HON. W. J. HANNA

Government Will Not be Stampeded By Any Organization

Hanna Declares No Party Has Right to Claim Temperance Monopoly

[By Special Wire to the Courier] HANOVER, June 13.—"It matters not what resolutions may be passed by different bodies it is not the intention of the Government to be stampeded into any position by such resolutions. I object to any political party claiming to be a temperance party and that others are not. No man in pulpit or pew or outside the walls has the right to so claim. We differ not as to minimizing the evils of the liquor traffic, but as to methods."

Hon. W. J. Hanna, at a public meeting last night, in the interests of Dr. Jamieson, Conservative candidate in South Grey, emphatically set forth the determination of the Government to enact progressive temperance legislation as may appear proper and because it is right.

From time to time, said the minister, as the people of this province demand, and as the condition of the public mind warrants, this Government will go forward in the future as in the past.

Mr. John Taylor presided over an audience which nearly filled the town hall auditorium. In the gallery and other speakers were R. J. Ball, M.P.; Dr. Jamieson and Mr. W. D. Cargie, nominated yesterday by South Bruce Conservatives.

The Hanover Musical Society Band provided excellent music. Mr. Ball who reviewed political issues in capable and able manner, attacked the pulpits mixing in politics. A minister, he said, preaches to members of both parties and ought to keep himself independent.

Hydro in Grey.
Dr. Jamieson referred to the development of Engenia Falls by the Hydro Commission. Contracts, he understood, had already been let, and the 6,000 horse-power resulting would supply all the towns and villages of the district, including Hanover.

Mr. Hanna rounded keeness interest in dealing with the moral reform work of his department.

Of the 12,000 children who, through the Children's Aid Society, are wards of the Government and placed in good homes, he estimated that 85 per cent. were becoming good men and women, a big contribution by the Government to the welfare of the province. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION EXPOSITION promises to be a big success—will be held in Ambitious City July 6 to 18.

Hamilton Industrial Exposition promises to be a great success. It is put on in the interests of the Hamilton Y. M. C. A. in the two large Armories on July 6th. to 18th, inclusive. 100 of the leading business men there are organized and working to make it a great civic enterprise. The board of Trade and Manufacturers are co-operating. At a general meeting of the committees, held on Thursday last Brantford day was set for July 8th. Special rates on all railroads are being arranged.

The famous Creations Band of New York has been secured. Local bands and 1000 voiced choruses, athletes and fancy drills will make it interesting to visitors.

Mr. Best, Y. M. C. A. Secretary is in the city in the interests of the Exposition and can be seen re space for exhibits at the Y. M. C. A.

His Election Only a Matter of Majority

Hon. Adam Beck, Ontario's Minister of Power, has again been nominated by London Conservatives, and it is doubtful if the Liberals will put any "sacrifice" to oppose him.

L. E. & N. Abandons Line Between This City and Waterford

From what can be learned of the intentions of the Lake Erie & Northern Railway heads, it is announced from a reliable source that the railway will not be built from Brantford to Waterford. It is said in explanation that the interest of the C. P. R. in the three roads, Lake Erie & Northern, T. H. & B. and M.C.R., is such that it will not be necessary to duplicate the present railway line between Brantford and Waterford. Consequently nothing is being done in the way of construction work on the part of the road. In this event it is not unlikely that the T. H. & B. station will be used as a union depot, which was urged by the civic representatives before the Dominion Railway Board this week at Hamilton as an alternative to the construction of a depot in the Holmedale. The road, however, between Port Dover and Waterford will be rushed to completion. Moreover, it seems a sure thing that it will be operated by steam and not by electricity.

DUKES FAREWELL TO PARLIAMENT

Has Been Struck by the Energy and Tenacity of Canadians.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] OTTAWA, June 13.—Presentation of the joint addresses of both Houses of Parliament to His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught on the occasion of his departure from Canada took place subsequent to the prolegation ceremony in the Senate to-day. The addresses were read by the Speakers of the two Houses, and in reply His Royal Highness said:

"I desire to thank you, the members of the Senate and of the House of Commons of Canada, in Parliament assembled, for the very gracious address which you have presented to me on the occasion of my approaching departure from Canada. 'Most deeply do I appreciate the kindly sentiments expressed by the representatives of the Canadian people. They have touched me most deeply.'"

"During my three years of office it has been my earnest endeavor to become acquainted with the many problems affecting the welfare and progress of this great Dominion. Nothing has struck me more than the energy and tenacity shown in all circumstances by its people, and I hope that a strong sense of duty will always pervade those to whom its destinies are entrusted."

"Of their loyalty and devotion to the King and to the Empire I have had many proofs, and I hope that Canadians will always be true to themselves and to that great Dominion with which it has been my pride to be connected."

A COMPROMISE

Has Been Reached in Matter of Regiment in Quebec Church Parade.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] MONTREAL, June 13.—A compromise has been reached in the trouble that has arisen over the application here of the imperial military regulation which forbids troops carrying arms in church parades, between Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, and the men of the 65th regiment, who have been desirous of providing an armed escort for the Host in the Corpus Christi procession taking place to-morrow, in accordance with a time-honored custom. The militiamen will be allowed to provide the guard, but must not enter Notre Dame Church, where the procession ends. They will leave for their armory after escorting the Host to the church doors.

ADAM BECK IS AGAIN CHOSEN FOR LONDON

Minister of Power Will Have Walk Away as Usual.

Opposition Useless, and Liberals May Not Put Up Candidate.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] LONDON, June 13.—Hon. Adam Beck was unanimously chosen by the Liberal-Conservative Association as the standard-bearer of the party in the coming provincial election at an enthusiastic meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last evening.

Major Beattie M.P. moved that Hon. Adam Beck would be the unanimous choice, and Major Beattie stated that while Mr. Beck was not present at the meeting, he was quite sure that he would be the candidate, in spite of stories to the effect that he would not run again. More than that he would be elected without opposition.

Opposition Useless.
"I do not think anyone would be of the opinion that it was worth while to put anyone up in opposition to Hon. Adam Beck," said Mayor Graham. His work is known throughout the world and is being copied in many countries. He has set a pace and done things for the poor man, and he is a comparatively poor man by giving so much time to the interests of the people."

REDMOND AND COM. IN FIGHT

Organization of Nationalist Volunteers Gets Beyond Real Party Leaders

[By Special Wire to the Courier] LONDON, June 13.—John Redmond's proclamation giving the official endorsement of the Irish National League to the organization of the Nationalist volunteers has led to something like a fight for the control of the volunteers to the great amusement of the Irish Unionists.

It appears that Mr. Redmond's declaration was resented by the Provincial Committee which controls the volunteers and which contains strong element of Sinn Finers and members of the Gaelic League. These people regarded Mr. Redmond's intervention as an attempt to oust them from control of the Nationalist volunteers, and although they gave the leader's letter a lukewarm blessing, they promptly set about securing their own power by calling upon the volunteers in each county to elect a representative to serve on the Provincial Committee.

The position became so strained that Mr. Redmond called a meeting of the Nationalist members of Parliament for yesterday to discuss the matter. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Redmond issued a long statement in which he remarks that the action of the Provisional Committee is tantamount to a refusal to accept his offer of co-operation by the appointment of nominees of the Irish Nationalist party to strengthen the Provisional Committee.

Mr. Redmond disclaims any knowledge as to who the twenty-five members of the Provisional Committee are, but says he understands they are not supporters of the Irish party, while 95 per cent. of the volunteers support his followers. Mr. Redmond continues:

"This is a condition of things which plainly cannot continue. The rank and file of the volunteers, and the responsible leaders of the Irish people are entitled, are indeed bound, to demand some security that an attempt shall not be made in the name of the volunteers to dictate a policy to the Nationalist party. Moreover, a military organization is of its very nature a grave and serious undertaking that every responsible Nationalist who

Witnesses Are Being Called For Empress Of Ireland Enquiry

[By Special Wire to the Courier] MONTREAL, June 13.—The work of issuing subpoenas for the Empress of Ireland wreck inquiry will be held at Quebec beginning next Tuesday is now going on. Those who have been served are Captain Kendall, First Officer Jones, Second Officer Fife, Chief Steward Kuada and Chief Engineer Sampson of the foundered liner, and Captain Andersen and the officers of the Storstad. Altogether it is expected thirty-one witnesses will be called.

In addition to the members of the enquiry board headed by Lord Mersey Sir Alolphe Routhier and Hon. Ezekiel McLeod, there will be an imposing array of counsel to represent the various interests involved. The C.P.R. has retained Butler Aspinall, K.C., the noted English Admiralty lawyer, who has arrived here and will act with Arthur R. Holden, K.C., of Montreal. The Storstad owners who are coming from Norway to attend the enquiry will be represented by Humphrey Mellish, K.C., of Halifax.

An official account of the dead and survivors from the wreck issued today by the C.P.R. makes the totals, dead 1014, saved 463, on board 1477.

TWO SUSPECTS WERE ARRESTED

Detective Chapman Took in Circus Followers—They Were Remanded.

Two suspected crooks were smartly hauled up in the city yesterday, and Detective Chapman has to be congratulated upon his effective work. Passing along Colborne street yesterday the detective noted the two men, by name, Frank Mitchell and James A. Malloy, and his suspicions were aroused. For some time he watched them and his convictions were confirmed when he saw them about to commence operations on the street cars, he called police assistance, in Provincial Police Inspector Boyd and Detective Bryce of Ringlings circus, and made the arrests. The men are still held and have been remanded for a week. They are thought to belong to the States and had purchased tickets from Detroit to Toronto, but rebated them at Hamilton, where they set out for Brantford, and they had not been here long before they were confined. Malloy states that he comes from Ottawa, and from the statements of Mitchell are that he hails from Toronto, but this is not thought to be correct. Their names under which the couple are remanded are not certain to be correct. The chief remark-

LOOKING FOR A SUCCESSOR TO HUERTA

Mediators at Niagara Are Now Attending To This Matter

Very Strong Kind of a Man Will Be Required.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 13.—The mediating colony turned their thoughts to-day from diplomatic forms and protocols to questions of personnel for the new provisional government of Mexico. They began the search for the man of the hour—a successor to Huerta who shall be acceptable to all factions, capable of pacifying Mexico so that a Constitutional election may be held.

A man of unusual qualifications is sought. He must be without violent prejudices, who can conserve the interests of the Huerta followers as well as the Constitutionists. The neutral populace, too must be satisfied that a sound and stable administration will be inaugurated which will be immediately recognized by the United States and the world generally. In a spirit of optimism the mediators and delegates began their task. They felt to-day that they had accomplished much by the signing of the first series of protocols. In this document, the American and Mexican delegates as well as the diplomatic representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile entered into an agreement for the transfer of power from the hands of General Huerta to the new provisional president, in the following manner:

A government is to be constituted in Mexico of a character to be later provided, which shall be recognized by the United States and the countries represented by the mediating plenipotentiaries. Argentine, Brazil and Chile, on (date to be fixed) and which from that day forward shall exercise public functions until there shall be inaugurated a Constitutional president.

Another protocol will deal with the personnel of the new provisional government and set forth that the new executive shall be installed after being recognized by Mexican nations, including all political parties. The Mexican delegates are anxious that some clause be written in one of the protocols by which it shall be emphasized that the new president is to be recognized by interior Mexico as well as foreign nations. The purpose of this is to make it consistent for General Huerta to resign in accordance with his declaration made recently through the Mexican delegates, namely that he would retire when Mexico was politically pacified. This was explained by the Mexican delegates as meaning, not material pacification of the coun-

PREMIER BORDEN MAY TOUR THE WEST

Series of Council Meetings Will be Held Within the Next Ten Days.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] OTTAWA, June 13.—With the end of the session members of the Government are ready to make their preparations for the summer. There will be a series of council meetings during the next ten days when a number of questions which have necessarily been left in abeyance during the all-day sittings of the House will be dealt with. When these matters have been disposed of there will be the usual scattering of Ministers for the summer vacation. It is believed that Premier Borden will be able to carry out the Western tour which he has had in contemplation for some time and it may be possible for him to start before August, going through to the coast and perhaps visiting Prince Rupert, stopping at various points in Western Canada on the return journey. Hon. Robert Rogers left for Winnipeg yesterday.

Wedding Bells

MILLER—M'KAY.
PARIS, June 12—On Wednesday afternoon a very pretty wedding took place at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Marion McKay, when her youngest daughter, Ellen M., was united in marriage to Mr. Roy A. Miller third son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Miller Brantford Township. At 2:30 the bride entered the parlor on the arm of her brother and took her place under a large arch made from orange blossoms and ferns while Mrs. E. Apps played Mendelssohn's wedding march. The bride looked very sweet in a dainty dress of white charmerse trimmed with shadow lace and pearls with white veil and orange blossoms and also carrying a bridal bouquet of cream roses and lily of the valley. Miss Edith Miller was bridesmaid and was gowned in white voile trimmed with lace and satin and carrying pink and white roses while Mr. George Miller ably supported his brother.
Rev. Mr. Reid of the Baptist church officiated. After the ceremony about fifty guests adjourned to the dining room when a dainty lunch was served. Later Mr. and Mrs. Miller left for a motor trip west, the bride wearing her travelling suit of navy blue serge with hat to match. On their return they will take up their residence on River street where the bride will be at home to her many friends in town.

The bride looked exceeding sweet in her wedding dress of white silk with shadow lace trimmings, white hat and carrying a white prayer book. Miss Annie Curtin was bridesmaid and was wearing a pretty dress of King's blue silk. Mr. E. Wilson of Brantford, assisted the groom. Rev. Father Cassidy performed the ceremony. After a lunch served at the bride's home, the happy couple left on the 1:2 train for Niagara Falls to spend their honeymoon. The bride is one of Paris' fairest daughters and received many beautiful and costly presents from her friends. On their return they will make their home at Brantford.

PATTERSON—RIEGER.

She also carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The bride's sister who was her bridesmaid, was gowned in pink charmerse, with overdress of net, large black hat, and carried pink roses, while Miss Ellen Rieger, presided at the organ. Mr. Hugh St. Clair attended the groom. On their return to town, they will take up housekeeping on Alexander street.

THE "ABOLISH THE BAR" PLATFORM.

Four ways exist under present law of abolishing liquor selling in Brantford or any municipality in Ontario, if the voters so desire.

1. The Scott Act can be invoked. This act, which prohibits any sale of liquor whatever, is still available by a simple majority vote in any municipality. The act did not work well at first owing to inefficient provisions for enforcement, and so became discredited; but the law was improved latterly, and would probably be effective now. It must be submitted in any municipality upon a requisition of one-fourth of the electors.

2. The Ontario Local Option law can be invoked. Under this act liquor licenses can be abolished by a vote of three-fifths of the voters who go to the polls.

3. A municipal council must reduce liquor licenses by whatever number—all, if so specified—a majority of voters may direct and a municipal council must submit any desired by-law to popular vote upon a requisition of ten per cent. of the voters.

4. A municipal council has power to reduce the number of licenses itself; and the people can, if they wish, pledge candidates for the council to vote for such reduction to any desired extent.

Into this situation come Opposition party leaders anxious to get into power in the province and without a chance of it upon good government issues and call upon the people to accept as the whole political test a platform of "Abolish the bar," which will leave shop licenses untouched. If this platform be accepted—if the Liberal party can be placed in power upon this slogan—bars would perhaps be abolished in Ontario, but shops would remain free to sell liquor under license; and any attempt to stop that would require all the effort which at present is necessary to abolish both hotel and shop licenses, and would not have the same driving force behind it.

No country or province in the world is in a better position than Ontario in the matter of available prohibition legislation in any municipality. Both for this reason and because even the proposition of Mr. Rowell could simply have been put forward as a proper matter for a plebiscite, no necessity existed to make the "Abolish the bar" issue a party battle. The cry has been made a party one. An inference is excusable that it is tried as the single hope of getting into office; that the Liberal leaders have noticed else worth while; that they are trying a gamble on the temperance sentiment. A majority of the people of Ontario favor the temperance cause, beyond a doubt. But we imagine their common sense will not be much affected by a slogan which tells them that their alternative is to either present a certain political party with office and jobs, or incur the stigma or being enemies of a great moral cause.

THE END OF THE SESSION.

After a session of a little over one hundred working days, the Ottawa House adjourned yesterday afternoon. During that period there was the usual waste of time common to all governments, more especially because of opposition tactics, but much of importance was nevertheless transacted.

The chief item which occupied the stage was the guarantee of $40,000,000 towards the completion of the Canadian Northern, without which this third transcontinental road would, without doubt, have failed of fulfilment. The situation was a nasty one and not of the creation of the Borden Government, but largely of their predecessors. It was generally admitted that something had to be done, not alone because of the importance of the road to the country, but for the additional reason that failure of the enterprise would have given Canadian credit a serious setback in the London financial market for many years. A most business-like arrangement was completed, one under which the people of the Dominion own outright forty millions out of one hundred millions of the capital stock, in addition to other safeguards. Liberal members did not offer very serious criticism—in fact, the best of that came from two Conservative representatives, Bennett and Nickle—and in the Senate Reform members helped to carry the measure. Another railway measure was that guaranteeing a further issue of bonds to the Grand Trunk Pacific to the amount of $16,000,000—one more child of the Laurier Administration which has to be looked after.

The Redistribution Bill provides for a parliament of 234 members, or an increase of 13. The Government had such an eminently fair measure that it passed. The proposal of nine more Senators was held up by the members of that Chamber.

The naturalization Act was another important matter. Under this one of the main points is that foreigners coming to Canada will have to reside in the Dominion for five years instead of three years before they can qualify as citizens. Mr. W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., took a prominent part in this debate. In fact, some ten years ago, at a Chambers of Commerce Congress in Montreal, he put this subject prominently to the fore and had the principle adopted. In addition passports issued now to properly naturalized citizens under the new act will entitle the holder to the same privileges as are accorded to the native-born. This also was one of Mr. Cockshutt's advocacies.

The Ministry proposed a vote of $1,200,000 to reimburse Farmers Bank depositors. It was shown that the Treasury Board of the Laurier Government should never have granted the charter, and that Fielding, then Finance Minister, was more than once warned that the undertaking was on a rotten basis. Government responsibility having thus been demonstrated, it was felt to be only proper to reimburse. Once more the Senate did the guillotine act, mainly at the expense of a lot of farmers.

The budget showed a buoyant revenue and few changes were made in the tariff. In this regard Hon. Mr. White, Finance Minister, reaffirmed the healthy principle of adequate protection.

Estimates were passed to enable the continuance of advanced waterways undertakings, a bill adopted to prevent the manufacture of butter substitutes, militia estimates thought to be most contentious adopted in two days, and so on.

Altogether the record has demonstrated that Premier Borden and his colleagues have been, honest and progressive ideas with regard to Dominion needs, while any political capital which the Laurierites have been able to make is abundantly described by the one word nil.

THE OUTCOME NOT IN DOUBT.

With polling day only two weeks off in connection with the Ontario election it may safely be affirmed that there is not the slightest doubt as to the fact that the Whitney government will be retained and that, too, by a very handsome majority. The reports from all over Ontario tell this fact each day, with increasing emphasis. It is only right and fair that this should be the case for the reason that the Province has never before possessed such an absolutely clean and progressive administration.

Realizing that he had no legitimate causes of serious criticism or attack, Mr. Rowell sought to take advantage of temperance sentiment to turn that into a political cry but he has failed most completely. The cause is much better handled aside from party strife with Conservatives and Liberals who believe in the same working shoulder to shoulder and this view has been voiced in more than one church convention and at other gatherings.

Realizing that a hoped-for stampede regarding this as a party issue has not in any sense materialized, Mr. Rowell not long ago declared that Sir James Whitney was not physically fit to remain as leader—a contemptible assertion which Sir James promptly denied in a most dignified manner. In this regard it is worthy of note that the Toronto Globe in its illustrated section of to-day (Saturday) gives a picture under which is the description, "Sir William Mulock and Ontario's rejuvenated Premier chatting at the races." A glance at the same fully demonstrates that he is in reality in vigorous shape.

Whitney will win and both Brants are going to be in line with Messrs. Brewster and Westbrook as the deservedly continued members.

Scaffell Buttress Scaled.

A party of expert cragsmen, led by Mr. S. W. Herford, who two years ago made the "girdle" traverse of the cliffs of Scaffell, has succeeded in negotiating the Central Buttress, which has hitherto been regarded as being an impossible climb. The wall of the Central Buttress is sheer for several feet. It is almost hopelessly smooth and steep, and was regarded by Mr. Herford as the crux of the Girdle Traverse.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Register. To-night is your last chance.

A vote for Brewster or Westbrook is a vote to endorse prison reform.

A vote for Brewster or Westbrook is a vote to endorse Hydro Electric.

A vote for Brewster or Westbrook is a vote to say you like clean government.

Registration closes at 10 o'clock to-night and has been the heaviest on record in Brantford.

The Borden Government emerges from another session more strongly entrenched than ever.

A vote for Brewster or Westbrook is a vote to endorse the ending of the school book monopoly.

A vote for Brewster or Westbrook is a vote to approve of Hydro radials—lines run by the people's power.

English or French language for instruction in the Public schools? What do you think of the Rowell attitude on this matter?

The monopoly of temperance professions by the Liberals is pretty well knocked sky high by the Whitney temperance achievement.

Brantford Conservatives are thoroughly well pleased with registration results up to this period, as they have a thorough right to be.

There is nothing surer in the world but that the government of Sir James Whitney will be returned by a large majority and both Brants should be in line.

Brantford has a splendid opportunity of having the Grand Valley included in the Ontario Government radial scheme and W. S. Brewster is the right man for Brantford to see this thing through.

Moral reform comes too high when Ontario electors are asked to give Rowell and party control of the public purse strings once more. The remembrance of the last Grit regime is still with the electorate.

Abolish the bar might be imagined as a new thing to hear some Liberals. As pointed out in these columns to-day there are four methods and there have been for years, of wiping out the bars if the electorate so decides.

Rowell is making a bid for the French and temperance vote together. He may get some of the former, because of Sir Jas. Whitney's firm stand, but temperance people are not being stampeded against a government which has been both progressive and honest.

When one remembers what Rowell and his party stood up for in the way of political immorality in 1905, it is passing strange that they should now parade forth as great moral purists. The people don't forget the three Norths, the Minnie M and the "barracles," which by the way are still there.

Mr. T. F. Best whose splendid work for the Y.M.C.A. is unquestioned, has spoken out strongly for the Whitney government, as one that has done well for temperance. Dr. S. Banks Nelson, a prominent Presbyterian divine has also spoken in the same regard, all of which shows a lack of faith in the sincerity of Rowell and his political machine to effect moral, temperance or any other kind of reform.

Says the Mail and Empire to-day: "The electors of Brantford and North Brant should not fail to send back to the Legislature W. S. Brewster and J. W. Westbrook. They are exceedingly useful members of the Legislature, and are a credit to their constituencies."

The Liberal leader in Ontario is a corporation lawyer. On one occasion he received a fee of $50,000, and was made rich in a day by the corporation at Sault Ste Marie and the old Ross Government working in conjunction. In return Mr. Rowell gave his undying allegiance to the Grit cause which was at that time at low ebb.

Hospital Gets Bequest. Some years ago John Moses died in Brantford and left considerable estate, of which $3,000 was left to the John H. Stratford Hospital, with a life interest to his wife during her life. She passed away in December, and the final accounts will shortly be passed by Judge Hardy and the General Hospital will be benefited to the extent of $3,000.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

THE BRIDES.

I see the blushing brides go by, all sweet and blooming, to the church; and nothing fairer greets the eye, however far a man may search. As nearer to the church they draw, the bliss they feel is all unfeigned, for they obey a holy law, and lead the life that God ordained. The old maids stand around outside, and think upon the yesteryear: each had a chance to be a bride, and passed it up for some career. Each was ambitious to be known as a lawyer, doctor or the like, and dimly each stands alone, and sees the brides go up the pike. From 'neath the churches' spires and domes the brides go forth to normal lives, to make and manage happy homes and join the ranks of gracious wives. The old maids leave the wedding scene, with hearts that feel as though they'd burst; they fill their stoves with gasoline, and cook their meals of wieners-wurst. They chose the dress and left the gold, their lives are but a dreary blank; they have no money around to spend, no kids to cuddle or to spank. Their eyes are full of tears unshed, their hearts of griefs that ever gnaw; their hair is gray; their noses red; their temper like a cross cut saw. Imagine, then, how tough they feel, as by the churchyard gate they stray, and hear the wedding music peal, and see the brides in brave array! WALT MASON.

No cases of serious illness were encountered and the boys returned safely home without any serious mishap.

No Thieving.

There were no burglaries, no robberies and no thieving reported to the police during the visit of the circus. Pickpockets were evidently scarce, as nobody has yet reported losing anything of value.

Cleaned Up.

Three vagrants were cleaned up at the circus yesterday by the police, and they will be dealt with by the bench on Tuesday next. The city clean-up amounted to three drunks, who have been bailed out.

D.D.D. In Hospitals; Standard Skin Cure

How many hospital patients, suffering from the frightful itch, the raw scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands?

That fluid is the famous D. D. D. Prescription for eczema.

The supervising nurse of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (naming of nurse and institute on application), writes regarding a patient "The disease had eaten her eye-brows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are trying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with the same soothing, healing fluid.

Dr. Geo. T. Richardson frankly writes, "D. D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see.

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed, calmed—so thoroughly refreshed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

But we are so confident of the merits of this prescription that we will refund the purchase price of the first full size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge.

ALL CROOKED IS KIPLING'S VIEW

Vitriolic Speech is Delivered by Poet at Political Meeting.

LONDON, June 13.—It is seldom indeed that Rudyard Kipling speaks in public. When he does do so, he always says something very much to the point. Three or four years ago he was asked to "say a few words" at a certain dinner in London. He accepted the invitation much to the surprise of his hearers. His few words proved to be a glass of water, the evening, and took the shine off everything else that was said on the same occasion.

Mr. Kipling made a rather important speech on the political situation at an anti-home rule demonstration at Tuxford. Wells a few nights ago its importance may be gauged by the varying stories about it in the London papers. Columns of verbatim reports appear in the Unionist journals while the Liberal papers speak of the "scurrilous partisan attack" which Mr. Kipling made on the government.

Out-Heroded Leaders

He "out-heroded the leaders of his own party in reckless accusations of crime and corruption," says the Daily Chronicle. The speech was certainly full of bitterness. Pausing at one moment in the course of it, Mr. Kipling took a glass of water, remarking, "You've got to clean your mouth for this filth."

Mr. Kipling began by saying: "When I was a young man in India I used to report criminal cases for the newspaper that employed me. It was interesting work, because it introduced me to forgers and embezzlers, and murderers and enterprising gentlemen of that kind. (Laughter) Sometimes after I had reported their trial I used to visit my friends in jail when they were doing their sentences. I remember one man there who got off with a life sentence for murder. He was a clever, smooth spoken chap, and he told me what he called the story of his life. It was not a very truthful account, but he finished by one true sentence. He said: 'Take it from me that when a man starts crooked, one thing leads to another till he finds himself in such a position that he has to put somebody out of the way to get straight again. (Laughter.)'

Started Crooked.

"Well, that exactly describes the present position of the Cabinet. (Cheers.) They started crooked; one thing led to another till they found themselves in such a position that they had to put some one out of the way to get straight again. (Cheers.) 'Nearly all practical and constructive crime that isn't done for the sake of a woman is done for the sake of money. I won't make wild statements about other people's careers—we can leave that to the Chancellor of the Exchequer—(laughter)—but I should like to draw your attention to these plain acknowledged facts. We know that with few exceptions the members of the Cabinet are not men of large private means or independent incomes."

The speaker remarked that persons who are dependent on their salaries "take good care to make the billies that gives them their salaries as permanent as possible." One thing marked off, he then spoke of the passage of the Parliament Act, by which the Cabinet "assured itself a straight run of at least five years' salary."

It Is All Crooked.

Mr. Kipling said that the Cabinet had promised on its word of honor that a second chamber should be created as soon as possible—but that was another bit of crooked work. Cheers punctuated the entire speech.

He then referred to the passage of the act providing for the payment of members of Parliament. "It was crooked work," he said, "but, as the Premier had pointed out, the House of Commons was the supreme and ultimate master of the situation. As long as the Cabinet stayed in office every coalition member of Parliament knew that he would get his cheque for £100 every quarter. Men will do a great deal for the sake of £400 a year certain for five years. (Laughter and cheers.)

"You see how one thing leads to another. The Parliament Act, and the fact that no second chamber had been created, prevented the possibility of any interference by electors outside. Payment of members prevented any revolt on the part of members inside the House. The Cabinet were in the position of a firm and fraudulent solicitors who had got an unlimited power of attorney from a client by false pretences, and could dispose of their client's estate as they pleased."

Openly Degraded.

Mr. Kipling then went on to speak of the Home Rule bill. "Our country," he said, "has been openly degraded in the eyes of all nations that set any store by the purity of their administrators. But so far that had been all. Till the Home Rule bill was produced the Cabinet had done nothing which fatally and irretrievably compromised the unity of Great Britain, or the safety of the Empire, or made existence unendurable to any large section of the King's subjects."

After arguing in favor of his own scheme and condemning that of the Provisional Committee, Mr. Redmond says: "Unless the committee can see a way to reconsider its decision and adopt my proposal, I must appeal to all supporters of the party in the volunteer movement to organize immediate county committees, which shall be quite independent of the Provisional Committee, and to maintain an independent county government until the organization is sufficiently complete to make possible the holding of a representative convention to elect a permanent governing body."

The Provisional Committee includes Professors MacNeill, Kettle and MacDonogh, of the National University; Sir Roger Casement, who exposed the rubber scandals in Peru, and Col. Moore, a brother of the novelist, George Moore. Prof. Kettle strongly disapproves of the action of his fellow-members on the Provisional Committee, which is receiving much general condemnation.

"WE CERTAINLY DO KNOW HOW"

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

When the Peacock Looks At His Feet

DONALD!" cried Nurse in that tone she used only when Donald really deserved to be scolded. "Just look at your shoes! Didn't you see that mud? Lands aakes! I believe you walked in it on purpose! Here, sit down on this bench and let me try to clean some of it off. And you looked so nice, too, with your new Peter Thompson suit and your sailor hat. And just look at you now! I think you'd be ashamed of yourself the minute you look down at your feet! Mery me, what a trial you are!"

Donald and Nurse were taking an afternoon walk in the beautiful grounds of the city's Zoological Park—as they did almost every bright, sunny afternoon, for Donald's home was but two blocks from the entrance to the Zoo.

Now, if the truth be told, perhaps it was partly Nurse's fault that the little fellow had stepped off the path and into the muddy road, for she was looking for the handsome Keeper who somehow always happened along that way just about this time every afternoon to pass the time of day with her.

But even at that, Donald should have known better than to walk in the road, especially since he felt so proud and important in his new spring clothes. Yet little boys, you know, never can see the necessity of keeping their shoes clean and polished even though they may be careful about the rest of their apparel. Shoes, somehow, don't seem to count!

Nurse gathered a handful or two of green leaves and finally succeeded in scraping most of the mud off Donald's feet, but anyone could plainly see that they had been muddied. Then—this time keeping hold of his hand—they continued their walk along the path that led to the out-of-door cages for the birds.

And presently the smiling, red-faced Keeper hove in sight, tipped his hat to Nurse and lifted Donald up on his broad shoulder for a ride. After a while they came to a bench, not far from the enclosure for the peacocks. Nurse and the Keeper sat down and Donald toddled off to gaze in awe at the lordly birds strutting around behind the wire screen.

"Hello—hello, Donald!" The voice of the ralling against which he was leaning, then on the ground and even on the wire screen; but the Old Man was no where to be seen, though Donald could plainly hear him chuckling in high glee.

"Here—here I am, Donald," he called presently, "right here on the back of this vain peacock!"

And, sure enough, there he was, his funny, bald little head, with its two queer horns sticking up, just visible among the gay plumage of the strutting bird.

"Oh—oh—oh," laughed Donald, "I never thought of looking for you there! Good-afternoon, I'm very glad to see you."

"Thank you, Donald," replied the Old Man. And, with that, he hopped off the peacock's back, jumped clear over the wire screen at a single bound and landed on the railing right by Donald's elbow.

He was a very queer little man indeed, no bigger than a minute. His cloak was of humming-bird's wings, trimmed with ermine; and his funny, little legs were all encased in fur that looked as though it might have come from a black bear or even a seal. Donald had seen him many times before, of course, so he was in no wise startled. But he noticed that the Old Man carried a new hat in his hand.

"Oh, what a beautiful new hat you have, Mr. Old Man of the Forest," he said.

"Yes—yes—it is quite pretty, isn't it?" The Old Man smiled but shook his head slowly from side to side. "I suppose it is very vain of me to wear it and very wrong, but I simply couldn't resist it, now that spring is here and everything is verdant and beautiful. See, Donald, it is made of daisy petals and rose-leaves, with a tiny peacock feather standing up in the front just to give it color.

"But I don't know—I don't know—it's not right to be vain about your dress and—oh—oh, Donald, did I ever tell you about why the peacock is as vain as he is and how, all of a sudden, he looks down at his feet, remembers something and instantly his spread-out, fan-like tail droops and closes up and—well, then he ceases to be vain at all! No? Well, now you lean down on this railing so I won't have to screech my lungs out and I'll tell you.

"In the beginning—a long, long time ago—way over in India, where the peacock comes from, he wasn't he now is. In fact, he was just a plain, black, fuzzy, roly-polly-shaped creature, with but a short stub of a tail, big, thick, scaly feet and a round, ugly-looking head. Indeed, he was so hideous that all the other birds in the forest laughed at him and held him up to ridicule.

"Now, the peacock, as you can well imagine, did not like this at all. He was continually bemoaning the fact that he was not beautiful and resplendent in plumage.

"Oh," he wailed, "if I could only make all those other birds feel ashamed of themselves!"

"Over and over again he would repeat that wish. And he thought of it day and night and wept real bird-tears about it.

"Then, one day, he came to me and told me what was troubling him.

"But," I said to him, "don't you see that your very ugliness is a protection to you? The other birds have to be continually alert to see that their enemies do not catch and kill them; whereas everyone passes you by. Why, peacock, you can just squat down on the ground and no bird or animal can possibly tell you from a lump of dirt. Really, you are better off than any of the other birds, even if you aren't

THE WILLOW WHISTLE

MY papa knows most everything. The names of trees, the birds that sing. The time for flowers to come out. And lots that I can't tell about. And once when we went for a walk, He cut a long green willow stalk. And with his knife he made a mark all round at two points on the bark. Then rubbed the piece hard as he could till it was loose upon the wood. Then dipped it off and made a top just like the whistles in the shop. And stopped the other end up tight. And it just whistled "out of sight!"

Suddenly Mr. Parrot cried, "Hey, Look At His Feet. Look At His Feet." exactly good to look upon."

"But the silly creature, Donald, couldn't see it that way at all. He wept and wept and begged and begged me to do something to make him beautiful. Though I knew he was very foolish, I really couldn't help feeling a little bit sorry for him. So finally, I agreed to change everything about him, just as he wished, if he would agree to take the consequences and fight his own battles with the enemies he was bound to have once he became conspicuous. He agreed instantly.

"First, Mr. Old Man of the Forest," he said, "please give me one gorgeous tail of feathers, green and purple and—resplendent—and make it stick straight up in the air and—bigger than the tail of any other bird in the whole jungle!"

"So I waded my magic wand and behold—he had a tail just like the one you see on this peacock before you," said Donald. And then, one day, he asked for iridescent, greenish-blue feathers on his body, instead of the fuzzy he had there, and for a small head with that pretty top-knot like all peacocks now have and—well, just then he happened to catch sight of himself in a stream and hopped about for joy and puffed out his chest and arched his long neck. Oh, Donald, he was so vain and proud of himself!

"Now, Mr. Old Man," he said, "give me a voice different from that of any other bird so I can call out to everyone. I will simply have to look to see where it comes from; and then they will all see what a beautiful creature I am!"

"I looked at him a moment, Donald, in pity; but I had promised to give him what he asked for, so I waded my wand again and he straightway had that same peculiar cry that peacocks today have. Then, with his tail all spread out like a fan and his vain head held high in the air, he strutted off, so proud of himself that he even forgot to thank me.

"He had gone but a short distance, when he met Mr. Parrot.

"Oh, oh—no!" cried the parrot, "look who's here! Why, it's that ugly peacock that—! And Mr. Parrot chuckled and laughed and cried out for all the other birds to come and see. They came—flying and running. "Peacock strutted around before them, as proud as—well, as proud as a peacock! And every now and then he gave his shrill cry and glanced at them haughtily.

"Suddenly, Mr. Parrot cried, 'Hey, look at his feet! Look at his feet—they're the same old ugly feet! Hah! Hah!'"

"The assembled birds looked and instantly set up such a howl of derision as was never before heard in that jungle.

"Peacock stopped in the midst of his lordly stride and looked down. Yes, there they were—the same ugly scaly, hideous old feet he had had before! He had it forgotten to thank his new ones! His tail drooped and folded up until all the pretty ocelli, or eye-like spots, were hidden; his proud neck lost its haughty arch and he cried—real peacock tears! He was so ashamed and so taken back! And, goodness, how the other birds did make fun of him!

And to this day, Donald, whenever a peacock looks down at his feet his tail closes up and he looks all wilted and humble. Watch—the peacock within the enclosure is looking down now—and his—"

How Willard Learned To Jump

THE coach was trying out his high-jump candidates for the high school team. It was evident to an observer that he was discouraged.

"I never saw such a lack of material in my life," he remarked to Professor Barrett as he watched the high jumpers vainly trying to "do" 4 feet 11.

"What's the matter with Willard Tracy?" asked the professor. "He seems to be built like a high jumper."

"Tracy seems to be the best of the lot," replied the coach. "He has a good spring in his legs, but for some reason he can't get his feet over the bar."

"Here, Tracy," he called, "try that over and raise your feet higher just as you reach the bar."

He watched the youth hopefully. Tracy approached the jumping standards from the side, gave a quick, sharp spring and bent double in an effort to clear the bar. But alas! His toe caught under the piece of fishing rod and it fell to the ground with a disheartening clatter. Both Tracy and the coach were evidently discouraged.

"No use, coach," said the boy, as he picked up the bar and brushed the sawdust from his jersey. "I just can't make it! My toe always catches."

"Yes, you can," spoke the coach encouragingly, striving not to show his impatience. "Keep practicing."

"Tomorrow," he announced. "I want the whole squad to meet in the gymnasium at three o'clock and take a cross-country run. It will do us all good. Now jog around the track and into the gymnasium to take a shower."

As the coach walked toward the "gym" with Professor Barrett he remarked:

"I'm not worrying about my sprinters, runners or weight men. I'm sure we can hold our own with Brunswick in most of the running events, but the high jump and hurdles bother me."

Brunswick high school was the longstanding rival of Hatley high school, and the outdoor meet was only eight days away. The coach had never felt so uncertain as now and he occasionally wanted to give up the meet without a struggle. That would never do, however, for Hatley always fought hardest in face of overwhelming odds.

The next day, Saturday, found the boys assembled in front of the gymnasium in their running suits, anxious for a ramble across the adjoining pastures. The spring air was exhilarating. The warm sun and breeze appealed to them and made them feel as if they could run to Brunswick and back as easily as not. Willard Tracy was there in his short running pants and fiery red jersey, which lent a touch of color to the fine squad of athletes. The coach himself, attired in a gray were going to take the meet. If I could not get my feet over the bar, I could only get my feet over the bar in my mind and conscious of this possibility resting upon him, he stretched his tired limbs, and stepped down in his tracks to straighten the "kinks" in his legs as is custom with jumpers.

He did not see a huge bull emerging from a herd of cattle in the corner of the pasture and appearing with evident displeasure. The bull only twenty-five feet in his rear-gymnasium suit, set the pace—a slow jog across the springy, green turf of the pastures. The only stops were to crawl beneath the strands of a barbed-wire fence or to slow down for a short breathing spell. As they were ready to make the return trip the coach said:

"Well stop and rest a bit. Then I'm going to set a pretty stiff pace back to the 'gym.' We don't stop on the way. If any of you can't keep up the pace, you needn't try to run yourselves to pieces. Just drop out and walk in."

As the squad trailed behind their leader, Willard Tracy strove hard to keep up with the foremost runners; but his eagerness to keep well up in front—and his inexperience, as a high jumper, in running proved sufficient to exhaust him so that he was soon far in the rear of the now straggling procession of flapping white track suits.

Completely out of breath, Willard sat down on a rock and held his sides.

"Guess—I tried—to keep—too far up front," he panted as he watched the disappearing line of runners.

He fell to thinking of the chances of beating Brunswick. Surely, he reflected, things looked darker than ever before for Hatley.

"We'll take the mile easily," he placated. "We ought to set both places in the half and first in the hundred and shot-punt. But Brunswick will take the pole vault, the hurdles, the discus, quarter and relay. Unless we win the high jump I don't see how Willard turned around and saw the snorting brute charging angrily in his direction.

"My Jersey!" he thought. "Well, I've got a head start at any rate," and he proceeded to run for the nearest fence.

But by the time he had "hit his stride" the bull was so close he could hear his breathing. Then came a tight race between the maddened animal and the boy. It happened that the fence for which Willard headed was a good 200 yards distant, and as he was already tired from his run, he felt panicky-riven. Surely he could not hold out that long.

Had it not been that Willard was dressed in a light running suit and in good training, he probably would never have had a show with his angered pursuer. He did not dare look around, but when he was a hundred yards away he felt the bull was only a length or two behind. Would that give him time to crawl under the barbed-wire fence when he reached it? No, he de-

A Few Facts About Coffee

HA VE you ever thought, when you saw Father drinking his cup of coffee at the breakfast table—or maybe when you drank your own, if you are old enough to be permitted to drink it—that a wonderful process the coffee bean goes through from the time it grows in the coffee fields until it comes to the breakfast table? Well, it is a most interesting story.

To begin with, our coffee comes principally from Brazil, though a good bit is also obtained from Porto Rico, other parts of Central America and from Java. Coffee trees grow in long, straight rows about twelve feet apart and live to be from forty to one hundred years old. As a rule, on a plantation, they are about fifteen feet high and their branches hang down to the ground bearing berries about as large as an acorn stripped of its little cup. Inside this berry, or shell, are two little beans, packed close together and almost oval in shape. It is from these beans, after proper curing, that coffee for the table is made.

When the berries are ripe they are bright red in color and are then picked by hand by the native laborers with the help of their wives and children. The brown hands of the pickers shake the berries to the ground to be gathered later, and freed of dirt by tossing them to windward with shovels. Then they are packed in bags.

These sacks are taken to the drying grounds and their contents dumped into running water which washes the berries free of dirt. They are then passed through sorting and shelling machines, after which they are spread out on large, flat terraces built of cement, to dry in the sun. During this drying process, men with rakes move about among the beans turning them over and over that the rays of the sun may dry them the more quickly. It takes an average of two weeks to dry them properly.

After the drying, the beans are passed through machines that free them of husks and stem that may still cling to them, and then follows another sorting and grading. And finally, they are packed in sacks and taken to be roasted—ready for table use.

BEAUTIFUL YACHT 'WANDERER' WAS THE LAST SLAVE SHIP THAT LANDED HUMAN CARGO IN UNITED STATES

A painting in the possession of the New York Yacht Club of the yacht Wanderer represents her as a beautiful little vessel. She was a keel schooner of 104 feet length on deck and 95 feet on the water line. Her draught was about 11 ft. She was built for J. O. Johnson, a member of the club and a man of means, and was launched in June, 1857 from the yard of James C. Bayless at Port Jefferson, L. I.

In the following year she was sold to W. C. Corrie, who had recently become a member of the club. Corrie, under the rules of the club, was captain of the Wanderer, but he installed as sailing master Capt. Semmes, said to have been a brother of Admiral Semmes, who commanded the Confederate vessel Alabama at the time of the civil war. Shortly afterward, the Wanderer, flying the flag of the New York Yacht Club, sailed from New York bound ostensibly for a pleasure cruise in southern waters.

It was this yacht that became the slaver Wanderer, and in all accounts of her and of those who had to do with her she is spoken of as the best slave ship.

A story printed in the Atlanta Journal of 1898 purporting to be gathered from one of the owners of the Wanderer describes her first appearance after she sailed out of New York harbor in 1858 under the colors of the New York Yacht club, having on board her reputed owner, Corrie, and her sailing master, Captain Semmes.

According to this story the owners of the Wanderer were Capt. McGhee, Charles A. L. Lamar, of Savannah, Ga.; Richard Dickerson, of Richmond, Va., and Benjamin Davis, of Charleston, S. C. Nothing is said about Corrie as an owner. After leaving New York the Wanderer put into the Great Ogeechee River in Georgia. The story goes on:

"Captain Semmes proceeded to take on a load of trinkets and gewgaws, brass wire and bright colored cloths suitable for the African trade with a liberal supply of beads and bandannas, and then instructing his mate, with a picked crew, to steer for the mouth of the Congo and await his coming, he left the vessel.

"With one or two trusty followers he boarded a steamer and gave out that he was bound for the west coast on a combination trading and exploring tour.

"He and his associates were put off at a point convenient to his destination and they worked their way down to the Congo and reached the chief town of a ruler of one of the three smaller Congo provinces in safety. The king and Capt. Semmes soon came to an amicable agreement.

For from $1 to $2 per head, paid in beads and bandannas and other trinkets, Captain Semmes was to receive a cargo of 750 slaves, male and female, ranging from 13 to 18 years of age, to be delivered on a certain date at the mouth of the Congo.

"The Wanderer was signaled and sailed up and dropped anchor near the landing place and the human freight was soon imprisoned in the hold of the vessel. The vessel then turned her course towards the southern shores of the United States.

"The voyage was made and the vessel ran into the mouth of the great Ogeechee River late in the year and tossed a safe retreat in the big swamp island. From there Capt. Semmes communicated with Lamar who was the prime mover in the expedition.

Passed Fort

"It was arranged that Lamar was to give a ball and invite the officers of the garrison at the fort at the mouth of the river to attend and he also insisted that the soldiers of the garrison should also partake of the good cheer. This was done to give the Wanderer an opportunity to pass the fort, whose black muzzled guns were a menace to all vessels that attempted to ascend the Savannah in a clandestine manner.

"Under cover of the darkness the Wanderer stole stealthily up the river under the guns of the fort and past the city, reaching Lamar's plantation in safety without having been questioned. They were kept there for several months, after which they were sent to New Orleans and sold.

Made Big Profit

"The venture proved to be a very profitable one, as after paying Capt. Semmes $3,500 for his year's work—it had taken a year to make the round trip—the owners had remaining $10,000 apiece in net profits.

"Slaves that cost from $3 to $3 apiece in the cheap trinkets with which they were paid for, brought from 600 to 700 in the open market, and the owners of the Wanderer were highly elated over the success of the expedition.

So much for the first voyage of the Wanderer as a slave ship. But that was not the voyage that brought the last cargo of the African slave trade.

Thus far in the story the name of Chas. A. L. Lamar has figured rather conspicuously. This Lamar was a member of a well known Georgia family and is mentioned many times in newspapers in connection with the Wanderer case as a southerner of Southeners. He seems to have been by far the most interesting person who had anything to do with the affair. He was supposed to have been the last Confederate killed on Georgia soil in the civil war.

"One of the Wanderer's stories has it that she reached the Georgia coast after her first African voyage on December 2, 1858. Within a year, according to these accounts, she had completed her second and last voyage in the slave trade.

The man who seems to have told the most about the arrival of the Wanderer on the Georgia coast after her last voyage to Africa was Captain James Clubb, who was once the keeper of the Cumberland island light and was afterwards a coast pilot. Capt. Clubb died several years ago in Brunswick, Ga., at the age of 63. A few years ago before his death he gave the Brunswick Appeal some account of the Wanderer's arrival. That paper said:

"The slave ship Wanderer reached the shores of Georgia during the fall of 1859 and crept late one evening into St. Andrew's Sound. The captain went ashore on Little Cumberland and stated to Captain Clubb then lighthouse keeper, that he had a party of people on board and wanted to see John du Bignon of Jekyll Island.

"Later on he returned and requested Captain Clubb to bring his vessel in for him at once. The Captain joined him in his boat and rowed out to the ship and to his astonishment found on boarding the ship that she was none other than the Wanderer, and had 350 negroes aboard, fresh from the West Coast of Africa.

Landed Slaves.

"There was no alternative except to bring the vessel in, which he did, and moored her near the south end of Jekyll Island. The negroes were hurried out in small boats and taken ashore, just over the small hill at the south of the island. The Wanderer was then taken up the Satilla river and moored.

"A few days later the steamer Lamar came down from Savannah with clothes for these poor people, for up to this time they were as nude as when roaming the wilds of Africa. They were clothed (many of them by force) and taken aboard the steamer and carried to Savannah and there distributed through the country and sold.

As soon as the news of the Wanderer reached Collector Mabry of this port he at once seized the vessel and arrested the captain and sailing master. The vessel was condemned and the men put in prison and would have fared badly but for the breaking out of the war, which put an end to the courts and turned loose all United States prisoners.

"The Wanderer ceased to be a vessel of the New York Yacht club on February 1859, when at a meeting of the club her name was stricken from the roll and Corrie, her owner, was expelled from the club.

"When Savannah was blockaded," says a writer, "at the outbreak of the civil war the Wanderer was hauled in and was finally sold to the Confederate government. She was eventually captured by the Union forces and was for a time used as a revenue cutter at Pensacola. Then she was sold at auction and put into the coconaut trade, being finally wrecked at Cape Henry."

SIX GENERATIONS IN FAMILY GROUP

They are Gathered to Celebrate a Wisconsin Woman's 102nd Birthday Anniversary.

MCGREGOR, Ia., June 13.—Six generations sat at table together yesterday in Wyalusing, Wis., on the occasion of the 102nd birthday of Mrs. Lydia Ault Shrake. Had it been possible for all of Mrs. Shrake's living descendants to be present, covers for 158 would have been required.

She is the mother of four aged children, the grandmother of thirty-two near-aged, the great grandmother of eighty-five middle aged, the great-great-grandmother of 30 young men and women, great great-grandchildren, and the great-great-great-grandmother of six infant great-great-great-grandchildren.

The remarkable family is the fruit of two marriages, one contracted 84 years ago, when Mrs. Shrake was 18 years old, the other in 1843. Ten children were born of the two unions. Four of them are living. The first husband was a veteran of the war of 1813, the second served in the Mexican war. Five sons and two sons-in-law fought in the Union army in the war of the rebellion.

Despite her 102 years Mrs. Shrake is able to do some of the housework in the family of her son, with whom she has lived since the death of her second husband in 1861. She also helps tend the garden, and croons her favorite great-great-grandchild to sleep. Her mental faculties are still clear and her memory is excellent.

HITCHED!

Hezekiah Wilkins Led Miss Rebecca Perkins to the Alter Last Wk!—It Was a Terrible Brilliant Wedding!—Rev. Saml. Moore Performed the Operation!—Full Particklers Below!

(Bingville Bugle.)

On last Friday at high noon (according to Rev. Saml Moore's watch, which is generally about a hour too slow), Mr. Hezekiah Wilkins, son of Jeff Wilkins, and one of the most intelligent young men of Bingville was united in the holy bondsof wedlock to Miss Rebecca Perkins, daughter of Widder Perkins. Becky is a terrible nise girl also—just as nise as Hez is. In fact some folks say that they think she is too good for Hez.

The affair took place at the home of the bride and Rev. Saml Moore performed the operation. Only the intimate friends & relatives of the contracting parties was present.

All the invited guests were present as early as 10 o'clock and when it got to be 11.30 and Hezekiah hadn't appeared on the scene, Becky, who was all dressed up in white, began to get nervous. She said she could not imagine what was keepin Hez back, and when Mrs. Polly Woods whispered in Becky's ear merely outen the kindness of her heart that praps Hez had changed his mind about marryin, Becky bust into tears.

Just a few minits before the hour set for the cedemony, however, Hez was saw coming up the middle of the road all dressed up within a inch of his life, and runnin fit to bust with his hat in his hand. He arrived all hot and perspirin and dusty, and as soon as he could speak he exclaimed that what kep him back was gittin into a biled shirt, somethink he hadn't wore for quite a spell and also that his new shoes which he had bought to get married in and had adipi $3 for at the co. seat, was too tight and pinched his feet somethink terrible.

Soon as Hez arrived Miss Amelia Tucker, our raining sossiety queen, set down to the organ and began to play "Here Comes the Bride!" To the beautiful & and pathetick strains of this selection Hez and Becky marched into the parlor and Rev. Moore, who in a sollum voice jiggled em together for better or worse, as the case may be.

Becky was as cool as a cucumber, but Hez was pale and flustered, and when the parson askt him if he would take this woman to be his lawful wedded wife Hez says, "I reckon so, if nobuddy else wants her."

After the ceremony everybody present set down to a wedding dinner. The table fairly groaned under the weight of choice vinds, and all present done full justice to the repast, being as they et fit to bust, as some of em was turburle uncomfor-ble afterwards.

Following the dinner Hez went & hitched up his old sorrel mare to the buckboard and drive around & Becky climb in and they departed on their honeymoon midst a shower of ice and old shoes. One old shoe white Hank Dewberry throwt, for good luck, hit Hez a turburle blow on the back of the head. Hez stoppted the horse and got outen the buggy and dared Hank to fight, but cooler counsel prevailed and the happy couple continued on their honeymoon.

It is a seckret where Mr. & Mrs. Wilkins will spend their honeymoon, but the general opinyn is that they will spend it at the co. sea where ezzes Ann Hetty lives, as her gests.

Upon their return they will set up housekeepin in Bingville. The Bugle joins in congratulationshs to Mr. & Mrs. Wilkins, and hopes that their matrimonial sea will allus be as smnooth as a millpond.

We also hope that Hez will take the Bugle like his father has allus did before him, but he will allus pay for it in advance, like his father has never did.

Wild Bull at a Sale

There was an exciting scene on Monday at a Llandilo stock sale. A two year old bull very soon after coming into the mart got wild and dangerous and had to be slaughtered on the spot.

Marvellous Escape

A Llandilo stock sale, Mr. Saff of Aberdare, was rounding a corner on the Tarall bridge, Brecon, on Thursday when he and his horse fell into the river, and the parapet of the bridge dropped 20 feet into the river, and escaped death marvellously, and a fractured ankle as his only injury.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright 1913 by W. G. Chapman.

As the excitement waxed the ape-man sprang to his feet and joined in the wild ceremony. In the center of the circle of glittering black bodies he leaped and roared and shook his heavy spear in the same manner that enthralled his fellow savages.

The outer wall was fifty feet in height where it had not fallen into ruin, but nowhere as far as they could see had more than ten or twenty feet of the upper courses fallen away. It was still a formidable defense. On several occasions Tarzan had thought that he discerned things moving behind the ruined portions of the wall near to them, as though creatures were watching them from behind the bulwarks of the ancient pile.

That night they camped outside the city. Once, at midnight, they were awakened by a shrill scream from beyond the great wall. It was very high at first, descending gradually until it ended in a series of dismal moans.

The very night that Tarzan of the Apes became chief of the Waziri he was in the boat 200 miles west of him upon the Atlantic. Of the six persons in the boat which she had escaped from the Lady Alice, only three survived. They were Jane herself, Clayton and Thurax.

The week following the induction of Tarzan into the kingship of the Waziri was occupied in escorting the Manyema of the Arab riders to the northern boundary of Waziri in accordance with a promise which Tarzan had made them.

Almost immediately upon his return to the village Tarzan commenced making preparations for leading an expedition in search of the ruined city of gold which old Waziri had described to him.

The fabulous wealth of the fabled city had been almost constantly in his mind since Waziri had recounted the strange adventures of the former expedition which had stumbled upon the vast ruins by chance.

So one glorious tropical morning Waziri, chief of the Waziri, set out at the head of fifty clean limbed elon warriors in quest of adventure and of riches.

On either hand towered mighty peaks thousands of feet higher than the pass through which they were entering the forbidden valley. Behind them stretched the woody valleys across which they had marched for many days, and at the opposite side the low range which marked the boundary of their own country.

But before him was the view that centered his attention. Here lay a desolate valley—a shallow, narrow valley dotted with stunted trees and covered with many great boulders.

ered with many great boulders. And on the far side of the valley lay what appeared to be a mighty city. Its great walls, its lofty spires, its turrets, minarets and domes showing red and yellow in the sunlight.

For an hour the little expedition rested upon the mountain top, and then Tarzan led them down into the valley below. There was no trail, but the way was less arduous than the ascent of the opposite face of the mountain had been.

The circus never loses its charm. No matter how tired a person may be at the end of the performance, he is ready for a repetition of the ordeal when the next circus comes to town.

That night they camped outside the city. Once, at midnight, they were awakened by a shrill scream from beyond the great wall. It was very high at first, descending gradually until it ended in a series of dismal moans.

For fifteen minutes they marched along the face of the wall before they discovered a means of ingress. Then they came to a narrow cleft about twenty inches wide.

Into this narrow alley Tarzan made his way, turning his giant shoulders sideways that they might enter at all. Behind him trailed his black warriors.

Another narrow passage led through this wall, and at its end Tarzan and his warriors found themselves in a broad avenue, on the opposite side of which loomed dark and forbidding. Upon the crumbled debris along the face of the buildings trees had grown, and vines wound in and out of the hollow, staring windows.

As the ape-man and his companions stood gazing in varying degrees of wonderment at this ancient city in the midst of savage Africa, several of them became aware of movement within the structure at which they were looking.
