ROYAL BODY BORNE FROM OSBORNE

Most Tragic Naval Splendor Since Cevera Burned His Ships.

ARRAYED IN ROYAL ROBES

Her Face Covered With Her Bridal Veil, Britain's Queen Now Sleeps In Frogmore Mausoleum.

London, Feb. 2, a. m., via Skagway, Feb. 6.-Yesterday with a grand yet mournful display and with naval pomp and power the body of the late sovereign of the British empire, Queen Victoria, was borne from Osborne castle.

Not since the warships of the Spanish Admiral Ceveras lit up the coast of Cuba in their self-consuming fires, has anything in the nature of a naval spectatcle been seen approaching such tragic splendor as on this occasion.

The procession was formed at Osborne House in the following order:

The coffin containing the body of the queen was borne from Osborne House by the Queen's Highlanders. The household royal servants and tenants lined the carriage drive.

The queen's pipers led the procession to the pier. There was a most · Telephone No. 87 imposing military display along the route where massed bands played funeral marches.

> Behind the coffin came Admiral Seymour, first and principal aide de camp to the queen. Then followed King Edward, Emperor William, Duke of Connaught, the Crown Prince of Germany, Duke of York, Prince Henry of Prussia, Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein and other princes. Then followed Queen Alexandria, the Duchess of York and other princesses.

Blue jackets carried the coffin aboard the royal family yacht Alberta, where four aide de camps and two ladies were in waiting to receive and accompany it. The members of the royal family embarked on the yachts Victoria and Alberta.

The Alberta steamed slowly to Portsmonth harbor, the grand procession in its wake. All warships passed fired minute guns, all yards were manned and bands played funeral marches.

The Alberta anchored in the harbor for the night and this morning the body was placed on a special train and carwill be taken to Frogmore mansoleum. The Prisoner Heard His Fate Without Any Emotion.

Was His Raply When Asked if He Had Anything to Say Previous

At the beginning of the afternoon session of court in the St. Cyr murder case, the accused was taken in hand by the crown prosecutor, the prisoner going into the details of the matter leading to the separation between himself and Clitheroe.

At the time of the separation he had called Clitheroe a sneek, because he had gone to Davis raking for shelter, which he did not think was warranted by the circumstances,

He had no ill feeling towards the man Davis. Once Davis had been zutting wood on the ground claimed by him, but he had explained this by saying that Clitheroe had sent him there,

When asked why he had gone past his own ground on the morning of the shooting when he found that who car was chopping was not on his ground, he said that Davis had previously been in the habit of visiting his cabin, but latterly be had ceased and he wanted ome explanation. We wanted to know if they were contemplating any further outrages such as cutting timber on his There had been a raft and a scow salved between himself and Davis, who had sold the raft to a steamer and hept the scow. However, he had forgivenhim long since for all this.

The cross-examination of the prisoner by Crown Presecutor Wade was long and searching, and at its close the counsel for the defense began argument which lasted from 4:30 till 5 p. m.

The crown prosecutor then began his argument by complimenting the defense upon its management of the case. He reviewed the evidence of each witness and brought the facts out in position to each other in the light heat calculated to make the case of the prospention a strong one, with consummate skill, He dwelt upon the theory of accidental shooring and used the side to demonstrate the in ability of such an explanation, and fine ished his argument in about three quarters of an hour. this morning the official wes her report

Justice Dugas then charged the jusy, laying before them clearly the facts in the case and defining the meaning of the charge and the duty of the jury with regard to all.

His direction was long, going very fully into the evidence from start to finish, and not besitating to say that the prisoner had, in the telling of his story, impressed him very favorably. ert He spoke a little more than an hour, (Continued on Page 4.)

literature is in the direction of the heroic. The fascination which appertains to the brave days of old is just as strong as ever, which fact is amply proven by the profuse applause given each new book dealing with knightly deed and hair-raising adventures.

This seems somewhat peculiar in an age which is essentially dominated by the money-getting spirit.

Where men formerly sought power and fame through the agency of physical prowess they now attain the same result by virtue of accumulated shekels. It does not appear, however, that the spirit of romanticism is entirely lost. It has merely been slumbering beneath the weight of the dollar mark and has required only the skilled hand of the modern fiction writer to again blossom

Undoubtedly, the great interest thus recently revived in the happening of home drunk this morning from a ball, hill by a procession of red-eyed friends Carlson and William Murphy were arthe times of chivalry, is due in a large measure to the contrast thus afforded to our own age. If the modern fiction writer sought to reflect the spirit of his own time he would deal almost exclusively in the building of fortunes and the attainment of political preferment -both of which pursuits are too well and generally understood to afford favorable opportunities to the romance Awriter. The energy of the world is now concentrated almost exclusively upon things material. Therefore, when the world is able to indulge a spare half hour in reading a book, it turns gladly to the time when ye gentle that Mr. Bryan should be invited to and since before I ceased the infantile coast, and the Pacific Northwest in parknight went forth to do battle for ye express his views along with others lisp I have sang with fervor 'God Save ticular, is generally recognized, and the

This desire for contrast has been recognized and full advantage of it taken by the literary world, as witness the extraordinarily large editions of MacLean of the State University today historical-romantic works but recently published.

There is a distinct relief in turning from the prosy affairs of every day modern life to the stirring events associnted with the "good old days" and in that fact lies the secret of the success which has attended so many literary productions of the above class.

Now is an excellent time for claim owners to move their supplies to the creeks for the coming summer. The trails are in splendid condition and freight rates are lower than they will be when warm weather approaches. The man who operates his claim most advantageously is the one who notes and takes advantage of all these little circumstances. A difference in a cent or two per pound in freight rates means. a good deal of money in transporting a season's supplies to a claim.

The officers and citizens surrounded an abandoned log house in which the trio took shelter, and a preacher named Densey and his son rushed forward and pushed open the door, when they were fired upon. Densey was killed and his son fatally wounded.

A general fusillade followed, during which two of the robbers escaped and the other was captured after being dangerously shot. Officers are in hot pursuit of the fugitives. It was with difficulty that the people were restrained from lynching the captured man, who was taken to Hopkinsville for safe keeping.

The two men who escaped were overtaken six miles from Flipper, Ky. One was killed and the other wounded and captured.

Alaska Invites McKinley.

John G. Brady, governor of Alaska, will appear before the Seattle Chamber of Commerce this afternoon and request that resolutions be adopted urging President McKinley to visit Alaska when he comes to the Pacific coast next spring. And Wants to Divide Territory in Two Parts.

Mr. Clement Has Resigned and Will Which Raises Complications.

needs of Whitehorse. One of these destruction of property. things asked for by the enterprising wants a line drawn on the maps somewhere between its back yard fence and of the newly formed territory.

This fact was intimated in a letter to a well known official here a few days since, who, for various reasons, did not wish to be quoted in the matter.

However, Superintendent of Roads Taghe was seen yesterday in regard to the statement and in reply to a question as to it's truthfulness he said it was quite true, although he said he himself believed it to be nonsensical, and had so expressed himself at the meeting when the proposal was discussed.

Whether or not Mr. Girouard furthered this proposed modest request of Whitehorse, or whether there is good grounds for the report current among the legal fraternity yesterday, are matters open thus far to the same question as was his parting information to press representatives concerning his object in going to Ottawa, which he stated was not concerning the O'Brien claim for reimbusement, and which the council has since declared was his mission.

Concerning the rumor of yesterday referred to, that Mr. W. H. P. Clement, public administrator, had resigned and that Mr. Girouard had been appointed to fill the office, it is only in part con-

Acting Public Administrator Clement, brother to W. H. P. Clement, stated this morning that a letter received from his brother by the last mail stated that he had resigned the office and that Dawson would know him no more, as it was not his intention to return here.

Whether Mr. Gironard has been appointed to the office or not is another matter and so far lacks confirmation.

This resignation leaves vacant a chair at the council board, and, masmuch as Mr. Clement is not coming back, it also leaves the legal advisership without an incumbent. And, should the has been appointed to the office of public administrator, it somewhat complicates the present position of the registrar's office, as that office is without a legal incumbent temporarily, as matters are, it would then become practically vacant in a more permanent

What effect all this will have on the bright dreams of ambitious Whitehorse, is, as Kipling would say, "Another story."

An Avalanche.
