30 Years in Practice in Newfoundland. BROKEN PLATES REPAIRED.

Well equipped Dental Offices can now repair plates. A broken tooth is no reason why a plate should be discarded. A new tooth, or several of them, can be vulcanized onto the old plate and make the service absolutely as good as ever. If you meet with an accident that injures your plate in any way, consult your dentist about repairs before you discard it for a new one. You can often prevent a needless expense. jne27,ta,th,s,tf

Lord Cecil's Dilemma

—OR—
The Picnic

Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XXI.

"You are but a changeling," went on the steward, calmly, "and the rightful heir lives. You will now see why I have been so anxious to place you in a secure position. As the husband of Lady Gladys Howard, come what may, you will be safe, and I shall not have schemed for you in vain. Even the wolf takes care of its own."

Lord Cecil sprang erect, and regarded Collins half in doubt, half in fear.

"No, no!" he gasped; "this cannot be! Proof, proof!"

That will be forthcoming when needed. Perhaps too soon. Your only safeguard at present is to obey me."

A servant interrupted them, and Collins departed—the young man's savage tones ringing in his ears as he poured a torrent of wrath at the unlucky menial.

"I did not intend telling him so soon," muttered the steward. "I might never have told him at all; but it is best for him to know. It is a heavy weight to bear! He is full of caprice as a woman, and from the moment Lady Gladys was his own her value began to diminish in his eyes. How little he dreams that she is his cousin."

Collins had an audience with the Earl that evening. He could not wait until next June.

"Are these the wishes of Lord Cecil?" demanded the earl.

"They are wishes, and Lord Cecil will object to nothing that I propose," said Collins.

"I cannot interfere," decided the earl.

"You refuse to speak to Lady Gladys?"

"Most decidedly."

"Then I will!"

My lord's eyes flashed with their old fire.

"You do so at your peril, Mr. Collins." He always prefixed "Mr." to the steward's name now. "I have told my laughter everything. Nothing that you can say will further damage me in her eyes. If you dare address one word to her, sir, I swear that she shall not wed Lord Cecil, and you may do your worst! My child shall not be tortured further. Now go, you unnaturaloundrel!"

He pointed to the door, and Collins led to be content with one venetian blind in reply. He was abashed and baffled. If he went too far, he might be buried in the ruins he was able to bring about others. After this there was nothing more said about hastening the marriage between Lord Cecil Stanhope and Lady Gladys Howard.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The dearest, truest friend that Sir Charles Hastings possessed in the whole world was Herbert Gardner. For years they had been chums at college, and there was hardly an action, or a thought, that one withheld from the other.

Sir Charles had confided to his friend the story of the shadow that had oppressed them for so long—the shadow that had killed his father—

WRIGLEY'S NIPS

This new candy-coated gum delights young and old.

It "melts in your mouth" and the gum in the center remains to aid digestion, brighten teeth and soothe mouth aches.

There are the other WRIGLEY friends to choose from, too:

Trade Supplied by MEEHAN & CO., St. John's, Nfld.

and driven his mother into seclusion. Only to Herbert Gardner did he willingly utter one word of this, for he knew that he could trust him, and there is sweet relief in earnest human sympathy. He craved for no man's pity, and had endured the contemptuous smiles of the thoughtless until his heart had been filled with bitterness.

The two young students had exchanged confidences. Of himself Herbert Gardner knew little or nothing, and there were times when his cheek burned with the fear of shame. When he heard others speak of their parents and friends he shrank away. When he was questioned as to who and what he was, he could say nothing, and at last came to be regarded with suspicion by the aristocratic snobs, who considered it a disgraceful fiction that they should be forced to breathe the same atmosphere as a nobody—a fellow who never mentioned father or mother—who perhaps had no rightful claim to the plebeian name he bore.

Sir Charles Hastings, who inherited something of his father's broad views of life, strongly resented the cruel persecution to which Herbert Gardner was subjected. The last of an ancient line himself, he firmly believed that "Kind hearts are more than coronets, And simple faith than Norman blood," and constituted himself the champion of Herbert Gardner.

There were few who dared to sneer openly before Hastings. He was known to be good-natured and kind-hearted to a fault; but he was quick to resent an insult, and was the hardest-hitting man in the college.

Herbert Gardner's origin was a mystery to himself. He appeared to have not one relative in the wide world. His earliest remembrances were of a kindly woman's face, a humble home, a large garden where he played with other children; a picturesque old house in a country village, with a shop in the front room. He lived here with an old couple, who cared for him lovingly. He was then sent away to a big school, where he remained for a long time. The old shopkeeper and his wife died, and he could not tell where the village was situated, or even its name.

He lived at the school until he was old enough to be sent to Eton, and from Eton to Cambridge.

But where did the money come from? He had nothing to waste, but all his wants were supplied. Someone must take an interest in him. His schoolmaster paid the college fees, and made him a small allowance, but declared that he could tell him nothing of the mystery. The money was remitted to him through the bank, and that was all he knew about it. He had been placed at the school by a stranger, who had made careful arrangements concerning him, and all these arrangements had been faithfully carried out. So at last Herbert Gardner ceased attempting to solve the problem of his birth and the mystery that surrounded him, and waited hoping and yet fearing for the disclosure that he knew would come some day.

Hastings was not a little interested in his friend's history, and together they wove all sorts of pleasant romances.

After leaving Cambridge they drifted apart, and Gardner turned his attention toward some profession, finally choosing the law. He visited Emden Hall on one or two occasions, and a desultory correspondence was kept up for years. To Herbert Gardner alone did Sir Charles relate the story of his strange marriage, and to Sir Charles alone did Gardner confide his hopes and fears for the future. The bankers kept up his small allowance, but his origin was as much a mystery as ever, and he was working hard for fame and fortune.

Then there was a long silence until after the sensational reports of the sudden return of the young baronet's wife. Immediately following these Gardner sent his old chum a letter of sympathy and advice as follows:

DEAR OLD CHARLEY—I see the papers that your beto noir has come to life at last. Now what do you intend doing? Surely you will not countenance the creature? If you take my advice (and I am a fully

DEAR BERT—The papers know more of my wife's movements than I do. So far I have neither seen nor heard from her, though I know that she is not far away. It may be that she does not intend to trouble me, and I pray to Heaven that it is so. If she does, as in a quarrel, if your letter is legally sound. Of course, I can never acknowledge her, and I dare not expose my mother's folly to the eyes of the world by dragging our troubles into court. Somehow, I dread the worst, for the newspaper announcements can emanate from one source only—my wife! I will run up to the metropolis next week for a day or two, and have a chat with you.

CHARLEY.

He posted his reply to Herbert Gardner, then searched the papers for the story of his own misery. It is strange that we rarely notice that which concerns us most until it is pointed out to us. Sir Charles had not even seen the briefest report, and when he read the miserable scandal, his cheek paled. He was more than ever convinced that the information had been supplied by the wretched woman who claimed his name; and that in itself was proof that she intended assuming her rights. His mother must not know of this. Her life was already cankering with remorse. He was folding the paper, ready to hide it away, when his eyes fell upon the announcement of Lady Gladys' engagement to Lord Cecil Stanhope, and a bitter cry escaped him. He could scarcely believe the awful words.

"My Gladys—my darling!" he murmured, "to that man! No—no, it cannot be!"

A Bit of Hypnotic Illusion.

Without the walls of the Mongolian yurt the wind whistled and drove the frozen snow sharply against the stretched felt. Through the roar of the wind came the sound of many voices in mingled shouting, wailing and laughter. I felt that in such surroundings it would be difficult to dumbfound a wanderer nomad with miracles. This thought had scarcely time to flash through my mind before Tushegoun Lama suddenly raised his head, looked sharply at me and said: "There is very much unknown in Nature and skill in using the unknown produces the miracle; but the power is given to few. I want to prove it to you."

He stood up, pushed back his sleeves, seized his knife and strode across to the shepherd. "Michik, stand up!" he ordered.

When the shepherd had risen, the Lama quickly unbuttoned the man's coat and bared his chest. Suddenly struck his knife into the shepherd's chest. The Mongol fell, all covered with blood, a splash of which I noticed on the yellow silk of the Lama's coat. "What have you done?" I exclaimed.

"Be still," he whispered.

With a few strokes of the knife, he opened the Mongol's chest, and more blood appeared to flow, and the face of the shepherd was quite calm. He was lying with his eyes closed and appeared to be in deep and quiet sleep. As the Lama began to open his abdomen, I shut my eyes in fear and horror. When I opened them a little later, I was still more astonished at seeing the shepherd with his coat still open and his breast normal, quietly sleeping on his side, and Tushegoun Lama sitting peacefully by the brazier, smoking his pipe and looking into the fire in deep thought.

"It is wonderful!" I confessed. "I have never seen anything like this!"

"About what are you speaking?" asked the Lama.

"About your demonstration or 'miracle,' as you call it," I answered.

"I never said anything like that," he replied coldly.

"Afterwards he added: 'What has happened to you this evening is a futile demonstration. You Europeans will not recognize that we dark-minded nomads possess the powers of mysterious science. If you could only see the miracles and powers of the Most Holy Tashi Lama, when at his command the lamps and candles before the ancient statue of Buddha light themselves and when the images of the gods begin to speak and prophesy!'—From Black Magic of Mongolia, in 'Asia' Magazine.

In the Realms of Sport.

It's fine to be a slugger great. And slam the ball upon the seam; And know that when you hug the plate The ladies all will cheer and beam. It's great to come up in the pinch And hear the roaring fans commence Because they know it is a cinch For you to bust the outfield fence.

A slugger's life is great, I wot. Just gaze on Chris with all the fame! He bumps the pill outside the lot And then gets cheered by every dame. He ambles up with manner grand, While bleacher nuts say "Aint he swell!" And when he poles one in the stand, O! baby! How they scream and yell.

Answers:—Shrub hold the world's record for the 5 mile run. 24-33%. Bell's best time is 28-12.

The record for the mile walk, 6 mins. 22secs. is held by George Cummings of Manchester, England, a professional. Harvey Thomas claims that the late Capt. Owen Steele walked the first mile in 7.32 the year he won the 20 mile walking match. Can anyone verify this? It seems a remarkable performance inasmuch as the first mile from the old St. Andrew's clubrooms (L.O.A. Hall) is all up hill.

When you manage to get struck out four times and miss five flies in the only game of the season your best girls comes to see—Well! ain't it disconcertin'?

Golf may be good for the nerves. But did you ever have to listen to a golfer?

He does his bit we will admit. Who makes the useful one base hit; But better far, it is, my son, To see him clout the long home-run.

A rip-roaring double header is on the carpet to-night for the Mount Cashel trophy. The first clash is between the Lions and the Wanderers, and if the latter show up as well as they did the other evening then the champs will have their work out to do to vanquish them. Likewise the meet between the B.L.S. and Cubs promises to be anything but one-sided as each club wants the honour and glory next Wednesday afternoon of playing before the assembled thousands.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Mary's Church on the 19th inst., when Agnes Alcock was united in the bonds of matrimony to George Fowlow. The bride, carrying a bunch of white carnations and maiden-hair fern, looked charming in a dress of peach crepe de chine with hat to match, and entered the church, where a large concourse of friends had assembled, on the arm of Mr. K. Carter, who acted as father-giver. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. B. Stirling. The bride was attended by Misses F. Priddle and M. Fowlow, who looked very pretty in their respective attire. The groom was assisted by Mr. Harvey Skirving who performed his duties to perfection. After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the West End Restaurant where a bountiful spread was partaken of by the immediate friends of the bride and groom. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents which testified to the esteem in which she is held. The happy couple went out by to-day's express enroute to Trinity where the honeymoon will be spent, after which they will return to the city and will reside on Springdale Street. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Fowlow a bon voyage over the sea of matrimony.

The Inventor of the Revolver.

On Monday, July 19, 1814, Samuel Colt, who invented the revolver, was born at Hartford, in Connecticut, in the United States. One of the principal establishments of that city is still Colt's Firearms Company, though he himself died on January 9, 1862. To call it an invention is, perhaps, not strictly correct, for an eight-chamber pistol dating from the sixteenth century is preserved in the Royal Artillery Museum at Woolwich. Pistols themselves had been used in England since 1544 being so named from Pistola, now called Pistola, a town in Italy, the place of their invention. Colt's weapon was practical, however, and led the British Government in 1855 to establish the Royal Small Arms Factory at Enfield, near London, whence the famous Enfield rifle derived its name. At ten years old Samuel Colt left school to work in his father's silk and woollen manufactory; but at fourteen he made a runaway voyage to India, during which he constructed a wooden model, which still exists, of his future revolver. After returning home he saved all his earnings to devote to his purpose, and in 1835 patented his invention in Europe. Returning again to his birthplace, he overcame various difficulties and discouragements and founded in 1852 the enormous factory which stands to-day, and which has produced many millions of revolvers.

The Child Welfare Association.

What is the object of the Child Welfare Association? In a few words—to keep well children well, to restore the sick children to health.

Next week we are holding a health conference, a conference of mothers and doctors. Mothers are bringing their children to the Conference to be examined by the medical men of the city, to find how they measure up to the standard of a healthy child.

They will be shown how they fall short of that standard and what they can do to improve them.

"Every community can determine its own death rate."

What is meant by the infant death rate? The infant death rate is the number of deaths under one year out of every thousand children born alive. Last year the infant death rate in St. John's was 131.57, that is to say, out of every thousand children born alive, one hundred and thirty-one were dead before they had lived a year. In New Zealand the death rate is 68. Why not "determine" that ours shall be no more than that? When the late King Edward was told that consumption was preventable he said, "Then why not prevent it?" If half these children can be saved, then why not save them? This is the work the community nurses are trying to do as they go their daily round. St. John's is not an easy city for district work, the roads are bad, the hills steep to climb, the weather in winter often very stormy. The nurses go from the Battery to Waterford Bridge Rd., from the Southside to Blackmarsh Rd. There are sixty families on Blackmarsh Rd. alone to be visited. The cars do not help very much and boots and rubbers need to be often replenished. But their work is being appreciated more and more every day.

We need another nurse, a trained public health nurse, but before we engage we must see our way clear to pay her salary.

The work of the Child Welfare Association is capable of being developed along many lines, but is sadly limited for want of money. We have to raise $1,200 yearly as our contribution towards nurses' salaries alone. We have three milk stations to support. The milk supplied very nearly pays for itself, but we have to pay rent, attendants' salaries and other expenses.

A hospital for sick children is badly needed.

"Every community can determine its own death rate."

What Your Face Reveals.

It is generally appreciated that a substantial proportion of almost every day consists of idle moments? To those who live continuously crowded hours, idle moments suggest a luxury, but to the majority the question of filling blank periods of varying lengths arise not infrequently.

There are few more fascinating ways of occupying idle moments than in the study of men and women. At the outset it is necessary to fix in the mind certain standards, so that comparisons may be made. With this object in view, the following distinctive types of features are indicated, but it will be realized that in no case are they exhaustive.

Brown Eyes Show Cleverness.
To take the head, there may be noted:—

The small head associated usually with a lack of capacity.

Heads of unusual magnitude—such, for example, as that of Mr. Lloyd George—indicating great force of character.

The criminal head, with its narrowness, low forehead, and low position of the ears, as seen in the photographs of criminals or in the Chamber of Horrors at Madame Tussaud's.

The high forehead, denoting talent and considerable intellectual capacity.

Amongst other types, may be noted those where the top of the head is rounded, indicating benevolence and religious feeling, whilst a tendency to general roundness shows 'will-power, firmness, or obstinacy.

Then to take the eyes. As indicators of character the eyes are invaluable, though not an infallible guide.

Blue eyes generally denote gentleness and serenity, of lack of determination and little business capacity. Grey eyes indicate liveliness, a poetic temperament, impressionability, earnestness, and magnetism.

Brown eyes are very pleasant, and show affection, courage, and cleverness. Green eyes are associated with the "green-eyed monster," jealousy, but they indicate cleverness. Black eyes are not usually trusted, and often the villain of the piece possesses black eyes and a bold glance.

The various distinct types of noses are:—

The prominent aquiline Roman nose, supposed to show energy, decision, firmness, and a certain absence of refinement.

The straight Grecian nose, indicating refinement, love of arts, and astuteness.

The cogitative nose, with its wide nostrils, indicating considerable powers of thought.

The rather thin and sharp Jewish nose, denoting shrewdness in worldly matters.

Voices That Betray.

Perhaps the human voice affords the most fascinating study. It betrays the quality of mind and character. These voices result from any of the following features:—

Yet it should be remembered that greatness and quality are not always apparent in conversation, for Garrick said of Oliver Goldsmith: "Here lies Nolly Goldsmith, for about seven years called Noll; He wrote like an angel, but talked like poor Poll."

The various types of voices—the coarse, hoarse, piercing, clear, sharp, trembling, hesitating, strong, and the grave to the soft and sweet—need hardly be mentioned in detail, since most have acquired a habit of judging friends and acquaintances by their voices.

Religious Ceremony.

At the close of the Annual Retreat of the Sisters of Mercy, conducted by the Very Rev. J. McLoughlin, C.S.S.R., the combined ceremonial of Religious Profession and reception took place in the beautiful Chapel of St. Brigid's College, on Sunday, July 16th, at 8:30 a.m.

It was greatly regretted that His Grace, the Archbishop, was unable to preside, as the pleasure it would give him to see so many aspirants to the Religious Life, and the joy his presence would afford their young hearts, were both frustrated.

The Right Rev. Mgr. MacDermott, V.G., officiated, assisted by Very Rev. J. Rawlins, the College Chaplain, and Rev. W. McGrath, brother of one of the Postulants. Every detail of the lengthy and solemn rite was impressively performed. Besides the parents and relatives of the Sisters there were present: Right Rev. Mgr. Donnelly, P.P., of Conception, the city clergy and Rev. J. J. Fealey of Philadelphia.

To the sweet strains of the hymn O Gloriosa Virginum, the Sisters entered the Chapel; the four Postulants, in bridal robes, followed by the nineteen Novices to be professed, or renew their pledge of service in the Master's Vineyard. Having taken their appointed places, Holy Mass began, during which the Choir rendered in an inspiring manner, the music appropriate to the occasion. At the Communion the Novices approached the Altar Rails, and in clear, but firm tones, pronounced their sacred vows; three their first annual; fourteen made their renewal, and for the first time since the establishment of the General Novitiate, two made their final consecration of themselves to the King of Kings. These latter add to the Councils the vow of Perseverance till death in the Congregation of the Sisters of Mercy.

At the conclusion of the Mass the Postulants retired, and, having cast aside the trappings of the world, they re-entered the Chapel, clad in the humble garb of the Order. Then the Rev. J. McLoughlin, C.S.S.R., delivered an eloquent and touching sermon, his text being "Hearken, O daughter, and see, and incline thy ear, and forget thy people and thy father's house, for the King hath greatly desired thee, and He is the Lord thy God." (Canticles). He congratulated the young Novices, their parents, and all their friends present, and exhorted the former ever to strive to copy the virtues of their model, Mary Immaculate.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was then imparted by Rev. W. McGrath, after which the Religious in processional order filed out of the Chapel.

The newly-received were: Miss Mollie Henley, in Religion, Sr. M. Gonzaga; Miss Mary Tobin, in Religion; Sr. M. Elizabeth; Miss Hilda Williams, in Religion; Sr. M. Teresa; Miss Madeline McGrath, in Religion; Sr. M. Bernadine.

The Sisters who made their first annual vows were: Sr. St. Jean McDonald, Sr. M. Gabrielle Carter, Sr. M. Alacque McDonald and those who took final vows were: Sr. M. Michael Gillis, Sr. M. Joseph Byrne.

Tobacco Manufacturer Here in Town.

Mr. William I. Zimmer, head of the corporation which manufactures Cornucopia and Southdown tobacco in Petersburg, Virginia, arrived by the Rosalind this morning to spend a vacation here. He was accompanied by his wife and an associate, Frank Vaughan. Mr. Zimmer, who was here some years ago, and speaks warmly of Newfoundland, will be the guest while here of Thos. Smyth, the commission merchant.

Casey Street Fire.

DAMAGE $1000.

Shortly after noon yesterday the Central and West End Fire Companies were called to Casey Street, where a residence occupied by police Sgt. Furlong, Mr. E. Whiteway and Miss Rendell was on fire. Damage to the extent of one thousand dollars was done to the house and contents. The fire was caused by sparks from a chimney igniting the shingles of the roof. It was over half an hour before the blaze was subdued. The residence, which is known as Casey's Cottage, is owned by Mr. D. J. Furlong and is partly covered by insurance.

Reindeer Expert

Came by Rosalind.

Frederick Swan Lawrence, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society and the American Geographical Society, arrived on the Rosalind from Chicago. He proceeds to Labrador to select a site for the herding of 1,000 reindeer, which will be brought over from Lapland next summer. Mr. Lawrence has an intensely interesting project, and a big American corporation is backing him. The Telegram will to-morrow print a detailed story of the projected industry.

Met the Prime Minister.

SIR RICHARD SHOT BY CAMERA-MEN.

The presence of the Prime Minister, Sir R. A. Squires, in New York, made it possible for J. R. Smallwood to get extensive publicity for Newfoundland in the papers and on the screen. Mr. Smallwood wrote interviews with Sir Richard for all the New York papers and for Associated Press, and got Pathe, Kinograms, Fox and International film news agencies to send movie cameramen to the Olympic to take movies of the premier. The newspaper stories contained information about the Humber project, and the possibilities of industrial activity here.

Out of Step.

Newfoundland will have to shortly begin to pick up her step in the march of trade and commerce, if she is to retain the position in the ranks formerly held. It is very easy to drop out and have another fill the vacancy. And that is what will occur unless we get out of the rut into which our reluctance to adapt ourselves to changed and ever-changing conditions abroad, as well as nearer home. If recognition is not speedily taken of the fact that this country is no longer in the commanding position which she once held in the fish markets of the world, there is going to be such a paralysis of exports that will be impossible to prevent. We cannot hope at this day in the twentieth century to dictate to prospective customers as to just what they must buy from us. Rather must we be prepared to fill their orders for requirements, the quality and quantity of which they know best themselves. Neither is the present time to be erecting tariff walls against countries to which we are obliged to sell our products. Retaliation is a weapon that can be used by all parties in the way of duties on imports. Newfoundland is not in a position to-day to enter into competition with bounty fed French fish going into European ports where formerly not one cargo out of ten was other than Newfoundland laden and owned. The scene has changed. All the fish producing countries of Europe, having more than is required for home consumption, are sending their surplus into the markets hither-to held by the Colony. The export duty on our codfish is a weapon that is killing our trade in this commodity. And it is a weapon forged by our own Government. The tax does not come out of the pocket of the exporter, though he has to pay it in order to clear his cargoes. Actually it comes out of the earnings of the men who catch and cure the fish, and therefore it is discriminative against them. Moreover it adds up in the estimated value of the fish, and consequently has to be charged against cargo, thus putting the price up on the purchaser. It is an evil tax, this one of export; does more harm than good, and its total return to the colony's revenue is not at all commensurate with the damaging effect it must necessarily have on our foreign trade relations. With Canada retaliating by the imposition of an import duty on Newfoundland fish and fish products, with the Spanish Government adding to their taxes on the same, and now in negotiations with France, Norway and Iceland on the basis of reciprocal arrangements, it is high time that the Government of Newfoundland, picked up its step, and got into line with the march of trade once more, in order that there may be no break in the commercial-ranks, nor the offer of an opportunity for some other fish country, Japan for instance, which is rapidly coming to the front in fish productiveness, to fill the place out of which this Colony appears to have temporarily dropped.

Nfld. Girl Graduate.

In the list of graduates (Class of 1922) of St. Francis' Academy, Ridgefield, New Jersey, published in the Weekly Bulletin of that town, is the name of Ita M. Devine, who, her many schoolmates will be pleased to learn, was awarded the Palmer diploma for penmanship. The successful recipient, who is a daughter of Mr. John M. Devine, was a bright and studious pupil of the Mercy Convent, Military Road, previous to leaving St. John's. A picture of Miss Devine, together with some associate graduates, appears in the paper above referred to. The Telegram offers congratulations to Miss Devine on her success.

REPORTS FROM LABRADOR.

S.S. Sagona, 13 days on the round trip to Labrador and return, arrived in port yesterday afternoon. The ship made the trip as far as Hopedale. Capt. Burgess reports that few attempts at fishing have been made yet below Cape Harrison. There are no two vessels fishing there are doing well. At Indian Harbor and Smokey quite a lot of fish has been taken in traps and Black Islands the prospects are very bright. At Indian Tickle some traps have been taken as high as 300 yds. whilst others have not had a fish. From Bolister's Rock south to Battle Harbor there has been practically nothing done yet. The remains of a man belonging to Carbonar named Pike who died at Style's Harbor was brought to his home for burial by the Sagona.

Newspaperman Tells About Ernest Shipman

J. R. Smallwood, Newfoundland newspaperman, who has been in New York the last several weeks, arrived in the city to-day by S.S. Rosalind. In conversation with a Telegram reporter Mr. Smallwood told about his interviews with Ernest Shipman, the Canadian moving picture producer, and that gentleman's plans to produce a big Newfoundland moving picture. "I happened to have Mr. Shipman's address," he explained, "and shortly after arriving in New York went to his office on Forty-Fourth Street and found him. He simply told him that I was from Newfoundland, explained that I understood that he had had his eye on our country, and then proceeded to give him all the encouragement of which I was capable. "Show me that the leading citizens of Newfoundland would like to have a Newfoundland picture made, and would co-operate with me in the production of it," capitulated Mr. Shipman, and I will go to Newfoundland! Well, I immediately got in touch with a number of prominent citizens and business men, and their replies were very encouraging, indeed. I also received wires and letters from high officials in the country. "On the strength of that I went to the producer again and showed him my letters and wires. "You have convinced me," he said briefly. "I will go to Newfoundland." So he agreed to leave Montreal on the 15th of this month or as near it as he could for St. John's. Regarding the picture itself the local newspaperman said that it will be a regular screen story, with plot and the best actors that the producer can obtain. Movie going of this city have of course seen many of Mr. Shipman's pictures—"The Sky Pilot," "Back to God's Country," "Nomads of the North," "Taran of the Apes," "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," "Glen-garry Schoolboys," etc. This picture will, like those, be a big movie epic.
"Many of our beautiful, quaint and romantic outports and fishing villages will be shown," it was explained. "Hills, valleys, rivers, ponds, harbours, coasts, the Humber, Codroy Valley, St. John's etc. will be shown. If Cotton is here at the time then it may be arranged, if possible, to have a cameraman go up with him and take the scenes."
"And so," Mr. Smallwood said finally, "we have the opportunity of having the theatres throughout the world show a moving picture of Newfoundland which will dispel at one blow the miserable old conception of Newfoundland as a land of ice, fog and Eskimos. This picture will, if made, prove a veritable eye-opener to the world. Every world, Newfoundland is, through sheer ignorance arising from indifference over our existence at all, thought of as a small, fog-lamped rock where Eskimo ponds fish and eat it themselves. This picture would do more than any other conceivable thing to smash that popular myth and show the world what a really wonderful little island this Newfoundland is, after all."

DEATH BLOW TO CREDIT SYSTEM.
 In these terrible times a death blow to the whole supply system, a heritage of the colony, even the price paid will perhaps not have been too great. "Fishermen will be able to pay for a year's supply at one time" is the almost universal reply made to this. But the fact remains that only those who can, are the independent men to-day, and as a matter of fact, it is exactly what the supply system forces them to do. Who has heard of a fisherman settling up once a year? He settles in the fall, the summer past and the winter come. Why not settle in the spring, be independent? Who can say they cannot do this? The assertion itself is the most encouraging one that can be given to the fishermen, that attempting that Utopian goal, every supplier hopes for, as clearly as does every economist or planner, and especially had in our mind in the north. The failures and losses made by the small as well as the large supplying merchants these last two years is irrefutable proof that at least in the particular circumstances of our coast, the system of constant anxiety, risk and trouble disasters. As a stimulus to character development it has none of the advantages of straight cash dealing. Its tendency is to force poor men into crooked dealings and suppliers into charging prices that will cover the bad debts at the expense of the better dealers. We have tried for years to get the fishermen to settle on a better system. That unquestionably is the best system in theory. It is always a better way in everything than the straight competitive way—being nearer to God's way. But it depends on men having the Co-operative Spirit, and loses that stimulus which helps Co-operation as evidenced by the experiments of others than ourselves clearly show this. In this country many of the smaller co-operative stores of the Co-operative Fishermen's Union have met disaster from the failure of the local human element. It certainly is a less expensive method of production. The Red Cross Co-operative is our best example. It has run twenty-six years in a place exceedingly poor as a fishing centre, and almost of firewood, and here not much furring can be done. It is an exceedingly good place for pictures, and is isolated for nearly eight months every year from the rest of the world. In all these years the manager, a local fisherman, says the co-operative spirit has been so well maintained that he has never had a cent for loading or unloading ropes, and that much has been done by co-operative labor on wharf, and premises—exactly as co-operative work runs the churches down north. "We don't ask the congregation to paint the roof, so much as we ask the congregation to meet the roof and paint it. One is being done almost alongside us as I write. The overhead expenses of several managers of divided business in a village who only come in summer and live south in winter, are paid; and the vessel that carries the produce brings supplies at the same time. One local man, who is called "Selectman," if such is available, accompanies the schooner as act as the jobber and salesman. The overhead expenses of the business. No one is afraid to criticize the system, as under the supply system, where the poorer man is afraid, and more he needs to do it, the less likely he is to query any of the details of his supplier.

AN EFFECT OF THE SYSTEM.
 This two days ago, a man came on board to get my opinion as a magistrate. He had been an Edger in a mill, and through an accident of his fingers were cut off. There was no provision for accidents in the mill, and he had been a whole summer in hospital and unable to do anything. And now, a year later, he had almost useless, as he could only touch the tip of his little finger with his thumb, and had no power to hold anything. The day of the accident he was rowed several times by two of his fellow workmen, the nearest skilled help. He claims that he had never received one cent of compensation, and that, for the day of his accident he was refused payment, and the two men who had helped him were also docked their pay. Yet when I told him that I was a trial probably before a magistrate, he said he was afraid to state it—and that was all I saw of him. This of course might occur under the competitive system. It does not under the Co-operative. The supply system is so very common a spirit and a terribly deplorable one. Every day, without exception, we are seeing Newfoundlanders going down for want of food, and nothing of women and children. The last patient seen since I wrote the last paragraph is a man of thirty, who has a reserve man before the Navy, and fought through the war. He has had very poor luck since he came home, and comes with stinking socks and a loss of between thirty and forty pounds weight during the war. His prospects are very gloom of being able to provide for next winter. He has four children. He bought a horse with the last of his savings last fall thinking with it he could make pit-propping pay. He used it all winter, and could not make it pay more than the oats it ate. A fortnight ago he lost it. It wandered away one day and has not been seen since. This man is a clever model boat builder. Another man just taken in as a patient is only twenty years old, he is clean, bright, handsome, but starved down to skin and bones. He is one of a family of fourteen, and all are living on a very close diet, consisting of only dry bread and tea to-day. We are suspicious of tuberculosis already setting in his lungs.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN EDUCATION.

Nutrition is more important here than education. We have a dozen specialists to teach nutrition at various stations this summer in the North. How to cook a potato? What are the cheapest foods? How to make the most in fats, proteins, carbohydrates and vitamins, of things within our reach are far more important just now than how to read and write, or even sing and pray. Starvation is not only threatening but overtaking many of our brothers and sisters. Of this I shall write more in detail later, as the good ship and dearly beloved Prospero and her fine crew are close at hand to carry this letter to the south. Here is one good example of the nutritional teaching. Family of seven. Father and eldest son paralyzed with beri-beri. Mother a bag of skin and bones. Eldest girl weak and anaemic. The three youngest children all as fat as butter. It was a puzzle to me, as the little ones generally suffer most. "How do you cook your potatoes?" I asked the mother. "Peel them." "What do you do with the peelings?" "I mostly throw them out to the hens, but the little ones eat some." Enquiry showed that the little children had acquired the habit, driven by hunger, of chancing up those discarded potato peels and eating them raw. Thereby they had gotten exactly the needed vitamins, and were safe from beri-beri so far. In another family we found one big boy outstandingly fat. He shyly admitted that he loved raw potatoes, and ate the washed peelings "mostly a bit every day." Yet the universal custom on this coast is to clear exclusively to white flour and boiled, peeled potatoes.

The Blind Pontiff of Urga.

The Living Buddha has a double personality. He is clever, penetrating, energetic, but at the same time he indulges in the drunkenness that has brought on blindness. When he became blind, the lamas were thrown into a state of desperation. Some of them maintained that Bogdo Khan must be poisoned and another Incarnate Buddha set in his place; while the others pointed out the great merits of the Pontiff in the eyes of Mongolians and the followers of the Yellow Path. They finally decided to propitiate the gods by building a great temple with a gigantic statue of Buddha. He never ceases to ponder upon the problems and well-being of the church and of Mongolia and at the same time he indulges himself with useless trifles. A retired Russian officer presented him with two old guns, for which the donor received the title "Tumbair Hun"—"Prince Dear-to-my-Heart." On holidays these cannon were fired to the great amusement of the blind man. Motor cars, gramophones, telephones, crystal, musical instruments, rare animals and birds; elephants, Himalayan bears, monkeys, Indian snakes and parrots—all these were collected in the palace of "the god" but all were soon cast aside and forgotten.

The blind Pontiff is regarded with the deepest reverence. Before him all fall on their faces. Khans and hutukus approach him on their knees. A drunken blind man, listening to the banal arias of the gramophone or frightening his servants with an electric current from his dynamo, a ferocious old fellow poisoning his political enemies, a lama keeping his people in darkness and deceiving them with his prophecies and fortune-telling—he is, however, not an entirely ordinary person.—Ferdinand Osenkowski, in Asia Magazine.

PRICES RECEDE with the DECLINE of the MONTH

at this popular Shopping resort.
SOME EXCELLENT BUYING OPPORTUNITIES
 out-lined for the Week-end.

OPPORTUNITIES too good to be missed, for it is just as the headline flagrantly proclaims—prices recede with the decline of the month, and this is taking place in each and every department of the Store. Many of these reductions do not get publicity here as space will not permit, but all we ask is—that you come and have a look around and see for yourself what amazing savings can be made attending our Week-End Sales.

They say that "MONEY TALKS"! And so it does. Usually "MONEY TALKS" to our young men and women and tells them to spend their dollars in thousands every year foolishly and extravagantly. TO YOU at age 20 and say "WILL YOUR MONEY TALK" Or will it say to you, "WELL—GOOD-BYE FOREVER"? Or will it say to you, "WELL—WELCOME TO YOUR COMPETENCY, which you have been wise enough to save up year by year through your Life Insurance Policies."
Let me quote you CROWN LIFE figures on your next policy and make YOUR "Money Talk" COMFORT to YOU after age 50.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND.

Tall Glasses

Stirred with eight inch cut glass spoons. On the top of each a slice of lemon floating on a sea of iced tea, spiced with a touch of mint—a Midsummer Night's Dream of deliciousness!

Blue Bird Tea
"Brings Happiness!"

You know how you feel on a sweltering day with an overweight suit on. You have also experienced the annoyance when your dark suit is covered with dust. We are now showing summer shades in light and tropical weights, also a few lines in flannels.
