PTORRHEA. Of all the poison taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by diseased gums (Pyorrhoea) are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

"There is an unwritten code of honor to which all girls subscribe," said her ladyship—"that is, all honorable girls—and the first article of it is that no girl shall deliberately set herself to snare the lover of another. This you have been guilty of."

"I am answerable to myself," replied Diana, "if I do a base deed, not to you, Lady Cameron."

"To me in this case," opposed her ladyship, "because your base deed affects my daughter;" and over the face of Lady Cameron, who had been so reckless of the suffering she inflicted on Diana there came a quiver of pain. "I repeat that the engagement is shameless," she continued. "Not only do you not love Lord Clanronald, but unless I am greatly mistaken, you like Sir Lisle."

Diana pressed her lips tightly together lest they should open and say, "Like a Scarsdale!" If she uttered that, it would give her enemy the clew to her actions.

"Whether you like him or not, you have given him a shameless amount of encouragement," her ladyship went on. "You have allowed him to believe that you cared for him—I am quite sure of that. You are very reckless in your conduct, Diana. You care little what you make others suffer; you do not care if you break Evadne's heart and make Sir Lisle miserable for life."

"You are right," said Diana; "I care little; others have cared less for me." And Lady Cameron saw that her step-mother's lovely young face grew prouder as she defied and irritated her interrogator. Evidently this sort of treatment was useless, so her ladyship decided to try what she had never really tried with Diana before—kindness. She drew nearer to her, and laid one hand on her shoulder. Diana shrank from her touch; but her ladyship was not daunted.

"Diana," she began, "I am sure you have not a bad heart. I beseech you to think over this matter. I do not know why you are going to marry Lord Clanronald. It cannot be for money—you have plenty of your own; it cannot be for his title—you could choose one higher; it cannot be for his birth or descent—you despise such things."

"I do, indeed," said Diana, loftily. "Then, if you have no especial motive, why persist in it? You and I have not always agreed very well; but, if you will concede this point, if you will decline this marriage, I will do everything in my power to render your life happy."

"It is too late," said Diana. "Besides, I would never bargain for kindness."

"You could do so much better," declared her ladyship. "You have everything in your favor; you have the whole world to choose from."

"I have already chosen," said Diana. But Lady Cameron ignored the remark.

"Evadne has always liked Lord Clanronald," she continued. "I plead to you, Diana, because I cannot bear that my daughter should suffer. I have not been driven to plead; and, when a proud woman asks a favor, it is more bitter than death for her to be refused. I am a proud woman, Diana. I ask a favor; you will not refuse me."

Diana felt that that one sweet moment of revenge repaid her for all her pain; for the humiliation she had indicted on Lady Cameron, for the pain she had caused Evadne in taking her lover, she felt that she could have suffered far more deeply than she had.

"I am sorry," she said, in a cold, hard voice, "that I cannot change my plans."

Then Lady Cameron's pride and courage seemed both to break down. "Diana," she said, in a low voice full of emotion, "think of Evadne. She is truly fond of him. I know he is not clever or intellectual, or anything of that kind; Evadne loves him; poor child, and you do not. You will not spoil her life?"

"Mine has been spoiled," returned Diana. "It is useless, Lady Cameron, for us to discuss the subject any further. You must consider that my marriage is settled."

But Lady Cameron had Evadne's face before her eyes—her face as it had been when she heard the news. "I cannot take that answer, Diana," said her ladyship, making a final effort to induce Diana to abandon her engagement. "I make one more appeal to you—to your good heart, to your generosity, to your nobility of mind. Do not enter into marriage which will bring misery to my daughter and misery just as surely to yourself. I cannot tell you how much depends on your 'Yes' or 'No.'"

This was her supreme appeal, and it was followed by a moment of anxious expectation. In this moment Diana fancied she enjoyed her revenge. With one word spoken now she could scatter the hopes of both her enemies; she could wring the daughter's heart, she could avenge every insult the mother had offered her. The last spark of goodness seemed to die in Diana's heart when she uttered the word "No;" and the girl's refusal changed Lady Cameron from a pleading, suppliant woman to a fury.

"You refuse?" she said. "You could do what I wish if you would. It would not affect you in the least. You refuse? Let the consequences be on your own head. From this day I am your enemy. Now, at this moment when you have set the seal of despair on my daughter's life, I curse you."

"It would not hurt me if you did," said Diana. "I would as soon have your curse as your blessing."

"I have no more to say. You are a hardened, shameless girl. You are beside yourself with pride and arrogance. Heaven will punish you. I shall yet see you weeping bitter tears for this day's work. When that happens, do not come to Lady Cameron for sympathy."

Applied After Shaving

Keeps the Skin Soft and Smooth

MANY men suffer from irritation of the skin as a result of shaving. With some it assumes a form of eczema and becomes most annoying and unsightly.

By applying a little of Dr. Chase's Ointment after shaving the irritation is overcome and such ailments as Barber's Itch and Eczema are cured.

"You may be sure I shall not," replied Diana. "If you have finished, I will go."

"Yes, go!" said Lady Cameron.

And with great dignity Diana quitted the room, and sought the welcome privacy of her own chamber. She tried to rejoice over the sweetness and completeness of her revenge, but Diana could never quite kill her noble nature. She did not care to remember the pain on Lady Cameron's face; she did not like to think of Evadne's grief. It served them right, she argued. They had insulted her grossly and without mercy; they had enjoyed one long triumph over her since they entered her father's house, and, what was still worse, they had lessened her father's love for her; and now they expected her to yield to their wishes.

"No," said Diana to herself—"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." Yet there came to her the memory of other words—"Vengeance is Mine, and I will repay."

It was not without a hard struggle with her conscience that she persevered in her evil design. She knew the course she was pursuing was a despicable and a wicked one, and she was fully cognizant of the fact that she was not reaping all the pleasure from it that she anticipated.

The home life at Ferness was not much improved by this last exhibition of willfulness on the part of Diana. Evadne looked ill and miserable, whilst Thea resented the wrong done her sister by treating Diana with scorn. Her ladyship was as frigid as her position of step-mother permitted, and Peter Cameron nursed his sorrow in silence.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Diana carefully avoided coming in contact with Sir Lisle. In vain his wistful eyes followed her; in vain he sent message after message, imploring that she would grant him an interview; in vain he waited, hoping at some time to find her alone.

No one had told him directly of Miss Cameron's engagement. He heard rumors that bewildered and amazed him; but he could not credit them. He would not believe such a monstrous thing, he said to himself, unless he heard it from Diana's own lips.

He knew Lord Clanronald well; he had seen him the worse for wine; he had heard him in the stables, amongst the grooms, using language that even they resented; and that sweet imperious Diana, with her beautiful face and exquisite dainty grace, should marry this man was a complete mystery to him. He resolutely refused to believe it until he had heard it from her own lips. She seemed to be always on the watch to avoid him. If they were together in a room full of people, she never even looked in his direction, never addressed a word to him, never listened while he spoke to others. If the numbers dwindled, and there seemed to be any fear that they might be thrown together, she quitted the room. If by accident they met in hall or corridor, Diana passed on quickly. If he spoke, she made no sign of having heard.

"I might as well be living in Russia for all that I see of Diana," he said to himself bitterly.

In the meantime the news of the heiress' engagement spread. Sir Lisle was soon assured of the truth of it. There was an unusually high tide one afternoon; the wind was blowing from the sea, and the whole company had assembled on the terrace to watch the break of the waves on the shore. The wind was cold, and Sir Lisle, always thinking of Diana, always watching over her, with grave, loving, anxious eyes, saw that she looked pale. He fancied that she felt chilly, and went in search of a shawl for her. He found one, and took it to her. She was standing between Lord Clanronald and her father.

"I thought you looked cold, Diana," he said; "I have brought you a shawl."

Diana turned abruptly to him, and he was just going to wrap the shawl round her shoulders, when Lord Clanronald stepped forward and took it from his hands.

"It is my privilege now," he said, "to attend to Miss Cameron's wants, a privilege I cannot concede to another."

Sir Lisle made no answer to him; but he looked straight in Diana's face. "It that true, Diana?" he asked. The question was embarrassing; but Diana, without bestowing a glance upon her interrogator, answered: "Yes, perfectly true."

Sir Lisle left them without another word, with deep anguish and pain depicted on his face. He believed all now. But he little knew how in that same moment Diana wished herself dead. Nor did he imagine how during the remainder of that day she could not endure the sight of Lord Clanronald or the sound of his voice.

It was not long before the whole country was apprised of the fact that a marriage had been "arranged" between Lord Clanronald and Miss Diana Cameron of Ferness. It was a nine-days' wonder. It was discussed in the clubs and draw-rooms; it was severely commented upon by match-making mothers who had thought Lord Clanronald easy prey.

One morning—it was the third after the announcement of the event—Diana went to the library in search of a new novel. She found Lady Cameron and her father in deep and earnest discussion.

VERBENA FLOUR

Coats Off!

(By Harold Begbie.)
To his fellow countrymen in England, Harold Begbie makes a ringing appeal that they have done with all the plagues of the after-war period and settle themselves to the task of reconstruction in thorough earnest. It is striking that a poem addressed thus directly to one nation should be capable of such easy application to many another, our own included. In Mr. Begbie's poem in the London "Daily Chronicle" we hear again the oft repeated warning about the necessity of superproduction to make good the enormous losses involved in war.

For England's faith and future a thousand years go bar, who doubts our strength to conquer, who says our heart will fall? So far we've marched in honor, so often we've stood fast, Who says that we shall perish by our own hands at last?

Four hundred millions starving?—a world of bankrupt States?—Europe a debtors' prison?—Red ruin at the gates? Out on your tale of terror! Strip off the coward's mask! The more mounts English courage the harder is the task.

We'll set our engines roaring, we'll show the world again What pride is in our women, what wonder in our men; We'll pile the quays with plenty, and swing rich wealth aboard, We'll break the back of Hunger as we broke the Prussian Sword;

And break the back of traitors, with blows that save the world. For it's England's trumpet calling, it's her flag still unfurled, It's England's fate we're handling, and hard our blows shall fall On the Sweater of the poor man, and the traitor of us all.

Get hence, you bloated Spider, with profits God shall reck, Get hence, you Russ-fed Judas, the noose is at your neck; No man shall be amongst us henceforth for evermore Who does not live for England, true English to the core.

A famished world is pleading, Come, comrades, let us pull Our weight, the weight of England, till every larder's full; No famine, and no madness shall shake the world apart If England's flag be flying from the keep of England's heart.

Now let the false man tremble, now let the tyrant quail, The World's Need come to sift us, with our Dead behind the veil; The true man, kind and selfless, the brave man, strong and just, Shall stand like rocks when treason has crumbled into dust.

We'll make a greater England is saying all the world, For it's England's trumpet calling, it's her flag still unfurled, A nobler, gladder England, in body, soul, and mind; Coats off, sleeves up, and steady, for the sake of all mankind.

To Utilize Tidal Power.

In view of the shortage of British coal for export purposes it is reported that French scientists and industrialists are endeavoring to supply power by harnessing the tides. For several years French scientific men have declared that this was no fantastic dream, and already considerable data on the subject has been collected. In order to apply these theories to the test of practice, a small scientific company has been formed to carry out experiments at Ploomanach, on the Cotes du Nord.

Paderewski's Fingers.

After the signing of the Austrian Peace Treaty in Paris recently, Paderewski, who represented Poland, shook hands with the other Allied plenipotentiaries, using (so we read) both hands for the operation. He was not always so free with his magical hands. Some years ago, while shaking hands with a friend, his fingers came into contact with the lighted end of a cigar, and for a day or two he was unable to play. Thereupon he heavily insured each of his fingers, and to reduce the chances of such a happening again he made it a rigid rule not to shake hands with anyone.

Nameless Fame.

The Pantheon, Paris, where the French Government purpose to inter one unnamed polli in memory of the millions who died in France, has had a strangely chequered career, comments a Paris correspondent. Begun by Louis XV, as a cathedral, with the tomb of St. Genevieve as its proudest possession, it was made secular by the revolutionaries and dedicated as a Hall of Fame, the first "grands hommes" to be buried there being Mirabeau and Voltaire. In 1806 Napoleon made it a church again; in 1820 it was again secularized, in 1855 rededicated, and in 1885 made secular once more to receive the body of Victor Hugo.

Mrs. Churchill Couldn't Hold Cup to Mouth

Was So Run-Down Her Nerves Were Completely Shattered— Entirely Relieved by Tanlac.

"I believe I am the happiest woman in the world," said Mrs. A. Churchill, of 12 Chapel Street, St. John's, Newfoundland, as she purchased her third bottle of Tanlac at Connor's drug store, recently.

In relating her remarkable experience, Mrs. Churchill stated that she could not walk without the use of crutches, that at times she could not even feed herself and that her case had been given up as hopeless three different times. But, she now says that, although she has just finished her second bottle of Tanlac, she is feeling perfectly well and has already gained ten pounds in weight. Let Mrs. Churchill tell her own story. Here are the facts just as related by her:

"I began suffering two years ago and don't believe I drew a healthy breath from that time on until after taking Tanlac. I suffered from stomach trouble, rheumatism and other things until I got to where I couldn't hold a cup to my mouth and for a while I had to be fed. I was so weak and crippled up that I always had to use a walking stick or crutch when I went out and I couldn't walk ten minutes without being all out of breath. My stomach hurt me so bad I couldn't stand up straight and was so helpless and miserable that I would just lie down and cry. I might as well have stayed up all night as go to bed, for I couldn't sleep. My feet and ankles would swell up more than twice their natural size with rheumatism and my nerves were completely shattered. I was under treatment several times, took every kind of medicine I heard of and spent a little fortune, but got no encouragement that I would ever get well. In fact, I was three times given up as a hopeless case and another time was told I would be a cripple for life. I had an awful pain in my stomach and another in my back just as bad. My right wrist would swell all up with rheumatism and hurt me dreadfully and I had such fearful nervous headaches that I could hardly stand it.

"But I am just like a different person now and I wouldn't be without Tanlac if it cost ten dollars a bottle. I am eating just anything I want, even cabbage and pork, and all kinds of fruits, and never have a particle of trouble with my stomach any more. I never have a headache, backache nor a rheumatic pain now and my nerves have quieted down until I can sleep just like a baby all night. Really, I haven't a pain of any kind. I have gained ten pounds in weight and am not only able to do all my work, but I can walk as far as I like—have no more use for my crutch or walking stick—and I don't get all out of breath or feel tired like I did before. My complexion was very bad before I began taking Tanlac, but now, you can see I have a good, healthy color. If anyone had told me there was a medicine that could do me so much good in so short a time I would not have believed them. I honestly believe Tanlac has saved my life and I can hardly find words to express my gratitude."

The stomach regulates the condition of the blood and in the fountain head of health or disease as the case may be. Tanlac is intended, primarily, for the regulation of the stomach and the correction of catarrhal inflammation, but it is no uncommon thing for persons who have used it to find that it has relieved them, not only of indigestion, but also of rheumatism, kidney complaints and many other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble.

Bird With a Train Bearer.

The bird with the longest tail comes from Japan. Some of them have tails as much as twelve feet long. When they go to walk in the open air they are accompanied by special train bearers who keep the tail from touching the ground. It is a variety of the barndoor fowl. In the same way that pouters and fan-tailed pigeons have been developed from the common pigeon in Europe, the long-tailed cocks are carefully reared in Shinowara, a village on the island of Skikoku.

"FIDDLE-FIT"

Keep Liver and Bowels Clean and Active with "Cascarets"

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will have you feeling clear, rosy and as fit as a fiddle by morning. They work while sleep.

"That isn't soap, madam," interrupted the grocery man, examining the package. "Your little girl was in here yesterday for a half pound of cheese and a half pound of soap. This is the cheese."

The Bulk of the Estate of the late Charles L. Freer, a Detroit millionaire is left to institutions to further art study. There is a $200,000 bequest to the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, in stock of Parke, Davis & Co.; $50,000 is left to Regents of the University of Michigan to encourage Oriental art study, and $5,000 to the Detroit Museum of Art to improve the collection by Charles Storm Van Gravesande. A million dollars and 2,000 shares of Parke, Davis & Co. stock were given the Smithsonian Institution during Mr. Freer's lifetime for the erection of a building to be devoted to art, and the bequests in the will are supplementary. Provision is made for removal of the Peacock room in his Detroit home to the Smithsonian Institution.

"Howdy!" shouted the King of the Belgians to the cheering crowds who gathered at Wyoming stations as the Royal train ran through. His Majesty thus added another Americanism to his vocabulary. The King and Queen Elizabeth, waving their handkerchiefs from the observation platform to the crowds of farmers and their wives, were greeted by a perfect storm of "howdys" as they rolled through tiny Wyoming towns. By the time the train had reached North Platte the royal passengers had mastered the twang of it. "Howdy," the King shouted to the enthusiastic crowd at the depot, and the crowd, when they had recovered from the shock of being "howdyed" by a king cheered him to the echo.

Cupid Won a 10 to 1 bet on the Kansas City Board of Trade. W. J. Mesendick and James N. Russell, grain dealers, while at luncheon recently discussed marriage. Mesendick bet Russell that he (Russell) would not be married within a year. Russell accepted the bet. The odds were ten to one. There came the following telegram to Mesendick from Russell a few days later: "Mail us $10 care La Salle Hotel, Chicago. We need the money. Mr. and Mrs. James N. Russell." The couple were sent the following reply: "Enclosed find payment. Any man who would get married on a 10 to 1 bet at the expense of a friend deserves a heavy fine as well as suspension from the Board of Trade while he is absent."

An Agitated Typist told a Chicago judge that the new employer had tried to kiss her. The judge sent for the man. He admitted it. The court told him to pay his stenographer the $13 he owed her and $2 more for her time and trouble in coming to court. Then he told him to put $10 in the Salvation Army box. He did it. "Now," said the judge, "when you leave this court try to have a little respect for women. Don't think because you may know some who aren't right that all are wrong. When you see a nice young woman like this treat her as you would want your sister to be treated if she worked in some man's office."

For Fourteen Thousand Dollars a woman in New York gave up her child and permitted it to be adopted by its uncle and aunt. The application for the adoption of the child was made by Wilwyn Herbert, and his wife. The child is Marietta, 2 1/2 years old, daughter of Mrs. Evelyn Ryder Herbert. Her husband, a brother of Wilwyn Herbert, died about a year ago leaving an estate of more than $100,000. His will left the bulk of the estate to his brother and provided an annuity of $600 for the support of his widow and child. Mrs. Evelyn Herbert told the court she was unable to support herself and the child on the annuity and had signed an agreement permitting the adoption. She said she wanted to go back to England. The application for the adoption of the child was granted.

A School Principal at Canton, Kansas, was working on the roof of his house when there came a gust of wind so strong that it stripped his shirt from his back, pulling it from under his belt and blowing it over his head, tearing the sleeves from the shoulders to the cuffs. A party of motorists passing at the time thought he was flogging them and stopped. However, noting signs of embarrassment, they drove on.

Two Freak Chickens came out of a setting at Paul Kroll's little farm on the Mission Road, San Francisco. Out of two eggs were hatched two chicks, one with one-half a bill and one eye over its exact centre, and the other with three half bills and three eyes, one over each incomplete bill. One chick was born with one of the eyes and one of the bill halves that should have been the lot of the other. Before the shells had been completely shed from their backs both prospective hens died.

THE UNFULFILLMENT

Do your dreams ever come true while you are dreaming them? What I mean is, when you dream that you are going to get something that you want, do you go on and get it in the dream or does the dream stop just short of its fulfillment. I have noticed that my own dreams seem to be always of preparation for pleasure rather than actual enjoyment of it, and I have been wondering if this is an individual peculiarity or if it is of the eternal nature of a dream.

Never a Real Ride.

This is the sort of thing I mean. I love horseback riding and I am constantly dreaming that I am just going to go to ride. The horse is being saddled and I am waiting, then something interferences and I find the horse had to be used for some other purpose and I can't have him until later and I try vainly to get another horse. Or perhaps the horse is ready and I cannot seem to get into my habit. I don't think that I ever actually rode in a dream.

But I Never Eat the Lunch.

Again when I was a child we used to have a basement luncheon room at school in which sandwiches, milk, cake and, twice a week, ice cream was sold. As my pocket money, like that of most children of that day, was limited, I used to have to choose between the various things which appealed to my palate, and I can remember how hard it sometimes was to make up my mind. Well, the backwash of memory from that circumstance carries me every now and then to school again, endows me with the ample pocket money I now have (ample for such purposes I mean, did anyone ever have unqualifiedly ample pocket money?) and starts me toward the luncheon room with my pockets full of loose change. I go down the stairs, I have even reached the lunch counter and ordered, but never yet did I get my order and taste it before I woke up!

THE UNFULFILLMENT OF DREAMS.

Do your dreams ever come true while you are dreaming them? What I mean is, when you dream that you are going to get something that you want, do you go on and get it in the dream or does the dream stop just short of its fulfillment? I have noticed that my own dreams seem to be always of preparation for pleasure rather than actual enjoyment of it, and I have been wondering if this is an individual peculiarity or if it is of the eternal nature of dreams.

I go down the stairs, I have even reached the lunch counter and ordered, but never did I get my order and taste it before I woke up!

They Come Back But Only for a Time.

There is one queer phase of unfulfillment about my dreams which a few friends have told me is true about theirs, and here again I wonder if this is mere coincidence, or if my reader friends will report a like experience. Whenever I dream that those who have passed over are back again with me, there is a shadow on my happiness. I always feel that although they have come back, they cannot stay. They do not seem exactly ill, I have no hope of getting a doctor and curing them. I simply know that they have been given back to me but only for a time.

If this unfulfillment of dreams is universal perhaps it is because if we dreamed true we should have our dreams better than our waking days. I wonder.

Fads and Fashions.

Cloak linings have a great deal of gold in them. Paris dressmakers are advertising the collar finish. Ostrich feathers appear dyed in Paisley colorings. Duvetyne is one of the most popular of all fabrics. Silver lace is much used with pink and old blue. Dress materials all incline to the splendid.

What is Phoratone?

Phoratone is a preparation manufactured by Dr. F. Stafford & Son for all kinds of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and various Lung Troubles. It is the result of 25 years' experience and thousands of bottles are being sold every year. At the present time quite a large number of people are suffering from Sore Throats, Coughs and Colds, etc., and if you will only try a bottle of this Phoratone you will be surprised with results. You can purchase same at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, for 30c. a bottle. Postage 10c. extra.

FARM AND CITY.

The hours of night bring calm repose upon the quiet farm; the weary husbandman there knows sweet slumber's fullest charm. Refreshed in spirit, brain and brawn, he rises, wearily, and rings the bells when dippy roosters greet the dawn with idiotic yells. How different it is in town, where weary people weep; in vain the laborer lies down to have a slice of sleep. The streets are full of strident noise that jars the nightly shades, and giddy girls and buoyant boys sing ringing serenades. And batty speedsters whiz along in whanging motor cars, and greet with yells and ribald song the pale, disgruntled stars. Belated plugs, with noisy hoots, to stables gallivant, and vagrant cats on metal roofs attempt a bughouse chant. And so the man who needs his sleep becomes a ghastly wreck; and in the morn he cannot keep from muttering, "By heck!" A night of sleep would soothe his soul, and heal life's sores and stings, but morning finds him in the hole, and he exclaims, "By jings!"

Lively Time With a Python.

The crew of a British gunboat, in Eastern waters once had a lively time looking after a python on board that had escaped from its cage. Besides the python there was on board a big Borneo orang-outang. The python, which was nineteen or twenty feet long, having dined heartily on a deer about three weeks before, began to feel its appetite returning, and in searching about its box for a place of egress, found one side in bad repair. It did not take long for that python to come through the weak part, and, quite unobtrusively, it began its perambulations around the boat.

Seeing the orang-outang chained up a few yards off, the big snake invited itself to dinner very much to its taste. It would have been all over with the orang-outang had not the quartermaster at that moment made the discovery that the two pets were about to be merged into one. He promptly cut the orang-outang loose.

The latter was up the masthead before any mischief could be done and a lieutenant the owner of the orang-outang, the quartermaster and a member of the crew flung themselves upon the hungry python—one at the head, another at the tail and a third in the middle.

Then the excitement began, for the python wanted to get one of the aggressors nicely in its coils, and the men were determined that it should be kept out in something as nearly approaching a straight line as possible.

For a minute it was the Laocoon group all over again, only in this case the three men and the snake were sprawling over the deck instead of standing upright in a classic attitude.

Re-inforcements, however, arrived in hot haste and about twenty blue-jackets, each embracing a foot of python reduced the reptile to comparative quiet. The procession marched back to the python's box, coiled the creature inside and shut it up. But the orang-outang sat aloft in the mast-head a long time before he came to the conclusion that he was not the menu for the day.

The silence in the Rocky Mountains is so great that the flapping of a partridge's wing may be heard for several miles.

THE PLAYFUL YEARS.

How little we knew in the glad old days when life was a round of play. Of the many cares and the many griefs that were hidden along the way! Oh, we wondered oft why the mother sighed and the father's face was sad. But they shielded us in our boyhood years from every care they had.

We woke each morn to a care-free day, full sure of the joy we'd planned. And the fluttering crepe on a neighbor's door we never could understand. There was no such thing as the pain of death in our glorious lives back then. For we were sheltered from every care that comes to the hearts of men.

We never grieved in the mother did when sorrowful news came in. Though we wondered at tears which filled her eyes and noted her trembling chin. She whispered of some one about to die and kissed us and went away. But we never knew what it really meant and it never disturbed our play.

We asked for things and we got them, too, nor thought of the money spent. We never learned in those early days they sacrifice they meant. We knew that the father went to work and was weary and worn at night. But always the cares that he bore for us were hidden away from sight.

And now we stand to the griefs of life, and now we have come to know why the crepe is placed on a neighbor's door and the hurt and the ache of woe. And we hide our grief as our parents did and we try to check our tears. So that never a care shall our children know to the end of their playful years.

The Old Path.

Now that the election campaign is over and the results only remain to be known, it is obvious that soon there will again be the old line of things, and as this is the first election after the end of the war period there are many serious things to be grappled with by the new Government. During the years of war and strife every ounce of energy was exerted in the common endeavour to win the victory, and it is now a matter of history that Newfoundlanders on land and sea played their part nobly and won encomiums from all sides for their personal prowess and collective bravery and ingenuity. It is equally well known that since our war efforts absorbed so much of the time, other things necessary for the welfare of the country were neglected, and much legislation was left undone that would otherwise have been enacted for the common good of the people. To the new Government will fall the privilege of taking up, more or less, the threads laid down five years ago, and to enact the laws that the intervening years since 1914 have, if anything made the more essential for our well-being and progress, and general prosperity. Of course although our efforts have been directed along the lines conducive to the gaining of victory, our general finances have not suffered. Far from it, as all know our present high, sound financial condition, but it is equally evident to the keen observer that the legislation of a country demands more than economic security, although that of course is the first fundamental of responsible government.

Although the old ways must again be trod, yet they can never be trod in the manner of pre-war days, for the past five years have been an experience and have brought to light many new conditions and things that hitherto played a very small if any, part in the government of this country. The days of war educated the people in a general sense, for it awakened many to take more interest and intelligence in the outside world, and by so doing, to lose some of their insular feelings. This was particularly emphasized by the numbers of our boys who travelled—we might almost say—the seven seas, as well as sojourning in foreign countries and coming back brought with them ideas imbued during their leave of absence from home.

The task then facing the new Government is one requiring much more consideration than was probably ever given to it before. There is a greater amount of practical work to be done than ever before. There will be a greater amount of work demanded from the legislators than ever before in this country. All these things spell a more than busy time for the first session of the new government, and during that session evidence will be plentifully given, proving the ability or otherwise of those placed in power by the electorate. Whether the actions of the new government will satisfy the people represented, is a question, not positively answerable at present, and to it, as to many others, we can only say "wait and see."

Inter-Collegiate Football

CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY ST. BON'S.
The championship match was played yesterday between St. Bon's and Bishop Field. The former won by four goals, the score being 4 to 0. St. Bon's was hindered by having five members of their team quarantined on account of one of the boarders having got diphtheria. The substitutes were: G. Eagan, E. Maher, backs; K. McGrath, left half; G. Halley, outside right; R. Halley, inside right. They played an excellent game considering their practice. Bishop Field played two new men. A. Rendell, who has returned from Montreal, and Ricketts, Y.C. St. Bon's will probably play Methodist College on Saturday, although they have the cup they will finish the third round.

The Dickinson Memorial

According to prints shown yesterday by Judge Johnson, the memorial to the late Miss Ethel Dickinson to be erected on Cavendish Square, will be a handsome one. Standing twenty-five feet high, it has a base of granite seven feet square. Public subscription has been solicited and subscribed. The monument will cost about $4,000.00 and the erection about $500. It will be a credit to the city.

Committed to Supreme Court.

At the preliminary enquiry into an alleged double bigamy case, held before Judge Morris yesterday afternoon, one of the accused, the wife, was committed to the Supreme Court for trial at the enquiry.

Police Court.

A returned soldier who said he was sick and had no home, applied to the lockup last night for shelter. He was before court this morning. Judge Morris sent him to the proper authorities to be looked after.

Vessel Abandoned.

Yesterday the Marine and Fisheries Department received the following message from Fogo:—
"The schooner Arnesba 466 tons owned by J. Flett & Co. of Bonne Bay and bound to Fleetwood with a load of lumber was abandoned 110 miles off Fogo. The crew arrived safely."

In for Repairs.

The tern schooner, Marne arrived in port yesterday, 27 days from Norway and towed to Bay of Islands with a cargo of salt and empty barrels. On the way out the vessel lost her rudder, and great difficulty was experienced in bringing her to port.

Decks Swept by Seas.

The "County of Richmond" meeting with heavy seas had her decks swept, loosing all her boats, was compelled to put back to Burgeo to have repairs effected, according to a message received to-day by the Deputy Minister of Customs.

Wedding Bells.

GOSS-MORGAN.
A very pretty wedding took place at Whitbourne on Monday, Nov. 3rd at the Church of St. John the Baptist, when Miss Jessie Goss was united in the Holy Bonds of matrimony to Mr. Geo. Morgan. Miss Goss is a daughter of the late Geo. Goss, and Mr. Morgan is an ex-soldier, having spent over two years as a prisoner of war in Germany. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Richard Goss, while the groom was ably supported by his brother, Mr. Albert Morgan; the bridesmaid and bridesboy were master Richard Goss, Hilda Morgan and John Goss respectively. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. Geo. Jeffrey. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to the residence of the groom's mother where the wedding supper was partaken of. The presents received were numerous and costly testifying the esteem in which bride and groom are held.

Portia's Passengers.

S.S. Portia sailed at 10 o'clock this morning, taking the following passengers:—Messrs. Gilfoyle, Brunshet, Squires, Bowring, Parsons, James, Ashford, Spencer, Fleming, James, Hodder, Inkpen, Squires, Douglas, Skinner, Butt, Hubby, Rev. Dea. Rev. Brude, Messames Brunshet, Vallis, Moulton, Osmond, Vall; Misses Fleming, Rowsell, Grant, and 23 second class.

Landed Injured Seaman.

The S. S. Craigmere arrived in port last night, to have some repairs made. The ship met very stormy weather and seas were continually sweeping the decks. One of the seaman was knocked down and badly injured, he was landed at the King's Wharf last night and taken to hospital. The ship will sail again to-morrow if repairs are effected.

Ballot Counting Delayed

Some considerable delay was caused in the counting of the West End ballots this morning. It appears that several hundred ballots had been irregularly handled by a deputy or some deputy. Some had numbers written on the back; some initials and number; and some had no initials or number. After consultation with the Minister of Justice, the Returning Officer delivered the judgement that the ballots were spotted ones. Consequently all such ballots were laid aside. It is possible that the candidates will lodge a protest against the judgement, the consensus of opinion being that it is a great pity to disfranchise voters through the ignorance or stupidity of a deputy returning officer.

Too Many Churches, Few Believers.

There is a joyous air of youth about the Church Congress at Leicester. It has arisen refreshed after its long hibernation, and there are signs of a glowing and ardent determination to bring the Church into real contact with man's everyday problems.

Nevertheless there remains the unwholesome fact, very apparent before the war and not less apparent now, that the Churches as a whole are losing their hold upon the people as a whole. The war brought its temporary reactions; but, if religious feeling is to be measured by the size of congregations, it is clear already that the chasm persists and, in peace, is widening again.

The chasm is not to be bridged by papers and discussions, or by restatements of dogma, or even by the adoption of a more militant policy in urgent social questions. Dogmatic religion does not play the same intimate part in family life as it did in the Victorian age. Thousands of young men reach manhood entirely ignorant and incurious and uninterested in the religion of churches and chapels. There are many voices calling them from many diverse pulpits, and in the discord they hear no clear call; nor will they hear and heed until a measure of re-union has been effected, until sects diminish and one compelling and attractive voice makes itself heard above the tumult.—Daily Mail.

Making the Auto Do the Chores.

An improved method for making an automobile do all the farm chores at a small expense for gasoline has been devised by a native of Kansas. His invention is an attachment comprising a frame with a pulley at its forward end adapted to project in front of the radiator of the car; by starting up the engine it is possible to operate the threshing machine, saw wood, churn the butter, turn the ice cream freezer, cut the fodder, turn the grindstone, operate the cream separator, or even milk the cow if the farmer is equipped with suitable milking apparatus.

The Eloquent Arabian.

Col. The Hon. R. M. Preston quotes a delightful instance of Arab eloquence in English in an article in the Fortnightly Review, in which he tells of Lord Allenby's great victory at Damascus.

In a village near Damascus "a local poet read a long poem of a war composition which he afterwards had done into English by a bazaar writer, and sent a copy to one of our Generals. As it is an interesting example of the work of one of the Arab species of the genus Babu, I may, perhaps, be excused for quoting it in full.

"The sound of thunderings and the lights that we see in the cloudy atmosphere is caused from the mixture and friction of oxygen and nitrogen. It produces the brilliant lovely lights and the terrible loudly sounds, causing the pourings of rain to irrigate the earth which is to give rise to the grain that is to save the lives of God's creatures. And these heavenly gifts are given to the happy souls of the earth, but those who have the lovely feelings are the people of freedom. Alas! the Orientals (sic) who are the causes of the door being shut in our faces for eight hundred year forever. We have been living in the hopes for this time to come.

"The sound of those thunderings and the brilliant of these lights is a fire from your lovely feelings and love of freedom and the freedom of the unfortunate Orientals from the without the cause of any loss to the inhabitants. We offer our hands with thank to your King and yours Generals and Soldiers and ask God to keep you healthy, wealthy and safe. Now you are leaving us again we bid you a kind farewell. We give our best regard to the victorious British nation. God be with you wherever you go, or whatever you be. When we received the message of your coming from your air fleets in the lovely atmosphere of beautiful Syria, it reminds us of the Prophets. All of us shouted in a happy voice the brilliant of your light lights the whole world. What a good judgment and what bravery you have shown.

"You are the victorious army which has no equal and by your occupation of this country is the change from darkness to lightness and as the heat of the sun passes through the clouds and the lovely light fills the world without noticing the revolution that is the way your sudden beautiful presence saved us from the treachery of the enemy. God save you from all future trouble and we are happy under the lights of your lovely sun forever. We must date the time of your joyful occupation of this country in golden letters in our hearts and we singing in a happy voices forever."

A Great Editor.

SIR EDWARD COOK, EDITOR OF THE "PALL MALL," "WESTMINSTER GAZETTE," AND THE "DAILY NEWS"—THE FRIEND AND BIOGRAPHER OF RUSKIN—THE FULL LIFE OF A LITERARY EDITOR.

Sir Edward Cook, the first editor of the Westminster Gazette, is dead at the age of 61. He was a great editor, and edited the Pall Mall Gazette before the Westminster was started, and left the Westminster to become editor of the Daily News. He spent 12 years on these three papers.

Lord Morley Starts Him.

"When he became journalism, as he did very soon after taking his degree, he was by nature and training well fitted for it. He had acquired settled and orderly habits of scholarship, and he had made up his mind on certain broad principles of political faith," says the Times.

"Lord Morley, then editor of the Pall Mall, an organ of great importance and strong personnel, gave him encouragement; and he found himself in genial surroundings when later on, under Stead's editorship of that paper, he was appointed assistant editor in succession to Lord Milner. The editorship fell to him in 1889, on Stead's relinquishing it, and for three years the Pall Mall, under his guidance, was a definitely Liberal organ supporting Home Rule."

A Wonderful 40 Years.

Mr. J. A. Spender, who succeeded him as the editor of the Westminster Gazette, writes a charming appreciation of a charming personality.

"The death of Sir Edward Cook, at the comparatively early age of 61, has come as a great shock and grief to his friends and colleagues in the Press, and to all those who were associated with him in his work in the Press Bureau during the war," he says. "Through by his own choice he remained in the back-ground, he was unquestionably one of the small company who leave their mark on their time, and his unflagging industry enabled him to do as much in the forty years of his working life as would have taken other men half as long again. He was a man of sterling character and great varied gifts, being in equal parts student, politician, and man of letters, and in all three displaying a capacity which was the envy of his colleagues and fellow-workers."

With Stead on the "P.M.G."

"For many years after he had gone down, 'Cook of New College' left a reputation behind him as one of the best Presidents and smartest and gaudiest debaters the Oxford Union had ever known, and a brilliant Parliamentary career was predicted for him. But journalism laid hold of him as soon as he left Oxford and came to London, and he was gradually absorbed into the Pall Mall Gazette, first as an outside contributor in Lord Morley's reign, and then as a member of the staff under Stead, with Milner and, afterwards, Edmund Garrett for his chief colleagues.

"Throughout Stead's editorship he was a staunch supporter of his chief, though no two men could have differed more widely in temperament, and the alliance that he applied to Stead's brilliant and fervent made this partnership one of the most effective in London journalism. When Stead retired, Cook was obviously marked out as his successor, and with Edmund Garrett for his assistant-editor he kept up the Pall Mall tradition with unflagging energy and skill for the two years and more until the paper was suddenly bought from under his feet, and converted into a Tory paper by Mr. Astor.

He Starts the "Westminster."

"Not to be beaten, he found a friendly and public-spirited proprietor in Sir George Newnes, and set to work without an hour's delay to found another paper which should carry on the tradition and be the lineal descendant of the 'old Pall Mall' under Morley and Stead. It was thus that the Westminster Gazette came into existence, with Sir Edward (then Mr.) Cook for its first editor and, with him, practically the whole literary staff which had served under him on the Pall Mall.

"Three years later he left the Westminster to edit the Daily News, and for five years more he reigned in Boulevard Street; then, after an interval in which he contributed leaders to the Daily Chronicle, he quitted regular journalism, and devoted himself wholly to the writing of books, and mainly to his magnum opus—the great library edition and biography of Ruskin, in which Mr. Alexander Wedderburn collaborated.

"Nearly twenty-seven years have passed since he came to Tudor Street as editor of the Westminster Gazette, but there are some still at work in the same office who have a vivid and grateful recollection of service under him both on the Westminster and previously on the Pall Mall.

His Journalistic Methods.

"He was the kindest and most considerate of chiefs, with a remarkable range of gifts and interests, which made him scarcely less keen about art and literature than politics. He was a man of deadly accuracy and precision, with a most methodical habit of indexing papers and keeping references, and if he was in any sense exacting, it was in requiring the same qualities from those who worked with him. His own writing was crisp and pointed, well seasoned with allusion and quotation, but very thrifty of rhetoric and purple passages, and his armoury of fact and reference made him one of the deadliest debaters with the pen.

"He had a special skill in short comments, and seldom let a morning pass without contributing two or three notes to the 'Notes of the Day' of the Westminster or 'Occasional Notes' of the Pall Mall Gazette. In order to give himself time for these in the crowded hours of the morning, he devised a most ingenious system of joint leader-writing, by which he wrote one-half and a colleague the other half of the leading article; and

THAT NIGHT COUGH

Could anything be more trying or more exhausting? Peps will end it! The Pine vapor breathed down the air passages when a Peps is dissolved in the mouth relieves the irritation, soothes the inflamed place and stops the cough. Mr. John Doussart of Little Current, Ont., says: "I was troubled with an irritating cough that kept me awake at nights. Nothing I took gave me relief until I used Peps. This wonderful breathe-able remedy, however, has entirely rid me of the cough." For asthma, bronchitis, laryngitis, sore throat and colds use Peps. All dealers. 50c. box.

the scheme was so neatly laid down in his instructions that it was impossible for the reader to discover that two hands had been at work.

"Though outwardly the least emotional of men, he was uncompromising in his loyalty both to causes and persons. He threw up his editorship of the Pall Mall Gazette without a moment's hesitation when he was unable to discover the politics of the proprietor who had bought it from Mr. Yates Thompson; he was equally unyielding nine years later when the proprietors of the Daily News were divided about his defence of the Boer War.

His Cult of Ruskin.

"For eight years he gave the best of himself to the monumental edition of Ruskin. His cult of Ruskin dated from the days when he went from Oxford to report, or rather describe, 'the Professor's' last series of lectures, and from that followed an intimacy which, so far as Ruskin's condition permitted, continued to his death. That the most copious and unrestrained of English writers should have had the coolest, most cautious, and most critical of writers for his editor and biographer is one of the oddities of literary history, but great good fortune for Ruskin. The latter prided himself that he had the most analytical mind in Europe, but on this side, at all events, he had his equal in Cook, who analyzed the analyst in a manner that would surely have given him exquisite pleasure could he have watched it.

The Best Book About a Journalist. "Two other biographies, one of Florence Nightingale and the other of his old friend and assistant-editor on the Pall Mall Gazette, show Cook in a different vein. To this time also belong his 'Delane of the Times'—the best book ever written about a journalism—and the essays and studies which were recently collected and published under the title of 'Literary Recollections.'

The Top of Scawfell Pike

"The top of Scawfell Pike is one of those marvelous places where even we common people may get a momentary entry into the ecstasies of the poets and see the earth and everything on it mystically apparelled with 'the glory and the freshness of a dream,' says the Manchester Guardian. "Everyone who knows what hills can give to the spirit of man will be grateful to Lord Leconfield for giving to Englishmen this archaic core of English soil with all the vesture of beauty that the sun and the Atlantic and the south-west wind have woven about it.

"By this piece of generosity the peak on which there burned the loftiest of all the beacons that called up England to resist the power of Spain becomes a monument to the thousands of men from the Cumbrian valleys below who were killed in withstanding the power of Prussia.

"Scawfell Pike is not merely the highest piece of English ground. It and the lesser heights about it are some of the oldest mountains in Europe. It was a mountain before the Alps had been made. It is splendid to look at, splendid to look from, and splendid to ascend."

Scawfell Pike is the highest mountain summit in England. This henceforth, by the goodwill of Lord Leconfield, the Lord of the Manor, is to be placed, subject to any common rights that exist, under the custody of the National Trust. He makes this gift in honour of the men of the Lake District who fought, and in thankful memory of the men who gave their lives in the great war, 1914-1918. It is not intended that any monument shall be placed upon the summit, but it is possible that in the existing cairn a rough stone may be inserted recording the gift and its purpose.

Fashions and Fads.

Large hats seem to be gaining in favor. Reversible velour is good for golf costumes. Leather hats are most attractive for sports. Ruffed side draperies appear on some of the new frocks.

A single long string of beads may be the keynote of a gown.

Handkerchief linen is being used for the new slip-on blouses.

The finest, most cobwebby laces are those most sought by fashion.

A few tailored silk waists have high collars with tiny turnovers.

Color is one of the most important elements in winter millinery.

Leaf green, with black and a little old gold, is another good color scheme.

Some of the new gaiters, in tan and brown, come almost to the knees.

A very simple type of wrap has a shawl collar open almost to the waist.

Silver tinsel and peach-colored Georgette combined make lovely dance frocks.

Low shoes and spats are the natural result of the high cost of leather.

Never before has embroidery played so important a part in women's apparel.

Little embroidered caps of self appear on many new set-in sleeves.

Parrot-green taffeta and black velvet are a good combination for evening.

Woman's New Walk.

While the new skirts are a little longer than the modes favored during the past three or four years, they are much narrower. The new skirt requires a new walk. For several years, says a dressmaking authority, women have enjoyed the freedom of their limbs, and the effect is noticeable in the masculine stride of the modern girl. With the narrow skirt action will be restricted, and we shall have once more the short steps of the hobble skirt. With wider hips, however, she will gain in grace what is lost in freedom. The new walk will be like the walk of a pelican—miming—but graceful, deliberate yet dainty, and always alluringly feminine."

AND LIFE'S WORTH WHILE BECAUSE YOU SMILE.

STILL WAITING.

She did not know he was only a waiter, for he had lately told her he was a gentleman of independent means.

But one evening they were seated in Hyde Park. John felt very drowsy; he had had a very long and trying day of it in the restaurant. But Clarissa was not to be denied. The glamour of love's young dream was still upon her.

"John," she whispered, "do you love me?"

"Eh? What?" opening his eyes. "Love me—of course I do, darling!"

"How much, sir? Oh, roas' best, eighteenpence, sir; potatoes, fourpence; cabbage, fourpence; bread, penny. Two-and-threepence, sir, please."

WHY ALEXANDER WEPT.

The teacher was telling his class about the conquests of Alexander the Great. He made the tale a stirring one. "When Alexander had conquered India," he said, wishing to impress the children, "what do you think he did? Do you think he gave a great feast to celebrate his triumph? No; he sat down and wept!"

The children seemed to be a little disappointed at this childish exhibition on the part of the hero: so the teacher continued. "Now, why do you think Alexander wept?" he asked.

Up went a little hand.

"Well, Tommy?" said the teacher.

"Please, sir," said Tommy, hesitatingly, "perhaps he didn't know the way back!"

WHAT HE SAW.

"Do tell me something about Mr. Oldplot's latest play!" said the young lady on the bottom stair at the dance.

"They say the climax at the close of the third act is superb! Won't you describe it to me as you saw it?"

"I will," grimly consented the young man with the spilt white kid gloves.

"The heroine came slowly on, and knelt, dagger in hand, behind a clump of pink ribbons. Then the hero emerged from a large bunch of purple flowers, and as soon as she perceived him she fell upon him, stabbed him twice with a handsome hatpin, and he sank back into a beautiful aigrette.

"What in the world are you talking about?" exclaimed the fair listener.

"Well," replied the narrator, "you see, the lady in front of me refused to remove her hat, and that is how the scene appeared to me."

OUT OF ORDER.

The village was all agog. Flossie Flatfoot was marrying William Giles. The church was crowded. Flossie, looking as pale as her somewhat highly-coloured countenance would allow, bore up until the plain gold ring was safely on her finger, and then, overcome, burst into tears.

The villagers were touched but not anxious. Many girls cry at weddings. Then suddenly William Giles screwed up his face and broke into howls. Tears poured down his face and dripped off his whiskers.

"What's up? Hush, man!" those nearest him urged. But Giles continued to howl, and at last burst out:—

"Let me be! I feel worse than 'er about it!"

PERHAPS.

Perhaps your days seem always dull, Uninteresting, long? Perhaps affairs will not go right. You wonder what is wrong; Perhaps you grumble, fret, or frown At trifles, when a small Amount of patience would, perhaps, Eliminate them all!

Perhaps you've never tried to smile, You think your path too rough? Perhaps you think your neighbours are All happy, rich enough? Perhaps you've never noticed, say, The man across the street? Perhaps your life compared with his Is positively sweet!

So look around you day by day For all the good in life; Seek sunshine every hour you can, And suffocate all strife. Perhaps you'll find it strange at first, But soon you'll banish care, In wealth of happiness you'll be A multi-millionaire!

A TIP FOR GUARDS.

"Now, guard," said Mr. Pilkington, "remember, if I have this carriage all to myself for the whole journey, you will receive half a crown from me."

"Very good, sir," said the guard, and he locked the door and went to his brake to think out how he would invest that half-crown when he got it.

All went well till they got to a station about the middle of the journey, and then an irascible gentleman pulled at the door of Pilkington's carriage as if he were pulling for a prize in a tug-o-war.

"Guard, guard!" he called, "open this door! I know your tricks and I won't countenance 'em, I've got the right to travel in this carriage, and I mean to do it!"

The guard hurried up; but, wonder of wonders, he whispered a few words to the irascible gentleman, and that individual went quietly away to seek room elsewhere.

"How did you manage it?" Pilkington, as he pressed the promised half-crown into his hand. "How did you manage to get that bad-tempered old chap to go away so quietly?"

"Oh, that was easy," replied the guard, with a suspicion of a wink. "I only just told 'im you were a little bit wrong in the 'ead, an' 'e went off like a fly what had trod on a 'ot cinder."

THE SHADOW OF YOUTH.

Shaking with grief, the young wife pillowed her head upon her mother's breast, and sobbed like a child.

"My poor child!" exclaimed the newly-made ma-in-law, her eyes gleaming. "What is it? Has Jack been cruel to you?"

"No, mamma," sobbed the bride; "it is not that! It is on account of a terrible discovery—"

"Ah!" exclaimed the fond parent. "Then there is a dark page in his life and he did not tell you till it was too late! Wretch! Monster! How can man be so base! How—"

"It is not that!" exclaimed the bride again. "But he found the picture of me sitting in a basin that you had taken for a baby-food advertisement!"

THE WRONG "BILL."

The gentle Eliza was sitting drearily in the darkened room, waiting miserably for a visitor who she feared would never come. To tell the truth, Eliza and William Snigaby had quarrelled bitterly the night before.

But what is that? A ring, a step, a masculine voice. She waited not, but threw herself in the visitor's arms.

"Oh, my darling!" she sobbed, with her head upon his bosom. "I am so glad you have called! I tried so long to make it up and do my best to pay you for bringing light into my life. Let us settle peacefully once more with each other."

"Well, miss," said a strange voice, "I'm willing, I'm sure. But my instructions is that if you don't 'm off of the gas!"

When Eliza found out that she had mistaken the gas-man for her William she swooned.

NAIL ECONOMY.

Mr. and Mrs. Newbride had at last obtained a villa in a suburb of London, and Mr. Newbride was hanging the pictures. There was a certain photograph of his wife which he decided must go up, but which was too small to suspend from the rail by a cord. He thereupon got a substantial nail, and hammered it into the wall.

There came a knock at the door.

"It's Mr. Nexdor," said his wife, running to the window. "Your hammering has disturbed him."

Mr. Newbride hastened to apologize.

"Oh, I don't mind the noise," replied Mr. Nexdor, cheerily. "I only came to ask if I might hang a picture on the other end of the nail!"

BACKWARD FOR AN M.A.

The Neverleeps had just moved into a flat below that of the great Professor Fuddlehead, M.A., and, aided by a few congenial spirits, were having a quiet little house-warming.

The walls groaned, the windows shook, plates crashed into a thousand pieces, the Neverleeps' baby squaled unheard, and, with it all, the notes of "The Merry Jazz," floated up to the professor, posing over Muddlehead's "Boshology."

In desperation he at last sent Matilda Jane to remonstrate with the new-comers.

"Please, sir," she said to Mr. Neverleep, "Professor Fuddlehead says will you make less noise, because he can't read."

"Ah," replied the noisy one, "I'm sorry to hear that! Tell your master that I could read when I was only five!"

THAT WAS ONE WAY.

Jones leisurely took his ticket at the office of a suburban railway-station; but, on hearing the train approaching, made more haste than speed to the platform, for a bold little run, when nearly at the bottom of the steps leading to the platform, caused his foot to slip. His silk hat wobbled on to his brow, his umbrellas and bag betook themselves one to the right and one to the left; but he manfully regained these possessions by holding them down on the steps in a grasp-all sort of fashion.

Whilst thus on all fours Jones meekly looked up at the official at the gate and inquired:—

"Is this the way to the Victoria train?"

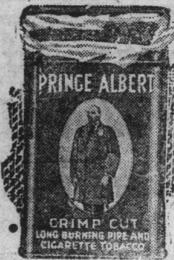

"Yes, sir," was the unsympathetic reply, "you may come that way if you wish."

And Jones felt still more lowly-minded.

Just Rats.

For want of a Pied Piper of Hamelin, the British Board of Agriculture is using the next best thing to get rid of the rats and mice—a Bill.

The House tinkered when the Bill was introduced says "A Londoner. The utterers did not know that the rat has been described as the most expensive animal maintained by man. He costs in damage anything up to $200,000,000 a year—as much as the whole of the Government subsidy to the farming industry. He spreads bubonic plague and other diseases among men and animals alike. He is of no earthly use except as a scavenger, and there the remedy is more than the disease. The fact has now gone forth; he must be exterminated wherever he shows his head—in stacks, in granaries, in warehouses, in the holds of vessels. The mouse, too, if less harmful, is just as useless as his big relative—and the Lusitania Enquiry--General Strike Declared in Huelva Spain.

GENERAL STRIKE DECLARED.
HUELVA, Spain, Nov. 5. A general strike has been declared here. Rioting has occurred at the Mines.

LUSITANIA ENQUIRY.
LONDON, Nov. 5. The parliamentary paper made public to-day containing secret evidence in the enquiry into the sinking of the Lusitania, shows that Capt. W. T. Turner, of the Lusitania, admitted that he disobeyed instructions of the Admiralty in steaming only at the rate of eighteen knots an hour. The Captain testified, however, that had he gone faster, the Lusitania would have reached the bar at Liverpool before a vessel could cross it, owing to tidal conditions. Captain Turner also testified that he had not steered a zigzag course at full speed as the Admiralty had ordered, because he thought this order applied only when a submarine was sighted. It was contended by Capt. Turner that although he had been warned by the Admiralty to avoid the headlands, he was justified in coming within ten miles of the old head of Kinsale near where the Lusitania was torpedoed, in order to fix his position. If he had remained longer out of sight of land he declared he would be taking risks.

PENALTY FOR DESTRUCTION OF SHIPS.
BERLIN, Nov. 5. The note of the Supreme Council calling upon Germany to send to Paris delegates to sign a protocol agreeing to carry out certain unfulfilled provisions of the armistice regarding the surrender of railway material, agricultural machinery, etc., and to make compensation for the destruction of the fleet at Scapa Flow, has been received here. The note calls for the surrender of five light cruisers, floating docks and small destroyers, as a penalty for the destruction of the warships at Scapa Flow.

OHIO GOES DRY AGAIN.
COLUMBUS, Nov. 5. Ohio yesterday voted to remain in the dry column by a majority which may reach three times the size of that by which it voted dry a year ago, according to incomplete and unofficial returns received early to-day at the Office of the Secretary of the State. Partial returns from half the counties in the State indicated a dry majority on all four prohibition proposals of approximately seventy-five thousand.

CANNOT ABANDON POSITION.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. The Government cannot accept proposal of organized labor to end the coal strike by vacating injunction against officials of the United Mine Workers of America. Assistant Attorney General Ames, in the absence of Attorney General Palmer, announced to-day that the Government could not abandon its position, because the strike was in violation of the law.

TO ATTACK PETROGRAD.
HELSINGFORS, Nov. 5. An Helsingfors newspaper says it understands that twenty thousand volunteers have secretly enlisted in Finland to join in the attack on Petrograd. The newspaper says the men will be supplied with arms and equipment, either by the Allies or General Yudenitch and urges the Government to take preventative steps.

TO BE HELD IN PARIS.
PARIS, Nov. 5. The first meeting of the League of Nations will be held in Paris. It did not, however, fix a date for gathering.

YOUNG ROOSEVELT ELECTED.
NEW YORK, Nov. 5. Indications early to-day were that the Republicans had gained several seats in the New York State Assembly as a result of an election yesterday. Their representation had been increased by five with no reports available on doubtful districts in King's County, Brooklyn. The strength of Socialists at next session remains in doubt. Both the women who served at last session were defeated by men for reelection. One of the interesting characters at next session will be Lieutenant Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who was elected from Oyster Bay District, by a large majority.

FIGHT BEGUN.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. The fight on eight hour day has begun. The first round indicate that it will be prolonged and that some time will probably lapse before International Labor Conference pronounced its opinion. It came before the Conference this afternoon in submission by the organization committee of the proposed convention for forty-eight hour weeks. Barnes, British Government delegate and member of the British War Cabinet pleaded for convention and was supported in his view by Mayor Desplanches, Government Delegate from Italy.

A LONG FIGHT.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. The refusal of the Government to vacate injunction means a long fight in coal fields, while its withdrawal would have opened the way for settlement of the strike, within forty eight hours, according to Edgar Wallace, Executive representative of the United Mine Workers of America.

SOVIET OPTIMISM.
LONDON, Nov. 5. An announcement issued by Russian Soviet Army Officials, received here by wireless, says, "We have received fresh reinforcements. Yudenitch can get none. Remnants of his army are breaking up. They are surrounded by our troops. From Luga our troops are irresistibly advancing on Yudenitch's rear. On the front the situation is favorably to us. We are on the eve of a victorious termination of the war."

ANTI-PROHIBITIONIST ELECTED.
TRENTON, N.J., Nov. 5. Edward I. Edwards, Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey, was elected yesterday by plurality of approximately twelve thousand. Edwards is pledged to oppose ratification of prohibition amendment and to fight "by all lawful means" the enforcement of anti-liquor laws.

SENTENCED BY COURT MARTIAL.
LONDON, Nov. 5. Lieut-Colonel Sherwood Kelly holder of the Victoria Cross, was to-day sentenced by a court martial to be severely reprimanded. The offense to which Lieut-Colonel Kelly pleaded guilty was the writing to a London newspaper, in which he charged that there had been "a scandalous waste in lives and of vast sums of money" in military operations in Russia.

RIOTING IN ALEXANDRIA.
LONDON, Nov. 4. Details of the rioting which broke out in Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 24th were read in the House of Commons to-day by Cecil R. Harmsworth, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs. Mr. Harmsworth said that of the 150 police employed during the disturbance 47 received injuries. Only fifty soldiers were called out. He added that the hostile demonstration was against British Officers but that stores were looted.

WILL CONTINUE PRESSURE.
LONDON, Nov. 5. The present measures of economic pressure on Russia will continue until a democratic government is established in Russia, which can be recognized by the allies, according to a statement made in the House by Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Harmsworth.

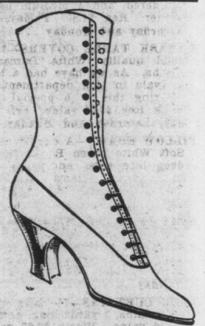

Mysterious Theft of Diamonds.
$400,000 worth of precious stones, in transit between London and Ceylon have disappeared. This is said to be the biggest robbery of its kind between London and the East, though there have been many greater between other places. The famous pearl necklace case between London and Paris of a few years ago, in which the pearls were replaced by lump sugar, involved an amount of $749,000. There is a remarkable resemblance between this case and that on the Nagoya, which occurred last July. On that occasion diamonds worth $250,000 were stolen from the vessel in transit to India.

Could a Whale Live on Land?

A naturalist has been asking if a whale could live on land, and he declares that it would be quite impossible. If we watch an elephant walking, and notice the ungainly swing of its flesh, we realize that for such an animal as a whole to move about on land would be beyond its powers. It would be unable to stand much less to move; but its enormous weight is counteracted when the creature lives in an element as dense as water. Instead of in the air, in the water the strain put on its structure by the weight of its parts is almost taken away, and so the whole can move as freely in the sea as we can on the land.

The Gathering of the Ships.

(By George Street.)
"Every vessel of the fleet is now in Sydney Harbor."
These have come back from the grey seas.
And these have come home from the green;
They have tasted the tang of the battle breeze
And their eyes in the dark have seen
The high death stalking, the low death creeping,
And the flame-death's banners unfurled,
White, at watch and ward, they steamed to guard
The faith of a shaken world.
These are our own, these are our own,
Steel of our heart and dream!
Never for us were the trumpets blown;
We knew not the death-fire's gleam;
But a thought came-stealing, a voice came calling,
"Till rivet and hammer wrought
The furnace steel and the deep-laid keel
To the force that the ages taught.
Under the cliffs and the sea-walls
These from their wanderings cease;
The skies are blue and the sunlight falls
And the great, cold guns keep peace.
But they still shall listen at dawn and midnight,
And their watch of the seas is ours;
For Australia speaks where the Spring wind seeks
To whisper about their towers.
Castles that rode on the grey seas
And stems that furrowed the green,
Let it be peace; but we hold by these,
For our eyes and our hearts have seen
The high death stalking, the low death creeping;
And this shall our children prize:
That a nation's youth stood, bold for truth
And her ships were her hands and eyes.

World's Most Famous Church Falling.

St. Sophia, the Roman Emperor Justinian's famous church, finished in 532 is sinking to ruin under the careless mismanagement of the Turks.
For since the Sultan Mahomet II. rode on his war-horse into its marble porchway in 1453, the Christian Cathedral has been a Mohammedan mosque.
Once, during the reign of Abdul the Cursed, it was noticed that under the cracking and peeling whitening at one corner, bright coloring had appeared. As bit by bit the plaster fell, during the succeeding months, the outlines of a marvellous picture were disclosed. At length it was seen that it was a grand mosaic, wrought in colored and precious stones of "The King in His Beauty," Jesus Christ, which had been hidden under Turkish whitewash for four hundred years!
Murderous, superstitious old Abdul Azis, was called in to see it. "Cover it up! Cover it up!" he croaked as he viewed its glowing beauty. "His time has not come yet."
Many of the beauties of early Christian art, are similarly hidden in that immense old building, once described as "of beauty and holiness, an earthly heaven, the abode of angels."
It was built and decorated at a cost inestimable in our day, under a hundred "master" builders, and ten thousand entered apprentices and other workmen. A light purple stone, and brick were used in its main construction, in order to avoid the crushing of excessive weight.
Earthquakes damaged the exquisite shrine in 600, 1317 and 1847, but the injuries were scientifically repaired. The skill of all the world was always at the disposal of the caretakers of beautiful St. Sophia.
Until the Turks gained possession of it they were always going to effect repairs, and never doing it. As a matter of fact, the stone cannon balls can still be seen imbedded in the crumbling walls where they lodged in the assault of 1453. The marble veneering, feet thick in places, has been stolen for other purposes, even some of its carved stones have been quarried away from its walls.
And the great fan, priceless link between the ancient Greek, the Roman, Latin and later Christianity is sinking. Its mighty pillars are actually out of plumb now, builders will know what that means!
Turkey will never do anything towards saving it from ruin, that is certain. It would require more money than that broken down country could raise—despoiled as it has been by Germany—to underpin and shore up that mighty building.
The sooner it is taken over by the League of Nations to a commission or body of some kind or another, to look after it, the better. There is no other monument of ancient Christian days, so rich in architectural beauty, or in historical associations, so eminently worthy of careful preparation as Justinian's famous basilica in Constantinople.
But speedy action is necessary. Every single month's delay in repairing, makes the work more difficult, and more expensive.
