LONGWOODS ROAD FIRST

London, April 6.—It is likely that the Longwoods road, part of the cross-province highway, will be taken over by the Government and work commenced on it early in May. At any rate, road foremen in charge of the work on this road under the county have been notified by County Engineer Talbot that their work on the road will probably be finished about the first week in May.

It is likely that this road will be the first one in the county of those recently designated by Hon. F. C. Biggs to receive the attention of construction gangs. This in view of the fact that it is part of the cross-province highway and that work has already been undertaken as far as London on the Governor's road, seems almost certain.

GLENCOE BOY'S PROMOTION

The following clippings from the Edmonton Journal of March 8 refer to a former well-known Glencoe boy who left for the West some years ago and has "made good":
N. M. Lynn, who has been the manager of the local branch of Ames Holden McCready, Ltd., for the past two years, is leaving for Winnipeg tonight, where he intends making his new headquarters as western sales manager of the five western branches. His family will remain in Edmonton for some time.

On Saturday evening the staff of Ames Holden McCready held a farewell banquet at the Macdonald hotel in honor of their ex-manager, N. M. Lynn, who has been promoted to the post of sales manager of all western branches. After dinner, toasts were proposed to the health and success of the guest of honor, Mr. Lynn, in reply, thanked the staff for their loyalty and support to the firm and himself. Recitations were given by Miss D. Keen, and W. S. Hurst acted as chairman.

PRESENTED WITH CHAIRS

Wardsville, April 1.—A farewell gathering was held in the town hall for R. J. Petch, who has resided here for eight or nine years. The gathering was held under the auspices of the U. F. O., who turned out in large numbers. F. McGregor, president, occupied the chair.

During Mr. Petch's residence in Wardsville he had taken an active part in municipal affairs, having been reeve for four years and previously a member of the council. Mr. Petch carried on an extensive business in flour, feed and coal. In addition to music by the quartette, eulogistic addresses were delivered by Rev. R. J. Murphy and J. A. McRae, Jr. and Mrs. Petch were presented with a beautifully worded address, accompanied by two arm chairs, the presentation being made by William Turk and William Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. Petch have moved to Newbury, where he is carrying on a similar business.

WINTER'S LAST KICK

What is hoped will be winter's last kick came with a vengeance at the opening of the Easter holiday season, with frost, snow and sleet and high winds. Easter millinery got nipped in the bud and holiday visiting was rendered anything but pleasurable for those who were tempted by the warm, sunny days preceding to start off from home with light apparel. Sunday's storminess depleted the church attendance to a considerable extent. The freeze-up was hard on the feathered songsters and the froggies, but will give another short season for the sugar-makers. Roads remain passably good and the winter field crops are still quite promising.

MARRIED AT SARNIA

Mrs. McLachlan looked charming in taupe chiffon over blue duchess satin and with trimmings of pearls. After a sumptuous wedding dinner Mr. and Mrs. Williams left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for London, St. Thomas and Toronto. The bride travelling in midnight blue broadcloth with hat to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Williams will reside on their farm near Glencoe.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The usual annual Easter Vestry meeting was held on Easter Monday night in the school room at 8 p. m. There was a very good attendance, including several ladies. The meeting was opened with prayer by the chairman (the Rev. T. J. Charlton, rector), after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The following officers and committees were then unanimously appointed:—Rector's warden, Wm. A. Hager; people's warden, W. D. Moss (barrister); sidesmen—A. J. Wright, John Oldrieve, Isaac Walker, David Reeves, David Lamont, Wm. McMillan and James Abbott; members of the finance committee—A. J. Wright, David Lamont, Isaac Walker, and John Tait (choir leader), with the two wardens ex officio. Votes of thanks were presented to the rector, wardens, choir and the various societies (the ladies being specially mentioned), and were suitably acknowledged.

The meeting was resolved into a congregational, when A. J. Wright was appointed Synod delegate, and David Lamont as substitute. The accounts of the parish were presented by the people's warden, and the reports of the various organizations were most satisfactory. The Sunday school has to its credit $29.50, the Guild and Calendar Society $69. Isaac Walker and A. J. Wright were appointed auditors, and the meeting adjourned to next Monday night to receive their report and any others not put forward. A very pleasant and profitable evening was closed with the blessing.

At the conclusion of the morning service on Sunday next, Miss Angus of London will kindly give a short organ recital. The congregation are asked to remain for the above. There will also be a solo by H. K. Charlton.

Retained Afterbirth.

This is a matter which many stockmen do not regard with due seriousness, possibly because they have not had an opportunity of observing the various evils resulting from the failure of a cow to clean properly.

When any great portion of the placenta, or afterbirth, is retained in the uterus for any length of time after the cow has given birth to the calf, there usually develops a varied chain of symptoms, which are very noticeable and likewise often serious and many times fatal. There may occur a simple catarrh of the uterus in which the discharge is of a mucous consistency or it may be a thick, heavy pus sometimes containing streaks of blood. There may be a cachexia or unthriftiness, or a wasting away, or there may be an absorption of the septic or poisonous matter, which is known as septic metritis, which often results in death and there also many times results a sterility or barrenness of the cow following a retention or any of these symptoms that we have enumerated here.

A portion of the afterbirth may remain after the cow has apparently cleaned normally and we sometimes find shreds or portions remaining after it has been removed by inexperienced men, or sometimes when the veterinarian has removed it.

When the simple catarrhal condition of the uterus follows this retention, the tail and scutcheon are soiled with a mass of filth which is composed of pus and dirt and when the cow is in the recumbent position a quantity of pus is usually noticed to flow from the vagina. Such cows in a herd can usually be detected from the odor of this discharge alone. Milk from a cow in this condition should not be used for human consumption. Now, as a matter of fact, a veterinarian can do little in the way of treating this condition, unless he is called early, as the mouth of the uterus will contract so that it is impossible to use mild antiseptic irrigations, as it is unsafe to use such irrigations unless it is possible to syphon off all the solution, because if any is allowed to remain it may produce such irritation and straining that an eversion of the vagina may take place and this would be a very serious condition under the circumstances.

With the resulting cachexia that we spoke of, the cow gradually loses flesh, her hair is rough, she gives very little or no milk, there is a loss of appetite and she will not respond to any agent to feed or tonic. She gradually grows weaker and becomes a living skeleton. Sometimes after a year or so she regains some of her former health but this is unusual and she generally wastes away and dies in a few weeks.

In other cases the cow absorbs these septic or poisonous products and this condition is known as septic metritis or pyometra, and is, commonly speaking, an inflammation of the uterus due to the absorption of the

Poultry

The leg weakness in poultry is usually caused by heavy feeding which has caused them to grow more rapidly in weight than they have increased in strength. This seems to be a form of paralysis and the mild cases rapidly recover, while the others show an increase of weakness and emaciation until the bird dies. The sick birds should be isolated where they can be fed away from the flock. This is not because it seems to be contagious, but the bird will not be able to eat when crowded by the healthy fowls. Rheumatism might cause similar symptoms but in such cases the joints will be swelled and hot. In leg weakness there seems to be no other symptoms but the weakness and inability of the bird to stand. As far as we can learn, no germ that causes this disease has ever been isolated. But usually it causes little trouble in flocks that have plenty of range and green food and have been grown from vigorous breeding stock.

When Auction Day Comes.

When the stock and tools on a farm are to be sold at auction it pays to put them in the best possible condition. Many farm implements are sold for much less than they are worth because their unkempt appearance puts them in the junk class where they do not belong. Clean up the tools and oil them. A coat of paint may give a tool such an improved appearance that many bidders will think almost as much of it as a new implement.

The cattle deserve attention before the auction sale. On some farms the very fact that the cattle are soon to be sold causes the owner to lose interest in them. It pays to keep them well fed and groom them for the sale. It is not deceiving a prospective buyer to present goods at their best. It is only good business and should not be neglected.

Flocks of poultry are sometimes displayed at an auction cooped in disarrayed boxes where the buyer has no chance to examine them. No effort is made to grade the birds, and so all of them are apt to sell at the same price as the poorest are worth. Why not cull the flock? Place the year-old hens in one lot and the pullets in another. Sort out the young cockerels and have them sold as broiler stock. If some of the birds are purebred and others are mongrels it will pay to classify them. It may bring a high bid for the purebreds while such a bid will be missing if all of the birds are lumped together.

When cattle are sold the owner should be at hand at all times to explain their age and condition and answer all questions demanded by the crowd. At a recent auction of purebred live stock at a consignment sale several of the cows sold for much less than they were worth because

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

When gazing in a looking glass I sometimes think I see A stranger I shall never know Who gazes back at me.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

When the owner did not get to the sale on time and the auctioneer was not provided with sufficient information concerning the time that the cows freshened or when they had been bred. The lack of this information caused some of the bidders to lose interest as they did not wish to risk placing bids without knowing the whole history of the animal. At the ordinary farm auction the farmer should be posted on all points concerning the date of freshening and breeding so that he can answer promptly all questions of the bidders. It is a question if some farmers do not lose money at an auction by trying to sell every broken pitchfork and leaky pail on the farm. These worthless articles are sold so cheap that it is almost a waste of time for the auctioneer to talk about them, and sometimes I feel that the buyers hear the prices bid on the junk and think that everything on the farm should sell proportionately at the same rate. The sum total derived from the sale might be larger if only the good and useful articles are included.

Plenty of help should be available at an auction so that the animals can be brought promptly into the ring in their turn. The crowd does not like to wait, and many buyers will lose interest if they have to remain all day to witness a sale that should be finished in four or five hours or less.

The Welfare of the Home

Nearly All Children Have Adenoids.

Babies are not born with adenoids. There is still in existence the foolish superstition that a baby must have whooping-cough, measles, mumps and other common diseases of childhood, and that the sooner he gets them over with, the better. The truth of the matter is just the other way round. The child is much better off without these diseases, and the longer he can put them off, the less damage they are likely to do to him. But even with the most careful mothers, the young child is likely to be exposed to these diseases and be caught by some of them.

Every time a child is effected by one of these diseases, his glands are overworked. They swell up to take care of the germs and the poison in order that they do not get the upper hand, as unfortunately they often do. By the time the child has suffered a number of attacks of colds and diseases common to children, the glands begin to show permanent effects of the hard struggle. Sooner or later they become permanently enlarged and diseased, so as to be unfit to do their work. In fact, they really endanger the child's life.

Decayed teeth are another common source of enlarged glands of the throat and nose; in fact, exposure to any kind of infection will enlarge these glands. When the tonsils and adenoids get so large that the child can not sleep with his mouth closed and is unable to breathe with tightly closed lips, or the glands become so diseased that they are interfering with his health, they should be taken out, and the sooner the better. If the enlarged tonsils and adenoids are allowed to remain and the child continues to breathe through his mouth, many things can happen. Instead of appearing bright, alert and attractive, he begins to look dull, stupid and unattractive, and he becomes in some cases just as he appears—stupid.

The enlarged tonsils and adenoids interfere with the child's hearing; his voice takes on a disagreeable nasal sound, he takes cold easily and has more or less constant catarrh. As a result of the partial stopping of the free passage of air to his lungs, the child does not get enough fresh air. Hence a child with adenoids is likely to be hollow-chested, round-shouldered, pale, thin, with poor quality of blood, and susceptible to disease.

Knowing what causes adenoids and enlarged tonsils makes it easier to prevent them. Keep babies and young children away from persons suffering from colds or other diseases. Avoid taking them into crowds or crowded places where one can not tell to what they may be exposed; and during an epidemic, keep young children safely at home. Parents who are not sure that their children are free from enlarged tonsils and adenoids should have them examined by their doctor. Children are our most valued possessions and it is our duty to send them out into the world in the best possible condition—physically, morally and mentally.

In time the baby got over this cold. (Sometimes babies do not.) But it wasn't a great while until along came another careless person who ought to have been quarantined because of his cold, and he gave baby another one. Again the glands became enlarged, as they do each time baby catches cold. Growing Potatoes Under Straw.

The practice of growing Irish potatoes under a straw mulch is excellent for small areas. The potatoes are planted at the usual time in shallow rows two inches deep. The mulch of straw, leaves, or strawy manure is spread over the ground to a depth of five inches, about the time the plants come through the soil. The tubers are formed partly in the soil and partly in the straw. They are easily harvested, are clean, and keep well in storage.

The mulch protects the roots and tubers and holds the soil moisture. No cultivation is necessary after planting, and therefore the rows may be placed as close as two feet.

Men who would not carry dirt in their pockets are sometimes not so particular about their minds.

SINN FEIN STARTS CAMPAIGN OF INCENDIARISM THROUGHOUT IRELAND

Important Public Documents Destroyed in Dublin, Cork and Other Cities—Sixty-One Police Barracks and Twenty-One Revenue Offices Raided.

London, April 4.—The Sinn Fein plan to destroy all British records and plunge the country's administration into confusion was put into operation last night when fires were started in official buildings all over Ireland.

Throughout Counties Cork and Clare, disguised and armed men destroyed police barracks. At this cabling the record of police barracks destroyed in the various counties is as follows:

Limerick	6
Claire	12
Down	2
Armagh	5
Roscommon	4
Dublin	6
Cork	4

League of Nations Short of Funds

Paris, April 4.—It is reported there will be a League of Nations meeting some time in April to discover, if discovery be possible, some method of handling the Armenian situation.

It is feared the question will be allowed to lapse owing to the hazardous financial straits in which the League now finds itself.

It is stated on good authority that the General Secretary of the League, Sir Eric Drummond, now is negotiating for funds with various London banks to pay the running expenses of tative summary of the week-end havoc throughout Ireland was given: Sixty-one police barracks were destroyed and 21 Revenue Offices raided and their contents burned.

Belfast was isolated from the rest of the world. The land wires and cable to England were cut and the only means of communication was the telephone.

The Grand Central Hotel, in which are located the Pensions, Labor and other Departments, and the Bank of Ireland, were entered during the night and a large number of documents were destroyed.

The raiders then tried to burn the buildings, but a fire brigade prevented this.

Three separate blazes were found in the Income Tax Offices. The City Postoffices and public buildings were under strong guard to-day. Despatches this evening state the city is calm and the authorities have the situation in hand.

Navigation on Great Lakes Will Open About April 10

A despatch from Chicago says:—Navigation on the Great Lakes will open about April 10th, the Weather Bureau predicts.

MUST INCREASE PRICE OF FLOUR

Result of Action of Wheat Board and Lack of Export Markets.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—A material advance in the price of flour in Canada is indicated in an announcement made here on behalf of Canadian millers by George A. Macdonald, representing the Quaker Oats Company, assistant head of a delegation of representative millers which waited on the Government to discuss the serious situation which Canadian millers are facing as a result of the action of the Canadian Wheat Board in continuing the restriction in the price of flour on the Canadian market, and the lack of export markets for Canadian flour. The increase will be necessary to meet the increasing cost of manufacture, it is understood.

The scarcity of millfluffs in Canada is directly traceable to the lack of a market for flour and the consequent decrease in the volume of domestic milling, the millers state. They have asked the Government to modify the regulations of the Wheat Board and to co-operate with the millers in inducing foreign buyers to take a reasonable proportion of Canadian wheat as flour rather than as wheat.

Vast quantities of flour are said to be available in the United States for export, and this complicates the Canadian problem. It is said that more than 4,000 men have already been thrown out of employment by forced closing down of the mills, of which there are about 500 in Canada.

Upper Canada College Endowment Fund.

Upper Canada College, the oldest and most historic school in Ontario, has launched an Endowment and Extension Campaign for $1,500,000. It is proposed that $400,000 shall be an Endowment, the interest of which shall be used to raise the salaries of the masters and to found a pension fund; $400,000 as an endowment for the provision of forty entrance scholarships, each of the value of $500, tenable for three years; and $500,000 for improvements and additions to the present buildings.

All the residential schools have been forced to raise their fees to meet the H. C. L. but the winner of one of these entrance scholarships should be able to live at Upper Canada College at an expense no greater than it would cost his parents to keep him at home. Upper Canada College has at present about 450 boys, drawn from every province in the Dominion, with the exception of P.E.I. It has about 4,500 "Old Boys" living, and is usually spoken of as a "Toronto School" counts among its "Old Boys" the Minister of Agriculture in the House and in the Drury Government.

Hoover in Ring for President.

A despatch from San Francisco says:—Herbert Hoover telegraphed the Hoover Republican Club of California that he would accept the Republican nomination for President.

FLYING CORPS FOR DOMINION

Personnel to be Drawn From Members of Royal Air Force.

Ottawa, April 4.—A Canadian Air Force is to be formed immediately, and the personnel will be drawn from volunteers from the ranks of ex-officers and airmen of the Royal Air Force resident in Canada. These will train at centres which will be in operation all the year round, and officers and airmen enlisted in the new force will spend at least one month out of every twenty-four in active training, receiving pay and traveling expenses during their active period.

The force probably will be limited in the beginning to about five thousand, inclusive of all ranks, and the training centres will not number more than one or two, to begin with, for the whole Dominion. It is understood that the Government wishes to avoid an expensive permanent organization. The organization of the force will be placed in the hands of Canadians who have had experience at home and on the war fronts in flying and who are interested in building up a Canadian air militia which can be readily extended and mobilized in an emergency. Age limit is set at about thirty for junior officers and at thirty-eight for senior officers.

Applications for enrollment in the new Air Force, giving all particulars of previous service, may be sent at once to the Secretary of the Air Board at Ottawa.

Three Islands For Reindeer Grazing

Ottawa, April 4.—As a result of recommendations made to the Government by Dr. J. G. Rutherford, Chairman of the Royal Commission on musk ox and reindeer in the Northwest Territories, an order has been passed setting aside three islands in the northern part of Hudson Bay as grazing ground for these animals. The islands named in the order are Southampton Island, Mansel Island and Coats Island. These are said to be favorably situated, with plenty of vegetation and climatic conditions suitable to reindeer and musk ox grazing.

Russia and Germany to Exchange Prisoners

Berlin, April 4.—The negotiations between Russia and Germany as to an exchange of prisoners are virtually completed. The first steamship to bring back German prisoners will leave shortly for Revel.

As a matter of fact, the question of exchange of Polish prisoners was settled quickly, and although it is ostensibly the reason for the negotiations, Victor Koppé, the Bolshevik representative, has been discussing matters of a wider import.

It is understood that the whole question of Russian-German relations will be settled soon.

Normals Close Early to Supply Teachers

Edmonton, Alta., April 4.—The closing of the Normal Schools at Calgary and Camrose by April 16, two weeks earlier than usual, has been announced. The first step has been taken in order to make available a supply of teachers for the early opening of the rural schools of the Province. The total number of teachers released from these Provincial schools will be 425, and together with a number of university students, who will be available, the teacher supply will be sufficient to enable every school in the Province to operate at an early date.

Irish Home Rule Passed Second Reading

A despatch from London says:—The Lloyd George Coalition Government scored its expected victory in the House of Commons when the second reading, which is tantamount to its becoming law, by a vote of 348 to 94.

The opposition votes were confined to the Nationalists, Laborites and ex-Premier Asquith's few followers. The division followed a speech by Premier Lloyd George.

A Letter From London

The outbreak of influenza, which caused the postponement of the departure of the Prince of Wales for Australia has had the effect of producing an interesting coincidence. The date of his departure from Portsmouth was the nineteenth anniversary of the sailing of his parents on the Ophir for their memorable tour of the Dominions. Their majesties were then the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, for the visit took place shortly after the death of Queen Victoria, and King Edward had not then given the title of Prince of Wales to his son. The Duke opened the first Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia while he was away, and upon his return the Prince, as he had then become, delivered his famous "Wake Up England" speech at the Guildhall.

Just before the Prince sailed he was formally summoned to the Privy Council by the King, though in the case of a member of the Royal Family no formal swearing-in ceremony takes place. This step would have been taken some time ago, had it not been for the war, and the Prince became a member of this Council at a rather more advanced age than has been customary in the case of the Sovereign's sons in the past.

So far no woman has ever been admitted to the Privy Council, though how long it will remain a masculine preserve is very problematical, since in the event of a woman M.P. becoming a Cabinet Minister she would presumably be sworn of the Privy Council.

Up to the present King George has been able to say that he has travelled more miles throughout the world than any other living Royal personage. But this record His Majesty is certain to lose within the next eighteen months, since, extensive as the King's tours have been, they will by that time have been eclipsed by the Prince of Wales.

The Prince, by the way, will be the first member of our Royal family to set foot on the West Indian islands as a formal visitor, and his welcome is, in consequence, likely to be more than ordinarily enthusiastic. As it may now be taken for granted that the King's globe-trotting is at an end, and since at least two other visits for the Prince of Wales are projected, he is likely to set up a mileage record that will remain unbeaten for many a day.

Prince Arthur of Connaught was to have held an investiture on behalf of the King at Manchester and Birmingham, but owing to illness he was unable to attend either of these, and his place was taken by Prince Henry, the third son of the King and Queen, who thus made his first appearance at a ceremony of this kind. He had the distinction of having represented the King at one of these local investitures before his elder brothers, as neither the Prince of Wales nor Prince Albert has as yet appeared at such a function in place of his Majesty. Prince Henry was twenty on March 31. He first of all went to school at St. Peter's Court, Broadstairs, then to Eton, and afterwards to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. In July last he was gazetted a second lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifles, of which the King is Colonel-in-Chief.

The Prime Minister has now been in office continuously for fourteen years. He was appointed President of the Board of Trade in December, 1905, and has since been Chancellor of the Exchequer, Minister of Munitions, Secretary for War, and Prime Minister.

It is a record without parallel in modern times. Sir Robert Walpole, in the first half of the eighteenth century, was Prime Minister and Chancellor of the Exchequer for twenty-one years, and Lord Hardwicke sat on the Woolsack for nineteen years.

For some years Sir William Sutherland, the new Junior Lord of the Treasury and Scottish Coalition Whip, has been Mr. Lloyd George's Parliamentary Secretary and right-hand man. At a fair computation he has been worth £10,000 a year to the Prime Minister, although he is only just over forty.

His constituency is Argyllshire, and because he is unmarried he was once taken to task at a meeting there. "Why," asked a woman, "are you not married?"

"I am waiting for Bonnie Mary of Argyll," promptly replied Sir William, a rejoinder which effectively captured the women's votes.

Our Colonial soldiers seem to have played a considerable part in the growth of superstitious beliefs in this country. One of the most persistent, which apparently was believed in implicitly by many Australians as well as Canadians, is that the loss of a silver coin should be followed by the news of a legacy. To meet a white donkey in the morning, the soldiers say, should be interpreted as the sign that a handsome present is on the way.—Big Ben.

RUINOUS FOOD PRICES IN RUSSIA

Long Lines of Citizens Waiting For Daily Rations.

A despatch from London says:—An indication of conditions obtaining in Bolshevik Russia as the League of Nations investigating committee will find them was contained in a review of the economic situation in the territory controlled by the Soviet just printed in the London Times.

The article, which was written by a staff correspondent, depicts long lines awaiting their food rations, with bread selling at 450 rubles a pound and butter at 5,200 rubles a pound; of queues with the dead of the various cities, for even the cemeteries are "nationalized" and the dead lie for days awaiting internment.

"Prices are very high, but the profits are low," the writer of the article says. These, for example, are some of the prices prevailing last week:

	Rubles
Bread, per pound	450
Flour, per pound	500 to 700
Beef	550 to 600
Pork	720
Salt	300
Butter	2,600 to 3,200
Groats and meal	600 to 700

Normally the ruble is worth 51½ cents, gold, now it is worth about 4½ cents.

"In spite of these charges salaries are comparatively low, a typist getting 3,200 rubles a month for an eight hour day without rations. A hospital nurse gets 2,600 rubles a month and army rations for a twelve hour day. Army rations in Petrograd consist of: ½ lb. horseflesh, 1 lb. bread (fair quality), ¼ lb. (about) groats and small quantities of sugar and fats daily.

"Bread on civilian rations contains about 50 per cent. of beans and 10-15 per cent. bird seed (millet, canary and hemp), the rest being rye flour.

"Under the system of the division of the population into categories, a person receiving rations on card A (the highest rate for heavy manual labor) gets 1½ pounds of such bread daily; sugar, horse meat and groats are doled out in small quantities at intervals.

"The working population—that is, every one except school children and persons over 60—work under truly terrible conditions, and the workshops are cold. There is also very little light, and no soap or washing facilities.

"It is proposed to reopen the schools in the spring. They have been closed since October, owing to the fuel shortage. Free dining rooms for the pupils have been continued throughout the winter, but the food offered there is of such bad quality that even the dogs refuse to touch it except when starving. This state of things in the school dining rooms is on a par with other Soviet "reforms," where word and deed are so diametrically opposed.

"The closing of the markets in these conditions means a terrible hardship for the population. It is not surprising that the very rumor raised such a storm of protest that the authorities have not yet risked enforcing the order. Only one market, indeed, has been closed, other markets being subjected only to periodical raids. At the closing of the Alexandrovsky market, which may be described as the Caledonian market of Petrograd, a free fight took place between troops and traders, when about twenty were killed and wounded."

LONDON TYPISTS RECEIVE O. B. E.

Telephone Operator Among Recipients of Imperial Honors.

A despatch from London says:—Great Britain has begun to confer Imperial honors upon stenographers and telephone operators performing distinguished services during the war.

The latest list of honorees contains the names of eight women typists created "members of the Order of the British Empire." Among them is Mrs. Alice Allison, Premier Lloyd George's confidential secretary, who was the only woman witness to the delivery of the peace terms to Germany at Versailles.

The other girls honored are employees of the Foreign, War, and Air Ministries, including a War Office telephone operator, Daisy Finch, and Lily Nash, superintendent of the girl messengers of the Air Ministry.

Unknown Soldier Arrives in Canada

A pathetic case came to light when military headquarters staff here received a telegram from Ottawa notifying them to meet on the arrival of the steamship Grampian an unknown Canadian soldier and to provide escort for him to the military sanatorium at Cobourg, Ont. This soldier has been detained and wandering about England for a year and a half. He was shell shocked and does not know his name or where he belongs. All marks of identification are gone. He is being sent to Canada in the hopes that something may lead to his identification. The Grampian docked on April 2.

ABOUT THE SEED DRILL

What Is Considered to be the Most Efficient Type.

The Feeding Device Is the Heart of the Drill—Seed Should Be Dropped Directly Under the Axle of the Disc—Give the Bearings Careful Inspection.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

As the drill sows, so shall the farmer reap, is no fallacy. It is as true in its content as the maxim "As a man sows so shall he reap." Given the right kind of a grain drill, the seed is all planted at a uniform depth, evenly covered; the earth compacted just enough to retain the moisture around it. These conditions mean that the young plants will all come up at the same time, that the roots will be well protected, and that the grain will ripen uniformly. As the grain is planted, so will it grow and ripen.
If some of the seed is planted too shallow, and some too deep, the seed that comes up first, ripens first. Thus it is that some of the grain is ready to harvest while other patches are still in the milk stage.

The feeding device is the heart of the grain drill. Upon its reliability depends the accuracy of sowing the seed. The drill scale is computed for the average sized seeds, and therefore cannot always depend upon when the size of them varies from the normal. If the grain is oversized or undersized the required amount per acre may be sown by setting the feed lever at a point slightly greater or slightly less than shown on the indicator. There are, in common use, two different forms of feeding devices. The fluted-cylinder-force feed, and the double-run-force feed.
The amount of seed sown by the fluted-cylinder-force feed may be regulated by a lever which changes the size of the outlet, but it does not always handle all classes of seed without breaking them, as can be done with the double-run-force feed, which necessarily requires for driving it a disc wheel, or a cog wheel with from nine to fifteen sets of cogs that make as many speeds or feeds.

In the most efficient type of grain drills the seed should be deposited as nearly directly under the axle of the disc as possible, as this is the only place where the seed can be dropped directly on to the bottom of the trench without hindrance. By this method the disc is not run deeper than the seed is deposited, thus the draft is reduced to a minimum. If the seed is deposited in the rear of the centre of the axle, the rotation of the disc tends to carry earth and seed up with it, causing the seed to be unevenly deposited. In operation, a properly angled disc opens a trench about two inches wide. The falling seed strikes the concave side of the shield and the convex side of the disc, and is thus scattered evenly over the entire width of the trench.

Grain seed drills are divided into four kinds, according to the type of furrow opener—the open delivery single disc and the closed delivery single disc, the double disc, the shoe, and the hoe drills. The open delivery single disc furrow opener deposits the seed between the disc and the convex side of the disc. The space is open from the end of the boot between the disc and shield to the bottom or lower end of the shield. The shield prevents the seed from becoming mixed with the loose earth and surface trash and insures its free passage to the bottom of the trench made by the disc. It will also do excellent work in highly cultivated soil that is free from trash.

The closed delivery single disc furrow opener has a closed boot, similar to a hoe furrow opener, which comes down at the rear edge of the disc and deposits the seed about two inches back of the disc. It does not plant the seed at as even a depth as either the open delivery single disc or the double disc, but deposits it at least eight inches in rear of the disc hub, and wherever it meets with an obstruction, rock or hard frozen soil the disc rises up and carries the boot with it, broadcasting the seed on the surface.

There are many styles of double discs, but the one that plants the seed under or slightly back of the disc axle, or hub, is the one to use, for that point is the deepest part of the furrow. The furrow opener that shoots the grain forward of this centre is to be avoided, for the reason that the seed reaches the ground before the furrow is fully formed, and it is, therefore, mixed with the soil as the seed trench is being made, causing what is termed "wavy" sowing. The double disc type of opener tends to spread out the seed more than other kinds, so that each seed has a somewhat greater area from which to draw moisture.

The -hoe furrow opener or shovel opener does not penetrate the ground readily and clogs easier than any of the other types. The shoe opener does no better work and rather than clog will run over trash and thus plant the seed at varying depths.

In selecting a drill the bearings should be given careful inspection.
They should be dust proof. The hard oil must be considered superior to all others for this kind of work, as the oil can be forced into the bearing from the centre, and as it works out it carries all the dirt with it. It should have a well-braced seed box with steel hopper bottom to allow the seed to pass freely into the cups; strong frame and substantial wheels are important features. The distance between the furrow opener varies to some extent but six inches is the usual spacing. The seed tubes may be of rubber or of steel ribbon. The rubber tubes give good satisfaction, but are not durable if exposed to the weather. The steel ribbon tubes serve the purpose well, and if painted will last as long as the drill.—Jno. Evans,

THE LATE D. D. GRAHAM

In the sudden death of D. D. Graham, Glencoe and vicinity loses one of its best known and most highly respected public men. The deceased was born on the sixth of January, 1861, in the township of Ekfrid, and his whole life was spent in this immediate vicinity. He was married on the second of October, 1889, to Jane McIntyre of the township of Moss, who survives him. He leaves one son, Duncan, at home, and two daughters, Clarice, a nurse in Detroit, and Phemia, of the Royal Bank staff, Glencoe. He also is survived by two brothers, John C. and Duncan C., of North Glencoe, and four sisters, Mrs.
M. S. Andrews of St. Thomas, Mrs.
(Rev.) S. D. Jamieson of Thornbury,
Mrs. W. F. Wilson of London and Mrs.
D. McMurphy of Preeceville.

The deceased was an extensive farmer and stock dealer for many years and shipped a large proportion of the stock raised by the farmers of the townships of Ekfrid and Moss, whose confidence he enjoyed in a high degree.

In spite of his farming and business activities he found time to take an active part in the public affairs of the township and county, where he had a long and creditable municipal career. He was collector of taxes, or for the township of Moss, and filled the offices of councillor, reeve, county councillor and warden of the county of Middlesex. His genial personality made friends for him among all with whom he was associated in public and private life. In politics he was a Liberal and took an active interest in political affairs. In religion he was a Presbyterian, being a member of the church at Glencoe.

His funeral was one of the largest that has ever taken place in this vicinity. The county council of the county of Middlesex was represented by Acting Warden John Cousins, County Treasurer Captain T. E. Robson, County Clerk John Stuart and County Engineer Charles Talbot, besides many of the Reeves of the various municipalities.

Among those present from a distance were Mr. Craile of St. Catharines, Mr. Turnbull of Komoka, Dr. and Mrs. Shafar of Detroit, B. Harrison, H. F. Flannigan and Dr. W. H.
Wilson of London and Mr. Campbell of Iona.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Lloyd of Glencoe, and the officers of Lorne Lodge A. F. & A. M., of which he was a member.

The floral offerings were beautiful and included wreaths from Glencoe Lodge A. F. & A. M.; John Munroe and John McMillan; the Royal Bank staff, Glencoe; Donald, Dougald and M. J. McIntyre of Alvinston; Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Wilson of London; Mr. and Mrs. James Colburn, Misses Marsh and Sines of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs.
D. A. McIntyre of Alvinston; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. and Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Graham; sprays from Misses English, Shepherd and Margaret Graham of Glencoe; Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Andrews of St. Thomas; Mrs. McLean of Alvin-ston; Women's Institute of No. 9, Moss; a cross from Mrs. Jamieson and Mrs. McMurphy; a column from John Allan and Andrew Newbigging, and a broken wheel from the family.

The Presbyterian choir did itself much credit in special music for the Easter services on Sunday. Especially appreciated was the solo, "Crossing the Bar," rendered with splendid effect by H. K. Charlton at the evening service.

Auto owners are required to keep their license number clean so that it can be easily read at any time, otherwise they are liable to a fine. It is difficult to do so during the muddy season, but the law must be obeyed or trouble will ensue.

The death occurred at Dawson, Neb., on Thursday, March 25, of Geo. Smith, formerly of Ekfrid. Mrs. Chas. Towers, Jr., of Metcalfe is a daughter, and T. E. Gough of Strathroy and Ogilvie R. Gough of Napier are brothers-in-law of the deceased.

Bidding was brisk at Geo. F. Munroe's sale in Metcalfe last week, a grey Percheron team fetching $421 and a brown Percheron mare $260.50. Sheep range from $25 to $36 and cows from $12 to $15. The sale was conducted by Dan McIntyre.

Special Easter music in the Methodist church on Sunday was greatly appreciated. At the morning service Mrs. Alex. Pole rendered a very pleasing solo, and the evening selection by the male quartette and a solo by Miss Cleo Sutton were particularly good.

At a special meeting of L. O. L. No. 593 on Wednesday evening, March 31, the brethren presented their departing brother, George Barker, with a ring and a farewell address in token of the esteem in which he is held by them. After a suitable reply, a social evening and lunch was indulged in. George with his mother and sister leaves this week for their future home in Hamilton, followed by the best wishes of the community.

The death occurred at Chateaufort, Ontario, on March 21 of the wife of Hugh D. Cameron, formerly of Glencoe. Mrs. Cameron was formerly Miss Florence MacCallum of Uxbridge and prior to her marriage was for some time in charge of the millinery department at Bayne's store, Newbury. Her husband carried on a milling business here up to about eighteen years ago, when he moved the building and plant to the West. There are two children, Nora and Kenneth.

Peter McArthur was in Toronto last week taking part in the Bliss Carman Benefit at Convocation Hall, arranged by the Arts and Letters Club and the Players Club. A Toronto paper says: A number of personal recollections of Bliss Carman were given by Mr. McArthur in his characteristic and genial manner. He was indelible in his association with Carman in New York, and also something of the poet's personality and methods of living and writing. Mr. McArthur read a number of Carman's poems with great effect, and the evening by becoming an impromptu auctioneer and selling several posters painted by leading Toronto artists to advertise the benefit.

PETE HAD OBEYED ORDERS

Literal-Minded Soldier Came Near Getting His Commanding Officer Into a Bad Mess.

There is a certain young officer who, according to his own story, is thanking his stars that General Pershing had a sense of humor.

"Some of my men were Polish, and when soldiers never heed, but I guess in Poland life has been one long sad story," said the officer. "Anyway, I never ran across a bunch who took things so literally. One night the Germans sent out a three-inch shell that landed square in the trench. In the morning I told one of my men, Pete, he could him to take it away.

"Where shall I take it?" he asked.

"Oh, anywhere," I answered peevishly, 'put it to bed in Pershing's tent.'

"A little later a brother officer came along and said: 'The old man wants you, and there's something doing.'

"I couldn't imagine what was up until I stood before the chief. He eyed me sternly and then pointed to his bunk, and would you believe it, there was that blamed shell, Pete sure had obeyed orders. Well, I thought I was in for it, but Pershing suddenly began to smile. He said: 'I just want to caution you not to order Pete to capture Berlin until the rest of us are ready to go with him. He might go and do it, you know.'—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

All That Affected Her.

That the Empress Eugenie is not prone to brood sentimentally over the past is evidenced by an incident that occurred some years ago. She visited Windsor castle, a palace in which in the golden days of the empire she was received as an honored guest. Those who accompanied her on this second visit hovered near her, fearing that she would be overcome with the contrast between the past and the present, especially when she viewed the apartments fitted up for her use and which had not been changed. But it was merely her artistic sense that was offended. The hangings of the huge bed were of imperial purple with the green of Napoleon, and the ex-empress remarked disgustedly. "Toujours ces affreux rideaux!" "Always those frightful curtains."

No Woman Passenger Pilots.

In England women will not be given permission to serve as pilots on passenger airplanes. An official of the air ministry gave the reason for this decision to a writer on the London Sketch as "physical disability as well as nerves," declaring that women's nerves are much more likely to give way than men's.

"I think there are no women in this country capable of passing the air ministry's test. If one does succeed, however, she will be permitted to fly her own private machine, but whether she will be allowed to take a friend with her is a point that remains to be decided.

"In any case women will be barred as pilots of passenger-carrying machines."

A Senator's Lunch.

Being addressed by a smirking head waiter as "Senator," means nothing to the gay life of Senator McCumber of North Dakota.

Instead of dining at the senate restaurant, where senatorial dignity and fitting white-apron garbed waiters predominate, when night sessions prevent him from going home, the senator repairs to a nearby cafeteria, collects tray, napkin, knife, fork, spoon and other implements of table warfare, nestles his liver and bacon and other seasonal delicacies on the tray, walks over to a table and lays out his bread.

When Dreams Came True
By BLANCHE GERTRUDE ROBBINS

CHAPTER I.

Captain David Spence lighted his pipe thoughtfully and dropping into the high, cushioned rocker, drew three deep puffs. Reaching for the poker, he probed the coals in the grate until flames sputtered merrily and sent a rosy glow into his tanned, weather-beaten cheeks. With a chuckle of satisfaction, he stretched his long limbs toward the fire, a gleam of triumph shooting from his deep-set blue eyes.

Jean MacAllister, mistress of the dingy, old-fashioned house, drew the mending basket nearer her chair and suppressing a tired, little sigh, delved into its formidable depths. She was conscious of two red spots that burned unnaturally bright in her cheeks and of the furrows imprinted in her forehead. Her blue linen dress was spotted but she had not bothered to remove her apron. It was a week at least since she had taken time to fluff her black hair and she believed it was losing its glossiness. She was too weary these days to stop long enough to analyze herself; she almost feared that if she did so, she would come to an agonizing conclusion—that she was showing plainly her thirty odd years.

Captain David Spence, the ship-builder, who had bought out the old shipyard and was reviving the building of schooners, was a boarder in the MacAllister home and had added but little to the household duties. Jean liked the way in which he sat evenings before the open fire, smoking in dreamy silence. Without doubt he was living over in memory many of his adventurous voyages, though he was still in the early forties. As Jean drew the darned needle through a boy's torn stocking, she glanced up to watch the freight playing on the reddish-brown hair of Captain David. His half-closed eyes and expression of contentment gave her a sense of rest.

A child's sharp cry from upstairs suddenly disturbed the silence and Jean, jumping to her feet in alarm, thrust aside the mending basket.

"It's Sonny. He's colicky and I know the reason. I caught the little imp in the cucumber pickles to-day," she explained as she ran.

Wrapping the little fellow in a blanket, she carried him down to the sitting room and doctored him with hot drinks, warming his feet at the open fire, and he soon fell asleep in her motherly arms.

"Let me carry the young scamp upstairs," urged Captain David.

But, cuddling the child close to her heart, Jean shook her head.

"Thanks, but I should have to go up soon to see whether Dick and Mollie are well covered," she answered, smiling wistfully.

A few moments later she again dropped into her chair and mechanically picked up the tan stocking. Captain David had replenished the fire and was again drifting off to his dreams amidst a halo of smoke.

There was a tap at the hall door, which was flung open without waiting and Milly Lynch, the pretty neighbor from down the street, blew in, gaily waving a half-knit sock.

"I've been dropping stitches again, Jean dear," she explained. "Can you help me out?"

Laughingly Jean unraveled the sock, picking up dropped stitches and gave freely an hour's instruction in knitting.

When Milly Lynch had gone, Captain David roused himself and with a glance of scrutiny peered into Jean's tired flushed face.

"Do they never leave you alone? Are you never free from the cares of the world?" he questioned bluntly.

She laughed softly as she folded the tan stockings and looked deep into the mass of glowing coals.

"Maybe I don't ever get really away from the responsibility but I have my dreams and often they are so real, I forget the cares," she answered.

"Dreams?" questioned Captain David, knocking the ashes from his pipe.

"Yes, the dreams that came to me as a young girl and now I dream them over and over until they seem real. If I lived in this atmosphere of work alone I should go under. I've always hated this house, so dingy and sombre and shut in on this narrow, crowded street. If I had been building a house, I would have built on the cliff, where I could look out over the Bay, watch the surf and feel the sea. Father was a sea captain and settled mother down where she would have plenty of neighbors, for he spent nearly all of their married life at sea. Mother's motto in life was to accept whatever came her way as her due. She never raised a protest. She lived along in this dreary old house, rearing us three children alone until she rusted out. Mother never dreamed, for she counted dreams foolish. When the machinery of her body gave out she went to pieces. Then for ten years she was just a care."

Woman's Interests

The House That Was Never Built.

She was sitting in the back row at a meeting of farm women—a meeting at which I chanced to be a speaker. I had noticed her at once because of the sombre, patient expression in her eyes. When one of the speakers referred to the hardships endured in earlier days by some of the women present, her eyes darkened and she nodded her head, as if she remembered those days clearly.

At the close of the meeting she came forward, greeted me with dignity, and asked me to have a cup of tea with her in her home during the hour or two that would elapse before my train left. So we walked together to her home at the edge of the town. While she busied herself in the kitchen, I tried to piece out something of her story from the room in which I sat.

It was intelligently lived-in—that was plain. There were good pictures on the walls, good books in the low bookcases that occupied one side of the sunny room. The deep window-sills were full of blooming plants. The rugs on the hardwood floors had been well chosen. But the one point in the room that seemed to draw everything together into a sunny, comfortable, youthful serenity was a triple-framed set of photographs on the mantelpiece. Two of the faces that smiled out at me were of girls—well-dressed, beautiful girls. The other face was that of a thoughtful boy of perhaps eighteen. The mother noted my glance and we smiled at each other with the "secret free-masonry of motherhood."

"My children," she explained, handing me another photograph. This was a picture of three small children in the stiff and frightened grouping that only an inexperienced photographer knows how to arrange.

"I drove thirty miles on a cold day to have that taken, sixteen years ago," she said, smiling. "It's all I have left of them now—those pictures."

"Just when we seem to need their youth and enthusiasm most in our lives, they leave to find their own lives," I said. "I suppose it is natural—we left our own parents so; but it is a little hard."

"It seems more so when it is your own fault that they leave," she said. "Our children were very good and we were so proud of them. But all the time that we were working and planning for them, we were driving them away from us."

She poured the tea and handed me a fragrant cupful.

"You see," she went on, "we came West twenty-eight years ago. We were young, strong, ambitious, and we took up a claim here and settled down to make a home. We built the barn first, as everybody back home had done. At that time a farmer built up his reputation by his big barns, and so we thought it all right to wait for the house. We set up the cook stove under a shed and cooked out-of-doors. At night we spread blankets and slept in the oat bin. We did not regard it as a hardship. We planned some day to have the best house in the community, and we worked hard and saved every penny for it."

"We forgot that times change. We did not realize that the younger generation was growing up and straining at the leash. But we saw that our children seemed to do their thinking for themselves. They were good children and we all loved one another."

"We were all up early and at work before daylight. Every pair of hands counted. We supplied most of the milk used in the town, and never thought of hiring help—the children did their share of the milking. It did not occur to us that a growing child could not rise at five o'clock and work every moment until schooltime, and every moment between school and bedtime, and retain any pleasant memories of the farm."

"My boy was studious. I have seen him come in from school, place his books on a chair and hastily run over a paragraph every time he brought in a pail of milk and waited to have it strained or run through the separator. He often dropped asleep over his books at night, and I have had to rouse him and send him upstairs to bed in a cold room."

"We banked every penny we could for the big house. All this time we lived in the old sod house with an addition built on to it. The children did not accept many invitations from their friends, and we found out afterwards that they were ashamed to ask their friends to their home in return. That isn't a pleasant thought for a mother in the long, lonely days when she has plenty of time to think back over her mistakes."

"We sent them to college in time, and planned to build the new home when they came back to us. The eldest girl had a talent for music and we gave her the best lessons we could afford. We used to talk about the pleasant evenings we would have when she came home; and we intended to give her the best piano money could buy. We bought it—it stands there in the corner."

"The other girl was interested in domestic science and her father encouraged her in learning all the new ways. We used to boast to the neighbors of the things they would do when they came home. Then the boy wrote us that he was taking a course in civil engineering; but we looked on it as some new educational fad, like the domestic science. Father planned to give the boy the east 'eighty' when he wanted a farm of his own."

"Well—we didn't build the new house, after all. The children wouldn't come back to the farm to live. The eldest girl wrote that she had had a good offer to teach music in her college, and had accepted it. The other girl took a position as domestic science teacher in another province. And when the boy wrote that he was going to Alaska on an engineering job and would not be back for three years—then I realized what it was we had done to our children. We had dragged them away from the farm! So here we are—round pegs in a square hole. My health broke down and father bought this little house in town. Father goes to the farm each day; but there didn't seem to be any use in our working so hard any more if the children were not coming home. And life stopped for me. Now I have hot and cold water and a furnace and everything to make it easy. But we could have had these things for years on the farm, if we had been wise."

"We used to shake our thrifty heads at one of our neighbors. He had four children and he used to say that his real job was in raising those children to be good citizens and good farmers. He had the first piano in the county, and the first telephone. They had all sorts of good times at their house when we were working too hard to know what good times meant. Their children went away to school, too; but they came back again. Their mother is a busy, happy woman with her children about her. The boys work the farm on shares with their father. They haven't so much money in the bank as we have; but they have their children. We were thrifty, you see—but they were wise."

In silence we looked at the picture, the little faded group, whose sober faces, with hair brushed stiffly back, gazed up gravely at us. The three faces on the mantelpiece smiled at us as if in amusement that they could ever have remained on the farm with its drudgery and its few pleasures.

There was nothing that I could say. But we were both mothers, and as I rose to go I reached out for that work-hardened hand. We had both known what it was to have our children leave us.

And later, as the wheels of my train clicked through the night and I lay in my berth, there was one sentence that formed again and again in my brain:

"We were thrifty—but they were wise!"

Our "Magazine Johnny."

Here is a little thing that has saved the whole family much worry and trouble. We were all great readers, but, like most busy men and women, my husband and I never could keep track of the time any magazine subscription ran out, therefore it would invariably come at a time when there was no change in the house, and when we were too busy to go to the town and bank. So we have a funny little bank, dubbed "Magazine Johnny," and into this each birthday my husband dumps a dime for each year of his age.

age. I place a nickel for each year of my own age, and each child on its birthday places a penny for each year of its age.

The result is that none of us ever miss the money, there is always the price handy when a favorite magazine or farm paper is to be renewed, and as the money is more than they come to, and as it increases every year, whenever we gain enough in the fund we subscribe for another magazine or paper. And hanging over the bank, on the wall, is a large card with title of each magazine and time it expires.

Make a real job of it.

PAINTING becomes necessary as your property increases in value, and as property was never so valuable as today there is a greater need than ever for that kind of paint which actually preserves the surface and thus saves the entire house.

This spring, to make a real job of it, use

B-H "ENGLISH" 70% Pure White Lead
(Equivalent to 100% Pure White Lead)
30% Pure White Zinc
100% Pure Paint

because it combines permanence, covering capacity and economy.

If B-H "English Paint" was dearer than it is, it would still be the most economical—the shorter life of other cheaper brands makes them more expensive in the end.

It contains the famous Brandram's Genuine B.B. finely-ground white lead—70%—to which is put 30% of pure zinc—a guaranteed formula that no other paint can boast. To this mixture is added fine turpentine and linseed oil from the B-H mills, which is of a quality in keeping with the other ingredients.

When you use B-H Paint you will notice its "body" and brilliance—you will compare the extreme covering capacity with other brands—the permanence you will be able to prove by other exteriors painted with B-H paint years ago.

Look for the B-H dealer in your territory—the H-B Sign hangs outside his store.

Alopecia Areata.

Alopecia means baldness, and areata means patchy; so alopecia areata is a disease marked by patches of baldness. These bald areas vary in number and also in size from a nickel to a half dollar or larger; they begin quite small, but spread out gradually and coalesce to form great bald spots. They are found chiefly in the scalp, but may occur also in the beard, and the eyebrows and eyelashes sometimes fall out. Sometimes the appearance of the bald spots is preceded by neuralgia, but ordinarily there are no symptoms noted until the hair begins to fall. Men are more often attacked than women, dark-haired people more often than blonds, and the young more often than the middle-aged. The back and sides of the head are the favorite seats for the disease, but no part of the head or face is exempt.

The victim first becomes aware of his trouble by noticing that the hair comes out while brushing a certain part of the head, and a little further investigation reveals the fact that the hair in that spot can be pulled out without any force and without the least pain. The disease is sometimes mistaken for ringworm, which it resembles superficially, but in the latter the stubby hairs can be seen, while in alopecia areata the skin is as free from hair as the palm of the hand. It is usually normal in appearance and feel except that it may be whiter than the surrounding healthy parts, looking as though the blood had been pressed out of it.

The hair follicles are not destroyed, and usually a new growth of hair makes its appearance in a few weeks or months, though exceptionally several years may elapse, and sometimes the baldness is permanent. The hair, which comes out first at the edges of the patches, is finer and lighter in color than that on the rest of the scalp, and it is only after several successive crops that the spot regains its normal appearance. The cause of alopecia areata is unknown, but a credible theory is that it is due to some trouble with the nerve supply of the part, and this theory is strengthened by the fact that the baldness in some cases follows a longer or shorter period of local neuralgia. Many dermatologists, however, are of the opinion that it is a germ disease analogous to ringworm.

The treatment varies greatly and is usually successful, whatever its nature, probably because the trouble would get well anyway. Nevertheless, treatment will probably hasten the cure. The applications made are usually of a mildly stimulating character. The use of violet-rays has seemed efficacious. Among the simple applications that anyone can use may mention spirits of turpentine dabbed on the bald spot with a pledget of absorbent cotton once or twice a day.

Straight Rows Aid Garden.

It will add considerably to the ease of gardening as well as to the looks of the plot if the vegetables are planted in nice straight rows instead of helter-skelter. Besides, it will utilize the space better.

Where space is restricted, it is best to have the rows run the long way of the garden—north and south if possible—planting several kinds of similarly grown vegetables like green onions, carrots and radishes, in the same row.

If you plant such crops as beets, radishes and onions in beds these can be made four to six inches high by digging narrow paths around the beds with a hoe and throwing the soil up on the beds.

If the drainage of your garden is not good it is well to grow cabbage, cauliflower and similar crops on small ridges thrown up with the spade or hoe. Other crops, among them early peas and celery, should be planted in shallow trenches scooped out with a hoe. When these plants grow the soil is gradually worked back around the roots.

"Bungalow" is Bengalese.

We get our word "bungalow" from the Hindu word "bangla," which really means Bengalese, but which refers to a Bengalese thatched hut. The British officers in India, being unable in out-of-the-way stations to secure lumber, frequently built their houses of bamboo. The original form of the bangla or bungalow consisted of a large and lofty room with double walls of bamboo, with canvas partitions to form the bathroom, storeroom and bedroom and having a wide porch surrounding the bangla. We have modified the bungalow in this country until its Bengalese ancestor the one-story, single-roomed, porch-surrounded bangla would not recognize its Canadian descendant.

International Town Planning Congress.

Delegates, appointed by the Governments of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, Serbia, Greece, Egypt, India, South Africa, Australia, Canada, the United States, and the republics of South America, will be present at the International Town Planning and Housing Congress to be held in London during June of the present year.

The proceedings of the congress will occupy nine days, special trains being made available so that the delegates may have an opportunity to inspect the progress that has been made in housing schemes.

FRANCE FACES SERIOUS PROBLEM

THE FUTURE OF 2,000,000 MARRIAGEABLE GIRLS.

How to Conserve the Purity of French Race and Ensure Its Increase.

France is taking up seriously the problem of her 2,000,000 marriageable girls, who as a result of the war's losses can never hope to have husbands.

About the economic future of these girls and women France is not worrying much. She is convinced they will have no difficulty in taking care of themselves. The 2,000,000 vacancies created in French economic life by her killed and mutilated during the war will afford them opportunities for becoming self-sufficient.

But what does worry France is this: At a moment when the future of the French race is threatened by a death rate that exceeds her births and when the national economic life is handicapped by a shortage of human beings, these two million potential mothers are condemned to unproductiveness.

Same Problem in England. The problem in France, thus set forth in a despatch from Henry Wood, United Press staff correspondent in Paris, has its counterpart in England, where the oversupply of women numbers 1,500,000, and is growing rapidly, with an incident decrease in the male birth rate, and the female preponderance already has caused the crumbling of old ethical standards. Statisticians say that chances of every English woman finding her proper mate has long since passed. Meanwhile the labor market is depriving the nation of its best potential mothers, the social butterfly, both male and female, is more prevalent than ever and scientists, despite great efforts, so far have failed to devise a remedy.

Specialists studying the subject in France see only two alternatives, says the United Press correspondent. Either France must overcome the prejudices and customs which in all civilized countries have always surrounded the "natural child," or child born out of wedlock, or else France must consent to these two million girls and women finding husbands among foreigners. This latter solution would of course mean the beginning of the end of pure French blood and race.

Maurice de Waleffe, one of the best known French writers and a specialist on the subject thus discusses the problem: "Aside from the 1,500,000 losses during the war, the condemn to sterility a corresponding number of French women, two other causes bring this total up to two million. First, there is the established disproportion between male and female birth, our French statistics showing 107 baby girls for every 100 boy babies. Secondly, there is the increased cost of living which is driving large numbers of men to celibacy. We can, therefore, estimate at two million the number of French girls for whom no husband is possible.

"But what worries us is the four or five million babies that we could normally expect from these two million women. That is the wealth that we must seek to save in our present alarming state of decreased natality.

Two Courses to Pursue. "There are only two ways and only two—not three. Between them we must choose. Either we must accept the natural born child or else we must accept a foreign child.

"If we want to conserve the purity of the French blood and the French race then we must accept the natural child, which will necessitate the complete and active protection of its girl-mother, with maternity homes and the material welfare of child and mother assured over a period of several months. Finally without entrance formalities and without incongruous publicity the child must be adopted by the State.

"If this solution proves shocking, for it of course entails the abandonment of a very old prejudice that has very respectable roots, then we must favor marriages with foreigners, but in this case we must then do everything possible to oblige the husband to occupy his wife's fatherland and to become installed there so that we may have the fruits of their marriage. Every marriage with a French woman must render obligatory the civil if not the political naturalization of the husband and this naturalization must be made immediate, automatic and without formalities.

"If both these solutions have their drawbacks there is one that is still worse and that consists in doing nothing at all and in believing that France will continue to live merely through the operation of the Holy Spirit."

Although many people believe that every Chinese in China eats rice every day, millions of Chinese, living in Szechuan and northwestern China where rice is not grown, have never seen or tasted rice, and millions more in the rice-producing districts cannot afford to eat it regularly. To be sure, rice is the staple article of diet in south China, but there is reason to believe that in the diet of the Chinese people as a whole the sweet potato occupies a more important place.

SPRING IMPURITIES MEAN WEAK BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an all year round tonic, blood builder and nerve strengthener. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is clogged with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills improve the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood most often find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In spring anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism and many other troubles are most persistent because of weak, watery blood and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Among those who have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Mr. Archie R. Carmichael, Tarboro, N.S., who says:—"For a number of years I was bothered with pimples which would break out on my face and body. The trouble was always worse in the spring, and although I tried different treatments, it was without much success. In the spring of two years ago, the trouble was worse than usual, and although I was taking medicine it did not help me until I finally decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Under this treatment the pimples disappeared, and there has since been absolutely no return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Minard's Liniment Lumberman's Friend.

A Turkey Tom and a Fox.

When a fox has succeeded in getting into a farmyard, he has sometimes found his progress stayed by a gallant gander, for ganders are brave fighters and can strike terrific blows with their wings. Turkeys, on the other hand, are an easy prey and usually find safety high in trees. However, Mr. Reynard made a mistake one day in tackling a certain old turkey gobbler that had been boss of the barnyard for some time.

The gobbler terrorized the farmer's little children and took special delight in thrashing the dog. Even if the dog came with his master, the gobbler did not hesitate to attack him, and when, with fluffed and trailing plumes and a sharp "gobble gobble!" the bird rushed at the dog, the dog would drop his tail, leave his master's side and race for the nearest gate.

One day the farmer, who was busy in his tall silo, looked out and saw a sight that he will never forget. A fox had stalked his turkeys and had got among them in an open field. The farmer expected to see the fox get some of the young ones at least, but he had forgotten the fighting prowess of Big Tom, and Tom was with the flock that day. When the fox first snapped at a turkey, Big Tom rushed forward with his feathers all up.

The fox reeled back in surprise, then made a spring at Tom's neck. To his great chagrin, he met a blow from the turkey's wing that brought him to the ground; but he was game and came back to the attack. Meanwhile the flock was hurrying away. So seeing this, the fox tried to pass the old gobbler, but Tom steadily confronted him and forced the fight. The fox made a third charge, and this time Tom caught him squarely on the nose. The fox curled up like a ball under the blow and rolled over and over. Tom, furious and fluffed, followed up his advantage; but the fox, quickly regaining his feet, fled for the woods. Doubtless Tom's fight with the dog had developed his proficiency in fighting and made his attacks on the fox so effective.

Exploding Vegetable.

Nature tries her hand at pretty nearly everything. As if to prove that she could make a bomb, she produced the "shooting cucumber."

This interesting vegetable can be eaten. Probably some people do eat it. But the chances are that it is not for much, gastronomically speaking. One does not see it in the markets.

When it is fully ripe the "shooting cucumber" explodes. This, be it understood, in a literal sense: it bursts with violence, scattering its seeds far and wide.

It is the method the plant adopts for distributing its seeds, and is certainly very curious.

Traffic in London.

At a recent meeting in London, Lord Ashfield gave an address on the traffic and transit problems in the metropolis and his figures were startling. There are now in London some 8,000,000 people that require transit of one sort or another within a radius of twenty to twenty-five miles from Charing Cross.

Lord Ashfield said that in 1914 the average number per head of journeys taken was 303, while in 1919 various forms of transport travelled 265,000,000 miles, which is equivalent to 10,000 journeys around the earth and 252 journeys from earth to moon. He then went on to declare the need of some proper authority to deal with the cognate questions of traffic and transport and to say that probably a solution of part of the problem would be to erect a vast system of underground roads for the exclusive use of fast motor traffic.

Well known in cities the world over where the streets are laid out in ancient lines will recognize at once a problem that is insistent, for say what we will, the motor vehicle is bulky and takes up a huge amount of space, while its numbers steadily increase.

JOY AND GLADNESS FOR THE CHILDREN

Every child—whether it be poor or rich—is entitled to joy and gladness. Health is the birthright of all and there is absolutely no doubt that the healthy baby is a happy baby. It is the baby's nature to be happy—not cross. Only the sickly baby is cross. The well child is a joy to the home—it is a laughing, gurgling, happy little piece of humanity which drives dull care from the household. The sickly baby is the opposite—he is cross and peevish; cries a great deal and is a source of constant worry to the mother. But mothers there is no need of your little ones being sickly. Regulate the baby's bowels and sweeten his stomach with a few drops of thorough laxative and baby will soon be well and happy again. Thousands of mothers have proved this through their use of Baby's Own Tablets—there is a smile in every dose of the Tablets. Give them to your baby and make him happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Making Tube Travelling Easier.

A new and ingenious device to render travelling easier on the London underground railways has just been installed in several of the principal subway stations in the West End, says a London despatch.

The device consists of a large map of the underground railway system showing the position of the principal streets. Round the map are alphabetical lists of theatres, shops, rail terminals, restaurants, dry goods stores, the sights and show places of London, the hospitals and other places of public interest.

The traveller looks down the list for the place he wants to get to and then presses the button opposite to its name on the list. Four lights at once spring up on the map. These are:

Large red light—Where you are.
Green light—Where you change.
Red light—Where you alight.
White light—The place you want.

The device, which is of British invention and manufacture, is known as "The Silent Guide," and if successful will be installed in every station on the underground system.

The Uncertain Zeppelin.

With thirty passengers occupying its comfortable cabin the big German Zeppelin Bodensee sank toward its landing field near Berlin. The regular trip from Friedrichshafen had been made without incident. Then everything went wrong. Unexpected air currents dashed the ship against the earth, broke the cabin windows, disabled the engines and put out the lights. A side puff drove the craft into the crowd of onlookers and killed one person and maimed five others. More bumps followed as the captain tried vainly to pass the mooring lines to the hangar crew below. Then an upward current seized the great ship and carried it high into the air. Meanwhile the terrified passengers were huddled in the cabin half frozen. After a time the mechanics succeeded in repairing the engines, and finally, near midnight, the airship was brought safely to earth in a grove of stunted fir trees in the Harz Mountains.

BITS OF HUMOR

How Could She? At a school examination the sentence, "Mary milks the cow," was given to be parsed.

The last word was disposed of by one of the pupils as follows: "Cow is a noun, third person, and stands for Mary."

"Stands for Mary," said the inspector, "how do you make that out?"

"Because," answered the pupil, "if the cow didn't stand for Mary, how could Mary milk her?"

A little girl was asked, upon her return home, how she liked the singing of the congregation in the church.

"I liked it very much indeed," she said, "although all the people said it was bad."

"All the people said it was bad? What do you mean, my dear?"

"Oh, it was so bad that I heard the people praying, 'Lord, have mercy upon us miserable sinners.'"

Don't miss it.

The death occurred quite suddenly at her home in Ridgeway on March 27 of Mary J. Hearn, wife of Thomas Hearn, aged 57 years. She lived at Melbourne for 25 years, and the funeral took place there on March 29th to Longwood cemetery. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her loss seven sons and six daughters, all of whom were at the funeral. The sons are mostly all at home and the daughters are Mrs. Nath. Cushman of Appin, Mrs. James Williams of Detroit, Mrs. John Philpott of Detroit, Mrs. George Platts of Detroit and Misses Mary and Lizzie at home. She also leaves one brother, Wm. Little Gordon Cushman had the misfortune while in Appin a few days ago to fall and break an arm, but is making good recovery from the injury. The box social held in the town hall on March 31st, under the auspices of the senior organized class of the Appin Methodist Sunday school, was a decided success, proceeds being over sixty dollars.

This matchless remedy is sold by dealers everywhere.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Daby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrup. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep.
