and took Constance to the entrance. A few minutes afterward Rawson Fenton appeared with the marchioness. "I—I am so sorry!" panted Constance, as she leaned back in the corner of the carriage.

"My dear, why didn't you say you were tired before," murmured the old lady, sympathetically. "I should have been glad to go. Good-night, Mr. Fenton."

Constance saw his pale face as he stood with uplifted hat, and with a shudder drew her cloak round her so that it almost hid her eyes.

"Let her alone, mother," said the marchioness in a low and anxious voice. "she is tired out. It has been a trying evening for her."

She lay back in silence, and after a time his hand stole toward hers, and took it and held it firmly. Her fingers closed on it with a firm little grasp. The carriage sped on its way, and stopping forward to arrange her cloak more closely round her, he touched her arm.

She opened her eyes and looked forward, nearer and still nearer to him, and suddenly she had slipped to her knees and was resting against his breast.

"Wolfe, Wolfe," she murmured, her breath coming in painful gasps, "you will love me always, Wolfe? Whatever happens—whatever they say, you will love me?" and she clung to him.

"Constance, Constance, my darling!" he murmured, gathering her to him and kissing her. "What has come to you tonight? What has frightened you? Love you I will, yes, against all the world, and till death."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Constance closed to and fro that night, sleepless, restless, and consumed by a fever of apprehension. The pale face of Rawson Fenton, with its sinister smile, so cold and confident, haunted her.

Over and over again, as the slow hours dragged themselves along, she asked herself the question: Why had she not told Wolfe the story of her life in its entirety? If she had done so, the presence of this man, who pursued and persecuted her with such relentless persistence, would have been a matter of indifference to her.

Could she tell him, even now? She resolved to do so twenty times in the hour, but her resolve always broke away from her.

Lady Ruth's words, spoken with such seeming carelessness, rose vividly before her. She had spoken of the marchioness's hot temper and easily aroused jealousy. Constance remembered too, all too distinctly, the sinister remark of Rawson Fenton. How could she explain satisfactorily her reputation of him as a stranger—him with whom she had spent weeks and months in an Australian cabin—him who had twice proposed marriage to her?

Had he any object in coming to the castle other than the political one? He had vowed that he would never speak to her of love again unless she made the first advances; was there any truth in his assertion—promise, as it might be called?

The mistrusted man, and did not believe a word he said, and yet surely, now that she was the promised wife of another man, he would cease to persecute her. He must see how hopeless and utterly futile his further pursuit of her must be.

These and a hundred other thoughts tortured her through the few remaining hours of the night, and the gray dawn found her still awake and haunted by a vague presentiment of coming ill.

Ah, if she had but only summoned up sufficient courage, when Rawson Fenton came up to her in the ball-room, to say "I know this gentleman very well," and had she, on their journey home, told Wolfe the whole story, what peace she would have secured for herself!

A little after nine a knock came to the door, and Arol's voice was heard calling to her.

Constance, who had been pacing up and down in her dressing-room for the last hour, let him in.

"Uncle Wolfe said I wasn't to disturb you, Constance, dear," he said, as she put her arms round him and kissed him. "He said you was very, very tired last night, and the house was to be kept very quiet so as not to wake you. So I waited outside until I heard you pull up the blinds, and here's Mary with some breakfast, and grandma says you are to have a good long sleep before you come down."

Mary came in with a dainty little breakfast on a tray, and was deeply concerned that her beloved young mistress should have got up thus early.

"The marchioness's love, miss, and he hopes you will not get up for some hours yet; and these flowers are for you. He cut them himself, miss."

Constance could scarcely speak as she pressed the blossoms to her lips. Her loving words and thoughtfulness sharpened the sting of her self-reproach.

"Uncle Wolfe's been telling me all about the ball," said Arol, curling himself up on one of the chairs. "He says you were the most beautiful girl in the room, Constance, and I'm sure that's true. I wish I had been there. How soon do you think I shall be grown up enough to go to a ball?"

"Not for a long while yet, dear," she replied, burying her hand in his long curls, earnestly, and finding comfort and consolation in his presence. "Why are you in such a hurry?"

"Because I want to dance with you, Constance, dear," he answered, with perfect gravity. "Uncle Wolfe says all the gentlemen wanted to dance with you last night. Did you enjoy yourself very much, dear? I hope you didn't quite forget me!"

"That I did not," replied Constance, with absolute truth. "Indeed, in the middle of one of the dances, I was thinking that if it should be fine to-day you and I would take the ponies for a drive."

He sprang up instantly.

"Why, it's a lovely day, Constance, dear!" he exclaimed, delightedly.

"Very well, then," she said. "You go and order the ponies, and we will start directly."

He ran off gleefully, and Constance finished dressing.

Out in the open air, during the drive she might perhaps arrive at some determination, might see some road out of the difficulty which surrounded her.

On his way down the stairs, two steps at a time, Arol ran into the marchioness.

"Halloo!" he said, catching him and swinging him on to his shoulder.

"Where are you going at this break-neck pace, young man?"

"Going to order the ponies, Constance and I are going for a drive."

"Oh, indeed!" said the marchioness. "Well, you are a favored individual! Go and tell Constance that if she will drive over to Mrs. Marsh's I will meet you there, say at twelve o'clock, I am going to ride over to Waverton on business, and will take Mrs. Marsh's as I come back."

It was almost a relief to Constance, much as she longed to see him and get his morning caress, to find that the marchioness had started before she came down.

"You look rather pale, this morning," said the marchioness. "You are not ill, my dear?" she added, with tender anxiety.

"No," replied Constance, with a wan little smile, "only a little tired still."

"The drive will do you good, dear," said the old lady. "Wolfe will meet you at Mrs. Marsh's; he has been very anxious about you."

Constance's pale face flushed, and she averted her eyes.

"I—I am sorry I distressed him last night," she murmured, wistfully.

"My dear, he quite understood, and was full of sympathy. The unusual excitement was too much for you. He has been reproaching himself all the morning for not bringing you home earlier."

Every loving word seemed to stab Constance, and as she got into the phaeton, her heart ached with the longing to throw herself upon the marchioness's bosom and tell her all.

She drove through the park and along the narrow lanes, all radiant in their autumn glory, with Arol chattering like a magpie at her side; but the fresh air and the brightness of the morning brought her no peace. Ever before her there loomed the coming ordeal of the evening, when she would have to meet Rawson Fenton, to speak to and listen to him, and play her part of deception and concealment.

They turned on to the moor, and the ponies were going along at a smart pace, reeling in the autumn breeze that blew over the broad plain, when suddenly Arol exclaimed:

"Look, Constance! What's that?"

Constance looked in the direction to which he pointed, and saw a tall, thin figure standing up distinctly against the sky. It was a gentleman in shooting attire, and carrying a gun. She recognized Rawson Fenton, far off as he was, and her heart sank.

"He is coming across the moor to ward us," said Arol; "I wonder who it is?"

Constance checked the ponies almost instinctively, and her face grew pale.

"Why, you are not afraid of him, whoever it is, are you, Constance, dear?" Arol asked.

"The question was more significant than he imagined."

"Yes, she was afraid of him, and she knew it; but she must crush all fear out of her heart. She touched the ponies with her whip, and they bounded forward.

She saw him walking toward the road on ahead, and knew that he would intercept her, for the road wound round in his direction, and she gradually schooled herself into composure, resolving that she would simply bow and pass on without stopping.

But as the carriage reached the spot where he was standing leaning on his gun, and evidently waiting for her approach, and she bowed coldly, he raised his hat and stepped into the road.

It would have been impossible to have driven on without attracting Arol's attention to her want of courtesy, and with tightly set lips she pulled the ponies up.

He came to the side of the carriage with a smile on his face, which was as pale as if he had spent the morning at his writing-table instead of on the glorious moor.

"Good-morning, Miss Grahame," he said; "I could not lose the opportunity of asking you how you were after last night's disipation, and he held out his hand.

Constance just touched it with her gloved fingers, and murmured a conventional response, looking straight before her.

"Is this Lord Lancashire, of whom I have heard so much?" he said, smiling at Arol, whose large eyes took stock of him with frank seriousness.

"Yes," replied Constance, "this is Lord Lancashire, and his face flushed with resentment at his persistence.

"This is Mr. Rawson Fenton, Arol," she said, reluctantly.

Arol took off his hat and held out his hand, but with no very great promptitude.

"The duchess has been telling me of his illness. He looks quite recovered, thanks to you, Miss Grahame."

"He is quite well," said Constance mechanically.

"I hope you have had good sport, Mr. Fenton," said Arol, with all the Brake-speare gravity, and anxious to be polite to a friend of "dear Constance's."

"Thank you, yes, Lord Lancashire," he replied, "very good sport."

"What have you shot?" asked Arol.

"Some plover and a rabbit or two. Would you like to see them? I left them in the hollow tire; I'll go and fetch them."

"Oh, no, please don't trouble; I'll go," said Arol, eagerly; and he jumped out and ran to the spot to which Rawson Fenton had pointed.

Immediately he had got out of ear-shot Rawson Fenton drew closer to the phaeton, and laying his hand on it, bent forward.

"I thought it likely that I might see you this morning," he said in a low voice.

The color mounted to Constance's brow, and she flushed an indignant glance upon him. Did he dare to think that she had driven out on the chance and hope of seeing him?

"I wished to see," he said, fully comprehending the flush and her look.

"Last night it seemed to me that you were rather unwilling that I should be come a guest of Lord Brake-speare."

She remained silent.

"Ah! I was right," he said, his eyes fixed on hers keenly. "Well, I was desirous of telling you that you need have no such reluctance; to remind you that by no word or deed of mine will any one learn that we were anything more than strangers till last night, I think you can trust me, Miss Grahame."

Constance's heart beat.

"I have nothing to trust to you," she said, coldly. "There shall be no such word between us, Mr. Fenton."

"I will not insist upon a word," he said, with a sinister smile. "All I wanted to say was, that you need be under no apprehension because I happen to spend a few hours under the same roof with you. That is all. I am a man of my word, as you know, and what I said last night I shall stand by. Don't let my presence make you unhappy, or even uneasy."

Constance set her lips tightly.

"Will you please tell Lord Lancashire that I am waiting, Mr. Fenton?" she said.

"He is coming," he answered, glancing over his shoulder, "and I have said all I wanted to say."

Continued Next Week.

He Preached on Business.

Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with my own?—Matthew xx, 15.

Taking this for his text, Rev. J. M. Whitson, of New York, says the question nowadays is: Is it not lawful for me to drive a rival out of business by selling below cost longer than he can stand it, haven't I a right to do it? Or if I control the sale of a necessary article haven't I a right to screw the price up as high as I like? But society is nowadays working more and more closely to the principle which Roman lawyers laid down before the dark ages: "So use what is yours as not to injure another's." Business is not a charity. But it is justice. A man's business is his own, but his hammer to crush a competitor, or his lance to pierce a customer. We shall probably see this principle wrought further into statute law than it has been.

All private business is a sort of public trust—that is, it is for the public benefit, including, of course, the benefit of the man who carries it on. It is to be worked for all it is worth, not to his alone, but also to those whose wants he supplies. By supplying their wants he makes his living. The more and the better he does it, the more he makes by it. But it is he to think only of what he thus gets, and not equally of what he thus gives? This, then, is his trust, his public trust; to care as much for public as for private benefit. Many business men now act on this social theory. Conscience and a sense of personal honor, stimulated by the public approval of their example, may be relied on to bring it ultimately into general adoption.

There is going to be a wonderful eclipse of the moon next week. Well, keep quiet about it. If my wife finds it out she will insist on having a new dress for the occasion.

Thousands Die Each Year From Liver Trouble.

PAIN'S CLEBERY COMPOUND PROMPTLY CURES THIS INSIDIOUS DISEASE.

The liver is the great housekeeper of our health. On its right and proper action depends our enjoyment of life. One of the simplest indications of a disordered and diseased liver is a nasty tongue—furred and coated. The coated tongue is proof positive that your liver is not working well. Other symptoms are as follows: nausea, taste in the mouth, pains under the shoulder blades, and in the region of the kidneys. The mental symptoms of liver trouble are often far worse than the bodily ills. Sufferers experience mental anguish, gloomy forebodings, melancholy, and a general feeling of disgust with life. When these bodily and mental troubles are experienced, your liver tells you it wants help. If help is not given at once sickness and death must result. Thousands have found Paine's Celery Compound a sure and certain cure for liver disease. It always acts promptly on the great nervous system and restores the healthy and natural action that the liver must have at all times. Paine's Celery Compound drives from the system all the poisons that have accumulated, and the sick one regains his old-time vim and energy; the muscles and tissues are made to hard and firm, the skin clear and fresh, so that perfect health is the result. Read this letter written by Mrs. George Durant, of Elms, Ont: No stronger proof can be given of the virtues and powers of Paine's Celery Compound in the cure of liver troubles: "For many years I have been a sufferer from liver trouble, and have doctored with several physicians, but only found relief for a very short time. My husband advised me to try Paine's Celery Compound. I did so, and found so much relief from the first bottle that I continued, and I am now using the third bottle. Your Compound has done more for me than any physician. For months before using the Compound I never had one night of sound sleep; but now I can go to bed and sleep soundly and naturally, and feel like a new creature in the morning."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 3, 1896.

Provincial Examinations.

Provincial examinations for teachers' licenses will be held next week. For the first time Wolfville has been made a station. In many ways our town is particularly well suited as a place for holding these examinations. Its pleasant location, fine scenery, cool breezes and general educational air will have the effect of making it popular. Following is a list of those who will write for certificates next week, with the grades applied for:

GRADE B. Mary A. Brison, Lizzie McHenry, Cranford, Archibald D. Murphy, Herbert H. Currie, Herbert B. Davison, Wolfville; Clement Leslie Vaughn, Grand Pre.

GRADE C. Minnie Vaughn-Crandall, Temple Piers, Arthur H. Taylor, Gertrude V. Roscoe, Mable S. Caldwell, Eva M. Cleveland, George E. Heales, Alice Lyman, Maggie Moore, Wolfville; Mattie Parsons, Horton Landing; Renford L. Martin, Burpee A. Caldwell, Gaspereau; Estie Inez Chute, Berwick.

GRADE D. Kishoro Evelyn Hilsley, Port Williams; Lottie DeWolfe Chute, Berwick; Mabel M. Simon, Wolfville; Minnie M. Hayes, Berta M. Cleveland, Gordon Bill, Fabel Fuller, Avarad R. Cobson, Wilford Strong, Theodore Boggs, Lillie M. Miner, Mary E. Burgess, Blanche Lyman, Wolfville; Anna Parsons, Horton Landing; Ethel Fuller, Cora Walsh, Avenport; Clara Alena McGee, Ernest C. B. McGee, Town Plot.

Sir S. L. Tilley.

The death of Sir Leonard Tilley, which occurred on Thursday of last week, was heard with widespread regret throughout the Dominion. He was one of the foremost and most conscientious men of his day. He filled many positions of trust and was twice Lieutenant-Governor of his native province.

Samuel Leonard Tilley was born at Gagetown, Queens county, N. B., May 18, 1818, and received his education at the Gagetown Grammar school. His father, Thomas M. Tilley, and Elizabeth, his wife, were loyalists, who settled at Farnmouth, now St. John, in 1783. Samuel Tilley's grant is numbered 1201, and here it is said he built the first house where St. John now stands. He was a descendant of John Tilley, one of the Pilgrim Fathers, who came over in the Mayflower and landed on Plymouth Rock in 1620.

In the summer of 1826 Col. Peters and Sir Howard Douglas, governor of New Brunswick, were driving through the village of Gagetown. Meeting a bright boy just returning from school, whose name was Leonard Tilley and from whom they made some enquiries, Sir Howard placed into his hand a Spanish V. V. shilling, little knowing that fifty years afterwards that same bright boy would become, like himself, governor of the province.

Dominion Day Sports at Windsor.

The Sports held at Windsor on Dominion Day were fairly well attended, a number going from Wolfville. The races as a rule were not of a highly exciting character. The half mile and mile bicycle races were won by Tommy Neas, of Lunenburg, with Ralph Smith, of Windsor, a close second in each. These men met again in the two-mile race, and the two-mile lap race, both of which were won by Smith. In the three-mile handicap Smith was placed on second, and Conrad, of Lunenburg, given 25 yards, with Benjamin Caldwell and Beedler starting from the 250 yards mark. The handicap proved too much for Smith, Conrad winning with Caldwell second. The other races were tame and uninteresting. The trap shooting competition was won by Mr. D. R. Munro, of this town, who made a score of 16 out of a possible 20. E. F. Bassett, of Kentville, coming second with a score of 9. The first prize was a handsome gold medal. In the evening a promenade concert was held, and a glittering affair it was. A few dozen people were on the grand stand, while others wandered aimlessly about the ground. The attractions were not of great variety. A few stately selections by the 68th Batt. Band, and some fire-crackers comprised the programme. It reminded one more of a funeral procession than a promenade concert.

Central Baptist Association.

This body covering the counties of Kings, Halifax, Hants and Lunenburg, and embracing within its limits 54 churches, with about 47 pastors, held its annual session with the second Horton church at Gaspereau, beginning on Friday the 26th and closing on Monday 27th. Rev. D. H. Simpson, of Berwick, was chosen moderator and Rev. H. A. Forter, clerk. The letters from the churches were somewhat encouraging though the additions by baptism were fewer than last year, being about 440. The churches of this association own 92 houses of worship valued at $226,000 with sittings for 23,320 persons.

Last year this association raised $36,000 for religious purposes. Saturday morning was devoted to general business, and in the afternoon an educational meeting of much interest was held, addressed by Rev. T. Trotter, E. W. Sawyer, Rev. S. B. Kempton, Leah Wallace, Prof. Higgins, Prof. Jones and others. A special feature of this meeting was a speech from J. W. Bass, one of the founders and a life-long friend of the institutions.

Wheeler's Trial and Conviction.

The trial of Peter Wheeler, on the charge of the atrocious murder of Annie Kempton, at Bear River, in January last, began before Judge Townshend, on Friday, the 26th. The trial was heard at Kentville, a change of venue having been obtained on the ground that the feeling against the accused was very strong in his own county. C. S. Harrington, H. H. Wickwire and A. J. S. Copp appeared for the crown, while the interests of the defendant were looked after by H. D. Ruggles and T. R. Robertson. The jury consisted of: David North, (foreman) N. W. Eaton, Chas. MacGregor, Jos. Brown, Robert Hamilton, Chas. H. Newcomb, Wm. Hardwick, J. C. Healy, Geo. Webster, Jas. Donaldson, Wm. Mortimer and Mansfield Nichols.

H. H. Wickwire opened the case giving briefly the evidence which would be adduced on behalf of the crown. Twenty-eight witnesses were examined, all of which were called by the crown. The evidence given which was much the same as that heard on the preliminary examination, was completed on Monday. Judge Townshend ruled, that since Mr. Harrington was the appointee of the court he should address the jury first.

Mr. Harrington made a very convincing address of two hours' duration, in which he carefully reviewed the testimony given. He referred to Wheeler's falsehood before the trial, and contended that the time of the murder was about six o'clock, that the victim had partially revived and struck a light, and that on Wheeler's return the awful murder had been completed. That the prisoner had entered the house to commit a lesser crime but failing in this, murder was committed to hide his crime.

Mr. Ruggles followed in a very clever appeal for the prisoner. He attempted to show that all the circumstances of the case might be explained consistent with Wheeler's innocence. He cited evidence to prove that the crime was committed later in the night. He claimed that his client's falsehood was natural under the circumstances.

On the court resuming on Tuesday afternoon his Lordship made a very exhaustive and learned charge to the jury which was on the whole very much against the prisoner. The jury retired for deliberation at 4.15 p. m. and remained out two hours. Throughout the trial the prisoner maintained an expression of calm indifference, but after the jury had left the room he became somewhat nervous and asked permission of his Lordship to speak. On the advice of his counsel, Mr. Robertson, however, he made no statement. A few minutes before the jury returned he leaned over the bar and with a face of deathly pallor asked one of the spectators if an appeal would be allowed him, however, the jury gave their verdict of "guilty," the prisoner although very pale never moved a muscle. After the mention of Mr. Harrington for a judgment the clerk asked the prisoner if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed on him. But Wheeler could not grasp the meaning of the question. His counsel explained it to him but he had nothing to say.

In passing sentence the judge informed Wheeler that he heartily concurred with the finding of the jury; that he (Wheeler) had a most fair and impartial trial; that like most murderers, the very things he had done to throw off suspicion was what had convicted him. He warned him to look for no withdrawal of the sentence which he was about to pass, but to prepare himself for the world beyond.

He then directed that he be taken forthwith to Kentville jail, from thence to Digby jail, there to remain till the 8th of September, when he was to be hanged by the neck till dead. The prisoner then arose and said: "I want to tell this community that I hope the man that done it will be found before the time, but I'm prepared I'd just as live die this minute." These words were said in a firm, clear voice to the breathless and awestruck crowd. On returning to his cell Wheeler advanced towards the corner from which a vial of poison had been taken a few days before by the jailor. Learning that it was gone he became greatly agitated. He had probably meditated suicide. He had carefully watched, night and day, before dismissing the jurors the Judge complicated them highly on their conduct during the trial.

In newspaper life there is no fact that strikes an editor more forcibly than that there are lots of super-sensitive egotists in this old manacle planet of ours. These individuals are always appropriating every allusion as a covert thrust at them individually, and seem to think that they are the target at which every ball is sped. Sometimes we wonder if every time a bell rings they do not imagine they are meeting-houses, or that every time an organ plays they fancy themselves to be the quadrumme attachment. The conception in either case would be no more conceited.

The Fourth of July number of The Youth's Companion is at hand. Exciting adventures and narrow escapes on land and sea—capturing a grizzly in the Rockies, an effort to collapse all previous explosions in the combination of a balloon with dynamite cartridges, the rival celebrations of two military companies, etc.—make this number of The Companion a veritable canon-cracker among weekly papers.

The Butter Industry.

The butter industry has become revolutionized in recent years in Canada by the establishment of creameries throughout the Dominion. This is more the case in the export of butter than in home consumption. It is pleasing to find that Canada is taking first place in this industry in the European markets, particularly in quality. A recent report of the British board of agriculture deals with the samples of imported butter analyzed under the British board. It is gratifying to know that in the analysis, Canadian butter took a high place, not a single sample being found to be adulterated. The total number of samples analyzed was 995, representing the products of twelve different countries. The countries in whose products adulterated specimens were found were:—Belgium, 132 samples, 8 adulterated; Denmark, 132 samples, 8 adulterated; Germany, 164 samples, 48 adulterated; Holland, 250 samples, 66 adulterated; Norway and Sweden, 109 samples, 2 adulterated. The countries contributing samples among which no adulterated specimens were found were:—Canada 39; Argentina, 4; Austria, 57; France, 63; New Zealand, 21; United States, 63. The noteworthy features of the report are the tremendous portion of the adulterated specimens—about 28 per cent. from Germany, the large proportion numbering over 25 per cent. contributed from Holland, and the fact that Denmark, by far the largest contributor of foreign butter products to the British markets, and enjoying hitherto an almost irreproachable reputation in the butter market, should have contributed in a total of 182 specimens, 8 adulterated, or nearly 5 per cent. Russia was also responsible for 10 per cent. of adulterated samples.

These figures should be gratifying and also encouraging to Canadian butter markets. Holland a century long noted for its dairy products, and even Denmark, supplied adulterated butter, so that further shipments from these countries may well be viewed with suspicion. Extra care and scientific methods will help Canadian dairymen to capture a large part of the trade of their rivals, especially as Canadian butter is so pure, that the British officials could not find a single adulterated specimen in 39 samples examined. The result of the analysis of United States butter was also satisfactory, showing that the dairymen of that country have taken to heart the lesson that have from time to time been inculcated on the subject of purity in butter. For some time the United States have been among the principal exporters of oleomargarine or as it is more commonly termed "imitation butter." During the last year they exported more than ten million pounds of this stuff as compared with four million pounds the year before. The export of butter, however, was less than six million pounds, compared with nearly twelve million pounds the year before, a decrease of nearly one half. The Merchandise Marks Act of England has done a great deal towards preventing the substitution of oleo for the general product in Great Britain but more remains to be done, and similar enactments would be of use in Canada, the West Indies and South America.

Canadian exporters have nothing to fear from the spurious product, provided all ways that the present high standard of excellence is maintained in Canadian butter, and the extra care is used in packing and shipping.

DEATH OF DR. A. H. HARRIS.

Dr. Harris died at his home in this city Wednesday evening after three weeks' sickness, although he has been in bad health for the past year with heart and lung trouble. The Doctor is well and favorably known in this vicinity and the entire community join in extending sympathy to the bereaved relatives. The funeral took place at the German Presbyterian church this morning at 8 o'clock, and was largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. Stannett of the Baptist church at Bladen, and Rev. Krebs, of the German Presbyterian church, after which the remains were taken to the Harmony cemetery for interment.

Albion Hathaway Harris was born at Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, Canada, on the 6th day of April, 1846, where he lived with his parents until 1869, when he came to New York. He was a graduate of Bellevue Medical College, of New York, having graduated in 1874, and has since that time followed the practice of medicine. On May 23, 1881, he was married to Miss Anna McCloud, of Dodge City, Kansas, and to them eight children have been born, two of that number having died. In 1888 they moved to Campbell, Nebraska. He died June 17, 1896, aged 48 years, 2 months and 12 days. His mother, five brothers, six sisters, wife, five daughters and one son survive him. —The Campbell (Nebraska) Press.

[The deceased was a brother of Mr. R. E. Harris, of Wolfville. The news of his death was heard with sincere regret by many old friends in this county.—Ed.]

Simple Precautions Insure Complete Victory.

A Child Can Use Diamond Dyes Successfully.

When using the world-famed Diamond Dyes for home dyeing, use fresh, clean, soft water; hard and impure water will mar the beauty of the shades. Woods, earthen, or enameled vessels are best. All articles before dyeing should be well washed with soap and water to remove dirt, grease, and rinsed in hot water, and dyed while damp. When any particular shade is wanted, the dye should be tested by dyeing a small piece of the stuff.

If these few precautions are observed you will be able to produce richer, brighter and more lasting colors than any steam dyeing house can give you. Be sure your dealer gives you the Diamond Dyes; they are the only guaranteed dyes in the world.

Remember the sale at Carver's, Windsor, N. S., is only advertised for three weeks. Secure what you want in Dry Goods, Clothing, Carpets, &c., and save dollars.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 3, 1896.

Local and Provincial.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be administered in St. Andrew's church on Sunday next, at the morning service.

Dominion Day passed off quietly in Wolfville. It was pretty generally observed as a holiday, and many people were out of town.

"Maple Leaf" Division, of Greenwich, held its annual picnic at Peregau on Wednesday. There was a good attendance and an enjoyable time was had.

Mr. I. E. Duncanson, of this town, has disposed of his finely-bred Morgan mare, "Lady Maid," to "A.H." Ellis, the well-known commercial traveller, of St. John, N. B.

We understand that Mrs. R. M. Rand, of Canard, has purchased the lot on Linden avenue, just south of the residence of Mrs. Murray, and will shortly commence the erection of a dwelling thereon.

The opening at Evangeline Beach for the season took place on Dominion Day. A goodly number were present, Mr. Balcom's express with four horses taking down a full load. The beach promises to be more popular this summer than last. Tide-tables and full particulars will appear in next issue.

The ladies of the Presbyterian congregation, Lower Horton, intend holding a Strawberry Festival and Fancy Sale in Evangeline Hall, Lower Horton, on Thursday evening, July 9th. Admission, 10 cents; Tea, 25 cents. Strawberries, 10 cents. Proceeds in aid of church debt. Doors open at 5 p. m.

MONEY TO LEND ON MORTGAGE—Apply to E. S. Crawley, Solicitor, Wolfville, N. S.

The Yarmouth Steamship Company's steamers now make four trips weekly, commencing on Monday last. Leaving Boston every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday; and leaving Yarmouth Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday after arrival of Express trains. Both the Yarmouth and Boston have had stateroom accommodation added. They are now in splendid order, and make their trips with wonderful regularity.

The summer time-table of the Dominion Atlantic railway goes into effect to-day. The morning train from Kentville reaches here at 6.25 and the express from Halifax at 7.40 a. m. The express from Yarmouth reaches here at 3.15 and the express from Halifax at 7.30 p. m. all local time. The post-office authorities request the ACADIAN to draw attention to these changes and to state that mails close twenty minutes before arrival of trains.

The American House has this week received a coat of paint, which brightens up its appearance very much. The office has been newly papered, and fitted with a handsome oak mantle—built by Mr. J. M. Toye. A new stair post of artistic design, also the work of Mr. Toye, has been placed in position, and various other improvements made. This hotel has always been popular with the tourists, but this season Mr. Duncanson intends to make it especially attractive, both from an æsthetic and epicurean standpoint.

Men's wear, such as Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, Neck Ties, Clothing, Hats & Caps, &c., &c., all included in Carver's big Discount Sale.

A Study in Entomology.

My young friend, lately returned from abroad, says he saw the ink-bottle that Luther threw at the devil. I asked him if he had seen the devil Luther throw the ink bottle at, and he scorned me, but I impaled him on my lead pencil and sent him like a new bug for an illustration.

Keep Minards Liniment in the

You do not go out often to dinner, Mrs. Waddington? No, I don't think the best dinner on earth is sufficient compensation for making one's self greenish for three hours at a stretch.

Elephant—Yes, I'd like to keep up with the times; but I can't afford it. It would bankrupt me to buy even a spring overcoat. Giraffe—But think what it would cost me to wear standing collars.

Young bride (pouting)—Here we have only been married two days, Clarence, and you're scolding me already!

Daughter—This plan is really my very own, isn't it, pa? Pa—Yes, my dear, and when I marry I can take it with me, can I? Certainly my child.

But don't tell any one; it might spoil your chances.

I say, Bobby, did you hear your sister say if she enjoyed the exhibition we gave last night?

As a general rule, and long since

I was cured of Bronchitis and Asthma
by MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Lady (after about twenty-five minutes'

examination)—Now, tell me, constantly, what is that strap under your chin for?

Scrap for Odd Moments

A girl of uncertain age is reported to have said that "where singleness is bliss, tis folly to be wiser."

Minards Liniment Lumberman's

Friend.
Teacher—Tommy, what is meant by nutritious food?
Tommy—Something to eat that ain't got no taste to it.

Conductor—Look here, my man;

what under heaven are you rigging the bell at both ends of the car for?

Scorer—Thirty dollars, eh? That's nothing. I had a bicycle cult that cost a thousand dollars.

Mr. Winks (looking over the paper)

—Cheap, Drug & Co. are selling all sorts of patent medicines at half-price.

Old Mrs. Darnly is a pattern of house hold economy. She says she made a pair of socks last fifteen years by only knitting new feet to them every winter, and new legs to them every other autumn.

For a family medicine, Ayer's Sugar

Pills are unrivalled. They eradicate disease.

When the hair has fallen out, leaving the head bald, if the scalp is not shiny, there is a chance of regaining the hair by using Hall's Hair Restorer.

As a general rule, and long since

I was cured of Bronchitis and Asthma
by MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Lady (after about twenty-five minutes'

examination)—Now, tell me, constantly, what is that strap under your chin for?

An Advertising Expert.

"The Chicago Post describes an old farmer who was leaning over a pine table, lazily making pencil marks on a sheet of white paper." "It's deemed hard work," advertisements, Maria, he said, at last, "when you don't know 'em' how."

"Who's talkin' of fishin'?" he demanded, "and fishin' is a right, 's' you've got to be in something about the lawn, too."

"I'm puzed you've got in somebod' about 'hand-press' on a board an' stick it up in the old hay-bale from the road. Then I said: 'Fish within a mile!'"

All was dark in the basement. Lenny against the wall stood a bicycle. Presently the sound of conversation was distinctly audible.
