THE SEASON OF ADVENT. (Fran the Churchman's Your.)

The season of Advent is rightly made the beginning of the ecclesiastical year. Had the year cos at Septuagesima with the account of the fall of man with the corruption of the human nature, and the ment inflicted on the world by sin, man might be led to despair. If the assurance of pardon through announced to the believer, he might be led into presumption and self-confidence. Whoever it might be, he was a regular brick inside, thought I, as I suggested that the hollow chest might serve so an alter for consuming offerings. But then, the cavity was no clean burnt, without a tint of smoke, that this seemed not tenable. By the side of this figure lay the rules of two others; but there were no traces of their insides, if they ever had any. A few paces off were a party of nativee; some whipping the grain out of the sheaf of paddy, others looking idly on. To one of the latter we addressed ourselves, and asked what he of the hollow chest might be. " Honoomial' was the reply. "Of course," said we to ourselves; it is, Scheb, behind." FASTS AND PESTIVALS OF THE CHURCH. To-marrow being St. Andrew's Day, the beginning of the Ecclesiastical year, we have in our present number emmenerd a series of extracts in reference actuance of which is enjoined in the Book of Common

We think that a course such as we contemplate in required,—and that, if judiciously carried through, it Buhrey Andrewee's Private Devotions, although we have will be productive of profit.

Few, comparatively speaking, are in the habit of paying an intelligent and devotional attention to the arrangements which the Anglican Church makes for rating the leading epochs and persons chevnicled in Holy Weit. As a late eminent divine well abertes :- "When human passions are mused, and the spirit of party is abroad, we are ready enough to observe days, and months, times and years; it is anh when we are called to enter the house of God, and to bless Him for His servents departed this life in His faith and four, that we find the duty irkume, and hook upon such celebrations as altogether useless."

Most willing are we to believe, that in the vast minjerity of cases, the neglectors of these venerable! and wholesome observances are through inadvertence. The matter has never been prominently brinight under their notice; and hence has been arrelanked,no contempt having been intended against the legitirity of the Church. Christianity is a great whole, requiring to be viewed in all its parts; and the mind of man is so apt to be diverted from the "one thing needful," that chronological laudmarks (so to speak) form the most important safeguarda which we can possess.

Enough has been said, we trust, to divert the attention of Churchmen to a matter which has been too much thrown into the back ground. Let not our Scriptural Fasts and Festivals be neglected through sluggish indifference, on the one hand, or a morbid dream that they originate in Popish superstition on thought good and holy practices by men who gave atronger proofs of their sincerity than any which we who followed them as martyre and confessors, follaxed them also in these grateful recollections of those who had gone before them. ### BISHOPRIC OF LLANDAFF.

It would appear that the Right Reverend Lord Anokland is not to be translated to the Bishouric of Llandoff, as stated in our last. From the London Guardian we derive the following information as to the person upon whom the vacant mitre will probably be bestured. Dr. Ollivant's knowledge of the Welsh language is no small recommendation, other things being equal.

The Nee of Llandaff is now said, by the filibe, to be about to he, or to have been, conferred on Dr. Ollivaut, Regius Professor of Divinity at Cambridge; and the minimation of Lord Auchland, which rested on the nuthurity of the Times and the Chemick, if ever made, it said to have been withdrawn or refund—at all events to be a an end. Dr. thilirant was formerly the Vice-Principal of Lampeter College, and is now a Camon of St. David's. He seve, universally respected in the University which he belongs. His politics so far as he has evine any political bies, are of a Conservative cast. He is well nequinited with the Welsh language; and we have reason to believe that his apparentances would be generally accep-table to the Principality. And we believe there is no doubt that the Gade is right, and that Dr. Ollivant is the person who has been nominated; whatever may have jamed, previous to his nomination, between the thousenment and lovel Auchland.

THE INDIAN OUTBREIK.

No intelligence has yet reached Toronto regarding he result of the military expedition to the mining districts. Public opinion seems to be almost unanimous in condemning the conduct of the Legislature towards our Indian fellow subjects. According to all that has yet transpired, if faith has not been trustful people, the most culpable procrastination in adjusting their claims has been manifested by government. For the honour of the British fleg, which, till note, has been regarded by the red man with confiding and loval affection, we trust and pray that not a moment may be lost by our Provincial Administration, in rectifying and atoning for errors which we more than fear have been committed.

ROMANISM AS IT 18.

The following advertisment which we extract from the London Times furnishes a curious illustration of the plastic and Japus-need character of Popers :-

"Salut Alkkin, Kuntion Town , .... Build the House; and I will take pleasure in in it, and I will be glorified, saith the Lord, - Hargai i S. - The Rev. Hardinge Ivers Incumbent of St. Alexa, began appetfully to ann upon to nobility gentry, and philanthy phie members of a wiety that the first stone of the new church of St. Alexia, Kentish Town, will be laid with all due solemnity, on Monday next, October 1, under the suspices of Repulsy. This Church from the many associations connected with it, has a peculiar claim on the benevolent support of all classes and creeds. The Catholic will naturally rejoice at the acquisition of a sairable place of worship in a district the enlightened. Protestant must necessarily applied the liberal spirit which presides over its erection. This is the first attempt ever made in England to unpart (as far as an individual act, in a very 'errounscribed sphere, can effect it) the hallowed sanction of religion to the broodest system of liberality ever witnessed in this country. For with the Church of St. Alexis, two institutions m the philanthropic eye, are necessarily and fundamentally connected. The first is the Kentish town Free School. for the education of the children of the industrious classics, without any distinction of creat or sectamen tendency.--The other is the Kentish-town Lyceum, in which a firstis imparted to vouths of promising parts, and of every per-sources; and from which through the stringency of the fundamental rules, and the publicity of all proceedings consea to all classes, is proutarly adapted to those youths. whose talents and prospects prompt them to generius purshilanthrops spread her presenting mantle over the dawn this must remained and unblushing piece of quarkery. What a warraless system in every sense of the word. must Romanism be, which can thus produce to the agricious liberalism of the age, and stimulate the autiproturing whipe of Pr test out dissent!

If there be one particle of sincerity in Mr. Hanlings Ivers' professions, the education dispensed at the two institutions connected with St. Alexis Mass-house, must be of an escentially infilel character. As in this event, however, violence will be done to a vital principle of Romanium, we are inclined to believe that faith will not be kept with the simple heretics who may give heed to the captivating promises of the philanhavie "Incombent" Father Dense would fornish ample authority for departing from the "broad exstem of liberality" guaranteed in this most unique advertimeest.

The public are informed that the first stone of the new Church will be laid under the auspices of Royalty. It would naturally be inferred from this notification that some member or members of the Royal family of Great Britain intended to sanction by their presence and co-operation, the erection of a Popish Conventicle. A separate advertisement, however, in the Tublet, atates that the illustrious stone lavers are " His Royal Highness Prince John, intant, of Spain, and her Imperial and Royal Highness, Beatrice, Archduchess of Austria." The suppression of this specific piece of information in the notice inserted in the Times, is one of the most contemptible petty frauds of Jesuitism. which ever fell under our observation. Not one out of ten thousand, of the readers of that journal would. in all probability see the Tablet, and hence many would be seduced to witness the ceremonial, on the supposition that their Sovereign, perchance, might be indicated by the will term rayalty.

Surely Romanian must be at a and discount in England, when such amoirical devices are resorted to, in order to procuse the ways and means for its extension. As an appropriate corollary to the full gushing liberality and Catholic toloration of Father Ivers, we subioin without note or comment an extract from a late number of the Standard.

" Much sensation has been created aming the English residents in Tuscany by the peremptory command of the Profect of Lucca, that Captain Pickenham, of the British Navy, should quit the territory in three days and upon no account return without special permission of the government. The offence charged against Captain P. is, that meeting upon the subject, when a strong protest was agreed to which was to be forwarded to the English Minister at Florence."

Popery, it would appear, is a widely different affair in Tuscany from what it is in Kentish Town!

THE ANGLO-SANON.

We have not as yet received the numbers already published of this periodical, but from what we have carned of its aim and general merits, we have much could ence in commending it to the attention of our renders. When we atote that the Anglo-Saxon is edited by the author of Proverbial Philosophy, we are consinced that this fact alone is sufficient to secure for it a favourable reception on this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Tupper is emphatically a man of principle, in the widest and most legitimate sense of the word; and his nervous lyries have gone far to revive a healthy tone of moral and political feeling. the object of the periodical is to unite the great English family all the world over, and to heat colonial

Friday Sept 28 - Another delightful morning. Left St. Thomas at 9 o'clock and after having travelled twenty one miles, we came out on the plank road about andaa. Dined here at J. The day continues fine and the old Canagan sectors also. The approximate the work pleasant, with a light breeze from the west; we have been highly favoured with g and weather, which is no slight advantage in travelling over e-untry roads in Canada. We arrived at Woodstock about 7 p. m., having travelled forty two miles to-day; and after putting up our horse at the Hotel, walked over to Mr. Bestridge's to make some necessary enquiries. 'Mr. and Mrs Bestridge kindly in-thanks to Mrs. Bettridge for her hospitality and kindn we set off on our journey, intending to take the roal to Paris. We had not proceeded many steps however, before we received that our horse was so still as to be scarcely to travel faster than a walk, and I began to entertain serious apprehensions of boing unable to accomplish our journey. This acreness and atiffaces we at once attributed to the plank roul, over which we travelled yesterday, at a brisk pace. ### THE GUARDED HOUSE. (From a Gorman Book for Children )

When the year 1814 began, treops of Swedes, Cos eacks, Germans, and Bussians, were within half an hour's march of the town of Bleavick; and new and and fearful reports of the behaviour of the soldiers were brought from the country every day. There had been a truce, which was to come to an end at midnight on the 5th of January, which was now drawing near.

On the autabitts of the town, on the side where the memy lay, there was a bouse standing alone, and in it there was an old pious weman, who was earnestly praying, in the words of an ancient hymn, that God would raise up a wall up around them, so that the enemy night foor to attack them.

In the same house dwelt her daughter, a widow and her grandon, a youth of twenty years. He heard the prayer of his grandmother, and could not restrain of from soying, that he did not understand how 'she could sek for anything on impossible as that a wall abould be built around them which could heep the enousy from their house. The old woman, who was now deaf, caused what her grandeen said to be explained to her, but only answered that she had but prayed

January and about midnight the treops began to enter on all sides. The house we are speaking of lay mont morning, so it grew light, they saw the cause. The storm had drifted such a mass of snow, to such a height, between the road side and the house' that to approach it was impossible. "Do you not see, my " mid the old grandmother, " that it was possible for God to raise a wall around us ?"

Does not this story remind us of the words, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that foor Ilim, and delivereth them?" Does it not seem as if the snow had been guthered together as by angels hands to form a defence for that house where one dwelt who thus feared God and trusted in Ilim.

With tearful eyes he passed on: and just as he went out from the church door, a noble-looking man rode by, who, at the same mement dropped his glove. P. took it up, and more deatly gave it to its owner. The gentleman, surprised at this attention from a echool-hoy, asked his name. He told it: and the stranger inquired if he were a con or a relation of the famous surgeon of that name. Ha, answered that he was his con; and the gentleman immediately asked him to dise with him at his lodgings, saying. "Your father safely performed a dangerous operation for me, and, neat to God, I owe my life to him."

EXTEMPORE PRAYER

(From the Auto-biography of a Discreting Minister.) The dissenters having no form of prayer for public orship, every minister supplies, from his own resources, prayers, and sermon too, and these are most admired when delivered extemporaneously. The sermons are not always delivered without notes; but I believe in no case whatever are the prayers written, or if they be written they must be learned by heart, for the sight of a minister reading a prayer in a dissenting meetinghouse or chapel, would be considered a downright aboutination—such a thing is never seen except among the Suckilana, and with them I believe it is not univerest. Extemporaneous praver used to be considered and by some persons still is, as the result of a momen-. tary inspiration; but with the generality of those who use it, it is most likely the result of habit, of knack,--even as any other hind of off-hand deaterity in the use of words. If, then, extemporaneous praying and extemporaneous presching be a desirable qualification, and if it be only to be acquired by habit and practice, the habit must be formed at an early period. Early enough is the attempt made in dissenting colleges :--I could, were I so disposed, coumerate many judicrous anocdates of ridiculous blunders made by young beginners in the art of extempore prayer; but I shall not enter into perticulars, for there may be some persons now living, who may not be pleased to be reminded of the follies of their youth :-- I say fullies, not ouddent thet, had any student read this composed prayer from the paper on which it was written, he would have met with reproof from the theological president. Now when it is considered that students were idmissible into this institution at the early age of sixteen, and that individuals of various measures of talent were, of course, all expected to perform the same kind of duty, it may very naturally be supposed that by some it would be but awkwardly done. I remember even now, with a painful and mortifying distinctness, several scenes in which devotion has been converted into diversion. Frequently would some trembling novice, forgetting what he had learned by heart, abruptly some in the midst of his prayer, painfully exerting his recollection to gather up the broken thread; and frequently would some inexperienced youth, trusting in the power of extemporizing, fluently commence with a bold and steady effection of devotional commonplaces, and then suddenly would he become confused, forgetting what he had said, and perhaps repeating it or, becoming more bewildered, -would ramble into all manner of luesherences, and the suddenly moulds of manner of luesherences, and the suddenly mould think of males above investigation of the chancel of this ancient and because of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and corry, and Cory, of Durham, to whom too great price cannot be given, for the chanteress and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and cory, of Durham, to whom too great price cannot be given, for the chanteress and beautiful church, at the joint expense of the restor and cory, of Durham, to whom too great price cannot be given, for the chantered; and Cory, of Durham, to whom too great price cannot be given, for the chantered; and Cory, of Durham, to whom too great price cannot be given, for the chantered; and Cory, of Durham, to whom too great price cannot be given. For the chantered in the chantered in the chance of the chance in general for protection for themselves and their frequently would some inexperienced youth, trusting town's people. "However," she added, "do you in the power of extemporizing, fluently commence with think that if it were the will of God to build a wall a bold and steady efficient of devotional commonstance. And now came the dreaded night of the 5th of places, and then suddenly would be become confu manner of lucaberonces, and talk such honorous and waterwassing non received work of the archway leading from the saldiers entered one after another, and even went to the neighbouring houses to ask for what they wanted, but all rode past their dwelling.

Throughout the subjection, such scenes are highly provocation for the neighbouring houses to ask for what they wanted, but all rode past their dwelling.

Throughout the which many suppressed the actual explosion of loud lengther, and to washe as an even while day there had been a heavy fall of snow—the finat that winter—and towards the evening the sterm became from strengths or of the subjection of the knack of extemporaneous prayer must be a unster of immense value, when such by the snow from entering the town by another send by the snow from satering the town by another send by the snow from satering the town by another send the indecorum of exposing prayer itself to the state of the suitable with these saiders, who had been hindered by the snow from satering the town by another send the indecorum of exposing prayer itself to the state of the suitable where the slid with three saiders, when and the same are send filed with three saiders, when any of inspiration, what prevents that inspiration from being lists the fine carved work of the charch, have been difficulty with which many suppressed the actual explosion of interesting, and that leading into the nerve of the charch. SURPAY SANOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.

To-morrow Mr. Rowlanto: Hill's plan for cetting at nought the fourth commandment, comes into operation; and, in the tree style of Whig-hyportay, under pretrace of honouring the Divine injunction. Mr. Hill, no doubt, has been moved to the devising of the whole reheave by the most plane considerations. It was his carrect desire to remody the extensive desceration of the Lord's day which takes place throughout the whole country under, the existing arrangements of the Pest-Uffice. That in this very leadable sudantour he bit upon a plan which sutails desceration of that day in the control of the Hill's unifertune rather than his fault; and, like other breakers of the law, he is, of course, sutitled to the benefit of the doubt.

Rest melther Mr. Hill's mandertunete abliquity of vision.

But neither Mr Hista's unfortunate abliquity of vision nor the enincidence of the views of Lono John Russel, and his colleages with those of the great Wisard of St. Martin's lo-Grand, will have the effect of causing the The following little story of a gentlemen, who was then well known, and held some office in N. under the government, was told by a friend of his.

In the early life of P., while he was studying at R., it happened that, owing to the disturbances of the country, his parents, who lived at a distance, fell at one time into such difficulties, that they were not able to same time death deprives him of his chief friend in the place where he was. One day, early in the moraing, with a very ead heart, he was passing through a church in the town, which stood always open. He found it empty; and throwing himself on his knees before the altar, he prayed that God would shew him some way out of his distrens, so that his pressing need might be supplied. As he arose and went towards the door, which led into the principal street, a poor old infirm woman leaning upon crutches, came into the church and naked him for alma. P. had cally one shilling left, with which he had throught to provide himself with food for that day; but he gave it to the poor woman, with them allent words of prayer: "O Lord, I have beaught Thee for help, and those causest even the last manked and asked alma and the ambles are seen in the poor woman, with them allent words of prayer: "O Lord, I have beaught Thee for help, and those causest even the last manked and the markle manked the alma beaught have the morained with how the last manked to be in their way in the Most to be in their wop the honor of the Most the honor the honor with the minister of him Most the minister word a single the maked to be in their way hall by their mandete rob the Most the Most the honor with the hards to be in their way in the Most the Most of the minister of the Most the most toward the honor was the minister of the Most the provincial Post offices would never have been thought to nequive to them to the word and through the provincial Post offices would never have been thought to nequive to the white remembers the minister of the whote the most of the way and the next the most of the word of the most them both to be in their day the header way all throught to be in the most of the minister way the manked to the honor was and comfort we will be never the minister of the Most the provincial Post of the public remembers the most of the most three way and the done away with, and the servants of that important depart-the rites of the Church, 17,046 were by license, and 24, 863 by banns. Upon comparing these data with the returns for 1842, it appears that the total number of marriages in 1842, according to the rites of the Church, was 110,047, while in 1847 it was 120,976, showing an increase in six years of 10,879, or more than the total number of Protestant and Roman Dissenters' marriages put together. CONFIRMATIONS ON THE CONTINUES. -- The Lord Bishop of Chines has returned from his tour on the Cor where he has held confirmations for the Lord Bishop of London. The number of confirmed by his Lordship at Bruges, Brussels, Frankfort, Bonn, and the Hague, is 247.

The Loads Intelligencer, of Saturday, records the consecration of the church of the Holy Trinity, in the village of Meanwood, near that town, built by the Misses Becket at an expuner of about £5,000, as a memorial to their decreased brother. Also the laying of the foundation stones Evangelist, at Moor Allerton, and the other to St. John the Evangelist, at Moor Allerton, and the other to St. Lake, at East Morton, near Bingley.

While the Universities are counting up those bishops who have graduated either at Oxford or Cambridge, and and while Oxford is complaining of an undus preference of her mathematical sister, the little island of Barbadous has reason to triumph that she has now on the episcopal to the beautiful and the little island. brach no less than three bishops, viz., Dr. Hampden, Bishop of Hereford, Dr. Hinds, (the new) Bishop of Nor-wich, and Dr. Piercy Austin, the Colonist Bishop of ded of the follies of their youth:—I say fullies, not sine, for whatever ain there might be in the matter, lay rather at the door of those elderly persons sho permitted and prompted young persons thus to commit themselves. In the college now referred to, it was a standing rule, that each student in rutation, after the completion of the first year of his academic course, should conduct the family devotion in the evening. It was not expressly stated that the prayer should be extemporaneous, but it was generally understood so, and I never remember to have witnessed any deviation from that practice. It is indeed true, that some few, not daring to trust themselves to the impulse of the moment, and to the words which might present themselves on the occasion, did previously compose a prayer, which they committed to memory; but I feel very confident that, had any student read this commond. THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERDURY AND PLUBALITIES in any case in which he had reason to believe that the distance, stipend, or population, exceeded the legal figure. But we are informed, on what we consider to be good authority, that Dr. Summer puts altogether a new reading upon the law; that he considers that the veto is not conupon the law; must no considers that the veto is not con-ditional, but absolute, in his hands; and that, under this conviction, he purposes to withold his license in every case where the stipend of either livings amounts to a thousand a-year. And we have further heard that the point at issue will speedily be tested by an appeal against him in the Privy Council.—Church and State Gazette.

Soman.—Some weeks ago we reported the intended repairs and restoration of the chancel of this ancient and lione of the large cost window have been co tried themselves in them; in several houses there were even fifty or sixty of these wild half savage men. It was a terrible night for those who dwelt in this part of the town, filled to overflowing with the troops of their elections and parties know that the matter depends upon intellect and habit.

But not a single soldier came into the grandmothor's house; and emidet the bund noises and wild counde all sevenal, and not even a kneek at this door was heard, to the grand work of the family within. The ment meraling, so it grew light, they saw the cause.

Suppar samous that necessary pointed as very judicious and work-manike manner. We cannot but feel highly gratified at intellect and habit.
