A Tip to Hubby—

Set you never thought of it, but isn't it just a wee bit selfish to sit there in your big chair, your feet upon the fender, pipe-dreaming, while that little housekeeper of yours works over a sink full of messy pots and pans or finishing up the day's odds and ends? Have a heart, help her keep those rosy cheeks of hers. Be a real sport, step into Stewart's Fancy Bakery and ask for a loaf of Stewart's Homemade Bread, it's the best. Also Xmas Cakes, Mince Pies, Ladies' Fingers, Pastry Shells, Oyster Pattie Shells, etc. Take it home and tell her to quit baking. If it's anything fancy in the baking line Stewart's have it.

The Romance of A Marriage.

CHAPTER II.

"How beautiful it sounds!" she says, with a little, wistful laugh. "Next to dancing, the best thing is to hear the music. I expect Alice is enjoying herself now; that is, if she has got a good partner, and isn't in mortal terror lest anyone should tread on her dress. I wish I were there now." Mark, it is the first time she has uttered that wish. She—Cinderella—has been quite content to prepare others for the ball, content and cheerful. It is the first time desire has fallen upon her.

With a yearning, wistful look in her dark brown eyes, she stands looking towards the Court, her lantern swinging in her hand. "How plainly one can hear!" she says again. "If I were to cross the paddock and stand under the elms, I could hear every note. I've half mind to go!"

Half a mind with Paula is equal to anyone else's whole mind. With a little, short laugh she sets down the lantern, and with a quick step crosses the paddock, and climbing the two-rail fence that divides the Eastcourt grounds from the Palmers', stands in the Court garden.

As she does so, a flood of light from the great saloon falls on her, and with a little start she skirts to the left, and going stealthily on, reaches an open space of lawn just beneath the saloon windows.

Here she can hear every note, can see the shadows of the dancers cast upon the blinds, can almost feel the faint breeze of the dresses as they whirl past the window. The band is playing one of Waldteufel's waltzes, a sweet, dreamy music which one cannot listen to without longing to move one's feet.

Paula, leaning against a flower-stand, listens with parted lips and wistful eyes.

"If one had but a partner," she murmurs, "one could dance here as well as in there. How happy they must be!"

The music goes on; the fascination—it is nothing less—grows upon her, and before she knows what she is doing, she finds herself beating time to the rhythmic strains.

From beating time to actual dancing is but a short step. The smooth gravel path is as good as a ball-room floor to her lithe limbs, and, unconsciously, she begins to move to the music of the waltz. All unconsciously, without a thought, she is in a part of the garden unfrequented even in the day-time; it is not likely that anyone will see her there now.

With parted lips, with her dark eyes glowing with the fascination of the music, she waltzes round the path, until, suddenly, all too soon, the music ceases, and with a sharp breath of surprise she comes to her senses. With a laugh at her own folly, she draws the shawl that has fallen to her solitary exercise round her head, and turns to depart for home.

As she does so, with a rather hurried step—for someone may open the window any moment—she stumbles against something. The shawl falls over her eyes.

"Good gracious!" she laughs, "I must have fallen against a flower-stand," and she puts up her hand to clear the shawl from her face.

As she does so she starts back and utters, not a cry of alarm—for fear and Paula are as yet strangers—but a cry of surprise; for there, standing in front of her, is not a flower-vase, but a man.

For a moment she looked up at him in the misty moon-light, expecting to see a footman, attracted, like herself, by the music and light; but instead she sees a tall figure which, in a moment, she recognises as that of a gentleman.

Instinctively she acknowledges it, for there is nothing particularly aristocratic about the dress.

The figure is clad in a suit of cords—a suit that fits like a skin; coat, breeches, gaiters.

Stablemen and gamekeepers wear cords; but Paula knows at a glance that this is neither groom nor gamekeeper, though as yet she cannot see his face.

It is so sudden an apparition. He towers so tall and statuesque before her that, for the moment, she loses her presence of mind.

If some fairy had been to work and transformed the flower-vase into a living man, she could not be more surprised—astounded.

Where she has been "playing the fool," to use the words she herself would use, is an unfrequented part of the Court grounds, into which no one would be likely to stray. It is, indeed, only open to the path from Myrtle Cottage, by which she had come. How did this tall figure in cords come here? and why?

With a swift drawing of Mary's shawl about her face, she turns to flee, when she feels a hand upon her arm, closing on it as strongly as a blacksmith's vice, yet gently and softly, and a deep, musical voice says: "Wait a minute, Mary. What is your hurry?"

Paula's face flushes, and the hot fire of indignation rushes to her face. She is evidently taken for a servant. Well, that is the best thing that can happen to her.

If she is wise she will accept it as a fit punishment for her vagary and fly; but somehow she cannot accept.

With an indignant effort to release herself she says, breathlessly: "My name is not Mary!"

As if he had been struck, the stranger half-drops her arm, and he raises his hat—a soft deer-stalker, matching his cord suit.

"I beg your pardon," he says. "I beg your pardon."

Well, that is all that is required. Why does she not turn and flee?

For the simple reason that, though one of his hands is engaged in lifting his hat, the other still holds her, in a gentle grasp if you will, but in a grasp that is not to be shaken off.

"I beg your pardon," he repeats. "I took you for a servant."

"And how do you know that I am not?" asks Paula, with an involuntary smile, aroused by his sudden discomfiture.

"How?" he says, his grasp relaxing, though his hand still lies upon her arm. "By your voice. I think I know when a lady speaks."

"That's nonsense," she says, quietly, with a short laugh. "Ladies and servants speak alike now, only that servants are more particular."

"I beg your pardon, then," he says. "You are a servant?"

"I did not say so."

"But," he says, evidently deeply interested, "you inferred as much. If that be so, then old Palmer is to be envied. If I were in his place, I shouldn't wish for a more lady-like servant."

Paula hesitates a moment. There is nothing particularly wrong in it—at least from her point of view; from Alice's, it would be different.

"I think I'd better go," she says. As she speaks, the hand strikes up another waltz—the "Manola," Paula's favourite waltz, one she would walk a good many miles to hear. Almost as if he knew this, he says:

"Wait until this waltz is over, will you not? If you do not, I shall think I have driven you away."

This is the strongest argument he could use, if he but knew it.

"Why should you drive me away?" she says, with a touch of the pride and self-reliance which are her chief characteristics; and she seats herself on the garden-seat and leans back with the air of one entirely alone.

He glances at her for a moment, and then at the lighted window, on which the shadows of the dancers come and go fitfully; then he sinks down on to the arm of the seat at a respectful distance from Paula, and slowly takes out a cigarette-case.

"Do you mind my smoking a cigarette?" he says.

Paula shakes her head; her foot is beating time to the music.

"Not at all."

He lights his cigarette and smokes in silence for a moment, then he says: "Pretty waltz."

"Isn't it?" she responds, with a little sigh. "My favourite waltz."

"It's a pity you are not in there too."

"Isn't it?" she assents, with a laugh. (To be continued.)

Elegant styles that add a graceful touch to your costume. They fit well, too!

"And I've driven you away. There is no occasion for you to go. I am a trespasser here, and I'll take my departure; unless—"

And he pauses. "Unless what?" she asks.

"Well," he says, with a certain frankness which has a charm of its own, "I was looking to suggest that, as we are both lookers-on, we should both stay. There is nothing particularly wrong in that, is there?"

Paula hesitates a moment. There is nothing particularly wrong in it—at least from her point of view; from Alice's, it would be different.

"I think I'd better go," she says. As she speaks, the hand strikes up another waltz—the "Manola," Paula's favourite waltz, one she would walk a good many miles to hear. Almost as if he knew this, he says:

Sands, of the Scottish Sessions, has delivered a portentous pronouncement on kissing both as regards religious and sanitary custom. It had been said in a case before him that the respondent had kissed the respondent merely as a part of a religious ceremony after communion service. Lord Sands said it might be all very well for elderly saints to greet one another with a chaste, Oriental religious salute, but it was a different matter when it came to young married women being promiscuously kissed by casual male acquaintances who happened to be fellow-communicantes. He held that the kissing in the case in question had exceeded religious custom, and he granted a decree of divorce.

British Soldiers
Wed German Girls.

No matter when the British troops are withdrawn from the Rhine there will always remain a scattering of British in the western provinces of Germany. Whereas in the early days of the Armistice last November an Anglo-German marriage was a rare occurrence and something to be talked about, it is now an every-day event, and there is every reason to believe that the German people are going out of their way to encourage these unions. Before peace was signed, of course, no British soldier was allowed to mix with the Germans, but after that period it was stated in army orders that fraternizing would be allowed, although it was "left to the common sense of the men not to forget the fellows who had given their lives in the war."

What a thing it is to be fit! To be not merely free from actual sickness, but to be well, absolutely well—and to have the mental vim, stamina, vigor, which go with physical well-being.

But you can't be fit if constipation is constantly breeding poisons, which are taken into the blood and undermine the whole system.

The modern treatment for constipation is Nujol.

The action of Nujol is entirely different from that of castor oil, pills, salts, etc. Nujol is pleasant to take and does not force and weaken the system, nor impair digestion.

Nujol prevents constipation because it softens the food waste and encourages the intestinal muscles to act naturally. It thus removes the cause of constipation and self-poisoning.

Nujol helps Nature establish easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals—the healthiest habit in the world. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

Nujol Laboratories, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) 80 Broadway, New York

Warning: Nujol is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark as shown here. Beware of products represented to be "the same as Nujol". You may suffer from substitutes.

Trinity Celebrates Centennial

Of the Death of Rev. John Clinch.

In the quiet and hallowed old cemetery, surrounding St. Paul's Church, Trinity may be seen a tombstone which bears the following inscription:

"Underneath are deposited the remains of the Rev. John Clinch, who died Nov. 22nd, 1819, aged 72 years." And on the wall of the Mortuary Chapel may be seen a tablet, bearing these words: "A tribute of filial duty and affection. This tablet is erected to the memory of the Rev. John Clinch, who during 38 years faithfully discharged the duties of his mission. He died the 22nd of November, 1819, aged 72 years." Your correspondent, being a member of the Historical Society, and feeling that the centennial of Rev. John Clinch was one of the important events of this historic town, consulted His Lordship Bishop White, and received his sanction and that of the Rector, Rev. C. M. Stickings to celebrate the above event, the following steps were taken. During the early part of October the Select Vestry of St. Paul's Church, finding the inscription on the Rev. John Clinch's tombstone was well nigh obliterated from the exposure to the storms of one hundred years, had the stone sent to St. John's, where it was polished and the lettering recut. This entailed some considerable cost, which was met by a collection being taken up from interested Trinitarians.

It was at first thought that this memorial service could be arranged to take place on the 22nd of Nov., but owing to unforeseen circumstances it was postponed until Dec. 7th. The Rev. G. S. Chamberlain incumbent of Catalina, who is the senior Clergyman in the Diocese, was invited to preach the Centennial Sermon.

The service was held in St. Paul's Church at 3 o'clock p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7th, and was opened with a short address from the Rector. Hymn 437 was sung by the congregation, after which special prayers, which brought this solemn memorial service to a close. Rev. John Clinch assumed the duties of a missionary Priest in Trinity, in the year 1783. Prior to his coming to Newfoundland he was a medical student, and was a personal friend and co-worker with the world renowned Dr. Jenner, who gave to the medical science of the world, that great allaying remedy for smallpox, which is known as vaccination, and some of the original vaccine was sent out from England by Dr. Jenner to Rev. Dr. Clinch, who used it in Trinity.

Had Mr. Clinch remained in the medical profession and continued a co-worker with Dr. Jenner, he too no doubt would have shared in the laurel wreath of immortal fame with his friend, but he preferred to lay his glory aside, and to do a nobler work in his Masters Vineyard.

When Rev. John Clinch became the Incumbent of the mission of Trinity Bay, his extensive work did not end here, as the old Church Register which dates back to 1753, goes to prove that Mr. Clinch officiated at Baptisms, marriages and interments from Greenspond on the north, to Bay de Verde on the south; and as his early ministrations were before the days of the Emancipation Act, he officiated at all interments, as in those days there was but one Cemetery in Trinity, which was probably the only one in the Bay, and here all the interments of the harbor and vicinity were made. It also appears certain that he officiated at most of the marriages and baptisms of those days. He was also a medical Doctor, and in his day must have been by far the most valuable and useful man both temporal and spiritual of the Bay, and in closing we say "Verily his name shall be his monument," as it will always remain green in the memory of all classes and creeds in this community.—COM.

Trinity, Dec. 8, 1919.

Hymn 538 was then sung, after which, part of the Burial Service was read by the Rev. C. M. Stickings, and the clergy and congregation proceeded to the Cemetery and visited the tomb of Rev. John Clinch, which was found to be providentially polished by the Divine Master with a thin transparent coating of silver-thaw, which appeared to magnify the lettering. The inscription was read, hymn 140 was sung and the Rev. G. S. Chamberlain read some

"If All Who Hate Would Love Us."

If all who hate would love us,
And all our loves were true,
The stars that swing above us
Would brighten in the blue;
If cruel words were kisses,
And every scowl a smile,
A better world than this is
Would hardly be worth while;
If purses would not tighten
To meet a brother's need,
The load we bear would lighten
Above the grave of greed.

If those who whine would whistle,
And those who languish laugh,
The rose would rot the thistle,
The grain outrun the chaff;
If hearts were only jolly,
If grieving were forgot,
Which tears of melancholy
Were things that now are not—
Then love would kneel to duty,
And all the world would seem
A bridal tower of beauty,
A dream within a dream.

If men would cease to worry,
And women cease to sigh,
And all be glad to bury
Whatever has to die;
If neighbor spake to neighbor,
As love demands of all,
The rust would eat the sabre,
The spear stay on the wall;
Then every day would glisten
And every eye would shine,
And God would pause to listen,
And life would be divine.

COST $15,000.00 — SELLING FOR $14.00 EACH—AT BISHOP, SONS & CO., LTD.

The designer of the "Orkin Fleet", Samuel Orkin, conceived the idea of building toy models of American battleships while working on a design of a battleship to be controlled by wireless from shore. A visit to the Battleship Georgia, in the year 1912, had shown him the wonderful possibilities and the number of lives that could be spared if this big fighting craft could be brought safely to port under the guidance of a wireless operator on land.

He began to build a model of the battleship with this idea in view, and after two and one-half years of the most tedious, tiresome work, confronted with many obstacles which he finally overcame, his boat was at last completed at a cost of nearly $15,000. We have only received SIX of these models, which we are selling at $14.00 each.

One morning a woman walked into a village grocery store with a majestic stride. It was easy to see by the airiness of her expression that she was somewhat disturbed.

"This," she sarcastically explained, throwing a package on the counter,

"is the washing itself. It's the soap that makes washing a pleasure. It's the soap—"

"That isn't soap, madam," interrupted the grocery man, examining the package. "Your little girl was in here yesterday for a pound of cheese and a half pound of soap. This is the cheese."

"U-m, that accounts for it," said the woman, as the light of understanding began to glow. "I wondered all night what made the Welsh rabbit we had for supper taste so queer."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Biggest Plum-Pudding Known.

On December 12, 1713, at the order of a certain James Austin, an immense plum-pudding, weighing 1,000 lbs., placed in a huge copper at the Red Lion, Southwark, and boiled for fourteen days. When done, it was placed on a wagon drawn by six asses, and accompanied by a band of singular musicians playing on equally singular instruments (one of which was a drum eighteen feet in length and four feet in diameter), a then popular air, "What lumps of pudding my mother gave me," was drawn to the Swan Tavern, on Fish Street Hill, whence it set out under escort for St. George's Fields, where it was advertised to be divided amongst Austin's customers. In vain, however, did they await the expected feast. Every minute the crowds, through which the gargantuan delicacy was obliged to force its way, grew more unruly. The delicious smell that stimulated their nostrils overcoming all sense of decorum, they attacked the escort and having after a sharp skirmish, put it to flight, soon possessed themselves of the coveted dish, which, in an incredibly short time, was distributed among the ravenous host of uninvited guests. This Austin seems to have been a specialist in plum-puddings, for he wagered £100 that he would bake one under water. The ingredients, when they had been well mixed, were in a tin pan, which in its turn was placed in a sack of lime, and the whole was then sunk to a depth of ten feet in the Thames, at Rotherhithe. There it was allowed to remain to the surface, and in due course, placed before a number of specially invited guests, all of whom pronounced it to be excellent.

Convivial Gent—"Whis' she calling me? Billy or William?"

Constable—"William, sir."

"But I think we ought to take them to D-a. That's where they took us." "What's that got to do with it?" "Isn't R-s all right?" "Why, it's all right enough, but it isn't in a class with D-a." "Well, what if it isn't?" "Don't you want to return their invitation in a suitable way?" "I call that the most suitable way possible."

"When they took us to that lovely place! Dinner there must have cost three times what it would at R's."

But They Have Three Times the Money.

"I know that, and I also know that they have three times the money we have. You talk about returning their invitation in a suitable way, that's just what I mean to do. I mean to entertain them in a way suited to our means, not to theirs."

The above, as you doubtless have gathered, is a discussion between a husband and wife as to the returning of a dinner invitation, at which discussion I had the pleasure of being present.

I wouldn't usually use the word "pleasure" of my feelings at being present where husbands and wives are arguing anything. For even when they start perfectly amicably, in this case, they are apt to get a bit warm. And then there is always the danger of being appealed to to give one's opinion—and make an enemy of one or the other.

In a Way Suited to Our Means, Not Theirs.

But I use the word in this case because I was so pleased with the felicity of that last phrase, "I want to entertain them in a way suited to our means, not to theirs."

If more people would make that the keynote of their entertainments, but a lot of heartburning and worry over money that should not have been spent, would be saved. And how much more self-respect and common sense would go into this business of entertaining than now does!

I certainly agreed with the husband (in this case, it was the man and not the woman who stuck out for the simpler entertainment) in his use of the word "suitable."

Wrinkles Vanquished by French Doctor.
Wrinkles in women's faces have been vanquished. Such is the startling declaration of Dr. Julien Bourget, of the French Academy of Medicine. He has found a method of operating on women for wrinkles just as he has operated for badly shaped noses on both men and women. Dr. Bourget claims the operation leaves no scars. He says wrinkles are caused by a slackening of the skin and he can give back elasticity to the skin around the chin, neck, forehead, lips or any part of the face by simply making an incision either behind the ear or at the edge of the scalp.

THE VICTIM.

W. M. MASON

All the world is shot to pieces, men are roaring, days and nights, for a lot of boons and some fifty kinds of rights; capital is swatting labor, labor's roundly hitting back, and our mills are standing idle, and our trains have jumped the track. All the struggling, fighting forces seem to glory in the wreck, while the Ultimate Consumer gets the cleaver in the neck. Oh, the Ultimate Consumer in the scrap has little part; he'd be happy just to labor in the office or the mart, and to feed his wife and kiddies, and to buy the rags they need, and provide against the future when he's old and gone to seed; but alas, the bricks are flying, and the scrapers are on deck, and the Ultimate Consumer gets the dornicks in the neck. And the Ultimate Consumer has a sad and weary lot, for he's always bound to suffer, whether others do or not; others do the frantic talking of their grievances and ills, while the Ultimate Consumer goes ahead and pays the bills; it's a time of sound and fury and the madness knows no check, and the Ultimate Consumer gets the hatchet in the neck.

Favorite Precious Stones

Fancies for precious stones change, with no apparent reason. Just now the sapphires is in high favor. After the diamond, the emerald, as a rule, holds favor. In old jewellery emeralds are more often seen than other precious stones; then rubies, then sapphires. These three stones are of high intrinsic value; also they combine to good effect with diamonds. So their popularity has remained.

Just Folks by Edgar A. Guest

HE DID IT FOR ANOTHER.
He did it for another—gave his money and his time. He sacrificed his comfort just to help a boy to climb. And he missed the touch of glory and the fame he might have won. But he's happy and contented in the good that he has done.

He did it for another—stretched his hand out to a friend. And his purse to-day is lacking what he might have kept to spend. For he gave away his treasure in the cause of one in need. But he's happier and richer in the record of his deed.

He did it for another—bore the battle and the pain. For the bigger life of freedom that his brother might attain. And men wondered when they found him lying silent in his place. How a man could die as he did, with a smile upon his face.

Why the People Do Not Strike.

Suppose the rest of the country were to manifest the spirit now exhibited by the striking miners. The miners say to the people: "So far as we can prevent it, there shall be no coal to operate the facilities of transportation and industry; there shall be no coal to warm men, women and children; there shall be no coal to cook food."

Why should not people denied of fuel retaliate in kind and say: "No one who prevents us from having heat can have food or raiment or any comfort or convenience of life within our control."

The fact that society does not assume that mercenary attitude is due to the circumstance that civilization has progressed sufficiently to teach most people the folly of the sort of savagery the miners are attempting.

The Ambidexterous.

The art of ambidexterity, or the use of both hands, is an extremely practical accomplishment, and one involving not only mechanical skill, but a certain amount of will and brain-power.

A society for the cultivation of the left hand was started some while ago in London, but the scheme never had sufficient backing to flourish. Now the French Academy of Medicine are advocating that school-children be taught to write with the left hand as well as the right.

One curious point concerns the cult of the left hand, an eminent physician having stated that it tends eventually to increase lunacy. This action has, however, been contested by other medical men, and the headmaster of Eton suggests that the further usage of the left hand develops certain organs of the brain which otherwise lie dormant.

The General Hospital.

The General Hospital of St. John's is the clearing house for all medical or surgical cases, requiring special treatment. Particularly is this so of out-patients whose diseases are beyond the care of the resident physician, whose time is taken up with so many others that he has not leisure at his disposal to specialise in individual cases, hence they are sent on to the General Hospital, where a capable staff of doctors and nurses minister to their physical ills. Too little, it may be, is known of the good work of this institution, reports of which are not so widely circulated as they might be. When it is remembered that the General Hospital is the only one of its kind—outside the Grenfell Institutions—in Newfoundland, it becomes at once apparent that the burden of caring for the sick of the Dominion, entering its wards, is an enormous one. In fact the present accommodation is not extensive enough to receive the number of patients who seek admission, and many have to wait long ere they can be received.

The Annual Report of the Medical Superintendent, a copy of which we acknowledge receipt—for the year ending December 31st, 1918, makes very interesting reading, covering as it does all the phases and ranges of the various treatments administered the patients, as well as giving a general resume of the conditions under which the institution is conducted. From this report we gather that as in previous years the hospital staff could not accommodate the large numbers seeking admission, (a state of affairs, we might add, in passing which existed throughout 1919.) Dr. Keegan emphasises that the causes which make for congestion of patients must be removed, even though the remedy for such removal be a radical one, and suggests the following solution of the problem: (1) Extension of the Hospital; (2) The provision of adequate accommodation for the sick poor, and (3) Building and equipping a ten-bed Hospital for each of the principal Bays. To carry out these reforms money is needed, but as the health of the population is the chief desideratum, there should be ample grants forthcoming to conserve this blessing—grants adequate in amount to complete the necessary extension, provision and construction. Of course it must be understood that if people look for and demand hospital treatment, in preference to home treatment, as they are largely doing now, they should be willing to pay for it, as only under an arrangement or agreement of this kind would Government assistance, financially, be justified.

In support of Bay Hospitals, Dr. Keegan quotes the work of the Grenfell institutions at LaRador, at St. Anthony and Pelly's Island, and refers to the letters of the Fishermen's Doctor, published from time to time in the local press, showing the advantages which would accrue from the establishment of such. "There can be no doubt," the report under discussion says, "that a properly equipped and managed hospital in each of the big bays would be of immense advantage, not only to the patients treated, but to the practising doctors of the principal places, by affording them an opportunity of keeping in touch with modern hospital methods." Bay Hospitals have to come, and their cost will have to be borne either by public subscription or grants from the public revenue. Newfoundland can find the money for other humanitarian purposes, and why not for the relief of the sick and the cure of disease? The erection of Bay Hospitals is neither Utopian nor impossible, and the advantages to subjects for treatment would be incalculable.

For the year under review, the total number of cases admitted to the General Hospital was 1,275, of which 621 were from the city, 619 from the out-ports and 85 from foreign parts. Of the 83 deaths recorded, 13 died within 48 hours of admission. The death rate for 1918 was 5.9 per cent. The statistics show that out of the 1,389 patients, 114 remaining in hospital on the last day of December, 1917, and 1,275 admitted during 1918, 1,261 were discharged, leaving 128 remaining in on December 31, 1918. Medical cases are accounted for as under: Cured, 115; improved, 85; unimproved, 14; died, 43. Surgical: Cured, 707; improved, 188; unimproved, 81; died, 40. The number of operations performed were 787, the mortality rate in these being at the exceptionally low percentage of 2.8 a high testimony indeed to the efficiency of the surgical staff. Altogether the report of Dr. Keegan is one worthy perusal, and his suggestions for further improvement in the care of the bodily infirmities of our population should be heeded and put into effect.

Work of the Storm.

A newly built garage on Prince of Wales Street, owned by a man named Kavanagh, was partly destroyed by the storm last night, the roof of the structure being blown off and the side walls thrown out of plumb. The house on Franklin Avenue, which was partly shifted from its foundation the previous night, made another shift during the storm last night, making it more difficult to have it replaced.

Explanatory.

The Telegram apologises to its readers and patrons for the incompleteness of the present issue. The electric power which runs the linotype machines, having been shut off all the morning while the fumes at Petty Harbor was being cleared of slob ice which made and accumulated during last night's cold snap, was not restored until some time after midday, consequently the machines were idle, and in "making up" only such matter as had been previously set, together with the most interesting of the daily current local items, as printed. The foreign messages are only published in part.

Temporary Hospital Operating.

The temporary military Hospital, taking the place of that burned when the Empire Barracks was destroyed by fire, is now operating in the Seaman's Institute, where Grenfell Hall has been taken over. Twenty odd patients and some forty-eight daily patients are receiving treatment. The X-ray apparatus, the burned wood-work of which has been rebuilt by Lawrence Bros., will be installed in a day or two.

"Flowerland" Repeated

An encouraging audience attended the second performance of the Operetta "Flowerland" at the Casino last night, as bad as the weather was. The repetition was carried through as splendidly as on the first night and the audience was highly pleased with every faint little actress and performer. The solos, duets and choruses were again faultlessly rendered and the accompaniment of the orchestra—the C.C.C. Band—added greatly to the evening's enjoyment.

Smallpox in Bonavista Bay.

The Health Department has received word that four more cases of smallpox have broken out at Keel's, Bonavista Bay. There are twenty-one houses at that place under quarantine. One case is reported from King's Cove and Dr. Le Vesconte is looking after the quarantine regulations. Luckily the disease is of a mild type and with precautionary measures being taken, it should soon be stamped out.

Express Snow-Bound.

The express which left Port aux Basques on Wednesday morning and should have arrived here yesterday, is snow-bound at Alexander Bay. The list of passengers has not yet been received as the wires are down. This express, which is now in ten feet of snow, will not arrive, it would seem, until late to-night or to-morrow morning.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, December 12, 1919. Among eligible lotions for use after shaving, some of our customers have found Cream of Cucumbers especially good, and always ask for it when they want an article of this kind. For Cream of Cucumbers is of great value as an emollient, especially in winter weather, and applied to the face after shaving effectually prevents chapping, spraying and other troubles of a close shave. The Cream may also be used—and it is genuinely good for the purpose—for chapped and sprayed hands and face. Price 30c. a bottle. We have a few bottles of Mavis Perfume on hand—excellent as a Christmas present. A favorite perfume daintily put up in a dull glass flask. Price $2.50 a bottle.

No. 2 Hold on Fire.

The s.s. Mercian, reported in yesterday's issue, reached port last evening at about half-past four. She hauled into the Furness Withy pier this morning, when the work of discharging No. 2 hold, which is on fire began.

From Cape Race.

CAPE RACE, To-day. Wind N.W., still blowing a heavy gale, with a heavy sea on. Nothing sighted. Bar. 29.85; Ther. 20.

At the Majestic.

Charles Ray, in the picture which the Motion Picture World describes as the best in which he has appeared, stars in "The Girl Dodger" at the Majestic Theatre this evening. This Paramount picture, which is a favorite with laugh following laugh from start to finish, is of the serio-comic class and will be sure to please every patron. Plenty of speed and action make it an unusual screen story, and no one should miss it to-night. In addition another picture will be shown—"Hushing the Scoundrel," a sate-splitting comedy. The entire show, therefore, is bubbling over with cheerfulness and good spirits and it will be utterly impossible for anyone to leave the hall to-night without a smile on his face. For a sure-cure for the blues and a thorough dose of pessimism-antidote, see the show at the Majestic this evening.

Water Shut Off.

This morning the water on the higher levels was shut off for some reason and many people had to go to work without breakfast, as a consequence, and many more wasted a lot of time thawing pipes that were not frozen at all.

Due To-Morrow.

A wireless from S.S. Schem, from Liverpool, received by the Furness Withy Co., shortly after noon, advises that the captain expects to dock at noon to-morrow. The ship is encountering a succession of heavy head winds, making progress slow.

Electric Service Stopped.

The intake of the fume at Petty Harbor became choked with ice last evening, and as a consequence the lighting and power services were cut off for some time. The streets, and many residences were in darkness until the ice was cleared away and the service resumed. During the stoppage of the current the long unused hand lamps were rooted out and furnished up, candles also being requisitioned.

Schooner Missing.

A small schooner with a crew of four men left Bell Island on Wednesday for this port, and as yet has not been heard of. The schooner was coal laden and may have sheltered in some part of Conception Bay.

Season's Heaviest Storm Yesterday.

Yesterday's and last night's wind storm, with the very low temperature, made them ones to be remembered for some time to come. West of Clarendville it was snowing and drifting, the thermometer registering near zero. In the city the storm was felt by the people on the Higher Levels more than by those below, and many panes of glass and chimney tops were broken and blown away. No less than three houses were shifted from their foundations by the wind, and the Constabularymen of the Central Fire Hall declare that they were "rocked to sleep"—by the wind-swayed building. Of course this may be exaggerating it—but it did blow some. "God help the poor fellows at sea!" was an exclamation heard from more than one, and all agreed that, bad as it was in port, they would rather be there than "on the raging main," where the seas swept over the vessel and the "hardy" sailors grinned as they hammered at the iron-frozen sails and rigging with bleeding hands. It's a romantic life—that of the sailor—in summer—but romance loses its glamour in the winter.

Fire at Cookstown Rd.

At noon to-day, the firemen were called to the residence of Wm. Squires, Cookstown Road, where a blaze was in progress. The fire started from a torch which was employed to thaw out some frozen water pipes. After about 15 minutes the "all out" signal was sounded. The place was not much damaged.

Extraordinarily High Tide.

WATER FLOODING WATERFRONT WHARVES, CAUSE DAMAGE.—HIGHEST IN FORTY YEARS.

What was described by Hon. Tasker Cook, for many years connected with shipping and a constant visitor to the waterfront, as "the highest tide in forty years," was in evidence along the harbor's edge this morning for about three hours or so.

At Baine Johnston's Wharf, for example, the water rose above the wharf and, continuing to rise, came up the cove to the upper corner of the wholesale store, leaving the bottom step of the stairs leading to the office under water. The rise was one of about three feet and a half, coming about a foot above the wharf. About 100 casks of fish, which were lying on the wharf at the time, were caught by the rising tide and for a time were floating about. When the tide went back, however, they were left stranded. Their contents are supposed to have been badly damaged. The casks of fish were owned by Hon. P. Templeman.

At Bowring's wharf, McDougall's, Bishop's and right up the harbor the same thing happened. On the South Side the schooner Jubilee, owned by Mr. Frank Moore of Carbonear, pounded against the fishstages and flakes of Mr. John Ryan, damaging them considerably.

Several vessels, anchored up-stream dragged anchor last night and were blown down the harbor. The vessels Admiral Drake, Lady St. John's and a couple of others became entangled when their chains interwound, and they will not be able to be cleared before the tide goes down.

At the City Hall.

The Municipal Council held its regular weekly meeting last evening. The Mayor presided, and Councillors Mullaly and Ayre attended. After the reading of minutes, etc., the following matters were discussed.

The Prime Minister wrote in connection with the transfer of the property on Quidi Vidi Road that he had referred the matter to the Minister of Mines and Agriculture for attention.

The Deputy Colonial Secretary wrote that he would bring Council's letter re matters of finance, to the attention of the Executive Council.

The Minister of Justice wrote that he was giving attention to the points raised by the Council in connection with the Telephone contract.

A light in Convent Lane, asked for by the residents, was allowed to stand over for the present.

Several applications were received for the position of Junior Clerk. Those stood over for enquiry and decision at a special meeting Saturday.

Applications received for the purchase of the houses on Quidi Vidi Rd., were ordered to be filed in the meantime.

The Solicitor reported on the rights of the Council in connection with the control of the Parade Ground. It was decided that the application of the Newfoundland Highlanders for a site to build their Armoury on this ground could not be acceded to.

The City Engineer reported on the need of a light on Cook Street. This was granted.

It was decided to take legal proceedings, after ten days' notice, against parties who have not paid the amounts assessed against them for the laying of the water and sewerage along in front of their properties.

The City Engineer reported on work of the several departments of the city under his control during the past week.

A list of lights out in the city during the past week was ordered to be referred to the authorities for attention.

The Health Officer and Sanitary Supervisor submitted their weekly reports.

After disposing of some routine business and passing of pay rolls and bills, the meeting adjourned.

This Morning's Fire.

The Central fire brigade was called to the residence of Mr. Will Ryan, assistant-city engineer, Newtown Road, this morning, a slight fire having broken out there. Mr. Ryan was thawing out a water pipe and the flame ignited the wall between the studding and the pipe. No damage was done.

Would Pay But Couldn't.

Last night an outport man, who could comfortably afford to pay for board but was unable to find shelter, had to apply at the Police Station. There he was welcomed and given the necessary shelter by the Guard. The outport man was financially independent, having several thousand dollars represented on his person by cheques, notes and bank-book.

Crown Jewels of Russia

ON SALE IN CONSTANTINOPLE. Chicago, Dec. 5.—Millions of dollars' worth of diamonds and jewelry stolen from the Imperial palaces and the homes of the nobility of Russia after the revolution that overthrew the Czar have been smuggled into Constantinople and are being sold there for ridiculously low prices, according to James A. Whelan, of New York, who recently returned after a three months' stay in Turkey.

It is thought that possibly these wholesale jewel smuggling operations may answer the question so often asked throughout the world, "What has become of the Russian crown jewels?" With the exception of the jewels of the English royal house, the Russian crown jewels were the most expensive and valuable collection in the world. They disappeared with the overthrow of the Czar and though rumor had it that they had been smuggled by the Czarina to her birthplace in Hesse-Darmstadt, no trace of them has since been found. A part of the collection was kept at the palace of Tsarko-Selo, the Imperial residence near Petrograd, and the remainder in the Kremlin at Moscow. Both these palaces were looted by the revolutionaries.

The crown jewels in the Kremlin included the crown of Michael Feodorovich; the tiara of Peter the Great; five jeweled sceptres once wielded by Michael Feodorovich, Czar Alexis, Peter the Great, George I, of Georgia and Stanislaus Augustus of Poland; and the crown which has been used by the Romanoffs since 1762 and was originally made for Catherine the Great.

The most valuable jewel kept at the Tsarko-Selo palace was the famous Orloff diamond of 182 carats given by Prince Orloff to his Imperial mistress, Catherine II, to patch a lover's quarrel. It is one of the world's largest diamonds and formed the eye of an idol in India several centuries ago.

It is now believed that the wonderful diamonds and other gems of the crown jewels were cut up for the thieves by Russian gemsmiths and are being sold in Constantinople and other foreign cities. It was thought only a few months ago that fragments of these royal jewels were being smuggled into New York.

"Diamonds from Russia," said Mr. Whelan, "are being sold in Constantinople for $75 a carat. In other countries, the price of diamonds has risen under an insatiable demand to $600 a carat. Beautiful gems of other kinds, which would be priceless, in normal times, are being sold in the Turkish metropolis for a song. I saw a steel-blue four-carat diamond sold for $300. The illicit trade is assuming vast proportions. There is no attempt made by the authorities to stop it and it is whispered that officials of the Soviet government in Petrograd are profiting by this trade in stolen jewels."

Shoots Bear With .42 Revolver.

The following interesting bear story is reprinted from the Telegraph of St. John, N.E.

A St. John man had a unique experience in the woods of Albert County a few weeks ago. He was sitting on the bank of a stream with a companion about 5 o'clock one morning fishing, when his companion thought he would try his luck at another part of the brook and went down stream. Not long before a whistling sound was heard, but thinking that it was his companion returning the man paid no attention to the sound. Suddenly there was a crash and a grunt and turning quickly he saw two live bear cubs tumbling over each other down the slope. Directly behind the cubs was a large black bear standing upright and coming toward the man. He quickly pulled out his .42 revolver and shot the old bear in the neck, the bullet making a nasty wound. This only aggravated the bear and with a savage growl she made a lunge forward. When the bear was only a few feet away he succeeded in firing three more shots all of which struck her in the head or shoulders. In her fall forward she knocked the man into the water. Hearing the first shot fired his companion ran through the woods and came upon the scene just as he was getting out of the water. The bear getting up at the approach of his companion afforded an opportunity to the intrepid sportsman who fired a third time, the bullet striking her in the head and taking effect.

With many scratches and much hard work, they succeeded in securing the two cubs which they brought with them to the city. The cubs are now doing well at a farm near the city are now as bright and playful as they were in their native haunts. A farmer near the place where the bears were found said that the bear had killed one of his hollers, had destroyed several bee-hives and other property about the place and had been making herself a general nuisance. The old bear weighed about 600 pounds and was over six feet tall when standing upright—a rather formidable assailant to combat single-handed with nothing but a revolver to defend oneself with.

"Imitation is the Sincerest Form of Flattery"

¶ There is no connection whatever between Ru-ber-oid and the roofings called "Rubberoid".

¶ Why do so many imitators refer to their product as "Rubberoid"? Solely and simply to mislead the buyer, to make him think that he is getting genuine Ru-ber-oid Roofing.

¶ And for the same reason, dishonest and unscrupulous dealers foist these imitations on a too-confiding and unsuspecting public.

Smoker's Paradise.

Mexico may be called the smoker's paradise. There is plenty of good, cheap tobacco in that country, where the leaf grows freely. Furthermore, no tax is levied upon it. One may buy in Mexico a cigar every bit as good as the average 15 cent brand in this country for a sum equivalent to 2 1/2 cents of our money. Cigarettes are cheap in proportion. To protect the domestic article Mexico has levied a prohibitive tax upon imported tobacco, so that no Mexican may buy an American cigar.

Hockey Pointers.

By TOM HOWARD (in "Top-Notch" Magazine.)

Hockey has three fundamentals—ability to skate, speed on the ice, and the knack of handling a stick—and without these any one trying to play the game is hopelessly lost.

Of course, ability to skate is the main thing, for without that nobody could play hockey. But ability to skate does not presuppose an intricate knowledge of the art of skating. All it requires is certainty of balance and an ability to change one's direction in a flash. Speed is another essential, for although a player may be a fair skater and have an excellent knowledge of the game, he is worthless when pitted against an opponent who can skate away from him at will.

As for the knack of handling a stick and directing a puck, that is something which only long experience in the heat of conflict can give a man. Practice helps, but it is when in opposition to players who are trying as desperately to get the puck away from you as you are trying to keep them from getting it. Clever stick work is the hand mark of the finished hockey player.

My first word of advice to one who thinks of playing hockey is to learn how to skate for speed and then how to handle a stick. After practice alone the player will find that his hockey education is just beginning, for the sport, although requiring its devotees to be expert in the three basic principles I have outlined, demands also strict adherence to team play. The individual is not robbed of the initiative, but he must be quick to grasp new situations and to complement the play of his teammates at any and all times. On the other hand, he must expect the same co-operation from his own players.

II.

The greatest difficulty that the new player will encounter once he gets on a team is the off-side rule. There is no rule like it in any other sport. In as few words as I can explain it, its import is: Keep behind the puck. No player can receive the puck who is nearer his opponent's goal than the puck itself. The rule is not, as so many people believe, to prevent diagonal passes up the ice. As a matter of fact, such passes are permissible provided that the player who takes the puck is nearer his own goal than the puck at the instant of its being passed. It is this off-side rule which has caused most of the difficulty with hockey in this country. The American player rarely realizes that it is the most important thing about the game.

Just let the off-side rule be strictly enforced in American hockey, and the players will be amazed to find how little they really know about it. Why, I have seen dozens of games, including one or two championship contests, which have hinged in a faulty interpretation or enforcement of the rule, and goals have been scored which should never have fallen into the net either because of ignorance or laxness on the part of the officials in applying this most important rule.

The player who is just beginning the game should know that the man who is off-side might just as well be off the ice so far as his value to his team is concerned. He can't take a pass and he can't help in the play in any way. Perhaps if there were a more drastic penalty than mere cessation of play and a new face-off of importance of observing this rule would be more firmly impressed upon the players.

III.

In my opinion the off-side rule is the one that has made hockey what it is, and it should never be changed, although you hear the point agitated from time to time. It is so thoroughly understood in Canada that it is second nature to the players, and that is what it should be here. It's because of the failure of the average American player to comprehend the value of this rule that so much misunderstanding has arisen from time to time in games between American and Canadian teams. In a tight game I have seen Canadians time and again make no effort to block an opposing player who was off-side only to have that player score a goal against them a moment later. The referee should have called the player off-side, but he didn't.

Then there is the desire of the American player to think of hockey as he does of some other sport. More than once, when I was coaching Yale, I have had men, who wanted to plot out their plays beforehand, go on the ice with a system of signals such as they used in football or baseball. But once the puck was faced they found their signals availed them nothing. Hockey as a game is so fast, the situations change so rapidly, and it is so complex that it is impossible to introduce signals or anything even approximating them. You have a general system of attack, but once you try to make your plans specific you strike all kinds of snags.

I do not desire to be understood as saying that you cannot have team play, for you can, and you can have team play which is practiced beforehand, but it must be such as to be readily adaptable to the ever-changing conditions that arise in the actual heat of conflict. It might be better to call it combination play rather than team play. It is in combination play that all the science and technique of the game are brought out. In advancing the puck you can send your forward line down the ice in a veritable wall with the puck passing constantly across from one player to the other. This is scientific hockey, for it is designed to split the defense and keep it guessing. On the other hand, you can have the kind of hockey that places full dependence on the individual, and relies on one man to get the puck down the ice to within striking distance when either he or some one who has followed through will take a shot.

IV.

In hockey a player never has actual control of the puck. He doesn't pick it up and carry it as the football player does the football. He must carry it down the ice by guiding it with his stick, and the slips that may take place are innumerable. This, then, is the chief obstacle against pre-arranged plays. From the face-off at the beginning of the play one team doesn't have undisputed possession; it must take its chance, and the puck may go to any one of the half dozen men playing behind the one who is facing off, or it may go to the opposing team. Therefore you can never count on getting an attack under way, because you never know if you are going to get it or how or where you are going to get it.

In football it is simple to sit down two weeks before a game and plot out your plays, both offensive and defensive. They say you can do the same thing in baseball, although I doubt it. In hockey it is absolutely impossible. Therefore, when the American begins to play hockey he would only be a very small piece of loss, and even this would cause me intense misery. I felt tired and worn out all the time and actually should have been in bed instead of trying to work, and if I had given way to my feelings there is where I would have been, for I was not really able to be up and about.

"I had tried every sort of medicine I could hear of, but none of them did me any good. Then one day, my wife suggested I try Tanlac, and while I had about lost faith in all kinds of medicines I took her advice, and I have thanked her ever since for mentioning it to me. Well, sir, to my surprise, I began to improve almost immediately after I started taking it, and now, while I have only taken five bottles, I can truthfully say I am a well man. I have a good appetite and can eat anything I want and everything agrees with me perfectly. I never feel nauseated now. Tanlac has put me on my feet again, and I think it is my duty to tell others about it so if they are troubled as I was they can have the benefit of my experience. Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative, in Harbor Street, by Thomas Walsely & Sons; in Placentia by James Murphy & Son; and in Topsail, by J. K. Bursell—adv't.

V.

I wouldn't change the method of scoring. The goal-keeper, although he may seem to be so, is not at a tremendous disadvantage. He makes relatively few bona-fide stops. Most of his stops are made by making a hit him, not because he has endeavored to stop it. You will find the attack and the defense well balanced in the average game.

One of the most interesting developments in hockey has been the change from seven-man teams to six-man combinations in professional hockey in some Canadian leagues. The amateur teams have retained the seven-man rule.

Six-man hockey is not nearly as fast as the game to which we have become accustomed; although it offers the individual player a better opportunity to make spectacular plays on a small or moderate-sized rink, it leads to a slow game that proves uninteresting. The average player would rather play six-man hockey because it is not so hard on the individual. It does not hold for the endurance necessary to play when there are seven men on the ice, and does not begin to be the test of playing ability that the standard game is. When a player goes into a game there are a lot of things he should discover just as soon as he can, for the reason that they may mean victory or defeat, later on. For one thing, he should find out the weakest defensive side of the player he is most directly concerned with, and he should try to learn the weakest sides of the point and cover-point, the two bulwarks of the defense. Every player has a weak side, and if you learn soon enough which one it is you have learned something that will be of immense value to your team. Every man on the team, especially the wings, should be schooled in getting the puck on the rebound from a stop by the goal keeper, for usually the goal keeper has been so drawn out of position by the previous shot that he is off his balance and totally unprepared to meet another assault.

VI.

Many teams make the mistake of playing too conservative a defensive game. They lose chances after chance to score themselves. Point and cover-point should never make the mistake of both going for the man with the puck. It is done sometimes, but the team that makes a practice of such a play is doomed to defeat. They should at all times play a close defensive game, unless it be a close game, and their team is behind, when it is often desirable to bring them right up behind the forwards and thereby reinforce the attack. Often the tying and winning goals can be made by such a shift of tactics, but it is dangerous to make a practice of such a play. The goal keeper must keep his eyes everlastingly on the puck, and in order that he may never lose sight of it on a face-off, his team should arrange itself in such a way that a clear, unobstructed avenue is left for the man guarding the cage to view the play. In no circumstances should the goal keeper leave his post even for the smallest fraction of a second.

Gets Rid of Six Year's Trouble in Short Order by Taking Tanlac.

"I never thought there was a medicine in the world that could do any one the good Tanlac has done," said A. J. Corrier, who resides at 44 Dorchester Street, Sydney, Nova Scotia, recently. Continuing, he said:

"For the past six years I have suffered a great deal with my stomach. I had a very poor appetite and would have to force down everything I ate, and as soon as I did it would sour, gas would come and my heart would palpitate terribly, and I would have great difficulty in breathing. I would have such dizzy spells it would be all I could do to keep from falling, and they would leave me feeling weak and exhausted. I was extremely nervous and could get but little sleep, and every morning I would get up with a terrible headache and was very seldom able to eat the least bite of breakfast and when I did it would only be a very small piece of toast, and even this would cause me intense misery. I felt tired and worn out all the time and actually should have been in bed instead of trying to work, and if I had given way to my feelings there is where I would have been, for I was not really able to be up and about.

"I had tried every sort of medicine I could hear of, but none of them did me any good. Then one day, my wife suggested I try Tanlac, and while I had about lost faith in all kinds of medicines I took her advice, and I have thanked her ever since for mentioning it to me. ## "Evangeline," The Perfect Shoe for Women.

THIS IS THE HOME OF GOOD SHOES FOR LADIES

It is with a feeling of pride and pleasure that we announce the arrival of our Women's Footwear for the Fall and Winter Seasons.

Evangeline Shoes are far superior to the ordinary sort of Shoes, that can be had at every store, where Women's Shoes are sold.

They come to us direct from the workshops of one of the world's noted makers of Women's Shoes.

There's many a new style feature in the Fall models, and we will take the greatest pleasure in showing our lady patrons the handsome Footwear that will be in vogue during the coming season.

(Before the Chief Justice.)

John A. Robinson vs. The St. John's Daily Star.

This is a case of libel brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for publishing the following statements, reflecting upon him in his personal and public capacity:—

(Daily Star, Oct. 17.)

"The Reid Newfoundland Company is using the post office officials, the baggage men, and other officers of the Reid Company for the purpose of distributing copies of The Daily News, published by Robinson and Company, Ltd. The Telegram published by W. J. Herder, and The Herald, published by Sir Patrick McGrath.

The Star is in a position to prove that the Reid Newfoundland Company is using their officials, baggage men and others, for the purpose of the free distribution of these papers throughout the country. The Reid news agents on the Reid trains are not handling copies of the Opposition papers, and are doing everything in their power to prevent their circulation.

Many of the Post Office Officials have declared themselves as aggressively partisan and are fighting for the Government and doing everything in their power to interfere with the circulation of the Opposition papers through the mails.

The time for revolution has come. If the people of Newfoundland are to have their mail service tampered with and dominated by government partisans and can get no redress by complaint to the proper authorities, then the people must rise in mass and wipe out the service.

If the Reid Newfoundland Company is to dominate the mails and use their trains and their officials throughout the country as political fighters for the Cashin-Morine-Robinson & Company organization, then the time has come when the Reids must be fired out of this country.

Newfoundland is to-day struggling for its life, and the Reids, the McGraths, the Morines, the Robinsons, the Cashins, the Herders, and other bought and paid for Reid heels, are doing everything they can to strangle the free life of this country.

Just as the people of Russia had to destroy the Czars and the Rasputins who were bleeding them, dominating them, and insulting them, so the people of this country will be driven through sheer desperation to rise in revolt against the men who in their press are daily circulating infamous falsehoods, whose editorial columns are being filled with lies, who by political intrigue are attempting to put chloroform to the nostrils of the people, whose graft and bullying are used to subdue the unwary and whose corruptionists have debauched the public service of this country, and are using its train service, its finances, its taxation, its postal service, its customs service, and every other public service of the colony, as the tentacles of this huge Reid octopus which seeks to strangle the very life of Newfoundland."

F. Stirling, First Clerk of the Col. Secretary's Office, sworn and examined as to issuance of the paper, and was asked if documents of ownership were filed in his office. Document not filed.

Dr. J. A. Robinson called, sworn; his commission as Postmaster General read and recorded. In his evidence he stated that hundreds of copies of the Star paper were recorded at the Post Office without any address and on one occasion there were 38 bundles without addresses.

Winter addresses court and asks that case be postponed, as certain witnesses to prove statement of defendants were out of town and consequently not available at present. The Chief Justice ruled that the case should proceed.

The Special Jury to try the case was then empanelled, the full tale being taken, with but one challenged, as follows: John A. Williams, Thomas McGrath, Fred Wadden, Ed. Sinnott, John Channing, Michael Benning, Michael O'Reilly, Wm. Fraser, Wm. Emsary, Geo. Coffey.

Following the panel and swearing in of the jurors, Mr. Robinson was recalled and examined by Warren, K.C., re the complaint. Mr. Winter then addressed the Bench and moved for an absolute dismissal, the plaintiff having failed to establish his identification with the complaint. Court refused motion. Howley, K.C., then addressed the jury for plaintiff and had not finished when court adjourned for dinner, to sit again at 2.30. Howley, K.C., for plaintiff; Warren, K.C., Winter, B.A., for defendants.

In a Nutshell.

Like the sun, the modern gas fire warms solid objects—such as the furniture of a room or its occupants—without appreciably raising the temperature of the intervening air. At the same time the products of combustion in their passage up the chimney flue keep the atmosphere in healthy motion. That is gas fire science and gas fire hygiene in a nutshell.

TESTIMONIALS

Are not required by us to boost our trade, that is why our plant is working at full capacity in our endeavour to handle the large volume of business that has been placed with us, by our many customers, all over the Island.

Ask to be shown our Suits, Overcoats, Overalls and Shirts, and we know your verdict will be "that for honest tailoring our products stand supreme above all others".

Our 25 years' manufacturing experience is at your service.
