Stella Mordant; —OR— The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER XXI.

She went straight to her room, and when her maid had undressed her and brushed her hair, Mary took out Edward's letter. She pressed it to her lips before reading it, and she read it slowly, for it was too precious to hurry over.

It was a cheerful letter—if Edward Bryan had been writing on the eve of execution he would not have made any man; but it told no story of success, and was not by any means sanguine.

"There are no openings here," he said. "The towns are too crowded, and the opportunities of making a fortune are not so numerous as they were. Every man one meets is on the same lay—excuse the slang, mother—and there aren't fortunes enough in this part to go round. So I am going to make a move. I have bought a good horse, and am going into the wilds on a kind of solitary prospecting. Don't be alarmed if you don't hear from me as regularly as you have done; there are no post-offices where I am going, and I may not be able to send you a letter for some time. When you see Mary next, give her this letter, and—no, I mustn't send her my love. But she knows—she knows! And when you write, tell me everything you can about her. The smallest, most trifling detail—how she looks, what she wears, where she is going, what she is doing—will be precious to me. I can see her now—but when do I not see her?"

Mary's face flushed, and her heart throbbled with love as she read these simple but eloquent words. Marry Ralph the earl! She almost laughed at the idea. There was only one man in the world she would marry, and if she could not marry him, then she would die an old maid!

Cornless Feet

Are Very Common Now

A few years ago they were not. People pared corns and kept them. Or they used an inefficient treatment.

Then the Blue-jay plaster was invented. That ended corn pain instantly for everyone who used it. But it also gently undermined the corn, so in two days it all came out. And this without one bit of pain or soreness.

One told another about it, until millions came to use it. Now those people never keep a corn. As soon as one appears, they remove it.

We urge you to do that. Prove Blue-jay on one corn. If you hesitate, let us send you samples free. If the pain does stop—if the corn does go—think what it means to you. It means a lifetime without corns. Your own friends, by the dozens, probably, know that this is so.

If only Edward could have heard her, seen the divine light in her eyes as she murmured this vow, how light his heart would have been as he started off for his solitary expedition—the expedition on which he was fated to meet Rath, the hermit of the island.

For some time Ralph the earl kept away from Hatherley. It would be well to give Lady Mary time not only to recover from the shock of his sudden proposal, but to think it over. And his time was fully occupied; invitations poured in upon him, and he was booked for a number of dinners and entertainments, for he was now in great request. The magnificent affair at the Hall had raised him in the estimation of the county people, and they were now quite ready to welcome him as one of themselves. Here and there was a man or woman who did not quite "take to" the new earl; but they could give no reason for their distrust, and the majority voted him a good fellow, and were loud in their praises.

The sporting section grew louder still when the hunting season commenced, and Ralph, having subscribed most liberally to the hounds, put in an appearance at the first meet on a good-looking but particularly safe horse. He was not in the first flight, it is true, but he did fairly well, and carried himself modestly. He had expected and hoped to see Mary at the meet, but she was not out that day.

"Mary has been troubled with a headache lately," said Lord Hatherley, as he rode beside Ralph; "and I couldn't persuade her to ride to-day, though I'm sure it would have done her good. Oh, no; it's nothing of any moment," he said, in answer to Ralph's enquiry. "That's a good horse you've got there, Ratton!"

"Yes, and not dear, I think," remarked Ralph. "I gave five hundred for him."

Lord Hatherley whistled softly. "It's a long price; but money's of no object to you, my dear fellow."

"Oh, I don't know!" responded Ralph, modestly. "Speaking of money, did you buy those New Golcondas? I see they have risen."

Lord Hatherley nodded.

"Yes, I did; and it's lucky for me that they have gone up, for I bought rather heavily, more heavily than I should like Bulpit to know. He is rather set against mining shares."

"Oh, Bulpit is too cautious!" said Ralph, with a laugh. "He's as nervous as an old woman. I've bought heavily, too, and I shall secure some more, I think. The financial papers say they are going to double their value."

Lord Hatherley looked at his eager listener. "Really? You think so?" he said. The hounds found at that moment and the two men had to ride forward so that no more was said; but as he rode—straight as usual—Lord Hatherley pondered Ralph's words. In buying of stock as well as betting on horses, even the man who is sensible enough as regards other matters, is always tempted to place reliance on a "tip," however ill qualified to give an opinion the tipster may be.

And that night he wrote to his broker in London instructing him to buy more New Golcondas.

Mary, yielding to her father's persuasion, was present at the following meet. Ralph saw her as she rode up to the cover, and his heart beat and his face flushed; but he did not hasten to join the men who made a circle round her; an admiring circle, for Mary was one of those girls who look their best in riding habit and ball dress, and she sat her thoroughbred as a woman does who has ridden since she was a mite of a child.

She was looking rather pale, and a little graver and sadder than usual, but her colour rose for an instant, as Ralph presently rode up to her. He was careful to keep every sign of emprovement from his manner and voice as he took off his hat and greeted her; and no one seeing and hearing them would have guessed that he had proposed and been rejected.

Vigorol

If you want to feel well, bright and cheery, full of ambition; be able to move about quick and smartly—VIGOROL, the Great French Tonic, will brace you up—it cleanses the whole system. If the manufacturers could only impress this upon every one who does not feel as they ought to, the world would owe them a great gratitude; but all we can do is to ask you to try one bottle and see for yourself. The change will be wonderful. You need a spring medicine—then take VIGOROL. Sold at all drug stores.

weather, he left her side at once. But his heart was still beating fiercely, and he watched her from the corners of his eyes, drinking in the beauty and unconscious grace of her presence. When the hounds found, he was inspired by a desire to attract her attention and distinguish himself, and with a spurious kind of courage he let his horse have its head, and rode as straight as the straightest of them. The horse, amazed and delighted at its owner's unexpected display of pluck, took advantage of it and went at hedge and rail eagerly, clearing everything like a bird and carrying Ralph in at the death. He had simply stuck on and let the horse go its own way—it was the best thing he could have done—and he received the congratulations of his friends with a modest smile.

"You ride well, Ratton, very well!" said Lord Hatherley, as he came up with Mary by his side; "that last ditch was a stiff one, and most of us funked it—eh, Mary?"

"Oh! all the credit's due to my horse," said Ralph, with a laugh; but Lord Hatherley shook his head.

"No, no! I saw you clear the last two fences, and—well, I couldn't have done it better myself—ten years ago."

Still Mary said nothing, but in silence turned her horse's head homeward. Ralph longed to turn aside and ride beside her, but he was too wary. He would give her time. So he kept with the men, who were trying for another fox, and let her go home alone with her father.

They found again; but the fox, after affording them a good run, gave them the slip and ran to earth. They were a long way from home; some of the men made for a way-side inn to rest their horses and get a drink, and Ralph went with them. He was excited by the praise bestowed upon his lucky ride, and, as was usual with him when he was a little "above himself," he drank freely. It is surprising how much liquor a man can take after a couple of runs; but Ralph was soon affected by whiskey—and this was by no means of the best—and as he rode homeward he was flushed of face and more talkative than ordinary.

"Ratton seems to have enjoyed him self," said Lord Parodel, with a laugh, as Ralph waved his hand to them at parting. "Didn't think he could ride as he has done to-day."

"He's mighty pleased with himself," assented the man he addressed. "Never knew him talk so much."

"Or drink," remarked Lord Parodel, musingly. He was one of those who didn't "take to" Ralph. "Ratton is rather a puzzle to me; always doing the unexpected, you know."

"Oh, well, he acquitted himself very well to-day, anyhow," rejoined the other.

Of this fact Ralph was fully sensible as he rode home. He had shown Lady Mary that he could not only stop a runaway horse, but ride straight to hounds; she had heard the praise bestowed upon him, and must have been favourably impressed.

He hummed a tune as he rode up the avenue, his face still flushed, his seat by no means close on his saddle. Then suddenly the tune ceased, and his smile of self-satisfaction gave place to one of amazement and injured dignity; for he saw a man lying at the foot of one of the elms near the railings, his hands in his pockets, a short pipe in his mouth.

Ralph pulled up and eyed the man angrily, then he said in the curt, overbearing way in which a man of his kind always addresses an inferior with whom he is not pleased:

"Here you, sir; do you know you're trespassing?"

The man looked up, and without taking his pipe from his mouth, said, coolly:

"How do you do, Lord Ratton?"

Ralph stared as if he could not believe his ears. That an ordinary-looking man should dare, not only to trespass upon the park, but to address him, the earl, without rising or taking his pipe from his mouth, seemed incredible.

"What the devil are you doing there, and who are you?" he demanded, haughtily.

The man rose slowly, and leisurely approached the railings.

"You don't remember me, Lord Ratton?" he said, as quietly as before, but with a curious smile about his thin lips and in his keen, bird-like eyes.

Ralph did not remember him in the east; a great deal had happened to the Earl of Ratton since they had met, and the calm, curt manner of the man roused him to fury.

"No, I don't, my man," he said, brusquely; "but whoever you are, you are trespassing. This is not a tea-garden, and I don't allow men to lie about smoking. Be off with you, or I'll summons you!"

The small, neatly made man smiled as he stopped his pipe with his little finger.

"You've got a bad memory, my ord," he said, slowly, but with a pleasant ease which was anything but pleasant to Ralph. "Now, I've a remarkably good one. Once I see a face I never forget it. I had the honour of being introduced to you at the bar of the Columbine, Drury Lane. My name's Workley."

Ralph started, and the colour left his face, and he stared in silence at the man for a moment or two. At the man's words, with the remembrance of his face, back came the squalid, miserable Past. He saw the lanky bar, the dyed and oily fellow-actor, the smirking barmaid; saw the wretched room over Waterloo Bridge, the worn and patient wife he had deserted. The sight of this close-shaven man, with the keen eyes and sinister, smiling lips, recalled it all, and he quailed before the vision.

Then he tried to conceal his discomfort, and with an effort said, haughtily:

"Yes; I remember you. But I don't acknowledge that the fact of—of your being introduced to me gives you the right to trespass, Mr. Workley."

Economy in Dress!

Any economy in clothing commensurate with appearance commends itself as being desirable. This is a subject of actual interest; because how to dress neatly and tastefully and economize is a problem which confronts most of us at some time or another.

But UNGAR'S has solved this problem most satisfactorily. The process of Dry Cleaning and Dyeing enables a man or woman to substantially reduce the cost of dressing, without sacrifice in the way of appearance.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, May 20. The Governor, Newfoundland, has received a despatch from the French Government report inactivity, consequent upon bad weather.
The Russian Government report successful actions in the Baltic Provinces. There is very fierce fighting along the whole front in Galicia. The Russians have made further progress near Kolozna.

HARCOURT.
PARIS OFFICIAL.
PARIS, May 20. An official to-night says: Between Neuport and Arras the ground remains water-soaked and impracticable. To-day was marked by a spirited artillery engagement, during the course of which two German towns were shelled, one by British artillery and one by our guns.
In Champagne, near Beausejour, we have advanced by mining as far as the enemy's trenches, contact with which we are maintaining.
In the Argonne, at Bagatelle, we have repulsed an attack at Ally Wood, taken several trenches, and captured some prisoners. Conserved ground gained.

DESTRUCTION OF KILID BAHR FORTS.
LONDON, May 20. According to an Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, the destruction of the forts at Kilid Bahr, bombardment of Nagara forts continues day and night.

RUSSIANS BEGIN GENERAL OFFENSIVE.
LONDON, May 20. A Petrograd special to the Telegraph says: There is consensus of opinion here that the Russians are about to begin a general offensive on the Prussian front, which may be expected to exert important influences on the German operations in Galicia. Colonel Shumsky, military critic, foresees the possibility of Russian assumption of the offensive on Rawka and Buzza, compelling the Germans to forego an attempt to force the passage of the San and Upper Vistula and transfer their troops to the Warsaw region.

Ever Ready Hot Water, Night and Day.

FOR THE NURSERY.

"The bath ready for baby, when baby is ready for the bath" should be an adage of every housewife—who should also keep in mind that any trouble saved to the nurse makes for a well-ordered, contented household.
Gas Water-Heaters, whether of the instantaneous or circular type, offer the convenience of available hot water "upstairs, downstairs, and in my lady's chamber,"—without any labour at all—Independently of the state of the Kitchen fire.
The cost is reasonable.

FOR THE BATHROOM.

An uncertain supply of hot water in the bathroom is a frequent cause of annoyance.
Hot water can only be secured easily by getting the cook to act as stoker, but at what a cost!
Think of the coal that is wasted—the fatigue of coal carrying—the after labour of grate cleaning—and the discomfort of a hot kitchen in warm weather!

A Gas Water-Heater is economical because it only heats the water actually required; and labour-saving, because there are no coals to carry, no fires to clean, no ashes or dirt to remove.
The master of the house has hot shaving water and a hot bath whenever he wishes without delay or trouble.

HOT WATER FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

When "Spring cleaning days" engross the busy housewife then the convenience of an unlimited supply of hot water on the upper floors is brought home to her with special force.
But at all times—apart from convenience a gas water-heater makes an irresistible appeal to the housewife from the point of view of dealing with the domestic problem.
Latter-day domestics are difficult to keep unless due consideration is shown by saving them unnecessary drudgery in the category of necessary drudgery may be included the toil of carrying hot water or coal upstairs, the cleaning of grates and the removal of dirt and ashes.
The gas water-heater renders such labour superfluous.—may12,tf

Amusements.

The week end programme at the Casino Theatre includes two features, "The Four Dare Devils," and "Facing the Footlights." The former is a sensational romance in a professional circus and to bring out prominently the chief characters the Dare Devils perform acrobatical feats in the which are of such a nature as to temporarily horrify the spectator. "Facing the Footlights" is a great social drama enacted by French artists and is one of the finest productions of its kind to be shown here for some time. On to-morrow afternoon there will be a matinee for the children who will be admitted for five cents. In addition to the forementioned pictures the children will be given an extra feature consisting of the Great Boer War which picture has pleased so many. This is an unusual programme and all should avail of the opportunity of witnessing such special features. Therefore give the children, especially, a chance to see the great struggle between Britain and Boer in South Africa.

THE BRITISH THEATRE.

This popular-house of entertainment presents an attractive program for the week-end. "The Price," by the Latin players, is a pathetic story of the fatal consequences of a wife's extravagance; "Through Life's Window" is a beautiful Vitagraph drama with Maurice Costello, the matinee idol, in the lead. "A Romance of the Pueblo" is a thrilling Indian story, and "The Ladies' War" is a pastiche comedy, featuring Antonio Moreno and Cissy Fitzgerald. With such an excellent screen and the up-to-date machine used at this theatre, this all-star programme will be seen to advantage. Miss Ellsworth and Mr. Cameron will be heard in popular and catchy songs. Beginning on Empire Day, for which a special programme has been prepared, a violinist will be added to the orchestra.

FORTY-SIX REEL PICTURE AT NICKEL.

The attendance at the Nickel Theatre this evening promises to be large, as the programme is a splendid one. See it in another column in this issue and you will be convinced. Monday there will be a big Empire Day Bill including another episode of "Our Mutual Girl." On Wednesday night, "The Million Dollar Mystery" commences. This is the greatest picture ever brought to St. John's. There are forty-six reels, two of which will be shown every week. See the first and every other instalment; also read the story, it is very interesting. This picture has had marvelous success everywhere in the children's big matinee to-morrow.

SIX GOOD PICTURES AT THE CRESCENT.

Six good pictures is the Crescent's big offering to-day; this is a finely arranged programme of comedy and drama selected by the Crescent management to delight Crescent patrons. The bill includes a Broncho Billy feature, a Vitagraph drama and two good comedies. Mr. Delmonico will sing a popular ballad and give a cornet imitation. The Crescent will give the biggest show of its life on Empire Day, the great path historical features, "Anthony and Cleopatra" is the headliner, this is a marvellous feature with gorgeous scenes and costumes. Mr. Delmonico will give a big vaudeville act, don't forget the Crescent's big show on Empire Day; prices as usual no extra charge.

"OURS" IN THE WEST LND.

Crowded to the doors at each and every performance. Big show for Monday, Saturday last performance for a while of the little Squares sisters, they are booked at Rossley's East End House for the pantomime, which is going to be the prettiest ever seen; new singer for Ours on Monday.

GREAT CONTEST AT ROSSLEY'S TO-NIGHT.

The contest to-night promises to be the best; there are lots of names and that means lots of fun. The early side door will be open at 8.45 p.m. for ticket holders and reserve seats only. Reserve seats will be filled first so that patrons will be sure of a good seat; extra chairs will be placed after ticket holders are seated. Last night Rossley's was crowded to see Mr. Ballard Brown and Miss Widge Locke in their dramatic sketch, "The Heart of a Girl"; they were encored again and again. On Monday the prettiest pantomime, "The old woman who lived in a shoe"; the best show ever seen here, with beautiful costumes all new.

When Half-Gods Go.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Blessed be nothing. Just once in so often I recall that inspired utterance of the wise old lady who found herself encumbered by too many possessions and suddenly had the vision to see how futile it all was.

Not long ago I heard of a woman who sold two valuable rings because she wanted to take an interesting trip with congenial friends, and had not the money. Some of her friends thought it a very foolish thing to do and told her so. "The trip will be over in a few months," they said, "and the rings will be gone."

"Will I be any poorer?"
"Yes," she said, "I know that, but will I be any poorer?"
"Any poorer?"
"Yes, I mean will my life be any poorer. I didn't do it impulsively," she went on. "I looked at the rings and I thought 'Are they enriching my life? Are they enriching it as much as this experience and the memories it would leave me?' And I decided they weren't. I was proud of them merely because they were expensive, and I didn't consider that pride a particularly enriching experience."

That little story interested me immensely and after I heard it I began to wonder if it would not be a good thing for all of us to look over our possessions occasionally and "make them measure up to the question, 'Is this enriching my life?'"

It is really strange how strong a hold our possessions have over most of us. They seem to put their tentacles around our hearts, and the idea of parting with anything we have owned, no matter how unnecessary to our happiness it is, or how useful the price it would bring, is to many people a most radical and painful idea.

I have a friend who has a household of antique furniture which she has gradually collected and I have a great admiration for her because she is willing to give up some of it, now and then. Whenever she finds she could get a certain sum for any piece, "I always ask myself," she says, "if I would put that money into it now, if I had the money and didn't have the furniture, and if I can't say 'Yes' I let it go."

Getting Rid of the Things That Clog One's Life.

Another friend who has recently moved and thus become impressed, as one never does at any other time, with the multiplicity of her possessions, is selling things right and left—furniture, books, china, ornaments—in short everything which she has found is superfluous and is merely clogging her life. Some of her friends think she is half crazy. I don't. More power to her, I say.

You remember the man who turned his back on the greatest adventure that ever beckoned "and went away grieving because he had great possessions."

Do not be like him. Do not let possessions clog your life. Fling them from you if they are keeping you from the true happiness, the real adventures.

There are numberless combinations of satin and straw in millinery.

Salvage Notes.

Ice blockade still prevails and has hampered fishermen in their operations. Many schooners are ready for the signal but unable to proceed owing to ice.

Many people are paying attention to the weather forecast in the hopes of a change of wind, which would enable steamers to get along.

Most of the populace have turned to gardening as the only avocation of employment at present and nearly all have their potatoes sown, rather earlier than previous years, and a good crop should be forthcoming in the early autumn.

Some activity is being shown by the younger folk in making preparations for the celebration of Empire Day next Monday, and a good time is in store for their friends especially if navigation is opened by that time. Apparently the 24th is intended to be a red letter day as far as Salvage is concerned, and we congratulate those concerned on their efforts, for if any time in the Empire's history that day should be celebrated, it is at the present when thousands of our noble and youthful sons are laying down their lives and giving their blood in order that the Empire's honor and integrity should be kept undented, and that old and glorious flag shall have more devotion, and the units of the Empire shall become more welded together.

Under the Distinguished Patronage of His Excellency the Governor & Lady Davidson.

To celebrate Empire Night, an Entertainment will be held in the Methodist College Hall on the evening of May 24th, at 8.30 p.m. The programme under the management of Mrs. Colville will be a most attractive and varied one. Patriotic songs in appropriate costumes, a short sketch called "Petitcoat Perfidy" by some of our best artists, to conclude with "A Russian Fairy Tale" without words, performed in national and picturesque costumes with brilliant spectacular effects. Proceeds in aid of the Newfoundland Beds in the St. John Ambulance Brigade Hospital at the Front. Tickets and plan of Hall at Dicks & Co., also at Methodist College Hall on Empire Day. Prices 50, 30 and 20c.—may 18, 21

A Boer in Scots Guards

Patriot Whose Two Loyal Brothers Were Murdered by Germans.

A stirring story of a Boer Family's splendid patriotism has reached The Daily Mirror.

Training with the Scots Guards at Caterham, Surrey, is a man of fine physique named David Derkierk.

He was born in Cape Colony, and with brothers and relatives took part in many engagements against the British in the Boer War.

In the years that followed the war his family became loyal to the British flag, and Derkierk went to Llanos Ayres and took up sheep farming.

Shortly after the beginning of the present war his two brothers in German South-West Africa were ordered to join in the rebellion.

They steadfastly refused, and the Germans thereupon murdered both. The shock of this double bereavement killed the mother of these two brave men, and it was to avenge their death that David Derkierk set out from the Argentine to enlist in the British Army.

Now he is with his regiment at Caterham, anxiously waiting for the order which will take him into the fighting lines in France or Flanders. Daily Mirror, April 19th.

At the House.

MAY 20th, 1915.

Mr. Walsh presented a petition from Placentia District re salmon net setting there.

Messrs. Morris, Devereaux, Piccott and the Leader of the Opposition supported the petition.

Messrs. Lloyd, Clapp and Winsor gave notice of questions.

The Bill relating to the Newfoundland Patriotic Association was read a third time and sent to the Upper House for concurrence.

The Council's amendment to the Saw Mills Act was read a second time.

In Committee on the Products Corporation Resolutions Mr. Lloyd's amendment relating to water power and the proper protection of private rights was accepted by the Government yesterday and passed without opposition.

After the fight put up for it by Mr. Lloyd, in which he was supported by Messrs. Kent, Morine and Coaker, the Premier opened negotiations with the Company, who eventually accepted what they had previously refused.

Mr. Lloyd asked if the Premier's negotiations with the Company reference to the modifications of the clause relating to Patent Rights had been successful. The Premier replied in the negative.

Mr. Kent then moved a resolution limiting the Patent rights conferred by the Contract to preserve the rights of third parties. This was voted down on a strict party vote.

Mr. Coaker submitted a Resolution that 20 cent an hour be the minimum wage for labourers. This was lost on a similar vote.

On the report stage, Mr. Kent moved all the amendments, which had been rejected on the Committee Stage and a division was called, which followed strict party lines.

Two members of the Opposition were absent, Mr. Morine, through illness, and Mr. Hickman, through business.

Two members of the Government came in too late to vote. But the amendments were lost.

The House then went into Committee on the Bill which provides that every vessel clearing for the Bank Fishery shall satisfy the Custom House official they have on board the life buoys to be kept on deck; a sufficient life belt for every person employed in the prosecution of such fishery; a compass for every dory carried on such vessel and an approved fog alarm.

Mr. Coaker said he had no objection to any amendments, but wondered why it took so long to take this step. He was pleased to find the Minister of Marine and Fisheries taking such an interest in the fishermen.

Fisheries Minister Piccott, introducer of the Bill, stated that Custom officials should be made better acquainted with the British Shipping Act than they are.

Messrs. Moulton, Lefevre and Currie expressed their satisfaction with the Bill; also Mr. Stons gave it his hearty support.

The House went into Committee on Ways and Means, and the Finance Minister read his seventh annual Budget. First it referred to the great war causing the dislocation of trade and commerce, then dealing with the finances of the Colony.

The revenue of the Colony on current accounts for the fiscal year ending June 30th, was $3,618,328.85, $300,711.58 short of that received the previous year.

The expenditure for 1913-14 was $3,928,178.21 or $111,616.79 more than that of the preceding year. There was therefore a deficit of roughly $300,000 on June 30th, 1914.

Last year's deficit of $302,000 is being met out of the $500,000 Reserve that was in the Bank of Montreal, leaving a balance of $198,000. For the current fiscal year the revenue for ten months at the close of April last was $2,453,521, while the expenditure was $2,826,970.

The total revenue up to June 30th next he estimated at $3,300,578.00 against a total estimated expenditure of $3,614,970.00, leaving a deficit of $714,392.

The $198,000 left to reserve will help to meet that deficit, leaving a shortage of $516,000 which is proposed to be met by Loan. The funded public debt of the Colony up to the end of April last was $30,450,765.27 and in addition a floating debt of $450,000 on account of raising temporary loans from the Bank of Montreal.

In view of the loan that is to be raised, the Minister expects that by the 30th of June the public debt will be $31,500,000. Out of the new loan of a million dollars, about half he expects to spend and the remainder expected to be exhausted by the end of December next or at the end of 1915 the obligations of the colony will be $22,500,000.

He anticipated that for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1916, an expenditure of $4,072,000 and a revenue of $4,000,000, the extra duties imposed are to yield to the Colony $750,000. An ad valorem duty of ten per cent, plus the surtax is placed on all goods and materials which were on the free list with the following exceptions: Wearing apparel, heliolums, books, etc., left by bequest, articles for the Governor, for the Army and Navy, for the Government, for the Municipal Council, for Consuls, and for religious purposes.

Machinery for pulp and paper and sawmills, and materials for construction of such machinery, artificial limbs and eyes, bait, goods returned after being exported, tourists' apparatus and gear, salvaged block straps, clothing for charitable purposes, cotton and bullion, ingredients for copper paint, corn for brooms, cotton yarn, raw cotton and coke, materials for preservation of fish, etc.

Equipment for brigades, fish of British cure, school utensils, hemp, hemp yarn, hides not tanned or cured, machinery for manufacture of lines and twines, pig iron, etc., for manufacture of nails, salt, vessels, supplies for Deep Sea and Moravian Missionaries, settlers effects, scientific apparatus, wools and yarns for use in connection with the manufacture of woollen goods, wire, etc., for use in broom factories.

For the year 1913-14 there was a decrease of $133,678.82 on the previous year for customs revenue. The total trade for the past fiscal year was $30,328,269, an excess of $59,183 in imports over exports. The Minister stated that the depression in the trade and commerce was wholly on account of the war, but thought that the prosperity of the colony was only temporarily arrested.

He referred to the fact that the labor market was relieved materially on account of 2,500 of our young men gone as soldiers and reservists; and that railway construction cannot be carried on on a large scale owing to inability to secure funds in that undertaking.

The increase in expenditure in five years was $972,319 and that the increase in the public debt was on account of the branch railways undertaken by the present Government. There is an increase of $134,000 allowed for under the head of Civil Government.

The amount on deposit in the Colonial Savings Bank at the end of December last was $2,483,722.95, the amount in the Savings bureaux of the four Canadian Banks doing business here was $6,187,985.49.

The amounts on deposit at interest was $2,733,958.19, and all these it was stated may be regarded as at the disposal of the people. The value of debentures held by the Colony up to December last was $3,894,218.64 and the amount of securities on account of life insurance $1,688,480.00.

The Minister regretted not being in a position to present a better financial statement of affairs.

Discussion on the Ways and Means was postponed till Tuesday next.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION.

Mr. Kent asked leave to move that the Rules for the Proceedings of the House of Assembly be amended by adding thereto the following:—

"That there shall be a standing committee of the House to be designated 'The Committee of Public Accounts' for the examination of the accounts showing appropriation of the moneys granted by the Legislature to meet the Public Expenditure, and of all other accounts showing expenditures from public moneys for any purpose to consist of seven members who shall be nominated at the commencement of every Session and of whom there shall be a quorum."

Mr. Kent said in moving the Resolution he did not wish it to be understood that he did it with any feeling of partisanship toward the present government that are in power now but simply moved it so that there would be parliamentary control over the expenditure of public moneys.

The absence of information of our public accounts warranted a remedy. The present system, he contended, was no system at all. It was merely laying the accounts on the table of the House each session for the members to examine but the members had not the opportunity of properly investigating the accounts.

Mr. Kent pointed out that such a Committee was in existence in every other portion of the British Empire and it was desirable to have it in this country, primarily because the tremendous amount of work that the departmental offices call for could be done by the proposed Committee at a couple of sittings.

Ample power in the Act is given the Government to make rules and call witnesses from departments in relation to any items of public expenditure. The Committee can report to the House their findings from time to time as they may deem expedient to do.

The Committee will comprise members from both sides of the House to be appointed at the opening of each session.

The Premier had no objection to such a recognized system of equity and submitted as an amendment that the word "designated" be substituted by "to be named by the Speaker" and instead of the word "nominated" substitute "appointed".

Mr. Kent's motion was then put and carried. The Finance Minister gave notice to introduce two loan bills.

After notices of questions were given by Messrs. Clapp and Stone, the House adjourned till this afternoon.

It's good to have some fell disease, t h e rheumatism in your knees, or boils upon your neck; it's good to suffer now and then, from spavin, bunion, boil or wen, and be a total wreck; for when you have your health ones more, you're twice as happy as before the punk diseases came; you are in shape to realize the luck you're in, when an- quish dies, and you've a painless frame. The delegate who's never ill, who never needs the druggist's or hears the doctor's ring, can't size how he is best; in perfect he finds no zest; it's such a co- thing. Then rheumatism hits, bones, and miles away you hear, in groans, as he anoints his legs, and rends his garb, and tears his hair, and bites large pieces from his chair, and for the sawbones begs. Then he begins to understand that health's a blessing great and grand that every man should prize; "if I get we'll instead of worse, and all my aches disperse, I will reform," he cries. will not howl unless I'm hurt, I will not rail and rend my shirt, or of a fictions bawl; for if a man is health well, he has no right to raise a ye whatever woes befall."

ITALY STILL ON THE BRINK.

LONDON, To-day. Any remaining hope that Italy would maintain her neutrality was abandoned this evening when the Italian Chamber conferred upon the Government extraordinary powers in the event of the outbreak of war. This is considered a vote in favour of which the Government has made all preparations, and the prospects of which have aroused the greatest enthusiasm throughout Italy. The German and Austrian Ambassadors were still at Rome last night, but according to a despatch from Berlin their one care now is to arrange for the safety of their nationals remaining in Italy. Formal declaration of war or perhaps action without a formal declaration is momentarily expected. At any rate all preparations for naval and military action have been made on both sides. It is quite possible that while the Italian Premier Signor Salandra was explaining to the Chamber and the world the policy of his Government, the troops on the frontier and the navies in the Adriatic had anticipated diplomatic action. Italy naturally will have to look first to her frontier, but it is expected her entrance into the war will compel Austria and perhaps Germany also to withdraw some troops from the Russian frontier, where they are hammerging at the Russian lines, particularly North West and South of Pryemysl and Central Galicia. This hammering, according to Austrian and German reports, is having its effects, for they claim the Russians are being driven back from the River San and in the region of Jaraslau, that the circle around Pryemysl is tightening. At other parts on the front the Russians appear to be withdrawing attacks, and in Opatow region in Southern Poland they have themselves taken the offensive. This, however, will be useless to them unless they can prevent the Austrians and Germans from making further advance in Galicia. In the West bad weather has brought operations almost to a standstill. This enabled the French and British to consolidate the ground they gained last week and early this week. Neutral gains were not excessive, military experts on the whole are satisfied with them, having proved to their own minds that when an ammunition are concentrated in sufficient numbers and quantity the Germans can be driven back. The public is still depending upon unofficial reports for progress of the armies on the Gallipoli Peninsula. These reports are most encouraging from the standpoint of the Allies as they state that the forts at Kilit Bahr have been destroyed, the Malids has been occupied, that the bombardment of Nagara on the Eastern sides of the Straits is in progress night and day.

NOON.

LOOKING TO SPAIN.

ROME, To-day. The Tribune says the Italian Govt. has not yet decided what neutral country will be asked to protect the interests of the Italians in Germany after war is declared, but it predicts that it will be Spain.

ULTIMATUM EXPECTED.

GENEVA, To-day. The Ultimatum from Italy to Austria may be expected to-day and the declaration of war before the end of the week according to information received here from Rome. Berlin newspapers publish long reports of the meeting yesterday of the Italian Deputies. Foreign editorial comment but those which discuss the situation take a resolute but unexcited attitude. The most prominent feeling expressed is the revulsion at what is regarded as Italy's treachery in turning on her former Allies.

THREATEN AMERICAN TRADE.

BERLIN, To-day. A meeting to protest against against American shipments of war materials was held last night by the Deutsch-Waerwerk. The resolution was adopted calling for a discontinuance of the export from Germany of goods, particularly needed in America, such as dye stuffs and the limitation of imports from America as far as possible, until the trade which is declared objectionable is stopped.

RUSSIANS STEM TENUIC ADVANCE.

LONDON, To-day. The Times correspondent telegraphs that the victorious advance of the Austro-German army from the line of the Danajec at length has been checked. The Russian army had fallen back to the defences of the San and for ten miles to the north of Jaraslau, the enemy had forced their way to the western bank. Meanwhile the left wing of the invading army operating to the north of the Upper Vistula, has been crushed. Messages of the enemy have arrived in the Stry region, apparently for an attempt to move on Lemberg. So far all their attempts to advance in this region have been checked by the Russians.

ANTI-JAP RIOTS.

PEKING, To-day. Anti-Japanese riots at Hankow were resumed to-day and several Japanese business houses were wrecked by Chinese mobs.

FORTS DESTROYED.

ATHENS, To-day. All the Turkish forts on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles have been destroyed, says a despatch, received from Wytelme to-day. Several of the European forts are still holding out.

AIR RAID SUCCESSFUL.

AMSTERDAM, To-day. Heavy casualties attended the latest air-raid of the Allies against the German concentration camp at Bruges, Belgium, according to information received here to-day. Ten German soldiers were killed outright and scores wounded. Much damage was done to the military property.

HOSPITAL SHIP CONDEMNED.

LONDON, To-day. The British Prize Court has condemned the German Hospital ship Oposhi which was captured at sea as a lawful prize of war.

VIEWS OF A PESSIMIST.

LONDON, To-day. Italy's participation in the war, while welcomed in many quarters, is not expected even by the most optimistic to result in any quick termination of hostilities, while many lean to an immediate benefit for the Allies, it is feared that complications of a most serious character may result. Russia's ambition has been not only to gain Constantinople but also to reach the Adriatic. By the establishment of Italy on the eastern shore of the Adriatic the claims of Rome and Petrograd may come into sharp conflict. There is no doubt Germany and Austria have been preparing for war with Italy for many weeks. Austria's finest troops have been concentrated on the Italian frontier. At least one tains, was issued here to-day and reads as follows: In the fighting of the past three weeks, since the beginning of the operations of the enemy in the Carpathians, their losses on May 10th to May 13th, during which the fighting lost some of its intensity, averaged 10,000 a day. On the other 17 days they were much heavier, especially during the period between May 16th and May 19th, when they amounted to several tens of thousands daily. Certain regiments of the enemy have been reduced to single companies. Their total losses during this period, including fourth thousand prisoners captured by us have undoubtedly reached to one-fourth or perhaps one-third of their total strength. The score of guns lost by the enemy in this fighting is nothing compared with their total number, but it must be borne in mind that owing to lack of horses and scarcity of projectiles, between two and three million shells have been expended by the enemy during this period. The enemy left behind in their positions, several hundred guns. This circumstance has helped to equalize the odds which were in favor of the enemy.

PIERCE FIGHTING ON THE NECK.

LONDON, To-day. Cablegrams from Athens, the correspondent of London says: Fierce fighting is in progress near the neck of the Gallipoli Peninsula. The big guns of the British battleship Queen Elizabeth are being fired from the Gulf of Saros, thus assisting in the Allies attack. Turks are being supported by guns of Sultan Selim, formerly of the German cruiser Goeben, which are being fired from the Sea of Marmora. Turkish troops from Avila in Asia Minor are said to have been transferred to the Dardanelles.

A LAWFUL PRIZE.

LONDON, To-day. The Prize Court has decided that the German steamer Ophelia captured in the North Sea by the British destroyer Meteor on October 18th and brought into Yarmouth was a lawful prize.

Prodigal Son Doomed By an Old Law.

Ancient Tablet at Yale Deephered— Gives Inheritance Rule.

New Haven, Conn., May 11.—Prof. Albert T. Clay, curator of the Babylonian collection at Yale, announces that the ancient Sumerian tablet, recently received at Yale, has been deciphered and that it bears the law governing a son's right in his father's estate that was in vogue considerably more than 2,000 years before Christ. This makes it the oldest inheritance law known.

The law shows that the child who renounced his sonship and received his portion was legally separated by his parents and had no further claim upon the estate. The law also protected the parents from any further demands. According to Prof. Clay it seems to be an advance upon present day law, for if a father during life gives a child what would be his portion and does not leave a will or a contract that specifies this the law of inheritance gives him another share. According to Prof. Clay the law throws entirely new light on the parable of the prodigal son, inasmuch as the brother who had labored at home was quite within his legal rights when he showed anxiety as to what his father intended to do after the prodigal, who had squandered his portion, returned. The brother who remained, according to Prof. Clay is generally unjustly condemned.

There are nine laws on the tablet. They are the laws of Nisaba (a goddess) and Khani (a god).

Trench Making At Night

THRILLS OF 4 HOURS' DIGGING.

The experience of a night's trench-making a few hundred yards from the enemy's lines are vividly described in the following letter from a soldier at the front:—

Dusk was gathering when we started out from our billet not far from the firing line. Each man—there were two hundred—carried a rifle and ammunition and a sharp curved spade. "All smoking must stop, and when you speak it must be below your breath," said the officer in charge. "Keep close to one another in single file, and keep your ears open for messages coming down or going up the line."

Crossing a battle-torn field was not easy. There were a hundred obstacles to negotiate in the inky blackness—barbed wire entanglements, "Jack Johnson" pits, deep and stagnant ditches, fragile, narrow bridges over streams, and, alas! unmarked grave mounds. Whispered messages followed from man to man. "Hole on the left, keep to the right." "Watch this ditch." "Mind the bridge"—warnings innumerable.

They say we reached the mouth of the communication trench in an hour; it seemed like a century. Here progress was even more hindered, for added to mud and water and twists in the trench, which you could not see till you were upon them, were the frequent warnings—"Wire overhead." "Wire underfoot." "Wire on this side." There were wires to pass every few steps, telegraph wires from the batteries in the rear to their observers in the front line. Somehow or other your rifle had an annoying knack of becoming entangled in them at the most inconvenient moments and delaying the whole line.

Whistle of Bullets.

In places the bottom of the trench was lined with bricks, in others with boarding, in others with brushwood, and in some with the natural foundation—sloppy mud.

We were now perhaps 300 yards from the main trenches and 500 from the Germans. Stray bullets sang and whistled above us, while some screamed eerily in their flight. Mostly they sounded like the long-drawn whistle of a far-away express, but now and then one, almost spent, would come whizzing to the earth near at hand with a human-like hiss.

Star shells soared from the lines every few minutes, throwing the country for miles around to vivid light. An occasional burst of "rapid" from the enemy made us keep very low in the trench, for the bullets cracked and ricocheted all around, more than one hitting the earthwork from the top of the parapet and sending a rain of mud into one's eyes and mouth.

At last our destination! "Climb over the parapet, boys, Yonder's where we're to dig," from the captain. One after the other we clambered over and lay down on the other side until the whole company was together. Star shells were frequent, but each man knew how to keep perfectly still, and the few bullets that followed did no harm. We piled rifles and got into single file. The officer took up his stand at the point where the trench was to begin. Then we proceeded to mark out the trench as we had been trained.

Shovelling the Clay.

When every man was in his place the order was given to start; a welcome order, for rain had begun to fall and it was bitterly cold. Each man excavated towards his neighbour. Shovels were wielded with a will. Huge clods of clay ("big enough to start a farm on," said someone near me) went hurtling on each side to form the parapets. Smaller lumps followed. Rapidly the trench began to take shape. The clayey soil of Flanders is kind to the trench-maker. Bullets came over, sometimes alarmingly near. Once there was a volley. As trained, we flopped down flat on the ground.

Four hours' digging is the specified task for a working party. In that time, of course, we could not hope to complete the trench, but our company has a reputation for digging and we had to keep it up. So that when the hour for "down spades" came a party could have found quite decent shelter from fire in the trench. As we un-piled arms and put on our equipments the Germans evidently spotted us, for a hot three rounds rapid was sent to greet us. It was as if Providence wanted to test our work, for by tumbling hurriedly into the newly dug trench and behind the four-foot parapet we escaped without casualty.
