

CAUSES OF TRICHINOSIS.
Dr. Macdonald has addressed a communication to the Hamilton City Council upon this subject, in which he says that the disease in hogs is caused by feeding them with butcher's offal. "There is, as you doubtless know, established in the city a glue manufactory. In this, the material used is chiefly offal taken from the pork factory, and as all the savoury substance is not consumed in glue making, the remainder is employed in feeding swine. Some of these swine were conveyed to a pork dealer in this city, not many months since, as I am informed. To show how unfit pork so fed is for human food, let me mention another fact. The prudent people living at the railway track on Wentworth street, were some time ago informed by the wise among them, that it was a waste of trouble to prepare food for their hogs, since there was plenty of 'offal' at the pork factory, to which the animals merely required access to commence feeding and fattening. The information was promptly acted upon, and before long symptoms began to appear among the swine which possibly some of our medical men would even think not difficult of interpretation. There was first diarrhoea, then a falling off in health and condition, and afterwards the death of many. There was every prospect of the death of many more in the same way, but the owners anticipated the misfortune of natural death by slaughtering, and then sending the carcase to the Hamilton market. Those animals alone which have eaten flesh can be infected with the trichina. All garbage eating animals are liable to suffer from it, rats, for example, are said to be frequent victims, and so may be, and no doubt often are, not only the 'poor man's pig,' but the 'poor man's cow' too, neither of which can afford to be choice in their eating."

THE FUTURE PRICE OF WHEAT.
The Chicago Tribune has an article devoted to the quandary in which the merchants of that city are now placed as to what to do with their wheat—whether to sell it as soon as possible at whatever loss, or to hold on with the risk of making or losing which will accompany delay. Speaking of the stock on hand when the winter set in, it says, "The greater part had been bought here at $1,500 or $1,600 while a chance remained of avoiding such a heavy loss in addition to the cost of carrying. Low as prices were here, they were still too high to admit of profitable shipment, and prices there were too high to admit of ocean transit. The consequence is that we have partially lost the supply of the British market this year. The wheat now held in Chicago and New York is so far a very costly article. Bought at high prices, it has been carried for months at a heavy charge for interest and insurance. No wonder that the question is one of absorbing interest—whether it be more dangerous to hold on or to let go." The conclusion to which the writer is led is that "advocates of high prices" have no very cheering prospect before them, and that "the very best thing that holders can do is to prepare to look their losses in the face as gracefully as may be, and decide to let go, lest the chance of selling be denied in toto. Such a conclusion, which certainly could not be adopted without a struggle, is worthy of careful attention." On the other hand, a correspondent of the Prairie Farmer contains the idea of low prices, and says that the fact that "grain men feel assured of low prices is a good reason to believe that they will not take place, since if these men were convinced that such would be the case they would not go to the extent of publishing their views." "The receipts of wheat in Chicago have fallen off twenty per cent. within seven years, while the population of the country has increased seventy per cent., and the consumption of bread is increasing at a rate far greater than the rate of production."

FENIAN GRATITUDE.—The pardoned Fenian convicts have anything but signalized themselves for gratitude to the Government for its leniency in dealing with them. The Daily News contains the following telegram dated Cork, Wednesday, March 17th: A soiree was held here this evening in celebration of the national festival. The Mayor presided. Col. Warren and several of the released Fenian prisoners attended, and were received with unbounded enthusiasm. Strong Fenian speeches were made by O'Mahoney, who was tried for treason-felony in 1867, and acquitted, and by Col. Warren. O'Mahoney said he regretted nothing in the past, and was hopeful of the future. Warren declared himself a believer in the sabre as the means of uplifting a downtrodden nation, exhorted the people to be united, and there was nothing they might not attain. The Mayor dissented from Col. Warren's views. The disloyal sentiments were received with loud cheers. O'Brien, the released Fenian, made a speech, but said nothing objectionable.

BELLEVILLE REJECTED.—The Hamilton Times says: We understand that John Sandfield Macdonald has decided to locate the Deaf and Dumb Asylum at London instead of Belleville. The reason he gives is sounder than those he generally assigns. It is that as London has sent a dumb representative to the Legislature it is but fair to give them an institution in which the remaining mutes may be trained. The result will be that any new mutes London may elect as representatives will at least be able to speak in the sign language.

A writer in the Christian Advocate, the denominational organ, ably advocates the union of all the Methodist sects in the Dominion. He is also in favor of a union of Canadian with American Methodists, and very truly says that the dividing line of nations should never divide the Christian Church.

A revival recently took place in Lynden, Ancaster Circuit, and nearly thirty persons were converted.

The Nor'-Wester says that in latitude 50 they have a climate precisely similar to that of Ontario, nearly six or eight degrees farther South, and that the temperature steadily rises on any given parallel of latitude from Labrador to the Pacific.

Jeannie Sinclair, OR, THE LILY OF THE STRATH.

Further evidence of the truth was abundantly forthcoming in the signs of desperate struggles which everywhere presented themselves round the mouth of the well.

They were crowding in upon the spot with excited exclamations, when the Sheriff, in a loud voice, ordered them to keep back.

The Fiscal, with the aid of one of the constables, made a minute examination of the printed marks on the clay, and though many of them were blurred and defaced by the sliding of the steps of the combatants, several remained perfect and entire, and these were carefully and accurately measured and cut out in paper.

The Fiscal, while engaged in taking the fac-simile of these marks, observed something gleaming among the grass, and reaching forward his hand, he found it to be a brass button, with the figure of a stag upon it.

A hush fell upon the multitude as they listened intently for any sound that might come up from the well, but all there was still as the grave, and the awe-struck faces paled as they thought of what was in all probability at the bottom.

After some of those present had been asked to take particular note of the appearances presented, the mouth of the well was cleared of the growth that partly obstructed it, and preparations were made to lower a burning torch down the circular cavity.

The torch was made, lighted, and fastened to a long rope, and the lowering began, as many heads being bent over the parapet to follow its descent as could make room for themselves.

The moments were moments of breathless emotion and dread expectation as to what the blazing torch might reveal. Suddenly one universal cry of horror burst from every lip, for at a depth not so very great, the torch was reached, and there lay, grim and stiff, a mangled human body, which they recognized as that of Sir Fergus Sinclair.

The bottom of the well was dry, and he reclined in a half-sitting position against the side, his face gashed and bloody, and something white in one of his hands. That he was dead was evident enough, but it looked as if he had survived the fall for some time, for the posture was not that of one who had fallen and never stirred.

Perchance hours had elapsed ere death came to release him from his agony, and perchance also, had he been spared, or, at least, he might have uttered the name of the murderer. But, alas, he was beyond this now. Cold and rigid he lay in the silence of death, and no one ever knew how great or protracted his sufferings had been.

The question now was—how was the body to be got to the surface? There was but one way of doing it, viz., by one of their number being lowered, and passing the rope round the dead man's body, by which means it could be drawn up. But who was bold enough to undertake the task? They looked at one another, and were silent.

'A sovereign to the man who will go down,' said the Sheriff, in a quiet tone. There was utter silence for some moments; then a voice said—

'I'll go.' It was the young gipsy, and as he spoke he stepped forward, showing neither doubt or trepidation.

One of the strongest ropes was tied round his waist, and the end of it was given into the hands of half-a-dozen of the most stalwart of the group. With a fearless air he had got over the parapet, and with the agility of one used to climbing he took hold of the rope with both hands and called to the men to give way.

In a very little he had reached the bottom, where the torch still burned brightly, and stood beside the corpse.

The end of another strong rope was now let down to him from above, and this he coolly and deliberately fastened under the dead man's arms, taking care to make the knot secure and trustworthy. Then he called out to those who held his own rope to stand firm, and he climbed up hand over hand with the ease and rapidity of a squirrel.

'He has a written book in one hand and a bit of cloth in the other,' he observed, when he was once more in the midst of them. 'The cloth is the colour of the clothes which Master Lynedoch had on.'

As he spoke, the torch was brought up, still burning, and after it, in a slow, cautious manner, the body was raised, and was soon revealed to the universal gaze in all its horrid ghastliness—bloody and cruelly disfigured. The face was so bruised and wounded as to be almost beyond identification, but the dress, complete in every particular, put it beyond a doubt that it was indeed the body of Sir Fergus Sinclair. As the gipsy had reported, his right hand clutched a torn fragment of grey cloth, while in the left was a pocket-book, open at the tablets, and on these few lines were written in pencil. The Fiscal took the book with difficulty from the dead man's grasp, and was able to decipher the following:—

'I have been murdered by my cousin, Lynedoch Sinclair. On this day, October 14th, 18—, he came upon me as I sat on the well, and avowed his purpose of killing me. The pain is agonising, excruciating, and shooting along the nerves like a shock of electricity, frequently feeling as if red hot wire were thrust into the parts, and after the pain passes away, a numbness remains for awhile. At these times, instead of attacking suddenly, it comes with a slight heat, or sense of itching or numbness, which augments in severity more or less rapidly. The pain increases from time to time until it becomes almost unbearable. Dr. Briggs's Alleviator is a positive remedy. Sold by E. Harvey & Co., Guelph, and druggists and country merchants every where.'

It is a source of gratification to us to know that Dr. Briggs, the chiropractor, has met with the patronage in this city that his skill merits. Crowds have gathered daily to be relieved from every conceivable form of disease of the feet, which was accomplished without the slightest pain. If any of our readers, who are suffering from corns, bunions, inverted nails, or any disease of the feet, have put off seeing the Doctor, we would say, go at once, and take out your word for it, you will thank us for the advice.—Hamilton Times.

Dr. Briggs Modern Curative, for Corns, Bunions and bad Nails, is sold by E. Harvey & Co. Guelph, and by all druggists and country merchants in general.

GREAT REDUCTION SALE AT CUTHBERT'S COMMENCING TO-NIGHT, 30th MARCH, 1869.

The mill is situated in the Town of Brockville, within sixty feet of the Grand Trunk R. R., and close to the Freight Depot, is substantially built of stone 40x60, four stories high, covered with slate, has three runs of stones, with merchant bolts, custom bolt, and bolt for buckwheat flour, and cornmeal sifter, with machinery complete in every department, coolers in 4th and 3rd storeys, with patent packer. The mill property consists of four acres, with stone dwelling house 2 1/2 storeys, water for 8 or 9 months. There is also a high-pressure engine, 40-horse power, with locomotive boiler. Boiler house of stone, covered with iron, chimney of brick rising above roof. No expense has been spared to make this the most complete mill in the country; everything about it is in perfect order. It will be sold at a bargain, and affords a rare opportunity to millers who may require a first-class mill cheap. For further information apply to E. MORRIS, Manager Ontario Bank, Guelph, or to the proprietor, J. L. SCHOFIELD, Brockville. Mar 30. det-wt

E. O'DONNELL & CO. Guelph, 2nd April, 1869.

Guelph, Ontario.

We have pleasure in making known to you the arrival of all of our IMPORTATIONS DIRECT FROM THE PLACES OF PRODUCTION, for the Spring Trade, and of saying that at no previous time have we been in the same position to offer you such an assortment to select from: the Varieties of Styles, Fabrics and Novelties in the various Departments are so varied and new that they call for an immediate inspection, in order that the taste and care shown in purchasing be fully appreciated.

We are safe in saying that no other House in the business in Guelph can approach the variety of our Stock to select from: and the prices at which our entire Stock will be offered must command immediate sale.

We are desirous of impressing this fact upon all intending buyers, that it is UTTERLY IMPOSSIBLE for any other House in the Trade TO COMPETE WITH US, for this reason: We have no second profit to pay; we buy direct from the Manufacturers in Britain ourselves; and as all others in the Dry Goods business here purchase their Goods at second hand from wholesale houses in Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton, paying the importers their profit (as a profit they must have) and then adding their own profit on before selling you the Goods here, it certainly cannot fail to convince you of the great truth that we assert, that our Goods must be at least twenty per cent under ordinary prices in other Stores in Guelph.

A call is respectfully solicited, when we feel confident that we will show you to your entire satisfaction that we are working for the mutual advantage of each. Yours very respectfully, HOGG & CHANCE.
