A Great Intrigue, OR, THE Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER XVI.

Once or twice she managed to escape from the circle of courtiers who attended her every movement, and got, for a little rest and coolness, into a conservatory; and there she let her thoughts fly back like a homeward-bound dove, to the man who had told her of his love, the love he deemed so hopeless; but the marquise was near her in a minute or two; now with an ice, and again with a prayer for another—just one more—dance.

"We may as well pack up our traps and leave the field," remarked one of her most ardent admirers, a certain dashing young artillery officer, who had come home from the last war, covered with fame and glory, which he was dying to lay at her feet. "Merle is making all the running, and means to win her, and, by George! he will do it, to, whether she likes him or not. Look at him now; he scarcely left her a moment for the whole of the evening."

It was not the first time the remark had been made, and such remarks tell. One by one the men seemed to acknowledge the greater perseverance or claims of the marquise, and dropped away from her, until, when her carriage was announced, she stood alone beside her, with her cloak on his arm, her fan and bouquet in his hand.

"Good-night, dear," said Lady Farnley. "I'm awfully tired. Very rude of me to say so, ain't it? But I'm very proud and satisfied."

"You ought to be," said Lucille; "we have had a very pleasant evening."

Lady Farnley laughed.

"Quite the proper sort of speech," she said. "Thank you, my dear; but I wasn't thinking of my little dance, but of you. I feel as if you belonged to me sometimes, and triumph in your triumphs. There, go home and sleep soundly, and keep your roses. Give me another kiss."

As Lucille bent forward, the old lady whispered in her ear:

"I'm glad you have taken my advice, dear," she said.

"Your advice?" said Lucille, smiling. "What advice was that, dear Lady Farnley?"

"Go down and see if they have got the carriage windows shut, marquise," said the old lady. "Then, when he had got out of hearing, I am glad you have decided to send that poor boy away, dear."

"Send him away—what poor boy?" asked Lucille, but the color rose gradually to her face.

Lady Farnley made a little grimace.

"How uncompromising you are, my dear," she exclaimed. "Why, Harry Herne, of course. I didn't advise you to send any one else away, did I?"

"Harry Herne!" repeated Lucille, the color fading slowly from her face, her voice sounding like a stifled, meaningless echo in her ears.

"Yes, they tell me that he is making preparations for immediate departure. My maid got it from her sweetheart, one of your grooms. I am glad of it; depend upon it, you have done right. I can't tell you why," she went on hurriedly, "but you were right. I should have liked to have seen him once more before he went, but he's gone by this time, I dare say. Never mind," and she sighed. "Poor Harry! There, here's the marquise. Well, are they closed? That's right. I want to take care of our beautiful rose. Good-night."

Lucille put her arm in the marquise's, but scarcely knew whether she was being led.

"Harry Herne gone! Gone to-night!" The words rang in her ears, the stars seemed to dance in a mist. Gone! Gone! She would never see him again! Oh, what had she done to leave him without a word, without making a sign to keep him.

"So ends a happy, a very happy evening, alas!" murmured the marquise, his glittering eyes fixed on her pale, disturbed face; but Lucille scarcely heard him, and, murmuring something unintelligible, drew back into the corner of the carriage, the word, "Gone!" ringing in her ears like a knell.

The Marquis stood looking after the carriage until the lamps had grown into stars along the road, with a strange smile on his lips. It was a smile that just matched the glitter in his eyes, and spoke of his confidence and coming victory.

CHAPTER XVII.

Lucille's heart ached, and her head felt like lead. She had been conning over the words she would murmur in Harry's ears as she hid her face against his heart. She had imagined their meeting and all that he would say a hundred times. She had intended going to him, sending for him to-morrow, or, at farthest, the next day, and now—now he might be gone!

There are two kinds of hunger in this life which assail us, I mean of the mental kind; gold hunger and love hunger. Men will risk their honor, their limbs, their lives for gold, and women will risk all these at once for love.

Lucille thought, as she crouched in the carriage that rolled smoothly along the drive, that she would give all she possessed, ten years, half of her life, to hear her lover's voice, feel his arms round her, to hold him in her own and whisper, "Harry, I love you! I cannot let you go! I care not what you say; I will be your wife!"

If he were gone, what would become of her! She knew him well enough intuitively to feel sure that if he had gone he would make no sign, send her no word. The years would roll by in dreary weariness, and all the brightness would go out of her life, and—she could not think any longer in silence. Putting her hands up to her face, she uttered a low moan of distress.

"My dear Miss Darracourt!" exclaimed the horrified Mrs. Dalton. "Do you feel ill? Are you going to faint? I will let down this window—my smelling bottle—"

Lucille put it aside with a hysterical laugh.

"It is nothing," she said. "The room was hot and—yet, put down the window; thanks!"

"The carriage reached the door as she spoke, and she got out and walked quickly, feverishly up the steps, the footmen standing by to assist her.

"Oh, the house seems as hot as fire," she murmured, with an impatient sigh. "I will stay on the terrace a little while and get cool."

"Do you not think—" began Mrs. Dalton, anxiously, but Lucille stopped her quickly, almost haughtily.

"I cannot go into the house yet. Please leave me alone."

Poor Mrs. Dalton bowed her head before the stately young beauty in her ballroom magnificence.

"I may send you a shawl!" she murmured meekly.

"Thanks—stay, give me yours," said Lucille, and she took it and flung it round her. The action tore the clematis from her hair, but she disentangled it from the fringe and thrust it quickly, but carefully, within the bosom of her dress.

Then she walked quickly to the end of the terrace, away from the windows, and leaned over the balustrade, looking in the direction of the hut.

If there had been a light burning in it she could not have seen it from where she stood, but she tormented herself by thinking that she could, and by imagining the pretty room she had seen bare and desolate, and Harry—gone!

The word seemed to echo through an aching void in her heart and sink into silence, leaving her desolate. She stood for some time silent and motionless, then gradually a great craving fell upon her—a craving to go to the hut.

A swift blush mantled in her cheeks at the idea, but she began to argue against her conscience. If he had gone, there would be no harm in going to the empty cottage; it would be some comfort to her in her present state to see it, and if he had not gone—well, then he would never know that she had been near him.

She was all alone in the world. If she had had a mother she would have gone to her, and kneeling at her feet, have told her everything, and get comfort and guidance; but there was absolutely no one to whom she could go with her full and aching, yearning heart. She was "lord of herself, that heritage of woe!" and a law to herself.

The craving, the impulse, grew upon her so strongly that it could not be resisted.

Half fearfully she went down the steps, and crossing the lawn, entered the park preserves, and was gathered up in its shadows. Five minutes afterwards a thin, girlish figure, wrapped in a black cloak, darted into the woods on her track. It was that of Marie Verner.

All unconscious that she was followed, Lucille, lighted by the flecks of moonlight which came through the trees, made her way along the path to the hut, and presently she saw it standing out keen and distinct in the little clearing. There was no light in the window, and an air of desolation seemed to pervade the spot. With sinking heart she stopped short and leaned one hand against the trunk of a tree, while the other was pressed to her bosom. Yes, he had gone, and she was left with her sad heart full of love for him. She could never see him again.

Almost as the thought ran through her, she saw his stalwart form come from among the trees. He stopped for a moment and raised his head, as if he were listening, then, hearing nothing, he went toward the door of the hut. Another moment and she knew that she should lose him, for she could not enter the cottage. Scarcely knowing what she did, she took a step forward.

His quick, keen ears heard her in a moment, and he stopped short.

"Is that you, Susie?" he asked.

She scarcely distinguished the words—oh, Heaven! how well she remembered them afterwards—but went towards him.

As she crossed the patch of moonlight, in which her jewels shone and flashed, he saw her and started.

"Heavens! is it a dream?" he murmured, turning his pale face towards her.

She stopped and held out her hand. Still he stood for a second as he were not sure that it was not a vision and strode towards her and caught her hand, breathing her name in a wild rapture:

"Lucille!"

"Harry!" she murmured, her glorious eyes raised to his, and burning with a maiden's first passion.

He stood, holding her hand pressed to his heart, for a moment, looking into her eyes, his breath coming thick and fast.

"Is it really you? Oh, my angel, my queen!" he murmured, his voice ringing with music. "Why, I was Paring a corn brings only brief relief. And there is danger in it.

The way to end corns is with Blue-jay. It stops the pain instantly. Then it loosens the corn, and in 48 hours the entire corn comes out.

Blue-jay is applied in a moment. From that time on you will not feel the corn.

Leave it on for two days, until it gently undermines the corn. Then lift the corn out. There will be no pain or soreness.

Blue-jay has ended sixty million corns. Nearly half the corns in the country now are ended in this way.

There is nothing else like it. And no man who knows will even suggest any other way for dealing with corns.

Do You Think?

"To have a catchword in your mouth is not the same thing as to hold an opinion; still less is it the same thing as to have made one for yourself."

It is the power of thought, of forming an opinion by reasoning that sets man apart from the rest of the animal kingdom. It would seem, therefore, that the habit of thought would be common among mankind. But is it?

In Columbus' time a few so-called learned men held the belief that the world was flat. To say that the great mass of people also thought so would be stretching a point, for to think one must employ any of the intellectual powers except that of simple perception through the senses. In brief, to think, one must exercise the higher intellectual faculties. In Columbus' time the people believed what was told them; they did not think.

Columbus thought. Told that the earth was flat, he actually thought about it. He did not say to himself, "These very learned men say the world is flat, so it must be." Instead he said, "These men think the world is flat, do I think so?" And finally having really thought the matter over, he came to the conclusion that the world was round.

It was neither his skill in seamanship nor his venturesomeness that made Columbus a great man. It was his power to subject a common belief to analysis, to think for himself and not let others think for him.

The same thing is true of any other great man. The man who thinks for himself is as far above the man who permits the crowd to think for him as the man who accepts his thoughts ready-made—as the man is above animal.

The habit of thought, like most good habits, is hard to acquire. It means subjecting everything that comes your way to your own powers of reasoning. It means cultivating an open mind. It means refusing to accept your thoughts ready-made, no matter who the maker may be.

The reason there are so few great thinkers is there are so many who permit the crowd to think for them.

Try this. The next time you tackle any subject and start to say "I think so-and-so," stop and say to yourself, "Have I thought! Is this my own, carefully pondered belief or is it somebody else's thought on the subject that I have picked up and adapted to my own use which I'm about to enunciate?"

You will find that saying "I think" is one of the commonest forms of self-deception. What we should more often say is, "So-and-so has said such-and-such a thing and I'm passing it along as my own simply because I have never thought anything really worth saying about the subject."

Divorced Life

Helen Hanson Fuestle

Marian was pleased and flattered when Calhoun asked her if she would mind if he changed his place in the dining room to the table at which she ate. She acquiesced delightedly. Calhoun was smiling his beaming, boyish smile often that formerly. His stilted periods of brooding seemed to be departing. Soon, Marian, fainted, the heart-wrecked young lawyer would be able to go back to Atlanta and resume his practice of the law.

A motherly feeling toward the young man began developing, offsetting a trifle her avowed determination to attempt to play a bit with his emotions. She was growing to like him more and more. The simple trust with which he had made the revelation of his loss of the girl he had adored, the memory of which event he was now trying to see in the light of the absurd, in his valiant quest for peace of mind, had made her warm to him with anxiety and concern.

"And how about the glum memories?" she asked him once. "The other breakfasts," he replied, "out-of-doors; they were alone in the cool dining-room. Are you succeeding in crowding them out of your brain?"

"They are losing their epic values," he smiled. "I've about found a place for them in the comic supplement. That's where they belong."

"Good," she answered. "You'll be getting back to your work soon now. You're going to make a great lawyer out of yourself."

A look came into his eyes—the old look she had seen in the eyes of men before, men struggling with certain things they wanted to say to her—the wistful, hungry look which she had seen in the eyes of Barker and Meadows. She laughed at him with her eyes, but anxiety touched her heart. She was beginning to be sorry that she had deliberately been teasing this sentimental machinery into action. Wheel on wheel, she could already imagine it spinning into swift, impetuous, reckless, southern revolutions.

"You're going back home and forget that there are such curcrauts as women in the world," she said steadily.

"Why don't you look the other way when you make a remark like that?" he retorted.

"I mean it," she insisted. "Of course, I shouldn't advise you to turn clients away merely because they happened to be women."

"Don't talk about clients," he objected. "The term has the musty suggestion of law books and briefs. This is June!"

"Go to your work and be strong; falter not in your ways," she quoted from Kipling.

"Quote Keats," he answered, "or Byron."

Marian rose. "I've got a pile of work to do this morning," she said. "I must go to my room, and start the grind."

THE PROGRAMME for the WEEK-END at THE NICKEL.

THE LUBIN COY PRESENT IN TWO PARTS:—

"THE SEA ETHERAL."

This is a wonderful story of the sea coast. Corson, the miserly fish dealer, of Rorey's Point, sees an opportunity to get rid of his business rival, John Mason. Noticing his friendship for the pretty wife of John Topley, he succeeds in circulating scandalous reports about them; they are sighted crossing the bay in a storm and are given up for lost—then, this is a powerful story, featuring Arthur V. Johnson.

The story deals with the bitter hatred of a lodgekeeper's wife, who believes that her daughter has been killed by remorse. Her lover deserts her for the beautiful woman who owns the estate on which the lodge is located. Powerful realism here.

THE ACTRESS AND HER JEWELS—THE CONSTABLE'S DAUGHTER—THE BARBER'S CURE.

(Three rattling, good, laughable farce comedies.)
By Request, DeWitt C. Cairns sings Tosti's "Good-Bye." Professor P. J. McCarthy at the Piano; Joseph F. Ross, Master of Effects.

5 PICTURES. The Crescent Picture Palace. 5 PICTURES.

"The End of The Trail-2 Reels.

A stirring Mexican feature, produced by Lincoln J. Carter and acted by the famous Powers Picture Play Co.

THE BOOB'S HONEYMOON—Another of the Boob Comedy series, featuring Bob Leonard the Boob. RARE SPECIMENS—A rare bit of history is sent to some naturalists; the specimen escapes. Imagine the fun before it is captured.

THEIR ONLY CHILD is a famous McManus cartoon.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF AN EGG is a very funny reel.

MISS ALICE CLARK sings two of Moore's melodies: (a) "Has sorrow thy young days shaded"; (b) "Believe me if all those endearing young charms."

(On Monday, an Extra 3 Reel Feature—"WHY"—a dream.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessary this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland. —ep174

The Departing Soldier.

"Farewell, dear wife," the soldier said, "my country calls, and I must go, to wear a helmet on my head, and shoot at folks I do not know. And men whose names I've never heard will go for me with gun and sword; the whole blamed business is absurd, and I am sad, and slightly bored. I know not what the war's about, if wise or just I do not know; I only know I'm going out to make a target for the foe. But keep a cheerful heart; for I'll return to home and farm; perhaps I'll be shy a leg, and maybe I'll be short an arm, but I'll come back, though battered sore, come back in flesh, or as a ghost; I may be brought upon a door, I may be shipped by parcels post; some time, I shall return, my soul, as ever, fond and true, to watch you trying hard to earn a living for our familar crew. You'll have to till our barren fields, and reap the scanty crops you raise, while I am packing swords and shields, and shooting holes through unknown boys. You'll have to thrash the meagre grain, and yoke the oxen to the plow, while I'm piroting o'er the plain, a large brass helmet on my brow. I hate to leave these humble walls; our lives, dear wife, are made a wreck, but I must go where honor calls, and get a bullet in my neck."

A Fine Force.

The volunteers now under canvas number 492, which is only eight short of the required 500. Since going into camp the recruits have undergone strenuous drill and all are in fine physical condition, while those who have had firing practice at the South Side Range are making themselves into marksmen. When these men are ready to embark, the men from Newfoundland should be found able to take their place beside the regiments from any of the Colonies.

Newfoundland Thanks.

TELEGRAM.

My Ministers desire me to convey to His Majesty the grateful thanks of all in Newfoundland for the gracious Message received last night. Newfoundland is loyal to the core to King and Empire in this just quarrel.

FOOD FACTS

What An M. D. Learned.

A physician went through a food experience which he makes public.

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also knew, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful restorer and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients gain very rapidly, just as I did in strength and weight.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains, but two months there did not improve me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and I became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public. Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Trial 10 days of Grape-Nuts, when regular food does not seem to sustain the body, works wonders. "There's a Reason."

The picture programme has also been selected by the Crescent management so as to give a pleasant hour's enjoyment to its week-end patrons; one two-reel feature and four other pictures. Money in Plays.

Fortunes Which Authors Have Taken From Their Dramas.

The famous melo-drama "The Silver King", which was played recently at His Majesty Theatre before a royal audience in the cause of charity, has established several reputations and made fortunes for a number of people.

Referring again to "The Silver King", it is interesting to note that the play definitely decided Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, the collaborator with Henry Herman in the authorship, to devote himself to drama.

"The Private Secretary," adapted from the German by Mr. Charles Hawtrev, brought that gentleman $175,000 at least during his first run at the Globe and its tours.

Mr. Edward Knoblauch's wonderful play "Kismet," in which Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Asche have scored such a brilliant success is estimated to have added $200,000 to the banking account of the famous actor and his wife, while Mr. Jerome K. Jerome's highly-successful production, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," has earned for Sir J. Forbes Robertson something like $300,000.

"The Walls of Jericho," enriched Mr. Alfred Sutro to the extent of $275,000, while "The Little Minister" earned Sir J. M. Barrie $20,000 a week for a number of years, and long before the curtain fell on the last performance at the Haymarket, the net profits had reached $500,000.

Turning to musical comedy, Mr. Gilbert, who has composed the music for "The Joy-Ride Lady," at present running at the Garrick Theatre, confesses that his income for some years past has been at least $15,000 a month.

He has broken the world's record by writing eleven successful comic operas within five years. He has been even more successful than Herr Franz Lehar, who has fascinated us with the ear-haunting melodies in "The Merry Widow," which play must have brought him over $1,500,000.

Mrs. Rossley's Pupils in Beautiful Acts.

There was a highly delighted audience at Rossley's last night and the act was greeted with rounds of applause. The children are doing some fine singing and dancing. To-night there is a complete change. The pictures are very interesting being the best seen here in a long time. On Monday there will be one of the very best shows seen here; Mrs. Rossley's pupils in new novelty songs and dances, besides the wonderful two-reel feature "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with King Baggot in the leading character, and other two-reel features. There is coming by the s.s. Carthaginian the four British Belles, good singers, expert dancers and magnificent wardrobe, one of the cleverest lady troupes in England. Mr. Rossley contracted with these ladies before the war, and intends keeping his word with them.

IN TIMES OF WAR you cannot do without clothes any more than you can in times of peace; but at such a time it is necessary that you economize as much as possible; and in order to keep all our help at work we intend to make up Suits and Overcoats, until further notice, at the smallest possible margin of profit, but must be strictly cash orders. Investigate and get our prices; quality of our work needs no advertising. SPURRELL BROS., 365 Water Street, next door to Parker & Moore's.

C. Wearing Hayward.
 Another Newfoundland and ex-Captain of the Church Lads' Brigade, is doing his bit for the Empire in the far West, in the person of Mr. C. Wearing Hayward. Mr. Hayward has been engaged the past few years with the Dominion Government on Alaskan survey work. The survey is suspended on account of the war, and as Mr. Hayward possesses military training and great knowledge of the geography of the mountain peaks of the northern slope of the Pacific, the Ottawa authorities have despatched him in charge of a number of men to keep a watch on all shipping and report by Heliograph to Prince Rupert or direct to Commander Hase of H.M.S. Rainbow. Mr. Hayward has charge of three stations and has the best lookout on the inside and outside channels and the route to Alaska. We are glad to hear of Capt. Wearing Hayward again and feel sure he is doing good work for his country.

SERBS RESIST AUSTRIAN BOMBARDMENT.

Special to Evening Telegram.
 The following bulletin was posted at St. Pierre, yesterday:

The German Government has supplied to the American Press information on the supposed use of dum dum bullets by the allies. Germany further adds that she has shown to foreign news correspondents at Berlin these dum dum bullets with machines used in their make, and that these projectiles and equipments were found in the kit of allied prisoners. The French Government has protested most formally against this accusation. It is to be feared that this German move is purely a plan on their part to justify themselves in using these same bullets and bring along a change of ideas in America's opinion, which was so justly indignant over the atrocities committed by German troops throughout Belgium and France. The same efforts were made by Germans near the Danish and Norwegian Governments to endeavor to discredit the allies. There has been no communication from military operations to-day. From Antwerp large German forces have crossed Liege in the direction of Germany. Austrians again bombarded Belgrade, the Serbs resisting vigorously.

when the Government Press Bureau issued the following statement: "The destruction of the Pathfinder was due to attack by a submarine, and not by a floating mine as originally believed."

BRITISH VICTORY IN AFRICA.

LONDON, this a.m.
 British troops have met and defeated a German force of four hundred which entered Nyassaland, British Central Africa, according to an announcement made by the Official Press Bureau, which adds: "The Germans lost 7 officers killed and 2 wounded and 2 field and 2 machine guns. The loss among the rank and file has not been ascertained, but was heavy. The British loss among the whites was four killed and several wounded. The loss among the rank and file not known. On Sept. 8th the British force advanced against the Germans, who, however, evaded them and attacked the British station of Karonga, on the northwest shore of Lake Nyassa, which was defended by an officer and 50 African Rifle Police and 8 civilians. After three hours' resistance a column arrived from the British force and drove the enemy off."

OFFICIAL FROM PARIS.

PARIS, Sept. 10.
 The following official communication was issued to-night: On the left wing the British and French troops have crossed the Marne River, between La Ferté sous Jouarre, Charly and Chateau-Thierry, pursuing the enemy, who is in retreat. During the course of their advance the British forces took a number of prisoners and captured mitrailleuses. During the four days' battle the Allied armies have in that section of the theatre of operations gained more than sixty kilometres between Chateau-Thierry and Vitry le Francois. The Russian guard has been thrown back.

The action continues with great severity in the region of the veteran Camp de Marly and Vitry le Francois, and on the right wing there is no change in the situation. On Omain and in Argonne districts the two opposing forces are maintaining their positions. In the region of Nancy the enemy has made slight progress on the Chateau Salin road. On the other hand, we have gained ground in the forest of Champenoux.

The losses are said to have been considerable on both sides, but the morale and health of the troops remain excellent.

There is no confirmation of the news published in the German newspapers of the fall of Mauberge.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Aug. 25th, 1914.
PROMPT NEWS.

The Government Press Bureau has promised to publish any important news, bad or good, so long as it is not such as could be useful to the enemy. On the whole, within the last few days especially, it has fairly fulfilled its function of directing the public to a sober estimate of the changing situation. It put the general result of the German advance through Belgium plainly. It has not concealed the fall of Namur. The public here, at any rate, has therefore taken these pieces of news calmly, just registering them, feeling confident that there is nothing worse which is being hidden. That is all to the good. It seems fair to assume that the Bureau will be just as promptly frank in all matters. It is to be hoped certainly that the publication of casualty lists will not be delayed. Everybody knows that casualties occur when a British force is engaged, and it is supposed that the Bureau will continue its sensible policy and issue them as soon as they have time to come through from the front. The few names published to-night can only be a first instalment of the list of casualties which have already occurred, and the rest of the list, it may be expected, will be issued as soon as it has been prepared.

SOLDIERS' SONGS.

An officer tells me that Tommy Atkins' prime favorite among songs is "See that my grave's kept green." By the time that is sung everybody knows it is time to go to bed, for that particular ditty is more suited to a sleep-song on a night than for shortening the length of a march. The "Buffalo Battery" still has its admirers, who tell of the doings of the "Elephants and buffaloes"—otherwise the ornate bullocks in an Indian heavy battery. "Conduct unbecoming of a soldier" goes to a marching tune, and has any number of verses, one of which says that "the Colonel's Mary Jane finds a little bit of dinner for a soldier." It is all very well (says my officer friend) for Mr. Kipling to label his verses "Barrack-room Ballads." They have never caught on in barracks. "Tommy Atkins," which was the salvation of "The Gaiety Girl," was by Messrs. Nolan and Easton, and not by Kipling, who gets the credit for it in blunderers' minds. Troops went to the Crimea to the tune of "Annie Laurie." The war music in 1899 was Sousa's "El Capitan" march, "Soldiers of the Queen," and "Queen of the Earth." Of the last named Mr. Labouchere wrote that he would be pleased if somebody would tell him what it meant. It was suggested that "woman" was "Queen of the Earth," but nobody was quite sure. In point of fact, however, the words of songs of the kind matter little if the tune has the rhythm of the "boots" in it.

SUBURBAN SIGNS.

It takes a great deal to rouse the London suburbs, and in spite of everything, it is true to an astonishing degree that the war is still something "in the papers" and merely academically interesting, although the line on the poster may be "Germans in Our Land." The publication of the first British casualty lists will make a startling difference. The signs of war in the suburbs multiply, and are found pictorially interesting. Every open space and park has its squads of brown-yellow Territorials drilling, and the golfer may find that the barbed wire protecting his sacred enclosure has been removed to make way for marching men. Territorials guard the stations and camp in the signal boxes. The concentration of Territorials in London is now at its height, and a friend who has just motored from Salisbury Plain to Richmond says that while the Plain usually in August dotted with Territorials and soldiers, is bare as the back of your hand, Richmond is full of them. Few suburbs have yet followed the gallant lead of the Hampstead Garden Suburb and sent out from its villas volunteer diggers to prepare common land for vegetable growing. The march of the garden suburban with shouldered spades on Saturday afternoons is an inspiring sight. The effect of the craze for household economies which set in through the suburbs early last week seems to have resulted in something like a slump in food, certainly in fruit. Dairy produce is still very dear, and so is sugar.

IS NORWAY THREATENED?

Though very little has been heard of Scandinavia since the war broke out, and a strict neutrality has been enjoined by both Sweden and Norway, I hear from Christiania that some nervousness is entertained in authoritative circles there as to the probability of a sudden German demand for further accommodation on the North Sea, which, whatever form it took, would amount to an ultimatum. Norway, obviously, is in no position to defend her elongated coastline, for her navy consists of only four relatively small armoured cruisers, with two old coast-service monitors, twelve gunboats, four destroyers, twenty torpedo boats and five submarines. A German demand such as is indicated to be possible would be a violation of the treaty guaranteeing the integrity of Norwegian territory, which was signed at Christiania as recently as October, 1907, by Germany, as well as Great Britain, France and Russia; but after the way the "scrap of paper" has been violated by the first-named power in the case of Belgium there is no building upon that international treaty as a protection.

GERMAN NEWSPAPERS IN LONDON.

Despite the Order in Council regarding the circulation of any newspaper in the language of a State at war with His Majesty it was possible to buy a copy of the "Londoner Zeitung" on August 21st. As to the paper's future, inquiries elicited the somewhat curious statement that "the editor—he is not a German—left for Germany this morning." (Last Friday). The proprietor of the "Londoner General Anzeiger," however, after consultation with Sir Charles Matthews, the Director of Public Prosecutions, did not issue that day's number, although it was already printed and its contents only translations of what had already appeared in the British press. Since the war broke out, said the proprietor, the demand for the "Anzeiger" had almost doubled, so that it appears that the circulation of the two German papers published in London must during the last two or three weeks have been over 50,000.

WAR ON GERMAN TRADE.

The enthusiastic response which has been forthcoming from the British manufacturer has nerved the skilled staff of the Board of Trade Commercial Intelligence Department to redoubled efforts in the campaign to capture Germany's paralyzed submarine trade, which was estimated on the eve of the war by a German newspaper at $350,000,000. Though it has been difficult to cope with the rush of inquiries that has been found to issue a series of valuable pamphlets at the rate of two a day to manufacurers, merchants, and Chambers of Commerce, dealing with all kinds of trade. Facts and figures dealing with the situation in each trade have been marshalled and issued with remarkable despatch. Of special interest to the Clyde (Scotland) will be the reports now in preparation dealing with German and Austrian competition in the iron and steel trades in neutral markets. The leading newspapers have taken up the combat with right good will. The British manufacturer is counselled that if the most is to be made of the present golden opportunity there must be more vigorous advertising of British goods in the neutral markets, and no "take it or leave it" attitude—which is supposed to have checked sales in the past—must be adopted. Many of the inquiries addressed to the Board of Trade are for the names of buyers or for the names of sellers. In the first instance the Board of Trade show where the business is, and leave it to the buyers and sellers to get to work. Where buyers and sellers cannot be found the organization of the Board of Trade will be further used to help manufacturers.

WANTED Rags!

Millions of dollars' worth of Rags collected annually

The General says:

My output of Certain-teed Roofing has grown to such enormous proportions that I am having difficulty in getting enough rags of good grade to supply this demand.

I also need a lot of rags of lower grade for making my standard quality roofing, and also a still lower grade for making my Competition quality roofing.

I will pay the best market price for roofing rags anywhere in any quantity. If they can be shipped in carload quantities and in assorted grades, we can have them shipped direct to any of our big mills, but if in smaller quantities or unassorted, we will arrange with one of our packers or assorters near you, to buy your rags and prepare them for our use in the different grades.

Churches, Societies, Charitable Institutions and others are making good revenue by collecting all kinds of old rags. We consume scores and scores of tons of these rags every day—in fact the total rag sales of the country amount to several million dollars a year. It's an easy way to make money. The rags are generally given to the collectors or at least sold for very little. Every kind of rag can be used for something. Use this plan to pay off your church debt or raise the minister's salary. The results are surprising.

Billy Bradley.

Red McGehee says:
 When Bill was still way down in teens and playin' around the sand lots green near Cleveland's baseball park. Pop Anson saw him play one day an', just to hear what Bill would say an' have a little lark, he asked Bill what he'd take to work. Bill blushed an' gave his belt a jerk, then named some messy wags. Pop signed him—that was '98—an' sent him down to New York state where Bill became the rage.
 Next year Pop brought the youngster back to fill that old third corner sack for his Chicago club. An' Pop was not findin' out that Bill could field his bag an' climb—his pickup was no dub. Bill got his chance when Pop got through, to do the thing he'd long to do—put on a Cleveland suit. Tilt just a few years back Bill starred around his home-town baseball yard. An' then he got the boot.
 They missed his underhand throws of bunts to first, his drooping pose at bat, his startling stops. But fans forget—new stars appear an' guys that headlined some past year get pushed behind the drops. Bill sat his seat for a while in Canada, even 'that ol' smile broke out again full force. He's managin' but still plays third with Ward's fast-goin' Brook-fed herd.—Go to it, Bill, Ol' horse.

India's Splendid Loyalty to England.

LONDON, Sept. 10.
 To the Governor, St. John's, Nfld.
 The Press Bureau summarizes the offers of service, money, etc., made in India to the Viceroy. Rulers of Native States, numbering nearly seven hundred in all, have, with one accord rallied to the defense of the Empire, and offered personal services and their states' resources for war.
 From among the many princes and nobles volunteering for active service the Viceroy has selected the Chiefs of Jodhpur, Bikaner, Kishangar, Ratlam, Patiala, Sir Pertab Singh, Regent of Jodhpur, the heir apparent of Bhopal, and the brother of Cooch Behar, together with other cadets of noble families.
 The veteran Sir Pertab Singh, insists on serving the King and Emperor despite his seventy years. His nephew, the Maharaja, aged sixteen, goes with him. All these have already joined the expeditionary forces.
 The Maharaja of Gwalior, the Chiefs of Jaora and Dholpur and the heir apparent of Palampur were, to their great regret prevented from leaving their states.
 Twenty-seven of the larger native states will maintain imperial service troops, and the services of every Corps were immediately placed at the disposal of the Indian Government on the outbreak of the war.
 The Viceroy has accepted from 12 States contingents of cavalry, infantry, sappers, and transport, also camel corps from Bikaner (for Egypt). Most of these have already embarked.
 Following are particular instances of generosity and eager loyalty of Chiefs: Various Darbars are providing a hospital ship to be called the Loyalty, for the use of the expeditionary forces. The Maharaja of Mysore has given fifty lakhs of rupees (£3,300,000) for expenditure upon expeditionary forces. The Chief of Gwalior, besides sharing expenses of the hospital ship, the idea of which originated with him and the Begum of Bhopal, has offered the Indian Government large sums of money and to provide thousands of horses as remounts.
 From Lahore in the Punjab and Las Bela and Kelat, Baluchistan, the Chiefs and Sardars offer to supply and maintain camels with drivers (for service in Egypt). Several Chiefs have offered to raise additional troops if required.
 Donations to the Indian Relief Fund have poured in from all states. The Maharaja of Rewa offers troops, treasure, even private jewellery for the service of the King and Emperor.
 Besides contributions to the Indian Relief Fund, the Chiefs of Kashmir, not content with subscribing to the Indian Fund, presided over a meeting of 20,000 people and delivered a stirring speech in response to which large subscriptions were collected.
 Maharaja Holkar offers free of charge, all horses in his state army, suitable for Government purposes. Horses are also offered by the Nizam's Government, by Jamnagar and other Bombay states. Every Chief in Bombay presidency has placed his state's resources at disposal of the Government and all have contributed to the Relief Fund.
 Loyal messages and offers have also been received from Mehtar of Chitral and tribes of the Khyber Agency and Khyber ridges.
 Letters have been received from the most remote states in India, all marked by a deep desire to assist the British Government, however humbly, in its hour of need.
 From beyond the Indian borders generous offers of assistance have been received from Nepal Darbar; the military resources of the state placed at the disposal of the British Government. The Prime Minister offers rupees three lakhs (£20,000), to the Viceroy for machine guns or field equipment, for the British Gurkha Regiments proceeding overseas, besides large donations from his private purse to the Prince of Wales Fund, and Imperial Indian Relief Fund. The fourth Gurkha Rifles, of which the Prime Minister is honorary Colonel, has offered thirty thousand rupees (£2,000) for machine guns in the event of their going on service.
 The Dalai Lama of Tibet offers 1,000 Tibetan troops, stating that the Lamas in Tibet are offering prayers for the success of the British army.
 The same spirit has prevailed throughout British India, hundreds of telegrams and letters to the Viceroy express loyalty and the desire to serve in the field or in India. Many hundreds have also been received by loyal administrations. These come from communities and associations of all classes and creeds, also from individuals.
 The following are typical examples: The All-India Moslem League, Bengal Presidency Moslem League, Moslem Association of Rangoon, Trustees of Aligarh College, Behar Provincial Moslem League, Central National Mohammedan Association of Calcutta, Khoja community and other followers of H. H. The Aga Khan, Punjab Moslem League, Mohammedans of Eastern Bengal, citizens of Calcutta, Madras, Rangoon and many other cities, Behar Landholders' Association, Madras Provincial Congress, Taluqdars of Oudh, Punjab Chiefs' Association, United Provinces' Provincial Congress of Hindus of the Punjab, Chief of the Khalsa Diwan representing Orthodox Sikhs, Bohra community of Bombay, Parsee community of Bombay.
 The Delhi Medical Association offer the field hospital sent to Turkey during the Balkan war. Bengalee students offer enthusiastic services for ambulance corps; there are also many other offers of medical aid. The Zemindars of Madras offer five hundred horses. Meetings are being held to allay panic, keep down prices, and maintain public confidence and credit. Generous contributions from all quarters are being made to the Imperial Indian Relief Fund.
 The Secretary of State for India has received the following offer from the Maharaja and Maharani Magi Sahiba of Baranapur, all resources of their state, two motor cars, two thousand rupees to Indian Relief Fund; the Raja of Akalkot, personal services in the field; Raja of Pudukota "all I possess, anxious to serve in any capacity." He has placed his motor car at the disposal of the Government and returns to India to raise, subject to approval, a regiment of his subjects to release the regular regiment. The Gaekwar of Baroda has offered all his troops and resources. Mir Ghulam Ali Khan of Khajpur offers his personal services in the field.
 British Indian residents in this country, of every class and creed, have been forward with loyal and generous offers of personal services.
 (Signed) HARCOURT.

Newfoundlander Doing Well.

A letter has been received by Hon. R. A. Squires from Mr. R. E. Gosse, formerly of Spaniard's Bay, but now residing at Marine Heights, Vancouver, B.C., where he is making good, in referring to salmon fishing on the Fraser River. Mr. Gosse said he purchased a new cannery last year. He has now two canneries with more than 20,000 cases of No. 1 salmon, valued at $200,000 and he thinks that before the close season, the middle of October, he will have about 15,000 more cases on hand. The exportation of the article, however, is greatly impeded owing to war conditions. A steamer in which Mr. Gosse had arranged to send a shipment last month was taken possession of by the British Government to be used as an hospital ship. Mr. Gosse has two sons who are engaged with him in the salmon cannery business. Mr. Gosse is doing exceptionally well and has one of the finest residences in Vancouver which was recently built.

Sighted Canard Liner Bound North—Passed Number of Icebergs.

The Norwegian steamer Hermod, Capt. Lind, 8 days out from Iceland bound to New York with a general cargo, put into this port to land four passengers named A. Kristensen, O. Kristensen, O. Johnson and G. Olojen, who are going to Winnipeg.

On Wednesday about four hundred miles off St. John's Capt. Lind sighted a Canard Liner steaming in a northerly direction and apparently taking her course for Iceland. Yesterday Capt. Lind also reports having passed twenty-six icebergs. Some of them were of enormous size and were fully 50 feet high over the water.
 The Hermod leaves for her destination this afternoon. The Iceland passengers that she landed will take passage by the Red Cross Liner Florizel to-morrow en route to Western Canada.

Two Big Films at the Nickel.

Mr. Cairns Sings Tosti's Good Bye.
 Another good programme will be given at the Nickel Theatre this evening which will eclipse the shows at this popular house of entertainment for some time. Arthur V. Johnson, the matinee hero appears in the leading role in "The Sea Eternal." It is a wonderful story of the sea coast. Corson, the miserly fish dealer of Roreys Point, sees an opportunity to get rid of his business rival John Mason. We would suggest that all patrons make an effort to see it. "The Depth of Hate" is another all-star cast also in two reels. The story deals with the bitter hatred of a lodge keeper's wife who believes that her daughter has been killed by remorse. Her lover deserts her for a beautiful woman of great riches. It is very exciting throughout. "The Actress and her Jewels," "The Constable's Daughter," "The Barber's Cure," are three laughable comedies. Mr. De Witt C. Cairns will sing Tosti's Good Bye by request.

The Last Week
 OF OUR Great Midsummer Sale

We have disposed of considerable goods since the Sale started, despite the fact that war with all its horrors interfered with our plans. Why? Because the people know that when we advertise Bargain in Furniture, particularly Beds, Springs and Mattresses, that they are going to get real genuine Bargains. In order to make a thorough clean up of odds and ends in Furniture, also Summer Goods, we are cutting prices in two in a great many cases. So now is your time to lay in your supplies, as new arrivals must necessarily be higher.

Our 10 and 20 cent counters are literally overflowing with unheard of values. Everything in Summer Goods must go regardless of cost.
