PEAK'S No. 3 WHARF, CHARLOTTETOWN.

It Is The Correct Thing

To discharge one's social obligations faithfully.

To pay special deference to elderly people wherever met.

To seek the society of those only who are congenial, since one has a right to choose one's friends.

To be pleasant to every one whom one accidentally meets.

For those in society to observe social usages.

To make a point of saying a few pleasant words to those who seem to be neglected at a large reception.

For kind-hearted Catholic matrons to chaperon motherless girls to places of amusement.

To remember that people of the highest rank are generally the least haughty.

For every well-born, well-bred American to act as if she felt herself the equal of every other well bred, well-born American, regardless of fortune.

To remember that snobs would not receive St. Peter himself unless he came with the proper credentials.

To get rid of undesirable acquaintances in some other manner besides the "cut direct."

To have many acquaintances, but few friends.

To consider a friend's roof as sufficient introduction at any time.

To assist cheerfully in affairs gotten up for charity through motives of charity, and not merely because it is fashionable to do so.

For ladies in society to use their position to further charitable aims.

For the rich to remember that money from them would be more acceptable than encouraging words.

For the poor to be generous with their sympathy and praise.

To refuse to know people who have forfeited their right in respectable society, whatever may be their position.

To think twice twenty times before uttering a word that would tarnish a girl's reputation.

To remember that legacy hunters are sometimes disappointed.

To have, as a rule, an average amount of sense, and are generally good readers of character.

To have a convenient memory at times.

To remember that money given in charity is on interest in heaven.

To entertain in accordance with one's means.

For a matron to refuse to present a man whom she would not care to have meet her own daughters, to the daughters of other people.

To remember that love, gauze, and tulle are unfailing friends to both the stout woman and to the thin one: to the first on the score of modesty, to the second on that of beauty.

To refuse to dance with a man whose reputation is not above reproach, no matter under whose roof he happens to be.

—The Correct Thing for Catholics.

Items of Interest.

A recent issue of the "Civita Cattolica" confirms the news that the Holy Father intends to publish an elementary catechism for use throughout the universal Church.

According to recent news, Mgr. Agius, the Apostolic Delegate in the Philippines, has recovered from the attack of native fever from which he recently suffered, and which, it was said, would probably result in his recall. The Roman authorities, it appears, had never considered the question of his withdrawal.

By resolution of the Australian hierarchy, a Plenary Council of all the Bishops is held every ten years. The first Plenary Synod was held in Sydney in the year 1885, and the second in 1895. This being the decennial year, the prelates, representatives of the diocesan and regular clergy and the Bishops' theologians will meet in Sydney in September, commencing business on the third of that month.

The late English Admiral J. L. Hammet, who died at Florence in February, on his way home to England, had for some time desired to enter the Catholic Church, and was looking forward to being received on his arrival in England. He was received by the Rev. Father Golding Bird, of the Oratorio di S. Giuseppe, Florence, and on the same day the last sacraments were administered by Father John Foresi, O. F. M., of the parish Church of Ognisanti.

The "Vera Roma," one of the three Catholic daily papers in Rome, is about to suspend publication. Recently it was announced that the Holy Father intends to publish official news of the Vatican in a special bulletin. It is stated that the "Osservatore Romano," which is published daily, will give place in September to that publication, which will appear periodically. The "Giornale di Roma," a new Catholic daily issued in Rome, is also said to be threatened with extinction.

The tide of conversion flows pretty steadily in the English-speaking colony at Rome, and at every season of the year converts from the most varied ranks of society are received. Of the most recent are Lady Batt and Margaret Batt, the latter of whom is now Princess Margherita Ruspoli, wife of Don Fabrizio Ruspoli, a son of the house at the head of which is the Master of the Sacred Hospice. Lady Batt is an American by birth, an English woman by marriage (being the widow of a very well-known judge) and a Roman by long residence, during which her name has been the principal one in the circle of theosophists dwelling in the Eternal City.

The Catholic nuns expelled from Catholic France are welcomed in Protestant Norway. Such a condition of things appears strange and anomalous, but the fact is vouched for by Bishop Fallize, of Norway. He says: "I have another cause for rejoicing. The congregation of nuns, persecuted in many Catholic countries, are so very welcome in Protestant Norway that those already established here are unable to answer all the requests made for their services. So I found myself under the necessity of founding a congregation of native Sisters under the name of Sisters of St. Francis Xavier. It was established last winter at Bergen, and the novitiate is full."

One of these little tales, satisfyingly authentic, which bring the Pope so near to all his people, enabling them to conceive of him as he is, comes out about the general of the Jesuits, writes the Rome correspondent of the London "Catholic Times." After granting the permission for the father to say Mass though deprived of an arm, the Pope kept awake by night wondering how it could be done. Soon the news was to reach him that it had been done without difficulty. Father Martin especially says the host, for breaking, with a paten before Mass. The assistant can touch the sacred species. He touches the chalice when two hands are necessary by prescription. For the rest, the venerable general is, to all seeming, well in health.

The French Chamber has been discussing the separation bill ever since the re-opening after the Easter holidays, and remarkably little progress has been made with it. The battle is chiefly raging round articles 4 and 6, which deal with the devolution of Church property and the guarantees necessary to ensure that that property shall not fall into the hands of unauthorized parties. The Socialists are making a stiff fight to leave such loopholes as may permit of the Church being tricked out of her property, but it is hardly likely that they will succeed to the extent they desire. Meanwhile Catholics are not the only ones who dread and oppose the Government measure. The General Secretary of the Lutheran Church of the Confession of Augsburg in France, at their annual congress last week, passed a strongly worded resolution expressing dissatisfaction at the Government bill, and praying for the continuance of the status quo, which, on the whole, has been found to work well and to offer serious guarantees of security and liberty.

"In the United States we hear much about immigration and very little about emigration," says the Leader. "It is, of course, generally known that a multitude of farmers from our Northwest have gone into the Canadian Northwest so that the latter territory promises to become American by population, if not by annexation. Another sort of emigration, and a most lamentable one, is threatened for next year. If this occurs, it will be an exodus of simon-pure Americans whom the country can not, historically or economically, afford to lose. We refer to the red men of Indian Territory. The lands of five tribes are to be opened to the white invader by the Government in 1906. Already the Cherokees have a representative in Mexico negotiating with that Government for lands in Othubaha. Many Indians from this country have settled in northern Mexico, and have been very successful. It should be remembered that these tribes are civilized and make excellent farmers. In fact, it was from them that the white men, who despoil them, learned the methods and the utility of irrigation. It will be no credit to our Government if the pale-faced land thieves are allowed to drive these men from the territory watered, cultivated, and enriched by their labors."

Right Rev. Mgr. Nugent arrived in Liverpool at noon on Wednesday, May 17. In his appearance there are traces of the rheumatic attack from which he suffered in the United States, but it is confidently hoped that he will soon recover his good health and wonted energy.

Commenting on the attempt made on the life of the young King of Spain the other day in Paris, the Catholic Advance says: "There does not seem to be any motive aside from the anarchists' declared hatred of all kings and governments. The monarch himself, scarcely more than a boy, has shown a lively interest in the welfare of his people, he has been carefully trained, and his knowledge of Statecraft is said to be far beyond his years. His reign promises to be a happy one for Spain, and his contemplated marriage to an English princess would bring his country into close relationship with the land that is held up for admiration as a model of commercial prosperity and personal liberty. But, then, anarchy does not reason."

The French Freemasons have really fallen on evil days. The scandal of delation in the army began to shatter their influence, and they cannot recover from the shock which the Ninth Court of the Paris Correctional Tribunal gave them by giving a verdict with damages in an action for libel brought against their periodical, the "Bulletin de la Franc-Maçonnerie." They had succeeded in establishing a kind of jurisprudence to the effect that as the paper in question was only circulated among Freemasons, the contents were not "published" in the legal sense of the word, and were privileged. Under this usurped cloak of privilege they slandered and libeled right and left. The Ninth Court has now decided that the "Bulletin" should be considered as a newspaper in the ordinary sense, and should be held liable for libel. Incidentally, they have also been called upon to make with the Inland Revenue authorities the legal deposit required of newspapers, and which they had, up to the present, managed to escape.

"Rome has seldom witnessed such an outpouring of devotion as attended the opening of the Eucharistic Congress," says the Catholic Transcript. "Friday, June 2, six thousand delegates were in attendance when Cardinal Respighi declared the Congress formally opened. The grand old basilica of St. John Lateran was worthy of the gathering, holding as it does the table which was used at the institution of the Blessed Eucharist. All the Cardinals of the Curia, and over three hundred prelates, including patriarchs, archbishops, bishops, and heads of religious orders, attended the closing exercises, Pius X. imparting his blessing to twenty thousand persons. The Congress has demonstrated to the world that in the very centre of Christendom the great standard devotion of the Church is in full flower. Nothing fits in more harmoniously with the only declared policy of the present Pontiff of restoring all things in Christ. The Eucharist is the source whence all blessings emanate. Pledged to propagate devotion to the Blessed Sacrament, the Eucharistic Congress is deserving of heaven's choicest benedictions."

MISCELLANEOUS.

A firm in Aberdeen recently engaged a raw country youth as office-boy. In the discharge of one of his duties—that of attending to the telephone—he was anything but a success. In reply to the usual query, "Are you there?" he nodded assent. Again the question came, and still again, and each time the boy gave an answering nod. At the fourth time the boy lost his temper and roared through the telephone: "Man, are you bin? I've been noddin me heid aff for 't' last ten minutes."

SUBSCRIPTION—$1.00 A YEAR, PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY JAMES MCISAAC Editor & Proprietor.

As our readers are aware, payment in advance for subscriptions is the rule, agreed upon by all the Charlottetown papers a few years ago. This has not always been observed, and we have not of late, very often reminded our friends of any delinquency in this respect. But now, half the current year having already passed, it seems opportune to call attention to this fact. It is our desire, therefore, that such of our friends as have not remitted for the present year will be so kind as to avail themselves of the earliest opportunity of so doing. Such action on their part we shall esteem as a great favor. All will understand, of course, that the rule applies not only to subscriptions for 1905; but as well to any arrears that may remain from years previous to the present year. Subscriptions up to and including 1905 come within the scope of this reference. We sincerely trust our friends will give this matter as early and as earnest attention as their convenience will permit.

Very Rev. Mgr. McDonald.

Very Rev. Monsignor, James McDonald, Vicar General of the Diocese of Charlottetown died at his residence in this city on Monday evening at the advanced age of 86 years, after 63 years in the holy priesthood. It is quite probable that at the time of his death, he was the oldest priest in Canada. He was a native of St. Andrew's parish and was ordained to the priesthood in 1842. Shortly after his ordination he was appointed pastor of St. Mary's, Indian River and adjoining missions. Priests were few then and the territory confided to the pastoral charge of young Father James, probably about half of Prince County, is now divided into a number of large parishes. He remained in pastoral charge of Indian River, ministering to the spiritual wants of this extensive territory for twenty-seven years. These were years of strenuous missionary labors; but a splendid constitution and a regular and abstemious life enabled him to come through in good health. Although not very robust he was scarcely ever known to be sick, until the very last years of his life when the infirmities of age and his long and arduous priestly labors told upon him and incapacitated him for active duty. In 1869 he was transferred from Indian River and appointed Rector of St. Dunstan's College. He remained at the College for eleven years and in 1880 he was appointed pastor of his native parish of St. Andrew's and of St. Joseph's, Morell. He resided at St. Andrew's, where he built a new presbytery. He also built a parochial residence at Morell and made numerous improvements to the Church at St. Andrew's, as well as at Morell. In recognition of his long and exemplary sacerdotal labors, he was in 1881 created a Domestic Prelate by his late Holiness, Pope Leo XIII, with the title of Monsignor.

In 1900 he began to feel the strain of his long years of missionary labor, against which even his excellent constitution was not proof. He consequently retired from his pastorate and took up his residence in Charlottetown where he quietly spent the evening of his life patiently waiting the end. For the last couple of years he was confined to his house, and his physical strength gradually gave way until the end came as above stated.

The casket containing his mortal remains was borne to the Cathedral Tuesday evening and placed in the Sanctuary. The Office of the Dead was then chanted by the priests. The body lay in the Church all night and this morning after low Mass the casket was borne to the hearse. The funeral procession then proceeded to the railway station where a special train was in waiting. The train conveying the body, and a large number of priests and others started for St. Andrew's, at 8.15, where the funeral obsequies and interment took place to-day.

At St. Andrew's, Solemn Pontifical

Requiem Mass was celebrated by his Lordship, Bishop McDonald. The funeral oration was preached by Rev. Dr. Morrison from the text: "Now dost thou dismiss thy servant O Lord according to thy word in peace." The Libera was sung after Mass and the absolution was given by his Lordship, Bishop Cameron of Antigonish a particular friend of the deceased. Requiescat in pace.

At the banquet in the Ironmonger's Hall in London last Thursday evening Lord Dundonald replying to the toast to the Military Forces stated that after his arrival in Canada in answer to pressing inquiries, his adjutant, one of the permanent officers of the Canadian Service, told him that effective means were taken to overlook the claims of officers to promotion who were not PERSONAE GRATAE with the political head of the department. Dundonald added that he had not been long in Canada before he entirely lost confidence in Sir Frederick Borden, who was charged with the responsibility of administering affairs. Continuing he said that while Canadian affairs presumably were administered by a Council of Officers with the Minister of Militia as chairman of the Council, in point of fact the Minister controls the action of the Council and his experience with Sir Frederick Borden as Minister of Militia was not such as to lead to the conclusion that efficiency would be the reason for promotion in the Canadian Militia. He instanced as evidence of the alleged disrepute in which he said the Canadian Militia stood in the estimation of Canada, the fact that thirty graduates are annually turned out of the Canada Military College, not one of whom would accept a position in the Dominion Militia service.

Dominion Parliament.

(Correspondence St. John San.)

Ottawa, June 23—The house is once more struggling with the Alberta autonomy bill, this time over the boundaries of ridings as cut out for political advantage by Sir Wilfrid's western adviser. It may not be courteous, it is certainly not within the four corners of parliamentary practice, to speak good or evil of departed politicians, but in justice to Hon. Frank Oliver, with all his wild west hide thickness, it may be remarked that he is carrying on his shoulders a load of Hon. Mr. Sifton's making that would submerge a lesser man. Oliver may be able to justify most of Sifton's burdens, but it strikes many people that he will substitute an equally obnoxious pack load. A creature of circumstance, he is as clay in Potter Laurier's hands. Sir Wilfrid has no use for ministers with settled convictions. He has learned how to run the show without them, save only from the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Monk, Conservative of Montreal, obtained yesterday from Mr. Oliver the information that a bonus is paid to government agents on every immigrant they bring into Canada. In the United States the department of the interior has 76 agents who are paid the following rates: $3 for each man, $2 for each woman, and $1 for each child. In Great Britain the bonus is $1.75 for each adult of the agricultural or domestic servant class, and half this amount for children of 12 years or under. This bonus is paid to the booking agents of the several steamship lines. A commission of $2 is paid for every child sent to Canada by charitable societies and a commission of one pound is paid to the North Atlantic Trading Co. of Amsterdam on all immigrants of the agricultural class. The amounts paid last year for bonuses on immigrants to Canada were:

Table with 2 columns: Category and Amount. Includes: On immigration from the United States $14,428.25; To Steamship agents and sub-agents and immigration societies on British immigrants 43,220.63; On Icelanders 2,104.81; On domestic servants 1,088.00; On immigrants from Great Britain at $2 each 246.00; To philanthropic societies on children from Great Britain 2,608.01; On immigrants from continent of Europe 35,316.66; Total $99,012.35

Mr. Foster, yesterday, directed the attention of the government to its failure to bring down the copy of the trade treaty with Japan. I noticed, said Mr. Foster, that in a late communication from Canada's agent, he cites special instances of where products from Canada are charged two and three times as much duty and sometimes more than those from other countries, thus making it absolutely impossible, it would seem, to carry on trade in these products with Japan. He points out very strongly how detrimental it is to Canadian trade, I spoke of the difficulty about three weeks ago and the hon. minister said that he would bring down the treaty or make a statement as to the way and in what particulars it was considered that the adoption or adherence to the treaty by Canada would be prejudicial. Here are actual prejudicial effects in commerce. What are the supposed difficulties or prospective troubles we may anticipate providing we do adhere to the treaty?

Mr. Fielding—My hon. friend the minister of agriculture (Mr. Fisher), who has a more intimate personal acquaintance with that question, and will be able to make a statement on the subject, or he will bring down the papers at an early day.

The debate on the gerrymandering of Alberta put Mr. Oliver in a bad light. Hon. Mr. Foster wanted facts, not partisan harangues, and finally Sir Wilfrid had to come to the rescue of the minister of the interior. The most impressive speech during the entire debate was that of L. G. McCarthy, the Conservative representative for Calgary, who had given patient and careful attention to the redistribution question. He pointed out that every one of the constituencies which had been left unaltered was in the southern part of the province, and left unaltered for political reasons. As the development of the provinces had been greater in the south than in the north, the people of southern and central Alberta were quite naturally complaining against this treatment. Taking up the question of the recent increase in population, Mr. McCarthy said the homestead returns showed that in the last three years there have been 9,941 such entries north of the dividing line, and 13,028 south. The proportions are 43 and 57 per cent. respectively. Moreover, many homestead entries in the north are speculative. Further, the heavy sales of lands in connection with the two great irrigation schemes in the south must be considered as an additional indication of heavy settlement in the south. Again, the returns of the government sales of lands showed that 54 per cent. of these had taken place in the south, 46 per cent. in the north. The cash receipts from the land sales in recent years had been 34 per cent. in the north, 66 per cent. in the south. By this computation the urban population would be 63,750, of which 42,450 was to the south and 21,300 to the north. Next he made an estimate of the proportions of the rural population. South of the dividing line he calculated there were 247 thickly settled and 189 sparsely settled townships. His final calculation was: Population of the south, 102,834; population in the north, 69,021. To be fair, the distribution should be 15 seats in the south and ten in the north.

Of course the bill will go through, as Oliver and Walter Scott have arranged the electoral boundaries, but once the Province is constituted it can deal with its own constituencies as it pleases.

Temagami.

Nimrod was a mighty hunter, but had he hunted in the Temagami region he would have been a mightier one. Nimrod hunted for glory, but Temagamians hunt for game. Those Indians who made the first canoe of birch bark long ago, were our greatest benefactors. The children of these Indians know the canoe, and they know how to use it, and if you go to Temagami this summer they will paddle your canoe in their own superb way. They will be the best guides you ever had, and they will take you through the rivers, lakes, forests and hunting grounds that forest-fathers once called home, they will tell you of the tricks and habits of the bears, beavers, moose, caribou and deer. Ah! the Indians know, for once they were mightier hunters than ancient Nimrod. Students who camp in summer along the Temagami lakes are able to do two years' work in one. The Jubilee celebration of St. Dunstan's College, which will be celebrated at the College on Tuesday July 25th, will be an event of unusual interest and importance in the ecclesiastical and educational history of our Province. The advertisement of the programme of the celebration will be found in the HERALD today. A very large gathering of alumnus of the College and others from all parts of the Province, as well as from other parts of the Dominion and the United States, is anticipated. It will be a day of reunion, of renewing old friendships and forming new ones. All are cordially invited to participate in the jubilee celebration.

One of the most appalling railroad accidents happened to the Twentieth Century Limited Train on the Lake Shore road at Mentor, Ohio, on Wednesday evening last. The time of this train between New York and Chicago had a few days previously been reduced from twenty to eighteen hours, necessitating a speed of seventy miles an hour over portions of the road. This is the speed at which the train was travelling when the accident happened. Mentor, where the accident occurred, is about twenty-five miles east of Cleveland, Ohio, and the time of the disaster was about 9.20 p. m. The locomotive was caused by an open switch, and worst of all the switch is supposed to have been deliberately opened and locked in that position by some person through malice or jealousy. A train had passed over a short time before and everything was all right; but when the limited flyer dashed along the switch was found to be open, and the driver was deceived by the position of the lights, which also appear to have been tampered with. The engine ran on to the switch and soon was hurled into the ditch and part of the train piled on top of it. Other cars of the train ran into the depot and demolished the building. To add to the horror the boiler burst and the wreck was soon in flames. Twenty-five persons are known to have been killed at once, and a large number were fatally injured. The authorities of the road have offered a reward of $2,000 for the arrest or information leading to the arrest of the person responsible for the wreck.

The German steamer Prinz Sigismund reports that when north of the Island of Luzon, Philippine Islands, on June 10th, she was stopped by the Russian auxiliary Cruiser Dargy, which fired a blank shot. She was overhauled by the Cruiser which after examining her papers allowed her to depart.

The tea party at Fort Augustus on Dominion Day, Saturday next will afford an excellent opportunity to all desirous of enjoying a pleasant outing in a most beautiful part of the country. A beautiful drive, a pleasant reunion in abundance of the best of edibles and amusements galore are in store for you at Fort Augustus on Dominion Day.

The advertisement of the Tea Party to be held at Souris on Wednesday July 19th, will be seen in this day issue of the HERALD. Needless to say that an immense gathering and a most agreeable outing are anticipated. The Souris tea have always attracted great numbers of visitors and have been successful in every respect; but those in charge of this year's tea have determined to make it surpass all previous gatherings of the kind. Be sure to attend.

On Saturday morning last, Rev. John B. McIntyre was elevated to the priesthood in St. Patrick's Church, Grand River, Lot 14, by his Lordship Bishop McDonald. His Lordship was assisted by Rev. Dr. Curran, as high priest, and Rev. A. J. McDougall and J. C. McKinnon, and sub-deacon Rev. A. P. McLennan assisted the officiating. Rev. N. V. McKinnon, S. J., of New York, a native of the parish, was present in the sanctuary. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion. On Sunday Father McIntyre celebrated his first Mass in St. Patrick's, his native parish church, when a sermon, eloquent and appropriate on the "Dignity of the Priesthood" was preached by Rev. A. P. McLennan. After Mass Father McIntyre was presented with an address and a purse of $225. At vesper Rev. Father McKinnon, S. J., preached an able sermon on the Gospel of the day. Ad multos annos.

As will be seen in our obituary column today, an old land mark has passed away in the person of William Welsh, of Keppoch. Captain Welsh, popularly known in Ottawa as the "Commodore," was nearly 83 years of age at the time of his death. He was a jolly, big hearted man, and had many friends. He was a member of the House of Assembly from 1873 to 1878, and a member of the House of Commons from 1887 to 1896. He was married in 1864 to Miss Pethick. His wife predeceased him by several years, and they had no children. His funeral on Sunday was largely attended.

Life Is Too Short.

Life is too short for vain regretting. Let dead delight bury its dead. I say, And let us go upon our way forgetting. The joys and sorrows of each yesterday. Between the swift sun's rising and its setting. We have no time for useless tears or fretting; Life is too short. Life is too short for any bitter feeling; Time is the best avenger if we wait. The years speed by, and on their wings bear healing; We have no room for anything like hate. This solemn truth the low mounds seem revealing. That thick and fast about our feet are stealing. Life is too short. Life is too short for aught but high endeavor— Too short for spite, but long enough for love. And love lives on forever and forever. It links the worlds that circle on above; 'Tis God's first law the universe's lever; In His vast realm the radiant souls sigh never: "Life is too short." —Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The Ups and Downs of Marjorie.

BY MARY T. WAGGAMAN.

(From the Ave Maria.)

VIII.—SHADOWS OF EXILE.

"Not yet, answered Gresham; 'but I hope to before long. I wrote to St. Vincent's for information of this Marjorie Mayne; and was answered, very briefly, that such a child had been admitted ten years ago, but had been placed out, according to their rules, under fitting guardianship; and that, until right for further inquiry could be shown, they could tell me no more. But I learned from a small boy, who sometimes does errands for the Sisters, that on New Year's Eve a Miss Talbot, who lives somewhere in this neighborhood, took one of the little orphans from St. Vincent's, and I am up here to discover, if possible, who and where that orphan is, and whether she is called Marjorie Mayne."

"And if she is—if she is?" said Lindsay, with much excitement. "If she is, my dear fellow, the next question: Who will pay me best for all the information I have gathered so laboriously on this matter? You or your honored uncle, the little lady's grandfather?" The younger man sprang to his feet with a muttered oath. "You've got the nippers on me, Gresham, and you know it. I have played fast and loose as my uncle's heir. If he should hear of this child, it would mean ruination to me. But as yet—as yet—there is no real proof that the child is Marjorie's, even if you find her; no proof that will hold good in my uncle's eye. You know what a man he is: how he has earned his name, 'Eagle' Lindsay?" "Aye, I know—I know!" and for the first time Gresham's voice changed and the cold face seemed to darken with passion. "It was the eagle eye of his that ruined me by its searching light; and I owe him no love for it! But business is business; and I can't afford to rake up old scores, unless, as in this case, they happen to pay."

"I see," said Lindsay, shortly; "it is a matter both of spite and profit. You're one of the cold-blooded devils Gresham, and they are the worst kind. But I'm with you in this game, straight through. Now, what's your next move?"

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night— That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't.

The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this scaling, burning, itching skin disease will disappear.

rids the blood of all impurities and cures all eruptions. "To see the child," said Gresham, "to see who and what where she is. I hear there is to be some sort of a religious meeting at the Talbot's to-morrow morning, and I thought we might get in with the crowd and look around, without showing our hand. We have to play a cautious game; for the Romish Church is a powerful protector, and the child is under its watchful eyes. But I think we can venture on a visit of investigation to-morrow morning."

Mrs. Eben Tibbs and her plump, rosy-cheeked daughter started early next morning, a basket of good things such as that motherly dame knew how to provide stowed away under the seat of her spring-wagon; for, as she remarked to her slow-witted spouse: "I'm not going to have those two blessed creatures feedin' half the country and not lend a hand."

"O'm," said Polly Tibbs, as they turned into the road that led to Manor Hill, "those gentlemen that put up at our house last night are behind us! I believe they are coming, too."

"It's none of our business if they are, child," answered her mother, sharply; "though I'd like to turn them to the right about on a day like this. It's no time to be breakin' in them dear women's hearts talkin' about buyin' and sellin' their home. And I don't like those men's looks, as I told your father last night. They look to me precious like sharpers; and I mean to tell Miss Susan to keep her eyes open, if they come dealin' with her."

Though quite unconscious of Mrs. Tibbs' opinion, her late guests drove on, somewhat doubtfully, among the other vehicles turning toward Manor Hill. Far and near the summons had gone forth—for Job and Nance had had their mission as well as Marjorie—and the guests were gathering from cabin and cottage, from manor and hill. The O'roffens, Hills, Leays, Mortons, filled old family carriages that were rumbling along the road, on which were also hurrying pedestrians from the hills and the river shore.

"We won't be noticed in the crowd," said Gresham, encouragingly. "It's a sort of open-house meeting for all who wish to come, and we can slip in unobserved and have a look at the child. The orphan from St. Vincent's is there, as I learned by judicious questioning of our host last night."

"What an old fox you are, Gresham!" said Lindsay, with an uncomfortable laugh. "Fox, wolf, or bloodhound, as you please—for I am called all three—I have learned to run down my game. And I feel pretty sure we shall find the bird we are hunting safe nest here," he added, as they turned into the open gateway of Manor Hill.

"By George, it's a fine old place!" the speaker continued, as he drove slowly along under the spreading oaks that arched the wide but neglected road, his keen eye taking in the prospects of orchard and meadow and hill that surrounded the low, broad house, with its pillared portico and gabled roof. "One of those old homes that men fight and die for. Tibbs tells me the Talbots have been the first people in the county for nearly two hundred years—"

"And we are breaking in upon them like this," interrupted the younger man, nervously. "I tell you, I don't like, your ways, Gresham. People of such standing can't be fooled and meddled with. We shall get kicked out, and it will serve us right."

"Pooh-pooh! no danger," said the other, lightly. "There are no men left to do any kicking; only two women—two poor simple-minded old maids. They will think we have come to pray with the rest. Keep your mouth shut and your eyes open, and there will be nothing to fear."

And, acting on his own advice, he drew his horse up behind the big family carriage of O'roffens, flung the reins to Job's little grandson Nick who, with half a dozen of his mates, stood near, grinning; and both evil plotters sprang out at the door of Manor Hill.

There were none to notice or forbid their coming. The two gentle mistresses of the old home were already on their knees before the altar that loving hands had once more made beautiful for its Divine Guest. The old drawing-room had wakened into something of its ancient glory. The light from the broad windows fell through faded splendors of crimson damask and costly lace. The sanctuary, marked by two colonial pillars that divided the spacious room was covered by a Persian rug brought by a sailor Talbot from the Far East. Richly wrought draperies of linen and lace covered the temporary altar, above which rose the Talbot cross, a crucifix of ebony and silver brought by the first exile for the Faith across the sea. Tall silver candlesticks burned into brilliancy upheld the spotless tapers; while above and around, massed in glowing profusion, were the Hillcrest flowers, filling the room with fragrance.

A touching and holy scene it was to meet the old and evil eyes of the two strange visitors who gazed in upon its beauty today.

IX.—GATHERING CLOUDS.

As the last candle was lit on the altar, Marjorie stood back enraptured. Oh, how beautiful it was, this little home chapel, that seemed her very own; for she had planned and worked and—as a glance at the Hillcrest flowers reminded her—even suffered for it all! And now she was to sing; for Miss Martha's voice was feeble and broken. Marjorie had been trained to lead the simple hymns at St. Vincent's, and when she sang it was with the joy of bird carolling in mid-air.

She knelt at her good friend's side, feeling as if she were in some heavenly dream, as black and white, rich and poor, crowded into the room. Then Father James, in his shining silvery vestments, approached the altar, with Dick Hill and Bert looking strangely good in their acolyte's surplices; and the Mass began. The priest's deep tones and the fervent responses were for a few moments the only sounds in the solemn silence. But presently Miss Martha's trembling fingers touched the melodeon, and a fresh, clear young voice burst into melody that startled every ear.

Little Marjorie stood in the soft light of the candles at Miss Martha's side singing her orphan's hymn. The dark face of one of the strangers at the door grew ashen at the sight and sound.

"Come!" he whispered hoarsely, clutching his companion's arm—"come out of here, quick!" "Geman sick?" inquired old Job who was on duty in the hall.

"No—yes; the place is too close for him," answered Gresham, as they pushed their way through the open door into the outer air. "Brace up, man!" he continued. "You are as white as a ghost. 'What's the matter with you?'"

"The child!" gasped Lindsay, when they stood alone without the house. "Did you see—did you hear her? It is Marjorie herself—Marjorie's eyes and hair and face and voice—the Marjorie Lindsay of twenty years ago."

"It is as I thought, then. Good!" exclaimed Gresham, triumphantly. "Good!" echoed Lindsay, with a fierce oath. "Good, do you say? Do you know what this means to me, man? If my uncle should see this girl, or hear of her, I am ruined, beggared, lost. Put your devil's wits to work, Gresham. You must save me at any price."

All unconscious of the two evil spirits she had banished from the holy place, little Marjorie sang on while voices young and old took up the familiar hymn; and the Mass went on solemnly and sweetly to its close. And, though Miss Susan's brave lips were quivering, and Miss Martha's tender eyes dim with tears, and many a kindly heart around the altar was heavy with thoughts of coming change, it was, all in all, a festive morning at Manor Hill.

Then there was the breakfast—such a big, cheery, hospitable breakfast, with father James at the head of the long table, and Miss Martha pouring the coffee for all who came; and Marjorie, with her red-brown curls flying as she bustled around with cream and sugar, hot biscuits and boiled ham, the blithest and busiest of little maids. Altogether, it was a morning of pure delight to our little girl, who only half understood the underlying sadness that found whispered speech among the older folks.
