FAILURES IN BRITAIN Marked Decrease in the Number During

London, Jan. 7.-A substantial deures during the year, according to a carefully compiled list, reached 8,323, in England and Wales, a decrease of 624 on the previous year.

When it is remembered that during the previous four years there was a steady growth in the number of those whose failure to make both ends meet suitable for garden purposes, with good landed them in the bankruptcy court house and barns; also nice home near the figures for last year have a speciallanded them in the bankruptcy court limits, good new house and large ly interesting significance. The failures in 1902 amounted to 7,782, in 1903 to 8,137, in 1904 to 8,875, in 1905 to 8,957 in 1906 to 8.323. The substantial decrease in the number of farmers' bankruptcies has particular interest. In 1895 the total numbered 303. This was gradually reduced until in 1899 only 135 were recorded. Since then there has been a steady rise until in 1905 the total reached 214. The figures for last year. 142, show that the rise at least has been checked It is satisfactory to notice that this improvement is reflected most largely in those trades which in previous years had been hardest hit by the depression then prevailing. The grocery and provision trades, for example. which in 1905 showed 169 more bills of sale than in the previous year, had in 1906 the substantial decrease of 134.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

The school trustees-elect, Messrs. English, Graham, MacRobert, Fitzgerald and McCormick, are all firstrate citizens and, with one exception, have had years of experience on the board and given faithful service. If they will show a little more generosity in the distribution of chairmanships and other honors, it will conduce to harmony on the board, but ratepayers are not so much concerned about these main thing. It would be deplorable if vote for him if he carries the tag. party considerations entered into the selection of teachers. We do not think

Some criticism of the method of election for the school board may reasonably be offered. The parading of the Conservative ticket day after day, with vehement appeals to Conservatives to vote it in full. and waive private judgment, was an abuse of the party system, and an insult to public intelligence. These tactics succeeded in this instance, but they are bound to produce a reaction. The spirit of protest which has controlled the city for years, against extreme partyism, which was represented by the candidature of Dr. Ross, will gather a force which will surprise machine politicians. Even as it was, their plans were nearly upset.

> THE LAST GREAT TREK. [Emerson Hough in Outing.]

The greatest story of the day is the story of the Canadian Northwest. Tales of new lands are always interesting; but lands, at least of the North American continent. It is the greatest people movement the world ever saw greater than the Goths. Silently, irresistibly, with an unparalleled rapidity, the people are moving forward and occupying new lands, even as they did the forest of Europe long ago, the forests of the Appalachians since then. This army of wayfarers bears no banners, Hun, led his savage clans over an ald empire and laid waste its cities, boasting that no blade of grass might grow behind two blades of grass grow where but one grew before. It is well night the last army of homeseekers the world will ever see we must ravage and lay waste if we would equaled. No family should be without occupy, must extirpate a people to make a box of Bileans on the shelf." waste no homes but builds homes anew.

TRIED TO STEAL

And the Sad Part of It Was That the Girl Was Caught in the Act.

London, Jan. 7.-Everyone here is talking just now of an incident which took place when the King was staying with Lord Iveagh at Elvedon. A certain American belle, who must be nameless, made up her mind that she was going to steal the King's sleeve-links as a souvenir. To us the Yankee love of mementos of the great is inexplicable, if not actually stupid. Well, anyhow, she made her resolve, and thereby hangs my tale.

The fair amateur thief said she had a headache, and would not go down to din-After the gong had sounded she waited until she thought the coast was clear, and then stole stealthily into his majesty's su'te. But lo and behold; as she was leaving with the objects of her quest, who should appear before her but the King himself, he having returned for something. There are different versions of the story. One says that in her fright the girl begged the King's clemency, then and there telling him the truth, while another statement affirms that si seeking matches, there being none in her own room. At all events, the King, who, like the majority of good-natured people, can be excessively angry if he is aroused, was thoroughly annoyed. He hates practical joking and tomfoolery, so even if the would-be thief did explain to him the real situation, it is not likely she did herself any good. The humor in the incident is furnished by the fact of its having taken place at the house of Lady Iveagh, who is the most prim and proper and most exclusive hostess in England. This is why people are laughing so in their sleeve at the af-"A woman always insists on having the fair. The heroine who hitherto was asked about a great deal because of her vivacity, her repartee and her frocks, it is feared will be, in the nearest future, cashiered.
