Married at Smiths Falls.
Last Wednesday evening at nine o'clock, the marriage was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, of Miss Katie Mildred Thom, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Thom, of Smiths Falls, and Mr. E. Theodore Frost, second eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Frost, of Smiths Falls. Rev. A. L. Fraser of Westminster church officiated, and Miss Flo Condie played the wedding march. There were no attendants. The bride was given away by her father and wore a gown of maize corded silk, with touches of French embroidery in cream and pink, with hat embroidered to match, and carried a shower bouquet of cream roses and pink sweet peas. After the ceremony, supper was served, the only guests other than the members of both families present, being Rev. Mr. Fraser and Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. W. McPherson and Miss Edna Bennett, Carleton Place, and Miss Katie Hamilton, of Ottawa. The table decorations were white watered silk ribbon streamers, entwined with smilax, and a vase of tuscany roses. Mr. and Mrs. Frost left on the midnight train for a short honeymoon and upon their return will take up residence at 52 Mill St. Both bride and groom are popular young people in Smiths Falls; the bride is a graduate nurse and the groom is connected with the Smiths Falls Malleable Castings Company. The Record extends congratulations.—Rideau Record.

The funeral of the late Miss Nellie Matthie (omitted last week) was largely attended. The services at the home and at the grave were conducted by Rev. Mr. Henderson, of the Methodist Church. The pallbearers were all girl friends of the deceased—Misses Minerva Rothwell, Lena Rothwell, Sadie Featherstone, Verna White, Flossie Boyd, and Tillie Graham. Among the floral tributes were wreaths from the family, from the employees of the Hawthorn Mills, and from Mrs. J. E. Gobeil; a spray from Misses Sarah Ashby and Gladys Kenny, and cut flowers from Mrs. M. Sterns. Interment was made in Pine Grove cemetery.

The employees of what is known as the C.P.R. federated trades in Ottawa and Carleton Place, in common with similar employees on all the company's lines east of Port Arthur, will share in a 6 cent increase per hour for a nine hour day, which has just been announced from Montreal. The increase which will date from May 1st, will affect many thousands of men employed in the roundhouses, such as machinists, boiler makers, etc.

An order in Council was passed and signed forbidding betting on racetracks in Canada from August 1 till the end of the war.

After forty years' capable service Rev. Father Chaine, of Araprior (retired to private life), has resigned his office of treasurer of the Separate School Board.

IN THE CASUALTY LISTS

In yesterday's list of week-end casualties the name of Bomb. Norman R. McPhail, of Carleton Place, appears under the head of wounded.

Pte. Geo. Field, Smiths Falls is reported killed.

A Missing Man.

Chief Wilson has received a circular from the Police Department at Sault Ste. Marie, concerning Charles E. Bate-man, aged 28 years, who is described as being tall, with dark brown hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion. He was last heard of, September, 1916, when he was a member of the 211th Batt., at Calgary Alta., and was given a month's leave to help with the harvest. Any information will be gratefully received by Ralph G. Vincent, Chief Constable, Sault Ste. Marie.

The Women's Institute.

The Women's Institute met in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon, with a large attendance. The Secretary Treasurer gave the report of the past year, which will be published in next week's issue. A life membership in the Red Cross Society was presented to Mrs. Yuill. A very interesting talk was given by Miss Susie Campbell, on "Woman's work after the War," after which refreshments were served. The following donations were received: Miss Marjorie McGregor (Beckwith), $5.00; Miss Jeanette McGregor (Beckwith), $5.00; Mrs. Godden, $1; Sunshine Y., $5.00; Mrs. Muirhead, $5; Mrs. A. W. Bell, $2; Mrs. James Bennett, $1; Mrs. A. W. Cram, $1; Mrs. B. Y. Williams, $1; Mrs. James Hughes, 25c; Mrs. Yuill, $1; Mrs. T. Bartley (Toronto), 75c; Mrs. N. D. McCallum, $1; Mrs. D. McFarlane, $1; Miss Berryman, 2 pr. socks. 44 new members were added to the roll for June.

The Late James Thom.

Mr. James Thom, one of our most highly respected citizens, passed away on Sunday afternoon last, after a somewhat lengthy illness. Deceased was born in Ramsay, being a son of the late John Thom, one of the early Scotch settlers who came to this country from Glasgow. He was in his 82nd year, and spent his entire fourscore life in the neighborhood of his birth. When a young man he took up land in the 6th concession of Ramsay, where his son John at present resides, where he lived until he moved into Carleton Place about 18 years ago. He married Christina Waddell, and to them was born a family of six children, five of whom survive, John in Ramsay, and Margaret (Mrs. Robert McGregor of Almonte), his twin sister; Mrs. David Henry of town, Mrs. Eph. Henry and James Thom of Ramsay. Mrs. Thom died shortly after the birth of her last child, and some years later Mr. Thom married Margaret Crain, who also predeceased him, passing away a little over three months ago. By the second marriage a son and daughter, were born—Helen (Mrs. Wm. Moore, at Red Deer, Alta.); and W. P. Thom at home. One brother also survives, Mr. David Thom, of Whitehurst, Leeds county. The deceased was a man of strict integrity and high moral character, and although not much in the public, being of a reserved disposition, was a great reader and very well informed. In religion he was a Presbyterian. The funeral took place this afternoon, the services at the house and grave being conducted by Rev. Mr. Dobson, with whose congregation he had been connected for many years.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries dedicated to tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

WHAT IS HOME.

Ask the above question to any person you chance to meet, who has wandered from home, and in nine cases out of ten the answer will be that Home is a green spot in memory, a center about which the greatest recollecting of his grief-oppressed heart cling with all tenderness of youth's first love. Home has an influence which is stronger than death. It is law to our hearts and binds us with a spell which neither time nor change can break. Not merely friends and kindred render that home so dear, but the very hills and streams throw a charm around the place of one's nativity. It is no wonder the grandest harps are tuned to sing of "Home Sweet Home." No songs are sweeter than those heard among the boughs that share our parent's dwelling, when some evening hour found us gay as the birds that warbled o'er us. We may wander away and mingle with the world's strife, form new associates and fancy we have forgotten the land of our birth; but as we listen perhaps to the summer wind, the remembrances of other days come over the soul and fancy bears us back to the childhood days and home. We may find climates as beautiful and friends as dear, but they will not usurp the place of "Home, Sweet Home."

WORK WILL NOT HURT.

It was Robert J. Burdette who said: My son, you have to work, whether you handle pick or pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around, you will see the men who are the most able to live the rest of their days without, work the hardest.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. They die sometimes, but it's because they quit work at 6 p. m. and don't go home until 2 a. m. It is the interval that kills, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, and gives you a perfect and graceful appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even; it simply speaks of them as "old Soandso's boys." The great, busy world doesn't know that they are there.

So find out what you want to be and do, take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.

APPRECIATION.

I always look forward to the coming of your paper with much anticipation, as to what good thing the Home Circle will have for us this week, and am never disappointed. You seem to have an inexhaustible supply of wholesome truth for all in the home—old and young. Every phase in life receives its illumination from your pen, and somehow life seems a bit brighter, the atmosphere purer and hope stronger after absorbing the thoughts you present and in appreciation of all this and many other excellent features, writes lines.—A Western Reader.

If men would remember that women can't always be smiling, who have to cook the dinner, answer the bell half a dozen times get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in, tend to a sick baby, tie up the cut finger of a two-year-old, gather up the playthings of a four-year-old, tie up the head of a six-year-old on skates, and get an eight-year-old ready for school, to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning, etc. A woman with all these to contend with may claim it a privilege to look and feel a little tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy would not be too much to expect from the man, who, during the honeymoon, wouldn't let her carry as much as a sunshade.

The evening is the hour when crafty Satan preaches most eloquently. It is also the hour when he can gather the largest and most attentive audience. In our great cities Satan's churches are crowded every evening. But, fortunately, the evening hour is also the hour in which the good angel can gather the largest audience and he who would baffle Satan's influence must preach in the evening. The evening is the hour when the protesting power of home is greatest; it is the hour when its protection is most needed.

A mother who really has the good of her children at heart, will teach them as soon as they can walk, not only to help themselves, but to help others. She will not bring them up under the impression that they are unfeeling angels, but dear, willful, little mortals who must learn they came to serve and not to rule. Self sacrifice is a good quality in a mother, but it is possible to carry that spirit too far; it is possible to make sacrifices which are not only uncalculated and unnecessary, but really harmful in their effects.

In the home all that is characteristically feminine in woman unfolds and flourishes. Home without woman is a misnomer, for woman makes home, and home is what she makes it. If she is illiterate, her home partakes of this quality; if she is immoral her home cannot be the abode of virtue; if she is coarse, refinement does not dwell where she resides. If she is cultivated, pure, refined, those qualities will characterize the home which she creates. The higher the degree of her culture, her purity, her refinement, the more will these qualities characterize the home of which she is the center.

Col. de Hertel Returns.

Colonel de Hertel returned to Perth from overseas on Saturday last and is on three months' leave. He was in France for a month attached to the 18th Battalion, 2nd Division, 4th Brigade and left France just previous to the Vimy Ridge engagement. Colonel de Hertel states that it is conceded by the allied forces in France that the British and French were masters of aerial warfare, and the submarine menace was being controlled successfully. The 130th Battalion was in England but a short time. Practically all the fit men were in France within one month after landing in England.—Perth Courier.

Killed by Train.

The body of Horace George Gordon Craig, a well-known Ottawa druggist, was found badly cut up beside the C.P.R. tracks near Manotick last Saturday morning by the crew of the morning passenger train from Prescott. Although it is not known how he was killed, it is believed that he was struck by a freight train which passed through some time during the night. The deceased was about 35 years of age and lived in Ottawa for many years. Several years ago he was in partnership with W. A. Henderson, druggist, Bank street, and at one time was manager of the Carp Drug store. He was well known in this community.—Carp Review.

Piles of trash and rubbish in fence corners and in out-of-the-way places around the yard, or in the attic or cellar, are innumerate "fire bugs" waiting only for the opportune spark or the slower process of spontaneous combustion to burst into flame.

Mr. D. G. Alexander, of Stittsville, recently received the sad news of the death of his sister, Mrs. James Burroughs, of Shelburne, Manitoba. The late Mrs. Burroughs, whose maiden name was Sarah Sane Alexander, was born in Huntley 83 years ago, and lived in this vicinity many years before moving West.—Carp Review.

Ann Ferguson, wife of Mr. John Burns, died at her home in Drummond on the 2nd instant. She had been ill some time. The late Mrs. Burns was born in the township of Montague 73 years ago. Forty-nine years ago she married and since had made her home in Drummond where she was highly esteemed and loved. The husband, five sons and four daughters mourn her loss.

IT WAS HIS OWN FIGHT.

So Plucky Enver Pasha Wanted the Scrap All to Himself.

I have known Enver Pasha for some years now, said a British vice consul to a traveler who writes to an exchange. The beginning of our friendships dates from the Young Turk revolution of 1908. On the morning that the revolution broke out in Constantinople I went to the bazaars with a guard of marines to see that the shops of British subjects were not attacked. I found the Hindus unmolested, but the shops of the Armenians, Jews, Syrians and Greeks were being ruthlessly plundered, and I observed men dead or wounded lying on the pavement or across the doors of shops they had tried to defend. The climax was reached when a hulking trooper came staggering over the body of a murdered Armenian rug merchant, carrying a sack of loot in one hand and with the other dragging by the hair a half senseless girl of fourteen or fifteen. Four or five companions, all looted and yelling, reeled after him.

I had been ordered to refrain from interfering, except to protect British subjects, and I was still hesitating when an Ottoman cavalry officer galloped up, leaped from his horse and flung himself upon the soldier. A vicious saber cut, shearing through the turban and scalp, sent the hulking wretch to the pavement. Instantly the youthful Galahad stooped to raise the fainting girl, and it was only by a catlike spring that he was able to oppose any guard to a descending saber that one of the other footers aimed at the exposed back of his neck.

A moment later he had backed into an angle of the wall and was calmly meeting the furious but ill directed attack of the ruffians.

I wish the fight could have gone on to a finish, for so coolly and adroitly did the young officer stand his ground that I am confident he would have out-matched his clumsy assailants. But my jackies got out of hand and started in to equalize a contest that outraged their sense of sportsmanship. The Bazookies scattered at the sight of the ominously leveled bayonets, but it was a very angry Turkish officer who strode up to the big sergeant of marines and in voluble French demanded to know "what he meant by mixing up in another man's fight."

"I am K. of the British embassy," I interposed in halting Turkish. "The marines thought you were in danger and with the best of intentions tried to create a diversion in your favor."

"I am Enver, captain in the Young Turk army," he replied stiffly in precise English. "In the circumstances your apology is accepted. As you and these men appear to have wandered away from that portion of the city where protection has been provided for foreigners, may I not require your kindness by conducting all of you safely back to the British embassy?"

And, in spite of my protests to the contrary, come he did. But he unbent on the way, and our meeting of that morning was the beginning of a warm friendship.

His Choice.

"A bad beginning means a good ending." "That may be, but if I can have my choice I'll take the fine start every time."—Detroit Free Press.

After taking 1000 ZUTOO TABLETS Says they are Harmless

Mrs. (Dr.) Shurtliff, of Coaticook, says "Zutoo Tablets must have cured 500 of my headaches, for I have taken 1000 tablets. After trying every remedy within reach, I discarded them all four years ago for ZUTOO, which I have taken ever since. I find the tablets a harmless and efficient cure for all kinds of headache." 25 cents per box—at all dealers.

Sleepy Time Story About an Interesting Little Insect.

HOW IT IS FED AND REARED.

Queer Home in Which It Begins Its Career—Baby Food That Would Not Appeal to Children—How a Small Boy Became a Hero.

This evening, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you about

WASPS AND A BOY.

Once when I was a small boy I knew a little fellow named Tommy Tompkins.

Tommy was a wonderful boy, and he did his best to make the rest of us think he was one.

We had an old chicken house where a lot of wasps had built their homes. Every spring the wasps had a great time building more cells and new houses.

In each cell, we were told, the mother wasp would lay an egg, which would hatch out after awhile into a baby wasp, and we were told also that before the little white cover was fastened to the opening in the cell so that the baby wasp would be kept nice and warm until it was able to take care of itself the pantry would be stored with food for the babies to eat.

And what do you think the wasps feed their babies? Well, they give them nice fat spiders. Spiders are just as much afraid of wasps as flies are afraid of spiders.

When the wasps catch a spider they sting him so he cannot fight. Then they drag him to their nest and stuff him into one of the egg cells. By and by, when the cell is full of spiders, the mother wasp will lay an egg in it. Then a warm curtain is spun over the mouth of the cell. When the baby wasp comes out of the egg it will eat these spiders.

You know how a wasp can sting. Boys and girls are generally afraid of them, and they have good reason to be so.

Little Tommy Tompkins, however, became quite a hero in the neighborhood because he said he was not afraid of wasps and bees.

"They don't bite me, wasps don't. Bees don't bite," he would say.

If you made it very pleasant for Tommy Tompkins he would come over into your yard and when a bee came along hold out his little hand and let the insect settle there. The bees and wasps didn't sting Tommy, but now that I am grown up and know more about insects I don't think so strange. The reason was he kept perfectly still, so that he did not frighten or anger them.

While there are some cross insects that sting folks without any seeming reason, usually if you stand perfectly still the bee or wasp won't hurt you. Of course if he has been stirred up by somebody or something before you come along he is going to take it out on you, so it is just as well to keep away from stinging bugs and not try to be a Tommy Tompkins.

Osman Pasha's Daring.

One of the most gallant generals that ever surrendered to the enemy was Osman Pasha, the immortal defender of Plevna. Surrounded by an immeasurably superior army of Russia, Osman kept his flag flying for 142 days, inflicting a loss of 40,000 men on the enemy and losing 50,000 of his own garrison. It was only when both provisions and ammunition failed that he decided on that desperate attempt to cut his way through the investing army. The attempt, one of the most daring and resolute in history, failed, and Osman was at last compelled to admit defeat. So impressed, however, were the enemy with his valor that as he was carried wounded through their ranks they greeted him as a conqueror with cheers and presented arms.

A Little Nervous.

Lord Charles Beresford tells a story about his stay at a country inn near Oxford. His lordship arrived over night quite alone, and told the host who he was. "That worthy thus admonished the hot water boy: 'Look here,' said he earnestly, 'we have got a lord here—a real live lord. We never had one here before, and I don't suppose we will ever again. When you take his lordship's water up in the morning knock several times, and if a voice says: 'Who is there?' mind you say: 'It's the boy, my lord!' The unfortunate boy was so flustered, however, next morning that shivering outside the door with his hot water when Lord Charles cried: 'Who's there?' he blurted out: 'It's the lord, me boy.'"

BROWN ROT ON PLUMS AND PEACHES

(Experimental Farms Note.)

There is one phase of fighting this disease which is hardly ever given consideration, — the destruction of the old dried-up, rotted fruits, or "mummies," which hang on the trees through the winter. Researches by the officers of the Division of Botany, Dominion Experimental Farms, have demonstrated beyond question that these mummies will readily carry the fungus over the winter, and even if they are covered with spring spraying, the fungus will readily grow out through the spray coat on the dried-up fruit.

Plum mummies may be shaken or knocked off the trees at any time in the winter and this work may be conveniently done along with pruning; but in the case of peaches they should be taken off as soon as the fruit starts to rot, that is, at picking time. This early removal in the case of peaches is necessary because the juice from the rotting peach passes back into the branch, which is thus killed for distances up to two feet or more.

In large commercial orchards the only practicable way in which to dispose of these mummies is to have them ploughed under, but in small orchards, or in garden plots, they may be raked up and burned or buried; and it is well worth while to do this when cleaning up in the fall.

THE HOUSING OF POULTRY.

These are the days when the more study is allied to practice the greater the success. In food production, as in all other things, this is eminently true. Book-learning is no longer an object of sneering by the man of practical experience. He has been forced to the conclusion that an earnest study of books, pamphlets and bulletins is a tremendous help to the beginner and often of the greatest value to himself. In by gone times poultry-keeping was of a haphazard nature. If the hens were healthy and laid in mysterious places all was well. If they didn't, the true cause was rarely discovered and the fowl, having seemingly failed of their usefulness, were summarily dispatched. To-day much of this is changed and poultry-keeping has become a systematic pursuit permitting of research and subject to experiment, the same as any other branch of agricultural industry.

A one to two-year old sod, when ploughed under, will enrich the soil as much as would manure applied at the rate of 10 to 12 tons per acre.

LANARK.

From the Era.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in the manse, Watson's Corners, on Wednesday, by Rev. R. J. Wilson, when Miss Lizzie Easton, second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Easton, Dalhousie, became the wife of Mr. Edward Closs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Closs of Flower Station.

In accordance with a petition to the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, signed by residents of the townships of Lavant, Dalhousie and Lanark, and forwarded by the Hon. Dr. Preston, three live beaver have been shipped from the Algonquin Provincial Park to the vicinity of Park's Lake, in the township of Dalhousie, with the object of restocking said townships once more with beaver. The conditions are that the Board of Agriculture appoint a number of responsible parties to see that the beaver are given complete protection for a number of years and to report to the said Department of Lands, Forests and Mines frequently as to how the beaver are progressing. This being the first experiment of this nature taken up by said department, the outcome of it will be watched with interest.

Mrs. William Cunningham of the township of Drummond, daughter of the late Oswald Montgomery, passed away last Saturday at the age of 76 years and 6 months. She had been ill for two years with goitre. Her maiden name was Jane Montgomery and she was born on the homestead now occupied by Mr. Thomas Montgomery, township of Drummond. Fifty-seven years ago Wm. Cunningham and Jane Montgomery were married and settled down on the ninth concession. The husband died in June, 1890. There were four daughters and one son—Mrs. Thomas Ireton, Drummond Centre; Mrs. Thomas H. Jackson, Chilliwack, B.C.; Mrs. Norman Anderson, Carleton Place; Mrs. H. J. Hande (deceased) and William O., now on the homestead. Mrs. James E. Allan, Balderson is a sister; William of Drummond, Oswald and Samuel, Winnipeg, and Robert, Maskawata, Man. are the surviving brothers. Deceased was a woman of kindly disposition, friendly and companionable. She made many friends and once a friendship established it was not easily broken. With the neighbors the name of Mrs. Cunningham was synonymous with goodness; as time and time again she had given evidence of the christian principles which controlled her life. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon from her late residence to Elmwood cemetery, Perth, services at the house and in St. John's Church, Balderson, being conducted by Rev. C. C. Phillips. The pallbearers were Wm. Montgomery, Chas. McLenaghan, Andrew Allan, H. J. Hands, W. T. Ireton and Clyde McIlquham.

SUCCESS WITH BARLEY.

Experience of a Farmer Who Sowed It as an Alfalfa Nurse Crop.

I have never raised barley as a crop but once, and then it was used as a nurse crop to alfalfa in 1915, writes a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer. I sowed ten acres of barley broadcast on May 8, 1915, using ten bushels. I think the name of the variety was Oederbrucker. It is a bearded barley with six rows of kernels. I paid 50 cents a bushel for the seed. I graded it and treated it for smut in a wagon box, using formaldehyde.

The barley being bearded, I could not cut for hay, so I let it mature and cut and shocked it for thrashing. If being very wet at harvest time, it was set up in long shocks and not capped, and it stood the wet weather remarkably well. When it stopped raining we thrashed about Sept. 4. It yielded 334 bushels, machine measure, and went into the bin in fine shape. I have used it for grinding and sold some for seed at 78 cents per bushel. The alfalfa came on nicely, and the binder clipped it some; then we mowed it off about Oct. 1 and let the clippings lie on the ground.

The field was limed April 27, using three tons of pulverized limestone per acre, spread with a limestone sower. The alfalfa seed was inoculated. The two and one-half bushels of seed used was sown with a hand seeder, using one-half of the seed both ways of the field, followed by a sixteen foot harrow, then rolled and harrowed again. The ground was in oats stubble in 1914 and manured and plowed deep, and the ten bushels of seed barley produced 334 bushels of good heavy barley. Had it not been used as a nurse crop I would have sown more and it might have produced more bushels. A large per cent was shelled and wasted on the ground.

FARMERS SHOULD RAISE MORE DRAFT HORSES

The danger of overproduction of horses is remote. It costs more to produce them than any other class of live stock, writes Wayne Dinsmore in the Iowa Homestead. For that reason many farmers sit back and proclaim that it doesn't pay to raise horses; that there never was a time when the horse market was so dull as now; that the motor truck and tractor have killed the horse business and the horse is a thing of the past. Some people believe all of this, even though the truth of the matter is the opposite. Those who have allowed such thoughts to direct their operations for the past five to ten years will soon see the error of their ways. It takes time to make much headway in the horse business. Five years are needed to grow a horse. At best one should not expect more than two colts from three mares as an average per year. Moreover not more than 16 per cent of our farmers are raising colts. Not long hence the American farmer will wake up only to learn that a great opportunity has passed.

One of the speakers at the Illinois Horse Breeders' association said that one reason for the fact that our farm horses are not as good as they ought to be is the scarcity of good, useful sires. Approximately half the stallions standing for public service in this country are grade animals. The rest of the pure bred sires never to have been used as sires. The stallion shown is a pure bred Percheron.

The next ten years is bound to see the greatest demand for horseflesh the world has ever known. It can't be met on short notice. The man who is breeding every mare old enough to the best stallion available and is taking proper care of the offspring is the man who is sure to be rewarded.

There are plenty of men who have bought and paid for farms within the past ten years by their pure bred draft mares. In the same community there are farmers who are no better off financially than they were a decade ago because they failed to foresee the profits from using the right kind of horses in their farm work. The men who have made money and who are going to reap the fruits of their efforts in the future are those who early saw the undeniable need for heavy draft horses for farm work, who bred that kind and who will continue to do so without a halt.

Keep Eggs Clean. Provide roomy, clean nests. There should be at least one nest for every six hens. Foul nests cause dirty eggs. Dirty eggs, no matter how large and fresh, are always graded as seconds or lower. Gather the eggs often and keep them in a cool, dry place all the time until they are sold. Use the small, dirty or cracked eggs at home. Small eggs are just as wholesome for food as large ones.

The Men's Bath. An old box half full of wood ashes and the ashes sprinkled with lime makes a good bath wherein Biddy can dust herself and free herself of vermin.

A NEW EMPRESS.

Consort of the Youthful Ruler of Austria-Hungary.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN.

Not Yet Twenty-five Years Old, This Royal Lady Has Three Sons and a Daughter—Also Two Brothers in the Belgian Army.

The empress of Austria is the thirteenth of the twenty children of Duke Robert of Parma, who was expelled from his sovereign duchy at the age of twelve by its incorporation in the kingdom of Italy. He inherited, however, the immense fortune of the Comte de Chambord and made his home in Vienna, where he assumed the state of a royal personage, with all his inherited titles—grand duke of Tuscany, king of Hanover, duke of Brunswick, duke of Parma, king of Naples, the Two Sicilies and Jerusalem.

Five of the duke's eight children by his first wife were either feeble minded or insane. His second wife, still living, is the sister of the Archduchess Maria Theresa, mother of the murdered Archduke Francis Ferdinand. She made her home in Paris some years ago and is related to the queen of the Belgians; hence the appearance of her sons in the Belgian army, the Prince Xavier and Sixte. President Poincare recently decorated both with the croix de guerre.

The duchy of Parma was made a part of the kingdom of Italy after 1859, since which time the principal residence of the dual family has been at the castle of Schwarzau, near Vienna. It was here that the Princess Zita was married on Oct. 21, 1911. Her father, Duke Robert of Parma, who died in 1907, was married first to Princess Maria Pia of the Two Sicilies and secondly to Princess Maria Antonia of Parma. Duke Henry, the present head of the house, is an offspring of the first marriage, the Empress Zita of the second. She was born at the Villa Pianore, near Viareggio, on May 9, 1892.

The new emperor has always been devoted to his wife. Their union is said to have been the result of a pure love match. The alliance is said to have been looked on unfavorably by the old emperor—the more particularly as he had hoped, according to persistent rumor, that Charles Francis Joseph would marry a daughter of the Archduchess Marie Valeria, his own daughter, who was married in 1890 to the Archduke Francis Salvator of Hapsburg-Tuscany.

Upon making the acquaintance of the Princess Zita, however, the old emperor relented and soon gave his consent to her marriage to the archduke. It is even said that she so strongly reminded him of his dead wife that he exclaimed that she would make a second Elizabeth.

The new empress has three sons, the eldest of whom, the Archduke Francis Joseph Otto, was born at the Villa Waltholz, near Reichenau, on Nov. 29, 1912. The second, Louis, was born in Feb. 8, 1915. There is also a daughter, Archduchess Adelaide, who was born Jan. 3, 1914, and a baby son, born last May.

Deep Breathing. Deep breathing, sensible breathing, every day breathing—long life depends upon it, good looks always. Yet nine-tenths of the world's creatures hate to breathe, and young folks especially are as niggardly in the matter of filling their lungs with clean, wholesome air as if they thought they were dealing with poison. Twenty long breaths night and morning will quickly improve the looks of a girl who has begun to go down with study and carelessness, and surely there is no beautifier cheaper than deep breathing.

Making the Best of It. There was a worthless old chap whom they tarred and feathered in Graveyard. "So they tarred and feathered you, eh?" said a curious friend. "Yep. They tarred and feathered me." "How did it make you feel?"

Raisins as Food. As a producer of energy the raisin is a marvel. One pound of raisins in this respect, according to a doctor, will more than equal "a pound of beef or five pounds of fish, two pounds of eggs, four pounds of potatoes, two quarts of milk, half a peck of apples or a dozen bananas." And the advantage of the sugar in the raisin is that it is almost immediately digested, assimilated and transformed into energy.

ONTARIO PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

Toronto, June 7.—If a man wishes to bring down upon himself the disapproval of the press and the people of Canada, one effective way in which he can do it is to accept a hereditary title. It was only a few months ago that a flood of protest and unfavorable comment came at the bestowal on a Canadian of such a title.

In the free democracy of Canada, Mr. Rowell said at that time, "we are not improving conditions by importing hereditary titles passing from father to son. If this is the first, I hope it may also be the last." This statement, and the sentiments expressed in it were echoed and re-echoed throughout Canada. The Ottawa Journal Press (Conservative) said, "The public attitude in Canada is well expressed in the comment of Mr. Rowell, and The Christian Guardian said that they would like to second with all the emphasis they might, the remarks made by Mr. Rowell regarding the granting of Canadian hereditary titles.

Now there is another flood of protest because another hereditary title has been granted. "A lot of Cheap John titles in the paper this morning. They are getting as common as dandelions," was the comment of the Toronto Telegram. "The hereditary title ought to be kept out of Canada. This country does not want a little aristocracy of its own," was the comment of The Mail and Empire, and the Liberal press joined in its disapprobation. The Toronto Star points out that at the recent conference in Washington, France was represented by M. Viviani, Great Britain by Mr. Balfour, the United States by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Lansing, and Canada by Sir Thos. White and Sir George Foster. In this case these are only lifetime titles. "No matter what may be said about them," the Star thinks "There is surely no defence for this new practice of distributing hereditary titles in Canada." "They are conferred," says the Star, "in defiance of public opinion that is, we venture to say, practically universal throughout Canada."

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES.

Among the women who are organizing in order to study public questions and to be able to fulfil their new responsibilities of citizenship, are those of the city of St. Catharines and the surrounding district.

At a meeting of the riding committee recently held attended by both men and women, it was decided, first, that women should be added to the Executive of the St. Catharines Liberal Association, and secondly, that women's Liberal Clubs for educational and patriotic purposes should be formed in St. Catharines, Merriton and other points in the constituency.

It was interesting at this meeting to see the development of women's opinion. At first they said modestly that this was a new field for them and that they would just have to feel their way, slowly and cautiously. While this is undoubtedly true, yet before the meeting was far in progress the women, including several from country points in the riding, were taking a leading part in the discussion, were showing the keenest intelligence on the matters before the committee, and by their own action had established themselves securely as important factors in the work.

This same thing is occurring all over the province, and the adaptability of women is being revealed everywhere.

Mrs. Hyslop, Organizing Secretary of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, has been visiting a number of places in the province, including South Huron, North Huron, North and South Perth, St. Catharines and Kaitloo.

COMBINES AGAIN

Combines as a factor in the high cost of living are again attracting attention. W. F. O'Connor, Federal Commissioner, investigating the cost of living, in his report recently published, thinks that the provinces have exhibited "little or no interest in the enforcement of laws against accumulations of products, unjust prices and combines." He thinks that the provincial authorities are primarily responsible for the enforcement of the law respecting the cost of living.

The government of the province of Ontario is particularly affected by the charge. They have immediately denied Mr. O'Connor's allegations and claim that they have done all they could under the law.

The Liberals in the Legislature have been criticising the government on this question of combines year after year.

Their resolution this session was as follows: "In view of the present high cost of living and the increasing burden upon the working classes and those in receipt of limited incomes, due to the high cost of the necessities of life, this House condemns the abandonment by the government of the investigation and prosecution of the illegal combines formed to limit competition and to enhance prices. It is the duty of the government to investigate all alleged illegal combinations in restraint of trade and to prosecute vigorously all those who appear to be violating the law."

This resolution was voted down by the government.

WILL OUTFLANK HUNS

General Haig's New Offensive Has This Object.

German Army Cannot Be Captured, but British Generals Aim to Reduce the Enemy Force Piecemeal—Advance May Automatically Relieve Lille, Douai, and Cambrai.

LONDON, June 11.—Counter-attacks of the Germans against the British army which captured Messines Ridge have on the whole been futile. The strongest one, reported by General Haig, broke down before midnight. It developed on a front of six miles south of Ypres, from St. Yves to the Comines Canal, just above St. Eloi. It is expected that the Prussians will attempt to make a stand on this part of the canal three miles away. Connected with the Yser Canal above Ypres, it forms a waterway clear across Belgium, crossing the frontier at Comines, half of which town is in Belgium and the other half in French territory. The section of the canal north of the border still in Prussian hands is about six miles long.

The best military authorities here agree that the offensive will be pushed further in Belgium along the valley of the Lys River, which forms the boundary as far as Merin, toward Courtrai. This thrust would outflank the Prussian lines as far as the sea on the north and as far as St. Quentin on the south, relieving Lille, Roubaix, and Cambrai. Of course the main object of the Allies is and always has been not gain in territory, but the destruction of the Prussian army.

As the right of this army rests on the North Sea and its left on the Swiss frontier, it cannot be surrounded and captured in its entirety as was the army of Napoleon III. at Sedan, nor can it be annihilated by a frontal attack. The only way to do it is piecemeal—an advance here, followed by an attack there, gradually pushing back the enemy at the greatest possible cost to him, with the least expenditure of life on the part of the Allies. This involves gain in territory.

The total number of prisoners taken since Thursday exceeds 7,000, while a great number of guns are still buried under the debris. There has been no great battle since Friday night, but the British have slightly improved their positions at various points.

Raids of more than usual importance were carried out during the night on the front from La Bassée to north of Lens, large numbers of Germans being killed and their defences destroyed.

In air raids on Thursday night the British blew up a large amount of rolling stock containing munitions. Fires and explosions followed, continuing until dawn. In the course of an air battle over the German lines two British machines collided, both aviators losing their lives.

GENERAL BYNG RESIGNS.

Has Given Up Command of Canadian Fighting Forces.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, June 11.—The Canadians in France are no longer "the Byng boys." Sir Julian Byng bade good-bye to his associates at headquarters Saturday. Before his departure the corps commander issued a special order, in which he said:

"In bidding good-bye to the corps, I find it very difficult to give expression to the feelings of pride and affection which dominate all other sentiments. During the year of my command the unvarying success in battle, the progress in training and in discipline, and the unswerving devotion and loyalty of all ranks are features which stand out prominently in the history of the corps. That history will last forever, and my association with you in the making of it is a joy that can never be impaired."

The men in the ranks, as well as the officers, with whom he was more intimately associated, regret deeply his departure from the command of Canada's field forces.

Recruits in Gotham.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Recruiting of Britons and Canadians here for the British army has been so successful that more than half a battalion has been signed within four days. It was announced Sunday night by Brig-General W. A. White, in charge of the campaign. The first recruits, several hundred in number, will leave here to-morrow for Canada, for a period of intensive training preparatory to overseas service.

"We came here to enlist British and Canadian subjects voluntarily and not to hunt slackers," General White said. "As we anticipated, the results have been gratifying. They have responded in encouraging numbers. I want to make special mention of the excellent type of men thus far recruited. They have come well up to the physical requirements and are a well educated lot."

Captured a General.

PARIS, June 11.—It is reported from Hazebrouck, in Northern France, behind the British front, that among the German prisoners who passed through that town Saturday was a general. He is said to have been captured single-handed by a soldier.

Women Vote in Russia.

PETROGRAD, via London, June 11.—Elections to the district and municipal councils began here Saturday. For the first time in Russian history, universal suffrage was in operation.

ITALIANS TAKE POSSESSION OF CITY IN ALBANIA.

Italian Troops Protests Against Action—Allied Activities Are Reported in the Balkans, the British Aviators Having Bombarded Sevjah, North-west of Seres.

LONDON, June 11.—The occupation by Italian troops of the city of Janina, in north-western Greece, is reported in a Reuter despatch from Athens. On receipt of this information at Athens the Cabinet assembled to formulate a protest. Janina is a town of about 25,000 inhabitants, thirty miles east of the Albanian border and more than 100 miles below the battlefront in Macedonia. In the last few weeks the Italians have been extending operations from their base at the Albanian port of Avlona, taking over various southern Albanian and Greek towns. Last March Greece presented a note to Italy, insisting upon the withdrawal of Italian troops from Epirus.

Referring to the operations in the eastern theatre the French War Office says: "Quite serious artillery actions occurred on Saturday, especially on the right bank of the Vardar and on the Serbian front. Aviators were active on both sides, there being several aerial engagements on the Italian front. British aviators bombarded Sevjah north-west of Seres."

A Bulgarian official report from the Macedonian front, issued on Sunday, says: "The enemy's artillery was active near the Cerna bend and on the Dobropole. There was aerial activity along the whole front."

"Several ships conducted a bombardment of a ho of the town and surroundings of Kavala (in north-eastern Greece on the Aegean Sea) and the coast near Sarichaban (on the Mesta River east of Kavala)."

PEACE PLAN REJECTED.

Russians Perceive Reason for the Teutonic Offer.

PETROGRAD, June 11.—The Council of Soldiers and Workmen announces that the German commander-in-chief on the eastern front sent a wireless message inviting the Russian armies to a separate armistice and proposing that they enter into secret pourparlers with the German leaders. The council denounces the proposals.

In the telegram, the council's announcement states, the German commander proposed to show the armies a way toward an honorable peace without a break with the Entente allies.

The Council of Workmen and Soldiers' delegates has in this connection addressed to the Russian army the following appeal: "The commander-in-chief of the German armies on the eastern front has sent to our troops a wireless message proposing to indicate to them a way towards an honorable peace and a means for ceasing to wage war without a rupture with the Allies. In his telegram the German general declares that a separate armistice does not offer Germany any advantage. But this is untrue, for in speaking of the inactivity of the German army on the Russian front, the German general forgets what Russia cannot forget, notably the Russian defeat on the Rostokod. The German general has forgotten that the Russian troops know whither the divisions and heavy batteries are being taken from our front. The German general has forgotten that we in Russia hear the sound of the bloody battles which British are fighting on the Franco-British front. He has forgotten that Russia knows that the overthrow of her allies would mean the overthrow of Russia and the end of her political liberty."

King Sends Greetings.

LONDON, June 11.—It was officially announced Saturday that King George had sent to Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-chief of the British forces in France and Belgium, the following message: "We rejoice that, thanks to the thorough preparation and splendid co-operation of all arms, the important Messines Ridge, which has been the scene of so many memorable struggles, again is in our hands. "Tell General Plumer and the second army how proud we are of this achievement, by which in a few hours the enemy was driven out of strongly-entrenched positions which had been held by him for two and a half years."

(Signed) George, R. I."

Huns Desert Ostend.

LONDON, June 11.—An Admiralty official statement, issued Sunday night, reads: "The Vice-Admiral at Dover reports that the latest reconnaissance of Ostend shows that all large shipping has been removed from that harbor. Two destroyers, lately reported as being towed to Zeebrugge, are probably those damaged during the bombardment, which have been removed from the basin. The harbor presents a deserted appearance."

Kaiser's Narrow Escape.

LONDON, June 11.—Emperor William was with Field Marshal von Hindenburg, Prince Eitel Friedrich, and other members of the German Emperor's staff inside the St. Peter's Station at Ghent, Belgium, when it was bombarded by Entente allied airmen the other day, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from a Dutch frontier correspondent. The Emperor's party was unhurt, but three army officers nearby were killed.

FROM OUR ANTIPODES.

Rev. Robt. McNair Has Still Kindly Feelings for Carleton Place.

Northcote, Australia, May 7, 1917. My Dear Mrs. Gillies:—

Mrs. McNair has just read me a letter she is sending to you, and although she may have given you all the information there is to impart at this point of the map, nevertheless I would like to add a line too, in order to say to you, and through you, to my other friends in Carleton Place, who may have, like yourself, sons fighting for us, who are not eligible to go ourselves. I do hope your dear Austin, (pardon me—Major Gillies) will come back unharmed from the terrible war. But we can only hope.

Our destinies are in wiser hands, and so are his also. We honor all who have thus gone forth at the call of duty, and those whom we are acquainted with, more especially, we shall ever look upon as our special defenders. Should they fall, then we have this consolation, that for the noblest of all causes they gave "all." For all of freedom and liberty and civilization, won on many a bygone battle-field by our heroic fathers, was and is threatened by a vile and treacherous people, whom we, in our innocence, looked upon as rivals, only to find them fiends whom civilization cannot and must not tolerate to substitute "Kultur" for "Culture."

I cannot say which families in Carleton Place, like David Gillies, have sons in the war, but some of them are known to me through the C.P. paper. To them, one and all, I express what I say to you. "They're Brave Boys." Defending our liberty as heroically as it was obtained by our heroic fathers. It would take a Demosthenes to say what ought to be said of their valor. Who said the British was a race degenerate? The Kaiser thought so. His henchman contemptuously spoke of "General French's contemptible little army." But that vile nation that rose up in its might to tear all down that was achieved, and to trample in the dust all honor and all right, must feel the weight of an avenging hand, and be brought down, for his destruction is the triumph of Justice and Right. He who takes part in this conflict in any capacity helps the cause of God, but he who gives his life for it, can have no more glorious death.

To give a son to fight in this war, is, I consider, to give a son for the grandest, the greatest, of all causes. Little by little were the elements of our civilization gathered and pieced together by generations of noble-minded men, and their descendants, worthy lads, as bravely defend their heritage now, so cheer up; the man who fights is not only a warrior but the instrument of God, who, in God's name, seeks to prevent the destruction of Righteousness.

I write this to remind you that we who cannot go to the front fully appreciate what young men like your only son are now doing, not for us, but for all people down to the remotest ages. Their deeds may be emblazoned on pages of history or otherwise rewarded, or, as in most individual instances, pass unnoticed and unproclaimed, but the effect, the influence, though it may take ages to bring to full fruition, must appear as a great factor in civilization for all time, and by its very universality, awaken, as never before, new thoughts of the Brotherhood of Man. Time for ages to come might be dated before and after the war of Deliverance of Man from Tyranny.

Please add a word to what my better-half has said to all my friends. I might say that she is a hustler and delights in being engaged in useful works in many ways, always going and never still, but yet her same sweet self.

My kindest love to all, who like us are getting along the journey of life.

Yours truly, R. McNAIR.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Franktown, June 2nd, 1917. To the Misses Nellie and Melissa Salter Dear Friends:—

It is with feelings of the deepest and most genuine sorrow, that the members of L. O. L. No. 381 place on record a sense of the loss they have sustained in the passing away of our aged and respected friend and brother, John Salter, and we desire hereby to express to you and the other members of his family our most kindly and affectionate sympathy and our earnest prayer that the God of all mercy and consolation may comfort and sustain you in this time of your sorrow and loss.

Your esteemed father enjoyed in a marked degree the respect and confidence of the whole community in which his long and active life was spent and in no sphere was he more highly esteemed and looked up to, than among the members of the Orange Association. His connection with the Order extended over a period of almost sixty-five years, about sixty of which were spent in connection with this Lodge. You have great reason to be thankful that throughout his very long and active life he was blessed with robust health, a spirit of diligence and devotion, and that he enjoyed in God's good Providence abundant, temporal prosperity and a rich share of the highest blessings of life. It is a source of comfort to yourselves who will remember him as a faithful and affectionate parent, that in his dying hours he rested his faith upon the saving and keeping power of that same God, who had blessed and prospered him during his earthly pilgrimage. Praying that you may all be comforted and meekly resigned to the all-wise will of our Heavenly Father and again assuring you of our sympathy, we are yours on behalf of the Lodge.

SUMMER and the Road are boon companions. The confinement of winter is over. The warm rays of the sun have dried the roads, and the out-of-doors is calling.

All the family can enjoy a Ford Touring car motoring through this beautiful country we live in. Don't allow this summer to pass without enjoying new scenes and having new thoughts. As your Ford carries you through this Garden of Beauty make yourself receptive to her many suggestions and remember Summer and the Ford are boon companions.

Ford cars are economical on account of their light weight. Heavy cars take their toll from the tires and gasoline.

The Ford engineers have not sacrificed strength to secure light weight.

Ford cars are made of the most dependable materials (there is no better). You know when you start out with your Ford in the morning it will hold its head up with the best of them until you put it away for the night and you can take it right out the next day and it will do it over again.

The low price of a Ford Touring car ($517.00 at your door) is only possible on account of quantity production. Made in an ordinary factory this car would sell for at least $800.

The price may advance very soon and we would advise an early purchase. We can make immediate delivery. Of course we will give easy terms where wanted at a very small extra.

Drop in and see the 1917 Ford. It's a beauty. Open evenings.

Animals on Firing Line Are Beloved by Fighters As Friends in Distress

AMONG all the innocent victims of the war none deserve more pity than the animals who find themselves suddenly in the midst of all the horrors of war.

One source of thankfulness is that such a society as the Blue Cross is at work, and through this agency alone a vast amount of suffering has been saved to the horses engaged in serving man in the firing line. A visit to one of the establishments of the society has been described, and it would appear to be most humanely managed. Here the wounded and sick horses are brought, and if these are judged to be beyond rescue they are once put out of their misery. If, however, they can be cured they are skillfully handled by experienced men.

One of the animals described was a black mule with a gray muzzle belonging to our Indian troops. This animal limped painfully, having been shot in the leg, until he could be hoisted on to a wagon sent for him, and it is said he appeared most grateful when the rest of the painful journey to the home was accomplished with as little suffering as possible. When the horses arrived at the home they were placed in two lines to have their wounds dressed. Many of them had bullets still in them, and these were, when possible, removed, and in all cases the wounds were carefully dressed. The saving of such a method in the number of horses' lives is very great, and, considering the terrible wastage of modern war, such an institution is valuable if only from the human point of view, while to anyone who knows from experience the sound of the cry of a wounded horse it is pleasant to know that our dumb helpers are saved as much as possible from the consequences of war.

The animals left in the deserted villages through which the tide of war has passed had extraordinary experiences. Some of the dogs have been found fastened to kennels and left by the inhabitants, where they have spent several days without food or drink. Our soldiers put them out of their pain as quickly as possible, while in several instances the captives have been adopted by our men.

It is strange how soon animals get used even to terrific shell-firing. This is seen in such places as Shoburness, where the testing of large guns is frequent. New horses being brought there to be trained show every symptom of fear, while the animals who have been there for some time graze unconcernedly under the muzzles of the huge guns even at the moment these are being fired without stopping for an instant. And it is said by those in the trenches that the cows which are kept by both sides for the sake of fresh milk are milked every day under fire, the cows seeming in no way disturbed by the falling shells unless they are hit; these animals are constantly under rifle fire, while in the fields round animals are feeding in many cases as if they were in a land of perfect peace.

Amusing tales are sometimes heard of the farmyard animals close to the rival armies. One officer records an instance of some hens which his servant set out to catch for his supper. The hens actually laid eggs in their fright, but managed to escape into the neighboring field, where his man did not dare follow them. And another case of animals under fire, or rather insects, was told by Lord Roberts of one occasion when he was leading the 9th Lancers. Passing a compound in the Northern Provinces in India, a soldier thoughtlessly poked his lance into a wild bees' nest. The angry bees immediately swarmed round him and his companions, and Lord Roberts saw his men scattered in wild confusion, as though an enemy was in pursuit, though none were known to be in that neighborhood. He afterwards found that the Highlanders complained that their dress had not proved suitable for such an encounter.

Wild animals suffer in many ways from the presence of troops in their neighborhoods; for they have not even the poor protection of one side or the other. In this way it is said that wild bears and bears are hastily leaving their haunts in the East of Europe and making across country in every direction, appearing in places they have never before visited. The Carpathians, which have hitherto been one of the finest sporting countries left in Europe, will suffer extremely in this respect from the present conflict which has raged over so much of the range. In Russia wild animals are leaving their haunts; but in this case some of them at least are profiting from the present disturbances, for multitudes of wolves are leaving their fastnesses and, losing their fear of the guns by degrees, are appearing in the neighborhood of the troops as soon as the noise of battle lessens, and are to be found devouring the dead, and even those who have been severely wounded.

And amid much that is lovable in the Russian soldier there are few more pleasing traits than his love for his horse. A writer gives a prayer said to be regularly used by the Russians before going into action for the welfare of his animal. He prays "for the humble beast who with him bears the burden and heat of the day and offers his guileless life for the well-being of their common country" that it may be saved from suffering and given, if its life cannot be spared, at least a speedy death. Such a prayer may seem primitive to us in the West, but at least it gives us a feeling of tenderness for our allies in the East who even at such a moment think of and care for their innocent friends.

Only Youthful Princess Blocks German Ambition In the Country of Dikes

ONLY two lives, those of the reigning Queen and her seven-year-old daughter, Princess Juliana, bar the way in the natural order of things to the accession to the throne of the Netherlands by a German prince. It is true that, so far as health and age are concerned, those lives may be described as "first class," but the potential slenderness of the thread was illustrated not long ago in the Hague woods, where the royal automobile carrying Queen Wilhelmina and the little Princess was the victim of a collision that might under less fortunate circumstances have cost the lives of both.

This question of the succession gave Dutchmen some concern before the war, and much more now. Several well known public men have drawn public attention to the matter in the last few days, and what looks like a strong agitation, enjoying widespread sympathy, has been started for a revision of the Constitution declaring null and void all potential rights of succession of foreign princes, leaving the choice of a new sovereign, in such an unhelped-for and unexpected circumstance as the failure of all direct heirs to the throne, entirely to the States General or Parliament of the country. For every Dutchman, practically without exception, whatever be his sympathies in the present war, would regard the accession of a German prince as a calamity.

In the House of Orange, Holland is blessed with a dynasty bound to Holland, and Holland alone by strong ties that no one at home or abroad would dream of suggesting that the council chambers of the Crown are accessible to other than purely Dutch interests. But if that house were left without living issue, the next claimants to the throne would be found among the collateral princely houses of Saxe-Weimar and Reuss-Kostritz, followed or accompanied by those of Saxe-Mainingen, Hohenzollern, another branch of Reuss-Kostritz, both equally foreign to the Netherlands.

Professor J. A. Van Hamel, a distinguished authority on law, declares in the Amsterdammer: "This game of interests with German royal relations on foreign thrones, must teach us that small powers should beware if they do not desire to see, in their highest government circles, a foreign aim that might be pernicious to them put in place of their national interests. Is the fact sufficiently reckoned with that, according to the present constitutional regulation of the succession to the throne, the successive princes called to the throne after Princess Juliana are all of German families, mostly officers in the German army, naturally all attached heart and soul and bound to the German policy? Monarchical coupling of this country to another, by a prince who could hardly be anything but an imperial prince-son, and who might be admonished from abroad to bear himself 'like a good German,' of whom, moreover, nothing is known here save that he has not the slightest relations with this country, would be a very serious matter for the coming times.

As regards the exact form that the proposed constitutional revision should take, Professor D. P. D. Fabius, yet another writer on the subject, argues in favor of simply putting all possible claimants besides Princess Juliana out of court, of binding the country in no way to any house or person outside the offspring of Wilhelmina, and thus in case of the necessity occurring leaving the States General an unquestionably free choice in the matter. On the other hand, Professor H. Louis Israëls, a well-known publicist, wants to take a cue from the American Constitution, which itself borrowed so much from Dutch political law, in its prescription that only a born American can be elected head of the State. He would have the rule laid down that only those who were born and had remained Hollanders would be right of inheritance succeed to the throne of the Netherlands.

A PRACTICAL JOKER.

Anecdotes Concerning the Late Sir Francis Burnand.

The quality of the humor Sir Francis Burnand, the former editor of "Punch" who died recently in London, did not exclude a certain love of jokes which, on one occasion, led to a very diverting evening. Sir Francis' colleague, Mr. Linley Sambourne and Mrs. Sambourne, had in some way or other, got the impression that they were going to meet Sir Henry (then Mr.) Stanley, at a dinner party at Sir Francis Burnand's house. Mr. Stanley was, as a matter of fact, not in England at the time, but Sir Francis did not undeceive them, and persuaded Mr. Alfred Watson, the famous critic, to impersonate the explorer. Sir William Gilbert was one of the guests, and the whole party prepared to enjoy themselves. Things might have remained tolerably easy for Mr. Watson had it not been for Sir William—though Mrs. Sambourne did show persistent and annoying interest in Mr. Stanley's adventures. But Sir William was quite deliberate.

"I have read your book, Mr. Stanley," he said, "with the greatest possible interest, and I had a long discussion the other day as to the proper way of pronouncing Mt. Magamoy. Will you tell us?" Mr. Watson got out of that difficulty as best he could, but Sir William Gilbert had not done with him. "Do tell us," he said, "that excellent story about the centipede in the boot," and the rest of the party joined in the request. Watson felt himself in a desperately tight corner, because he had not the shadow of an idea what the story was about. But it is a beautiful one, and turned the corner with, "I am not sure that it is a story that I could very well tell in the presence of ladies."

The kudos for the idea of the famous Tennyson cartoon, "Dropping the Pilot," Sir Francis Burnand gave entirely to Albert J. Beckwith. "I do not remember," wrote Burnand, "any other instance of the suggested subject for the cartoon being at once unanimously accepted without argument, contradiction, or discussion. . . . It was an inspiration." When, in 1906, the editor of Punch retired, Sir F. G. G. published a parody of "Dropping the Pilot," in which the figure of Burnand is shown descending the ladder, while Mr. Punch leans over the bulwarks with a face of sorrow, and Toby sets up a dismal howl.

Saint Quentin.

There is much historical interest attached to the little town of Saint Quentin, in Northern France, in whose immediate neighborhood desperate struggles have recently taken place. The Romans called it Augusta Veromanduorum, and during the centuries that the empire held sway over Gaul it was an important strategic point, standing as it did at the meeting-place of five great military roads. As to its name, it is derived from that of Gaius Quintinus, a "preacher of Christianity," who journeyed to Saint Quentin in the third century from Italy and was there martyred.

Centuries afterwards it was thrice ravaged by the Normans, and so constant was the trouble from this quarter that towards the close of the ninth century the town was surrounded by a wall.

In 1420 the Burgundians, in the course of their ever-recurring conflict with the kings of France, took possession of the city and remained in possession until 1471. Then in 1557 it was taken by the Spaniards, Saint Quentin remained in Spanish hands until 1559, and in 1560 was assigned to the dowry of Mary Stuart.

During the reign of Louis the Fourteenth Saint Quentin was looked upon as a place of no little importance, as a locus of elaborate fortifications for its defence. These were, however, demolished between 1810 and 1820, and with this demolition ended the long history of Saint Quentin as a strong place.

Amulets and Mascots.

"In respect to belief in magic, witchcraft, and the use of amulets and mascots, the war has occasioned a retrograde movement of two hundred years, and shown that the coating of refinement was very superficial," said Mr. Edward Lovett in a recent lecture at the Horniman Museum, Forest Hill. He attributed to the introduction of motoring, with its dangers, a revival in the belief in charms before the war. As to the effect of the war, he instanced that a child's caul, esteemed a safeguard against drowning, which a little over two years ago could have been bought for two shillings, recently sold for two pounds ten shillings—the increased price being due to the submarine. Nearly every man now fighting carried a mascot, usually beneath the clothing. In the case of the Russians, French, and Belgians these were generally of a religious character; the others were charms of substitution—the small image to divert the evil eye; the charms of "inoculation," such as fragments of enemy shell and symbolic amulets. Referring to the wooden statue of Hindenburg raised by the Germans and the driving into it of nails, he said it is remarkable that the Germans, great students of folk-lore, should be doing in such a case that which, according to folk-lore, was certain to bring the subjects to a disastrous end.

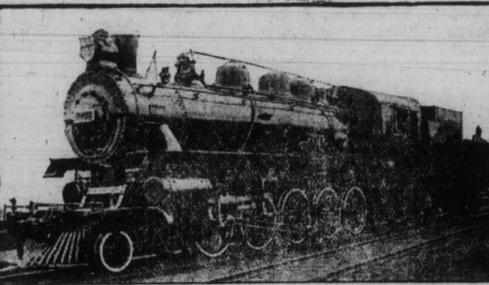

Peat in Dominion.

From 140,000 acres of peat recently discovered in one district in Canada it is estimated that 115,000,000 tons of fuel could be procured. Deposits of peat in Montreal and Ontario districts are said to be capable of yielding 50,000,000 tons.

"Indian Red."

Dogwood was the source of the "Indian red" with which the warriors at one period dyed their eagle feathers and buckskin clothes. They procured the dye from the roots of the tree.

NEW OIL-BURNING ENGINE

A NEW Decapod locomotive, just turned out by the Angus Shops for the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been inspected at Montreal by Lord Shaghnessy and a number of interested railway officials.

What strikes one most about this wonderful engine is the comfort and safety under which the engineer drives his train, and the ease with which so many tons of machinery can be operated from the luxurious shelter of a protected and cushioned cab. The locomotive engineer is not a machine but a human being, his cab is to some extent his home, and up-to-date railway managements are recognizing this by providing him with pleasant quarters. There is no doubt sound policy in this, for the less disturbed he is by weather, or other physical conditions, the more care he can devote to the locomotive and the train itself. Under the severe climatic conditions which sometimes prevail in the mountain divisions, this naturally conduces to safety, and so far as the locomotive engineer is concerned Safety First and Comfort First go hand in hand.

The interior of the cab, which is roomy and well ventilated, has spring cushioned seats which can be moved on a slide, while the sliding armrest on the window is also comfortably cushioned. A coat cupboard with swinging pegs takes care of the surplus clothing. The windows are double sashed with storm windows for winter and are constructed with small panes—a great advantage, as they are more easily and quickly replaced and occasion less discomfort if broken. A wind deflector enables the engineer to see the track without hurting his eyes, while a wind deflector on the roof of the cab stops the back draught and keeps the face free from dust. The cab itself has double ventilators and is pleasantly warmed in winter through having the insulation on the boiler head made in panels which can be easily lifted out. The roof is painted a cool green, and cool green shades cover the lights, while the eyes are further protected by a deflector on the fire door which eliminates the glare. The water gauge is protected with a screen in case of the glass breaking, and, indeed, every possible device that human ingenuity has so far invented has been provided for the safety and comfort of the man behind the gun.

A great improvement is the power reverse gear worked by air, as easy to work as the handle of a sewing machine, which eliminates the old heavy hand lever and reduces the physical strain upon the engineer.

So far as the exterior of the locomotive is concerned, this has been designed so that repairs can be made without the men having frequently to go inside or under the engine. One of the old worries of the engine crew is removed by a new type of air strainer, drawing cool air into the pump which requires little or no attention. A noticeable feature of the exterior is the Laird crosshead, an old type revived because it ensures such excellent lubrication and is easy to maintain. A safety strap is applied to the guide bar to prevent it from dropping. The guide is self-centering and maintains alignment better than the ordinary guide, while the leading driving wheel is flexible with one-inch extra sideplay and is provided with wedge play to ensure proper guiding. The engine truck is provided with side resistance produced by a sliding inclined plane, and here again the safety of the engineer is considered in the safety clamp which prevents the tank from sliding forward on to the cab in case of collision.

Twenty-five such Decapods are under order for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and will be in service on the mountain division. Maximum power for minimum weight is the keynote of their construction. The locomotive itself weighs 125 tons, the tender 22.5 tons, loaded, while the tank capacity is 2,200 gallons of oil and 7,000 gallons of water.

Notwithstanding high prices of materials, the Canadian Pacific has continually added to its cars and engines, having built 1,500 cars last year and another 2,000 under construction at the present time.

FAMILY DOCTOR'S GOOD ADVICE

To Go On Taking "Fruit-a-lives" Because They Did Her Good

ROCHESTER, P. Q., JAN. 14th, 1915. "I suffered for many years with terrible indigestion and constipation. I had frequent dizzy spells and became greatly run down. A neighbor advised me to try 'Fruit-a-lives'. I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve, and he advised me to go on with 'Fruit-a-lives'."

I consider that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-lives' and I want to say to those who suffer from indigestion, constipation or headaches—'try Fruit-a-lives' and you will get well'. CORINE GAUDREAU. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

The fellow who thinks he knows it all should have his attention called to the remark by an eminent professor that it is impossible for one man to know more than the one-seven-billionth of all the knowledge in the world.

THE PUREBRED CLYDESDALE STALLION

CASHEL LAD

Inspected and enrolled under the Stallion Act of Ontario, Certificate No. 1924, dated to December 31, 1917, will be permitted to serve a limited number of Mares during the season of 1917 at his Owner's Stable, Carleton Place.

CASHEL LAD (Reg. 12775) is a handsome horse of true Clydesdale type, a bright bay in color, with strip on face and legs white, foaled April 30th, 1911, bred by Ed. M. Meyer, of Cashel, Ont. Sir Gray Sprig, imp. 7290; grand sire Gay Eward, imp. 5542; Dam, Lavinia, 10617, by Lottin Boy imp. 5388; grand dam Maud of Bethesda, 10614, and so on for many generations.

Inside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS and ROBERT WELLS BITCHIE

Copyright, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Why, Mrs. Sherman—and Kitty! And you, Mr. Sherman—charmed!" He accepted the proffered seat by the side of Kitty, receiving their hearty halloos with languid politeness. With the sureness of English restraint Mr. Willy Kimball refused to become excited. He was of the type of exotic Americans who try to forget grandpa's corn fed hogs and grandma's hand churned butter. His speech was of Rotten row and his clothes Piccadilly.

"Terrible business this!" The youth fluttered his hands feebly. "All this harrying about and peeping at passports by every silly officer one meets. I'm afraid I'll have to go over to America until it's all over—on my way now, in fact."

"Afraid!" Sherman sniffed loudly and appraised Mr. Kimball's tailoring with a disapproving eye. "Well, Willy, it would be too bad if you had to go back to Kewanee after your many years in Paris. Now, wouldn't it?"

Kimball turned to the women for sympathy. "Reserved a compartment to come down from Paris. Beastly treatment. Held up at every city; other people crowded in my apartment, though I'd paid to have it alone, of course; soldier chap comes along and seizes my valet and makes him join the colors and all that sort of—"

"Huh! Your father managed to worry along without a val-lay, and he was respected in Kewanee." This in disgust from Henry J.

Kitty flashed a reproving glance at her father and deftly turned the expatriate into a recounting of his adventures. Under her unaffected lead the youth, who shuddered inwardly at the appellation of "Willy," thawed considerably, and soon there was an animated swapping of reminiscences of the great terror—hours on end before the banks and express offices, dodging of police impositions, scrambling for steamer accommodations—all that went to compose the refugee Americans' great epic of August, 1914.

Sherman took pride in his superior adventures: "Five times arrested between Berlin and Gibraltar, and what I said to that Dutchman on the Swiss frontier was enough to make his hair curl."

"Tell you what, Willy; you come on back to Kewanee with us and mother and you'll lecture before the Thursday Afternoon Ladies' Literary club," Sherman boomed, with a hearty blow of the hand between Willy's shoulder blades. "I'll have Ed Porter announce it in advance in the Daily Enterprise, and we'll have the whole town there to listen. 'Ezra Kimball's Boy Tells Thrilling Tale of War's Alarms'—that's the way the headlines'll read in the Enterprise next week."

The expatriate shivered and tried to smile. "We'll let mother do the lecturing," Kitty came to his rescue. "How to Live in Europe on a Letter of Discredit"—that will have all the gossips of Kewanee buzzing, mother."

The meal drew to a close happily in contrast to its beginning. Mrs. Sherman and her daughter rose to pass out into the reception room. Sherman and Kimball lingered.

"Ah-h, Willy!" "Mr. Sherman!" Both began in unison, each somewhat furtive and shamefaced.

"Have you any money?" The queries were voiced as one. For an instant confusion; then the older man looked up into the younger's face—a bit flushed it was to be judged.

"Not a postage stamp, Willy! I guess we're both beggars, and if mother and Kitty didn't have five franks between them this Swiss holdup man who says he's proprietor of this way station hotel wouldn't trust us for a fried egg."

"Same here," admitted Kimball. "I'm badly bent."

"They can't keep us down—us Americans!" Sherman cheered, taking the youth's arm and piloting him out into the reception room. "We'll find a way out if we have to cable for a warship to come and get us."

Just as Sherman and Kimball emerged from the dining room there was a diversion out beyond the glass doors on Waterport street. A small cart drew up. From its seat jumped a young woman in a duster and with a heavy automobile veil swathed under her chin. To the Arab porter who had bounded out to the street she gave directions for the removal from the cart of her baggage, two heavy suit cases and two ponderous oser baskets. These latter she was particularly tender of, following them into the hotel's reception room and directing where they should be put before the desk.

The newcomer was Jane Gerson, Hildebrand's buyer, at the end of a motor flight from Paris. In the French capital she had managed after considerable difficulty to have an interview with the American ambassador and his wife. The latter was completely won by Jane's story of her anxiety to get herself and her gowns quickly back to New York. It was the ambassador's wife who suggested her going to Gibraltar and who arranged the necessary details of the trip for her. Cool, capable, self-reliant as on the night she saw the bastions of the capital's outer forts fade under the white spikes of the searchlights, Jane strode up to the desk to face the smiling Almer.

"Is this a fortress or a hotel?" she challenged.

"A hotel, lady, a hotel," Almer purred. "A nice room—yes. Will the lady be with us long?"

"Plans of what?" the sergeant glared.

"Heaven forbid! The lady is going to be on the first ship leaving for New York. And if there are no ships I'll look over the stock of coal barges you have in your harbor." She seized a pen and dashed her signature on the register. The Sherkmans had pricked up their ears at the newcomer's first words. Now Henry J. pressed forward, his face glowing welcome.

"An American, a simon pure citizen of the United States! I thought so. Welcome to the little old Rock!" He took both the girl's hands impulsively and pumped them. Mrs. Sherman, Kitty and Willy Kimball crowded around, and the clatter of voices was instantaneous: "By auto from Paris Goodness me!" "Not a thing to eat for three days but rye bread!" "From Strassburg to Lueville in a farmer's wagon!" Each in a whirlwind of ejaculation tried to outdo the other's story of hardship and privation.

The front doors opened again, and the sergeant and guard who had earlier carried off Fritz, the barber, entered. Again gun butts thumped ominously. Jane looked over her shoulder at the khaki coated men and confided to the Sherkmans:

"I think that man's been following me ever since I landed from the ferry." "I have," answered the sergeant, stepping briskly forward and saluting. "You are a stranger on the Rock. You come here from?"

"From Paris by motor to the town across the bay, then over here on the ferry," the girl answered promptly. "What about it?"

"Your name?" "Jane Gerson. Yes, yes, it sounds German, I know. But that's not my fault. I'm an American—a red-hot American, too, for the last two weeks." The sergeant's face was wooden.

"Where are you going?" "To New York on the Saxonia just as soon as I can. And the British army can't stop me."

"Indeed!" The sergeant permitted himself a fleeting smile. "From Paris by motor, eh? Your passports, please." "I haven't any," Jane retorted, with a shade of defiance. "They were taken from me in Spain, just over the French border, and were not returned."

The sergeant raised his eyebrows in surprise not unmixed with irony. He pointed to the two big oser baskets, demanding to know what they contained.

"Gowns—the last gowns made in Paris before the crash, fashion's last gasp. I am a buyer of gowns for Hildebrand's store in New York."

Ecstatic gurgles of pleasure from Mrs. Sherman and her daughter greeted this announcement. They pressed about the baskets and regarded them lovingly.

The sergeant pushed them away and tried to throw back the covers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—Second Quarter, For June 17, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John xx, 1-18. Memory Verses, 15, 16—Golden Text, 1 Cor. xv, 20—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

As the next lesson will be the quarterly review, we must endeavor to summarize the last two chapters in this lesson. It may be a little difficult to arrange all the events of the resurrection day and of the forty days before His ascension in their correct order, but that is a grand and comprehensive saying in Acts i, 3, "He showed Himself alive by many infallible proofs." Then in John xx, 31, the reason of John's gospel, "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through His name." In His great prayer He said to His Father, "This is Life Eternal that they might know thee, the only True God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent" (John xvii, 3). He is alive forevermore, has the keys of hades and of death and has all power in heaven and on earth (Rev. i, 18; Matt. xxviii, 18), and it is for us to show these facts in our lives that others may know Him too. It does seem an amazing thing that even Peter and John had not received any of His sayings that He would rise from the dead on the third day (verse 9), though he had again and again so plainly said so (Matt. xvi, 21; xvii, 23; xx, 18, 19). Neither had Mary Magdalene nor the other women received these truths, with the one exception of Mary of Bethany.

How wonderful that He should appear first to Mary Magdalene and call her by name! (Mark xvi, 9; John xx, 16). His reason for not allowing her to touch Him is so clearly and simply stated in xx, 17, that we cannot but wonder that it does not satisfy every one. The other women met Him a little later and held Him by the feet and worshiped Him (Matt. xxviii, 9, 10), so that between these two appearances He must have been to His Father and returned. Between His death and resurrection He was surely with the Father, according to Luke xxiii, 43, 46, but He was on His way to His Father in His resurrection body when He appeared to Mary and called her by name. Some time that day He had a special interview with Peter, then the walk to Emmaus with the two, and in the evening He appeared in the midst of those who were gathered in the upper room, with the doors shut for fear of the Jews. He showed them His hands and His side and twice said, "Peace be unto you." He also commissioned them to go in His name and proclaim the forgiveness of sins. See also Acts xiii, 33, 39. It was on that evening that He said, "A Spirit hath no flesh and bones, as ye see Me have; handle Me and see that it is I Myself," and He ate a piece of broiled fish and honeycomb before them (Luke xxiv, 38-43).

Thomas missed a whole week of peace because he was not with the others that evening. But a week later Jesus came again and with the same "Peace be unto you" and asked Thomas to do just what he had said to the others he would need to do before he could believe that Jesus was risen from the dead. He saw and believed and exclaimed, "My Lord and my God." Jesus said, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (xx, 24-29). We should walk by faith, not by sight, for it is as we believe that we see (John 40; II Cor. v, 7). In chapter xxi we have the record of the seven who went fishing, led into it by Simon Peter, perhaps because they were hungry, had no money and, it may be, had not seen the Lord for some time. Well, their toil was fruitless, for they caught nothing. So it is always without Him—nothing. In the morning some one called from the shore, "Have ye any meat?" and they had to answer, "No." At his bidding they cast the net on the right side of the ship and caught 153 great fishes without breaking the net. Then John recognized the Lord.

When they came ashore, before they brought the fish that they had caught, they found that their need had been anticipated, and they saw a fire of coals with fish laid thereon and bread. And Jesus said, "Come and break your fast." Greater faith in Him might have saved them the night of fruitless toil, for the blessing of the Lord maketh rich, and toll addeth nothing thereto (Prov. x, 22; R. V.). It was at that time Jesus three times asked Simon Peter, "Lovest thou Me?" perhaps because of his threefold denial, and gave him the thrice repeated command, "Feed My sheep and My lambs." He also told Peter by what manner of death he should glorify God, reminding us of Paul's determination that Christ should be magnified in his body either by life or death (xxi, 18, 19; Phil. i, 20). As Peter inquired what His plan for John was, Jesus replied: "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou Me" (xxi, 21, 22).

The following verse makes it plain that Jesus never meant death when He spoke of His coming. Many are too much concerned about others instead of following Jesus fully themselves. Note that whether it was weeping Mary, or the fearful disciples, or doubting Thomas, or the disappointed fishermen, the cure for all was the revelation of Jesus Himself.

"Open your baggage—all of it!" he commanded snappishly. Jane, explaining over her shoulder to the women, stooped to fumble with the hamp.

"Seventy of the darlinest gowns, the very last Paul Pierre and Racket and Gerth made before they closed shop and marched away with their regiments. You shall see every one of them."

"Hurry, please! My time's limited!" the sergeant barked.

"I should think it would be, you're so charming," Jane flung back over her shoulder, and she raised the tops of the baskets. The other women pushed forward with subdued coos.

The sergeant plunged his hand under a mass of colored stuffiness, groped for a minute and brought forth a long roll of heavy paper. With a fierce mien he began to unroll the bundle.

"And these?" "Plans," Hildebrand's buyer answered.

"Plans of what?" The sergeant glared.

"Of gowns, silly! Here, you're looking at that one upside down! This way! Now, isn't that a perfect dear of an afternoon gown? See that lovely basque effect? Everything's moyn age this season, you know."

Jane, with a shrewd sidelong glance at the flustered sergeant, rattled on, bringing gown after gown from the baskets and displaying them to the chorus of smothered screams of delight from the feminine part of her audience. One she draped coquettishly from her shoulders and did an exaggerated step before the smoky mirror over the mantelpiece to note the effect.

"Isn't it too bad this soldier person isn't married, so he could appreciate these beauties?" She flicked a mischievous eye his way. "Of course he can't be married or he'd recognize the plan of a gown. Clean hands there, Mr. Sergeant. If you're going to touch any of these dreams! Here, let me! Now look at that mousquetaire sleeve, the effect of the war—military, you know."

The sergeant was thoroughly angry by this time, and he forced the situation suddenly near tragedy. Under his fingers a delicate girle cracked suspiciously.

"Here—your knife! Rip this open! There are papers of some sort hidden here." He started to pass the gown to one of his soldiers. Jane choked back a scream.

"No, no! That's crinoline, stupid! No papers"—She stretched forth her arms appealingly. The sergeant humped his shoulders and put out his hand to take the opened clasp knife.

A plump, doll faced woman who possessed an afterglow of prettiness and a bustling, nervous manner, founced through the doors at this juncture and burst suddenly into the midst of the group caught in the imminence of disaster.

"What's this, what's this?" She caught sight of the filmy creation draped from the sergeant's arm. "Oh, the beauty!" This in a whisper of admiration.

"The last one made by Gerth," Jane was quick to explain, noting the sergeant's confusion in the presence of the stranger, "and this officer is going to rip it open in a search for concealed papers. He takes me for a spy."

Surprised blue eyes were turned from Jane to the sergeant. The latter, shamefacedly tried to slip the open knife into his blouse, mumbling an excuse. The blue eyes bored him through.

"I call that very stupid, sergeant," reproved the angel of rescue. Then to Jane: "Where are you taking all these wonderful gowns?"

"To New York. I'm buyer for Hildebrand's and"—

"But, Lady Crandall, this young woman has no passports—nothing," the sergeant interposed. "My duty!"

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 6667 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Two Days in One. Chatham Island, lying off the coast of New Zealand, in the south Pacific ocean, is peculiarly situated, as it is one of the few habitable points of the globe where the day of the week changes. It is just on the line of the demarcation between dates. There at 12 noon on Sunday Sunday ceases and instantly Monday meridian begins. Sunday comes into a man's house on the east side and becomes Monday by the time it passes out of the western door. A man sits down to his noonday dinner on Sunday, and it is Monday noon before he finishes it.—London Globe.

Painting Overhead. When it is necessary to paint a window or any object overhead the paint or liquid usually runs off the handle of the brush and then over the worker's hands. If you will take two pieces of tin soldered at the ends, says C. H. Thomas in the Popular Science Monthly and tack them on either side of the brush below the bristles, you will have a little cup which catches this overflow paint. Each time the brush is dipped into the paint can the shield is automatically emptied.

Sure. Mrs. Smiley—Here we've been married ten years, and my husband still says I'm an angel. Her Friend—But does he really mean it, my dear? Mrs. S.—Perhaps not. But don't you think I'm lucky to have a husband who pretends to mean it?

Architecture. A distinguished philosopher spoke of architecture as frozen music, and his assertion caused many to shake their heads. We believe this really beautiful idea could not be better reintroduced than by calling architecture silent music.—Goethe.

CARLETON PLACE COUNCIL.

The regular monthly meeting of the Carleton Place Town Council was held last evening, Mayor Smythe in the chair and every member present except Mr. Hales.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From W. H. Deemer, asking payment for a door taken from his property, valued at $1.50, also an account overdue for whitewashing lockup, $1.50.

From the Hydro Electric Railway Association, calling attention to the fact that Carleton Place is not yet a member of the association.

From the McBride Press, Brantford, submitting sample of soldiers' certificates.

From J. J. Turner & Sons, re sale of chairs for municipal buildings.

A number of accounts were read and referred to Committee.

Mr. Nichols reported the result of the conference held recently with the engineer of the Hydro Electric Commission, also result of interview with Messrs. H. Brown & Son, re sale of power plant. The firm did not desire to sell.

The Relief Committee reported the case of a family in destitute circumstances. After discussion it was decided that the Committee use discretion in the matter and limit the expenditure to $2 or $3 per week.

Moved by Mr. Pattie, seconded by Mr. Nichols, that the following accounts be paid and that the Mayor grant the necessary orders on the Treasurer:

BYLAW FOR TAXES.

A bylaw to accept payment of taxes half-yearly, with discount of 2 1/2 p.c. on amount paid, was introduced and read a first time.

The time fixed for payment was from the 1st to 30th July, collector's hours from 2 to 5 p.m. and bylaw read a second time.

The bylaw was read a third time and passed.

A bylaw to appoint a Collector was introduced and read the required number of times. The blanks were filled with the name of "H. McC. Wilson" and "100" and passed.

A discussion took place on the certificates for soldiers, and the matter was left over.

The question of transgressing the bylaw regulating the speed of autos within the town limits was brought up and discussed. The consensus of opinion was that the bylaw should be enforced.

Mr. Nichols asked an expression of opinion as to the wisdom of lending the town roller to the county to roll the 11th Line road toward Ashton.

The members of Council were willing to grant the use of the roller to the county if they would use it to finish the road.

Mr. Hughes drew the attention of the Council to the road leading to the 7th Line Ramsay.

Council adjourned.

Rural free mail delivery routes in Canada increased in number from 614 to 3,586 between October 1, 1911, and March 31, 1917, according to the answer given in the Commons recently to an enquiry by Dr. Edwards, of Frontenac. The number of mail boxes served increased from 16,015 to 165,142. In the same period 2,952 new post offices were opened.

Sixteen carloads of wheat were strewn about the tracks, and a section man named Coogler was killed in the wreck of a freight train at Mountain. The wreck occurred as the train was taking a siding and Coogler was standing on the next track. The cause of the accident was presumably a broken axle on one of the cars which caused the center of the train to derail. The engine remained on the track.

It is officially announced through the Chief Press Gensor's office that the following troops have arrived safely in England: Battalions—122nd, Galt; 207th, Ottawa; 217th and 243rd, Saskatchewan; 246th Nova Scotia Highlanders; 263rd, Central Ontario; 262nd and 254th, Eastern Ontario; 255th, Toronto. Drafts—Balance of 222nd Saskatchewan Battalion British Columbia Horse; Field Artillery from Vancouver and Guelph; Siege Artillery from Halifax; Infantry from Calgary, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia; draft for P.P.C.L.I. from Saskatoon University; Engineers, Foresters, Medical; Bermuda Artillery; Newfoundlanders, naval ratings and details.

COUNTY CONVENTION—W.C.T.U.

A Large Gathering and Excellent Reports.

The twenty-fifth annual convention of the Lanark County Woman's Christian Temperance Union met in the council chamber in Carleton Place on Thursday, June 7th. There were present about 35 delegates, besides a goodly gathering of members and friends.

Mrs. Richard Craig, County President, occupied the chair. The forenoon was taken up with the various reports of the twenty-four departments of work carried on by the Unions in this County. In almost all the departments good work had been accomplished. Interspersed with the reading of reports by the superintendents, inspiring songs were sung, and many fitting remarks on temperance work were made by the president, who is especially adapted to fill the office.

Our Carleton Place "Sunshine Y" was represented by Miss Edith Kells, who gave the following report:—

In presenting the report of the "Sunshine Y" we have indeed great cause for thankfulness, for although there have been so many other demands on our members yet our financial statement is most satisfactory, having raised $311.34 in money. Our Flower Mission is our most important work, and the following articles have been given to the sick and needy of our town: 22 qts. canned fruit, 21 glasses jelly, 40 qts. milk, 3 1/2 doz. eggs, 25 doz. oranges, 265 lbs. groceries, 10 1/2 pks. fruit, 12 pks. vegetables, 20 lbs. candy, 6 bars soap, 6 loads wood, 45 lbs. meat, 18 Xmas baskets, 337 articles of clothing, 9 dishes, $3.25 in cash. We also sent 80 bouquets, 25 potted plants, and 120 calls were made on the sick and shut in of our town. Both flowers and visits were very much appreciated, as was shown by the letters of thanks sent to the Y.

We also did our "bit" nobly in assisting our soldiers at the front, as $25 was sent to the Y.M.C.A. Fund; $50.00 for comforts for our own town boys, also $26.50 to the soup and chocolate fund, making a total of $101.50. We hemmed 94 doz. handkerchiefs during our hours of meeting, and also made 25 scrap books for hospitals. We held 10 regular meetings and 1 special meeting during the year, and have a membership of 32 active members. Our cor. sec. wrote 15 letters and 15 correspondence cards.

During the afternoon session an instructive and very interesting address was given by Mrs. W. B. Bartram, of Ottawa, on "The responsibility of the Franchise."

Dr. J. J. McGregor, License Inspector, was invited by the president to address the meeting, which he kindly did, he giving some good pointers on the enforcing of the Ontario License Act, for which he received a hearty vote of thanks.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The election of officers then took place resulting as follows:

Hon. Pres., Miss Florence Edwards, Ottawa.

President, Mrs. R. Craig, Smiths Falls.

1st Vice-pres., Mrs. D. Gillies, Carleton Place.

2nd Vice-pres., Mrs. A. E. Hanna, Perth.

Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. G. Pollock, Carleton Place.

Cor.-Sec'y, Mrs. Sherman, Smiths Falls.

Treasurer, Mrs. S. McVeety, Perth.

Auditor, Miss E. Robertson, Perth.

RESOLUTIONS.
The following resolutions were passed: Resolved, that our Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Lanark County still stands unalterably opposed to the liquor traffic and that we work for the total prohibition of the same.

Resolved, that we put on record our sincere gratitude for the measures enforced for the present degree of prohibition enacted by the Provincial Legislature, and hope these laws continue in greater measure when the war is over.

Resolved, that we express our appreciation for the passage of the bill for Equal Suffrage. We trust that all women will avail themselves of this privilege and use their votes and influence for the good of the nation and vote for principle and morality irrespective of party.

Resolved, that we urge the united and continued prayers of the mothers of our land for our soldiers and sailors, for our nurses and doctors, and all who in any way are connected with the defence of our Empire.

An adjournment was then made to the Methodist church, where the Sunshine Y served tea to the visiting delegates. The school-room was tastefully decorated, and the tables presented a most inviting appearance.

Greetings were extended by Mrs. Taber, from the Methodist church, Miss Dorothy Findlay, from the Sunshine Y, Miss Anna McKostie, from Zion, and Mrs. G. A. Burgess, from St. Andrews, which were responded to by Mrs. McVeety of Perth. Delightful solos were given by Miss Eldridge, of Smiths Falls and Miss Queen Allen, of Carleton Place.

Miss Craig, of Smiths Falls, extended the thanks of the Convention to the Sunshine Y for their very considerate arrangements for the meeting and entertainment of the visiting delegates; to the hostesses of the town who so cordially received them into their homes, and to the Mayor and Council who very graciously allowed the use of their beautiful Council Chamber.

The Convention closed by singing "Blest be the tie that binds" and the National Anthem.

Pictures of Lloyd Keet, aged 14 months, and heir to $3,000,000, are being sent out broadcast all over the United States. He was kidnapped while his nurse slept and his parents attended the theatre.

LINGERING WEAKNESS FOLLOWING DISEASE

Banished by the Wonderful Tonic Powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

How often victims of disease such as la grippe, fevers, or contagious troubles are left weak, ailing and despondent after the disease itself has disappeared. They do not pick up strength as they ought; remain listless, tired and discouraged. The reason for this is that the blood has been impoverished by the ravage of the disease through which the victim has passed. Strength will not return until the blood has been enriched. The blood can be purified and enriched by no other medicine as quickly and as surely as by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—to enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves is the whole mission of these pills. Thousands have found them beneficial in bringing strength and energy after disease had left them weak and run down. Miss Hannah Hamilton, Everett, Ont., says:—"After an attack of la grippe I was so run down and anemic that I could scarcely walk. I had no color, no appetite, and constant headaches. The medicine I was taking was doing me no good and I had almost lost hope of getting better. I was asked to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and it was not long until I could feel that they were helping me, and after taking them for a couple of months I was completely cured. I now never fail to recommend these pills to anyone needing a blood builder."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. John Pearce, who called the police when Hon. George Brown was shot, died from blood poisoning in Toronto last week.
