IT WILL PAY YOU To Attend Park Business College

WHY?—

- 1—Because our courses are complete and thorough with no unnecessary subjects added.
- 2—Because we charge a reasonable rate of tuition, as low as is possible for the superior service and expert training provided for our students. In choosing a school, please do not lose sight of this fact.
- 3—Because the owners are teachers of long experience and spend a large part of each day teaching.
- 4—Because we have good order and good discipline.
- 5—Because we employ plenty of capable teachers to give each pupil a proper amount of attention.
- 6—Because we interest our pupils and urge them to make all possible progress in their work.
- 7—Because each week we are receiving more calls for well-trained office help than we can supply.
- 8—Because our graduates secure, and are able to hold, the best-paying class of positions. We have received over 130 calls for office help since April 1, this year, many of these being for young men at excellent salaries.

CONSIDER CAREFULLY THE ABOVE FACTS

Flamboro Will Have Big Show This Year

A meeting of the East and West Flamboro Agricultural Societies was held at Fredston last Wednesday evening, when the United fair directors revised the prize list and arranged for special attractions.

The largest increase in prizes will be in the bacon hog classes. The directors have included a full class of Holstein cattle and have increased all of the prizes on horses, grain and roots and fruit. An increased number of special prizes are being donated by many who are interested in the success of the show.

The directors have arranged to have a merry-go-round as a special attraction for the children. All children will be allowed free admission if they march in the parade, headed by the band, to the fair grounds.

The directors are very enthusiastic for a most successful fair by the united fairs of East and West Flamboro.

Claremont Summers

BY
 Mrs. Emerson Marcy
 Kilbride, Ontario

Mrs. Markland was attending to her household duties as usual when the door bell rang and Miss Richmond was announced. Mrs. Markland took Velma in where Claremont was sleeping. Velma uttered an exclamation of surprise, to which she added, "Why, Mrs. Markland, I had no idea Mr. Summers was so badly hurt. Oh, he will certainly have to be removed from this place of incompetent nursing."

At this outburst of language, Gladys could not endure, and she said to Velma, "Very well, we shall hire a trained nurse and Mr. Summers will stay here. The doctor says he can't be moved yet."

"Yes," added Mrs. Markland. "Well, dear Miss Markland, if you need any assistance, why just call on me."

Velma could speak very condescendingly now. What would be the end of this anyway?

"I wish I had gone with him this afternoon. I must think of some plan, so he won't be nursed by that girl," Velma thought to herself.

Mrs. Summers tried to send nurses and maids, but Mrs. Markland said no.

A week after the accident Claremont was sitting up in bed, or rather propped up.

Gladys had been talking to him very unsatisfactorily.

He asked, "Who nursed me through all this illness?"

"We all did," answered Gladys.

"How long have I been here?"

"A week, Mr. Summers."

"Call me Claremont after this, Miss Markland."

"Call me Gladys after this, Claremont."

Just then the doctor came in and a talk with him. "You can get out of here now as soon as you feel strong enough."

"Say, doctor, who nursed me?"

"Why, the tall, dark young lady, of course, who did you think?"

"It seems strange mother never sent down any trained nurses."

Just then Mrs. Summers came in and mother and son talked for a long time.

"I wished now I had brought a different rig so I could drive you home," and with that Mrs. Summers departed.

When once more alone after the doctor left after talking with Mrs. Markland, Claremont told himself it was time he spoke to Gladys about his regards for her.

"Gladys, come here."

"Mother, is that Claremont speaking to me?"

"Yes, Gladys, he wants to speak to you alone, I think."

Gladys dashed away a hidden tear, came up to his bed with such a sad look on her face that Claremont said, "It is you that needs the couch, not me. Why, Gladys, I have nearly killed you with my illness."

"Oh, no, it is not that."

"Well, Gladys, put confidence in me and tell me all. I know something is wrong." Claremont took both her hands in his hands and smiled at her.

"Well, I will tell you I am sorry to lose you so soon."

"Say, Gladys, won't you be my wife?"

Reminiscences

Dedicated to the Waterdown C. G. I.
T. by the Author

There was a club in Waterdown,
And it was wondrous gay—
All sorts of plans were thought of
Where to spend a holiday.

And "Orillia" was decided,
—Not a one had been before,
So to new thrills all looked forward,
And adventures by the score.

So one "5 a. m." they started
—Nothing later could be tried!
Chaperoneless! all excited!
Undeterred by wind or tide.

They were laden down with baggage,
They had baskets, one and all,
For their future meals depended
On what larders they might call.

Well, they reached their destination,
On Tecumseth street, it was,
Chaperones were there to greet them,
And lay down a few laws.

Two, each day, should do the cooking
Without murmur or complain,
Household goods should not be harmed
Lest fun be on the wane.

Well—they started in immediate
To paint the old town red,
And cheer the neighbors up forsooth
No matter what they said.

Where'er you went you'd see them,
In pairs or in a bunch,
Hiking off for somewhere,
Or to the park for lunch.

When each would seize a basket,
Spoons, or dishes, or the pie,
And thus were meals transported
Without a single sigh.

They went bathing (?) in the bathtub
If the lake was o'er forbidden;
They held "sings" upon the stair steps
With a fiendish joy unhidden.

And—Oh my, they met the Plunketts,
Basked in Albert's winning smile,
And thereafter lived on memories
Love lorn maidens beat a mile.

And they saw a real live author,
One of true Orillia fame,
Whose stories they had read before,
Marian Keith by name.

Old Home Week brought diversions, Fireworks, concerts, games and such,
While of dancing on the pavement
They never got too much.

They went to Church demurely,
To the movies—each and all,
In motor boats, and rowing boats,
Nor in the lake did fall.

They "swam" the lake—they fished
the fish,
They saw all that they could,
And always ready were to eat,
And my! Those "eats" were good.

One morn they rose at 4 a. m.
To speed a parting guest,
They loved him well—he'd helped the cooks,
And they must do their best.

To raise a racket in the town
And wake the tired folks,
And practice up on "Georgia"
How one wished for bad egg yolks.

But one sad lack was ever felt
Thro' all the golden hours;
Young men were scarce as old hen's teeth,
Or January flowers.

Three brave Horatios—all they saw,
But what did three avail?
Tho' one could swim and one canoe,
The "leftovers" would wait.

The chaperones lived through it all,
A miracle, you'd say,
Tho' one the rest cure had to take,
When they were well away.

And yet in dreams she lived it o'er,
And heard that sweet (?) refrain,
"Georgia my happy home,
(May I ne'er hear thee again).

The neighbors too have had some sleep,
The towns fallen in its wont
Of dignity and quietness;
—Enjoy it? No we don't.
Orillia, August 26, 1922.

HOW AUTHORS WORK.

Find Inspiration Under Many Different Conditions.

Various are the adventitious aids to inspiration of which the novelist or poet avails himself. Not the least of them, perhaps, is tobacco. Tennyson and Charles Kingsley were prolific smokers, and Sir J. M. Barrie has confessed that when at work on a novel he smokes seven ounces during the course of a week.

Maeterlinck, too, always works with a pipe in his mouth, though he has long since given up the use of tobacco. According to his biographer, M. Gerard Harry, "in lieu of ordinary tobacco, he fills his bowl with a denicotinized preparation, tasteless indeed, but harmless. His pipe is still always alight when the pen is busy, but it is hardly more now than an innocent subterfuge intended to cheat and so satisfy an irresistible mechanical craving."

D'Annunzio is a night worker, and plies his pen when the rest of mankind are asleep. He works throughout the night, generally retiring to bed at about nine in the morning.

Disraeli always worked in evening dress—a habit that was not, perhaps, without influence on his elaborate and highly-artificial style. That industrious scribe, the late Dean Farrar, used to write his books standing. Maurice Jokal always used violet ink, and when unable to obtain it he found the flow of thoughts considerably impeded.

Upon the writing-table of Henrik Ibsen there was a small tray containing a number of grotesque figures, among which were a diminutive devil, some cats, and some rabbits. "I never write a single line of any of my dramas," admitted Ibsen, "without having that tray and its occupants before me on my table. I could not write without them."

Of James Thomson, the poet of "The Seasons," it was said that "he would often be heard walking in his library till near morning, humming over in his way what he was to correct and write out next day." Thomson was in the habit of seeking inspiration in long walks in the open air, during which his thoughts would arrange themselves in ordered sequence.

Browning, too, did much of his work in the open air, and it was while walking in Dulwich Wood that the thought occurred to him which was afterwards to find artistic expression in "Pippa Passes." The title of Thackeray's great novel, "Vanity Fair," on the other hand, suddenly flashed into its author's mind one night when he was lying in bed at the Old Ship at Brighton.

If the Sun Went Out.

Wonderful things are constantly happening in the universe; but what if the sun were suddenly extinguished?

The earth and every living thing upon it would be doomed in a very short time.

Why, at the end of the first week the frost would have destroyed all but the hardiest of the vegetation.

Our lakes and rivers would freeze solid. Even our oceans would be soon turned to ice. And the ice, by its greater bulk compared with water, would encroach upon and overwhelm the land, until only the tops of the highest mountains would show above the glacial sea. These mountain summits would themselves be covered with deep snow, or ice crystals, which had fallen because of the water vapor in the atmosphere having frozen.

Mankind would be destroyed to the uttermost ends of the globe. Neither would the very lowest forms of organized creatures escape the icy death.

The stars would be always looking down upon our derelict earth, for it would be one long night. No bright-shining moon would ever rise, for our satellite borrows its splendor from the sun.

The earth would not stop turning round on its axis, nor would it cease to revolve about the dead sun.

There are believed to be many dead suns in the universe, all traveling through space at a great speed.

Would our dead sun be doomed to an eternal night? Perhaps not. Perhaps, in the course of its wanderings—at a speed of about twelve miles a second—it might meet with another celestial derelict.

If so, then appalling would be the impact. Its light and heat would be revived. The sun, in brief, would be born again.

And what of that icy tomb, the earth? It would melt as a flake of snow in the fire.

Vessel Made of Corrugated Plates.

Using ships' bulkheads to build an entire vessel seems an extraordinary proceeding, says Popular Mechanics Magazine; yet it has just been successfully accomplished in England, where a 6,000-ton tanker was so constructed with nearly 400 tons less material than would ordinarily be used. The secret lies in the curious form of the newly-invented bulkhead plates, which are made with vertical corrugations, so strengthening them that the usual horizontal and vertical stiffening brackets are dispensed with. The oil ship built in this manner, with its straight lines and corrugated sides, naturally offers a most peculiar appearance. It is to be used as a floating reservoir at Las Palmas, Canary Islands, for supplying oil-burning ships with fuel, and is equipped with pumps that have a capacity of 200 tons an hour.
