Miscellaneous.

WILKIE COLLINS.

The death of Wilkie Collins, the eminent and world-famous novelist, who died at his residence, 82 Wimpole Street, Cavendish Square, on September 20th, was a strange death for a man whose brain had pictured and whose pen had described the death of all kinds of men in all kinds of places that could be conceived. He died alone, with out wife, child, or relative, to soothe his last agonies with that love and sympathy which only comes from the life of blood. He had no relative in the world save one old aunt who was far away in Dorsetshire, and whom he had not seen for a long time. By his side was only Dr. F. Carr Beard, the life-long friend and physician, and the old house-keeper who for thirty years had looked after her master's comfort with the care and devotion of a slave. His valet, George, was not present, and it was in the company of a single friend and servant that he breathed his last. The death-room directed across the front of the Wimpole street house on the third floor. There was a hot fire in the grate and on the coal's some medicine was steaming. All about were the paraphernalia of a sick-room. The curtains were drawn, the lights were low, and the sick man sat near the fire in a large arm chair draped with blankets. He was very much emaciated, and the pallor on his face and heavy heart that curled over his eyes, showed that he was in the last stages of his illness. Wilkie Collins was a short man of slender build, with a large head and broad, prominent forehead, and large, intelligent eyes. He had for three months been a prisoner in the room in which he died. He was fifty-five years of age, and his illness, which was primarily due to a malignant affection, was long-standing.

AT LAST!

A Wonderful Vegetable Discovery That Removes the Terrible Disease of Overwork.

A True Invigorator.

Weakness and prostration of the nervous system, which follow overwork and worry which brings sorrow and suffering to so many Canadian homes. The terrible results of nervous weakness, are seen on overworking. Pain in the back, poor and unsteady sleep, lack of appetite, dyspepsia, and loss of energy and strength, are the first symptoms of more serious and dangerous trouble. This is the way that Paralysis, Paresis and Insanity begin. Do not delay a moment longer, for some time it will be too late to regain your lost health and vitality. Use the Pain's Colery Compound, now, and the dull eyes will regain their brilliancy, the cheeks will grow rosy, the brain become clear, the nerves strong and steady, your sleep restful and refreshing, appetite good, and health and happiness will take the place of grief and suffering. A Sabiston, the well known lithographer of Montreal, writes: "In the summer of 1885 I had to work very hard, and was troubled and hindered by insomnia (sleeplessness). I resolved to try Pain's Colery Compound, and after taking the contents of two bottles, felt like a new man. A good night's rest gave me strength for the duties of the day, and instead of feeling as if I had completed a day's work instead of being able to commence one I finished one on my feet. My wife and friends, to whom I recommended the medicine, have benefited greatly. Pain's Colery Compound is a household word in our family."

THE TEMPLE OF HEAVEN IN RUINS.

A cablegram from London on September 27th says: "The Temple of Heaven at Peking containing the dragon throne, has been destroyed by fire. It is the largest of the Emperor's official residences representing the people worshipped on the 22nd of December, offering a sacrifice to Shang-ti, also at times of famine and national calamities. The altar at which these solemn rites were performed consisted of a triple circular marble terrace 210 feet wide at the base, 150 in the middle and 90 at the top. The uppermost surface was paved with blocks of the same material, forming nine concentric circles, the innermost consisting of nine blocks and that on the outside of eighty-one blocks. On the central stone, there was a perfect circle, the Emperor knelt, surrounded first by the circles of the terraces and their enclosing walls, and then by the circle of the horizon. In the same temple stood the altar of prayer for good harvests, which was surmounted by a triple-roofed circular structure ninety-nine feet in height. The tiles of these roofs were of glazed porcelain of the most exquisite deep-blue color, and added a conspicuous element of splendor to the shrine, which, even without their gilt, would inspire admiration by the grace and beauty of the design and the beauty of the materials employed in its construction."

Common Sense

At a First-class Restaurant, Detroit.—Can you give us an opinion on the half shell tonight? Water.—Yes, sir; but you will have to wait a few minutes. All our half shells are in use at present, sir.—You're right.

For the Ladies.

Interesting Brides.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR YOUNG WOMEN ABOUT TO COMMENCE HOUSEKEEPING.

If you have a great desire to be married in white, select a fine Swiss muslin and have it made up tastefully with creamy ribbons for trimming, and natural flowers for adorning, or cashmere, made to clear the ground, that it may be worn the following summer. It is so out of harmony with all good taste and judgment to think only of preparing a dress for a show wedding ceremony, and putting time and money into a piece of elegance, with a long train that cannot appropriately be worn more than once more, in the sphere in which the bride is to move. The better way is to be married in simple white, or the plain travelling dress, if desired, with a pretty silk or tawny wool dress, for church and for returning calls, receives some thought and elaboration. A book might be written, and then all not be said on many subjects of interest to brides. I only wish to call attention to a few things. In buying for the furnishing of the home, fine linen for the tables is often overlooked, or the fund exhausted before it is thought of. The bride should remember at least, one handsome linen cloth, three and one-half yards long, for her table, with one dozen large napkins. These will last a long time for guest days, and will add much to the table. Linen cloths for table use should not be more than two yards long, and the napkins medium sized, as they are easier to take care of. A little kitchen, well stocked, makes life much easier for the young housekeeper. It is the rule in one family to lay aside one dollar a week for the utensils needed in the kitchen, or, if less is necessary, something for the dining table. The sum is small, hardly missed, and yet quite proportionate to the needs, after what you think necessary has been bought. To any who are not strong enough to take upon themselves all their work, I would like to suggest the pleasant and cheaper way of hiring the washing done out of the house, and having a woman occasionally a day to sweep and clean rather than to hire a girl. Nothing is pleasanter than to be alone in one's own home. There is a fearful lack with much of the foreign help now in this country. Besides their waste it is often found they are helping others of their own nationality from their mistress' slender resources. To those either afraid of gasoline, or living where it is not used, I wish to recommend a small kerosene oil stove with burners, costing only two dollars. It requires the same care, as a lamp must not be filled with lighted, and must not be left long alone, as the wicks sometimes rise of themselves when the objects above become heated. This is only to supplement a wood or coal stove. There should be baking days, and then there will be days when this stove will do the work, and tea can be got quickly without soiling the dress. I think it requires about three hundred and fifty dollars to furnish a little cottage comfortably. Many a couple have commenced on less, and died with a great deal more. And the happiness can be much greater in the little homes, where love is not frightened away by envy, pride, and a long train of ill-favored relations. A lovely bride of my acquaintance is not enter upon housekeeping soon without a hand help, and her knowledge of cooking is summed up in the fact that she can fry potatoes! How does anyone dare to begin to care for as sacred a place as home without any training? Suppose you expect luxury and a servant, can you direct her? You will often be imposed on if you do not know how the work should be done yourself.—Ladies' Home Companion.

Children's Clothing.

PERFECT DEVELOPMENT DEMANDS THAT IT SHOULD NOT BE TOO TIGHT. Much is said in these days concerning the rights of children, but there is certainly no right to which every child is more surely entitled than that of good, sound physical health. One of the first requirements of healthful clothing is that it allow unobstructed action of every organ of the body. This is absolutely essential for perfect development so long as the body is undergoing the process of growth. According to Dress, mothers often unwittingly violate this principle in the dressing of their children by compelling them to wear clothing which they partially outgrow, but which is not sufficiently worn to be discarded. Tight laces, tight bands, tight waists, etc., which have become such from the child's increased size, are certainly quite as harmful as any clothes purposely so constructed; and added to this is the fact that the bones and muscles of the tender little ones are far more susceptible to the constriction of tight clothing than are those of persons of older growth. The clothing of children should always be so made that it can readily be enlarged to accommodate the growing form, and should never fit so snugly as to allow perfect freedom of movement to every organ. Whatever garments are worn about the chest and waist should always permit of an unobstructed, full inspiration, and it would be an excellent plan if mothers would frequently test the child's breathing capacity by placing a tape measure around its waist when in its night clothing, and allowing it to take a full inspiration, noting the number of inches expansion, and then adjusting its clothing to correspond with the measure of the full inspiration, allowing one inch or two more for growth.
