Paris, Oct. 6.-Premier Brisson, commenting on the resignation of the minister of war, said: Chanonine's declaration was a complete surprise to him, as the gentleman had been presented at the cabinet meeting which decided to submit the documents in the Dreyfus case to the court of cassation. The general did not then raise any objection. Continuing, the premier remarked that the government was fully determined to uphold the civil power against the military, and agitation and almost terror. After attempts upon the part of various deputies to discuss the alleged military plot, the insults to the army, etc., M. Ribot, in behalf of his friends, including M. Meline, approved M. Brisson's statement, and added: "We have every confidence in the army, and do not wish to see it attacked. All republicans are united on this subject."

M. de Mahy proposed a resolution, calling upon the government to "end the campaign of insult against the army"; but M. Brisson refused to ac-

After the ministers had withdrawn the chamber adopted, amid cries of "Down with the Jews!" the order of the day, combining the motions of M. Ribot and M. de Mahy, by a vote of 460 to 28.

A fresh tumult was aroused by the declaration of M. de Baudry d'Asson that all the ministers except Gen. Chanonine ought to be impeached. The chamber adjourned to Nov. 4. It is the general impression among the deputies that President Faure will invite M. Alexandre Ribot to form a cabinet.

President Faure signed the appointment of M. Lockroy, minister of marine in the retiring cabinet, as minister of war, ad interim. When accepting the resignation of the ministry, M. Faure begged M. Brisson and his colleagues to continue to act until the formation of the new

All the stores in the neighborhood were closed in anticipation of rioting, and finally the cuirassiers, assisted by the mounted Republican Guards, succeeded in driving back another crowd, which was shouting "Spit upon Brisson." As this dispatch is sent a big crowd is gathering and organizing a manifestation in front of the Military Club. "PATRIOTS" SMASHING WINDOWS

Chanoine and denouncing the make-believe Republicans, who have "strangled 1-bate in the chamber and created a crisis." The committee has decided to organize all the socialists and revolutionary republican forces in the country against 'military and clerical reaction.' BOULANGISM. The Paris correspondent of the London Times says: The days of Boulangism are returning, without a Floquet to draw the sword against a factious general, and without a Constance to make him cross the frontier. The cabinet has been overturned on a mere pretext, because bands of people, collected by those defying authority while pretending to defend it, have fomented agitation and almost terror. In the CHARGE. Rue Royale the rioters tried to overturn a carriage containing three Amdemonstrations is reviving, and perhaps on Thursday, when the court of cassation will meet, there will be a renewal of the uproar. It looks as though M. Brisson gave up in disgust a position which yielded him neither pleasure nor greatness. Nobody has any idea who will succeed him, unless, perhaps, M. Faure knows, for he is alleged to

For my part I believe the sooner it comes A great the better for this country.' majority of his countrymen share his views. On the other hand, the French side of the situation is very difficult. France does not want war and does not expect war. She is almost indifferent in regard to Fashoda. If France was a sane country, sanely governed, this would mean a speedy end of the crisis. Unhappily, France today is neither.

The Archbishop of Canterbury recently delivered a charge to the clergy-men in Ashford parish church, dealing with the confessional. He described the system as one which carried men back to Judaism, and as perilous to the privacy of domestic life. The Church of England in this respect made for freedom, and did not permit compulsion, either direct or indirect, and no priest had a right to require confession as a condition of confirmation or Holy Communion. To claim this was usurpation, and should be resisted.

ANOTHER DAY'S INVESTIGATION

Into the Shooting of Policeman Toohey.

George Reardon Was Spoken to by the Officer Just Before He Was Murdered-What Witness Saw and Heard on the Fatal Night.

Wednesday Morning.

Unwearied of attending the examination regarding the charge of murder preferred against Marion Brown, the me crowd of spectators day by day Ends its way into the police court, and remains throughout the whole proceedings. Just how long the examination will continue no one can say, but County Crown Attorney Magee hopes to close it on Friday. This would make the whole affair a consensus of Friday events—the murder was committed on a Friday, the prisoner was arrested on a Friday, he started for London on Friday, and narrowly missed arriving here on Friday. Whether this is an omen of good or ill remains to be seen.

JOHN H. PIKE. John H. Pike, carpenter, No. 898 Elias street, was the 24th witness called. He said he heard of the shooting about 9:30 o'clock in the evening, and shortly after went to the scene, where he saw the dead body of the policeman. He saw the black hat picked up, but could not identify it. He also saw the revolver picked up, but did not know to whom Cross-examined by Mr. McPhillips, witness said he heard no shots fired, but heard of the shooting at about 9:30, when he went over to the place where the body lay. Witness was questioned regarding distances, and when he was not positively certain of any distance said he didn't know. Witness could say nothing about the white pieces of material said to have been taken from the policeman's hands. Witness said that on the night of the murder an object could be seen at some distance, and when asked how far away he could have seen an object and recognize it again, he said fifty feet.

Mr. McPhillips—It is a good job that you were not there that night for me. Mr. Magee-I'm glad you admit it.

JOSEPH WARD. Joseph Ward, of 465 Ontario street, remembered the night of June 24. He had seen P. C. Toohey on Ontario street, when the policeman inquired of him for a one-legged man. At this Mr. McPhillips objected to anything that Mr. Toohey had said being admitted as evidence.

Mr. Magee said the question was only asked to bring out the facts, and the objections of Mr. McPhillips was

Cross-examined by prisoner's coun-sel, Mr. Ward said P. C. Toohey had merely asked if he (witness) had seen a peg-legged tramp, and witness re-"No." The policeman had not stated why he wanted the one-legged tramp. Asked regarding the electric light at the corner of Elias and Ontario etreete, witness said the light would reflect as far north as the bush, but how much farther he did not

GEORGE REARDON.

George Reardon, a 14-year-old boy, of Crumlin, said on the night of the murder he was living on Ontario street. On the night of June 24 he had seen a one-legged man going north on Ontario street, near Elias. A few minutes afterwards he saw the policeman going north also. The policeman spoke to witness, and asked if a one-legged man had gone north. The officer went north, followed by Roy Treleaven, two Hayman boys, Roy Cox, Sam Yates and Witness went up near the bush and let the policeman pass the bush. As the officer passed the bush witness lost sight of the policeman. and heard a shot; after the shot the policeman said, "Here! here! there!" and then there was a second shot. The flash appeared to be on the west side of the bush.

Q.-How do you know it was the policeman who spoke? A.-Because I recognized it as the voice that spoke to me at the corner.

Asked why he did not go any further north, witness said after the shots he ran back towards Elias street, because he was scared. A moment later the same boys came running south to get help. He could not identify the prison-

What self-renunciation and heroic purpose was this! They drowned witches to be sure, but that was no part of their puritanism. It Is to the puritan women we owe so much for that spirit in our people which gives them the fortitude to endure hardship and stake ife and fortune for their convictions.

The American women of to-day have the spirit of their puritan mothers, but their constitutions are not rugged or able to en-dure half the hardships of these New England ancestors. Very often they are rundown with weaknesses and irregularities peculiar to their sex, and the constant drain upon their vitality makes them chronic invalids. Many women hesitate to go to their family physician, because they dread the local examinations so generally insisted upon by practitioners. Such women should write Dr. R. V Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., giving a full description of their symptoms, history, etc., so that he can give them the best possible medical advice. If Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescripsay so. Witness said he had seen another peg-legged man in a C. P. R. box car a couple of days before the murder. That peg-legged man was a thin man and used a crutch.

Young Reardon was re-examined by the crown prosecutor regarding the time the peg-leg was first seen, the time the policeman passed the corner, and the shooting, as witness had made some statements that a little twisted his first story.

HARRY TRELEAVEN.

Harry Treleaven, of 386 York street, was behind the bush, on Elias street, on June 24, when the shots were fired. He followed the policeman up to the bush but did not see the shooting. There were other boys in front of him. After the shooting he had seen the peg-leg's hat picked up.

Mr. Magee-Perhaps you are jumping at conclusions? A.—Well, it was a black hat, anyway.

The hat picked up at the scene of the murder was produced and witness said that it looked like the one he had seen up at the top of Ontario street. Cross-examined by Mr. McPhillips, witness said he was standing on the corner of King and Waterloo streets when the patrol came along, and with other boys he chased it to Ontario, where he saw P. C. Toohey.He could not say what time it was, but between 9:30 and 10 p.m. The doctor described the finding of the body. Te found it on the knees, with the head bent forward to the ground. The right arm was extended from the head, and the left arm doubled up beneath the head and shoulders. The doctor said he noticed that the breast pocket of the policeman's coat was torn out. On the policeman's belt was a lantern and pistol pouch. Witness noticed the smell of powder from the policeman's coat, and this attracted his attention to a hole in the coat. Witness said the omited matter on the ground was likely the result of a shock. The cause of death was the result of a pistol shot.

Cross-examined by prisoner's counsel, Dr. Seaborne said he had noticed a wound on the right side of the head, which he took to be a bullet wound, but did not probe it at the time. At the post mortem he had ascertained that it was only a slight cut, possibly caused by coming in contact with the barbed wire fence. There were other large bruises both caused by the bullet which entered the body on the left side near the ninth rib and continued through the body to the right 553 58. side near the eleventh rib. NOTABLE WEDDING AT POPLAR HILL

Marriage of Miss Vina McGugan to W. Doherty, of Clinton.

Today at high noon, a quiet and pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. Godfrey McGugan, Poplar Hill, near Strathroy, when Laura, his eldest daughter, became the wife of J. P. Doherty, the genial son of W. Doherty, of Clinton, the well known organ manufacturer. Miss Vina McGugan, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and hibition." A. T. Cooper, of Clinton, as groomsman. Only the immediate relatives of the families were present, and after the usual congratulations and luncheon the party left on the evening train for Detroit, Chicago, and other American cities. At the present time Mr. Doherty is the youngest alderman of the town, and secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association, and other organizations, and has always taken a leading part in the various enterprises of the town.

Engineer Kingley Crushed in His Cab -Train Ran 20 Miles Unguided.

Susquehanna, Pa., Oct. 26.-When the night express train, No. 12, eastbound, arrived at this station at midnight Monday, the engineer, Henry Kingley, of Susquehanna, was found dead in the cab, with his head badly crushed. After the train left Binghampton, 23 miles west of here, trainmen and others noticed that the engineer failed to give the usual signals at crossings and small stations, and that the train was running at unusual speed. Fireman Cogwill noticed that the whistle was not blown for this station, and going forward into the cab found the dead engineer. The train has run at a terrific speed for twenty miles without an engineer. There were more than 200 passengers on board. It is supposed that the engineer had been hit by a water crane at a point just east Binghampton. Engineer Kingley was one of the most reliable engineers on the Erie road.

Temperance Workers Consider the Standing of the Cause

And Outline Work for the Future-Adjourned Annual Meeting of the W C. T. U.-Reception at Somerset

Many wearers of white ribbon assembled at the W. C. T. U. headquarters, Somerset Hall, yesterday afternoon, to attend the adjourned annual meeting of the union. The unfinished business consisted of the reception of the president's and recording secretary's annual reports and the election of officers.

Mrs. Gordon Wright, in her report as president, said the past twelve months had been an epoch year to the London Union. Work had been accomplished which should leave its impress upon all time. The year was commenced ner of Ontario street. Witness saw P. with a smaller membership than some of the previous years, but as a result ing along Ontario street, but could not of the membership campaign institutsay who they were. Witness described ed in view of the oncoming plebiscit, the finding of the policeman's body, and 350 men and women handed in their applications for membership at the meeting, Feb. 8, making the day a redletter one in the history of the union. Some idea of the vast amount of work the plebiscit campaign entailed was given; 4,000 dodgers, 8,000 circulars, and 335,400 leaslets were distributed. Of the vote, Mrs. Wright said that though the day's results were not all they had hoped for, yet they believed such a measure of success rewarded their efforts as would warrant their expecting the government to fulfill to the utmost its pledges. It was true Quebec had spoken in overwhelming terms against a prohibitory measure, but they were persuaded that undue pressure was brought to bear upon the Quebec elector, so that he, through a misconception of the situation blindly voted "no." But, despite these untoward circumstances, they believed the white line of prohibition for Canada rose just ahead. At this crisis in their history, Mrs. Wright said the women of the union should not allow their work to lapse, for even with the inauguration of prohibition it would not mean to temperance workers a surcease from toil and labor. A report by Mrs. Frank White, the corresponding secretary, showed that 430 names were on the roll, including 95 honorary members. Over 300 new members had been added during the year. The average attendance was 72, and the smallest attendance at any meeting was 30. The largest 350. Twenty-three regular, 3 special and 20 executive meetings had been The total receipts were $2,-

In the evening the union held a reception for the temperance workers shot could have been fired from a man on the ground.

The different result was, he asserted, because word had been sent out by the power ecclesiastical and powers political to influence the electors.

A report of the secretary, Mr. C. J. Beal, showed that a balance of $28 remained in the treasury after all expenses were paid.

Rev. Ira Smith reported for the public meetings committee. The cam-paign, in this respect, he considered better conducted than any other ever waged in the city.
Mrs. Gordon Wright reported for the literature committee. "The Present Standing of the Temperance Cause in Canada" was discussed by Rev. T. S. Johnson. The cause was none the worse for the vote, he said. The question had been presented, not loaded up with political issues, and they knew pretty well how large a force ists. was standing out for prohibitory law. The speaker was surprised so many had voted for the temperance cause. A tremendous victory had been achieved. The cause had received a grand impetus by the campaign. An educative influence had been at work, and they were now stronger and better able to pursue an aggressive policy than before. About the vote in Quebec, Mr. Johnson vehemently alleged "it was the result of a trick of the party determined by hook or by crook to defeat pro-Mrs. May R. Thornley also spoke of the present position. Not only a majority of the provinces had been obtained for prohibition, she said, but a majority of the constituencies. In the latter the division was 125 for, to 81 against. They had also a grand majority of 13,000. This was a grand showing, she thought, in the face of the difficulties they had to contend against. An unfair ballot had been forced on them. The campaign was in the worst two months of the year. A strong section of the church opposed them. They had no warrants to arrest impersonators on election. Forged ballots and plugging had been resorted to by their opponents; and, lastly, the men—the class most interested in retaining the saloons-had ballots in their hands, while the women-the class most intersted in doing away with the saloons were ballotless. In conclusion Mrs.

Thornley dwelt upon the claims of women to enfranchisement. Rev. Dr. Saunders spoke of the future possibilities and probabilities along the line of temperance work. He did not think there would be another plebiscite, and if they did have government by referendum, he hoped it would not begin with the temperance question. They had enough of the piebiscit. But they should ring out over all the land that they have a majority. They should go on and "agitate, educate and legislate." Dr. Saunders did not take the ground of the other speakers, who impeached the government. He was not convinced, he said, that the government, as a government, did anything to change the vote in Quebec. One or two politicians may have gone through the province, but it was, no doubt, on their own responsibility, and not as representaties of the government. The speaker also thought the franchise should be extended to women. Continuing, he said they should gather in the returns,

Mr. F. G. Simpson asked if it would be well to take any action in the coming municipal elections.

Rev. Robert Johnston favored the continuance of the present organization. They were in sight, of victory, he said. He advised that they ask for effective restrictions under present conditions, out should not forget that "total prohibition" was the goal in sight. That might not be attained, however, for a Dr. Arnott, as one of the promoters of the write-prohibition-across-your-ballot movement, said that they could become a strong force in any election if they could get even 100 men who could be relied upon to promise that they would not vote except for a prohibitionist for anything.

Rev. T. S. Johnson moved the con-tinuance of the organization, and it was decided that the chairman, Mr. William Bowman, should call a meeting of all persons interested in temperance work for reorganization, so that nobody could say hereafter that they were a self-appointed body. Rev. Ira Smith was elected a delegate to represent London whenever the plebiscit deputation should wait on the government.

An adjournment to the dining-room was then made and a pleasant hour

USES OF WHEY.

Whey is a valuable feed for hogs. There are about seven pounds of solids in every 100 pounds, and that quantity of whey, fed properly, in combination with other feeds, should produce two pounds of increase in live weight. Whey is a poor diet when fed alone, although hogs will live on it and gain in weight. Whey may be turned to lard, but it does not give good results, when fed alone. To young, growing pigs it may be fed with profit on clover pasture. The use of a field in that way puts it in a capital condition for the growing of a crop of Indian corn for fodder purposes the following year. Whey should be fed in a sweet and clean condition. A clean and comparatively sweet whey is wholesome, whereas a very sour whey is dangerous. Often its use is injurious to the swine. The whey tank at a cheese factory should be above ground; and for the sake of the value of the whey for the production of pork, the tank should be cleaned thoroughly once every week. Indian corn, ground or unground. should not be fed alone with whey. It is unprofitable in that combination; and results in the production of very fat bacon. A good mixture would be (a) one-third shorts or bran, (b) one-third ground oats, peas, barley, wheat, mixed or single, and (c) one-third ground Indian corn. The best results from Indian corn are obtained when it is fed in combination with skim-milk, or buttermilk, which supply the flesh-forming materials in which the corn is deficient. -Prof. J. W. Robertson.

Modern Chivalry.

Sir Walter Raleigh's cloak has been a symbol of chivalry for many years, but the little street boy's cap in the following story, from The Sunday Magazine, deserves an equally honorable place:

The best story I know of an Edinburgh street boy was told me by a lady who witnessed the incident. There was a Christmas treat given to poor children at a mission hall, and hundreds of little ones were assembled at the doors in advance of the hour of admittance, many of them bare-

Among the number was a sweet faced little girl, who seemed less hardened than most to the cold, for she shivered in her poor jacket and danced from one foot to the other on the cold, hard stones. A boy not much older watched this performance for a few-minutes and then, with a sudden impulse of protection, took off his cap, put it down before her and said:

"Ye maun stand on that."

Animals and Music. Tarantulas do not dance to the sound of the violin, but let the people they bite do the dancing. Scorpions, however, enjoy fiddling, according to The Quarterly Review, and lizards go crazy for music of any kind. As for serpents, the boa constrictor and python are senseless to melody, but the cobra is fascinated by the flute and still more by the fiddle. Polar bears enjoy the violin, so do ostriches. Wolves will stop in the chase to listen to a cornet. Elephants are fond of the flute, especially the upper notes. Tigers, while appreciating violin and flute, cannot stand the harmonium, while the musical sea shows no emotion on hearing any instrument, not even the bass drum. Persistancy. Persistency is characteristic of all men who have accomplished anything great.

They may lack in some particular, may have many weaknesses and eccentricities, but the quality of persistence is never absent in a successful man. No matter what opposition he meets or what discouragements overtake him, he is always persistent. Druggery cannot disgust him, labor cannot weary him. He will persist, no matter what comes or goes. It is a part of his nature. He could almost as easily stop breathing. It is not so much brilliancy of intellect or fertility of resource as persistency of effort, constancy of purpose, that gives success.—Keystone. Improved on Solomon.

In a Pontiac (Mich.) Sunday school a little girl told the story of Solomon and the disputing mothers in this wise: "Solomon was a very wise man. One day two women went to him, quarreling about a baby. One woman said, 'This is my child,' and the other woman said, 'No, 'tain't; it's mine.' But Solomon spoke up and said: 'No, no, ladies; don't quarrel. Give me my sword, and I'll make twins of him, so you can both have one." "-Exchange.

The Czar's Home Life.

A French newspaper publishes a description of the home life of the Czar and Czarina, which, it says, is very simple. The Czar, it appears, often remains at his desk until late at night, and frequently receives his counselors and Ministers at midnight; but, the paper adds. they rarely find him alone, as the Czarina is generally seated beside him, embroidering or sewing. When a stranger appears, she picks up her scissors and spools and prepares to leave the room. The Emperor thereupon begs her not to go, but to remain with him, and the Czarina silently returns to her seat, puts her thimble on her finger and resumes work with her needle, while her husband discusses affairs of state.

Honesty and Fairness.

Simple integrity, simple fairness, simple justice to rich and poor alike, giving to each one his rightful dues, striving neither to oversell nor to underbuy goods or labor, incurring no debts but such as to admit of being properly met, and luring no one else to do so-in short, carrying out in daily life the principle of honesty and fairness, is the very best and most efficient means of benefitting the community, and the only foundation on which to build a benevolence worthy of the name. - Self Culture.

Anecdote of Li Hung Chang.

As showing the wonderful adaptability to circumstances of the great Chinese statesman, it is said that when informed that the Emperor had deprived him of his yellow jacket, he merely smiled, and observed: "Very well. Then I shall go to America and buy a red golf coat. There are ways of making one's self conspicuous that this little almond-eyed Emperor of ours wots not of."

THE STARTER'S LOT.

The post of starter is not an easy one. The jockeys are paid extravagant fees by owners with a "pull" sufficient to counteract any disciplinary measures the starter may undertake, and they practically defy the starter, and do as they please at the post. The experience of Mr. Fitzgerald, a former Londoner, is a fair example. Every winter at New Orleans he makes an days, but about New York it is different. There his hands are tied. Black and Blue writes in the New York Mail and Express: No starter has ever pleased the betting public. Mr. Caldwell, who was for some occult reason once christened the Prince of Starters, left two favorites at the post in a Suburban handicap, and did many other things displeasing to the betting pub-lic. Mr. Fitzgerald has ot suited everybody, and has been savagely attacked by persons whose unfriendly motives would not bear investigation. For a time it looked as if certain jockeys were anxious to retard the starter's success, but it must be admitted that Mr. Fitzgerald, despite all handicaps, has steadily won his way in the esteem of racegoers, and has shown marked improvement in sending the horses from the post.

STRAIGHT AS A RIFLE BALL

Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure Goes Direct to the Seat of Disease and Quickly Cures.

The modern rifle, with its deadly effects, is no greater improvement over the old, scattering musket than is Dr. A. W. Chase's Catarrh Cure with the improved blower over the common catarrh cures offered for sale. This remedy, while most efficient, contains none of the injurious poisonous drugs usually found in catarrh remedies. Its great success is due to the fact that it reaches the right spot at once, and is so soothing and healing that the ulcerated linings of the nose and throat are quickly healed. When once healed the poisonous discharge stops, the breath becomes sweet, and the disease is entirely thrown off. Why not adopt the modern means of destroying disease as well as combating with human enemies? Dr. A. W. Chase's Catarrh Cure is the only 25cent catarrh cure with blower included, and is the most effective remedy for this disgusting disease that modern science offers to suffering humanity.

THE REFEREE'S POSITION

President Edward Bayly, of the Canadian Rugby Football Union, has forced an issue on the ruling by the Amateur Athletic Association of Canada, that a man who is paid as referee of a football game is no longer an amateur athlete. Mr.Bayly has for several seasons made it a practice to charge for his services in that capacity ,and to make plain his position he gives his receipt marked "for services as referee." It was ruled by the executive of the A. A. A. of C. before the opening of the present football season, and in answer to a question by the Ontario union, that no one could do so and remain an amateur. That decision made no change in Mr. Bayly's policy, for he naturally believed that his position was a sound one, and in this he will be almost universally supported. He is not an amateur referee, and does not want to be one, but he is still an amateur athlete, and no rulings can get over facts.

FISTIC. Tommy Ryan nearly put Jack Bonner out of business in 20 rounds at New York and got the decision.

Jim Watts, of Louisville, beat Jim Janey, of Baltimore, in the seventh round of what was called a fight for the "colored middle-weight championship."

THE ANNUAL

Of the Western University Students

A Huge Success-Ladies Turn Out Well to Encourage the Contestants-An Ideal Day-Arts and Divinity Students Triumphant -The Results.

The annual sports of the Western University students were held yesterday afternoon and were in every way a huge success. The day was all that could be desired from the standpoint of both spectators and competitors, and a large crowd of citizens availed themselves of the opportunity to witness the games and at the same time bask in the rays of an October sun. The students of the different colleges were on hand in fair numbers, somewhat before the appointed time, and vied with the Musical Society band in supplying upto-date music.

When the hour for beginning the games arrived the attendance was somewhat small, but it kept improving until later on there was an immense throng. The ladies especially were nt in large numbers and conclusdemonstrated their interest in athletic sports. All had their favorites and would eagerly watch and encourage them at every opportunity. Much credit is due to the officials of the afternoon for the prompt and efficient way in which the events were run off.

Special features of the day were the tug-of-war, the mile walking race, and the team race between the arts, medical and divinity departments. All the events were keenly contested, and the entries were numerous in all cases. Mr. W. H. Hartley, a second year divinity student, won the gold medal presented by Dr. Ferguson to the contestant making the most points in all events. Great rivalry has always existed between the medical and the arts and the divinity departments, and the meds. usually got the best of it, but this time the arts and divinity students were too much for them, and carried off the major portion of the prizes.

A church within a church, a republic within a republic, a world within a world, is spelled by four letters-home! If things go right there, they go right everywhere; if things go wrong there, they go wrong everywhere. The doorsill of the dwelling house is the foundation of church and state. A man never gets higher than his own garret, lower than his own cellar. Domestic life overarches and undergirdles all other life. The highest house of congress is the domestic circle; the rocking chair in the nursery is higher than a throne. George Washington commanded the forces of the United States, but Mary Washington commanded George.

As individuals we are fragments. make up; our deficits and surpluses of character being the cogwheels in the great social mechanism.

I have no more right to blame a a driving wheel has a right to blame the iron shaft that holds it so the center. John Wesley balances Calvin's "Institutes." A cold thinker gives to Scotland the strong bones of theology. Dr. Guthrie clothes them with a throbbing heart and warm flesh. The difficulty is that we are not satisfied with just the work that God has given us to do. The water wheel wants to come inside the mill and grind the grist, and the hopper wants to go out and dabble in the water. Our usefulness and the welfare of society depends upon our put us, or intended we should occupy. curse. Cowper said: For more compactness and that we may be more useful we are gathered. The kindest and the happiest pair in still smaller circles in the home Will find occasion to forbear group. And there you have the same variety again-brothers, sisters, husband, and wife, all different in temperaments and tastes. Mary and Martha are necessities. There will be Marth: there will be no audience for there be no Mary. The home zation is most beautifully constructed. Eden has gone, but there is just one little fragment left. It floated down on the river Hiddekel out of paradise. It is the marriage institution. It does not, as at the beginning, take away from man a rib. Now it is an addition of ribs. This institution of marriage has been defamed in our day. Socialism and polygamy and the most damnable of all things, free lovism, have been trying to turn this earth into a Turkish harem. While the pulpits have been comparatively silent, novels, their cheapness only equaled by their nastiupon themselves to educate, this nation in regard to holy marriage, which over the porch of a Christian home. makes or breaks for time and eternity. Oh, this is not a mere question of residence or wardrobe! It is a question charged with gigantic joy or sorrow, with heaven or hell. Alas for this new dispensation of George Sands! Alas for this mingling of the nightshade with the marriage garlande! Alas for the white frosts of eternal death that kill the orange blossoms! The gospel of Jesus Christ is to assert what is right and to assail what is wrong. Attempt has been made to take the marriage institution, which was intended for the happiness and elevation of the race, and make it a mere commercial enterprise. Eighty thousand divorces in Paris in one year preceded the worst revolution that France ever saw. And I tell you what you know as well as I do, that wrong notions on the subject this day of more moral outrages be-

Cherry Pectoral

Washington, Oct. 25.-Rev. Dr. Tal- | fore God and man than any other

My first counsel to you is, have God in your new home, and let him who was a guest at Bethany be in your household, let the divine blessing drop upon your every hope and plan and expectation. Those young people who begin with God and with heaven. My second advice to you in home is to exercise to the very last possibility of your nature the law of forbearance. Prayers in the household will not make up for everything. Some of the best people in the world are the hardest to get along with. There are people who stand up in prayer meetings and pray like angels who at home are uncompromising and cranky. You may not have everything just as you want it. Sometimes it will be the duty of the husband and sometimes of the wife to yield, but both As individuals we are fragments. God makes the race in parts, and then he gradually puts us together. What I lack, you make up; what you lack, I decide the conflict. Never be ashamed make up; our deficite and surpluses of to apologize when you have done wrong in domestic affairs. Let that be a law of your household. Never be ashamed to apologize for domestic man for being different from me than inaccuracy. Find out the points, which are the weak points, if I may call them so, of your companion and then housework, and is as well as she ever stand aloof from them. Do not carry was. Sold by all druggists; large botthe fire of your temper too near the gunpowder. If the wife be easily fretted by disorder in the household, let the husband be careful where he throws his slippers. If the husband come home from the store with his patience exhausted, do not let the wife unnecessarily cross his temper, but both stand out for your rights, and I will promise the everlasting sound of the warwhoop. Your life staying in just the place that God has riage to you will be an unmitigated will be spent in making up, and mar-

And something, every day they live To pity and perhaps forgive.

I advise also that you make your chief pleasure circle around about that no dinner for Christ if there be no home. It is unfortunate when it is otherwise. If the wife throws the cares of the household into the servant's lap and then spends five nights of the week at the opera or theater, she may clothe her children with satins and lace and ribbons that would confound a French milliner, but they are orphans.

I have seen the sorrow of a godless mother on the death of a child she had neglected. It was not so much grief that she felt from the fact that the child was dead as the fact that she had neglected it. She said. "If I had only watched over and cared for the child, I know God would not have taken it." Oh, you wanderers from your home, go back to your duty!
The brightest flowers in all the earth ness, are trying to educate, have taken are those which grow in the garden of a Christian household, clambering

I advise you also to cultivate sympathy of occupation. Sir James Mc-Intosh, one of the most eminent and elegant men that ever lived, while standing at the very height of his eminence, said to a great company of scholars, "My wife made me." The wife ought to be the advertised partner in every firm. If a man goes into a business transaction that he dare not tell his wife of, you may depend that he is on the way either to bankruptcy or moral ruin. On the other hand the husband ought to be sympathetic with the wife's occupation. It is no easy thing to keep house. Many a woman who could have endured martyrdom as well as Margaret, the Scotch girl, has actually been worn out by house management. There are 1,000 martyrs of the kitchen. Sympathy of occupation! If the of Christian marriage are the cause at husband's work cover him with the soot of the furnace, or the odor of leather or soap factories, let not the wife be easily disgusted at the begrimed hands or unsavory aroma. Your gains are one, your interests are one. Lay hold of the work of life with both hands. Four hands to fight the battles; four eyes to watch for the danger; four shoulders on which to carry the trials. It is a very sad tning when the painter has a wife who does not like pictures. It is a very sad thing for a pianist when she has a husband who does not like music. It is a very sad thing when a wife is not suited unless her husband has what is called a "genteel business." So far as I understand a "genteel business," is something to which a man goes at 10 o'clock in the morning and from which he comes home at 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon and gets a large amount of money for doing nothing. That is, I believe, a "genteel business," and there has been many a wife who has made the mistake of not being satisfied until the husband has given up the tanning of the hides, or the turning of the banister, or the building of the walls and put himself in circles where he has nothing to do but smoke cigars and drink wine and get himself into habits that upset him, going down in the maelstrom, taking his wife and children with him.

I have one more word of advice to give to those who would have a happy home, and that is, let love preside in When your behavior in the domestic circle becomes a mere matter of calculation, when the caress you give is merely the result of deliberate study of the position you occupy, happiness lies stark dead on the hearthstone. When the husband's position as head of the household is maintained by loudness of voice, by strength of arm, by fire of temper, the republic of domestic blies has become a despotism that neither God nor man will abide. Oh, ye who promised to love each other at the altar, how dare you commit perjury? Let no shadow of suspicion come on your affection. It is easier to kill that flower than it is to make it live again. The blast from hell that puts out that light leaves you in the blackness of darkness forever.

A clerk with a salary of $1,000 a year -only $1,000—goes to his home, set up three months ago, just after the mar riage day. Love meets him at the door, love sits with him at the table love talks over the Bible and reads of him who came our souls to save, and they kneel, and while they are kneeling, right in that plain room on the a throne not out of flowers that perish and fade away, but out of garlands of heaven, wreath on top of wreath, amaranth on amaranth, until the throne is done. Then the harps of God sounded, and suddenly there appeared one who mounted the throne with eye so bright and brow so fair that the twain knew it was Christain love. And they knelt at the foot of the throne, and, putting one hand on each head, she blessed them and said, "Happiness is with me!" And that throne of celestial bloom withered not with the passing years, and the queen left not the throne till one day the married pair felt stricken in yearsfelt themselves called away and knew not which way to go, and the queen bounded from the throne and said, "Follow me, I will show you the way up to the realm of everlasting love. And so they went up to sing songs of love and walk on pavements of love and to live together in mansions of love, and to rejoice forever in the truth that God is love.

London, Wednesday, Oct. 26, 1898.

An Incendiary Contemporary. In view of the momentarily excited feeling alike in Great Britain and in France over the Fashoda incident, it surely behooves public men and responsible journalists to do nothing, whether in Great Britain, in France or in Canada, to fan racial or religious feelings into flame. Yet that is what the London Free Press deliberately endeavors to do in an editorial in today's issue. It does so under cover of a defense of an incendiary harangue delivered in South Ontario against Hon. John Dryden by Mr. Carscallen, M.P.P., in which the electors were urged to vote against Mr. Hardy's Minister of Agriculture, because, as alleged, Mr. Tarte had sailed down the St. Lawrence on an inspecting tour, with the tricolor flying. Mr. Carscallen's motive was obvious; namely, by use of the demagogue's art to injure Mr. Dryden's candidature, even though a temporary and provincial advantage could be obtained only by setting the match to the handy combustibles of racial and religious prejudice. Mr. Carscallen would evidently prove an opportunist of a dangerous type, were his ability on a par with his recklessness. He has been' everything by turns, and nothing long.

The London Free Press goes beyond Mr. Carscallen. It will have no tricolor business. It will not tolerate Sir Wilfrid Laurier's manly, sentimental attachment to the land of his forefathers, though it reluctantly admits that the second most conspicuous figure in the Queen's Jubilee may perhaps be personally loyal to the British Empire. Our demagogue contemporary then proceeds solemnly to inquire of "our people," "whether they are being hoodwinked by the talk of racial unity,"

Our contemporary is great on holding Mr. Tarte responsible for everything that appears in La Patrie, of Montreal. Why, then, in that case, does it not quote La Patrie's powerful plea of a few days ago, against friction and illfeeling between Great Britain and France, and strongly advocating an alliance between the two great nations? Our contemporary does not do so, because that would have been to throw water on its own inflammatory torch.

The course of the London Free Press in this matter, at a time when wisdom points out that passion needs to be allayed rather than excited, is the course of an opportunist incendiary, and should be reprobated by men of goodwill and statesmanlike breadth everywhere, whether English-speakers or French-speakers, whether Protestants Roman Catholics.

The Street Railway Trouble.

The people of London hope that the differences between the London Street Railway Company and their employes will be speedily and satisfactorily adjusted.

It seems to be a case where a conciliatory attitude on both sides and a frank exchange of views will conduce to this end.

If the company and their employes find, after full discussion, that a reasonable compromise cannot be effected by that means, they should have recourse to arbitration and bind themselves to accept the verdict. Arbitration is the modern enlightened method of dealing with labor disputes.

We believe public sentiment in the city will uphold this view.

Harold Frederic.

The circumstances of the death of Harold Frederic, the journalist and novel-writer, were rather peculiar. He seemed to have received "Christian Science treatment," and some members of his family are reported to have said that "he did not believe in doctors." He was a brilliant writer, but not one likely to have permanent influence. In our opinion, some of his best work is to be found in a volume of short stories, entitled, "In the Sixties." The picture of the sturdy old "copperhead" is splendidly done. The volume from his pen which attracted most attention was the one published in England under the title of "Illumination," a very appropriate title, certainly, but it seems to have been considered not the beliefs of enthusiastic theorists. striking enough for this side of the Atlantic, as the same book was published in America with the more sensational name, "The Damnation of The- stances are always changing, and there ron Ware." It was no doubt a elever book, but cynical in its tone, and not that the practical statesman must be altogether wholesome in its influence. The kind of doctors and parsons found It is, of course, much more difficult to since they evidently do not believe in is to be a consistent agitator or a themselves, or in any great truth The little knowledge which is proverbtally dangerous, upset Theron Ware, es it was an "illumination" of a very superficial kind; and while the word damnation is not to be lightly used, we concede that in some form it represents the fate of men who have no more will-power than Mr. Frederic's Methodist parson. We are not in a position to speak fully of the circumstances attending Mr. Frederic's death; but it seems strange that a man who evidently regarded as "the seamy side" deathbed have yielded to such strange study the conditions of some European religious practices

The Hamilton Herald thus comments on Ald. Graham's municipal reform

"This plan is a decided improvement on the ward system; but we don't like it so well as the plan of electing a fixed number of aldermen. What would be the basis of representationthe decennial Dominion census, or the annual census of the assessors? There would always be a doubt about the correctness of the representation, and probably a good deal of wrangling over it. There would be danger of having the census figures cooked so as to increase the number of aldermen. The system would also make the good plan of two or three year terms harder to work. "But this is a minor consideration. The important feature of this proposal is that it abolishes the ward system and substitutes a system under which each alderman will represent the whole

"Will London show itself to be more progressive than Hamilton in the path of municipal reform?"

The Herald is correct in saving that the main consideration is the abolition of the ward system. When that is achieved, other reforms will be more workable. We certainly think the twoyear term desirable, but to attempt too much at once might perplex some people whose minds can better grasp a single idea than half a dozen. Improvement in the personnel of the city council is the present aim.

The Ottawa Free Press makes a good point when it says the Legislature should grant wider permissive powers to the cities in respect of their administrative forms. The mere fact of having to solicit legislative sanction for such a change as is proposed here, is an obstacle in the path of reform. A municipality may safely be left to its own wisdom in such purely local matters, though Legislative checks and safeguards are necessary in financial transactions. The London city council, in co-operation with Hamilton, Kingston and other places, should urge this privilege, and obtain permission to make reforms from time to time, without waiting for the formal assent of the Legislature. Experience will be continually suggesting changes.

If the aldermen are to be elected by the general vote of the people, the school trustees should be elected in the same way. Ward-grabbing is practiced in the school board, as well as in the council.

M. Louis De Rougemont.

Who is he? He is the modern Robinson Crusoe, who has lived among savages, and has come back to the civilized world to tell us all about it. He recently lectured in St. James' Hall, London, England, to an assembly so large mark, "If it's a swindle, it's a big thing." The opinion was freely express- tario possess. ed that he was probably a fraud. Others again thought that perhaps he by exposing his "sun-tanned, weathercolored arms"? "No questions were permitted," says the British Weekly, "and such laughter or applause as there was came chiefly in response to references to the benefit the hostile criticisms had brought to his publishers." His apology for possible exaggeration was: "When you are young you see things big, especially when you are frightened of them." His strange stories are being scattered throughout the world, but many sensible people think that it is indeed a big swindle. If people are to be swindled, it must be done on a large scale.

The Socialist and the Anarchist.

These two types of modern political activity are often confounded; but as a matter of fact, they represent two opposite tendencies. The socialist. who would usher in his reign of equality by a violent revolution, may easily be mistaken for the anarchist, who would gladly blow all governments to pieces. Socialism is one extreme; it would have everything done by government production and transportation, buying and selling, and would even regulate, by public authority, the amusements as well as the education of the people; while anarchism of the milder type is the extreme of individualism, which rests upon the belief that man would easily reach a more perfect form of life if he was not so much governed. One looks for salvation to a widening of the area of social control; the other, from a larger freedom of the individual life. Neither of these comes within the range of practical politics. Much legislation of modern times has had a socialistic tendency, but it is not likely that the ideal of socialists will ever be realized; while anarchism pure and simple could only be carried out by reducing the population of the world to a small number, and scattering that few through the woods and vales, going back to "the state of nature," whose praises a certain class of poets have sung so fervently. These different views have always been held by speculators in political science, but these could so brilliantly describe what he problems only become acute where governments are tyrannical and the of American Methodism, should on his conditions of life hard. more intelligent teaching. Italy, according to the latest reports, is not only the land where the government is almost bankrupt, and where the poor laborer works under the most miserable conditions. When we remember how many noble patriots have suffered and died for the land of sunny skies and great historical associations. there is something tragic in its present sad condition. But there, as elsewhere, salvation must come from within. To drive out the Austrian was not easy, but to drive out the devil of sloth, greed, and petty grinding tyranny, is infinitely harder.

Sewage farms have been tried in London and Berlin, but their success as a solution of the problem is still disputed.-Ottawa Citizen.

For the information of the Citizen we may say that the sewage farm system has been tried at the London Asylum for the Insane for the past ten years and has proved an unqualified success. Eminent engineers recommended the same method for the disposal of the sewage of this city, but the aldermen were offered a different system, and not being able to determine on either, postponed action until next year.

That many people have a sneaking notion that they are among the most conspicuous members of human society, may be proved any day by crying out something or other streets. Almost everyone within earshot will immediately turn around, on the supposition that he or she is the party noticed or wanted. The personal ego looms up as a very large quantity in the view of most. It is indeed a sad revelation when a man finds that the world does not want or even need him very badly after all.

THE OLDEST BANK. The oldest bank notes are the "fly-

Originally these notes were used by the treasury, but experience dictated a change to the banks under government inspection and control. A writer in a pro-vincial paper says that the early Chinese "greenbacks" were in all essentials similar to the modern bank notes, bearing the name of the bank, date of issue, the number of the note, the signature of the official using it, indications of its value in figures, in words and in the pictorial representation in coins or heaps of coins equal in amount to its face value, and a notice of the pains and penalties for counterfeiting. Over and above all was a laconic ex-

His Peace Proclamation Not a Humanitarian Document.

Rabbi Masliansky Says It Is Policy, Pure and Simple.

[Detroit Free Press, Oct. 23.] Rev. H. Masliansky, the Jewish rabbi who speaks in Detroit today for the first time, expresses some very positive views concerning political conditions in the old world. When asked by a representative what he thought of the recent peace proclamation of the Czar of Russia, he expressed himself as fol-"The czar has been reading 'the lows: handwriting on the wall.' The military budgets of all European countries are stubborn propositions, and it takes about all the money that can be raised by the governments of these countries to meet their expenses. Russia's war fund is much larger than that of any other European nation, and it is not strange that the ezar should desire to find some way to lighten a burden that has already nearly bankrupted the nation. The Russian Government is very anxious to develop the resources of the empire, but it takes money to build railroads and make other needed improvements, and the cash for this purpose is not forthcoming under the present system. 'It amuses me to read of the expressions of some of your writers and preachers here in America concerning the wonderful humanity and magnanimity of the 'Czar of All the Russias,' in his so-called meace proclamation. Do not think for one moment that the name of the young czar deserves to be placed in the list of great humanitarians. His action in this matter reminds me of an old Russian fable of a lion that was the terror of all the other animals in the region over which he roamed during the early years of his life. All of the animals were in mortal fear of him, and would go any distance, out of their way, to avoid meeting him. But when old age brought with it decrepitude and failing powers, the old lion saw that he must change his policy, as the great bluff that he had been putting up would not go any longer. The wise old fellow immediately began to talk about peace and brotherly love. He called the animals together in great numbers, and made eloquent appeals to them, urging that they should hereafter dwell together in peace, thin'ing more of each other's interests than of their own. The animals listened with profound surprise and awe, and vied with each other in extolling the virtues and kindheartedness of this almost helpless but remarkably 'smooth' king of beasts. The Russian bear is today in exactly the same position as the lion in the fable. and his peace talk is nothing but policy, pure and simple."

"In your opinion, how does the French republic compare with that of America?" the rabbi was asked. "There is positively no comparison between France as a nation and this country. The Frenchman of today is a slave to the most arbitrary military despotism in the world. France is 100 years behind the times in everything that makes for civilization and human progress; and I firmly believe that her days, as a so-called republic, are numbered. You Americans know very little about what it means to be a citizen of a country that supports a great standing army, and permits the army to trample upon individual rights with impunity. Your papers have been making a great stir about the evils that have come to light in the management of your army in the recent war, but all of the trouble that you have had in prosecuting a victorious war is but a drop in the bucket when compared with the evils and maladministration that occurs in one year in times of peace in France." "If the time should come when America will need to maintain a much larger standing army than she now has, do you think that the same great evils which are now the bane of European military institutions would eventually creep into our army, and make it a menace to individual freedom that you urge the armies of all monarchical governments now are? "I have no fears for the future of the United States army," was the re-"Without doubt there has been some mismanagement in connection with the conduct of the army during the recent war, but it will never occur again in this country. The lesson has been an important one, and the sequel shows that it has been well-learned. The American people have never been quite in earnest in regard to army equipment and discipline, but in the future, if I mistake not, there will be no lack of interest, and the past history of this country goes to show that the American people generally get what they want when they go after it. The success of the American navy shows what can be accomplished in this country in a military way when once the system of organization and discipline is reduced to an exact science. I expect to see the American army become just as efficient as the navy now is, within the next five years."

STELLA.TON, N.S.-James R. Murray, well known violinist, of this place, who has traveled extensively throughout the Provinces, makes this statement:

"I was running down in health and my weight fell off from 175 to 150 pounds. Prescriptions did me but little good. My trouble was called nervous dyspepsia. I resorted to Hood's Sarsaparilla and after taking five bottles I was greatly benefited. I feel as well now as ever in my life, and have increased in flesh so that I now weigh 177 pounds. I am well known in this part of the country, having followed my profession, that of a violin musician for the last 26 years. I gladly tell my friends what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. Before I began taking the medicine I did not have any ambition, but now all is changed and my dyspeptic trouble perfectly cured." JAMES R. MURRAY.

WEEKLY.

Wheat has been advancing steadily all week. The gain so far is 7c per cwt, $1 10 being the price a week ago, and $1 17 today. The supply has been light. Rainy weather is said to have damaged the Northwest crop. This, coupled with light receipts, in Ontario, and the other fall wheat belts, and the war scare, are considered the cause. What distress and anguish come to the mother when her little one wakes up at night with a nasty croupy cough. Wise mothers always keep on hand a bottle of

take it without any fuss, and at the same time its promptness and effectiveness are such that the cough is checked before anything serious develops.

From one end of the Dominion to the other people are praising Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup as the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and all Lung Affections.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE

In a Suburb of Detroit-Fears That the Family Have Perished.

Detroit, Oct. 25 .- At 12:30 this morning, the residence of the late Justice F. W. A. Kurth, corner of Fort street and Crawford avenue, Springwells, was burned to the ground. For a time the neighbors were fearful that the occupants, Mrs. Hattie Clapp, her two daughters and two women school teachers of the McMillan school, had been incinerated, but at 3:20 this morning, after a thorough inspection of the ruins, that idea was abandoned.

The women had moved into the house only a week ago, and the neighborhood knew little about them. Charles W. Kurth, son of the late justice, who sleeps in the office adjoining the residence, saw the women about the house as late as 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but does not know whether they were in the house when it burned.

The firemen spent considerable time looking in the ruins for dead bodies, but owing to the heat were not able to progress very fast. In the ruins of the hallway were found the charred remains of a dog, adding to the suspicion that the women were within the house and shared its fate. Young Kurth thinks the house was burned by an incendiary. It was thought that the women might have been in Detroit over

THE AUTHOR

Sienkiewicz and His Early Struggles in Life.

His First Work Was in America-A True Son of Poland.

Sienkiewicz is coming to America during the latter part of this month, and almost the first place he will visit will be Washington, where he will spend several weeks with friends. The immense popularity of "Quo Vadis" undoubtedly has had much to do with the prospective visit of the celebrated author, for the earlier imtwenty years and more ago, were not calculated to induce him to once more come to these shores. Sienkiewicz first came to America as a young man. At that time, in the early seventies, he was imbued with high ideals. He thought that the present system of life is all wrong and founded upon false beliefs upon the conduct of human life. His visit to America and his departure from Europe have been likened to the voyage a land where he might realize his beliefs. Sienkiewicz passed quickly through the United States and went to the southern part of California, where he joined a party of Socialists, who had a grand colonization scheme streets and the band of a cavalry on hand. There were about 80 men and the Emperor and Empress landed. took up land under the Homestead The colony was founded on the After landing their majesties enter-ed carriages and were driven direct to principles of all men being equal, and Mount Carmel, at the foot of which a German-American colony is situated. The men labored in the fields, for it was an agricultural colony, while the women of the party conducted themselves at home. In this ideal community the most conspicuous persons at that time were the actress Helene Modjeska and her husband, Count Bozenta, who had left the world behind for the sake of entering upon this vita nuova or new life. A number of other distinguished Poles also found homes in the colony, and during the summer of '77 the colony thrived and prospered, and Sienkiewicz doubtless believed that at last he had found the new life of which he dreamed. And then in the fall the crash came. It was just when the community was preparing to enter upon the winter that a trusted officer of the community, who had charge of the finances of the colony, disappeared. He was later heard from in Australia, but was never captured. The betrayal of the trust by this ungrateful man, who absconded with the savings of nearly a hundred people, so shattered the beliefs of the community in human nature that was immediately abandoned. Modjeska returned to the stage, and Sienkiewicz, almost broken-hearted at the annihilation of his dearest hopes, returned to New York, where he endeavored to secure work. His experience in New York, however, was even more discouraging than his life in the colony in California. He knew little English, had very little money and no friends. For nearly six months he existed in New York, but he could find no work. finally made an arrangement whereby he was to write up his impressions of New York for a St. Petersburg newspaper and a Warsaw journal. This was the first time the novelist tried his pen, and he met with a very fair degree of success. The letters were a series of articles of "The Far West," and they first attracted attention to the young author and brought him the first of the recognition which has become so universal. He finally left America and returned to Poland, arriving there in 1878. It will be interesting to note his impressions of America, which he now revisits after a score of years. Like Dickens, no doubt, his ideas will undergo much modification, but that he will find anything more to encourage his socialistic dream than he did in 1877 is doubtful. One thing he will find materially changed, and that is his place in the estimation of the people among whom he once thought to permanently cast his lot.

The few who noticed his harsh criticisms of Americans and America in the years gone by were impatient at the opinions of the unknown young man who ventured unasked to find a great deal of fault. Now they will listen with respect to the observations of the great novelist and thinker.

Scientiewicz is a passionate patriot, a true son of Poland, but his sympathies have been broadened by extensive travel, and he may now be ranked as cosmopolitan in the truest sense. Henry Sienkiewicz is now 53 years old, having been born in Lithuania, Poland, in 1845. He is, therefore, still a comparatively young man, so far as his literary life is concerned, and it is umes to those already to his credit. Not the least interesting feature of the visit of the great Polish writer to this country is that he will be accompanied by his daughter, Jadwiga, who is the constant and inseparable companion of the novelist. Jadwiga is described as a pretty girl of sixteen, who inherits many of her father's qualities. Personally, Sienkiewicz is a charming and courteous gentleman. The two are very popular at the village of Zalopane, in the mountains of Galicia, where they spend the summer months nearly every year. Zakopane is the resort of the artistic and literary elements of Polish society. Here the father is usually engaged upon a new novel, while Jadwiga enjoys the mountain climbing.

VANNECK

Hunt and Subsequent The Sparrow Ball.

Vanneck, Oct. 21 .- The second meeting of the Vanneck Sparrow Hunt

Club was held on Oct. 20, the umpire presiding, with Mr. Oswald Robb acting as secretary. About forty members were present. Upon motion, certain changes were made in former arrangements. First, 20 more members were added to the club, making a total or pressions gathered by Mr. Sienkiewicz 30 on each side. A degree of impation his former visit to America, some ence was felt for the final, so that it was changed from Christmas Eve to the evening before Thanksgiving Day. All the members of the club are required to deposit with the umpire, through their respective captains, Attwood and McIntosh, by or before the next meeting, which will be in the same place on the Saturday night previous to the final, 75 cents each, for which they get a ticket of admission, with lady, to the hall; no person outside of the club to be admitted, only of Columbus, turning his back upon by special invitation by the captains, one world, and seeking in the far West and they, with lady, pay 50 cents. The umpire to continue to receive heads, and after counting, to burn them in the presence of the parties who fetch them; no heads to be counted after 12 o'clock p.m. the night before the final, and to keep it a profound secret how the match is progressing, or which side is ahead, until after the refreshments are served at the final. Then the winning side will positively have 50 cents of their deposit returned, the other 25 cents going toward the cost of the supper: the losing side will get returned all except the balance of the cost of the entertainment, pro rata. The members of the club are scattered over a section of country some ten miles square, or, say, from Birr to Lobo village, north and south, and from Arva to Poplar Hill, east and west, so that all sparrows had better carry their heads out of that territory, or they will be counted. Heads are now coming into the umpire by the hundred almost evand it is confidently ery day, and it is confidently expected that fully six or eight thousand will come under the guillotine within the next month. The Routledge band will be engaged for the final, which will be-well, to use plain English-a ball. Perhaps few persons have a just conception of the advantage gained to the country by the killing of these sparrows. The Strand Magazine estimetes that in ten years, provided all lived, the progeny of a single pair would be 275,716,983,698. Whether this estimate was arrived at by actual calculation, or whether it was obtained in the way the Yankee calculated the distance to the sun by first guessing at the quarter, and multiplying it by four, I cannot say. But; of course, the great increase would be in the last two years. I myself this season took eleven eggs out of one nest. Whether the nest was a private enterprise or run on the co-operative principle. I cannot say. Before closing, I would say that I have been corresponded with as to who first brought the sparrows to London. Well, the evidence lies between Dr. Saunders and Rodger Smith, who was well known on the market years ago. I am sorry to say that the bulk of the evidence is against "Sir Rodger," who was a favorite of mine, and on his account would feel like compromising this time from ten years to five. However, both were "English, very English, you know." Yours truly, A. C. ATTWOOD, Umpire

Remains of the Late Frank Fletcher Laid at Rest in Woodland Cemetery.

The remains of the late Frank Fletcher, who died of typhoid fever in Jacksonville, Florida, were laid at rest in Woodland cemetery this afternoon. The funeral took place from Stephenson's undertaking rooms, and the service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. V. Smith, of the First Methodist Church. A number of beautiful flowers were sent, among them being crossed swords from the captain of his company, and a floral wreath from Mr. and Mrs. Atkins, of Jacksonville, Fla. Deceased was buried in his soldier's clothes, and in the buttonhole of the coat was a faded flower which his mother had sent him while sick. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Peter Fekins, James Forbes, E. McMartin, Jas. Ferguson, Joseph Gibbons, and Sergt. Lawrence, who accompanied the body to this city. There is no truth in the statement

Many of the men have been called into the office by Mr. Carr and asked to sign an agreement to the effect that they would sever connection with all labor organizations; that they would be loyal to the company; that they would pay for damages done to the car while under their control, the sup-erintendent to be the sole judge, and that in the event of their quitting the ploye, who is charged by his wife, the right to discharge the men at any time without giving the cause.

Many other city unions have passed resolutions indorsing the stand taken by the street railway employes, and have also passed resolutions requesting organized bodies and their friends not to ride on the cars until the matter is

Two young men attended the meeting of the street railway employes last night, and said they had been imported from Hamilton by the company, had been promised good jobs, and had had all their expenses paid. They had ascertained what the trouble was and refused to go to work.

A dispatch was received from Ham-ilton this morning stating that fifteen men had left that city en route to London to take the place of men who were to be discharged, owing to the trouble. The men had been promised 15 cents an hour.

It is stated that several cars not reg ularly carrying mail between East London and the city postoffices have been furnished during the past few days with signs, stamping them as engaged on her Majesty's service. Those in sympathy with the men say there is some significance in this, as in case of trouble these cars could not with impunity be interfered with.

Mr. Carr has replied to the city engineer concerning the latter's demand that certain employes, who are non-residents, be dismissed. Mr. Carr's letter states his willingness to comply with the terms of the bylaw as far as practicable so to do, adding that if the men are not loyal to the company he is forced to get experienced labor from outside for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the public generally. Mr. Carr denies that the company has submitted a proposition to the men.

ANNEX THE PHILIPPINES

McKinley Will So Instruct the Commissioners.

The Peace Commission Costing the Country $1,000,000 a Day.

Washington, Oct. 26.-President Mc-Kinley has just had a severe jolt. It is 25 days since the American peace commissionerse arrived in Paris, and peace negotiations are costing this country $1,000,000 a day. This about equals the cost of maintaining the army and navy on its present rating.

The responsibility of this condition solely with President McKinley. It is his lack of definite policy; his inability to make up his mind what to demand in the Philippines, which has cost the united States $25,000,000 without any adequate returns. Criticism is becoming so caustic that since McKinley's return it has been felt at the White House and the state department. Secretary Hay urged the executive to make up his mind and to speak it via cable to Day, Fry, Gray, Reid and Davis in Paris, who have been patiently waiting for their cue. So strongly has this view of the situation been brought home to the president since his return that it is said he has decided to take a decided stand. The American commissioners are to be instructed to insist upon beginning the discussion of the disposal of the Philippines and to demand annexation of the entire group to the United States.

TODAY'S DOINGS.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The American peace commissioners held a session of several hours today, prior to the joint sesion of the two commissions, which opened at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The Americans fully realized that they are approaching the discussion of the chief question entrusted to them, namely the future of the Philippine Islands, and it may be taken for granted that they are well prepared to take the matter up if it is broached today by the Spaniards.

THE QUEEN OF

Not Paris, the bright and beautiful city in which Eugenie, as its fair and gracious empress, held her court, but Paris—beleaguered Paris, forsaken by all but the brave, who would not fly, and the poor, who could not. A be-sieged city, that could only hold in-tercourse with the outer world by stratagem, whose noblest edifices were turned into hospitals for the wounded, or stores for ammunition, and whose citizens hurried through her streets with fear and trembling, lest their career should be cut short by one of those terrible missiles that ever and anon hurtled in the air—bombs and shells projected from the cannons of the enemy encamped without their walls; an enemy so untiring, so vigilant and so powerful, that the most sanguine were beginning to look grave, and secretly confess that the struggle was a doubtful, if not altogether a

It was after midnight, and the porter of one of the finest hotels in the vicinity of the Place Vendome, an hotel much frequented in happier times by the English, was dozing in his lodge, when the well-known signal made him rouse himself and shuffle out to open the gate of the courtyard, that a tall, graceful figure in the quaint garb of a Sister of Charity might pass out.

It was not the first time Francois had seen her during the last two or three days; he had found her homely, and inclined to be communicative, like himself, and, therefore, he did not hesitate to address her.

"It is late for you to return to your convent alone, ma bonne soeur," he observed, with respectful familiarity. Her answer was inarticulate, but he took it for an assent, and went on to

"So late that I am sorry the duties of my office will not permit me to attend you." 'I am not afraid," she said, hastily, holding her handkerchief to her mouth, as if to guard herself against the night

"No-no!" he answered. "You good ladies are always brave, almost to rashness. It is we, to whom you are so valuable, who should charge ourselves with your safety. Will it not be prudent for you to remain here until the

"Are the dangers of the streets so the wind threatened to extinguish, he would have discovered that the features hidden beneath the cap and hood of the Sister of Charity were far more youthful than those he was accustomed to see; he would also have perceived that valuable rings were flashing on the slender fingers that drew the gray cloak of the nun more closely about her.

But on this occasion Francois wa not as keen-sighted as usual, and with a shrug of his shoulders he slowly raised himself to reply.
"Who should know better than yourself, bonne soeur, that the siege has given the turbulent classes an excuse for committing many excesses? I do not say that they would be likely to meddle with one who devotes herself to good works; but you are a woman, and, therefore, easily alarmed by their riotous doings. It would not be agreeable for you to meet a mob of these noisy

"I am not afraid," she said 'again; and, though her voice was somewhat unsteady, Francois did not detect it, and answered cheerfully: "That is well. You have the courage astonishing! You will return to us? They said that you were going to remain with la grande dame Anglaise until she recovers." "I shall return before daybreak," the sister abruptly interrupted. "You will admit me. "At any hour,' she was assured, "a touch of the bell and I am awake and on the alert instantly. Ah! then, you do but go to the convent or the physician for something you require? I was afraid that the bad humors and caprices of miladi had driven you away Her maid, pauvre file, stops now and then en passant to confide to the how tried to excuse the maid, and himself,

"Ah! there is no harm in her confidences. We are compatriots, bonne soeur-Alsatians, both of us.; and it is natural that we should chat of our little troubles when we encounter each You will not mention that she has been so indiscreet as to complain not a servant in the hotel who does not please. It is much to be regretted that she did not return to her own country before the siege commenced; we could have supported her absence.'

"You are detaining me, and I am in haste!" the sister impatiently exclaim-

Pardon; it is for the want of oil that . this bolt works so badly. Did you say that miladi is better?"

"Yes—no; she is not really ill, only —" and then the sister checked herself, and signed to him to stand aside and let her pass through the portal, which he was new slowly opening. "Ah, no; not suffering from any terrified; she is angry; she scolds the beautiful miss, her daughter; she re-proaches her as the cause why their departure was delayed till the execrable Germans flocked the roads, and it became impossible. And the miss is sullen and mutinous, and remains silent till miladi suffocates with wrath, and makes a scene, screams and faints. and has to be carried to her bed, where she shricks anew every time she hears the boom of the cannonading. Oh! but these English are eccentric; is it not Without replying the sister glided past the garrulous old man, leaving him still chuckling to himself at the recollection of miladi's terrors. He did not see how underneath her large cap she was blushing angrily, and biting her lips, and frowning, as if his observations had annoyed her keenly. While he went back to his lodge, telling himself that la soeur Brigitte was as chatty and pleasant as on the preceding day, she hurried on, neither looking to the right nor left, till she reached the wide entry or portico of a large house, deserted by the fair marquise to whom it pertained.

This house stood in one of the quietest nooks of the fashionable quarter of beguile me into some horrible den the city the nun had been traversing. Where I am to be robbed to Not a pedestrian was in sight as she I carry and then murdered? plunged into the obscurity of the en-garments she had just flung off. Partly retracing the route by which she had gained this spot, she now walked towards one of the many bridges that cross the Seine. Once she paused and shrank against the nearest wall, closing her eyes and ejaculating a prayer for divine protection, for a red giow in the sky, an explosion that shook the earth beneath her feet, and wild cries of terror, told her that one bodily filness. "She is great distance; and once, when she had great distance; and once, when she had taken courage to resume her way, a drunken soldier, staggering home from the wine shop, accosted her so familiarly that her hand involuntarily clenched, her cheek grew pale, and then flushed the deepest crimson, and she gasped for breath; but prudence mastered her indignation, and she passed swiftly on, nor paused again till she stood in the shadow of a statue that graced the center of the bridge; and, folding her arms on the parapet, rested awhile, gazing thoughtfully at the waters gliding darkly below.

"Am I doing right or wrong in coming here?" she mentally queried, when nearly ten minutes had elapsed, and frequent glances on either side showed her that no one was approaching her resting-place. "It is a rash enterprise - mad one, perhaps—but it has been forced on me. The world-by which, of course, I mean my amiable stepmother's world-would say that nothing could excuse a young lady of good family for quitting her hotel at night, and in secret, to go she knows not whither, and under the guidance of a woman she has seen but twice. What if I never return? What if this woman's pretended information is but a snare to where I am to be robbed of the gold

In Woman's Interest

An English Beauty.

Lady Alice Montague, daughter of the Duchess of Manchester, will spend the coming winter in New York. Lady Alice is a slender girl with beautiful golden hair. Her features are said to be as classical as those of her grandmother, now the Duchess of Devenshire. Her face is oval, her nose straight, her eyes a faultless almond shape, and her brow low and broad. She has the gray eyes characteristic of the Manchesters. Her chief charm, however, is her amiable, lovable disposition. She made her de-but last spring. Lady Alice's evening frocks are built of white tulle and muslin. The Duchess of Manchester plain wall with a pretty border, a white is far from rich, and she wisely gowns iron bed with brass trimmings and towards him the face she had hitherto kept carefully averted. Had he not been During the London season Lady Alice make a bedroom that must be kept carefully averted. Had he not been busy with his little oil-lantern, which tiful mother. She is an accomplished skater, and on her small feet she wears Dutch skates, with points that curl up over the toe, and at. St. Mority, where she first learned, and where many of the most accomplish-ed skaters in Europe gather, she is easily admitted to surpass them all. Added to this, Lady Alice is a fine linguist and an excellent horsewoman.

Cashmere Linings Give This Aesthetic Effect.

A very extreme modiste of New York city turned out for a fashionable customer a skirt which she declared would be the style before the season was

"It is the first one made in this country," said she, "but it is after a Paris model, and will soon be all the rage." The dress referred to was a navy blue silk, with the skirt very narrow. In the back there was a small train, which "swished" as the wearer walked. But the singular part was the lining, which was of fine cashmere. "Why do you line a silk skirt with cashmere?" asked a spectator. "So that it will cling to the limbs when walking," replied the modiste, promptly.

The fashionable young woman, for whom the costume was designed, took a turn across the room as the modiste spoke, and sure enough the navy blue silk skirt, with its ruffles and little shirrings, clung closely to the figure and gave the long, narrow effect which was so much desired by the designer.

As to Wall Papers

Papers are frequently one thing in the shops and quite another thing upon the wall. In buying plain paper this discrepancy cannot occur.

For bedrooms, plain papers, with a roughly finished surface are the best. These should be light and cheerful in color, and can be relieved by a richer border and contrasting woodwork if

In a hall richly figured paper may be used, but better results are invariably obtained by the use of a plain paper of some dark tone. A deep old red is very effective. With this the woodwork should be painted black and highly varnished. The floors can be covered with matting or with dark carpet.

This color scheme is good also for a small den or study. Red is al-ways rich and warm and very comfortable to the eye in a room much used in winter time. A very pretty treatment of walls in a girl's room or in a cottage parlor is to make a dado of matting running about the room, a full width, above the washboard, and the wall above to be covered with some pretty shade of denim or with heavy burlaps. Such walls are ornamental, and help materially to furnish a room. On planning a room the first consideration should be the walls, the woodwork and the covering of the floor. Any room will have some architectural features that will assert themselves if it is not swamped in unnecessary nicknacks. The ends to be sought are, as in dress, simplicity, use, good color, and pleasing effect. The fewer materials used the better. The trouble is that our walls are usually so offensive that instinctively we seek to conceal them beneath pictures, photographs, fans, and draperies, which only serve to hold the dust and weary the eyes.

A good wall needs very few pictures.

A plain wall will set off the few encourage to do without pictures altogether in a bedroom one will save one's eyes from detecting that this or that frame is hanging out of plumb, and will keep them for the parlor, where they belong. It may require some hero-ism to simplify the bedroom in this way, but the result will more than compensate.

There is a space, a freshness, a sense of cleanliness obtained in this way that cannot be achieved by all the de walls. Simple muslin curtains at the windows clean matter windows, clean matting on the floor, a

Yet these things could be purchased for half the price of the useless decorations with which we constantly disfigure our homes.

Avoid Salt.

A medical journal advises against the excessive use of salt. It is first of all a perversion of taste, the condiment destroying the flavor of delicate dishes if too pronounced. Furthermore, it is asserted that an excessive use of sait seriously overtaxes the kidneys to remove it, and that many cases of derangement and disease are due to this excessive use. The salt nabit, it is added, is easily acquired, and persons indulging themselves soon reach a point where nothing is palatable that is not strongly impregnated with salt.

THE WRITING ON THE WALL

Rev. Prof. Burgess, of London, on the Fashcda Incident-France's Unhappy Condition.

Galt, Oct. 26 .- Rev. Professor Burgess, M.A., of the Western University, London, officiated in the English Church here on Sunday, and preached two interesting sermons. In the morning, speaking of the paralyzing effects of national unbelief, he spoke as fol-lows regarding the Anglo-French disturbance: Deriding eternal truth, rejecting divine authority, France, under the sole guidance of national impulse and self-gratification, pursues her infatuated course, blind to the inevitable goal, unheeding the ominous writing on the wall. Many still remember how, some 30 years ago, in passion and fury, she madly rushed upon her fate, with every sign and circumstance pointing with unwavering finger to the awful day of Sedan. Five years thereafter, by the generous, the chivalrous, inter-vention of England, she was saved from virtual destruction at the hands of an implacable foe. What return has she made, what gratitude has she shown her benefactor, her deliverer? Mischievous interference, persistent opposition, wanton provocation, reckless aggression! And now, forsooth, she would fain plunge into war with the power to whose disinterested friendship she is indebted, it is hardly too much to say, for her very existence as a nation! The internal condition of this unhappy country is known of all men, and unless experience is vanity, unless the teaching of history is altogether delusive, her misguided people, in the bitterness of humiliation, will, at no distant day, learn to appreciate the admonition of the Psalmist, "Upon the ungodly he shall reign fire and brimstone, storm and tempest." Verily, there is a God that ruleth the

Said To Be Largely Caused by "Landlordism."

Sorry Picture of the Industrial Condition of the Island.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 25 .- For the last two or three weeks the attention of the outside world has been especially directed to this island by the incipient condition of rebellion said to have been neached by the alleged Maroon tribes-men who inhabit the mountain fastnesses of the eastern and western ends or the island. The "formidable mountain tribesmen" of Jamaica are nothing tut a mythical survival of the historic people that practically ceased to exist a generation ago.

The recent trouble is no more nor less than the old land question, raised to an acute crisis by the deplorable industrial condition of the island. Owing to the success of American bounty-fed beet sugar in killing the West Indian cane sugar industry, nearly all the sugar estates have been abandoned.

Fruit cultivation has been substituted to a large extent, but this cannot support a teeming population of 700,000, as the sugar industry did and could. The result is that the island is today overrun by thousands of unemployed, and, for the most part, starving, laborersnegroes, of course.

It is quite true that no one need starve in this tropical paradise, where the land answers profusely to the mere tickling. But that presupposes possession of the land, and just here the trouble comes in. The land—at least the available land-is held by landlords, and cannot be got by the peasants.

Many landlords will neither sell nor rent their lands. Those who agree to do so, impose the condition that bananas are not to be grown, as their cultivation might cut the business, of which the landlords now enjoy a mon-And as nothing else that has opoly. And as nothing else that has a quick growth finds a market in these days, the people decline to take up land on such terms.

It is inevitable that such a condition of affairs should create widespread popular dissatisfaction.

Most of the dissatisfied negroes are only too glad to encourage dissatisfied natives in the belief that possibly some material benefit might result to themelves, or at least that an opportunity may arise to pillage the property of the landlords and others.

This is what nearly happened at Annette Bay a fortnight ago, when the would-be "Maroons" raided Fyfe's pen and actually resisted the police for a gravings to which one may cling to time successfully. Any prolonged successape monotony. But if one has the cess would inevitably have precipitated a general negro rising, but the appearance of a strong reinforcement, backed up by white troops, settled the matter. The conditions, however, remain unchanged, and there is no doubt that the price of peace and order in the island for some time to come—until the dis-turbed industrial conditions have quieted down-will be constant vigilance and prompt action on the part of the gov-

-No One Hurt!

Bayonne, N. J., Oct. 26 .- An engine and five loaded freight car of the Central Railroad, New Jersey, are at the bottom of Newark Bay, and traffic through the waterway is interrupted. The engine and cars ran clean off the tracks, through the open drawbridge, and plunged, while going at a considerable rate of speed, into the water. The drawbridge is about 25 feet above the water. All the hands jumped to the trestle.

That Common Trouble, Acid Dyspepsia or Sour Stomach.

Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heartburn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak to promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic, and being an everyday occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Chemical Company, Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but, on the contrary, by giving perfect digestion, strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living. The annual tea meeting under the auspices of the First Congregational Church took place last night. It was a success from every standpoint. Tea was served from 6 to 8 o'clock in the schoolroom of the church, and a large n mber partook of the many good things furnished by the ladies. At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Rev. J. W. Pedley, chairman. Among those taking part were Miss Myra Pickard, Mies Eva Roblyn, Miss Sylvia Warren, Miss Shopland, and the choir of the church. Mr. W. A. Bleuthner officiated as accompanist. Addresses were delivered by Rev. J. A. McGillivray, the new pastor of St. James' Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Dr. McKenize, a Congregational minister from England, who is at present on a vicit here. The proceeds will be devoted to the work of the Ladies' Aid. HAVERLY'S MINSTRELS.

After a lapse of many years, the Haverly minstrels appeared at the Grand last evening. The past reputation of this famous minstrel man brought a very lage attendance. Both galleries were crowded, while the lower floor was well filled, few seats being unoccupied. The first part represented a man-ofwar at Manila. The seats and background were tastily decorated with the cent of the old-time minstrel performance, and with Frank Cushman and Billy Rice on the ends the wit and humor is fast. Very few jokes are attempted, but those given are good. The blending of the voices in the choruses is very fine. The second part opened with the Nichols sisters in black-face southern medley, representing the jolly life of the negroes. It was one of the features of the show. Bogert and O'Brien, in their musical skit, are well known to Londoners. It is not their first appearance here, and they seem to be continually improving. Bogert is the fun-maker, and kept the audience in continuous laughter. The finale served to bring out the entire company with an elaborate display of costumes MORE PEOPLE WHO SAW PEG-

SONG RECITAL. A pleasant and interesting hour was enjoyed last evening in Wesley Hall by an audience that overflowed and jammed both auditorium and galleries. Of those advertised, only one failed, because of illness, to appear-Mr. George Allen, of Hamilton. Mr. Wolcott, at the piano, and Miss Maud Maclaren, in songs, were deservedly encored. We have never heard Mr. John Tod. to better advantage. The Loch Lomond song was a gem of vocal delivery. Mrs. H. de M. Miss Edith Hyman's elocutionary contributions to the programme more than satisfied expectation. The story of the good fighting ship "Revenge," was told with the necessary dramatic feeling, in good voice, and understandable enunciation. Of another sort, but equally effective, was the scene, full of pathos, where the soldier on the field has broken to him

FELLOWS-FARR

Harly Morning Wedding at St. Peter's Church, Goderich.

The Advertiser's Goderich correspondent, says: At St. Peter's, on Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 9 a.m., by the Rev. Father West, Mary, only sister of the Messrs. Farr, of this town, and Flint, Mich., to Joseph Fellows, of Niagara Falls, contractor. The bride was tastefully arrayed in a traveling costume of brown broadcloth, with vest of pale blue crinkled velvet; picture hat of from the hospital site. This Mr. Marbrown to match, trimmed with brown and pale blue. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary Campbell, Brock street, was prettily dressed in pale blue cashmere, with hat to match. The groomsman was Mr. James Reynolds, of Clinton. When the bridal party was leaving the church, Miss Josie Shannon, organist of St. Peter's, played the wedding march. The bridal party drove to the residence of Mr. Wm. Farr, Cambria street, where the intimate friends of the bride sat down to an excellent wedding breakfast, and left on the 2:30 p.m. train for London, where they intend to reside. Mr. Pat Farr, of Flint, attended the wedding. The bride was held in high esteem in town, a devout member of the Sodality of the B. Hospital Matters Reach a Satisfactory Stage.

A Proposition Which Meets With the Approval of the City and County Representatives—Terms Provide for Payment of 75 Cents Per Day Per Patient, Regardless of the Cost.

A mutual understanding was arrived at yesterday afternoon between the sub-committee of the county hospital committee and the special hospital building committee of the city council. An agreement was reached, which, it is believed, will be satisfactory to both councils. At any rate, until it is acted upon by the county's entire committee, negotiations are at an end. The committee will be called next week. The terms of the agreement differ from previous propositions chiefly in that they provide for the payment of 75 cents per day per patient, regardless of the The city representatives present were Mayor Wilson (in the chair), Ald. Carrothers, Hunt, Wilkey, McPhillips and Jolly, and the county's interests were guarded by Warden Elson, Reeve Gilmour, Councilors Hodgins and Stanley. The last resolution of the council with respect to the matter was read, and the warden asked Mr. Gilmour to explain the county's objection to the resolution.

Mr. Gilmour replied that the objection was to the clause which provided for the termination of the agreement on six months' notice if the cost exceeded 75 cents. He suggested that an agreement as to a definite amount that could stand for at least five years, be arranged. The matter was discussed at some length, and the following propo-

If not, the difference to be paid to the city.

"The building must be completed according to present plans and specifications before county money is paid over. "The county to pay for patients for admittance, maintenance and treatment, the sum of 75 cents per day per

"Either party can terminate this agreement at the end of any year after the expiration of five years, by giving six months notice in writing of their intention so to do; and at such or any termination of this agreement the city to give back to the county the sum of $15,000 and accrued interest, if any. "All other matters of detail to be settled by the respective committees. "If the government grant is with-drawn at any time, the city can terminate the agreement by giving six months' notice.' On motion of Ald. McPhillips the proposition was adopted, Chairman Carrothers voting "Nay."

MR. MARTYN'S EXPLANATION

Led the Hospital Committee to Change Its Opinion,

And Instruct Chairman Carrothers to Sign the Certificates-Are Not Particular Where the "Sand" Went.

The hospital building committee yesterday reconsidered their action concerning Contractors Martyn & Hammett, and decided to "take it back." A statement had been demanded by Chairman Carrothers from Mr. Martyn as to what earth had been removed tyn said he could not give, as he had sub-let the contract. He said also that he should not be called on to give such a statement. Thereupon the chairman refused to sign any certificates the architects might give Contractors Martyn & Hammett until the statement was forthcoming. Ald. Carrothers' action was upheld by the council, to the inconvenience of the contractors. The special meeting of the committee was held yesterday at Mr. Martyn's request, and as soon as his position was made clear to the committee, the chairman was instructed to sign the certificate. Entire satisfaction at Mr.

Martyn's action was expressed. Mr. Martyn pointed out that under the specifications he was obliged to remove all superfluous earth and grade the property as ordered by the architect. If this were done it was not the concern of the council or committee where the earth was put or whether it was sold or given away, said Mr. Martyn. A large quantity of earth had been taken away, he said, but none which was fit for grading. In having it carted away he was acting in strict accordance with the specifications, and even if too much earth were removed the percentage of the contract money held back, which amounted to about $7,500 after the completion of the building, was sufficient to guarantee the proper grading a dozen times over. On motion of Ald. Hunt, the chairman was instructed to sign the certi-

Ald. Carrothers said it was unnecessary to refer the matter to the council, and there and then affixed his signature to the papers.

Architect McBride reported an improvement in the plastering at the hospital. All the members were present but Ald. Greenlees.

FOUND THE LOST

A Sarnia Woman's Long Search for Her

Erring Sister. [Detroit News.]

An man and woman went into police headquarters yesterday and asked for Superintendent Martin. The man was evidently a farmer. His wife was a little woman about 40 years old, dressed in old, faded garments. Her shouldens were bowed down from hard work and her face was seamed with wrinkles.

The superintendent sent for Lieut. Breault, of the truant squad. The woman told him, with tears in her eyes and a quaver in her voice, of a once happy home near Sarnia, Ont., of a loving mother, a kind father and an innocent young sister; of a mother's insanity resulting in her removal to an asylum; of the father's mysterious disappearance of the breaking up of the home circle. She had taken her sister, Grace, to live with her. But the couple were poor, and after a time Grace was sent to live with a grandmother. A wioked woman enticed her to Detroit.

Now they, husband and wife, had spent their hard-earned money to come to Detroit to look for Grace, and they must go back to Sarnia soon, for their funds were almost exhausted. Lieut. Breault found the address of the girl. Then the trio, led by the big lieutenant, found 15-year-old Grace. The elder sister pleaded with her to come back to her friends, and finally succeeded in taking Grace away, just in time to catch the afternoon boat.
