Called Away.

The many friends of Mrs. Mary Ann Smer will learn with surprise of her death yesterday morning. The deceased, who was in her 61st year, had not been in good health for some time, and especially during the past few weeks, but no serious consequences were entertained by her relatives. Early yesterday morning a turn for the worse set in and death relieved the sufferer. The deceased's husband died about eight years ago, and since that time she has lived alone at her home, No. 608 Elias street. As one ever ready to relieve those in distress, she had endeavored herself to the hearts of many. The deceased lady was a member of the Memorial Church and aided it in several ways. The funeral is private. Services will be conducted at the Memorial Church at 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Thos. Tulett, of Elias street, is a brother of the deceased.

Sudden Death of W. F. Hammett.

He worked all day and returned with his fellow workmen at the usual hour in the afternoon apparently enjoying good health. Port Starling, leaving the city he went to a barber shop and was shaved. Mr. Hammett then went to his home and ate a little supper. At this time he said he did not feel very well and vomited. Dr. Jarvis was summoned, and after examining the patient said that he would be all right in a short time. He left some medicine, but Mr. Hammett gradually grew worse during the night, and complained of pain in the region of the bowels. Early yesterday morning Dr. Gardiner was sent for, but before he arrived the sick man was a corpse. Death occurred at 5 o'clock, and is supposed to have resulted from inflammation of the bowels. Deceased was 35 years of age, and leaves a wife and two children, to whom his sudden demise was a terrible shock. He came to this city from Port Hope about thirteen years ago, and since then has made many friends. He was a member of the Chorazin Lodge, No. 109, I. O. O. F. The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon.

Detective Rider Victorious at Last.

Miss Lizzie O'Brien, a clever and young woman about 25 years of age, who has been operating in this city of late, was arrested in St. Thomas by Chief of Police Fewings yesterday about noon. She had dinner in South London on Saturday, and at once started on foot for St. Thomas. A distance of sixteen miles. She walked fourteen miles and rode in a farmer's wagon the remainder. On arriving in St. Thomas shortly after midnight she obtained a room in the Hutchinson House, where she also had breakfast. Detective Rider took her in charge yesterday and brought her to this city. The only information laid against her yet is that of Mrs. Mary McLeod, 347 Dundas street, who charges her with having obtained under false pretences goods valued at $6 and $25 cash. Miss O'Brien denies having solicited goods for the unknown widow and family alleged to have been living in the southern part of ward 6 in destitute circumstances. She will give no history of herself whatever, and her lawyer has been put to her invariably: "It's none of your business."

For the past two weeks she has been boarding at a house on Maple street, South London. She has no money, and is dressed precisely the same as when she was first seen in this city.

Jolly Transient Visitors.

Two hundred jolly knights of the Uniformed Rank of the Pythian Order from the State of Massachusetts spent an hour in the city Saturday evening and they made the best of it. They were en route to the historical convention in Kansas City, and tired with continuous traveling were right glad to get off the cars, partake of a square meal and stretch their legs in the city of London. The G. T. R. dining hall was packed for the space of half an hour. Many of the knights strode, called Richmond street, and mingled with the usual throng of Saturday night promenaders. Accompanying the party was the Band of the Second Regiment, K. of P., from Haverhill, Mass. They played a couple of lively selections on the platform, which was soon crowded with spectators. The delegation was composed of representatives from Boston, Fall River and Haverhill, and a merry, good-natured lot they were. They traveled in sleeping cars and were provided with every equipment for comfort. The wives and daughters of the knights occupied a separate Pullman at the rear. Among the distinguished officers on board was Gen. Abbott. Three cheers for London were heartily given by the train passengers as the train pulled out, and were responded to by people on the station. The delegates left Boston Friday evening and expected to reach Kansas City to-day.

Killed by the Flames.

Little Mary Hughes Meets an Awful Death.

Her Clothes Accidentally Set on Fire

While at Work in a Kitchen on the Hamilton Road—A Horrifying Spectacle—The Victim Dies Through Inhaling the Flames.

It was a frightful death that poor Mary Hughes met on Saturday.

Mary is the 13-year-old daughter of George Hughes, who lives on the Hamilton road, at the corner of Adelaide street. At the time of the terrible occurrence she was at the house of a sick friend, Mrs. Francis Arnett, 239 Hamilton road. About 5 p.m. Dr. Gardner, called to see his patient, who was in the front room with her daughter, Mrs. Taylor, of Michigan. Mary Hughes was in the kitchen, 50 feet to the rear, with Mrs. Taylor's children.

The girl was lifting a kettle of the stove and it is probable that she leaned too far forward. At any rate her clothes ignited, and the fire in the front room heard a scream. Mrs. Taylor went back and was horrified to find the girl in a blaze. The lady gave the alarm, and strove to extinguish the fire. Dr. Gardner answered the summons. He met the unfortunate girl rushing out the back door wrapped in flames. Snatching the nearest thing at hand likely to serve the purpose, he ran after the victim, telling Mrs. Taylor to bring along a quilt. The unfortunate girl, screaming in agony, flew along the street, too much terrified and bewildered to heed the cries of her pursuers. By the time Mrs. Taylor and brought along a blanket, and with the assistance of a young man who bravely came to the rescue they were enabled to extinguish the fire, aided by the water from a hydrant near at hand.

Quickly they carried her to her home just across the road, and Doctors Gardner and Fraser dressed her wounds. They found that she had been burned extensively about the body and limbs. This alone would not have caused her death; but, alas for her, she had inhaled the deadly fumes. The ambulance came and she was taken to the hospital. There an opiate was administered. Everything that medical skill could do was done. She was beyond human aid, however, and at 11:30 o'clock the same evening she breathed her last. "Oedema of the lungs" is the technical name ascribed to the cause of her demise. It tells the story of a sad ending to the life of poor Mary Hughes. She was a favorite child of her parents, who will have universal sympathy in their bereavement. This afternoon the funeral will take place from the family residence.

FORESTERS AT CHURCH.

A. O. F. Annual Church Parade—Five Hundred Foresters in Line—Ingersoll Brethren Participate—Service at St. Paul's Cathedral.

Yesterday was Foresters' day in London. It was the last set for the annual church parade, and there is always a big turnout on that occasion. The members of the Ancient Order, to the number of about 500, paraded, led by Ingersoll, helped to swell the ranks. The city lodges met in their respective halls and marched to the Market Square. Here the line of march was organized and proceeded up Talbot street to Dundas, along Dundas to Wellington, up Wellington to Queen's avenue, thence to the Richmond street entrance to St. Paul's Cathedral. Walter Richards, of Court Forest City, was grand marshal. Crowds of people congregated along the sidewalks, on the corners and in the vicinity of the cathedral to see the line of uniformed men and boys. The following

Through persistent use of the Royal Crown Remedy, I have been cured, and have derived great benefit from its use; in fact I am feeling better at present than I have for many years. I can with pleasure recommend it, and I would induce any one who is afflicted to get it without delay. W. E. GREEN.

The Foresters occupied the central portion of the cathedral. Rev. Canon Richardson, pastor of the Memorial Church, preached a sermon suited to the occasion. He took as his text Galatians, vi., 2: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

At the conclusion of the service the procession reformed. Most of the Ingersoll brethren returned to their homes on the 6:15 train, while some waited until the later train at 11:40. They were well pleased with their visit to London.

THE TREE SLAUGHTER.

Important Announcement for Farmers and Others.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

The question of how best to promote the material progress of Canada is one to which much attention has been devoted. It is felt that in the past the development of the country has not been in proportion to the resources which it possesses. Various proposals have from time to time been submitted, with a view to the more rapid expansion of our commercial and industrial interests. It seems not a little singular that while this problem occupies so prominent a place in the minds of Canadians they should suffer one of the principal sources of national wealth and prosperity to be wasted. I refer to our forests, which, apart from the present and prospective value of the timber supply, are indispensable to the continued prosperity of our yet more important agricultural interests.

It ought to be generally known that the indiscriminate cutting down of the timber lands greatly impairs the productivity of the soil. A certain proportion of wooded country is necessary to insure a steady water supply and prevent the land from becoming parched and sterile owing to the want of moisture during the summer season. Ignorance or indifference to this great natural law has only resulted in national ruin. The process is gradual, extending over a lengthened period, but none the less sure. Climatic changes set in, which render the labor of the cultivator less productive and the crops less abundant. The country is no longer able to support the population which it formerly derived their subsistence from the soil, and famine drives many to seek homes elsewhere.

Scientific forestry explains the function performed by the forest as the great natural storehouse of moisture, large quantities of which are absorbed and retained by it after every heavy rain, and given out gradually into the water courses or by evaporation into the atmosphere. Where no trees exist the water runs rapidly off the torrents, and in a day or two the ground is as dry as ever.

It follows that the reckless clearance of the country has inflicted great injury on agriculture, besides diminishing the sources of our future supply of wood. It is time that this destructive process was arrested, the remaining woods, especially in our frontier counties, carefully preserved, and measures taken to redeem in some degree the mistaken recklessness of the past by replanting. I am glad to note that the Provincial Government has set apart a forestry reserve of considerable extent in the back townships, where some of our principal rivers and streams have their source, which will prevent their being dried up to mere rivulets owing to the destruction of the woods. But much more remains to be done in a direction where private effort and example can alone be effective.

Every farmer and landowner ought to realize that it is in his interest as well as his duty to do what he can by preserving the remnants of bush as well as by replanting to maintain the conditions of soil and climate which alone can render Canada a prosperous agricultural country.

The Ontario Government forestry report for 1891 has just been issued, which contains a survey of the condition of the counties of the Province, as well as much general information on the subject of forestry. Copies will be mailed free of charge to all sending the names and addresses to R. W. PHIPPS, 251 1/2 Richmond street west, Toronto.

She Received Good Advice.

"I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia," writes Mrs. John McLean, Barrie, Ontario, "for the last nine years, but being advised to try St. Jacobs Oil, I can now heartily endorse it as a most excellent remedy for this complaint, as I have been greatly benefited by its use."
