"When the Author of the following little work states, that it is not only "founded on facts," but is indeed almost devoid of any fictitious admixture whatever, he would not be understood to assert, that the events of the narrative occurred exactly in the order and connexion in which they are related, and befol the members of exactly such a family as is here described. Had this been the case, the production would have been merely a biographical treatise, with the real parties thinly veiled under fictitious names. Such is not its nature; and yot there is not a character, attempted to be drawn, nor an event of any importance narrated, which is not an exact transcript of some character or event that occurred within the range of

POLLY GRAY AND THE DOCTORS.

FOLLY GRAY AND THE DOCTORS.

Ir was a dark, and rainy night in June, when Deacon Gray, about ten o'clock in the evening, drove his horse and wagon up to the door, on his return from market.

"Oh dear, Mr. Gray!" exclaimed his wife, as she met him at the door, "I'm dreadful glad you've come; Polly's so sick, I'm afraid she won't live till mornin', if something ain't done for her."

"Polly is always alling," said the deacon, deliberatoty; "I guess it's only some of her old aches and pains. Just take this box of sugar in; it has been raining on it this hour."

"Well, do come right in, Mr. Gray, for you don't know what a desput case she is in; I daren't leave her a afflute."

"You are always scared half to death," said the deacon, "if anything ails Polly; but you know she always gets over it again. Here's coffee and tea and some other notions rolled up in this bag," handing her another bundle to carry into the house.

"Well, but Mr. Gray, don't pray stop for bundles or nothin' else. You must go right over after Doctor Longley, and get him here as quick as you can."

"Oh, it's only Doctor Longley she wants," over after Doctor Longley, and get him here as quick as you can."

"Oh, it's only Doctor Longley she wants," said the deacon carelessly, "I guess she ain't so dangerous, after all."

"Now, Mr. Gray, jest because Doctor Longley is a young man and about Polly's age, that you should make such an unfeelin' expression as that, I think is too bad."

The deacon turned away without making a reply, and began to move the harness from the horse.

"Mr. Gray, ain't you going after the doc-or?" said Mrs. Gray, with increasing impatience.

"I'm going to turn the horse into the pas-ture, and then I'll come in and see about it," ture, and then I'll come in and see about it,"
said the deacon.

A loud groan from Polly drew Mrs Gray hastily into the house. The deacon led his horse a quarter of a mile to the pasture; let down the bars and turned him in; put all the bars carefully up; hunted round and found a stick to drive in as a wedge to fasten the top bar; went round the barn to see that the doors were all closed; got an armful of dry straw and threw it into the pig-pen; called the deg from his kennel, patted him on his head, and went into the house,

"I'm afraid she's dying," said Mrs. Gray,
as the deacon entered.

as the deacon entered.

"You are always scared half out of your wits," said the deacon, "if there's anything the matter. I'll come in as soon as I've took off my coat and boots and put on some dry ones."

off my coat and boots and put on some dry ones."

Mrs. Gray ran back to attend upon Polly; but before the deacon had got ready to enter the room, Mrs. Gray screamed again with the whole of her lungs.

"Mr. Gray, Mr. Gray, do make haste, she's in a fit."

This was the first sound that had given the deacon any uneasiness about the matter. He had been accustomed for years to hear his wife worry about Polly, and had heard her predict her death so often from very slight illness, that he had come to regard such scenes and such predictions with as little attention as he did the rain that pattered against the window. But the word fit was something he had never heard applied in these cases before, and the sound of it gave him a strange feeling of apprehension. He had just thrown off his boots and put his feet into dry shoes, and held a dry coat in his hand, when this last appeal came to his ear and caused him actually to hasten into the room.

"Polly, what's the matter now!" said the and repeated the question more earnestly and in a tender tone.

"You may as well speak to the dead," said Mrs. Gray, "she's past hearing or speaking." The deaton's eyes looked wild, and his face grew very long.

"Why didn't you tell me how sick she was when I first got home!" said the deacon with a look of rebuke.

"I did tell you when you first come," said Mrs. Gray, sharply, "and you didn't take no notice on it."

"You didn't tell me anything about how sick she was," said the deacon; "you only spoke jest as you used to, when she wasn't hardly sick at all."

The subject seemed to subside by mutual consent, and both stood with their eyes fixed upon Polly, who was apparently struggling in the fierce agonies, of death. In a few minutes, however, she came out of the spasm, breathed comparatively easy, and lay perfectly quiet. The deacon spoke to her again. She looked up with a wild delirious look, but made no answer.

"I'll go for the doctor," said the deacon, "I'll go for the doctor," said the deacon the said the deacon the said the said the said the deacon the said the sa inside, and she's been growing worse all day."

"And what have you given her?" said the doctor.

"Nothing, but arb-drink," said Mrs. Gray;
"whenever she felt worse, I made her take a good deal of arb-drink, because that, you know, is always good, doctor. And besides, when it can't do no good, it would do no hurt."

"But what sort of drinks have you given her?" said the doctor.

"Well, I give her most all sorts, for we had a plenty of 'om in the house," said Mrs. Gray." I give her sage, and pepperquint, and spare-mint, and cammermile, and pennyryal, and motherwort, and balm; you know, balm is very coolin', doctor, and sometimes she'd be very hot, and then I'd make her drink a good does of balm."

"Give me a candle," said the doctor.

The deacon brought a candle and held it over the patient's head. The doctor opened her mouth and examined it carefully for the space of a minnte. He felt her pulse another minute, and looked again into her mouth.

"Low pulse, but heavy and labored respiration," said the doctor.

"What do you think ails her?" said Mrs. Gray.

The doctor shook his bead.

"What do you think ails her?" said Mrs. Gray.

The doctor shook his bead.

"Do you think you can give her anything to help her?" said the deacon, anxiously.

The doctor looked very grave, and fixed his eyes thoughtfully on the patient for a minute, but made no reply to the deacon's question.

"Why didn't you send for me sooner?" at last said the doctor, turning to Mrs. Gray.

"Because I thought my arb-drink would help her, and so I kept trying it all day till it got to be dark, and then she got to be so bad, I didn't dare to leave her till Mr. Gray got home."

"It's a great pity," said the doctor, turning from the bed to the table and opening his saddle-bags.

"It's a great pity," said the dootor, turning from the bed to the table and opening his saddle-bags.
"Thousands and thousands of lives are lost only by delaying to send for medical advice till it is too late; thousands that might have been saved as well as not, if only taken in season."
"But dector, you don's think it's too late for Polly, do you!" said Mrs. Gray.
"I think her case, to say the least, is extremely doubtful," said the doctor. "Her appearance is very remarkable. Whatever her disease is, it has made such progress, and life is so nearly extinct, that it is impossible to tell what were the original symptoms, and consequently what applications are best to be made."
"Well, now, doctor," said Mrs. Livermore, excuse me for speakin'; but I'm a good deal older than you are, and have seen a great deal of sickness in my day, and I've been in here with Pelly a number of times to-day, and sometimes this evening, and I'm satisfied, doctor, there's something the matter of her insides."
"Undoubtedly," said the doctor, looking very grave.
This new hint from Mrs. Livermore seemed times this evening, and I'm satisfied, doctor, there's something the matter of her insides."

"Undoubtedly," said the doctor, looking very grave.

This new hint from Mrs. Livermore seemed to give Mrs. Gray new hope, and she appealed again to the doctor.

"Well, now, dector," said she, "don't you think Mrs. Livermore has the right of it?"

"Most unquestionably," said the doctor.

"Well, then, doctor, if you should give her something that's pretty powerful to operate inwardly, don't you think it might help her?"

"It might, and it might not," said the doctor: "the powers of life are so nearly exhausted, I must tell you frankly, I have very little hope of being able to rally them. There is not life enough left to indicate the disease or show the remedies that are wanted. Applications now must be made entirely in the dark, and leave the effect to chance."

At this, Mrs. Livermore took the candle and was proceeding to remove it from the room, when the doctor, perceiving her mistake, called her back. He did not mean to administer the medicine literally in a dark room, but simply in a state of darkness and ignorance as to the nature of the disease. It was a very strange case; it was certain life could hold out but a short time longer; he felt bound to do something, and therefore proceeded to prepare such applications and remedies as his best judgment dictated. These were administered without confidence, and their effect awaited with painful solicitude. They either produced no perceptible effect at all, or very different from the ordinary results of such applications.

"I should like," said Doctor Longley to the deacon, "to have you call in Doctor Stubbs; this is a very extraordinary case, and I should prefer that some other medical practitioner might be present."

The deacon accordingly hastened to call Doctor Stubbs, a young man who had come into the place a short time before, with a high reputation, but not a favorite with the deacon and his family, on account of his being rather fresh from college, and full of mode

"The Lord's will be done," said the deacon, as he stood by the bed and saw her chest heave for the last time.

Mrs. Gray sat in the corner of the room with her apron to her face weeping aloud, Old Mrs. Livermore and two other females, who had been called in during the night, were already busily employed in preparing for laying out the corpse.

It was about daybreak when the two doctors left the house and started for home.

"Very singular case," said Doctor Stubbs, who spoke with more case and freedom, now that they were out of hearing of the afflicted family. "We ought not to give it up so, Doctor: we ought to follow this case up, till we ascertain what was the cause of her death. What say to a post-mortem examination!"

"I always dislike them," said Doctor Longley: "they are ugly uncomfortable jobs; and besides, I doubt whether the deacon's folks would consent to it."

"It is important for us, as well as for the cause of the science," said Doctor Stubbs, "that something should be done about it. We are both young, and it may have an injurious bearing upon our reputation, if we are not able to give any explanation of the case. I consider my reputation at stake as well as yours, as I was called in for consultation. There will doubtless be an hundred rumours affoat, and the older physicians, who look upon us, you know, with rather an evil eye, will be pretty sugs to lay hold of the matter and turn it greatly to our disadvantage, if we cannot show facts for our vindication. The deacon's folks must consent, and you had better go down after breakfast and have a talk with the deacon about it."

Doctor Longley felt the force of the reasoning, and consented to go. Accordingly, after breakfast, he returned to Deacon Gray's and kindly offered his services, if there was any assistance the could render in making preparations for the funeral. The deacon felt much obliged to him, but didn't know, as there was anything for which they particularly needed his assistance. The doctor the benefit of the science and so valuable for

Doctor Stubbs, "I'll not only ascertain the cause of her death, but I want a subject for dissection, and she, having died so suddenly, will make an excellent one."

Doctor Longley shaddered a little at the bold project of Doctor Stubbs. "You know, Doctor, there is a law against it," said he, "and besides, the burying-ground is in such a lonely place and surrounded by woods, I don't believe you can find anybody with nerve enough to go there and take up a newly buried corpse in the night."

"Let me alone for that," said Doctor Stubbs. "I know a chap that would do it every night in the week if I wanted to; a friend of mine down there in the college, in the senior class. He has nerve enough to go anywhere, and is up to a job of this kind at any time. The business all arranged, Doctor, and I shall go through with it. Joe Palmer is the man for it, and Rufus Barnes will go with him. I'd go myself, but it would be more prudent for me to be able to prove where I was. Rufus must go to the funcal and see whereabouts the corpse is buried, so he can find the place in a dark night, and I shall have to go down to the college the first of the evening after Joe myself, and get him started, and then come right home, and stay at home, so that I can prove an alibi in case of any questions. Don't I understand it. Doctor!"

"Yes, full well enough," said Doctor Longley, but I had rather you would be in the scrape than I should."

THE CHEST.

SIR ASTLEY COOPER, BART., M. D., the eminent Medical Practitioner, has left a valuable legacy to the world, in his GREAT PREVENTIVE OF CONSUMPTION, and unfailing cure for Pulmonary Discases, without the use of Medicine. Sir A. C. Bart., invented and advised the use of the MEDICATED FUR CHEST PROTECTOR to all persons of all ages and conditions, as a certain and safe shield against those fearful discases, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Colds, and other affections of the Lungs, which arise from the exposed state of the chest, according to fashion, and the continual changes of our climate.

"The Protector" is simply a chemically-propared for, lined with silk and padded, which, suspended from the neck, covers the chest in so agreeable a manner, that, once worn, it becomes a necessity and a comfort.

"The Protector," although but recently introduced into America, is making rapid progrees through the United States, the Canadas, South America, and the West Indies. It has for a long time been a staple article in England, and on the Continent of Europe, while it has grown in many countries to the position of an article of dress.

To demonstrate these facts, enquire of any English resident in your vicinity of his knowledge of the beneficial effects of wearing the Protector, without them. The hospitals in this country are not alone recommending them, but rapidly introducing them. Harcourt, Bradley & Co., of London, and Manchester, England, were originally entrusted with the manufacture of the Protectors, by the lamented Dr. Cooper, and confide to mafacture according to his original instructions, and therefore recommend those who would wear "The Protector," to see to their being genuine.

An Aristocrat in quest of a say Potatoes.—"Since I have been here I think I have been patronized by all the British aristocracy in the Crimea, and some of the French. Colonel the Hon.——L.——, who came here with us, came on board to beg a few things for himself and Lord Raglan; he loaded himself with as much as he could carry in his haversack, and a ham over his shoulder, with as much as he could carry in his haversack, and a ham over his shoulder, as he was leaving he asked if I could spare him a few potatoes. All I had was dozen cold cooked ones, which I showed him, and he accepted most thankfully and begged me to put them in his beautiful dress coat which he had on; and away he went with a greasy ham over his shoulder and his cold potatoes in his pocket. Every one is obliged to be his own porter here. The next day I met the Colonel on shore with Lord Raglan and the Duke of Cambridge, and all of them thanked me for the potatoes—they said they had tasted for three weeks.

Turkish Seamen.—Dickens, in his Household Words, states, that at the close of the Greek insurrection in 1829, the Turks turned every Greek out of their naval service. Henceforth they were determined to fight, work, and navigate their ships themselves.—The first they could do indifferently well, the second not at all. The seamen draughted on board ship by the marine conscription did not know the use or even the name of one single spar, block, or rope; and the officers were utterly ignorant of the terms of the nautical vocabulary, whereby to convey their orders to the men. Moreover the men could be have understood them, if they had been as learned in nautical slang as an English boatswain or a Dutch skipper. In this dilemma, the Turkish naval instructors bit upon an ingenious plan. They symbolized and named the various parts of the vessel by anything that came nearest to hand. They tied a pear, for instance, to the mainmast, a pomegranate to the mizonmust, a bunch of grapes to the foremast. The poop was distinguished by a strag of onions, the forecastle by a basket of figs, the various sails by pipe-sticks, making the ropes by vine-leaves the various sails by pipe-sticks, matter bones, rice-bags, or any other conven-odds and ends. Here was a new na dictionary invented at once: "Haul down the pipe-stick!" "Take two reefs in the ne pape-stor.
rice-bags!" "Stand by the grape-mast!"
"Go forward to the onion-castle!" were as good words of command when anderstood them (which they soon is to do) as the correct ones; and men who, on their arrival on shipboard, scarcely knew a clew-line from a kedge-anchor, or stem from stern, speedily acquired a competent knewledge of the different parts of the ship.

THE GREAT DEBATE NUISANCE.—We confess we did not like the aspect of the Times on the morning after the assembling of Parliament. CAPT. DANIEL ABBOTT, Brooklyn, Maine, July 16, 1843, says: "I was taken sick one year ago, lest April, upon my passage from Havanna to Charleston, S. C. At the latter place I took medicine and procured a physician, but for ten days could obtain so relief, no sicep or appetite. At last taking up a newspaper laving your advertisement of 'Hoofland's German Bitters' in it, I sent for some immediately, of this was about 10 o'clock, at II o'clock I took the first dose, and another at 6 o'clock. The effect was so rapid on me, that I had a geodappetite for supper, and rested well that night, and the next day found me a well man. I have not been without your medicine since, having been sailing between Baltimore, Charleston and the West India Islands ever since. I have now given up going to sea, and reside in this place, where you should have an agency, as you could sell large quantities of it."

SURPRISING CURE OF A CONFIRMED ASTH-MA, AFTER FIVE YEARS' SUFFERING. The following testimonial has been sent to Professo

The following testimonial has been sent to Professor Hollogicay, by a gealteman named Middleton, of Scotland Road, Literpool.

Sir,—Your Pills have been the means, under Providence, of restoring me to gound health, after five years of severe affliction. During the whole of that period, I have suffered the most dreadful attacks of Asthma, frequently of several weeks' duration, attended with a violent cough, and continual spitting of phlegus intermixed with blood. This so shook my constitution that I was unfitted for any of the active dates of life. I was attended by some of the most eminent medical men of this town, but they failed to give me the slightest relief. As a last remedy, I tried your Pills, and in about three months they effected a perfect cure of the disease, totally eradicated the cough, and restored tone and vigor to the chest and digestive organs.

OF MANY YEARS DURATION.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Gamis Chemist, Yeo-vil, to Professor Holloway.

Dear Sir,—In this district your Pills command a more extensive sale than any other proprietary medicine before the public. As a proof of their efficacy in Livre and Bilious complaints, I may mention the following case: A lady of this town, with whom I am personally acquainted for years, was a severe sufferer from disease of the Liver and digestive organs; her medical attendant assured her that he could do nothing to relieve her sufferings, and it was not likely she could survive many months. This announcement naturally caused great alarm among her friends and relations, and they induced her to make a trial of your Pills, which so improved her general health that she was induced to continue them until she received a parfect cure. This is twelve months ago, and she has not experienced any symptoms of relapse, and often declares that your Pills have been the means of saving her life.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF DROPSY AFTER SUPPERING, FOR EIGHTERN MONTHS.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemis Goole, dated February 15th, 1853.

To Professor Holloway,
Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of Dropsy, recently effected by yor valuable medicines. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with Dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swellen, and water oczed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of app and became necessary; notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of no avail, autih the commenced using your Pills, by which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it. To Professor HOLLOWAY,

These celebrated Pills are wonderfully efficacious
