HOPE FOR THE HOPELESS

Success Claimed for Dr. Koch's "Consumption Cure,"

But It Will Be Too Costly for the Poor.

The King of Holland Pronounced a Lunatic—Stanley Sharply Criticised.

Emin Advancing.

ZANZIBAR, Oct. 31.—Letters from Emin Pasha say his expedition is advancing steadily and that all hands are well.

The Capture of Vitu.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Advices from Mombasa state that 900 seamen and marines, and 150 Indian troops took part in the storming of Vitu, which was captured and burned on Tuesday by the British forces sent there to punish the natives for massacreing a number of Germans. Many of the natives were killed. A few members of the British force were wounded. A reward of 10,000 rupees has been offered for the capture of Bakari, the Sultan of Vitu.

A Crazy King.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch from The Hague says: It has transpired that the statements made regarding the condition of the King of Holland by the doctors and Ministers were untrue. The King's physical health is good, but he is suffering from a mental malady which renders him unfit to govern; in other words, he is a lunatic. The statement that he has been physically ill was made simply to delude the general public and explain the necessity for the appointment of a regency.

Stanley and Barttelot.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The London Times publishes a parting interview with Mr. Henry M. Stanley. Mr. Stanley adds nothing to his previous statements. He accuses Troup of using violent language and making vague charges. He says all the rear officers were offended by his first report to the Emin Relief Committee on the condition in which he found the rear column; that he cannot modify the censure he then expressed, and that it remains for those officers to tell their own stories.

Herbert Ward, who was a member of the Stanley expedition, says he knows nothing about the alleged facts upon which Stanley based his insinuations.

Balfour's Journey.

DUBLIN, Oct. 31.—Yesterday Mr. Balfour traveled from Kylemore, a distance of 50 miles, to Carraroe, one of the poorest villages in a typical congested district. He drove through the wildest part of Connemara, abounding in lake and rock scenery. The few people seen were apathetic. Before the party arrived at Costello Lodge, where they were the guests of Police Commissioner Byrne, all were drenched with rain. They will visit Galway and thence proceed to Dublin. At a League convention in Limerick John O'Connor warned Mr. Balfour not to misinterpret Irish respect and try to make political capital out of his visit, or he would be treated as the Prince of Wales was.

The Consumption Cure.

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—Prof. Koch refuses to say more on the subject of his discovery of the cure for consumption than has been published in the National Zeitung, except that Melaic acids are used in the preparation of the lymph. The lymph, having killed the baccilus, acts as a medium to reestablish the patient's health by its inherent healing powers, and also fortifying him against the further invasion of the baccilus. The lymph is obtained by a long and extremely difficult process at great cost, and the cure will, therefore, be available only for the wealthy if the remedy is not bought by the Governments of the different countries for the general benefit of humanity. It is expected that long standing cases of lung consumption cannot be cured by the invention, as in such cases other parasites besides the tuberculosis-baccilus eat their way into the lung, while Prof. Koch's lymph only kills the baccilus proper. But it kills it immediately and stops the process of consumption. The doctors who have seen its working declare that the new invention is superior to the discovery of chloroform. Prof. Koch is making experiments at the present time in Prof. Senator's ward of the Charity Hospital in this city on slight cases of consumption. The patients have signed papers declaring they will undergo the treatment of their own free will without holding Prof. Koch responsible if the results should unfortunately prove fatal. The Professor has one assistant, who is bound by oath not to breathe to anyone the slightest information of anything he sees or hears. From a reliable source a reporter learns that the great difference in the lymph used to fight smallpox and that used in the battle against consumption is that Professor Koch innoculates only persons who are already stricken with phthsis. This fact proves that it is not a preventive as the smallpox lymph is. The celebrated Prof. Leiden is the only person in Koch's confidence, and has the very greatest hope of the discovery. He said: "Prof. Koch would have remained silent if his success were not assured." Prof. Koch will announce his invention by means of an illustrated lecture which will soon be delivered before the Medical Society.

More Charges Against Stanley.

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—In addition to what has been printed as coming from Mr. Rose Troup, of the Stanley expedition, on the charges made by Mr. Stanley against the late Major Barttelot, Mr. Troup says:

"Mr. Stanley has seen fit to specify two things which Major Barttelot did which called forth censure from him: One was the shooting of a Zanzibar porter for stealing meat, and another flogging a Soudanese was shot for some breach of discipline. Now Stanley has that all mixed. A Soudanese soldier for desertion and for stealing a gun and ten rounds of ammunition, and a Zanzibar porter was flogged for stealing meat. The shooting affair occurred in this manner: One night one of the Soudanese soldiers deserted the camp while on guard duty, taking with him his gun and ammunition. A reward was offered for his recapture, and he was brought back by the Arabs. That same day a court martial was held and the man was condemned to be shot. Messrs. Ward and Bonny voted in favor of shooting the wretch, and Jameson and myself were opposed to such harsh measures. Major Barttelot cast the deciding vote in favor of the execution.

"The soldier was taken out at 5:30 the next morning and shot by his own comrades. I was not present at the execution. I had voted against it because I did not think the occasion demanded it. The others were equally conscientious in voting as they did. It was a legal execution, and if those who condemn were in Major Barttelot's place they might have done the same thing.

"Mr. Stanley accuses me of cowardice in not interfering when I saw Major Barttelot getting into trouble with the natives. He told me I should have forced my advice upon them. He also told me that I should have put the Major in irons for shooting that soldier and sent him back to England in disgrace. What nonsense. Mr. Stanley knows I had no right to interfere with the commander of the camp. Major Barttelot would have been justified in shooting me on the spot. He was in command, not I. While that was not a military expedition, it was absolutely necessary to have discipline, and good discipline requires but one head—one commander. He was selected by Mr. Stanley, and I reiterate my charge that Mr. Stanley is primarily responsible for any blunders made.

"Now, I'm not going to talk any more about the matter until Mr. Stanley makes public the charges which he intimates he will make. Then I may have a reply to make. Mr. Stanley says he has his proof. Well, so have I. I am not going to sustain Mr. Stanley against Major Barttelot until I know what he is going to say, neither am I going to deny blindly what he intimates. Mr. Stanley is a great explorer, but he went into this for fame and what he could get out of it. He has no more philanthropy than my boot. I will go further and say that the expedition was in the nature of a speculation, and not a philanthropic relief movement. The capitalists who backed it were after the ivory which Emin Pasha was supposed to have collected. The officers of the expedition had promises of a certain share of the big supply of ivory which was expected as a reward for their services. Emin Pasha's release was a secondary consideration entirely. He didn't want to be released. He had been up there ten or twelve years, and had held his own all right. Those facts explain the entire situation, and the expedition must necessarily lose some of the glamor which surrounds it when it is known that greed for fame and riches, instead of humanity, prompted the movement."

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

Closing Sessions of the Annual Convention.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 31.—The Sunday School Convention reassembled yesterday morning with a large attendance of delegates and spectators. The first business was county reports, all of which were very encouraging. Peterboro had 36 schools, 3,049 scholars, and an average attendance of 256 teachers; 56 scholars were members of the church; contributions, $534. Wellington claimed 120 schools, 7,966 scholars; average attendance, 4,638, of whom 909 are members of the church; contributions to missions, $1,306.

Ottawa was selected as the next place of meeting.

The committee appointed to consider the reports of the Executive Committee recommended as follows:

1. That the convention heartily indorse the importance of missionary work in the sparsely settled parts of the Province; empower the Executive Committee to employ such suitable agent or agents as may be available, or as the funds at their disposal may warrant; endeavor to secure at this convention pledges to the amount of $3,000. 2. That individual members of this convention be requested to contribute towards this work in addition to the sums pledged on behalf of county or other associations. 3. That, in view of the special work indicated as well as other needs of the association, it is imperatively necessary that amounts pledged or promised at this convention be paid the treasurer, at least in part, before the 1st of January next. 7. That the convention approve of the proposed district conferences and request the Executive Committee to take the necessary steps to give effect thereto. 8. That the convention approve of the efforts made to secure accurate statistics, express satisfaction at the measure of success attained and instruct the Executive Committee to continue their efforts in this direction. 9. That the convention heartily indorse the plan of home classes for Bible study, and, with a view to disseminate information in reference thereto, instruct the Executive Committee to prepare and circulate as widely as possible a leaflet containing such information and instruction. 10. That the convention heartily emphasize the importance of the subject of teachers' training and urge the establishment of normal classes wherever practicable. With a view to this they suggest correspondence with the secretaries on the part of those desirous to engage in such work or to have such classes carried on. 11. Believing that the cause of Sabbath school work generally and the interests of this association will be enhanced thereby, the convention instruct the Executive Committee to prepare an edition of not less than 10,000 copies of the Executive Committee's report, together with these recommendations, for general circulation throughout the Province, especially in those counties from which returns have been received.

Clauses 4, 5 and 6 recommending the division of the Province into districts, as outlined in the report of the Executive Committee, were struck out. A resolution was passed instructing the treasurer to close his annual account on the 15th of October of each year.

By a unanimous vote the Executive Committee were instructed to invite the Quebec association to unite with them.

The Business Committee' report was adopted, appointing Rev. John McEwan, of Lakefield, honorary secretary; Alfred Day, honorary secretary; J. J. Woodhouse, corresponding secretary and treasurer, and also appointing the Executive Committee, consisting of representatives from every county in the Province.

Resolutions were adopted expressing pleasure at the success which has attended the efforts of the Executive Committee in county and township organizations and urging the co-operation of every Sunday school worker until the work is completed, requesting Senator Vidal to use his influence with the Dominion Government to have the provisions of the resolution calling for the insertion in the census returns of 1891 of a column giving the number of persons attending Sunday schools carried into effect, and thanking those who had assisted in making the convention a success.

Hon. S. H. Blake gave a forcible address and the convention was closed by singing "God be with you till we meet again."

The Hair Thief in Canada.

DELHI, Ont., Oct. 31.—Last evening some wretch called at the dwelling of Mr. J. E. Laughlin, who is station agent at the G. T. R., and knowing that Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin were out, despoiled Mr. Laughlin's sister, a girl of 14 years of age, of her beautiful tresses.

Windsor Milk Analyzed.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 31.—Dr. Covent, medical health officer, yesterday finished the analysis of the milk taken from the different milk vendors on Wednesday. Of the 36 samples he found 12 below the Government standard, 8 were just on the standard and 16 above the standard. The butter fat in each sample varied 2.75 per cent. to 5 per cent.

A French Schooner Seized at Newfoundland.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—A special to the World from St. Johns, Nfld., says: "Joseph Girardin, captain of the French schooner Minegerd, was arrested lately at Codroy, a village on the Newfoundland shore where the French claim fishing rights, for insisting on the right to sell goods without paying duties. The Newfoundland authorities seized the schooner, fined the captain $800 and confiscated his cargo. Pending payment, the captain was imprisoned. Girardin broke jail, and, with French aid, overpowered the English guard, regained possession of his schooner and went to sea. The sheriff recaptured the vessel and made prisoners of the crew. The Government steam cruiser Fione proceeded to Codroy with Judge Prowse and a force of police, and will bring the prisoners here. This will force the Newfoundland-French difficulty to an issue.

IN BIRCHALL'S BEHALF.

The Doomed Man's Wife Working Hard to Secure Commutation of the Sentence.

WOODSTOCK, Oct. 31.—Detective Bluett, who was employed to work up Birchall's defense, has sent the prisoner a long and earnest telegram, in which he beseeches him to prepare to meet his Maker by making a clean breast of his crime. Such a request coming from such a source may be considered as significant.

Mrs. Birchall, it is reported, leaves for Toronto to-day in the interest of the petition for the commutation of her husband's sentence. Birchall himself has half abandoned the Michigan letter story, though his Toronto publishers are still "booming" it in his behalf. The whole business is strongly denounced by the public here. An effort is being made to turn Benwell's boots found on him to account, the theory being that they were not Benwell's. The defense examined into this matter in the most thorough manner. The boots were Benwell's beyond a doubt. They were of English make and corresponded in size with those in his trunks. Birchall said in one of his letters that he told Benwell that morning to put on heavy boots because the roads would be bad, and Benwell seems to have put on the heaviest and oldest pair he had in his outfit.

Birchall states that the "Colonel" came to America last February, ten days before he sailed with Benwell and Pelly. The "Colonell" was to have sailed on the first ship preceding the Birchall party, but it will be remembered Birchall was delayed a few days; hence another sailing intervened. The prisoner states that when he met the "Colonel" at Morley's hotel he was stopping with his father-in-law, Mr. Stevenson, and merely took luncheon occasionally with him at the hotel. He did not know his name further than he was called "The Colonel." His explanation of this is that in Europe the guests very frequently do not register, but are known to the landlord by the number of their room.

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—Over 1,000 signatures have been attached to the petition praying for a commutation of Birchall's death sentence. Arrangements are being made to hold a public meeting in the Victoria Rink for the purpose of protesting against the sentence.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—Mr. D. Donaldson, the late Equal Rights candidate, writes to the press a long letter on Birchall's case, in which he says: "When the fatal bolt falls on Nov. 14 next, so far as Birchall himself is concerned it will but hurry him from this world into another. But what about the friends he leaves behind? We can realize the terrible effect of that blow as it falls with terrific force and pierces the inmost soul of the widowed wife, the aged mother and the large circle of friends in England, who, like his brother, Rev. Mr. Birchall, and his father-in-law, Mr. Stephenson, are all people of culture and refinement and of the highest respectability, which makes them all the more sensitive to the unfortunate position in which they are placed. If not for the condemned prisoner's sake (for we do not ask mercy for him), might not the clemency of the Crown be exercised in order that the many friends of the doomed man might be spared the terrible and lasting disgrace of the gallows? What a disgrace no one knows but God and those who have passed through the dreadful experience."

A Toronto telegram says: An affidavit has been filed asking for the examination of J. R. Birchall, now lying under sentence of death in Woodstock jail, as a material witness in a libel suit brought by Grosvenor Hood Graeme against the Toronto Globe newspaper. The motion will be opposed on the ground that Birchall is at present legally and civily dead to law, and that therefore his testimony is valueless.

UNDER THE SEMAPHORE.

Grand Trunk Earnings—Change on the West Shore.

The Saginaw and Michigan Railroad has passed into the control of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railroad.

The first passenger train arrived at Pugwash, N. S., on Tuesday evening with a large party of excursionists on board.

Five hundred twenty-five ton gondola coal cars have been ordered by the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad.

It is understood that regular traffic over the new Cape Breton Railway as an extension of the Intercolonial road will begin Nov. 18.

Charles P. Morse has been appointed general agent of the New York, Lake Erie and Western road, with the headquarters in Cincinnati.

It is said the T., H. and B. Railway Company have purchased sufficient property through the city of Hamilton to comply with the $275,000 bonus bylaw.

The officers of the Toledo, Peoria and Western Railway say that the statement that the road has been or would be purchased by the Pennsylvania system is false.

The directors of the Northern Central Road in New York are considering the project of a direct line from Canandaigua to Niagara Falls, through Rochester, to connect with the Pennsylvania system.

Following is a comparison of the returns of the traffic earnings of the Grand Trunk Railway for last week and corresponding period of 1889-1890: Passengers, $133,522; freight, $273,490; total train earnings, $407,012. 1889 — Passengers, $131,247; freight, $310,524; total train earnings, $441,771—a decrease for 1890 of $34,759.

An important change will take effect on the West Shore on Saturday next. Mr. D. B. McCoy, who has for the past six years been superintendent of the Buffalo division of the West Shore, has resigned to take service elsewhere, and will be succeeded by Mr. J. P. Bradfield, who has been for some time superintendent of the Hudson River division of the road. Mr. W. G. Wattson, who has been car accountant, will succeed Mr. Bradfield, and Mr. G. P. Conard will become car accountant.

Good Work Done at the County Fairs.

The Ontario Local Option Law Commended—The Plebiscite Question Sent to Committee.

KINGSTON, Ont. 31.—The W. C. T. U. Convention finished the hearing of superintendents' reports yesterday and elected officers. The vexed question of the separation of Toronto District Union from York county came up and was settled by practically granting the request of the Toronto unions, who want direct affiliation with the Provincial Union.

Mrs. (Rev.) Chapman reported on the work in Parry Sound. They had now but one licensed saloon, which they hoped soon to close. Much of this good condition of affairs was due to Mr. Wm. Beatty, who originally owned much of the land there and put in his selling deeds a clause directing that no liquor be sold thereon. They, too, did much work among the lumbermen.

The secretary read the report of Miss Slaght, of London, superintendent of Provincial and County Fair Work. The report reviewed the efforts made by the superintendent to interest the various unions in this opening for work, and told of the labors of individual unions. In St. Thomas, Bowmanville, Belleville, Renfrew, Cobourg, Hamilton, Seaforth, Sarnia, Toronto and London, the W. C. T. U. had tents or refreshment booths on the fair grounds, and did much good. The Prescott Union reported that they were unable to do anything, as the majority of the directors of their fair are on the enemy's side; and in Sarnia the W. C. T. U. pay an annual sum for the exclusive right to furnish refreshments on the grounds, thus effectually excluding liquor.

Mrs. Jacob Spence, superintendent of the franchise department, regretted that the was not able to report more work done during the year, but believed that shere is an awakening on this subject among their members. Forty-one unions have taken up the work, 22 interested themselves at the time of the municipal elections and endeavored to secure the return of temperance men in the municipal councils. It was universally acknowledged that the ballot in the hands of women is the surest and speediest way to secure prohibition. Even the liquor dealers admit this. But while they were awaiting the full franchise they could avail themselves of the franchise offered by the Ontario Legislature to widows and spinsters in connection with the new local option measure. This was the first time, so far as she was aware, that Canadian women have been endowed with and have exercised the right to vote for the direct suppression of the unholy traffic in strong drink. They might record this as a substantial gain for their cause during the year.

Mrs. Brandscombe, of Picton, read her excellent report on "Legislation, Petition and Parliamentary Usages." Among other encouraging signs the speaker mentioned the fact that the bar formerly situated in the Legislative Assembly at Toronto has been abolished. Should we not, she asked, unitedly protest against the similar abomination at Ottawa? The report went into a review of the recent amendments to the license law, and urged that the union take up the local option measure vigorously, "and then, if it fails, there can be no excuse for not giving us something better." The resolution of the Dominion Union of June last in favor of a plebiscite was quoted, and the advice of the convention asked as to the advisability of petitioning for such a measure. They had obtained 37,445 signatures to the world's petition in Ontario.

Mrs. Foster, ex-Dominion president, said that it was understood in the Quebec Union that a plebiscite would be unconstitutional, and that they had agreed with a conference of the alliance, the new party and the Maritime Province prohibition party that the only course was to elect prohibitionist members to the Commons. It was decided to refer the advisability of petitioning for a plebiscite to the Plan of Work Committee.

Mrs. Shortreed, superintendent of the work among the lumbermen, was able to report a good measure of effective work during the year.

Mrs. Jarman presented the report of the social purity department. Much work had been done during the year, 254 meetings had been held, 16,300 pages of literature distributed, and 285 white cross signatures obtained. She recommended that the co-operation of the ministers, Sunday school workers, Y. M. C. A. members and all Christian people be secured.

Mrs. D. V. Lucas, of Toronto, superintendent of the heredity and hygiene department, read an admirable report on this important subject. The work of this department had advanced very slowly, because, the superintendent fancied, its importance was not understood.

Mrs. Alexander, of Ottawa, had been unable to prepare a report on "Narcootics," but uttered a word of warning against the use of chloral, morphine, opium and other similar drugs, a habit not wholly confined to their brothers.

Miss Scott, the editress of the Woman's Journal, reported that the organ of the union was in a flourishing condition.

Mrs. Cowan, of Gananoque, appeared on the platform with a tempting bottle of ruby wine in her hand, which she explained was a sample of unfermented wine, and said that the manufacturers had sent her a bottle for each delegate. (Laughter and applause.)

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. J. R. Cavers, Galt.

Vice-President—Mrs. Fawcett.

Corresponding secretary—Mrs. Wiley (re-elected).

Recording secretary—Mrs. Rutherford (re-elected).

Treasurer—Miss McArthur, of Cornwall.

The evening meeting at the Sydenham Street Methodist Church was largely attended. Addresses were given by Mrs. Judge Foster, of Knowlton, Que.; Mrs. Cavers, president-elect; Mrs. Maddock, of Guelph; Mrs. Jarman, of Toronto, and Mrs. Alexander, of Ottawa. Greetings were received from the Portsmouth Royal Templars. Mrs. Cavers announced that because of the incomplete returns received from many counties it had been decided to leave the prize banner with the county of Waterloo for another year. Rev. W. W. Carson, pastor of the church, presided, and in closing the meeting spoke in favor of a plebiscite on prohibition.

VOICES OF THE PEOPLE.

Commissioner Essery's Rejoinder.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

The letter of Mayor Taylor published in your issue of last evening headed "The Mayor and the Water Commissioners" only confirms my contention. He is correct when he stated that the Water Commissioners asked for $70,000. We never denied this, but his statement is altogether wrong when he says or intends to insinuate that the Water Commissioners were consulted as to the statute or to the issue of $130,000 thereunder. The only communication to the Water Commissioners from the City Council in this matter is dated Nov. 27, 1889, from the City Clerk's office, asking the Water Commissioners to furnish to the Council the anticipated amount of debentures required for their department, and the answer to that was: Spring extensions and mains, $45,000; mains, hydrants and valves in London South, if annexed, $20,000; services in London South, if annexed, $5,000; total, $70,000. His Worship's letter states that in November, 1889, "the Council sent a communication to the Water Commissioners asking them to give a statement of the amount of money the commissioners would require for waterworks purposes so that application could be made to the Legislature for power to issue debenture for the extension of the mains and the purchase of additional springs," but I challenge his Worship to show that the agreement with South London was ever produced before the Water Commissioners, or that the agreement was ever explained to them, or that they ever were consulted as to the issue of any other sum than the $70,000 above mentioned; that is the issue between us. Permit me further to state that the Water Commissioners are not responsible for the rate of taxation, and never were, nor do they intend to shoulder the responsibility for gross mismanagement on the part of others; nor should they permit the rights of the Water Commissioners under the statute or the credit of the city to be destroyed by the issue of waterworks debentures for the purpose of lowering the rate of taxation. Yours truly,

EMANUEL T. ESSERY.

The Niagara Postoffice Robbed.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 31.—The postoffice at Suspension Bridge was robbed at noon yesterday. Only one clerk was in the office at the time, and he was engaged taking stamps from the safe when some one from behind held a chloroform handkerchief to his mouth, which overpowered him, when the robber made away with between $200 and $300. There is no clue to the robber.

Two Boys Drowned.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 31.—A peculiarly distressing drowning accident occurred here this afternoon. A young son of Frederick Mundle, a well-known St. John merchant, fell over the railway wharf and Frederick Young, a lad of 17 years, leaped in after him. A number of mill hands left work and went to the rescue. A boat was launched, but was broken to pieces against the rocks. A little buoy was sent out to the drifting boys, but they could not reach it. After keeping Mundle up about half an hour Young and the other went to the bottom.

The St. Clair Tunnel.

The Sarnia Canadian (Oct. 29) says: On account of the very unfavorable weather, great difficulty is experienced in prosecuting the work of opening the approaches. The working forces have been repeatedly stopped by the heavy rains, which have also converted the whole locality into an ocean of mud. Unless better weather follows it will hardly be possible for the contractors to push the work so rapidly as was planned. The calking of the tunnel was completed last week; a force of workmen was set to take down the brick walls which formed the bulkheads, and on Saturday the air pressure was taken off; the last of the bulkhead walls were taken out, and the tunnel was thus opened from portal to portal. The lining was found to be perfectly watertight, no leakage being observable anywhere. The bricklayers who are putting in the brick lining of the tunnel, began by building in so much of the lining as would be needed for the foundation of the track, leaving the side lining to be put in afterwards. The track foundation is now about complete, and a force of workmen is now at work putting on the concrete floor and laying in the timbers on which the rails are to be supported. When this is finished the track-laying will begin. The St. Clair River, viewed in the light of an obstacle to railway travel, is practically abolished.

WORK OF THE LADIES.

Annual Meeting of the Women's Christian Association—A Successful Year.

The annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association was held in the parlors of the Aged Women's Home yesterday afternoon. Among those present were: Mrs. Carfrae, president; Mrs. (Rev.) Roger, vice-president; Mrs. D. S. Perrin, treasurer; Mrs. M. Pattullo, secretary; Mesdames Hopkins, Fraser, Complin, Gibson, Burns, Kent, Murray, Allan, Hutchinson and Whitehead. The report of the secretary, Mrs. M. Pattullo, which was read and adopted, showed that everything in connection with the Women's Refuge and Infants' Home had gone on very smoothly during the year, the kindness of the matron being repaid by the dutiful obedience of the adult inmates. At the time of the last meeting 7 adults were in the Home, and since that time 44 had been admitted, of whom 5 still remained. The number of infants in the Home at the last annual meeting was 5; since then 51 had been received; 9 were still in the Home. The cash donations for the Home during the year amounted to $87 18. The management was also indebted for gifts of clothing and furniture and to Dr. C. T. Campbell for his attention upon the inmates. Religious services had been conducted during the year, in which Miss Freeman and the city clergymen assisted.

The Aged Women's Home continued still to flourish, the present matron having proved an efficient manager. During the year it was found necessary to increase the accommodation, and for this purpose a house adjacent to the Aged Men's Home was rented. Three deaths occurred in the Home during the year. The thanks of the association were due to Dr. MacArthur for his attention to the sick. The number of inmates in the home at the last annual meeting was 12; 18 had been admitted since; remaining in the institution, 19.

The matron of the Aged Men's Home had given satisfaction. Four deaths have occurred during the year in this Home. The inmates numbered 19 at present, as against 16 one year ago; since the last meeting 22 had been admitted. Dr. Mitchell kindly gave his attention to those of the inmates requiring the same, for which the association desired to return thanks.

The members of the Relief Committee had attended to the wants of 86 families, and paid 751 visits during the past eighteen months. The hospital and jail had been regularly visited, and religious services had been held at each institution at regular intervals. The thanks of the association were tendered to the Ministerial Association and the Episcopal Church ministers for holding religious services in the several homes, as well as in the jail and hospital, and also to the ladies who assisted in the musical services. The city papers had also placed the association in their debt. The report concluded with an earnest request that all ladies eligible should join the association.

The report of the treasurer for the seventeen months ending Sept. 30, 1889, was read by the treasurer, Mrs. D. S. Perrin. It showed the balance on hand at that time to have been $272 19; general fund receipts, $1,252 25; Aged Women's Home receipts, $2,322 84; Aged Men's Home receipts, $2,405 89; Women's Refuge and Infants' Home receipts, $1,135 18; and Relief Committee receipts, $353. Grand total of receipts, $7,741 95. The disbursements in the similar departments were: General fund, $82 35; Aged Women's Home, $2,839 78; Aged Men's Home, $2,643 16; Women's Refuge and Infants' Home, $1,607 63; expended for the relief of the city poor, $403 65; grand total, $7,576 57; balance on hand, $165 38.

Reports from the Women's Refuge and Infants' Home, Devotional Committee, Visiting Committee, Aged Women's Home, Hospital Committee and Jail Committee were presented and adopted. The last mentioned report contained a strong plea for the formation of a Prisoners' Aid Association, and stated that the assistance of the Ministerial Association had been obtained to secure this object.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Carfrae; first-vice, Mrs. (Rev.) Roger; second-vice, Mrs. Whitehead; secretary, Mrs. Pattullo; treasurer, Mrs. D. S. Perrin; assistant secretary, Mrs. Kennedy.

JESUS BEFORE CAIAPHAS.*

BY THE REV. LYMAN ABBOTT.

Jesus had been arrested at the gate of the garden of Gethsemane about midnight, and hurried to the Temple courts or their vicinity; first to the house of Annas, that the officers arresting might learn what he would have done with him; then, by his direction, to Caiaphas. In one of the rooms opening off the courtyard of the palace a preliminary examination was held. The soldiers and officers of the chief priests and their servants gathered around a little fire in a brazier in the courtyard, for it was cool. Peter stood with them. His denials, therefore, were within the hearing of Jesus and within his sight as well; and it was when Jesus looked upon him as he was led out through the open door to the council chamber where the trial was to be held, that Peter recalled the words that had been spoken, and went out and wept bitterly. While this preliminary examination in the palace of Caiaphas was going on messages were sent in haste to gather the officers of the Sanhedrim, the Supreme Court of Judaism. By 4 o'clock in the morning this court convened in the council chamber adjoining the Temple, on the 7th day of April, in the 34th year of the Christian era, for the most momentous State trial history has ever recorded.

It is necessary, if we are to understand the significance of this trial, that we understand exactly the nature of the accusation brought against Jesus. God was the head of the Jewish people. To turn their allegiance away from this their King was high treason, and was punishable with death. This was the crime of blasphemy, of which Jesus was accused. It is almost exactly paralleled by the law of England in the sixteenth century against the offense known as præmunire, at the time when the Pope of Rome claimed the allegiance of the English people, and it was made a capital offense for any man in England to attempt to divert the allegiance of the English people from the English king. So, centuries before, it had been made a capital offense for any man in any wise to attempt to divert the allegiance of the Jewish people from Jehovah, their King.

It was under this law of the Old Testament that Jesus Christ was put on trial for life. It was charged against him that he had denounced the church authorities to their face; that he had, under pretense of reforming men, gathered a rabble of harlots and drunkards to follow him; that he had denounced the rich and flattered the poor; that he had denounced the Jewish law-givers and assumed to pronounce the judgments of God against them; that he had constituted himself a new king in the midst of Israel and promulgated laws as by his own authority, that he had pretended to work miracles, and yet had refused to submit them to the properly constituted authorities; that he had claimed to be the Messiah; that he had avowed himself to be greater than Moses, greater than Solomon; that he had violated and broken down the law of God; that he had abrogated the Sabbath; that he had cast scorn upon ablutions and ceremonial washings; that he had repudiated the authority of the scribes and Pharisees who were chiefrulers of Israel; that he had been very lax in his attendance upon the Temple service and the Temple feasts; that he had told his disciples openly not to fast; that he had told them openly not to pray in public; in short, that he set men against the whole religious current and thought and teaching of his time, and that he had claimed a supreme authority so to do. And yet all this was insignificant compared with that which was the main charge against him—that he had claimed to stand as in the place of God; that he had averred himself to be the son of God; that he had received without objection divine honors; that he had attempted to deflect the allegiance of the people of Israel from the Jehovah of olden time to himself.

It is easy for us to imagine the evidence gathered against him. It could be proved that he claimed to be king; that he had proclaimed laws as a law-giver; that he had set himself above those of olden times, saying, "It has been said to you of olden time, but I say unto you;" that he had entered Jerusalem riding in triumph as a king, and that when men cried out after him, "Hosanna, hosanna, to him that cometh in the name of the Lord," and he had been called to rebuke them, he had refused so to do; that he had worked miracles in his own name, as no prophet had ever done; that he had proclaimed in his own name, and had claimed even to forgive sins without invoking the forgiveness of Jehovah. And yet such had been the reserve of Jesus that it could not be proved that he had claimed distinctively divine character. We know now what his claims had been in the secret councils of his own disciples; but these were then unknown. Evil spirits had undertaken to bear testimony, and he had silenced them. The men he cured would have borne testimony, and he bid them not to do it. He quietly told his disciples that he was the Son of God, but bid them tell no man. With a wise caution born of foresight, he had exercised himself and had imposed on others a reserve, and had thus guarded against this hour. Witness after witness was brought—false witnesses, too, perjured witnesses; but their testimony agreed not with one another. There was, indeed, that traitor Judas, who might have been summoned to tell what had been spoken in the secret councils, but under the Jewish law one witness was not enough to condemn to death, and Judas Iscariot's testimony unsupported by other testimony would have been without avail.

The morning sun was creeping up the east. The golden glory of the coming day was flooding the council chamber. The priests and scribes began to fear that their victim would escape them, and that they would be unable to bring such testimony of blasphemy as would sustain conviction even in that packed tribunal. At last the High Priest ventured on a bold and audacious experiment. He put Jesus Christ himself on the witness stand. He administered the Jewish oath in the form in which the Jewish oath was then administered: "I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us whether thou art the Son of God." Jesus interposed his remonstrance: "If I tell you," he said, "you will not believe. If I question you, you will not answer. If I should prove my innocence, you would not let me go." Still the High Priest persisted, "I adjure thee that thou tell us by the living God whether thou be the Messiah." Jesus might have refused to answer. He did not. "Thou shalt see," he said, "the Son of man coming in the clouds of glory to judge the world. The relations between me and you will be reversed. You will stand before my judgment bar. I will sit upon the judgment throne." The priest again persisted in his demand. "Art thou indeed the Son of God?" Jesus answered with a clear, ringing, simple statement, "I am." One may imagine the hush that fell upon the court, and the crowd outside looking in through the windows, for the moment, as the High Priest rent his clothes, as the High Priest was bound to do in conviction of blasphemy and in token of his judgment, as the English judge puts the black cap on his head when he pronounces sentence of death. And the whole court, waiting not for the secret ballot required by the Jewish law, cried out: "He is guilty of death, he is guilty of death!"

Our Christian faith, that faith which the great Evangelical Church of Christendom holds, in the divine character of Jesus of Nazareth, does not depend upon any interweaving of texts of Scripture or upon any doubtful deductions. In this supreme and awful moment of his life, when he stood face to face with death, under the solemn sanction of his oath, when he was under the highest obligation to sweep away misconstructions, if they existed—then, in that great hour, he swore before that court and high heaven, that he was the Son of God and the Judge of humanity. If this he was not, he would have been rightly adjudged guilty of blasphemy.

Lest this shall seem a forced conclusion, a picture of imagination, listen to the late Judge Greenleaf, law professor at the time of his death in Harvard Law School: "If we regard Jesus simply as a Jewish citizen, and with no higher character, his conviction seems substantially right in point of law, though the trial were not legal in all its forms. For, whether the accusations were founded on the first or second commands in the Decalogue, or on the law laid down in the thirteenth chapter of Deuteronomy, or that in the eighteenth chapter that twentieth verse, he had violated them all by assuming to himself powers belonging alone to Jehovah; and even if he were recognized as a prophet of the Lord, he was still obnoxious to punishment, under the decision in the case of Moses and Aaron, before cited. It is not easy to perceive on what ground his conduct could have been defended before any tribunal, unless upon that of his superhuman character. No lawyer, it is conceived, would think of placing his defense on any other basis."

This is the ground of our faith in Jesus as the Divine Son of God. In this supreme hour of his life, when the claim meant death to himself, when, if it were false, it meant falsity running through all human history and to all time, he claimed divinity under the solemn sanction of his oath and in the presence of eternity. There is no room to build a tomb to Jesus of Nazareth beside the tomb of Confucius of China, Buddha of India, Socrates of Greece. He was either less than a philosopher or more than a man. He was either the Son of God or to be acquitted of blasphemy only by being regarded as an enthusiast. He was either deserving of condemnation or he is entitled to the highest loyalty and allegiance that human hearts can give him.

*Examination of the testimony of the four Evangelists. With an account of the trial of Jesus. By Simon Greenleaf, LL.D.

WORK OF THE LADIES.

Annual Meeting of the Women's Christian Association—A Successful Year.

The annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association was held in the parlors of the Aged Women's Home yesterday afternoon. Among those present were: Mrs. Carfrae, president; Mrs. (Rev.) Roger, vice-president; Mrs. D. S. Perrin, treasurer; Mrs. M. Pattullo, secretary; Mesdames Hopkins, Fraser, Complin, Gibson, Burns, Kent, Murray, Allan, Hutchinson and Whitehead. The report of the secretary, Mrs. M. Pattullo, which was read and adopted, showed that everything in connection with the Women's Refuge and Infants' Home had gone on very smoothly during the year, the kindness of the matron being repaid by the dutiful obedience of the adult inmates. At the time of the last meeting 7 adults were in the Home, and since that time 44 had been admitted, of whom 5 still remained. The number of infants in the Home at the last annual meeting was 5; since then 51 had been received; 9 were still in the Home. The cash donations for the Home during the year amounted to $87 18. The management was also indebted for gifts of clothing and furniture and to Dr. C. T. Campbell for his attention upon the inmates. Religious services had been conducted during the year, in which Miss Freeman and the city clergymen assisted.

The Aged Women's Home continued still to flourish, the present matron having proved an efficient manager. During the year it was found necessary to increase the accommodation, and for this purpose a house adjacent to the Aged Men's Home was rented. Three deaths occurred in the Home during the year. The thanks of the association were due to Dr. MacArthur for his attention to the sick. The number of inmates in the home at the last annual meeting was 12; 18 had been admitted since; remaining in the institution, 19.

The matron of the Aged Men's Home had given satisfaction. Four deaths have occurred during the year in this Home. The inmates numbered 19 at present, as against 16 one year ago; since the last meeting 22 had been admitted. Dr. Mitchell kindly gave his attention to those of the inmates requiring the same, for which the association desired to return thanks.

The members of the Relief Committee had attended to the wants of 86 families, and paid 751 visits during the past eighteen months. The hospital and jail had been regularly visited, and religious services had been held at each institution at regular intervals. The thanks of the association were tendered to the Ministerial Association and the Episcopal Church ministers for holding religious services in the several homes, as well as in the jail and hospital, and also to the ladies who assisted in the musical services. The city papers had also placed the association in their debt. The report concluded with an earnest request that all ladies eligible should join the association.

The report of the treasurer for the seventeen months ending Sept. 30, 1889, was read by the treasurer, Mrs. D. S. Perrin. It showed the balance on hand at that time to have been $272 19; general fund receipts, $1,252 25; Aged Women's Home receipts, $2,322 84; Aged Men's Home receipts, $2,405 89; Women's Refuge and Infants' Home receipts, $1,135 18; and Relief Committee receipts, $353. Grand total of receipts, $7,741 95. The disbursements in the similar departments were: General fund, $82 35; Aged Women's Home, $2,839 78; Aged Men's Home, $2,643 16; Women's Refuge and Infants' Home, $1,607 63; expended for the relief of the city poor, $403 65; grand total, $7,576 57; balance on hand, $165 38.

Reports from the Women's Refuge and Infants' Home, Devotional Committee, Visiting Committee, Aged Women's Home, Hospital Committee and Jail Committee were presented and adopted. The last mentioned report contained a strong plea for the formation of a Prisoners' Aid Association, and stated that the assistance of the Ministerial Association had been obtained to secure this object.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Carfrae; first-vice, Mrs. (Rev.) Roger; second-vice, Mrs. Whitehead; secretary, Mrs. Pattullo; treasurer, Mrs. D. S. Perrin; assistant secretary, Mrs. Kennedy.

JESUS BEFORE CAIAPHAS.*

BY THE REV. LYMAN ABBOTT.

Jesus had been arrested at the gate of the garden of Gethsemane about midnight, and hurried to the Temple courts or their vicinity; first to the house of Annas, that the officers arresting might learn what he would have done with him; then, by his direction, to Caiaphas. In one of the rooms opening off the courtyard of the palace a preliminary examination was held. The soldiers and officers of the chief priests and their servants gathered around a little fire in a brazier in the courtyard, for it was cool. Peter stood with them. His denials, therefore, were within the hearing of Jesus and within his sight as well; and it was when Jesus looked upon him as he was led out through the open door to the council chamber where the trial was to be held, that Peter recalled the words that had been spoken, and went out and wept bitterly. While this preliminary examination in the palace of Caiaphas was going on messages were sent in haste to gather the officers of the Sanhedrim, the Supreme Court of Judaism. By 4 o'clock in the morning this court convened in the council chamber adjoining the Temple, on the 7th day of April, in the 34th year of the Christian era, for the most momentous State trial history has ever recorded.

It is necessary, if we are to understand the significance of this trial, that we understand exactly the nature of the accusation brought against Jesus. God was the head of the Jewish people. To turn their allegiance away from this their King was high treason, and was punishable with death. This was the crime of blasphemy, of which Jesus was accused. It is almost exactly paralleled by the law of England in the sixteenth century against the offense known as præmunire, at the time when the Pope of Rome claimed the allegiance of the English people, and it was made a capital offense for any man in England to attempt to divert the allegiance of the English people from the English king. So, centuries before, it had been made a capital offense for any man in any wise to attempt to divert the allegiance of the Jewish people from Jehovah, their King.

It was under this law of the Old Testament that Jesus Christ was put on trial for life. It was charged against him that he had denounced the church authorities to their face; that he had, under pretense of reforming men, gathered rabble of harlots and drunkards to follow him; that he had denounced the rich and flattered the poor; that he had denounced the Jewish law-givers and assumed to pronounce the judgments of God against them; that he had constituted himself a new king in the midst of Israel and promulgated laws as by his own authority, that he had pretended to work miracles, and yet had refused to submit them to the properly constituted authorities; that he had claimed to be the Messiah; that he had avowed himself to be greater than Moses, greater than Solomon; that he had violated and broken down the law of God; that he had abrogated the Sabbath; that he had cast scorn upon ablutions and ceremonial washings; that he had repudiated the authority of the scribes and Pharisees who were chief rulers of Israel; that he had been very lax in his attendance upon the Temple service and the Temple feasts; that he had told his disciples openly not to fast; that he had told them openly not to pray in public; in short, that he set men against the whole religious current and thought and teaching of his time, and that he had claimed a supreme authority so to do. And yet all this was insignificant compared with that which was the main charge against him—that he had claimed to stand as in the place of God; that he had averred himself to be the son of God; that he had received without objection divine honors; that he had attempted to deflect the allegiance of the people of Israel from the Jehovah of olden time to himself.

It is easy for us to imagine the evidence gathered against him. It could be proved that he claimed to be king; that he had proclaimed laws as a law-giver; that he had set himself above those of olden times, saying, "It has been said to you of olden time, but I say unto you"; that he had entered Jerusalem riding in triumph as a king, and that when men cried out after him, "Hosanna, hosanna, to him that cometh in the name of the Lord," and he had been called to rebuke them, he had refused so to do; that he had worked miracles in his own name, as no prophet had ever done; that he had prophesied in his own name, and had claimed even to forgive sins without invoking the forgiveness of Jehovah. And yet such had been the reserve of Jesus that it could not be proved that he had claimed distinctively divine character. We know now what his claims had been in the secret councils of his own disciples; but these were then unknown. Evil spirits had undertaken to bear testimony, and he had silenced them. The men he cured would have borne testimony, and he bid them not to do it. He quietly told his disciples that he was the Son of God, but bid them tell no man. With a wise caution born of foresight, he had exercised himself and had imposed on others a reserve, and had thus guarded against this hour. Witness after witness was brought—false witnesses, too, perjured witnesses; but their testimony agreed not with one another. There was, indeed, that traitor Judas, who might have been summoned to tell what had been spoken in the secret councils, but under the Jewish law one witness was not enough to condem to death, and Judas Iscariot's testimony unsupported by other testimony would have been without avail.

The morning sun was creeping up the east. The golden glory of the coming day was flooding the council chamber. The priests and scribes began to fear that their victim would escape them, and that they would be unable to bring such testimony of blasphemy as would sustain conviction even in that packed tribunal. At last the High Priest ventured on a bold and audacious experiment. He put Jesus Christ himself on the witness stand. He administered the Jewish oath in the form in which the Jewish oath was then administered: "I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us whether thou art the Son of God." Jesus interposed his remonstrance: "If I tell you," he said, "you will not believe. If I question you, you will not answer. If I should prove my innocence, you would not let me go." Still the High Priest persisted. "I adjure thee that thou tell us by the living God whether thou be the Messiah." Jesus might have refused to answer. He did not. "Thou shalt see," he said, "the Son of man coming in the clouds of glory to judge the world. The relations between me and you will be reversed. You will stand before my judgment bar. I will sit upon the judgment throne." The priest again persisted in his demand. "Art thou indeed the Son of God?" Jesus answered with a clear, ringing, simple statement, "I am." One may imagine the hush that fell upon the court, and the crowd outside looking in through the windows, for the moment, as the High Priest rent his clothes, as the High Priest was bound to do in conviction of blasphemy and in token of his judgment, as the English judge puts the black cap on his head when he pronounces sentence of death. And the whole court, waiting not for the secret ballot required by the Jewish law, cried out: "He is guilty of death, he is guilty of death!"

Our Christian faith, that faith which the great Evangelical Church of Christendom holds, in the divine character of Jesus of Nazareth, does not depend upon any interweaving of texts of Scripture or upon any doubtful deductions. In this supreme and awful moment of his life, when he stood face to face with death, under the solemn sanction of his oath, when he was under the highest obligation to sweep away misconstructions, if they existed—then, in that great hour, he swore before that court and high heaven that he was the Son of God and the Judge of humanity. If this he was not, he would have been rightly adjudged guilty of blasphemy.

Lest this shall seem a forced conclusion, a picture of imagination, listen to the late Judge Greenleaf, law professor at the time of his death in Harvard Law School: "If we regard Jesus simply as a Jewish citizen, and with no higher character, his conviction seems substantially right in point of law, though the trial were not legal in all its forms. For, whether the accusations were founded on the first or second commands in the Decalogue, or on the law laid down in the thirteenth chapter of Deuteronomy, or that in the eighteenth chapter that twentieth verse, he had violated them all by assuming to himself powers belonging alone to Jehovah; and even if he were recognized as a prophet of the Lord, he was still obnoxious to punishment, under the decision in the case of Moses and Aaron, before cited. It is not easy to perceive on what ground his conduct could have been defended before any tribunal, unless upon that of his superhuman character. No lawyer, it is conceived, would think of placing his defense on any other basis."†

This is the ground of our faith in Jesus as the Divine Son of God. In this supreme hour of his life, when the claim meant death to himself, when, if it were false, it meant falsity running through all human history and to all time, he claimed divinity under the solemn sanction of his oath and in the presence of eternity. There is no room to build a tomb to Jesus of Nazareth beside the tomb of Confucius of China, Buddha of India, Socrates of Greece. He was either less than a philosopher or more than a man. He was either the Son of God or to be acquitted of blasphemy only by being regarded as an enthusiast. He was either deserving of condemnation or he is entitled to the highest loyalty and allegiance that human hearts can give him.

THE COMING MAN WILL FLY.

One of the most remarkable developments in the inventing power of man is the designing and patenting of an air ship by Messrs. Pennington & Butler, two well-known Cincinnati experts. They claim to have solved the great problem of aerial navigation, and they have so far commanded the confidence of capitalists as to be able to sell their patents and other valuable contrivances to a company with an authorized capital of $10,000,000, the greater part of which stock has already been taken. At an early day, we are told, the Mount Carmel Aeronautic Navigation Company will erect mammoth works for the construction of the new air machine, and steps will at once be taken to introduce it into every portion of the world.

The great trouble hitherto experienced in the navigation of the air has been the lack of a material sufficiently strong to carry passengers, yet light and capable of easy control, and a motor power that could be put in small compass, and still be lasting. Iron and wood on the one hand have been demonstrated to be too heavy, and to carry coal to generate enough gas to keep a vessel in the air would but handicap the aeronaut.

Invention, however, has proved that aluminium and electricity meet the requirements of the air navigators, and the inventors assert that these two elements have now been brought to such perfection that they will form a most important feature in aerial machine construction. It is claimed for the air ships which the inventors are about to present to public approval, that safety, speed, and comfort have been taken into consideration; they assert that they have perfected their ship so that it is under absolute control of the operator, and can be raised and lowered at will, go to any given point and return, attain a speed of 200 miles an hour or come to a standstill in mid-air. The design of this aerial ship is on the same principle as the hull of a ship, with about the same proportions. Its appearance, except being A shaped, is round, and conical at both ends, having attached at either side two large wings extending the full length. These wing are arranged with devices that will adjust themselves automatically into a parachute, allowing the machine to descend to the earth gradually in case of accident. On the outward corners of these wings are placed propeller wheels, which run right or left, for raising or lowering the ship. At the bow is a very large propeller wheel, which propels the ship forward and backward, and directly on top of the buoyancy chamber is a rudder extending its full length and half the width of the wings, that is used to steer the ship horizontally. A little to the rear and just behind this top rudder is an adjustable rudder to steer the ship sideways, either to the right or left. Directly under this is a rudder running horizontally. This is used to raise or lower the ship when in motion. The cabin is hung directly under the main part of the frame, and directly underneath the cabin is a space for storage batteries, and, being at the extreme lower side, acts as a ballast, and keeps the ship from turning to either side. The front end of the cabin is occupied by the pilot, or steersman, who has in front of him a map and compass of his route to steer by. Both the rudders and five propeller wheels are controlled by electricity.

Most remarkable of all is the speed which it is claimed the machine will attain. It depends, we are told, on the will of the operator, who can run it up to 200 miles an hour or gradually slow up until it stops. By its agency, a most startling revolution in traveling will be possible. For example, if a London lady desires to visit a friend in Toronto, she will be able to take an airship here in the morning, visit her friend in that city, take lunch and a walk down town, and yet be home in time for dinner. Similarly, it will be easily possible for a London man to go in the morning by airship to Montreal or New York, transact business for several hours, and still be with his family in the evening. A trip across the Atlantic or the Pacific will have no terrors in the days when these things are practicable, and the inventors and their capitalist friends tell us they are at hand. Perhaps even the obstacles intervening between the known and civilized world and the much-sought-for north pole will be overcome by the same agency. Commander Cheyne, indeed, has informed us that if ever the pole is approached it must be by aerial navigation. Great modifications in social and business life will result from the free navigation of the air, even though the speed attained does not reach one half what the inventors claim can be easily accomplished. When people can fly from country to country and from continent to continent with as great ease as they now travel from city to city, many changes in the system of collecting revenue for purposes will be rendered necessary. Who, for example, could prevent smuggling by the occupants of an air ship floating into a country at a speed of 200 miles an hour?

There is really no need for misgivings as to the ultimate success of the airship. Equally wonderful inventions have before now been perfected. The steam engine, illuminating gas, the magnetic telegraph, the telephone, and the electric light were each in their turn invented, and viewed by skeptics as impossibilities, yet by perseverance and the aid of science they have proved successful.

Why should man not control the air as well as the land and water?

MAGAZINES OF THE MONTH.

The Atlantic Monthly for November (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co.) opens with the first installment of "The House of Martha," by Frank R. Stockton, a writer who is above all things ingenious and original. So far the new serial is an account of a traveler recently returned from Europe, who is unable to find any one desirous of hearing him talk about his travels. All his friends and acquaintances in town are glad to see him, not that they might hear what had happened to him, but that they might tell him what had happened to them. In despair he advertises for a listener, who proves thoroughly satisfactory, and gives him the full opportunity and the perfect right to bore a fellow-being, added to the enjoyment of the knowledge that the bored one is bound to make it appear that he is not bored. Edith M. Thomas writes of the sea-shore in most poetic vein. Here is an illustrative sentence: "In fine weather by the sea, time wastes exquisitely, and purpose dies by a lovely euthanasy. Conscience bleaches white and clear of any imprint as to duty." "The Legend of William Tell" is traced to a mythical source. Oliver Wendel Holmes' "Teacup" talk is charming, as usual, but the other serial, "Felicia," by Fanny Murfree, suffers a little by inevitable comparison with the work of her more gifted sister, Charles Egbert Craddock. The other articles are critical, descriptive and historical. In the "Contributors' Club" there is always something of freshness and value, conveyed in the purest and finest of contemporary English.

Harper's Magazine for the coming month contains two poems by Canadian poets—"A Quatrain," by Bliss Carman, and "In November," by Archibald Lampman. The latter, which is a poem of peculiar and striking beauty, gives the very color and spirit of the November woods. Lampman has no mannerisms, no affectations; nor does he overlay the unapproachable beauty of nature with garish epithets; but that in the fields and woods which the clumsy purblind observer passes by half noticed he takes up in gentle, reverent fingers, and lays bare the heart of its mystery. Another poem which gives charm to this number of Harper is "The Quaker Lady," written by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, and adorned with seventeen quaint and airy illustrations. In an article on Southern California entitled "Our Italy," by Charles Dudley Warner, the author says: "Italy is the land of the imagination, but the sensation on first beholding it from the northern heights, aside from its associations of romance and poetry, can be repeated in our own land by whoever will cross the burning desert of Colorado, or the savage wastes of the Mojave wilderness of stone and sage brush, and come suddenly as he must come by train into the bloom of Southern California." William Black contributes a story called "A Hallowe'en Wraith." "On All-Hallow's Eve," he says, "there is one form of incantation which is known to be extremely, nay, terribly potent, when all others have failed. You go out by yourself, taking a handful of hemp seed with you. You get to a secluded place, and begin to scatter the seed as you walk along the road. You say, 'Hemp seed, I sow thee, hemp seed, I sow thee; he who is to be my true love appear now and show thee.' And if you look furtively over your shoulder you will behold the desired apparition following you." Other articles are: "A Winter Journey to Japan," an account of Princeton University, and a description of "Switzerland and the Swiss." In the "Editor's Easy Chair," Geo. William Curtis, commenting on a recent peculiar phase of the temperance movement says: "The force of the sentiment of temperance in the community will be tested not by attempted prohibition, but by ingenious obstruction. It will not say, probably, that there shall be no public drinking, but that public drinking shall be accompanied with full responsibility, shall be deliberate and without concealment."

The novelette in the November Lippincott's, "A Laggard in Love" is not sufficiently clever in treatment to cover a rather threadbare plot. "Heroines of the Human Comedy," by Junius Henri Browne, introduces us to some of Balzac's women, who seem to have remarkable variety and divergence. Most poets and novelists seem to have one idea of the sex, with variations. They bear a striking family resemblance, and their authors are either sentimental or cynical. Balzac's women are as unlike as possible. In "Some Experiences of a Stump Speaker" we are told that to succeed upon the stump one must feel himself master of the situation; he must thoroughly understand the questions at issue, be well versed in the political history of the country, and be a walking encyclopedia of information, facts and statistics upon business and economic questions. In "Journalism versus Literature" the reason why daily newspaper work is antagonistic to literary writing is briefly given in the answer of a city editor of a prominent New York paper to a young seeker after journalistic distinction who said: "Mr. ——, I have distinctly literary aspirations." "Indeed?" was the reply, "Well, for the present you will confine your literary aspirations to the east side police stations."

The late numbers of Littell's Living Age fully maintain their high standard in selections from the best of current English magazines. Perhaps the most noticeable articles in the number for Oct. 25 are "The Last Days of Heine," from Macmillan's Magazine, and "Parallel Passages from European and Asiatic Writers," from The Asiatic Quarterly Review. In addition to other articles, which may be described as historical and geographical, there is a charming short story from Blackwood called "A Physiologist's Wife."

The Young Friends' Review is a small monthly magazine published in the interest of the Society of Friends, at London and Coldstream. It is intended chiefly for Young Friends, and, it is needless to add, the quality of the original and selected matter is unexceptionable.

The fiction in the current number of the Cosmopolitan is by H. H. Boyesen and Richard Malcolm Johnston. The Norwegian writer in "A Norse Atlantis" transports his characters from Norway to America, and after describing the influence of new world life and manners upon his heroine concludes in these complimentary words as applicable to Canada as to the States: "And this great and wholesome land of ours, with its rank vigor and riotous freedom, by making her conscious of the dignity of her womanhood, has enabled her to grow to the full stature of her own self. This is the greatest blessing which America bestows upon the immigrant, and it is a blessing which outweighs a thousand disadvantages." "The American Amateur Stage" and "Fan Histories and Fashions" are very pleasingly and profusely illustrated, as is also "The Army of Japan," by Arthur Sherburne Hardy. Some good practical words are said on the subject of "College Education in Relation to Business," to the effect that in taking an inventory of a man it is a matter of slight moment to know whether he graduated from this college, or that college, or any college. "The plain blunt question which the world asked yesterday, and has been asking to-day, and will ask to-morrow, is: What of the man? How much is there of him and to him and in him? What can he do?"

"The Future American Drama," as coming from the pen of Dion Boucicault, will be read with interest in the Arena for November. "A New Basis of Church Life" is founded on the belief that whatever life is in the church to-day is due to the virtual ignoring of creeds, and the embracing of the opportunities for practical good the institution offers. "A Glance at the Good Old Times" reveals the fact that those were the times when there were "no railroads, no locomotives, no steamships, and no telegraph wires, no gas lights, no petroleum, no California gold, no Indian-rubber shoes or coats, no percussion caps or revolvers, no friction matches, no city aqueduct, no steam printing presses, no sewing machines, no reaping machines, no postage stamps or envelopes, or pens of steel or gold, when there was no homœopathy or hydropathy, no chloroform or teeth extracted without pain, no temperance societies, no saxhorns or cornets or seven octave pianos, no photographs, no paint tubes for artists, no complete stenography, no lithography or etching on stone, no illustrated papers, and hardly a decent wood engraving, when omnibuses and street cars were not dreamed of, when dull street lamps lit with whale oil were a luxury, when there were no public schools, no special departments of science in colleges, no gymnasiums, no art unions, no literary or political clubs, no lyceum lectures, no wisely organized and widely operating philanthropic societies, no prison discipline, no good lunatic asylums, no houses of employment and reformation for young scamps—and generally very little hope of reform in young or old scamps."

The Forum is as usual packed with essays which at first glance look too profound to be readable, but which on inspection seldom fail to interest. Under the heading of "French Canada and the Dominion," in the November number, Mr. W. Blackburn Harte considers the aims of the French-Canadians and their influence in our politics. The farming population, who produce the largest share of the nation's wealth and get the smallest share for themselves, have their side of the economic question well represented in the article on "The Embattled Farmers." The much-written-of topic of "The Kreutzer Sonata" is freshly denounced as a libel on the majority of men. Other articles of interest are "The Probabilities of Agriculture," "The Shibboleth of Public Opinion," and "Democracy and Wealth."

Sick Headache

IS a complaint from which many suffer and few are entirely free. Its cause is indigestion and a sluggish liver, the cure for which is readily found in the use of Ayer's Pills.

"I have found that for sick headache, caused by a disordered condition of the stomach, Ayer's Pills are the most reliable remedy."—Samuel C. Bradburn, Worthington, Mass.

"After the use of Ayer's Pills for many years, in my practice and family, I am justified in saying that they are an excellent cathartic and liver medicine—sustaining all the claims made for them."—W. A. Westfall, M. D., V. P. Austin & N. W. Railway Co., Burnet, Texas.

"Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered stomach and liver. I suffered for over three years from headache, indigestion, and constipation. I had no appetite and was weak and nervous most of the time. By using three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured."—Philip Lockwood, Topeka, Kansas.

"I was troubled for years with indigestion, constipation, and headache. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills, used in small daily doses, restored me to health. They are prompt and effective."—W. H. Strout, Meadville, Pa.

NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY

A Great Blood Purifier

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia

A Medical Triumph!

HOW THE HEALTH OF ONE OF BELLEVILLE'S CITIZENS WAS RESTORED.

Remarkable Cure of Dropsy and Dyspepsia.

MR. SAMUEL T. CASEY, Belleville, writes: "In the spring of 1884 I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, which gradually became more and more distressing. I used various domestic remedies, and applied to my physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of Dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever, except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. NORTHROP AND LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with but little hope of relief; and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. Although now seventy-nine years of age, I can enjoy my meals as well as ever, and my general health is good. I am well known in this section of Canada, having lived here fifty-seven years; and you have liberty to use my name in recommendation of your VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which has done such wonders in my case."

A Very Bad Case!

DYSPEPSIA VANQUISHED.

MR. JAMES JOHNSTON, 4th con., 7th lot, Amaranth, writes: "Two bottles of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY cured me of Dyspepsia. Mine was a bad case and I had tried a number of other preparations without getting any benefit from them."

Dyspepsia Had to Go.

MR. W. J. DEYELL, Wingham, carpenter and builder, writes: "Three years ago I was greatly troubled with Dyspepsia; a pain between my shoulders was so bad that I thought I would have to quit work altogether. No medicine gave me ease until I got a bottle of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which gave me relief. I continued using the medicine until I had taken three bottles, when I was perfectly well. I consider it invaluable as a cure for Dyspepsia. I know of several persons who have used it with the same benefit."

THE TURF.

Chas. Gauntlette, of Milan, Mich., has refused an offer of $15,000 for his 4-year-old black stallion Corallioid, 9,831, by Simmons, dam Coral, by Clark Chief, second dam Cassia, by Cassius M. Clay, jun., 22. Corallioid made a record of 2:19½ at the Lexington meeting.

C. J. Hamlin, of Buffalo, is considered one of the wonders of the trotting turf the present season. He is 70 years of age, and can handle the reins over a trotter as well as any owner on the circuit, as is proved in the case of Belle Hamlin and Justina, which he drove to a best record for double teams.

Wednesday's steeplechase fiasco at Washington, D. C., has done much to discredit that style of racing at the national capital. The committee thought that Hercules, ridden by Chandler, had not done his duty, and the way he was handled was considered so suspicious that both Hercules and his jockey have been suspended.

California has produced 42 trotters in the 2:20 or better class, Canada 3, Connecticut 3, Illinois 9, Indiana 11, Iowa 5, Kentucky 89, Maine 6, Massachusetts 5, Michigan 23, Minnesota 1, Missouri 3, New Jersey 8, Maryland 1, Nebraska 1, New Hampshire 1, New York 50, Ohio 11, Oregon 1, Pennsylvania 1, Rhode Island 8, Tennessee 7, Vermont 1, Wisconsin 5.

An experienced horseman claims that colts should be trained to walk. The walking gait will make less balky horses and less unsound ones. Walking horses will keep in much better condition on the same food, and get there almost as soon if not sooner. The horse hard driven walks very slow, and so loses time.

Gamble Orr, Revere House, Toronto, has issued the following challenge: There has been a great deal of talk about the stallion Chicken that I imported from Ireland to this country in August last, and who is owned in Toronto at the present time. Now, I will match the Chicken for £1,000 or $5,000 against any stallion, mare or gelding owned in the Dominion of Canada, the race to take place over the full steeplechase course at Woodbine, about two miles and a half, and to be run at the Ontario Jockey Club meeting on May 24 next, half forfeit, play or pay. The money can be placed in any reliable man's hand, but the sooner it is put up the better I shall like it.

CRICKET.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—It is expected that negotiations will shortly be completed for a visit of the American team of cricketers, who will probably, in that event, arrive here early in May, and the campaign will be carried on until September. The programme, so far as it is now arranged, takes in 29 games in England alone.

It is possible, of course, that the American team may also visit Scotland and Ireland. In England the first-class county elevens will be met, three games will be played against teams representative of all England, and other games will be played with the gentlemen of England and the players. They will play in the north and south of England, the Oxford University, Cambride University, Marylebone Club, Lyric Club, Hurst Park Club, the United Service Club, the counties of Kent, Middlesex, Surrey, Sussex, Lancashire, Gloucestershire, Somerset, Derbyshire, Essex and Cheshire. Dr. W. G. Grace, the captain of the Glouchester men, the champion cricketer of England; Mr. A. N. Hornby, the captain of the Lancashire team, and Mr. D. J. Walker, of the Middlesex Club, have been in personal communication with Mr. Crowhurst, the representative of the Americans, and will contribute much to the completion of this vast programme.

HE IS ON THE FENCE.

Mayor Taylor Communes with Himself on the Debenture Question.

Chairman Davis and Commissioner Essery State Their Positions—Do the Commissioners Owe $60,000 as Charged on Capital Account?

An hour's talk over the waterworks debenture question last evening by the special committee from the City Council and the water commissioners did not advance matters much. The following aldermen waited upon the full Board of Commissioners: Aldermen Boyd, Skinner, Anderson, Moule, Thomas and Fitzgerald. Ald. Boyd, as chairman of the deputation, was asked to state the views of the aldermen, but as neither Auditor Jewell nor City Chamberlain Pope were present he asked that proceedings be stayed until they should arrive.

Commissioner Essery suggested that the deputation submit what they wished the commissioners to consider in writing. What was wanted was that the basis of their request should be put down in writing.

Ald. Thomas contended that it would be better to talk the matter over and see if the difficulty could not be adjusted. If the commissioners needed all the money, why he was not willing to object to their keeping it.

Chairman Davis supported Commissioner Essery's suggestion on the ground that it would be easier to handle the matter and would avoid much useless talk.

THE COUNCIL'S CONTENTION.

Ald. Boyd explained the stand the Council had taken in the matter by stating that it was understood that the commissioners owed the corporation a certain sum of money spent on capital account. The commissioners had sent in a written statement that they would require $70,000, and the Council added $60,000 for the purpose of paying off the old debt. The act went down as an act for the raising of waterworks debentures. The question is, do the commissioners owe this money? If they do, they should pay it back, and if not, why, they have no reason to pay it back.

THE COMMISSIONERS' DEFENSE.

Commissioner Essery—We asked for $70,000 and got it, but it is one thing to ask for $70,000 and an entirely different thing to be asked to hand over $60,000 for a purpose foreign to our department.

Ald. Moule asked the speaker why he had not taken his objection before.

Commissioner Essery put the question back with the query: "Why did not your Council meet us on the question before as you have done this evening? Had this been done we would have been in honor bound to make every explanation. For that $60,000 charged against us, the Council has been paid back dollar for dollar in the shape of water mains and other permanent improvements. Your Council got more than that. You have assessed the citizens of London every year since to make up that amount. We did not pay back that $60,000, but you raised the money from the citizens and have got the water mains and other improvements besides."

Chairman Davis—I think that as chairman of this Board I should have been consulted when this act was framed, but I never even saw a copy of it until long after it had become law. I did not know what the purport of the act was, therefore I say with respect to the whole contention in this matter that we have never been consulted. We were never consulted on any debentures issued for any amount over $70,000. Any gentleman who says that we were consulted for the act authorizing the debentures for $130,000 is entirely mistaken.

Ald. Thomas contended that the money should be paid over to the Council. It was not intended that the permanent improvements should have been provided for out of the debentures. "The money," he said, "is well invested, and I believe one of the best assets of the city, but the Council's intention was that the money was to be used simply for current expenses, and that the balance should be paid back."

Commissioner Essery—I am making apologies for no one when I say that we have followed the regular custom of the commissioners. The waterworks were built for the purpose of supplying the citizens with water. The money wished to be deducted has been raised by rates by your own Council. It is rather late for the City Chamberlain to find out that such action was wrong. You are attempting to get $60,000 which you would not dare to have asked for in Toronto. Look at the notice on the application for that act. You will find $70,000 for waterworks and $60,000 for something else. Why did your Council not get the $60,000 from the Legislature for the purposes they asked in the first place? When you found out that you could not get the money in that way, what object was there in getting the money through us? We have spent our own money and we are prepared to comply with the statute. The act does not say that we must pay any portion of the $60,000 debenture money back. If the City Council cannot get money in the way in which they applied for it, why should the Water Commissioners be their conduct pipe?

Ald. Boyd—The reason we did not ask to have the debentures issued in any other way was because we expected that out of this money would be paid back the amount of the commissioners' former indebtedness. We did not come here to ask favors. If the money is not owing, why the contention ends here.

Ald. Anderson—The question, Commissioner Essery, is, "did the commissioners when this act was passed owe the City Council $60,000?"

Commissioner Essery—We were not indebted in the sense in which your auditor and treasurer make the statement read.

Several members of the deputation hereupon asked that City Chamberlain Pope make a statement.

Mayor Taylor—I object to Mr. Pope making any statement until the deputation present their request in writing. I am here as a commissioner, and will insist upon the request being put in writing.

The commissioners then withdrew in order to allow the aldermen to draw up their form of request, and after being out for over half an hour they were recalled. When again seated Ald. Boyd made known the result of the conference. He stated that as the commissioners required the deputation to draw up their request in writing the meeting would have to come to an end. The aldermen were not prepared, he said, to put a request in writing which would bind the entire Council. They had decided to return to the City Council and report what had transpired during the evening. They would also recommend that the Council issue the debentures for the remaining $60,000.

Commissioner Essery—If you issue that $60,000 we will take measures to get the money, and as far as my vote is concerned that will end the whole matter. If you issue them you will do so at your own peril.

Chairman Davis then made a statement. "At the present time," he said, "the commissioners are not asking for the issue of the $60,000 debentures, but if they are issued I will take those debentures and hold them for the purpose laid down in the act. The act does not specify that we shall hand back that money nor any part of it at any particular time. In the future work may be required to be done, and we could not possibly hand back the money until all work necessary had been completed. For these reasons I have arrived at this decision."

Commissioner Essery again took the floor and with a copy of the statutes on the question in his hand said: "In section No. 17 of these statutes of Ontario for the year 1890, chapter 89, it is provided that the city corporation may issue if they see fit debentures of $130,000 for waterworks purposes, and the Water Commissioners may use the whole of it or such part of it as they see fit. After they get through with it, the time unlimited, they may hand the money over to the corporation if they are justified in doing so. I was sent here to act as a water commissioner only, and I was not sent here to lower the rate of taxation for the present year. It would be an outrage on the part of the City Council to issue debentures, because they have not been asked to. If the commissioners want any more money than they have when the present arbitration is over we will ask for it. I deny the City Council's right to any of that money until the commissioners are through with it, and as far as my vote goes not a dollar will go out of our treasury. Since the City Council has threatened to issue the debentures, the commissioners will appoint a solicitor of their own and take proceedings to see that every dollar of the money goes into the commissioners' treasury."

The deputation then withdrew, and when they were gone the commissioners decided to call another meeting this morning and appoint a solicitor.

Mr. Pool, of London, is here endeavoring to organize a court of the Independent Order of Foresters. Several have signed the application for a charter.

SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The North Dorchester Sunday School Convention was held at Nilestown on Tuesday. Rev. J. E. Moore, pastor of the Methodist Church, opened the meeting with devotional exercises. A letter was received and read from the president, R. Venning, J. P., stating that on account of illness he would not be present. A resolution of sympathy for him in his affliction was passed. The morning session gave its attention to an essay by Rev. J. E. Moore on "Hindrances to religion and Sabbath school work." The paper pointed out in a clear manner and expressed in strong language the obstacles ministers and Sunday school workers meet with in the discharge of duty, such as the apathy of parents, light literature, continued stories (novels), the reading of secular newspapers on the Lord's day, dancing, card playing, theater going, intemperance, tobacco, etc., which provoked a spirited discussion.

Mr. R. P. Aylesworth, vice-president, occupied the chair at the afternoon session. The church was well filled. The Sabbath school scholars rendered inspiring songs, and Mr. J. F. Pack, of Putnam, taught a blackboard lesson and brought out many interesting points. Rev. J. A. Ayearst read an essay on "Parental Example and Training," which elicited great interest and a lively discussion. The use of tobacco and Sunday visiting amongst Christians and Sabbath school teachers was strongly spoken against, some few speaking in favor of both, but the voice of the convention was strongly against the practice of either.

At the close of the afternoon session the election of officers for the ensuing year took place and was conducted by ballot, which resulted as follows: President, Mr. R. P. Aylesworth, Dorchester; vice-president, J. Dibb, Derwent; secretary-treasurer, W. Malpass, Mossley (re-elected). It was decided to hold the next convention at Avon in the fall of 1891.

At the evening session the church was again crowded and much interest manifested. Rev. R. J. Garbutt, LL.B., Avon, delivered a splendid address on "Self Helps, Their Use and Abuse," which also called out a lengthened and profitable discussion. It was decided that each school in the township should in the future send three delegates, one of whom was to be the superintendent, ex officio. The convention was right royally entertained by the Nilestown people. Mr. W. Thomas, of Brownsville, was among those present, and gave an excellent address on "The Teachers' Unconscious Influence." Taking the convention altogether it was considered very successful.

THE LUXURY OF TRAVEL.

A Splendid Train and a Great Four-Track Railroad.

To those who appreciate traveling in comfort we commend the New York and Chicago Limited of the New York Central. In the construction of this splendid train, the high reputation of the Wagner Palace Car Company for beauty and perfection of appointment has been fully maintained. In fact, the train is a hotel on wheels, with many conveniences which no hotel can offer.

During the ride—and the time of departure is specially arranged with reference to the attractive portions of the road—one may look out on as beautiful scenery as there is in the world. The entire train is heated by steam from the engine, and lighted with Pintsch gas. The vestibules between the cars enable passengers to pass from one to the other without either danger or difficulty.

The New York Central's four tracks and level roadbed permit the highest speed with safety.

OUR NEW STORY.

Rudyard Kipling, the famous young Anglo-Indian novelist, whose recent writings have set the world talking, has unfortunately broken down from over-work. His physicians have ordered him to take a long rest, and he has now settled down at Naples, in accordance with their injunctions. The story which the famous novelist has just completed will be published at an early date in the ADVERTISER, special arrangements for that purpose having been made with Mr. Kipling's publishers.

Broke Both Legs.

A G. T. R. section man named William Lawrence, living on Grey street, had both legs broken this morning about 11 o'clock by a heavy piece of timber falling on him, while working at the Cove bridge. He was placed on the section train and immediately brought to the city, where he was met by the ambulance and taken to the hospital. At last reports he was doing as well as possible.

Terribly Mangled.

An accident which will in all probability result fatally happened at the William street crossing of the C. P. R. this morning, a few minutes past 5 o'clock. At this time Patrick Kinsella, a young man about 18 years of age, who was employed by the company as night call-boy, was walking down the main track of the road from the C. P. R. roundhouse to the city. As he reached William street he noticed the Chicago Flyer pulling out of the station and stepped off the main line to one of the side tracks. The noise of the approaching train prevented the predestrian from hearing the bell of the yard engine, which was coming down behind him on the track upon which he was walking. Before he was aware of his danger the engine struck him and he was dragged for several yards under the wheels. The engine was promptly reversed and the luckless messenger was picked up by his sorrowful friends. When Kinsella saw the men approaching him he said, "Pick me up boys. Here's another dead man or boy, whatever you have a mind to call him." Dr. W. J. Mitchell was immediately summoned, and after a look at the mangled body decided to have him removed to the hospital. The right arm was crushed and torn and hung on to the shoulder by shreds of flesh, the sufferer being greatly weakened by loss of blood. At the hospital Dr. Mitchell decided to amputate the arm a short distance from the shoulder, and was assisted in the operation by Dr. Jones. A more minute examination of the wounded man's injuries revealed several wounds on the head and body, a severe dislocation of the right hip, and a dangerous cut on the lower portion of the abdomen. In addition to these, none of which except the latter would be likely to prove serious, the doctors suspect that there are internal injuries, and until the nature of them are ascertained it is impossible to say whether Kinsella will recover or not. His pulse was very high at last accounts. Kinsella lived with his parents on Richmond street north, where his father has a small boot and shoe store.

At the annual convention of the National Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, held in Los Angeles, Cal., last week, the treasurer's report showed that $275,000 had been paid out for disability and death claims during the year.

The London Dockers' Union has issued a manifesto forbidding any strike on account of the dock companies' proposed changes. The document expresses the conviction that the companies have no intention of enforcing a lockout or depriving the men of the benefits secured to them by the Mansion House agreement. It says that if any are unjustly dismissed they must complain to the union, which is now called upon to prove its stability by thorough discipline. The manifesto expresses the belief that the co-operative system will be soon generally adopted.

The Chicago telegraphers yesterday surrendered their Brotherhood charter. In consideration of this action the Western Union agreed to take back all the discharged employes except the three leading agitators.

RECIPROCITY.

Mr. Charlton Talks to the Addington Farmers.

ENTERPRISE, Oct. 30.—Mr. Charlton addressed a large audience of farmers here this afternoon, and was listened to during a speech of an hour and a half with the closest attention, interrupted by frequent bursts of applause. Representative men from a wide section of country were present, some having come a distance of 70 miles. Mr. Charlton, upon coming to the platform, was warmly applauded. He first gave a brief outline of the increase in the debt, the expenditure and the taxation of the Dominion, and gave a striking object lesson for the purpose of illustrating the magnitude of our debt, expenditure and interest charges. Mr. Charlton, however, confined himself chiefly to the consideration of the reciprocity question in the light of their interests. He dwelt upon the severe depression under which the agricultural interests of the Dominion were at present laboring. The price reaped by the farmer was settled by the prices in the open markets of the world. He sold in a free trade market, where he was subjected to the keenest competition from the products of the cheap labor of India, Russia and other countries, but his purchases were made in a market where a free competition was excluded and where he was obliged to pay the high protection tariff prices of monopolies. If he was obliged to sell cheap, why not, in common justice, allow him to buy cheap? Hitherto the majority of the farmers in the county of Addington had voted for a supporter of Sir John. He would tell them of a better man to vote for, one who would look more closely after their interests, would sympathize with them in trouble and would not tell them that because they did not ride in a lumber wagon, behind a team of oxen, they were living too high. That person for whom he advised each other present to vote at the next election was the farmer himself. Quit voting for those who have made your necks a step in the stairs that lead up to fortune and special favors and fat offices. Look after your own interests. Mr. Charlton had the closest attention of his large audience while he depicted the enormous advantages that would result to the farmers, lumbermen, miners and fishermen of the Dominion from free access to the markets of 65,000,000 people, who, notwithstanding the absurd and heavy restrictions upon trade imposed by both Governments, were still our largest and best customers for the productions of our farms, forests, mines and fisheries. Full and absolute reciprocity would remove all the difficulties which were threatened by the McKinley Bill. Such a measure of reciprocity could without doubt be obtained, and when the next election came the farmer should vote for himself by voting for the men who, if placed in power, would make an honest and determined effort to obtain it.

At the close of his address Mr. Charlton was loudly cheered and warmly congratulated.

HOW SHE RETAINS HER
Wonderfully Youthful Looks

The newspapers far and near have voiced the opinion of the public that Adelina Patti's marvelous power of apparently resisting the destroying angel of beauty, whose name is Time, is something akin to the miraculous. "Mme. Patti," says one paper, "is, as everyone knows, 47 years of age, but she has the figure and the complexion of a girl. Her skin is fair and without a blemish, and on the closest inspection no evidence of cosmetics appears. How she preserves it is a mystery." When Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer read the above she smiled, and producing a file of thirty or more letters, all of which were not only signed, but entirely in the handwriting of the great prima donna, Mrs. Ayer said. "For years Mme. Patti has used the Recamier Toilet Preparations, and to them she owes her truly remarkable skin. Here," said Mrs. Ayer, "is one very good example of Mme. Patti's letters to me on this subject," and I read the following:

CRAIG-Y-NOS CASTLE, Oct. 13. 1887.

MY DEAR MRS. AYER—There never has been anything equal in merit to the Recamier Preparations; my skin is so immensely improved by their use. I need not dread old age while these magic inventions of yours exist. I use Cream, Balm and Lotion every day of my life, and could not exist comfortably without them. Recamier Soap also is perfect. It far surpasses all toilet Soaps. I hear that the Princess of Wales is delighted with the Recamier Preparations. I am convinced they are the greatest boon ever invented. I could not comfortably endure a day without them.

ADELINA PATTI-NICOLINI.

The articles mentioned in Mme. Patti's letter are known as Harriet Hubbard Ayer's Recamier Toilet Preparations as follows:

Desperate Remedies

By Thomas Hardy,

AUTHOR OF "A PAIR OF BLUE EYES," "THE TRUMPET-MAJOR," ETC.

[The opening chapter of this charming story refers to a Christmas visit to London, in 1835 of Ambrose Graye, a young architect, during which time he became acquainted with a retired officer in the navy, named Bradleigh, his wife and their beautiful daughter Cytherea. Graye falls in love with Cytherea and asks her to be his own. Although fond of Graye her reply is, "We must part now," and they accordingly separate. Graye then learned that Cytherea had a fondness for her cousin, an officer of the line, who had departed for India. Eight years later Graye married another lady but he could never forget his first love. Several years elapse and Graye becomes a widower with two children—Owen and Cytherea. Time passes on and the children reach the ages of 19 and 18 respectively, when their father dies. Owen finds his father was hopelessly in debt, and both incidentally learn of his first love. The young man secures a situation in an architect's office and provides for his sister's want, while she endeavors to procure a position as governess. Owen informs his sister that the head draughtsman, Edward Springrove, is a "nice fellow," who is on the lookout for a suitable companion for life, and says that though of humble origin he is a thorough artist and has a decided bent for writing poetry, and brings home a selection of Springrove's verses, which Cytherea reads with great interest. Being left much of the time alone, Cytherea lets her mind dwell on the image of the young draughtsman, and soon feels a more than friendly interest in him, and when Owen tells her that Springrove is to leave Mr. Gradfield's employ and go to London she is inexpressibly saddened, though why she knows not. While on an excursion Owen wanders away from his sister, missing the returning steamer, and Cytherea is thrown into the company of Springrove, who entertains her pleasantly and accompanies her safely home. They each discover an undefined attachment for the other. Owen returns and Springrove takes the brother and sister boating for several evenings. Meeting Cytherea alone he proposes a row, and they go off together. Springrove talks of his future, and thinks he will not succeed because his social qualities are not of the class he attributes to successful men in his profession. Cytherea speaks encouragingly and urges him to try to succeed, and tells how she has again advertised for work. Before returning Springrove declares his love for her, and in the supremely happy moment of his confession kisses her ardently. Springrove tells her he has kept something from her and has no right to love her, and that something forbids, and Cytherea's short-lived bliss is dead and gone, as she begs for an explanation, which is refused. Cytherea advertises for a place as lady's maid, and is engaged by Miss Aldclyffe, formerly Cytherea Bradleigh) who on the evening of her maid's arrival is giving a dinner party honoring her father's birthday. Inexperienced Cytherea in her duties as lady's maid crosses the very erratic and excitable temper of her mistress over the arrangement of her hair. After the dinner, while unrobing Miss Aldclyffe, Cytherea sees a small locket and chain around her neck. Her mistress opens the locket and shows the picture of a man whom Cytherea recognizes as her father. Soon Miss Aldclyffe reproaches herself for reposing such confidence in her maid, and scolds and accuses Cytherea of deceiving her. Cytherea denies the deceit, and recriminations follow, culminating in a heated quarrel, during which Miss Aldclyffe discovers that her maid is the daughter of her lost love. Cytherea gives notice that she will not serve such a mistress, and retires to her room. During the night Miss Aldclyffe comes to Cytherea's bed and gives way to a passionate longing for sympathy and love, when, discovering that the younger woman has bestowed her love, she rails against all men as unfaithful, and says Springrove is engaged to marry a girl in that neighborhood, where his father is a tenant on the Aldclyffe estate. That night Miss Aldclyffe's father dies, leaving his property to his daughter, who induces Cytherea to remain as her companion, and, despite the irascibility occasionally shown by the elder, a warm friendship is established between them. Miss Aldclyffe advertises for a land steward, and from a large number of applicants for the post—among whom was Edward Springrove—she selects Æneas Manston, whom she appears to have known of previously, and who is installed in the old Manor house as superintendent of the estate.

Manston had arrived on the estate, in the capacity of steward, three or four days previously, and occupied the old manor-house, which had been altered and repaired for his reception.

"Call on Mr. Manston," said the lady impressively, looking at the name witten under Cytherea's portion of the list.

"But he does not subscribe yet."

"I know it; but call and leave him a report. Don't forget it."

"Say you would be pleased if he would subscribe?"

"Yes—say I should be pleased if he would," repeated Miss Aldclyffe, smiling. "Good-by. Don't hurry in your walk. If you can't get easily through your task today put off some of it until to-morrow."

Each then started on her rounds: Cytherea going in the first place to the old manor-house. Mr. Manston was not indoors. She called then on the two gentleman-farmer's wives, who soon transacted her business with her, frigidly indifferent to her personality. A person who socially is nothing is thought less of by the people who are not much than by those who are a great deal.

She then turned towards Peakhill Cottage, the residence of Miss Hinton, who lived there happily enough, with an elderly servant and a house-dog as companions, her father, and last remaining parent, had retired thither four years before this time, after having filled the post of editor to the Troomister Chronicle for eighteen or twenty years. There he died soon after, and though comparatively a poor man, he left his daughter sufficiently well provided for as a modest fundholder and claimant of sundry small sums in dividends to maintain herself as mistress at Peakhill.

At Cytherea's knock an inner door was heard to open and close, and footsteps crossed the passage unhesitatingly. The next minute Cytherea stood face to face with the lady herself.

Adelaide Hinton was about 29 years of age. Her hair was plentiful, like Cytherea's own; her teeth equaled Cytherea's in regularity and whiteness. But she was much paler, and had features too transparent to be in place among household surroundings. Her mouth expressed love less forcibly than Cytherea's, and, as a natural result of her greater maturity, her tread was less elastic, and she was more self-possessed.

She had been a girl of that kind which mothers praise as not forward, by way of contrast, when dispraising those warmer ones, with whom loving is an end and not a means. Men of 40, now, said of her, 'a good sensible wife for any man if she cares to marry," the caring to marry being thrown in as the vaguest hypothesis, because she was so practical. Yet it would be singular if in such cases; the important subject of marriage should be excluded from manipulation by hands that are ready for practical performance in every domestic concern besides.

Cytherea was an acquisition, and the greeting was hearty.

"Good afternoon? Oh, yes—Miss Graye, from Miss Aldclyffe's. I have seen you at church, and I am so glad you have called. Come in. I wonder if I have change enough to pay my subscription." She spoke girlishly.

Adelaide, when in company of a younger woman always leveled herself down to that younger woman's age from a sense of justice to herself—as if, though not her own age at common law, it was in equity.

"It doesn't matter; I'll come again."

"Yes, do at any time; not only on this errand. But you must step in for a minute. Do."

"I have been wanting to come for several weeks."

"That's right, now you must see my house—lonely, isn't it, for a single woman? People said it was odd for a young woman like me to keep on a house; but what did I care? If you knew the pleasure of looking up your own door, with the sensation that you reigned supreme inside it, you would say it was worth the risk of being called odd. Mr. Springrove attends to my gardening, the dog attends to the robbers, and whenever there is a snake or a toad to kill, Jane does it."

"How nice. It is better than living in a town."

"Far better. The town makes a cynic of me."

The remark recalled somewhat startlingly to Cytherea's mind, that Edward had used those very words to herself one evening at Creston.

Miss Hinton opened an interior door and led her visitor into a small drawing-room commanding a view of the country for miles.

"How lonely it must be here at night!" said Cytherea. "Aren't you afraid?"

"At first I was slightly. But I got used to the solitude. And you know a sort of common-sense will creep even into timidity. I say to myself sometimes at night, "If I were anybody but a harmless woman, not worth the trouble of a worm's ghost to appear to me, I should think that every sound I hear was a spirit. But you must see all over my house."

Cytherea was very interested in seeing.

"I say you must do this, and you must do that, as if you were a child," remarked Adelaide. A privileged friend of mine tells me this use of the imperative comes of being so constantly in nobody's society but my own."

"Ah, yes. I suppose she is right."

Cytherea called the friend 'she by a rule of lady-like practice; for a woman's 'friend' is delicately assumed by another friend to be of their own sex in the absence of the knowledge to the contrary; just as cats are called she's until they prove themselves he's.

Miss Hinton laughed mysteriously.

"I get a humorous reproof for it now and then, I assure you," she continued.

"'Humorous reproof;' that's not from a woman; who can reprove humorously but a man?" was the groove of Cytherea's thought at the remark. "Your brother reproves you I expect," said that innocent young lady.

"No," said Miss Hinton, with a candid air. "It is only a professional gentleman I am acquainted with." She looked out of the window.

Woman are persistently imitative. No sooner did a thought flash through Cytherea's mind that the man was a lover than she became a Miss Aldclyffe in a mild form.

"I imagine he's a love," she said.

Miss Hinton smiled smile of experience in that line.

Few women, if tried with having an admirer, are so free from vanity as to deny the impeachment even if it's utterly untrue. When it does happen to be true, they look pitiingly away from the person who is so benighted as to have got no farther than suspecting it.

"There now—Miss Hinton; you are engaged to be married!" said Cytherea accusingly.

Adelaide nodded her head practically. "Well, yes I am," she said.

The word "engaged" had no sooner passed Cytherea's lips than the sound of it—the mere sound of her own lips—carried the mind to the time and circumstances under which Miss Aldclyffe had used it towards herself. A sickening thought followed—based but on mere surmise; but its presence took every other idea away from Cytherea's mind. Miss Hinton had used Edward's words about towns; she mentioned Mr. Springrove as attending to her garden. It could not be that Edward was the man! that Miss Aldclyffe had planned to reveal her rival thus!

"Are you going to be married soon?" she aquired, with a steadiness the result of a sort of fascination, but apparently of indifference.

"Not very soon—still, soon."

"Ah—ha. In less than three months?" said Cytherea.

"Two."

Now that the subject was well in hand, Adelaide wanted no more prompting. "You won't tell anybody if I show you something?" she said, with eager mystery.

"Oh, no, nobody. But does he live in this parish?"

"No."

Nothing proved yet.

Mr. F. Rawlinson, deputy chief ranger Independent Order of Foresters, has left for Ohio, where he will engage in organization work for the order. Mr. Rawlinson has been a good citizen and his success in the new sphere will be heard of with pleasure by the public generally.—[St. Thomas Journal.

Mr. C. C. Whale, organizer of the Independent Order of Foresters, has commenced an inspection tour of all the western courts, and during last week several were visited and encouraging reports were received. At Morriston on Friday evening and at Aberfoyle on Saturday evening public meetings were held in the interest of the order, at which Mr. Whale delivered addresses, and after which a number united with the society. The following new courts are reported: Court Beacon, No. 662, at Gore Bay, with 29 charter members; Champlain, No. 663, at Montreal, with 21 charter members.

ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Mount Brydges, No. 217, will erect a two-story brick structure, the upper flat to be used as a hall and the lower one to be fitted up as a store. The cost will be about $3,000.

The oldest members of the Sovereign Grand Lodge is James P. Sanders, past grand sire, a resident of Yonkers, in New York State.

Olive Branch Lodge, of Woodstock, has purchased the roller rink on Graham street for the use of their drill corps. The price was $1,600.

SELECT KNIGHTS OF CANADA.

J. C. Walker, deputy grand commander of the Select Knights of Canada, instituted a legion in Parkhill on Thursday last with a large charter list. Mr. Walker expects to do good work for this organization during the coming winter months.

MASONIC.

W. G. Scott, city treasurer of Winnipeg, and grand secretary of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Manitoba, has received his commission as representative of the Grand Lodge of Ireland near this Grand Lodge. The commission is signed by the Duke of Abercorn, grand master, and confers the rank of past grand warden. Accompanying the parchment is a handsome jewel of the office, a large circle of blue enameled gold, surrounding an emblem of the craft, attached to a sky blue silk collar. Very few of the grand lodges honor their representatives by the presentation of jewels.

ANCIENT ORDER FORESTERS.

The Ingersoll Foresters held their twelfth annual banquet in the Atlantic House on Tuesday evening. Among the distinguished visitors present was High Chief Ranger Lanning, of Toronto.

The Supreme Conclave will, on Thursday evening next, institute a new conclave in Woodstock, to be known as Excelsior No. 7. Representatives from the several conclaves in the vicinity will be present. Supreme Adjutant C. Pugh and Supreme Commander W. T. Duff, of this city, will assist in the institution.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

John Van Valkenburg, whose death occurred at Fort Madison, Iowa, recently, was born at St. George, Ont., about 50 years ago. He had lived in the Western States for many years, and in Iowa achieved an enviable reputation in legal circles. In society circles no man was better known in the West. He was supreme chancellor of the Knights of Pythias when the great international gathering was held in Toronto four years ago. He was also prominent as an Oddfellow.

ORANGE ORDER.

At a well attended meeting of London district on Saturday night last, arrangements were completed for a special church service on Sunday afternoon, in the London West Methodist Church; Rev. Bro. McDonagh, deputy grand chaplain, will officiate.

On Wednesday evening a grand banquet will be held in the Hodgins House, at which a number of right worshipful Grand Lodge officers will be present, and a number of other prominent men. As the banquet is in commemoration of the frustration of the gunpowder plot, and as the tickets have been placed at a low figure, no doubt there will be a very large gathering of Orangemen and their friends to do honor to the day.

ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN.

The members of Guelph and Royal lodges, of Guelph, met at their hall on Sunday, and marched in a body to St. James' Church, where the annual sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Belt. There was a very large turnout of the brethren.

Missouri has the largest number of lodges of any jurisdiction, New York comes next, Illinois third. The number of lodges in these respective jurisdictions at the close of the last fiscal year is shown by the report of the supreme recorder to be as follows: Missouri, 424; New York, 414; Illinois, 347. Ontario stands next to Illinois in the number of lodges, there being 341 in Canadian territory up to the close of the last fiscal year.

Tuesday was the 22nd anniversary of the Ancient Order United Workmen, an association which has made such rapid strides during the past ten years in Ontario as to command attention. The society was organized in an unpretentious way by Father Upchurch at Meadville, Penn., who died but two years ago. The object when founding the order was simply to assist each other as workingmen in the railway shops at Meadeville, keeping especially in view the assisting of apprentices. A club was organized with a membership of but 13; regular meetings were held, and an endeavor made to improve the position of the members, both mentally and in a financial sense. Matters continued in this way until sickness occurred in the family of one of the members, and then the idea of assisting in a financial way those who belonged to the club was conceived. After a time death broke into the ranks, and then it was decided that in future each surviving member should pay a certain amount to the family of the departed brother. In this small way, with but a membership of 13, the society began its career, and after 22 years of continued success totals up a membership of 230,000, scattered over the United States and Canada. A separate jurisdiction was established in Ontario in 1878, the membership in this Province at that time being but 2,000. Since then the increase has been steady and rapid, until to-day there are 340 lodges in the jurisdiction, with a membership of 21,032.

For the Ingenious to Solve.

The Washington National Tribune revives this: "Open a book at random and select a word within the first ten lines and within the tenth word from the end of the line. Now double the number of the page and multiply the sum by 5, then add 20, then add the number of the line you have selected, then add 5; multiply the sum by 10. Add the number of the word in the line. From this substract 250, and the remainder will indicate in the unit column the number of the word, in the ten column the number of the line, and the remaining figures the number of the page."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headache, and refreshes the burdened mind. On arriving at their new home they were serenaded by their numerous friends. Many valuable presents were received by the young couple.

—The annual meeting of the Young Liberal Club will be held this evening at the club rooms in Oddfellows' Hall, corner of Clarence and Dundas streets. The election of officers for the ensuing year and other business of importance will be transacted, so a large attendance of members and friends of the club is hoped for.

—Patrick Swain, who was arrested in this city for horse-stealing on the strength of a telegram from St. Thomas, was taken there last evening by Chief Fewings. The latter says he has the right man, although Swain told the police here he had come from Ingersoll and had met another man with the rig, who asked him to stable it for him.

—Charles Daly appeared before the Police Magistrate this morning for the third time this week on a charge of drunkenness. On the two previous occasions he was fined $5, but the Magistrate decided the matter was becoming tiresome and imposed $20 or twenty days as the penalty. He afterwards remanded Daly for six days without the option a fine.

—P. C. Woolway noticed Richard Rawlings administer two blows on Fred Brock's face yesterday afternoon on King street, and promptly arrested the offender. It appears that Brock was bridling Rawling's horse at the request of the latter's little boy, when the owner came up and thought he was interfering. The Police Magistrate fined Rawlings $2 this morning.

—The scholars of class No. 9, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday school, met Wednesday evening at the home of their teacher, Miss J. Gourlay, to bid farewell and godspeed to one of their number, Master Tom Wright, who is leaving here for British Columbia. At the close of the evening the lads "surprised" the young voyageur, who is a general favorite, by presenting him with a handsome Bible.

—The Toronto papers speak in high terms of the singing of Mrs. Alfred Wigmore at a recent concert in that city. One of them says: "Mrs. Wigmore sang 'In Verdure Clad' with exquisite expression, and showed she possessed a highly-cultivated voice." Another says: "Mrs. Wigmore is a soprano of high-class, and we should be glad to hear her voice frequently." Mrs. Wigmore (Miss Ella Cole) is one of Dr. Sippi's former pupils.

—The creditors of Head & Wheeler, hatters, who carried on a business at Woodstock, met yesterday afternoon. Messrs. A. A. Allan, John Calder, Toronto, and George C. Gibbons, of this city, were appointed inspectors of the estate. Mr. Gibbons represents the Montreal creditors. Liabilities and assets are about the same, and the creditors gave F. H. Daniel, one of the members of the firm, and Mr. Wheeler the option of purchasing the business at 70 cents on the dollar. If this is not accepted the business will be sold by auction.

—On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings next McCarthy & Reynolds' "Dear Irish Boy" will be presented at the Grand. Gus Reynolds who played Mike McClutchey in "The Dear Irish Boy," while fishing at Nantucket Beach last summer fell overboard from the yacht on which himself and party were sailing and narrowly escaped being eaten by a shark. As it was his sharkship seized upon Mr. Reynolds' coat, which went over with him at the same time, and this fact alone saved Mr. Reynolds' life, as it enabled his friends to drag him into the boat just as the shark made a vicious dive for the actor, having discovered his first mistake.

—Wednesday evening at the residence of the Rev. J. Ballantyne, the marriage of Mr. W. S. Corbin, of London West, and Miss Lucy Pugsley, of South London, took place, Mrs. Johnson and Florence Ballantyne acting as bridesmaids. The reverend gentleman at whose house the ceremony was performed tied the knot and made the couple happy. The bride was arrayed in a pale blue cashmere. Mr. and Mrs. Corbin were then driven to the residence of Mr. J. Flannigan, of South London, where quite a number of friends were gathered. The presents were of a most useful and ornamental character. Yesterday Mr. Corbin's fellow-employes in the ADVERTISER made him the recipient of a handsome lamp as a token of their good wishes.

The Comic Opera.

Unalloyed enjoyment was given to the audience which assembled in the Grand Opera House last evening to witness "The Sea King" comic opera. The piece was presented with most elaborate stage fittings and scenic effects, and the singing and acting was far above the average. As Don Bamboula, the count who was too ugly to secure the admiration of even one female subject, R. E. Graham kept the audience in roars of laughter. Miss Ada Glasca, who took the role of Dolores, his niece, sang well, as did Mark Smith, the Sea King. The choruses were bright and sparkling and the dresses magnificent. Again and again the pretty parts of the piece were encored, and the performance was much extended as a consequence. "The Sea King" must be a formidable rival to Gilbert & Sullivan's productions.

Janauschek in "Macbeth."

On Monday evening Madame Janauschek, whose ability is well known throughout this continent, will favor Londoners with a representation of Lady Macbeth, supported by his well-known company. In speaking to a Toronto dramatic writer, she referred to her friendship with the Duke of Meininghen and wife. "The Duke took great interest in the correctness of artistic details," she said, "and sacrificed a fortune in perfecting the performances and establishing the existing reputation of the company. Large sums were often unnecessarily expended on unimportant details, and realism sometimes marred the actor's art. On the occasion of my last appearance with the Meninghens I played Lady Macbeth, and Macbeth was played by a very good actor whose name I forget. His rehearsals were most satisfactory, but at night he was not at all responsive in action and lost patience. He then explained that his movements were heavily handicapped by the iron armour which he was obliged to wear. It weighed 80 pounds."

Rousing Opening Ceremonies.

The Maple avenue school was formally opened yesterday afternoon, and when Mr. A. O. Jeffery, chairman of the Board of Education, took the chair a fair-sized audience was present, consisting chiefly of the parents of the pupils. The proceedings were opened with a song from the children entitled, "Catch the Sunshine," after which Trustees J. W. Rowlands, one of the representatives from South London, and formerly a member of the old School Board, was called on and made a happy speech, in which he congratulated the residents on having secured their present commodious addition to the school. He also thanked the children and their parents for turning out at the opening. Inspector Boyle, Mr. W. L. Berry and Water Commissioner Essery also made appropriate speeches, between which were interspersed a number of popular songs. The ceremony was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem. Miss Gleeson and her pupils were congratulated by Chairman Jeffery for the entertainment provided, and after a minute inspection of the addition, which will be under the charge of Miss Ingarnells and Miss Gray, the audience dispersed.

Methodist Mission in Paris.

Rev. W. Gibson, a Methodist clergyman who has spent 22 years in Paris, France, as a missionary, addressed a large audience in Wesley Hall last evening on the subject of taking the gospel to the Parisians. The speaker described the moral and spiritual condition of the French people as of a very low order, a great many professing no religion at all. The people, however, were ready to embrace the teachings of Protestantism as set down by the Methodist missionaries in its purity and simplicity. The result of these missions had been to revive the embers of the Protestantism of France, which included the Huguenots, Lutherans, Free Protestants and Methodists, and to unite them all under one synod, with Christ as the foundation stone. Mrs. and Miss Gibson, wife and daughter of the missionary, also made short speeches bearing respectively on the women's and children's departments of the mission work of France. They also rendered a French hymn in excellent style. The programme was varied somewhat unexpectedly by the solemnizing of the wedding of Mr. Isaac Mullet and Miss Susan Stevenson, of this city. The couple were made man and wife by Rev. G. Boyd and were assisted by Miss M. Maginnis as bridesmaid, and Mr. W. Balkwell as groomsman.
