Mr. Fred Johann of Belmore occupied the pulpit in the United Church last Sunday evening.

The Literary Society is planning to stage a mock trial at its meeting to be held on or about March 7th. The cast of characters has been selected and the trial, an action for breach of promise, will be intensely interesting and entertaining.

Village Property for Sale
Solid brick 2 storey, 7-roomed house, with 2-5 acre land, in Mildmay, Kitchen and woodshed attached, hard and soft water, and electric lights. Apply Chas. Albrecht, R. R. 3, Mildmay, or phone line 54 r. 3.

Auction Sale
Auction sale of Farm Stock and Implements, at lot 28, Con. C, Carrick (village of Mildmay) on Thursday, Feb. 21st. Herman Gutzke Estate, prop., John Darroch, auctioneer.

Help for Welsh Miners
The Mildmay Literary Society has decided to donate a portion of the receipts of the Thursday evening meeting to the need of the Welsh miners. Industrial conditions in the Welsh mining area are terrible, and a liberal contribution is hoped for.

Provincial Election in 1929
Premier Ferguson made a definite statement in the Legislature this week to the effect that there will not be a general election in 1929. That means that the big fight will be held in June 1930.

Auction Sale
Auction sale of Farm Stock and Implements will be held at lot 28, Con. C, Carrick, on Tuesday, February 19th. The farm will also be offered for sale, if not previously disposed of. Mrs. Frank Strauss, auctioneer; Edward Weiss, proprietor.

Farm for Sale
200-acre farm, one mile from Mildmay, no better farm in Carrick. Fine brick residence, bank barn and strawshed, concrete stabling, through out, driving shed, good orchard. Sixteen acres good bush, excellent water supply, well fenced and land is in grand shape. The place is very reasonably priced, and easy terms can be arranged. Apply to J. A. Johnston.

The price of hogs dropped 25¢ per wt. this week and indications are for further figures for the next shipment. The price is more than a half over. Well, it has been a real fine Christmas.

Will Pave Walkerton Road
It has now been definitely announced that the Highways Department will pave the Mildmay and Walkerton provincial highway this year. The contract has been advertised, and already a number of pavement contractors have been here looking over the job. Mr. W. W. King of Oakville was here on Tuesday looking over the road.

Gutzke Farm Sold
The executors of the Herman Gutzke estate were successful on Monday in completing negotiations for the sale of the farm property in this village. The purchaser is Mr. Linus Fischer of Culross, who obtains possession on March 1st. This farm is comprised of 42 acres, with good buildings and the land is in great condition. The farm stock and implements of the vendors will be sold by public auction on Thursday, Feb. 21st.

Seifried Farm Sold
Messrs. George J. Schneider and Jos. Seifried, executors of the Joseph Seifried estate, were successful in disposing of the farm by auction here last Saturday afternoon. The purchaser was Henry Illerbrun, of Formosa, who obtains immediate possession. The price was about $6000. The buyer is a careful, industrious young man, and will make a success of it. The sale was conducted by John Strauss.

Mr. Ezra Reuber, manager of the chwalmi's millyard at Clifford, tells us of a Minto farmer who brought in a load of logs containing 1125 feet.

Help for Welsh Miners

W. M. S. Program
One of the best, instructive and spiritually helpful meetings, was rendered by the W. M. S. members of the Evangelical Church last Sunday evening. There was a splendid attendance, and the interest manifested was encouraging. The recitation of Lloyd Liesemer and reading by Mrs. Liesemer were splendidly rendered. The dialogue given by Mrs. J. Bilger and Edna Schurr, and the Playlet "Aunt Tillie learns to tithe" by members of the W. M. S. was beautifully given and enthusiastically received. Those who were absent missed the inspirational and every liberal offering was laid upon the altar for foreign missions.

Obituary
Mrs. Elizabeth McElwee, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Misre at Mildmay for the past year or more, passed away on Saturday morning after a long and trying illness with chronic myocarditis. Mrs. McElwee, who was in her 59th year, was born at Lenavady, Ireland, and came to this country when quite young. She is survived by two sons, Robert of Oshawa, and William James of Toronto, and one daughter, Mrs. J. Gordon Webb, of Regina. The remains were taken to Oshawa on Saturday afternoon, where interment took place on Monday afternoon.

Mr. John Polfuss, of Carrick, who was taken to the Bruce County Hospital a couple of weeks ago, is in a very precarious condition, with very little chance of recovery.

Underwriters' Inspector Here
Mr. C. Graham, inspector for the Fire Underwriters Association, paid a visit to Mildmay last Thursday morning and gave the local fire brigade a test practice. The brigade responded fairly promptly to the alarm, and in a few minutes had the engine out throwing two strong streams. There was no delay in starting the engine, and the inspector seemed pretty well satisfied with the work of the brigade.

Councillors Didn't Back Down
At the Mildmay Council meeting of Monday evening, when the bylaw providing for the remuneration of the members of Council was introduced, a lively and spirited discussion took place. Messrs. Hesch, Diemert and Miller saw no reason for backing down from the stand they took at the first meeting, when a resolution was put through providing for payment at the rate of $2.50 per meeting. Reeve-Phelan and Councillor J. J. Huber moved an amendment, fixing the salary at $10 per year. The amendment was lost on division.

Interesting Court Decision
At the Division Court Sittings at Walkerton on Tuesday, Isaac Glintz of Walkerton was the defendant in an action brought by a fertilizer company to recover the price of three bags of fertilizer. Mr. Glintz bought the fertilizer from the company's agent, Mr. Carr of Walkerton, who sold the stuff on commission and was also authorized to make collections for same, and gave him credit on his account for same. Mr. Carr offered to pay the Company, but the latter did not accept, and brought an action against Glintz, and succeeded in obtaining judgment. Judge Owens ruled that an agent may be safely paid at the time of the transaction, either in cash or trade, but a past due account cannot bar the company from obtaining payment for the goods sold by the agent. At this Court, garnishee proceedings filed against the proceeds of Herbert Goetz's auction sale by Francis S. Marie, were dismissed.

Mr. A. J. Chisholm of Owen Sound, while attending the annual meeting of the Mutual Life Assurance Company at Waterloo, last Friday, dropped dead as he was leaving the meeting. Mr. Chisholm is well known here, having done an extensive life insurance business in this locality in former years. He was about eighty years of age.

Ice Harvest Opens
Witmers mill pond will be a busy place for the next week or two. The C. N. R. commences on Thursday morning to fill their contract, and it is expected that two hundred carloads of ice will be cut and loaded here during the next ten days.

Durhamites Sulked
Forty Mildmay hockey fans were at Walkerton on Monday evening to witness the O. H. A. game between the Durham and Walkerton. The non-arrival of the Durham team, the result of a quarrel between the teams, and finally Harris Rife of Walkerton was agreed upon as arbiter. The game proceeded nicely until Walkerton forged ahead, and a Durham player was banished for roughing it. At this juncture the Durhamites left the arena and refused to play any further with Harris Rife as referee, although a council is recommending his appointment as county constable, and Mildmay spectators were of the opinion that Rife was very impartial. The O. H. A. ordered Durham to replay the game at Walkerton on Wednesday night.

Unfortunate Accident
Mrs. Arthur Dickinson of the 13th concession of Carrick, was the victim of a very unfortunate and painful accident last Friday evening. Mr. Dickinson attended a sale at Hanover in the afternoon, where he purchased a horse, and brought the animal with him after dark. Mrs. Dickinson took her husband in stabling the newly purchased equine. The horse, new to its surroundings, became frightened as it entered the shed, and bolted. In its flight it collided with a rack, and the impact was so forceful that the rack was thrown against Mrs. Dickinson. Her injury was very painful, and Dr. Carpenter was immediately summoned. He found that a fracture of the leg above the knee had been sustained. Mrs. Dickinson is doing as well as can be expected and it will be some months before she regains the proper use of her limbs.

New Constable Appointed
Mr. Noah H. Stiegler is Mildmay's new constable, having received his appointment on Monday. The village council is recommending his appointment as county constable, and Mildmay spectators were of the opinion that Rife was very impartial. The O. H. A. ordered Durham to replay the game at Walkerton on Wednesday night.

Protest from Fordwich
A Fordwich hockey player, commenting on the action of the management of the Saugeen Hockey League, in grouping the teams in the league this season, writes us as follows:—"Had the management of the Saugeen Hockey League given more consideration to the grouping of the teams, there is not a doubt but what the teams from these three villages, Fordwich, Wroxeter and Gorrie, would now be playing Saugeen League games instead of a schedule of games as referred to in your paper. These three teams make a fine group, with no financial burden attached, so a tip to the grouping committee of the Saugeen League is to leave these three teams in a group, if they want them in the League next winter."

Literary Meeting Thursday Night
The next meeting of the Mildmay Literary Society will be held in the town hall, Mildmay, on Thursday evening of this week, and the program will be fully up to standard. The debate on the subject "Resolved that Old Age Pensions should be established in Ontario," in which the affirmative will be taken by Messrs. J. A. Johnston and E. H. Sovereign, and the negative by Messrs. John Weigand and Fraser Scott, is one that should be very interesting and instructive. Talent from Lint's school section will present their side-splitting play "The Small Encumbrance" and local talent will complete the program with readings, solos, choruses, instrumental, etc. The Carrick Council has generously invested in seventy-five new chairs for the town hall, and these will be ready for use on Thursday evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this meeting.

There was a little stir in Balaklava real estate on Monday when Jos. J. Dietrich bought ten lots, subdivisions of farm lot 30, Concession C, from Albert Harrison. This was the property that William Baltruweit bought a few years ago, and turned back to Mr. Harrison last fall.

It is many years since Easter has occurred as early as this year. Palm Sunday, March 24th; Good Friday, March 29th, and Easter Sunday, March 31st. A week of remarkably fine weather is predicted. It is altogether likely that it will be better than some we have been having this winter.

Full Fairs which suffered from rainy weather last year will draw on the Ontario Government indemnity fund. There is an annual grant of $10,000 distributed last year in 36 counties and districts, in proportion to loss in 1927 but 1928 was quite wet during the time when most agricultural societies held their exhibitions, and claims total about $13,000. It was stated recently by J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of the branch Assistance will have to be gauged accordingly.

Sars Lost at Teeswater

On Wednesday evening of last week, the Stars played a Saugeen Hockey League game at Teeswater, and were defeated by 8 to 4. The game was more keenly contested than the score would indicate, and the home team had to extend themselves to the limit to keep in the lead.

To Stop Boots Pinching

To ease any part of the boots which press or pinch, a plan which will succeed when everything else has failed and which is perfectly harmless to the leather, is to put flannel in boiling water, wring it out and lay on where it presses. Repeat until the shoe feels easy then keep the shoe on the foot until it is dry or you will run the risk of undoing the work.

Horse Judging

Horse judging in connection with the Bruce County Agricultural short course was held at the Queen's hotel stables at Walkerton and proved the most important feature of the course up to the present time. There was a large number of horses and the judging demonstration was given by Dr. A. J. Sinclair of Cannington, who is acting as instructor of veterinary science. The Bruce short course, which opened in Walkerton on December 1st, and closes on March 1st, is considered the best school of its kind ever held in the county. There is an average attendance of 100 students, the classes being about equally divided, having 55 boys and 45 girls.

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A.A. MILNE

© 1923 & 1924 by The Red House Mystery Co.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Within two minutes after Robert Ablett, ne'er-do-well brother of Mark Ablett, bachelor proprietor of The Red House, had arrived and been ushered into Mark's office, a shot was heard.

Antony Gillingham, a friend of Bill Beverley, one of Mark's guests, arrived at that moment to find Mark's companion, Matt Cayley, pounding on the locked door of the office and demanding admittance. The two men entered the office by a window and on the floor found the body of Robert with a bullet through the head. Mark was nowhere to be found. Investigation by Inspector Birch showed that Mark had learned with considerable disgust and annoyance of the coming of Robert. Cayley refused to believe that Mark had deliberately murdered Robert.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Bill was silent, wondering how to put in words thoughts which had never formed themselves very definitely in his own mind. Seeing his hesitation, Antony said:

"I ought to have warned you that nothing that you say will be taken down by the reporters, so you needn't bother about a split infinitive or two. Talk about anything you like, how you like."

"Well, Mark fancies himself at arranging things. He arranges things, and it's understood that the guests fall in with the arrangement."

"Arranging things for you?"

"Yes. Of course, it's a delightful house and opportunities for every game or sport that's ever been invented. But with it all, Tony, there's a faint sort of feeling that—well, you've got to do as you're told."

"How do you mean?"

"He's a devil for taking offense. That Miss Norris—did you see her?—she's done for herself. I don't mind betting what you like that she never comes here again."

"Why?"

Bill laughed to himself.

"We were all in it, really—at least, Betty and I were. There's supposed to be a ghost attached to the house. Lady Anne Patten. Ever heard of her?"

"Never."

"Mark told us about her at dinner one night. He rather liked the idea of there being a ghost in his house, you know; except that he doesn't believe in ghosts. I think he wanted all of us to believe in her, and yet he was annoyed with Betty and Mrs. Callidine for believing in ghosts at all. Rum chap. Well, anyhow, Miss Norris—she's an actress, some actress too—dressed up as the ghost and played the fool a bit. And poor Mark was frightened out of his life. Just for a moment, you know."

"Where did the ghost appear?"

"Down by the bowling-green. That's supposed to be its haunt, you know."

"Was Mark very angry afterward?"

"Yes. Sulked for a whole day. He got over it—he generally does. He's just like a child. That's really it, Tony; he's like a child in some ways. As a matter of fact, he was unusually bucked with himself this morning."

"Is he generally in form?"

"He's quite good company, you know, if you take him the right way. He's rather vain and childish—well, like I've been telling you—and self-important; but quite amusing in his way, and—" Bill broke off suddenly. "I say, you know, it really is the limit, talking about your host like this."

"Don't think of him as your host. Think of him as a suspected murderer with a warrant out against him."

"Oh! but that's all rot you know."

"It's the fact, Bill."

"Yes, but I mean, he didn't do it. He wouldn't murder anybody. It's a funny thing to say, but—well, he's not big enough for it."

"Suppose it was an accident, as Cayley says, would he lose his head and run away?"

Bill considered for a moment.

"Yes. I really think he might, you know. He nearly ran away when he saw the ghost."

"Well, now," said Antony, "what about Cayley?"

"How do you mean, what about him?"

"I want to see him. I can see Mark perfectly, thanks to you, Bill. You were wonderful. Now let's have Cayley's character. Cayley from within."

Bill laughed in pleased embarrassment, and protested that he was not a blooming novelist.

"Besides," he added, "Mark's easy. Cayley's one of these heavy, quiet people, who might be thinking about anything. Mark gives himself away . . . Ugly, black-jawed devil, isn't he?"

"Some women like that type of ugliness."

"Yes, that's true. Between ourselves, I think there's one hero who does. Rather a pretty girl at Jallands"—he waved his left hand—"down that way."

"What's Jallands?"

"It's a country cottage belonging to a widow called Norbury. Mark and Cayley used to go there a good deal together. Miss Norbury—the girl—has been here once or twice for tennis; seemed to prefer Cayley to the rest of us. But of course he hadn't much time for that sort of thing."

"What sort of thing?"

"Walking about with a pretty girl and asking her if she's been to any theatres lately. He nearly always had something to do."

"Mark kept him busy?"

"Yes. Mark never seemed quite happy unless he had Cayley doing something for him. He was quite

"Now then," said Bill, "we are alone."

lost and helpless without him. And, funnily enough, Cayley seemed lost without Mark."

"He was fond of him?"

"Yes, I should say so. In a protective kind of way. He'd size Mark up, of course—his vanity, his self-importance, his amateurishness and all the rest of it—but he liked looking after him. And he knew how to manage him."

They reached the inn, and Antony went upstairs to his room. He returned his brushes to his bag, glanced round to see that nothing else had been taken out, and went down again to settle his bill.

CHAPTER VIII.

Antony's bedroom looked over the park at the back of the house. He was sitting on his bed, in shirt and trousers, absently smoothing down his thick black hair with his brushes, when Bill shouted an "Hallo!" through the door, and came in.

"I say, buck up, old boy, I'm hungry," he said.

Antony stopped smoothing himself and looked up at him thoughtfully.

"Where's Mark?" he said.

"Mark? You mean Cayley."

Antony corrected himself with a little laugh. "Yes, I mean Cayley. Is he down? I say, I shan't be a moment, Bill." He got up from his bed and went on briskly with his dressing.

"Oh, by the way," said Bill, taking his place on the bed; "your idea about the keys is a washout."

"Why, how do you mean?"

"I went down just now and had a look at them. Some were outside and some inside, and there you are. It makes it much less exciting. When you were talking about it on the lawn, I really got quite keen on the idea of the key being outside and Mark taking it in with him."

"It's going to be exciting enough," said Antony mildly, as he transferred his pipe and tobacco into the pocket of his black coat. "Well, let's come down; I'm ready now."

Cayley was waiting for them in the hall. The three of them fell into a casual conversation.

"You were quite right about the keys," said Bill, during a pause.

"Keys?" said Cayley blankly.

"We were wondering whether they were outside or inside."

"Oh! oh, yes!" He looked slowly round the hall, at the different doors, and then smiled in a friendly way at Antony. "We both seem to have been right, Mr. Gillingham. So we don't get much farther."

"No." He gave a shrug. "I just wondered, you know. I thought it was worth mentioning."

"Oh, quite. Not that you would have convinced me, you know. Just as Elsie's evidence doesn't convince me."

"Elsie?" said Bill excitedly. Antony looked inquiringly at him, wondering who Elsie was.

"One of the housemaids," explained Cayley. "You didn't hear what she told the inspector?"

Cayley told them of what Elsie had heard through the office door that afternoon.

"You were in the library then, of course," said Antony, rather to himself than to the other. "She might have gone through the hall without your hearing."

"Oh, I've no doubt she was there, and heard voices. Perhaps heard those very words. But—" He broke off, and then added impatiently, "It was accidental. I know it was accidental. What's the good of talking as if Mark was a murderer?" Dinner was announced at that moment, and as they went in, he added, "What's the good of talking about it at all, if it comes to that?"

"What, indeed?" said Antony, and to Bill's great disappointment they talked of books and politics during the meal.

Cayley made an excuse for leaving them as soon as their cigars were alight. He had business to attend to, as was natural. Bill would look after his friend. Bill was only too willing.

"Let's go outside," suggested Antony. "I want to talk to you."

"Good man. What about the bowling-green?"

They came out of the front door and followed the drive to the left.

The road bent round to the right, but they kept straight on over a broad grass path for twenty yards and there in front of them was the green. A dry ditch, ten feet wide and six feet deep, surrounded it, except in one place where the path went forward.

"Yes, it hides itself very nicely," said Antony. "Where do they keep the bowls?"

"In a sort of summer-house place. Round here."

They walked along the edge of the green until they came to it—a low wooden bunk which had been built into one wall of the ditch.

They finished their circuit of the green—"Just in case anybody's in the ditch," said Antony—and then sat down on the bench.

"Now then," said Bill, "we are alone. Fire ahead."

Kitchen Cleaning

The refrigerator should be thoroughly cleansed and ventilated at least once a week. Take out all the food and also the ice; remove the ice racks and the shelves of the food compartment. Perhaps a borax solution of one tablespoonful of borax to one quart of water, first dissolving the borax in a little boiling water. With a small stiff brush scrub the parts removed, rinse them in clear cold water and wipe them dry. Wash the walls of all compartments with strong lukewarm borax water. Wrap the cloth around a shewer to reach all the corners, rinse in cold water and wipe dry.

Wash the sink free from grease with hot soap solution. The drain pipe should be cleared daily. Place two heaping tablespoonsful of borax on the grid and flush it down with a kettle of hot water. Follow with a flood of cold water.

Rinse weekly in hot borax water the bread and cake boxes. Wipe them dry with a clean, fresh towel and ventilate them thoroughly in the open air.

Scrape plates taken from the table with a rubber plate scraper and wipe off the silver with paper napkins; stack the dishes according to kind and size and let the hot water run over each separate pile before washing. For each gallon of dish water then add one tablespoonful of borax and the preferred amount of soap. Rinse in very hot water and wipe immediately with a lintless cotton or a linen towel. If the water is exceptionally hard, a little borax in the rinse water, too, aids in bringing the luster to china, the sparkle to glassware and silver, that is so much desired.

Porch Chairs in the House

At the end of the summer, garden and piazza chairs that show wear and are sometimes discarded, can often be rejuvenated for bedroom use, bright with new paint and covering. The first thing is to scrub thoroughly and smooth the woodwork, giving at the same time a vigorous shampoo of soapsuds to the fabric part of the chair which is sometimes strong enough to serve as the foundation for a new covering. The next thing is to paint the framework in some color to correspond with the creosote to be used for the new cover. Sometimes a glossy black is more effective than a gay-colored frame, or a mahogany finish is good choice. The new cover will last longer if not attached to the framework, but simply tacked to the former fabric, as the position can then be shifted so that wear and tear do not come always on the same place. A small bolster-shaped pillow of the new covering is a pretty addition to hang over one side of the back and a generous-sized floor cushion gives delightful charm and completes the ensemble. An extension chair of the "deck" or "steamer" type can easily be transformed into an attractive and comfortable chaise longue quite rivaling some of the expensive bits of furniture of this type.

Chimneys in Fruit Pies

The appearance of a fresh fruit or berry pie is often spoiled by the fruit juice bubbling through the top crust and then browning or burning. This may be avoided by the use of several short lengths of stick macaroni. Place several lengths, say, 2 or 2½ inches according to the thickness of the pie, through the cut opening in the top crust, so that the steam may thus escape plentifully. This saves the pie from "stewing over," and when the pie is baked the macaroni may be removed. The pie is a lovely brown and the juice is retained inside the crust where it belongs.

Have You Written Your Limerick Today?

The interest in this contest is growing steadily and a great many people are gaining pleasure and profit from this entertaining pastime. Numerous entries however, are coming in, which have to be discarded because they are not in Limerick form. Some prizes have been awarded where the verses did not fully measure up to requirements, but were considered worthy of recognition. Now that every one has had an opportunity to learn exactly what is wanted, prizes will be given only where the necessary requirements are fully met. A little humor helps a great deal and is nicely illustrated in the contributions of Mrs. Hurst and Mrs. McNeil.

The first Limericks published to-day are placed at the head of the list for two reasons. First, because they come from two members of the same family, and second, because they demonstrate very well just what a Limerick is. Note the rhythm of these two examples.

Everybody's Doing It.

DEAR SIR:—

When making up the mail bag the other night after everybody had gone to bed, I slipped in a couple of Limericks, rather shamefacedly, for it seemed a silly thing for an oldish backwoods woman to be at, but the children found the old letter-back I first scribbled them on and whooped with joy to catch Mother. They have coaxed me to write some more and hunted up the page containing the various advertisements for which limericks were asked.

Yours truly,
Kate Neal,
Pudash, P.O., Ont.

Thanks for your letter, which is quite as interesting as your limericks. We hope you will write again.—Ed.

Dear Sir:—

I notice your Limerick Contest in The Bruce Mines Spectator and am sending one. Can each person send more than one?

(Miss) Doris Taylor,
R.R. 3, Bruce Mines, Ont.

Send as many as you like, Miss Taylor. Watch the rhyme and rhythm.—Ed.

There is plenty of enjoyment for the whole family if all join in the fun of writing Limericks.

Any nationally advertised article or service found in this or any previous issues of this paper may be made the subject of a limerick.

One dollar will be sent for every Limerick accepted. Give name and address and name of this paper. Write: Limerick Editor, Associated Publishers, Rooms 421-5, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto 2.

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If the name Bayer appears, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it's not! Headaches are dispelled by Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Aspirin—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) indicator Bayer Manufacture. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assure the public against imitations, the Tablets will be stamped with their "Bayer Cross" trademark.

Getting At The Truth Of The Emigration Problem—A British View

(By S. A. Mosley in The Montreal Standard.)

There ought to be no difficulty about getting at the truth of the emigration problem. Yet it appears to be at the bottom of the deepest well.

Either there is a call for men in the Dominions or there is not; either those who do go are treated shamefully or they make good; either our unemployment ought to go (if they can) or wait, Micawber-like, for something to turn up in England.

Let us take this last point first. Should our men leave the Old Country? If there is work—most decidedly! Were I out of a job I would go anywhere and do anything in order to avoid borrowing or "sponging." And in saying this I do not theorize from an armchair. I have had some experience—and I know. As a youth I left an old job before I had obtained a new one. In the earnest desire to save my face I became soldier, sailor, tinker, tailor, as the phrase goes.

As I say, "I know." The main thing is to pull your weight in society. Work and the world will listen to you. The man who prefers to idle in England rather than accept work in Timbuctoo gets no sympathy from me—or from anybody else. The question of "hating" to leave the "bosom of your family," the sentimental regard for one's place of birth and such pleas are so many excuses. In a crisis, get down to it!

WHERE MEN AREN'T WANTED
And we are experiencing an industrial crisis in England. War is not the time or the battlefield the place to debate Utopian themes. There are heaps of things I would do for the poor and the unemployed if I were Dictator. I should be indeed the softest-hearted Dictator who ever lived. But there would be no place in my heart for the idle. Let us do everything in our power to help the willing-to-work. Down with the shirker!

It surprised me, therefore, to find that there is a disinclination in some parts of the affected areas to go and seize every available opportunity to obtain work in the colonies. Now, cutting out all question of patriotism, mother-love and so forth, every sensible unemployed Englishman would prefer to find work in the Colonies rather than in any strange country. At any rate, there yet remains a tie language! Why, then, is there a holding back both on the part of the unemployed and on the part of the Dominions? This is a problem I have undertaken to solve with these results.

Firstly, not all the Dominions offer work. Places like New Zealand, Newfoundland, New South Wales and South Africa frankly tell me that they don't want any outside help. "Better put your cards on the table," they say. "We have no State-aided immigration scheme and do not encourage poor immigrants. We can cope with such work as we have." In a word, they haven't got the work for emigrants.

"It is the trained women domestics we want, not men, at the present time of a slump, which happily is passing away," the New Zealand authorities told me in the course of a long conversation.

The same story was told me elsewhere.

THE DISAPPOINTED.
What about other parts of Australia and what about Canada?

Here I am in the possession of two extraordinary pieces of conflicting evidence.

The first is a human document from the Rev. Ebrard Rees, of Merthyr Tydfil, who writes: "Canada is a gorgeous country for the tourist, since it has wonderful scenery. But for the immigrant it is not only a land that lacks the promised milk and honey, but presents colossal problems and difficulties which break hearts rather than make backbones."

Mr. Rees declares that very few emigrants from England who have gone to Canada since the war would hesitate if they were offered the opportunity of returning. Most of them are cowed, disappointed, despairing. And not a few are destitute. Canada has not brought them health and wealth, but unemployment and unhappiness.

Now, Mr. Rees has been in Canada, but it does not necessarily mean that he knows anything more about the actual situation of Canada generally than many people in London know about the situation in England. They told me at the New Zealand office, for instance, that the same outcry of thousands of men wishing to return home was made there last year, and that when an offer in the form of advertisement was made again and again to repatriate the men only four applied.

Mr. Rees quotes a judge at the Court of Sessions at Quebec who was hearing charges against two Scots of Glasgow, saying, "Our emigration policy is dumping a whole lot of young men into this country, brought here under false pretences." Charity offices at Toronto informed Mr. Rees that they estimated the unemployed of that city at between 6,000 and 8,000.

And it is "terrible, for they have no dole, there is no outdoor relief they can claim, and they have no friends." This is a very bleak picture.

But what puzzles the detached investigator is that Canada should go to the trouble and expense of foisting this alleged gigantic ramp on the Mother country when they can get all the workers they want out in Canada. It doesn't sound feasible.

What is more explicable is that unemployment is rife in towns as it is over here, and that what Canada wants and what she makes clear she wants are not men who are after jobs in its cities, but strong, healthy and willing farm laborers. I don't think there can be any doubt on this point. With all the trouble caused by unemployed or discontented men, what could possibly be at the back of the mind of the Canadian authorities in getting these men to come out?

As Commissioner Lamb of the Salvation Army points out in the other document in my possession, Canada, as our largest Dominion, has an area of 3,000,000 square miles and a population of only 8,000,000—or in other words, three persons to the square mile, whereas in England and Wales we have 639 persons to the square mile.

THE ANSWER.
What answer has Canada to these charges of Mr. Rees and others? First, a categorical denial. There is no unemployment at all on the land; there is work for every efficient, willing worker.

Second, no destitute man or woman is permitted to remain in Canada. They are deported. So that the picture of starving men anxious to return to England is untrue. No need to stow away. Just become a public charge and you will get packed home free.

An interesting sidelight on why men won't migrate to Canada was given me at Canada House. These men say that having paid unemployment insurance for years the system should be continued in Canada.

"Why should I lose what I've paid in for years?" say these men.

How about Australia? Colonel Manning, D.S.O., Director of Migration, put the case in a nutshell. Obviously the conditions in the Australian Bush are somewhat primitive, but for those prepared to rough it, to take off their coats and to take the risks that are to be met with anywhere, here is a golden opportunity. Australia has got the land, and is proud of the fact that her non-British element is as low as 3 per cent. Australia, like Canada, and many States whose London representatives I called on, is all "British to the backbone."

Yet we must ask ourselves whether we are sending the right sort of emigrant. The man softened by city life is utterly useless. I happen to know, for instance, that nearly all the Londoners who applied to go out harvesting recently were turned down. And I also saw a confidential report on a number of youths who were recommended as "suitable British emigrants to one of the dominions. I wish I had authority to reproduce what the medical examination revealed.

In one case an insane boy was seriously put forward as a candidate! Another had a criminal history; a third had a grave medical history. I ask, frankly, what is the use of putting such types forward as representatives of British stock?

No wonder that in some parts of Canada and Australia groans are heard, not only from the emigrants but from the natives who object to the groans! Obviously, if unsuitable men are sent out they must ultimately fail to please or be pleased, and thus swell the already swollen ranks of unemployed in the cities.

There is, again, the question of women-folk. Canada won't aid emigrants unless they have first had a satisfactory interview with the wives! For the failure of many an emigrant you must once more cherchez la femme.

At the same time it is impossible to overlook the political element in Ottawa. Several private authorities who deal with the problem told me that they felt that certain objections to the smooth working of the emigration scheme may be traced in that direction.

I wish I had the space even to summarize the interesting conversations I have had with the Agents-General or my discussion with the Rev. J. H. Pringle, who is Vice-Chairman of the British Dominions Emigration Society. But the plain facts that emerge from my inquiries are these:

There is plenty of scope for the right sort of emigrant. It is fatal to transport the wrong sort of emigrant, who is the cause of all the trouble. There are hundreds of thousands of acres in the Dominions waiting to be developed; for the healthy, strong, vigorous type of Englishman there is a great opportunity. Many leading men today in Canada, Australia and New Zealand, including Cabinet Ministers, started as emigrants on the land. It is useless for townsfolk to think of becoming farmers all of a sudden. Those who want work in the cities must not think of going.

What is certain, however, is that the States themselves in both Australia and Canada are entirely British in sentiment. They could if they liked import foreign labor from the Ukraine and other foreign parts where blizzards and desolation are as common as rain in London. They could get this labor cheaply, and they

Britain Finds Naval Base at Rosyth Useless

Removal of German Menace in North Sea Renders Big Ship Depot Unnecessary

Pillar of England's Ocean Power During Great War

Discussing the practical abandonment of the great naval war base and dockyard at Rosyth, Scotland, Hector C. Bywater, writing in "The London Daily Telegraph," says twenty years ago the Firth of Forth, although visited from time to time by His Majesty's ships, had no particular significance from the naval point of view. To-day, as I write, battle cruisers and other fighting craft are lying in the Firth, but they are here on a routine visit, which has no connection with the strategic situation at sea. Yet today, within this comparatively brief space of years, these northern waters formed part of the stage upon which was enacted the greatest drama of modern civilization.

In the British Navy as it now exists we see only a remnant of that mighty armada that thronged the East coast harbors of Scotland in 1918. In 1908 the dockyard at Rosyth was only a paper project. Ten years later it had become the largest and best-equipped naval base in the world. Yet today, little more than twenty years since the first sod was cut, this great base lies derelict, a mute reminder of stirring times that we all hope may never recur.

Germany Plans Conquest.
To trace the history of Rosyth to its source we must go back to 1898, for it was in that year that Germany hatched her scheme for the conquest of the seas. Few in England interpreted the portent betimes. At that date the century of naval gravity lay in the Mediterranean, as it had done for more than a century. But in the early years of King Edward's reign the rapid growth of the German fleet compelled our naval strategists to readjust their ideas. How leisurely this mental process was is indicated by the fact that in 1908—ten years after Germany had entered the lists as challenger of our naval supremacy—we were without a single organized fleet base north of the Thames.

It was not the least of Lord Fisher's inestimable services to his country that he made good this grave deficiency. During his tenure of office as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty work was begun on the new base at Rosyth, which until the theory of far distant blockade led to the selection of Scapa Flow, was designed to be the main base of the British fleet in a war against Germany.

Great War Surprises.
As originally planned, the works at Rosyth were estimated to cost £3,000,000, exclusive of machinery. Upon their completion seven or eight years later a much greater sum than this had been expended. The outbreak of war found the Scottish base far from finished, and for many months afterward a floating dock, hurriedly towed from a Channel port to Invergordon, represented the only means that the Grand Fleet had of docking its battle-ships within the main zone of war.

Compared with the naval establishments then in being, Rosyth was planned on a grand scale. Provision was made for dredging a basin with an area of fifty-two and one-half acres with a projecting pier, giving a total wharfage of more than 7,000 feet, with a uniform depth of water of thirty-eight and one-half feet. Other works comprised an entrance lock, available for use as a dock if necessary, 350 feet long, 110 feet wide at the entrances, and 36 feet deep over the sill at low water; a straight river wharf 2,730 feet in length; and a large space for coal storage. Three drydocks were constructed, each about 1360 feet long and 110 feet in width, dimensions far in excess of any warship then afloat or in contemplation. These docks could be lengthened by some thirty feet in case of need. Dockyard facilities were also provided for a large number of destroyers and submarines and with the increasing use of liquid fuel oil tanks were multiplied.

It is not too much to say that Rosyth was one of the main pillars of British sea power during the World War. To the spacious docks, up-to-date equipment and skilled staff of this great yard the Grand Fleet owed in large measure the maintenance of its material efficiency. Practically every major ship in the fleet was docked at Rosyth, and in many cases extensive repairs were carried out at the yard. At the date of the armistice 7,230 hands were employed there—not an excessive total in view of the fact that the Grand Fleet, at the same date, numbered at least 260 vessels of various types.

British Forsake North Sea.
With the extinction of German naval power at the close of the war the strategical outlook at sea underwent a radical change. It was clear that the British fleet could serve no useful purpose by continuing to cruise in the North Sea, which no longer harbored a potential enemy.

Nevertheless, the Rosyth yard continued for some years to function as a repairing base, and numerous ships were refitted or reconstructed there between 1919 and 1924. In April, 1921, 6,000 work people were still on the pay roll. At that date, and for some time after, the Rosyth docks were the only naval docks in the kingdom sufficiently spacious to accommodate H.M.S. Hood and the large bulged capital ships of the fleet.

In 1922 and subsequent years Rosyth, in common with all other naval establishments, felt the edge of the economy "axe." The final blow fell in September, 1925, when this yard and the establishment at Pembroke were jointly ordered to be closed down. By that time the staff at Rosyth had been reduced to 2,500.

Rosyth was only one, albeit the most important, of the chain of naval stations that sprang up round the Scottish coast in answer to the German menace. For several years before the war Invergordon, on Cromarty Firth, was undergoing development as a secondary base, and the building of oil tanks began in 1912. The headlands guarding the anchorage, the North Sutor and South Sutor, were fortified, the defences being erected and manned by marines, who were accommodated in the old battleship Renown. Admiralty officials were meanwhile surveying Scapa Flow, where it was proposed to establish naval magazines and build wharves, but very little had been done by the outbreak of war.

Dreadnoughts Kept in Port.
Another base, chiefly for submarines, was being prepared at Dundee. On the West Coast, Lamalash, situated on the Firth of Clyde, had been approved as a naval anchorage, while Loch Ewe was founded on August 10, 1914, as a secondary coaling station for the Grand Fleet.

It is of interest to recall that the approaches to Loch Ewe were heavily mined by the German mineslayer Meteor in September of that year, just after the dreadnought battle fleet had arrived there to coal and clean boilers. Among the ships temporarily blockaded was the Fleet flagship, the Iron Duke, on board of which Mr. Winston Churchill, then First Lord, and the chief of the war staff had taken themselves to confer with Admiral Jellicoe. Fortunately the mines were soon swept up, though not before they had claimed several minor victims.

Canada's Dairying Industry Growing

Tourists Account for 15,000,000 Pounds of Butter and England Takes Much Cheese

London, Ont.—However sparingly visiting motorists spread the butter on their bread, they at least managed to consume an aggregate of 15,000,000 pounds of butter in Canada last year.

This is an official estimate, supplied to the convention of the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario here by J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner for the Dominion. Mr. Ruddick said there had been 3,000,000 visiting motorists from the United States in Canada for an average of several days each during 1927, and the result had been to provide a market for 15,000,000 pounds of butter. The figures for 1928 would be about the same.

Mr. Ruddick, as well as officials of the association, said that conditions in 1928 had been excellent for the dairy industry. Included in the outlets for Canadian dairy products in 1928 were a growing domestic trade in eastern Ontario.

George A. Barr of the Ontario Department of Agriculture said the Canadian cheese has been maintaining its prestige in England, and Ontario and Quebec had built up an enviable connection in the United Kingdom.

Canada is recovering its export trade of milk and cream to the United States, according to W. S. Stevens, the Canadian Dairy Council. He said Canadian dairy trade with the United States was now practically back to the old level.

Owing to the steady demand and rapidly diminishing supply the industry of Muskrat Farming offers one of the most attractive investment opportunities.

Muskrats are signally immune from disease and are very prolific. A pair of muskrats will produce from 30 to 35 young in a single season.

U. S. A. biological survey report a shortage of 15,000,000 pelts last year.

These Eastern Ontario Muskkrats are known the world over as the best obtainable and the pelts bring on the market from 85 cents to $1.00 over Western Ontario and Western Canada pelts.

National Fur Farms Limited owns one of the best and largest farms on the Continent. The marsh land comprises a very large area situated in North Hastings County. Natural feed from 6 to 8 feet high, fresh water moving at 2 miles per hour over the whole area.

SOME OTHER PEOPLE

The turn of the Chinese policeman's lip seems to indicate that he could snarl out a very nasty "Where'd you think you're going?" if he thought you would understand him, but passengers on the Canadian Pacific World Cruise last year found him very courteous.

Some time before the globe-trotters met the man with the pudding-basin head-gear they were greeted at the entrance of the famous Stadium at Athens by the fiery-mustachioed guard who looks like Harry Lauder in a combination of the worst features of the Highland, the Dutch and the hosiery advertisement national costumes.

But the Japanese practising on the saxophone's ancestor takes the cake when it comes to strange head-gear. A pun could be made here about "wicker" and "wicked-looking," but let that pass. The dark representative of the fair sex evidently believes in simplicity of costume—and economy! She has made her "robe de style" serve for her young son, too, and her head dress! Permanent waves have probably been amongst the old family secrets handed down from mother to daughter for centuries in her country.

Taking them altogether they are a fair sample of strange sights to be viewed on a trip round the world.

The Canadian Pacific has organized six winter cruises this year. Round the World by the "Empress of Australia," South America-Africa by the new 20,000 ton "Duchess of Atholl," Mediterranean by the "Empress of Scotland" and three cruises to the once happy hunting grounds of the buccaner—the West Indies.

A Belfast man found himself about to be "stuck" with a lot of women's coats—a belated post-season delivery. He jumped the legitimate retail price by 10 shillings. Then he pinned to each coat a brand new 10 shilling note, and said, "These coats 36 shillings, and here's 10 shillings from us to help you pay for the coat you want."

LET'S GIVE ALBERTA COAL A FAIR TRIAL
(Owen Sound Sun-Times)
The special freight rate which will enable large quantities of Alberta coal to be brought to Ontario is again in effect and the movement of coal eastward is now under way. For the second time the people of this province will have the Alberta product available at rates that compare favorably with coal from the States.

The $6.75 freight rate this year has been granted for a six months' period, from January 15th to July 15th and it is confidently expected that a great increased tonnage will be moved east as compared with last year. In Ontario a large percentage of the total coal consumption of the entire year occurs from January 15th to May 1st, and Alberta coal should therefore this year be a greater factor in the fuel requirements of the coal consumers than during 1928.

Alberta coal is a Canadian product and Ontario householders should at least give it a fair trial. We Canadians are sending millions to the States every year for fuel and if a good portion of this huge sum is retained in Canada—so much the better for Canada.

Some people are like price lists—you have to know what the discount is on what they say.

Many farmers find themselves in difficulty due to expenditures having doubled while their incomes have remained stationary. They have been spending more but not making more. Most of us give too much thought to spending and not enough to making.

We concentrate on spending and not on producing. We should reverse the process. The difficulty most of us have is in making money. It is easily spent. In spite of that the majority of us are putting emphasis on spending. If we would put our daily thought and energy on greater production there would not be so many failures either on the farm or in business. If we are failures we are probably neglecting production while putting much time on spending.

Elmwood, Ont., May 13th, 1927
Mr. B. J. Murfin,
Dear Sir:
I must write and let you know how our son, who had creeping paralysis, is improving. He had only taken your medicine about a week when he could walk and in three weeks had gained 13 lbs. He has helped his father with seeding, and is working every day and is feeling fine. Our daughter is also making an improvement, is gaining nicely but is still taking your medicine. We certainly cannot praise your medicine too highly for what it has done for us; we do not think there is any medicine sold on the market so effective in building up a run-down system as Mr. Murfin's Natural Herb Medicine, and we highly recommend it to our neighbors and friends.
Hoping to see you soon, we remain,

COLLINGWOOD MAN KILLED IN BLAST

Peter Cantlon, employed as a laborer on the construction of the foundation of the new elevator at Collingwood, was blown to pieces at 9.15 o'clock last Saturday morning. He was engaged, along with a number of others, in doing some blasting. Several dynamite charges were put in the holes and all were discharged with one exception, and it was thought that this was a dead one. Mr. Cantlon went over to inspect the hole and just as he reached the spot, the charge exploded, and the unfortunate man was hurled a distance of about 40 feet in the air. His head was blown off, in fact his body was literally blown to pieces, his fellow workmen picking up a piece of the body some distance away. The dynamite charge was a heavy one.

Dr. A. M. McFaul, coroner, was at once notified, and an inquest will be held to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the fatality.

The deceased was a man of about 40 years of age, and resided in the village of Clarksburg, where he was well known and highly esteemed. He was employed by the township in building roads and was looked upon as an industrious fellow and eager to support his family as best he could. About a month ago he went to Collingwood to work on the new elevator with his fellow workmen. He is survived by a wife and eight children, including one married daughter, the rest of the family being at home, including one child but two months old.

FIRE AT OWEN SOUND

One of the most spectacular and disastrous fires which has occurred in Owen Sound in a number of years almost completely destroyed the plant of the Dominion Linseed Oil Company Limited, at an early hour Sunday morning, entailing a loss of approximately $75,000, or more. The fire was discovered about 1 o'clock in the morning, and by the time the fire brigade arrived on the scene, it had made very rapid headway, although had there not been a terrific explosion almost immediately after their arrival there might have been a chance of saving the building. The explosion scattered the fire and after that there was nothing the firemen could do but pour tons of water on the blaze. The main building, which held a heavy stock of grain ready to be ground up, was completely gutted, and the machinery is a wreck in the basement. The new south wing, just erected this past year, was saved with but little damage, due to the fact that there was a fire wall between it and the older building.

A BRIDGE BALLAD

She was a damsel fair of see;
A gallant bachelor was he;
He offered her, on bended knee,
One Heart.

A richer rival came in view;
Of maids he'd learned a thing or two;
He flashed before her eyes, so blue,
Two Diamonds.

They married. Next, a change of scene,
He spent his time (he said) between Three Clubs.

And so this once too pampered bride
Forlorn, neglected, pined and died;
And four grave diggers grimly plied
Four Spades.

The moral is: Don't wed for gold;
A marriage bought is a marriage sold.
A loveless match is proved to hold
No Trumps.

THE KING'S CAR

As a motorist, King George sets an example in economy. Many people imagine that the King has only to desire a new car, and one appears. The reverse is the case. His Majesty is by no means a rich man, and after the needs of hospitality and upkeep have been met the royal grant allows very little margin for expensive whims. The King's last car was in constant use for over fifteen years. Indeed it was only due to his anxiety to encourage industry that he gave way to the representations made to him and ordered a new one. The buying of the royal car is by no means the simple task it sounds, and it is not merely a matter of going into a large show room and choosing a model. A full-size plan is first drawn on a wall for the King's inspection. Now that the state coach is rarely used for ceremonial occasions apart from the opening of parliament many features of the gilded coach have to be incorporated into the design of the royal car. The windows are made exceptionally large, so that the public can see their Majesties during processions. The height of the car, too, must be sufficient to allow the King to wear the tall head-dresses that State occasions demand. Spare wheels are fixed on the side of the hood. The King's car does not bear a registration number plate, but carries instead a shield bearing the Royal Standard in the day time. At night a distinguishable blue light is used to enable the police to afford it precedence.

SAFETY RULES

Here are some rules that are laid down to aid bachelors of all descriptions in selecting partners for life:

Choose one that is neater and cleaner than you are.

Choose one that doesn't consider you merely a meal ticket.

Choose one who cannot find the last word without a dictionary.

Choose one that is not acquainted with first love affairs that might spoil yours.

Do not expect too much. Do not look for perfection. Remember that the perfect ones have taken wings and can be found only amongst the angels.

Have you ever noticed the little tubs filled with juice in an orange or even more easily seen in a grapefruit, as it is larger? Meat is like that; very small tubs filled with juice. You know how white of egg will coagulate as soon as it touches a hot surface—that is exactly what we try to do with meat, sear the surface immediately and try to keep in the precious juices. If you cook it on the top of the stove, have your pan hot; if in the oven, have a very hot oven, and if you boil it, have your water boiling. Then in each case reduce the heat.

A Mining News Service For Readers of This Page

Former Financial Editor of the "Toronto Globe", Mr. L. J. Moore will contribute Exclusive Weekly Letters to this Page and will Answer Enquiries

CONSERVATIVE INFORMATION

By L. J. MOORE

We are very pleased to tell the readers of this page that Mr. Lloyd J. Moore, mining and financial expert of note, will contribute a weekly letter to this page. Mr. Moore had a long and successful connection in the newspaper field as financial editor of the "Toronto Globe". He is now a member of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange of Toronto and has visited all the chief mining centres of Canada; he brings to you a wealth of personal knowledge which should be of keen interest and extreme value.

Mr. Moore has agreed to answer in these columns any legitimate enquiries on mines and mining investment problems, and we trust the readers will avail themselves of this attractive opportunity to acquaint themselves with Canada's vital growing industry.

THE SITUATION TODAY

High-priced stocks have been the principal money-makers in the Canadian mining market for the last year or more. The experience of purchasers of low-priced shares has been unsatisfactory on the whole. The same situation seems likely to continue in greater or less degree during the coming months.

Nickel

International Nickel has been the most spectacular performer during January. Its present price has discounted the future several years in advance. Its chief sponsors, notably in Montreal, are predicting confidently that much higher prices will be reached. Recent performances of the stock tend to confirm their views. The strong Montreal group is easily capable of obtaining its object. In the meantime the Frood Mine is developing wonderfully at depth.

Noranda

Noranda Mines is second in market interest. The news of a proposed offering of Rights has had a detrimental rather than a beneficial effect on the market, but this is probably merely temporary. Noranda has been earning at the rate of close to $3.00 annually on returns from a single reverberatory unit. Sinking of the new No. 4 shaft is proceeding. It will be completed and equipped for hoisting ore in the latter part of this year. At the present time No. 3 shaft provides insufficient hoisting capacity; No. 1 furnace has been shut down for repairs, and No. 2 furnace has been blown in. As a result the current production figures have decreased. Improvement is expected as No. 2 furnace works in. It is expected that Noranda will show itself capable of earning well over $5.00 a share annually with two furnaces in operation. At the rate the Horne Mine is developing the doubling of present smelter capacity seems justified. The forthcoming annual report will be most conservative. For those who have the patience to hold this stock we have no doubt they will realize upwards of $100.00 a share. The retirement of the $2,500,000 bonds held by Hollinger is a constructive piece of financing.

The Manitoba Field

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting is in very strong shape. It looms up as one of the most attractive Canadian mining ventures from the investors standpoint. The shrewd and powerful group holding control of this company have said unofficially that the Flin-Flon earnings in the first six years operations will be sufficient to meet the entire capital expenditures. Its ore reserves are estimated to be in excess of 20 million tons. The company is in an unassailable financial position with over $16,000,000 in cash to meet the development and equipment requirements before starting production. Even after an expenditure of close to $6,000,000 for power development at Island Falls, Saskatchewan, there will be left more than ample funds for smelter construction, mine development, township and other needs. The management has a far-sighted program. It has been most reticent about mine development, which is known however to be most favorable. It is estimated that there is enough ore to be obtained by glory-holing to provide smelter feed for the projected 3,000-ton mill for at least ten years.

MR. LLOYD J. MOORE

Member of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, who will contribute to this page and answer mining enquiries. Mr. Moore is prominent in conservative mining investment circles.

Hudson Bay will undoubtedly earn market recognition of its assured earning power in due course. The stock should be held for substantial appreciation in the writer's opinion. This conclusion is reached after securing the best information obtainable, and after making a personal visit to the property in Northern Manitoba. It has been holding steadfastly around $21.00 recently.

Sherritt-Gordon has earned much market attention recently. The development and exploratory work has yielded some surprisingly good results, especially on recently acquired claims, situated along the mineralized break. Sherritt will undoubtedly be productive of big tonnage. It may eventually rival the Flin Flon. It has plenty of cash on hand for some time ahead and there is understood to be approximately 1,333,000 shares of the total authorized capital of 6,000,000 shares remaining in the treasury. This should be approximately sufficient to bring the mine into production in a big way.

The Smaller Issue

Wright-Hargreaves is now looking better after an unusually tempestuous market career during the past twelve months. Mill heads were not much above $6.00 during the final quarter of 1928. Bullion returns were also low. Profits were approximately $18,000 in October and about $14,000 in both November and December. The mine is looking definitely better, however. The downward continuation of the vein encountered in the north workings in the direction of the Sylvanite boundary looks like extremely good ore. This vein has been encountered at both the 1500 and 1750 foot levels. At the former horizon it was 4½ feet wide and assayed $48.00. No returns are available yet about values and average widths at the 1750 foot, but it is understood that the ore looks comparable both in quality and quantity with the level above. The management seems to be sanguine that it has the makings of a new mine below the faulted zone. Lake Shore has secured wonderful ore recently very close to the Wright-Hargreaves boundary. All these things combine to make the Wright-Hargreaves situation look more cheerful, especially for those who are willing to hold their stock for some time.

The situations at Teck Hughes and Lake Shore are exceptionally good and these will be outlined in succeeding articles if the correlation of mine developments and market opinions of the writer meet a responsive audience. In the meantime requests for information on Canadian mining subjects will be cheerfully answered in order to accept as far as space permits. Address your enquiries to Mr. L. J. Moore, 10 Jordan St., Toronto, and your letter and answer will appear in an early issue.

The little man dashed along the platform as the train was moving out and made for the last carriage, at the window of which a woman was frantically waving her handkerchief. He was about to grasp the handle of the door when the porter pulled him back. "You mustn't board the train while it's moving," said the porter. "Besides, that compartment is engaged." "Engaged!" shouted the little man, dancing about in his rage, as he watched the train disappearing. "Of course it's engaged! I engaged it myself, and that's my wife at the window, off on her honeymoon!"

Sunday School Lesson

February 17. Lesson VII—Prayer—Matt. 6: 5-13; Luke 28: 9-14; 1 John 5: 14, 15. Golden Text—If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.—John 15: 7.

ANALYSIS

I. TRUE AND FALSE PRAYER, Matt. 6: 5-13.

II. TRUE AND FALSE WORSHIPPERS, Luke 18: 9-14.

III. FAITH AND PRAYER, 1 John 5: 14, 15.

INTRODUCTION—There are few subjects to which Jesus gave more time and thought than prayer; and there are three different ways in which we might study his teaching on the very important subject. We may notice: (1) His own example, from which we learn how constantly he sought communion with the heavenly Father, and how he consulted him on every issue of importance. (2) His manifold instruction given to the disciples on the great subject. (3) His actual prayers which are contained in Matt., chap. 6, and John, chap. 17. From the we infer that this is one of the most important subjects for our consideration. A revival in the art of prayer would do more to revive our church than anything else. Prayer is the way by which we get the power of God.

I. TRUE AND FALSE PRAYER, Matt. 6: 5-13.

V. 5. In the earlier part of this chapter four verses are given to thanksgiving, three to fasting and eleven to prayer, so that from this we may measure which is the most important in these three acts of worship. First of all we have a warning against the danger of hypocrisy. If people make a parade of their prayers in order to win the reputation of being religious then they may receive the reward of human praise, but they do not get the reward from God.

V. 6. Jesus here gives the positive statement. His method often included negative or positive teaching. One of the necessary conditions of true prayer is that it be the sincere desire of the heart. This verse lays stress upon the secrecy of the religious life.

V. 7. The second warning is against unreality. If people repeat a formula without putting their heart or soul into it, hoping that this will be heard, they have a totally wrong conception of God. Mere repetitions imply that God is a hard, exacting ruler, demanding penance. But if God be our loving Father, prayer must be a form of communion, or conversation in which our souls find true delight.

V. 8. We do not need to pray in order to inform God of our wants. "Prayer is the human side of inter-communion with God." We thus learn to see how dependent we are on him, and how blessed it is to know him.

V. 9. Now begins the best known of all prayers. No sayings of Jesus are more universally used than these. In this Lord's Prayer we have the motives, the model and the aims of all true prayer. It consists of seven sentences. The first is the address, while the remaining six fall into two parts.

V. 10. The three petitions to be made concerning God are: (1) The hallowing of his name, by which the worshipper expresses his desire that nothing be done to bring discredit on the holy name. The opposite of this would be to profane that name. (2) That the kingdom or rule of God may be extended. (3) That his will may be done on earth. These petitions rise out of a sense of the sovereignty and goodness of God, and they imply that the divine rule extends over the earth. God's interest must come first.

V. 11. The first of the three petitions for ourselves concerns our physical needs. We cannot live without our daily bread, and in this prayer we acknowledge God's power and readiness to give us that we need.

Vs. 12, 13. The two remaining requests are spiritual, including the great doctrine of the forgiveness of sins along with protection from the powerful assaults of evil.

II. TRUE AND FALSE WORSHIPPERS, Luke 18: 9-14.

V. 9. This parable is found only in Luke, and is meant to teach a definite lesson on prayer, a subject occupying much space in this gospel. We are told in this introduction of the special fault here condemned. It is self-confidence, combined with a severe critical attitude to others.

V. 10. The Pharisee does not really pray at all. There are four elements in prayer, thanksgiving, confession, intercession and supplication, but none of these is included in this case. His supposed thanksgiving is a form of self-congratulation, and instead of confessing his own sins he criticizes the sins of the other man.

V. 13. The publican stands at a distance from one whom he regards as a very pious man, and in his case we see illustrated one of the primary conditions of true prayer: humility and a sense of unworthiness. He does not think of the faults of others, but only of his own, and he places himself in the class of sinners. Pleading no merit in himself, he puts all his hope in the mercy of God.

V. 14. This despised man goes away justified, that is, justified in the sight of God, while the Pharisee receives no blessing of soul at all. Thus we have the examples of false and true worship.

III. FAITH AND PRAYER, 1 John 5: 14, 15.

V. 14. In these verses John writes on intercessory prayer as the natural fruit of faith. He who believes in Christ has the assurance that whatever he asks of God will be given to him, if it is according to the will of God. We must notice this condition, which is here laid down. If in our ignorance we ask for anything that is not for our good, then the love of God will refuse to grant it to us. See 2 Cor. 12: 9.

V. 15. True prayer carries with it the answer—we get what we ask for, if the condition in v. 14 is fulfilled. See Mark 11: 24.

Dry Cleaning as a Technical Problem

There are at least 500,000 different kinds of spots, and preparations that will take off one kind of spot will not take off another.

The expert cleaner, as such, is a different technician from an expert "spotter," whose business it is to understand the why and wherefore of every one of the 500,000 or more kinds of stains and blemishes that have a way of attaching themselves to the finest silks and the cheapest gingham. Theoretically, a spot can always be taken off, it was declared, if one knows just how to do it. However, there are many spots that cannot be removed by present methods, and for this reason the National Cleaners and Dyers Association is pushing research in an effort to discover new preparations which will reveal the vulnerable traits in every spot.

It is believed that the greatest problem facing the cleaning and dyeing profession is to clean artificial silks and not destroy them in the process. Last year there was half as much artificial silk manufactured as there were cotton goods, and as the result, cleaning and dyeing establishments the country over are being swamped with materials that present the most complex and difficult problem of cleaning yet faced.

Artificial silk is manufactured from wood fiber. When this fiber is moistened, it becomes tender and has a tendency to fall to pieces. In many cases, it takes an expert to distinguish between real and artificial silks.

One of the most indelible stains that the cleaning and dyeing profession has not been able to remove is that which forms at the nape of the neck. Thus coat collars tend to become dingier with continued wear. Strenuous efforts are being put forth to develop a chemical preparation that will remove this stain.

Literary Iconoclasts

W. N. Brigrance in the North American Review. We have efficiency experts in industry; we have them in government. We have them in the trades; we have them in the professions. We have them in our schools; we have them in our churches. It was inevitable, sooner or later, that they should invade the fields of literature. It was equally inevitable that, arriving there, they should, as Goths in the Imperial City of Rome, find small merit in the tapestries of art which for centuries have been treasures of the literary world.

The Future of the Empire

Wickham Steed in the Review of Reviews (London): England and the whole British Commonwealth form a going concern. If they cease to go on, they will perish. No polity has ever had stronger reasons to fear stagnation. The stability of the British Empire is not the stability of a monument. It is the stability of a gyroscope swiftly and noiselessly revolving in a free atmosphere.

AND JEFF.—Bud Fisher.

Early American Tribes Believed Of Mongol Race

Faces on Submerged Walls Bear Mongoloid Stamp

All of North and South America were once peopled with Mongoloid inhabitants who probably migrated from central Asia centuries before history began to record events, writes a contributor in "The Milwaukee Journal." And then, many centuries ago, Indo-Europeans came.

From time to time this has been suggested as a speculative theory. It is now virtually considered a fact. It is believed that these people got to the new world either across the Aleutian chain of islands from Siberia to Alaska or, perhaps some of them, across a now vanished land chain over the Pacific.

Most of the Indian races in North and South America today, including the Wisconsin tribes, are considered descendants of the Mongoloid Americans. The Mongoloid features can still be seen in many tribes. Among certain Indians of Mexico especially one may clearly see the Mongoloid eyes and cheek bones. This is also markedly true in Bolivia, Ecuador and Peru.

Are You Ready When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhoea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

But there is far greater proof than mere facial resemblance. Educated Chinese have constantly recognized the Mongoloid type in the remains of primitive races of the Americas. The Chinese laundryman of Professor John H. Cowan (Aztec and Toltec expert of the National University of Mexico) clearly identified as Chinese the little clay figures which Professor Cowan had unearthed in archaeological excavations in Mexico. Professors Mena, Niven and Hyde and various members of the staffs of the National University and National Museum of Mexico to be Mongoloid. Professor Morley of the Carnegie Institute concurs.

CHINESE WRITING IDENTIFIED

The Secretary of the Chinese Legation in Mexico City recognized primitive Chinese writings in signs on Mexican walls which were erected between 8,000 and 10,000 years ago. He also said that terra cotta figures dug up from a buried civilization twenty feet beneath the surface in the valley of Mexico were ancient mandarin dresses. He further added that these figures were very similar to some of the ancient Mongoloid gods found in early Chinese civilization. In the valley of Mexico alone there are millions of these figures.

Faces on submerged walls of ancient Mexican temples, sculptures and paintings on stone tablets and adobe brick bear the unmistakable Mongoloid stamp, and the early primitive gods of the Mongoloids, the gods of nature, fire, sun, earth, water, are in evidence everywhere among the remains of early Mexican civilizations now being excavated.

The most remarkable finds among the remains of these buried Mongoloid cities are stone slabs, adobe brick, terra cotta tablets and cylinders covered with primitive hieroglyphic writing. Some of these the Chinese secretary recognized and interpreted without hesitancy, and since then other Chinese have confirmed his interpretation.

The first civilized races of Mexico were swept out of existence by a continuous deluge so stupendous that it is recorded in the chronicles of the Aztecs as the "Water Sun," or the period when the sun was finally destroyed by the deluge of waters which, descending from the sky, swept him out of existence in his daily journey across the heavens. The huge crater-like throat of the valley of Mexico was a second time converted into a lake, the waters of which rose high up on the mountain sides.

NEW RACE APPEARED.

Later came a new race very much like the first in appearance. It had slanting eyes and pronounced Mongoloid features; and it was probably a descendant of the early civilization so tragically destroyed. Living outside the influence of the flood, it had not been engulfed in the cataclysm which swept the former out of existence. While the valley of Mexico lay a dead land this race had evidently been traveling the highway to a more advanced civilization; it had discarded the rude sculpture of the earlier Mongoloid with its stuck-on eyes, ears, nose, mouth and limbs; and it had advanced from primitive wall paintings to well executed stone sculpture. Pottery had developed from simple to more complicated forms and terra cotta figures had approached nearer to a reproduction of the human features.

This second Mongoloid people, like the first, must have led a peaceful life, for few offensive weapons are found among the remains of their places of habitation. Evidently the Mongolians of these dim distant days were as industrious, as active, as persistent and as attached to civic and community life as their Chinese descendants are today. They had learned to lay down excellent cement drains, to build extensive temple walls and to make elaborate incense burners and other religious vessels which they decorated with figures and symbols of their gods.

They were excellent pottery makers and stone cutters, spinners and weavers; and the density of the population of the valley argues they were agriculturists. This is confirmed by the finding of charred corn and beans in the ruins of their houses and the fact that they paid special cult to the earth mother and to the gods of production and fertility.

After this second Mongoloid people had lived perhaps 2,000 years or more in the valley of Mexico and surrounding country another deluge descended upon the land, covering up the houses and the temple crowned pyramids. When the waters subsided volcanic ash covered the deserted land to a depth of several feet in places and desolation settled again upon the valley for hundreds of years, while the dead and buried cities slept in a new winding sheet. In this, as in the first covering, no remains of human beings are found except in the disturbed strata where they have evidently been washed in through the action of water upon the alluvial and volcanic deposits.

With the destruction of this second civilization the Mongols disappeared from the valley of Mexico and a new race, more cultured and of apparently Indo-European origin, took their place years afterward when the waters had subsided and the earth had again become cultivatable.

NO MEDICINE LIKE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

For Either the Newborn Babe or the Growing Child

There is no other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets for little ones—whether it be for the newborn babe or the growing child the Tablets always do good. They are absolutely free from opiates or other harmful drugs and the mother can always feel safe in using them.

Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. John Armour, R.R. 1, South Monaghan, Ont., says:—"We have three fine, healthy children, to whom, when a medicine is needed, we have given only Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are in the best medicine you can keep in any home where there are young children."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the stomach and bowels; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Anglo American Relations Leo Maxse in the National Review (London): Anglo-American affairs offer a singularly unpromising field for the activity of busybodies, but busybodies are always with us and insist on regarding this particular sphere as peculiarly their own. The results so far have been pitiable, and unless a halt can be called they are bound to get worse. Can we repress our busybodies? Can we restrain their mischief-makers? Can we repress our busybodies? This is a burning question of the hour. It should be now be plainer than most piekstaffs that every effort of either country to arrange the Navy of the other can only add fuel to the fire and is predestined to failure, leaving a legacy of disappointment and embitterment calculated to promote the very disaster these well-intentioned miscarriages were designed to obviate. He: Are ye fond of moving pictures, Jeanie? She (hopefully): Ay, Sandy. He: Then maybe, lass, ye'll help me get half a dozen doon out o' the attic. Use Minard's Liniment for the Flu.

The New Russia Dr. C. Hagberg Wright in the Contemporary (London): The industrial class, i.e., the working class—the manual laborers in the towns—is now the most important class in Russia. Having turned out the rich and taken over all their property, they have stepped into their shoes. In everything they take precedence. In housing accommodation they are given the first choice of rooms, and they pay a smaller rent than those who do "brain work." Their children take priority in the schools and universities, the children of the peasantry coming next, while boys and girls of employes or of the remnants of the bourgeois class are not accepted as pupils in any school until vacancies have been filled by the other two classes. In the days of the Tsars the Jews alone were subject to restrictions in matters of education.

WAS ALWAYS AILING NEVER FELT WELL

Health Restored Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

"I am one of the many who have found new health through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," says Mrs. Everett Dowse, South Nelson, N.B. "For some years I never felt well, and at times was so weak that I would be confined to bed. At the very best I was in an ailing condition and found it difficult at all times to do my housework. I was subject to headaches, poor appetite, breathless at the least exertion, and very pale. Before Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended to me I had tried several medicines, but without any good results. I had become completely discouraged and felt that I would always be an invalid. A friend strongly urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and finally I consented to do so, but without much hope that they would help, where other medicines had failed. But in this, to my joy, I was mistaken. I had not been taking the pills very long when I knew they were helping me. As I continued their use I found my appetite improving, I slept better at night, and my strength was gradually returning. I continued taking the pills for several months, when I again found myself a well woman, and I believe that had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would today be a helpless invalid. The pills have since been taken by others in our family, with the same beneficial results. I strongly urge every weak woman to try this grand health-building medicine."

If you will send your name and address to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., a little book, "Building Up the Blood," will be mailed you postpaid. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Rough and Smooth

Life is made up of rough places as well as smooth. We take the smooth for granted and resent the rough. But no man has really lived until he has learned to conquer the things that he encounters along the way. Apparently old-school ideas have no place in the understanding of Griefswald University, Germany, even if it does date from 1456. For a lawn tennis course has been scheduled as a compulsory course in the college curriculum, in keeping with the modern sport movement.

Talent Talent, lying in the understanding, is often inherited; genius, being the action of reason and imagination, rarely or never. Minard's Liniment prevents Flu.

"My dear," said a wife who had been married three years, "tell me what first attracted you to me—what pleasant characteristic did I possess which placed me above other women in your sight?" "I give it up," answered the husband distractedly. Always Under the Lash.—The pupil of the eye.

Ultra Violet Rays Get Poor Chance

British Air Ministry Condemns London Fog As a Cause of Rickets and Tuberculosis

London.—The British Air Ministry has renewed its fight against London fogs, which are blamed for being the frequent cause of rickets and tuberculosis. Dr. J. S. Owens, superintendent of the Air Ministry advisory committee on atmospheric pollution, has discovered that during a bad fog there are between 800,000 and 1,600,000 particles of soot crammed into every cubic inch of air over London. Each person breathes about 80,000 cubic inches of air every hour. This means that under bad fog conditions nearly every person in central London inhales from 24,000,000 to 48,000,000 particles of soot in an hour. "The shutting out of the ultra-violet rays of the sun is the worst and most harmful feature of air pollution," Dr. Owens points out. "It is the frequent cause of rickets and tuberculosis." On a winter's morning 280 tons of soot are produced in three hours over London by domestic fires. Half a pound of soot pollution per million cubic yards is enough to eliminate virtually all the ultra-violet rays which would otherwise be coming through. Burning 17,000,000 tons of coal London loses through the smoke pall mixed in winter sunshine it should receive and 50 per cent. of the winter daylight, according to Dr. Owens. The density of air pollution is measured by an intricate clockwork device. A disk of white filter paper, seven inches in diameter, divided into twenty-four sections like the face of a clock, is fixed on a turn-table revolving once in twenty-four hours. Records obtained in this way show that the impurity varies every hour. In London the atmosphere thickens about 7 a.m., when domestic fires are lit, and it is at its densest about three hours later. After this it clears gradually, but there is a slight increase in density about 6 p.m. On Sunday morning the period of maximum density is one hour later.

STOCK MARKETS

Receipts of fresh cattle unloaded on Sunday at the Union Yards for Monday's opening market were in about the same volume as on Monday of last week. While prices were no higher than for the previous marketings, there was a little better tone discernible, as out-let for supply demand broadened out. Consequently movement of stocks was more active than at any time last week, and at 2 o'clock 1700 head of cattle had been weighed up, with indications at that hour of a fairly good clearance on the initial receipt.

Heavy steers, for the bulk of the run, sold from $9 to $9.75 a cwt. with 6 head, average weight 1300 pounds, bringing top price at 10c a lb. The best in the handyweight division made from $9 to $9.50 a cwt., with common stuff moving downward to $7.50 a cwt. Better grade butcher heifers sold at from $8.75 to $9.25 a cwt. Butcher cows were an active feature of the session, with the majority of sales made at a range of from $7 to $7.50 a cwt. A few sales were made at as high as 8c a lb. and on the day's market performance it does appear to be stronger than last week's values as low as $4 a cwt. Baby beef were mostly steady with last week's close at from $10 to $11.50 a cwt. A few lots of feeding steers cleared at from $7.50 to $7.75 a cwt., with trading in store cattle quiet. Milkens and springers show little variation in price from a week ago at a quotation around $130 each for tops.

Calf markets were weaker outside, and the local yards reacted by clipping $1 a cwt. off prices at the opening. Run of fresh calves was light, and the bulk of the supply sold between $14 and $15 a cwt. A few choice sold at $15.50 a cwt. Common vealers were taken as low as 8c per pound.

Lamb market was steady at $14.50 for the main supply, with common to medium lambs crossing the scale all the way from $8 to $14 a cwt. Two loads of lambs of Western origin were unsold at 3 o'clock. Sheep look steady at from $3 to $8 a cwt.

Hogs was another feature of trading which was sharply influenced by a price break on outside markets. Settlements were made for a fair supply at $19.25 a cwt. f.o.b., or at $11.25 a cwt. for select, a drop of 75c a cwt., from Thursday.
