Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il

| may be bibliog of the images | py available for filming. Features of this copy which ay be bibliographically unique, which may alter any the images in the reproduction, or which may sprificantly change the usual method of filming, are secked below. | | | | | | lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous. | | | | | | | | | | | |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------|--------------|-----|------|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|------------------|--------------------|--------|--------|----------|---------|------|----------|-------------|--|
| 1 1 | l covers/ ire de couleur | | | | | | | - F | | red pa de cou | _ | | | | | | | |
| Covers d | amæged/ ire endommag | gée | | | | | | 1 | _ | damag endon | | es | | | | | | |
| 1 1 | estored and/or ire restaurée e | | | | | | | ı | - | restore restau: | | | | | | | | |
| 2 3 | le missing/ le couverture | manque | | | | | [| -/1 | - | discolo décolo | | | | | | | | |
| Coloured Cartes ge | l maps/ ographiques o | en couleur | | | | | [| | ••• | detach détach | | | | | | | | |
| 1 1 | l ink (i.e. othe couleur (i.e. : | | | re) | | | | - 71 | | h:oug parenc | | | | | | | | |
| 4 3 | plates and/or et/ou illustrat | | | | | | | . / ! | | y of p é inéga | | | | n | | | | |
| 1 / 1 | ith other mat c d'autres doc | | | | | | | | | nuous ; tion c | | | 1 | | | | | |
| along int | ding may cau erioc margin/ e serrée peut c | | | | | | | • | | es ind rend u | | - | lex | | | | | |
| cistotsib | n le long de la eves added due | marge intë | ileure | | | | | | | n hezi e de l' | | | • | | | | | |
| within the been on | e text. When tted from film | ever possio ning/ | le, these ha | re | | | | | • | age of e titre | | | ison | | | | | |
| Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées. | | | | | | | Caption of issue/ Titre de départ de la livraison | | | | | | | | | | | |
| p. 0.00 | | | | | | | | - 8 | ¥asthe ∃ënëri | dns (t | pēriod | ថ្ងៃបន | i) de la | a livra | รงก | | | |
| 1 | al comments: taires supplén | - | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| This it am is fill Ce document e | | | | | | , | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| 10X | 74X | | 18X | 1 | | | 22X | | | 1 | 26X | | | | XCE. | - | | |
| 12 | | XSI | | | 30.X | | | | 74Y | | | | 780 | | | | √ | |

Vol. XV.]

TORONTO, JANUARY 5, 1895.

No. L

Compensation.

Ir is true that drinking does a great deal of harm to a man, but how seldom we mention the compensating advantages that come to him. For instance:

He drank when he was stupid For to quicken his insight, His eyes grew still more bleary, But his nose grew bright.

He drank when he was weary, His strength for to prolong, His legs graw still more shaky, But his breath grev strong.

He depak when he was downcast For to chose away the night, His debt grew still more heavy, But his purse grew light.

apprentice, and, for want of paper, was obliged to work his algebraic problems upon leather with an awl. Robert Burns, a ploughman of Ayrshire, Scotland, was afterwards the greatest of Scotch poets. James Cook for a long time was a common sailor, but afterwards, on voyages of discovery, sailed three times round the world. Jeremy Taylor was a barber's boy, and afterwards a D.D. Thomas Tedford, the great civil engineer, was once a shepherd's boy. Inigo Jones was first a journeyman carpenter, and afterwards the chief archigreat civil engineer, was once a shepheru as boy. Inigo Jones was first a journeyman carpenter, and afterwards the chief archi-tect of his age. Halley, the astronomer, was the son of a poor soap boiler. Haydin, the composer, was the son of a poor wheel-wright. Henry, the chemist, was the son of a weaver. Smeaton and Rennie, emin-ent engineers, were both of them, at one strange. You may find "there is a pleasure in the pathless woods, there is society where none intrudes," or you may shudder and feel you are in the very House of Death, in the home of the prowling wolf and the cruel raven.

THE GREEDY BOTTLE.

THERE are many poor boys and girls too, who are robbed of what would rightfully be their by "the greedy bottle." There would be happiness and rojoicing, in many poor homes if the bottle could be broken, an other than the start that "All Justices the start than the start that the start than the start than the start that the start than the start that the start that the start than the start than the start that as in this story from the Children's Record:

A poor undersized boy named Tim, sit-ting by a bottle, and looking in, said, "I

"Why," he said, "I was looking for a pair of new shoes; I want a pair of shoes awful bad to wear to the picuic—all the awful bad to wear to the picuici-all the other chaps wear shoes.

"How came you'to think you'd find shoes in a bottle it he father anked.

"Why, mother said so; I saked her for some new shoes, and she said they had gone into the black bottle, and that lots of other things had gone into it, too—out and late, and bread and meat and things; and I thought if I broke it. I'd find em all; and there suit's a thing in it!" And Tim sat'down again and cried harder than ever.

"His follow asated himself on a box 'n the sit down again and crice nature that ever His father seated himself on a box on the disorderly yard, and remained quiet for so long a time that Tim at last looked cauously up.
"I'm sorry I broke the bottle, father."

THE WOODS IN WINTER.

PERSEVERANCE

DEMOSTRENES, the poor stuttering son of n butler, became the most famous orator of uncient times. Virgil, the son of a baker, was the most celebrated of Latin poets. Esop, the son of a slave, and almost a slave himself, managed to acquire imperishstave himself, managed to acquire imperishable fame. Thomas Wolsey, the son of a lautcher, became cardinal of the Church of Rome, the next to the king, in his day the most powerful person in the English Dominion. William Shakespeare, also the son of a butcher, was yet one of the most famous poets the world has ever beheld. Oliver Cromwell rose from a comparatively humble station to be protector of the English Commonwealth. Benjamin Franklin was a printer in his early days; he afterwards became one of the most celebrated philosophers and statesmen. William Guildord, the editor of the Quarterly Review, was in youth a humble shoemaker time, merely makers of mathematical intime, merely makers of mathematical in-struments. And when you have read the lives of all these, ask yourself whether perforerance had not as much to do in making these men great, as any other quality which they pessessed.

THE WOODS IN WINTER.

Ir you are fond of a tramp through the snow, walking where, you will have to make your own path, and where no one will disturb you, choose the woods, the really wild woods, in winter for your walk. There is scarcely any place on earth so lonely. But among the great trunks of the forest trees, and under their bare branches, you will find many interesting forms of nature. Your feelings as you stand surrounded by these slient guants, alone with the silence, will be now and Ir you are fond of a tramp through the wonder if there can be a pair of shoes in it." He wanted to go to a Sunday-school picnic, but he had no shoes. His mother had mended his clothes, but said his shoes had mended his clothes, but said his shoes were so bad he must go barefoot. Then he took a brick and broke the bottle, but there were no shoes in it, and he was frightened, for it was his father's bottle. Tim sat down again, and sobbid so hard that he did not hear a step beside him, until a voice said :

"Well ! what's all this?" He sprang

"Well I what's all this?" He sprang up in great slarm; it was his father.
"Who bake my bottle?" he saled.
"I did," said Tim, catching his breath, laff in terror and half between his sobs.
"Why did you?" Tim looked up. The voice did not sound so terrible as he had expected. The truth was, his father had been touched at the aight of the forforn figure, so vry small and so sorrowful, which had is not over the broken bottle.

"Yes, I guess you are," he said, laying a hand on the rough little head as he went away, leaving Tim overcome with astonishment that has father had not been angry with him. Two days after, on the very evening before the picnic, he handed Tim a parcel, telling him to open it.

"New shore! New shore!" he shouted. "Oh, father, did you get a new bottle? And were they in it?"

"No, my boy, there isn't coing to be a and were they in it?"

"No, my boy, there san't going to be a new bottle. Your mother was right—the things all went into the bottle, but you see getting them out is no sany matter; ao,
God he'ning me, I am going to keep them out after this."

The saloon burdens the state by sate of untold millions. Stamp it set The saloon projupts politics and delibes our public servants. Stamp it set Stretch It a Little.

Taubeing along the all ppery street. Imperior along the suppers served.
Two childs figures, with acting feet,
And hands benumbed by the hiting cold,
Were rudely, jostful by young and old
Hurrying homeward at close of day
Over the city's broad highway.

"Come under my cost," said little Nell, As tear ran down Joe's checks, and fell On her own thin fingers, stiff with cold; "Taint very bic, but I guess 'twill hold Both you and me, if I only try To stretch it a little. "So now, don't ery."

The garment was small and tattered and thin, But Joe was lovingly folded in Close to the heart of Notl, who knew That stretching the coat for the needs of two Would double the wainth, as I halve the pain of the cetting wind and the key rain

"Stretch it a little i" O girls and boys In homes d'erflowing with conflorts and joys, See how far you can make them reach, Your helpful deeds and your loving speech, Your gifts of service and gifts of gold. Lat Lat them stretch, so incushoids manifold.

OUR PERIODICALS:

PER YEAR-POSTAGE FREE

The best, the cheapest, the most entertaining, the net nonular.

most reputar.

Intestian Guardian, weekly Metibodist Magazine, Guardian and Onward together.

Sundan School Hanner, & P. go, voor, mooning, illustrated Magazine, Guardian and Onward together.

3.0.

The Weekean, Halifat, weekly Sundan School Hanner, & P. go, voor, mooning, of the Sundan School Hanner, & P. go, voor, mooning, of the Sundan School Hanner, & P. go, voor, mooning, of the Sundan School Hanner, & Sun

WILLIAM BRIGGS, Methodist Book and Publishing Wetne B C. W. COATES, SP. F. Humste, 2176 St. Catherine Street, Wesleyan Coulc's Montreal. "Habbax, Mis.

Pleasant Hours:

A PAPER FOR OUR YOUNG FOLK Rev. W. H. WITHROW, - D.D., Editor.

TORONTO, JANUARY'S, 1866.

WHAT TO BE.

Ir a boy knows what trade, business, or profession he wishes to have when he was man, it is a very good thing. There is no doubt that he should follow his bent, and his education should be such as will help him best to develop those faculties which he will use in his work. But many a boy of good abilities, honest and sincere, does not know what he wants to be. It is for such boys that this article is written.

I feel sure that there is some particular work given to every one who is born into this world. And I think that if a boy will this world. And I think that it a boy will patiently and scriously study his own nature, in time he can find out what his work'is. It is a good plan, in the first place, to find out what one cannot do. Many of the arts, for unstance, require a genius—and that means more than a taste, or even a talent-for their successful pursuit. And there are at least two professions which should not be attempted unless one is sure of an unmistakable call towards one is sure of an immistakable call towards them. A boy should never dare attempt to be a physician unless he has not only the strongest taste for the twin sciences of surgery and medicine, but also a love for humanity so broad and deep and unselfish that he cannot be satisfied, with anything that he cannot be satisfied with anything less than spending his lifetime in alleviat-ing its miscries. And before he enters the Christian ministry, he should be equally sure that he can be satisfied with no other iffe-work, and that he is willing to make the same self-consecration for the whils hat a doctor does for the dedice of men.

sions;" never choose one because of the Annour or distinction which it may bring you. No professon ever distinguished a mean; on the contrary, if a man does not emoble and dignify his profession he disgraces it.

Many pursuits are in those days barred Many pursuits are in those days barred out because they are not considered suit-able for a gentleman. This is a mistake. All labour is honourable, and any man is a gentleman who behaves like one, and I know men to-day who have faned in life because they were put into a profession or a business, when if they had been allowed to learn their favourite trade or handreaft, to learn their favourite trade or handiciaft, they would have been successful and happy. So if you have a strong taste for anything of that sort, be sure it is a bent anything of that sort, be sure it is a both of your nature and not a fancy; then make your choice, stick to it, and be happy.

I know a gentleman, now hough on a New England college town, where plain living and high thanking are yet the fashion, and he made such a choice and became a black-matter. ne made such a concernat became a back-sunth; and he is the most wonderful blacksunth I ever heard of. He has a power of subduing culous animals which a phenomenal, and which two hundred years ago would have given him a reputation for sorcery. He shoes the most untamable for sortery. It should be the touch of his hand, the sound of his voice, and the steady gaze of his bright dark eyes, in a short time after they are brought to him, quet and subdue them and render them obedient to his will. This gentleman is a well-educated man, a reader and a thinker, and he is considered the social equal of anyone in the place; and I did not know whether to admire him more as he stood before his to admire him more as he stood better his anvil, with has leather apron buckled on and his wherear oiled up to his shoulders, adiaplaying the magnifectin muscles of his arm, while with his great hammer he sente with mighty blows the iron he was feshioring, making showers, of sparks ity all about the place, or when, on the evening of the anne day, the came forward to speak to me at the President's lovee with the same any and, gontle manners with speak to me at the President's levee with the same easy and gentle manners with which he had welcomed me to his shop. And I in gine that if that man had at-tempted to be anything else than a black-mith he would have disobeyed a divine ألآب sand when you have made your choice, cange when you have made your choice, semember that filness for your business is not the only thing. Long yours of steady, work may be necessary before you gain success. Without industry genius itself is nothing; but patient continuance in well doing will surely win its reward.

WHAT CURED SUSIE

Scars Prese . r's mother had been very sick, and the doctor said she must go away for a long journey: so Susie had come to stay with Uncle Will and Aunt Hatty. At first, she was very happy, but after she had been there two or three weeks, they noticed a change in her; she lost her appetite, and grew thin, and pale, and

At first, Aunt Hatty doctored her her-self, thinking she would soon be all right; but as she kept growing worse rather than better, she began to be quite w graed, and finally, one morning when Susie was too ill to get up, she sent Uncle Will for the doctor.

doctor.

Now Sude wasvery fond of Dr. Parsons, and usually delighted to see him; but this morning it seemed to make her feel worse than ever to think of his coming.

"Don't send for him, auntic," she pleaded. "I think I'm better now."

But, as Annt Harty did not see any particular change, she thought it best for him to come.

"I should not like to w. ac to your mamma that I had let you get really sick;" she said to Susie. "She would blame me very much for not having the doctor, I

"Well, well," said the doctor, cheerwhat's the matter with Eusie! inity, "what's the matter with susset 1 meer thought of having her for a pat ant. Have you drank too much milk, or haven't you drank enough? Let me see if Let it villell from the looks of your tongue?"

But 'he could not find out much either founds of the could not find out much either founds of the could not constrost to matter.

from her tongue or the questions he saked.

The most she would say was that she was not sick, and did not need any medicine.

"Poor little gul!" said the good dector, as he put up some medicine "Têy pect as he put up some medicine "Te cannot see that there is really anything the matter with her." But when he went back in the room, he found her sitting up in nea.

"Oh, Uncle Will and Aunt Hatty" she cried; "don't-give me any medicine; it would choke me, I know. I'm going to tell you now I'm not sick, only I did something draafful that day you went to the city. I was in the library looking at one of those lovely big book of pictures. I knew I ought not to take them without knew I ought not to take them without permission, something kept telling rase so, but I would not listen, and then somehow I lit the mistand, and it went sill over a whole page. I didn't dare tell you before, and I was so afraid every minute that you'd find it out. Oh, it has been deadful! I have been perfectly miserable ever since. I am so sorry, and if you will only show me how, I'll work hard all summer, and try to earn enough to buy you another

By this time Susie was sobbing as if her

By this time Susio was sobbing as if her heart would break.

"You paor little chicken," said Aunt Hatty, tenderly; "so that is what has ailed you. If you only had come and told me, it would have been much better."

"I kept trying to, but the words would not come. Oh, Aunt Hatty, I never shall forget how I felt; when I'm tempted to do wrong. I'll remember this!"

"That's rig t, Susie," said the doctor; "no matter how pleasant a wrong-doing looks, remember that the pleasure, it there is any, is soon gone, and then comes only sorrow and unhappiness. And now I think, you're better, aren't you?"

"Yes, sir, I'm well, I think," replied Susie.

HERO JACK.

Benford school bore a bad name. new teacher, one of the real kind, came, and the tone of the school improved. Jackand the tone of the school improved. Jack-Peterson had just come from Excelsior school, where the code of honour was high. The bully of Bedford was Joe Bandy, who nagged every new boy into a fight, if pos-

Jack was a puzzle to the Bedford boys. Jack was a puzzle to the Bedford boys. He was different, some way; perfect in lessons, walked with head up in manly fashion; honourable and faithful. Yet he was bestimbses-ball, and a capital fellow on the playground. Joe tried to pick a quarrel in vain. Jack paid no attention, until one day Joe struck him across the face, saying: "Now, take that; fight it out or but a coward." out, or be a coward."

Jack's face tlushed; then, with folded arms and head erect, he walked away without a word.

"Coward! coward!" shouted Joe. And

"Coward! coward!" shouted Joe. And.
the boys echeed "Coward!"
"We'll show him," said the leader, "that no boy that bears that name can play on our ground."
One day a terrible thing happened. A mad dog dashed into the playground, and was almost upon Joe Bandy before the boys saw him. Quick as a flash Jack snatched up a base-isall har, and springing from of the ravine beact, with its onen in from of the raging beast, with its open jaws and frothing mouth, dealt it a stun-ing blow, giving a policeman in hot pursuit a chance to shoot.

"I declare, boy, that was a plucky thing to do!" said the officer.

With a shout, "Three cheers for Hero Jack!" the boys lifted him to their shoulders and bore him around the playground in triumph.

But, little readers, when did he most truly earn the name of "Hero Jack?"

Father: "Who was that young lady sitting by you at the base ball game?" Boy: "That was my school-teacher." "Oh! I noticed that you and several other boys were continually talking to her." "Yes; were continually talking to her." "Yes; we were trying to make her understand how the game is playel, but she couldn't. I don't see how she ever got to be a school-teacher."

A GREAT RIVER FROM A LITTLE

A WEISH dergyman soked a little grif for the text of his last serion. The child gave no answer; she only went. He swert-amed that she had no Bible in which to look for the text. And this led him to 100k for the text. And this fed him to inquire whether her parents and neigh-bours had a Bible; and this led to that meeting-in-London, in -1844, of a few de-voted Christians, to device means to supply the poor in Wales with the Bible, the grand usage of which was the formation of the British and Foreign Bible Society - So-British and Foreign Bible Society—a So-ciety which has already distributed many minious of copies of the Bible, its issue now reaching nearly 1,500,000 annually. And the, in turn, led to the formation of the American Society, and to the whole heautiful cluster of sister institutions? throughout the world, which are so, many trees of life, scattering the golden fruits of minorizality among all_nations of the earth. This mighty river, so deep, so broad, so far reaching in its many branches, we may trees back to that theirs of that livid gul. Behold, how year a matter a little fire kindleth."

WHAT GOD GIVES A BOY.

A nony to live in and keep clean and healthy, and as a dwelling for his mind and a temple for his soul.

A pair of hands to use for himself and others, but never against others for him-

A pair of feet to do errands of love and kindness, and charity, and business; but not to loiter in places of mischief, or temptation, or sin.

tation, or sin.

Apair of lips to keep pure and unpolluted by, tobacco or whiskey, and to speak true, kind, brave words; but not to make a sinokestack of, or a swill trough.

A pair of ears to hear the music of bird, and tree, and rill, and human vocc; but not to give heed to what the scripent says, or to what dishonours God or his mother.

A wife of eyes to see the heuriful, the

A pair of eyes to see the beautiful, the good, and the true—God's finger-prints in the flower, and field, and snowlake; but not to feast on unclean pictures, or the blotches which Satan daubs and calls

A mind to remember, and reason, and decide, and store up-wisdom, and impart it to others; but not to be turned into a chip-basket, or rubbish heap for the chaff, the rubbish and sweepings of the world's stale wit.

world's state wit.

A soul as pure and spotless as a new-fallen snowlake, to receive impressions of good, and to develop faculties of powers and virtues which shall shape it day by day, as the artist's chisel shapes the stone, into the image and likeness of Jesus Christ.

Tis True as Truth

My hoys, come listen while I teach, A lesson true as truth, A lesson that you all should learn By heart in early youth.

'Tis this, there's naught upon the earth That hapless home can cheer, Where but five cents is spent for bread To tifty cents for beer.

The wife and mother, though she be As patient as the bests, a: We are on her face a look that tells Of nights unknown to rest. The children shiver oft with cold, And tremble oft with fear. Where but five cents is spent for bread To nity cents for beer.

The holidays bring but fresh grief,
Fresh want, and a deel care,
And while, around it; happy songs
And laughter fill the sir,
The sound of curses; sighs and sobs
Is all that one can hear
Where but five cents is spent for bread To fifty cents for beer

And boys, I beg you, let my words On frintful soil be sown, So when you welleft your boyhood's days And are to madheod grown, No one can speak of homes you've made, As places poor and dicar, Where but face exits is spant for bread. "To fifty cents for beer.

The Wonderful Bamboo Tree.

BY MARY M'NEIL SCOTT.

ONE night when the hills were drenched with

And moonbeams lay about, the conical cone of a young bamboo Came cautiously creeping out.

It tossed its cup upon the ground,
Am ized at the sudden light;
And so pleased it was with the world it found.
That it grew s x feet that night.

It grew and it grew in the summer breeze;
It grew and it grew, until
It looked right over the camphor trees To the further side of the hill.

A Japanese phrase the wood-cutter used of ("Fine tree!" is what we should say); He chopped it all round, till it fell to the ground;

His ox then hauled it away.

H made a fine tub from the lowermost round. A pail from the following one,

A caddy for rice from the very next slice, And his work was no more than begun.

The next were tall vases and medicine cases, With dippers and cups galine from There were platters and bowls," and pickets and poles.

And matting to spread on the floor.

A parasol frame and an intricate game And the ribs to a paper fan, A sole to his shoe and a tooth-pick or two He made next, -this wonderful man.

A pencil, I think, and a bottle for lak, And a stem for his miniature pipe: A ring for his hand and a luncheour-stand.

And a tray for the oranges ripe.

A rake then he made, and a small garden And a trellis to loop up his vine: A flute which he blew, a tenstrainer too And a fiddle to squeak shrill and fine.

It would take me all day if I were to say
All that wonderful man brought to view; But a traveller I met says he sitting there

At work on that single bambos.

THE OLD ORGAN

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

By Mrs. O. F. Walton.

CHAPTER XI .- ALONE IN THE WORLD.

LITTLE Christie was the only mourner who LITTLE Christie was the only mourner who followed old Treffy to the grave. It was a poor par sh funeral. Treffy's body was put into a parish coffin, and carried to the grave in a parish hearse. But, oh! it did not mutter, for Treffy was at home in "Home, sweet home;" all his sorrows and troubles were over, his poverty was at an end, and in "the Father's house" he was being well cared for.

Father's house" he was being wen curetair. But the man who drove the hearse was not inclined to lose time upon the road; and Christie had to walk very qurekly, and sometimes almost to run, to keep up with him; and on their way they passed another and a very different function. It was going very and on their way they passed another and a very different funeral. It was going very slowly indeed. There was a large hearse in front, and six funeral carriages filled with people, followed. And as Christie pitssed close by them in the middle of the road he could see that the mourners within looked very sorrowful, and as if they had been crying very much. But in one carriage he saw something which he never forgot. With her head resting on her papa's shoulder, and her little white, sorrowful face-pressed close to the window, was his little friend Mabel.

"So her mother is dead!" said Christia to

"So her mother is dead!" said Christie to himself, "and this is her funeral! Oh, dear! what a very sad world this is!"

what a very sad world this is!"

He was not sure whether Mabel had seen him, but the little girl's sorrow had sunk very deep into Christie's soul, and it was with a heavier heart than before that he hastened forward to overtake this bearse which was earlying his old master's body to the grave. So the two finneral propositions that of the

So the two funeral processions—that of the poor old man, and that of the fair young mother—passed on to the cemetery, and over both hodies were pronounced the words, "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust." But all this time their happy souls were in "Home, sweet home," far, far away from the scene of sorrow. For, a few days before, just at the same hour, two souls had left this world of woe, and had met together before the gates of pearl. And as they were both clean and white, both washed in the blood of the Lamb were both clean and the gates had been opened wide, and sold Treffy and little Mabel's mother had entered the city together. And now they had both seen Jesus, the dear Lord whom they loved well, and in his presence they were even now well, and in his presence they were even now enjoying fulness of joy.

Christie was obliged to give up the little atter after Treffy's death, for the landlady wished to let it for a higher-rent. However, she gave the boy leave to sleep in the great lodging-room below, whilst she took possession of all old Treffy's small stock of furniture, in pryment of the rent which he owed her.

But blie organ was the stie's property; his old master had given it to him most solemnly about a week before he died. He had called Christie to his side, and told him to bring the organ w th him. Then he had committed it organ with him. To Christie's care.

"You'll take care of her, Christie," he had said, "and you'll never part with her, for my sake. And when you play 'Home, sweet home, 'Christie, boy, you must think of me and your mother, and how we've both got

It was hard work for Christie, the first day It was hard work for Christie, the first day that he took out the organ after old Treffy's funeral; he did not so much mind playing "Rule Britannia," or the "Old Hundredth," or "Poor Mary Ann," but when he came for the first time to "Home, sweet home," such a rush of feeling came over him that he stopped short in the middle and moved on without finishing it. The passers by were ped short in the middle and moved on without finishing it. The passers by were surprised at the sudden pause in the tune, and still more so at the tears which were running down Christie's cheeks. They little thought that the last time he had played that tune hid been in the room of death, and that whilst he was playing it his dearest friend on earth had passed away into the true "Home, sweet home" But Christie knew, and the notes of the tune by ught back the recollection notes of the tune by ught back the recollection of that midnight hour. And he could not make up his mind to go on playing till he had looked up into the blue sky and asked for help to rejoice in old freff, 's joy. And then the chorus came very sweetly to him, "Home, sweet home; there's no place like home, there's no place like home," "And old freffy s there at bat, 's aid Christie to himself as he finished playing.

One day, about a week after Treffy's functal, Christie went up the suburban road, in the hopes of seeing poor little Miss Mabel once more. He had never forgotten her sorrowful little face at the window of the funeral coach. And when we are in sorrow ourselves, it does us good to see, and sympathize with those who are in sorrow also. Christie felt it would be a great confort to him to see the little girl. He wanted to he arall about her mother, and when it was that she had gone to "Home, sweet home."

But when Christie reached the house he stood still in astonishment. The pretty garden was there just as usual, a bed of heart-seases was blooming in the sunshine, and the stocks and forget-me nots were in full flower. But the house looked very descrited and strange: the shutters of the lower rooms were and the dedrooms had no blinds in the wirdows, and looked empty and forform. And in the nursery windows, instead of little Mabel's, and Charlie's merry faces, there was a cross-looking old woman with her head bent down. over her knitting.
What could, be the matter? Where were the children gone? Surely no one else was lying dead in the house. Christie felt that he lying dead in the house. Christie felt that he could not go home without finding out; he must ask the old woman. So he stood at the garden-gate, and turned the handle of the organ, hoping that she would look out and speak to him. But, beyond a passing glance, she gave no sign that she even heard it, but went on diligently with her work.

At length Christic could wait no longer; so stopping suddenly in the middle of "Poor Mary Ann," he walked up the gravel path and rang the hell. Then the old woman put her head out of the window, and asked what he wanted. Christic did not quite know what to say, so he came out at once with the great fear which was haunting him.

"Please ma" is anyone dead?" he

"Please, ma'am, is anyone dead?" he "Dead? No!" said the woman, quickly. "What do you want to know for?"

"Please, could I speak to little Miss Mabel?" said Christie, timidly.
"No, bless you," said the old woman, "not unless you d like a walk across the sea; she's in France by now."
"In France!" repeated Christie, with a bewildered air.

bewildered air. "Yes," said said the old woman, "they've all gon-alroad for the summer;" and then she sou the window in a decided manner, as much as to say, "And that's all I shall tell you about it.

Christie stood for a few minutes in the pretry garden before he in ved away.
was very disappointed; he had so hoped was very insappointed; he had so hoped to have seen his little friends, and now they were gone. They were far away in france. That was a long way off, Christie felt sure, and perhaps he would never see them again. He walked slowly down the dusty road. He felt very lonely this afternoon, yere lonely and foresten.

and forsaken. His mother was gone; old Treffy was gone; the lady was gone; and now the children were gone also! He had no one to cheer him or to comfort him; so he drauged the old organ wearily down the hot streets. He had not heart enough to play, he was very tired and worn out; yet he knew not where to go to rest. He had not even the old attic to call his home. But the pavement was so hot to his feet, and the sun was so scorching, that Christic determined to return to the dis-that Christic determined to return to the dis-mal court, and to try to find a quiet corner in the great lodging room.

But when he opened the door he was greeted by a cloud of dust; and the landlady called out to him to take himself off, she could not do with him loitering about at that time of day. So Christie tuined out again, very heart-sore and disconsolate; and going into a quiet street, he sheltered for some time from the hot sun, under a high wall which made a little shadow across the pavement. Christic was almost too hot and tired eyen to be unhappy, and yet every now and then be shivered, and crept into the sunshine to be warmed again. He had a strange, sharp pain in his head, which made him feel very be-wildered and uncomfortable. He did not know what was the matter with him, and know what was the matter with him, and sometimes he got up and tried to play for a little time, but he was so sick and dizzy that he was obliged to give it up, and to lie quite still under the wall, with the organ beside him, till the sun began to set. Then he dragged himself and his organ back to the lodging-room. Te lan dady had finished her cleaning, and was preparing the supper for her lodgers. She threw Christie a crust of bread as he came in, but he was not able to cat it. He crawled to a bench in the far corner of the room, and putting his old organ cat it. He crawled to a bench in the rat your ner of the room, and putting his old organ against the wall beside him, he fell asleep. When he awoke, the room was full of nin;

they were eating their supper, and talking and langhing noisily. They took little notice of Christie, as he lay very still in the corner of the room. He could not sleep again, for the noise in the place was so great, and now and again he shuddered at the wicked words and coarse jests which fell on his ear almost every minute.

Christie's head was aching terribly, and he Christie's head was aching terribly, and he felt very, very ill; he had never been so ill in his I fe before. What would he not have given for a quiet I ttle corner, in which he might have lain, out of the reach of the oaths and wi kedness of the men in the great lodging room! And then his thoughts wandered to old Treffy in "Home, sweet nome." What a different place his dear old master was in! "There's no clace like home, no place like

"There's no place like home, no place like home;" said Christ e to himself. "Oh, what a long way I am from 'Home, sweet home!"

(To be continued.)

58 TWO STUPID BOYS.

DEAN STANLEY once said to a boy, "If I tell you I was born in the second half of 1815, can you tell me why I am called Arthur?" The name of the hero of Waterloo was then on all men's lips:

When nine years of age Arthur was sent to a preparatory school. He was bright and clever, but he could not learn arithmetic.

Dr. Boyd writes in Longmans' Magazine that the master of the school, Mr. Rawson, declared that Arthur was the stupidest boy at figures who ever came under his care save only one, who was yet more hopeless, and was unable to grasp simple addition and multiplication.

Studey remained unchanged to the end.

At Rugby he rose like a rocket to every kind of eminence, except that of doing "sums." In due time he took a first-class at Oxford, where the classics and Aristotle's Ethics were the books in which a student for honours must be efficient. He would not have done as well at Cambridge, whose senior wrangler must be an accomplished mathematician

On the contrary, that other stupid boy,

"more hopeless" than Stanley, developed a phenomenal mastery of arithmetic. He became the great finance minister of after years, William E. Gladstone, who could make a budget speech of three hours' length, and full of tigures, which so inter-ested the members of the House of Commons that they filled the ball, standing and sitting tid midnight.

3

The story has two morals. One is that a boy may be stupid in one study, and bright in all the remaining studies. The other moral is, and it is most important, that a boy may overcome by hard study his natural repugnance to a certain study, and even become an eminent master of it. -Youth' Companion.

HOW THE CEINESE DO THINGS.

EVERYTHING relating to the Orient, where a terrible war is being waged now between China and Japan, is of interest. We would all like to see these people fol-low the example of the civilized nations in later years and settle their difficulties without murder and bloodshed. But these heathen nations are just the opposite, even in their ways of doing common things:

The Chinese do everything backward. They exactly reverse the usual order of Note first that the Chinese compass points to the south instead of the north.

The men wear skirts and the women trousers. The men wear their hair long and the women wear it short.

The men carry on dressmaking and the women carry burdens.

The spoken language of China is not written, and the written language is not spoken.

Books are read backward, and what we call footnotes are inserted at the top of the Page.

The Chinese surname comes first instead

The Chinese shake their own hands instead of the hands of those they greet.

The Chinese dress in white at funerals and in mourning at w ddings, while old women always serve as bridesmaids. The Chinese launch their vessels sideways and mount their horses from the off side.

The Chinese begin their dinner with dessert and end with soup and fish.

The Point of View.

SAID the Gray Horse to the Brown Horse: "Il, but life's a pull! Half at least every day My cart is full.

Half of every year.

Talk about the lark. I must leave my warm bed While it is dark.

> "Half the food I live on, Every day, Only hay, Half my time, yes, fully, Cold days and hot, I must still keep going Whether I can or not,"

Said the Brown Horse to the Gray Horse: "My work is half play, For my cart's empty Half of every day; Half of every day;
Half of every year, too,
I go to bed at night
Knowing I can stay there
Till it is light.

"Master likes his horses With glossy coats, With glossy coats,
So half my food is always
The best of oats,
What with nights and standing While they unload, Half my time I'm resting, Not on the road."

Two little sporrows perched upon a beam, Broke into laughter with a perf ct scream. Mr. Sparrow chuckled, "Who d believe it,

Their food and work are both alike all the live-long year!"

LESSON NOTES.

THE FISHER LAD.

BY LOUIS MAKAING HODGINS.

las Master wasser sa excuring anadows fell lly toda of; He saw bearle her palaing ebb and swell

Another sea,

I see of upturned faces that he scanned In loving quest. If haply one among that chosen band His power confessed.

"A lad is here," cried one, "with fish and bread,

A scanty atore,"

"Bring them to me," was all the Master and i.
Nor wished for more.

Nor wished for more, yet needing only this, A work unwrought: And weary tamished souls forever miss A child unsought.

You who behold and fain would satisfy He unsufficed, Remember -tr I beneath the sunset sky Waiketh the Christ.

Not yours to bless and break the living bread In that surpl ce clad.
But yours to fin I smid the throngs unfel
The little lad.

FIRST QUARTER.

LESSON IL A.D. 23.1

Dan 13. FEEDING THE FIVE THOUSAND.

Mark 6. 30-44. Memory verses, 41, 42

GOLDEN TEXT.

He hath filled the hungry with good things. Luke 1. 53.

CONNECTING LINES.

Mark's story of the death of John, which we studied last week, in tall parenthetically; this narrative connects directly with the account of Herod's belief that Jesus was John.

QUESTIONS FOR INTERMEDIATE SCHOLARS.

1. Need, v. 30-36.

. Need, v. 30-36.
What company came to Jesus?
What report did the disciples make?
What did Josus tell them to do?
Why did they need to seek retirement?
Ily what means did they depart?
Who saw them going away?
What did the people do?
How can you account for the great in

What did the people do?
How can you account for the great multitude? (John 6. 4.)
How did thusight of the people effect Jesus?
What did he do for them?
What did the duciples say about the people's need?
What did they advise him to do?
What ducation did Jesus ask Philip, and why? (John 6. 5. 6.)
2. Ahmdauce, v. 16.44.
What did Jesus his disciples to do?
What was their answer?
What supply had they on hand?
What were the people commanded to do?
How were they grouped when scated?
What did Jesus do with the loaves and fishes?

fishes?

How many of the people ate of the food?

What was I-sur's command about the frag ments? (John 6, 12)

How much was left over?

How many men were thus feel?
Who were there besides then men? (Matt. 14-21)
What did the men say? (John 6, 14.)
What Scripture was thus fulfilled? (Golden Text.

TEACHINGS OF THE LESSON.

Where are we taught a lesson of-

2. Helpfulness to those in need? 3. Thankfulness for divine supply?

THE LESSON CATACHESI.

1. Whom did King Hered believe Jeans to be down the Explication to John? He had pur him in prison.

3. How long did he keep John in prison? art a year."
What did he then do? He put him t-dinoi-5. Wi--- 'mtred arred Herod to kill John'

The barrent Herodian 6 What is the golden leat? "Fear not," etc.

PEDING THE FIVE 1-10USAND.

IT PAYS TO BE MANLY.

This is what Alfred Studey said to a boy standing idly in front of a store, who jeered at his manly appearance. Alfred spoke and would have passed quietly on, but the boy said, "It does, ch? How much a week?"

Something in the tone made Alfred stop.
"I am paid every day, and every hour, and really every minute," he replied.

"Cone now, no fooling."

"I am truly paid," said Alfred seriously;

"and I invest capital in a place where it is saite. I can never lose it."

The boy's attempt at raillery fell before Alfred's carnest face and manner, and he listened with something more of respection he had shown in a leng time, as Alfred continued, "I am not paid in dollars and cents; they won't last forever, you know. My pay is the trust of my friends, the knowledge that no honest deed ever dies, and the promise that the pure in heart shall and the promise that the pure in heart shall see God."

It was only a seed by the wayside; but who shall say that it was lost?

The Sparrow in the Snow. He hopped down cheerily into the snow, Brave little harefoot BrownieAs if snow were the warmest thing below.
And as cozy as it is downy ! And his brown little k owing saucy head, In a way that was 'cutely funny, He jerked to one side, as though he said, "I don't care if it isn't sunny."

I don't care! I don't care! Idon't care!" he said.

And he winked with his eyes so cheery.
For somelody's left some crumbs of hread,
So my prospects are not at all dreary.

"And what's a cold too when I've got a whole suit

Of the cunningest warm brown feathers? don't care if I haven't a shoe to my foot, I'm the bird, sirs, of all sorts of weathers.

"I don't fly away at the first touch of frost, Like some of your fine-tongued birdies; don't think everything's ruined and lost When the wind mutters threatening wordies.

"I don't care!" he chirped; "I don't care!

I don't care!

It might be a great deal colder:
But I'm a fellow that knows not fear—
Old Winter but makes me bolder!"

Ah, plain little hardy browns coat bird?
Through life I'll are to remember
To meet its winters with cheerful word,
Like thee to brave my Perember.

Hermed Glyndon, in Youth's Companion.

A JUDGESHIP is vacant, the ermine awaits.
The shoulders of youth, brave, honest and true,

Some one will be atanding by fame's opengates,
I wonder, my boys,—Will itbe one of you.

The president's chair of a great railroad mare. Is empty to-day, for death glaimed his due. The directors are choosing a man for his place, I wonder, my boys,—Will it be one of you:

A pulpit is waiting for some one to fill,
Of elequent men, there are only a few,
The man who can fill it, must have power to thrill;
The best will be chosen,—Will it be one of you?

The great men about us, will pass to their rest,
Their places be filled by the loys who pursue
The search for the highest, the noblest, the best.

I wonder who'll fitl them; I hope 'twill be Hints. ..

Don't complain about the weather, For easier 'tia, you'll find, To make your mind to weather Than weather to your mind.

Don't complain about the sermon, And show your lack of wit, r'or like a boot, a sermon hurts The closer it doth fit.

Don't complain about your nei, blour, For in your neighbour's view His neighbour is not faultiess— That ====bbour being you.

Sunday-School

Lesson Helps

FOR 18.5.

Illustrative Notes.

With Original and Selected Comments' M thede of Teaching, Illustrative Stories' Maps, Pictures, etc.

By JESSE LYMAN HURLBUT and ROBERT REMINGTON DONERRY.

Price. $1.25.

Peloubet's Select Notes.

Inductive, Suggestive, Explanatory, Illustrative, Doctrinal and Practical. With Illustrations, Maps, Pictures, etc.

Price. $1.35.

Monday Club Sermons.

Sermons on the Sunday-school Lessons for 1206 by eminent presenters. Price, $125.

Berean Lesson Books.

No. 1.—The Beginner's. No. 2.—The Intermediate. No. 3.-THE SENIOR.

Price, 20c.

Berean Leaf Cluster.

targe pictures printed in eight-olours, illustrating the International S. Lossons. Title and Golden Text in large lotters. Price, $1.25 per quarter; $5.00 a year, postpaid.

Golden Text Booklets.

Sunday-school Lyssonaand Paily Bible Read-ings, with Golden Texts and Bible Facts. Pyice, postpaid, each, Sc; per dex., 33c.

The Picture Lesson Roll.

Large colored picture, 24 x & inches, printed in four colors, illustrating the International S. S. Lessons. Title and Golden Text in large letters.

Price. $1.00 per quarter; $250 per year, pesipaid

WILLIAM BTISTS. Methodist Book and Pustesning House, Toronto.

C II (TIATES, MONTERAL

R. P. HURSTIS, Haupet.

