The Hon. Member for Dauphin (Mr. Lewycky) was saying earlier in his speech that the officials of the Canadian Wheat Board have been very helpful. What he was really saying was that since it is helpful, how can we possibly in any way demote the Wheat Board? That was followed on a similar theme by the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) when he said that the Wheat Board is absolutely essential. We find that each of the Hon. Members is implying that because the Wheat Board is good we cannot in any way detract from any of its powers. But what we really need is farmers who can grow to capacity, a Canadian Wheat Board which can market to capacity, and a transportation system which can deliver to capacity.

The autonomy of a transportation system is essential because it is its autonomy which gives it its status. What we want to have is a group of people who are proud to be working for a very efficient transportation system. So when farmers, grain elevators locals or grain elevator companies call the agency, the full focus of attention of that agency should be on transportation. We do not want people who wear a number of hats, one under which they market grain, another for the handling transportation. I believe that kind of separation is important.

I believe the amendment being put forward by the New Democratic Party is not at all in the best interests of the producers of western Canada. In fact, what should happen is that we should achieve a type of system whereby transportation is considerably improved from what it is today. Clearly the farmers at present, Sir, are not happy with their transportation service. They are much happier than they were prior to the establishment of an agency in 1979, but most farmers believe that quotas can become larger and can open more frequently than has traditionally been the practice in this country. In short, I feel it is important to underscore that what we have to maximize is the full capacity of this nation to become a producer, exporter and mover of grain. We must put specialists into all those categories so that not only will the farmers be able to sell all the goods they can grow but we can also deliver them effectively in order to meet and keep our markets.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, may I add this thought? If producers can deliver their grain much more quickly then they can convert their product into cash, put that cash in the bank and earn interest. They would then be able to avoid a considerable amount of borrowing, on which they have to pay interest, in order to pay their operating expenses. That is all dependent upon transportation. It is a question of how large and how fast quotas open. If the NDP Members do not believe this is very important to the primary producer, then they do not understand farmers and they do them an enormous disservice.

Mr. Jack Murta (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, I would like to join in this debate very briefly to outline some of the reasons why I personally, along with my Party, would not be able to support the NDP amendment. I would also like to illustrate a number of, for the lack of a better word, red herrings that the NDP Members have dragged into the debate this afternoon, mostly because they are trying to generate scare tactics directed at the majority of grain producers in western Canada.

The first question concerns the Canadian Wheat Board and its acceptability on the Prairies, and whether it is going to be around for a long period of time. In my opinion, and certainly in the opinion of the agricultural producers I represent in southern Manitoba, indeed in all of Manitoba, there is absolutely no question that the Canadian Wheat Board rates as highly now in the esteem of grain producers as it has for a long, long time. Producers in Canada, primarily in the West, feel that while there are some things we could do better with the Wheat Board, the concept, which was put in place many years ago for all the reasons we have heard, is a good one and should remain. No one has said in any way, shape or form that that is going to change. It is not in trouble, although the NDP would like to make it seem that some political Parties would like to decrease, shall we say, the powers of the Wheat Board. That, of course, is utter nonsense.

Some years ago, I, along with two other Members of Parliament, was part of the whole exercise of setting up a grain transportation co-ordinator. It was a great learning experience not only for the committee which I had the honour to chair but also from the point of view of the people with whom we came into contact. The reason the Conservative Party moved to set up that co-ordinator is that we felt, in discussions with the industry, that the direction the industry was taking or wanted to take was unclear. It was unclear to the participants themselves.

It has been mentioned that we held extensive hearings throughout western Canada, into Ontario, parts of Quebec and even in the Maritime Provinces to see just where we should be moving. We found an incredibly complicated system, as I think everyone in this House will realize. We found a system with 160,000 farmers, all individual producers, entrepreneurs or, if you like, small-businessmen. We found a system with two major railways that were in some cases competing against each other, in some cases not possibly as strenuously as they should, but with a large number of employees and a tremendous capital investment in that particular area. We also found many elevator companies which had not only investments on the Prairies, but some substantial investments in facilities in Thunder Bay, the Port of Vancouver and, to a lesser extent, Prince Rupert, as well as investments in the Province of Quebec in elevator facilities.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, all these players, if you like, in this vast complex business of producing and marketing grain have a highly vested interest in the whole system. Rightly so, because they have a lot at stake. Given the number of people involved in this one industry, it was not very surprising that we found friction. We found that unless there was a co-ordinating body to sort out the conflicting interests and in effect set out the direction in which the industry should go based on what the various groups want, over time the industry will virtually pull itself apart. That, in our opinion, was starting to happen when we set out on our task force study.

In our first few meetings it was obvious that the people involved were very cautious about saying too much or doing too much with a group of politicians, which may jeopardize their bargaining position later on. The first meeting we held in which all the participants came together, and that happened to be in Winnipeg, was truly remarkable. While we as a committee had heard from other people that there was dissatisfaction with the system, we did not realize how extensive or deep that dissatisfaction was until we tried to get everyone to sit down and talk out their problems. We could not do it. It was impossible because there was so much distrust within the industry. Over a number of weeks or months, there were a series of meetings. Many times they were with the Canadian Wheat Board, which was distrustful at the start but eventually came around to being of great help. In the final setting up of the grain transportation co-ordinator, the commissioners and the people involved in the Wheat Board were of substantial help. It is true to say that it would not have been set up unless the Wheat Board had given its help and assurance that it was willing to go along with the concept. I believe they saw the need for a co-ordinator because of the distrust that was inherent in the industry at that time. In effect, it made their life a little easier because it took some of the responsibility from them and set it into someone else's area. That of course made it a little easier for them.

So over the period of time we studied this matter, until the transport co-ordinator was appointed, the hostilities and tension surrounding the various participants slowly started to ebb until we could sit down together and have a reasonable discussion and know where we were going. These were all grown men, intelligent people, but they all distrusted each other initially, and obviously they all had a substantial vested interest in an industry which they did not want taken over by anyone else.

What has been the outcome of the appointment of a grain transportation co-ordinator? I think if we look back over the last number of years, one of the things that we can truly be proud of is the establishment of that body. It has helped out substantially. One will find very few people in the grain industry who have very much to say in a negative way about the grain transportation coordinating agency that was set up. The Canadian Wheat Board, the railways, the elevator companies, the three prairie Pools, farmers in general and farmer's organizations all agree that that was certainly one positive step taken under the Clark Government. I think all of us in the House would agree. Therefore, in my opinion, any move which would have a tendency to downgrade that body, even though it would be transferred into another area and made more permanent because of the legislative component attached to it, would be a disservice to the grain industry.

The Canadian Wheat Board, it is true, appeared before the Standing Committee on Transports and indicated some concerns, although in my reading of its brief they were very mild concerns about the direction that the legislative body would take. That is only natural. It was, once again, staking out its position. It was very gently telling the politicians, "Do not go too far because we think we are doing a good job in selling grain. We want to ensure that we maintain that. We want to maintain certain activities that we consider to be important". The politicians have basically said, "Yes, we agree that you will maintain those particular areas, the responsibilities that the Wheat Board has had in the past", and we have proceeded from there.

I have spoken with various officials of the Canadian Wheat Board. My riding is just outside of Winnipeg and, of course, the head office of the Canadian Wheat Board is also in Winnipeg. I can tell Your Honour that its officials are not concerned about the particular aspect of the dilution, shall we say, of their powers.

I return to the point at which I started my remarks by saying that the NDP, for some reason, is using this particular amendment as a simple and pure scare tactic. What Members of the NDP have said here this afternoon in terms of the potential destruction of the Wheat Board, or suggestions that the Conservative Party wants to destroy or in any way downgrade the Wheat Board, amounts to sheer and utter nonsense, and should be taken as such. I cannot support the amendment, and my Party cannot support the amendment.

Mr. Benjamin: I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Regina West is rising, I presume, on a point of order.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to interrupt in the course of a very good debate, but I wish to draw a matter to the attention of the Chair before proceedings go much further. I know that the Chair and the Table officers are in consultation as a result of something that happened earlier this afternoon. I want to assure the Chair completely that I am not trying to debate or question the ruling of the Chair. I would like to ask, though, that the Chair refer to Hansard of last Thursday, at page 27600, wherein it is reported that I rose on a point of order and said:

> Mr. Speaker, I was pleased to hear the remarks of the Minister. Madam Speaker grouped Motions Nos. 24, 25, 26, 27 and 29 for debate. No. 24 should bevoted on separately. Affirmative vote on Motion No. 25 would dispose of Motion Nos. 26 and 27. A negative vote on Motion No. 25 would require further voting on Motion Nos. 26 and 27, and Motion No. 29 is to be voted on separately—

I went further in my point of order to say:

> Mr. Speaker, I rose on a point of order. The Minister asked for the guidance of the Chair.

The Minister had just said that he was prepared to accept Motion No. 26 and move the appropriate consequential amendment. I stated:

I am asking for the guidance of the Minister. Is he saying that he is accepting all five of those motions, two of which are identical, and he would then move consequential amendments following the deferred votes? Or is he only accepting certain ones, and what would be the procedure then? Do we vote separately in spite of Madam Speaker's preliminary ruling? Do we vote separately if the Government indicates it is prepared to accept amendments that the Speaker said should be voted on in concert? I think we are going to find ourselves in trouble farther down the road.

In the next column, on the same page of Hansard, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) is reported as saying:

I was asking what the appropriate timing for moving such a motion was. I know that Motion No. 27—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I want to extend to the Hon. Member every opportunity for him to raise the level of understanding of the Chair, but there is some difficulty. As I understand it, the matter has been discussed before in points of order. It would help me, in the beginning, if the Hon. Member for Regina West could explain the point of his point of order.

Mr. Benjamin: Very well.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Then, if he wants to develop it further, I would be better able to understand it.

Mr. Benjamin: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. I confess immediately to not being an expert in these sorts of things. I really rely on my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans). The point is that it was agreed on Thursday, implicitly and specifically, that an opportunity would be provided for discussing the merits and demerits of whether or not Motion No. 25 should be withdrawn. I want to provide Your Honour with another quote. The Minister was asking for advice, I take it, from the way he spoke as reported at page 27600 of Hansard, about the timing of his consequential amendment and the acceptance of my Motion No. 26 and Motion No. 27, the amendment of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). I then said:

Mr. Speaker, I take it, then, that the Government is prepared to accept Motions Nos. 26 and 27, which are the same as the original wording of the Bill. Can I take it, then, that now he would bring in his consequential amendments to Motions Nos. 26 and 27 but that Motions Nos. 24, 25 and 29 will remain under debate and will be voted upon separately?

Mr. Deputy Speaker asked if that was agreeable to the House, and some Hon. Members agreed. Mr. Deputy Speaker went on to say:

Motions Nos. 26 and 27 appear to be the same motion. Therefore, we can put these two motions at the same time and they can be voted on by the House, presumably. With the consent of the House I am taking Motion No. 26—

That was on Thursday, Mr. Speaker. On Friday, Your Honour yourself, the Acting Speaker, raised the subject with regard to Motion No. 25 and whether or not it should be withdrawn, whether it was superceded and became redundant with the adoption of Motions Nos. 26 and 27. Your Honour said, as reported at page 27622 of Hansard:

I understand that last night the House considered Motion No. 26. In accordance with Madam Speaker's ruling which grouped certain motions, it would follow that Motion No. 25 would now be withdrawn.

I gather that the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) wanted some consideration of the issue. If he has any comment, perhaps now is the time, because it should logically now be withdrawn.

I then said:

Mr. Speaker, at the moment, my druthers are that it does not logically follow that it be withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I know the essence of the argument that the Hon. Member is making. He referred to remarks that I made on Friday indicating at that time that I could not see anything in his own words which supported an argument that Motion No. 25 should be put to the House. I am further aware that the Deputy Speaker, the previous occupant of the Chair, has ruled that no vote will be taken on Motion No. 25.

I think I know what happened, that is, that the House did not protect Motion No. 25 when it made certain judgments as to how it wished to proceed with other motions. I would think it was an oversight at the time, but that is not the business of the Chair to judge unstated arguments by the House or by Hon. Members. Therefore, we are faced with a problem, it seems to me, involving the desire of the Hon. Member for Regina West to protect a vote on Motion 25. The problem is that the Deputy Speaker has ruled that Motion No. 25 has now fallen as a result of the vote on Motion No. 24.

The Hon. Member needs to offer me some argument that gets around the problem that a decision has already been made. I want to make it clear that it would not be possible for me to overrule the decision already made by an individual previously in the Chair.

There is another method I can offer to him. He may want to take a few moments to see whether there would be unanimous consent, among representatives of the Parties or through whatever other means he wishes to take, that his Motion No. 25 be eventually put to a vote.

As I said, in attempting to helping him, I must say that it seems to me that the House was silent on that matter at the time and that that is his difficulty. I cannot overrule previous decisions. I would now invite the Hon. Member to address his remarks to some field of language that gets around that problem. To repeat the procedural argument related to the problem is now out of order because there has been a ruling on it already. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your comments. I was coming to another point that you made on Friday when I said: "That is why I would like to ask if Your Honour—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): This is the third time I have interrupted the Hon. Member. I cannot entertain arguments which proceed along a presumtion that the Chair is going to overrule itself. That is not in order at all.

Mr. Benjamin: That is not what I am asking.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I need to know what the Hon. Member is asking.

Mr. Benjamin: I am asking the Chair to consider what I requested and what the Chair agreed to on Friday, that is, to leave this matter in abeyance until—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I am sorry to advise the Hon. Member that I am reliably informed that the previous occupant of the Chair has ruled that Motion No. 25 will not be voted on.

Mr. Benjamin: Why?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is no way that the present occupant of the Chair can overrule that decision.

Mr. Benjamin: I am not asking you to do that. I am asking you to consider what the Chair said on Friday when I said, "Hold this in abeyance until Monday, and we can discuss it further." The Acting Speaker said that the Chair would accept the Hon. Member's request. We had no chance to discuss that today. It was ruled upon by the other Speaker. We were told on Friday that this matter was in abeyance and we would have an opportunity to discuss it further, but no such opportunity was made available.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): This is now the fourth time that I have offered the Hon. Member for Regina West a possible solution to this problem.

I see an Hon. Member and a Minister seeking the floor. I should have thought that a moment's private conversation behind the curtains would have done the Hon. Member a great deal more good than lengthy points of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I certainly do not want to deny the Hon. Member a chance to debate his motion but the facts are fairly clear. If he really now wants to introduce Motion No. 25, it runs counter to Motion No. 26, which is in his name and was carried. He cannot really have it both ways. Under Motion No. 26, he proposed that there be six members, each representing one of the six largest primary elevator licencees in Canada. In Motion No. 25 he is proposing that five members be included representing the licensed primary elevators.

He has had one of his motions carried which provides for six members representing the primary elevators to sit on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. Does he now want the House to debate this issue again so that he can have an opportunity to reduce that number from six to five? I really do not quite understand it.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point that was just made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). As I recall the statement made by Madam Speaker, she indicated that an affirmative vote on Motion No. 25 would dispose of Motions Nos. 26 and 27. Logically, an affirmative vote on Motions Nos. 26 and 27 would dispose of Motion No. 25.

I heard Members of the NDP previously making an appeal for logic. Surely the same appeal should be made to them. They might try to be logical. I know it is not their intent to be logical in this debate but simply to filibuster as they have said publicly. Surely they should respect the rules of Parliament and at least a semblance of logic in what they say. One cannot introduce two amendments which have different points of view, have one accepted and then say they want the other one debated.

After all, they are beginning to stretch the point a little far, and they just might begin to convince people across the country that they are really not serious at all but are just here to waste the time of Parliament, which we all know is probably the reason. At least they should not be so blatant in their admission of that, and I would suggest that the ruling of the Speaker should stand.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, the problem lies in something that took place last week. Let me put quite bluntly where the difficulty lies. When the Speaker grouped the motions for debate, ruling that some were in order for debate and others were not, I suggested at the time that there should be some time given for a review of that ruling before the debate proceeded. If we had that time we would have asked that Motion No. 25 and Motion No. 26 be dealt with separately rather than grouped for debate because they were, in fact, different questions. We were not given that opportunity.

The Minister chose to accept the second of the amendments offered within the grouping that the Speaker had determined were suitable, without any opportunity for discussion. We would have preferred to deal with the first amendment, but we were not afforded the opportunity of dealing with that amendment because the Minister moved to accept an amendment that satisfied him rather than the one which we considered to be the most important of the two.

What happened on Thursday was that my colleague raised that very point. He first asked that the Minister's suggestion that he would accept one of the amendments not be agreed upon at that point because we considered the other amendment to be of greater substance. At that particular point, the Speaker agreed not to put the accepted motion of the Minister. On Friday you yourself, Mr. Speaker, indicated to my colleague, the Member who has just spoken, that you did in fact agree that the question of Motion No. 25 was still before the House.

That is the essence of what was said on Friday afternoon. We did not anticipate at all that the Deputy Speaker would walk into the House today and make a ruling on Motion No. 25. We did not even anticipate that Motion No. 25 was still under consideration by the Speaker today. We anticipated that if there was to be any further consideration of the merits of Motions Nos. 25 or 26, an opportunity would be given to the House to discuss the relative merits before the question was put on either of them.

Quite clearly, in the sequential order that the amendments are listed in the Speaker's ruling Motion No. 25 would have to have been disposed of before Motion No. 26 could either be accepted or turned down. Common sense tells us that and the rules of Parliament tell us that. While debate on the questions could proceed dealing with each and every one of them at the same time, Motion No. 25 would have to be put to the House before Motion No. 26 could be agreed to or turned down.

That is the essence of what we were saying. It is grossly unfair that the Speaker should walk into the House in the middle of the afternoon and make a ruling which had not been asked for and make a ruling without allowing discussion to take place with regard to the relative merits of the argument to be put and expect us to sit back and allow the second of our choices. I make it quite clear that we would accept Motion No. 26 if Motion-No. 25 were voted down, but we wanted Motion No. 25 to be considered as the more substantive of the two. We do not appreciate the Speaker's making a ruling on something about which no ruling was necessary.

I therefore ask you to reconsider, if you will, between now and tomorrow whether, in fact, there may have been a misunderstanding as to what took place on Thursday and Friday. We are quite prepared to discuss the matter further privately in order to find some accommodation for the question we put before you. It is not up to the Minister to say which of the four or five amendments grouped at any one time is acceptable to the Minister. You can imagine, for example, that if we were to accept that kind of procedure and there were five amendments grouped for debate, one of them being the Minister's, he could rise at any point in time and say, "That one is acceptable to me, and so everything else is out of the way." That is ludicrous, Mr. Speaker. I can see from your face that you can see the stupidity of that and you can, therefore, understand the point that I am now making. It is not up to the Minister to say something is acceptable or otherwise. It is up to the House to dispose of it. It was our intention, safely protected by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), that we should deal with Motion No. 25 before we dealt with the Minister's intention to accept Motion No. 26. That was said by the Hon. Member on Thursday, reiterated by the Hon. Member on Friday. It required absolutely no Speaker's ruling on Monday. I simply ask that until tomorrow we be given an opportunity to discuss it further, and that Motion No. 25 not be removed from the Order Paper.

Mr. Gustafson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a further point of order on the same subject. For clarification, I think at the very beginning the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) moved to adjourn the House. The Hon. Member for Regina then gave up his right to speak. We then introduced Motion No. 27 which was the same Motion as Motion No. 26.

Mr. Deans: No.

Mr. Gustafson: It became a matter of politics in this House, at which time we had upstaged the NDP. We were getting some ink in the papers in western Canada, and the NDP became very jumpy at that point and it made its move to Motion No. 26, thus bypassing Motion No. 25.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I may be able to assist in the resolution of the problem. I will try to do so. I see the Hon. Member for Regina West rising. I have recognized him several times and I wonder if he would let me see if I could find a solution to this problem.

We can take the issue in this order. In the first instance I know that all Members will recognize that it is the policy of the Chair that rulings are, if I may call them such, indivisible. It is not possible for me to overrule a ruling made by a previous occupant of the chair. That option I do not find possible. I do not think any Hon. Member would want the Chair to start that kind of practice. We would soon have four different Speakers offering four different kinds of rulings.

Mr. Blaikie: We do.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): You would never know what was going to happen in the House.

The second option which the Hon. Member may be able to achieve himself is by way of private discussions which would lead along the subject matter of unanimous consent. I have to leave that to him. It is pointless for me to put that proposition to the House right now, and it would do the Hon. Member no service. Judging from what was said by the two Hon. Members who have spoken on that matter, I think I would have difficulty getting unanimous consent for the Hon. Member now.

There is a third issue which the Hon. Member for Regina West and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) have raised, and that is, that somehow the Chair committed itself to creating certain opportunities for the Hon. Member for Regina West. I will look at that. This argument is made and it is made with myself in the chair on Friday, found on page 27622 of Hansard. The exchange was as follows:

THE ACTING SPEAKER (MR. BLAKER): I understand that last night the House considered Motion No. 26. In accordance with Madam Speaker's ruling which grouped certain motions, it would follow that Motion No. 25 would now be withdrawn.

I gather that the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) wanted some consideration of the issue. If he has any comment, perhaps now is the time, because it should logically now be withdrawn.

In the next paragraph the Hon. Member for Regina West concludes by saying:

That is why I would like to ask if Your Honour could just leave this matter in abeyance until Monday and we could discuss it further.

The Chair replies with what is obviously a repeat of the same warning, a warning that Madam Speaker grouped these motions, but it logically follows from the treatment of the motions by the House that Motion No. 25 would now be withdrawn. The words used are:

The Chair would accept the Hon. Member's request. I do not hear a procedural argument which would affect the statement I made to the effect that, with the passage of Motion No. 26, it would automatically follow that Motion No. 25 would be withdrawn.

I then went on to indicate to the Hon. Member that I could see no harm to the proceedings of the House if his request were met. That is, in his own words, "Leave it in abeyance until Monday and we could discuss it further."

The question now arises for the Hon. Member and his colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton-Mountain, whether there is some way in which my words on Friday give to the Hon. Member for Regina West some opening for a better treatment by the Chair or by the House. In opposition to that question is the fact that my predecessor ruled that Motion No. 25 was deemed withdrawn. I will undertake to consult with the Table officers to determine whether there is some way the Chair can assist the Hon. Member, or the Table officers may be able to advise the Hon. Member of some procedure which he might find available. I want to warn the Hon. Member in advance that I do not know of any, but I am prepared to put the matter in the back of my mind. I am not prepared to consider overruling the previous Deputy Speaker. I am prepared to do a little research to see if in some way the Chair can fulfil its duties, which is always to offer assistance to Members.

Some Hon. Members: Well, help us out.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): But the Hon. Member understands in advance that I regard the previous Speaker's ruling as binding. If we can leave it at that, fine.

I do not think we can entertain more points of order on the matter because the point is very clear. The issue is very clear. I do not think the House should have to take up too much more time on the matter. If the Hon. Member is satisfied with that, we can proceed in that fashion. If he is not, I will now give him an opportunity to speak again. One of the responsibilities of the Chair is to move the business of the House along in some orderly fashion and I will have to do that as quickly a possible. The Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Benjamin: Thank you for your comments, Mr. Speaker. I only want to be helpful in discussions which I hope will take place. I have had conversations with some of the Table Officers only to point out, for the sake of discussions that I hope will take place between now and tomorrow when the House convenes again, that Madam Speaker said in her preliminary ruling that Motions Nos. 24, 25, 26, 27 and 29 standing in my own name and that of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) appear acceptable to the Chair and should be grouped for debate. But she then went on to say that Motion No. 24 should be voted on separately, and an affirmative vote on Motion No. 25 would dispose of Motions Nos. 26 and 27, but a negative vote on Motion No. 25 would require further voting on Motions Nos. 26 and 27.

I take my share of responsibility and say that collectively we erred on Thursday and Friday by proceeding to deal with Motion No. 26 before we dealt with Motion No. 25. I hope that discussions can occur. Since Motion No. 25 was our first choice amendment, we filed Motion No. 26 in the event Motion No. 25 failed. I only ask, Sir, that in the discussions which I hope will take place, we will find a way, by unanimous consent or in some other manner, without asking the Chair to be overruled or asking the Chair to overrule itself, I hope we can find an agreeable solution to this sometime tomorrow. When we debate Motion No. 25, it may be tomorrow or any other day. In terms of undoing what we did on Thursday and Friday by not dealing with the motions seriatim as they appeared on the Order Paper by way of votes, we will find ourselves in trouble down the road. I am as guilty as anyone in the House. Over a period of a few minutes or even seconds we were frantically trying to figure out what happened to what because we did such and such. I think we have to undo it, and I hope the discussions will arrive at a way of undoing it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I do not want any misunderstanding. This occupant of the chair is not offering to the Hon. Member some form of debate or further debate on the matter. I can make that clear by indicating that any other occupant of the chair would, from this point on, feel that the Hon. Member has not only had fair hearing but that I personally have given every moment of time I can. It is not a question of the Chair offering some way to overcome what amounts to a decision of the House. I simply offered some help to the Hon. Member, that research could be done to see if there was some alternative procedure for him.

As far as the status right now is concerned, the matter has been decided upon, and Motion No. 25 has been withdrawn. I am not sure whether there are other Hon. Members who wish to address themselves to Motion No. 32.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Has the Hon. Member not already spoken to his own motion?

Mr. Benjamin: On a point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Presumably the Hon. Member is on another point of order.

Mr. Benjamin: No, I rise on the same point of order, a further point.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): That is not possible because I have ruled on that point of order and cannot entertain debate on it.

Mr. Benjamin: There is an agreement of the House that Motions Nos. 24, 25 and 29 would be debated and voted upon separately.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I know the Hon. Member for Regina West feels that I have done my utmost to be of assistance to him, and that he will see a substantial reduction in my interest in being of assistance to him if he is not prepared to take my rulings on a courteous basis. On debate, Motion No. 32.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak for a few moments this afternoon on Motion No. 32 in the name of my learned friend and colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I readily admit that I am not a farmer and as such I do not have first hand knowledge of the farming industry. I do represent many farmers and I talk to them when I go home to my constituency. I talk to the officials of municipalities, towns and villages in my constituency as well. Over the last few months many of them have passed resolutions which they sent to the federal Government calling upon it to preserve the Crowsnest Pass rates for the transportation of grain. They have done this out of interest for the farmers in their communities and for the economic wellbeing of their communities as service centres to the farming industry.

I have listened today with interest and with some amusement to the speeches in this debate by Members of the Progressive Conservative Party. I especially noted the comments of the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer), who happens to be my neighbour in Manitoba. He charged the New Democratic Party with a poor performance in the debate on the Crowsnest Pass rates or on Bill C-155. This is somewhat amusing. The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette, in a ringing piece of oratory which will long be remembered, on a day during the debate of Bill C-155 when we had about half the number of Members of the PC Party rising to enter into the debate as Members of this Party—

Mr. Blenkarn: Come on.

Mr. Sargeant: This was from a Party whose Leader on the weekend in Regina and Saskatoon said that it would oppose and do everything it could to stop the Bill.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There were 1,500 Conservatives in Saskatoon; you would have been proud.

Mr. Sargeant: Approximately 1,500 Conservatives gave him a subdued applause.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I was there. There was a standing ovation.

Mr. Sargeant: Returning to the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette, he spoke about our performance. Today we heard from the hon. psychologist for Calgary who stretched the credibility of the House and insulted the Canadian electorate by intimating that the NDP was responsible for Bill C-155 being introduced in the House of Commons. This is one of the best pieces of creative thinking in the House for some time.

If the Conservative Government had not been chucked out of office in the winter of 1979-80, the Crowsnest Pass freight rates would be long gone, dead and buried. During Question Period today we heard the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) come on as a strong defender of the Crowsnest Pass freight rates. He is from the Province of Alberta. I would like to ask him what kind of strong support those rates have from the Premier of that Province or from the provincial Minister of Agriculture. Not very much, I am afraid to say. Who is talking about good performances!

The Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette also talked about this Party's inconsistency in its position on the Crowsnest Pass rates. This Party is the only one that has been consistent from day one. In fact, we have been consistent for many, many years. Our bottom line is that we are opposed to the changes. The Tory position, since the introduction of Bill C-155, has marked one of the most notable turnarounds since St. Paul took a trip toward Damascus.

Once again the Progressive Conservatives are joinging with their ideological bedmates, the Liberals, to put into effect a system which will once again leave western farmers with the short end of the stick. We have them voting against the continued wellbeing o the Canadian Wheat Board and in favour of the ability of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and the Grain Transportation Administrator to weaken the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. I say to the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), who is not in the House at the moment, that yes, the Conservatives are voting against good by voting against Motion No. 32.

What are we trying to do with this motion? Basically we are trying to maximize the returns to producers, as was said in the House this afternoon. How do we maximize returns by putting into place two systems which may very well be conflicting, by putting in place two bosses? If you have split responsibility, in the end nobody is responsible. The Canadian Wheat Board has been doing its job well for 40 or 50 years. I do not see why that has to be changed now. If we look at the record of the Grain Transportation Agency since it has been in place, what it has done over the last two or three years is to experiment with systems. In the end, it has gone back to the same Canadian Wheat Board allocation system it was using before. Basically, it has done nothing. It is an extra cog in the wheel, a cog that takes time, could possibly add confusion and in the end would not serve the best interests of western producers.

I listened with interest to the comments of the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta). He said that in his travels in and out of Winnipeg, he often spoke with members of the Canadian Wheat Board who expressed to him that they are not especially concerned with this provision of the Bill. That flies in the face of the testimony which the Canadian Wheat Board gave when it appeared before the Transport Committee over the last couple of months. I quote from their presentation:

> The Canadian Wheat Board, like any other sales organization, must control shipment of its own product in order to ensure performance. For these reasons the Board has always held the view that overall control of the system, as developed in co-ordination with the industry, should be administered by the Board.
> The Board still feels that the system operates most efficiently and effectively if grain transportation is fully co-ordinated by the major sales agency. If this is not permitted, it should be clear that we view any further reduction in the Board's ability to co-ordinate transportation, as a very serious step backward for the export sales program for western Canadian grains.

That seems to be completely contradictory to the statement of the Hon. Member for Lisgar. We should take note of that. The Canadian Wheat Board has done the job well for many years. It has concerns about the grain transportation authority.

We must address those concerns and make the grain transportation authority part and parcel of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Basically, we want an efficient system that will not have conflicts, not have two bosses, two systems working against the best interests of Canadian farmers. I therefore ask all Members, especially the Conservative Party which is trying to pretend it is the defender of the Crow and western farmers, to support Motion No. 32.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the comments of some of my Conservative colleagues. At first I was surprised at the anti-Wheat Board attitude they displayed. I thought as I listened to them, particularly those from the Prairies, that perhaps they were trying to develop some other arguments, sustainable by factual information, which had shown conclusively that this move was going to be of lasting benefit. I then came to the conclusion that I should not have been so surprised, looking back over the history of debate on this legislation; the weak-kneed, lily-livered approach they have taken to supporting the farming community in prairie Canada. Almost on bended knee they hoped the Liberals would push this Bill through as it would save them from having to do so later should they ever become a government.

As I listened to the debate on this clause alone, I began to see what was behind the Tory push. This amendment that we offer is aimed at strengthening the transporting of grain to the export markets. What we are talking about is the responsibility that has been taken on by the Wheat Board to find the markets, to ensure that the demand in world terms can be met, and to ensure that the farmers of Canada have available to them the grain transportation system that they need.

It has the responsibility when selling wheat abroad to make sure that the transportation system in place will be available and ready to carry that wheat to the ports so that it can be shipped on time and the grain farmers of western Canada will be assured that their reputation will not suffer at the hands of some other body. That is really what this is all about. I do not understand the Conservative position. It is mind-boggling.

Mr. Blaikie: Which position are you talking about?

Mr. Deans: My colleague asks, "Which position". I can understand him being puzzled about which position, given the numbers of positions that the Conservative Party has taken since the Bill was introduced. As my old friend and colleague from Sudbury would have said, they have more positions than Masters and Johnston, and let me tell you that their intent is not as good as the intent of Masters and Johnston.

Their leader has been speaking in Saskatchewan, speaking in Manitoba, talking to 1,500 Tory flunkies, getting them off their backsides to cheer for useless rhetoric which does not in any way reflect the true Conservative position. We know the true Conservative position because we have taken a look at it. Others across the country are now beginning to look at it.

What is the Conservative position? The Conservative position today is whatever happens to be the most specious, the one that provides them with the shortest run gain, the argument that they can put forward that will satisfy, notwithstanding whatever argument they may have put forward yesterday. I find it improbable. We have the Tories bemoaning the fact that we are trying to protect the interest of the prairie wheat farmers while they, hand-in-glove with the Liberals as usual, support Liberals at every turn in the committee, speaking together as one and representing the same interests, the corporate interest as usual.

Mr. Blaikie: The railroad.

Mr. Deans: My colleague says, the corporate interests, and adds, sotto voce, the railroad, I see it is six o'clock, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of other comments I want to make. I will wait until tomorrow to complete my remarks.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFAIRS—REMOVAL OF UREA FORMALDEHYDE FROM MANITOBA HOMES. (B) MANITOBA GOVERNMENT'S NON-COMPLIANCE WITH REGULATIONS

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Mr. Speaker, on September 27, 1983, I posed a question to the Minister of Consumer and Coprorate Affairs (Mrs. Erola) regarding the removal of urea formaldehyde from Manitoba homes. I asked her to respond and thought that I was to receive a progress report on the problems which have occurred in Manitoba because subcontractors are not being paid and liens are being placed against Manitoba home owners. I was shocked by her response. The answer she gave me was nonsense. It was to the effect that her Department did not have contractors and she could not understand the question.

I went on to ask her why the Manitoba NDP Government is not co-operating with the federal Government by giving progress reports about the operations of the different contractors in Manitoba. She informed me that she had no knowledge of the subject. I found that very strange, and I will go into that further in just a moment.

I would like to deal with the history of the problem of urea formaldehyde. First the Government recommended urea formaldehyde foam insulation for homes. The Government is now recommending its removal by Government registered firms which have been proven in Manitoba to be unreliable and inexperienced. A performance bond should be a prerequisite for the hiring of these firms. In Manitoba these firms are hiring subscontractors and not paying them. Subcontractors in turn are placing liens against properties they have worked on.

I would like to point out that there is a time limit with regard to liens. If something is not done about a lien within 40 days, the matter ends up in court. I hope the Minister will take some action so that none of these home owners will end up in court regarding payments to contractors and subcontractors.

Home owners are left with uncompleted work. Wires are left hanging, windows are smashed, woodwork is destroyed, exterior walls are torn down and the home owners do not know when to expect the replacement of those walls.

I appreciated receiving a call this morning from someone in the Minister's office. The caller was seeking information about what was going on in Manitoba. I gave her office the addresses of some of the affected home owners and a little bit of background information so that they will know what to look for when a member of the Minister's staff is sent to Manitoba. I understand that will be this week.

Home owners will be facing a cold Manitoba winter with no protection against the elements. They face two prospects: They may become ill due to formaldehyde gas poisoning or they may become ill due to exposure to weather. Home owners feel that they are at the mercy of the contractors. The Manitoba NDP Government is not reporting names of delinquent firms to the federal Government and obviously the Manitoba Government is not concerned with the plight of these home owners.

Let me tell you about the plight of just one home owner in Manitoba. He will have snow blowing right through his house because the gables are wide open. He has plywood covering the lower part of his home. He has broken an agreement with the contractor and could have a libel suit on his hands. He has had to retain the services of a lawyer at his own expense and has had to repair damage done by the contractor at his own expense. Apparently Consumer and Corporate Affairs has only one person in Winnipeg assigned to deal with these problems. This one person must deal with problems regarding urea formaldehyde in three western Provinces. With those kinds of problems, Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister should look at expanding her staff.

In Toronto, Canada's biggest class action suit has been launched against the federal Government because of the urea formaldehyde situation. If the Government continues in the same manner, more suits can be expected.

On September 27, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs denied knowing about the problems in Manitoba. However, on September 9, a telex was sent to the Minister by Mr. G. J. Markowski, President of HUFFI in Winnipeg, describing the situation. On September 16, that telex was acknowledged by the Minister who said that the matter was under careful consideration. I find it very strange that she could not give me a progress report instead of telling me that she had no knowledge of the subject when I raised the matter in the House. This would clearly indicate that mail is leaving her office signed by someone else and that she is not aware of it.

Why did the Minister mislead the House? What will she do for these home owners? What action is she going to take against the Manitoba NDP Government for not reporting the names of delinquent firms as requested in order to protect the home owners? I would like to remind the Minister again that there are just a few days left to remove some of these liens before the home owners find themselves facing a court action. I hope I can receive a more satisfactory answer this evening than the one I received last week.

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I regret that my reply to the question of the Hon. Member last week could have inadvertantly misled the House. I must in all sincerity say that the question he posed offered me no alternative but to answer as I did. The question he asked, as reported at page 27500 of Hansard for September 27, was:

> Has the Minister had any consultations with the Manitoba NDP Government as to why it is not conforming to federal Government regulations? Will she work in conjuntion with the Manitoba Government to have the liens removed immediately, have the foam inslation removed, and have the outside sidings replaced?

I replied, and I quote:

> The Province of Manitoba has not informed me of the difficulties and I am glad that the Hon. Member is fulfilling his obligations as a Member of Parliament by bringing the matter to my attention.

No, indeed, I have not received a request from the Manitoba Government. I have had no formal request. Yes, I have had a number of requests from people across the country, including people from Manitoba, which we are investigating. I suggest to the Hon. Member that had he posed his question differently I would have given a very different answer. Now I have an opportunity to answer the Hon. Member more fully, I am very pleased to say to him that I was aware of the specific problem in Manitoba and we had, indeed, responded and we are working on it.

The original question put to me by the Hon. Member had really four separate points: my Department's relationship with UFFI contractors; the specific problem of liens in Winnipeg; the question of houses remaining unfinished, and the Government of Manitoba and performance bonds. I would like to deal with all of these points because when we looked back at the question it occurred to us that there were many questions all within the one.

First of all, I will speak about the licensed contractors. The UFFI Centre does not licence contractors but maintains a register of those who have demonstrated their ability to carry out corrective measures for UFFI.

The Hon. Member mentioned provincial involvement and performance bonds. As I understand it, it is not a provincial requirement in Manitoba that contractors post performance bonds. I am not clear on what the Hon. Member was talking about when he mentioned these bonds and I will be pleased to receive details of any problems he thinks may exist.

There is certainly a problem with one contractor in Winnipeg. The UFFI Centre has a system for identifying contractors who seem to be taking on too many contracts for UFFI work for the number of trained employees they have. I should point out, however, there are very few across the country who have tried to do this, although we have had problems, as I said earlier, right across the country. The particular contractor who caused the problem in Winnipeg was identified by this system. As of August 3 he has not been permitted to take on any new work, although he is required to complete the jobs for which he had already contracted. I would like to assure the Hon. Member of this.

Nevertheless, the situation is not as bleak as my hon. colleague seems to fear. The contractor in question has made arrangements with two of the suppliers who had imposed the liens. I am aware of about 60 liens. I would be interested to have details of the 150 which were mentioned by the Hon. Member. Those suppliers have agreed to continue to supply the contractor as long as the home owners agree to make their payments to the contractor and the supplier jointly. The contractor is confident he will have all his outstanding contracts completed by December 15. UFFI Centre officials will be monitoring his progress.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I do not have the option to offer the Minister the opportunity of extending her remarks by unanimous consent. Her time has gone considerably over the three minutes she is allowed. Accordingly, there is no way for me to get around it. I am sorry to inform the Minister that three minutes is the time allowed for the reply on the late show and the Chair, by tradition, has been requested by the House to be quite rigorous in the application of the rules.

EMPLOYMENT—DENIAL OF ACCESS TO TRAINING FOR GRADE SIX EDUCATED WORKERS. (B) POLICY INQUIRY

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, on two separate occasions I have raised a question with the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) regarding a policy which presently exists in the Canada Manpower offices across the country, in that it is denying training assistance to adult Canadians who apply for training and who have functional grade seven or less as their level of education. Manpower offices, by policy, denied them admittance or the necessary support for training programs. Twice I have raised this in the House. The last time the Minister followed it up with a letter from which I will quote from as follows:

A careful evaluation of the Canada Manpower Training Program confirmed that academic upgrading at lower levels rarely led to further skill training or to employment. In view of these findings and the Senate Committee recommendations, it was determined that the Commission should withdraw from low-level BTSD funding at the Grades 1 to 7 level.

I find it most objectionable, Mr. Speaker, that in this time of unemployment and misery across the country a Government would set a policy denying admittance to Manpower Training Programs because people do not have an education, the very people we should be helping. That is a fact; I have it in writing from the Minister.

I also have a letter from Frontier College which came across my desk today, one portion of which I would like to read, as follows:

It is a shock to most Canadians to realize that several million adults have fewer than nine years of school. Of course, for these people, as you suggested, it is extremely difficult to obtain access to provincial or federal training programs.

Mr. Speaker, the Government is denying these people the opportunity to go into training programs, by way of a policy, not by an Act, because an Act like that would not pass this House of Commons. It would discriminate against people because they lack education or because their educational level is not above grade 7. I appeal to the Minister to reconsider this most reprehensible step that the Manpower Offices across the country are taking.

I have a paper from UNESCO which says that 28.4 per cent of Canadian adults have less than grade 9, an educational attainment well below the requirements of our society. The very people we should be helping are being denied that help through a policy implemented by the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

The Government conducted an evaluation which indicated there was no use in giving people who are functionally illiterate an education because they do not go on to take skill training, and do not contribute to society anyway. The Minister also claimed in his letter to me that part of the reason for withdrawing support for those unfortunate people who are functionally illiterate is that the Senate Committee on Finance has determined it is a waste of money. I tell you that it is not a waste of money, Mr. Speaker. If we do not address the problem, if we do not make the people in Canada aware that there are millions of adult Canadians walking the streets of our country who have every right to this education and who, perhaps through an accident of birth, did not get that education when they were young, then they are being denied Manpower Training Programs paid for with tax dollars, programs to which they on many occasions have contributed.

The Frontier College has been teaching people to read and write for years. People coming out of university have gone and worked on train gangs on the railroads to teach people to read and write. This policy is wrong, Mr. Speaker, absolutely wrong and absolutely deplorable. I urge the Minister of Employment and Immigration to reconsider this most reprehensible policy.

● (1815)

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for the point he raised, because it is a very essential and important point in dealing with the matter of education in Canada. There is no doubt but that there is too great a number of Canadians, especialy adult Canadians, who do not have the functional education to be part of the labour force in a way that could meet the challenges of industrial conversion with which we are involved at this point in time. However, one thing we must also bear in mind at this same moment is that there are some limitations to the responsibility of the Government of Canada so far as adult education is concerned, and so far as the primary and secondary levels of education are concerned.

When an adult finds himself or herself in the situation where he or she must go back to school to receive instruction to prepare for training in the new skills that will ensure him or her of the kind of permanent job we are attempting to create in this country, the responsibility, and we must be well aware of this, is essentially, according to our Constitution, the responsibility of the Governments of the Provinces. There is no doubt but that adult education is an essential objective that we must pursue simultaneously with the training of Canadians in those new skills and jobs where the future of the economy of Canada lies.

I am not ready to subscribe to the interpretation that the Hon. Member gave to the Minister's letter to the effect that those people are automatically barred from training. I would rather think that the Minister is certainly not prepared to write off the workers with grade six education. However, the basic responsibility to provide academic upgrading at these low levels rests, in fact, with the Provinces. There is certainly a need on the part of the Provinces to question themselves on their adult education priorities.

There is no doubt that if there are any programs in the country that should address adults personally, they should be for those adults who have reached only the lowest grades of education, because the proof is there on the table that those with very low levels of education have much more difficulty in being successfully trained in order to find permanent jobs. Essentially what we have in mind, therefore, is to establish the minimum skills an adult should have at the beginning, and then integrate the adult in the training programs that the Minister has launched and that the House has approved. Those are the kind of steps that should be taken if we want to achieve the creation of permanent jobs we are all looking for in this country.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Ordinarily, it is the Parliamentary Secretaries who provide answers during the adjournment proceedings. It may help a little bit, and this is not intended as inadvertent criticism, particularly since there are two Ministers present, to remind them that these are the difficulties suffered by Parliamentary Secretaries. Their Ministers and Departments provide them with answers which cannot be compressed into a three-minute period. With that as note, perhaps I could recognize the Hon. Member for Fundy-Royal (Mr. Corbett).

NATIONAL DEFENCE—CANADIAN FORCES BASE CHATHAM, N.B. (B) PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate having the opportunity of again raising the issue which I raised last week with the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Blais), who now must take the responsibility for the closure of CFB Chatham. Your Honour might recall that last week I asked the Minister how he could reckon his Department's decision and his endorsement, the decision of his colleague, the former Minister of National Defence, to close the airbase in view of the pledge that was made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in 1976, when he gave his "personal word on CFB Chatham's permanent status". He also went on to say that the base was fulfilling a need and that there were no plans to close it down.

It is interesting that at that particular time, in response to the question, the Minister of National Defence did indeed raise himself to his feet and say that it was the Department's intention to close the base down. I suppose he made the quickest flip-flop the Government has made since it has been in power. Within a matter of seconds he reversed his decision after an interjection by the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne). He said it really was not the Government's intention to close the base but just to close down the fighter squadron aspect of it. There is no question that, for all intents and purposes, the base is being closed with the elimination of that fighter squadron. The fact that the F-18s are being transferred to Quebec from Cold Lake, Alberta, means that there will be 3,500 jobs directly or indirectly affected. There will be $33 million in annual revenue lost to that community. It is a community that is already suffering approximately 50 per cent unemployment.

It is also interesting for the House to know that at the last Liberal convention, which was held here in Ottawa, there was a resolution that passed by the full plenary of the Liberal group there gathered which said:

> WHEREAS the closure of CFB Chatham would cause irreparable harm to the already struggling economy of the Miramichi, and whereas the recent provincial election has shown the announced closure has greatly diminished the traditional faith of Miramichiers in the Liberal Party—

All of which is extremely true, continues to be true and even more substantial than perhaps it was then. It continued as follows:

> Be it resolved that steps be taken that will ensure the current level of employment at CFB Chatham not be reduced.

This motion was passed without dissension by the Liberal Party, which I assume included a clutch of Ministers opposite, and probably the Minister of National Defence, who put their stamp of approval on it.

What has been the response of this Government? It says that in order to compensate for those 3,500 lost jobs it will move the pay directorate of the Armed Forces to the Chatham area. It has promised a trickling of megafunds for some port development and it has maintained that it will establish a fluid bed minerals research centre.

Those projects collectively, with everything else it has announced, will not amount to a 10 per cent replacement of the jobs that will be lost due to the phasing out of the 401 Squadron, which the Minister, and his Department and his Government, are intent on inflicting on those people who are already experiencing 50 per cent unemployment in the area.

Today the Deputy Prime Minister rose in his seat in response to a question from my colleague for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) and told her, the House and the nation that the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) initiative is a policy of reducing the unemployment rate.

The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola) will apparently respond to my question which more properly should be answered by the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Blais). It is probably an indication of their concern for the area. I want to ask the Government where is that policy for reducing unemployment in the Miramichi region of New Brunswick? Where is it when they stand and say one thing and then create a situation that will eliminate 3,500 jobs instead of creating more. There are no concrete steps whatsoever being undertaken by this Government to begin to address the problems that will result from the loss of those 3,500 jobs, or to reduce substantially the unemployment rate which now exists in the Miramichi area. I ask this Government through this Minister to address that in a positive way; do not give these people words but, rather, bread and butter. Give them jobs.

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I should like to update the Hon. Member. I am no longer the Minister of State for Mines, I am the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

I have some difficulty in understanding why the Hon. Member referred back to the situation in 1976 when the Government was just beginning the process of acquiring a new fighter aircraft to replace the CF-101 Voodoo, the CF-104 the Starfighter, and the CF-5.

In his adjournment debate statement on February 9, 1982, and again on April 19, 1983, in the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence, he seemed to understand the military and strategic reasons the CF-101 operations with the advent of the CF-118 should cease at CFB Chatham, and what the Government was doing to enhance the economic base of the Chatham region.

The then Parliamentary Secretary for National Defence made it very clear, during her response in the adjournment debate, that because of strictly military, strategic considerations and economic needs, it was decided that the CF-18 be based at Cold Lake and Bagotville and that two deployment bases at Comox and Goose Bay would also be used. This decision on the basing posture of the CF-18 had to follow a decision on the best kind of aircraft the Government could afford and what capabilities it possessed. The Hon. Member seemed to understand that very clearly.

In a speech to the Chatham-Newcastle Chamber of Commerce on November 7, 1981, the Minister talked about the standing down of Squadron 416 at CFB Chatham after termination of the CF-101 flying operations on December 31, 1984. The intent of the Government in seeking to establish a broad base for the economic well being of the region was clearly outlined by the then Minister in his statement given in Chatham.

In addition to the current units presently stationed in Chatham, less 416 Squadron, the DND directorate of pay services comprising approximately 350 personnel will be transferred to Chatham starting in 1985 and a building to house this directorate is being built in the downtown core.

An interdepartmental committee on the future of CFB Chatham is continuing its work and proposals encompassing initiatives by the federal, provincial, municipal Governments and private industrial firms, are being considered.

The Minister had constructive and positive discussions with the Mayor of Chatham, the local MLA and the Member from Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) this week. There is an ongoing process of discussion at all levels of Government, and I am optimistic that appropriate activities and initiatives will offset the termination of 101 flying operations.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock.

At 6.28 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Monday, October 3, 1983, consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 32 (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I was explaining the problem that we saw in the position being taken by both the Government and the Official Opposition with regard to the amendment we have placed before the House. If Your Honour will recall, I was expressing my concern over the fact that once again the Conservative Party has joined with the Government to defeat what was no doubt in the best interests of western grain farmers. I was trying to make the plea, if it were possible, to the Conservatives to rethink this allegiance that they have developed with the Liberal Party of Canada, and to stand up foursquare on behalf of the farmers of Canada. I say it not only with a straight face but also with a very heavy heart, because as I look at the Conservative Party I cannot believe the duplicity that I see and hear coming from their spokesman.

Our intent, quite clearly, is to assert the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board over the movement of grain.

An Hon. Member: You intend to kill the Bill.

Mr. Deans: One of the Tories has mentioned that our intent is to kill the Bill. I want to make it quite clear that that is indeed our intent. I do not want to leave any doubt about that in the minds of anyone. I know the Conservatives want the Bill to pass, but we, recognizing the tremendous hardship that this measure will bring upon the grain farmers of the Prairies, believe that the Bill should not pass. In coming to that conclusion we have put before the House, on numerous occasions, the proposal that the Bill be divided in such a way as to allow the upgrading of the railroads and ports and to allow for proceeding with the disposition of the coal lands, while we could go on to deal with the question of how those things should be financed other than through an increased cost to the farmers of prairie Canada.

I am sorry the Conservatives do not see fit to support us. I am sorry that they say one thing in Alberta, a different thing in Saskatchewan, something quite different again in Manitoba and a fourth different thing in the House of Commons. I want to suggest to them that if they could get their act together, it might be beneficial to the farmers of western Canada, rather than going around pretending to be all things to all people.

What we are saying is that the Bill as it now stands with the clause that we are attempting to amend would erode the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. That ability of the Wheat Board to control the movement of grain through the grain car fleet is an essential requirement of the Wheat Board's operations.

We recognize that in 1979 the Conservatives attempted to erode that ability and they did in fact do so. But the Conservatives have been trying to shift that responsibility from the Wheat Board for a long time. That is to the detriment of the Wheat Board, the Canadian prairie farmer and our ability to export that very vital commodity as well as being to the detriment of the Conservative Party.

Let me suggest that without the control we are concerned about being in the hands of the Wheat Board, the block system would certainly be in jeopardy. The block shipping system is essential if we are to continue to be effective in terms of international wheat sales for years to come.

Frankly, we are worried that if the Bill in its present form is allowed to pass—given that we are now aware that the Tories will not support us in our opposition to the Bill—it will have a lasting detrimental effect. That opinion is not only our own but the analysis of many who are even more learned in the matter than we. Their opinion is that the future of the Canadian prairie farmer and his ability to grow and sell wheat for export markets will be placed in serious jeopardy. Because of those concerns we would frankly urge the Government not to heed the Tory support in this case, to pay attention to what we are suggesting and adopt it as part of the policy.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to take part in this debate on the Crow Bill today. I have followed the debate with a great deal of interest and I have heard a lot of nonsense spoken on the subject.

Mr. Lewis: The previous speaker?

Ms. McDonald: Not from the previous speaker but from some of the fellows to my right. I have heard a great deal of nonsense spoken and some of the worst was actually said outside the House by the new Leader of the Conservative Party (Mr. Mulroney), who implied in Saskatchewan that the NDP has come rather late into the Crow fight when we know very well that it is the Conservative Party that made the about-face in the summer and began to support us.

We in this caucus have been fighting this Bill very vigorously. That includes all of us in the Party whether there are large numbers of farmers in our ridings or whether we are concerned about the transportation aspect; it does not matter if we come from city or country ridings. I gave two speeches on transportation issues in June because transportation is a national issue, as agriculture is a national issue.

The effects of the Crow Bill in my riding are indirect. We know that if the Bill is passed and the rate goes up, farmers will have $1 billion less to spend. In turn, that will affect the people in my riding because they work in industries with very high lay-offs already. Consumer spending cuts mean that there will be more lay-offs. People who work in the textile industries will see fewer people buying their goods. People manufacturing farm equipment will find that farmers will not be able to buy as much. That industry in particular has been very badly affected. This is an issue for people all across the country.

The amendment before us today is very practical and is one that I believe we should all support. It is simply to ensure that the person in charge of grain transportation will be an employee of the Canadian Wheat Board. This amendment supports efficiency and good sense. The Canadian Wheat Board must control the shipment of wheat because it is Canada's wheat farmers who will suffer when the system does not work efficiently.

Let me quote from some of the testimony that was given to the committee dealing with this very subject. We heard from witnesses and members of the committee regarding the element of confusion with the variety of agencies involved in the whole issue, and we have a number of agencies overlapping authority and jurisdictions. The amendment is designed to reduce that confusion and to reduce, if not eliminate, overlapping in two Crown agencies. It will modestly increase and strengthen the Canadian Wheat Board. It has been the view of three Wheat Pools, the National Farmers' Union and a number of individuals who appeared before the committee that the jurisdiction for this kind of an agency should remain with and be under the Canadian Wheat Board. The Canadian Wheat Board, like any sales organization, must control shipment of its own product in order to ensure performance. For these reasons the Board has always held the view that over-all control of the system as it is developed, in co-ordination with the total grain industry, should be administered by the Board.

One wonders why, with this eminent good sense and the advice of the people most concerned and most knowledgeable about the problem, the Tories are not supporting this amendment. We get preaching about efficiency, we get preaching about good co-ordination from them, but when we come to a practical problem and to something that really needs to be done, where are they? Perhaps the Tories want to have a lot more confusion here. Why are they not after the most efficient solution to the problem before us?

Let me continue with testimony that came to the Standing Committee on Transport:

> Today we are facing the very real possibility that the agency or a new agency with expanded powers and a powerful administrator will take powers away from the board and inevitably damage its sales efforts.

"It is imperative that grain sales and grain transportation not be separated", said one of the main experts who came before the committee this summer. The Canadian Wheat Board must be able to arrange transportation of its own product or it cannot fulfil its obligations to western grain producers or their customers overseas. The board's marketing success depends upon its ability to make day by day or even hour by hour decisions on grain movement. Its flexibility must not be compromised.

What needs to be done, Mr. Speaker, is very simple. We have had the advice of the people who work in the system. The testimony I cited just a moment ago is from a person who served as a Wheat Board Commissioner for many years. Why are the Conservatives not prepared to take this advice? Will the Liberals finally accept some sensible advice from the community they claim to be serving?

Let me continue:

> We have a group of individuals in the Grain Transportation Authority and in Transport Canada whose abstract economic principles tell them that the grain industry has gone the wrong way over the past 100 years. They want to see the transportation system in a certain configuration and they except farmers, the grain companies, the Wheat Board and the Wheat Board's customers to adjust to accommodate it.
> I suggest the reverse approach be taken. Let the transportation system develop to meet the needs of the people who are using it. That is the approach that makes real economic sense, and the Government should allow it to proceed by keeping bureaucracy out of the grain business. The Government has repeatedly stated that it will not remove existing responsibilities of the Canadian Wheat Board—

Yet it proposes to open the door to this by expanding the authority of this transportation agency. That is talking out of both sides of one's mouth, and it is not acceptable.

My Party will continue to work for amendments to this Bill. We want to see the Bill split. We want to see the constructive, productive parts of the Crow Bill go ahead, but we will certainly fight as hard and as long as we can on the parts that we do not want, the ill thought out parts, the parts where we have obfuscation and where there are inefficiencies right now. There is a great deal to be done to amend this Bill, and we intend to continue bringing in amendments to get a better Bill.

Of course we will support the aspects of the Bill that will provide jobs and improve the transportation system. Of course we will support those parts of the Bill that will enable development of the coal fields in British Columbia. There is good and there is bad in the Bill; distinctions have to be made. We will most vigorously continue to oppose those parts of the Bill which will be damaging to the farm community across the country and will have a very harmful long-term effect on the rest of the economy, as a slack in consumer demand means a slack in demand for products made in the cities of our country.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, this is the fourth occasion I have spoken on what the Government is trying to do to the Crowsnest Pass rates. I rise again, but not with any great pleasure, because of the damaging effect the Government's proposal will have on the farming community and on the economic structure and fabric of Canada.

When I first became involved in the Crow rate, as most other Members from urban communities, I did so without any great, deep knowledge about the impact of the Government's measures on the economic fabric of the country. It was with the great assistance, deep knowledge and concern of Members of my own caucus, such as the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse), that my knowledge and awareness of the impact of this particular Bill have been increased. They have done a tremendous job in the House in terms of representing the concerns of the farming community. Although the Official Opposition and the Government do not seem to realize it, the farming community plays a tremendous role in the economic life of the country. In fact, it is one of the largest generators of wealth of any group in Canada.

As the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) just mentioned, undoubtedly the measures proposed in the Bill will take away some $1 billion in earnings from the farming community. This will have a tremendous effect on spin-off industries which rely heavily on Canadian farmers for their livelihood. I know many people in my riding who work in such industrial enterprises as Massey-Ferguson. Undoubtedly they will feel the effects of this Bill. If farmers do not have the money, if they have less earnings to spend on the items manufactured by Massey-Ferguson, for example, then obviously there will be further cutbacks in the farm implements industry and there will be inevitable reductions in industries such as herbicide manufacturing and that kind of thing. It not only affects farmers in the country; it will affect consumers and people involved in industrial enterprises. The impact of those measures will be felt right across the country.

The intent of this particular amendment is to assert the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board over the movement of grain. The reason my Party put forward this amendment was because the Bill, as it stands, would erode the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. The ability of the Wheat Board to control the grain car fleet is essential.

We all know that without control the block shipping system will be severely hampered. The block system permits the Board to ship grains of a specified grade or quality or a blend of grades and qualities to meet the needs of its customers. Without this ability, sales of Canadian grains for export by the Wheat Board could suffer. Certainly our competitive position would be weakened. Giving authority over the grain fleet to another agency adds an extra and unnecessary level of bureaucracy to the shipping procedure. This has been the experience with the Grain Transportation Authority since 1980. The movement of grain could be delayed by having an outside agency, without the day to day knowledge of sales and the grades, quantities and location of grains in storage, assume control of the grain car fleet.

The Wheat Board must be able to call the grain it needs, when it needs it, and be able to assign cars to the points where it knows it is stored. To fill this need, an outside agency such as the one proposed in this Bill could do nothing more than pass on the orders of the Wheat Board, unchanged, to the railroad. Certainly that has been the experience of the Grain Transportation Authority. This is obviously a useless procedure and it should be made clear that the board has control of the grain car fleet.

The House is well aware of the high esteem in which Mr. Justice Emmett Hall is held across the country, and of his inquiries into the medicare system and his authoritative knowledge of the Crowsnest Pass rate. Mr. Justice Hall appeared before the Transport Committee when it held public hearings in Regina on August 9, 1983. In his testimony before that Committee, he said and I quote:

> The producers of western Canada are concerned about the ultimate fate of the Wheat Board. It is true that not too much is said about the Wheat Board in Bill C-155, but the beginnings are there and the capacity of the Wheat Board to control the grain fleet is being interfered with by the provisions of the bill. The capacity of the Wheat Board to control the wheat fleet is absolutely necessary. I hope the Wheat Board appears before you, and they will corroborate that statement, I am sure, because to meet a given sale the Wheat Board has to have grain, whether it is barley or oats, of a certain quality, of a certain grade.
> I do not know, but if you went in, you would see that they have a wall there the length of this one which shows where all the grain in western Canada is and its grade. They have it so that they can call if they have a sale of so many thousand tonnes of whest of a certain quality; they know that it is either in the Regina district or maybe Edmonton or somewhere else. And to meet that, they are able to say to the railways that is where you want to get the grain this week and bring it to Vancouver or Thunder Bay. They have to be able to call the grain they need. If that were to go, it would interfere with the sales capacity and ability of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Earlier I spoke about the dramatic effects that the amendments which the Government is proposing to the Crowsnest Pass rate will have not only on the farming community but on consumers across the country. As my colleagues in the House have pointed out both during Question Period and in speeches on this Bill, there is hardly anything that the Government could even come close to calling a consensus across the country to support what the Government is attempting to do here. An editorial on February 4 of this year in the Toronto Star listed a number of things the Government is trying to do. I quote one part of that editorial:

> Despite the opposition of provincial governments and of virtually every responsible farm group on the prairies, the federal government intends to unilaterally and drastically restructure the Crowsnest Pass Agreement. And if the Crow dies, the funerals of many western communities may follow . . .

As Western Canada sees it, the Crow is part of a Confederation bargain. Western Canada got low, fixed freight rates in return for agreeing to pay high import tariffs protecting eastern industries. Since then, the Crow's fixed rate—a half cent per ton-mile—has allowed our western farmers to compete for exports, from their land-locked position, with the transportation-subsidized farmers of Argentina, Australia,—

I see that my time is up, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Keep going.

Mr. Young: My colleague suggests that I keep on going but I think it is sufficient to say that the Toronto Star editorial expresses the concerns of members of this Party, the concerns of farmers of the country and certainly the concerns that consumers right across the country will have once they fully understand the impact of the Government's measures.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to be afforded the opportunity to join in the debate. As my colleagues have pointed out, it is interesting to note that the Tories do not have much to say here although they are frequently travelling across the country telling everyone how much they dislike growing bureaucracies. Yet they are, through silence and, I suppose, through their ultimate vote on Motion No. 32, indicating that they really want an increased bureaucracy. In a few moments I will deal with the reasons for that.

As our transportation critic pointed out yesterday, the Tories had 51 opportunities to speak on this motion on Friday and they chose to put up only seven speakers. I think that that really indicates what faint-hearted efforts they are making to support the western farmers who desire to see the Crow Bill scrapped and who desire to see that any changes that are made are in the interests of farmers.

The intent, Mr. Speaker, of Motion No. 32 is to assert the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board over the movement of grain. As it stands now, the Bill would erode the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board and that is certainly the view that is taken by one of Canada's foremost authorities on this subject, Mr. Justice Emmett Hall. Having read the Crow legislation, Mr. Justice Hall has concluded that if it is to proceed as it stands, not only will the farming community be dealt with rather destructively but the Canadian Wheat Board would be very quickly eroded.

I think that most farmers and most Canadians know that the Canadian Wheat Board was established in 1935 and had three key responsibilities. One was to market principally wheat, barley and oats, the second was to provide price stabilization for farmers for those grains which were held by annual pooling, and the third was to attempt to assure every farmer a portion of the available market every year. I believe that all of us in the House are now aware that the changes that would occur as a result of the Crow legislation would dramatically affect the movement of grain and the viability of many rural farms. I will speak about that in terms of the Kai Report in a few moments.

I would like to deal with the concept of the Grain Transportation Administrator for a few moments, Mr. Speaker. I think most of us in the House remember that it was not too long ago that Mr. Horner, who was a Tory, crossed to the Government side in an attempt to achieve some kind of status that he was looking for. That move indicated at that time the Liberal-Tory alliance that existed on certain transportation matters.

I do not think we have to look too far into the Tory caucus to see who the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) would like to appoint to the new Grain Transportation Administrator position. He would probably like to appoint the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and that is perhaps why the Tories are not speaking about this. The Tories say that they are opposed to expanding bureaucracy, but this proposal by the Government does precisely that. It erodes the decision-making authority of the Canadian Wheat Board by adding to it this unusual appendage. It is pretty clear that a Tory has made a deal with the Government side in order to take a shot at that job. If it is not the Hon. Member for Vegreville, perhaps Jack Horner, with the difficulties he is having with CN, is looking for another job to carry him on into the next decade.

It is imperative that grain sales and grain transportation not be separated, as is being proposed by the Government. I know that in Prince Rupert, one of the communities I represent, the present system is working very well. As a matter of fact, last year we again set records for shipments. Many Hon. Members know that there is a $3 million grain elevator being built in Prince Rupert right now that would perhaps be devastated by the proposed Crow changes.

The railways and certain individuals in the private grain trade, persons like Jack Horner and Otto Lang, I suppose, would dearly love to see more bureaucracy to allow for more high-paying employment for unemployable Liberal and Tory hacks such as themselves. The railroads should be set up to meet the needs of the people and the producers rather than adjusting its schedules and shipments for the convenience of the bureaucracy of the railroads and certain private individuals.

I mentioned a few moments ago that I would refer to the Kai Report. That is a report which deals specifically with grain production subsidies. I would like to talk about a few of the comments made in that consulting report in regard to this specific amendment. The report states on page 17: "Western Canadian wheat's international competitiveness is diminished by the relative generosity afforded the American product". The report points out that on average, U.S. wheat subsidies are $11.41 per tonne whereas Canadian wheat subsidies are $6.35 per tonne.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. In the Chair's opinion, the Hon. Member's remarks are not relevant to the amendment at hand. Perhaps the Hon. Member could indicate to the Chair in what way his remarks are relevant, if in fact they are.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I think it is pretty clear that if I am discussing what will happen in terms of the erosion of the Canadian Wheat Board because of the Liberal-Tory proposal for a kind of subsidiary organization, I need to demonstrate why the Canadian Wheat Board is required to remain in its present and untarnished position without an auxiliary transportation administration. If this auxiliary transportation administration were to be set up, rural Canadian farmers would be negatively impacted by the changes in the Crow and would perhaps be less likely to be in a position to move grain. This is not only because another administration would be set up but because the cost of the subsidies presently in place in the Bill will make the situation that much more difficult in the future.

If you give me a moment, Mr. Speaker, I will demonstrate through the subsidies why it is important that the Canadian Wheat Board maintain the function of organizing what grains are to be moved and when, rather than have a subsidiary associated with the grain transportation administration proposal perform that function.

Western Canadian wheat earned 41 cents out of every grain export dollar, wheareas in the United States grain only earned 16 cents out of every grain export dollar. I think most Hon. Members recognize that the Government has made various proposals in recent years. For example, in 1977 a proposal was made in terms of the branch line subsidies. As of last year, those subsidies amounted to $278 million. As Mr. Justice Emmett Hall has pointed out, the federal Government was forced to introduce, even after bringing in a direct subsidy program, a branch line rehabilitation program which now costs us hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

I am saying that the Crow change will increase the cost of moving grain to farmers by over 400 per cent. If the government is to put this Bill forward as it now stands, including the concept that a grain transportation co-ordinator would take over part of the job of the Canadian Wheat Board, a great many rural Canadian producers will be negatively impacted because the Administrator will be making his decisions about what cars will go where and when, on what line and to what port, using different criteria from that used by the Canadian Wheat Board.

As I have said, the Canadian Wheat Board has demonstrated real expertise, at least in terms of the Port of Prince Rupert and hopefully in terms of the future of the Port of Prince Rupert. I feel that the creation of this subsidiary position will simply add another political, bureaucratic, decision-making body that is completely unnecessary.

An Hon. Member: A pork barrel.

Mr. Fulton: That is right; it is simply a pork barrel.

The 1971 to 1982 average subsidy proportionally in Canada was 4 per cent, as compared to that in the United States which was 8.6 per cent and that of the European Economic Community which was 10.5 per cent. The United States and the EEC are clearly operating with a much greater level of subsidy to farmers.

As concluded in the Kai Report, the consequences of the unilateral changes will be to reduce grain production and grain exports. I think we in the House must ask ourselves what kind of legislation would be introduced that would do that in a world that is already hungry for an export that is so beneficial to the Canadian balance of trade. In this trade, Canada exported over $6 billion worth last year alone.

The Crow change, Mr. Speaker, would take $1 billion a year away from farmers, an increase of more than 400 per cent by 1990. For example, this would have the devastating effect on farmers in British Columbia of a net drop in income of about 30 per cent. The addition of this supposedly beneficial position of Grain Transportation Co-ordinator would not bring anything like the long standing benefit that we have experienced with the Canadian Wheat Board. The Kai Report concludes that because Canadian farm income is lower and more variable, Canadian farms are less viable than their foreign counterparts.

On that point I should like to hear members of the Tory Party or of the Government explain how the addition of this bureaucratic position, separate from the Canadian Wheat Board, would in any way be of benefit to rural producers in the efficient and equitable movement of grain, whether to Thunder Bay, Churchill, Prince Rupert or Vancouver. From any of the evidence given at committee or any of the speeches made in the House, I have been unable to identify any way in which this would benefit anyone other than the appointment of some Tory or Liberal to this pork barrel position. It is of no benefit to the Canadian economy or the Canadian producer.

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I should like to speak on the amendment that a number of members of the New Democratic Party have addressed.

Before I begin my comments, may I say that I think the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) is not only very loose with his words but his tactics are very questionable when dealing with the truth. He likes to raise certain issues and talks about deals when he obviously has not done any research on them. Because he does not know what to do with the last paragraph of his written speech, he decides to put something in that he knows nothing about. He should get back to dealing with the amendment that is before the House.

The argument is always made by the NDP that they are the only ones to support the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Althouse: It is true.

Mr. Epp: They have certain hallmarks for those of us who come from the Prairies. Every time they hear the name, they have a Pavlovian dog-type reaction. Every time they hear the name the Canadian Wheat Board, they are for it and everybody else is against it. That is their first reaction, but nothing could be further from the truth, Mr. Speaker. They are so divided in their policies, so divided in their leadership and so worried about the next election that they have these knee-jerk reactions. We have seen that again today. The NDP has never been in government in Canada and, with the actions they are taking, they never will be.

It must be remembered that this Party brought in the Canadian Wheat Board and this Party supported and defended the Canadian Wheat Board. The NDP has never had the opportunity to strengthen the Canadian Wheat Board. They have a good line of talk, of course. Those of us who come from the Prairies know that the ultimate reactionaries out there are the ladies and gentlemen to my left, the NDP. They seem to think that the only way they are going to get to power is to recall the 1930s. That seems to be their argument. They will rail against everyone.

Time and time again we see members of the NDP defend the status quo even though, through individual decisions, many farmers have gone well beyond that point. If we were to follow their line of thinking as the ultimate reactionaries, we would give ultimate authority for the right to move all grain to the railway companies. But the NDP members are always speaking out against the railway companies. You want the railways to have the ultimate and exclusive right of movement of all grain. When have you defended any movement by trucking? When has any member of the NDP done that?

Mr. Althouse: We didn't tell anybody to carry the bags, either.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. First of all, I would invite the Hon. Member to address his remarks to the Chair, and then I would invite him to speak to the amendment.

Mr. Epp: As always, Mr. Speaker, I take your advice and thank you for asking the NDP to be quiet.

The amendment before us is based on very solid experience. All of us know that in 1975, 1976 and 1977 we were losing sales because we were not moving enough grain. There were bottlenecks. When the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) had responsibility as Minister of Transport, after extensive hearings in the country led by the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta), he came to the conclusion that there was a need to establish a Grain Transportation Authority, a Co-ordinator, in order that the cars be put to the best use in the movement of grain.

When members of the NDP spoke about this amendment, I never heard them speak of eastern Manitoba where there is a limited number of elevators, or where they are opening up new lines in areas where traditionally grain had not been grown. Some farmers have to travel 50 or 100 miles to elevator points at the moment.

What is the solution? What did we do? What have they done? They turned to producer cars. There is no question that in eastern Manitoba the Grain Transportation Authority, the Grain Co-ordinator, helped get producer cars. But did we hear anything from the NDP about that? They did not want producer cars and we must ask the reason for this. Then we get back to the ultimate reactionaries. In other words, that which has not been done before has to be wrong because it has not been done before! That is the position they always take.

All across the Prairies we see farmers making decisions based on economics and common sense; that is a rational approach. They decide how they can become viable and remain viable. That is why I call the NDP the ultimate reactionaries: no matter how they twist and turn, they always come back to that which has been established as ultimately good.

In discussions on the Bill and the amendment I have yet to hear the NDP say how much money eastern Manitoba will receive from the $651 million Crow rate benefit for the maintenance of branch lines. I have asked them about that but they do not know.

Mr. Benjamin: All you need.

Mr. Epp: All we need! Have you looked at the branch line system? You will find that they are main lines.

Mr. Young: You shut them down.

Mr. Epp: The $651 million is not going to be used for the main lines. Farmers in Manitoba happen to be some 400 miles away from the Lakehead. Should they not have the right to move some of their grain by truck? We do not hear about that from the NDP. Again, I say they are the ultimate reactionaries; every time they look at the reality they have what I call the Pavlovian dog reaction: every time they hear certain words they react in the same way. They do not look at the reality of the situation.

The point that has to be made about the NDP amendment is that, once again, that Party is willing to take the chance of having bottlenecks, of losing grain sales, of not moving grain and of reducing the alternatives. That, Mr. Speaker, is what they want. We will again have those long lines in front of elevator doors. We will again have a farmer standing there from the middle of the night to the next day, only to find out that the elevator is full and he has to pay demurrage charges. That is what they want, Mr. Speaker. They might not say that is what they want, but let me tell you that their position, their policies and their amendments will do just that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I do not mind if they continue to live in the 1930s. I do not mind if they want to be the ultimate reactionaries. But I will not let them give this House and the country the message that that is the reality on the Prairies. It is not. What farmers on the Prairies want today is an efficient transportation system. One component was the GTA, and I say to the NDP that they had better start living in the 1980s or they are again going to be defeated as they have always been in the past.

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I lived through the 1930s as a young boy and I am very glad to know that the NDP, which grew up in the 1930s, or at least they had short pants in the 1930s, have suddenly come to defend the Wheat Board. Who in the world originated the Wheat Board, Mr. Speaker? Why did they originate the Wheat Board? It was the Conservative Government that saved the pools, my friend from the NDP, so I have no apologies to make for standing up here.

I notice the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) taking off and the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong). All of a sudden it begins to register on them. They of all people should know something about the situation in western Canada.

You can make a lot of speeches in this House, Mr. Speaker, and as long as you are talking to a bunch of Liberals who do not have a clue what it is all about, as long as you have the representation in the NDP with only two Members with any remote relationship to the Wheat Board, then I suppose it is safe enough for you to say anything.

Our Party does not have that kind of representation. Fortunately, our Party has representation from rural parts of Canada and we are familiar with what has happened. We know what the Wheat Board stands for. The brother of the man who heads the Wheat Board is in my constituency, for your information, and I will be darned if I am going to go out there and talk against a voter of mine.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Korchinski: I know he has an impact with his brother. I do not care how you look at it, for us even to consider that he needs one more helper is an affront to him. I do not think he needs it. He is a very capable man, in my estimation. I think the NDP, in their valiant efforts to latch on to something, have come to the support of the Wheat Board. They have had to because all they have to latch on to is a few representations, a few farm organizations coming forward and telling them, oh yes, we need this and we need that. They do not have a clue what is behind the whole thing. But they say on the surface that yes, that is it. They have no research or no idea of what is behind the whole thing.

I know what the Wheat Board did for us, and I have no apologies to make nor do I stand here to condemn the Wheat Board. But I do condemn the NDP for thinking that all of a sudden, by their phony amendments, they can come forward and think they are going to strengthen the Wheat Board or make it appear as if the Conservative Party is opposed to the Wheat Board.

Mr. Mazankowski: Phony amendments, that is right.

Mr. Korchinski: How can we possibly be opposed to the Wheat Board when we were the originators of the Wheat Board? If they want to take us back to the 1930s, let us go back to the 1930s and let the world know who it was that was responsible for the Wheat Board. You know, Mr. Speaker, that most of the social legislation was originated by the Conservative Government, contrary to what the Liberals have been telling us up until now.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Korchinski: They have been in power, yes, and as a result they have had the opportunity. We have heard all that. Of course, over a period of years, what can you do? But the fact is that the original thought came from the Conservative Party.

Mr. Lapierre: But no action.

Mr. Korchinski: You had better live with that.

Getting back to the notion of another employee of the Canadian Wheat Board—

Mr. McKnight: The Board never even asked for that help.

Mr. Korchinski: My friend from Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) says they did not ask for it. Of course, that is because they are powerful enough as it is. So why are they trying to introduce an amendment which is supposed to do something but really does nothing? What do they expect one extra employee to do, overrule their friends? You really have to go a mile here to imagine what this amendment is going to do.

Mr. Althouse: It does away with two bosses, Stan.

Mr. Korchinski: I just cannot imagine who dreamed up this amendment for my friend. Unfortunately he comes from Saskatchewan, but why would he even want to introduce that except that he was desperate for an amendment? I do not know where that idea came from, where it is going or for whom it is intended.

Mr. Althouse: You should have been here yesterday and heard the speeches.

Mr. Young: We are waiting to hear you speak. We have not heard you.

Mr. Korchinski: Mr. Speaker, I have one more minute but I wish the mikes were turned on for everyone of those 15 jabbering commentators over there.

Mr. McKnight: There are only six.

Mr. Korchinski: I am sorry, I said 15. Well, they are so far away, and I am getting to that age; there are only six.

Mr. Young: Tories never could count.

Mr. Korchinski: What is the point of this debate? It is just an exercise in futility. I think Madam Speaker should have ruled the whole matter out of order, frankly, because it does not really add anything of substance to the Bill. It is a waste of time even to discuss this kind of thing. Maybe that is what their intention was and, if so, let us tell them what it really is. They are playing around with the Wheat Board.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out line 6 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"(d) promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrange-".

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the amendment is to strengthen the role of the Administrator to negotiate reciprocal arrangements between railroad companies. The important words are "to promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements". The clause now simply states that the Administrator may "promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers". The amendment would insert the words "promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements". Again, the key words are "to promote a reliable, efficient and effective transportation system", but also in the interest of "maximizing returns to the producers".

I might point out that it was our Party that incorporated the word "reliable" and the phrase "for the purpose of maximizing returns to the producers". As I and other Hon. Members have pointed out previously, the mention of producers and the interests and concerns of producers was an absent entity in terms of the Bill. Therefore, this provision would put some teeth into the clause and give the Administrator the power to demand, if it were necessary and in the best interests of maximizing returns to the producers, that he engage in reciprocal and other arrangements between the two railroad companies, or more railway companies if others are included in it. Therefore, it would be more than simply the persuasive powers that the Administrator now has under this clause if it were to remain as it is at present.

What are "reciprocal and other arrangements"? For the benefit of Hon. Members who did not sit during the course of the committee's legal counsel as "arrangements between railway companies", the most prominent type being that the railway of one company would operate over the lines of another company either for a temporary period or for the carriage of only one kind of traffic. He went on to point out that there are now occasions when there are voluntary reciprocal arrangements made, when there is a landslide or a rockslide, but there is really nothing to encourage the use of reciprocal arrangements, particularly when one can move grain more efficiently in a more cost-effective manner. What we tried to do in the course of the committee hearing was to try to determine what sort of powers this gave the Administrator, and we found that it was really nothing more than simple persuasion.

Therefore, concerning the clause, I asked a question of Mr., Thompson, the committee's legal counsel, in this way:

I am trying to relate this to the movement of grain, Mr. Thompson. If this objective were to be fulfilled, would it be fair to assume that possibly you could see CP trains running on CN track up to Churchill and CP trains running on CN track up to Prince Rupert? Is that really what would be envisioned in this?

Mr. Thompson replied as follows:

No, in this proposal here the verb is the word promote.

He pointed out, "That is not binding, of course." I went on to ask:

But assuming that the word promote were removed and something more in the form of a directive were put in . . . that you could see the kind of situation that I just described?

He responded by saying, "That is right". Therefore, I went on to say:

—the word promote really renders that clause meaningless, other than that one could go through the gestures of promoting without having any residual power to enforce it.

Mr. Thompson replied as follows:

I guess it would be understood that the administrator would promote measures to facilitate the efficient movement of grain and among those some might, under certain circumstances, be reciprocal on other arrangements between companies.

I do not think this clause is necessary. I do not think it does any harm but I do not think it is necessary, because surely this is part of the kind of work that the administrator would do anyway.

What our legal counsel said is that it is really a meaningless clause in its present form. It has no teeth and no clout. What we are trying to do again, in our commitment and our desire to ensure that we have an effective, efficient and reliable grain transportation system functioning in the best interests of the producers, is to give the Administrator the power to more than simply promote, even though the NDP believe that the Administrator is really a nonentity. If necessary, the railways should be required to engage in reciprocal arrangements.

Throughout the course of the committee hearings we demonstrated the need to incorporate the necessity of maintaining producers' interests at all times. We moved amendments to Clauses 29(2), 18, 33 and 38. Throughout the course of our committee hearings we found it to be quite obvious that the Bill was written as a very favourable mechanism to the railroads. The major beneficiary in the whole Bill is the railroads. The benefactors will be the people of Canada, the taxpayers and, indeed, the producers.

We think that in every case possible it is important to inject the requirement that any efficiencies or economies of scale that can accrue must be incorporated. There must be someone to ensure that those economies of scale are brought about, because in this regime there is really a cost-plus system. Quite frankly, the railways will be paid for all their costs involving the movement of grain, and the higher the costs, the more they will receive. When there is this kind of cost-plus regime in place, we must ensure that there are some disciplines in the marketplace. Since there is a monopoly here, that cannot take place, so there must be some other monitoring device. Hopefully, the Administrator and the Senior Grain Transportation Committee would fill that role, but they must have the tools with which to do the job.

Of course, the whole business of an effective and reliable grain transportation system is brought about as a result of the production of the producers. As we have pointed out time and time again, they were the forgotton persons in this whole exercise. In amendments such as this we are trying to incorporate ways and means in which the producers' interests will be preserved. If we really mean what we say when we talk about an efficient and cost-effective system, we must use every mechanism to ensure that we get the best bang for the buck. As the Bill now stands, with the railways recovering all of their costs plus a 20 per cent mark-up for profit, it is certainly not in their interest to cut costs. It is in their interest to add costs. I believe these kinds of disciplines must be put into place.

I am disappointed that members on the Government side did not see fit to support this amendment during the course of the committee hearings. I believe it is a good amendment and consistent with what we should be trying to achieve in terms of establishing a very lean and cost-effective system. Unless there is the power to force the railroads to engage in these kinds of reciprocal arrangements which would serve the best interests of the grain industry and the producers, it will simply not occur.

I think the Administrator needs more than simply the power to promote. He must have the power to demand if it is deemed necessary and in the best interests of the grain industry and the producers.

I commend this motion to the House for support and I am sure that when Members understand and witness the kind of regime that we have in place they will see that it is certainly one small step toward incorporating some discipline which would hopefully accrue finally to the benefit of the producers.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, this amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) was designed because of the fear that most of us—including members on the Government side who attended and heard witnesses at approximately 66 committee hearings during the summer months—have that the rationale behind this Bill has been distorted at some point.

This Bill began some 18 months ago as one which would benefit the grain producers in western Canada and adequately compensate the railroads for the movement of that grain. As debate and study in this Bill progressed, it became increasingly evident to us and to members of the Government who were on the committee that the railroads had, if not undue influence in drafting this Bill, at least the ability and financial and human resources to voice their desires and needs. Their influence was used to give them the ability to collect hundreds of thousands of dollars from the Canadian treasury without any provision in the Bill to make the railroads perform in the best interests of the grain producers and provide for a maximum return on the shipment of their product.

The amendment by the Hon. Member for Vegreville simply states that when the Administrator put forward a proposal that would allow the railroads to enter into reciprocal agreements that were in the best interests of the producers to mazimize their returns, he could require the railroads to enter into that agreement.

When one looks at the Bill and sees the railroads' past performance, it is quite evident that the railroads jealously guard their own lines and the ability to move grain along their own roadbeds. They would rather not enter into agreements that would benefit the farmers if those trains were taken off their own lines. Therefore, it made common sense to us that if additional taxpayer dollars are to be put at the disposal of the railroads, they would have to accept the responsibility under legislation to maximize the returns to the producers. All of the discussions, commitments, press releases, grandiose schemes and promises that have been made by the railroads during debate on Bill C-155 are old news to grain producers in western Canada. It is an old story which goes back ten years.

When decisions were made on the railways that would either benefit the farmers or the shareholders of Canadian Pacific or Canadian National, who happen to be the people of Canada, those decisions always were to the benefit of the railroads and not the producers of grain. A review of this Bill leads us to believe that the railroads should be required to enter into agreements that would benefit producers in order to protect their rights and at least ensure some measure of effective cost return for the taxpayers of Canada on their commitments to the railroads.

It is strange that Canadians have historically—particularly during the last 18 months of public discussion and debate on this Bill—assumed that the railways are one great charitable organization which only moves grain because of the nature of Canadian Pacific and Canadian National. People seem to believe that they are charitable in providing this service for the benefit of the producers and, while they do not like it, only do so because they are national companies, and should do so.

But that is not the reason. The reason they have been moving grain and will continue to move grain, and the reason they are pleased with Bill C-155 as it exists, is that they will make money. It is not with a sense of national interest but because of the prospect of reward that they will do so. That is fine, let the railroads be rewarded, but in return let there be some guarantees in this Bill for the taxpayers of Canada.

I believe it was the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien) who talked about iron-clad agreements. But we only talked about iron-clad agreements. We find that this Bill does not provide the statutory powers to require the railroads to function in the best interests of producers, maximize their returns and use the taxpayers' money economically. For that reason we have introduced several amendments that would require the railroads to perform in those interests. That is why we will be supporting the amendment when it comes to a vote.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, we dealt with this subject at some length in the committee. Many witnesses spoke to this matter and members of the committee discussed this Bill clause by clause. I believe there was certainly an implied agreement among all members from all sides in the committee that further steps had to be taken than in the past on how the railroads deal with one another and how it should be for the benefit of the railway users as well.

We support Motion No. 33. For many years shippers generally thought that the National Transportation Act and the Railway Act provided sufficient safeguards that the CTC, the Minister and the courts could require certain things of the railroads. Too often we found they could not, would not or did not. We have seen for too many years, at the expense of shippers, in this instance, grain shippers, the spectacle of the railways not wanting and even refusing to handle one another's traffic, to the detriment of ports like Churchill and Prince Rupert and even on the odd occasion to the detriment of Thunder Bay or Vancouver. When the Canadian Wheat Board needed a large volume of a certain grade and quality of one kind of grain and it had to be drawn from many places on the Prairies, marshalled and got to the coast or Thunder Bay, the railroad's refusal to have reciprocal arrangements to take traffic on one another's tracks meant it took that much longer for the grain to get to its destination. And all in the name of what? In the name of so-called competition.

Competition in the railway system in Canada has always meant higher costs for taxpayers and for the users of the railways. Since the railways are a public utility, they should be treated as such and they should be accountable as such. It is something that everyone has to use directly or indirectly. Railways are natural monopolies. In that kind of circumstance, competition has no place. If it were logical to have competing railroads, it would be equally logical to have competing highways, competing sewer and water systems, telephone and power lines. If you were to suggest that, they would run you out of town or laugh you out of town. The economic and social logic of having competing railroads, competing public utilities, has always escaped me and many thousands of other Canadians. Certainly in many other countries they got rid of that mythology of the 1890s railway barons many years ago. All countries in western Europe of all political stripes gave up on the idea of competing railway systems decades and decades ago.

I said it meant higher costs, Mr. Speaker. It means higher costs for users. It means interchange charges, switching charges. It means duplicated facilities, the cost of which plus the railroads' profit is built into their freight rates, which users have to pay.

We have had spectacles and I would like to illustrate. Take grain loaded on a CN line in my friend's constituency of Assiniboia destined for Vancouver. What happens to it? That CN line is southwest of Moose Jaw. The grain is hauled back northeast to Moose Jaw. It is destined for the west but it is hauled northeast back to Moose Jaw. Then it is hauled east from Moose Jaw to Regina. Then it is taken northwest from Regina to Saskatoon. Then it starts going west to Vancouver. In the meantime it has crossed two CPR railway lines. That is called a back haul. Those back hauls have meant millions of dollars in costs to the Canadian Wheat Board, money which has come out of the grain producers' pockets.

That is the worst form of competition. It is competition backwards. Whatever validity there is to competition, it sure is not valid in that kind of circumstance. Other members in this House from western Canada will be able to illustrate countless other situations similar to that.

This legislation, if it passes, means that no matter how the money is paid out, whether Government money is paid to the railroads or paid to the producers, or paid partially to the railroads and partially to the producers, the railroads still get the money. In fact, we submit that if all the money were paid to the producers, it would cost the producers even more. In any case, no matter how it is paid out, the railroads still get the money. This extra money guarantees not only their long run variable costs, their out of pocket costs including maintenance and depreciation, but it also guarantees them a 22 per cent to 25 per cent return on investment. That is pretty nice. Most of us would be happy if we could get a 9 per cent, 10 per cent or 11 per cent return which means, compounded over five years, double your money. But the railroads get a guaranteed 22 per cent.

I ask the Parliamentary Secretary, I ask any reasonable person in this House how much more willing and ready will the railroads be to enter into a reciprocal agreement using one another's lines or one another's equipment, or taking over traffic from one railroad on to another, and yet not get the benefit of all that money? Just as sure as the sun will rise tomorrow morning, the railways will be even more reluctant to enter into reciprocal agreements. It is all very well to promote it, as is called for in this legislation; you can promote it until you are blue in the face but it is not about to happen. Even though it is in the national interest, even though it is in the interest of Canadian exports, even though it is in the interest of the grain producers, the railroads will not be ready, willing and able to enter into reciprocal arrangements and lose out on those guaranteed profits. You can bet on it, Mr. Speaker. Unless the railroads are required to enter into reciprocal arrangements, they will not do it. Even the voluntary arrangements that are in effect now will be in severe jeopardy.

If a railway comes to a rock slide in the mountains and it is figured that it will take only six or seven days to get the track cleared and back in shape, you will hear it said "To heck with it". Say it happened on a CN track. CN will say: "To heck with it; we will hold the grain for six or seven days until the rock slide is cleared up so we can move the grain over our lines and collect all the charges". That will be done instead of diverting the grain on to a CP line and getting the goods to Vancouver six days sooner.

My friend, the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight), said: "Well, the railroads are in this to make a buck and we do not object to that as long as you get the service". You can bet on it that they are in it to make a buck. If it means fouling up service for a few days in order for the railroad to clutch on to all the possible revenues itself, that is exactly what will happen. That is the responsibility and the mandate of the railway management.

The former Minister of Transport in 1974 wrote a letter to the board of directors and management of Canadian National instructing them to start making money. Ever since then we have been losing branch lines and service. That is the result of that so-called operating in a business like way—in business for Canada—which has been at the expense of too many Canadians.

We think this is a good amendment, Mr. Speaker. We hope the Government will agree that whoever is in authority, whether the Grain Transportation Administrator is an employee of the Wheat Board or not, he should have the authority, when the railroads will not agree voluntarily, to darn well make them. There should be no horsing around or appealing to the CTC or the Minister. They should be given two choices. If they will not do it voluntarily, give them two other choices—it is either compulsory or they have to do it. Then we will get even better results in the movement of grain in western Canada.

• (1230)

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 33 in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) deals with the duties and functions of the Administrator under Clause 17(d) which reads:

—promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers.

The amendment would strike out line 6 at page 8 and substitute the following therefor:

"(d) promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrange-".

This motion reinforces and strengthens the position of the Administrator to require from the railroads reciprocal agreements that would be in the best interests of the primary producers.

We have heard much in the last few days from Members of the New Democratic Party regarding their position, that they represent primary producers. They have gone to great lengths to try to discredit Conservatives in regard to the Canadian Wheat Board, the Wheat Pools in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta and so on. Quite frankly, they have fallen very flat on that score.

As the Hon. Member for Mackenzie (Mr. Korchinski) said earlier, most Conservative Members, if not all, ran their campaigns on the basis of supporting a strong Canadian Wheat Board. I remember the ads in my 1979 campaign—"Len Gustafson works for western Canada and a strong Canadian Wheat Board". We have heard all the rhetoric of the last few days. We have finally got down to an amendment which carries with it some direction to the Bill and provides a strengthened position for primary producers. It would require some accountability on the part of the railroads as far as producers are concerned.

Last weekend the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party spoke very ably in Regina and Saskatoon. He brought out the importance of the ability of producers to pay. That deals with the whole area of protecting producers. If producers find themselves in a position where freight rate increases are unbearable and where railroads are not accountable to the Transportation Committee regarding costing and so on, we will find ourselves, as producers, in a very difficult position. This is what the whole Bill is about.

In dealing with this type of amendment, we must keep in mind that it certainly protects primary producers. There are more commodities moving on the railroads than grain. For example, we have coal, steel, automobiles, potash and a number of other commodities being transported on railroads. It is most important at this point, as the Hon. Member for Vegreville mentioned, that there be accountability and a requirement—"and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements"—for the purpose of maximizing returns to primary producers.

In closing, I want to say that we in the Progressive Conservative Party stand fast on defending primary producers, on accountability of railroads to them, and on a position which will strengthen their ability to produce grain and ship it.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I find it difficult to comprehend why the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) is trying to bring in another amendment to subclause (d) when we already accepted two of his amendments in committee. We accepted the word "reliable"—"to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain". We also accepted the words "for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers". I think we have a clause which meets the intent of the Bill. The Hon.

Member's present amendment really moves against the intent of the Bill.

I find it somewhat strange that this amendment comes from a Party whose Leader is going across the country wanting to restore free enterprise. The same Party brings in amendments to manage the affairs of CP and CN; it almost wants to manage the affairs of private companies. It is difficult to understand why this amendment would come from the Conservative Party. I could understand if it came from the New Democratic Party but not from the Progressive Conservative Party.

The clause, as it now stands, allows the railways to enter into reciprocal arrangements facilitated by the Administrator, but the amendment of the mover would authorize the GTA to demand that the companies enter into reciprocal arrangements. I thought these were the powers vested in the CTC. Is the Hon. Member telling us that he wants the GTA to have greater power than the CTC? I do not think so.

I thought the Hon. Member would withdraw this amendment if he thought it through carefully. He said that legal counsel advised that the clause was not necessary. If the clause is not necessary, legal counsel should have advised the Hon. Member to delete the clause, not bring in amendments. If the clause is not necessary, the advice should have been to delete it, not amend it.

Our legal counsel told us that this amendment would contravene a basic tenet of the Railway Act under which the railways are free to enter into traffic, commercial and operating arrangements, with the Government agency acting as arbitrator. Under this amendment the Government agency would impose an arrangement and establish conditions. If we force two or more parties into an arrangement and they do not really want to honour it, they will not honour it. If the Administrator can promote the parties coming into an arrangement, then I think they will honour it.

I think the wording as it is is far superior to what the Hon. Member is trying to bring in. The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) was a little worried because the railways might "make a buck". Again I find that strange coming from a Party which is promoting free enterprise and competition. What is wrong with companies wanting to make a buck if these additional dollars are reinvested in the transportation system to give us a first-class transportation system for the movement of grain and other commodities?

A witness appeared before the committee who said that when countries like Japan buy goods from Canada, one of the things they check into is whether Canada will be able to deliver that product to port and to their country on time and in good condition. If we have a first-class transportation system, which is what the Bill wants to provide over the next decade, then Pacific Rim countries will buy more from Canada and will want to trade more with Canada.

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) asked why the railways did not go into reciprocal arrangements now. I think that up until now it has not been profitable for the railways to move grain. Therefore, they wanted no part of transporting grain. They preferred that another railway system would take over. Under this Bill it will be profitable to move grain just as it is profitable to move coal, sulphur and other products. These profits will be reinvested in the system.

We know that over the next decade CN and CP will be investing $16.5 billion. Translated into jobs, this means 375,000 person-years of work. Every day in Question Period Opposition Parties demand that the Government do something about creating long-term jobs. What better program or what better investment for creating jobs than Bill C-155?

Many witnesses told us the Bill was not perfect. It is a complicated Bill. Some groups wanted these amendments, some groups wanted others. However, the majority of the witnesses told the committee to get on with it because it is good for the economy of the country, because it will create that many jobs.

I appeal to both Parties to call the question and get on with this Bill. I have stated our reasons why we cannot support this amendment. Let us not waste time in this House as there are too many unemployed people in Canada who are waiting for this Bill.

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to speak following the Parliamentary Secretary. In fact, it is interesting to speak following any Government Member because none of them has seen fit to get up and speak very often to defend this Bill and make the case for the position they have taken. Therefore, I am pleased to have this opportunity.

I am disappointed that we have not heard from the Chief Government Whip on this Bill. He is a very straightforward gentleman. I have had the opportunity to sit with him on the Transport Committee many times. His position, knowledge and experience is long standing and will be very useful as far as the railways are concerned. Therefore, I would know his position on this amendment.

I want to deal with some of the concerns addressed by the Parliamentary Secretary. He talked about this Party being inconsistent in the sense that it should not be moving an amendment like this when our Leader talks about free enterprise. I should not have to remind him that it was the same Parliamentary Secretary at committee who turned down our freedom of choice amendment which would have given rise to some options within free enterprise. It would have put some of the decision-making power in the hands of the individual producers in this country. If he had wanted to do something beside speaking out of both sides of his mouth, he would have taken a consistent position at committee.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. While the Member is continuing his remarks, will he explain to this Chamber whether this freedom of choice means retaining the Crow rate?

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, we had 66 Transport Committee meetings. I think he attended a good number, if not all. That was explained at length at committee. If the Hon. Member did not understand it in 66 meetings because his head is that thick, I do not think I will have much success doing that in ten minutes.

Very simply, all that the rate freeze meant was that we were not going to increase costs to producers for at least the next three years. We said that a billion dollars a year for the railways from the Government coffers for the next three years was enough. The investment part that was going to go ahead and the jobs that would be created, supposedly by investment by the railways, would come about as a result of the Government pumping in $1 billion a year. We thought that the producer should not have to contribute in the meantime.

It is interesting to note that at committee on Tuesday, September 13, if memory serves me, this Parliamentary Secretary berated us and bemoaned the fact that we were all over the place because we were talking about cost of capital for the railways and their constant costs. He was saying that was terrible, that we should not deprive the railways of that money. The next evening he came forward with a Government amendment which said it would look into the cost of capital. We were saying essentially the same thing, except we came down on the side of the producers. We said that when the review process was under way, the producers should not be asked to pay any more. When the Government is conducting the review process, it does not care about the producers; it just looks after the railways and in the meantime asks the producers to pay more.

The Parliamentary Secretary talked in glowing terms about all the jobs that this will create. That may be true. However, what is the point of creating a lot of jobs in the mountains by building passes when you are going to chase 30,000 or 40,000 producers on the Prairies out of business? What kind of sense does that make? Those are the kinds of figures that we heard when we travelled the Prairies this summer. When talking about jobs, let us be consistent.

If you chase farmers off their farms because you have put them out of business, they will move to the cities. The farmers will not be out of work, it will be the people in the cities. When farmers move to towns or cities, they get jobs. It is a well known fact that they displace other people. That can be backed up in any city in the country. If someone hiring has the opportunity to hire someone with a farm background, that is who they hire. The farmer will not be out of work. When the Parliamentary Secretary talks about creating jobs, he should understand what this Bill may do to prairie agriculture and the jobs it will cost.

We talk about all the money that the railways need to go ahead and invest in building the mountains, to create the extra capacity and finance the double-tracking. I refer to what was said on July 12 by Wood Gundy concerning Canadian Pacific Limited. I will read one paragraph entitled "CP Earnings":

> Given its leverage to enterprises and the significant effect of the Crow revision, we expect CP to enjoy record earnings in 1985. However, like enterprise, the turn will be gradual in 1983 with anticipated earnings per share of $2.90 versus $2.60 in 1982. However, for 1984 and 1985 respective earnings of $6.50 and $10 should slay any notions that Canada's largest corporation is less than dynamic.

The point made throughout the four-page review is that the revision of the Crow rate will have a substantial effect on CP shares. It will drive them up. It is suggested that they will have record earnings in 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Flis: What's wrong with that?

Mr. Mayer: There is nothing wrong with that. There is nothing wrong with making a buck; I would be the last to bemoan that fact. I am saying that if you want to be consistent and not talk out of both sides of your mouth, be concerned about the producers whom we heard from when we travelled. When they tell us on one hand that they are going to go out of business, and on the other hand we hear that CP is going to have record earnings, where is the equity? If Members representing western agriculture do not point that out, they are being less than honest and derelict in their duties. If the Parliamentary Secretary wants to talk about jobs, he should do that in the complete context.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Chair does not question the validity of the Hon. Member's remarks, but I do raise some question as their relevancy to the amendment now being debated. Perhaps the Hon. Member can indicate in what way this is strictly relevant to the amendment.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, in my view it is extremely relevant because basically this Bill is written for the railways. It is a regulatory Bill. If you are going to pay railways based on regulations and on their costs, there should be something in the Bill to require the railways to keep their costs as low as possible. I am pointing out how inconsistent the Parliamentary Secretary is. As a result of this Bill and because it is so favourable to the railways, Wood Gundy points out that CP will have record earnings. Producers have told us they will have difficulty staying in business as a result of this Bill. This amendment speaks to putting some efficiency into the Bill as far as the railways are concerned, therefore holding down costs to the producers, hopefully not letting CP shares go as high as they might according to this report, and in the meantime saving tax dollars. I think I am making a very relevant point in terms of this amendment.

If you would like some more convincing, Mr. Speaker, allow me some more time and I would be more than pleased to go on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I appreciate the Hon. Member's attempt to convince the Chair that his comments are strictly relevant to the amendment. However, the Chair must remind him that we are now debating an amendment respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator. At the report stage in the House, debate must be much more formal and relevant than it generally is in standing committees. It is in that sense that I invite the Hon. Member to come to the point.

Mr. Mayer: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I certainly take your admonition although I somewhat regret that you used the word "attempt". By that, I take it that I have not totally convinced you. At any rate, I thank you very much for your guidance.

Let me simply refer specifically to the amendment. It would remove paragraph (d) of Clause 17 on page 8 of the Bill and would simply substitute the following words: "promote, and shall require," which is compulsory, but, "if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements" as far as the railways are concerned. I think that is entirely in order.

There is nothing totally compelling about it. It does not say that the Administrator shall, under all circumstances and under any conceivable condition, require the railroads to reciprocate as far as running rights are concerned. It simply reads to "promote", and that entails a whole range of things.

It goes on to read, "and shall require", and I think the key words are "if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements". I see that as being entirely consistent with what the Bill should do. As I said, the Bill should promote efficiencies within the system, keep costs down to the producer and also hopefully save the taxpayers money, because this is an entirely regulated system.

I am not accusing the railways of being devious or anything else, but if the regulations are set up so that the railways can run circuitous routes, that may in fact be exactly what the railways will do. If there are ways for the railways to take less than direct routes and keep their costs higher than would normally be the case if there were reciprocal arrangements, I think there is nothing wrong with the Administrator being in the position to enforce that kind of reciprocal arrangement. That is exactly what this amendment attempts to do.

I really do not understand why the Government should be so concerned about this amendment. As I said, the motion reads: "promote, and shall require," and the key words are "if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements". Then it goes on. I do not see anything that is inconsistent with the free enterprise system and I do not see anything that would indicate that this Party is being inconsistent. In fact, the whole Bill is totally regulatory.

One of the things that we on this side attempted at committee was to get rid of some of these arrangements that were totally regulatory in order to free up the system and allow truckers and the individual producer to have a part to play. The Government turned that down so we are now saying that we should at least give the Administrator some powers to force the railways to be efficient.

The Parliamentary Secretary says that he does not understand this. I can understand that. He finds it difficult to understand because he lives in High Park. He has made a big deal about being born in either Wakaw or Cudworth in Saskatchewan. I cannot remember which town, but I am familiar with that area.

Mr. Flis: Try Wadena.

Mr. Mayer: Excuse me, Wadena. That is the same general area of Saskatchewan. I can understand that he does not understand it because he did not grow up in that part of the country. He does not understand the railways. He did not have a chance to deliver grain and load cars through elevators. When he says he does not understand, I would suspect it is because he does not have an understanding of the way the railways work.

When talking about this amendment, Mr. Speaker, we are talking about why the railways should not have to be subject to some of the powers of the Administrator. The reasoning is that the railways need to make money because the railways will turn around and invest that money. We know very well that that is not the case because officials of the railways told us in committee that there was no guarantee that this money would go to specific investments. They told us that the money would go into general revenues. In fact, I think officials of one or both of the railways issued press releases last spring indicating that their intention to invest money would not now come about because of the downturn in traffic. They were not planning on investing as much money this current year as had originally been intended.

The railways are going to make a lot of money as a result of this Bill which is so generous to them, but there is no guarantee that their officials will take that money and invest it in the way that we need it to be invested. The railways have good intentions and we know that, but there is no iron-clad guarantee. We are attempting to give the Administrator some teeth so that he may do what he thinks is right in terms of holding down the costs to the producers and in the process hold down some of the costs to the public treasury.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, what is really at issue in this amendment, which we certainly intend to support, is why the railroads should give up a long trip for a short trip. Certainly the experience in Prince Rupert over the years has been that where and when possible the railways have been somewhat reticent to provide the required number of cars to the existing grain elevators in Prince Rupert. One of the largest and most efficient grain elevators, not only in Canada but in the world, is now being constructed and it is certainly our expectation that, because of the Crow Bill as it now reads, there is a possibility, if not a probability, that there will be shortages in the supply of grain to the Port of Prince Rupert.

The Parliamentary Secretary has said that the amendment contravenes the powers of the CTC and the Railway Act. I do not believe the Government has taken care to analyse and evaluate what the probability of grain shipments and deliveries will be under the Crow Bill. It is pretty clear that it is in the interest of CN and CP to take their time and to use the longest route possible rather than the shortest. That is clearly how the railways will be making money.

The substantive addition that the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) has suggested is the addition of the word "require", so that the clause would read:

"promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements" between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to the producers.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, I think it is clear that officials of the railways will take the initiative to make as much money as they can by holding cars on sidings or by not shifting them on to shorter routes. From our point of view, it is clear that the powers should be under the Canadian Wheat Board rather than under a completely separate jurisdiction; but I dealt with that when I spoke earlier.

The significance of adding to the clause the requirement for reciprocal arrangements is that in order to improve the efficiency of the grain handling system, we want very much to allow for more interchange between the CP and CN systems to get the railways working together for shorter hauls and quicker delivery of grain. Each railway has track that is better served by interconnection with the oher system, yet only in the most exceptional circumstances do the systems acknowledge let alone co-operate with each other. That is the point that I think members on this side have been trying to make to the Parliamentary Secretary and to others.

The Parliamentary Secretary has said that the CTC and the Railway Act already have those powers. We have seen over the last 20, 30 or 40 years that those powers have simply not been used in an effective and efficient manner. We say that there should be some kind of sensible consolidation of authority, if not under the Wheat Board, then perhaps under some other agency. When the Wheat Board effectively tries to administer what grains will go where, when and with which contracts, which cars, which lines, when and to where, it makes a great deal of sense to consolidate all of that authority under one régime.

It also makes sense to ensure that either the Wheat Board or some other agency has the legal capacity to require reciprocal arrangements and not simply to promote them. Officials of the Wheat Board or the GTA could simply phone officials of CN or CP and say that they would like another 500 cars for Prince Rupert or another 1,000 cars for Vancouver. The rail lines could start moving those cars and simply put them off on a sideline for a while. It is not good enough to have the power to promote. That agency must have the ability to require.

The motion to enhance the authority of the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator over the railways specifically gives that Administrator the power to direct the railroads to exchange carloads of grains where such exchanges increase the efficiency of moving grain to export position. While we in this Party have argued that there is no effective need for an additional bureaucracy such as the Grain Transportation Agency and that the Administrator already has too much power in the sense that his powers encroach upon those of the Canadian Wheat Board, this is a good amendment and should be supported particularly by Government members.

No matter what public agency has control over the transportation of grain—we will find out in a few weeks exactly which agency that will be, whether it be the Wheat Board or the Canadian Grain Transportation Agency—it should have the ability to direct the railways to exchange cars in order to promote efficiency.

I see that it is now one o'clock. I will carry on this afternoon.

PATENTS

SUPPORT FOR MANUFACTURE OF GENERIC DRUGS

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, there is no question that there is considerable pressure and a movement afoot by multinational drug companies to pressure the Government to rescind the manufacture and sale of generic drugs in favour of the more expensive brand name drugs.

Generic drugs, Madam Speaker, are just as effective as brand name drugs but cost a great deal less, which means that consumers can save millions of dollars every year.

As well, Madam Speaker, many more people are employed by generic manufacturers—all Canadian companies—rather than by the subsidiaries of foreign drug firms.

There is ample evidence as well that Canadians need the competition provided by the generic firms. Individuals who pay for their own prescriptions, including senior citizens, can save money. So can all taxpayers because the provincial Governments pay for the drugs used in hospitals, and for drugs for the elderly and the needy.

Before the Patent Act was amended in 1969 to allow the availability of generic drugs, Canada had about the highest drug prices in the world. Now they are among the lowest. I urge the Government for the sake of all Canadians not to take any action to change this.

AIR SAFETY

CONSEQUENCES OF METRIC MEASUREMENT FOR AIR TRAVELLERS

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, Mr. Robert Buck, chairman of the commission which praised Air

Canada for its safety standards, while at the same time refusing to release the details of the study because it was to remain confidential and the property of Air Canada, said, as reported in The Globe and Mail on September 30, "You shouldn't have a bastard bunch of airplanes mixed in with the whole fleet, but that is a political issue (for Canada) as I understand it. It's unfortunate that you have one group of planes that is metric and one group that is not."

On September 19 I rose and asked for a public inquiry into the crash landing of an Air Canada Boeing 767 at Gimli, Manitoba. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) responded, saying, "If the opposition were to co-operate we could get that legislation through very quickly—" and, presumably, out of committee. We did co-operate and the legislation is out of committee, but we are still waiting for it to appear in the House in order that we can have public inquiries into these kinds of accidents.

The Canadian people will not be happy now that they have learned that this clean bill of health for Air Canada's safety is a result of a seven-man commission appointed by the president of Air Canada, with five of the seven members of the commission being salaried employees of the Boeing Aircraft Company.

How serious does an accident have to be if Canada is to have a public inquiry? Will the Government listen to the air pilots and the air traffic controllers, and hold off air travel in metric until the world associations determine it is safe to change to metric?

EFFECT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA LEGISLATION

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, the Social Credit Government of British Columbia has objected to a $20,000 federal grant to the Vancouver Island Human Rights Committee on the ground that it will be used to overthrow the Government.

When the provincial Government first cut back on human rights it did so in the name of financial restraint. It now appears that the Socreds fear human rights as a threat to their stay in power. In a sense they are right. Whenever people learn to value their own humanity and to stand up for their own rights, they pose a threat to all mean spirited and repressive governments.

In the same way, the Socreds object to federal funding for self-help centres for the unemployed. These centres provide basic counselling for workers and their families who suffer from the trauma of unemployment. They operate community food banks. Right now they are beginning to organize Christmas hampers and gifts for families who would otherwise do without.

The Socreds fear that when unemployed workers get together they will talk and discuss the basic reasons for their unemployment. The neo-neanderthals fear the full humanity of all people who co-operate to better their own lives and who organize and plan for better communities. Considering the federal Government's failure to solve the problem of unemployment, it has a continuing responsibility to fund these self-help centres, and not be spooked by Socred fears.

BILINGUALISM

WINNIPEG REFERENDUM

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, it is a great concern to Members of Parliament in all Parties that the City of Winnipeg has decided by a very narrow vote in city council to hold a referendum on French language rights during the municipal elections next month. The wording of the proposed referendum is so complex and so ambiguous that many people may not understand the purpose of the vote.

The intent of the provincial legislation which prompted Winnipeg City Council to hold this referendum is not to ram French down the throats of Manitobans, nor to make it a necessary criterion of advancement in business or in the civil service of that Province for people to speak French as well as English. Rather, it is to provide some provincial services in French to Franco-Manitobans, and to comply with Section 23 of the Manitoba Act of 1870, which was a condition under which Manitoba entered Confederation.

All Canadians are hoping that the citizens of Winnipeg will uphold the Canadian traditions of tolerance, fairness, and multicultural understanding, when they mark their ballots on October 26.

THE CONSTITUTION

PRIVATE PROPERTY WEEK—CALL FOR INCLUSION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, I want to remind the House that this is Private Property Week, a national observance sponsored by the Canadian Real Estate Association and its 50,000 members across the country.

I trust all members will endorse the purpose of the observance which is to remind Canadians of their existing rights and responsibilities. It is also to remind them that when encroachments on property, through all manner of laws and regulations, are always increasing, property rights cannot be taken for granted.

At the same time we know that property rights in Canada could and should be strengthened through an amendment that would entrench them in the Charter of Rights. I have seen some fine words from the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) pledging his support both for the purposes of this week and for the amendment. If the Government is serious about adding this fundamental right to the Charter, it will introduce a property rights resolution to the House, with the usual planning, so that it can be dealt with properly.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SRI LANKA—CALL FOR UNIFIED SOCIETY

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, having recently returned from Sri Lanka I have witnessed and discussed with Sri Lankans the result of inter-communal violence in that nation.

The barbarous nature of man has emerged and demonstrated the worst of its most basic elements, in a state considered to be educated, enlightened and civilized. Human rights atrocities have been committed and a pluralistic democracy may be at risk.

A fragile developing economy has suffered severe dislocation. These events are particularly tragic in light of the recent successes of new conservative economic policies which include reduction of government subsidies, removal of import quotas, and the establishment of free trade zones.

It is hoped that Sri Lanka will find peace, justice, stability and economic progress as the process of negotiation, compromise and reconciliation unfolds. Canada can play a key role in that process by supporting political attempts to forge a unified society, and aiding economic revival and growth by continued development aid.

Canadian aid, however, should be an element of political stabilization and economic growth leading to self-sufficiency, not to repression and colonialization. The Canadian Government should receive concrete guarantees from President Jayewardene that the resettlement as a result of the Mahaweli Dam project, partly funded by CIDA, will be predicated on existing ethnic ratios, and that future aid will be evenly distributed throughout the country.

I hope that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) will raise these issues when he attends the Commonwealth Conference in India in November.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

SUPPORT FOR POLICIES OF MANITOBA NEW DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, I cannot let yesterday's statement by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) stand without correction. The Hon. Member, never one to let facts cloud his thinking, told the House that the Manitoba Government is the worst in this country for business and that it leaves Manitobans no hope for recovery. How can that be?

Is the NDP Government in Manitoba worse than Alberta's Tory administration where the rate of economic growth is lower than Manitoba's, in fact one of the lowest in Canada?

Can it be worse than the Tory Government thrown out of office by Manitoba voters a couple of years ago—the same Tory Government that drove Manitobans from the Province in greater numbers than at any time in recent history—the same Tory Government that simply could not, in its last year, match the business starts of the current NDP Government in this last year?

Let me set the record straight. Under the Tories, Manitoba suffered its first absolute population decline in many years. Mr. Lyon was simply driving people out of the Province. It was only when the voters threw him out of office that Manitobans began to return. In fact the population growth in the last year was the greatest since 1963.

Manitoba's NDP Government was left a dismal economic future by the Tories but it is turning that around. This year alone, by working with small business, it has been able to reduce bankruptcies by 22 per cent. The interest rate relief program has saved some 500 small businesses from the threat of—

NECESSITY TO PROVIDE FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO PEOPLE LIVING ON QUEBEC NORTH SHORE

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, once again, the North Shore has been struck by major lay-offs. Last week, I was in Schefferville, and I now want to ask the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray) and the Minister responsible for Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) for additional funding to help more employees of the Iron Ore Company who were laid off last week.

Madam Speaker, for a number of reasons, workers on the North Shore have the impression they have been abandoned by everyone. We no longer have a president at the Iron Ore Company. The position has not been restored, so there is no longer any contact between workers and company management, which has produced a tremendous feeling of insecurity. Soon other towns on the North Shore may be affected, and I would like to bring up the subject here in the House because we will need additional funds if, once more, the Government is to take up the slack left by private companies, which after taking advantage of the skills of their workers are now dropping them in the middle of their careers, people who are only in their early 40s. Work at Pointe-Noire has started, but this will not be enough. We will need substantial assistance this winter, and funds will have to be allocated imediately to put people back to work, because if things go on as they are now, I think the North Shore may soon have a number of social problems. I would therefore appreciate it if the ministers would act as responsibly as they have in the past.

INDUSTRY

RED STAR EXPRESS—EFFECT OF SCHEDULE CHANGE ON EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, there is a serious problem confronting the trucking industry, not only in my riding of Erie but in Canada as a whole. An American firm, Red Star Express, based in New York State, runs a trans-border service to Toronto. Originally American drivers took the loads as far as Fort Erie where Canadian men took over for the drive to Toronto. Now, in a move aimed at streamlining the operation, the parent company decided it would cease to switch drivers in Fort Erie. It intends to close the Fort Erie terminal and send the American drivers all the way to Toronto. The result is that 14 Canadians are out of work.

I believe the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) should take firm and decisive action to stem the tide of shutdowns of Canadian operations at the expense of Canadian jobs. With 1.5 million people unemployed we cannot ignore the dangerous precedent of Red Star. Five thousand jobs are at stake should other American operators take this cue and follow suit.

The Red Star decision appears all the more reprehensible in light of the fact it was approved by FIRA in 1975 to take over two existing Canadian operators. Although there were no agreements on undertakings with regard to hiring Canadians to drive in this country, surely the company has an ethical and moral obligation to continue employing Canadians.

In light of the above it is necessary to take some kind of action. I therefore appeal to the Minister of Transport to meet with his provincial counterparts and with representatives of the trucking industry to decide what must be done to ensure that Red Star and similar companies continue to provide jobs for Canadians.

SRI LANKA—INDIA'S OFFER TO ASSIST WITH CONCILIATION

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, I would like to echo the concern many of us have over the situation in Sri Lanka where earlier this summer there was a massacre of a large number of the Tamil population, and where the Leader of the Opposition, whom we met yesterday, is no longer able to return to his country because under the new constitutional reforms his party and his position have been virtually annihilated.

I ask that the Government of Canada do two things. First, urge the Government of Sri Lanka to accept the offer of the Prime Minister and Government of India to use their good offices in bringing peace and security to the country of Sri Lanka. Indeed, I think the Prime Minister of Canada could take that initiative, I hope he will, when he is talking next with members of the Government of Sri Lanka, and we would like to see, particularly on behalf of the Tamils, that offer taken up by the Government.

Secondly, I would hope Canadian aid in Sri Lanka is distributed in such a way that the Tamil population will be—

U.S.S.R.—SHOOTING DOWN OF KOREAN AIRLINER—PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. While he was absent all last week travelling both in and out of the country—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rossi: Where were you?

Madam Speaker: Order, please. We have not started yet, and I do not know if we will ever get to the end of it.

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, while the Prime Minister was travelling, no doubt on official business, he introduced a troubling new dimension into a recent foreign policy matter. The Prime Minister repeatedly referred to the shooting down of the Korean airliner as an accident. Is it now the official position of the Government of Canada that the Korean airliner tragedy, in which ten Canadians lost their lives, was in fact an accident?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am glad the Hon. Leader of the Opposition missed me last week. I can assure him that I missed this old place and I was thinking of him often when I was travelling through the Provinces and to the United Nations. I even missed him when I was talking to my Quebec colleagues on Sunday.

Mr. Crosbie: The last round-up.

Mr. Hees: You better do better than that, Pierre; you are slowing down.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: The Hon. Member for Prince Edward-Hastings—

Mr. Hees: The wrong riding. It is Northumberland.

Mr. Trudeau: —should realize that I was not even aiming at him, Madam Speaker. He is too small fry to occupy my time—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, on the subject raised by the Leader of the Opposition, I want to assure him that the statements made by the Secretary of State for External Affairs and other Ministers who have commented on this subject still remain the view of the Government. I was not intending to change those statements in any way.

"Accident" means something that happens.

An Hon. Member: You are an accident, Pierre.

Mr. Trudeau: It is something tragic which happened—

Mr. Shields: Like you.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, "accident" comes from the Latin accidere, which means "to happen"; it can be a disaster. It comes from ad-cadere, which means "to fall down". That is what the Korean plane did, it fell down.

An Hon. Member: By itself?

Mr. Trudeau: I think it is an accident that the Korean pilot put that plane over Soviet territory. I think that was an accident. I do not think it was done by design. Therefore, an accident did happen, Madam Speaker.

• (1420)

The Government took the lead in expressing its outrage about that happening. It took the lead and, since then, the Leader of the Conservative Party has been trying to catch up in showing his indignation.

When the Secretary of State for External Affairs declared the 60-day boycott, he consulted me. I said, "That is a policy and you should do it now, before waiting for the lead of other countries", which we did. We took—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: We took the lead in bringing it before the Security Council at the United Nations. We took the lead in bringing it before ICAO in Montreal. We are still continuing that boycott, whereas most of the European nations have interrupted their boycotts. I do not think the Government has to state that it did not show the proper amount of indignation and outrage at this happening. Still, the House knows that we adopted, in the House, a resolution which the Soviet Union has refused to receive. The Government presented a note which the Soviet Union refused to receive. What do we do now, Madam Speaker? Do we go on shouting, or do we start war, or do we tell the western farmers that they should not sell their wheat to the Soviet Union? What does the Leader of the Opposition propose?

Some Hon. Members: Bravo!

Mr. Mulroney: The Leader of the Opposition proposes to get a very straight answer from the Prime Minister, even though that is difficult in this country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

USE OF WORD "ACCIDENT" BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, on September 12 in this House the Secretary of State for External Affairs called the tragedy "an unjustified act of murder". That was the position of the people of Canada as well. There is a world of difference between the word "accident", as the Prime Minister, with his semantics, knows, and "an act of murder".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: I want to know from the Prime Minister whether this was an egregious slip of the tongue that he made—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: —or whether he is privy to new information, of which none of his Cabinet is aware, that he would care to share with the House, which has caused him to so characterize such an important international incident.

Mr. Lalonde: You have changed positions ten times.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Soviets themselves admitted that they shot down the airline. No new information that I can bring will say that they did not shoot it down. It was characterized as murder by the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I said I accepted it, and I was party to the decision which the Secretary of State made. That was a month ago. We have still not had any indication from the Soviets that they will pay compensation. We still have a heating up of the war, the cold war, which has now been going on for a while, and it is getting dangerous, Madam Speaker.

I think that, for my part, I will not get anything out of the Soviets in terms of describing that murder anew. I want to speak of the event, which was disastrous, and which I believe brought the world closer to the brink of disaster. It is the view of myself, of my Party, and of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, that at this stage we will not get more from the Soviets by treating them as murderers. We might get some de-escalation in the cold war by treating them as human beings.

Yes, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member speaks of murder. We spoke of murder. However, I do not believe it was the intention of the people in the Kremlin to shoot down innocent passengers.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: Well, they do over there, and that is the difference between that Party and this Party.

Mr. Stevens: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, we know that the Korean airliner was over Soviet air space for a matter of more than two hours. We know that all the maps indicate that when one is over that territory one can be shot down without warning. We know that the Soviet fighters tried to communicate and challenged the Korean airliner, asking it if it was friend or foe.

Some Hon. Members: Nonsense!

Mr. Trudeau: We know that that communication did not get through. We know that two years ago there was a Korean airliner which went some thousands of miles into Soviet air space before being brought down. We do not want that to happen again. That is why we are taking positive steps in ICAO to try to ensure that communications of that kind not go by each other in the night, and that if one is challenged, "Friend or foe?" that there will be answer. This is important. For that reason I think that we should concentrate our efforts, (a) in trying to get compensation and, (b) in trying to ensure that this kind of tragic accident does not happen again.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: I was fascinated, Madam Speaker, at the Prime Minister's statement of the intentions of the Soviet Union, that it had absolutely no intention of shooting down that airliner.

Mr. Trudeau: I said "the people in the Kremlin."

Mr. Mulroney: The Kremlin. What is the difference? They had no intention of invading Afghanistan, either. They had no intention of invading Poland.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR APOLOGY TO HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Does the Prime Minister realize the gravity of sending the kind of clear signal that he has sent around the world to the Soviet Union, a signal which undermines the position taken by all civilized countries, which gravely undermines the position of our allies? Why does the Prime Minister not do one of two things? Either he should admit that he made a grave mistake in judgment, or he should apologize to the House for issuing a statement which runs counter to the resolution passed by the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, for about a month we expressed our indignation and outrage. I repeat that the Government has taken the lead in doing that, and it was in the forefront of all the nations of the world. Now, what did it get us and where are we, Madam Speaker? I ask the Leader of the Opposition, does he want to send a gunboat to shell Leningrad, or what?

Mr. Hees: We don't have one.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member wants to know the difference between the Kremlin and the pilot who shot down the Korean airline. There is a difference. I do not believe that the people in the Kremlin deliberately murdered or killed some 200 or 300 passengers in the Korean airliner. I do not believe that. I believe it was a tragic accident, an accident of war. It was caused, no doubt, by a reckless pilot and, no doubt, by a misguided commander on the ground. That is what I am afraid of, that the next war that awaits us will be started, not by the people in the Kremlin or by any other people, but, rather, by some accident of some pilot making the kind of tragic decision that he made, and the people on the ground making that tragic decision. That is why I am worried.

I can express indignation just as well as the Leader of the Opposition. The difference is that we have done it before him and we have done it before other nations. Now I think there should be some effort to re-establish communications with the Soviets. I, for one, think that it is in that direction that the superpowers must go. They must try to find some way to stop shouting at each other, when the world is teetering on the brink of disaster and atomic war.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I must ask the House to refrain from manifesting itself in this way or we will not get through the Question Period, and I must also ask that everyone try to be brief in their interventions. I now recognize the Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, Hon. Members on this side of the House, and I include my friends in the NDP, have no lessons to take from the Prime Minister or his colleagues about our commitment to peace. Of that, we are absolutely certain.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CANADIAN DIPLOMATIC NOTE

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): The implication was that the Kremlin did not wilfully do this. If that is the case, why does the Prime Minister not secure from those people who did not wilfully do this at least the acceptance of our note and compensation paid to the Canadians who were affected by it?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, now the Leader of the Opposition is making a positive suggestion. He wants me to intervene with the Kremlin and get them to accept our note. First, I will have to talk to them. Then I will have to make sure that they will listen to me. They will not listen to me, nor can I talk to them, if I just continue shouting at them and treating them as murderers. That is my point, Madam Speaker.

MEDICAL CARE

PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS—EFFECT ON UNIVERSALITY OF PROGRAM

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. She is quoted as saying that she thinks that what has been occurring in Alberta in the last week is crazy. She obviously disapproves of it.

Could she tell the House and those of us who are concerned about Medicare, especially in regard to what is happening in Provinces like Alberta, whether she intends to address the problems of premiums through the Canada Health Act, which we hope to see very soon, and the way in which payment for health care through the premium mechanism in Alberta leads to the erosion of universality? In Alberta especially it is not just the erosion of universality, it is the complete destruction of universality. Does she have any plans to address that, or does she still maintain the position that she must keep a hands-off position in this matter?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, as I stated yesterday in answer to some media queries, Alberta would not be in such an administrative mess if it had taken the route of having people pay for Medicare through general taxes, which is also the best method in terms of social justice. It would hit everyone equally, and all of those who are not technically on welfare but are unemployed, and who certainly are not rich by any standard, would not be caught between a two-chair situation as we see now.

However, the Member should not polarize, asking to be in favour of premiums or not, and equating it with not being able to do anything. According to Justice experts, under the Constitution we cannot, ourselves, decide that premiums are not proper for Provinces to choose if that is what they wish. But we will have a paragraph on universality, like we already have, that is as strong as possible according to the Constitution. If there is a breach of universality because premiums are not paid, that will be a breach of the Medicare Act.

Mr. Blaikie: We do not need any lectures from the Minister on social justice. The NDP pioneered the abolition of premiums in all the Provinces where it governed.

INTRODUCTION OF NEW HEALTH ACT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Does the Minister intend to find a way, through the new Act, to take action in a situation where the payment of premiums in a certain way is found to be an erosion of universality? It is not enough for her just to declare that she does not like them. Does she have any mechanism in mind for taking action when we find that premiums are eroding universality?

Furthermore, will we see the new Canada Health Act very soon? It has been three weeks since I asked her about that when we first came back, and we still hear nothing but rhetoric from the Minister.

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): If the NDP is so much in favour of Medicare, and since Medicare needs all the friends it can have, maybe it would help if the Minister from Manitoba would say it a few times publicly. I would love to hear that he is supporting Medicare like he should, and like he tells me privately.

Second, my English must be getting worse by the day or week because I just said that people in Canada everywhere must have universal coverage and access to all insurance services. That means all visits to the doctors and hospitals. That is part of the Canada Health Act.

This means that whatever means Provinces use to raise additional money, such as by premiums in three of them, if they do not cover their people according to the Act it will be a breach of the Act and will, unfortunately, be subject to a penalty.

Mr. Blaikie: The Minister of Health in Manitoba has made it clear many times, as he did this summer when he met with all New Democrats across the country, that he agrees with the position we have been taking in this House and is in favour of steps to do away with the erosion of Medicare. The Minister is completely off base when she makes a charge like that.

FEDERAL FUNDING

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, does the Minister in fact intend to bring in the Canada Health Act and finally do something about those things she says she has deplored all of these years? If so, at the same time will she re-open the question of the adequacy of federal funding of Medicare and the fiscal arrangements pertaining thereto, so that when she does so it can be a more viable political option which will no longer give the Progressive Conservative provinces something to hang their ideological agenda on for the destruction of Medicare?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): After the Member opposite met with the Minister in their kitchen in Manitoba, there was the Halifax meeting on September 7. You met in August, and I would have been pleased if the Minister did not forget to tell the Press that he was in favour of Medicare and not against it. That was September. There still is October and there will be November.

We will need him like we will need every Canadian in favour of keeping the system open as it is for all Canadians.

As I have said often, and as I answered the Member when he asked me on our first day back last September, the Act is going through the Cabinet process and will be tabled as soon as it is approved in all its various stages.

Mr. Blaikie: You have been saying that for two years.

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister, Canada's version of Neville Chamberlain. It is a question about Government policy in which there is another conflict. In the Government, the feet do not know which mouth they are in.

According to Maclean's magazine of today, there are serious differences in the Government how to deal with the economy. Is it correct that the Government has neglected a range of functions that will become critical in supporting the economy? Is it correct that the Departments are run so badly that Canada now lacks some of the basic government services needed to take advantage of the current recovery? Are those statements correct with respect to the Government?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the statements are incorrect, including the one the Hon. Member made about Neville Chamberlain.

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF STATE FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, if the statements that the Government has neglected this range of functions, and that Government Departments are run down so badly that they cannot take advantage of the current recovery are not correct, will he dismiss or ask for the resignation of his Minister of State for Economic Development who made those statements in a 35-page document that went to the Cabinet, and who has made similar statements of criticism of Government policy in other documents presented to royal commissions and elsewhere? Is he going to go, or is the Prime Minister going to go, or will they both go—that is the preferable course?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Neither will go, Madam Speaker.

TRUST COMPANIES

PROMISE TO INTRODUCE NEW LEGISLATION

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. He will realize that he, his predecessor, and every Minister of State for Finance since the Bank Act was passed in 1980, promised a new trust company act. Is it the view of the Minister that a new trust company act is not important and is not critical for recovery?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Government and my Department are reviewing the various pieces of legislation that should be brought before Parliament. I would suggest that we have more urgent pieces of legislation to bring before Parliament, such as the Income Tax amendments that I hope will be expeditiously considered by Parliament when they come before it.

As the Hon. Member knows, we also had other measures brought in on those various subjects during the last year or two. As far as trust company legislation is concerned, I do not intend to proceed with a piece of legislation on this subject in the next few months.

CRITICISM OF DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, do I understand that the Minister of Finance does not agree with his Cabinet colleague, the Minister of State for Economic Development, who stated in his famous paper that the Finance Department is stifling potential investment with its long delays in bringing the country's trust company, insurance, and pension fund legislation up to date?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Minister did not make such statements.

THE ECONOMY

UNEMPLOYMENT IN CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Is the Minister aware of the fact that in the Province of Quebec half of the total number of construction workers are out of work, that in the City of Vancouver half of the number of construction workers are out of work, that in southern Saskatchewan 60 per cent of construction workers are out of work, and that in southern Ontario 60 per cent of construction workers are out of work? If the Minister is aware, will he sit down now and develop an inventory of public works that could be undertaken either by the federal Government, or by the federal and provincial Governments jointly, in order that those people might have not only a job but the hope of a job in the near future?

Will he also look again at the problem of the unemployment insurance payments which many of those people are no longer receiving because they have run out of them and they are unable to live on welfare? Will the Minister try to do something to solve the terrible problems of these people and their families?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I am aware of the figures mentioned by the Hon. Member, and that is why, in the last budget, the federal Government proposed a recovery program involving expenditures of $2.4 billion on federal capital projects throughout the country. The program was announced when the budget was brought down and it is now operating. Work has started on a number of projects and in many cases, construction starting within the coming months will keep the industry busy for several years. We have done exactly what the Hon. Member is suggesting. Within the framework of federal spending, we have identified a large number of projects that would have to be carried out in any case by the end of this decade. We have rescheduled the programs in order to implement them at a time when Canada is starting to come out of the recession, thus stimulating the Canadian economy. Last July, I met with my provincial counterparts and discussed the matter with them. I asked them to give special attention to the construction industry and to see whether they could supplement the efforts of the federal Government in this area.

PLIGHT OF UNEMPLOYED IN HAMILTON

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, the program is not working. In Hamilton 500 out of 700 carpenters are unemployed; 600 out of 1,200 electricians are unemployed; 1,000 of 1,200—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I will not allow another long enumeration of statistics. The Hon. Member could be asking a question, but that is all I will allow.

Mr. Deans: Given that those people are unemployed, and I could go on at some great length, that they are not receiving unemployment insurance in many instances—

An Hon. Member: Question.

Mr. Deans: —that there are no jobs for them, that you will do nothing about the COED program, will you move to provide those people with an income so that they can provide for their families?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I do not think jobs are created by pounding one's fists on the table but by proposing specific and realistic programs like those we mentioned. Another way to create jobs, especially in Hamilton, would be to adopt as quickly as possible the amendments to the Crow Bill, which, once it is passed, will generate $25 billion in investment in the coming decade and 300,000 person-years' worth of jobs, and this will also bring jobs to the city of Hamilton, in the steel industry as well as in many other sectors. If my Hon. colleague really wants to help the workers of Hamilton, he should hurry up and pass the bill that is now before the House and is going to create jobs across Canada.

[English]

Mr. Deans: Not one single steel job, not one. You are a hypocrite. You are a liar.

ENERGY

PRODUCTION OF GEOLOGICAL IMFORMATION

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who is lining up delegate support.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Move over, Pierre.

Miss Carney: Now that the Minister has resumed his seat, Madam Speaker, may I point out that the Minister has committed some $8 billion of taxpayers' money for frontier oil and gas exploration under the Petroleum Incentives Program. Does he agree with the view that his Energy Department has failed to produce the geological information needed to develop Canada's offshore mineral resources?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): No, Madam Speaker.

REPORTED CRITICISM OF DEPARTMENT

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Is the Minister aware that his colleague, the Minister responsible for economic development, has said that the Energy Department failed to do its homework before committing taxpayers to a runaway expenditure program amounting to billions of dollars?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I think the Minister referred to never said such a thing.

Mr. Crosbie: He wrote it.

AGRICULTURE

RESEARCH INTO SOIL AND WATER SUPPLIES

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Agriculture my question is for the Acting Minister. Does the Acting Minister of Agriculture agree with the view that Canada's food producing capacity is threatened by a lack of research on the part of Agriculture Canada into the deterioration of our soil and water supplies?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I would point out to the Hon. Member that a number of initiatives have recently been taken to improve substantially the agricultural research initiatives in this country under the Special Recovery Program. A number of new agricultural research stations have been opened, particularly in western Canada with a hydrology lab. Other initiatives have been taken. I think what we can point out, and if the Minister of Agriculture were here I am sure he could elaborate on it, is that he, and his Department and the Government have been very much aware of that issue and have been responding to it by taking appropriate action.

Mr. Greenaway: Madam Speaker, it sounds to me as though the Minister disagrees. This is at variance with the latest chapter of "Fiscalamity" written by the Minister of State for Economic Development.

CRITICISM OF DEPARTMENT

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, does the Acting Minister agree with a document drafted by the Minister of State for Economic Development that states:

> Agriculture Canada has been so preoccupied with Canagrex that it has failed to research vital problems such as the declining amount and quality of our farm land.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the document to which the Hon. Member refers is one on which we would not comment. What we can comment on are the actions that have been taken. I just pointed out this Government has taken several very important initiatives to upgrade and improve research and development, particularly with the establishment of the new hydrology station in Saskatoon in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Crosbie: Why doesn't Johnston know about it?

COMMUNICATIONS

REGULATION OF HIGH TECHNOLOGY INDUSTRIES—CRITICISM OF DEPARTMENT

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Communications. Does he agree that the communications Department is subjecting high technology industries to a host of regulations which may be impeding their growth?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, may I first of all congratulate the Hon. Member on being able to read Maclean's magazine. He, like the two previous questioners, has read Maclean's this morning, which I suppose is something to their credit. If the Hon. Member is referring to the communications industries, he knows as well as I do that there is one industrial sector in Canada that has a competitive edge in the international field and it is, indeed, the Canadian telecommunications industry. On the other hand we all know that with evolving technologies there is a need to reform certain regulatory aspects that affect not only the telecommunications industry but also the broadcasting industry. But if the Hon. Member is saying that we should at this stage of the game try to improve that regulatory process, I obviously agree.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, I am delighted to know that the Minister of Communications can read Maclean's magazine as well.

DOCUMENT SUBMITTED BY MINISTER OF STATE FOR SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, does the Minister of Communications agree with the document submitted by his colleague, the Minister of State for Science and Technology, the document that was submitted to Cabinet? Does he agree with the statements made by his cabinet colleague?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, quite obviously we, on this side of the House, feel there is always room for improvement, that there is always room to ensure that the regulatory environment is adjusted to changing times and conditions. If that is what the Hon. Member is asking me, then my colleague and I are indeed in agreement.

RAILWAYS

COST OF UPGRADING RAIL NETWORK

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. He will be aware of a telex that he received from the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool on September 21. It pointed out that his officials estimate in the order of $1.6 billion will be required to upgrade all the rail line network now guaranteed to the year 2000, but that the announcement of February 1 by the Government of only $1.072 billion means there is a shortfall of about $528 million. Can the Minister advise the House what his reply was to the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and all the other elevator companies that are making investment plans and do not know whether or not their branch lines will be retained?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I would answer by saying I do not think one should say "only $1 billion." It seems to me that is an awful lot of money that is being allocated toward a major improvement of the branch line system in western Canada.

I would point out that already some 1,700 miles have been totally and completely rehabilitated and that another 3,500 miles of work is under way. That is due to the program announced by the Government in 1977 where we did a global attack on the whole branch line rehabilitation issue under Mr. Lang, the then Minister of Transport, for some $700 million. The Government has added over $300 million to that program, and we will be negotiating each line as we do every year with the railway and grain companies. I would say to the Hon. Member that $1 billion is a very big commitment to branch line rehabilitation in western Canada.

Mr. Benjamin: I think I got my answer. It means that we will lose another 1,500 to 2,000 miles of branch lines.

GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, is it the Minister's intention to keep the Government's commitment to upgrade all branch lines in the basic network, or is it the intention to spend only the amount announced on February 1?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the commitment of the Government in 1977 was to undertake a program of branch line rehabilitation according to the amount of dollars and fiscal resources we could allocate. The Government has now allocated a second round of resources to improve substantially and add to that sum, as the Hon. Member mentioned, to over $1 billion. We will be negotiating those lines on a priority basis as the money is made available. The sooner and the better the NDP gets on board and supports the Crow expansion, railway modernization of western Canada branch lines will be better off.

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF WAGE SUBSIDY PROGRAM FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Given the disastrous youth unemployment in the country, is it the intention of the Government to introduce a wage subsidy program for young people, based on the British experience, so that young people can obtain experience in the workplace? Is it his intention to bring in such a program? If so, why does he feel it is necessary to wait for prorogation and a new Speech from the Throne, when in fact he already has the mechanism in place to implement such a program now with the Access Program, the Portable Wage Subsidy Program, and the program for the disadvantaged? He has the mechanism now. Why does he not implement the program now?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I am simply astounded by the Hon. Member's question. There is such a program. It is the Career Access Program to which the Hon. Member has just referred.

BRITISH MODEL

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, the Minister knows that the Career Access Program was announced in April and is not even operative yet, notwithstanding the ongoing concerns of the country over youth unemployment. My question concerns the British model of training young people and giving them a start, a kite which the Minister has flown not once but twice, and as recently as today in Maclean's magazine. Obviously he is committed to the program, and I am sure that he has read Maclean's magazine. Does the Minister intend to bring in such a program to help these 600,000 young people who are unemployed? If so, why does he not bring it in now instead of waiting for another session of Parliament?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I regret to say that I have not read Maclean's magazine. I will rush out and read Maclean's magazine. I have been informed by my staff, who are usually reliable, that I am not in Maclean's magazine. The fact is that the program is in place. We expect it to deal with at least 31,000 young people this year and 31,000 people next year. We think it is a more effective program than the kind which has been put in operation by Mrs. Thatcher because it is a program which deals with young people between the ages of 17 years and 25 years, whereas Mrs.. Thatcher's program concentrates only on teenagers. We think there are other young people who deserve our attention as well.

GRAIN

GRAIN STABILIZATION PROGRAM

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport who is spokesman for the Canadian Wheat Board in this House. When farmers were encouraged to enter into the grain stabilization agreement with the Government, the promise was that there would be a payout in a year of low grain prices. We had that year of low grain prices last year and the fund is now built up to approximately $800 million. When will the Government be announcing a payout to farmers?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the assessment is made on a five-year average on the stabilization fund. Based upon that average in which there has been a reasonably decent price for grain, we do not expect a payout in this year.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Towers: That is declaring war on the western Canadian farmer. He will retaliate, and don't ever think he won't.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Towers: Not only is the Minister saying that he is not going to pay, but he is taking $1,200 out of the farmer's pocket this year.

REQUEST FOR CHANGE IN POLICY

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, the Government had better change its mind on that, and had better do it quickly. When will the Minister change his mind as far as the policy of the Government is concerned?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, before the Hon Member gets all convoluted in his indignation, I think we simply go back to the formula which was established. We base it on a five-year average. The 1982 index was about $400 million above that average. As far as 1983 is concerned, those calculations are not made until the end of October, 1985. When those calculations are in, of course the matter will come under review and the Minister will make that decision. We are saying that as far as the 1982 crop year is concerned, payout was substantially above that five-year average, and the Hon. Member should know that.

AIR CANADA

OVERHEATING OF TOILET PUMP

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I would ike to direct a question to the Minister of Transport. It has been drawn to my attention that another incident occurred aboard an Air Canada DC-9 jetliner involving the seizing and overheating of a toilet pump in the washroom with the potential for very serious consequences. Since this comes on the heels of the Cincinnati tragedy, and on the heels of a very favourable internal report conducted for Air Canada on its technical and procedural maintenance standards, what steps will the Minister take to ensure that another Cincinnati tragedy does not occur?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I can confirm to the Hon. Member that indeed late Friday afternoon another incident took place aboard an Air Canada DC-9. It was immediately investigated by both Air Canada officials and Transport investigators. That particular malfunctioning has been corrected. However, as a precautionary measure we have undertaken first to issue an airworthiness directive today requiring a daily check of the pump facilities in all the lavatories on Air Canada. Second, I will be ordering a replacement of the particular model of pump which caused the problem both in this latest incident and in the Cincinnati case. We are taking these as precautionary measures, as well as looking at the over-all safety performance under the Air Canada audit which my Department has under way.

OPERATING AND MAINTENANCE PROCEDURES

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, in a more general context, since the recent internal audit carried out with respect to Air Canada on its operating and technical procedures produced a very favourable report for Air Canada, does the Minister not think in light of this incident that it would be necessary to take some further steps such as a more broad investigation into the technical, operating and maintenance procedures of Air Canada, to ensure that passenger confidence is restored? Surely an incident like this will do nothing more than undermine passenger confidence and the confidence of those who are potential passengers of Air Canada. Is the Minister considering anything further in a broader context to investigate these procedures?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the first thing I would like to do in answer to the Hon. Member is to give assurances that steps have now been taken in relation to the particular problem that has to be faced. They really are quite extraordinary measures. We are requiring, to underline the point, a daily check of the particular piece of equipment to ensure that there are no problems at all, and the direct replacement of that piece of equipment in a phased period so that it will be totally new.

As to the larger issue, that is indeed what we are now doing. We ordered a complete operational, management and safety audit of Air Canada operations at the beginning of September. That is now under way, and I should have the results in a matter of three or four weeks. The Air Canada report which was prepared by Captain Buck for the purposes of Air Canada's management has been forwarded to the team which is undertaking the audit. It will be incorporated as part of the report, and that report will be made public by me so that Canadians and Members of the House will be fully aware of the assessments which will have been made.

PRIVILEGE

MR. DOMM—ACTIONS OF METRIC COMMISSIONER

Madam Speaker: Before recognizing the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm), I remind him that he did not take the opportunity to bring this question before the House at the earliest possible opportunity. He did send me a notice that he would raise a question of privilege on Tuesday in the House, but the Hon. Member was in the House yesterday. He ought to have raised his question of privilege at the first opportunity. I will not hold that against the Hon. Member, but I do remind him that, technically speaking, it should have been raised yesterday.

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, I rise today to discuss a breach of my privileges as a member of the House as it relates to a letter forwarded to my office, written by Commissioner Cleo Mowers, a metric commissioner employed by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and appointed by Order in Council.

I will endeavour to show you, Madam Speaker, in as few words as possible, how this metric commissioner has clearly overstepped the mark of propriety. He has hampered my ability as a Member of Parliament to function in a responsible manner. He has attempted to create an atmosphere of fear and thus has created a climate of mistrust. The situation has made it very difficult for me as a Member of Parliament to pursue my responsibilities not only in this House but to my constituents as an extension of my duties in this House.

Beyond this indignity, Mr. Mowers has the audacity to call into question the integrity of Government Cabinet Ministers, and even of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) of Canada. For the benefit of the Chair I will supply the full content of Mr. Mower's letter to the Prime Minister and to many of my colleagues here in this House, as well as to members of the Senate.

Madam Speaker: It would be more useful in the particular proceedings that we are going through if the Hon. Member sent a copy of that document to the Chair, because the Chair would not be able to judge this question of privilege unless it had the full documents to which the Hon. Member is referring.

Mr. Domm: I realize that, Madam Speaker. That is why I referred specifically to the letter in my communication to you last week, referring to excerpts from the letter in order that you may be apprised of the seriousness of the letter.

I am personally appalled at the lack of respect exhibited by this individual on the Metric Commission. By the way, he is paid $250 a day as a public servant in the Metric Commission serving as a commissioner. He drastically exceeds his mandate and his oath of office, which I have here and which I will also be tabling, by instructing not only myself as a Member of Parliament but also the Government of this country.

We are not dealing in this case with a private citizen, nor am I questioning a private citizen's freedom of speech. We are, however, dealing with a public servant whose words and actions carry the authority of his office. When Parliament first established the Metric Commission, its purpose was to facilitate the conversion process and not to throw into question the integrity of Members of Parliament, the Cabinet or the Prime Minister.

The prima facie case I wish to make deals with a letter circulated to my colleagues which discredits elected Members of Parliament and seriously impedes their ability effectively to discharge their duties. It is the responsibility of a Member of Parliament to interpret matters as he or she sees them. It is definitely not the responsibility of a metric commissioner to practise overt acts of harassment. I strongly object to the manner in which this was done.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I can see from the presentation of the Hon. Member, which has now gone on for five minutes, that he is aggrieved by an action of a public servant who has obviously criticized what the Hon. Member has said outside the House. The Hon. Member may be considerably aggrieved by that, but it certainly does not constitute a question of privilege. The Hon. Member will have to demonstrate to me very soon that he has been impeded in his function as a Member of Parliament and that that is the basis of his question of privilege. Otherwise, I will have to cut him off and decide that he does not have a question of privilege.

Mr. Domm: Madam Speaker, I will respect your wishes and deal precisely with the two points you have asked me to deal with; first, exactly what this person said and, second, the precedents in rules and procedures both in Beauchesne and other references which makes this a very definite question of privilege, as determined in my research with the Parliamentary Library and other authorities on the Hill.

I would like to quote from Mr. Mowers' letter to give the obvious indication of where I feel I have a question of privilege. In his letter to the Prime Minister, referring to Cabinet Ministers and Members of Parliament Mr. Mowers said, and I quote:

> As a member of the Metric Commission I was appalled at the vast distortion of metric facts in news stories, editorials, and letters to the editor, most inspired by or emanating from the office of Bill Domm, M.P.

I am trying to make this brief by quoting only three paragraphs of a rather lengthy letter. There will be opportunity for yourself and the Table to review it Madam Speaker. I quote:

> I wrote a couple of hundred original letters to editors correcting the record and inferentially questioning Domm's truthfulness, until finally both his voice and his credibility are now much weakened.

In addition, I refer the House to Mr. Mowers' remarks regarding the governing Party. I will quote for their interest and Your Honour's consideration:

> The impression is abroad that the Government doesn't listen to the people. To the extent it is true, these are the faults: (a) the ultimate decision-makers are too few, too obscure, too elusive; (b) those in authority are held in protective custody of their staffs; (c)—

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member is debating. Just because a bureaucrat does not agree with the Hon. Member or is criticizing some Members of the Government, or other people, does not constitute a question of privilege. The Hon. Member will have to tell me right away where his question of privilege lies.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, may I intervene just briefly at this point. I heard the Hon. Member say two things which I think deserves the attention of the Chair in coming to a decision as to whether or not there is a prima facie case of privilege, which is all that is required.

Madam Speaker: I am giving the Hon. Member all my attention. I have not denied him one second of my attention.

Mr. Nielsen: I have not said that you have, Madam Speaker, but I have heard two things. First, a public servant has questioned the truthfulness of a Member. Surely that is deserving of the attention of the Chair, which I am sure the Chair will give it. Second, in that same sentence that public servant concluded that, because he has questioned the truthfulness of the Hon. Member, it has affected his effectiveness in this House of Commons. That must surely be on all fours with a Government that fired a public servant, Neil Fraser, because of a much less offence. This case sounds far more serious to me, questioning as it does the truthfulness, and thereby affecting the effectiveness, of the Hon. Member as a Member of Parliament.

Mr. Domm: Madam Speaker, in the interest of expediting my case, I will refrain from quoting the letter. I will table this rather lengthy letter. I will circulate it to all Members of Government, all members of the Senate and all Members of the Opposition in order that we can determine whether this gentleman deserves to remain in a position in which he took an oath not to do exactly what he is doing. I will not read the oath; I will table that as well.

I would like to produce for the benefit of the house one final example of Mr. Mowers' lack of respect for Parliament and his contempt for the decision-making processes that are now supposedly in place in this country. I am quoting for the final time from Mr. Mowers' letter to the Prime Minister:

Communications the other way—from the government (and the party) to the people—is in a much worse state. These are the reasons and the culprits—

I will leave that for you to examine, Madam Speaker, and I will send all Hon. Members on the Government side copies of documents indicating what he thinks of them. Liberal Members appointed this man through Order in Council. They gave him the authority to have a clipping service from across Canada in order that he can criticize them publicly.

In the correspondence that I will table, Madam Speaker, Mr. Mowers has clearly treated in a libellous manner the Prime Minister, Members of the Cabinet and Members of the Official Opposition, particularly myself, and I am raising this as a question of privilege as it pertains directly to me. I hope that those Hon. Members on the other side will listen.

Mr. Mowers has clearly treated in a libellous manner statements that I as a Member of Parliament have made in the House. In so doing, he has breached his rights and privileges by referring to me.

I refer you, Madam Speaker, to Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, page 98, subsection (3):

Libels on members have also been constantly punished: but to constitute a breach of privilege they must concern the character or conduct of members in that capacity, and the libel must be based on matters arising in the actual transaction of the business of the House.

I am not going to rely strictly on the section relating to business of the House because Mr. Mowers is guilty of character assassination in response to press releases, letters to the editor and speeches. I cite the case of Roman Corpn. v. Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Ltd. which can be found on page 20 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. That case clearly established the extension of Members' of Parliament rights outside the House of Commons and therefore under the general umbrella of privilege.

I was planning to refer to examples of what Mr. Mowers has said across the country and to the 200 letters in which he has condemned the Government, the Prime Minister and myself, but I will not do so. I will go on. Mr. Mowers has attempted to discredit me by distributing a damaging letter to my colleagues.

An Hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Evans: So sue him.

Mr. Domm: I hear Hon. Members from the Government side saying "sue him". I might.

I have already quoted from Mr. Mowers' letter and I believe it provides sufficient proof of a serious breach of privilege. I will go on and refer the Chair to Erskine May, Eighteenth Edition, page 147, where the following is stated:

Sending insulting letters to Members in reference to their conduct in Parliament or letters reflecting on their conduct as such Members—

—in carrying out their duties and responsibilities. That is clearly exactly what Mr. Mowers is doing to Government Members and to Members of the Official Opposition.

Beauchesne's Rules and Forms is quite explicit on the enforcement of the privileges of the House. I turn to page 13, Citation 22, which states:

The power of the House to enforce its rules extends not only to Members and others admitted within the precincts of Parliament, but also to members of the general public who may interfere with the orderly conduct of parliamentary business.

I would like to inject here a passage from Erskine May, Eighteenth Edition, page 148, which reads:

"Written imputations, as affecting a Member of Parliament, may amount to breach of privilege, without, perhaps, being libels at common law"—

That answers the Hon. Member's question about whether or not I should take Mr. Mowers to court.

Mr. Evans: Do it.

Mr. Domm: I shall continue:

—but to constitute a breach of privilege a libel upon a Member must concern the character or conduct of the Member in that capacity.

That is what I am asking you to consider as a question of privilege, Madam Speaker.

In accordance with Erskine May, I sincerely believe that the letters written by Mr. Mowers represent a defamation of my character as well as seriously call into question my conduct as a Member of the House of Commons and my capacity and responsibility to represent my constituents.

In conclusion, I must say that I am well aware, as are all Members of the House, that criticism in itself does not constitute a breach of parliamentary privilege. It is in answer to such criticism that I continually respond to Mr. Mowers' numerous editorials on mandatory metrication. A difference of opinion regarding Government policy is not uncommon, and in fact, through the media, allows Canadians, the opportunity to consider opposing views and analyse new alternatives. However, Mr. Mowers' criticism goes well beyond objective criticism and is directly intended to bring my duties in the House generally into disrepute. In fact, that criticism has had the effect of questioning the very integrity of this venerable institution and the entire democratic process. It therefore seriously impedes the privileges and rights of all Members of Parliament which are absolutely necessary for the proper execution of their Parliamentary powers.

If you find, Madam Speaker, for the reasons stated above, that I have a prima facie case, I am fully prepared to move a motion which would have the effect of calling Mr. Cleo Mowers to the bar of the House where he would be asked to submit a formal apology.

Might I conclude by reading the oath Mr. Mowers took when he accepted the job as metric commissioner. I claim that he has violated that oath to the Canadian people. That oath reads:

> I, Cleo Mowers, solemnly and sincerely swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully and honestly fulful the duties that devolve upon me by reason of my appointment as a member of the Preparatory Commission for Metric Conversion and that I will not, without due authority in that behalf, disclose or make known any matter that comes to my knowledge by reason of such appointment.

In his capacity as a member of the Metric Commission, Mr. Mowers has available to him a full national clipping service paid for by the people of Canada which is not available to me although I, as a Member of Parliament, requested it from Consumer and Corporate Affairs. That clipping service is made available by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola) to Cleo Mowers who then in turn uses against his oath, in his capacity as a Metric Commissioner, that material supplied to him by virtue of his appointment as a Metric Commissioner. That material is then used to commit a character assassination which is clearly a question of privilege in the House, Madam Speaker.

I hope, given the material that I will supply to the Chair, that you will rule in support of my motion, which will not call for him to be replaced. I have since learned that he has been given his termination. I would hope that you would support a motion calling for his public apology for statements made against the Prime Minister, the Cabinet Ministers of the House and myself as a Member of Parliament speaking on behalf of the Conservative Party in opposition against mandatory metric, Madam Speaker.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, you are undoubtedly going to be taking this question under advisement. I will not be speaking to the facts that have been raised in support of the request made by the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm) that you do find that there is a question of privilege. I do ask the House to take the matter seriously and dispense with interventions like that of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader (Mr. Evans) who encouraged the Hon. Member to sue.

Nothing goes more directly to the roots of the functioning of this place and the exercise of its authority than the ability of Members to carry on their functions in the House free from wrongful and libellous charges of untruthfulness, particularly when made by a civil servant. The Government has its remedy, which it exercised very quickly in the Neil Fraser case; but here, quite apart from statements made with respect to the Government, there is a direct accusation made by the civil servant in question calling into question the truthfulness of an Hon. Member of this House. That Hon. Member has stated in his assertion that that has lessened his effectiveness as a Member of Parliament.

Nothing could go to the root of the rights, duties and authority of Parliament any deeper than this, notwithstanding the fact that it occurred in the case of only one Member. What happens to one Member can happen to any Member. It goes to the roots of the privileges of all Members when something like this happens.

Our understanding of privilege, Madam Speaker, must be constrained by what has already been pointed out by the Hon. Member for Peterborough. It is not mere criticism that causes a question of privilege to arise; but if that criticism goes to the extent that has been described here, and there is a prima facie case that it has, I suggest the Chair has an obligation to act. When that criticism impedes the Member in the performance of his duties, then in my submission, Madam Speaker, there is clearly a question of privilege.

I should like to read, for the consideration of the Chair, Citation 108.(1) of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, which reads as follows:

> Anything which may be considered a contempt of court by a tribunal, is a breach of privilege if perpetrated against Parliament, such as wilful disobedience to, or open disrespect of, the valid Rules, Orders or Process, or the dignity and authority of the House, whether by disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent language, or behaviour, or other disturbing conduct, or by a mere failure to obey its Orders.

Given the prima facia establishment of the fact of the letter read by the Hon. Member for Peterborough, the very least that those statements and the letter constitute with respect to the Hon. Member is insolence. I am in accord with the Hon. Member that they amount to libel because they have been published, and libel against an Hon. Member, in my submission, is clearly a contempt of Parliament.

I should like to refer the Chair to Citation 108.(3) of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, which extends this point by adding the following:

> Libels on members have also been constantly punished: but to constitute a breach of privilege they must concern the character or conduct of members in that capacity—

Namely, in his capacity as a Member. All of us are very aware that he has been the metric critic in this place for a good number of years. It continues:

—and the libel must be based on matters arising in the actual transaction of the business of the House.

What could be plainer than that the criticism aimed at the Hon. Member in that letter is a libel in respect to the conduct of his criticism in the House of the application of and the Government's policy with respect to metric? Nothing, in my submission, could be clearer than that. The House has consistently viewed reflections against the House or its Members as a contempt against the Members or authorities of the House. These stretch from the Tassé case in 1873 to the Choquette case in 1976. These reflections have generally been made in the press by members of the press. That is not the case here.

This is a case where Mr. Mowers made use of the vehicle "Letters to the Editor" as the means of carrying on his campaign. Clearly, all letters to the editor are not matters infringing upon the privileges of the House. We are not dealing here with a fair comment made by a private citizen. We are faced with a letter addressed to a Member of the House—indeed, to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau)—by an individual who holds an appointed office and who, in his capacity as an office holder, has seen fit to carry on a public campaign as a civil servant, designed to undermine the Hon. Member for Peterborough in the conduct of his duties in the transaction of the business of the House.

In his letter, as the Hon. Member for Peterborough has pointed out, he directly questions the truthfulness of the Hon. Member for Peterborough. I will quote from that letter briefly. He says "until finally both his" —that is the Hon. Member for Peterborough— "voice and his credibility are now much weakened". That is, the Hon. Member's voice in this House and his credibility in this House as a member are much weakened because Mr. Mowers has been so assiduously determined to question the truthfulness of the Hon. Member for Peterborough.

Mr. Evans: Outside the House.

Mr. Nielsen: The Parliamentary Secretary continues to interject, Madam Speaker. What would he do to protect his rights in this place if it had happened to him? I can tell him what would happen. The Government would fire Mr. Mowers, as it did Neil Fraser. This is the only remedy we have here and he should be supportive of what we are putting to the Chair with respect to the privileges of this place.

I now cite from Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, Citation 55, as follows:

The privilege of freedom of speech is both the least questioned and the most fundamental right of the Member of Parliament on the floor of the House and in committee. It is primarily guaranteed in the British Bill of Rights which declared "that the freedom of speech and debates or proceedings in Parliament ought not to be impeached or questioned in any court or place outside of Parliament".

Clearly, it was Mr. Mowers' intent to restrict the ability of the Hon. Member for Peterborough to conduct his duties in the House. Mr. Mowers himself admits that. In my submission, that would constitute a prima facie case of privilege. He calls into question the Hon. Member's activities in the House and he, Mr. Mowers, intends to restrict the Hon. Member's freedom of speech in the House both through his, Mowers, public campaign and by exhorting other Members to assist him with his campaign. He does so by writing to other Members of the House of Commons. In those letters to other Members Mr. Mowers accuses the Hon. Member for Peterborough of distorting the facts. Mr. Mowers thereby contributes to the infringement of the privileges of the Hon. Member and, consequently, of the House.

Moreover, Mr. Mowers starts off by saying that he did this in his capacity as a member of the Metric Commission—as a civil servant. In my submission, Mr. Mowers has engaged in a contempt of this House, given the prima facie existence, not the proof, of what the Hon. Member for Peterborough has laid before the Chair. The letter itself, once the Chair has possession of it, in my submission constitutes that prima facie proof. He has engaged in contempt and should be called before the bar to apologize, not to the Hon. Member for Peterborough but to all Members of the House, for his actions in not only the campaign but specifically the letter directed to that Member. In laying out his case, the Hon. Member for Peterborough has provided a substantial body of fact which should assist the Chair in coming to the conclusion that there is at least a prima facie case of privilege for putting the question to the House.

If there is no prima facie case of privilege, the Chair, in my submission, has to come to the conclusion that the letter written by Mr. Mowers does not exist at all. If ever there were a prima facie case, it lies in the fact of the existence of the letter authored by Mr. Mowers. The intent, as displayed in that letter, is very clearly laid out. First, it questions the truthfulness of the Hon. Member for Peterborough, which questions the truthfulness of any Member of the House; second, he admits in the letter he wrote himself that his intention was to affect the efficiency of the Hon. Member in the conduct of business in this place; and third, it was mounted deliberately to minimize the effect of the criticisms that have come from the Hon. Member for Peterborough with respect to the application of metric in the country for the entire last three years.

In my submission, Madam Speaker, there was never a clearer case of privilege before the Chair.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, I wish to make a brief intervention in this matter and to draw a parallel for the Chair. Earlier this year the Hon. Member for Lincoln (Mr. Mackasey) brought a question of privilege to the Chair. His point was that, through the publication of an article in the Montreal Gazette, his capacity to function as a Member of Parliament had been impeded. The Chair found a prima facie case of privilege. We on this side, as did the Government, supported that Member with a unanimous motion sending the case to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

I submit to you, Madam Speaker, that we have a very similar case here. In this case, however, it is not a question of an interpretation of a newspaper article; this is a clear action by a Government employee to impede the voice and credibility of a Member of the House. That is the issue here. That is why I rise to support my colleague in asking that the Chair find a prima facie case that his ability has been impeded. In the earlier case, we stood with the Hon. Member for Lincoln and said; "Yes, your privilege has been impeded and it should be examined".

I ask Your Honour to find a prima facie case of privilege here and to support the Member in calling the civil servant in question to the bar of the House to make an apology.

● (1530)

Madam Speaker: I obviously will have to examine the documents in support of the case and all the arguments presented to the Chair. I will come back to the House with a decision later.

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

PRESENTATION OF TWENTY-THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I have the honour of tabling the twenty-third Report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

POINT OF ORDER

MISCELLANEOUS ESTIMATES—PRESENTATION OF NINTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Claude Tessier (Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead): Madam Speaker, as Vice-Chairman of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, in the absence of the Chairman, and having discovered and agreed on the need to correct the ninth Report to make it conform to the proceedings in committee on Bill C-152 and to the amendments duly voted on and approved in committee, said report having been tabled in the House on September 29, I now, with the agreement of the Opposition critics of the Progressive Conservative Party and the New Democratic Party and also of our independent colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton-East (Mr. Yurko), request the unanimous consent of the House to correct this report. Therefore, on page 2 of the report, Schedule I should read as follows:

Add, immediately after item 9, on page 17, the following:

Clause 60 is amended by substituting "Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion" for "Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce".

—and renumber the subsequent items accordingly.

Thus, the amendment to the Canagrex Act included in the Ninth Report is to be replaced by the one I just mentioned, because it was not voted on in committee.

Madam Speaker, I ask that corrections be made accordingly.

Madam Speaker: Does the House give its unanimous consent for correcting the report?

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, you will recall that this matter arose last week. I spoke to the Hon. Member then and told him I would get in touch with our critic in order that I might be free to give unanimous consent to what he is attempting to do today. I have indeed exerted every effort to get in touch with our critic who is in New York on Government business, but I have not been able to do so. I believe I should communicate with him, not that I for a moment doubt the word of the Hon. Member that he has been in touch, but I think I should have that confirmed before I consent.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: So, there is no unanimous consent.

PETITIONS

MR. KORCHINSKI—ASSISTANCE FOR WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT COMPANY

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of 108 petitioners from Alberta who have sent a petition to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Lumley), to the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers), the Hon. Member for Crow Foot (Mr. Malone) and the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight). They have asked me to present this to the House on their behalf to ask that the Minister and his Department make every effort to maintain the White Farm Equipment Company as a viable entity.

MR. RIIS—BROADCASTING ACT—AMENDMENT RESPECTING DISCRIMINATION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, it is my privilege to present on behalf of 1,000 petitioners a petition regarding Bill C-675, an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act which urges that Section 3 of the said Act be amended by adding immediately after Paragraph 3(c) thereof the following paragraph:

Notwithstanding Paragraph C, no station, network, operator or pay television licensee shall broadcast any abusive comment or abusive pictoral representation on any race, religion, creed or sex.

MR. YOUNG—SAFE DRINKING WATER

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, it is my honour and privilege to present a petition signed by a number of residents of Ontario who humbly show that toxic chemicals are posing an increasing threat to the potable waters of that Province. There is presently no legislation which will guarantee the safety and healthfulness of those waters, and Canada's neighbour, the United States of America, has legislation entitled the Safe Drinking Water Act, 1974.

Wherefore we the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to enact a safe drinking water Act which would protect and enhance drinking water quality in all areas of Canada.

MR. ANGUISH—NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I have three different petitions to present to the House of Commons this afternoon. Each of these petitions originated with the Winnipeg Co-ordinating Committee for Disarmament, and they were sent to the Parliament Hill peace camp which approached me to present them to the House.

The first petition is signed by 1,156 residents of Manitoba who fear an escalation of the nuclear arms race and call upon Parliament to support the minority report on security and disarmament, and to refuse to allow testing of the Cruise missile in Canada.

The second petition argues that the nuclear arms race could end in a nuclear holocaust, and it urges Parliament to press for an early signing of a strategic arms limitation treaty and actively support the convening of a European conference on military detente and disarmament in Europe.

Finally, Madam Speaker, it is with a great deal of pleasure that I present a petition signed by citizens of the United States of America who live near the Grand Forks airforce base in North Dakota, and in Minnesota, who are working for a nuclear freeze and the stopping of all testing and deployment of the Cruise missile. The petition is sent to the Parliament of Canada as a form of international support for Canadian opposition to the Cruise.

I think, Madam Speaker, these petitions are particularly relevant at the present time because of the Korean airlines incident and the fragile tinderbox we seem to be living in at the present time.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO SRBA FUND

Question No. 4,904—Mr. Miller:

1. What was the total amount of contributions by federal employees, including the Canadian Armed Forces and the RCMP, to the SRBA Fund since it was enacted in 1970?

2. What was the total amount of contributions by federal employees, including the Canadian Armed Forces and the RCMP, to the superannuation fund since its creation circa 1924?

3. What was the total amount of interest accrued on these two funds?

4. What was the total amount paid to pensioners from these funds since 1924?

5. What was the total amount of contributions by the government as an equal amount to the contributors to these funds (superannuation and SRBA) since 1924?

6. What was the total amount of funds needed from general taxation to pay for (a) pensions (b) indexation of pensions?

Mr. Peter Lang (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): 1. The total amount to March 31, 1983 is $627,100,000.

2. There are separate superannuation funds for members of the Public service, the Canadian Armed Forces and the RCMP. The fund for public servants was established in 1924. The fund for the Canadian Armed Forces was created in 1946 and the fund for the RCMP was established in 1949. Employee contributions to the three funds to March 31, 1983 have been:

Public Service Superannuation Account	—$4,265,000,000
Canadian Forces Superannuation Account	—$1,407,000,000
RCMP Superannuation Account	—$ 231,000,000

3. The total amount of interest credited on the superannuation funds from their inception to March 31, 1983 was as follows:

Public Service Superannuation Account	—$6,204,000,000
Canadian Forces Superannuation Account	—$5,101,000,000
RCMP Superannuation Account	—$ 467,000,000
Supplementary Retirement Benefits Account	—$ 578,000,000

In addition, from September 30, 1969, the three main superannuation accounts have earned additional interest which has not been credited to the accounts, but rather has been used to partially offset the government's cost of amortizing actuarial deficits. The total additional interest earned by the three main accounts to March 31, 1983 has been:

Public Service Superannuation Account	—$3,179,000,000
Canadian Forces Superannuation Account	—$2,500,000,000
RCMP Superannuation Account	—$ 165,000,000

4. Public Service Superannuation Account —$4,187,000,000
Canadian Forces Superannuation Account —$2,746,000,000
RCMP Superannuation Account —$ 99,000,000
Supplementary Retirement Benefits Account—$2,235,000,000*

* Includes amounts charged directly to the Consolidated Revenue Fund pursuant to subsection 8(2) of the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act, totalling $2,033,000,000.

5. The total amount of the contributions made by the government (including public service corporations) in relation to the contributions of contributors has been as follows to March 31, 1983:

Public Service Superannuation Account	—$4,042,000,000
Canadian Forces Superannuation Account	—$2,437,000,000
Supplementary Retirement Benefits Account	—$ 627,300,000

In addition to making contributions in relation to employee contributions, the Government also has paid the net cost of amortizing actuarial deficiencies. These costs, in relation to the three major superannuation accounts, have been as follows to March 31, 1983:

Public Service Superannuation Account	—$2,232,000,000
Canadian Forces Superannuation Account	—$2,332,000,000
RCMP Superannuation Acount	—$ 164,000,000

6. (a) Zero, (b) $2,033,000,000 to March 31, 1983.

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): I ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Hon. Minister of Veterans Affairs have been answered.

[English]

Mr. McKenzie: Madam Speaker, I would ask the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) in his new role of answering Order Paper questions if he would check out three questions of mine which have been on the Order Paper for some time.

Question No. 4,945 for this year is whether the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Lumley) was notified of the opposition by Canadian truckers to the imposition of a 12 per cent duty on the importing of heavy duty reefer units. This is causing the trucking industry problems in Canada, and I would appreciate if it we could receive an answer as soon as possible.

There is also question No. 4,387, which goes back to June 29. It has not been on the Order Paper too long but is quite an important question. We are receiving more and more complaints that western Canadians are unable to join the RCMP, and I have a number of constituents who are having problems joining the RCMP. I would like to have this question answered regarding the recruiting policy of the RCMP.

I also have a question going back to 1981, No. 3,441. The question is, "Did the (a) Minister of Supply and Services (b) Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (c) Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development take a JetStar flight to Winnipeg for the official opening of the General Aluminium Forgings Incorporated on October 30, 1981 and, if so, in each case, other than the Minister and the aircraft crew, who was on the flight?" I know who was on the flight. They were flying Liberal workers to work in the Manitoba election in 1981. I would like to obtain the names of these Liberal campaign workers and receive an explanation as to why Government aircraft were being used to fly Liberal campaign workers around the country.

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 33 (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to resume debate on Motion No. 33, the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) with regard to Clause 17(d), which would really add an element of time to the movement of grain. Rather than simply having powers of promotion for the movement of cars and grains, it would add the words, "shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements". The key matter before us involves why CN and CP should give up a long trip for a short trip. Why should they move grain as efficiently and effectively as possible if they can stall, either by leaving the cars on the sidings, waiting too long to get the cars to be loaded, or taking their time getting them to the ports? By adding the key word "require", a time element would be added, which is crucial.

I would like to give a reminder to the Parliamentary Secretary who spoke this morning and said that the amendment contravenes the powers of the CTC and under the Railway Act. I think we all know that if one has a contract, if one has ships waiting at the Port of Prince Rupert, one wants the grain cars to be there so that they can be unloaded and put onto the vessel while the vessel is there and not lose the contract. If we were always to wait under the new proposed Crow legislation for CTC hearings or for the implementation of the Railway Act, there would be an awful lot of farmers with grain sitting on their farms.

Mr. Justice Emmett Hall had a few comments to which I think Government Members should pay a little attention. They do not seem to be moving too quickly in preparing themselves to accept the amendment. I think we need to ask ourselves why the Government side would be reticent to accept it when it is pretty clear that witnesses who appeared before the committee favoured this kind of legislation. The majority of Hon. Members on this side favour this kind of amendment. What kind of a signal is the Government really trying to send out to the CN, the CP, Wood-Gundy and various shareholders of CP stock? The impression is really being left that the trough is wide open out there, that CP can keep all the bottlenecks it likes, that CN can take as long as it likes, and so on.

Bill C-155, as it now stands, really leaves open field running to CN and to CP to maximize absolutely their costing for moving grain. This model, however, increases the cost to producers and allows for continued bottlenecks, stalling and lost contracts.

As Mr. Justice Hall notes, even at the existing Crow rate, the railroads hang on to loaded cars of grain for movement to export position even though the other line could move them to port over a more direct line, cutting the distance, costs and adding to the efficiency of this system. This tends to undermine the assertions of the railroads that they lose money every time they move a carload of grain. If that were so, presumably, they would lose more money for each additional mile they hauled it, and would do everything possible to get rid of it as soon as possible and stick their competition with the losses.

As we know from the way the legislation is written, that simply is not the case. There is no bonus system so that if the rail cars are moved by the shortest, quickest, most efficient route there would be some kind of a bonus per mile, per load or per car. For that kind of idea, a variable rate simply has not been included.

Therefore, the only way to go about it so as to really protect producers and our markets is to have the capacity, hopefully within the Wheat Board, if not at least through some other function within Bill C-155, to allow for the requirement of efficient and competitive movement.

With the lush revenues for moving grain under Bill C-155, this tendency to hang on to loaded grain cars as long as possible so the money will roll in as the cars roll over the road will be exaggerated. Without the authority which the amendment would give vested in the hands of a public agency, one can be sure that there would be little, if any, exchange of carloads of grain between the railroads simply for efficiency's sake.

Mr. Justice Hall, as co-ordinator of the Crow coalition, had a very interesting comment to make to the Transport Committee hearings in Regina on August 9. I think it is worthy of being on the record, particularly for consideration of Government Members. He said:

> We heard a lot about efficiency, and the whole idea of the railways about efficiency was to get rid of the branchlines. That would have been very efficient from their standpoint. But on this question of efficiency, I am told by senior railway people, there is a railway philosophy that once the line gets hold of a commodity for transport, it will hang onto that commodity to the delivery points, come hell or high water. That works out this way and this is what we found, great quantities of grain grown on, say, the Goose Lake line . . . and now that may not mean too much to members from the east, but it is one of the great grain-producing areas in Saskatchewan between Saskatoon and Calgary served by the Canadian National Railways; it is closer to Vancouver at Rosetown than to Thunder Bay, so the trend is westward. Grain was taken to Calgary, but the CN has no line going from Calgary to Vancouver. So they hauled it then northward 200 miles to Edmonton so they can take it south again to Vancouver. That was the CN.

CP with the Hardisty line, which is another line going through Edmonton . . . all that CPR grain went to Edmonton, but there is no line from Edmonton into Vancouver—so it went south to go to Vancouver. Trainloads of grain were passing each other like ships in the night between Calgary and Edmonton.

I see, Mr. Speaker, that I have run out of time. I hope that some of the Members from the Government side will take time during the debate to rise and explain how they see Bill C-155 maintaining an efficient grain system without this very important amendment.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Mr. Speaker, I just want to spend a couple of moments on this particular provision. I support the motion of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). I represent a constituency in Saskatchewan, a Province that feels very strongly about the proposals being brought forward by the Government. I would say it is the considered opinion of the vast majority of grain producers in Saskatchewan that the proposals of the Liberal Government are ones which contain a very rich package for the railways. If anyone is considered to be a prime beneficiary of the initiatives of the Government, such as they are, it would be the railways of Canada. I dare say that if the Government, with its majority, decided to ram these proposals through in their current form, then if I were the president or the chairman of the board of directors of a railway of Canada, I would commission a statute of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) to be placed in a permanent location in the headquarters of the building, because the railways will be the main beneficiaries.

I am naturally very much concerned about the implications of the legislation as it would affect the producers. These are my constituents. These are people who are finding great difficulty in carrying out their responsibilities as farmers in Canada, considering their financial obligations, the pressures of inflation, the ever escalating costs of their operations. This is the message we heard in Regina, in my Province in the representations which all members of the committee heard. I sat through all the hearings in Saskatchewan, in my home Province, because I wanted to have a sense of the main stream of thought. I wondered if it was exactly the same perception as mine, after consulting and travelling around the Province prior to the hearings, as when the Bill was first introduced. That is one of the considerations that is lacking in the Bill. This is why this is another attempt on the part of Members of my Party to bring forward constructive suggestions with respect to the operation of the system, a matter which has caused great concern to farmers with regard to the transportation of their grain to the export points. Particularly in Saskatchewan they are faced with the proposition of lines of one railway or another running parallel or in some instances one being the more appropriate route and efficient way of moving grain to either export point.

That is why I want to suggest that there is a general feeling of support which the Government should seriously consider and accept instead of stating general principles on the matter of maximizing the returns to producers as provided for in the clause of the Bill. We should make the provisions of that clause even more certain.

My colleague's suggestion that the provisions in the Bill should contain a requirement for reciprocal and other arrangements to maximize the returns to the producers is one which I think anyone with any interest in the producers of this country should support wholeheartedly. That suggestion is to oblige the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator and the Grain Transportation Agency to require that the most efficient routes be adopted in terms of transportation of grain. It is a proposal that we should all subscribe to regardless of our view of the over-all effect of this legislation.

I simply say, in supporting this particular provision, that there are serious concerns in Saskatchewan, which were raised in the House again today, about the various programs the Government is operating and implementing. For example, we look back at legislation that was brought forward with respect to western grain stabilization. There were many promises made to the western farmer about the advantages he would experience as a result of that legislation. There were all those promises that were made under the legislation about how the producer would benefit. However, experience in western Canada has been to the contrary. While it is great to pass legislation and promise the world to the western grain producer, they have a bitter experience. When it comes to the pay-off, there is none.

Today, the matter was raised by the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) with respect to the western grain stabilization program. We said at the time that that legislation would not be effective or sensitive to the real situation in regions of western Canada within the Wheat Board area.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): How is that relevant?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It is relevant to what I am saying here. This is another example of words of general intention that read well and state that the Government will maximize the benefit to the producer. However, unless we put a mandatory requirement throughout this legislation and ensure that there will be the maximum benefit to the producer, the experience has been, using the analogy of the Western Grain Stabilization Act, that we will not experience that benefit in western Canada. We know that. We have been sold a bill of goods in the past and, as a result, the western grain producers are very skeptical. They want to know the precise wording of each of these provisions.

I support my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), and suggest that this provision with respect to the activities of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee and the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator was brought in because the original Bill mentioned no positive aspects in terms of benefit to the western producers. There was not one reference to maximizing benefits to the western producers.

I simply ask my colleagues in the House who do not come from western Canada what they would do if there was legislation affecting their area and they had to speak on behalf of their constituents. What would their opinion be if the preoccupation of such legislation was to enrich the railways and take many other steps except ones which would positively affect the people residing in their area? That is precisely what we are faced with in this legislation. It is pie in the sky and anticipation of all sorts of economic activity, but the person who is most seriously and adversely affected is not mentioned in the legislation. That was the situation when this Bill was introduced.

In conclusion I want to assure Members of the House that as far as I am concerned the provisions of this Bill are unsatisfactory. There is no consensus in support of this legislation. We intend to vote against the legislation but we support this particular amendment.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I just want to make two or three observations with respect to this Bill. First, the power which the amendment would vest in the grain commissioner is already vested in the Canadian Transport Commission, which has a western division and which is quite adequate to the task that this amendment will put upon the grain commissioner. It would seem to me that we would have an untenable situation if there were two different Government agencies with the same power over the railroads. The regulatory agency is the CTC and should remain so.

I wonder why the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) is arguing so vociferously in favour of this amendment and why he is so anxious to have it in the legislation if he is going to vote against the legislation. It seems to me to be somewhat of a contradiction in terms.

I believe the Hon. Member is correct when he says there is no consensus in the West on this proposed legislation. However, throughout his remarks he kept referring to the Bill as originally introduced in the House. We are not debating the Bill that was originally introduced in the House. We are debating the Bill as it has been returned to the House from the Standing Committee on Transport. It is quite different from the original Bill.

The changes in the Bill are due to many factors. The committee listened to people from across Canada, and the former Minister and present Minister approached amendments to the Bill with an open mind. The Bill has been extensively amended, with 89 amendments in committee itself.

The contention that this Bill is designed to enrich the railways is, of course, a canard. While there is no doubt that the railways will receive greater revenues, they also have imposed upon them a very heavy responsibility to build and maintain a modern rail transportation system for Canada. The fact that all those who oppose this Bill have failed to mention is that a transportation system that is modern and efficient is absolutely essential to the development of a nation or part of a nation like Canada which covers such a vast territory, much of which is landlocked. If we are to be a trading nation—surely no one will argue that we will never go anywhere economically if we are not a trading nation—we must be able to deliver the goods to the world markets.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Chair has been listening quite attentively to the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne). It seems that his remarks are of a general nature about the total Bill. It is quite possible that the Chair has missed the point that the Hon. Member wishes to make, relative to the amendment now before the House. In any case I would invite him to restrict himself to the amendment as much as possible because at the report stage that is exactly what Members ought to address themselves to.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I thank you for that admonition, Mr. Speaker. I was simply responding to some of the remarks made by the previous speaker who was speaking on the same amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I appreciate the Hon. Member's position. Unfortunately, it so happens that, in the course of debate, Members may go beyond the scope of the amendment before the House, but the Chair cannot unsay what has been said. As a general admonition, I would invite Hon. Members to avoid those digressions and come to the heart of the subject matter now before the House.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): That is a point well taken, Mr. Speaker. I will simply complete my remarks on this amendment by stating that the amendment is superfluous and redundant because it attempts to give to the Administrator the powers that already exist in the CTC where they rightfully reside, where the expertise is in matters of rail transportation and has no place in this particular Bill.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, will the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) entertain a question?

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Sure, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, I have listened with interest to the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi defend the CTC vis-a-vis the chairman of the new Grain Committee. Could he tell us what would motivate the chairman of the CTC to protect the interests of the grain producer in determining the most efficient and cost effective way of moving that grain? What is being asked for in this amendment is some form of protection for the producers so that the grain will not be delivered in a circuitous route when a more effective, as the "crow flies" route, might be available. Who in the CTC is going to consider the plight of the poor grain farmer?

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the role of the Rail Transport Committee of the CTC has as one of its mandates the question posed by the Hon. Member. In fact, this Bill will put more onus upon the Rail Transport Committee to see that the railways operate in an efficient manner because the railways have to submit all their costing, all of their efforts to fulfil the responsibilities imposed upon them by this Bill to the CTC for verification. If they do not live up to the performance demanded of them, they will not get the credits they expect to get. The biggest stick of all to any company is the financial one. That will reside in the CTC and will be applied by the CTC. It is the responsibility of this House and the Standing Committee on Transport as a committee of this House to examine the CTC to see that it is doing its job well.

Some Hon. Members: Continue.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I believe there would be unanimous consent for our distinguished Chairman of the Transport Committee to continue his remarks. We would be most happy to hear him further if he wishes.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, it is unanimous.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. It is the Chair's understanding that the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi has terminated his speech. I do not see the point of inviting him to continue. He had time left and the Hon. Member chose to sit down. However, I will recognize the Hon. Member on a point of order.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I just want to thank Hon. Members. I did not realize I was so well loved, but I have completed my remarks.

Mr. Laverne Lewycky (Dauphin-Swan River): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to be able to get up at this stage in the debate to address myself to Clause 17 which deals with the powers of the Administrator and, more specifically, to Motion No. 33, which adds the phrase "the Administrator shall require". This deals with the exchange of cars in the movement of grain where such an exchange would increase the efficiency of moving grain to its export position.

I want to address some of my initial comments, perhaps even by way of rebuttal, to what the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) said as to why this particular amendment is not necessary. He said that the CTC western division is a regulatory agency with powers adequate enough to render unnecessary this added feature of the Administrator being able to take action.

I suppose my question has to be somewhat rhetorical because the Hon. Member is not here to respond. But I have to ask, when has this authority ever worked? It has not worked to this date. I could go further and ask, when has the western division of the CTC ever worked? We have had some 18 rail line abandonment hearings in Manitoba. All of the decisions have gone in favour of the railways. Some of the lines under consideration are lines that would be shorter. If the Administrator had this type of power, he would be able to exercise it to compel the railways to make use of these shorter lines.

Another question asked by the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi was, if, as the Conservatives claim, they will vote against this Bill, or even if we in the New Democratic Party, as we have said, are going to vote against the Bill, why are we arguing for improving a particular clause? If the Government accepted our suggestion to split the Bill into three distinct sections and portions, I think the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi would understand we could still argue for enhancing this clause.

We are in favour of the railways being upgraded so that the producers' grain can be transported to an export position. Even with that kind of attitude and support, this type of provision for the Grain Transportation Agency, the Grain Transportation Administrator, would enhance his ability to make sure there could be this type of exchange.

Let me deal a little more specifically with this provision. I think Motion No. 33 is very important. I want to illustrate why it is important that the Administrator have the opportunity when faced with a problem, and these problems arise frequently, to be able to use his authority. I am sure those of us who represent rural ridings can recount enough horror stories of bottlenecks in the transportation of grain. This particular addition, in essence, says "The buck stops here." The Administrator is able to require the movement of grain and the exchange of cars so the grain can be transported.

I was a bit embarrassed, when this amendment was voted on in committee that all the Liberal Members voted against it. I want to emphasize to my friends opposite why the amendment is important. I want to point out the types of problems that farmers in my constituency and other constituencies face when they want to make sure the grain is moving.

As Members of Parliament we often have to deal with such situations. I have had to deal with situations at the elevator at Makinak. The only reason I am being very concrete is that I feel that sometimes an illustration is worth a thousand words; people understand the types of problems faced by farmers when they cannot get their grain moved. I was glad to hear some of my friends to my right talk about their concern for producers. I hope they will demonstrate this further by supporting us in our attempt to have the Bill split. When harvest has occurred, when the grain is off the field and producers have to have it moved, some of them cannot afford to have it sit idle in storage. It may be that they do not have enough storage space, especially smaller farmers such as the ones in my constituency, and it is essential that the grain be moved quickly. There have been occasions when I telephoned the railways inquiring as to why cars were not on certain sidings at Makinak, at Fork River or in other areas of my riding.

Sometimes we have had to resort to writing long letters to the railways demanding an explanation. We would receive back detailed responses indicating that during recent weeks their unloads at Thunder Bay have gone down from an average of 3,183 cars per week to 2,283 per week and, in a later period, down to 1,723 cars per week. Why is there this bottleneck? How can we put our finger on the problem? Obviously the railways were not able to do anything about it. They really had no particular motivation to deal with the problem. They said that the Grain Transportation Agency is responsible, but if the Administrator could compel the railways to ensure that there is an exchange, the situation would be improved. Sometimes that is necessary, especially when we think of ports such as the Port of Churchill.

When we consider the block system in place on the Prairies, we realize there are some 48 different blocks from which grain is taken. The grain taken to port has to match a particular request or a particular sale which has been committed. We have to get grain out of the block system which will match the particular request or sales commitment. If people do not understand much about the shipment of grain out West, they could just picture the checkerboard which has been developed to ensure an efficient movement of grain. Also they could picture that CN and CP lines sometimes run closely parallel and sometimes at great distances from each other. The most efficient way to move grain is to see what type of grain is required, for example at Churchill, and to move it from the closest block, even if it is on a CPR line and it is a CNR line which goes all the way up to Churchill. It should make obvious sense to Hon. Members opposite that we need someone with the authority to require that the shortest route be taken.

There are many illustrations in my constituency. I could refer to the Erwood subdivision or to the line which goes from Swan River through the Hudson Bay, Saskatchewan. There are lines which have not been used but should be used for the transportation of grain. There are lines which are even shorter than the more circuitous routes which could be used. There are such lines through Canora or through Preeceville if we want to move grain from the Swan River Valley. If the Administrator had teeth, he could ensure that those types of movements took place and that exchanges, where necessary, would also take place. What we have at stake is the welfare of producers. No one here really needs to be told about the plight of the producers in western Canada.

I see Mr. Speaker indicating that my time is up. I thank the House for the opportunity to illustrate in the form of case histories the particular problems faced by farmers if they cannot get their grain to market or cannot store it on their own farms because they do not have the granary or storage space. It is incumbent upon Hon. Members opposite to acquaint themselves with the problems faced by farmers in western Canada if this type of authority is not vested in the Administrator. I hope Hon. Members opposite will give unanimous consent to this amendment.

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and on Motion No. 33 (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I was about to suggest that we give some extra time to the Hon. Member for Dauphin-Swan River (Mr. Lewycky) to finish his remarks, but he has to attend a committee meeting so I will not bother.

Motion No. 33 concerns the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator. I think some excellent points have been raised in regard to this matter, but for a moment or so I would like to deal with the major point of the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne), who said that he did not favour this amendment because the authority already rests with the Canadian Transport Commission or the railway section of the CTC. I agree the authority is there, but I do not know of one case in the history of the CTC where it was used in the interests of the farmer, in the interests of the producer. Our major concern today is the producer, the man on the land who has to receive more consideration than he has ever had in the past. I agree that the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator has a tremendous job in front of him, if he does the job he is supposed to do. If we do not give him the tools to do the job, we might just as well not appoint him. If all he can do is to suggest, that is not good enough.

In part, Clause 17 reads:

(d) promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers.

He can suggest until he is blue in the face, he can make arrangements until he is black in the face, but it will not do any good unless the suggestions are carried out.

● (1620)

That is the point we are trying to make in connection with this amendment. The Grain Transportation Agency Administrator not only has the right to suggest and to make arrangements, but to require that they be carried out, "if necessary shall require reciprocal and other arrangements". There is a world of difference between what is said in the Bill and in the amendment.

In case the Chairman of the Transport Committee is not adamant about having this change rejected, I would suggest some reasons why he might listen to these reasons and change his mind. After all, he comes from the other end of the country. I do not hold that against him, but he does not have the direct experience in the grain business which people in the West have had. That comes only from being a farmer in the West.

We hear the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) talk about double-tracking. Some people laugh about double-tracking from Winnipeg to Vancouver. I do not laugh at anything because I have seen over the last few years that anything can change. I can understand why there is laughter when we talk about double-tracking the whole area because the entire area from Winnipeg to Vancouver is not the problem. There are problem points where it should be done. When a minister of highways is dealing with the building of a highway or exchanges, he does not go from one end to the other. There may be something at one end which has a hundred times more traffic. You pick out the trouble points, correct those and then correct the other areas as the traffic requires it.

This is what we should be doing with our railway system. For example, double-tracking is required in some parts of the Rocky Mountains. I do not agree with some of the CP routes. I did not agree with them destroying part of the beautiful Village of Lake Louise. I said that in the House and at the Transport Committee hearings. However, I agree with the objective of moving the grain faster through the mountains and other difficult areas.

I have had letters from people pointing out that from Alberta to Vancouver there is already double-tracking. One is the CN line and the other is CP. Some constituents have asked why we do not make these lines one way. We would then be able to move three times the amount of traffic. That is the case with highways. A two-lane highway can move X number of vehicles per hour. A divided highway, which would not cost that much more, would move three or four times that amount of traffic.

The same is true of the railways. Engineers know these facts. There should be authority, at least during certain times of the year when all traffic goes one way, to have both lines, or at least sections of them, going one way. Why not have a two-way system at certain times of the year, having the CN line going one way and the CP line the other way? Traffic could increase tremendously.

I know there would be some objections. I know the hair on CP's head would stick straight up, if it has any hair left. Perhaps it is like me and does not have much left. In any event, CP would not like that at all. If the Administrator said he had the authority and it was the sensible thing to do, rather than having the grain standing in boxcars, the glut of grain could be moved. That would make a real difference.

When there are West Coast strikes, the grain farmers bear the brunt because the grain cannot be loaded into ships. It is not the Government, the owners on the coast or the elevators that take the brunt. It is the grain farmer who loses. He pays the extra that has to be paid, in some years up to $18 million.

We hope that a strike will not occur again. However, if that should happen, the Administrator, once the strike is settled, should be able to get the hopper cars to the port as quickly as possible so that we do not lose our markets. During one strike we could not move our barley. The ships sat in Vancouver harbour for many days. Finally they moved to United States ports to load the barley. We never got that pearl barley market back. We lost it because we accommodated those who had gone on strike on the coast. We forgot all about the grain producer. He is the one who has had to bear the brunt.

The Administrator should have authority to look after the interest of the grain producer. That should be his prime consideration, not to accommodate the railway or put up with the arrogance of the CPR. The grain must be moved, and there is a way to move it.

I notice, Mr. Speaker, you are indicating I have only one minute left. I have at least nine other topics. I will hold them for another part of the debate. Each and every one has to do with the duties of the Administrator. In closing, I say, let us get the Administrator. Let us not give him just a pretty job, but let us give him the tools to do the job so that he can insist on what is right being done, and order it to be done if there is no co-operation from the railways.

Mrs. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of amendment No. 33 which concerns the Administrator of the Grain Transportation Agency. We are pleased that our colleagues in the Conservative Party are at last seeing the light as far as co-operative integrated planning is concerned. It is surprising that they have moved from their free enterprise, free competitive kinds of principles and are actually interested in integrated planning, in this case in order to make the best use of rail cars. We are surprised that the Liberals have not seen the light and recognized this as a sensible plan to make the best use of our resources at a time when we are trying to improve the rail system across Canada.

The motion recommends the exchange of cars between the railways in order to increase the efficiency in the movement of grain. I would like to point out in my remarks, Mr. Speaker, that there is a concept that I think should be expanded in an over-all planning process that would apply beyond only the transportation of grain. I might mention that in my riding and the ridings that surround the Port of Vancouver, there exists probably one of the worst examples of a bottleneck and inefficiency in the use of rail cars. This is of course because there are four different quite unrelated railways going through the area. For example, it often takes considerable time and expense to move railway cars from the north shore of the Port of Vancouver where there is B.C. rail connections some 45 miles around the total port area to connect to the inner port and transfer grain and other items to another rail system such as Burlington Northern.

I would like to point out also, Mr. Speaker, that in addition to making better use of rail cars, it is my understanding—and my colleague who is an expert on this will perhaps elaborate on this—that we also need more rail cars and we need Canadian-made rail cars. That is why I must put on the record again the fact that this Party feels that it was a great tragedy when the Social Credit Party in British Columbia closed down a B.C. rail car manufacturing plant in the Squamish area which was brought into being when our Party was in power in British Columbia. This is the kind of thing we do not need to see more of. If that plant had not been closed down, it would have provided more Canadian-made rail cars for Canadian domestic use as well as for export at a time when we really needed them.

Returning to Bill C-155 and this amendment, Mr. Speaker, there is no question that we need to make better use of rail cars right across Canada. We need an integrated and interchangeable plan that would make the best use of tracks, regardless of whether those tracks belong to CN or CP Rail or, in the case of the Vancouver region, Great Northern Railway or British Columbia Railway. That would allow for the flexibility needed to combine partial loads of specialized grains into one load on whichever rail system seemed to be the most logical.

In British Columbia and in the area of the Port of Vancouver particularly, there exists a very complex and, I might say, extremely inefficient and unco-ordinated system, which sometimes makes me very fearful for my community when I think of some of the very dangerous goods that are transported on the rail systems.

As I pointed out, there are four different rail systems which are quite unrelated serving that port area. The Burlington Northern is an American rail system and is completely unaccountable to the local communities, the City of Vancouver or even to Canada, as far as I can see. I am thinking of a situation that occurred when there was a problem with noise pollution created by this railway. This problem was very disturbing to the surrounding community, especially to people who were trying to sleep at night. There was much shunting of cars and so on going on. We investigated every possible avenue in our attempts to do something about this. Because it was an American rail system, the noise bylaws were apparently unenforceable. Similarly, the mothers in a public housing community in that particular area had a great fight on their hands when they were trying to get an overpass built over this railway so that their children could go to school without having to cross a dangerous track.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, Order, please. It seems to me that the Hon. Member, while raising valid points, is relating to matters incidental to the matters at hand. I do not know what term I should use, but she is sidetracking her remarks and not addressing them to the amendment. I would invite her to relate to the amendment, please.

Mrs. Mitchell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The point I was trying to make, by illustrating with some examples from my own experience in Vancouver, was that we need an integrated system. We certainly need an integrated system that will allow for the sharing of rail cars, but we also need to expand on that. I think that is very important because we are dealing with a Bill which is concerned with planning for the whole future transportation system particularly in western Canada.

I might say, Mr. Speaker, that this Bill does practically nothing at all for the Port of Vancouver area. Not one cent of the moneys that the Liberals are proposing to put into rail improvements will go to improvements to relieve the congestion in the Port of Vancouver. I was trying to explain that the congestion is even worse there than in many other regions because of the complexity caused by four different rail systems.

My colleague from Regina spoke this morning about the high cost in inefficiency of having competitive railway systems. Again, the existence of four railway systems in Vancouver is certainly a very good example of what he was complaining about earlier. We need a very integrated planning and operation system, not just for rail cars but for the whole of the rail system.

I would like to devote a good part of my time, Mr. Speaker, to illustrate something that really is related to this Bill and certainly to this amendment. I would like to illustrate this point by referring to some of the documented evidence in a report entitled "Vancouver Rail Access Study, Phase I Report", which was prepared by a group called Travacon Research Limited. This report was prepared for the Provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba and for Transport Canada and the Canadian Transport Commission. It deals with the very serious bottleneck situation that occurs in the Port of Vancouver.

This Bill and this amendment will actually do very little to solve that bottleneck situation. I think it is very important that I document this because its principles are very important and relate to this Bill. The report attempts to document and identify the timing of potential future rail capacity shortfalls within Vancouver, not only for those that are occurring now. The bottleneck situation is bad right now, but this report deals with it through to 1990. This is quite important because it ties in with a master port plan for the Port of Vancouver.

Under Bill C-155 and the proposed funding that would go along with that, no moneys were allocated to deal with rail improvements to relieve the congestion that now exists and will increase in the future. The report attempts to evaluate potential alternative solutions to such shortfalls. I will deal with those in a moment. It also develops recommendations and some very interesting alternative ways which would, through an integrated planning process and integrated use of all the rail systems under an authority, ensure the availability of needed rail capacity for the foreseeable future. It would make much better use of the available resources of all the railway systems in an integrated way so that we could deal with the bottlenecks that are there now and the greatly increased bottlenecks that are anticipated for the future as our economy hopefully recovers and there is more shipping through the port.

The scope of the study covers demand for railway movement through Vancouver until 1990. This amendment which deals with rail car traffic improvements should be considered in terms of future as well as present projected traffic volumes. The report forecasts that the demand for rail car movement through Vancouver, which is based on a recently released Port of Vancouver master plan, will increase considerably. It also assumes that forecasts from the CN and CP Rail systems indicate that they will expand their main line rail capacity through the mountains and increse capacity which, in turn, will create problems as they flow into the Vancouver region—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret having to stop the Hon. Member but her time has expired. She could continue with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I would like it to be made known that I did not deny consent to the Hon. Member who is from that part of Canada in which I reside.

I would like to offer a few comments in reply to the comments made by the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) about the fact that the Government will be voting against this amendment because the CTC—

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I never said that.

Mr. Huntington: He says that he never said that. He spoke against the amendment. I think I have it right now. He spoke against it because he said it was redundant, that the CTC was already in place and you could not have another authority with the powers that would require the Administrator to find the shortest and best route for the benefit of producers.

● (1640)

I want to deal with that point. The CTC has had these powers and, historically, has not represented the best interests of the producers. I do not want to be unfair, but the problem has existed from time immemorial. I have been told by labour union leaders in the Port of Vancouver that if we were to address the switching limit problems in that port and re-arrange the dispatching of grain cars into the Port of Vancouver, those two areas alone could improve the delivery of grain to the port by some 200 cars per day.

We are pretty good at taking the side of management and established interests, but it is pretty frustrating for the rank and file grain worker and port worker to realize that certain efficiencies are available to management but are not taken up, as is the case with the switching limit and the method of dispatching grain cars to Vancouver to match the grade of grain required by the orders that fill the ships. The over-all integration of the management of the system, from the hinterland down to the port, has some faults which are the direct responsibility of management and are nothing to do with the grain farmer who struggles for a living wage.

If the Government were to accept the amendment of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) it would require the Administrator to do what is right for the producer. You would then have a force in place that would allow some correction of the inefficiencies within the system.

What we are doing in Bill C-155 and what we are doing by ignoring this type of amendment, is delivering the whole bundle over to one element of a transportation system. We are not placing normal marketplace forces against that element to compel it to be competitive and efficient. In that way we work against the direct interests of the producer, and that means that we work against the Port of Vancouver and all the other elements in western Canada.

I notice that in the United States the subsidy is $1.12 per bushel, while in Canada it is 37 cents per bushel. However, none of the subsidy in the United States is delivered specifically to transportation. In that country, they are far too smart to do that. They deliver it to the producer and give him the freedom of choice to use those elements of the transportation system that help him operate in the most cost-effective mode. That is what this clause is trying to impose in this bad piece of legislation.

Just the other day I had a conversation with a very senior person in the transportation system about the Port of Vancouver. He said that what we fail to realize is that Bill C-155 is not a grain Bill; that it is a transportation Bill for coal, sulphur, potash and other commodities.

The container movement in the Port of Vancouver relies on grain for 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the outbound trade of containers. That information was given to us by the Vancouver delegation that came to Ottawa some two weeks ago. We rely on that outbound trade of full containers of grain products from the hinterland, the Canadian prairie basin, to attract container ships into the port and provide the some 400 jobs involved at the port. It is very, very important traffic. When someone gets the mindset that what we are dealing with is a transportation Bill and not a grain Bill, it gives us some serious problems.

We receive a great deal of propaganda from the railroad and the federal Government to the effect that we should not try to improve the Bill—just let the darn thing go through and then, when we get in power, fix it up. To them I say that the Bill is too fundamental and too important. If it goes through in its present form and if the type of amendment set out in Motion No. 33 is put aside, then all Canada from Thunder Bay west loses an opportunity to have value add activities on top of its primary agricultural production. The other thing we lose by continuing to ignore the wisdom of this type of motion is the competitive pressures of an open marketplace on transportation systems. Why should the grower be locked into a rail system if he can move his grain more efficiently by truck? Why should we get into the high cost of branch line maintenance when, who knows—if we put competitive pressures on the system we might find the farmers have a more cost effective way of moving it?

For the Bill to provide for the delivery of all the payment, the subsidy that the Government is putting into the system, strictly into the railroad system is to deny the future of western Canada the further value add in the form of cattle feeding, meat packing plants, crushing plants and further manufacturing of the agricultural wealth that comes out of that prairie basin.

Locking it into the railway system alone locks the farmer into that one mode of transportation. That is literally a tragedy, Mr. Speaker. We have to get this point across to the Government and start to open up the methods of payment that allows all, or a good part, of that subsidy to go out to the producer so that he has the freedom of choice to elect what shall be done with the grain.

We must take into consideration the fact that the farmer on the Prairies is receiving no more for his grain today than he received in 1973 and all his costs of production have inflated, just as those of the railroads have. Yet, in this element of transportation we propose to remove a statutory limit. There is talk of a basket clause or a safety net of 10 per cent. But unless world grain prices go up, I do not know how the farmer on the Canadian prairies will be able to increase productivity. He must do this if he is to offset the imposition of the massive increase in the cost of getting his grain to port in the next decade.

Why would anyone say that this motion is not acceptable? What we are trying to do is to give the grower some form of protection and put some pressure on the CTC which has not been doing its job in terms of the producers' costs. Why does the Government not accept it and give the producers a little more hope in a very bad Bill?

I see that you are on the edge of your seat, Mr. Speaker, with anxiety as the result of my remarks. You are about to ask me to sit down because my time has expired.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I want to take a few moments to express my views on this important amendment. Essentially what we have, as the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) has just stated, is an amendment concerning statutory limitation. It would also, quite naturally, extend the opportunities for competition so that the farmers would have a minimal level of service.

I submit, Sir, that one of the great mistakes made by the Government with this legislation is consistently to point the finger toward western Canada and say that the people there could not get their act together and the Government had to take the question in hand. From a political perspective the Government effectively pointed out the differences in western Canada and then said that because those differences exist, they do not have their act together. Sir, the differences exist because the West is not homogeneous, rather, it is a mixed agricultural economy, and while there is a significant difference between Alberta and Saskatchewan, I tell you, Sir, there should be a difference.

More than 85 per cent of the grain grown in Saskatchewan, Mr. Speaker, is exported. In the Province of Alberta, by contrast, 47 per cent of the grain is used in feed lots, in poultry and in swine production. The result is, Sir, that in Alberta there is a very extensive feed lot and meat packing industry. If this amendment, and others associated with it, are not accepted we could lose some 6,000 jobs and, according to at least two economic reports I have seen, somewhere between $400 million and $600 million annually. Feed lot operators in Alberta would be in the position of having to match the Government subsidy of at least 45 cents a bushel. Other parts of the country would be receiving an advantage of 45 cents a bushel because they are moving that grain to export markets. In effect, Sir, what you would have is a 90 cent a bushel disparity between one region of Canada and another. Alberta would be in a position where its feed grains are being exported to create industry in either some other Province or some other country. That, Sir, would mean not only the export of grain, it would mean the export of sons and daughters. When you lose the secondary industry, you also lose your sources of employment. I submit that we are talking about an agency with the power of persuasion plus some authority to ensure that the railways effectively move the grain or, alternatively, open up the market for other modes of transportation.

Over the past 12 months, Mr. Speaker, there has been enormous transportation congestion in the community of Oyen and, more recently this past spring, inthe community of Lougheed. At the present time there is very serious congestion on the line between Camrose and Forestburg, and more specifically the community of Heisler.

As a Member of Parliament, Mr. Speaker, I really have no place to turn in order to help my constituents except to make appeals to agencies which do not have the necessary authority. What the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) has done in his amendment is, by using the words "shall require if necessary", to give the agency the power to make things happen for the farmers of this country. We have to ask ourselves not only what we should be doing regarding the Crow rate legislation, but also ask ourselves about the historic meaning of this legislation and its conventions as they affect the expectations for a minimum level of service.

This legislation was established to move grain from the Prairies to other parts of Canada and for export, and as a tool for economic development. I submit that those two principles should remain in the legislation today. If we deny the Hon. Member his amendment, we will have limited the ability of our producers to move grain effectively. It would also affect negatively the secondary industries in Alberta because the farmer can acquire his portion of the Crow rate benefit only if he exports. That kind of limitation, Sir, is unacceptable. However, it is an extremely dangerous one, not only in terms of the economy of the Province of Alberta, but also with regard to the spin-off ramifications for all of Canada.

I note that Your Honour is sending me the signal that my allotted time is up. I really wish I had more time to develop that particular point. However, I know there are other amendments related to that point and I can handle it at a later time. But that concept—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak on the amendment that has been put forth by my friend and colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), who represents a constituency neighbouring mine. I would like to bring attention once more to what I think is the crux of the whole problem, the crux of the amendment. At present, Clause 17(d) states:

—promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers.

With the amendment, it would then read:

—promote and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purposes of maximizing returns to producers.

I will not debate the matter, but the Government is proposing to transfer $1 billion a year over the next three years, directly to the railroads with no strings attached, except for these kinds of statements, with no onus on the railroads to become accountable to the producer or to the Government which, in its largesse, is handing over this amount of $1 billion.

All that the Hon. Member for Vegreville is doing is putting in three key words, "and shall require". The amendment shall require the railroads to follow through to reciprocal arrangements with other transport carriers within the country. Surely that is not too much to ask when one considers that the taxpayers are transferring to the railroads $1 billion a year for the next three years. In a sense, the $1 billion a year is making the railroads accountable to the people who are supplying the money, making them accountable to Members of the House of Commons who, in turn, are accountable to their constituents and, in my case and that of all western Members responsible to producers within their ridings.

In effect, if the amendment goes through, we know that as soon as reciprocal arrangements are not made and transportation of the producers' crops is stifled, the pressure will be put on Members of Parliament from the West, from the producing areas, from the commodity areas, to do something about it. They, in turn, will come to the House because they will have a definite statement that states, "and shall require". It is not a promotion saying, "Go out, railroads, and start a publicity campaign, a hot air campaign", but words in effect saying, "Yes, we are doing this". However, it states, "and shall require", which would make it mandatory. It will place it under the scrutiny of Members of Parliament who are responsible to their constituents, and would indeed put it under the scrutiny of those in the Government benches who will also feel the pressure, which will indeed force the railroads to do what they say they will do.

I do not know if Members on the Government side understand. I can say without fear of contradiction that the Conservative Members of Parliament are the ones who represent producers in western Canada. I do not know if the Liberals understand that the very lifeblood of the producer is on the line. It is being put on the line with the transfer of tax dollars, which the producer would also contribute, directly to the railroads, $1 billion a year with no strings attached.

We have had experience with railroads which have stated that they would maintain branchlines in all of the communities, and we have seen what has happened. We have heard the railroads promise that they would maintain passenger traffic from Edmonton, Alberta, right through to Vancouver but, indeed, they have cut off service to the severe detriment of an area represented by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor).

Jasper dropped 60 per cent of its tourist traffic because the railroads were not compelled by legislation to keep the lines open for passenger service. We have continually seen the railroads lobbying all Members of Parliament, the House of Commons and the Government, pleading their case, stating that they cannot continually operate the railroads and provide services to those very prairie towns for which we are giving them $1 billion to move commodities from. If we do not allow the amendment to go through, we will be giving them carte blanche permission to withdraw or to do exactly as they please, and requiring nothing. I am saying that three simple words, "and shall require", change the clout of the legislation, if it does indeed pass. It would then be mandatory that those railroads do what they say they will do, and live up to their commitments that we know they have not lived up to in the past. They have abandoned branch lines and prairie towns. They have abandoned passenger services from city to city and into some of the vital areas which depend on tourism. I would suggest that unless we include "and shall require", if we do not require the railroads to do it, they are damn well not going to do it and will only pay lip service to it.

I would urge all Hon. Members of the House to consider those three words very seriously and allow the amendment to pass because it is crucial to the legislation. It is crucial, involving as it does control by the Canadian people, who are giving this money to the railroads, to increase the service and to move commodities for the farmer. It is our responsibility to ensure that the $1 billion a year is spent in exactly the way the railroads say it will be spent. We must require them to do it because their record sure as hell does not show that they will do it on good faith.

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a few words on the record this afternoon concerning Motion No. 33 amending Clause 17 in Bill C-155. As mentioned by the previous speaker, it requires the railways, CN and CP, to have interchange agreements that can actually be guaranteed or put into force.

When the Government first introduced Bill C-155, it was actually giving the railways a guaranteed annual income without any guarantee to the producers that they would have any better movement of their grain from their farms to the elevators, over the rail lines to the ports and on to the market. That is a very dismal situation and it reflects the attitude of the Government toward our producers in Canada. They are already in a very precarious position because of the economic conditions they have experienced and are experiencing. Farmers face enough difficulty when they do not get adequate prices for their products in order to cover their costs and have some margin of profit for themselves. They do not need the added burden of not having their products adequately transported to the ports.

One area where I think the interchange agreement would work very well concerns the area I represent where producers move some of their grain through the Port of Churchill. The only access to the Port of Churchill is a CN line which goes to the terminals there. Canadian Pacific does not have a line going into the Port of Churchill. Quite often, the situation arises when CN Rail may not have the cars or facilities to move grain into the Port of Churchill whereas Canadian Pacific may very well have some cars within the area that are available to haul grain to Churchill. However, they are not available because the Grain Transportation Agency or the Canadian Wheat Board does not have the power to require CN actually to use Canadian Pacific equipment to go over CN lines and haul grain from plugged elevators to a terminal at the Port of Churchill that is waiting for grain. That is one particular instance.

After all the years when land, rolling stock and money has been put into the rail lines, they are not required to have an interchange agreement for these facilities. The only one who really suffers from this are the Canadian farmers who are unable to get their grain to the ports and must put up with the frustration of having a final crop quota for which there is no room in the elevator to which the farmers traditionally haul their grain. In some cases they must haul their grain greater distances to where there might be elevator space that is on a main line or that is better served.

One point which has been stressed in the interventions that have been made this afternoon is that there is need for support from the Conservatives and, hopefully, some Liberals in the House to back up the NDP proposal to have Bill C-155 split into three very distinct parts. Those parts are: one dealing with the statutory Crow rate itself; a second dealing with the upgrading, improvement and rehabilitation of rail lines in Canada; and the third dealing with Dominion Coal Blocks.

As the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) pointed out this afternoon, this is not really a Bill dealing with grain transportation but one dealing with much more than that. We heard some Members state that they support Motion No. 33 because of the lack of guarantees from the railroads for the improvement of transportation of grain to Canadian ports.

Of course, I believe the Dominion Coal Blocks have very little to do with transportation at all, especially grain transportation. Without guarantees being provided in the Bill to have better performance from the rail companies in hauling grain, we will only further enhance the guaranteed annual incomes which the rail companies have had for so many years. At this time they are asking for a guaranteed return of 20 per cent on their investment. I would point out that this investment does not even come from the railways but from the people of Canada in terms of land grants, rolling stock and actual money given to the rail companies.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have been listening very carefully to the Hon. Member. I thought we were on Motion No. 33 which states:

—promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements—

And "the duties and responsibilities of the Administrator." I fail to see what splitting the Bill into three and the coal fields have to do with Motion No. 33 which we should be debating right now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The point of order by the Parliamentary Secretary is very well taken. Will the Hon. Member please take note of the remarks.

Mr. Anguish: Mr. Speaker, I have taken note and I think it just shows the unwillingness or lack of understanding that the Liberal Government has about how Bill C-155 affects the farmers of western Canada. I am trying to make the point, which I thought I was making very well, that we need some guarantees in this Bill. I support Motion No. 33 and I am pleased it was brought forward.

It is difficult to support some clauses of the Bill with which one agrees when there are other clauses that are not interrelated. I maintain that the statutory rate is something that we want maintained because it was an agreement made with the farmers to bring us into Confederation. We want that Crow rate maintained and the prairie farmers cannot afford to pay what the Liberal Government is asking of them.

The second part of this Bill to which Motion No. 33 refers is that part dealing with rail line improvements, upgrading and rehabilitation of the transportation system. We want that part split from Bill C-155. I can see that the Speaker is shaking his head, nodding in agreement or disagreement with what I am saying, but I think it simply points out the lack of empathy shown by the Liberals for the farmers of western Canada. I am very happy to be able to stand up and speak in support of this motion this afternoon.

I invite some of the Liberals to tell us how the Dominion Coal Blocks and the statutory Crow rate interrelates so closely unless it is due to their friends in Canadian Pacific who donate approximately $50,000 a year to the Liberal bagman who comes around. Does that not really have more to do with the passage of this Bill and lumping those three areas together than actually setting down good legislation for the Canadian people and western Canadian farmers in particular? Is that not the real truth behind this Bill?

Therefore, I suggest that my remarks are relevant. I gave the example of an interchange agreement over a line that is owned by the Canadian National which goes into the Port of Churchill. That is only one example of interchange agreements which may exist between the rail companies if the Grain Transportation Agency or some other agency to replace it were given that authority if the Bill is passed.

I suggest the Liberal Government should think again when the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) stands up to say that the remarks I have been making this afternoon are not relevant to Motion No. 33 before us. That motion states that there must be some obligation placed upon the rail companies to make them give guaranteed service on rail lines through interchange agreements because dual ownership over the lines and rolling stock does not exist. Instead, we see a single rail company becoming involved in petty arguments with the other rail company. It does not want to give good service, or even if it wants to do so, it does not provide the kind of service that the Canadian producers think should be given in return for all the benefits which have been given to rail companies over the years by the Canadian people and by this Parliament. The Government should be ashamed of the guaranteed annual income which has been delivered by it to the railways and also by the people who produce our grains in western Canada who, in good faith, have in some cases bought rolling stock for the rail companies without guarantees. I think that is very important and very relevant.

I call on Members in the New Democratic Party to support this motion to make sure we not only improve the rail transportation system in Canada but we also get from the rail companies some guarantee of performance for the producers of western Canada.

Mr. Nystrom: Since the Hon. Member has some time left, would he be willing to answer a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired. A question and answer period is not provided in the rules at this point. There would have to be unanimous agreement of the House. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak to the amendment, Motion No. 33, which reads:

> The Grain Transportation Agency Administrator may promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers.

I want to congratulate the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) for proposing this amendment. I would urge the Government to support it. When we as Members of Parliament representing the taxpayers of Canada are looking at the possibility of forwarding $1 billion a year for the next three years to the railway system, most definitely we must have someone in an administrative position who will protect the very producers we are talking about.

For a moment I want to comment on the remarks made by the Parliamentary Secretary and the remarks made by the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. He suggested that the Transport Commission should be the one to deal with this. We have seen the record of the Transport Commission. We know of the backlog of work. We know, with regard to VIA Rail, what has happened there and what has happened to the recommendations. We know about the abandonment of lines. For them to suggest that they should be the governing body which would make recommendations is certainly not something with which I would feel comfortable, nor would I want to stand by when the taxpayers' money is being invested.

I would like to comment on some of the remarks made by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall when he spoke at the Transport Committee hearing in Regina on August 9, 1983. I think it is imperative that we look seriously at what he said. He said, in part:

> —one of the great grain producing areas in Saskatchewan between Saskatoon and Calgary served by the Canadian National Railways; it is closer to Vancouver at Rosetown than to Thunder Bay, so the trend is westward. Grain was taken to Calgary, but the CN has no line going from Calgary to Vancouver. So they hauled it then northward 200 miles to Edmonton so they can take it south again to Vancouver. That was the CN.

He also states that CP at the same time has brought grain into Edmonton but, because there is no line west from Edmonton, CP goes 200 miles south. It is like ships in the dark, he suggested. Here we have two trains, one CN and one CP going in different directions carrying grain north and south so they can eventually go west. It is a ridiculous situation. It is one that we as Members of Parliament cannot ignore. Not only does grain go north and south but it hits a bottleneck in Calgary. I know because I have worked for the railways for 35 years. When the grain hits Calgary there are switching cars at the Keith yard. This switching goes on for as long as five hours. I would surmise that the same thing happens at Edmonton.

We in the House have allowed taxpayers' money to go forward to build extra grain cars. I say it is a waste of money because grain cars are being held up for hours at a time. Not only are cars being held up in Calgary but then we have problems at places like Rogers. Cars sit in the siding waiting. The train goes on westward again until it reaches Chase and then Monte Creek. The cars sit on sidings for weeks on end while the railway decides when it is time to start moving farther west. A train is 300 miles away from port and it will leave from Revelstoke and be told to set off 50 cars of grain at Chase. Then it will be told to continue on and set another 35 cars off at Monte Creek and continue to Kamloops.

Then we get into a situation where we have another train of grain. This train will be asked to pick up 25 cars at Chase. In order to do that, the train will pull out 100 cars of grain, put on 25 and shove the rest back, and continue on. What a ridiculous situation.

The Hon. Member for Vegreville is right on with his amendment. It is time these railways had someone to administer what is going on. There are computer systems. I know for a fact that in Revelstoke you can ask where a CP car number such and such is. That information can be had with a touch of a button. When there is that kind of system in place, we can certainly have one of the most up to date transportation systems of handling grain anywhere. I want to say that we can feel proud of the Wheat Board because of the way it serves the needs of the producers.

Not only could we have an efficient way of handling grain but we could also apply the system to the handling of other commodities. We do not see unit cars of coal sitting in a siding unless there is some emergency or breakdown, and that is understandable. But unit cars of coal coming out of the Kootenays make their turn and come back in an efficient manner. This could be done with grain and other commodities.

I think it is wrong when we bring in legislation which makes those kinds of guarantees of money to the railways without having the railways guarantee that they will live up to the kind of performance that we expect.

I think we can utilize those grain cars which the Government has provided and which the Wheat Board has put forward in a much more efficient manner. They can go across the country faster. Instead of having grain cars sitting in sidings, they can be unloaded and returned or they could at least be brought a little closer to the destination in cases such as that.

If we can shoot rockets to the sky and pinpoint where they land, surely we can co-ordinate some grain from our shipping areas in the Prairies to our ports in Vancouver that will make connections with boats and ships. I think it is a disgrace that we should be discussing this situation today. This sort of thing should have been put in place a long time ago. One billion dollars a year is a lot of money to guarantee to these railways without any major guarantees made to this House of Commons. I think every Member on the Liberal side of the House should reconsider what has been put in this Bill and get assurances that the railway will do the upgrading.

If Liberal Members would like to ask questions afterwards, I will be prepared to answer them. I can hear some of them shouting from across the way.

There is no question about it. We should have an Administrator who is capable of looking at situations as they arise and seeing where it will be beneficial to trade off with CP and CN on certain grain commodities at certain times. Certain types of grain which are being handled at the present time by CN could meet the requirements when the grain being carried by CP does not meet the requirements. We could co-ordinate different types of grain and ensure that they travel on different railways. I disagree with what the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) said when he expressed the idea of railways running loaded one way and empty the other. It is not feasible to run loaded trains on one track in one direction and empty in the other, because it will throw out track alignments. Loads must go back and forth to keep trackbeds aligned. It is not like a highway, and it is not feasible in the operations of railways.

I urge Government Members to consider what they are doing, to adopt the amendment and to ensure that we have some mechanism whereby we are guaranteed that the railways will carry out what we expect of them.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I know the Government would like the debate to end, particularly on this particular clause, because it is not interested in putting some muscle into the legislation to make the railway corporations do what they ought to do, that is, give some assurance to producers that the money flowing to them by means of this legislation will in fact be spent to the advantage of grain producers.

The amendment is very simple. It asks that the Government give a statutory declaration that railways shall be required to maximize the returns to producers. It is "shall be"; not may be, not happenstance, not hope so, not even ought to. The Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) makes his request for a very good reason. Producers have had much experience at being disappointed by railways. Is it good enough to extend $651 million to the corporation and hope that it will be spent for the benefit of producers? Is it good enough to expect that, especially when we look at the long lists of interventions by railways relative to branch line abandonment? Are the railways thinking first of producers when they make application to the CTC to abandon branch lines? It seems to me that it is almost a genuflecting impulse on the part of the railways to think first for themselves and of themselves.

I ask the Government whether there is any guarantee that the $651 million, which will be given carte blanche to the railways, will improve the rail system in British Columbia for all its primary producers. What guarantee is there, regardless of the propaganda floating around British Columbia, that the railways will in fact improve the system for the benefit of producers? It so happens that the Port of Vancouver is interested in an improved system because about half the tonnage flowing through that port is directly related to grain production in the Prairies. If production in the Prairies breaks down, jobs are lost in Vancouver. If production in the Prairies breaks down, it does not matter how good are the port facilities in Vancouver, they will be underutilized. It is very important for people in Vancouver, for people in British Columbia and for those interested in port facilities and jobs in that area to know that railways will not be able to dodge their responsibility in the expenditure of the money for the benefit of producers.

Hon. Members have repeatedly risen to speak on this point and to make a very simple request on behalf of producers, that the Government first think of the benefits to producers, not to railways. They have asked the Government to make sure that the $651 million will not be spent on some other part of the railway rather than for the benefit of grain producers in the prairie basin. I want to see the other parts of transportation in British Columbia improved also. I want to ensure that coal trains have good transportation facilities, that lumber can be delivered to port and that all other aspects of the production system in British Columbia are served well by the railways, but I do not want prairie farmers to pay for it. If the railway system is functioning as it ought to function, if it serves primary producers in British Columbia as it ought to serve them, it will pay for itself. The catch-up work which has to be done to improve the lines in the Prairies should not be neglected further in order to build up the railways somewhere else. I am not saying that the railways will do that. I am saying that the legislation does not guarantee that they will not. If the railways are thinking first of themselves and not of producers, there is no guarantee that they will not do it.

I rise in support of the amendment of the Hon. Member for Vegreville. We ask the Government to provide a simple guarantee that it requires the railways to spend that $651 million on the rail line system so that producers on the Prairies will be served.

A simple piece of information came out of the Wood Gundy report, that as a result of the subsidies flowing to the railway system the value of stock in the railways will double. I do not begrudge shareholders that profit as long as it is earned profit. Therefore, I urge the Government to support the amendment that the railways be required to use that money to upgrade the system for producers in the prairie basin.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on Motion No. 33, the "shall require" amendment which was placed before the House by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). It is very important to have government support for this motion. We know that the efficiency of the railways is not something which is automatic. We cannot expect them to co-operate automatically.

Turning to Clause 48 and Clause 49 of the Bill, they allow the Administrator to make rate arrangements with the railways for interchange and reciprocal agreements for joint use, and they give the Administrator the right to buy co-operation between the railways. If we come up with a rate which is advantageous to the railways, they will co-operate, but if we do not come up with advantageous rates, they are not likely to co-operate as they have not in the past. In the sixties and seventies there were a lot of opportunities for interchange. As the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) indicated, they jealously guarded the right to move their own cars. In the days when they claimed they were losing a lot of money, the CPR would not let CNR carry any of its cars. It belies their statement that they were losing money when they would not let the other railroad carry their cars. It tends to undermine the assertion that the railways lose money every time they move a cargo of grain. If that were the case, you would expect them to push their cars off to another railroad. There was no way they were going to allow the other railways to carry their cars.

If they would not co-operate when they were losing money and carrying their own cars increased their losses, how can we expect them to co-operate when it becomes very profitable to move those cars? This amendment would give the Administrator the right to require that there be co-operation between the railways. In order to improve the efficiency of the grain transportation handling system, we must have in place an interchange system between CNR and CPR which works when we need it to work, not when the railway thinks it would be advantageous to them.

The problems are bad enough when moving grain under ordinary circumstances. If we have to fight another major group of participants, the railways, it will be a very difficult situation. It is very logical to put in place a "shall require" amendment which would give the Administrator, much as we would like him to be directly under the Wheat Board, the right to require the railways to co-operate with each other.

Almost every area on the branch line has a very direct route from the shipping point to the port. It is logical that, as a utility that route be the best, shortest and cheapest possible route. We should be able to depend upon the railways to give the kind of efficiency that we need and that it happen automatically. We know what the efficiency of the railways can be. I want to quote Justice Emmett Hall who spoke on the efficiency of railways. He said, and I quote:

> We heard a lot about efficiency, and the whole idea of the railways about efficiency was to get rid of the branch lines. That would have been very efficient from their standpoint. But on this question of efficiency, I am told by senior railway people, there is a railway philosophy that once the line gets hold of a commodity for transport, it will hang on to that commodity to the delivery points, come hell or high water. That works out this way and this is what we found, great quantities of grain grown on, say, the Goose Lake line . . . and now that may not mean to much to Members from the East, but it is one of the great grain-producing areas in Saskatchewan between Saskatoon and Calgary served by the Canadian National Railways—

It is much better to move that grain through Edmonton, as the Hon. Member for Kootenay East-Revelstoke (Mr. Parker) mentioned earlier. Instead, the grain is shipped through Calgary. We have put before the House a number of examples where co-operation was logical, efficient and valuable to the producers and to the railways, but they would not do it. If they would not do it where they were losing money, there is no hope that they will do it when moving grain becomes profitable.

This Bill allows a kind of profitability which our farmers would love to have. Ask any farmer if he would find acceptable a 20 per cent guaranteed profit on what it costs to farm. We would like to see that kind of situation for our farmers. Since we are giving it to the railways we should demand from them the kind of efficiency which would allow that to be possible.

We have argued that there is no need for the Grain Transportation Agency. Also, we have argued that the Administrator has too much power. However, we go along with this amendment of the Hon. Member for Vegreville. Although under certain circumstances we think that his power encroaches on the power of the Wheat Board, if he is to be there we should have this kind of amendment which gives him power to increase the efficiency of the agency. No matter what public agency is finally given control over the movement of cars, the Administrator needs the power to force this kind of co-operation.

Over the years, the railways have been operating under the Railway Act. That Act gives power to the Canadian Transport Commission to require certain efficiencies and qualities regarding the movement of cars. The CTC has never used the Railway Act. It has never used the powers that it has. If we gave those powers to an agent directly involved in the movement of grain, possibly he would use those powers to help the producers and the grain transportation system.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, in rising to enter the debate on the amendment of my colleague for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), I trust that Members opposite are paying adequate attention to the arguments being presented on this side of the House. The Chairman of the Transport Committee, who spent a considerable part of the summer chairing this committee as it toured western Canada, is in the Chamber. As Chairman, he has been very fair, honest and straightforward in the approach that he has taken to this. We respect him for it. There is a great misunderstanding, though—

● (1750)

Mr. Huntington: He spoke against the amendment.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) has the floor.

Mr. Towers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, but I always welcome the interjections of my colleagues because they are always very worthwhile and, hopefully, the Members opposite will pay attention to them. Nevertheless, he does have his shortcomings and one of them is that if he debated and argued against this amendment, then certainly his education is not complete. He still has something more to learn, and perhaps another trip to western Canada would stand him in good stead and help him understand exactly what happens there.

I recognize what this amendment is attempting to achieve because my constituency lies between two of the railways, the CPR and the CNR. I recognize that those cities or towns with grain moving facilities in an area served by two railroads do get better service than those that are isolated from either one or the other. There is no doubt that if this amendment is accepted by the Government and there is a reciprocal arrangement made between the CPR and the CNR, the farmers will enjoy the benefit of it.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, possibly because of the politics of the Government in one form or another, quite often the farmer or the grain producer is the forgotten individual. Somebody, and it really does not matter who or whether or not his agency is called the Grain Transportation Agency, must have the authority to emphasize to the participants involved in moving grain that the grain must move in an efficient manner.

An interesting thing came out of the committee hearings. One of the witnesses before the committee stated that if we could have a 2.5 per cent improvement in efficiency in the movement of grain each year, however the railroads, the grain companies and the shipping facilities at port operated, it would mean that there would not necessarily be any increase in the cost to the producer. This is of fundamental importance because, at this time, the producer cannot afford to pay any more for moving his grain until such time as the price of grain goes up.

Those of us on this side of the House know very well what the Snavely Report meant, and one of the arguments I had with that report is that it accepted the railways' figures. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that we must accept those figures, because I have never seen an operation yet that could not become more efficient with proper leadership.

This amendment, if accepted by the Government, will provide a more efficient system of moving grain. In the competitive world that we live in, we must compete against our counterpart south of the 49th parallel. I was in that country just recently and those farmers were receiving anywhere from 50 cents to 80 cents a bushel more for a comparative bushel of barley than those farmers north of the 49th parallel. This is something of basic importance and something of which we must be cognizant.

An area of the movement and transportation of grain in which we can give full credit to the producer is the area of efficiency because the producer has certainly done his part in improving efficiency. However, there is a limit to the extent that the producer can go. I think at the present time, with the increased costs of energy, there are dire times ahead for the producers unless we start implementing programs and facilities that will be of benefit to the producer.

We have had dealings with reciprocal arrangements between the CPR and the CNR in my constituency. In Red Deer, the train must cross a river. The CNR eventually got permission from the CPR to use the bridge belonging to the CPR. It can be done if it has to be done. This is why the amendment moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville, is of basic importance. It will mean that this will have to be done, and the railways can do it.

I do not know whether you recognize it, Mr. Speaker, but it is ridiculous for the CNR to pull a trainload of grain into the port facility at Vancouver and then have to unhook its locomotives and put CPR locomotives on to pull the grain train in and unload it because it is on CPR tracks. I know, Mr. Speaker, that you are amazed by that and I trust that, with any influence you may have on Members opposite, you will help to ensure that they become cognizant of what is happening.

An Hon. Member: Somebody has to have control.

Mr. Towers: No problem. Somebody has to get control, and we are asking the Government to move one step at a time. The Chairman of the Transport Committee can blame the railway brotherhood or whoever he likes, but I must tell you, Mr. Speaker, that it is the farmers who have to pay the price if the provisions of this Bill are implemented. There is provision in the Bill for the cost of moving grain to increase five times by 1989-1990. This is totally unacceptable to western Canadians and to those of us who represent those grain producers in western Canada.

Further to that, there are extra costs involved in uni-transportation. That occurs when a railway has a monopoly over a certain area and can do whatever it likes. It can move the grain whenever it likes. As I said earlier, wherever competition exists, there will be better service.

Mr. McKnight: What about the cost-plus system?

Mr. Towers: As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) has said, with the cost-plus system the railways absolutely cannot lose. This is one of the deficiencies in this Bill.

I must tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the general mistrust felt by grain producers in western Canada is certainly surfacing at this time. They are angry at the CPR because of what it did through Marathon Realty. They are angry about what happened with Pan-Canadian, and they are really angry about what will happen to them in the years ahead.

Mr. McKnight: They are not happy with the Government.

Mr. Towers: I suppose that is right. They are not happy with the Government. They are angry about that as well. I presume, Mr. Speaker, that the next election will prove that.

I do hope that Members opposite will think about this overnight and accept it. I realize that it is close to adjournment time but I do trust that the Members opposite will think about this amendment and what it will do. Thinking about it will take no skin off the noses of any of the Liberal Members in western Canada even though their skin is pretty thin and they do not have too much of it. If they would just take cognizance of this amendment, accept it in their policies and draft it into the legislation, then we will certainly move in the right direction.

May I call it six o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION—RESPONSIBILITY TO DEAL WITH TELEVISED PORNOGRAPHY. (B) INQUIRY RESPECTING PENALTIES

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I have been raising the issue of pornography in broadcasting since last January and the first response of the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) to questions asked of him was relatively favourable. He did express some concern, and also expressed confidence that the CRTC would act. We know that the CRTC has failed to act; it has not amended its own broadcasting regulations to deal with the pornography question. It has not been tough in private with broadcasters and it has basically admitted that it made a mistake in licensing Pay-television. Then, it said to the women of Canada, "Tough luck! You can wait until the licence renewal time is up." That is roughly five years hence, Mr. Speaker. The CRTC failed to act in spite of the fact that the Broadcasting Act was very clear and that the powers given to it are enormous.

The only light at the end of the tunnel as far as the CRTC is concerned, is the recent decision it gave to a complaint from Media Watch. At last the CRTC has shown that it understands the problem of pornography and is able to distinguish between a discussion of violence against men and women as a question of freedom of expression and the advocacy of violence against women directly, which we have in pornography. The CRTC still did not offer any remedy, however.

The Minister of Communications next offered an excuse for not acting by suggesting that men or women who complained about pornography could lay complaints with the police under the obscenity provisions of the Criminal Code, and go to court. Of course, everyone should go to the police, insofar as they can, with obscenity complaints. There are some loopholes in the existing legislation, however. Some instances of pornography—even extremely violent pornography—are not covered by the current provisions of the Criminal Code. The Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) has promised an amendment. That was supposed to be introduced last spring before we left for the summer, but it has been delayed until the next session of Parliament.

There is another difficulty with enforcement, Mr. Speaker. Individuals and organizations have made complaints but police response has not been vigorous. The courts still do not understand the problem of pornography, especially the violent aspects of it. Recent decisions have included paltry fines, even in such flagrant case as Red Hot Video in British Columbia.

For broadcasting, there are particular difficulties in enforcement. What do you do if you do not have expensive recording machinery? With print pornography there is a magazine that you can take to the police with your complaint; otherwise, you do not have anything. A tape may be available or it may not. In the case of satellite broadcasting of pornography we cannot even have tapes and that means that redress is extremely limited.

Pornography is a serious problem. The rate of violence against Canadian women is too high and the situation is growing worse. We now have proof that a link exists between violence on the screens and violence in real life. Social workers, psychologists and psychiatrists have been telling us about child abuse cases, and they are becoming increasingly serious. Battered women tell us that their aggressors forced them to imitate pornographic acts. And what does the Federal Government do? The Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) has faith in the CRTC, but the CRTC does not do anything. The Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) has proposed an amendment to the Criminal Code, an amendment which I support indeed, but the Minister is quite prepared to wait until the new session of Parliament to introduce it in the House. No hurry, even though the problem is serious.

What can we do now? Tomorrow, we can take one step. Tomorrow, my Private Member's Bill will come up for debate on second reading, which means we will be debating the principle. My Private Member's Bill, C-675, features a simple amendment to the Broadcasting Act. I propose adding a single sentence to prohibit abusive comment or pictorial representation on any race, religion, creed or sex. The first three criteria are already covered in CRTC regulations, but the fourth—sex—is not. Abuse against ethnic minorities and religious groups is illegal, but abuse against women is legal. Antisemiticism and racism are prohibited, but sexism is acceptable. If the CRTC has refused to bring forth an appropriate amendment to the regulations, then it is up to Parliament to amend the legislation, the Broadcasting Act, and to abolish all forms of abuse on public airwaves.

[English]

The Minister of Communications can show his concern about the pornography issue concretely tomorrow by supporting my Private Members' Bill to amend the Broadcasting Act, and I call upon him to do so. Indeed, I am hoping to get all party support for this Private Members' Bill. It is only a small step but an important one. It would say to the broadcasting world that abuse is not acceptable. With other measures, it could help to stop pornography and help turn the tide. It would give Canadian women some confidence that this Parliament takes the problem of violence against women and children seriously.

[Translation]

Hon. Céline Hervieux-Payette (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to answer this timely question on pornography which has been a subject of growing controversy since early this year as a result of the campaign launched primarily by residents of the Ottawa region and the advent of Pay TV.

[English]

Since then the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) proposed amendments to the Criminal Code, on June 23, to reflect growing concern about cruel, violent or degrading portrayal of individuals in the media. This proposal removes the current need for linking crime or cruelty, violence or degradation with sex in order for the undue exploitation of these matters to be obscene. Video tapes and broadcast material are clearly included in this clause, so this is step number one.

The second step is that we have to state clearly that the CRTC also has to go by the general standard and that child pornography and violent pornography has never been permitted. This Government has set up a task force made up of experts in the field of pornography, that is to say composed of deans of law faculties and various experts in the social sciences. This committee has already started its work this summer, and it is working very closely with all those concerned with this important problem.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that even though we feel this particular subject is of the utmost importance, if we were to take the wrong measures in order to protect women we might create more harm to those we want to protect.

I have been standing very stongly with the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) on this particular issue, but I would like to reassure our citizens that this Government is firmly committed to taking the necessary action, but also in line with the new Constitution of this country under which freedom of expression also has to meet the standards generally accepted by this country.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are quite aware of the problem. This task force will certainly give us more indication as to what steps we should take and we are necessarily going to work very closely with the Hon. Member to study her Bill tomorrow. But I would like to point out that pornography is certainly a delicate matter and we should treat this very delicately in this House.

CULTURAL AFFAIRS—RECOMMENDATION THAT LIBRARIES SHOULD COMPENSATE AUTHORS. (B) REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, several weeks ago I asked the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) whether he was prepared to implement a proposal that authors be paid for the public use of the books they have written which are available in public libraries. My questions arose following a series of cross-country demonstrations organized by the Writers Union of Canada in order to publicize the issue of payment for public use. It was, they felt, one of the only avenues left to them after many years of quietly suffering poverty and neglect.

There are several thousand people in this country, Mr. Speaker, who make their living by writing. Very few of them make a very good living. There are authors like Peter Newman, Pierre Berton and I suppose Margaret Lawrence and Margaret Attwood, to mention a few. However, most authors can only earn a part-time living, with an income of something in the neighbourhood of $2,000 to $3,000 a year, from their writing. Most of them live in poverty. Despite that poverty, they endure and continue to write, contributing to the cultural life of this country.

I put this matter before the House in the form of a question several weeks ago. I referred to payment for public use program which would give authors compensation for the public use of their books through public libraries. This program would be one way of providing a minimum level of support for writers who now earn, as I have already indicated, somewhere between $1,000 and $3,000 a year from their books. It would encourage writers to continue writing and producing Canadian literature, and would, in a small way, support and enhance the development of Canadian culture.

This idea is not new; it is not unique to Canada. There are now various schemes based on this principle in existence in ten other countries. The question has been examined in some considerable detail by a number of very important organizations. It was studied by the Canada Council, which not only approved the idea but also worked out a proposal as to how it could be administered. It was studied by the Applebaum-Hébert Committee which also worked out a proposal somewhat different than that of the Canada Council, but one in which they adopted the principle, the idea.

Indeed, the Minister of Communications endorsed the idea, the principle, in a speech he made to the Writers' Union. Unfortunately, endorsements do not authorize funds. The total amount to implement the plan in the first year was estimated to be just $1 million, a very modest amount by government standards. Yet the Minister has continued to stonewall its implementation.

All that the writers are after is some compensation for the royalties they lose when a library purchases books they have written and then loans them repeatedly to members of the public in order that all can enjoy them. Under this idea, book borrowers would not be penalized, nor would the libraries be required to fund the authors' payments. The revenue would come out of general revenue and at least some of it would go back into the public coffers in the form of income tax.

When I raised this question with the Minister, as I say, a principle which he apparently endorsed in his speech to the Writers' Union, he had two answers. First, he suggested that since libraries come under the jurisdiction of the Provinces he would have to receive the Provinces' approval. I say that that is nonsense. No province would object to a plan for helping authors earn a living if it did not have to pay for it. The proposal is that the Government would pay $1 million a year to help authors earn a somewhat decent living.

The second point the Minister made was that the Canada Council could do it. Of course, it could and it has looked at the problem and worked out a system for doing it. Unfortunately, the Canada Council simply does not have the money. The Minister knows that the Canada Council already has many more demands on its funding than it can meet. Therefore, to suggest that the Canada Council can do it without giving it the authority or money required is simply to put off the implementation of this proposal. In fact, it is saying to the authors that the Government is not prepared to implement this idea which is so essential if Canadian authors are to be able to earn any kind of living.

I would urge the Government to seriously consider the proposal from the writer's union and implement this plan which would require a relatively modest amount of funding.

Mr. Jack Burghardt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), I believe he knows full well that in fact not only the Provinces but municipalities have a great deal to play in this matter of public payment for authors. We are really talking about the use of books in public libraries. The Hon. Member also knows that Provinces have great jurisdiction over public libraries, as do individual municipalities.

Of course, this matter is not only of concern to the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) but to the Government as a whole. The basic answer is yes, the Minister of Communications is in favour of some sort of program that would assist authors to receive financial benefits and payments for the use of their works in a public setting. However, we know that the Provinces have great jurisdiction in this matter.

The Hon. Member raised this question on September 15, at which time the Minister responded that all libraries that would be affected come under provincial jurisdiction. I cannot stress that particular point too strongly because it is a fact.

The Hon. Member also referred to the Applebaum-Hébert Report which is the federal cultural policy review committee. As a Member of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture, he knows full well that the committee is looking at other aspects of the Applebaum-Hébert Report, part of which is this very subject. Therefore, the Minister is waiting to get some response from the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture as well as from the Provinces.

I believe it was a year in May that the Minister met with his provincial counterparts when this subject came up. He asked for a provincial response. We have not received any response to date. Until we get some input from the Provinces and from the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture very little can be done about it.

I can assure the Hon. Member and the House that we in fact are very cognizant of this particular problem and would certainly hope that we would be able to get the co-operation of the Provinces, municipalities and all others concerned to come up with a workable solution to this very pressing problem as it affects Canadian authors.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS—FEDERAL EXAMINATION OF PROVINCIAL LEGISLATION. (B) GRANT TO BRITISH COLUMBIA ORGANIZATION

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, last week I rose in the House to ask a question of the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) relating to the practice of the Government in funding organizations that operate in each of the Provinces. Specifically, I was alerted by the fact that the Government had given grants to two different organizations in British Columbia with the expressed purpose, apparently, to enable those two organizations to demonstrate—using today's language—against that particular Government.

The Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) first raised this question in the House regarding Government funding of organizations in the Province of Quebec first, and now of organizations in British Columbia.

If there is any one thing at which the Canadian people will point as the legacy of this Liberal Government to the country—and I think there are many prime choices—it is the state of anxiety and conflict which exists. The fact is that the Government under the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has caused region to fight against region and different levels of Government to fight against each other. It has caused sectors to fight against other sectors. It seems to me that the Prime Minister has been thriving on a program of divide and conquer.

There is no question that the Government has the ability to do what it has done. It has the financial resources to fund these organizations in each of the Provinces, and it may even have the law on its side, in order for those organizations to fight legislation or programs within those Provinces. The question is not whether the Government has the legal right to do it; not a question of whether the Government can, but a question of whether the Government ought to do so. It is a matter of propriety; whether the Government should use federal tax dollars to fund organizations in any of the ten Provinces in order that those local groups can demonstrate against any of the programs within the Provinces.

The Minister of Justice says in this case it is a matter of human rights programs. Who says? It well may be, but is it the prerogative of the Minister of Justice or the Secretary of State (Mr. Joyal) to decide that possibly human rights will be violated in the Province of British Columbia? Is it the prerogative of the Minister of Justice or the Secretary of State to decide whether human rights or language rights will be proscribed in the Province of Quebec? Are they doing the same thing in the Province of Manitoba? Are they doing that in the Province of Alberta? There are about ten provincial Governments that would be interested to know what are the criteria which allow the federal Government to decide it can spend tax dollars to fight programs within each of the Provinces.

The question is not whether it is lawful or whether it is within the purview of the Government, but is it right that each of the ten Provinces now should have to look over their shoulders when they pass legislation, when they conduct programs, when they institute new programs, to see whether the federal Government is going to run counter to the Provincial program?

It seems to me that if Confederation has matured, and we all believe it had when we debated the Constitution two years ago, to the degree that the Provinces can now make their own decisions, should they not democratically rise and fall on the basis of their own legislation? Is it within the purview of the federal Government to fund organizations to fight provincial Governments? Should the Government do so?

I think the Prime Minister would be the first to say that democratically this Government will rise or fall on the basis of its own programs, and that the electors will decide whether or not this Government should be elected on the basis of how it has administered the affairs of state. If he believes that to be true federally, why should he not believe that to be true provincially? Are there not ten Provinces elected democratically? Are they not also defeated democratically when they violate the trust of their electors?

I would like to have an answer from the Parliamentary Secretary as to the criteria the Government uses to spend our tax dollars to fight provincial programs initiated by democratically elected Governments which can also be democratically defeated? Is it right for the federal Government to use our money to fight against provincial programs? That is what we have a right to know, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to apologize to the Hon. Member opposite in that neither the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice nor the Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State are here today. I will endeavour to comment briefly. I believe a number of points have been made sincerely by the Member opposite.

I want to assure the Hon. Member that it is not the policy of the Government of Canada to fund any group, in the words of the Hon. Member "to fight the provincial Governments." I want to assure him also that it is not our policy either to fund any group to promote policies of any particular provincial Government or political party. Let me refer to the days of the Special Joint Committee of the House of Commons and the Senate on the Constitution of Canada when all Parties sat around the table and discussed the issue of the Charter of Rights for this country. It discussed the many issues involved in human rights in Canada. It should be apparent from that experience that it is the policy of the Government, as it always has been, to promote wherever possible free, open and democratic discussion of what the Charter of Rights means to Canadians and, more important, during the process of evolving those rights, to hear the views of all groups concerned, in particular the views of every minority group. The will of the majority is often heard without any assistance or motions from anybody.

I assure the Hon. Member opposite that this Government, or any government in Canada for that matter, is not interested in funding groups to promote or, in the words of the Hon. Member, to fight legislation of any provincial Government. We are not in the business of asking such organizations what their views may be on any particular legislation of any Province of Canada. We are interested in the promotion of free, open and democratic discussion of the rights of Canadian citizens, particularly those rights which have now been entrenched in the Canadian Constitution.

SMALL BUSINESS

EXPENSE INCURRED DUE TO POSTAL DELAYS

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, the Government often speaks in favour of small business and the desire of the Government to help small business, but it is hard to take those statements seriously when one sees the way Government Departments and agencies function. Everyone knows that for small business to be healthy it has to have a healthy cash flow and a healthy current account balance.

However, when the Post Office itself will take two weeks to deliver a cheque for $10,000, or $20,000, or $30,000, a delivery time that should take two or three days, one must wonder how seriously the Government agencies are in helping the small businessman. It deprives a company of the hard cash that it needs to function, and it adds extra costs in carrying charges for that company since it has to borrow the money that is being held by the Post Office. The question should be asked if business or the Post Office should pay the extra expense that it costs the small business because the Post Office will not deliver.

It seems to me that a company should not have to revert to priority post at the extra expense that entails in order to get the kind of service it should have from first class mail.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADIAN PARTICIPATION IN CONFERENCE ON DISARMAMENT IN EUROPE

Mr. Louis Duclos (Montmorency-Orléans): Madam Speaker, with the international situation deteriorating from day to day, I must say it is very encouraging to see that the Canadian Government did not burn all its bridges, and I am referring to a statement made by the Right Hon. Prime Minister at the United Nations on October 1 of this year, when he said that although NATO would be deploying Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe, Canada would be taking a very active part in the Conference on Disarmament in Europe, to be held in Stockholm next January. Instead of making thundering and hawkish speeches on East-West relations like the official Opposition does, the Prime Minister has preferred to have Canada play a mediating role within the framework of this Conference. I would like to thank the Prime Minister for his wisdom in wanting to keep the lines of communication open between the West and the Soviet block at this difficult time for international relations. This attitude is far more responsible than that taken by the official Opposition, which is fond of rhetoric and does not hesitate to fan the flames of discord by making far-fetched statements about a situation that is threatening the very survival of mankind.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

RECOGNITION OF WORK OF LECH WALESA

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, all Members of the House will be aware that Lech Walesa was today announced as the winner of this year's Nobel Peace Prize.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kilgour: Let me, in the moment available here, give three reasons why I believe all thoughtful Canadians will rejoice in this honour.

First, Walesa has faced, without flinching, the combined force of Poland's Communist Party, its Government, its army, and its official media, on behalf of the rights of Polish working people.

Second, the movement he founded, Solidarity, achieved in the brief period that it was legal an estimated membership of fully 10 million Poles in a work force of approximately 14 million.

Madam Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but I must warn him that he must have a statement on a particular situation. He cannot use this particular time of the House to pay homage to someone, no matter what merit that person might have.

Mr. Kilgour: Madam Speaker, the third point was that Mr. Walesa is an unbreakably honest, intellectually brilliant and thoroughly democratic leader of faith, Christian faith I might add, who has won a permanent place in the pantheon of those men and women who, through the ages, fought and suffered for the rights of their fellow human beings.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

TRIBUTE TO LECH WALESA

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parkdale-High Park): Madam Speaker, yesterday during Question Period, in answer to question posed by the Leader of the Official Opposition regarding the shooting down of the Korean airliner by the Soviet Union, the Prime Minister said that the super powers must try to find some way to stop shouting at each other when the world is teetering on the brink of disaster and atomic war. The Prime Minister was suggesting a peaceful resolution to the tragic Korean airliner incident. Statesmen who seek peaceful resolution as opposed to solutions by battle are prime candidates for the Nobel Peace Prize.

In this same vein I am pleased that the Nobel Peace Committee awarded the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize to Lech Walesa, leader of the Polish Trade Union Solidarnosc.

Thanks to Lech Walesa's peaceful approach in attempting to obtain the right of Polish workers to elect free trade unions, widespread bloodshed in Poland was averted. Demonstrations organized by Lech Walesa were large in numbers but peaceful in approach. Indeed, Lech Walesa was successful in moving Poland away from the brink of disaster. Thus, the choice of Lech Walesa as this year's recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize is encouraging to workers and freedom loving people everywhere. With this decision, the Nobel Peace Committee has given recognition to the crucial importance of the principle of freedom of association, and peace.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

LEVEL OF FUNDING

Mr. Fred King (Okanagan-Similkameen): Madam Speaker, Canadian farmers are deeply upset at the attitude of indifference shown by the federal Government to the urgency of their credit needs. These needs, which should be met by the federal Farm Credit Corporation, are not being met at all.

This House passed amendments to the Farm Credit Corporation Act which would permit it to resume its historic role as the major source of long term farm credit. Despite that, directors of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture have recently noted that:

> It is shockingly clear to farmers that the Minister of Finance is restricting the ability of FCC to borrow anything like sufficient funds to meet today's urgent needs. The Government must be either ignorant of the credit problems the industry faces or unforgiveably indifferent to them. Today, with farm incomes appallingly low, the role of the FCC in meeting the federal Government's obligations in farm credit must be respected and facilitated rather than resisted as the Minister of Finance appears to be doing.

There is simply no long term funding available from the commercial banking system to which this Government abdicated its responsibility. The Government of Canada is to be condemned for its failure to support the Farm Credit Corporation with adequate financing. By so doing it is thwarting the desire of many Canadian farmers to stay on their farms producing foods for Canadians.

SEQUEL TO GIMLI ACCIDENT—DEMOTION OF PILOT

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, I was dismayed, as I am sure were many Members of this House, to learn that Air Canada has decided to discipline Captain Robert Pearson, the pilot who safely landed his crippled Boeing 767 on an airfield near Gimli, in July. He will receive a six months' demotion.

At the time Captain Pearson was praised, and rightly so, for his role in bringing the plane down. His action saved the lives of 61 people aboard, saved the aircraft, and saved Air Canada millions of dollars in potential lawsuits.

I do not think it is right, Madam Speaker, for Air Canada to make scapegoats of its air and ground crews for what is obviously a failure of the Crown corporation to implement proper training and operational procedures for the Boeing 767.

The fact that the crews at both Montreal and Ottawa made the same error when they manually measured the plane's fuel supply shows that Air Canada had not yet introduced the proper procedures for dealing with this kind of situation on the Boeing 767.

Instead of victimizing its staff, Air Canada should take a hard look at its own training and operational procedures for the new Boeing 767. It should abandon its efforts to discipline Captain Pearson and the other workers, and make sure flight and ground crews are properly trained to deal with this aricraft.

GRAIN

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION PROGRAM

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): The objectives of the western grain stabilization plan are commendable. Farm incomes cycle with unpredictable variables, and a plan for stabilization is appreciated.

However, the Minister of Transport's (Mr. Axworthy) announcement yesterday "that no payment is expected this year" from the western grain stabilization plan has been greeted by Prairie farmers with shock and disbelief. Underscored was the view that the mechanics and administration of the plan are insensitive to economic realities and the needs of individual farmers, and that the plan is open to political manipulation. The Prairies are crying out for amendments so as to make a good principle workable.

In this period when farm receipts are equal to those of 1973 but the operating costs have tripled, the fact that the fund will be storing approximately $1 billion by January 1, 1984, mocks and insults our farmers. The intent of their investment has been betrayed.

I and my colleagues call upon the Government to amend the western grain stabilization plan quickly to make it sensitive to the realities of our economy, and to function in concert with the general expectations of the producer investors.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

FUND RAISING BY MR. CROSBIE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, the Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), the Conservative Finance critic, is reported to have a $200,000 deficit from his leadership campaign. Following in the footsteps of that world reknowned feminist, Hugh Hefner, the Member is planning to pay off his debts by holding a little fund raising bash featuring a former "Playboy" Playmate of the Year.

We all know of the Conservative Party's impressive track record on women's issues as exemplified in its caucus where women make up only 3 per cent of its members. I am glad to see that traditional Conservative sensitivity toward women is being upheld by the Hon. Member for St. John's West.

In fact, when questioned by the press as to the role of the playmate he said that she will not be the main course. He said:

> She will be the aperitif.

He also said that he had abandoned the imaginative idea of wrapping his playmate in a Newfoundland flag and auctioning it off. He said:

> Someone would say it was sexist.

He added:

> You've got to be so careful these days not to be sexist.

And finally he said:

> There'll be nothing sexist going on there, at least not in public.

I assume the three women Members in that caucus will pass up the opportunity to be humiliated at the fund raising function and will, instead, mail in their cheques.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. The position of the Farm Credit Corporation as the main lender to the agricultural community has deteriorated to a point where it is being referred to as a lender of last resort. What is the Government doing to ensure that Farm Credit will have enough funding so that it can lend on a regular and long-term basis to provide Canadian farmers with certainty and accessibility to funding on a regular basis?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member should check the legislation by which Farm Credit is bound in its operations. The Crown corporation will be lending this year the most money it has ever lent in its history. It will lend somewhere between $700 million and $800 million. It is the eleventh largest lending institution in Canada. We cannot take private lending institutions off the hook for all the money that farmers want. Private lending institutions have a responsibility. It used to be that 17 per cent of the loans went for refinancing farm operations. This year nearly 60 per cent of all loans we make will be taking over debts which farmers have with private lending institutions.

I would like to have perhaps a large rural bank. Is that what the Hon. Member is suggesting, that we form another Crown corporation in Canada so that we can offer farmers short-term money? I was in British Columbia with a Member from that area this week. We met hundreds of farmers who are in really dire financial straits. But mostly the banks are cutting off their money, are cutting off their operating funds, and are cutting them off the long-term money they had. Is the Hon. Member suggesting that I take over from the banks?

Mr. Lewis: The Minister is on record as saying, "We want more money, we want to move the Corporation back into lending".

REFINANCING OF FARMERS' LOANS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, Farm Credit asked for $600 million in June. The Minister of Finance approved less than half that request, and it is not even all advanced. What advice does the Minister of Agriculture have for a Canadian farmer who is refinancing a bank loan or buying a farm? Should he apply to a bank or to Farm Credit?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, under the Bank Act banks have a responsibility to lend to people who can comply with the rules and regulations of a proper lending authority. The banks have a responsibility to the rural community just as much as we do. This year we will be lending and taking care of nearly 50-some per cent of all long-term mortgages in Canada because banks and other lending institutions are just refusing to give long-term money. Farmers want ten-year or 20-year money. We are offering it to them on ten year or 20 year contracts, if they want, with a renewable feature after ten years. We are probably the best lending institution for long-term money at the present time. If the Hon. Member can convince his Party and his Party Leader that Crown corporations are a good thing and that we should expand upon them, boy, we will go to the races!

Mr. Lewis: The Minister's track record at convincing people speaks for itself. Canadian farmers are not asking for free money. They are not asking for hand-outs. They are not asking for money to be spent on them. What they want is funding through Farm Credit which they will pay back, but they have to get it at reasonable rates and they have to know that they can go and get it, and they do not.

ROLE OF CORPORATION

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, when will the Minister act to persuade the Minister of Finance to take the Farm Credit Corporation out of the role of lender of last resort and put it in the business of lending money to Canadian farmers?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, we have a responsibility that we are fulfilling under the legislation which guides the Farm Credit Corporation. The Hon. Member should read it. In one instance it is stated clearly in that legislation that it is to be a lender of last resort. We are lending to young farmers, start-up farmers, and farmers who are in dire need. He says that we did not get any more money. We promised that we would only put $200 million more into it. This year we will put nearly $300 million more into the fund.

REQUEST FOR ADDITIONAL FUNDING

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. He talked about creating a new Crown corporation. We do not need a new Crown corporation. We need the Minister to support the Farm Credit Corporation which is there, and is a very good credit corporation. That is all we need.

I had an opportunity to question the Minister on September 12. I asked him if he had seen fit to approach the Minister of Finance on behalf of the Farm Credit Corporation for additional funding. I will ask him the same question again. Has he approached the Minister of Finance on behalf of FCC to see that the Corporation has additional funds to meet the requests of the farm community today?

• (1420)

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, this Member, who says that he represents the great free enterprise world, is asking me to expand a Crown corporation. I sat in this House last week and listened to his Party downgrade Crown corporations one after another, speaker after speaker, yet today they seem to have a change of heart. They want this Crown corporation expanded to be the largest lending institution in Canada. If we took over all the responsibility from the private lending institutions for rural lending, we would be the largest lending institution in Canada. In reply to the Hon. Member, yes, I have made representations to the Minister of Finance about the needs of the farmers of this nation.

AGRI-BOND CONCEPT

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, if we have ever had a windbag, do-nothing Minister of Agriculture that—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member can say that in the course of debate, but we are in Question Period and he should go straight to his question.

Mr. Mayer: As a result of the Minister's cap-in-hand visit to the Minister of Finance, can we expect some innovative financing through the Farm Credit Corporation, such as the agri-bond concept?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to a bag of wind. The House rules would not allow me to say what kind of a bag I think he is.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Whelan: If and when he ever has the opportunity to serve as Minister of Agriculture, and the nation should beware of that, let him have so many good things as are said about the present Minister of Agriculture, and have been said by many people in this country.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Whelan: The agri-bond concept was not thought of by the Hon. Member, that's for sure. It is one that has been considered by many farm leaders in Canada for a long time.

THE CHARTER OF RIGHTS

VOLUME OF SECURITY CHECKS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General. Canada's new Charter of Rights refers explicitly to the "liberty" and "security of the person", concepts which, according to the United States Charter of Rights, which has been around for 200 years, have been interpreted correctly to mean freedom from intimidation, among other things. Canada's Human Rights Commissioner revealed yesterday the extraordinary fact that some 75,000 Canadians who have had some kind of dealing with or working for the federal Government and who have had security checks done on them. How can the Government of Canada justify this extraordinary situation? Why all these incursions into the privacy and security of Canadians?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, this very high figure is, of course, known to the Government. It is a matter of concern to the Government as well. I can tell the House that between two and one-half and three years ago I cut out a very large number of positions in the Government of Canada from requiring security clearance so that at present security clearances are limited to those positions, which was not the case in the past, where actual access to classified documents takes place.

I would like the Hon. Member to know that a paper is being worked on in my Ministry which I will be bringing to Cabinet, to provide for a more rational system of classification of documents. I confidently expect that that will result in a considerable reduction in the number of security clearances that are necessary in the course of a year. Most important, I remind the Hon. Member that his Party has hidden behind shrill rhetoric until today about the important Bill C-157 which will establish a security agency, and which will also establish a right of review for the first time for people who are denied security clearance. This would be a good day for the NDP to tell the House and the country about the things in that Bill and that they are prepared to support the steps that are undeniably an advance in the rights and respect of privacy of Canadians. Let us get on with that Bill.

REASONS FOR SECURITY CHECKS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the Minister has brought up no fewer than two red herrings in his answer. First he said he took corrective measures two or three years ago. The figures that Mr. Fairweather produced yesterday were from last year. The corrective measures that the Minister took two or three years ago were totally inadequate.

The second point that Mr. Fairweather makes is that, whatever new provisions are in the security Bill to provide rights for Canadians who are subjected to security checks, too many security checks are being made. The Minister did not deal with that.

I would like to ask him specifically about two kinds of checks that are now being carried out. One pertains to employees working for the Human Rights Commission itself. Mr. Fairweather has indicated that no such security checks are required. I ask the Minister why those employees are subjected to security checks. Second, in terms of federal-provincial relations, why is it that provincial Government employees involved in such relations are not subjected to the security checks to which federal Government employees are subjected? Why do these incursions exist?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, it was actually provincial classifications that I excluded in the action I took sometime between two and a half and three years ago. Before those measures, security clearances were being conducted by the RCMP on people who worked for provincial Governments. That is no longer being done, for the simple reason that those employees do not have access to classified material.

Within the Human Rights Commission there are some employees who, as I understand it, do have access to classified material, but I would be very glad to discuss that situation and look into it in more detail, and hear the Commissioner's views about the amount of classification that should exist in that agency.

I do agree with the Hon. Member that too many security clearance checks are occurrring. I have explained what I have done in the past. I am telling the House that work is being done right now on an improved system of classification that I confidently believe will result in a great reduction in the number of Canadians who are subjected to security clearance checks in order to work for the Government.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, the complacent tone of the Minister is not encouraging. If 75,000 people were investigated last year, the steps he has taken in the past are clearly inadequate.

INVASION OF PRIVACY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I would ask the Minister if he does not realize that, in a society that really respects the individual, any incursion by the state on that individual's privacy must be justified. If he accepts that as a criterion, will he tell the House today what criteria are used by the Government for the broad range of investigations that are occurring? Does the Government not realize that Canadians do not want a society in which the Government holds files on everyone?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, I do not think that we need a lecture from Members of the NDP on that subject.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Kaplan: The Government has indicated its respect for rights of privacy and civil liberties for Canadian people by bringing forward the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Access to Information law, and by the program I have just described which will reduce the number of jobs that require security clearance. I have told the Hon. Member that security clearances are now required only for an employee who has access to classified material. Too much material is being classified so we are now in the process of developing a criterion of procedure which will prevent an excessive number of government documents from being classified. I think the result of that will be that the clearance requirement will be removed from a great number of positions.

Finally, I respect as much as does the Hon. Member the privacy and civil liberties of the individual. I believe that the project that is underway will mean progress, but I think that the main progress we could achieve together is the passage of Bill C-157 containing, as it does, the first provision in the history of Canada to give an individual who is denied a security clearance, first, the information that he was denied that clearance, which does not happen today, and, second, a right of appeal and review by independent outsiders.

REVIEW OF SECURITY REGULATIONS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Solicitor General. There is some concern with the criteria now used by the Government with respect to who will be subjected to security checks. Mr. Robert Bryce has indicated that the reason such a large number of security checks have occurred is that the Government views the protection of federal-provincial negotiations as being paramount. I should like to ask the Solicitor General if he can give us a time when the internal review of this matter will be completed. This is important, so that when people are dealing with the Government they will know that they do not automatically need a security clearance. They should also know that the story that is current at the present time that even the tissue in the washrooms is marked confidential, is not the case under this Government.

● (1430)

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, I can give that assurance to the Hon. Member. There are only top secret, secret, and confidential classifications. The criteria for applying those designations are not as tight as I think they should be.

We are working on a project, but I cannot tell the House when it will be completed; however, neither can I tell the House when Bill C-157 will be passed. I hope that with some co-operation we will be able to achieve progress in protecting the rights of Canadians by having the whole range of safeguards that the Bill contains, as well as, for the first time, a procedure for complaining if an individual is denied a security clearance.

TOURISM

REQUEST FOR TAX CHANGES TO ASSIST INDUSTRY

Mr. Otto Jelinek (Halton): Madam Speaker, I should like to address my question to the Minister who is responsible for tourism. In a speech he made in Toronto last Monday, the Minister finally followed some of the initiatives of the Conservative Party, in at least recognizing the importance of tourism in this country. I compliment him for that.

Unfortunately the Minister did not address himself to the major problem facing tourism in Canada, namely, the excessive taxation on lodging, food, gas and liquor, which is pricing the industry out of business. Can the Minister tell us why he has not dealt with this most important of issues? When does he intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that he make the necessary tax changes in this respect?

Hon. David Smith (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Madam Speaker, the subject of the cost competitiveness of Canada vis-à-vis the United States in terms of the North American tourist dollar was the subject matter of a federal-provincial conference held in September at the federal initiative. That matter was put on the agenda by the federal Government, and I had the opportunity of discussing that issue with my provincial counterparts. We discussed a wide range of approaches.

I should point out to the Hon. Member that the main problem grows from provincial taxes, so perhaps he could speak to some of the Conservative Premiers in this country.

Mr. Jelinek: Madam Speaker, notwithstanding that answer, the fact is that the tourist industry in Canada suffered a $1.7 billion deficit and a loss of 70,000 jobs in the first six months of this year.

PROMOTION OF CANADIAN TRAVEL ABROAD

Mr. Otto Jelinek (Halton): Madam Speaker, can the Minister tell the House if he agrees with the External Affairs press release which promotes Canadian travel abroads and which states, in part, that travel beyond the North American continent is again becoming attractive to an increasing number of Canadians, and information booklets designed to assist Canadians travelling abroad will be distributed to members of the public? Does the Minister agree that the Department of External Affairs should promote Canadian travel abroad, or does he believe it is counterproductive to the efforts of the industry trying to bring tourism to Canada?

Hon. David Smith (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Madam Speaker, we happen to live in a free country. If Canadians want to travel abroad I think it is only reasonable that the Department of External Affairs would provide them with good advice. The Government has given a lot of emphasis to promoting tourism to Canada. Last year there was a television campaign in Great Britain, and a radio campaign in the United States. On Monday of this week I announced an incremental increase in funding of $7.5 million, $3.3 million of which will be spent in Canada to promote Canadian vacation travel in Canada. There will be a television campaign entitled "Canada. Oh, what a country" which will take place this winter. There will be more radio ads in the States, and another $1 million spent in Great Britain and other countries. We are putting the emphasis where it should be, namely on getting Canadians to travel in Canada and inviting folks from abroad to visit us.

ADMISSION OF WORKERS TO SKILL-TRAINING PROGRAMS

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, I direct my question to the Minister for Employment and Immigration. Will the Minister confirm that his Department no longer sponsors those adult Canadians with less than a functional grade seven into skill-training programs, even though the National Training Act states that the object is to increase the employment potential of individual workers without regard to education? While the Minister is on his feet, will he confirm that this was done after an evaluation of Canada Manpower training programs confirmed that academic upgrading at lower levels rarely led to further skills training or employment? Would he also tell us who made the recommendations and who did the evaluation?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I think we have one question and two supplementary questions here. As I have already said to the Hon. Member in the House, it has been relatively long-standing policy that training at the educational levels he has described is primarily the responsibility of the Provinces. I believe it is also the case that the Provinces, generally, share that view. This position goes back a considerable number of years and it flowed from recommendations made by the Senate committee which looked into the matter several years ago.

Mr. Shields: Madam Speaker, to try to push on to the Provinces the responsibility that the Minister has to treat all adult Canadians in an equal manner, is a very poor excuse indeed.

PLIGHT OF THE FUNCTIONALLY ILLITERATE

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, does the Minister not realize that one million adult Canadians have sought job-training programs but have been barred from those programs? Does he not realize that the problem is not the one million people with less than a functional grade seven education—the problem is getting an insensitive Government to act on their behalf?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I think I am more aware of the problems at those levels in society than the hon. gentleman. I am aware, but I am not sure that he is, of recent reports which have indicated very serious problems with literacy on the part of Canadians, and the difficulty of many Canadians in meeting the grade six or grade seven educational standard.

It seems to me that what the Hon. Member is suggesting is that we try to pre-empt the role of provincial Governments, which is a legitimate role, in responding to this problem. I do not know why he is counselling that we take initiatives which would lead to that result.

Last week I was discussing this problem with the Minister from Ontario. In discussions with the Provinces we seek to respond to that kind of problem. I think it would be helpful if the Hon. Member found out a little more about it before he began to blather in the House.

TRADE

MANUFACTURERS' SHARE OF DOMESTIC MARKET

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Products from other countries occupied only 19 per cent of the Canadian market in 1968, the year the Prime Minister took office, but occupy 31 per cent of our market today. This shows clearly where the jobs have gone. Will the Prime Minister take the first opportunity on motions to outline to the House what policies his Government intends to introduce to stop this massive erosion of the Canadian market for Canadian products, which has cost Canadian workers hundreds of thousands of jobs in the last 15 years, and is going on at an unabated pace today?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is seeking an occasion to express his views. Rather than do it on motions, where he would not have a chance to reply because of his backward position in his Party, I would suggest that perhaps it could be done on the debate on the Government Re-organization Act where we could deal with precisely the re-organization of the Department of External Affairs, giving greater importance to external trade. That might be an occasion where he could get the floor and discuss this matter.

Mr. Hees: Madam Speaker, the Right Hon. Prime Minister has taken a very circuitous route to explain to the House that he has no idea what the answer to this very important question is, and has no intention of doing anything about it although it is one of the most important reasons why the country has nearly two million unemployed people today.

REQUEST FOR POLICIES TO ASSIST MANUFACTURERS

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, would the Prime Minister take this seriously, stop trying to duck this very important issue, and introduce policies that would make it possible for Canadian producers to win back the very large proportion of their own market which they lost during his prime ministership? I would remind him that a blueprint for doing just that has been presented to him on the floor of this House on several recent occasions.

● (1440)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, this is known as the rhetorical question. The Hon. Member is prepared to discuss his views on policy. We are discussing ours. As a matter of fact I have just had lunch with Canadian businessmen who are doing with the Chinese markets, precisely what the Hon. Member suggests they should be doing. This is something which is a matter for debate. If the Hon. Member has any ideas, apart from questions, he could express these ideas in a debate to which I welcome him. However, as usual, the Hon. Member, like his party, is better at asking questions than giving answers.

Mr. Hees: Madam Speaker, I have presented various programs to the Prime Minister in this House on several occasions and he has taken no action on them at all.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

PROPOSAL TO ESTABLISH HARBOUR AT STOKES POINT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. I am sure he is aware that in 1978 the Government of Canada accepted the recommendations of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, which were supported at that time by the National Energy Board, that the area on the North Slope in the Yukon be withdrawn from development for the purpose, particularly, of a national wildlife park and conservation area. Would the Minister reconfirm the July 21 promise he made at Rankin Inlet, that should he proceed and accept the Gulf application for Stokes or King Point, he will return to Cabinet and obtain an Order in Council for that purpose.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, I believe it would be premature to give the Hon. Member an assurance of that kind simply because —and I believe he would be aware of this — there is a project review group on the North Slope, now in the midst of deliberations. It has agreed, hopefully, to give me its recommendations in about a week from now, certainly by October 17. It is looking at the whole question of Stokes Point alternatives. I believe it is considering other elements which could possibly form some type of package arrangement in terms of national wilderness parks.

I believe the Hon. Member would certainly agree that I should await the recommendations of that group. It consists of all the varied interests, including representatives from COPE and the native interests. I am sure the Hon. Member will agree that we should wait and see what that group will come up with before making any further decisions on this matter.

POSITION OF YUKON GOVERNMENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, the people of Canada trusted in the recommendations of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, on the very project about which the Minister is talking. Given that one half of the representatives on the North Slope project review group were appointed by the Yukon Territorial Government, I wonder if the Minister would tell this House whether or not, on behalf of the Government of Canada, he supports the statements made to the Leader of the Yukon Government, Mr. Pearson, from the Deputy Minister of Economic Development, and I quote:

—without economic growth the North could become a large "reservation" with our native population comprising the majority of the population.

... YTG must do everything possible to ensure that some of the Beaufort Sea hydrocarbon action is centred in Yukon, e.g. Stokes or King Point.

It is pretty clear, Madam Speaker, that the position of the Yukon Government is blatantly racist—

Madam Speaker: Order.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, if the comments set out in that letter from Mr. Lang to Mr. Pearson, as read by the Hon. Member, are correct, I also find them objectionable. May I also say that a letter from a Minister to his Leader does not necessarily represent Government policy. I believe that is the situation there. Let us see what are the recommendations of the task force. The position of the Government of the Yukon will be presented to that task force. Presumably it will be the position of the Yukon Government, not the personal, rather objectionable views of Mr. Lang.

CRIMINAL CODE

HIGHWAY FATALITIES—NEED FOR LEGISLATIVE MEASURES

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York-Sunbury): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. In view of the recent OECD report which shows Canada has the second highest rate of highway fatalities in the world, will the Minister tell the House if he plans to introduce any new programs or legislation designed to help prevent or eliminate this serious situation? Where delay is measured in terms of human lives, when will the Minister act?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question, and for his notice of the question. This is indeed a matter of great concern and common concern, I believe, to Hon. Members on all sides of the House. I have tried to be open with the public as to where we are on this. I can say that I have now made my decision with my Department on what to recommend to the Government. We will be making recommendations. We would hope they would be in the omnibus Criminal Code Bill which we will be able to bring forward as soon as the Hon. Members opposite will allow us to get on to the next session.

REQUEST FOR EARLY ACTION

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York-Sunbury): Madam Speaker, I am sure the Minister of Justice realizes—although some of his colleagues do not—that the Government does have carriage of the business in the House and is in complete charge of the agenda. I realize that the Minister has a review of the Criminal Code under way. However, this section deals with human lives. I cannot think of anything more important. I would like to suggest to the Minister that that section should be brought out and legislation introduced immediately, particularly when the Minister tells the House that he has taken a decision. How many Canadians have to die on their highways before the Minister will act?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, this legislation could be introduced in the next week or two or three, depending on the co-operation of Hon. Members opposite. We are only too anxious on this side of the House to start the new session. However, Madam Speaker, I would not want Hon. Members or the public to be under a misapprehension that the only way of dealing with this problem is through legislation. I agree that changes to legislation are necessary, but public education and much stricter enforcement are at least equally important in dealing with this very serious public problem.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT IN ATLANTIC REGION

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. In response to a recent question the Minister said that, of course, the reduction of unemployment is a major priority of the Government. The construction industry in New Brunswick is experiencing a 76 per cent unemployment rate. By December, work at the Saint John Shipyard will have dried up with the result that 400 or 500 persons will be added to the soup lines. Unemployment in the Miramichi is between 40 per cent and 50 per cent, with another 3,500 to be added to that figure. This is reflective of the entire situation in the Atlantic region. Where is this policy of reducing unemployment in Atlantic Canada? It certainly is not there. What is the Minister going to do about it?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the next time I am Acting Prime Minister I will answer that question.

EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT DEBT

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, I will address my next question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. I am sure the people in Atlantic Canada will take notice of the answer of the Acting Deputy Prime Minister.

I would ask the Minister to address himself to the question I have already asked. In addition to that, would the Minister tell the House how a Government, which has built up a deficit of $31 billion, with an annual price tag of $17 billion to $18 billion, with only pittance to show for it in Atlantic Canada, can possibly say to the desperate unemployed in that region that it is trying to do something about unemployment?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I could go back over a long litany of answers pointing out to the Hon. Member that in fact there has been considerable job creation in Canada. The record since last November is one which we on this side of the House are glad to see in terms of increasing employment, and we are optimistic that the recovery of the economy will continue. About three or four weeks ago I did send to the Hon. Member a complete description of the variety of programs which we have available to help his constituents. I would hope the Hon. Member would look through that material and come forward with projects which he could suggest to be utilized under those arrangements.

MULTICULTURALISM

REQUEST FOR SEPARATE MINISTRY

Mr. Laverne Lewycky (Dauphin-Swan River): Madam Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. On April 21, 1980, on behalf of various multicultural groups, and in support of the appeal by the National Congress of Italian Canadians, under Standing Order 43 I called upon the Government to create a full Ministry of Multiculturalism. More recently, many multicultural groups have indicated that the present multiculturalism directorate no longer seems to be capable of handling the workload. Since we have groups such as the National Coalition of Blacks in Canada and other multicultural groups which are calling for a full Ministry of Multiculturalism, would the Prime Minister tell the House what his intentions are concerning the creation of a full Ministry of Multiculturalism?

● (1450)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I feel the present arrangement with the present Minister is the ideal arrangement. If we had a full Ministry it would cause problems in the machinery of government, because obviously people who belong to multicultural groups come under different Departments and they can be served by different Departments. There is a specific interest in multiculturalism which is best discharged, in our view, by having a Minister of State for Multiculturalism.

Mr. Lewycky: Madam Speaker, I am a bit disappointed in the response of the Prime Minister bacause it seems to indicate a kind of backtracking from the commitment that he made in 1971 with his policy statement to the House.

BUDGET OF DIRECTORATE

Mr. Laverne Lewycky (Dauphin-Swan River): My supplementary question is addressed to the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. The Government's budget for 1983-84 works out to something like sixty-six cents—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member must ask a question. His preambles are much too long.

Mr. Lewycky: Madam Speaker, going directly to the question, could the Minister indicate what type of pressure he is exerting on other members of Cabinet to see that multiculturalism in Canada is more of a way of life rather than a mere Government policy to which they only devote 66 cents per capita for the population of Canada?

Hon. D. M. Collenette (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Madam Speaker, first, the Government has increased the budget of the multiculturalism directorate, in fact, has doubled it, for the period of the last year and the next four years. Therefore I think that is quite a commitment. It would take too long here to catalogue all the various programs that have been put in place by the Government of Canada to enhance the multicultural dynamic of the country. I would be glad to give the Hon. Member information at a later date.

GRAIN

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. It follows on the heels of his answer of yesterday when he said, "We do not expect a payout with respect to the western grain stabilization plan". Does the Minister find any fault with the present administration or regulation of the plan? Specifically, is he trying to cause a greater sensitivity of the plan toward economic conditions that currently exist, and the needs of individual farmers?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, as I pointed out in my answer yesterday, the grain stabilization payment is regulated by the legislation. It must be adjusted over a five-year average. That is very clearly part of the rules which the Hon. Member, himself, admitted in his earlier statement would have to be amended by the House. As I pointed out, according to the formula that is not a matter of policy but a matter of requirement, the average this year, or so it appears, will be above the five-year average.

I did indicate that that matter would be under review at the end of October, which is the normal time. If the Hon. Member has any specific complaint or judgment about the administration, I would be glad to receive it on behalf of the Minister of State responsible for the Wheat Board.

FIVE-YEAR AVERAGING PRINCIPLE

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, I think the Minister has touched on the very point that I wished to ask him about. We in this House are all aware that we are bound by the legislation and a five-year average. I want to put the question to him again, though. Does he find any fault with the concept of the five-year average, bearing in mind the fact that a 10 per cent inflation rate for five years would in fact yield a 50 per cent misrepresentation from payments for the farmers? Therefore, can I have the Minister's view as to whether or not he finds that five-year averaging at fault, and is he agreeable to accepting an amendment that would shorten that period of time?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I would be very pleased to have more detailed representations from the Hon. Member concerning any changes that he would want to see. I think it is a matter that would have to be more carefully assessed than one is given time to do during Question Period.

INCREASE IN PREMIUMS—REQUEST FOR CHANGE IN PAYOUT FORMULA

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Transport. If, in his view and that of most producers, the formula that establishes the payout is at fault, considering that the payment for the insurance program started at $500 per year, was raised $900 per year, and is now at $1,200 per year, if the premiums can be changed would the Minister agree that he could change the formula to reflect the realities of 1983, and trigger a payout at this time?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think we are all aware of the changing conditions in the grain market. It is for that reason that a review is being undertaken of the operation and application of the grain stabilization program. But I do not think one can pick out one ingredient and isolate it as being a cause or a factor. I think it must be reviewed over all. That review is under way and should be completed very soon. As I said, if Hon. Members of the Opposition would like to make further representations, I would certainly be very pleased to receive them.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS

PROPOSED TUNNEL BETWEEN WEST BLOCK AND CONFEDERATION BUILDING

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. Public Works Canada completed a study into building a pedestrian tunnel from the West Block to the Confederation Building to replace the present bus service. Does the Government plan to proceed with the building of the tunnel?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I have not seen a final report. Obviously I will want to find out what it contains before I answer the Hon. Member.

POSSIBLE SAVINGS ON BUS SERVICE

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, Public Works Canada also conducted a cost ratio study which showed that millions of dollars would be saved with the building of a tunnel to replace the bus service. Would the Minister also have an update on the cost ratio savings and inform me and the House, as soon as possible, if the Government plans to proceed with the tunnel?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Obviously, Madam Speaker, if this were considered seriously, substantially, those questions would have to be examined.

ACCIDENT AT GIMLI—REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, we have just learned that five staff members of Air Canada have been severely reprimanded, some of them suspended, some of them demoted, and other things done to others. In light of the fact that the airline, Air Canada, was just praised for its service, and in view of the fact that the pilot of the airplaine, through his miraculous ability to land the plane as a glider pilot, saved the lives of 69 people—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Domm: —would the Minister, to avoid the appearance of a cover up—because the chairman of that investigation committee said, "You shouldn't have a bastard bunch of metric airplanes mixed in with the whole fleet"—would the Minister order a public inquiry into that Air Canada incident at Gimli, Manitoba?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, such an investigation is already under way. I have already indicated to the House that results will be made known in a period of two or three weeks, at which time we would be able to provide a fuller assessment of what did take place in the Gimli air incident.

PASSAGE OF LEGISLATION

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also directed to the same Minister. The last time, on September 15, that I asked that question here in the House, the Minister responded that if the Members of the Opposition would speed up the removal from committee of Bill C-163, we could have a public inquiry. We did speed it up. We removed the Bill from Committee, and the Government is dragging its feet in an effort to cover up Air Canada in the Gimli disaster by not having a public inquiry and by not bringing the Bill of the House of Commons for final approval, agreement from all Parties, and a public inquiry, to get around this reprimand of five employees of Air Canada, in an effort to cover up a bad administrative story.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, just let me remind the Hon. Member that the Government does have legislation that is presently before the House. As soon as the Opposition is prepared to pass it, we will be in a position to bring forward the aviation safety Bill.

Mr. Domm: You haven't brought it before the House.

QUEBEC-OTTAWA JOB-CREATION PROGRAMS

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. If my information is correct, it seems the Minister met with his Quebec counterpart very recently to discuss Quebec-Ottawa job creation programs. Could the Minister inform the House today how negotiations have progressed and whether an agreement can be expected shortly that would be in the best interests of both parties?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member suggested, I met my Quebec counterpart, Mr. Léonard, last night, to start discussions on how both Governments could proceed so that municipalities would receive funds designated for employment in the Province of Quebec. I can say that last night's meeting was very general and, I feel, fairly positive, and that during these talks, officials will continue to demonstrate their good will and common sense and that a way will be found to respect the jurisdiction of the provincial government and also the right of the Government of Canada to treat its citizens in Quebec as it does Canadian citizens in other provinces.

PETITIONS

TABLING OF REPORTS OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of one, presented by Hon. Members on October 4, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form. The petition presented by the Hon. Member for Mackenzie (Mr. Korchinski) does not meet the requirements of the Standing Order as to form.

Although the petition by residents of the United States, presented by the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish) is correct as to form, I must note that it cannot be received by the House on the grounds that are cited in Citation 688(1) of Beauchesne's Sixth Edition which states:

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

NOTICE OF RESOLUTION ON FRENCH LANGUAGE RIGHTS IN MANITOBA

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, there has been consultation among the representatives of the different Parties on a very important subject. I suggest that you seek unanimous consent of the House to deal with the following House order once I have finished reading the House order so that we will be able to adopt it without debate today and are able to proceed accordingly. Therefore, the House order is the following:

That at 3 p.m. on Thursday, October 6, 1983, any business before the House shall be interrupted and a Minister of the Crown shall propose the following motion:

Whereas a fundamental purpose of the Constitution of Canada is to protect the basic rights of all Canadians, including Aboriginal peoples, English-speaking and French-speaking minorities, religious, ethnic and other minority groups;

Whereas the Constitution contains provisions respecting the status and use of the English and French languages in Canada;

Whereas the Manitoba Act, 1870 was enacted by the Parliament of Canada to establish the province of Manitoba and is part of the Constitution;

Whereas in 1870 Parliament provided special protection for the use of the English and French languages in Manitoba under section 23 of that Act;

Whereas the Supreme Court of Canada, on December 13, 1979, reaffirmed this constitutional protection under section 23 of the Manitoba Act, 1870;

Whereas the Constitution is the supreme law of Canada and is binding upon Parliament and the Legislatures of all provinces;

Whereas it is in the national interest that the language rights of the English-speaking and French-speaking minorities in Canada be respected and protected in a spirit of tolerance and civility, amity and generosity;

Whereas an agreement was reached on May 16, 1983 by the Government of Canada and the Government of Manitoba, with the participation of the Société Franco-Manitobaine, to modify the Manitoba Act, 1870, so that the Government and Legislative Assembly of Manitoba can fulfill effectively their constitutional obligations under section 23 of that Act;

Whereas it is in the national interest to support continued efforts by the Government and Legislative Assembly of Manitoba to fulfil effectively their constitutional obligations and protect the rights of the French-speaking minority of the province;

(1) the House endorses, on behalf of all Canadians, the essence of the agreement reached by the Government of Canada and the Government of Manitoba, with the participation of the Société Franco-Manitobaine, on May 16, 1983, to modify the Manitoba Act, 1870;

(2) the House invites the Government and Legislative Assembly of Manitoba to take action as expeditiously as possible in order to fulfil their constitutional obligations and protect effectively the rights of the French-speaking minority of the province.

[English]

Provided that after one spokesman from each Party in the House has spoken, the said Motion shall be deemed to have been adopted.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, it is quite evident that the Government House Leader (Mr. Pinard) did not provide the translation services with a verbatim copy of the resolution, for as I listened to the translation, it departed significantly from the text of the resolution which the Government House Leader was good enough to provide to me when he sought my consent.

All that he has to do is to assure me that the copy he provided to me is the actual text of what he read in French today and I would be happy, on behalf of my Party, to provide our unanimous consent to this House order.

Mr. Pinard: Yes, Madam Speaker, I am pleased to confirm to the Hon. House Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) that what I read in French is what I have shown in both French and English.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, the concerns raised by the House Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) were indeed the same concerns that I had. I am pleased to hear the House Leader (Mr. Pinard) indicate that the text which we have had an opportunity to peruse and approve is in fact the text that will appear in Hansard. We are very pleased to give our consent.

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East): Madam Speaker, I have been consulted on this matter by the Government House Leader and he has provided me with a copy of the resolution.

I have categorically stated my views on this very important matter in my speech on the Constitution on March 10, 1981, and again under Standing Order 21 on May 26, 1983, both of which are recorded in Hansard. I wholeheartedly give my consent to the resolution that is presented to the House today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Pinard) agreed to.

PETITIONS

BROADCASTING ACT—AMENDMENT RESPECTING PORNOGRAPHY

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I have four petitions today which are basically on the topic. One is submitted by Mrs. Violet Drabble from Speers, another from Mrs. Roy E. Kieper from Radisson and another from Jessie and Bruce Smith from Battleford. They call upon the House to bring about a resolution regarding what they and many Canadians see as a problem that of pornography being degrading to women, children and men alike. The undersigned, your petitioners, ask that this Parliament demonstrate its opposition to the degradation of women by enacting an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act. This was introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) on March 8, 1983 which will be debated in the House this afternoon.

● (1510)

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, I have a large number of petitions which I would like to present as a group. Some come from my own riding of Broadview-Greenwood. They are all in support of my Private Members' Bill to be discussed this afternoon, Bill C-675. Some are from other parts of Toronto, including the riding of St. Paul's and some north Toronto ridings. There is a large number from Kootenay West from the towns of Castlegar; Glade; Trail; Riondel; Proctor; Fernie; Rossland; Crawford Bay; Argenta; Nelson; Salmo; Burton; Winlan; Fruitvale and Nakusp. Also there is a petition from the board of directors and regional representatives of Media-Watch.

I would like to thank them all, and indeed the many hundreds of people who have sent in petitions in support of this Bill.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Madam Speaker, I have a number of petitions touching on the same subject as the Private Members' Bill which will be introduced today by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). These petitions come out of an information meeting held by the women's movement in Winnipeg for the general public, and they call upon Parliament to act to stop the abuse consisting of pictorial representations that affect women in this country.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from residents of Spadina, Ontario, on the matter to be debated this afternoon, namely an Act to oppose the denigration of women by amending the Broadcast Act as introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) on March 8, 1983, and as in duty bound your petitioners ever pray.

[Text]

EMPLOYER PENSION PLAN CONTRIBUTIONS

Question No. 4,880—Mr. Gauthier:

1. What is the method of determining employer pension plan contributions for employees of Departments?

2. What is the method of determining employer pension plan contributions for employees of Crown corporations who are covered by the Public Service Superannuation Account (PSSA)?

3. What was the estimated percentage of payroll employer pension plan contributions made by (a) Departments (b) Crown corporations who are covered by the PSSA for the fiscal year 1982-83 and each of the preceding five fiscal years?

4. What is the estimated additional amount in employer pension plan contributions that PSSA Crown corporations would have been required to make in the fiscal year 1982-83 and each of the preceding five fiscal years if their pension plan contributions had been determined in the same manner as those of Departments?

Mr. Peter Lang (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): 1. Under the legislation governing the Public Service Pension Plan, the Government as an employer, each year:

(a) Matches the departmental employee contributions made to the Public Service Superannuation Account in the previous year,

(b) Matches the departmental employee contributions to the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Account in the current year,

(c) Pays the net cost of amortizing the actuarial credits (e.g. for annual salary increases) made to the Public Service Superannuation Account,

(d) Pays the cost of any indexing payments made to retired employees in excess of pensioner credits to the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Account.

The Total of the costs is divided by the total of the salaries and wages of departments to determine a uniform percentage of payroll that each department pays as pension contributions in respect of its employees.

2. Public Service Corporations match the current contributions paid by their employees to the Public Service Superannuation Account and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Account.

	(a) Departments	(b) Public Service Corporation

Mr. Peter Lang (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned:

1. Yes.

(a) The Machinery and Equipment Advisory Board is comprised of a Chairman and the Deputy Ministers of Industry, Trade and Commerce/Regional Economic Expansion, Finance and National Revenue. Deputy Ministers are represented at these meetings by officials from their respective departments.

(b) (i) The members of the Board or the officials who represent their Deputy Ministers at Board meetings are required to have a broad understanding of their representative department's responsibilities in terms of commercial policy, tariff administration and knowledge of the machinery sector of the Canadian Economy.

(ii) Deputy Ministers are ex officio members of the Board.

(c) Neither the Chairman, the members of the Board nor officials who replace Board members receive any remuneration for exercising their responsibilities to the Board.

(d) The Machinery and Equipment Advisory Board's administrative requirements are provided by indeterminate employees of Industry, Trade and Commerce using existing accommodation and resources.

2. (a) The Board was established on the recommendation of the Minister of Industry, pursuant to section 15 of the Department of Industry Act (P.C. 1967-2301). (b) See 2 (a) above.

(c) The Board generally meets weekly, although there are no specific requirements on how often it must meet.

(d) The Board published an annual report in 1982-83 and provided recommendations concerning approximately 17,000 duty remission applications.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, I note that the number that has been called and the item set down for the first item of business bears a serial number of about 600. May I respectfully raise again the objections that I have put before, that late comers on the list are getting debating time, whereas there are some Private Members' Bills that have been on the Order Paper, quite as important to the Members who are the sponsors, since 1980.

Why is it that an official, to whom apparently this authority has been delegated to select items, should do so? That is a matter for the Table officers, and there was an order of precedents that was set. I am not aware that there has been any agreement by the House to vary the procedure. Why is it that we have the Johnny-come-latelies coming in now?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I do not think it is appropriate for the Chair to comment too extensively on that subject. I might indicate to the Hon. Member very briefly that my understanding is that Private Members' Bills come forward on the basis of agreement and availability of the private Member. I might also indicate that recent information from the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization that the handling of Private Members' Bills will be shifted from its present system to a system which responds to the Deputy Speaker and to the Clerks at the Table.

I understand the Hon. Member's point. He has raised it before.

Mr. Lambert: And nothing has been done to vary it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I believe that if the Hon. Member wishes to check the records of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization he will find that that problem has been addressed.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, may I say that the only time this has been addressed is apparently in a letter circulated by the former Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council who was proposing a rather complicated procedure. It did not receive sanction from anyone as far as I know.

All I am saying is that we have well known established rules with regard to the filing of two types of motions and of private Bills. There were procedures laid down quite clearly as to how the priorities would be chosen. May I say, as one who still has two outstanding Bills, that no one has approached me concerning these apart from the one that I have had to debate. I do not believe there is a sort of seriatim right pertaining to everyone in the House to be asked or to have proposed a Bill so their name may appear as a proposer of some private Member's motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I will repeat, with the permission of the Hon. Member, that I have heard his comments before on the subject. I am aware of the grounds for his comments. I have indicated that, as far as I am aware, the Procedure and Organization Committee has addressed this subject. I think that if he would accept my comments as indicated that the form for procedure with respect to Private Members' Hour seems to be on the way, then, with his agreement, I might be able to proceed. I cannot say anything further because it is not within my particular authority to do so. I would hope the Hon. Member would understand that and realize the subject has been addressed in the committee.

Mr. Lambert: If you are deputizing for Madam Speaker, you have the authority—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): If the Hon. Member wishes to stand and make a further comment, I will recognize him, but it is difficult to have a personal conversation with the Chair.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, as my last comment may I say that I admire your diffidence as to authority, but at the present time the occupant of the Chair is representing the Speaker, and the Speaker has the authority on all these matters. Therefore, in my book there is no ducking it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In that case, I shall not attempt to duck it and will simply proceed as I ought to in the circumstances.

Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding order No. 475 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Lambert: I will let it go on division. I am not going to make any issue of it. I do want it noted that I protest on the part of a great number of Members in this House against the procedures that are adopted.

Just to go on a little bit. I do not have any material here but if the Clerk will pull out a Bill that is in my name, I will take it.

● (1520)

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): A point of order, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Of course I will recognize the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) on a point of order, but I indicated in my remarks that I hoped the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) had realized I was aware of the point he raised and that it was my feeling the problem was on the verge of resolution. Having said that, that is no more than an effort to ask the Hon. member for Edmonton West whether he would accept my indication in the present circumstances. If he does not accept that view and does not wish to give his consent to proceed, that is entirely his right as an Hon. Member of the House, and I would respect that right without any hesitation whatsoever.

I have indicated that I will recognize the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi, but I want to indicate that if the matter becomes one of increasing debate, the probability is that we will not be able to proceed today in the usual fashion.

Mr. Lambert: Well, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I will now recognize the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, obviously I did not rise to debate a point but simply to raise a point of order. When you asked for unanimous consent, it was not given. Consent on division is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Speaker, in light of what you said, I was prepared to go ahead with any Bill of mine they want to bring forward. I will withdraw that for today. I have done this, but I want to underline that I disapprove of the procedure under which we are going forward with Private Members' Bills and that we should return next week to the appropriate procedure which had been laid down.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Edmonton West has made his point, and has made it strongly. I hope other Hon. Members realize that he feels strongly about the issue and that recommendations to the Standing Comittee on Procedure and Organization might be considered in the circumstances. He has also indicated that he is prepared to give his consent toward a unanimous consent that we might proceed as we do in the ordinary course of events. Accordingly, I will put the question again. Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding order No. 475 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

BROADCASTING ACT

AMENDMENT TO PROHIBIT ABUSIVE COMMENT ON THE BASIS OF SEX

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood) moved that Bill C-675, an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture.

She said: Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to have the opportunity to debate my Private Member's Bill, Bill C-675, this afternoon. It is a very simple amendment to the Broadcasting Act. All it will do is to add the following sentence:

> Notwithstanding paragraph (c), no station, network operator or pay television licensee shall broadcast any abusive comment or abusive pictorial representation of any race, religion, creed or sex.

This is a phrase which has been taken from the existing broadcasting regulations established by the CRTC. It is necessary for Parliament to put this clause into the Broadcasting Act because the existing phrase in the regulations includes only the first three criteria—race, religion or creed. Abuse on the basis of sex is not there despite many recommendations that it be added to the list. The broadcasting regulations are hopelessly out of date. Regulation amendments were proposed more than a year ago by the CRTC task force on sex stereotyping in the media. They have been advocated by groups like the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, Media Watch and various organizations. The CRTC has persistently refused to amend its own broadcasting regulations, so it is now up to Parliament to take the necessary action.

One proposal has been that as well as race, religion, creed and sex there should be other criteria added, for example, age and physical or mental handicap. Some people have suggested that the Act should include all categories which are now in the Charter of Rights. I would certainly be in agreement with doing this. The appropriate time to do this, I would suggest, is at committee. The real problem in broadcasting right now is the abuse of women, the problem of pornography. That is the real problem.

I am a practical person. I am directing my efforts toward solving a most important problem that we have to face in abusive broadcasting. That is why the proposal is the way I framed it. Race, religion and creed have already been accepted. Now we have to add sex to the list. Certainly it would be appropriate to add the other categories. There is some symbolic importance in doing this, to make clear the kind of protection we believe Canadians deserve and to make it consistent with the Charter of Rights.

There is support for this proposal all across the country. Petitions have been introduced in Parliament from all parts of the country; there have been thousands of signatures. I am very happy to report that the people who supported this Private Member's Bill include women and men of all ages, church groups, unions, voluntary associations, large organizations, small organizations, all kinds of people. I am very pleased to be able to report that there is a great deal of support for this Bill among men. I have had many men in my own constituency say that they are very glad to see that I am taking up the issue of pornography and taking it up very vigorously. Male constituents of mine have told me that they are horrified and ashamed by pornography.

It is women who are the prime victims of pornography, it is women who are the physical victims of abuse, as well as a growing number of children. But it is still largely women who are the victims. However, the role for men in pornography is as the "pornographer", as the aggressor. Decent men do not like to be identified with this role. Men too are demeaned by pornography. Pornography is demeaning to men. It is also an insult to their dignity. To women it is an insult not only to their dignity but also to their security and sometimes to their lives. The wielder of the whip is demeaned but the receiver of the blows bears the scars.

Let us be very clear about what is the problem. I am talking about pornography, especially violent pornographic abuse with real victims. The issue is not sexual explicitness; it is coercive relationships, it is about abuse. Pornography is growing in quantity and it is getting worse in quality. We also have growing evidence of the harmful effects of pornography. There are psychological studies which show that men who are exposed to pornography, to pornographic films, video cassettes and so forth, are more likely to injure, to hurt a woman or a child. It has been shown that men who are exposed to pornographic films are more likely to accept the rape myth that rape does not really happen, that the women really liked it after all, that aggression is all right because the woman comes around in the end.

Indeed, this has been found to be the most dangerous kind of pornography because it is the one that excuses actual sexual assaults, at least in the mind of the person who commits them. It is false, it is a lie. Pornography does lie. We must face that lie and denounce that lie.

I want to relate the issue of pornography to the broader issue of sex role stereotyping. I was a member of the CRTC task force on sex role stereotyping in the media. It was set up in response to a large number of complaints which women had been raising with regard to their portrayal generally in the media. These were complaints about under-representation in serious programming, under-representation in the news and public affairs, not treating women's issues seriously as real news issues and of course over-representation and ridiculous representation of women in advertising. These were the issues which prompted the task force on sex stereotyping. It was only at the end of a three-year study that the pornography issue really became clear, that it emerged. Thus, public members of that task force came up with the following statement about pornography:

Male dominance and female submissiveness are at the very heart of the stereotypes of men and women. Pornography is the extreme portrayal of dominance and exploitation of women's sexuality. Pornography, or any portrayal of violence against women, is the ultimate expression of dominance submissiveness, the objectification and the abuse of women. As such, pornography or the portrayal of violence against women has no place in the broadcast media.

Very specifically, the public press members recommended that sex be added to the list in the broadcasting regulations. This, of course, has not been done and that is why we have proceeded to this Bill this afternoon. We worry that all the good that the task force on sexual stereotyping did could be undone by the proliferation of pornography. We are seeing some improvements in the portrayal of women in the media, but all of these good effects could be reversed if late at night we see adult programming that is pornographic and demeans women in a much more serious way.

Mr. Speaker, we could move from ring-around-the-collar on the old television to noose-around-the-neck in the adult programming. Women used to be portrayed as being excessively clean. We worry now about women being portrayed as excessively bloody.

In the old television, women sought to get male approval by being good housewives. Now it goes very fast, women are simply beaten into submission in pornography. In the old days, television showed women as the chatelaines of middle-class domesticity. Shall we give this up now for women as inmates of the torture chamber?

There is the matter of freedom of expression. Yesterday, in answer to my question, the representative for the Minister of Communications raised the point of freedom of expression being entrenched in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. We all know there is a limit to freedom of expression. We do not have the right to shout "Fire" in a movie theatre. We are not allowed to make libellous statements about another person. We are not allowed to counsel someone to commit murder, assault or any other crime. The individual's right to life and security is more important.

I think the Minister of Communications has been somewhat hypocritical in his comments. He raised the issue of freedom of expression when women demanded legal protection. The same protection already exists for minorities and religions. Why the double standard? Does the Minister of Communications mean that minority groups and religions deserve to be protected by law and that women do not? And if that is his position, I would ask him to say so clearly to Canadian women, and if it is not, it is up to the Minister of Communications to take a stand and to support this Private Member's Bill today.

The CRTC made its position on freedom of expression known not long ago in its ruling on the complaint against CKVU in Vancouver. A complaint had been lodged by Media Watch, after a program where the commentator expressed the hope that in a conventional war, the women of Media Watch would be at the front so they could be raped by Russian soldiers. The CRTC explained that the Broadcasting Act involved certain rights and obligations assumed by all licensees. One requirement is that programs must be of high quality. The Commission stressed that freedom of expression was not absolute and was limited by other legislation passed to protect other values that were equally precious. The CRTC agreed with Media Watch that the issue was not whether the women should be raped or not, and I quote:

The right to freedom of expression on the public airwaves cannot prevail over the public's right to receive high quality broadcasts that are free of denigrating comments or incitements to violence against any identifiable group.

[English]

The CRTC has shown a great deal of sense and sensitivity in its decision, but note that there was no remedy in the decision. There has been a lot of hypocrisy when the issue of freedom of speech has been raised. Where were the people who talk about censorship when women were demanding the end of censorship of women's news and the right for women to be in the news and to be part of public affairs programs? Why are the people who are worried about censorship not demanding that the protection that now exists on the basis of race, religion and creed be removed? There is certainly an inconsistency. Why is censorship only an issue where women's rights are concerned and nobody else's? I ask people to be consistent.

What are we going to do about this? Passing this Private Members' Bill today is only one step. I suggest that many others are needed. The Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) is responsible for appointments. There is a vacancy for the position of head of the CRTC. I suggest that the Minister should be considering a woman. He should be considering a feminist. He should consider the stand on pornography of whoever is considered for this position. The CRTC should ask these questions as much as they ask questions on Canadian content.

The CBC has a board of directors. It is responsible for a great deal of programming. There is only one woman on a board of 15 members. There are four vacancies. This is shameful. It is not because women's organizations have not put forward names. I have personally recommended people, but it has not done any good.

I would like to support the recommendation which Canada presented at Copenhagen to the United Nations Decade on Women. There was already a provision encouraging "the fullest and most active participation of women at all levels of policy-making and decision-making within media organizations". Our Government put forward this addition, and I quote:

Governments should use the opportunities they have by way of appointments to regulatory bodies and broadcast networks to ensure that women are equally represented in senior decision-making.

We have only one woman out of 15 on the CBC board of directors, and yet that was said in 1980 in Copenhagen. Where is the Minister of Communications?

The CRTC must get tough on Pay TV and tough on pornography. Adhering to the guidelines on sex-role stereotyping should be a condition of licence for every station and network in the country. There should be the possibility of revocation of licence when there are serious violations. These are the public airways. Commercial operators make money by using them. We should demand high quality and concern for human rights when we in effect rent out our public airwaves.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) has some responsibility. The obscenity laws are inadequate. They are antiquated. The language is bizarre. The Minister has proposed an amendment. It is a good amendment. However, it will not come up for a while even though he said it would be up shortly as long ago as last April. It will stress violence and add the notion of degradation. This is certainly moving in the right direction, but what we need are tough laws and much tougher enforcement. Pornography is a business. People make money from it. It is important that the fines that are levied make this business unprofitable.

The courts do not adequately understand pornography. In some cases their interpretations have been quite misguided. Certainly the fines they have imposed have been rather paltry. We hope to see a growing sensitivity on the part of the courts. We want to see many more prosecutions in order to really get rid of the problem.

Something else the Minister of Justice could do in bringing in tougher laws is to see that they are carefully directed. We want them to be tough, but we do not want them to go all over the place. We do not want to see people like Margaret Laurence, who has been harassed by the school boards, hindered by the Criminal Code. We need proper distinctions. The Canadian Association of University Teachers has proposed an eminently sensible one, in my opinion, to ensure that scientific research, political discussion, serious artistic and literary work will not be included in the definition of pornography. That would be a sensible approach and one that would make it easier to have really tough laws to go after those who are clearly the offenders.

I seek today, Mr. Speaker, approval in principle of this Bill. Simply referring the subject matter to committee is something which I would be happier to accept than having the Bill talked out. However, I would suggest that simply referring the subject matter to committee is not quite what this Bill deserves. Referring the subject matter to committee, would suggest that this is a matter which perhaps is a good idea but needs more study. We do need more study about what to do with the victims of pornography and about all kinds of aspects of pornography, but we do not need a study on the principle of the Bill. We need a clear statement of that principle and we know what it is. Wording has been developed that comes right out of the broadcast regulations. It would fit right into the Act and it would fit right into the section of the Act which deals with policy. It is an appropriate amendment, and I do not think that we really need to take a step backward and merely look at the whole subject again.

The issue at stake is equality. Anyone who believes in equality for women in Canada must be against pornography because it limits the freedom of women to work, to go out, to take part in trade unions, political Parties, and social, cultural and sports events. Pornography makes women afraid and women cannot be full citizens and full participants in our society while that fear exists. Therefore, I call on all men and women to recognize that we must resist, denounce and fight pornography wherever and whenever possible. Hon. Members of the House here today have the opportunity to take a step that will approve Bill C-675 in principle. The women of Canada expect that of Hon. Members and the women of Canada deserve no less.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to speak to and offer my full support for Bill C-675 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). Because of the nature of politics, some people may find it unusual that a Conservative Member of Parliament would speak in favour of a Private Member's Bill standing in the name of a Member of the New Democratic Party. However, this Bill is interesting, it is important and it deserves support from all Members of the House. I would like to endorse the principle of the Bill and certainly see it obtain approval in principle at second reading. Failing that, I would like to see the subject matter of the Bill referred to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture.

I should point out as an aside to the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood and other Members of the NDP who were not here five and a half or six years ago that at that time, I was here in the Parliamentary Press Gallery and as a broadcaster was very concerned about the subject matter of pornography and particularly pornography on the airwaves. A whole series of Private Members' Bills were put on the Order Paper five and a half or six years ago by the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen), the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp), the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Roche) and the then Hon. Member for the riding that was then known as Selkirk, Mr. Dean Whiteway. The subject matter of the Bills was referred to the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, the Chairman of which was the present Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan). The committee came up with unanimous recommendations designed to deal with the spreading pornography crisis. All of those recommendations have been ignored to this day.

We are starting all over again, Mr. Speaker. It is our expectation that the Government side will approve in principle the subject matter of the Bill introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood, and certainly we on this side give that approval. Perhaps when the subject matter goes to committee this time, specifically the Committee on Communications and Culture, we can deal with it expeditiously and put on the statute books, through an amendment to the Broadcasting Act, some meaningful legislation and laws designed to deal with the spread of pornography over the public airwaves and, in some cases, through the printed media. I will refer to that in a few moments.

The genesis of the Bill is worth mentioning again. The Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood was a member of the task force on sex role stereotyping in the broadcast media which was formed in September, 1979, by our then colleague, my friend, the Hon. David McDonald, who was the Minister of Communications. The mandate of that task force was, and I quote:

> To delineate guidelines for a more realistic and positive portrayal of women in radio and television (both programming and commercials) and to make policy recommendations for consideration by the Commission and the broadcasting industry.

The task force reported in September, 1982, with a well thought out document which contained many valuable recommendations, some of which deserve reiterating now. I read from that report as follows:

> The following summary of concerns was compiled and discussed by the Task Force: (only related concerns listed)
> "Women should not be used as sexual stimuli or lures, or as attention-getting, but otherwise irrelevant, objects."
> "Broadcasting should not demean or degrade women through the images used to portray them."
> "Male dominance and female submissiveness are at the very heart of the stereotypes of men and women. Pornography reflects the extreme portrayal of dominance and the exploitation of women's sexuality. Pornography, or any portrayal of violence against women, is the ultimate expression of dominance/submissiveness, the objectification of women. As such, pornography, or the portrayal of violence against women has no place in the broadcast media."

As a former broadcaster intimately involved with that industry, I say Amen to those concerns.

The task force recommendations for Pay TV read as follows:

1. recognize the public concern about sex-role stereotyping
2. adopt the applicable programming recommendations set out in this report
3. exercise sensitivity to, and awareness of, the problem of sex-role stereotyping in the acquisition of programming material or rights
4. ensure that women are adequately represented on and off air

I presume that off air in this case means that women should be represented as prominent members of boards and commissions.

Incidentally, I would applaud and second the suggestion made by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood that the next Chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission might well be a woman and one who would be able to bring to that very important regulatory body the concerns that are raised in this Bill.

The recommendations I have just read from the task force report are ones that we as Members of Parliament should look at very carefully, particularly in light of the second stage generation of this Bill and the Playboy adult programming controversy which surfaced last January over Pay TV programming. Before I get to that, I will point out that this issue is clearly in the minds of the media. As I was putting together some remarks for this speech, I came across an interesting article from the Hamilton Spectator of September 27, 1983. The headline reads: "Use power of sales against porn: Broadcaster". That braodcaster was speaking in Kitchener and said:

> People should use their buying power to force pornographic advertising from the media, says a 10-year veteran of radio broadcasting.
> "It's a weapon too many of us don't use," said Liz McCloy, a third-year divinity student at the University of Toronto, during a conference on pornography. "Radio stations have images, corporations have images."
> When listeners or viewers phone to complain, they may not see the effects of the call, but Ms. McCloy said from her radio experience, "panic sets in."
> "Memos go out from general managers to announcers, salesmen and programmers: 'We have to clean up.' "

There is great power in the advertising dollar over the broadcasters when they do step over the mark. The problem that this Bill deals with and the problem we all face is that there is nothing now in the Broadcasting Act to give any kind of direction which would regulate or prevent pornography or the sexual exploitation of women in advertising.

● (1550)

I mentioned the furor on one of the pay TV channels over this Playboy adult programming. I think most Members received a lot of mail on this from their constituents because I did. Although the Playboy TV issue is only a small part of the pornography question, it serves to focus attention on the fact that we have progressed—if you like to use the word progressed in this context to the point where soft-core pornography is available on your television set via broadcast. I wonder how long it will be before soft-core pornography gives way to hard-core pornography and all its horrible ramifications.

The Playboy pay TV episode focused concern on the entire pornography/violence issue. One of the connections between violence toward women and pornography, violent sexism whether implicit or explicit, is that it leads to the degradation of women and has no place in the broadcast media.

As a communications critic for the Official Opposition I am concerned with the sex stereotyping of women in advertising and the degradation of women over the airwaves. Some of us take equal exception to printed exploitation. As a former journalist I recognize that this takes us into the most difficult and sensitive area of censorship, and I am not prepared to deal with that at the moment.

The CRTC is supposed to make decisions based on its view of what is in the best interests of the general public. It must decide what minimum standard of public morality should be applied by those it licenses. This is not a new idea and it falls within the power of the commission.

I would draw to the attention of the House the current code of advertising ethics developed by the CRTC, broadcasters and advertisers and the task force report which I mentioned earlier.

I should like to see the pay TV companies subscribe to and work within the guidelines set out in the report on sexual stereotyping, but there does not seem to be a great deal of activity in this area. Perhaps this is an extremely important and vital reason why we must have a new Broadcasting Act from the Government—or from the next Government which some of us on this side will have a say in.

I should like to see a new Broadcasting Act tabled in the House as soon as possible and I think it should contain the material set out in Bill C-675, introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood.

Although I would prefer pay TV licencees and the CRTC to come to a co-operative agreement, perhaps the way to set up such a public forum would be to send the Bill to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture and invite pay TV companies to appear before it to justify why they feel they should not come under more stringent laws on pornography.

Essentially, we are still dealing with the public airwaves and with young people, and we just cannot leave everything to their choice. Somewhere a provision has to be enshrined in the Broadcasting Act which will prevent the sex stereotyping of women.

I am sure I speak for all Members of the Official Opposition when I say that we are pleased to support wholeheartedly the subject matter of Bill C-675.

Mr. Jack Burghardt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, as Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Communications I welcome this opportunity to participate in the debate on Bill C-675, presented to the House by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood.

I think it is quite evident from the remarks and comments I have heard outside of the House by Members of all the Parties represented here, that there is a great deal of support for the Bill. I had hoped that the debate this afternoon would be along those lines. This being politics, however, I must say that I am a little disappointed in some of the remarks of the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood in her criticism of the actions or, as I suppose she was suggesting, the inaction of the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) regarding this very important concern.

I believe that actions do speak louder than words. If one were to look in Hansard since the whole issue of pornography came to the fore, one would see that the Minister of Communications has stated a number of times—and that I, as Parliamentary Secretary have stated a number of times—concern about this matter. We have suggested to the various elements of society responsible for pornography and the degradation of women in broadcasting, and the sex stereotyping question, that they clean up their act.

I am not going to go on at great length this afternoon about the Bill. I think everyone supports it in principle. Certainly the Minister has indicated his concern that something be done in a very definite and parliamentary way through the legal process to put teeth into the Broadcasting Act and regulations affected thereby.

As late as yesterday afternoon the Minister of Communications and I had the opportunity of a meeting with representatives of Media Watch, one of the groups to which the Hon. Member referred. It was set up to watch the media, television in particular, and programs related to pornography and sex stereotyping. Media Watch has been funded by the Minister responsible for the Status of Women who has been very much concerned about this matter and who wants to see something done in a positive way.

It is not only the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood who has been carrying the torch on this question. Certainly on this side of the House the Ministers responsible have been trying to arrive at a suitable solution to this very penetrating question.

It has been suggested by the Hon. Member that the Minister of Justice (Mr. McGuigan) set up a special committee to see how the Criminal code could be changed as it relates to violence and sexual crimes. In turn, this will relate to the broadcasting industry.

I should like to add my support for this Bill, Mr. Speaker. It has been suggested that we send it on to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture, and I think that is where it should be handled. It is not a question of trying to prolong the debate, but to change the Broadcasting Act and put teeth into this section is not as simple as the Hon. Member states. There is a difference between changing the Broadcasting Act and amending CRTC regulations.

I would therefore move:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

Bill C-675 an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act be not now read the second time but that the order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Burghardt) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion, as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion, as amended, agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Accordingly, the order is discharged, the Bill is withdrawn and the subject matter thereof is referred to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture.

Bill withdrawn and order discharged.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

ADVISABILITY OF MAKING TELEPHONES ACCESSIBLE

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government, in pursuance of a policy that will ensure that all disabled Canadians have the same opportunity to participate fully in all of the employment, recreational, consumer, educational, community and domestic activities which characterize everyday Canadian society, should consider the advisability of introducing legislation that would require all telephones being produced in Canada or imported into Canada to be fully accessible to hearing-impaired Canadians.

He said: Mr. Speaker, my motion arises from a decision which was made on November 23, 1982, by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission. In that decision the CRTC refused to require that all telephones should be compatible with hearing aids. Hon. Members on all sides of the House will know that many people with hearing aids use a telephone switch or T-switch on the hearing aid to improve access to telephones. The T-switch enables the hearing aid to respond to the magnetic pulses of the telephone receiver, the part you hold to your ear. This feature improves reception. In short, it gives hard of hearing people better access to the telephone.

Admittedly, much of the argument which I am going to present is of a rather technical nature. However, it is necessary to go through it in order to allow Hon. Members to understand exactly what the problem is. In arriving at its decision, the CRTC dealt a severe blow to the hearing impaired, indeed, to the whole thrust of achieving full accessibility to the disabled community generally. In fact, this decision will have serious implications for the hearing impaired, that it has been appealed to the federal Cabinet by the Canadian Co-ordinating Council on Deafness, the Canadian Hearing Society, the Canadian Hard of Hearing Association and the Hard of Hearing Club of Ottawa. This petition has received wide public support from both individual Canadians and numerous organizations. Among those organizations is the Canadian Labour Congress, the Laurentian University School of Social Work, the National Union of Provincial Government Employees, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario and the Canadian Federation of Communication Workers, to name but a few.

The reason for this massive support, Mr. Speaker, is apparent to anyone who cares to look at the issue carefully. Hearing loss in Canada is one of our most common physical disabilities. About a million and a half Canadians have some degree of hearing loss. It is estimated that some 200,000 Canadians are profoundly deaf. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the Department of National Health and Welfare has estimated that of those who are not profoundly deaf, some 550,000 Canadians have a significant hearing impairment in both ears.

I cannot emphasize enough that while the impact of the CRTC decision is most severe on the present hearing impaired population, it will become even more so in a few years' time. As Hon. Members are aware, all indicators show that Canada, as well as other nations, is faced with the fact that our population is aging very rapidly. Hearing problems will increase in number rather than diminish as we go through the process. I cannot conceive of a better time to prepare for that than right now.

It is to this large group of Canadians that my motion addresses itself. The telephone is often a much more important device to the hearing impaired than it is to a person who does not have this disability. In cases of emergency, it may be the only way a person can call for help if that person has impaired hearing. This can often be the case if one is elderly and housebound, or if one has multiple disabilities or happens to live in a rural or isolated community. The telephone is also a very important device in a number of work places. Being able to use the telephone can mean the difference between keeping a job or losing it and, indeed, even in securing employment. A major problem for people with hearing impairment is in finding suitable and reasonably well paying employment.

Witnesses were heard before the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped. I saw an estimate not too long ago which indicated that the unemployment rate within the hearing impaired community was in excess of 40 per cent, and I believe more in the area of 50 per cent, of the unemployed within that population group in our society. That spells out the size of the problem, Mr. Speaker, because to the hearing impaired an inaccessible telephone is a major obstacle toward achieving the right to independent living. I would even say that it flies in the face of the spirit of the amendments which this House recently made to the Canadian Human Rights Act. If the federal Cabinet fails to overturn the decision of the CRTC, it would be doing a great disservice to those Canadians who looked on the International Year of the Disabled Persons as a starting point for greater future achievements.

The telephone has become a part of daily living in our society, whether it be in business, social contact or in communicating information quickly. Yet for most hearing impaired Canadians, the telephone is only of use when special attachments are available. The CRTC in its decision, to which I referred, has refused to prescribe technical standards which would ensure that all telephones are compatible with hearing aids and are equipped with a device known as a telecoil. In the face of that refusal, this motion asks the Government to consider introducing legislation which will require all telephones which are produced or imported into Canada to be accessible to the hearing impaired.

On occasion, Mr. Speaker, I and other members in my Party have been severely critical of Bell Canada in the way it conducts its business with the public at large. However, in this case, Bell Canada has played an excellent role and has been a good corporate citizen in recognizing its responsibility in this area. It has been fitting its equipment with the necessary devices. Unfortunately, a number of other producers have not followed suit. By not doing so, it has been argued that Bell has been placed in a position which makes it less competitive with other producers. In my view, Mr. Speaker, the only real long-term solution is to put all telephone equipment producers on the same competitive basis. All of them should be required to provide telephone terminals which are magnetically compatible with hearing aids. All telephones manufactured in Canada or imported should be required to generate enough electromagnetic flux to be compatible with hearing aids. This requirement should apply to all telephones, residential, public, those used in business. Existing incompatible public telephones should be retrofitted where that is required. It is essential that all new telephones imported into the Canadian market also be required to be compatible.

It has been argued by some that if the federal Government did overturn the CRTC decision, which I would like to see, the whole question should be referred to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture for further examination. It is my recollection, after speaking with some of the consumer groups representing hearing impaired Canadians, that some of the evidence presented to the CRTC hearings, from which it made its decision, was clearly erroneous. In fact, I have some correspondence from B.C. Tel and others disputing the information that the CRTC received in making its decision. Short of referring the whole question back to the CRTC for proper examination, a perhaps more productive way of dealing with it would be to place it before a committee, such as that on Communications and Culture, where elected representatives of the people in this country could ensure that the hearing impaired in Canada were being dealt with equitably. I am quite sure there is not one Member in the House who has not received correspondence from hearing impaired groups about this very question. I am sure that concern is shared by all Members, and not just by myself or people in my Party. It is something that requires more examination.

I know that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), worked extremely closely with groups such as the Western Institute for the Deaf. He has made many representations to the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) on this matter. Unfortunately, the response from the Minister's Department has not been as productive or useful as we had hoped. The Minister himself, I must say, is one of the more concerned Members in the Cabinet when it comes to enacting recommendations that have emanated from the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped, of which I am a member. The Minister has been one of the most caring Ministers. I hope that he uses his persuasive powers to convince the Cabinet, which presently has an appeal before it right now, not to dismiss it lightly but, rather, to have the question referred right up to the Standing Committee or back to the CRTC for proper examination.

There are many misunderstood aspects of this particular case. I have in my hand a letter from one of the Members of the House who had written to the Canadian Hard of Hearing Association. He argued thus in the letter:

Part of the difficulty comes with deciding whether or not to impose what would in effect be a universal tax on all telephone subscribers.

That would be if all telephones were required to have the telecoil implanted in them. It is an argument I have often heard, whether it comes to providing ramps for wheel chair use or removing architectural barriers from federal buildings. Why should the general taxpayer pay to remove those barriers for a small group of disabled Canadians? First, I want to tell Your Honour that that small group of disabled Canadians amounts to something like 10 per cent of the total Canadian population. In fact, it is estimated that there are over two million Canadians who are considered to have disabilities of one form or another. It seems to me that rather than placing those kinds of offhanded, dismissive remarks about why we generally should be caring in our attitude toward those who are disabled, we should be discussing what kind of society we really want. Do we want a society that reduces every problem to dollars and cents and wonders where these dollars and cents are coming from when it comes to human needs? Or are we to be the kind of society that says, "I look after me first, on a dollar and cents basis, and everyone else is on their own"? That is not the kind of society in which I am interested. I daresay that most Hon. Members in the House would share that view. I do not place all that much importance on that kind of an attitude.

But then it comes to a more serious question, where one particular Member says that another problem arises with the effect there could be on international trade from requiring all new telephones to be compatible with hearing aids. Now that telephones no longer have to be leased from the telephone company, which is Bell Canada, such a requirement could be perceived as a non-tariff trade barrier with possible retaliation. I felt the Canadian Hard of Hearing Association presented the classifical argument to that classical argument when its Chairman wrote back to this particular Member and said:

—in regard to international trade, I cannot see how such a requirement could be perceived as a non-tariff trade barrier. In particular, such a requirement would in no way give any advantage to domestic industry. International trade agreements do not take away our right to control the performance of devices in the Canadian health, transportation and, in this case, communication system. We already regulate automobile safety, medical device performance, et cetera.

While the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped was going through public hearings over the last three-year period, we found that there was a readiness, even a willingness on the part of able-bodied Canadians to dismiss out of hand, lightly, problems faced daily by people with disabilities. They used the most specious, spurious arguments to dismiss legitimate claims on society, arguments that they would not dare use with any other group in society. However, they feel quite free to use such arguments against disabled persons simply because the individuals are disabled.

I do not feel that I am being unkind in making that statement, because it is a fact. We found it time and time again, from witnesses who appeared before the committee, relating their experiences with the able-bodied community. I found it quite shameful and shocking. We all did in the committee, and I think that is what made it one of the best committees the House has ever had.

I would argue that the time has come when the House has an excellent opportunity to say that we must play a role in changing the attitudes of society toward the disabled community. Today we are presented with no more of an excellent opportunity than to do it right now. I would ask the House, in all sincerity, to give its support to the motion. If the Government wishes to amend it in such a way as to get the motion into a committee where it can be examined, where we can be assured that the hearing impaired population will receive their due right to have the matter examined closely, I will not object. What I am interested in is ensuring that the question be fully and properly examined. I would ask the House for that support.

Mr. Jack Masters (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, may I begin by complimenting the Hon. Member and congratulating him on his choice of issues to raise before the House. It is certainly true that the ability of disabled Canadians to participate in the mainstream activities of Canadian society is something that all of us should be concerned about. I honestly believe that all of us in the House have that same concern and share it as sincerely as the Hon. Member opposite. I would like to assure the Hon. Member that I also absolutely support the idea that disabled Canadians should have access to the same employment, recreation, consumer, educational, community and domestic activities which characterize Canadian society every day.

However, before Members consider the specific issue raised by the Hon. Member, that is, the advisability of introducing legislation that would require all telephones being produced in Canada or imported into Canada to be fully accessible to hearing impaired Canadians, I believe some background information would be in order and helpful.

There are more than 180 telephone companies in Canada. Of course, some are very large like Bell Canada and some are very small. Generally speaking, federal and provincial Governments are responsible for the regulation of the telephone companies under their jurisdiction. Usually, carriers must apply to their regulatory agency, be it the federal agency, a provincial Government public utility board or a municipal council in some cases, for approval of the terms and conditions on which telephone service is provided. Of all these telephone companies, only four are currently subject to regulation by the federal telecommunications regulatory body and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, CRTC. These are Bell Canada, which operates in Ontario, Quebec and part of the Northwest Territories, the British Columbia Telephone Company operating in the Province of British Columbia, NorthwesTel serving the Yukon and the other part of the Northwest Territories, and Terra Nova Telecommunications, which serves part of Newfoundland.

Traditionally, for all or most of their operations, the telephone companies have carried on business as monopoly service providers within their operating territory. This monopoly extended to the provision of telephones and other devices which were attached to the telephones companies' lines. Over the past ten years, however, this situation has been changing, particularly in the Territories served by the four telephone companies I mentioned a few moments ago. Over much of this period, the federal Department of Communications has sponsored a program known as the Terminal Attachment Program which has put in place mechanisms for an orderly transition to an environment in which telephone company subscribers can attach their own devices to the telephone networks.

Over the same period, the CRTC has made regulatory decisions which have progressively given subscribers greater choice and flexibility in deciding on the kind of telecommunications equipment they want and whether they will lease it from the carrier or buy from an independent supplier. It is worthwhile to describe briefly the work of the program advisory committee, TAPAC, which has played a major role in the orderly development of the telecommunications industry in Canada.

In 1975, the Department of Communications, recognizing the evolutionary change in the telecommunications environment, proposed the creation of a committee dedicated to the development of terminal equipment standards which could be used in the telecommunications industry across the country. Under the chairmanship of the Department of Communications, a voluntary co-operative committee was formed composed of provincial Governments, federally regulated common carriers, telecommunications equipment manufacturers and suppliers as well as representatives from consumer associations and users. TAPACs first work was on terminal attachment standards for network non-addressing devices, that is, devices which cannot be used to dial directly into the telephone network. An example of such devices is the well known automatic telephone answering machine. When a consensus is reached within TAPAC, its decisions are referred to the Department of Communications and are published in the Canada Gazette for public comment. Upon completion of this process, the standards are issued by the Department. The committee has now completed the development of standards for network addressing devices, which include the ordinary single line telephone, of which some 10 million are currently in operation in this country.

As I have said, matters progressed in an orderly fashion, and in 1980, the CRTC made an important decision with respect to Bell Canada. At that time the CRTC issued a decision which permitted ordinary extension telephones purchased by subscribers to be attached to Bell's lines. This was the first such decision in Canada. Prior to this, only certain kinds of business equipment could be attached to Bell's lines, and many telephone companies permitted no subscriber-provided equipment to be attached without special protective couplings which were to be provided by the telephone company at a tariffed rate.

While many subscribers welcomed this decision, one group of Canadians, the hearing impaired, viewed it with some concern. The concern of the hearing impaired was as follows: hearing aids which are equipped with a device called a telecoil can, when the telecoil is activated by the hearing aid T-switch, detect and amplify the magnetic field generated by certain telephones. However, not all telephones generate sufficient magnetic field to activate a telecoil hearing aid. Some telephone receivers must have a flux coil added. The flux coil increases the magnetic field sufficiently to be detected by a telecoil.

Just prior to the 1980 CRTC decision, representatives of the hearing impaired had held lengthy discussions with Bell Canada, and Bell had made a very public spirited commitment. Bell Canada had committed itself to equipping all of its telephones with flux coils. Thus, the hearing impaired were assured that any telephone leased from Bell would work with a hearing aid equipped with a T-switch. With a decision that subscribers could attach their own telephones to Bell's network, the hearing impaired were concerned that a proliferation of non-Bell telephones would lead to a situation where telephones would not generally be compatible with hearing aids equipped with telecoils.

In the fall of 1981, the CRTC held an extensive public hearing into the issue of attachment of subscriber-provided equipment to the networks of federally regulated carriers. Representations were made by 30 representatives of various organizations interested in the matter, including three associations representing hearing impaired persons. These associations were the Canadian Hearing Society, the Canadian Co-ordinating Council on Deafness, and the Hard of Hearing Club of Ottawa. Groups representing the hearing impaired urged the CRTC to prescribe technical standards which would ensure that all telephones are compatible with hearing aids that are equipped with a telecoil. Representatives of the hearing impaired were concerned that in an environment in which consumers and businesses can purchase their own primary telephone set, and in the absence of appropriate technical standards, an increasing percentage of telephones will not be compatible with hearing aids. Also, they expressed the view that access to telecommunications services would be reduced owing to the fact that private or business users would be able to purchase telephones which are not hearing aid compatible.

On November 23, 1982, the CRTC issued its final decision, Telecom Decision CRTC 82-14, which concluded that it was in the public interest that the terminal attachment policy that was established as a result of the 1980 interim decision be continued. The liberalization of ownership of telephone equipment and other devices to be connected to the federally regulated common carriers' public networks is now a fait accompli and has generally met with positive reaction.

In its decision, the Commission stated its view that any device necessary to permit a disabled person to have access to the telephone network should continue to be priced at a level as low as possible, and that it continues to be committed to ensuring that hearing impaired persons have access to telephone service in the most effective and efficient manner. The evidence presented at the public hearings, however, did not convince the Commission that requiring all telephones to be hearing aid compatible is the most feasible way of achieving this goal. Also, the CRTC noted that alternatives to the imposition of technical standards could be implemented, such as modifications to the design of hearing aids themselves and modifications to the design of and rates for portable accoustic couplers. The latter permits the amplification of the voice signal received at the handset receiver and acts in a manner similar to the volume control amplifying handset which is provided free or for a nominal charge by the majority of the telephone companies.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, the Commission noted that Bell Canada reiterated its commitment during the public hearing to continue to provide telephones on a lease basis which are equipped with a flux coil, the additional feature which is favoured by the hearing impaired associations. The British Columbia Telephone Company had made a commitment to continue to provide, upon request, amplifying handsets to residence subscribers at no charge and to business subscribers for a nominal monthly charge.

Based on all these considerations, the Commission decided not to require that all telephones meet technical standards which ensure hearing aid compatibility. However, in so deciding the Commission also encouraged the Terminal Attachment Program Advisory Committee to explore additional means by which the access of hearing impaired persons to telephone service can be improved.

Subsequent to the release of Telecom Decision CRTC 82-14, the Public Interest Advocacy Centre presented a petition to the Governor in Council requesting the CRTC Decision 82-14 be varied to require the CRTC to issue an order to the effect that, within 90 days, all telephones authorized to be attached to a public telephone network be compatible with hearing aids. The Centre is acting on behalf of four associations representing the hearing impaired—the Canadian Hearing Society, the Canadian Co-ordinating Council on Deafness, the Hard of Hearing Club of Ottawa and the Canadian Hard of Hearing Association.

Representatives of the hearing impaired are concerned that the technical standards approved by the CRTC do not require manufacturers to make their telephones compatible with hearing aid devices and are of the view that an additional component, a flux coil, should be mandatory in telephone receivers to ensure their compatibility with certain hearing aids. Also, the associations feel that this component should be treated as a basic part of the telephone network, the cost of which all users share in order to preserve universality of service.

The Governor in Council will, Mr. Speaker, be dealing with this matter very shortly. As I said at the outset, I support the idea that disabled Canadians should have access to the mainstream activities which characterize Canadian life. I am sure that every reasonable Canadian accepts that concept.

As for compatibility of telephones and hearing aids, there is considerable work going on in Canada and in fact all over the world. The Comité consultatif international télégraphique et téléphonique, the international organization concerned with devising and preparing recommendations for international telecommunications standards, practices and procedures, is currently studying the question of developing an international standard for the coupling of hearing aids and telephones. This is complicated by a number of factors.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have been watching the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Masters) reading word for word his intervention. I wonder whether it is appropriate that there be some originality somewhere if he feels so deeply as he does about this matter.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The point raised by the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) is completely in order. It is a point of order because the rules of the House require that Hon. Members should be able to make use of notes, but in that sense it does not include the possibility that a speech may be read entirely. The purpose is simply to encourage debate rather than accept set speeches.

On the other hand, I have a great deal of sympathy for the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Masters). A number of Members throughout the House on both sides do read speeches. But when the point is drawn to the Chair's attention, I think it is the responsibility of the Chair to remind Hon. Members that they should, if possible, attempt to avoid reading speeches verbatim.

Mr. Masters: Mr. Speaker, I quite agree with the point of order. It is not my normal practice to use notes. I usually do not use them except on the rare occasion when one is presenting items that are technical. I think this item does require some clarification in the technical sense of what is going on and of what the inhibitions are in providing the hard of hearing couplings which the Hon. Member has suggested should be mandatory through legislation.

While I am certainly sympathetic, as I have said in the read speech—and I grant the Hon. Member that I have been reading verbatim—I accept the principle of trying to provide that kind of service to the hearing impaired. Like other Members in this House I, too, have intimate knowledge of the difficulties that the hard of hearing have inflicted upon them.

I had almost come to the conclusion of my read remarks on the subject. However, I do believe that from time to time—and this is one of those times—when we have the crossing of jurisdictions, when we have various regulatory bodies that come into play, when we are dealing with a situation that technically is controlled directly by the CRTC and all of those companies that we control in a regulatory sense by the CRTC, they have in fact lived up to the letter of the intent of the Hon. Member's motion.

I do take very serious note of the Hon. Member's representation. I hope that by trying to bring about an orderly procession of facts and figures and the history of what has been happening, I will be forgiven for reading my speech. I hope it has helped—perhaps it has not enlivened debate—to have information available to all Members of the House in a comprehensive manner on such an important subject that we can digest and work with.

Finally, because I think I will be abusing the time of the House if I go on much further, I do compliment the Hon. Member for bringing forward this matter this afternoon. I would like to reiterate that it is my commitment, along with the rest of the Members of Parliament, to ensure services to the disabled not only as they are now in an improved situation but that the whole process be accelerated so that all handicapped people will participate more fully in the mainstream of life.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, as I was saying in addressing Bill C-675 earlier this day, it is not every day that I get up to endorse the essence of a Bill or a motion proposed by one of my colleagues in the New Democratic Party. Today I get to do it twice.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) will never understand this. I want to speak in support of the principle of the motion moved by the Hon. Member for the Beaches (Mr. Young). This is a totally non-partisan issue and that does bring to mind the work done by our late colleague, the Hon. Walter Dinsdale. I want to pay tribute to him on behalf of all Members of this House because of his work of love. Indeed, his entire life was dedicated to those Canadians who suffer from handicaps and disabilities.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): That work is now being carried on by my colleague the Hon. Member for Oxford (Mr. Halliday), and my colleague the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean), who has replaced the late Mr. Dinsdale on the committee.

I was looking into a little bit of the background earlier today on the hearing impaired, and I was surprised to learn that hearing loss is the most common form of disability, that 1.5 million Canadians have some degree of hearing impairment, that 200,000 Canadians are profoundly deaf and 550,000 have difficulties hearing in both ears. A quarter of a million people wear hearing aids and an equal number of individuals could use them. Current demographic trends suggest that more individuals will be using them as the population grows older. I apologise for using notes on these statistics, but they are startling and I wanted to make sure that I was correct.

With the permission of Hon. Members, I would like to digress for a moment to illustrate how important the problem of the hearing impaired has become. In terms of one particular project in my riding, a lady by the name of Jacqueline Harbour has started a school for hearing-ear dogs. The problem of the hearing impaired in Canada is as significant as, if not more so, those with visual difficulties. They can be treated in much the same way as the blind who are provided with seeing-eye dogs. I will refer to the work of Mrs. Harbour in greater detail on a future occasion, but it is really incredible to see the dog actually taking the place of the human ear and alert the hearing impaired to the telephone ringing, the doorbell sounding or anything of this nature around the home. This project deserves national attention, and I will be giving it that attention at the earliest opportunity.

In this particular motion we are talking specifically about telephones. The progress report of the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped issued in June, 1982 made three basic yet very important recommendations. Recommendation No. 56 read:

> Reduce telephone rates for hearing impaired persons who need special TDD (teletypewriter) equipment.

Recommendation No. 57 read:

> Special telephone equipment for disabled persons be provided under basic monthly charge.

Recommendation No. 58 read:

> Equip federal offices with special telephone equipment for disabled persons.

These recommendations were made to enhance the accessibility of the hearing impaired to general communications. They would also enhance the already valuable role played by these Canadians and would be in accordance with the Charter of Rights that was passed by the House.

However, there is a larger international situation of which the committee should be aware if and when it begins to deal with the issue, and I hope it is soon. The United States adopted accessibility standards—90 per cent of telephone receivers in that country are compatible. We do not have a large number of U.S. manufactured phone sets in the Canadian marketplace, but in all probability they would have a telecoil.

CRTC Decision No. 82-14 to allow business and home subscribers to purchase their own equipment has opened up the market. As a result we are receiving imports from Japan, Korea, Italy, Singapore, Poland and Sweden. Needless to say, these units may not be compatible. If we impose this new standard, it may be seen as a non-tariff trade barrier and we may be open to retaliation. If we want to explore international markets for our technology, we must cultivate these trade barriers. However, there is an excellent argument that we should have standards in place as we do for cars, medical devices and so on.

There may be some interim solutions which could be proposed to the non-compatible phone units being sold in Bell Canada territory where, incidentally, two-thirds of the hearing impaired reside. For example, we could put labels on these units indicating that they are not compatible or they do not work with a T-switch on hearing aids. That was suggested by the Canadian Hearing Society. Perhaps these temporary solutions could be considered while legislation requiring these units to be compatible is being discussed and studied.

The problem faced by my predecessor and I in this role as critic for communications, when discussing modifications that should be made and additions that should be considered by Bell Canada, was that they increase the cost to the consumer and place a bigger financial burden upon Bell Canada. I can sympathize with that point of view, but we are dealing with something which I think transcends the matter of cost to consumers. We are dealing with a person's hearing ability. That is something which is critical to all of us. A few more dollars being spent by the consumer to aid the hearing impaired is unarguable. If that is what a Commons committee looking further into this matter recommends, then Bell Canada and the people with normal hearing should be more than willing to give consideration to a slight additional cost if it were really to assist the hearing impaired.

In connection with Motion No. 91, of course we endorse the principle of enhancing opportunities for the hearing impaired. It is in line with the commitment the House has made to the "Obstacles" report and with the Charter of Rights. The question is how we best enhance opportunities for the hearing impaired.

There are several areas at which the committee could look. First, it could look at ensuring if the equipment of provincial telephone companies is compatible, such as B.C. Tel and Sask Tel. As members of the committee we should figure out a way to ensure that non-Bell telephone systems can be altered so that they are hearing aid compatible. Bell Canada has made a commitment to continue to ensure that its receivers are compatible. Given its commitment, we should try to work out a similar arrangement with provincial telephone companies.

Second, it could look at labelling. When I was consumer affairs critic for this Party for about three years, I learned that we would never be able to see the name of a product if all labels recommended by various commissions and committees were stuck all over it in both official languages, in imperial and metric. We should look at putting labels on telephones that are compatible with hearing aids for people who can see perfectly well. They would take precedence over many other labels of which I can think. We should be putting labels on all telephones that are compatible with hearing aids so that when hearing impaired persons buy telephones they will know that they can use them. That sounds reasonable. We should look at labelling public telephones. When we think of the number of public telephones in the country, that in itself will be a major but very necessary undertaking.

The Committee could also look at the idea of international standards so that some day we will be sure that technology will meet the need of the hearing impaired. Canada could take the role at the international level given the expertise of Bell Canada in this area. We have done it before and Bell's expertise in the area could be most useful internationally.

Then the committee could look at the extent to which the mobility of the hearing impaired is deterred in the workplace and how best to prevent it. There are many hundreds of thousands of productive individuals whose ability is impaired as a result of their hearing deficiency. This is something we as Members of Parliament should be looking at to correct.

The right of access to telecommunications by hearing impaired individuals is a very important issue. It is a non-partisan issue. As technology increases, it is only right that the largest disabled group in Canada be guaranteed equal accessibility. It is in that spirit that I endorse the motion by the Hon. Member for Beaches.

As that Hon. Member said earlier, the subject matter of this Bill, as technical, detailed and important as it is to the hearing impaired of this country, shoud be sent to the appropriate standing committee for detailed study and the calling of witnesses. Members on all sides of the House could be made aware not only of what Bell Canada and the provincial non-Bell companies can do now, but might be able to do in the future as technology increases. I would like to hear suggestions from the Canadian Hearing Society and other associations which have ideas to present to the committee based on the recommendations of this motion.

I am sure this Government would want to listen to the report of the disabled and to pay very close attention to the thrust of that report. I hope that Government Members recognize the obligation we have to Canada's hearing impaired and allow the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture to give this motion in the name of the Hon. Member for Beaches further examination. Therefore I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor):

That the motion be withdrawn and that the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Jack Burghardt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I wish to take this opportunity to speak to Motion No. 91 with regard to aid for the hearing impaired. I want to say first that we agree with the honourable intentions of the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) in presenting this motion. We know of his work on the Committee on the Disabled and Handicapped which came out with a far-reaching report concerning all handicapped and disabled persons. The report was entitled "Obstacles". Therefore, we know of his honourable intentions.

The motion presented to the House fails to take into consideration much of the work and many of the areas of progress undertaken by the Department of Communications in dealing with this very important subject matter. In the next few minutes I would like to share with the House some of these areas which the Department of Communications has already undertaken. Many of the steps taken thus far came about as a result of recommendations in the "Obstacles" report to which I referred earlier. Before speaking to those recommendations, I remind the House that the Department of Communications has for a number of years been vitally concerned in promoting telecommunication services for the disabled.

In recent years a number of activities designed to improve such services has been sponsored by the Department. I will have to refer to my notes to get the exact dates. As early as 1976 the Department commissioned research which was carried out between 1976 and 1978 by St. Paul University in Ottawa and which aimed at identifying the basic telecommunication needs of the disabled and the handicapped. Following this research at St. Paul's, a separate study was sponsored in 1979 at Queen's University to determine the telecommunications needs of the hearing impaired. Just this year the Department published the report of a study undertaken by Dr. Elaine Pressman of the University of Ottawa and the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario on the communication and telecommunication needs of the speech impaired. The Department, moreover, recently awarded a university research contract to Memorial University of Newfoundland to study the telecommunication needs of the cerebral palsied. I mention these past research studies that have been taken by the Department in order further to emphasize the fact that the Department has not been standing idly by, ignoring this very pressing need.

One of the problems that I have with this motion is that it does not recognize the fact that the Minister and the Department of Communications have indeed taken some very positive steps to try and alleviate this current concern.

There are numerous other examples which I could mention of initiatives on the part of the Department of Communications and the Minister that have been directed at improving the accessibility of the disabled to telecommunication services. I can speak personally on this because I was part of the first meeting. One of the recommendations in the "Obstacles" report referred to the setting up of a special advisory committee to advise the Minister of Communications on behalf of the disabled community, not just the hearing impaired but all handicapped, so that the Department would be able to provide better services for all handicapped people.

The first such meeting of this advisory committee which the Minister set up was held last June. I was privy to being part of that meeting. At that meeting were not only representatives of the hearing impaired but those with other physical handicaps; in other words, all areas. I would like to report that this advisory committee is presently at work with the Department of Communications in providing some stimulus and advice as to how the Department can further initiate improvements that will help handicapped people of all natures to have more access to telecommunication needs.

It is not just a matter of dealing with the hearing impaired; I must reiterate that the Department has looked at the entire question. We all know that there has been much concern regarding the hearing impaired when it comes to watching and listening to television. As a result of that, we have the close captioned hearing organization set up. That is well under way. Many of the broadcasting services at work in Canada have made use of the captioning services for the hearing impaired. It is certainly the intention of this Member, the Minister of Communications and the Department to see that further expanded. This not only involves the public network, the CBC, but I must also congratulate CTV, Global Telecommunications of Ontario and some of the private broadcasting outlets for at least establishing the foundation upon which this can be further developed.

There is much under way at present that will help the hearing impaired and others in the handicapped community. The year 1983 is World Communication Year and is a year, Mr. Speaker, of sharing technology with underserved nations. This is something of which we can be proud as far as communications in Canada is concerned because the Canadian communications industry is certainly leading the way in this area. As a matter of fact, there are some very important conferences on an international level still to come up before the year is out at which the Department of Communications will play a very important role not only in further developing hearing devices and hearing aids to help the hearing impaired in Canada but also throughout the world.

While the Hon. Member for Beaches is certainly honourable in his intent in presenting Motion No. 91, as I said earlier, it does not take into account much of the work and research and progress that has already been accomplished in this very important area. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I feel that we cannot—

The House resumed from June 5, 1981, consideration of the motion of Mr. McLean that Bill C-233, to encourage the role of the voluntary sector in Canadian society, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence.

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, on October 1 of this year the National Anti-Poverty Association released figures indicating that by definition, using an acceptable measurement, four million people in Canada were living below the poverty line. That, Sir, is one out of every six of us in this land of plenty and this land of opportunity.

Today we heard in the House a question directed to the Government expressing concern about another group of disadvantaged Canadians, the approximately one million Canadians in the country who have less than a seventh grade education and for whom the employment incentive and job-creation programs of the Government are of little or no benefit. According to the present policy of the Government, these people are the responsibility of the Provinces.

On Friday of this week, unemployment statistics for the month of September will be released. I do not think it would be going out on a limb to predict that there will be virtually no change in the level of unemployment in the country. Indeed, there may even be a slight increase. We know that the labour force figures which will be released in a few days' time will show that there are approximately a million and a half Canadians who are unemployed. If we count the hidden unemployed, we can bring that figure up to almost two million unemployed Canadians.

We know that included in that million and a half officially unemployed Canadians are approximately one-half million young people between the ages of 15 and 25 and approximately 600,000 women. These are the two groups that have been hardest hit by the recession. Indeed, these are the groups that are preoccupying us as we express our concerns in the House. The Bill introduced by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean), goes a long way toward addressing the concerns of the poor and those who have been hardest hit by the unemployment situation in the country.

I congratulate my colleague, the Hon. Member for Waterloo, not only for bringing in this Bill, which will enable the voluntary sector to play an even more important role in addressing the problems of the unemployed, but for the job that he has done in the House by articulating so eloquently the problems facing the voluntary sector of the country which has traditionally played an important role by looking after the needs of the less fortunate among us.

I do not mean to be critical in a partisan way, but I suppose almost inadvertently we have undermined the role of the voluntary sector through our desire to address in a dramatic and expeditious way the business of job creation. Our make-work programs have had the effect in many instances of undermining the work of voluntary organizations in the country. We should gear our employment programs toward complementing and assisting the work of the voluntary sector.

This Bill will assist the voluntary sector through the implementation of the National Voluntary Organizations Committee which would be provided certain tax breaks. In essence, the give and take proposal would enable charitable agencies to avail themselves of the same tax position as political parties with respect to donations so that the voluntary sector as a whole will finally have the necessary funding channelled to it to realize its proven potential for job creation.

What is the potential of the voluntary sector in terms of job creation? We have heard evidence, Mr. Speaker, presented to the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration from members of organizations such as the Canadian Council on Social Development. We have heard from officials of the national voluntary organizations, such as the YMCA, the YWCA and the National Anti-Poverty Organization. These officials told the committee that the voluntary sector would be capable of producing three to four times as many jobs as the Government through its make-work programs if the money was channelled in some way through the voluntary sector. This is one way for us to assist the voluntary sector to achieve that potential. We should give it the same income tax breaks as are given to the political parties of the nation. Surely that is not too much to ask.

We should assist the voluntary sector. We should provide it with encouragement because it is in a position to help the less fortunate of our nation. It is in the best position to help the poorest of the poor and to help the most uneducated among us who really have little or no opportunity to enter the trade colleges of the country because of the low grade of their primary education. It is the sector that is best capable of providing that kind of assistance and I believe the Government would be well served by allowing this Bill to go to a committee of the House.

I would therefore move, Mr. Speaker:

That the motion be amended by deleting all of the words after the word "that" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-233, An Act to encourage the role of the voluntary sector in Canadian society, be not now read a second time but that the order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

That amendment is seconded by the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean).

• (1710)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I should inform the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) that the Hon. Member for Waterloo cannot move the motion being proposed since he is already the mover of the main motion.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, perhaps you would permit me to gauge the mood of the House. There may be a Member of the Government who might be disposed to second my motion.

Mr. Fisher: I will.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. Douglas Fisher (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to talk this motion out. However, I should like to get a few thoughts on the record and I think some of my colleagues across the way want to add their throughts. We have until six o'clock before the motion would expire and if we are careful and do not go past the deadline, we can all get our thoughts on the record and then pass the subject matter to the Finance Committee.

May I commend the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) the Chairman of that Committee, who has for some time now aggressively sought this kind of subject matter for the Committee's consideration. The Finance Committee has done a very good job over the past two years in considering tax legislation, banking and a variety of subjects and has passed its opinions on to the Government. It has become a sort of tradition started by the former Minister of Finance, the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), who last year wanted the Finance Committee to comment on tax matters. Some very controversial legislation was sent to the Finance Committee in the summer of 1982 when we had two or three months of discussion and reported to the Minister. Some of the Committee's recommendations were then incorporated in Bill C-139.

There has been a lot of activity of that sort and all of us who are members of the Finance Committee are proud of our contribution. It has worked as parliamentary committees should and much of the credit does to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre, the Chairman.

The subject matter of the Bill, charities, is the subject matter of the discussion paper issued by the Department of Finance entitled "Charities in the Canadian Tax System". I refer Hon. Members to that paper which has captured the attention of charities and foundations across the country. I understand there was an August 15 deadline for submissions to the Department on that paper but submissions are still coming in at the rate of 40 or 50 per week. They are being accepted and studied despite the deadline. There will be more consultation between the Department and the private sector before any recommendations go on to the Minister. The reference of this material to the Finance Committee will complement the work that the Department of Finance has been doing on its own.

I have reflected on the experience I have had with charitable organizations in my riding, Mr. Speaker. When I first heard about this Bill it occurred to me that Mississauga charities were probably typical of those that operate all across the country. Thousands of people are involved in a variety of activities, from community enrichment to hobby and sports groups. They do not rely on big handouts from Government but on the ingenuity and generosity of participating citizens. Some of them are ready to charge the beneficiaries of their activities a small user fee.

There is a school lunch program in my city which affect thousands of families. Mothers from across Mississauga go to the schools and help in the supervision of children over the lunch hour, trying to upgrade their nutritional standards at the same time. They take occasional small grants from Government agencies but are proud of the fact that they have a self-supporting volunteer organization. They recruit senior citizens and I think they are about to go to the New Horizons' program to see if there are ways to encourage and fund the activities of seniors to complement their own work in the schools at lunch hour. The schools that take part in the program are grateful for it and the people who run it take pride in their self-sufficiency and independence.

In Mississauga we hold an annual Citizen of the Year dinner. The people nominated and the person selected are voted for and supported by volunteer groups in Mississauga. Over 200 people come to the dinner and the proceeds go to a selected group within the city. The award is named after an outstanding citizen, the late Gordon Shipp, who was a great community builder as well as a leader and volunteer. The family, under the leadership of Harold Shipp, continues the tradition and supports the Citizen of the Year dinner. The people nominated work in hospitals, with crippled children, school associations, trade unions and business associations. This year the winner was Mr. David Doncaster and I am sure Hon. Members would like me to extend my congratulations to him. He is a well rounded community spirited man whose contributions have made our community stronger. The people involved in the award do not rely on Government help. They do not want it. They rely on their own ingenuity and I compliment them for it.

An Hon. Member referred to Government grants and Government aid programs. In Mississauga these programs work very, very well. For example, the New Horizons program was used by the Senior Asian Multicultural Association under the leadership of Mr. J. D. Mohan. Every year it gives an award for human rights and community development to people who show leadership in those areas. It is a nice occasion when a bus driver, a postman, the mayor or any other person active in the community who contributes to human rights and community development is recognized.

The New Horizons program also helped a group of senior citizens in the Ivan Franko Home. That is one of the non-profit homes built by the outstanding Ukrainian community in my city. It has a few extra acres of land which have been turned into a farm. The New Horizons program was used to buy gardening and farming equipment. Residents in the home now grow their own food and are becoming more and more self-sufficient through their efforts. They have a nice hobby in the garden and they have returns for their efforts. There are beehives and orchards and a variety of vegetable plots which the residents maintain. That is something which has made that corner of Mississauga very pleasant. I understand that the home will be relying on a Summer Canada grant next year to hire a few students to maintain the orchard and to continue this farming operation.

● (1720)

The Summer Canada program with students in Mississauga worked very well. For example, this year I received two letters which I feel are worth noting. The first letter was from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Mr. Victor Irvine, District Administrator, wrote to me on September 13, and I would like to quote one paragraph:

> We, at the CNIB, have been pleased to provide the vehicle for the employment of sincere students and to facilitate meaningful programs to visually impaired children.

As well, Mr. Speaker, on August 26 I heard from Lorri Smith and Barb Brandow of the Boys and Girls Club of Peel. I would like to quote from their letter:

I would like to thank you very much for your help and support with The Boys and Girls Club of Peel Summer Adventure Day Camp. It was very important that these children had some opportunity for summer recreation. With your support that was made possible.

The project was a great success and we hope it will be possible to run it again next year.

Summer Canada, in my city, helped people as well in places like the San Salvador Centre where three students worked out a slide presentation on the immigrant experience in our city. Those slides will be distributed to service clubs, schools and churches and will help its residents to understand some of the emotional upheaval which new people in Mississauga sometimes feel.

On the job creation side, Mr. Speaker, the United Way, which, of course, is currently in the middle of its fund raising drive, has just received $70,000 from the Canada-Ontario Employment Development Program, COED. It is going to use that money to hire four people who will then improve its fund raising and community group liaison work. As well, people at the San Salvador Centre are developing a new community centre which will become the home for Serbian people in Mississauga. Again, that community centre is being built by volunteers in partnership with the Government.

In the Canada Works area last year, two non-profit community newspapers, the Valley Echo in the centre of Mississauga and the Meadowvale World in the community of Meadowvale each hired a person who has helped to build up the newspapers. These are non-profit monthly newspapers which pass on important neighbourhood information to local residents. It is the kind of information which can only really be communicated through this sort of community paper. Each of these newspapers hired a person who has contributed greatly to the advertising revenues of the nespapers and to their internal administration. I was very pleased to be able to recommend both those organizations for these grants.

The Peel Multicultural Council is hard at work on a citizenship program. The Malton Community Council and the Mississauga Canadian-Italian Association are helping to build up immigrant aid services in those two important parts of our city.

I have mentioned all of these organizations, Mr. Speaker, as I believe that Government and volunteers work hand in hand best in this way. When these kinds of specific grants are used they help people accomplish given tasks, specific tasks, without creating undue dependence upon Government. The very nature of the work of a volunteer is to stay independent from Government, to use extra energy without having to rely on the public sector. I feel these grants, whether they be New Horizons, Summer Canada, COED or the Canada Works, are helping people to build up the quality of life in our city. They are not the fundamental financing, not the lifeline of the group, but they are important seed money which launches specific and important projects for each organization.

The grants also help these groups avoid a dependency on Government. They are available, of course, for parliamentary scrutiny. They are available for community examination in our city. We here in Ottawa on the Government side have to answer why we are spending money in this fashion, so these grants satisfy the requirements of a responsible Government. For the groups which receive them, grants are available in predictable amounts and there are predictable methods of application. For the people in Government they are predictable as well because we can control or dedicate specific amounts of money towards each of these programs. These grants are not open-ended. They do not add willy-nilly to Government spending. They add specific, concrete amounts each year to Government spending. The community benefit, of course, comes in the form of accomplishments in each group which many times results in extra employment.

It is my view, Mr. Speaker, that any time we are going to offer assistance to charities—and I feel it is important to do that—we must remember the question of dependence on Government agencies. We do not want our volunteer groups to become too deeply involved in Government financing and then find the only way they can stay alive is through repeated injections of grants. I do not believe the community wants that.

When I approve a grant in my own area to a specific group, I make sure it knows it is only going to last for a year. It is not there for an unending period of time in the future; it is there for a specific period of time. I do not feel we want groups to be built up to rely solely on federal Government largesse. We want groups which will take the opportunity provided by these grants to build up specific projects or special programs without becoming dependent upon us. In my city, that is what people seem to respond to. They seem to like that approach. People seem to agree that a specific targeted spending of grants is an appropriate way to support worth-while activities and to develop some employment.

When we are looking at this issue, it is my hope that we will not ignore all the good ideas which the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean) has raised. He has proposed that a variety of Government facilities should be made available to volunteers, whether they be in charities, sports leagues or any other voluntary agency. However, I would be concerned that we would be constantly making these facilities available and creating a dependence on Government which neither the Government nor the people really want.

As we study this issue, I would like to take a look at that question of dependency. I am very proud of being associated with the community groups and volunteer agencies in my city. I feel they really improve the quality of life there. I would like to take this opportunity, in this brief address, to extend my congratulations to the men and women who have worked so hard and who freely and generously have dedicated their time to their neighbours and to their city.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I will take only about five or six minutes to speak on the principle of this Bill. I will begin by congratulating the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean) on addressing this very important problem. I would also like to take this opportunity to say that I could not disagree more with almost everything which the Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr.

Fisher) has said in the contradictory remarks he has made on this very important topic. We have heard from the community bulletin board of the Hon. Member for Missisauga North and I did not think that was the intention of this particular piece of legislation.

The 1960s and 1970s were the golden age of Government programs. If there is anything we should have learned from that golden age of Government programs it is that Governments fail. Contrary to what the Hon. Member for Mississauga North said, the problem with Government programs is that you cannot depend on them, rather than that you can. It depends upon the caprice of the Government. On the one hand, the Hon. Member for Mississauga North says one can depend on them. On the other hand, he says that the problem with these community agencies is that they should not depend on Government grants. The Hon. Member does not have it straight. The problem with Government programs, I say again, is that you cannot always depend on them.

It is ironic, Mr. Speaker, that Government programs grew at the time of greatest prosperity. It was in the mid-60s to the 1970s that Government programs grew. Is it not ironic that it is during the times of recession that the Government programs fail? The Government programs pull back, and the people who need help the most get the least during these times when they ought to be able to depend on them. Therefore, it is a time like that when the voluntary agencies and charitable organizations are most necessary. They should not have to depend on the caprice of the federal Government to feed them.

I cannot understand the audacity of the Hon. Member for Mississauga North in listing such organizations as New Horizons and Canada Works as voluntary agencies, when in fact they are Government grant programs, just the thing that we think ought to be avoided.

First, I would say that we need to encourage voluntary agencies and charitable organizations because they are most capable of reaching the most needy. They are the ones that are out there in the community, meeting the people where the needs are the greatest. All one must do is look at the agenda of people's law school, trying to help those who cannot help themselves because they do not have the mechanism. Government cannot do it.

Second, Government is not the cheapest way of doing it. Lest people think that I will attack Canadian Government programs, I want to give an illustration by way of our neighbours to the south, the United States. It is no accident that the highest per capita income in the United States is in the community surrounding Washington, D.C. Who lives in those communities? They are the highly paid administrators of Government programs. I think I have my history right when I say that those Government programs sprang up during the years of Lyndon Johnson, and rightly thereafter, with his war on poverty. He did wage a war on poverty. It was a poverty of Government administrators, because they are well paid, thank you very much. Government agencies are simply not very cheap.

If one wants to have the work done well, and if one wants to have it done economically, one must turn to the voluntary agencies, to these self-help organizations. That is why the Hon. Member for Waterloo has been promoting in this House a very good program called the "Give and Take". We use that same principle for political parties. We seem to think it is good for political parties to be able to get a tax reduction so that they can operate in an accountable way. If it is good for political parties, why should it not be good for charitable organizations and self-help agencies, the voluntary organizations? As the Hon. Member for Waterloo can attest, the "Give and Take" program has been shown to be a more accountable, cheaper way of funding agencies than the grant system. Why should the Government not take the best way of doing it and do it through the "Give and Take" program?

Finally, I want to mention a point raised by the Hon. Member for Mississauge North. He complimented, by heaping encomiums on the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans), the way the Bill would be dealt with in committee.

Mr. McGrath: Would you repeat that?

Mr. Friesen: Encomiums, yes; it is a great Latinized English word!

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Tell us what it is!

Mr. McGrath: Spell it!

Mr. Friesen: He heaped these praises, these great praises.

Now that I have taken 30 seconds to define the word, may I have 30 seconds more in which to say what I wanted to say? He heaped too much praise—I know the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre can take a lot of compliments, but even he had a hard time handling these—saying that the Bill would be dealt with expeditiously in the committee. I want to say to the Hon. Member for Mississauga North that almost to the day four years ago I presented a motion to the House that was unanimously passed dealing with tax breaks for the parents of handicapped children. It passed on to the Finance Department. That motion has not as yet been dealt with by the Department of Finance. We have had an Obstacles Committee submitting two reports, but it has not yet dealt with the motion. Regardless of how efficient and interested the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre is concerning the work of this particular committee, and the necessity that he may see in dealing with the report, I want to see some action before I believe all of those encomiums that he has heaped on the Hon. Member.

Mr. McGrath: I am not sure that that is parliamentary language!

Mr. Friesen: Again, I want to close by complimenting the Hon. Member for Waterloo on the work that he has done and by saying that this Bill turns the attention of the Government in the right direction and, hopefully, will encourage the Government to see the value of voluntary agencies so that these agencies can do their work unmolested by Government whim or caprice, in a way which will have dependable financing. The people who are interested in these agencies will give to them, if only the Government will encourage them to do that through the "Give and Take" program.

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Something must be happening this afternoon, Mr. Speaker. This is the fourth or fifth occasion today when all the Parties in this House have agreed on something.

Mr. Huntington: There is an election coming up.

Miss Jewett: I am getting terribly worried about it. I agree, as does my Party, that the subject of the Bill should go to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs rather than the one that was originally mentioned, the Committee on External Affairs and National Defence, although that Committee, come to think of it, will probably change if the reorganization Bill ever goes through, because trade will presumably come out of it. In any event, we do agree and are pleased that the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean) introduced the Bill, but for different reasons.

I have been listening to all the comments on the Bill so far, and people are supporting its subject matter going to committee for rather different reasons. The Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr. Fisher) supports its going so he will have a chance to make another speech about everything the Government does in his constituency through Canada Works or Summer Works or whatever.

Mr. Fisher: Don't be cynical.

Miss Jewett: Well, the Hon. Member may be cynical. That seems to be the main reason he wanted to speak to the Bill this afternoon and wants it to go to the Committee.

The Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen), on the other hand, wants it to go to the Committee in order that we can have the Government removed from intervention in society where he believes that voluntary organizations can do the job just as well.

Mr. Friesen: Or better.

Miss Jewett: The Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), on the other hand, was the one with whom I found the closest affinity as far as his remarks were concerned.

Mr. Friesen: Watch yourself!

Miss Jewett: However, he did point out that we are now in a society of 1.5 million officially unemployed people. We have countless hundreds of thousands living below the poverty line. The implication of all his remarks was certainly not that the voluntary sector could look after all those people. It cannot. Therefore, I think we would all have to emphasize the need for a very comprehensive and shared approach, perhaps one might say, but certainly with governments having to take the initiative; a very comprehensive approach to the problems of unemployment and poverty.

Back to the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta for a moment.

Mr. Friesen: Leave me alone.

Miss Jewett: I could not honestly agree when he said that there was nothing in the Bill that brought the Government into the scene as far as the voluntary sector was concerned. As I read it, it is suggesting that the Commission to be established will bring the Government in—this is found in Clause 6—in the sense that the Government will provide the voluntary sector with use of Government communications facilities such as telephone lines and computer time in off-peak periods, special rates or unique designation on charter and excursion flights and rail travel within Canada, special postal rates for informational materials and publications, and the use of unused premises or meeting rooms, all of which seem to me to be very admirable.

• (1740)

As the Hon. Member for St. John's East said, perhaps the most significant thing the commission will do is have contributions to voluntary organizations treated the same as political contributions are now treated. I am sure no one would deny that these all concern Government involvement.

The voluntary sector is perhaps hampered to some extent in its work by some of the so-called short-term employment programs in which the present Government is indulging. I believe that is the case.

I also wanted to comment on what I believe to be a remarkable growth in one part of the voluntary sector that perhaps has more people contributing to it than has been the case up to now. I am speaking of the voluntary sector in fields like international development, peace and disarmament. There are a number of areas in which many people are becoming extremely involved in setting up voluntary organizations. While CUSO has existed for some time, churches, other groups and non-governmental organizations are becoming increasingly involved in Third World problems.

An organization in my constituency called Public Education for Peace is a voluntary group dedicated to the idea of greater education on issues of arms control and disarmament. I believe this is a very hopeful development when volunteers are becoming increasingly involved and volunteer organizations are becoming more involved in our relationships particularly with Third World countries. I believe this involvement has been even greater than at any other time in Canada's recent history.

I hope it does not detract from what we contribute to the many excellent domestic, charitable and educational organizations. Indeed, I would hope, since Canadians are showing an equal concern over these matters which I have just mentioned, that the Government would be even more encouraged to bring positive and explicit proposals to the committee for ways to assist domestic and internationally oriented voluntary and charitable organizations. I hope the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta is wrong when he states that he does not believe the Government will do this.

Let me reiterate that a major assistance to these organizations would be to allow contributions to them to be deducted in a similar manner to contributions made in the democratic political process.

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton South): Mr. Speaker, I just want to take a moment to say that a small step forward is about to be taken in the House this afternoon before six o'clock. It is a small step on behalf of non-governmental and voluntary organizations which play a crucial part in the life of our country and creation of our society which is enriched by the participation of so many individuals who express their active concern for the lives of their neighbours and others in our country.

I believe I should review the contents of this Bill which is about to be referred to the committee. It is an Act to encourage the role of the voluntary sector in Canadian society. This Bill, which would establish a commission to examine the various aspects of the voluntary sector in our society, essentially says that the commission shall make recommendations on the need for legislation or any other action that may be required to encourage greater financial contributions through registered charities.

This addresses the basic issue that the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean) has brought before the House in this Bill, and indeed that I brought before the House three years ago in an effort to improve the financial situation of charities and voluntary agencies, given their serious difficulties due to inflation and great competition from the work sector. We are being asked to consider helping the voluntary sector that already provides 175,000 jobs, which is more than the construction industry. They have an annual wage bill of $1.7 billion and total revenues of $5.6 billion. That amounts to fully 3 per cent of the Gross National Product.

The jobs that have been created in the voluntary sector are labour-intensive by nature, giving work to disadvantaged groups such as women, youth and part-timers. The voluntary sector can create one full-time position at a cost equal to one-third of that required for the federal Government to create a similar position. The Government must take these statistics into account during these hard economic times.

When the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) brought down his budget last April he removed the $100 standard deduction in an effort to increase the revenues of the Government. He said he was giving the voluntary agencies half of what they asked for and denied the other half. The full proposal was called the give-and-take proposal in which the $100 standard deduction would be eliminated in return for a 50 per cent tax credit on what was given.

While this is not the proper time to argue the substance of the case, I want to say that the non-governmental organizations now have an opportunity to come before the appropriate parliamentary committee which will be examining this Bill and make their case before that committee that they have been denied before.

When Members of the House, including myself, tried to make the case that full implementation of give-and-take would actually save the Government money, the Government's spokesman at that time quoted statistics that were dredged up from the Finance Department and said that, to the contrary, it would cost the Government money. There is a dispute at the moment about whether the give-and-take proposal in its entirety will cost the Government or benefit it. It is my submission and that of the national voluntary organizations committee that the implementation of the give-and-take proposal in its entirety will benefit the Government financially.

I now challenge the non-governmental organizations that will be reading the account of today's debate and will take some heart for what is about to happen in a few moments, to get their facts together, update their statistics and make representations to the committee so that it can then turn to the Finance officials with figures to prove them right or wrong to us as Members of Parliament.

When the Finance Department is then challenged before the committee to refute the argument that has been made time and again by the non-governmental organizations and the voluntary sector, I believe we will see some progress. It is, however, one thing to make proposals in the House and for a committee to approve them. As the Hon. Member said, a proposal could be before the House for three years without being fully implemented. Nevertheless, the rising pressure from the voluntary sector—47,000 registered charities could benefit from this—could put a lot of pressure on the Government once the facts are clearly determined. I am now pleading with the voluntary sector to make the appropriate representation before the committee.

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I first want to acknowledge and thank the Parliamentary Secretary and my colleague from St-John's East (Mr. McGrath) for their collaboration and suggestion that this matter be referred now to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs for further study. I believe this is at least a measure of hope to the voluntary sector in Canada which has been looking for some action in this area for some 15 years.

I want in the moments left before we take action on this Bill to make an observation on the comment of the Parliamentary Secretary about the response from the charitable organizations to the discussion paper put forward by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde). He will know that the Department had been deluged and that these was a clear misunderstanding on the part of the authors of the paper as to the difference between charitable organizations and charitable foundations. Surely it would have been appropriate before ever altering such a paper to begin to talk with the people concerned.

Now that we have dealt with it as the cart before the horse, we are now beginning to move back to the point where normal people would suggest that you hear from the people affected and begin somehow to design a procedure that will be of some help to them. We look forward to their discussion and to the many proposals alluded to by my colleagues in terms of the definition of a charity, tax incentives and the operations that will be of help.

I have in mind that this discussion has been going on since the Government in the 1970s commissioned the "People in Action" report through to consultation in 1981 when the then Secretary of State drew together the national voluntary agencies. In the last year the present Secretary of State (Mr. Joyal) promised a task force. This was shot down in the budget by the Minister of Finance. Maybe now that we are moving from the Department of the Secretary of State into the Department of Finance we will begin to have this matter addressed in a serious way.

Since I introduced this matter on June 5, 1981 I have been pursuing the issue in committee as critic for the Secretary of State, and in this House. Everywhere people say: "Yes, it is a motherhood issue, but it might cost us". The interesting matter is that the Government affirms that it has not been prepared to set up any Cabinet committee or vehicle to co-ordinate somehow all of the effective policies on the voluntary sector. I have been advocating the creation of a Cabinet committee through which all policies and program proposals before the Government will be cleared in terms of their contributions and impacts in relation to the whole voluntary sector.

In concluding this debate, may I remind the House and those who may be following our discussions today of the importance of rehearsing again what is the impact on this sector. The financial impact is only slowly dawning on many of us.

In a study released by the Secretary of State in January of this year entitled "Some Financial and Economic Dimensions of Registered Charities and Volunteer Activity in Canada", by David Ross, the impact is fully outlined. This paper surely ought to be before the Committee when it reviews the recommendations not only of the Finance Department's discussion paper on charities and foundations but as a context for deciding whether there is a cost benefit. In his report Mr. Ross talks about the revenue and finances of charitable organizations. He notes:

> The total revenue received from all sources by the 39,965 registered charities was $5.84 billion in 1980 (hospitals and teaching institutions were excluded in the financial survey). In comparative terms, this amount is equal to 11 per cent of federal government revenues.

Mr. Ross goes on to talk about the number of paid workers. He states:

> —it is concluded an equivalent of about 142,000 full-time positions are generated in the charitable sector.

Then he talks about the number of volunteer workers:

> —about 2.7 million Canadians donated an average 2.9 hours per week to organized volunteer work. This represents 15 per cent of the working-age population, and varies between 11 per cent and 27 per cent among the Provinces.

He then deals with the expenditures of charitable organizations in terms of the economy of the nation. He writes:

> One of the largest expenditure items is represented by wages and salaries—amounting to one-third of total expenses. Also comprising a one-third share are direct charitable disbursements (aid) to individuals and groups both at home and abroad. Administrative, conference, meeting and communication expenses, and expenditures to produce goods and services for sale, constitute the other one-third share.

When Mr. Ross focuses on the economic value of volunteer work, he says:

> The figure has been placed at $2.0 billion, which is equivalent to 1.3 per cent of all wages and salaries paid to Canadian workers.

In summing it all up under the heading "The Economic Contribution of Registered Charities and Volunteer Workers", he writes:

> Combining the economic contributions of registered charities and volunteer workers gives an estimate of the economic contribution of the "voluntary" sector. The value of this contribution is estimated at $4.5 billion, or 1.7 per cent of gross national product.

Surely these facts laid before the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs are an indication that after 15 years of intentions concerning giving encouragement to this sector at a time when we are seeking economic growth and seeking to maintain a qualitative standard of life in a nation, at the same time bringing our costs into reality with today's financial climate, it is a most appropriate subject. I look to other Members in the House to encourage the presence of voluntary agency representatives to present the case more fully than we can and, therefore, encourage positive action by this Government and by this House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It has been moved by Mr. McGrath, seconded by Mr. Fisher:

> That the motion be amended by deleting all of the words after the word "that" and substituting the following therefor:
> "Bill C-233, an Act to encourage the role of the voluntary sector in Canadian society, be not now read a second time but that the order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion, as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion, as amended, agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Accordingly, the order is discharged, the Bill is withdrawn and the subject matter thereof is referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Finance Affairs.

Order discharged and Bill withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is there a disposition to call it six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It being six o'clock, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 2(1).

At 5.57 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Tuesday, October 4, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 33 (Mr. Mazankowski).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair sees the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) rising but it is the Chair's understanding that he has used his allotted time.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Could the House tell us when, in fact, the Speaker would be addressing the question of the procedural debates, which was offered to take place this morning?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, if I recall correctly, I believe the Speaker indicated that she would be entertaining arguments this afternoon. I presume now, in light of the special debate that will be taking place this afternoon, it may occur after that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): That is my understanding as well.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of Motion No. 33 moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) which is now before the House. The purpose of this amendment is to make a change to Clause 17 of the legislation. Clause 17 deals with the duties and functions of the Administrator. In Clause 17(1)(d) as it is now worded, the Administrator would have the power to "promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers".

I would note this clause as presently worded would not give the Administrator the power to require or to order the companies to ensure the movement of grain in the most efficient possible manner. It would merely ensure that such arrangements between the various railways would be promoted. The purpose of this amendment would be to include the words "and shall require", in Clause 17(d), thereby ensuring that the Administrator would in fact have the power to order where necessary—and, of course, it would not always be necessary—the railway companies to exchange cars in the most efficient possible manner.

We in this Party have argued that there is in fact no need for a Grain Transportation Agency and that the Canadian Wheat Board should be empowered to carry on in the manner in which it has performed its functions in the past. I am pleased to note that the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) was, as usual, very eloquent in his support of the Canadian Wheat Board. Naturally we are also concerned that, because of our position on the Grain Transportation Agency, the Administrator may already have too much power under this Act.

The purpose of this amendment is to recognize that as long as we are to have a Grain Transportation Agency and an Administrator with powers to perform under the Act and to assist the Grain Transportation Agency, one of the essential powers should be the power to require the efficient use of railway cars. No matter what public agency ultimately has control over the transportation of grain, whether it be the Wheat Board—and it is our view that it should be the Wheat Board—the Canadian Grains Commission, the Canadian Grain Transportation Agency as proposed in the Bill or whatever, it should have the power to direct the railroads to exchange cars to promote efficiency.

There should be far more interchange between CP and CN in order to get these two companies working together for shorter hauls and quicker delivery of grain. Ultimately we in this Party support the integration of the railway system in Canada. We believe it is about time the railway transportation system should progressively be brought under the ownership of the people of Canada. In its present form this Bill would ensure a bonanza to the shareholders of CP, but it would ensure tremendous losses to Canadian farmers. It is for that reason that we have called for the Bill to be split and for there to be a speedy upgrading of rail facilities as well as a return of the coal lands to the Province of British Columbia. In so far as this Bill would impoverish farmers and benefit the shareholders of CP, obviously we are totally opposed to it.

In terms of the amendment itself, at the present time the Crow rate allegedly involves tremendous losses to the railway companies; they cry great crocodile tears at how much money they are losing and they hang on to loaded cars of grain for movement to export positions even though they might be moved over another line much more efficiently. This would cut the distances, this would cut the costs, and it would add to the over-all efficiency of the movement of grain. If, at a time when movers of grain claim to be losing money, they are holding on to hopper cars of grain, if that is happening already, just imagine what would happen under the provisions of this legislation with the tremendous revenues which could potentially accrue to CP Rail for moving grain. What it is going to do naturally is try to hold on to that grain as long as possible. While this might benefit the shareholders of CP Rail, it would be to the detriment of the efficient movement of grain in Canada.

I have received many representations of concern not only from the Prairies but indeed from my own constituency. There are not many farmers living in Burnaby, but there are many retired farmers and people who are concerned about their friends and relatives in Saskatchewan and elsewhere in the Prairies. It is in that spirit of co-operation that I speak to this particular amendment. The amendment would ensure that in my area, in the Port of Vancouver which includes Burnaby, grain would be moved far more efficiently. As I have indicated, there is already a bottleneck in the Port of Vancouver. A recent study conducted by Travacon Research entitled "Vancouver Rail Access Study, Phase I Report" indicates very clearly that there are already bottlenecks in the Port of Vancouver.

I have noted on a number of occasions that there have been problems in my constituency in terms of the efficient movement of CP, CN and Burlington Northern, all three of which traverse the boundaries of my constituency. In my view, this report provides very eloquent testimony for the need for this amendment. If indeed the Administrator is to have powers under this Act, surely one of the most essential powers should be the power to ensure the efficient movement of grain and, where necessary, it will be exchanged from one company to another. This study forecasts very serious bottlenecks in the movement of grain and other commodities throughout the rail system, particularly in the Port of Vancouver.

I note in this Bill that there is not one penny which would go toward the upgrading of the Port of Vancouver, which of course includes Burnaby. This amendment would go a very small but important distance. I am pleased that the Hon. Member for Vegreville has put it forward to ensure a more efficient rail system in this country.

I mentioned that under the present system the railways are holding on to their cars. I wish to quote from Mr. Justice Emmett Hall, the co-ordinator of the Crow Coalition, a truly outstanding Canadian, one who has served this country well. What more eminent authority could there be on the Crow than Mr. Justice Hall? At a meeting of the Transport Committee in Regina, Saskatchewan on August 9, 1983, he said:

> We heard a lot about efficiency, and the whole idea of the railways about efficiency was to get rid of the branch lines.

I do not have to remind this House how the Liberal Government is attempting to get rid of branch line after branch line in this country, but that is another speech for another time. On the question of efficiency, he said:

> I am told by senior railway people, there is a railway philosophy that once the line gets hold of a commodity for transport, it will hang on to that commodity to the delivery points, come hell or high water.

That is under the existing statutory rates. If they are holding on to grain now, imagine the extent to which they would be doing that in a very inefficient and unproductive manner under the new Crow rates.

I have received a letter from a constituent, Mrs. Joyce Hansford of Spruce Street in Burnaby, and it is important that this letter be read into the record. What she has to say is directly relevant to the amendment before us today in terms of the efficient movement of grain, particularly in the Burnaby-Port of Vancouver area. She writes:

Dear Mr. Robinson:

> Further to our conversation regarding the proposed Crow freight rate where it pertains to the Vancouver waterfront, I cannot but emphasize the concern my whole family feels at the further threat to our livelihood by this proposed legislation over the years. We have had three generations working on the waterfront at one time.
> Right now we have nine people directly concerned with this industry and I might point out that I am aware of families having more numbers than we have involved, not to mention friends.
> If this container business goes to Seattle—

The implications of this amendment are that it could very well do so if it is defeated.

> —(who incidentally have more container cranes than our two large and one small crane, plus one crane in the process of being erected), this will result in a waste of money! We even have one dock that has been condemned as unsafe and as far as can be determined no plans for its repair.

I emphasize that under this Bill not a penny would go toward upgrading the facilities in the Port of Vancouver.

> This port has been the most productive, both in tonnage and profit and also the most neglected. I realize that last year this port took over its own autonomy. Are they now throwing this to the wolves?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I really question the relevance of the Hon. Member's remarks to the specific amendment now before the House. At the report stage in the House of Commons, remarks must apply in strict fashion to the amendment. Hon. Members should not stray away from the point in all directions. I appreciate the validity of the Hon. Member's points in a general way, but I would invite him to speak specifically to the amendment now before the House.

● (1120)

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I have tried not to stray in the course of my remarks and certainly I will in fact, in drawing this letter to a conclusion, show how it is directly relevant to the amendment which is before the House.

As my constituent concluded:

> We feel quite bitter that now we are going to subsidize a foreign port again at the expense of unemployment in our own port.
> I must ask our Government to please reconsider this legislation before they—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but I must inform him that his time has expired.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to enter this debate on this very historic piece of legislation which is before us today.

Mr. Benjamin: Black historic.

Mr. Keeper: Yes, it certainly is a historic mistake, as my colleague has indicated by his interjection.

We are dealing with an amendment introduced by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) who is a Member of the Conservative Party. We in this Party, Mr. Speaker, are delighted and only too happy to support this amendment. It is good to know that even the Conservatives can come up with positive—

Mr. Benjamin: A good socialist amendment.

Mr. Keeper: They come up with useful socialist suggestions from time to time. It is good to see Members of the Conservative Party endorse the regulation of the free enterprise economy as this amendment proposes, Mr. Speaker, but to be a little more serious, I do welcome the initiative on behalf of the Conservative Party in this matter because it is a good amendment. It reminds one of the fact that while Members of the Conservative Party at the beginning of the Crow debate did not seem to understand the full historic significance of the debate before the House, they have recently come around and offered their support to the general thrust and direction of our critique of this legislation. Therefore, we are only too happy to support them when they come up with a positive, useful and constructive amendment.

This amendment seeks to give authority to the Commissioner of the Grain Transportation Agency to order the railways to act in an efficient manner. At the present time the Commissioner of this Agency does not have that authority. There appears to be evidence that such authority is required. In other words, the railways do not always act in an efficient manner when it comes to the transportation of grain. That is one very important, underlying assumption in this particular amendment. It is particularly important because efficiency underlies the whole notion of a free enterprise economy.

Mr. Nystrom: Efficiency?

Mr. Keeper: Yes, efficiency is the philosophical underpinning of a free enterprise economy. It is this philosophy that is being applied to the farmers in an attempt to justify the change in the Crow rate. It has been indicated that the yardstick that much be used to measure how much of the cost of grain transportation the farmer must pay is the market place. That is another basic assumption underlying the free enterprise economy and is just as basic to that philosophy as is the notion of efficiency.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, that things do not always work according to the theoretical models of economists or free enterprise ideologues. It is necessary from time to time to intervene in a direct way through public authority in the marketplace. That is what this amendment will do. It provides for us to move into the transportation sector of the economy and take a look at the social reality, which is that the railways are demonstrably inefficient in the transportation of grain. They come to us and say: "We need higher rates for the transportation of grain; it is costing us too much to transport it". If they were thoroughly efficient perhaps they would not have to come to us on bended knee and ask us to raise the rate charged to farmers for the transportation of grain.

The evidence that the railways are not always efficient in the transportation of grain comes from Mr. Justice Hall, a respected authority in this country in the area of grain transportation and a man of well known integrity. He took note of the fact that the railways often hang on to loaded cars of grain even though the other train company could move it to the ports for export in a more efficient manner. What is being said in this connection is that if you were the CPR and had 1,000 full cars of grain, you might let it sit there even while the CNR could take it to port. That is the height of inefficiency.

This positive amendment indicates that where the railroads insist on acting in an inefficient and wasteful manner, that naturally drives up costs and leads to a demand for increased freight rates for the farmers, who have nothing to do with this inefficiency. The amendment calls for authority to be given to a public agency to direct the railways to act in an efficient manner.

I hope the Government will accept the amendment. I understand that it is reluctant to do so, although I do not understand why. Is it because it is a positive suggestion coming from this side of the House? Is it because it is afraid to give direction to the railways even when there is a clear evidence that it is necessary?

When the railways come to the Government and ask for changes in legislation, changes in policy or for increased revenues for themselves, the Government listens with both ears. When Parliamentarians come to the Government and point out clear inefficiencies in the transportation of grain, the clear and documented need for a public authority to direct the railways to act in an efficient manner to reduce waste and costs, the Government turns a deaf ear, not only to the New Democratic Party but to the combined Conservative-NDP Opposition and to the farmers. This is insensitive, arrogant and stupid. I must say once again that I welcome this amendment because it gives some direction to the railways where it is demonstrably necessary.

There are other areas in which the railways need direction, as is shown by their actions. The call for passage of the Crow legislation says, in effect, that if we only let this Crow Bill slide through the House, there will be increased investment in the country and more jobs. Those are magic words, of course. We all know that investment is going on anyway and that, from the Manitoba point of view, it is maldistributed. There is enormous investment in British Columbia, for example, but little or no investment in Manitoba—indeed, no investment in Manitoba. We could use the Government directing the railway—

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the Hon. Member was doing well and was ready to sit down until the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) whispered in his ear "Go on, go on". Clearly we see filibustering here, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I thank the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary for raising the point of order but I do not think he should question the right of the Hon. Member to continue his remarks within his allotted time. Let us be clear about that.

However, the Parliamentary Secretary did raise the matter of relevancy and, as the Chair has pointed out, it is not an easy rule to apply. In cases of doubt, the Chair would prefer to give the Hon. Member who has the floor the benefit of the doubt. I must repeat again, however, that under our standard practices, at report stage in the House of Commons remarks must relate directly to the amendment before the House. Hon. Members should not stray far and wide and discuss the general content of the Bill but should as much as possible confine their remarks to the specific amendment.

I do not feel I can be any clearer. I appreciate it is not an easy rule for the Chair to apply. I appreciate also that Hon. Members may accidentally stray from the motion before the House. I do suggest however, that we are all keepers of the rules and practices of the House of Commons. I appeal to Hon. Members to respect those rules.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper) will be given an additional minute.

Mr. Keeper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I welcome the invitation to be a keeper of the rules. I will attempt, Mr. Speaker, to demonstrate to my hon. colleagues the direct relevance of my comments with regard to this amendment.

This is an amendment which was introduced by the Conservative Party and which is supported by our Party. We are calling upon the Liberal Government to adopt this very positive amendment. We want the Government to see that this amendment can also be the Liberal way of approaching railways. I mention that because my earlier comments were moving toward the whole matter of investment in railway location in Winnipeg. That connects with this amendment because of the fact that a couple of federal elections ago the matter of railway location and investment in railways in Winnipeg was a central matter debated in Winnipeg.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I had no intention of rising until the Parliamentary Secretary rose. I do believe he needs more information. I wanted to rise primarily to commend the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) of the Conservative Party. It is not very often I feel I can rise in the House and commend a Conservative for being so progressive. The Hon. Member for Vegreville is following in the good red Tory footsteps of "Red Ray", the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn), and I am very pleased—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are going to ruin my reputation!

Mr. Nystrom: —because "Red Ray" is one of the more progressive Members of that Party. He would support this amendment, which is a democratic socialist type of amendment, which gives the public, through the Administrator, the ultimate say in controlling the two railways, making sure that the priority is the public good, not the private good of the CPR. I believe that to be very important because the railways are there to provide a service. They are there to represent the people of this country. They are not there primarily for the shareholders of the CPR. I feel that is very important.

What this amendment does is that it gives the power to the Administrator of the Grain Transportation Agency the right to require different reciprocal and other arrangements between the two railways in the movement of grain. That is very important because the record of the CPR in western Canada, when it comes to service, is not a very proud record indeed, Mr. Speaker. Having grown up on a farm in Saskatchewan, with my whole family being involved in farming in one way or another for many years, I grew up, I suppose, with a natural instinct to be suspicious of the CPR because the CPR is usually shafting the farmers.

I remember a story about the CPR which the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) told me a long time ago. It is a story I also heard as a kid back on the farm. I think it really summarizes this amendment. It is the story of an old farmer who came home one day, Mr. Speaker, and found that a hailstorm had wiped out his wheat. He went into the house and found that lightning had struck his home, his wife had run off with the hired hand and the Income Tax Department was after him. The farmer went outside and looked up to the heavens. He shook his fist and he shouted, "The goddam CPR!"

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I would adivse the Hon. Member to be careful with his choice of words, even in his stories. I also do not see what that story has to do with the amendment before the House.

An Hon. Member: He thought you wanted to hear it.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, maybe I should cease and desist from quoting the Hon. Member for Regina West. It just gets me into trouble. However, Mr. Speaker, I feel that little story summarizes the very good reason why the Hon. Member for Vegreville has put Motion No. 33 on the Order Paper today. It is because the CPR has not dealt very fairly with the interests of the farmers in western Canada historically. I am sure the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) would say the same thing. I know the same thing has happened in his riding as well. The railways are more interested in the railways than they are in the public good.

When it comes to this motion today, Mr. Speaker, I feel it is probably very relevant to look at the tremendous power of the CPR because it is one of the most powerful companies in this country. When we are looking at this amendment we must realize and point out to the Government that it is necessary to give the Administrator this power because on the other side of the table sits a very powerful corporation, one of the most powerful corporations in our country.

An Hon. Member: In the world.

Mr. Nystrom: In the world, I suppose. This corporation is not just involved in railroading with Canadian Pacific Limited as the chief company. It is also involved in all kinds of other businesses as well, including hotels, mining, transportation and shipping. I would just like to mention to you, Mr. Speaker, and particularly to Government Members, some of the subsidiaries of the CPR, which I think will point out to you why it is such a powerful company and why it is so important that Motion No. 33 be carried by this House. This amendment would give farmers, through their Transportation Committee, a little more power in dealing with the CPR.

Canadian Pacific Limited is a company which controls a number of the following companies: Canadian Pacific Investments, CPR, CP Air, Cascade Pipelines, CP Telecommunications, CP Bermuda, CP Shipping, Smith Transport, CP Transport, CP Express and CP Rail. That, Mr. Speaker, gives you an idea of the tremendous corporate power which the CPR has. It gives you an idea—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I suspect that the Chair is going to have a difficult time this morning in attempting to convince Hon. Members that their remarks must be relevant. In examining the specific clause which the amendment seeks to change—I do hope my remarks are not interpreted as the Chair wanting to participate in the debate—I cannot see the connection between the powers of the Administrator and control over subsidiaries and what have you. I would invite the Hon. Member, if there is a link, to demonstrate it as rapidly as possible.

Mr. Nystrom: I am referring, Mr. Speaker, with respect and deference, to Motion No. 33 which the Hon. Member for Vegreville has submitted. It is a motion which would give the Administrator the real power to control the CPR, to direct the CNR, to allocate boxcars and make all kinds of arrangements which would be of benefit to the farmers.

● (1140)

Clause 17(d) would read that the Minister has the power to:

—promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements—

What the Hon. Member for Vegreville wants to do is to require them, if necessary, to make reciprocal and other arrangements. He wants the word "require" to be inserted because that would give the Administrator the power to control the CPR and CNR regarding arranging the cars on the various lines.

We have a very good example of this in my riding. The Port of Churchill is very important and there is a CN line which goes there and often there is grain on CP lines, which are not that far away, which should be going to the Port of Churchill and is not because we do not necessarily have the power to direct the CPR. For your information, Mr. Speaker, I was putting on the record a little bit of evidence which shows the House how very poweful the CPR is. It is an extremely big and powerful company but I will not list all the subsidiaries because there are 45 or 50, or perhaps even more. That shows you there is absolutely immense power resting in the hands of the CPR. I will respect what you said and not go into it any further.

Another point is that over the years we have tended to subsidize massively the CPR. We have used your tax money, Mr. Speaker, the tax money of your parents, friends, indeed the friends of everyone in this House, to subsidize massively the CPR. In return we have basically said to them that they do what they think is best, run the railway the way they want to without regard to what is happening to the services for Canadians. In fact, often the CPR profits are about the same as the taxpayers' subsidy.

To show you the power these boys have, Mr. Speaker, in 1967 the total federal subsidy to the CPR was $45 million and the CPR profit was some $33 million. In 1968—that is the first year both you and I were here, Mr. Speaker—this House voted them subsidies of some $40 million. Do you know what their profit was? It was $43 million in 1968. I am sure that if you were aware of that, Mr. Speaker, we would not have done the same thing in 1969. But in that year we again voted the CPR a subsidy of $35 million and its profits were $31.4 million.

I can go beyond that. I can go right to 1981 or 1982 and show you how we have given blank cheques to the CPR and it has spent the money virtually as it saw fit. There are many other models which could be followed. We had a very distinguished freelance—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired.

Some Hon. Members: Continue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the Hon. Member seeking to have his time extended?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is there unanimous consent—

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I regret that there is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, how inconsiderate of the Government Members not to give unanimous consent to my colleague.

Mr. Benjamin: They are not allowed to get up.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, you will be pleased to know that my comments are going to be completely germane to the motion before us today.

I must first say that I am a little perplexed. Before I came into the House this morning someone tried to tell me that the Conservatives were not speaking on behalf of their own amendment. I really could not believe that; I found it too much to accept. The Conservatives I know are far too principled and too supportive of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) to not speak on behalf of his motion. So I checked the record before I came in this morning and I found that so far in the debate on this motion they have been as supportive of their own motion as have Members of our caucus. So far they have matched us one for one, even though they outnumber us three to one. So I really want to know how committed they are in their support of the Crowsnest Pass rates.

Mr. Forrestall: Over 42 per cent of your caucus did not vote the other day. Answer that one.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, as has been said by other Members of my caucus, we are supporting this amendment. It is not a bad amendment. Even though we have opposed the creation of the Grain Transportation Authority separate from the Canadian Wheat Board, we do support this amendment as it will empower the Administrator to require CN and CP to co-ordinate in an efficient and cost-effective way the delivery of prairie grain to port. The railways do not do that now. That works to the detriment not only of prairie farmers, but also to the detriment of ports like Churchill in my home Province.

This summer, when Mr. Justice Emmett Hall appeared before the Standing Committee on Transport in Regina, he told Committee members—that it is a pervasive railway philosophy to hang on to a commodity once it gets hold of it, come hell or high water, until it reaches its ultimate delivery point. He was not making some kind of back-handed criticism of the poor state of the rail system. No, he was passing on information received from senior railway officials.

Our grain delivery system is fraught with costly and inefficient back-hauls. It does not matter if the grain grown in one region of the Prairie would get to port faster if the railways exchanged carloads of grain from, say, CN to the CP line. What is important to the railways is that they keep that carload of grain on their own system, period. The railways are in a good position in Canada. They do pretty well for themselves, as was pointed out just a few moments ago by my friend from Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom). They are subsidized to the tune of millions of dollars by the federal Government. Yet in return they are not required to make sure they are able to co-ordinate between them an efficient system of grain delivery.

The competition between CN and CP for grain delivery does not help grain producers or the country, it only helps the railways. It seems to me that since they are public utilities, they should be treated as such and be accountable to the Government of Canada as such. As my colleague from Regina West said on Tuesday, the railways are a natural monopoly. In that situation competition has no place. If it were logical to have competing railways, it would make just as much sense to have competing highways and sewer and water systems, or competing hydro or telephone systems. We all know that does not make sense, and by extension it does not make sense for competition to continue to exist between CN and CP.

This Bill, if passed, will mean that the railways will be paid a handsome subsidy for some time to come. It does not matter whether it is paid directly to the railways or the farmers, or some mix of the two. Ultimately they will get the cash, which will guarantee not only their long-run variable costs and out of pocket expenses like maintenance and depreciation, but it also guarantees them a 20 per cent to 25 per cent return on investment. That is not bad. I know a lot of farmers in my constituency and in my Province who would jump at the chance to get that kind of return on their investment. Yet in spite of the continued generosity of the Canadian taxpayers to the railways, will they reciprocate by co-ordinating their operations for the most efficient, cost effective means of delivering grain to port? Will they enter into a reciprocal agreement using one another's lines and equipment?

Mr. Benjamin: Not voluntarily.

Mr. Sargeant: Will they exchange grain traffic from one line to another? I think the answer is clearly no. As Clause 16 reads now, the Administrator of the Agency will be empowered to promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate efficient and reliable movement of grain. Well, whoever that Administrator may be, should this Bill pass he or she can promote and promote until they are blue in the face, but the railway companies will continue their artificial competition in grain transportation.

The railways, Mr. Speaker, have used their stable of lawyers and accountants to present a case that they are hurting under the Crow rate. If that is the case, it seems to me they would lose more money the further they hauled the grain. Therefore I ask, if the CNR picks up a load of grain in southern Saskatchewan and the closest way to port in Vancouver would be to ship it through Calgary, why does the CNR not do that? Why do they move it north to Edmonton and then through their own lines on a route that must be hundreds of miles longer and more expensive? If I was losing money as a result of hauling goods further when it could have been done cheaper, I would do my utmost to get that grain to port by the shortest possible route. If that meant passing it on to my competition, so much the better. The competition would do the same for me if it were like minded.

However, this is not the situation with the railways. I believe that undermines their case that they are losing money on the Crow rate. But setting that aside for the moment, if the railways are so unwilling to co-ordinate their grain delivery under a pricing system which they believe is losing money, what will they do when the revenues provided for moving grain under Bill C-155 start to roll in? They will hang on to those carloads of grain even more tenaciously. I think that would be a shame, not only for the prairie farmers but for the whole country. It would mean that tax dollars continue to support an inefficient grain delivery system only because we failed to give the Administrator the power to require co-operation between CN and CP on grain transportation.

If this amendment is accepted, we will be taking an important step to correct a long-standing problem in our grain transportation system. It will be more difficult for the railway companies to thwart the efforts of the Wheat Board to marshal large volumes of grain for export by refusing to enter into reciprocal arrangements to take traffic on one another's track. We will prevent the railways from shipping grain over needlessly long distances to the detriment of ports like Churchill only because the railways believe that once the grain is on the CP line it stays on the CP line.

In short, we will be going a long way toward creating that efficient delivery system that the Government talks long and hard about. Thefore, I think there is absolutely no choice but for this House to accept this motion before us today.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I thought perhaps one of the Conservatives would stand and speak this morning.

Mr. Benjamin: No, they are tired.

Mr. Murphy: Although this is a Conservative motion, I wish to make a few comments on it. I also wish to express support for the motion and I hope that the Conservatives will speak to their own motion.

The effect on this motion is to give the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator the authority to require the railways to enter into an interchange agreement permitting cars from either company to go on one another's lines. That agreement is very important to the efficient running of Canada's railway system.

My colleagues for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and Selkirk-Interlake (Mr. Sargeant) have already pointed out that the Port of Churchill consistently suffers from Canadian Pacific's reluctance and refusal to let grains from their areas into the Port of Churchill. They refuse to do so even though places like Saskatoon, Humboldt and Yorkton are closer to the Port of Churchill to which grains can be moved more efficiently and cheaply than to the present terminal of Thunder Bay.

Canadian Pacific would allow that grain to go to the nearest port if it had any concern for the farmers, the efficiency and welfare of this country. However, that grain has always gone elsewhere with the exception of one year.

We have heard many people say in this debate that the railways are losing money in the shipment of grain. If they in fact lose money for every mile that the grain is hauled, why do they refuse to allow the grain to go on their competitor's line? Why would they haul that grain farther distances to port instead of going to the nearest port?

For that reason I sincerely believe that many Canadians as well as many Members in the House are being sold a bill of goods with this legislation. If the railways were really concerned about saving money, they would allow the grain to travel on the shorter routes of their competitor. As the Hon. Member for Selkirk-Interlake pointed out, they would only be too glad to see their competitors take this paper loss. However, that is not the case because there is only one occasion when CP allowed the grain on its line to go on the CN line into the Port of Churchill.

The transportation critic for the NDP has often raised this concern in the House and I have raised it with the Minister, CN and CP. However, they all continually refuse to address these concerns and work out an agreement.

I am in favour of this amendment because I believe it is necessary. As Mr. Justice Hall pointed out this summer, if the railways were really concerned about efficiency they would take the initiative to allow interchanges in recognition of the fact that our grain must go to the nearest port, and that would increase the efficiency of the whole system.

My only criticism of the amendment introduced by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) is that it does not automatically require the railway companies to send grain to the nearest port. It simply states that the Administrator—whether a friend of the Liberals or Tories, whichever is in power—may require that the grain be transported to the nearest port or that an interchange agreement be arranged.

While we support the amendment because it is a step in the right direction, it is not good enough. If we are really sincere about having our grain moved to market in the cheapest and most efficient way, a factor which this Bill does not address, the railways would be automatically required to do so. We would not allow corporate considerations to hinder that movement. We would be concerned about the money going into the farmers' pockets rather than charging him more to ship his grain to ports which are further away.

Therefore I support this amendment and hope Government Members who have had a chance to think about it will change the vote which they cast in committee and indeed support this amendment.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I also rise to support the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). Motion No. 33 before us would indeed improve the Bill if only to put some teeth in the clause. It would benefit producers since it would maximize their return. It would force the railways to exchange grain car for grain car.

Members of the House will be aware that we are not generally in favour of the creation of the Grain Transportation Agency since it is our belief that it simply adds another layer of bureaucracy. We do not want an Administrator whose powers will encroach on that of the Wheat Board. We would prefer that the Whest Board be given further powers to force the railways to co-operate with each other. If we are to be denied that, definitely the amendment before us would improve the role the Grain Administrator will be performing, and as such we have to support this amendment.

I think it is important when discussing this Bill to reflect briefly on the attitudes the railways have in the shipping of statutory grains particularly, but I think it is true of the shipping of all commodities. The railway philosophy is to hold on to the commodity come hell or high water, to hold on to it as long as possible, because in that way they maximize their return.

There are many examples. Mr. Justice Emmett Hall this summer in his testimony in Regina said that the CN sends grain west to Calgary and then north to Edmonton, around 200 miles, and then from Edmonton out to Vancouver. On the other hand, the CPR sends grain west to Edmonton, south to Calgary and then along its line to Vancouver. For all of us who have followed the ins and outs of the Crow debate, the words of Mr. Justice Emmett Hall that "Train loads of grain are passing like ships in the night" will long be remembered.

Is this efficiency? No. Whom does it end up costing? The farmers, the producers and the taxpayers of the country, they pay for this inefficiency. Whom does it benefit? It benefits the railroads. Surely it is not too much to ask this House to agree to an amendment which would stop this illogical business as far as the taxpayers are concerned.

It raises some other interesting questions, questions that some of my colleagues have pointed out. For instance, if the railroads do lose money hauling statutory grains, why do they attempt to hold on to those grains as long as possible? I suspect the railroads are not losing money but making money hauling statutory grains. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) made a very important point. He said that if this Bill passes the railroads will get a 20 per cent guaranteed return on investment. It will be even more in their vested interest to hold on to the grains as long as possible and to encourage the inefficiencies in the system as much as possible in order to get a greater reward for themselves. As I pointed out earlier, the farmers and the taxpayers are the ones who will end up paying the railroads even more.

What the amendment before us today will do is at least begin to cut out some of that. It will force the railroads to become more efficient and to act in a more co-operative manner. I do recognize that this runs counter to some of the philosophy in the free enterprise system. In the free enterprise system competition dictates that you have no truck or trade with your rival. CN should have nothing to do with CP and vice-versa. The problem is, as I have already mentioned, that the consumers, the producers—the Canadian people—are the ones who get hurt.

The time has come to make the case that railroads in Canada should be treated like a public utility. We do not have two different power lines running parallel to each other. We do not have two different water mains running parallel to each other or two different telephone lines running parallel to each other—

Mr. Flis: That is not relevant.

Mr. de Jong: —because that does not make sense. It is recognized that ultimately the consumer of those services is the one who has to pay for their duplication.

The same case surely is made with our railways, which are so vital to the economic, social and cultural interests of Canada. The railroads should be considered as a public utility. Heaven knows, we have paid enough for them. The time has come to rationalize the system so that you do not have this insane duplication of services that we find time after time in our railroad system. At least the amendment before us moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville will cut out some of that insane competition.

I was interested in the remarks some of our Conservative colleagues have made. They have been good remarks. When the Hon. Member for Vegreville introduced his amendment, he said that Bill C-155 as a whole was written as a very favourable mechanism to the railroads. The major beneficiary in the whole Bill is the railroads. He also said that the producers are the ones forgotten in the whole exercise. Indeed, I am happy to hear that Members of the Conservative Party are voicing those opinions. I think it is an accurate description and an accurate analysis of this Bill. I hope we will be receiving their support for some of the other amendments that we will be proposing that will make certain this Bill is of benefit to the producers and not to the railroads and their vested interests.

It is obvious from the few catcalls and comments from Members opposite that Government Members have not been convinced of the worthiness of Motion No. 33. I would suggest this necessitates more speakers by the Opposition to describe fully their arguments and thus penetrate the thinking of Members opposite. I urge some of our Conservative colleagues to make these points over and over again. Believe you me, gentlemen, it is necessary to repeat your points in order to convince Government Members across the way.

I invite more speakers from the Official Opposition to make their points and to make them forcefully. This amendment in Motion No. 33 is a good amendment, Mr. Speaker. For heaven's sake, Hon. Members, don't just sit there and not say anything about this good amendment. Stand up and make the case and help us to convince Government Members of the worthiness of your amendment.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. de Jong: I also invite some Government Members to stand up and give some rational reasons and arguments why we should not pass this amendment. Surely this is a debating forum. For Government Members to say nothing and to sit quietly and vote like a bunch of robots is a travesty of the purpose of this House and our parliamentary tradition. Surely, Mr. Speaker, they have some obligation.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member, who does not know very much about this Bill obviously, is now taking it upon himself to reflect upon the motives of other Members in this House. That is surely not part of the rules of debate in this House.

Mr. Benjamin: Don't be so touchy, Maurice.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I certainly was not referring to the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) has given his thoughts and opinions on this amendment, and I congratulate him for that. I certainly do not want to imply that he has wrong motives, certainly not that Member. But I do invite some of the other Government Members who will be voting on this amendment to stand up and explain to this House and to Canadians why they will vote that way. Surely this amendment is a rational one; it requires rational debate. The least we can expect from Government Members are some rational reasons why we should be opposing this amendment. Silence is not debate. Silence is not rational argument. Government Members owe it to the public of Canada to give something more than silence.

• (1210)

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, I rise simply to point out that in all the blathering from the Hon. Member who just took his seat, he did not discuss the merits of the particular amendment either.

Mr. Benjamin: You just came in. Where have you been?

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I hope we will not indulge in that kind of bootlegging of comments on other Members' speeches. That is deliberate debate. If the Hon. Minister wishes to make a contribution, he should seek the floor and make one, not rise under the guise of a point of order.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) rising on the same point of order? If so, I must caution him because there is no point of order. Perhaps he is seeking the floor on a different point of order.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, all I wanted to say was exactly what you said, and I will sit down.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: He is a good Minister of National Defence; every time he comes into the House he starts a war!

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Perhaps you could seek the unanimous consent of the House to allow the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Blais) to share his wisdom on the amendment before us.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. That is not a point of order.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I suspect the Hon. Minister has shared all his thoughts on this Bill with us.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Blais: That is the best one yet.

Mr. Riis: I am very pleased to have the opportunity to say a few words on what I consider to be a first-rate amendment which will enable the Grain Transportation Administrator to do what is necessary in order to obtain the most efficient production from the railway system of Canada. When I see words in an amendment such as "promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements", I see the essence of a motive which can only be applauded. If there is anything we can do as a House of Commons in improving this legislation to ensure a more efficient movement of commodities across the country via our rail transportation system, it behooves each Member of the House to stand when possible to speak in favour of such legislation and certainly to support it when it comes time to vote.

I heard Government Members suggest that the existing National Transportation Act and the Railway Act were sufficient guarantees to allow the Canadian Transport Commission to enforce regulations to ensure maximum efficiency of Canada's railroads. This is something which must be questioned. This is certainly not the case. At the Crow rate hearings, Justice Emmett Hall indicated that railroads hung on the loaded cars of grain for movement to export position even though movement over another line would cut the distance and therefore decrease the cost to the producer. Justice Emmett Hall understands what is going on with the Canadian railway system. He is well aware of a variety of areas where the system is being abused, and, I want to emphasize, being abused by railway companies to maximize their returns. Nevertheless, this slows the movement of grain to our port facilities.

I had a particular experience in my constituency this past summer which brought the need for this new power to my attention. As a result of a terrible storm in the Rogers Pass area of British Columbia, both the Trans-Canada Highway and the CPR mainline were washed out and the traffic over the CPR mainline was disrupted for many days. Had the transportation czar in Canada had the authority and power to do so, he could have stepped in very quickly and enabled CPR to take advantage of the CNR line which also runs through the Rocky Mountain corridor and on to western ports. He could have encouraged the transfer of rail cars from the southern line into the more norhtern route and could have allowed for a maximum flow.

As a result of this terrible rainstorm and wash-out, undue hardships were faced by many small businesses and ordinary Canadians. The transportation Administrator would have been able to act swiftly in such a situation and immediately order CNR to allow CPR to use its track so as to keep the vital grain transportation links open and to ensure that prairie farmers would have their grain delivered to West Coast ports. We have had first-hand experience in my constituency with the need for greater regulatory powers. I believe the amendment is a good start, I believe it is a good amendment, and we in the New Democratic Party are pleased to support it.

When we see example after example of the CPR taking a longer route than necessary, we always recognize the inherent danger of leaving private interests such as CPR with the responsibility of furthering the public good. Time after time in industry after industry when there is a conflict between public good and private gain, it is private gain that wins. Private interests are only interested in the public welfare when it fills their own private coffers. It is not necessary to throw aspersions at the private sector. After all, it is the mandate under which it operates. Its major motive is to obtain the maximum amount of profit for its shareholders.

We are talking about an integral transportation system which is necessary to move grain and other commodities from various areas of Canada to its coastal ports. Therefore I believe very strongly that increased regulatory power as proposed in this amendment with the words "promote, and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements" is something that we as Members of the House of Commons, with the public good at heart, must support.

As previous speakers have indicated, we must encourage Government Members to give some consideration to this particular amendment. If they are not interested or do not see the wisdom of providing this additional regulatory power to the Grain Transportation Administrator, I ask them to stand in their places and explain to us as Opposition Members and to the people of Canada why this amendment is an inappropriate one, why this amendment is not in the best interests of Canadians, and why this amendment is especially not in the best interests of Canadian grain growers. Hon. Members opposite have a responsibility, particularly those Ministers who are directly responsible to the agricultural sector, to rise and say why the amendment is inappropriate or why it is not in the best interests of Canadian farmers or of the public good.

With those words I will rest my case and look forward to hearing an opposite viewpoint presented by Government Members, if in fact they can establish any logical opposition to this first-class amendment.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to take part again in the Crow debate and particularly to address the issue of the amendment before us, Motion No. 33. As we all know, this is a Conservative amendment but I am pleased to speak on it as a New Democrat.

• (1220)

Our Party is supporting the amendment very strongly. I might note that the NDP have put up 14 speakers on this motion while the Conservatives have only put up ten. The Conservatives should put up three Members for every one of ours. It is we who are really speaking to the motion, fighting for it, asking the Government what is wrong with it and why it is not addressing this issue. We are asking why the Government is not speaking and listening to the voices of reason. We are asking why the Government is not prepared to accept such a sensible amendment.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It is the old question of quality versus quantity.

Ms. McDonald: The amendment before us is very precise. The clause reads:

> The Administrator may—
> (d) promote reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers.

The significance of this amendment is that we need greater efficiency in the grain handling system. That is something that I am very happy to speak to as a New Democrat. I am concerned about seeing a much more efficient economic system operating. I speak as one who defends the farmer and the producer, wanting to see them get reasonable returns. I am not so concerned about defending the profits of CPR.

In order to improve the efficiency of the grain handling system, we want more interchange between the CP and CN systems, the two major systems in this country. They must work together if our farmers are to be well served. The railways must work together on shorter hauls. It is extremely appalling to me as an environmentalist, as somebody who is very much committed to energy conservation, to see the enormous waste in the transportation system. It is not only the rail system which is extremely wasteful in this way: we also see this in other modes of transportation, such as ships and planes. There is no excuse for not having greater efficiency in the rail system.

We have to be very careful of our resources. We must use them wisely. We are dealing with non-renewable resources which were given to us through no credit of our own. We are using them very rapidly. We should use as little as possible. This means using our transportation system in the most efficient way possible. Both CP and CN have track that would be better utilized by interconnection with the other system. Unfortunately, it is only in exceptional circumstances that we see these interchanges which promote efficiency and conserve energy. I am sure all Members could cite examples close to their own constituencies about the inefficiencies which occur.

This amendment is a step toward greater efficiency. We of course would like to see a much more comprehensive, integrated system. However, that is a subject for debate on another day. We should at least take the first step toward efficiency with the amendment now before us, Motion No. 33.

We argue that the Grain Transportation Agency has been given excessive powers. The Administrator has too much power in the sense that his powers could encroach upon the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. However, that is the situation. We would have done it differently if we were in government. However, we are not; we are in opposition. We have to see how we can make the system the most efficient through amendments which can be put in place, given the context that it is beyond our control to make change. That is why we support this amendment. No matter what public agency has control over the transportation of grain, whether it be the Wheat Board, the Canadian Grains Commission, the Grain Transportation Agency or whatever, there must be the ability to direct the railways to exchange cars in order to promote efficiency.

Mr. Justice Hall is well known as a fighter against the Crow rate changes and is a knowledgeable person on the whole question of transportation. He made some interesting remarks on this. He really gets to the heart of the difficulty before us. I quote from his testimony:

> We heard a lot about efficiency, and the whole idea of the railways about efficiency was to get rid of the branch-lines. That would have been very efficient from their stand-point. But on this question of efficiency, I am told by senior railway people, there is a railway philosophy that once the line gets hold of a commodity for transport, it will hang onto that commodity to the delivery points, come hell or high water. That works out this way and this is what we found, great quantities of grain grown on, say, the Goose Lake line . . . and now that may not mean too much to members from the east, but it is one of the great grain-producing areas in Saskatchewan between Saskatoon and Calgary served by the Canadian National Railways; it is closer to Vancouver at Rosetown than to Thunder Bay, so the trend is westward. Grain was taken to Calgary, but the CN has no line going from Calgary to Vancouver. So they hauled it then northward 200 miles to Edmonton so they can take it south again to Vancouver. That was the CN.

That is an example of an extremely wasteful procedure. It costs money and it is inefficient for the whole economy. It wastes energy. This is the kind of thing that has been going on. I again quote Mr. Justice Emmett Hall:

> CP with the Hardisty line, which is another line going through Edmonton all that CPR grain went to Edmonton, but there is no line from Edmonton into Vancouver—so it went south to go to Vancouver. Trainloads of grain were passing each other like ships in the night between Calgary and Edmonton.

There we have examples regarding both CN and CP. Both were offenders in hanging on to the commodity they had. They were not concerned about efficiency in the system. They were not concerned about the farmer, only about getting a buck by keeping the commodity under their control.

An interesting exchange came up in the Transport Committee hearings in Regina with Mr. Justice Emmett Hall and a Member of Parliament. Referring to the railways he said:

> If they continue to do business the way they are doing it now, and that is as though they both existed in a separate country and did not co-operate, I do not suppose there is very much we can do. But if the railways could come to a situation where the principle of transportation would be to the nearest port by the shortest route, you could increase the capacity very substantially.

Increasing the capacity is important. There have been hold-ups, which means people do not get their money when they should. Unfortunate situations have occurred as a result of these hold-ups. The Member of Parliament then asked:

> This may be a bit of a naive question, but how do you get the railways to do that under the present system; under what we have?

Mr. Justice Hall replied:

> I do not think it is by enriching them at the farmers' expense.

I heartily agree. Let me give a couple more examples of inefficiency, of wasteful use of energy. I wish to quote my colleague who has been leading our struggle regarding the Crow rate. He said:

> The administrator is going to have a heck of a time getting co-operation. It was tough enough before, but under this new regime, and with the guarantees of variable costs plus in the rate system, the railroads would be damn fools to agree to move grains off their lines onto somebody else's line any sooner than they absolutely had to. They would be damn fools to do it—
> CN would be smarter to draw grain from far south of Hudson Bay and all the way down the Gravelbourg, and get their maximum variable costs plus, rather than rely on grain coming on CP tracks from Yorkton to Hudson Bay. Either one of the railways would be crazy to go into any kind of reciprocal arrangement, at least up to the point where they get their maximum variable costs plus contributions to constant cost.

The railways are in it to make a buck. We have seen this with both CN and CP. They do not care very much about the producer. Only if they are forced into making these arrangements will it be suitable for the producers and we will have efficiency. They do not do it willingly.

It is extremely important, Mr. Speaker, that they be forced to do that, and that is the reason for the amendment that is before us today. That is the reason we are all concerned that the Government is not listening but is quite happy to let the railways go along making a buck and turning some of that money back to the Government by way of campaign contributions. The Government is not concerned about the energy conservation or efficiency aspects of the matter or about serving the farmers. We think it is about time the Government listen to reason and support the amendment before us today.

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I have been listening with some interest to the Hon. Members of the NDP who have made a lot of noise about whether Members of our Party are speaking or not. I want to point out that there have been some excellent speeches made by Members on this side on this amendment. As well, the point was really made at committee where the only Member of the NDP present most of the time was the "Lone Ranger". We in this Party had a full complement of Members present throughout the hearings and committee reports.

It is very interesting to note that the NDP has been constantly opposed to the idea of the Grain Co-ordinator. Even at the time we were setting that Co-ordinator up, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) and his colleagues were totally opposed to setting up the Co-ordinator. The Government has decided that it will provide for an Administrator and we have rewritten the clauses of the Bill over and over again to put provisions in place so that the Bill does not only benefit the railways but also benefits the producers. We feel that this Bill should protect the producers when the railways are moving grain, rather than protect the railways.

The Hon. Member for Regina West said in committee that the amendment we are proposing is simply window dressing. He made this comment on page 128:81 of Transport Issue No. 128. Now he rises in the House and says that this is a very good amendment. We appreciate that because it is an excellent amendment. It will give this clause some teeth.

I listened to Members of the NDP while one after another of them rose, and I found that they had a lot of difficulty understanding exactly what this amendment really means. They talked about the concept of the railways holding on to their cars. That really is not what we are trying to do by this amendment. We are trying to say that the railways ought to allow CN cars to run on CP lines pulled by CP engines, but in fact the rate would still go to the originator of the car. The problem is which company gets the rate. If the railway hauls something at a loss, it still wants however many dollars that are left. That railway company is not prepared to give that money to a competitor.

I heard many comments to the effect that this concept would create some difficulty with the free enterprise system and that we ought in some way to put these two railways together as a public utility. The Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) said that we would not have two power lines running side by side and I wondered if he had found that in his Province the CP ran in the southern part of the Province and the CN in the northern part, and that the problems arise in that small area in the middle.

We in Alberta have that same difficulty. In fact, CN cars were running one way and CP cars were running the other way on the same line. This instigated some negotiations between the two railways in an attempt to run cars on each other's lines. They found that, in effect, it balanced out and that there was no loss in revenue on this line at all. When the Prince Rupert terminal was being built, this difficulty came into question in a very serious manner because the line to Prince Rupert was a CN line, yet there was the necessity to move CP grain from the south to that terminal. Much time was spent in an attempt to have the two railways come together in an agreement.

When we read this Bill, we found that the Co-ordinator or Administrator really had no power to say that, if it is in the interest of the producer to maximize his returns, then that ought to be done. We ought not just to promote it; the power ought to be there to require it, particularly since we are putting forward so many hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidies. We should not put this money forward to serve only the interest of the railways but also to serve the interest of the producers. That is why there ought to be some teeth in this proposal.

The clauses that we are talking about, Mr. Speaker, are Clauses 17 and 18 of the Bill, and particularly Clause 17. In committee many amendments were accepted that were proposed by this Party in an attempt to strengthen that clause. The reason for those amendments is that we felt these clauses were too lenient to the railways, so we inserted in Subclause (b) and Subclause (d) of Clause 17 the word "reliability". In Subclause (d) we inserted the words "and reliable" and the words "for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers". We rewrote the whole of Subclause (2) in another attempt to air our concern for maximizing returns to producers.

We are now attempting to add the words "and shall require", which we attempted to add in committee but were turned down by the Government. We are now trying to make the same very strong argument that we made very effectively in committee in the hope that the Government will see the light and add those words. The Administrator in the past has operated very effectively by seeing to it that cars were placed in areas where producers could get the maximum benefit from those cars, and he ought to have the powers to do so again if the railways do not come to an agreement on exchange lines.

I must say again that we are not in any sense trying to give a CN car to CP but simply want to see the exchange of cars running on the line that is so necessary in the areas of the Prince Rupert terminal, the Churchill terminal and in some of those areas in the Provinces where the lines come together in the middle of the Province.

In most cases where reasonable, the railways have come to agreements. There certainly can be in the future areas where the Co-ordinator or the Administrator, in the best interests of the producers, would want to have the power that we are proposing here that will allow him to require the railroads to come together.

I remember when we first began to set up the position of Co-ordinator some four years ago that the same problem resulted in the delivery of what at that time was called rapeseed to the West Coast. I suppose the same was the case in Thunder Bay as well. In that case, it was not the railway companies but was each grain company that requested that its car of rapeseed be delivered to its facility in the port. When the train was picking up the commodity across the Prairies, it would pick up a Saskatchewan Wheat Pool car, a Pioneer car, a Cargill car and a United Grain Growers' car. These cars would perhaps be situated side by side on the train as it moved to the port. We found that a train of some 100 cars arriving in the port might require some 50 switches in order to get each car going to the proper facility when the same product was in each car. They simply would not exchange cars to move them into the facility. That was a very time-consuming practice which resulted in cars not getting back to the Prairies as quickly as they ought to.

After much discussion and after bringing this matter to the public sphere, we worked out an arrangement to pool cars which increased the turnaround capacity. You can see, Mr. Speaker, that if we would have the ability to give the Administrator those powers, then if the companies had not agreed voluntary and it was in the best interests of the producers that that agreement be reached, the Administrator, with that best interest at heart, would have the teeth to put this agreement in place.

We are very concerned that when you give this kind of money to the railways—who have not performed that well in the past on public subsidies—the Bill sought to contain clauses with teeth that will ensure the maximum performance by the railways to get grain to port in the best interests of the producer.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I was rather interested in the remarks of the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) who implied that we in the NDP did not support this particular amendment. I think the Hon. Member misunderstood what the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) has been saying all along. If he wishes to check the record, he will find that the Hon. Member for Regina West said: "This amendment is some more window dressing on behalf of the Conservative Party and I will not use any stronger words. However, I can support the amendment, for all the good it will do." That is exactly what the Hon. Member for Regina West said.

It is refreshing to find that finally the Conservative Party speaks in support of its own amendment. This morning the NDP has put up nine speakers to the Conservatives' one in support of the amendment. This makes one wonder whether that Party has had a change of heart again with respect to the impact of the Crow rate and what it will do to the farming community in the country and to consumers generally, as I pointed out in earlier remarks on the Bill.

What the spokesperson for the Progressive Conservative Party called for several weeks ago was, in effect, a hoist on any amendments to the Crowsnest Pass rate. According to press reports, this stirred up a hornet's nest in political circles in Ottawa at that time because it appeared that the Conservative Party had changed its mind again and was saying, in effect, that because of the political difficulties in the country and because of popular support for the existing Crowsnest Pass rate, particularly in the prairie Provinces, it had decided that statements made by the official spokesman for a hoist of three years was being read as support for the Crowsnest Pass rate.

I do not know what happened between the time that statement was made and September 29, 1983, when it was reported in the Western Producer that the Conservative Party had decided it was not the better part of wisdom to follow that course and was arguing that it was going to drop the proposal. Perhaps that is the reason it has put up only one speaker today in support of the amendment.

As I understand it, the amendment to Clause 17(d) proposed by the Conservative Party would enhance the authority of the Grain Transportation Agency, through an Administrator, over the railroads and specifically would give him the power to direct them to exchange carloads of grain where such exchanges would improve the efficiency of moving grain to export positions.

As the Hon. Member for Regina West has already pointed out and as I pointed out the other day, while we would argue that there is no need for the Grain Transportation Agency and that the Administrator already has too much power in the sense that his powers encroach upon the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board, this is a good amendment and we support it. No matter what public agency has control over the transportation of grain, be it the Wheat Board, the Canadian Grains Commission, the Grain Transportation Agency or whatever, it should have the ability to direct the railroads to exchange cars so as to promote efficiency. As Mr. Justice Hall noted, even at the existing Crow rate the railroads hang on to loaded cars of grain for movement to export positions even though the other line could move them to port over a more direct line, cutting the distance, costs and adding to the efficiency of the system.

In his testimony before the Transport Committee in Regina on August 9, 1983, Mr. Justice Hall said:

> We heard a lot about efficiency, and the whole idea of the railways about efficiency was to get rid of the branch-lines. That would have been very efficient from their standpoint. But on this question of efficiency, I am told by senior railway people, there is a railway philosophy that once the line gets hold of a commodity for transport, it will hang onto that commodity to the delivery points, come hell or high water. That works out this way and this is what we found, great quantities of grain grown on, say, the Goose Lake line . . . and now that may not mean too much to members from the east, but it is one of the great grain-producing areas in Saskatchewan between Saskatoon and Calgary served by the Canadian National Railways; it is closer to Vancouver at Rosetown than to Thunder Bay, so the trend is westward. Grain was taken to Calgary, but the CN has no line going from Calgary to Vancouver. So they hauled it then northward 200 miles to Edmonton so they can take it south again to Vancouver. That was the CN.
> CP with the Hardisty line, which is another line going through Edmonton . . . all that CPR grain went to Edmonton, but there is no line from Edmonton into Vancouver—so it went south to go to Vancouver. Trainloads of grain were passing each other like ships in the night between Calgary and Edmonton.
> I do not know what else we did on the commission, but we shamed the railways into entering into an agreement to exchange cars—car for car—not exchanging traffic but car for car. That agreement, I think, still subsists. I think it can be abrogated on 30 days' notice. That is about the situation.

If you have ever seen an example of inefficiency, Mr. Speaker, it would seem to me that would be it. I think what Mr. Justice Hall was attesting to was that all of these measures tend to undermine the assertion of the railroads that they lose money every time they move a carload of grain. If that were so, presumably they would lose more money for each additional mile they haul it and then would do everything possible to get rid of it and stick their competition with the loss.

With the lush revenues from moving grain under Bill C-155, this tendency to hang on to loaded grain cars as long as possible so that the money will roll in as the cars roll over the road will be exaggerated. Without the authority the amendment would give vested in the hands of a public agency, you can be sure there would be little, if any, exchange of carloads of grain between the railroads for the sake of efficiency. Again I quote a few words from the testimony of Mr. Justice Emmett Hall at that Transport Committee hearing in Regina on August 9. Mr. Justice Hall, in dealing with that question, said:

If they continue to do business the way they are doing it now, and that is as though they both existed in a separate country and did not co-operate, I do not suppose there is very much we can do. But if the railways could come to a situation where the principle of transportation would be to the nearest port by the shortest route, you could increase the capacity very substantially.

Perhaps that goes to the crux of the question. I suppose the existing Crow rate is not so very bad in comparison with the inefficiencies in the railway industry in this country. Perhaps this is an area to which this House could address itself in greater detail than it has over the past weeks and months. I am quite sure that once this has been done, the House and the Government would take a different view of the existing Crowsnest Pass rate.

I understand my time has expired, Mr. Speaker, so I will conclude my remarks.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, the amendment before us proposes to change Clause 17(d) at page 8 by removing the words "promote reciprocal and other arrangements" and inserting instead "and shall require, if necessary, reciprocal and other arrangements". That seems like a very reasonable amendment. While it may be a little surprising to find the Tory Party advocating greater Government control of private enterprise, as in this case, that Party does have the option of going backwards and forwards at the same time. It is built right into the name "Progressive Conservative". That Party can switch back and forth very easily and say yes or no, or yes and no, without any embarrassment, but I hope it stays with this particular amendment because it does seem reasonable.

Presumably, the argument against this amendment would be that the railroads may already do this voluntarily. In fact, we understand they had an agreement to do this voluntarily. The problem is partly that the agreement is subject to cancellation on a month's notice and partly that there is no way for the interested public to monitor the performance of this agreement, nor in any sense to enforce the agreement to provide any compliance with the agreement. That is the nub of the question.

That is why it is so interesting to find the Conservatives pressed to admit that private enterprise would not be willing. That is the implication of the amendment. It must be compelled and required, because it would not be willing to do this in an efficient way on a voluntary basis. It clearly has the means to do it. The examples which were placed before the committee by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall were, of course, examples based on the record and practices of the railroads. The railroads know full well what inefficiency there was in conducting their business as they did.

As has been pointed out by the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), the railroad contradicts itself in complaining about the cost of hauling grain when it chooses to haul it for hundreds of miles unnecessarily. Obviously, the railroads are not essentially interested in efficient production. If inefficient operation will make money for them, then let there be inefficient operation. That is their philosophy. Anyone who uses the rail service between Ottawa and Toronto is well aware that the railroad has no overriding sense of obligation to efficiency. It does not mind whether the train comes in late or not.

An Hon. Member: That is VIA Rail.

Mr. Heap: It is VIA Rail which, of course, is really only a function of the railroads and must take the railroads as it finds them. It must take the rolling stock as it finds it and must pay for worn out rolling stock as it finds it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I must caution the Hon. Member, as I have other Hon. Members, that he is straying somewhat from the amendment before the House.

Mr. Benjamin: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. With all respect, Sir, surely examples of railways inefficiency, whether in the use of tracks or rolling stock, relate to the very points made in the amendment. The inefficiencies are caused by not having reciprocal agreements which could be required, if necessary. The same kind of reciprocal agreement needs to be required in many other places, including the line mentioned by my hon. friend. It relates to the point of the argument in this amendment.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I point out to you and Hon. Members in this House that the title of this Bill is:

An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

I am not aware that VIA Rail in Ontario moves a heck of a lot of grain.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I will give the Hon. Member, of course, the benefit of the doubt. However, I thought he was straying somewhat from the amendment before the House in his last remarks.

Mr. Heap: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do want to explain that while I accept your direction and will not pursue that particular detail further, I was trying to speak as an easterner who is aware of the over-all conduct of the railroads we are dealing with, which includes what is, in effect, their creature, VIA Rail. Of course, if I keep on being interrupted by Hon. Members I might get confused again and stray off the subject. If Hon. Members want this, they can continue in their present conduct.

I believe there could be another important value in—

Mr. Blais: Talk about the jobs which your filibuster is costing Toronto.

Mr. Heap: Even the Cabinet now wishes to get into the act, Mr. Speaker. I do not know if the Minister will speak to this amendment. I hope he will. Since the Minister opposite seems to want to comment, I hope he will have an opportunity to do so this afternoon.

The point I was trying to make, Mr. Speaker, is that if the public Administrator had this power to require—not just to promote—this kind of co-operation between these two railroads for the sake of efficiency, there would probably be a spin-off benefit as well. He would probably be in a position to give the public more complete information about what the practices are of the railroads. That might even open up the question of what is the real cost of shipping grain since the railroad has been caught implicitly contradicting itself as to the actual cost in relation to efficiency.

I would hope that this amendment would be adopted, that the Administrator would use his power to ensure the efficient handling of grain and monitor the practices of the railroad, so that the records would show whether the railroad has been handling grain efficiently in the past. I believe this would be very interesting because the debate about the Crow rate, which is the main subject of this Bill, of course, is likely to continue for some time. The same interests which want to increase the rate will still want to increase it even after this Bill has been defeated.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I am hoping that this amendment will be adopted. If not in its present form, then it is conceivable, as I said before in this debate, that there might be some compromise arrangement available whereby the essence of the amendment could be adopted.

I see my time has expired, Mr. Speaker.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

EXCLUSION OF PETERBOROUGH FROM TORONTO FOOTBALL COVERAGE

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): The Crown corporation, CBC, has made a decision to exclude Peterborough from television coverage of the Toronto Argonauts' Canadian Football League game on Sunday, October 9. Peterborough is clearly outside the 75 mile black-out radius. As a result of this I have learned that the CRTC is entirely at fault because it neglected to add the 75-mile exclusion clause to a contract with Classic Communications of Richmond Hill, Ontario, which fully intend to broadcast the game via telecasts picked up from CHEX Television station in Peterborough, Ontario.

Therefore, the CBC has made the arbitrary decision of disallowing Sunday's broadcast by CHEX and its affiliates on the basis of an error by CRTC in drawing up a licence with a Richmond Hill cable TV company. What this means is that thousands of football fans in the east central Ontario region will be denied the privilege of viewing the game, a deplorable situation which is further compounded by the loss of thousands of dollars of advertising revenue.

I strongly urge the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) to intercede immediately on behalf of football fans and force the CRTC to get its records straight and not deny football fans viewing rights because of a contractual error by the CRTC, a regulatory agency of the Ministry of Communications.

ACHIEVEMENTS OF BOMBARDIER COMPANY

Mr. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Madam Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House today to the fact that a major contract has been awarded to a Quebec company in my riding, and I am referring to Bombardier, which in its twenty-fifth year has succeeded in breaking into a market ignored until now by Canadian companies, namely, military vehicles. Madam Speaker, about twelve months ago, Bombardier was awarded a contract worth nearly $140 million which created a lot of jobs in the Eastern Townships, 1,875, to be exact, and yesterday, another contract worth $68 million was announced, which means an additional 1,000 jobs in Quebec. The product, a 4-wheel drive jeep, will have 50 per cent Canadian content during the first year and 60 per cent the second. I think this is an incredible achievement for a Quebec company, and it is due to its ability to draw on its own technical expertise, to know where the market is and to diversify production. After starting 25 years ago as a snowmobile manufacturer, Bombardier was able to find new markets, and I think that thanks to the expertise of its workers and management, this company which we can really call our own has a great future.

LOUIS RIEL

PLEA FOR POSTHUMOUS PARDON

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East): Madam Speaker, this House acted yesterday with unanimous consent to correct an historic injustice. Perhaps the Senate might also act in a similar manner.

The House acted to assist the Government of Manitoba to reinstate the constitutional rights of Manitobans so provided in the Manitoba Act of 1870. The Parliament of 1890 could have prevented that injustice through the use of the federal constitutional powers of reservation and disallowance. But the Parliament of 1890 did not act. Yesterday's action, to be followed by speeches by the three Party Leaders today, is a noble act. It is correcting a wrong. Perhaps the House could find within itself the will and generosity of spirit to correct another injustice committed in 1885.

This House could and should act unanimously by passing Bill C-691 or, by separate resolution, to grant a posthumous pardon to the father of the Manitoba Act of 1870, Louis David Riel, who was hung for the crime of treason against the central Government in 1885. A pardon would not only be an act of forgiveness for Riel, whose cause was just but whose methods were criminal, but it would also serve to remove an ugly blot of bias from the Canadian system of justice. It would also be forgiveness for the Government of 1885 which played politics with an unstable man's life, and a negligent Parliament which did not even sit to consider the matter—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

U.S.S.R.—HISTORY OF VIOLENCE

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) stated Tuesday that we must stop treating the Soviets as killers. I believe it is an absolute disgrace that the PM-NDP alliance has such strong sympathies for the Communist movement.

In 1968 the Red Army invaded Czechoslovakia, suppressing that country. Through the 1970s the Soviets instigated violence in African countries, using Cuban proxies to enthrone and keep in power oppressive Marxist regimes. In 1979 they invaded Afghanistan, where some 100,000 troops have been slaughtering entire tribes and gassing innocent civilians. During the first 30 years of the Soviet dictatorship the latest estimate of the number killed by the Communists is 83,000,000, and most recently the Soviet Union massacred 269 innocent passengers and crew aboard Korean Airlines Flight 007.

How can we treat them as anything but murderers? The Soviets have no respect for the human rights of their own citizens, much less of the citizens of other countries. For the PM-NDP alliance to sympathize, almost condoning the actions of these human slayers, is almost as repulsive as the revolting acts of the Soviets themselves.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

LIQUOR ADVERTISING IN SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, the Province of Saskatchewan, breaking a 58-year old tradition on October 1, began allowing liquor, wine and beer advertising on radio, television, and in the print media. I am concerned that this has not been done in the interests of the people of Saskatchewan.

I was puzzled when I first learned that a private television station from Toronto had contributed $5,000 to the Progressive Conservative Party of Saskatchewan in 1982, until I found that the station was CFTO, owned by Baton Broadcasting, which is in turn owned by the Bassett family of Toronto. It is no coincidence that Baton Broadcasting is also the owner of CFQC Radio and Television in Saskatoon. It just so happens that CFQC contributed $2,500 of its own money, and the CFQC vice-president and station manager is also chairman of the beer and wine committee of the Saskatchewan Association of Broadcasters, who have been instrumental in lobbying the provincial Tories to change the 58-year old ban.

I would like to add, Madam Speaker, that in 1982 the brewers and distillers of Canada gave a total of $51,000 to the Conservative Party of Saskatchewan, which is more than they contributed in the same year to the Conservative Party of Canada. The buying off of the Tory Government in Saskatchewan is an affront to the trust the people of Saskatchewan have placed in their Government, and I find a great deal of disgust in this whole idea.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

RECITATION OF PRAYERS

Mr. Jack Masters (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Madam Speaker, I rise today to talk about a very important part of the business of this House, a ritual that is not well known by many people in Canada. I refer to the practice of being led in prayer in private by the Speaker.

As Members know, the prayers are recited each day preceding the beginning of the day's business, with as many Members as possible in attendance, as well as pages and officials of Parliament. True, not all of us can be present, but I believe many try to take in the prayer session as often as possible. It seems to me that the commencement of this important ritual has been delayed every day this week. The delay has been caused because both opposition Parties have, for one reason or another, chosen not to be in the House or their seats for the prayer period. It should be noted that immediately after the prayer period, miraculously, Members file to the benches in goodly number.

I make these comments only to underline the fact that we do begin our daily activities with prayer, and that this might be an appropriate time and place to remind us that this is a practice worth preserving on all sides of this House. I believe we all benefit from prayer. It seems to me that if many can appear in their seats following prayers, there is no reason for them not to be in their places in time for the daily prayer.

CALL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF AGRI-BOND PROGRAM

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, since the Government has repeatedly refused to provide the Farm Credit Corporation with sufficient funds to honour the many loan applications of Canada's struggling farmers, it must at the very least implement an agri-bond program immediately. In fact the Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) said at one time that he personally supported the concept of agri-bonds to finance more credit for farmers at reduced rates. But he said that in March of 1982. If is now more than a year later and Canadian farmers are going bankrupt in record numbers while the Government drags its feet. Need I remind the Government that close to 300 farmers, including 35 in my home Province of Manitoba, have gone bankrupt so far this year?

● (1410)

To make the agri-bond program work, we suggest that the Government offer tax exemptions or reductions to encourage farmers and others to loan their savings to the FCC and the agri-bond program, with a capital gains tax waiver if the taxable portion is invested for not less than five years.

The Minister of Agriculture has said that he generally supports the idea. Farmers certainly support it, and we in the Progressive Conservative Party have long supported it. All that remains is for the Cabinet to make it a priority. Canadian farmers do not need any more of the Government's empty words. They need action.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

MULTIPLE WARHEAD MISSILES

Mr. Paul E. McRae (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Madam Speaker, a MIRVd missile is one with multiple independent re-entry vehicles, or warheads. Each warhead is capable of attacking a separate target. For example, one MX Missile with ten warheads could destroy ten Soviet cities.

A U.S. Congressional budget office study indicated that the U.S. will be getting rid of 143 Titan and Minuteman III mark 12 missiles, with a total of 343 warheads, between 1983 and 1988.

Under the build-down proposal of President Reagan, when two missiles would be destroyed and one missile would be added, there would be a net loss of 72 missiles—sounds good! The 343 warheads contained on the Titan and Minuteman missiles would be replaced by 710 warheads on the MX, for a net gain of 367 silo-busting warheads. Some build-down!

There have been on both sides all kinds of meaningless offers, especially when the super powers are replacing used, old and obsolete weapons like the Titan or the S.S. 4s and 5s, and 11s to impress the world that they are both serious about nuclear disarmament. It is time that the middle powers convey in the strongest possible terms the idea that this kind of spurious bargaining is unacceptable and does nothing but allow for a never-ending dangerous increase in nuclear weaponry.

AGRICULTURE

NECESSITY TO HELP FARMERS

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, last summer, the Farm Credit Corporation asked our permission to borrow $600 million on the financial markets, but the Minister of Finance refused to authorize more than $250 million. I may add that many farmers have benefited from the temporary 4 and 5 per cent interest rate programs, but this was only for a two-year period, starting November, 1981. Madam Speaker, you will therefore understand the emphasis on the desirability of Government assistance to farmers, when we are discussing farm loans.

Madam Speaker, I deplore the lack of interest shown by the Minister of Agriculture and the entire Government for the problems and difficulties with which many farmers will be faced starting this year, when the temporary programs are about to expire and these farmers will have to go back to interest rates of 16¾ per cent. Madam Speaker, in the circumstances, I trust my representation to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) will help them understand the importance of this matter, and that they will show more compassion for farmers and a better understanding of the importance of the survival of agriculture in Canada.

STATUS OF WOMEN

TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF MURDOCH CASE

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, October 2 marks the tenth anniversary of one of the most infamous cases in Canadian judicial history, the Murdoch case.

Ten years ago the Supreme Court of Canada denied justice to a women who, as well as doing all of the housework and child care, did the haying, raking, mowing, branding and vaccinating cattle, and drove the tractor. Her husband argued that this was what an ordinary rancher's wife did and that accordingly she was entitled to none of the property accumulated by the couple's joint labour, but held in the husband's name. Shamefully, with the exception of Mr. Justice Laskin, the Supreme Court of Canada agreed.

As a result of this appalling case of judicial sexism, Canada's wives thronged to the women's movement. After concerted lobbying, both federal and provincial, substantial improvements were made in family property laws. However, full equality has yet to the achieved, and even good statutory provisions have been interpreted in a backward way. The Leatherdale case, as recently as last year, is an example of how the Ontario Family Law Reform Act has been narrowly interpreted.

Marriage in Canada is now recognized, at least in theory, as an economic partnership of equals. Yet farm wives still seek legal recognition as partners with their husbands on the family farm. The federal Government has yet to ensure pension splitting for federal public servants, judges, the Armed Forces and Crown corporations. Appointments to the Bench do not yet reflect the equal partnership and contributions of Canadian women to Canadian society. We have a lot left to do.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

FINANCE

CAPITAL GAINS TAX AMENDMENTS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. On October 1 he decided to let certain people who are investing in shares, or "puts and calls" in the marketplace, wheeling and dealing, or speculating, to have complete indexation on their capital gains and the right to write off their capital losses. Does he expect the House to pass legislation amending the Income Tax Act that gives special people special advantages but does nothing for the ordinary small business people, farmers, fishermen, and those who have a cottage or who invest in something like a coin collection? Why should those special people who wheel and deal in the marketplace have those advantages?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I am very surprised at the Hon. Member's comments. He knows perfectly well that as far as capital gains are concerned, we have very substantial provisions to help farmers. We have, for instance, exempted private residences, which are not subject to capital gains. When the Hon. Member talks about farmers and home-owners, these people already benefit from exemptions where capital gains are concerned. As for shareholders, I made it clear in my budget that it was extremely important to increase in Canada the rate of Canadian participation in ownership of our industry, and that is done mostly through capital shares. The measures I have announced have received general support across the country. If the Progressive Conservative Party wishes to vote against this particular provision in the Bill, it can go right ahead, and at least we will know where the Party stands. However, as far as the legislation on indexing securities is concerned, the Hon. Member knows perfectly well that the tax on capital gains will be maintained, but only on the actual gains made, in that case.

TREATMENT OF STOCK PURCHASERS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, if the Minister really intends to help sound, solid investment, why does this Bill allow relief for those wheelers and dealers who trade in "puts and calls", since they are essentially speculators who have nothing to do with investment because there is no investment in that? Why does he not just withdraw the proposal and allow proper allowance for capital gains or inflation gains to those who invest in real business or new business? Why does he not do something for ordinary Canadians, in the interest of jobs and the creation of new investment? Why does he not want to do something for them—

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member seems to be repeating the question.

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I answered the Hon. Member's question in my first reply, but perhaps I may add that in terms of the legislation that was announced and the program that has been in effect since October 1, these provisions apply to anyone who buys shares, whatever their purpose may be. My hon. colleague is well aware that under the market system we have in Canada and other industrialized countries in the free world, the stock market is the principal source of financing for businesses. Once more, I wonder what the Progressive Conservative Party is trying to do here, because I must say it is rather unusual to hear this kind of talk from the mouth of a Conservative spokesman.

[English]

APPLICATION OF TAX TO SPECULATORS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, the Minister knows that we on this side have always been in favour of at least indexation of capital gains, if not abolishment. We have always been in favour of honest treatment of people by the tax department. How does the Minister justify this preferred treatment for a select group of investors while not looking after those people who really work, invest, and create in this country? Why does he want to favour that select group and not let the real creators and job builders in this country have the same kind of fairness that he proposes for these speculators?

• (1420)

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I am simply amazed at the Hon. Member's third question on this subject. It seems to be even worse than the first two. Canadians who invest in corporations by buying stocks contribute to the functioning of the Canadian economy. It is essential, if you want to have a market economy and a free economy, that you have an active equity market. I indicated in my budget, following representations from all kinds of groups across the country, that it was important for Canadians to become purchasers of equity and that Canadians should invest more in the industrial development of Canada. It is real investment when you buy shares, just the same as when you loan money or make other investments.

I want to remind my hon. friend that we have taken particular care of the situation of the farmers and particular care of the situation of the home owners by exempting farms and households from capital gains in circumstances that are specified in the legislation.

As far as the particular proposal is concerned, as I have indicated, the ISIP system is one that was developed after extensive consultation, and which received the broadest possible support across the nation.

CASH FLOW SITUATION OF COMPANIES

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Madam Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of Finance. Most of the business survivors of the recession have cash flow problems. Their earned surplus and capital accounts have been reduced to dangerous levels. If there is even the slightest bump in the recovery of the economy, many of these recession survivors could go under. Inasmuch as the Government is looking to the private sector to reduce the level of unemployment by adding to its work force, is the Minister planning a taxation solution to aid the cash flow problem of these struggling companies, and will he bring in his solutions in an amendment to the Income Tax Act in the immediate future?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I would invite my hon. friend to read the April budget in which this question has been repeatedly and consistently addressed. The net result is that the debt-equity ratio of companies across the country has improved quite considerably in the last several months, thanks to the measures that were announced in the budget and thanks to the steps that have already been taken by various corporations on the basis of that budget. I invite my hon. friend to acquaint himself with the many provisions contained in the budget on this very issue. I want to assure him that the Bill itself should be introduced soon in the House, and I hope the Bill will get the Hon. Member's wholehearted support in spite of the opposition of his seatmate. I am glad to see my hon. friend has better and broader vision than his seatmate.

Mr. Kempling: Working one against the other won't work, Marc.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CAPITAL COST ALLOWANCE

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also for the Minister of Finance. I have read the budget and all the provisions in it. It just does not help the cash flow problem being experienced by many businesses in Canada. The former Minister of Finance in his November, 1981, budget put in place new capital cost allowance rules that have severely damaged the cash flow and the profitability of most businesses. Inasmuch as productivity and profit go hand in hand, and many businesses have put off the purchase of new productive machinery and processors because of the capital cost allowance rules, is the Minister reviewing this matter, and will he bring in an amendment to the Income Tax Act in the immediate future to address this problem?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Indeed, Madam Speaker, I have addressed this very question in the budget by providing the possibility of taking losses three years backward and seven years forward. That provision again has been acclaimed by the business community as being one of considerable help in their current situation.

Mr. Kempling: You have to lose money to get it. Is that it?

Mr. Lalonde: In addition, I would refer my hon. friend to the various provisions in the budget which, obviously, time in the Question Period does not allow me to enumerate.

THE ECONOMY

JOB-CREATION PROGRAMS—BUSINESS COUNCIL'S ADVICE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, not only is there a cash flow problem for the Canadian business sector, but there is a cash flow problem for the average Canadian citizen.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: My question is for the Minister of Finance. A letter written yesterday by the Business Council on National Issues urges the Government to extend its present policies to depress workers' incomes even further, and asks the Government to restrain itself from taking any further job-creation measures.

Will the Minister of Finance stand in this House of Commons today and tell Canadians that he is going to ignore that kind of advice and that he has identified the number one problem in this country as job creation? As far as the letter from the Business Council on National Issues is concerned, will he tell them where to take that letter, or tell them he is going to ignore that letter?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the priority problem as far as I am concerned is the growth of the economy and the creation of more jobs. That is going to remain our priority, my priority as Minister of Finance, and the priority of this Government over the next year. I am very pleased to assure the Hon. Member about that.

EFFECT OF UNEMPLOYMENT ON PEOPLE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, in terms of that response, we have seen the results of the Government's economic policies. We know that there are two million Canadians out of work, who are told repeatedly that to expect work is being unrealistic. We have a generation of young Canadians who are being told that they might never find meaningful work. We are finding people who have to retire ten years early. To say that being age 55 and out of work, you are better off dead, is also being heard. We have had three days of rioting and demonstrations in the Gaspé area. Is this the kind of policy that we can expect now and in the future, that is, fighting the problems of Canada's economy on the backs of Canadian workers, as the Minister has been doing for the last three years?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I would remind my hon. friend that he seems to be looking at Canada only. In the last while we have had thirty million people unemployed in the OECD countries. That is a world-wide problem. Things have been improving lately. I am glad to see they have improved more rapidly since last November in Canada than in almost any other industrial country.

This has meant, for instance, that we have created 328,000 new jobs between last November and last July. It has meant that we have reduced inflation more than any other country. It has meant that we have been creating jobs just as fast as any other industrial country, and we intend to continue doing so, making our economy grow as fast as we can possibly make it grow, and thereby reduce unemployment. Our unemployment level is high, and it is a source of concern. But it would be misleading to let people believe that somehow Canada can isolate itself from the world context in which we live, and that tomorrow anybody could cut unemployment by half. We will have to address this question consistently and do everything we can together.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, I make no apologies for looking at Canada. I am aware that we have two million out of work. All indications now suggest that figure will likely remain at that level for a number of years. It is very nice for the Minister of Finance to stand up in his position and listen to the National Business Council advise Canadians from high salaried positions that the rest of Canada simply has to stand back and wait.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER SET FULL EMPLOYMENT TARGET

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, other countries have set targets for their unemployment levels. They have identified full employment targets. Japan is one, West Germany is one, and Switzerland is one. Why does Canada not do the same thing and set some targets so we can start moving unemployment levels down, and implement some strategies to accomplish that, rather than simply accepting the status quo and saying to two million Canadians, "That is the price you have to pay"?

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nielsen: Yes or no, Marc.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I take the question of the Hon. Member very seriously. We have indeed expressed our concern about the unemployment situation. We have not only expressed our concern but we have dealt with it and led a strong attack on unemployment. The last budget included the provision of $4.8 billion in expenditures having to do with stimulus to the private sector, having to do with public expenditure. In addition, only in this year we are spending over $1.5 billion directly in terms of direct job creation. Our target is to reduce unemployment in Canada as fast and as much as we can. Our target is to create the largest possible number of jobs. In that sense we are all for full employment but we realize you cannot have it the next morning. It is easy to make a speech about it, but we have to take steps to achieve it. This Government has not only spoken and made speeches about it, but we have been acting on it as well.

EFFECT OF BOMBARDIER CONTRACT ON JOB CREATION

Mr. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Supply and Services. In a somewhat laconic press release issued yesterday, his colleague the Minister of National Defence announced that the Quebec-based Bombardier Corporation had been awarded a $68-million contract. Could the minister indicate to the House what will be the impact of this decision on the employment and economic situations in Quebec? At the same time, could the minister indicate whether there is any connection between this contract and the Volkswagen file about which so much more has been written than about this $68-million contract?

Hon. Charles Lapointe (Minister of Supply and Services): Madam Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Member for his question. It is a fact that my colleague the Minister of National Defence and I announced yesterday that the Bombardier Corporation had been awarded a contract of about $65 million to provide Jeep-type light utility trucks to the Canadian Armed Forces. This contract will create directly 312 jobs at the Bombardier plant, and indirectly a thousand or so more throughout Canada. As the Hon. Member is certainly aware, this contract is in addition to a $140-million contract also awarded to the Bombardier Corporation, to supply the Canadian Armed Forces with 2½-ton trucks, which has created directly 375 jobs at the plant and some 1,500 sub-contract jobs throughout Canada. The ILTIS technology which Bombardier acquired when Volkswagen set shop in Canada is finally bearing fruit, and as the Bombardier Corporation is marking this year its 25th Anniversary, Madam Speaker, we must rejoice that co-operation has existed and continues to exist between the Government of Canada and this major Quebec-based corporation.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CENTRAL AMERICA—CANADIAN OFFER TO MONITOR PEACE ARRANGEMENTS

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs I would like to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. The Minister of State for External Relations is reported today as stating that Canada would be willing to monitor any future peace or truce arrangement in Central America arranged by the Contadora group. Will the Minister tell the House in specific terms exactly what this role would entail, and whether this commitment followed discussions by the Minister of State or by the Minister himself with representatives of Honduras, El Salvador, and Costa Rica, as well as with the Contadora group and the Foreign Ministers of Nicaragua, Guatemala, and Cuba?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the position of the Canadian Government in relation to any peacekeeping corps in the area has been clear for some period of time. The position the Government has taken is that we are in support of the group of nations in the area that have been working toward peace. We do not see Canada as essentially playing a role in any peace corps in Central America, but we are prepared to consider it if requested.

The Hon. Member is concerned about the type of consultations that occurred before Canada established that position. I would take the portion of his question as notice for the Secretary of State for External Affairs to deal with upon his return to the House.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): That does not exactly square with the reports, but I am glad to have the additional information.

REQUEST FOR PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, could the Minister assure the House that before any decision is taken the Government will allow Parliament, as it has in the past in the case of Cyprus and the Middle East, to debate any such monitoring role and to approve or withhold approval as circumstances warrant, before Canadians are sent to Central America? Could he give the House any information on the remark of the Minister of State that Canadians would act as "verification teams" to cover border areas, and would control the acquisition of foreign arms by the countries? Would he also let it be known whether there is any time limit placed upon the presence in that area of any Canadian groups?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I will bring the representations of the Hon. Member to the attention of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, but I want to emphasize again that the position of Canada is, and has been, that we are not seeking to play a role in any monitoring of peace in the area. We feel, as responsible members of this hemisphere, that if a request is made to us by the appropriate authorities for an appropriate type of participation, we should carefully consider that question.

ROLE OF PARLIAMENT

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of State for International Trade. As this could be a dangerous and costly operation for Canadians to engage in, would the Minister assure the House that before any agreement is entered into, even if it is in response to a request, as he suggested, that the matter will be brought before the House for approval or disapproval before any Canadians are asked to engage in what the Minister has been suggesting?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member can be assured that the usual procedures and the appropriate ones for the Government will be followed by the Secretary of State for External Affairs and other Ministers who would be involved.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON CANADIAN OBLIGATION

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of State for International Trade who just put his finger on why we feel so uncertain about what the Government may be doing. Is he aware of what the Minister of State for External Relations said, namely, that eventually Canada will have to pay the price for its involvement and interest in the talks, and that Canada has an obligation to support the group's efforts? Is he aware of that? In short, what did the Minister mean that Canada has to pay a price?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I want to make it quite clear that the Hon. Member is putting the cart away in front of the horse. What the Minister said is exactly what was said in the House repeatedly on previous occasions by the Secretary of State for External Affairs, that if Canada is asked to participate, we will give the matter serious consideration. He went on to recognize the responsibility of Canada in relation to the role we have traditionally played, or the way in which we have been prepared to react to requests that contribute toward world peace in the past. I am confident that the Hon. Member opposite would be in full support of the principle that Canada continue to play the traditional role in working for peace that it has in the past.

INCOME TAX

REASSESSMENT OF ARTISTS' TAX RETURNS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. He will know that his departmental officials have followed, in recent months, a very aggressive policy of reassessing income tax returns of artists, not just for the current taxation year but for three or four years back. In the view of the artists, the officials are treating them as if they were manufacturers, which they are not. Artists feel very strongly that, if that policy continues, the production and creation of innovative and creative art will simply dry up. Will the Minister give consideration to putting a hold on that kind of interpretation or that kind of policy, at least until he can work out a system which is fair to artists?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): First, Madam Speaker, I should like to reassure Hon. Members and tell them that we have no special programs to audit the income tax returns of artists in particular. I might remind the House that the general provisions of the Income Tax Act may be used by taxpayers whose situation is similar to that of an artist when they file their income tax returns. There are various ways of figuring out their income, just as there are special ways of figuring out expenses which may be deductible. Those general provisions of the Income Tax Act have been quite adequate so far with respect to the income tax returns of artists, and unless the Minister of Finance is shown that they ought to be changed, they will remain in force.

• (1440)

EXPENSES OF PART-TIME ARTISTS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, the Minister surely knows that there are no new laws, but that the interpretations now being used in his Department have created an entirely new situation for full-time artists. I direct his attention to another group of artists who earn a lesser part of their income from the sale of art but work full-time as teachers and so on. They are not permitted to deduct expenses which they incur in producing their art, when calculating their income tax. Will the Minister give consideration to that aspect of the way in which his Department is assessing artists?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): In the first part of my answer, Madam Speaker, I referred to the general provisions related to the interpretation of the Income Tax Act for people whose situation is similar to that of an artist. Under those provisions, a taxpayer may claim general expenses to maintain a work place, a studio and a place to sell works of art. There are as well very specific provisions for an artist who must incur special expenses to produce a work of art, and those expenses must be deducted from the selling price of that work of art.

The Hon. Member is wondering whether a special treatment might not be given to a group of artists whose art work is not the main source of income. I must say that it is difficult to make a general rule for such particular cases. However, on the basis of the facts submitted to us, we look into the situation of the artist and we try to be as lenient as possible in our interpretation of the Income Tax Act in those particular cases.

PUBLIC SERVICE

PAYMENT OF HOSPITAL INSURANCE PREMIUMS—GOVERNMENT'S SHARE

Mr. Hal Herbert (Vaudreuil): Madam Speaker, my question is for the President of the Treasury Board who is the Minister responsible for the federal Public Service. The subject is hospital insurance premiums. Is the Minister prepared to discontinue the federal Government's tacit support for the payment of these premiums by its payment, in the Province of Ontario and other Provinces, of part of the contributions of the federal public servants and, if his attitude is to discontinue this tacit support of this obnoxious form of taxation, will he compensate the public servants by folding that amount of money into the existing pay scales?

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, I will be happy to take the Hon. Member's question under consideration.

MEDICAL CARE

HOSPITAL AND MEDICAL PREMIUMS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. The Minister has been making a number of statements relative to the present controversy in the health care field. Does the Minister regard hospital and medical premiums as part of the extra billing controversy?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to receive the first question on Medicare, a month after Parliament has reopened, from my friend on the other side. I compliment him on having been made the medicare critic. I therefore know he is interested, and I appreciate that.

On the question of premiums, it is a practice in three Provinces. I have always said that, in terms of equity, premiums are a very regressive form of taxation. Unfortunately the Constitution does not permit us to take action in the coming Canada Health Act. As I said, in the case of Alberta, where thousands of people are cut off from having their doctor's visits paid by Medicare, if that Province had gone the route of justice and general taxation, it would not be in the mess it is.

SITUATION IN YUKON

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, if the Minister says this is a regressive form of taxation, I agree. Can the Minister explain why she levies hospital premiums in federal hospitals under her care, namely, in the Yukon, up to $318 per family per year?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): I don't, Madam Speaker.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

NATIVE SYSTEM OF JUSTICE

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. In a speech to an audience of native people in western Canada two days ago, the Minister said, and I quote:

> I think that we are now finally beginning to realize that the native peoples of Canada have the right to expect a system of justice that reflects elements of their own cultural heritage—

He went on to say that the Government is busy working on a plan to codify the Indian law and to establish special courts, confirming the suspicion that Indian people have, that the Government is not really interested in consultation but is once again off on a tangent, putting in place a blueprint that is disrespectful of the legitimate aspirations which Indians have for themselves. Why has the Minister chosen this time to confuse the issue, just days before a parliamentary committee, which has met in 60 locations in Canada over the past year, will be reporting to the House on these very questions?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member has considerably embellished the statement that I made last week. It is true that the Government is concerned about attempting to ensure that the law that is applied to our Indian citizens as far as possible adequately reflects their cultural heritage. In fact a conference will be held in Saskatchewan next week, of which my Department is a partial sponsor, to look at this question. It is a native peoples' conference. We have been having the fullest possible consultation with native peoples on this issue. The native peoples' group to whom is made that statement last week welcomed it. I will welcome the report which the parliamentary committee will be presenting.

POSSIBILITY OF SELF-GOVERNMENT

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, the Minister, through his executive assistant, also speculated on the right of aboriginal peoples to some form of self-determination, although it is reported in the press that he was very careful to mention "self-government" rather than using the term "band government", which was his choice. Will the Minister assure us today that no decisions will be made with regard to the establishment of any form of band government, or any new system of justice, before the parliamentary committee has the opportunity to lay its report before the House and for the native people to react to the report? That is crucially important.

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, questions involving Indian government are very much to the fore in the constitutional discussions which are going on between the Government of Canada and the native peoples and which will also, of course, very soon involve the provincial Governments. We are having a meeting of officials in several weeks. We are having a meeting of responsible Ministers early next month. These are all questions which are on the public record. Nothing is being done secretly or behind the scenes. It is all being conducted so far as possible in public, certainly with full consultation both with the native groups and the provincial Governments.

ENERGY

ONTARIO AND QUEBEC PROPOSALS TO ESTABLISH HYDROGEN INSTITUTES

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister will know that the Government of the Province of Ontario, in co-operation with the University of Toronto, established an Institute for Hydrogen Studies in 1981, and that they have asked for federal co-operation and assistance. He will also know that it now seems likely that the federal Government will be supporting a similar institution in Quebec. Will the Minister ensure that the Ontario initiative receives a fair share of support? Also, does he know there is absolutely no federal funding at present?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, the two propositions are completely different. I am aware of the request by the university and the Government of Ontario. The project he is referring to is being partially initiated in Quebec by the private sector and will be supported by two levels of government. They are not of the same nature at all.

SITE OF FACILITY IN QUEBEC

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, when will the Minister be announcing the site of the new facility in Quebec, perhaps in Shawinigan or some other place, and what level of federal funding can we expect to see for that facility?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, there has been no final decision on that. There is a group named Electrolysor Inc. and Hydro Quebec which will be in a majority position in the corporation. We will be giving some grants through the normal programs of the Government, but the final decision has not yet been reached.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CENTRAL AMERICA—PROPOSAL TO MONITOR PEACE AGREEMENT

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for International Trade and follows some of the earlier questions with respect to the statement made by the Minister's colleague in New York yesterday. His colleague said that Canada would be willing to send observers to Central America to monitor any future peace agreement arranged by the Contadora group. I am glad, by the way, that the Government has finally discovered Central America. Can the Minister assure us that such monitoring would be undertaken only after all foreign military forces and military bases have been removed from the region including, of course, American military forces and military bases in Honduras?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I think it is perfectly obvious to the Hon. Member that I cannot give her those assurances and, indeed, I would not want to do so. I think that the Hon. Member, upon reflection, will quickly agree that the conditions upon which Canada would agree, if asked to participate in the monitoring of peace in the region, would be dependent upon whether those conditions would contribute to the likelihood of peace and would prevent further bloodshed and loss of life. Indeed, I think it would be unwise for us to take any firm position publicly on the terms or conditions under which we would agree to participate in such a monitoring exercise.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, I take it that it is therefore useless to ask a further question of the Minister, but in any event I will try.

PRESENCE OF FOREIGN FORCES IN AREA

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister to think his position through again. If we are to participate in a monitoring role, would we not insist that all foreign forces, including American and Cuban, but particularly those forces in Honduras which are American, must be removed from the region before we would participate in such a monitoring activity? If he cannot answer, Madam Speaker, then a parliamentary debate really is in order.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, again if the Hon. Member takes time to think about it, she will realize that it has been difficult at certain times in the past months and years to know when foreign forces are present in some of those countries, and the extent to which they are present. Therefore, I think it might be unwise to set those hard and fast conditions. However, I believe that the Secretary of State for External Affairs would want to give careful consideration to any representations that the distinguished Hon. Member has made, and I will therefore pass her representations in that regard on to him for consideration. Again, I would certainly not be prepared to take any fixed position at this time.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE

ESTABLISHMENT OF DUTY-FREE SHOPS IN ONTARIO

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. In view of the hundreds of jobs that could be created at border crossing points in Ontario by the establishment of duty-free shops, and given the clear indication that, after a delay of a year and a half, the Province of Ontario will not co-operate in the establishment of these shops unless they are effectively run by and for the benefit of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, is the Government prepared to move ahead with this program under the constitutional authority it has for international trade? Will the government establish these duty-free shops at Ontario border crossing points, using private entrepreneurs, as has been done in other Provinces?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member should have taken this opportunity to tell the House that we ought to be concerned about the fact that one of the Provinces which has the highest number of border crossing points, namely Ontario, has yet to participate in the duty-free shops national program. The Hon. Member and his colleagues must remember that, under the existing legislation, provincial authorities are responsible for importing, stocking and marketing alcoholic beverages in Canada. It is unfortunate that the Province of Ontario has chosen to protect its state monopoly and thus thwart private enterprise which the Canadian Government wants to promote through its duty-free shops national program. I did meet with the Ontario Minister responsible for implementing this program, but I have not yet received a favourable answer from him. We will go ahead with a unilateral program to issue operating permits for such shops, but unfortunately the permit holders would not be authorized to sell alcoholic beverages. I therefore urge Hon. Members to make representations to the Ontario Government so that it might forget all about protecting its state monopoly and work hand in hand with the Canadian Government to help private enterprise launch the duty-free shops program.

SUGGESTED ROLE FOR PRIVATE SECTOR

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Madam Speaker, in view of the criticism of the Ontario regulations, is the Government of Canada now prepared to relax some of its regulations and invite members of the private sector to apply for an opportunity to operate a duty-free store in other Provinces of Canada in which the climate may be more favourable?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member ought to know that New Brunswick already has such a store. Indeed, I attended the opening ceremonies of that shop with a Member who is well known in the House since he often occupies the Chair. As soon as we have made an evaluation of the experimental program, we will be ready to proceed with the expansion of the national program.

FISHERIES

FUTURE OF GEORGETOWN PLANT IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of Fisheries. The federal Government has announced a new development plan for the Nova Scotia fisheries which includes access to redfish in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Can the Minister assure us that the trawler fleet capacity that is now lying dormant in the Gulf area, and especially the Georgetown plant in Prince Edward Island, will be reactivated in order to process Gulf stocks and provide much needed employment opportunities in that particular area?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I would first like to remind the Hon. Member that no fishing allocations could be made on a bilateral basis between the Department and one single Province. All negotiations must involve all Provinces. That is why there has been no commitment made, although we have said that Nova Scotia, like all other Provinces, will be consulted on any allocation.

Second, I would be grateful to the Hon. Member if he would tell me whether or not he is in favour of allowing non-Gulf based vessels greater access. They actually already have access to redfish in the Gulf. Third, on the question of development land for the fisheries of Nova Scotia, yes, I have committed myself on that question, but as you can tell by the joint statement that Mr. Buchanan and myself have made public, it is well understood that the amount and the sharing ratio will have to be decided upon by Cabinet.

Mr. Crouse: Madam Speaker, the Minister must be aware that the Georgetown plant was closed by the action of his predecessor in office who denied Nickerson's the right to supply that plant with ships operating outside the Gulf. This is a matter that he will have to address since he has restructured Nickerson and National Sea.

POSITION OF INDEPENDENT COMPANIES

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also directed to the Minister of Fisheries. In the restructuring agreements the Minister has committed himself to returning the fishery to the private sector as soon as it is economically viable. I hope I am paraphrasing him correctly. Since this will require existing independent companies to grow and strengthen their position in the industry, how can this be accomplished when they are faced with strong competition from this new Government backed enterprise?

● (1500)

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend has asked several questions. On the question of Georgetown, the history, with which I am familiar, that was confirmed to me by the Minister of Fisheries of P.E.I. is that Nickerson committee to supply Georgetown with their trawlers. Then they moved their trawlers to Riverport and, when Riverport burned, they moved their trawlers to Canso. It is the company that failed in its commitments. It moved its trawlers from P.E.I. Now that we have managed to have this agreement with Nova Scotia, I can tell my hon. friend that already, through the representation of my colleague, the regional minister for P.E.I., we are looking very closely at the possibility of supplying fish through that newly structured company, to Georgetown. Whoever gets Canso I think will also have to look at the possibility of supplying fish to Georgetown. I am very surprised that, even though that new company is not yet structured, my hon. friend is criticizing its actions.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

RESOLUTION ON FRENCH LANGUAGE RIGHTS IN MANITOBA

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister) moved:

Whereas a fundamental purpose of the Constitution of Canada is to protect the basic rights of all Canadians, including Aboriginal peoples, English-speaking and French-speaking minorities, religious, ethnic and other minority groups;

Whereas the Constitution contains provisions respecting the status and use of the English and French languages in Canada;

Whereas the Manitoba Act, 1870 was enacted by the Parliament of Canada to establish the province of Manitoba and is part of the Constitution;

Whereas in 1870 Parliament provided special protection for the use of the English and French languages in Manitoba under section 23 of that Act;

Whereas the Supreme Court of Canada, on December 13, 1979, reaffirmed this constitutional protection under section 23 of the Manitoba Act, 1870;

Whereas the Constitution is the supreme law of Canada and is binding upon Parliament and the Legislatures of all provinces;

Whereas it is in the national interest that the language rights of the English-speaking and French-speaking minorities in Canada be respected and protected in a spirit of tolerance and civility, amity and generosity;

Whereas an agreement was reached on May 16, 1983 by the Government of Canada and the Government of Manitoba, with the participation of the Société Franco-Manitobaine, to modify the Manitoba Act, 1870, so that the Government and Legislative Assembly of Manitoba can fulfil effectively their constitutional obligations under section 23 of that Act;

Whereas it is in the national interest to support continued efforts by the Government and Legislative Assembly of Manitoba to fulfil effectively their constitutional obligations and protect the rights of the French-speaking minority of the province;

(1) the House endorses, on behalf of all Canadians, the essence of the agreement reached by the Government of Canada and the Government of Manitoba, with the participation of the Société Franco-Manitobaine, on May 16, 1983, to modify the Manitoba Act, 1870;

(2) the House invites the Government and Legislative Assembly of Manitoba to take action as expeditiously as possible in order to fulfill their constitutional obligations and protect effectively the rights of the French-speaking minority of the province.

He said: Madam Speaker, I feel truly privileged to participate in this debate. I should like to say, not without emotion, that it is perhaps the most important day of my life as a parliamentarian. For by the resolution which is before the House, we in this Chamber are called upon to do two things: first, to ensure that the Constitution will be obeyed; second, to right a wrong.

It is fundamental to our life as a free society, indeed to our existence as parliamentarians, that the Constitution be obeyed. The Constitution is the source of all authority in this land: it permits us to sit in this place and to make laws; it gives authority to the officers of the Crown to collect taxes or to ensure obedience to the criminal law; it is the source of the very authority by which the Queen reigns and holds office. If the Constitution is not obeyed, then indeed the human contract on which this free society exists is imperilled. As Hobbes said, life indeed would then be solitary, poor, nasty, brutish and short.

This resolution is of fundamental importance because, first, it is giving our support to that principle of obeying the Constitution. Second, I have said that by this resolution we will be attempting to right a historic wrong. I think that is not only a very noble privilege and duty which falls on us but it also is an encouragement to all those in this country, no matter how weak or small or poor they be, to know that the men and women sitting in this place are dedicated to that principle of setting wrongs right.

What is this resolution about, Madam Speaker? It is about a law enacted by the Parliament of Canada in 1870, a law that created the province of Manitoba. This law was introduced before the Parliament of Canada by the then Prime Minister, John A. Macdonald. It gave provincial rights to a territory that was part of our Canadian territories at the time. But above all, it gave legal status to the desire of the people of Manitoba, the majority of whom were French speaking at the time, that both languages, French and English, would be entrenched in the Constitution and given equal status in the legislature, the statutes and the courts.

Madam Speaker, as we all know, twenty years later, in 1890, the Manitoba legislature passed a law making English the only official language, the result being that subsequently, unilingualism became official in Manitoba, a situation that was to last for many decades.

Although experts on constitutional law maintained that the 1890 law was probably ultra vires in terms of the Constitution, it was not until the seventies that a Franco-Manitoban, Mr. Georges Forest, challenged the law of 1890 before the courts. And the Supreme Court of Canada, a tribunal established by the Parliament of Canada under the powers vested in Parliament by the Canadian Constitution, declared that the 1890 law establishing unilingualism was ultra vires and null and void, and consequently, that the 1870 guarantee for two official languages still stood.

I admire the Supreme Court for saddling politicians with this problem, since it is its role. The Supreme Court must tell us what the Constitution says. It must not worry about the political, social or economic problems that may arise as a result of a Supreme Court judgment on a legal matter arising from the Constitution. In fact, after the judgment in December 1979, governments in this country were faced with a dilemma. Because the 1890 law was unconstitutional, this might mean that all statutes passed by Manitoba, all its policies and practices, had no legal authority. That is the question now before the Supreme Court of Canada, and it is there because Mr. Bilodeau asked the Court for a ruling on the consequences of its 1979 judgment.

Madam Speaker, it was at this point that the political authorities became involved. First of all, I wish to say a few words in praise of the man who was Premier at the time, Mr. Sterling Lyon, who in 1979 was Premier of Manitoba. Mr. Lyon quickly acted to repeal the unlawful and unconstitutional Act of 1890. He went even further, and started by ensuring that a certain number of services in Manitoba would be available in French, on demand. Mr. Lyon's successor, Premier Howard Pawley, tried to find a way around the eventuality that the Supreme Court would rule that everything that had happened since 1890 in Manitoba was illegal, which could even be taken to mean that the Premier's own legislature was sitting unlawfully and had no authority. Madam Speaker, it is indeed important, that the Constitution is respected, as I said earlier, both for legislators and for judges.

At this point, an agreement was reached between the Government of Canada, represented by the Secretary of State and assisted by the Minister of Justice, and the Government of Manitoba and the Société franco-manitobaine. They tried to find, as was their duty as political authorities and responsible leaders, a way of resolving this problem and thus preventing the utter chaos that might ensue if a judgment were to invalidate some ninety years of legislation. They found a formula that lead to the agreement referred to in the resolution before the House today. This agreement had many advantages, one being that politicians and the community leaders were saying: It is up to us to try to solve these problems. We cannot go to the courts again. Let us try to find a solution. It was a little like what we ourselves did in the House two years ago when the Supreme Court gave us a nice problem to solve as a result of its judgment in September 1981. At the time, the political leaders of this House and the Canadian Provinces managed to find a solution to the problem, and although the going was at times a bit rough, as I think my colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien), then Minister of Justice, will agree, we managed to find a solution that could be accepted by the vast majority of Canadians.

Similarly, the Pawley Government, our Government and the Franco-Manitobans drafted an agreement that had several advantages. First of all, under the agreement, Manitoba and the Parliament of Canada would be asked to adopt a constitutional amendment declaring all laws passed since 1890 to be valid, thus preventing legal chaos in this part of the country. Second, an agreement or constitutional amendment that would establish the legitimacy of the province and the Government of Manitoba would, as it were, reaffirm their constitutionality. Third, the agreement would release the province from the obligation, which it would have had pursuant to the Act of 1870, to translate the 4,500 statutes or laws still in existence that govern this province, substituting therefor an obligation to translate only the province's 400 principal statutes. The agreement would also enable the Government and Parliament of Canada to assist the Province of Manitoba financially in accomplishing this task. Finally, the agreement would give Franco-Manitobans a number of advantages insofar as they would be able to receive services in French, over and above the provisions of the Act of 1870.

[English]

That is the situation today, Madam Speaker. It is important to repeat for those who think that this is a new right which is being given to that small minority of French-speaking Canadians in Manitoba that this is not a new right. This is a right which was given to them in 1870, which was unconstitutionally withdrawn from them in 1890, and which was restored by the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada in 1979. This is not a matter of giving new rights and privileges; this is a matter of re-establishing certain rights. And in return for not creating the chaos which would follow from the unconstitutionality of some 90 years of invalid laws, it said uncertain services will be delivered in French beyond those authorized and required by the law of 1870.

I believe it is a very important day for us in this Parliament, Madam Speaker, that the three Parties in this place have agreed that they will make this joint statement to say that no matter how old, how forgotten, and no matter how few people were protected by it, the Constitution must stand if, indeed, we are to continue to exist as a civilized society. Wrongs must be righted.

We cannot undo the past, Madam Speaker, and I am not one of those who is constantly trying to rewrite history and trying to seek redress for decades, perhaps generations, of injustices, real or imagined. However, we can be just in our time. The events in Manitoba are calling on us to do precisely that, to assist in the re-establishment of a situation of laws where, from today onward into the future, we will not repeat the mistakes of the past.

I am encouraged, Madam Speaker, that there is a disposition in this place to speak with one voice on that basic principle. I know it has been said, even in my own Province, by some political leaders—who it must be said do not believe in Canada, who perhaps have a vested interest in that only French be spoken in my Province and only English spoken elsewhere—that these are but a small minority, that they are all but lost. Why worry about them? Well, Madam Speaker, I think it is fundamental to our existence as a people and, indeed, to our survival as a nation that we say no matter how small the minority, if they have rights, those rights will be respected.

• (1520)

Mr. Trudeau: Lest some think that we on this side are inventing some new principle or some new basic authority or policy to govern this country, I would ask the indulgence of the House to let me make two quotations from the debates which took place in 1890 when there was a resolution before the Canadian Parliament to abolish the use of French in the Northwest Territories, and in effect that meant in all western Canada.

There was a resolution moved in the early months of 1890 by Dalton McCarthy, who proposed to abolish the official status of French in western Canada. In that debate Sir John A. Macdonald utters his famous declaration which still stands throughout the land, and I hope will stand during the many centuries that this country will exist. I quote:

I have no accord with the desire expressed in some quarters that by any mode whatever there should be an attempt made to oppress the one language or to render it inferior to the other; I believe that it would be impossible if it were tried, and it would be foolish and wicked if it were possible.

So spake Sir John A. Macdonald on February 7, 1890.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: It was a great speech, Madam Speaker, but if I could be permitted to voice an opinion, I think the greatest speech in that debate was uttered a week later by Edward Blake, who had been leader of the Liberal Party and who sat beside Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House. Blake—and I think we can keep in mind that he was perhaps one of the greatest legal minds that this country has known—on February 14, 1890 spoke as follows:

I am not of those who believe that our path is made plainer and straighter by the circumstances of different nationalities and of different creeds.

He saw the dangers, Madam Speaker, and the difficulties of a bilingual and multicultural society even in those days. Yet despite the difficulties and dangers he saw ahead, he declared, in words which do him honour, that the survival and development of French-speaking Canadians was "a victory for humanity". These are his own words, Madam Speaker:

—if, as the case is, it has imposed greater difficulties and more arduous efforts and toils on those who are engaged in making a nation of Canada, it yet, by that very circumstance, gave the chance for more exalted triumphs, gave an opening for the exhibition of still higher and deeper and broader feelings of justice and liberality and tolerance than are permitted to a wholly homogeneous people.

Blake concluded:

—I maintain that it is the duty of those who truly regard the progress and prosperity of Canada, who hope to see it advance in its path towards nationality, to defend the rights of the minorities in this regard, as by law and by convention and by national settlement established. I intend for my part to defend them just as warmly as if I were one of themselves; and I should regard myself dishonoured and disgraced if I were now to yield to the forces which press me to any other course.

That, Madam Speaker, is the spirit of Confederation which this resolution asks the House to endorse today. It is a spirit which goes to the very basis of our society and I am deeply encouraged by the unanimity with which this debate will be concluded, as well as by the spirit of co-operation and understanding which existed between the Leaders of the Parties of this House and which has led us to move this debate and second it, Madam Speaker.

I do believe that this country has entered a new period of understanding. I believe that if the events in Manitoba turn out in the way we hope and pray and in the way we have confidence that the majority of the people of Manitoba will understand, I have confidence that living in this country will be, for all those minorities and all those other people who are asking for greater measures of justice, a turning point in the life of our nation.

[Translation]

Our forefathers have built a country where life is not particularly easy but is based on tolerance and fraternity. Madam Speaker, we would be unworthy of them if we failed to do everything in our power to make this nation survive and prosper, this magnificent country that was founded on the principle of reciprocity, of cohabitation of cultures and the principle of minority rights.

[English]

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, I speak today on a resolution of consequence before this House. I do so with pride and in the genuine hope that our action will be helpful to our fellow Canadians in Manitoba as they search for an equitable solution to a problem which has troubled the soul of this nation for over 100 years.

[Translation]

The purpose of this resolution is one which has touched the soul of Canada for decades. When I was very young in Baie-Comeau, we were taught at the local school the sad story about some of our Francophone brothers outside of Quebec. Even at that young age, we knew that an injustice had been committed in Manitoba. We did not know why or how, but we knew that certain basic rules—which we Quebecers, Anglophones as well as Francophones, could benefit from—had been broken. A Francophone minority, which had enjoyed an historical protection of its language in Manitoba, was suddenly cut off—amputated—from this guarantee which was so vital. We knew also, Madam Speaker, without being able to really evaluate its consequences, the less than glorious role some of our Quebec leaders had played in the outcome of this very painful situation.

I do not want today to go over all of the steps, again make all of the accusations, recite all of the injustices. Still less do I intend to blame anybody, Madam Speaker. The facts are clear and speak for themselves.

Our collective evolution has determined that two peoples speaking English and French were united in a great national adventure. This unique situation has given birth to our Canadian citizenship. This very noble outcome has not been without failings, Madam Speaker. Neither has it been protected from constant assault by those who wish that we give it up for a less grandiose vision, a more limited country, a less generous mentality. There is even a Member of the PQ government who said that any such initiative to help the Francophone minority in Manitoba was stupid.

This resolution compels us to remember our overriding commitments in this country of almost limitless space, overflowing with great opportunities for the future. These commitments comprise a respect for our linguistic and other minorities, a long-held desire to encourage their flowering, and the duty to protect the rights of our minorities—wherever they are.

Manitoba is going through a period of disturbance. In making this gesture today, I do not want to exacerbate the complexity of this situation. In the final analysis it is up to Manitobans themselves to decide. I hope that Manitoba's leaders, who I assume are acting in good faith, will work together in a spirit of generosity to ensure that Franco-Manitobans are treated with dignity and respect.

Thus we have today the occasion to state our position on this question here in the House of Commons. By this resolution before us, we are asked to make a gesture. The significance and the impact of this action relate first and foremost to profoundly human values, values which define to a large degree the kind of generosity of spirit typical of Canadian society.

It is with pride that I announce today, in the name of my colleagues in the Progressive Conservative Party, our unanimous support for the resolution which is before this House.

• (1530)

[English]

Years ago this House approved the principle of official bilingualism for Canada. Simply put, it means that English and French Canadians shall have equal rights and equal opportunities across Canada. It is a noble principle, one which is capable of enriching the life of this nation. By our stand today we reaffirm our commitment and that of our Party given earlier in this same House of Commons by outstanding and distinguished Canadians such as the Hon. Robert Stanfield and the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark).

Bilingualism is a valued principle and an indispensable dimension of our national life. The program, however, must be implemented with fairness and with equity. It is diminished if it comes to be perceived by large numbers of Canadians as an instrument of division or an instrument of unfairness. Governments must always be alert to this possibility. Excessive zeal and regrettable statements by public officials have seriously hindered worthy programs in the past. We do not want that to happen here.

We are all children of our environments. We bring to given problems the judgment that has been shaped by the realities to which we have been exposed in our lives. In Canada, particularly in the area of language, these differ widely according to individuals and according to regions because of our sense of history. We must seek to understand these differences and consider them not as obstacles but as guides to the elaboration of sensible and realistic policies which will enhance rather than lessen the attractiveness of such policies in the minds of all Canadians. Sensitivity to people and the presumption of good faith should be the hallmarks of implementation. They will ensure for bilingualism a more durable character and more pervasive acceptance. In the larger sweep of history these qualities will have served the country better than a divisive gesture or an uncaring remark.

I want to say a word to the people of Manitoba. I am aware of the problems that have arisen in many of your communities. We do not seek today to make them more difficult. Sadness always results when there is division among us. Strong people take strong stands on major issues and have done so throughout our entire history.

Our days together as Canadians have not always been glorious but neither have they been without absolutely splendid accomplishment: For all our imperfections, we remain in Canada a country of promise and a people of hope. We have come through so much together against overwhelming odds that our citizenship has become a privileged symbol in our lives. Our respect for the rule of law, our unparallelled record in civil liberties, our sense of tolerance, our respect for our neighbour and his property have combined to make Canada an admired nation in the world.

The issue before us today is one that must be approached in a spirit of conciliation. This is a quality for which Manitobans are renowned. It does honour to them and to their Province. The issue before us today is also one of simple justice. There is no painless way to proceed. There is no blame to be apportioned. There are no motives to be impugned. There is only the sanctity of minority rights. There is no obligation more compelling and no duty more irresistible in Canada than to ensure that our minorities, linguistic and otherwise, live at all times in conditions of fairness and justice.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: The Manitoba Members of Parliament in our caucus, along with many Manitobans at home, have been deeply troubled by this issue. I have shared with them their moments of anguish but they have responded with courage and with respect. In a great unifying gesture to all of Canada they stand with me and our Party today in a historic and unforgettable endorsement of a fundamental tenet of this nation.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Mulroney: My friend, Robert Cliche, was a great humanist who sought, at all times, conciliation, the right approach, respect for the common man whose rights have been abused. He often quoted Felix Antoine Savard who once wrote: "Happy are those men and those peoples who get along together".

I believe, Madam Speaker, that with this resolution we have helped the process of reconciliation which must take place in Manitoba.

Many years ago, Madam Speaker, in welcoming a group of immigrants to America, one of the most outstanding jurists in that country, in that great republic, described for his audience of freshly arrived immigrants—which is not inappropriate for us because this very House of Commons reflects the fact that we are a nation of minorities, we are a nation of immigrants and should be very proud of it—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: —what he thought was most important at that time. However, I think he also, inadvertently no doubt, described what is best in our citizenship as well. Mr. Justice Hand referred to it as the "spirit of liberty." He told the group of immigrants that the spirit of liberty is the spirit that is not too sure that it is right. The spirit of liberty seeks to understand the minds of other men and other women. The spirit of liberty weighs their interests alongside its own without bias. The spirit of liberty knows that not even a sparrow falls to earth unheeded. The spirit of liberty, he said, is the spirit of Him, who near 2000 years ago taught mankind a lesson that it has never quite learned and never quite forgotten, that there may be a kingdom where the least shall be heard and considered side by side with the greatest. That is what this resolution is about today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: This resolution is about fairness. It is about decency. It is an invitation for co-operation and understanding. It speaks to the finest qualities in this nation.

I say to you on behalf of my entire Party on this or any great issue that affects this nation that we stand before you, Madam Speaker, united in the sunlight, ready to work for a better Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, in 1867 Canada was created when the rights of French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians were acknowledged. If that had not been the case there would have been no Canadian federation. These rights were originally recognized in Quebec and the Parliament of Canada, and without these crucial rights, Canada would not have continued to survive. The various crises we have experienced in the course of our history occurred largely because we failed to respect the letter and intent of this duality. Madam Speaker, history has shown that when the majority exercises its powers with tolerance and imagination, we obtain the cohesiveness that is essential to the unity of a country. On the other hand, when the majority of its leaders fails to respect this principle, conflict and injustice are the result. That is the situation we are faced with today.

[English]

We have to see the history of Manitoba itself in the context of this resolution. Manitoba Members who have studied the history of our country will recall that Manitoba was the first Province to join Confederation after 1867. It was not, I might underline here, the will of the Government in Ottawa that this Province should come into existence. Quite the contrary. The federal Government of the day wanted the whole of the Prairies to be ruled as a territory from Ottawa.

Manitobans felt differently. Led by Louis Riel, English and French-speaking Members of the Red River colony alike forced the federal Government by their own actions to take notice of the moral legitimacy of their claims to a government of their own.

It is this I want to emphasize today, Madam Speaker, that Manitobans set the trend for the historical development of western Canada by saying that they, indeed, should have a government of their own.

The new Province of Manitoba, established in 1870 by the Manitoba Act, reflected in law the reality of its population. By law, the English and French languages were put on an equal basis in the legislature and the courts. It was a good beginning.

[Translation]

Unfortunately, twenty years later, the Government of Manitoba no longer recognized those rights, the Franco-Manitobans were no longer in the majority and had become a minority group. We, the majority, must recognize these facts and the consequences resulting from the disappearance of those rights. Franco-Manitobans had become strangers in their own country. They no longer had access to public education in French. Franco-Manitoban teachers who taught the French language and culture to their pupils were threatened with dismissal. They could not be themselves in public.

[English]

I am pleased as a Canadian to be able to say that in recent times this sad period in our history has witnessed a new page. Modern Manitoba is in most respects a very different place indeed. Not only has there been a cultural renaissance by Franco-Manitobans with their school rights clearly established, but also the infusion of Canadians whose ancestors came from every part of the globe has made Manitoba one of the most diverse and interesting of our Provinces. The composition of modern Manitoba governments and institutions has borne witness to this change in the population. Recent court decisions have also reflected this new tolerance, this enrichening openness.

● (1550)

With the Supreme Court decidion of 1979 it became clear that the provincial Act of 1890 was not only morally offensive but also unconstitutional. It became clear that the rights of Franco-Manitobans must not only be restored in practice but also in law. It was in this context that the present Government of Manitoba, following in the footsteps of the Conservative Government which preceded it, began discussions with the Société franco-manitobaine. The result of these discussions is the legislation now being considered by the Manitoba legislature which in essence is supported by today's resolution in the House.

When this process is completed and when it is passed by Parliament, as I am convinced it will be, as an amendment to the Manitoba Act, it will become part of the Constitution of Canada. I want to emphasize a few points about this important resolution in the Manitoba legislature. It not only conforms with the constitutional requirement established in 1870 that English and French have equal status in the legislature and courts of Manitoba, it also extends with constitutional guarantees many provincial services to Franco-Manitobans in their own language.

The second point I would like to stress—and I say this particularly as the Leader of a federal Party—is that the essentials of the resolution in the Manitoba legislature were the product of Manitobans. Although certain technical details were provided by the federal Government, it is of great importance for us in this Parliament to recognize that this resolution is a western Canadian solution to a western Canadian problem which affects us all.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: The third point I would like to stress—and this is important given the very diverse nature of the country and the population of Manitoba—is that the resolution before the legislature of Manitoba has the support of the spokesmen for the Indian and Métis people of Manitoba. It has the support of virtually all organized ethnic groups in Manitoba and, it goes without saying, the support of the Government of Manitoba. In short, most of the leadership of those who constitute a majority in Manitoba are now fighting for the rights of the minority. It is very important for us to bear witness to this today.

Therefore, in this context I want to say that we in the rest of Canada owe the Government of Manitoba, Franco-Manitobans, Métis, Indians and the ethnic community of Manitoba, our appreciation for their initiative, our gratitude for their imagination, and our support for their leadership.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: In conclusion, what we are doing today in unanimously supporting this resolution goes beyond support for the details of a particular Bill in a single Province on a given date. We are now acting in the spirit of those who created Canada in 1867, who out of necessity and by imagination created our fundamental duality. We are supporting a spirit of tolerance and a respect for diversity which should always be the hallmark of Canada and of Canadians. Never again should any Canadian say—

And, with the kind of collective leadership demonstrated by all Canada's national Parties today, I am confident that in the future of our great land no Canadian ever again will have to say that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Pursuant to House Order of October 5, 1983, this resolution is deemed to have been passed unanimously.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, after the last hour everything seems rather anticlimatic, but I would direct the usual Thursday question to the Government House Leader and ask him what the business for the remainder of the week will be and to take us as far along as he can into next week.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, in the same kind of spirit we could add something to Bill C-155 and it could be disposed of very quickly, within the next few hours. But presuming that we will need time to talk about it, I want to confirm to the House that we will be dealing with Bill C-155 respecting the Crowsnest Pass freight rates today, tomorrow and Tuesday of next week. I will advise the House if there is any change, and so far as the business for next Thursday is concerned, in due course.

Mr. Nielsen: I thank the Government House Leader for that. I trust he is sufficiently recovered from his affliction to convene a House Leaders' meeting at an early date, subject to the way he feels physically, so that we might discuss other pressing matters which we have not done for over two weeks now and which have nothing to do with Bill C-155.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for his wishes for a speedy recovery. I can assure him that my health is quite good and was certainly not my reason for not having any meetings during the past two weeks. Actually, since many members had indicated a desire to speak to the Bill we are debating in the House, there was no need to have meetings in order to discuss business of the House for the next few days. That is why I did not hold any meetings. A meeting was scheduled yesterday to discuss the resolution the House just adopted on the rights of Francophones in Manitoba, but, as my colleague will recall, we negotiated behind the curtains during question period and quickly reached an agreement without requiring a formal meeting with very positive results, as the House is aware.

I can assure the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) that if he would like a meeting to discuss other than short-term business of the House or if he wishes to discuss short-term business as well, he merely has to notify me and I can assure him that I am always available to see him, on very short notice. We on this side of the House are always willing to discuss short-term House business, but I assumed that for the time being, neither his Party nor the New Democratic Party were willing to discuss the duration of debate on Bill C-155, and since this is the only bill on the agenda and since it is our main priority before we consider proroguing, I did not think it would serve any purpose to have these meetings. However, if my colleague wants a meeting, we could have one at his earliest convenience.

● (1600)

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I would like, at the Government House Leader's convenience, to have such a meeting, not particularly to discuss business in this Chamber, but other matters relating to the administration of the House and so on which have been piling up on my desk in the last two or three weeks.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, if my colleagues are willing, we shall decide on a time acceptable to all parties. Perhaps we could meet early next week, Tuesday or later, some time during the day, unless my colleague prefers a meeting this afternoon, but I know that we are to discuss the procedural aspect of the amendments, and I think it would be more useful, unless my hon. colleague indicates otherwise, to meet early next week.

[English]

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I asked the Government House Leader some time ago and then asked the Acting House Leader some time in the last two weeks what has become of Bill C-653. Quite clearly the Bill seems to be lodged somewhere in committee. The Government House Leader indicated to me that he would check with the committee and perhaps the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) to determine what the Government's intentions are with regard to this. I wonder whether he knows if something will be coming up in the reasonably foreseeable future.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, we avoid interfering in the business of committees, but the Minister I referred to the other day was the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola).

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, perhaps the House Leader of the NDP is unaware that that Bill is now before committee, that the committee is holding current meetings and witnesses were heard this morning. I imagine that when the committee finishes its work, it will be back very shortly.

Madam Speaker: Presentation of committee reports.

Mr. Tessier: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the unanimous consent of the House for tabling an amended version of the Ninth Report of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, to replace the report tabled in the House on Thursday, September 29, 1983.

Madam Speaker: Does the House give its unanimous consent?

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I have had an opportunity of discussing the matter with our critic, the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley), and we quite agree that it can be presented.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member has the unanimous consent of the House and may therefore proceed.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 4,678, 4,679 and 5,010.

[Text]

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT

Question No. 4,678—Mr. McKenzie:

Does the Secretary of State intend to personally involve himself in the application of the Official Languages Act in Quebec, especially at Nordair, or does he consider that Quebec has only one official language?

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): The question deals with the Secretary of State's personal involvement in applying the Official Languages Act in Quebec generally, and, more specifically, with respect to Nordair.

The Official Languages Act applies in all of the Canadian provinces, including the Province of Quebec, with respect to matters within federal jurisdiction and to subjects and entities to which the Act's provisions are expressly made to apply.

The Secretary of State is responsible for ensuring that those government services offered by his Department conform to the Official Languages Act and to federal bilingualism policy generally. His mandate also includes the encouragement and facilitation of the use of both official languages in operations of organizations and institutions in the private sector and in the non-federal public sector.

More specifically, with respect to Nordair, it should be noted that the Secretary of State is not responsible for ensuring that the provisions of the Official Languages Act are adhered to by Crown Corporations or subsidiaries of Crown Corporations such as Nordair, that are within the responsibility of the Minister of Transport. However, the Secretary of State would presume that, as a matter of policy and practice, Nordair would endeavour to provide its services to the travelling public in both official languages.

SALT USED ON ROADS

Question No. 4,679—Mr. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River):

1. Does the Department of the Environment have any record of the amount of salt used to keep roads clean in Canada on a yearly basis and, if not, for what reason?

2. To the knowledge of the Government, what is the amount of salt being used by municipal, regional, provincial and federal Governments to keep roads and sidewalks clean on an annual basis?

3. Has the Department done any research or sponsored any research on the effect of this salt on the freshwater resources of each region of Canada and upon the soil quality of each region of Canada?

4. Has the Department taken a position on the use of salt for the above purposes and has it determined the safe level for the disposal of salt into the environment and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of the Environment and Statistics Canada as follows:

1. Environment Canada does not keep records on the amount of salt used annually in Canada for de-icing purposes. Research into de-icing practices has shown that the impact on the receiving environment is of a localized nature and may range in significance from nil to severe depending on several site-specific variables. In terms of environmental priorities, however, de-icing practice on highways and roads is not a significant national issue and does not justify the resources that would be necessary for collection and management of salt-use data.

2. Statistics Canada does not collect statistics on the amount of salt used by municipal, regional, provincial and federal Governments to keep roads and sidewalks clean on an annual basis.

3. Yes.

4. Because of the localized nature of the problem of the many site-specific variables that influence the definition of "safe" or "hazardous", concentrations of salt in snow melt, Environment Canada has not developed a national effluent objective for salt concentrations in point and non-point discharges to the environment.

PURCHASE OF BOOK "FLAUNTING IT" BY CANADA COUNCIL

Question No. 5,010—Mr. Epp:

1. Did the Canada Council distribute copies of the book "Flaunting It" and, if so, how many were distributed to (a) libraries (b) prisons (c) senior citizens' clubs (d) cultural centres (e) hospitals (f) native peoples (g) primary schools (h) high schools?

2. How many copies of the book did the Council purchase?

3. What was the total cost of the book to the Council?

4. What were the distribution costs of the book to the Council?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canada Council as follows:

1. Yes.

(a)	libraries (not including school libraries)	51
(b)	prisons	1
(c)	senior citizens' clubs	9
(d)	cultural centres (broadly defined and not appearing elsewhere on this list)	16
(e)	hospitals	4
(f)	native people's organizations	8
(g)	primary schools	4
(h)	high schools	73

2. The Council purchased 208 copies.

3. The total cost was $1,489.28.

4. Distribution costs are not separately accounted for individual titles. Distribution of kits of 200 titles cost a total of $21,920, so the average per title was $109.60 or, in the case of "Flaunting It", approximately 60 cents per copy.

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 33 (Mr. Mazankowski).

Madam Speaker: Before embarking on the procedural arguments that Hon. Members will undoubtedly wish to make to enlighten the Chair, I would like to categorize for the benefit of Hon. Members the motions and the reasons behind my reservations concerning their acceptability. I think that will contribute to focusing the debate and having it take place with a certain order. I suggest to Hon. Member that it would facilitate the procedural debate if they were to relate their remarks to a group of motions, and I will group them, except of course where a motion stands by itself.

Motion No. 1 attempts to introduce into the Bill a disguised preamble. This is a very interesting point. It is not often that an Hon. Member attempts to amend a Bill in such a way as to include a clause setting out the objectives of Parliament in relation to the transportation of grain. Although the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) does not include the normal "whereas" paragraphs, it is an attempt to place in the Bill a preamble. In other words, what the Hon. Member cannot do directly he is attempting to do indirectly. In this regard I refer Hon. Members to a statement I made on July 13, 1981, at page 11463 of Hansard, in which I had referred to a previous ruling made by Mr. Speaker Lamoureux on June 11, 1973, in relation to the inclusion of a preamble in a Bill.

Motions Nos. 2 to 19 inclusive, 59, 64, 66, 67, 70, 129, 134, 135 and 145 are substantive amendments to interpretation clauses namely, Clauses 2, 34 and 54 of the Bill. These motions attempt to modify existing definitions in various interpretation clauses throughout the Bill or tend to add completely new definitions or transfer definitions from Parts II and III of the Bill to Clause 2 which offers definitions for the entire Bill. In order to assist Hon. Members, Motion No. 14, for instance, standing in the name of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy), changes substantially the definition of the word "grain" as it appears in Clause 2 of the Bill. Motion No. 129, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville would add to the Bill a new definition "Government contribution to cost increases". May I refer Hon. Members to a ruling of one of my predecessors which can be found at page 61 of Journals for October 28, 1970 when he said that, "It is not good procedure to try and introduce a substantive amendment by way of modification of the interpretation clause".

Motions Nos. 20 to 23 inclusive, 28, 36, 41, 54, 57, 80, 81, 85 89 and 166 go beyond the scope of the Bill. For example, Motions Nos. 22 and 23, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), add to Clause 2 new subsections which would impose conditions and burdens on the Canadian Pacific Railway not contemplated in the Bill as agreed to by this House at second reading.

Again, Motion No. 57, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville, introduces into the Bill a new clause which would allow for agreements to be made between the Minister and the railway companies other than railway companies as defined in Clause 2. Since the Bill covers only those railway companies which come under federal jurisdiction, I find Motion No. 57 to be outside the scope of this Bill.

Motions Nos. 87, 139, 146, 147, 150, 153, 155 and 165 are contrary to the principle of the Bill as agreed to at second reading. The purpose of the Bill, as I understand it, is to provide for new rates for the movement of grain through the Crowsnest Pass. Motion No. 87, for example, would keep the rates as they existed on June 16, 1983. This, in my view, is clearly contrary to the principle of the Bill. In other words, the amendments propose to negate the principle of the Bill as agreed to at second reading. That is really the difficulty with which the Chair is confronted.

Motions Nos. 104 to 114 inclusive, 172 and 173 infringe on the financial initiative of the Crown. For example, Motion No. 105, by allowing a shipment in excess of 31.1 million tonnes to qualify for the Crow benefit and Motion No. 172 by adding new crops to Schedule I would involve expenditures not covered by the Royal Recommendation. It would extend the objects and purposes or relax the conditions and qualifications as expressed in the Royal Recommendation.

Motions Nos. 51, 73, 86 and 151 give the Chair difficulties for two reasons. They are contrary to the principle of the Bill and infringe upon the Crown's financial initiative.

Motions Nos. 74, 152 and 157 are new propositions which are clearly outside the scope of the Bill. Motion No. 157 proposes to place in the Bill a new Part IV concerning "Shipper Share Limitations". This is a new concept not envisaged in the Bill. As Motion No. 74 is consequential to Motion No. 157, whatever decision is made on Motion No. 157 will also apply to Motion No. 74. Motion No. 152 proposes to extend the Crow benefit to the grain producers of the Peace River district, which likewise was not covered by the Bill as read a second time.

Motions Nos. 75 and 116 to 126 inclusive were dealt with in my statement on Monday last. They are clearly irrelevant to the Bill as amended by the committee and reported to the House. Any Member who compares these motions with the Bill as reprinted will quickly see what I mean. I would urge the Hon. Member who presented these motions to look at that. I am sure that he will readily agree with me.

As stated in Section 4 of Citation 773, Beauchesne's Fifth Edition:

> An amendment is inadmissible if it refers to, or is not intelligible without, subsequent amendments or schedules, or if it is otherwise incomplete.

This rule must by extension be followed at the report stage.

Motion No. 174 proposing to amend the title will be ruled on by the Chair when the motion is reached, as I have indicated earlier this week.

I would therefore propose, in the interest of clarity and for the early conduct of the debate, to call upon the Hon. Member for Vegreville to present argument in support of Motion No. 1 standing in his name, and thereafter proceed to hear argument on the other motions grouped in the categories which I have suggested.

I would like to warn all Hon. Members that this of course is not a debate on substance; it is merely a debate on procedure. I will only allow arguments that deal with procedure and will not allow Members to go into the substance of this Bill because that debate will take place in the House later. These procedural arguments are naturally of interest to the debate in the House and that is why I am allowing them. I will ask all Hon. Members to keep very much in mind that they are presenting procedural arguments to the Chair and nothing else. I am warning then that I will be very strict as to relevance in all of their interventions.

I would also like Hon. Members to be brief because we have in mind that the debate on this particular Bill shall be unrepetitive, and that is one of the reasons I have suggested that we group the motions so that all motions which refer to certain procedural difficulties should be discussed together. The same arguments would apply to all of these motions. Therefore, I would ask Hon. Members to be brief and unrepetitive, because these arguments are allowed in compliance with the Speaker's discretion as outlined in Standing Order 75(10) which reads as follows:

> The Speaker shall have power to select or combine amendments or clauses to be proposed at the report stage and may, if he or she thinks fit, call upon any Member who has given notice of an amendment to give such explanation of the subject of the amendment as may enable the Speaker to form a judgment upon it.

The rules are very clear. There is the discretion of the Speaker to call upon Members to give explanations concerning their amendments. I would ask Hon. Members to take into account as well the beginning of that Standing Order which reads:

> The Speaker shall have the power to select or combine amendments or clauses—

Of course, that means that the Speaker has the power to rule on the acceptability of amendments. Should the debate become repetitive or if it does not focus on procedural arguments and goes instead into substance, then there are other powers which the Speaker may use. I think all Hon. Members should be well aware of that.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I regret having to interrupt my colleagues, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) and the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), but before we find ourselves in any further difficulties, I would like to call something to the attention of the Chair. I would like to make it clear right now, Madam Speaker, that in no way am I calling into question a previous ruling of the Chair.

We are presently dealing with Motion No. 33. The next two motions to come up are Motions Nos. 34 and 35 which are consequential. If Motion No. 34 stands and is adopted, Motion No. 35 drops. If Motion No. 34 is not adopted, then we move to Motion No. 35.

I draw to your attention, Madam Speaker, that I drew to the attention of the House on Thursday, September 29, that I was pleased to hear your preliminary ruling dealing with Motions Nos. 24, 25, 26, 27 and 29, that Motion No. 24 would be voted on separately and an affirmative vote on Motion No. 25 would also dispose of Motions Nos. 26 and 27. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 25 would require further voting on Motion No.—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I would like the Hon. Member to tell me exactly what he wants the Chair to understand. We know all of this. We have been through the consequences of adopting one motion or another motion which stands on the Order Paper. The Hon. Member needs not repeat that.

I am just wondering if the Hon. Member is referring to the ruling of the Chair made when the Deputy Speaker was in the Chair. If he is doing so, he knows that that ruling has been made and that he has been asked consistently by those who were in the chair at the time not to come back before the House with that particular problem because, in the view of the Chair, that problem has been solved.

It appears to me that if the Hon. Member wants his Motion No. 25 to be debated now when, as a consequence of what was voted upon in the House, that motion is supposed to be redundant, which it is, I cannot allow the Hon. Member to discuss that. When a vote was taken on Motion No. 26 the Hon. Member had all the liberty in the world to vote against it, which he did not. He therefore seems to have expressed his view that he was in favour of Motion No. 26 and, as a consequence of Motion No. 26 having been voted, Motion No. 25 is redundant.

I will not hear any more from the Hon. Member on this particular point.

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Benjamin: Not on this particular point, Madam Speaker. I want to draw attention to a preliminary ruling of Madam Speaker, the first one put out in which she dealt with Motions Nos. 24 to 29, leaving out Motion No. 28. I have been seeking the guidance of the Chair. I am not sure whether I have a question of privilege or a point of order. The House decided on Friday last—and I should like to quote what the House decided—prior to the ruling of the Chair—I am seeking the Chair's advice on what recourse I have.

As reported at page 27600 of Hansard, the Deputy Speaker said:

> I call the attention of the Hon. Member for Regina West to the fact that he apparently has spoken in the course of this debate and cannot be recognized again—

As reported on the same page, I said:

> Mr. Speaker, I rose on a point of order. The Minister asked for the guidance of the Chair.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member will not go on in this vague and confused way. The Chair is obviously confused and has no idea what the Hon. Member is talking about. I want him to tell me clearly if he has a point of order. I should like him to decide in his mind whether he has a point of order or a question of privilege. I cannot determine that for him. He can then rise and make his point, but rising and making a speech which the Chair is absolutely unable to understand will not be allowed at this point.

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, I will quote the record of the House and ask for your guidance since your advisers did not bother to read Hansard. At page 27600, in the right-hand column, one-third of the way down, this appears:

> MR. BENJAMIN: Mr. Speaker, I take it, then, that the Government is prepared to accept Motions Nos. 26 and 27, which are the same as the original wording of the Bill. Can I take it, then, that now he would bring in his consequential amendments to Motions Nos. 26 and 27 but that—

Madam Speaker, I wish you would stay.

—Motions Nos. 24, 25 and 29—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The record of Hansard will show that the Hon. Member has had extraordinary opportunities to raise this point of order. Having been the last occupant of the Chair to deal with the matter, I indicated at that time that the speakership and the Chair are indivisible in the House of Commons. I also indicated that the person who occupied the Chair when the ruling was made, the Deputy Speaker, ruled this point of order out of order.

I took a great deal of time to offer the Hon. Member opportunities for discussion behind the curtain in order that he might achieve what he wants to achieve.

I also took considerable time to indicate to the Hon. Member that no further consideration of this point of order would be given from the Chair in a procedural sense. I offered him the opportunity that he might like to take the benefit of advice from Table officers who might assist him. I went even further and suggested to him that he might consider some discussion with other Members of the House in order that he might make his point on this particular motion.

This point of order is now closed; it was closed the day before yesterday and it will continue to be closed. I will not recognize the Hon. Member on that point again. Debate please—and not the Hon. Member for Regina West under any circumstances.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, on a different point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): On a different point of order?

Mr. Benjamin: Since the Chair—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I left the Chair for a few seconds in order to let the Acting Speaker, who dealt with this matter and who knew the exact sequence of events and could relate to the exact words of that particular non-debate, take over.

As the Acting Speaker has said, that matter is closed. I will now recognize the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Benjamin: A point of order. It is not closed.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I wonder if I—

Mr. Benjamin: A point of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, I wonder if I might defer to the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr,. Nielsen), the House Leader, who will be presenting general arguments on your ruling, including Motion No. 1. I hope I will have the opportunity to participate in the debate at a later time but I think it would be important to have him outline in a general the thrust of our arguments.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker—

Mr. Benjamin: A point of order—

Mr. Nielsen: I have had discussions with the Minister for the sake of order. Since I may agree with some of the arguments he presented to the Chair I should like to hear those, and it may cut down on the time necessary for my presentation and thus save the time of the House.

In the meantime, however, I wish to stake out a caveat with respect to Standing Order 75(10). I think the logic of the Chair is eminently reasonable and, to use the words of the Chair, I would suggest to Hon. Members that it would facilitate the procedural debate if the groupings outlined by the Chair were to be adopted.

My problem is that I have spent some five to six days preparing my arguments on the 174 amendments and they do not happen to fall into the groupings that the Chair would like to see. It would have been an excellent idea for me to proceed in that way but I only knew this morning that that was the suggestion of the Chair.

I would not want to think for a moment that Standing Order 75(10) would be applied to give the Chair the same discretion with respect to the grouping of amendments for procedural submissions as the power exists in the Chair for the grouping of amendments for purposes of debate. I notice that Madam Speaker nods her head in the negative but I should like to make my submission before the Chair comes to that conclusion.

I think the suggestion of the Chair is eminently reasonable—had I known of it in advance. I am sorry that I did not think of it myself; I should have, but I did not. My argument, which has taken several days to prepare, is not going to conform strictly to the suggestion of the Chair.

I would suggest that the Chair hear the Minister first with respect to the Government amendment, and I will listen very carefully to those arguments. If there is any way I can accommodate those arguments I shall do so. That will likely result in a more ordered procedural debate and perhaps will even cut down the time I need to present the rather lengthy procedural argument that I have.

Madam Speaker: I would ask the Hon. Member for Yukon if he could make an effort to proceed with his argumentation in the order of the groupings I have made. He will obviously recognize that many of these amendments have to do with the same argument since some infringe upon the financial responsibility of the House, with the introduction of a preamble, with the scope of the Bill and against the principle—the arguments are the same.

I am sure that the Hon. Member, who has such a brilliant intellect, will re-organize that very, very quickly, and I hope he will do so.

● (1630)

L'hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, we have no substantial objection to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) defending his own amendments. Perhaps it would help shorten the procedural debate the Chair has allowed on the subject. Now, I do not intend to repeat the argument I made before: former Standing Order 75(10) is quite clear in that the Chair has discretionary power but, with due respect, I would say that it is limited. If former Standing Order 75(10) is interpreted literally only the member who gave notice of an amendment and no one else, can provide explanations. This Standing Order reads as follows:

(10) Mr. Speaker shall have power to . . . call upon any member who has given notice of an amendment to give such explanation of the subject of the amendment as may enable Mr. Speaker to form a judgment upon it.

A literal interpretation of the Standing Orders would mean that in theory, only such members who have given notice of an amendment can be heard or asked for explanations, if you so desire. It is in our view very generous of you to allow a debate which goes beyond the provisions of former Standing Order 75(10). We on this side of the House certainly do not want to take advantage of your generosity, but we have no objection to the Minister who moved these amendments wanting to provide some explanation or to you wanting to hear him. If this shortens the procedural debate on the part of the Opposition, all the better!

Madam Speaker: I simply want to remind the Hon. Minister that, more often than not, the Standing Orders are not interpreted literally. They are a guide. Some must of course be followed to the letter, but when a Standing Order provides some discretion, this discretion exists! In any case, I believe that these explanations which are being allowed will facilitate this debate.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I wish to acknowledge the courtesy of the Chair and of the House Leader of the Conservative Party in allowing me to present our arguments first. I hope it is done for the sake of brevity. I would intend in my remarks, Madam Speaker, to speak to the rulings on three of the proposed Government amendments, Motions Nos. 14, 74 and 157, as put forward in the Order Paper. Also, for the sake of saving time, I would like to speak to the amendment put forward by my colleague on this side of the House, the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Reid), which is Motion No. 152. Finally, I would like to make some additional comments on a few of the amendments put forward on behalf of the Opposition Parties. I believe we would be in a position to make some favourable comments on them and perhaps be able to help the Chair make a decision in that area. If that particular procedure is acceptable to the Chair, I will proceed. First, to deal with the matter of—

Madam Speaker: Order. I would really prefer the Hon. Minister to discuss these amendments according to groupings. As I see now, the Hon. Minister intends to go through all of the amendments on which he would like to speak. That, I believe, would be confusing to everyone.

Mr. Nielsen: No.

Madam Speaker: If the Minister is now going to speak first, perhaps he could choose to speak on an amendment or group of amendments where the same arguments are relevant. Then I will let other Hon. Members speak on those particular amendments. I can then have complete explanations at least on a group of amendmnents.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I said in my previous intervention that the suggestion made by the Chair just today makes eminent sense. If we had established previously that that was the desire of the Chair, it would have been a good suggestion—had we known five days ago when we started preparing. But what the Chair is now asking us to do is to toss aside that five days of preparation, with what has been sprung on us just now.

Quite frankly, I could more easily follow the Minister if he proceeds as he suggests. But I intend to follow the wish of the Chair and try to keep within those groupings as far as I can. However, the Chair will, I am sure, show some leniency if I am not able to do that in all cases because my submissions and arguments have been prepared. They have been in the course of preparation for some five days, and I heard this suggestion just this morning. I am sure the Minister will follow that course as well, as far as he can. Right now, I am sure I can follow him more intelligently if he proceeds as he has suggested.

Madam Speaker: Yes, indeed. There might have been some indication in the way in which I grouped the arguments in my preliminary ruling. However, it is a rare occasion when both the Minister and the Opposition House Leader agree on a procedure to be followed—

Mr. Nielsen: That is the way the day started.

Madam Speaker: I suppose the Chair would be placing itself in a very strange position if it were to insist on opposing that. I suggested a plan which I thought was logical and which would lead to orderly debate. However, if disorderly debate—if I may qualify it that way—or any other way of debating something is made easier by whatever plans Hon. Members have, I am willing to go along with that, and I will reorganize the arguments in my office once I have heard them.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank you for your judgment and discretion. You indicated that this day began with a rare note of unanimity. We are now continuing. I hope we can find some way of bottling that essence when we get to the debate on this Bill and thereby, perhaps, we could get it all concluded by six o'clock tonight.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: Dream on!

Mr. Axworthy: It was a try, anyway. When you are on a good roll, you might as well keep going. The first amendment, Madam Speaker, which was proposed at report stage by the Government is Motion No. 14. It deals with the definition of grain and amends the Bill. I have read your ruling on this motion. I think it is clear you feel this is a substantive amendment to the interpretive Clause. I believe, as you quite rightly say, that according to a strict interpretation of the rules it would not normally be accepted under the procedure. However, I would like to make the case to you that what we are in fact doing in this particular motion is simply responding to a substantive part of the Bill which has already been accepted by the Chair under Motion No. 164, which gives the Governor in Council the right to add grains as part of Schedule I. That is simply a way of allowing Cabinet, the Governor in Council, to put forward additional specialty crops under the schedule, which would make them eligible for payment under the Crow regime. In order to make that happen, as you have already approved under Motion No. 164, we need to alter somewhat the definition under this motion in the interpretive area. All we are really doing under this motion is enabling the Governor in Council to include this definition of grain as part of the scheduling and, therefore, make it eligible for that rule.

I would only say, Madam Speaker, that this is partly the kind of result I saw taking place in committee where that flexibility was being shown and where some of the interpretations in the Bill, because they have consequence back to the substance, and vice versa, have to be tied together. I would hope, Madam Speaker, that you might accept that argument. I believe it might have the general acceptance of Hon. Members on the other side of the House. It would certainly not in any way change the substance, intent or meaning of the Bill. It would just facilitate the operation of the Governor in Council in this particular respect.

The second matter with which I would like to deal are two motions which are linked together, that is Motion No. 74 and Motion No. 157. Motion No. 157 is really the operative clause because it is dealing with the so-called safety net proposition. That was included by my predecessor in this portfolio as of May 10 as a way of providing a stronger guarantee of protection for farmers against any potential income loss if there were to be a drastic decline in the price of grain or a drastic increase in the cost of grain. The real question is, does it change the intent, meaning or substance of the Bill? I do not believe it is a surprising proposition, Madam Speaker, because it is one which has been requested by Hon. Members in the Opposition. I believe the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) in debate on March 2 introduced the idea into second reading debate at that particular point in time. The acceptance in principle was announced by my predecessor on May 4. The text of the amendment was released and circulated to Members of the House on May 31 during second reading and was not acceptable at that time because of that. But it was introduced, so it was fair notice. Certainly during the course of the committee hearings many witnesses endorsed and supported the idea of a safety net. The question is, does it in fact in any way run counter to the intent of the Bill or does it enhance it? I would make the case that it is very clearly within the context of the Bill, because not only does the Bill provide for compensation to the railways, it has a number of clauses deemed to be acceptable which provide protection for the farmers against loss of income. There is the limit on the farmers' share of cost increases over the years through a 3-3-3-6 formula. There are various amendments which deal with performance guarantees from the railways to ensure a degree of protection for farmers. There is the railway investment guarantee. There is a key clause, which has been accepted as part of a motion, dealing with the establishment of review machinery which would take place as soon as the Bill is passed. This is designed to look at methods of payment and the way in which it impacts on farmers' income and performance.

So there are a number of parts of this Bill which have as the principle the protection of farmers' income and their ability to pay. This is a sort of additional clause to enhance that particular area. I recognize that it is a substantial amendment, no question about that, but I do believe it lies within the course of these amendments. I not only recommend it to yourself, Madam Speaker, but obviously to other Members of the House. I believe it will be generally endorsed as further protection for the grain producer.

Motion No. 74, which you also ruled out, is really consequential to Motion No. 157. It is a way of adding to the actual amount of Government compensation to take into account the question of a safety net. So if you accept Motion No. 157, then Motion No. 74 would follow on it.

I want to speak briefly to Motion No. 152, Madam Speaker, in the name of the Hon. Member for Kenora-Rainy River. As you have said, it proposes a new scheme not contemplated in the Bill. The substance has some attraction. It is in a sense a living experiment of an alternative method of payment to producers. This is not the time to debate the policy implications but rather the motion's procedural acceptability. The Government finds itself in agreement with the Speaker's ruling that it is not within the boundaries of the Bill according to the rules of procedure, even though the substance may be worth examination at some point in time.

I might conclude by speaking to the amendment put forward by the Progressive Conservatives, particularly Motion No. 10, the definition of "export" put forward by the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight). This was the subject of some interesting debate during examination here and in committee. I would not want to comment on its procedural acceptability. That is really within your purview. But I would indicate that if it is ultimately ruled out of order, the Government would be prepared to give consent to introduce it, as we consider it favourably and are in agreement with it. So if it is ruled out of order, we would be prepared to accept it by unanimous agreement because it does enhance the Bill.

On the question of Motion No. 57, presented by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), the so-called British Columbia Railway amendment, I would simply point out that if it presents procedural difficulties, then Government Motion No. 56 addresses the same issue. I believe that has been accepted by the Speaker, although the Hon. Member may want to address this matter, or perhaps his House leader. I think Motion No. 156 is the same as Motion No. 57 and will have the same impact and consequences.

Those are the comments I have concerning procedural matters, and I thank the Hon. Members for their time.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, this is a rather unique arrangement. Let me say just briefly and perhaps my House leader may want to comment further—I think the Minister is right with respect to Motion No. 14. The definition of "grain" is really consequential upon Motion No. 164, which would give the Governor in Council the power to add additional grains under the statutory freight rate regime. I believe my colleagues and I would have no difficulty with that.

Regarding Motion No. 157, while it is true that this is not a new issue—it was injected into debate by the former Minister of Transport and, for all intents and purposes, was considered to be an integral part of this legislation—the committee had difficulty debating this issue because of its procedural unacceptability. I am pleased that the distinguished Chairman of that committee is in the House today. We regret very much that we were not able to discuss this matter because it was something committee Members clearly wanted to debate. The principle is perhaps acceptable, but I am not sure whether the detail is acceptable. While we are sympathetic to the inclusion of Motion No. 157, I would think that in its present form we would have some difficulty with the detail. That is not to say that we are not prepared to discuss it at a later point. Perhaps there can be some agreement reached, so I will leave that open.

With respect to Government Motion No. 156 and the provision to include other railway companies under the provisions of this Act, and Motion No. 57 standing in my name, I think the Minister is correct. Those two motions have the same intent, and to the extent the Government's amendment is found in order, I would certainly have no difficulty in accepting the suggestion made by the Minister in support of the Government's motion. I think that for all intent and purposes it achieves the same purpose, and what we are after is an enabling provision for the Governor in Council to enter into an agreement with another railway, subject to the terms and conditions which may be outlined.

So, in a preliminary way, I think we can support the Minister on a couple of the items with respect to Motion No. 157, but I think it will require some further discussion.

Mr. Nielsen: We are already making progress. The Hon. Member for Vegreville stipulated that we are prepared to consent to the Minister's proposals with respect to Motion No. 14. For his part, the Minister is prepared to consent to our Motion No. 10 dealing with the definition of "export", and to Motion No. 57 which is the same as Motion No. 156. I would suggest we need not go as far as the Minister has suggested and require the Chair to rule on those three items because if we have the consent of the NDP with respect to the meeting of the minds we have here we can dispose of Motions Nos. 10, 14, 57 and 156 immediately. The Hon. Member has left the door open on Motion No. 157, and I would suggest the Minister and the Hon. Member get together and perhaps an agreement on the wording of that motion might be arrived at, along with a representative of the NDP.

• (1650)

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I had not anticipated that we would begin the negotiation process here on the floor of the House.

Mr. Nielsen: It will save time.

Mr. Deans: It will not save time, unfortunately. To begin, the argument right now is not a matter of determining the question of desirability. At the moment we are arguing whether something is admissible or not within the parliamentary rules.

We can determine later what may be desirable. It may well be that we could think many of our amendments were desirable. If that were to be the criteria used to determine whether thay are admissible, I suggest we could cast out the Speaker's ruling and say that we think they are all desirable and then get on with the debate on each of the amendments. However, that is not what we are charged with addressing this afternoon.

We are charged with determining whether certain things are admissible under normal practices and precedents of those normal practices in the House of Commons. I want to deal strictly with that for the time being.

I would contend that the Speaker is correct in her ruling that Motions Nos. 14, 74 and 157 are inadmissible. I would suggest that there are in fact other motions which I would be quite content to concede are inadmissible. I would suggest that they are inadmissible for exactly the reasons set out by the Speaker in the preliminary ruling. Desirable though they may be, they go beyond the scope of the Bill.

In the case of Motions Nos. 157 and 74, they clearly go beyond the concepts as they were debated at second reading and in the committee. Bearing that in mind, if it were to be decided as a result of some further negotiation that those particular proposals were desirable, we could, of course, come to the Speaker at any time and point out that there is unanimous consent for the inclusion of one or more amendments notwithstanding how the Speaker might rule.

Therefore I would ask that we deal strictly with admissibility on the floor of the House and that we determine the admissibility of the amendments as they stand. I contend that these particular amendments are not admissible. I suggest that we make our submissions on the admissibility of all of the amendments so that the Chair may then make a determination. Once we have seen which are acceptable and which are not, and then which ones may be desirable but not admissible, we then have a procedure to follow subsequent to this one. Through that process we can see which of the Liberal amendments, Conservative amendments and NDP amendments, though technically inadmissible, are desirable and therefore ought to be negotiated into the Bill.

Therefore I say that the Speaker has quite correctly ruled. There is ample precedent, which I will not go into, for ruling that a motion that (a) is not touching upon those matters decided at second reading or not contained in the Bill at the time of approval in principle, and (b) alters the intent of the Bill in such a way as to make it considerably different from the Bill that was given second reading, cannot be accepted on the strict test of admissibility.

Let me use Motion 157 as an example since it touches on all the others. It is entirely new. The only thing which has not changed is the number in the Bill. Beyond that, the wording is entirely different and the intent is entirely different. It is not an intent that was debated in the House at any other time nor is it an intent that could legitimately be placed before the committee for discussion. Quite clearly, it is not a matter that has been ruled on within the context of the principle of the Bill. Therefore I would suggest to the Speaker that, notwithstanding the good intentions of my two colleagues, I would find it quite unacceptable simply to make decisions on whether something is good or bad at this time. I suggest, rather, that we make decisions on admissibility, and I would contend that those matters are inadmissible.

While I have the floor, I ask that we look at a matter which I believe will assist us in determining the admissibility of certain amendments. Earlier today, the question arose as to the definition of the Bill. While I do not want to deal with that at the moment, I would like to deal with a question raised by the Speaker. When discussing the Bill earlier, the Speaker indicated that the intent of the Bill was to change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. I believe that is a reasonable paraphrasing of the Speaker's words. However, that is not what the Bill says, and that is, of course, a major bone of contention in dealing with many of the amendments now being presented. If the intent of the Bill is indeed to change the Crownsnest Pass freight rate, then certain of the amendments might clearly be argued to be in order.

However, the Speaker will recall that at the time of the second reading debate and subsequently when we argued that that was the intent of the Bill, we were told that it was not. We were told that the intent of the Bill was to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof. Although it may appear at first gloss to be a point of some irrelevance, it is in fact a fundamental point when regarded in consideration of the intent of the Bill and the amendments that might be acceptable.

I would therefore ask the Chair to consider that. I would want to argue at a later date, in quite a different vein, the admissibility of certain amendments that are before us if the Chair does indeed rule that the sole or even primary purpose of the Bill was to amend the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. I contend that if we deal with the statutory grain rate, then of course some of my argument will be quite different from what it would have been, taking into account what the Bill says, and what we were told repeatedly the Bill says, and what its intent is.

I wonder if the Speaker would care to comment on that in order to determine what course to follow.

Madam Speaker: Of course, it is not for the Speaker to determine what the full intention of the Bill is. The Hon. Member was referring to page 3 of my statement where I was certainly paraphrasing but giving an argument by way of an example that a certain amendment would be out of order since certain clauses of the Bill are intended to change the Crowsnest Pass freight rate and that whatever amendment I was discussing would mean exactly the contrary. I was giving this as an explanation of the way arguments can be mounted to say that a certain amendment is contrary to the principle of the Bill.

It is not for the Chair to determine the entire scope of the Bill, but it can determine that certain amendments go contrary to the expressed intentions within the Bill.

Mr. Deans: I appreciate that, Madam Speaker. The problem is that it poses a terrible dilemma. If the Bill is for the purpose of facilitating the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, then it is not unreasonable to propose amendments that deal strictly with the shipping and handling of grain as they are contained in the Bill. Some of the amendments are ruled out because they go beyond the scope of the bill. They would go beyond the scope of the Bill if the Bill were solely for the purpose of providing new rates for the movement of grain through the Crowsnest Pass. We are in a rather confused situation.

● (1700)

We have argued that the Bill was misnamed, that the Bill ought to have been called something else because that would then clearly define what its intent was. Therefore, you would know when you were going beyond the intent of the Bill. But in this case we are faced with the problem that the Bill says it does one thing when it does another. The Speaker has picked up very quickly on what it actually does, and has, in fact, incorporated that on page 3 of the statement, which is what we have argued all along. I find that under normal circumstances this sort of confusion would never arise. In this case, because we are going to deal with—and I will not try right now to deal with it—the admissibility or the inadmissibility of the definition section, which would clear up the question, we are going to be faced with a dilemma. I just raise that for the Chair's consideration.

I understand the Speaker cannot change what is written on the face of the Bill. But what is written on the face of the Bill is not in any way the interpretation that any normal reasonable person, like yourself, Madam Speaker, could come to in reading the Bill.

Madam Speaker: Could the Hon. Member, if he disagrees with that particular statement, enlighten the Chair and tell the Chair in what way the amendment he proposes fits or does not fit into the Bill? That would be of great interest to the Chair. The reason for which this period of debate is taking place is to allow Members to help the Chair in case the Chair has not fully understood the meaning of certain of those clauses, especially not having participated in the total debate that took place around this Bill, and has failed to understand exactly what was meant by certain amendments. It would be helpful if the Hon. Member could tell me exactly where he feels this fits or does not fit into the Bill.

Mr. Deans: That will be part of my submission, Madam Speaker. I think, if you will allow me, I will introduce it as I go along and show you where I think that does infringe upon some of the amendments, rather than to pick them out right now and take undue time and probably infringe upon the time of my colleague who has a substantive statement to make about his views. I will do it as I unveil my views on what is wrong with certain of the proposals.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I will try to be very brief, Madam Speaker. I will speak first with regard to Motions Nos. 14, 74 and 157. It is my belief that it was the clear intention of the Government, perhaps not of the House, and it was accepted by the committee, that there would be amendments at report stage of the Bill brought in by the Government to do things with the Bill that were impossible for the committee to do because of the lack of the Royal Recommendation.

Mr. Deans: That is too bad.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): That would include the definition of grain by adding extra crops. If the definition of grain is static and cannot be changed except by an Act of Parliament, I suggest, Madam Speaker, that it will render the Bill rather stiff and inoperative because it will mean that new crops that should rightly be recipients of the Crow benefit would not be eligible without another Act of Parliament.

I do not think the Government or the House intended the Bill to be that restrictive in its nature. I would argue that this Bill is more than just a Bill to change the Crowsnest Pass rates. There are many other things in the Bill. It deals with the obligations that will be put upon the railways to provide a better transportation system. It deals with penalties to be imposed upon them if they do not. It deals, in several clauses, with limits which the farmers, the producers, will have to pay. There is no doubt it is increasing the cost of transportation to the producer, but it does limit the rate at which that cost can increase. It seems to me it was the clear intention to put a cap—if the cap is there in the Bill—on the cost to the farmers.

I would argue that Motions Nos. 14, 74 and 57 are within the scope of the Bill, provided they are covered by the Royal Recommendation, which Nos. 14 and 57 are. Motion No. 74 does not require an amendment to the Royal Recommendation because it simply incorporates a safety net into the calculation of the Government's contribution. Motion No. 157 would require an amendment to the Royal Recommendation, and that is provided with the amendment. I leave those three, Madam Speaker.

I would like to speak on the various groupings now, if you want me do do so, or, if you prefer, I will wait until later and now make some comments about some of the others. But I can speak on those three motions now if that is what you prefer.

Madam Speaker: I am just wondering at this point if the Hon. Member for the Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) Has a main presentation to make. I had given the floor to the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and he deferred to the Hon. Member for Yukon, saying that the Hon. Member for Yukon would introduce this debate as far as the Opposition arguments are concerned. Here I am waiting for that magnificent presentation. Does the Hon. Member for the Yukon want to make it now?

Mr. Nielsen: Yes, I will, Madam Speaker. Because it is relevant to the points raised thus far, the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) has a very brief intervention to make. Then I will unburden myself on the Chair knowing full well the Chair will give the arguments which I will be presenting to it the entire weight they deserve.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I rise regarding Motion No. 10 that stands in my name. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) had mentioned there would be agreement. I have consulted with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), with the Minister of Transport and with other Members of the House and I will be withdrawing Motion No. 10 by leave. I will be asking leave to reintroduce a motion that I have reason to believe will be accepted unanimously by this House.

I ask whether you would like me to read it now. If I could notify the House of my intent by reading it, then at the appropriate time I could move the motion. The old motion would be withdrawn by leave. The new Motion No. 10 would read:

That Motion No. 10 be amended by substituting the following therefor: "export" in respect of grain means shipment by vessel within the meaning of the Canada Shipping Act to any destination outside Canada and shipment by any other mode of transport to the United States for use of the grain in that country and not for shipment out of that country.

I would like your guidance, Madam Speaker, as to when the appropriate time would be to ask leave to introduce the motion.

Madam Speaker: I would like the Hon. Member not to move that now because I would like to look at the new amendment. As soon as I am able to rule on it as to its acceptability, perhaps we can see what mode of procedure can be used to do that.

Mr. Mazankowski: Madam Speaker, may I rise on a brief point of order and perhaps the Table officers can take note of this. Motion No. 130, which is in my name, and Motion No. 131 are duplicates. I think that was a typographical error.

Mr. Nielsen: By Journals.

Mr. Mazankowski: Yes. In Motion No. 130, I am proposing to delete lines 11 to 17 on page 30 which would delete the Section "Government share of the rate of cost change."

• (1710)

My second motion was to delete the section dealing with interim adjustment, lines 18 to 31. My motion, as proposed, was based upon the original Bill, the one before the reprinted version, so the lines do not correspond. I wonder if I might prevail upon the Chair and the Table officers to correct that because it would be rather useless to debate Motions Nos. 130 and 131, which are identical, when it was the intention to debate, in one case, the deletion of the Government's share of the rate cost change and, in the other, the interim adjustment. I would ask that that be considered.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, my submission will be in three parts. The first part will be the briefest and falls within the suggestion by the Chair that I deal with motions according to group. The first group is Motion No. 1. I have read the concerns of the Chair with respect to Motion No. 1 which can be found on page III of the Order Paper for Monday, October 3, 1983. It is the intention that the amendment of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) be inserted immediately before the short title of the Bill as reprinted. It would appear that the precedents would support the Chair. Citation 779 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition reads:

(2) Substantive amendments to the preamble are inadmissible unless the modification is proposed for purposes of clarification or uniformity. Journals, January 19, 1970, p. 323.

(3) Where the bill, as introduced, does not contain a preamble, it is not competent for the committee to introduce one.

Of course this Bill does not contain a preamble. Citation 792 of Beauchesne's is to the same effect.

I find myself in agreement with the Chair's concern with respect to Motion No. 1. I would suggest to the Minister, who is at the moment unavoidably absent, that he might consider the desirability—and I would make the same suggestion to the NDP—of accepting Motion No. 1 as a preamble, and we could go about achieving that objective by consent.

Having dealt with that matter, I wish now to present a global submission with respect to all Government amendments that have been introduced and are now on the Order Paper pursuant to Standing Order 79(6). That Standing Order provides that the Government may propose an amendment requiring a Royal Recommendation at report stage of a Bill if at least 24 hours' written notice is given of the recommendation and the proposed amendment. I submit that there can be no doubt, therefore, that the Government has the right to introduce, as it has, amendments which require the Royal Recommendation. However, I have some concern about the form of the Royal Recommendation the Government has attached to its amendments.

I will not go into the question of the financial initiative of the Crown, nor will I trace the development of the Royal Recommendation or its applicability to the amendments in question. The Government has determined—and I agree—that its amendments require a Royal Recommendation. The question I would place before the House is whether or not the Royal Recommendation has been provided in the required form.

Citation 541 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, under the general heading, "Signification of Recommendation by a Minister of the Crown", reads:

> The Governor General's Recommendation is communicated to the House and is included on the Notice Paper with the item of parliamentary business. When required, the Royal Recommendation is printed in a bill and when that bill is given first reading, the text of the Message and Recommendation of the Governor General is printed in the Votes and Proceedings.

These steps were carried out when Bill C-155 was introduced. I have no concern about the original Royal Recommendation that accompanied the Bill, however Citation 548 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition notes:

> Amendments to bills are out of order if they attempt to substitute an alternative scheme to that proposed with the Royal Recommendation. Journals, April 11, 1939, p. 325.

This citation gives me some difficulty as it appears to contradict Standing Order 79(6). The solution to this contradiction rests in Citation 540 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition under the general heading, "The Royal Recommendation", which reads:

> The guiding principle in determining the effect of an amendment upon the financial initiative of the Crown is that the communication, to which the Royal Recommendation is attached, must be treated as laying down once for all (unless withdrawn and replaced) not only the amount of the charge, but also its objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications. In relation to the standard thereby fixed, an amendment infringes the financial initiative of the Crown not only if it increases the amount but also if it extends the objects and purposes, or relaxes the conditions and qualifications expressed in the communication by which the Crown has demanded or recommended a charge. And this standard is binding not only on private Members but also on Ministers whose only advantage is that, as advisors of the Crown, they can present new or supplementary estimates or secure the Royal Recommendation to new or supplementary resolutions.

The key point to be found in Citation 540 is that the Royal Recommendation must be treated "once for all (unless withdrawn and replaced)" as laying down, "not only the amount of the charge, but also its objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications" with respect to report stage amendments. Therefore, I would submit that if the original Royal Recommendation were not broad enough to accommodate the proposed amendments which are now on the Order Paper under Standing Order 79(6), the proper procedure would have been to withdraw the Royal Recommendation and replace it before giving notice of a report stage amendment.

This has not happened in this instance. The Government has merely introduced new recommendations to cover each of the amendments, clearly in contradiction to Citation 540. Thus, rather than withdrawing the Royal Recommendation which was laid down on the Notice Paper with the Bill, the Government has put 14 new Royal Recommendations on the Order Paper in respect of Motions Nos. 14, 61, 71, 74, 82, 101, 142, 156, 157, 160, 164, 167, 168 and 171.

I raise this matter for the consideration of the Chair because I believe that we are about to establish a practice which I have never experienced before. We are about to establish a practice which will undermine the financial initiatives of the Crown. I hope that you might consider this matter when making your final ruling on the procedural acceptability of the motions that you highlighted in your remarks in which you outlined the first concerns of the Chair with respect to an initial grouping of the amendments.

Clearly the matters placed on the Order Paper under Standing Order 79(6) fall within the purview of Beauchesne's Citation 540. In my submission, the way for the Government to have proceeded would have been to enlarge the original Royal Recommendation by withdrawing it and coming back to the House with a Royal Recommendation which would have accomplished the objectives that it seeks to accomplish in the amendments attached to the "notices" given under Standing Order 79(6). In the remainder of my submission, as I have undertaken to the Chair, I will endeavour to keep within the suggested parameters of the groupings that the Chair suggested in its statement today. I will deal with the first grouping that was outlined in your statement.

The first motion I would like to deal with is Motion No. 64 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). Last Thursday you indicated this motion was related to a group of motions that appeared to be contrary to the content and purpose of the Bill and some of which appeared to have infringed upon the financial initiative of the Crown. The purpose of Motion No. 64 is to reduce, and I emphasize reduce, the amount of money that will be paid to the railways in a given year. Had the motion proposed to increase those payments, it would clearly have been out of order inasmuch as such an amendment would have sought to increase the financial burden imposed on the Crown by the Bill and would have been contrary to the principle to the financial initiative of the Crown, which I have just outlined partially in Beauchesne's.

However, in seeking to reduce the financial burden of the Crown or by reducing the expenditure of public funds, this motion merely asserts one of Parliament's traditional rights and duties as Citation 233 of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition points our at page 198. Citation 233 reads as follows:

It is one of the old standing principles of our constitution that the House of Commons should control the finances of the country. That is the right, privilege and duty of the House. It has been achieved by means of struggle lasting through centuries, beginning from the fourteenth century down to the seventeenth century, when it was fully confirmed, and since then it has never been disputed.

The cardinal principle on which the whole of our financial system is based is that of parliamentary control, and by this is understood not the control of Parliament in its constitutional sense, but control by the Commons alone. Upon this fundamental principle, laid down at the very outset of English parliamentary history and secured by three hundred years of mingled conflict with the Crown, and peaceful growth, is grounded the whole law of finance and, consequently, the whole of the British Constitution.

The authority cited is Durell. I point out that Motion No. 64 proposes to reduce the amount of money that would be payable to the railroads in any given year by eliminating phased-in contributions to the constant costs of the railway. It does not eliminate payments to the railroad and, therefore, cannot be said to run counter to the proposal of the Bill as passed at second reading, but it would reduce the charge on the public purse, thus asserting Parliament's right to control public expenditure. This argument also applies to Motion No. 66, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer), whih is identical in wording to Motion No. 64.

With respect to Motion No. 59, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville, I submit that the objective of the amendment is to limit the charge that is to be levied on producers. Again, as it is the practice with Ways and Means Bills, it is the undoubted right of the Commons to reduce the imposition of the charge upon the public. This point is adequately demonstrated by Citations 526 and 527 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition which consider the matter of amendments to Ways and Means Bills. The citation reads:

526. Reductions can be made in committee on the bill, but no grant can be increased except upon recommendation of the Crown.

527. So long as an existing tax is not increased, any modification of the proposed reduction may be introduced in the committee on the bill, and is regarded as a question not for increasing the charge upon the people but for determining to what extent such charge shall be reduced.

It might, however, be argued that Motion No. 59 seeks to increase the charge on the public purse by reducing payments by producers. I do not believe that this argument holds, and I so submit. If Motion No. 59 were to be grouped for debate with the other motions which seek to amend Clause 34 of the Bill, it could easily be seen that the effect of Motion No. 59, when combined with the other proposed amendment, would not substantially alter the financial effects of the Bill upon the public Treasury. In any event, the motion does not propose to reduce the amount currently paid by producers, and it does not by itself increase the financial burden upon the Government. I submit, therefore, that the House should be permitted to debate and vote upon this motion.

The comments I have made in support of Motion No. 59 also apply to Motion No. 86 which is similar in its intent, scope and effect. I was very glad to hear the intervention of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) with respect to his citation of the long title of the Bill, because by doing that, he has supported the point that I am about to make with respect to the intent and purpose.

With respect to Motion No. 86, it has been traditionally held that although the House does not have the right to increase taxation or grant the payment of moneys from the public funds, except through the passage of Government-sponsored resolutions or Bills, it has also been established that the House has the right to amend proposals for the granting of money by reducing the amount proposed in any given measure placed before the House by the Government. This principle is underlined by Citation 244(2) of Beachesne's Fourth Edition, which reads as follows:

Amendments moved for the reduction of a grant are proceeded with under the general rules governing amendments. For instance, on a resolution granting $10,000 for a certain purpose, a member may move that the amount be reduced by $2,000. This amendment then takes the form of the original motion offering, in lieu of the sum thereby proposed, a reduced sum for the acceptance of the committee. Rejection of the amendment leaves room for the proposal, without limit, of amendments in the same form and of ever varying amounts. The reduction must be of a substantial and not trifling amount; nor may a series of motions be made upon the same grant, raising, substantially, the same issue.

Motion No. 57 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville seeks to provide the Minister with the authority to enter into agreements with railway companies other than those which are subject to federal jurisdiction. The most notable example of such a railway company is B.C. Rail which is sought to be addressed by Motion No. 57 and Motion No. 156.

Last Thursday when you expressed some concern about Motion No. 57, Madam Speaker, you indicated that this motion appeared to be beyond the scope of the Bill. The long title of this Bill is, as has already been cited, "An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof". Under that broad rubric, there can be little doubt that agreements reached with railway companies other than those falling under federal jurisdiction could assist the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain.

Moreover, Motion No. 57 specifically states that agreements reached under its provisions shall—I am not trying to be humorous, Madam Speaker, I am trying to be very serious. As I warned the Chair, my arguments have great substance and I know the Chair is following them very closely.

These are rights as would be imposed or granted to railway companies falling under the definition contained in Section 2 of the Act.

Furthermore, and most important, Motion No. 57 specifies that no such agreement shall result in any enlargement of the Crow benefits or payments from the public purse. When a Bill is given second reading, Madam Speaker, the substance of the Bill is not open to debate. Rather, only the broad principles of the Bill are to be considered by the House during the debate and when voting on the motion for second reading. This point is clearly stated in Citation 734 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition under the general heading "Second Reading", and reads as follows:

> The second reading is the most important stage through which the Bill is required to pass; for its whole principle is then at issue and is affirmed or denied by a vote of the House. It is not regular on this occasion, however, to discuss in detail the clauses of the Bill.

The fundamental observation to be drawn from Citation 734, Madam Speaker, is that the clauses of the Bill are not to be discussed in detail. These are matters to be discussed in committee or at the report stage. The principle of this Bill, and thus its scope as considered at second reading, rests not in the specifics of given clauses but in the principle of facilitating the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain as stated in the title of the Bill.

In support of this contention, Madam Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the Chair to Citation 703 and Citation 704 of Beachesne's Fifth Edition. Citation 703(1) reads:

> Although there is no specific set of rules or guidelines governing the content of a Bill, there should be a theme of relevancy amongst the contents of a Bill. They must be relevant to and subject to the umbrella which is raised by the terminology of the long title of the Bill.

A Journal citation appears as authority. Subsection (2) of Citation 703 reads:

> Some of the constituents parts of a bill are essential; some are optional. The title is an essential part; the preamble is not.

Citation 704 reads:

> A bill may have two titles, one long and one short. Both the long title and the short title may be amended if amendments to the bill make it necessary—
> The long title sets out in general terms the purposes of the bill. It should cover everything in the bill.

I fail to understand, Madam Speaker, how it can be argued that the principle of the Bill and its purposes, particularly in the case of a Bill which does not contain a preamble as this one does not, are established at second reading in such a manner that amendments are precluded at later stages in the consideration of the Bill. As I have mentioned, Beauchesne clearly states that the substance of the clauses of the Bill are not for consideration at second reading but should be dealt with in committee or at report stage. It is not, therefore, the substance of those clauses which establishes the purpose and principle of the Bill but, as Beauchesne notes in Citations 703 and 704, it is the long title of the Bill which serves that end. If amendments are to be precluded at future stages, then there is no need for those stages.

Furthermore, the Nineteenth Edition of Erskine May, when speaking of the functions of a committee on a Bill, gives consideration to the matter of what constitutes the principle or objects of a Bill. Under the heading of "Functions of a Committee on Bill", the following words may be found at page 506 of Erskine May's Nineteenth Edition:

> The function of a committee on a bill is to go through the text of the bill clause by clause and, if necessary, word by word, with a view to making such amendments in it as may seem likely to render it more generally acceptable. The rules as to the admissibility of amendments are explained in detail on pp. 520-3 below, but the general powers of a committee and the limitations by which it is bound should be clearly borne in mind.
> (1) A committee is bound by the decision of the House, given on second reading, in favour of the principle of the bill, and should not, therefore, amend the bill in a manner destructive of this principle.
> (2) The objects of a bill are stated in its long title, which should cover everything contained in the bill, as introduced (see p. 489). Amendments, however, are not necessarily limited by the title of the bills, since a committee is empowered by S.O. No. 42 to make amendments "relevant to the subject-matter of the bill," provided that, where such amendments are outside the title, the committee extends the title so as to cover them.

The view that it is the long title of a Bill which sets out the purpose, principles and objects of a Bill is further supported by Elmer Driedger, one-time Deputy Minister of Justice and Deputy Attorney General of Canada, in his book, "The Composition of Legislation: Legislative Forms and Precedents". At page 153 of that book, Professor Driedger outlines a view of the nature of a long title of a Bill that is entirely in accord with the observations that I have cited from Beauchesne's and Erskine May. In the interests of time, Madam Speaker, I will not quote from the text but I do direct your attention to it.

In my submission, Madam Speaker, the objective of facilitating the movement of western grain as approved at second reading includes in principle the movement of grain by such companies as B.C. Rail, as long as such shipments do not alter the proposed changes that are to be made to the payment of federal subsidies or to the schedules containing the proposed freight rates that are outlined in this Bill as the methods of facilitating the movement of western grain. I would hope, therefore, Madam Speaker, that you will permit the House to consider Motion No. 57.

Moreoever, in the case of each of the motions that I have mentioned or that I will be mentioning in the course of my submission to you today, Madam Speaker, you have raised the concern that the motion in question appears to be contrary to the principle or the scope of the objects, purpose or principle of the Bill. I would ask that you re-examine each of these motions, specifically Motions Nos. 57, 59, 64, 66, 86, 129, 145, 153 and 155, in light of the submissions that I have made concerning the nature and extent of the purpose of the Bill. It is my hope, Madam Speaker, that upon taking a second look, you will come to share my view that each of these motions fall properly under the umbrella of the long title of the Bill.

In the comments that you made on Monday, Madam Speaker, you indicated that Motion No. 129 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville appears to introduce substantive changes to an interpretation clause and infringes upon the Crown's financial initiative. With respect, Madam Speaker, allow me to disagree with that interpretation. Beauchesne's Fifth Edition notes in citation 773(10) that a substantive amendment may not be introduced by way of a modification of the interpretation clause of the Bill and directs attention to a ruling of the Chair to be found at page 835 of Journals for May 21, 1970. Within the text of the ruling the following words may be found at page 836:

> With reference to motion No. 2 it should be said in a preliminary way that this amendment is defective in both form and substance. It must be recognized in the first instance that motion No. 2 purports to amend the interpretation clause of the bill. Accordingly, the form and content of the motion must be consistent with the purposes sought to be effected by the interpretation clause. Although the preliminary sentence of motion No. 2 appears to be in the form of an interpretation provision, what follows is a list of prohibitions and objectives to be observed in the administration of the Act. In other words, motion No. 2 is but a substantive proposition of a declaratory nature. If neither defines nor interprets any provision of the bill. While I sought long and hard, I can assure honourable Members, to find some ground on which I may be able to give the honourable member the benefit of any doubt so that motion No. 2 could be put to the House, it was not possible for me to reach a favourable decision in respect of this motion. For the reasons stated I do not think that motion No. 2 should be accepted.

In other words, amendments to an interpretation clause would be in order if they served, first, to define, or second, to interpret provisions of a Bill. In my submission, Madam Speaker, this is precisely the intent and effect of Motion No. 129. This motion merely serves to clarify the definition of the Government's share of cost increases as currently outlined in Clause 54 in lines 10 to 25 at page 29 under the term "cumulative Government share of the cost change".

With respect to the effect of the motion upon the financial initiative of the Crown, I believe it is important to understand that this motion would not increase the financial commitment of the Crown. For those reasons, I submit that the House should be permitted to debate Motion No. 129.

In commenting on the procedural acceptability of Motion No. 129, you indicated you felt that Motion No. 145 is consequential to Motion No. 129. Clearly, if you were to accept that Motion No. 129 is procedurally valid, that decision would resolve any problem with Motion No. 145. However, even if you find that Motion No. 129 cannot be put to the House, I would aks you to consider the acceptability of Motion No. 145. In my reading of Motion No. 145, it did not appear to me that it is necessarily consequential to Motion No. 129.

Without regard to the substance of Motion No. 129, it would seem to me that the effect and intent of Motion No. 145 is clearly identifiable on the basis of the provisions presented in the Bill as it was reported from the committee and, indeed, from the Bill as it was introduced in the Commons for first reading.

The definition of "cumulative Government share of the cost change" as outlined in Clause 54 of the Bill incorporates the substance of this motion. This fact, by extension, also speaks to my argument concerning the procedural acceptability of Motion No. 129. I believe I have reached the end of my submission with respect to the first grouping that the Chair suggested today.

With respect to the second grouping, in the case of Motion No. 153, I am once again of the view that the substance of the motion is in no way contrary to the purpose of the Bill—the purpose of the Bill as outlined in the long title of the Bill—nor am I of the opinion that it seeks to go beyond the royal recommendation. I submit that the intent of the motion is to permit the Governor in Council to make a more comprehensive regulation concerning the manner in which payments will be made under the proposed Act, the number of instalments by which payments will be made, the time at which payments will be made, and the rules for information relating to the movement of grain with respect to which payments are to be made.

This motion does not attempt to increase payments and would not have that effect. Rather, it attempts to provide the Governor in Council with the authority to prescribe regulations governing payments, notwithstanding the requirement in Clause 55 that payments be made by a responsible Minister; no more and no less. This proposal to allow the Governor in Council to increase the qualifications and conditions attached to the recommended charge upon public revenue falls well within the scope of the authority of this House as outlined at page 712 of Erskine May's Nineteenth Edition where, under the general heading "The Royal demand or recommendation fixes the limits of a charge", there appears this sentence:

In relation to the standard thereby fixed, an amendment infringes the financial initiative of the Crown, not only if it increases the amount, but also if it extends the objects and purposes, or relaxes the conditions and qualifications, expressed in the communication by which the Crown has demanded or recommended a charge.

The observation made at page 712 is strengthened by the following words found at page 714 of the same edition:

The problem has arisen through a change in the attitude of the House of Commons to expenditure. From regarding itself as primarily a check upon executive extravagance, it has turned more and more during the present century to pressing expenditure upon the Government. But during its period of retrenchment it had allowed the restrictions upon its powers of amendment in supply to be firmly established. The machinery by which this was enforced had been lost sight of, and it was generally held that it was the role of the Government, not only to propose new expenditure, but also to increase by amendment expenditure after it had been proposed, and the role of the Commons to accept or reduce the Government's proposals.

It is evident that the procedure both in the United Kingdom and in Canada is that the recommendation fixes the upper level of expenditure and is not open to upward amendment, but it is within the competence of the House of Commons to amend the provisions contained in legislation so as to reduce expenditure or increase the qualifications attached to expenditures. For those reasons I do not believe, Madam Speaker, and I so submit, that Motion No. 153 can be said to go beyond the Royal Recommendation.

With respect to Motion No. 155, you have indicated some concern that its substance is contrary to the principle of the Bill and that it may infringe upon financial initiative of the Crown. By itself, Motion No. 155 does not change the method of payment envisaged in the Bill, nor can it be said to authorize payments other than those permitted in other sections of the Bill. In that sense the motion, in my submission, cannot be said to infringe on the financial initiative of the Crown. What the motion says is that in the event that payments are made other than to railways and pursuant to other sections of the proposed Act, the Governor in Council may make regulations to ensure that the spirit and general terms and conditions of the proposed Act are upheld as if the payment had been made to the railways. In other words, the motion proposes to strengthen the qualifications of the Act in the event of certain decisions being made by the Governor in Council. The motion fills in details within the broad reach of the Bill as recommended—I underline the word "recommended". It does not authorize spending not permitted in other sections of the proposed Act and merely serves to place a limitation or condition on spending if payments are made other than to the railroads. For those reasons, Madam Speaker, I would ask you to find that Motion No. 155 is in order and that the House should be permitted to consider that motion.

● (1750)

You will be delighted to learn, Madam Speaker, that I am about to reach the end of this submission. However, I would like to make a request with respect to the grouping of motions for debate. You asked us to make those suggestions. The motions which I have touched upon in my submission, along with many of the motions which you have previously indicated are in order, seem to relate to two broad subject matters. I believe that debate on these motions would be more comprehensible, more orderly, and would progress more easily if they were to be grouped for debate as they relate to these two subjects. Therefore, I propose that Motions Nos. 153 and 155, if they are now ruled in order, be grouped for debate with Motions Nos. 154 and 48, as all of these motions relate to the method of payment proposed in the Bill. As well, I would ask that Motions Nos. 59, 64, 86, 129 and 145, if they are now ruled in order, be grouped for debate with Motions Nos. 63, 68, 69, 99, 102, 115, 127, 130, 131, 133, 136, 138, 140, 143 and 148, as all of these motions relate to the rate structure proposed in the Bill.

I would be pleased to provide you with a written breakdown of these proposed groupings if that would be of assistance to you, Madam Speaker. I am sure I can get these notes back from Hansard in time to do so.

I thank the Chair and the House for their indulgence in listening to a rather lengthy argument. I am sure, Madam Speaker, you will agree it was necessary. Certainly, in my experience, it is the first time I have ever seen 174 amendments to a Bill come before the House. Only 46 of these were motions made by this Party, of which 71.7 per cent have been ruled to be in order. Some 109 motions have been moved by the New Democratic Party, of which 38.5 per cent appear to be in order. By the Government there have been 19 amendments moved, of which 78.9 per cent appear to be in order.

By virtue of the very bulk and number of amendments, the argument and submissions have been necessarily of some length. I hope that those submissions commend themselves to the Chair and that perhaps a measure of substance will be found so as to permit the motions which I have addressed to be put to the House. With respect to the motions I have not addressed, I do not intend to do so, because obviously I agree with the concern of the Chair with respect thereto.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I listened with interest to the submissions of the Hon. House Leader for the Official Opposition (Mr. Nielsen). He obviously has done a first rate job in analyzing the amendments.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: No, I will not go too far. Do not worry. I agree in part with what he said. I wonder, however, if for ease of handling, it might be possible to call it six o'clock in order to put my comments in one block in one day's Hansard so that it can be considered by the Speaker in that way, rather than start now and then start over tomorrow.

Madam Speaker: Is it agreed that we call it six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

GRAIN—WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION PROGRAM. (B) FIVE-YEAR AVERAGING PRINCIPLE

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take the opportunity to speak with respect to a question I raised just yesterday regarding the western grain stabilization plan. In response to my question, Mr. Speaker, the Minister said in part, as reported at page 27764 of Hansard:

> I think it is a matter that would have to be more carefully assessed than one is given time to do during Question Period.

I again raise the question of the grain stabilization plan now simply because I believe at this moment in our history we need a response which is more extensive than a person can give during the Question Period.

The concern on the Prairies with regard to the western grain stabilization plan is extensive. We are hearing more and more about farmers who are becoming suspicious, who believe that their money is being taken for general Government revenues, who believe that political motives are being tied to the payout and who believe that somehow there is some scan which is operating. I do not necessarily associate or dissociate myself with those sentiments. I simply say I believe there is justifiable reason for farmers to be concerned.

The legislation was written in 1976, Sir, and it was based on the immediate previous history of the stable farm economic conditions of the 1960s. In the late 1970s and 1980s a much more tumultuous economic period demonstrated, with high interest rates and a high inflation rate, that the western grain stabilization plan was not sensitive to individual farmers' needs. The result was that once the plan was initiated in 1976, in the next two years, 1978 and 1979, there were payouts. The fact is, however, that at the present time we are having our most severe agricultural cost-price squeeze. Yet there has not been a payout, Sir, since 1978.

Obviously, the concern about political interference, whether justified or not, arises from the fact that we had an election in 1979 and there were payouts in 1978 and 1979. You will recall, Sir, that in both of those years the public was suspicious. The Minister said in answer to a question by the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) two days ago that he does not expect to pay out this year, and we are expecting an election next year. Again, we have the suspicion of political interference. I am not going to say those suspicions are fact, Mr. Speaker, but I do believe it is important that the Government become cognizant of the concerns which exist.

One of those concerns, Mr. Speaker, is that the plan is not sensitive to the actual economic needs of farmers. Secondly, Sir, when we do this on a regional basis we make it less sensitive to the individual farmer's needs as opposed to a region's needs. That has two faults. First of all, it is possible to be on the borderline, or on the wrong side of a region, and to have suffered drought or low income but not get anything at all because the region was not affected. Conservely, as I know is the case, people who had wonderful farm incomes, because they were in a region that was generally depressed were getting their normal income plus payments from the Western Grain Stabilization Fund.

I want to make this point strongly, Mr. Speaker. One of the main wrongs is that because the program covers a region it covers the fertilizer and machinery producers, the industry, on a regional basis. We do not have a program to protect individual farmers, but we do have one which protects essentially the broad base of our agricultural economy. The combine and tractor builders and the fertilizer manufacturers now have a guarantee that their stability is assured, but the farmers' individual stability is not.

I raise this broad spattering of a number of concerns about the program because I believe it is essential, since I believe there is going to be a review in October, to first of all invite Prairie farmers to send their representations to the Government. And secondly, to encourage the Government to invite the appropriate Committee of the House of Commons to start asking enough questions to ensure that this program is sensitive to individual needs, and that the farmers themselves will have an opportunity for extensive input into any changes that to be recommended.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the suggestion that payouts under this program are connected to elections could only come from a wharped mind like that of the Hon. Member. I just cannot seem to follow his logic. The Hon. Member makes the point that the five-year averaging method used in the western grain stabilization program is, in his estimation, not sensitive enough as a level of support for making payout calculations. He uses the words "not sensitive to individual farmers' needs". As the Minister has pointed out in previous exchanges between himself and the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) on this question, the Government is aware of the concerns expressed more recently by the advisory committee on the five-year averaging method, which is part of the current legislation. The Member does not seem to realize that. It has proposed a shorter averaging period to, say, three years, which would make it more sensitive to the current situation. That is what he is after. What it at the base of the concern is that the program payouts are not triggered quickly enough when net cash flow of western producers is dropping.

A major review which has been conducted is close to completion. Various adjustments or options for the Government which might alter the program and improve its effectiveness are under consideration but have not as yet been submitted to Cabinet. A change to a three-year average level of support would be one change that could be considered. I should like to add, however, that a three-year average would not have resulted in a pay out for 1980, 1981 nor 1982.

As has already been pointed out, a three-year averaging formula would respond more quickly to downturns in the farm economy. However, there are risks that payouts from the fund on this basis might damage the soundness of the program. The Government has to assess these possibilities very carefully.

The inference in the Member's question is that the effects of incorporating adjustments for inflation into the formula might make it more sensitive. However, the review of the program has suggested that had this been incorporated in the five-year averaging formula used in the past seven years, the western grain stabilization program would no longer be a sound program at the current levy rate. A period of rapid inflation which could make the program less sensitive to the western producers' needs is recognized.

There are, of course, a number of other areas of concern that have been brought out in this review and these touch on other matters outside the number of years averaged as a base for pay-outs.

I understand that there have been recommendations by the advisory committee to the Minister responsible for this program that the Government also consider a change so that receipts be calculated on a crop year basis rather than an annual basis, and participation options which would allow producers some opportunity to opt out under certain circumstances. Increased program flexibility would have to be balanced against maintaining a sound program. Other recommendations extend to including interest costs for farm equipment which are currently not included as eligible expenses under the program.

The Hon. Member should recognize that a major reason the fund has not been triggered, despite lower grain prices and higher costs, is the increasing volume of producer deliveries and export sales each year. These volumes have risen each year as the transportation and handling system has expanded and the Canadian Wheat Board has successfully increased export sales.

Nonetheless, I can point out to the Hon. Member that the Government will be taking into consideration the concerns brought to its attention through the major review of the program and those made recently by the advisory committee.

GRAIN—INCREASE IN PREMIUMS—REQUEST FOR CHANGE IN PAYOUT FORMULA

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I certainly appreciate the courage and stamina of my colleagues who, for one reason or another, are still in the House.

My question was supplementary to that of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) regarding the grain stabilization program as it now exists and the concerns that have been expressed about it by producers.

Several producers have expressed concerns, not only recently but over the past number of years, about the effectiveness of the stabilization program. Most people would consider a stabilization program to be something that would stabilize the cash flow of producers in western Canada in the grain areas. It is not, and this is perhaps unfortunate, and was not designed as an insurance program, but as a stabilization program.

The review legislation that is in the Act had not been acted upon until recently. There is now an advisory committee to the western grain stabilization program that is acting. They have put forward two suggestions, of which I am aware, and the Parliamentary Secretary referred to one of them, that is, to bring the average payout calculation down from five years to three years. That would have triggered a small payout in 1982 and it definitely would have triggered a payout in 1983. When one considers the plight of western grain producers in those two years and the cost-price squeeze that has been imposed upon them, as well as the loss of income in real dollars which they have suffered, that payout in 1982 and in this present crop year of 1983 certainly would have been welcomed.

The western grain stabilization advisory committee, which was established to advise the Minister on these matters, made another suggestion which the Parliamentary Secretary forgot to mention. It suggested that it would be beneficial for the inflation rate to be established as a criterion on calculating the payout. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Crowfoot used that in his question as a basis for his concern about the lack of money that would be available, and lack of payout in the years when it was necessary to maintain a cash flow for the producers. The western grain stabilization policy committee has asked and recommended that inflation be considered in the review along with the shortening of the three-year payout.

One of the concerns about the payout and the formula used is that certain items used in determining the cost of production are not included in the formula. One thing that has increased, I would say, tenfold since the formula was established is the cost of indebtedness for capital purchases which has been assumed by grain producers in the Wheat Board region. As I said, that has increased at least tenfold, and that key figure, the indebtedness of the grain producer, is not used to my knowledge in the formula for establishing the payout.

The Minister was questioned yesterday by the Hon. Member for Crowfoot and myself, and the day before by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers). Proposals of a general nature have been put forward. I would like to hear from the Parliamentary Secretary and the Minister as to the acceptability of some of these proposals for consideration.

What about a self-administered RRSP? This would allow the producer on an individual basis to withdraw a fixed number of dollars from his income in years when his income was high and shelter it from tax until a specific year when his income fell. He could then draw that sheltered tax money down and use it to stabilize his cash flow. Those of us in the farming industry realize how cyclical in nature the financial returns are in the production of grain. That is a positive suggestion and it is something which could be considered very easily by the Department of Finance in conjunction with the responsible Minister. It would not really be an impingement on the finances of the Government. The Government could continue to make its contribution to the producers by allowing them to draw from income that was protected in years when their income was high.

Another matter of great concern and the subject of a recommendation that has been put forward by the western grain stabilization advisory committee is the decision to opt in or out. I would suggest very strongly that they be allowed to opt out. Since the plan started the maximum to be paid by producers has increased from $500 a year, to $900, and it is now 2 percent of $60,000, which is $1,200. I would suggest that, in all fairness to the producers, every time the premium is increased they should be allowed to decide whether or not to opt out. It would only seem natural that in fairness we should not lock people into a plan which forces them to pay a higher premium for stabilization than what was originally estimated. I will be interested to hear the Parliamentary Secretary's remarks.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I thought the Hon. Member would be tired of hearing from the Parliamentary Secretary, but I do want to say how much we enjoyed having the Hon. Member on the Transport Committee. He attended almost all of the hearings when we travelled across Canada. He is sitting faithfully through the debates on Bill C-155. I want to congratulate him for extending his working hours and taking part in this adjournment debate.

The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) makes the point that the western grain stabilization program apparently can be altered to respond to certain concerns, but not to others. It is true that the Government can raise by Order in Council, under very specific circumstances, the maximum ceiling on grain receipts so that an individual producer participating in the program would have his or her levy contribution increased.

As the Hon. Member pointed out, these have risen from a maximum levy of $500, based on gross grain receipts for an individual farmer of $25,000 when the program was first put in place in 1976, to a maximum in effect at the start of the 1983 program year of $1,200 per producer based on a maximum of $60,000. As the Hon. Member must know, this element of flexibility in the legislation is based on the objective of the program to move toward covering 90 per cent of eligible grain sales; that is, as prices rise and volumes increase contributions by way of levy should rise and be adjusted to ensure that 90 per cent of grain receipts are covered under the program.

While this element of flexibility exists in the legislation, there is not the flexibility to make the changes that have been suggested, such as the one to the averaging period on which payouts are calculated. These are quite clearly set up on a five-year basis. The reasons for this, and the problems which may be attendant on a change for a shorter period, I have already outlined in my respons to the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone).

I should point out, however, that the Act is not without other elements of flexibility. For example, there are provisions that would result in the current levy for producers, set at 2 per cent, being reduced to 1.5 per cent with effect in January 1984, and there is a potential for a further drop to a 1 per cent levy rate. This element of adjustment built into the Act brings down levy contributions for farmers and for the Government as well. When it is established that the fund has reached a size where interest accumulation becomes large, a drop in the levy rate to 1 per cent would lower the maximum levy of $1,200 to $600, based on gross receipts of $60,000. As has been stated many times recently, the whole program is under review, and the Minister will be giving consideration to changes, not only to the number of years on which to base payout calculations, but also on other matters brought out in the review.

I assure the Hon. Member that I will pass his constructive suggestions on to the Minister and that they will go on to the review committee.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

LAY-OFFS IN LONDON, ONT.

Mr. Jack Burghardt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, recently CN Rail announced that the staff complement of its operations in London, Ontario, will be reduced from the present 564 employees to 437 by 1987, a reduction of 127 employees. Combined with the CN Trucking cutback, 233 CN jobs will be lost in London. CN Rail attributed the London lay-offs to "technological and operational changes", as well as to CN efforts to "start introducing certain efficiencies".

Although I appreciate that CN Rail has job security agreements which will ensure that many of the London job losses will take the form of transfers, early retirement, and attrition, many Londoners will nevertheless lose their jobs. I am concerned that those who introduce these sorts of streamlining measures, which aim to improve productivity and efficiency through the application of centralized technology, are not always aware of the profound human consequences these changes have on workers and on over-all employment levels. It is my sincere hope that in the case of CN Rail these human consequences will be seriously considered.

It is also my hope that where technological, organizational and operational changes are necessary, an effort will be made to ensure that the resultant lay-offs are minimized and that staff reductions are shared equitably throughout the operations of CN Rail.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

STOCKPILING OF WEAPONS BY SOVIET UNION

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, now hear this! Last Saturday the news media reported that 500,000 people turned out in Moscow in a peace march protesting the deployment of United States missiles in Europe. This is hypocrisy personified, when the Warsaw Pact has been building and testing missiles extensively during the last few years and now has three times the number of mobile surface to air missiles, double the number of land divisions, three times the number of anti-aircraft artillery, four times the number of tanks, as does NATO, which includes the U.S.A., to say nothing about its 7,500 aircraft capable and equipped to deliver nuclear weapons, or its scores and scores of submarines now carrying ballistic missiles.

Of course Communist leaders tell none of these facts to the Russian people, but while NATO and the U.S.A. actively work for Strategic Arms Reduction Talks and are committed to negotiate an equitable and verifiable agreement on strategic nuclear weapons, Moscow communists quietly build up their stockpile of missiles and submarines, and send their fifth columns throughout the western world to talk peace.

Yes, let us continue to negotiate for arms reduction on an equitable, mutual, and verifiable basis with the communists, but let them not think that we are blind to their avowed objective, namely, the domination of the world.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

ANNIVERSARY OF 1763 ROYAL PROCLAMATION

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Madam Speaker, today is the two hundred and twentieth anniversary of the Royal Proclamation of 1763. This Proclamation, one of Canada's oldest constitutional documents, recognized the basic rights of Indian nations and directed that all negotiations should be on a government to government basis. The basic intent of this document was emphasized in many treaties when Indian people were assured that they could continue their traditional way of life. Failure to respect the spirit of the Royal Proclamation has led to the basic mistrust by Indians of federal and provincial Governments. Positive action is needed on the part of all Canadians to implement the spirit of the Royal Proclamation of 1763.

A basic change must be made in the traditional pattern of Canadian politics which has led to the disintegration of Indian life, the assimilation of its people, and the dismal social and economic conditions in which they struggle. On this two hundred and twentieth anniversary of the Royal Proclamation, all Canadians should commit themselves to working together so that Indian nations can take their rightful place in the Canadian federation.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

RESOLUTION ON FRANCO-MANITOBANS' LINGUISTIC RIGHTS—INVITATION TO ONTARIO PREMIER

Mr. Denis Ethier (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Madam Speaker, the unanimous support given the Government's resolution on October 6 by the Leader of the Official Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic Party has raised them to the ranks of the great statesmen of our time, which include our Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Hon. Richard Hatfield, Premier of New Brunswick, and of course great statesmen of the past such as Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Hon. Edward Blake.

The telephone has not stopped ringing since that historic moment. Until late last night and again early this morning, my office was receiving calls asking me to express the callers' appreciation to our Prime Minister, to the Leader of the Opposition, to the Leader of the New Democratic Party, and of course, to all members from Manitoba.

These calls came from both English- and French-speaking Canadians, all of whom were from Ontario. In the light of the many calls received from Ontarians endorsing the gesture made yesterday by our three leaders, I would invite the Premier of Ontario, the Hon. William Davis, to join the league of great statesmen by officially recognizing bilingualism in Ontario, as has been done in the Province of New Brunswick.

SHIPBUILDING

NECESSITY FOR ISSUANCE OF CONTRACTS IN NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, the employment situation in central Nova Scotia and along its eastern shore is extremely serious. Ferguson Industries and Hawker Siddeley are both facing a very bleak winter. The House will know—and the Government is certainly aware—that further shipbuilding orders can be awarded. There are few if any places in the country where employment is needed more than at Ferguson Industries in Pictou, Nova Scotia.

The Government is also aware that any refit work that is required would have a great and beneficial effect in keeping the work force at Ferguson Industries from facing, along with their counterparts at Hawker Siddeley across the harbour, another bleak and very unsatisfying Christmas.

If the Special Recovery Program is to be meaningful, surely there has to be proper assessment of priorities and, by the same token, the Government's purchasing and tendering policies should be seen to be equitable, and not open to further politicizing of the nature we have seen in recent months.

I am appealing to those on the Treasury benches to take heed of the very serious unemployment situation in that part of Nova Scotia, and to take some action to remedy it.

HONDURAS—SEIZURE AND DETENTION OF MIGUEL ANGEL ORTIZ

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, on September 26 in Honduras, Miguel Angel Ortiz was seized by Honduran security forces. Ortiz is executive director of the Christian Democratic Party, a recognized party with representation in the Honduras Assembly. He is also a member of the Electoral Commission of the capital.

Since he was seized, his court order for habeas corpus has not been honoured and no charges have been laid in court. This is shocking. Just two years ago Honduras went through a form of democratic elections. It is said to be a democracy with liberty for legal opponents and critics of the government, yet ever since the installation of President Suado Cordova in February, 1982, human rights have been under attack. First Salvadoran refugees were harassed, and even killed by the military. Soon Honduran citizens were being treated the same way. Ortiz is only the latest and most prominent of a number of Hondurans who have been kidnapped by the state.

An assault like this on the executive of an official party makes a mockery of Honduras' claim to democracy. Canada gives $10 million or $15 million per year in development aid to Honduras. Honduras is the main United States military base in Central America, and the base for United States supported invasions in Nicaragua. Therefore, Canada must either speak out firmly and publicly against the Honduras military assault on its own people and its neighbours, or share the blame for the destruction of human rights and life in Honduras and Nicaragua. I call upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to intervene with the President of Honduras to request immediate release of Miguel Angel Ortiz.

REQUEST FOR YOUTH JOB-CREATION MEASURES

Mr. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Madam Speaker, today, we have some encouraging news for Canadian since the unemployment rate has dropped to 11.3 percent. Unfortunately, one group of Canadians is not going to benefit as much, and I am referring to young men, among whom unemployment is at 30.9 percent and young women, where this figure is nearly 16.2 percent. I feel that this should make us challenge our traditional programs and wonder why their general effectiveness did not reach this segment of the population. People refer to the "lost generation". I would say that we are wasting lives, and I feel that, in terms of the broad principles of equal opportunity and minority rights, all members of this House should recognize the need for increased awareness and for consultation on this very serious problem which will certainly become a priority for this Government, and that governments, employers and unions should be aware of the problem and take joint action, so that we will not have a generation that has lost all hope and is unable to seek its rightful place in society.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CENTRAL AMERICA—REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON CANADIAN ROLE

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Madam Speaker, the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) is quoted as saying in New York that Canada has been actively engaged in discussions with Cuba, Nicaragua, and Guatemala—no mention being made of El Salvador, Honduras, and Costa Rica—with a view to offering Canadian observer teams to supervise the truce which the Contadora Group is trying to arrange to bring peace and stability to Central America.

Now that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) has returned to the House for Question Period it is appropriate that he should know that the House expects that, if the stories are true, the Government will be setting aside some of its time so the issue can be fully debated and approved or disapproved, as the case may be, before any decision is taken to commit Canadians, whether military or civilian, to any such operation. During his statement the Secretary of State for External Affairs should outline fully how this offer came to be made, as well as the terms and conditions, including the length of time that any Canadian observer group would be permitted to serve in such a role.

Canadians will no longer tolerate truce observation teams to serve more or less indefinitely, as has been altogether too prevalent in previous similar situations. Canada does not want to become part of the problem that needs to be resolved. It is also important that Canadians should learn why no discussions appear to have taken place with authorized spokesmen in El Salvador, nor in Honduras and Costa Rica where some involvement is being alleged.

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ECONOMY

FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR TORONTO PROJECTS

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Earlier this week the political Minister for Toronto was complaining that the Government had lots of money available for its various programs, but very few applications. Does this situation indicate that the Government's programs are misdirected, or is the Government concerned that the money will not be spent before the next election?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I have had occasion to discuss this matter with the Minister, and he would be happy to answer the question if addressed to him.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I can understand why the Hon. Member came to the conclusion he did on the basis of the newspaper reports of what I said. What I was discussing at that point was the grant that was made to the Ryerson Institute of Technology, which I hope the Hon. Member would support. I was speaking particularly of the area of trade skills development. It is true that in those areas we have had some surplus funds, and I would have welcomed receiving more applications along the line of the Ryerson proposal because it is the kind of thing which, I think, very badly needs to be done across the country.

Mr. Wilson: Madam Speaker, I think this clearly points out that we cannot force-feed an economy. I think it also points out the futility of developing policies which experts in Ottawa design to be perfect programs which, when applied in the real world, simply do not work.

GOVERNMENT POLICY ON TAX INCENTIVES

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Is the Government considering a shift toward the use of tax incentives which are broadly based and available to all, or is this not consistent with the political strategy of the Minister's Party which is to try to get maximum publicity through the presentation of a cheque, or the cutting of a ribbon, or a picture in the paper, all key elements of the Liberal political election primer, part one?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I am a bit surprised by the Hon. Member's statement. The project which I just described for Ryerson Institute of Technology was not one designed here in Ottawa. It was a worthy project which was designed by people on the spot in Toronto and was supported very strongly by industry, as well as by Ryerson Institute of Technology, which will provide training in a whole variety of areas such as robotics and laser technology, training which is very much needed and wanted in the marketplace. I would have thought that the Hon. Member, being from Toronto, would in fact be applauding this as exactly the kind of project we should be supporting, rather than saying it was a waste of taxpayers' money.

As far as the second part of his question which relates to tax incentives is concerned, it might be worth while if the Hon. Member would simply review the budget brought forward by my colleague, the Minister of Finance, which brings in exactly the kind of tax encouragements which will create jobs in the country.

Mr. Wilson: Madam Speaker, if the Minister would read that budget he would see that about two-thirds to three-quarters of the money that was added in that budget will be handed out by direct grants, loans or subsidies, and not by tax incentives.

LIBERAL PARTY ELECTION STRATEGY INQUIRY

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, the Government seems to be more concerned with developing a strategy for the recovery of the Liberal Party than with developing a strategy for the recovery of the economy. Is it true that the doling out of taxpayers' dollars, backed up by a high profile promotion campaign, is a critical element in the Liberal Party's strategy which is designed to rectify the desperate position that its Members find themselves in with the voters of Toronto?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the kind of tax encouragement which is provided in my colleague's budget amounts to, if my memory serves me correctly, something like $2.4 billion. I think that it not only will have, but has been having a very considerable effect on the creation of jobs in the country. I am surprised that the Hon. Member is not on his feet today saluting us because the unemployment statistics show that there has been a decline of one-half of 1 per cent in the unemployment figures. The policies which were brought in by my colleague's budget, and which we have pursued since, are working now and will continue to work in the future. It is about time Hon. Members on the other side of the House began to recognize that we are on the right track.

SIGNS FOR WORKS PROJECTS

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, it is obvious that the Minister does not want to reply to the question that my colleague has asked about the importance the Government places on advertising.

I would like to ask the Prime Minister if he will confirm the existence of a confidential document I have in my hand, dated September 16, which is a Cabinet document called "Status Report on Communications". It, among other things, indicates as advice to Cabinet that the Government does not even know many jobs will be created directly or indirectly by the Special Recovery Capital Projects Program. There is more preoccupation with the number of signs going up than with actually producing new jobs.

• (1120)

Would the Prime Minister confirm that, in fact, of 247 construction projects approved to date, there are already signs on 199 and an additional 328 signs are to be erected? In other words, there will be more signs than projects. Will the Prime Minister confirm that this is the emphasis the Government is developing?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The Hon. Member asks me to comment on a leaked Cabinet document. Let me read to him from the oath of Members of the Privy Council.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: Hon. Members over there laugh because they have forgotten their oath; we have not on this side.

Mr. Nielsen: How about your Minister of Energy?

Mr. Trudeau: I would be prepared to deposit a copy of this document that I will read from.

Mr. Nielsen: We did that during the Gillespie debate.

Mr. Trudeau: It would be perfectly useless, however, because those Members on the other side will never have occasion to take this oath.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Never say never, Pierre.

Mr. Trudeau: I quote, Madam Speaker: "you will keep close and secret all such matters as shall be treated, debated and resolved on in Privy Council . . . So help me God."

Mr. Stevens: Why didn't they?

Mr. Siddon: Madam Speaker, it is obvious the documents are leaked when some officials within Departments feel that things are going wrong.

SIZE OF SIGNS ADVERTISING PROJECTS

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, this document states as follows:

> At the request of Ministers, extra large project site signs have been erected at Toronto Harbourfront (60′ × 15′) and Dorval and Toronto airports (16′ × 8′).

The document also indicates that, because of initial adverse publicity surrounding the Canadair CL-215 program, a great national event would be held at Dorval in late September, including an air show where the CL-215 water bombers were to be flown, with several Cabinet Ministers participating.

Is this the price that the Government is willing to pay, risking life and limb of the people of Canadair in such a great public extravaganza, in order to promote their political aims and nothing more?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I will concede, and I will even brag about the fact, that the Government intends that the spending of the taxpayers' money raised by Parliament, will be known to the taxpayers of Canada. I know the Party on the other side is not interested in that approach. They do not believe in a strong federal presence. I have never heard them criticize the millions spent on advertising by Premier Davis in Ontario, or by Premier Lévesque. That is because they do not believe in a strong Canada; they believe in strong Provinces. That is the difference between the two Parties.

UNEMPLOYMENT STATISTICS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Labour force statistics are out today and they document the fact that 309,000 fewer Canadians are working today than were working one month ago. Rather than the Minister simply calling upon the Opposition to salute him because of a statistical drop in the rate of unemployment, I wonder whether he is prepared to do something real for the 309,000 Canadians who are not working and who were working a month ago.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member knows that the appropriate assessment is to look at what is happening to employment figures in a seasonally adjusted way. For some reason the Hon. Member wants to put the worst possible interpretation that he can on the figures, and to welcome with gloom and doom every sign he can find, even when he distorts them, to justify taking that position. The fact is that for every month since last November there has been an improvement in the employment situation, and that is shown in the figures. I would have thought that the hon. gentleman would have been happy about that rather than seeming to take some enjoyment in the fact that he can find some reason for sadness.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN GASPÉ REGION OF QUEBEC

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Madam Speaker, the statistics clearly show there are 309,000 fewer Canadians working today than one month ago. The Minister has been in his portfolio long enough to know that.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the same Minister. The Minister is aware that the regions in Canada are suffering from very high unemployment rates, and especially the area around Gaspé and the town of Grande-Vallée. Is the Hon. Minister prepared to intervene in Gaspé to help the people in these communities or is he just going to blame the Quebec Government for the situation?

[English]

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the hon. gentleman knows very well he is partaking in an intellectual fraud. He knows very well that employment statistics vary in this country seasonally, particularly between August and September. He knows that very well. The fact of the matter is that the base line of employment since last November has improved tremendously. It is the seasonally adjusted figures which show the .5 per cent drop which are the important figures. He knows that. I would either have to be disrespectful to his intelligence or to his sincerity. I prefer, in this particular case, not to be very flattering about his sincerity.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATION ON CANADIAN CONTENT

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, let us deal with some facts. The Government has before it the report of the automobile industry task force which recommended, among other important things, that the Government immediately undertake negotiations for Canadian content in foreign imported cars. It suggested we could create 80,000 jobs in Canada, with a Canadian content requirement. We will lose 40,000 jobs if we do not act. Why does the Government not move now to negotiate a Canadian content requirement for imported automobiles in order to ensure employment not only for automobile workers, but for other workers in the steel, glass, and rubber industries?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce has this report. He has been discussing it with various people. It is under examination and review. When the Government is ready to make an announcement in that regard, I am sure the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce will be very happy to provide his answer.

MEDICAL CARE

PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS IN YUKON

Mr. Herb Breau (Gloucester): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the confusion created by the Hon. Member for Provencher with regard to premiums for health care in the Yukon, would the Minister enlighten the House by telling us in fact whether or not there are hospital premiums levied in the Yukon? Obviously the Hon. Member for Provencher not only has difficulty coming up with a policy on medicare for his Party, but also has difficulty reading the facts.

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Minister of National Health and Welfare answered the question yesterday quite correctly when she said that there were no hospital premiums in the Yukon. What the Hon. Member for Provencher was talking about was medical care premiums which are charged by the Territorial Government of the Yukon at $26.50 per family multiplied by 12, which gives him his figure of $318. The Hon. Member should address his question to the Territorial Government which, I understand, is also a Conservative Government.

PAYMENT OF HOSPITAL LEVIES

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I thank the Minister for that answer. Could he then answer this question? Why is it that the federal Government, which owns and controls all of the hospitals in the Territory, has made an arrangement that it will not neither give a tax base or sufficient revenue, but rather that those levies can be made and in fact its federal hospitals are sustained in part through premiums?

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, it is very easy to distort the facts.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): The Hon. Member is talking about medical care premiums, which I remind him are being charged by doctors and being condoned by the Government of the Yukon.

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF NEW TAX RÉGIME

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, could I ask the Minister, then, now that he has confirmed that federal hospitals are in fact partially sustained by levies, if he would indicate whether he would do the same thing which this Government did, which was that, having imposed entry fees for admission into the Yukon hospitals for years and years, it finally dropped them in 1981, not for philosophical or policy reasons but rather because the revenues received were less than the cost of the administration of the program?

● (1130)

Would the Government now undertake a tax régime in that Territory in order to remove the necessity of sustaining the hospitals through monthly premiums, and having done that would it then be willing to discuss medicare on that basis in other jurisdictions as well?

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is complicating the issue more and more. First of all, hospitals are not being sustained by premiums. The Yukon system is a non-premium system. The medicare system, where doctors perform services for patients in hospitals, is where the premiums are being applied by the Government. I said that very simply in the first answer.

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY

EXPLORATION PERMITS ISSUED BY FRANCE

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who confirmed to me, in response to a question I raised on September 30, that negotiations between Canada and France over France's sovereignty claim in the St. Pierre and Miquelon area have broken down. How many exploration permits for oil and gas have been issued by France within our exclusive economic zone outside St. Pierre's territorial zone?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, there is a disputed zone. At present negotiations between Canada and France have not resulted in a resolution of that difficulty. The Hon. Member asks what licences have been issued by France in that disputed zone, which is not the territorial sea to which he refers. I do not have the facts on that but I will find out if any, and let him know.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I cannot use it as evidence, but I have a map showing the number of permits issued outside the 12-mile territorial zone and inside Canada's exclusive economic zone. Why did the Government allow those permits to be issued by another sovereign country, inside Canada's exclusive economic zone?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): I presume the Hon. Member is referring to the disputed zone adjacent to St. Pierre and Miquelon in which France has claimed a very extensive area, and which we dispute. That is the subject of negotiations. Canada certainly has not and will not acknowledge the claims made by the French Government.

The Hon. Member asks why have we not prevented the Government of France from doing this. I think on reflection he will find that is something beyond the reach of the Government of Canada.

ENERGY

EXPORT PRICE OF NATURAL GAS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who, once again, is in the House but not in his seat. If we could divert him from the campaign trail, possibly we could direct his attention to his Ministry.

The national energy policy plan announced by President Reagan this week reaffirms the U.S. commitment to further deregulation of U.S. natural gas prices, increasing the competitive pressures on Canadian gas exporters who are selling only 40 per cent of their contracted volumes. Since it is the Liberal Cabinet which sets gas export prices, and since the single border price for Canadian gas exports is too expensive for our American customers, is the Minister prepared to reduce the price charged for our gas exports? Or is he prepared to see us lose this market to our competitors?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I am well aware of the problem. Twice this year I have adjusted prices. I reduce it in the first instance and gave an incentive price for new quantities of natural gas in the American market later on. These decisions were taken in consultation with the industry and the producing Provinces, Alberta and British Columbia. We are holding discussions at this time, and the view being expressed by the provincial Governments and myself on this problem is that there is no need to move at this time. We are watching the situation very carefully, in consultation with the industry and the Provinces.

I have to tell the Hon. Member that the U.S. market is complicated at this time and some politicians in Washington are trying to blame Canadians for high prices, but we provide only 5 per cent of the natural gas used in the American market. We are just a marginal supplier, and at this time there is no need for a further move. If there is, I will do that in consultation with the producing Provinces.

Miss Carney: Madam Speaker, I remind the Minister of the comment made publicly by the president of TransCanada PipeLines who says this Government is neither technically nor psychologically competent to set the price of gas.

PRICE CHARGED TO U.S. CUSTOMERS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Since contracts are now being negotiated between Canadian suppliers and U.S. gas companies at rates less than Canadian domestic gas prices, and since this would violate existing pricing regulations, does the Minister intend to allow Americans to buy our gas for less than what Canadians pay?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I think the comment the Hon. Member made is in fact a bad reflection on the Alberta Government which has supported me in all the activities I have initiated in that field. If we are not competent, I guess the Alberta Government is even less competent because it has been perhaps less flexible than I have been on that score. I think it is a hypothetical question at this time. When we decide to change the price we will see if it will be lower for the Americans than Canadians. But I do not think there is a great desire in Canada at this time to see Canadian gas sold in the American market cheaper than in the Canadian market.

RAILWAYS

MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON RAILWAY LANDS IN TORONTO

Mr. John Gamble (York North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration who, while freely dispensing from the pork barrel in Toronto this week, indicated that among the projects to receive federal funding were construction projects, in particular those related to the development of the railway lands. By that I suppose he is talking about the relocation of the rail lines leading into and out of metropolitan Toronto, which is the subject matter of a study by the Railway Committee of the CTC. Is the Minister now telling us that, prior to the conclusion of that study, he wishes to relocate those lines to the north, into the region which is now the electoral district of York North?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): No, Madam Speaker, I am not saying that. What I would say to the hon. gentleman is that the Liberal Members from the City of Toronto are very much interested in the proposals brought forward by the Mayor of Toronto for the development of the railway lands along the waterfront. This is a project which we are following with considerable interest, and we hope to work closely with the municipal officials, particularly Mayor Eggleton, in realizing that project.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS

Mr. John Gamble (York North): Madam Speaker, if indeed these rail lines are moved from their present area in metropolitan Toronto, and if the Minister who, of course comes from that region, will look at the matter very carefully, it will be obvious there is no other place to locate them except where the preliminary report of the Railway Committee indicates, that is, through the riding of York North.

Having regard to the fact that the preliminary report dealt with the transportation of dangerous goods and the consequential effect upon people in the entire metropolitan Toronto area, will the Minister now realize that the transportation of dangerous goods across the northern part of metropolitan Toronto, given prevailing winds, will have a devastating effect in the event there is an accident, not only on my riding of York North but on the entire area to the South, which is metropolitan Toronto?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I will certainly pass on to the proper authorities the representations of the hon. gentleman that the rail lines be moved into his constituency.

Mr. Gamble: Very funny.

Oral Questions

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

BRITISH COLUMBIA COAL DEVELOPMENT—FUTURE OF TWO MINES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Regional Economic Expansion, whose Government has worked very closely with the Social Credit Government of British Columbia in developing one of the few major megaprojects in western Canada. What the Government has been telling Canadians is that this will be the major job-creation project in western Canada in the months and years ahead.

● (1140)

Is the Minister aware of a recent study done by H.N. Halvorson Consultants Limited for the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority that suggests that the two major mines in the northeast coal sector, namely, the Bullmoose Mine and the Quintet Mine, because of the high price of coal that they are mining, will be mothballed likely for the next 20 years?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, first, I am not aware of the Hon. Member's allegations. But, second, if he is speaking of megaprojects in western Canada, I would hope that he would encourage his colleagues to support the Crow changes, because that is one of the biggest megaprojects ever developed in this country.

INDUSTRY AND LABOUR ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION IN PORT ALBERNI, B.C.

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Ten months ago, the Government announced an ILAP program for Port Alberni, in the sum of $15 million. To this point only $3 million of that amount has been spent, creating only temporary jobs, more permanent. In light of the fact that this Program will elapse in December, and in light of the fact that the backbone of the Alberni Valley will continue to be the forest industry, is the Minister prepared to consider extending that Program, changing the criteria, so that that community, in that area, along with the Government, industry and labour, can embark on a major reforestation program, using the funds that remain, under different criteria?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I welcome the representations of the hon. gentleman. I am not aware of the exact details of what he is describing. I am therefore pleased that he has brought it to my attention. I will look into it and try to deal with it as sympathetically as I can.

I indicated to the House before that we have undertaken continuation of what, in effect, was the old employment bridging assistance program, which was oriented toward the forest industry. It may be possible that there are some elements within that extension which could be of service to the Hon. Member. In any case I will look into the specifics of the matter and try to see what is possible to do.

GRAIN

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. It appears to the western farmers that the Government is playing politics with their money. I am referring to the Western Grain Stabilization Program, in which there are some $900 million, and also to increasing the initial price for grain. Farmers have a very, very serious cash flow problem. Will the Government continue to hold the farmers' money—and I emphasize "the farmers' money"—and play politics with their money, or will it make it available? We have heard nothing from the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board of any positive consequences. What direction is the Government taking?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I believe I answered questions previously this week concerning the western grain stabilization fund. As the Hon. Member knows, it is basically an insurance fund, and both the farmer and the federal Government pay into the fund against the day when the cost price squeeze becomes so exorbitant that farmers lose dramatically.

Under the legislation itself, pay-outs must be considered according to a five-year average. That is not at the discretion of the Government or anyone else. That is very clearly laid out in the Bill and the statutes. The five-year average, as it is being considered now, represents some $400 million above the five-year average pay-out and, therefore, we are not in a position to respond. However, I have said that we are reviewing the western grain stabilization fund to see whether it can be reduced to a lower three-year average, therefore providing quicker pay-outs.

We have received representations. They have been very valuable. As soon as our review is concluded the Government will move on that, but we would obviously require legislation to make the change.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

INITIAL PRICE FOR BARLEY

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, with regard to the Western Grain Stabilization Program, the Minister knows that it was designed not to be an insurance program, but, rather, a cash flow program. The Government is dragging its feet on this issue. With regard to the initial payment, when will the Minister announce an increase in the payment for barley? Wheat is trading at Thunder Bay at $1.14 higher than the farmers are receiving at the grain elevators today.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I can report to the Hon. Member that the question of the pay-out on barley payments is now being considered by the Minister of State responsible for the Wheat Board. I expect he will be making a recommendation to Cabinet momentarily.

FISHERIES

GEORGETOWN PLANT IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—MINISTERS' STATEMENTS

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, if I might have his attention. Yesterday, in the House, the Minister said that the federal Government was still looking into the possibilities concerning the reopening of the Seafoods Plant at Georgetown, Prince Edward Island. How does the Minister reconcile that uncertain statement with firm commitments given by his colleague, the Minister of Veterans Affairs, all last summer, to the workers at Georgetown, that the reopening of the plant was imminent? Who was speaking for the Government of Canada on this important issue, the Minister of Fisheries or the Minister of Veterans Affairs?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): I can tell the Hon. Member, if he is trying to see any contradiction, that there is none. I have had several meetings with the regional Minister for P.E.I., precisely on the question involving Georgetown, and we are working on it very hard. On the other hand, as the Hon. Member may remember, I have said that, before focusing on one plant in a particular Province, what we must do is to look toward establishing healthy corporations, with proper financing, and then we can focus on the different plants.

Now that we have, I hope, managed to come to a solution by the merger of Nickerson and National Sea, obviously, concerning the question of Georgetown, I see some avenue there. I will be meeting next Tuesday with the Minister of Fisheries of P.E.I. jointly with the regional Minister, and this topic will be among the questions we will be discussing.

DATE OF PLANT REOPENING

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Will the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans identify himself with the firm commitment given by his colleague, the Minister of Veterans Affairs, to the workers of Georgetown that the opening of the plant will be prior to next spring? Yes or no? Will he give that commitment?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): I can say to my hon. friend that my resolve is as great as that of the regional Minister that every possibility be studied. If a solution can be found I am sure that nobody will be happier than the regional Minister himself.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF NAVAL UNIFORMS

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, I have a question to ask the Minister of National Defence. When Vice-Admiral Fulton retired as Chief of Maritime Command in July of 1983, he made a very serious plea to return the blue uniform to Canada's Navy. All concerned know that this would be a tremendous boost to morale in that branch of the Canadian Armed Forces. Therefore, will the Minister meet this plea from one of Canada's dedicated naval personnel, and will he immediately implement a plan or program to restore the navy blue uniform to Canada's Navy?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, in view of Admiral Fulton's representations, and in view of a number of representations that have been made by Hon. Members, that is one of the areas to which I paid particular attention very early on, after being appointed. I have considered it very seriously, with the aspects identified by the Hon. Member, and have come to the judgment, having considered all the various arguments, that there is no advantage at this time—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blais: —in returning to the old style uniforms or to the old colours. I might point out that over 68 per cent of those who are presently in the Force came into the Force at the time the uniform was of a green colour, such as it is, and are satisfied with the state of affairs. There is no intention of changing that state of affairs.

Mr. Crosby: I am very disappointed, as I am sure thousands of other Canadians will be, with the Minister's attitude.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER CONSULT ON ISSUE

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Will the Minister at least avoid taking a firm opinion on this matter? Will he consult many people across Canada, in and out of the Canadian Armed Forces, before he makes a final decision? I know that his predecessor was of that mind, but surely there is always hope for some change in his attitude. Therefore, I ask the Minister, will he at least consult—

Mr. Trudeau: Always backwards, never forward.

Mr. Crosby: —with people in the Armed Forces and other interested Canadians before he makes a final decision on this very important issue? And do not make light of it.

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I am not making light of it. As I indicated to the hon. gentleman, that was one of the first things that I considered. One of the factors I took under consideration at the time was that Canada has an armed force that has superior morale because we are able to provide it with the highest pay of any force within NATO. I am not sure whether Canada's force is not the highest paid of any force in the world. That has been made possible as a result of the savings that we were able to effect within the force because of integration. I would suggest to the hon. gentleman that going back to the different coloured uniforms would simply be an indication of a weakening of our resolve to maintain the integration of our armed forces.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. As he is aware, Saskatchewan is one of only two Provinces where unemployment went up last year. As a matter of fact, since the election of the Conservative Government in our Province the number of people looking for work has gone up by 82 per cent in the last year.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Nystrom: The number of people on welfare has gone up 46 per cent in the last couple of years. I know Tory times are tough times, but that is no excuse for the Minister across the way not to have some special measures for my Province. Can he tell us what he plans to do to provide jobs in Saskatchewan, and is he planning on meeting our Premier very soon?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, as I pointed out earlier today, there is now and has been a considerable improvement in the employment picture across the country since November. I can only hope, if Saskatchewan is suffering a minor fluctuation, that the over-all improvement in the country will help. It seems to me the obvious answer to the question which the Hon. Member has posed is the removal of the Conservative Government in Saskatchewan.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INDIAN AFFAIRS

CROSS LAKE RESERVE—CONDITION OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Over two years ago his Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development went to northern Manitoba and promised a new school to the residents of Cross Lake, an Indian reserve. Last week Howard Pawley and myself—

Mr. Murta: Howard who?

Mr. Murphy: —toured the present accommodations. There are holes in the floor of those school buildings through which you can put your foot. These are elementary classrooms. That promise was made over two years ago by the Government and it has not been fulfilled. Next week Treasury Board considers a submission for a new school in that area. I would ask the Prime Minister to use his good offices to make sure that submission is accepted, as was promised by his Minister.

[Translation]

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is reviewing parts of the program where work has already been done, and a definite answer on the subject should be forthcoming within the next few weeks.

PERSONAL CORRESPONDENCE OF MINISTERS

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. When a Minister is transferred from one portfolio to another, understandably he takes his personal correspondence with him. Keeping in mind the freedom of access to information provisions, what limits are put on the definition of personal correspondence, bearing in mind there is no access to information that has been shredded?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I suppose personal correspondence would first include all correspondence marked personal by the person who writes the letter.

INTERDEPARTMENTAL CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Prime Minister. Does this include interdepartmental correspondence, correspondence relating to the privileged information of citizens of Canada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am not sure whether that is two questions or whether it is the same one. Interdepartmental correspondence would not seem normally to me to be personal correspondence if it has to do with the affairs of Government. If it is between two Ministers of two different Departments, or somebody acting on their behalf, obviously it is covered by the exception relating to communications between Ministers of the Crown, Ministers of the Crown being bound by the oath I quoted earlier to keep correspondence between themselves private and privileged.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ISRAEL—INTENTION TO ESTABLISH CITY ON WEST BANK

Mr. Ian Watson (Châteauguay): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Last week The Globe and Mail reported that the Government of Israel had dedicated a new town called Emmanuel on the occupied West Bank destined eventually to grow to a population of 60,000. Has the Government of Canada objected, or does it intend to object specifically to this new affront to civilized international behaviour, or will it simply acquiesce in this further example of anti-Palestinian racism on the part of the present Israeli régime?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, we have not, to my knowledge, made any particular protest about this settlement. But we have on quite a number of occasions expressed our opposition to the settlement policy of the Israeli Government. We have stated that the continuation of this action is a further obstacle to peace. And as recently as my statement at the United Nations General Assembly, I appealed to Israel again to reconsider its settlement policy.

HARBOURS

FUNDING FOR MARINA PROJECTS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Will his Department, through the Small Craft Harbours Branch, be providing material costs for municipalities applying under the Canada Works Program for marina projects this coming winter? It is fairly important to the municipalities to know soon whether the Minister's Department will be providing these funds so they can go ahead with applications for winter works projects.

Mr. Nielsen: Of course they are.

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I am happy to remind this House that through the Special Recovery Program of the Minister of Finance we have embarked in the Province of Ontario on a very major program of small carft harbour and marina construction. It was a dramatic increase of about 600 per cent for this year. Hopefully, during the next year we will be able to continue our programs jointly with the Department of Employment and Immigration.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

AMENDMENT OF INDIAN ACT

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, may I put my question to the Acting Minister? When does the Government intend to introduce amendments to the Indian Act, and will the amending legislation now being prepared provide for retroactive validation of proclamations issued under Secton 4(2) of the Act?

[Translation]

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member has raised a very interesting point, and I shall take the question as notice. Next week I will be able to provide details on the subject, because the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has many pieces of legislation that are now being reviewed, and I think we must first specify the nature of the question if we are to give a responsible reply.

[English]

VALIDITY OF PROCLAMATIONS

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, perhaps I can give the Parliamentary Secretary more details by referring him to the secret Cabinet document of July 7 from his Minister—

Mr. Nielsen: Another one? They are leaking like a sieve.

Mr. Beatty: —in which he recommended the elimination of discrimination from the Indian Act, with comprehensive legislation to confirm the validity of such proclamations. He recommended further that, even if amendments to such legislation were not passed, the subject proclamations should nonetheless be confirmed by statute to resolve any doubt in their favour. Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell the House why it is that when this document was written the Minister had already prepared a comprehensive reply to the Report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments dismissing the concern of the Committee over the validity and legality of those proclamations? Why, if the Government is totally satisfied that those proclamations are legal, did the Minister in a secret document recommend such retroactive legislation?

[Translation]

Mr. André Maltais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Madam Speaker, since the Hon. Member seems to be referring to a confidential document whose contents I have not been able to check, I think that in the circumstances, we should wait for an official and public reply that will be given in due course by the responsible Minister.

APPOINTMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND REPRESENTATIVE TO CABINET

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. It is now over six weeks since the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's was forced to resign from the Cabinet, leaving Newfoundland the only Province not represented in the hon. gentleman's Cabinet. There are nine Newfoundlanders sitting in the right hon. gentleman's caucus, and there are five in this House. Does the Prime Minister intend to appoint a Newfoundland representative to his Cabinet? If so, when? And I hope he will avoid another lecture on prime ministerial prerogatives.

● (1200)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, maybe I should lecture the Hon. Member on the simple subject of fairness. The Member from Newfoundland who was in the Cabinet and who resigned, has his case before the courts now, and it is being decided very soon, I understand.

MR. HNATYSHYN—STATEMENT OF MR. TRUDEAU RESPECTING PROCEEDINGS INVOLVING MR. SIMMONS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, I want to raise a point of order with respect to the comments made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in an answer he gave my colleague, the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath). There is a principle of parliamentary tradition in the House that there shall not be any attempt to interfere with the judicial process. If I understood the words of the Prime Minister, his statement was a direct reflection on upcoming proceedings involving the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons), the implication being in connection with the proceedings that the future of that Hon. Member in the Cabinet would depend upon the outcome of a hearing with respect to the charges against the Hon. Member.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. That is not a point of order; that is a matter of debate. The Hon. Member cannot raise that point now and try to continue Question Period under the guise of a point of order. That is not a point of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I simply wanted to raise it. I would like to have a look at the Prime Minister's exact words.

Madam Speaker: All right, I need no notice of that. The Hon. Member can look at it and raise it, if he thinks he has a point of order. He does not have to tell the House that he thinks he is going to look at something and raise it later. Really, that is an abuse of the time of the House.

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Thursday, October 6, 1983, consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 33 (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I would like to deal now with amendments we have proposed which have been tentatively or permanently ruled out of order, depending on one's interpretation. I dealt with the submission of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) yesterday and therefore I do not propose to dwell on that today.

Basically I want to deal with four matters, although they cover a number of amendments. I want to deal with what is in fact beyond the scope of the Bill, as in many instances is the claim by the Chair, with regard to certain of our amendments. I want to speak about certain amendments which are defined to be substantive changes to the interpretative clause. I want to deal with the infringement on the Crown's financial initiative and prerogative and, primarily as the fourth matter, I want to deal with the question of what is contrary to the purposes of the Bill.

I have looked at the question of the interpretation of what is beyond the scope of the Bill. It is a difficult subject with which to deal. However, it is necessary to deal with it in order to address certain of the amendments which appear to be in the process of being ruled out of order.

I refer to Driedger's Legislative Form and Precedents", Chapter I, "Formalities", which deals with the long title of a Bill. It sets out in quite lengthy detail how the title of the Bill must reflect the scope of the Bill. It reads, and I quote from the second paragraph:

> The title, therefore, must accurately define the scope of the bill, and an amendment is out of order unless it falls within the scope as defined in the title.

Turning to Beauchesne's Fifth Edition under "Form of a Bill", Citation 703 reads:

> Although there is no specific set of rules or guidelines governing the content of a bill, there should be a theme of relevancy amongst the contents of a bill. They must be relevant to and subject to the umbrella which is raised by the terminology of the long title of the bill.

Under the heading, "The Title", Citation 704 reads in part:

> (1) Long Title—The long title sets out in general terms the purposes of the bill. It should cover everything in the bill.

The title of the Bill before us is "An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof". I will argue as I go along that in the case of amendments which have been ruled out of order as being outside the scope of the Bill, they cannot possibly be outside the scope of the Bill given what the long title defines the Bill as being.

I draw to your attention, Madam Speaker, that it is quite clear the the House of Commons, according to the citations in Beauchesne's and Erskine May, cannot deal with the clauses contained in the Bill at second reading. It can deal only with the principle of the Bill at second reading. The principle of the Bill at second reading must reflect what is contained in the long title of the Bill. Our amendments are aimed at altering the clauses within the Bill but are quite clearly within the definition of the Bill as contained within the long title. I will return to that in a moment.

I want to deal with our amendments in order. In most instances they will also be within the grouping the Speaker has established. The Speaker ruled in the first ruling that Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 12 and 17 were outside the scope of the Bill. In the second ruling they were deemed to be substantive amendments.

Madam Speaker: Could I simply interrupt the Hon. Member for a moment. I would like him to refer to a preliminary ruling, otherwise I would not be able to allow him to comment. I would not like it to appear in Hansard that the Chair is allowing discussion on a ruling. A preliminary ruling is quite acceptable.

Mr. Deans: I apologize, Madam Speaker; I obviously meant preliminary ruling. Any time I use the term "ruling", I authorize Hansard to insert the word "preliminary" in order that never again will I be seen to be out of order.

I am dealing with Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 12 and 17. In the majority of cases what we have proposed is not different in even one word from what is already contained in the Bill. We have proposed moving the definition from one part of the Bill to another part of the Bill for ease in the public's dealing with the Bill. It is appropriate for us to suggest that the definition clauses be grouped together so that those who have to deal with the Bill can refer to the definition section and find all of the definitions in that one section so that they can deal with them.

It may not be the desire of the Government to accept that, but I contend that that is clearly in order. Erskine May, Nineteeth Edition, page 527, says on the transfer of clauses that a clause or series of clauses may be transferred on motion from one place in the Bill to another place specified in the motion. What we have done is move in that way. I will deal with the amendments one at a time. There is no attempt on our part to alter any of those amendments but simply for ease of handling to move those clauses to another part of the Bill.

Let me give an example. I will not read it into the record, but Motion No. 2, the base scale amendment, is identical to a portion of Clause 34(1) of the Bill. We are simply suggesting that it be moved. Motion No. 3 deals with CN adjustments. The content of what we have said capsulizes what was contained in Clause 56(1) of the Bill. It does not alter it in any substantive way. It does not require any additional expenditure by the Crown. It is simply another way of defining the same circumstances. I suggest there is nothing out of order in that. Motion No. 4, the cost change per tonne, is in essence exactly identical to Clause 54(1). We are asking only that it be moved from where it now is to another part of the Bill. Under Motion No. 5, Crow benefit, we have in essence taken exactly what appears in the definition of Crow benefit and moved it to another part of the Bill, consistent with our view that those definitions should all appear in one place.

Motion No. 12, final adjustments, similarly, with minor word changes, does not alter the purpose, nor does it impose upon the Crown any additional expenditure, but simply moves the clause with some word alterations. The word alterations do not in any way negate the principle of the definition that exists in the Bill. Neither does it require the Government to spend more. In fact, it may well require the Government to spend less.

Under Motion No. 15, interim adjustment, the same is true, and minor word changes exist only because our motion did not include report stage amendments. Under Motion No. 17, the rate of cost change, the same situation prevails. The substantive part of what we have done is move that definition from one place in the Bill to another place in the Bill.

I suggest in tentatively ruling that they are unacceptable—they may well be unacceptable to the Government and the House of Commons in a substantive sense, but in terms of their procedural acceptability—they do nothing to alter the purpose of the Bill as set out in the long title. They do nothing to alter the method to be used in determining what the interpretation is intended to serve. I would ask that those amendments in particular be allowed to stand for that reason.

In addition, I ask that it be ruled that it is appropriate. As I suggested, according to Erskine May it is appropriate for Members to move a motion, which we would be doing, a clause of this Bill, in this case that section of a clause, to another part of the Bill. I do not see that there can be anything out of order in that.

I now want to turn to Motions Nos. 6, 7, 8, 11, 12 and 67. They are motions that in one way are grouped for purposes of the interim ruling of the Speaker. They have been ruled by the Chair in the interim ruling to be substantive changes in many instances to interpretative clauses. I will deal with them one at a time because it is necessary to do so. We have made no substantive changes.

Motion No. 12, for example, moves the definition to the front, as do the other motions. Motions Nos. 6, 7, 8, 9 and 11 have changes contained within them, but the changes would, in effect, reduce the cost to the Crown. Surely it is within the prerogative of the House of Commons to propose amendments which would reduce the cost to the Crown. That is a well held prerogative of the House.

My colleague the Opposition House Leader indicated yesterday all of the precedents for that. I am sure I do not have to go into them. I am quite confident that the Chair is as aware as every other Member that a Member of Parliament can rise at any time on any financial Bill and move that the amount be decreased. They certainly may not rise as per the Standing Orders of the House of Commons—

Mr. Nielsen: You cannot do it on second reading.

Mr. Deans: My colleague says you cannot do it at second reading, but you certainly do it when those clauses are rightfully before the House of Commons, and the clauses would be before the House of Commons were they to be ruled admissible at this point in time. We are not arguing that we should have the right to increase the Crown's financial prerogative. We are not arguing that what we have proposed here will require upon the Crown an additional tax or levy of taxation. It will not require the Crown to spend more public moneys than are outlined within the Royal Recommendation. In many instances, if they were to be carried by the House after substantive discussion, they would in fact reduce the cost to the Crown. I claim that is quite clearly within the prerogative of the Opposition, or for that matter within the prerogative of the Government or any Government Member. I am not going to read the authorities in.

The example I would use so that the Speaker can check it is Motion No. 9. It applies to all of them, I believe. Motion No. 9 limits the liability to the Government for grants to the railroads. It modifies the existing wording, but it is not contrary to the long title. It is not even contrary to the content of the Bill, regardless of how you define the Bill. It says that there can be grants, but it is not necessary that the grants be made. We believe that should be deemed to be admissible. Whether it is acceptable subsequently in the debate to the House as a whole is a question that can be dealt with later, but it certainly should be admissible.

It has been indicated that Motion No. 12 is deemed to be contrary to the intent of the Bill, yet in this instance again all we are doing is relocating existing wording within the Bill. I will not make the argument; it has already been made. We see no reason why we cannot do that.

Motion No. 13 has to be considered in consequence with Motion No. 14. I have argued that Motion No. 14 is perhaps not acceptable. I am not going to make that argument, but if it were to be decided by the Chair that my argument is not one that can be sustained, then I suggest that Motion No. 13 carries the same obligation; and if Motion No. 14 is therefore acceptable, then Motion No. 13 should at least be offered for debate. That alternative plan, if you will, does not go beyond the Royal Recommendation for Motion No. 14 nor does it go beyond the definition or the long title of the Bill. If one is to be acceptable, then both should be acceptable. If one is ruled out, then I concede that both should be ruled out. I believe that that argument is important.

I now deal with Motions Nos. 15, 16 and 17. Motion No. 17 merely moves the definition to the front of the Bill. It is unamended and contains the exact wording as contained in the Bill previously. Motion No. 16 moves and amends the definition but it is an important definition. We have apparently agreed in principle that the definition of the purpose of the Bill is, as I have said, "An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of grain".

This motion quite clearly falls four-square within that particular purpose as set out in the long title. This motion deals with shipper costs and there are a number of amendments before us that deal with shipper costs, some moved by the Government and others alternatively moved to try to provide a different way of dealing with what is supposed to be the principle of the Bill.

We are not suggesting that we should deal with other than what is contained in the Bill. We are not suggesting the Government should spend more money than the Royal Recommendation permits. We are suggesting that the money should be spent differently. It would seem to us that if we are not exceeding the Royal Recommendation and if we are clearly within the scope of the Bill in terms of its long title, then an amendment to change the way in which the money is spent should at least be in order for debate. Again, whether or not it is acceptable in principle by the Government or by anyone else is a question to be decided by a vote of the House of Commons, but it is a question that can only be decided by a vote of the House of Commons.

Our argument on Motion No. 16 is clear. We have offered, within the scope of the Bill and within the Royal Recommendation, another way of accomplishing the purpose of the Bill as set out in its long title and also as set out in debate. We are offering another way to achieve the same objective, albeit perhaps with less onerous consequences.

We believe that the decision to be made in this case is a political decision and should be made in the House of Commons after proper debate. It is not one that should be made as a Preliminary ruling of the Chair to the effect that the motion is or is not within the scope of the Bill or that the motion does or does not infringe upon the Royal Recommendation. In our judgment, it clearly does neither of those two things.

In the interim ruling it has been suggested that Motion No. 18 is a substantive interpretation which again goes beyond the scope of the Bill. It is actually intended to limit the Government's prerogative to regulate system participants. Quite clearly, the Government has offered one way in which to solve what it believes is a problem. We have offered an alternative way. Our alternative way is again within the scope of the Bill in terms of the definition contained in the long title of the Bill. It is clearly within the scope of the Bill if one takes into account the Royal Recommendation.

Motion No. 18 narrows the scope of the Bill. It therefore reduces the cost but it does not introduce any new factors into the Bill. However, it does try to define more clearly who will be the recipients. In our judgment, it clarifies the intent of the Bill.

We initially considered Motion No. 18 to be a housekeeping amendment. We believed that it fell into that category and we were a little surprised to find that it was more than that. However, we do believe that it is again an amendment that must be decided politically. As long as it clearly deals with the same subject matter and not with other legislation and does none of the other things that I have referred to, it is a motion that should be considered as being within the scope of the Bill.

The suggestion has been that Motions Nos. 19 and 70 go beyond the scope of the Bill and are contrary to its purpose. We would make an argument that applies in every instance. To be beyond the scope of the Bill, we must deal with something other than that which is contained in the long title of the Bill. To be beyond the scope of the Bill, we must offer alternatives that are not envisaged as being practical and possible within the definition as set out in the long title of the Bill. We have not done that. We have said that among the many things that could be done with this legislation, our Motions Nos. 19 and 70 should be considered as things that could possibly be done.

Again, Motions Nos. 19 and 70 do not require that the Government spend more money than is allowed by the Royal Recommendation. In fact, if implemented, they would require that the Government spend less than allowed by the Royal Recommendation. Our argument is again quite clear, as it was on the previous motion. While I do not deny for a moment that it is an amendment of consequence, it is one that will have considerable force and effect on the people who will be required to change as a result of the Bill. It is still quite clearly within the scope of the Bill and is still quite clearly within the Royal Recommendation. I would argue that those are the two primary tests of whether or not an amendment is admissible for the purposes of debate and disposition by the House of Commons.

I turn now to Motions Nos. 20, 21, 22, 23, 36 and 41. Motion No. 20 deals with the disposition of the Dominion coal lands. I am at a loss to understand why it goes beyond the scope of the Bill. The disposition of the Dominion coal lands is clearly mentioned in the Bill. The ultimate disposition of the Dominion coal lands is not spelled out, but again, I argue that our amendment simply indicates that if we are to dispose of the Dominion coal lands, we must dispose of them in such a way as would give the Province of British Columbia the jurisdiction. We do not suggest that anything else should happen.

Quite clearly, the question of the disposition of the Dominion coal lands is contained in the Bill, although I must confess that in this instance I suspect it should not be contained in the Bill. I do not think that that matter has any place in the Bill under any interpretation that any reasonable person would make when analysing the long title of the Bill. I frankly do not believe that the long title in any way has any provision for disposition of the Dominion coal lands. If you recall. Madam Speaker, that is why on numerous occasions I have asked that the Bill be split. Quite frankly, and I have made the argument before, the long title of the Bill has nothing at all to do with the Dominion coal lands. It seemed to me as if it were stuck in there at the last minute by someone who, in the dead of night, thought that he could perhaps sneak it through.

My first request of the Speaker would be that the Speaker determine that that particular section is not appropriately in the Bill. However, if the Speaker were to determine that that is beyond the scope of the Speaker—and I ask that that be looked at—that it does not fall four-square within the long title and therefore ought not to be contained within the Bill, then I would ask that the amendment which we have placed be seen to be appropriate for debate and disposition, in a political sense, in the House of Commons.

I pose two questions for the Speaker in that regard. I would argue in a substantive way that the long title could never, never be seen to include the disposition of the coal lands. If that is beyond the scope, I would argue that Motion No. 20 is quite clearly a motion which should be dealt with politically. It deals with provisions the Government has placed in the Bill. We are suggesting how they should be disposed of. Our suggestion is that it should go to the Province of British Columbia, and I think that option is for the House of Commons to decide. I would ask, therefore, that Motion No. 20 be deemed to be suitable for debate and for disposition by the House of Commons.

I turn now to Motions Nos. 20 and 21. In the Speaker's preliminary ruling on Motion No. 22 the Speaker has indicated a predisposition that the new subsection would enforce conditions and burdens on the Canadian Pacific Railway not contemplated in the Bill, as agreed by the House on second reading. I want to draw to your attention, Madam Speaker, that those kinds of things were not contemplated at second reading because it is inappropriate to contemplate them then. One can deal only with the principle of the Bill at second reading; it is not possible to contemplate the various and many clauses in the Bill at that time.

The principle of the Bill is to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. We contend that one of the two parties to the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain is the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that it is not unreasonable for the House of Commons to want to impose restrictions or to direct how the legislation will affect one of the two major carriers. We were not in a position to debate that at second reading; it is clearly outside the scope of what is acceptable debate at second reading and it is, therefore, only acceptable in the form of an amendment.

It may well be that the amendment we have put before the House is not politically acceptable, but that is not the question before us, as I argued in the case of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy); what is before us is whether it is procedurally proper to place it before the House.

In this amendment we are suggesting that just as there is in place today an agreement between the Government of Canada and the shippers, and just as this Bill intends to alter that agreement, the terms and conditions of the existing agreement and all of the terms and conditions surrounding that existing agreement are subject to discussion here. What was the subject of serious negotiations when the original agreement was entered into surely is a subject for continued negotiation when the change takes place. That is our argument in a nutshell—that if I enter into an agreement, the terms of conditions of that agreement are all on the table if we decide to change the agreement. That may not be the case if we decide to change it in some minor way, but in the case we are changing the agreement substantially.

The Government has decided to abolish the agreement that existed in Canada which required that the Crowsnest Pass freight rate, the statutory grain rate, should be in force and effect in perpetuity. The Government has decided to alter that; it has decided to impose a new regime. We contend that those questions which were legitimately before the participants at the time of the original agreement was signed are now open for debate.

I put it to the House that those participants never envisaged that the perpetuity of the agreement they were signing would somehow or other be abridged or interfered with the House of Commons at a later date, and that is why they made it a permanent feature. Be that as it may, they arranged certain things with the two railroads and with one in particular, CP, in return for an agreement which they signed. We are now dealing with that agreement. I contend that it is not beyond the scope of this Bill and that it is not contrary to the Royal Recommendation because what we are proposing requires no expenditure of any kind. It is not beyond the scope of the Bill to address in the House of Commons, by way of amendment, changes which would conform with the intent of the existing legislation to preserve the costs for western farmers to a level deemed at that point in time, to be acceptable.

I would therefore argue that on Motion No. 22 the Speaker agreed that a decision is in order on whether some compensatory factor by way of claim by the people of Canada upon the railroads, which were given significant benefits at the time they agreed to carry grain at a statutory rate should be made. A compensatory clause is not out of order.

Motion No. 23 follows on Motion No. 22 and therefore requires no further elaboration; the same basic argument would hold.

Motion No. 36 and Motion No. 41 prohibit the Administrator from regulating bodies other than railways. We believe it is legitimate to place a restriction and we do not see why the House of Commons would be denied the right to move amendments which would restrict the scope of the Administrator. It may be that from the point of view of the Government or the Official Opposition that is not desirable, but it is not what we are arguing today. What we are arguing today is that it is appropriate that it be placed before the House of Commons.

Motion No. 36 and Motion No. 41 are consequential amendments and flow from Motion No. 18. If my argument on Motion No. 18 is acceptable, then I would argue that the arguments on Motions Nos. 36 and 41 are equally acceptable. They limit and narrow the scope of the Administrator to oversee only the railroads.

• (1240)

Mr. Benjamin: I beg your pardon; I am wrong.

Mr. Deans: My colleague now tells me he is wrong, so I will go back to it.

Mr. Benjamin: It was not No. 29 that was deferred.

Mr. Deans: In any event, I will come back to that. Motions Nos. 36 and 41 should be in order, just as Motion No. 18 should be in order. Again, I do not see how it could not be the prerogative of the House of Commons to offer amendments which narrow the scope of an Administrator who is to be defined in the Act and given responsibility for administering this Act. It may be that it is politically unacceptable. It may not fall within the view of the governing Party, or even the Official Opposition, that the administrative function should be narrow, but in our view it should be. We are not altering in any way the clear mandate set out in the long title; neither are we increasing the charge to the public purse. We are simply saying that the responsibilities which have been given to the Administrator are too broad and we would like to narrow them down a little. Perhaps we would like to narrow them down substantially, but the decision about whether or not they should be narrowed down is not a decision of admissibility, surely, it is a decision of politics, and we would argue that that is in fact the case.

I would go back for a moment to Motion No. 28. What we have said is that the Grain Transportation Committee should be made up somewhat differently from what the Government has suggested. We are not saying it should not exist, becaue we know we could vote against it. We are not saying there should be an additional charge on the public treasury, because it will be made up of similar numbers. We are saying it should be made up differently, that the participation in the actual committee itself should be a different participation from the one offerec by the Government.

It seems to this Party that that is a legitimate matter for debate. It is not a question of rewriting the Bill, of deviating from the long title or charging to the Government substantial new sums of money. At the moment I am sure the Government does not know exactly how much the Grain Transportation Committee will cost in any event. That is going to be very difficult to determine at this point in time because the cost will fluctuate. We are suggesting that an amendment to the numbers, and as to who should participate as full members, is surely clearly within the scope of the Bill. It is clearly within the definitions envisaged by the long title and is certainly not an infringement on the financial prerogatives of the Government as contained in the Royal Recommendation.

We would argue, therefore, that that amendment, again like the others, should be decided here. It is up to the Government if it does not want it, but it is certainly legitimate to say that instead of having a representative from this place, there should be a representative from another place, and that is what we are saying. We believe that motion should be considered and allowed to stand.

Motions Nos. 67 and 70 are consequential again and will depend upon your ruling on Motion No. 19. I just bring that to Your Honour's attention.

Motion No. 89 is a substantive motion in the sense that it is difficult to explain. Perhaps I might, if you will allow me, have my colleague from Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) explain exactly how that works, if that is acceptable. It will not take my colleague a great deal of time, but the subject is technical. I do not want to pretend for one moment that every technical part of this Bill is carefully tucked away in my memory; it is not.

Motion No. 151 brings in the question again of the British Columbia Railway and whether or not it should be considered as part of the grain transportation system. I suggest that quite clearly it is a part of the transportation system for the movement of grain. It is already a part of the transportation system for the movement of grain. The Bill purports to be an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. It cannot be done properly without the British Columbia Railway being seen to be part of it.

We are suggesting, first of all, that our amendment is not beyond the scope of the Bill. Being beyond the scope would take it completely out of the question as to whether or not it deals with the transportation, shipping and handling of grain. We contend further that it would not cost money. Therefore, in that way it does not fall outside the Royal Recommendation. We are trying to spread the benefit available, if you will, among the farmers to the shippers who are legitimately in the business of shipping western grain. They are not going to ship any more grain if the British Columbia Railway is included; they will still ship the same amount. Therefore, the charge on the public treasury will be no more than the charge is today. We are suggesting, however, that since the British Columbia Railway is legitimately part of the over-all and integrated railroad system, transporting grain on the British Columbia Railway should be seen as acceptable within the terminology and definitions of this legislation.

I reinforce the point by asking this: If we are going to ship grain in western Canada—and I do not know what the amount will be—how will we ship it? It does not alter the amount we ship; the amount we ship is determined by the marketplace. If it is shipped on Canadian Pacific or Canadian National, it qualifies under this legislation. If it is shipped on the British Columbia Railway, it does not. We suggest that this is a political decision. This motion is clearly within the scope of the Bill. It is clearly not an infringement on the Royal Recommendation. It is, therefore, clearly in order.

I believe, in fact, if I may be so bold, that we could mount a substantive argument which would be acceptable in the final analysis, given the opportunity in the House of Commons. I see the former Minister of Transport sitting nodding his head. I do not know if he is nodding in agreement or whether he is simply amazed. I am not going to ask him. However, I would like to put to him—

Mr. Pepin: I am just wondering if the BCR want to be included.

Mr. Deans: Of course it did. It wants to be involved.

Mr. Benjamin: You should have thought about all this when you drafted the Bill.

Mr. Deans: I think the Minister, given the opportunity, would agree with my argument that shipping of grain would not increase or decrease by including by the British Columbia Railway. Therefore, there would be no additional charge.

Mr. Pepin: BCR already benefits, as you know.

Mr. Deans: I have dealt with the Dominion coal lands question and that is left to your determination. There are two matters before you which can be dealt with, I believe, quite reasonably. Motion No. 173 amends the Schedule and includes new crops. I believe the difficulty with which the Chair and its advisers are faced would be that it would add to the cost as defined in the Royal Recommendation. I believe that may be their problem.

We contend that this is not the case. We are saying that farmers can only use their land for one crop. Therefore, if product "A" is eligible for benefits but product "B" would grow better and there is a market for it, then the farmers should be encouraged to grow product "B".

• (1250)

Mr. Evans: Why do you think we are getting rid of the Crow?

Mr. Benjamin: That does not do it. You do not understand.

Mr. Deans: Simply put, this amendment gives a broader scope to the farmer to determine which of the various products is needed and therefore should qualify under the shipment provisions. If he is not growing grain, then obviously he is not shipping grain. However, if he is growing another product for which there is a market, then quite clearly it can be shipped and will take the place of the grain. It is just that simple. We are not changing the amounts of money, neither are we moving outside of grain. I want to make that point forcefully. We are still talking about grain when we are talking about amendments. Therefore, we urge that you recognize, Madam Speaker, in your reconsideration, that Motion No. 173 should be determined politically rather than on a technical admissibility basis.

Finally, Motion No. 174—

Mr. Benjamin: Go another eight minutes.

Mr. Deans: My colleague says go another eight minutes. You can tell I am going as fast as I can.

Motion No. 174 changes the title of the Bill for the very reason that you, Madam Speaker, were confused about in your third preliminary ruling. We have argued from day one that the purpose of the Bill was to eliminate the statutory freight rate and put in place a new regime. It may also be interpreted as having something to do, substantively or otherwise, with the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. But nowhere in the long title of the Bill is there any mention at all about the intention of the Government to abolish the statutory grain rate. We find that most objectionable and we think the long title should reflect what is truly in the Bill.

Not only that, but in every single reference, whether one looks at Erskine May or back to British parliamentary tradition, you can find quite clearly that it says categorically that it must reflect what is contained in the Bill. I contend, Madam Speaker, there is no way that any person of average intelligence reading the long title of this Bill—and I put it to you for the last time, "an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof"—could interpret that to mean that we were abolishing the statutory grain rate.

So I return to the argument I made on the Dominion coal lands. Either the long title is wrong and out of order, or the Bill is wrong and out of order. I contend the Bill does not reflect what the long title says and I ask again that the Speaker make a decision on whether or not the Government can proceed with the Bill, given that the long title does not reflect those things. I ask that you make a determination that what is in this Bill is inappropriate and unacceptable, unless it is clearly set out having regard to the clearly understandable definitions of what would be acceptable under the long title.

I have argued since day one that the Bill deals with three matters and that they are unrelated. It deals with the setting up of a regime on transportation not only to handle grain but many other things. It deals with the question of the statutory rate and the decision of the Government to move politically to alter that. It deals with the disposition of the Dominion coal lands. Only one of those three things falls under what could reasonably be interpreted as having anything to do with the long title.

I have asked the Government, as you are aware, Madam Speaker, to alter the Bill in such a way as to allow it to be dealt with as it should have been dealt with. We in this Party are prepared to deal with the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, and similarly but separately deal with the question of the disposition of the Dominion coal lands. We are prepared to debate the question of the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. But we do not believe this Bill is proper. We consider the long title as being abrogated because of the Government's insistence on dealing with three unrelated matters.

I ask you, Madam Speaker, to look at the precedents involved and determine whether in fact what we now have before us is properly before us.

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, I would ask if it would be in order now to respond to a point raised by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) yesterday regarding the Royal Recommendation.

Some Hon. Members: One o'clock.

Mr. Evans: Could I call it one o'clock, Madam Speaker?

Madam Speaker: Order. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2.05 p.m.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. When the House adjourned at one o'clock, the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) had the floor.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the reason for my intervention at this time on the arguments with regard to procedure relates to an intervention made yesterday by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) with regard to whether or not Royal Recommendation had been provided in the required form for some of the Government's amendments. In his intervention, the Hon. Member relied upon two citations from Beauchesne to support his argument that a Royal Recommendation had indeed not been appropriately given. He first quoted Citation 548, found at page 183 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, which states:

> Amendments to Bills are out of order if they attempt to substitute an alternative scheme to that proposed with the Royal Recommendation. Journals, April 11, 1939, p. 325.

That particular citation was brought into conjunction with our Standing Order 79(6), which indicates:

> When a recommendation of the Governor General is required in relation to any amendment to be proposed at the report stage of a bill, at least twenty-four hours written notice shall be given of the said recommendation and proposed amendment.

The Hon. Member then said: "Citation No. 548 in Beauchesne's gives me some difficulty in that it appears to contradict Standing Order 79(6)". I would agree that the interpretation he gave to Citation 548 does indeed contradict Standing Order 79(6). The solution to his dilemma was apparently found as he went back to Citation 540 of Beauchesne, which deals specifically with the Royal Recommendation and states:

> The guiding principle in determining the effect of an amendment upon the financial initiative of the Crown is that the communication, to which the Royal Recommendation is attached, must be treated as laying down once for all—

The Hon. Member made much of the words "once for all". It continues:

> —(unless withdrawn and replaced) not only the amount of the charge, but also its objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications. In relation to the standard thereby fixed, an amendment infringes the financial initiative of the Crown not only if it increases the amount but also if it extends the objects and purposes, or relaxes the conditions and qualifications expressed in the communication by which the Crown has demanded or recommended a charge.

The following is the important part of the citation which the Hon. Member perhaps did not notice to a proper extent:

> And this standard is binding not only on private Members but also on Ministers whose only advantage is that, as advisors of the Crown, they can present new or supplementary estimates or secure the Royal Recommendation to new or supplementary resolutions.

The problem in this particular case is that when Beauchesne's Fifth Edition was brought out in its revised form, the editorial changes were lacking in this particular area. Citations 540 and 548, referring to the nature of the Royal Recommendation, continue to put forward a point of view that reflects, in content, the procedures that were established prior to 1968 and prior to the time the rules were revised. In other words, when Beauchesne's Fifth came out it did not reflect the changes made in 1968 to the Standing Orders of the House.

Prior to 1968, as we all know, Mr. Speaker, the procedure used with regard to Royal Recommendations dealt with a resolution. A resolution was put; the Minister would stand and put the recommendation. After 1968, this procedure was changed substantially and the present procedure does away with the resolution stage and substitutes the printed recommendation with the notice. Citation 540 at the end, as I mentioned, makes it clear that Ministers may:

> —secure the Royal Recommendation to new or supplementary resolutions.

With the resolution stage abolished, this clearly must now be interpreted to mean that Ministers may obtain new or supplementary Royal Recommendations that are printed on the Notice Paper. Indeed, Standing Order 79(6), which was adopted unanimously by this House subsequently to the original writing of these obsolete citations in Beauchesne, provides exactly for this. The Rule, as I read earlier, is:

> 79(6) When a recommendation of the Governor General is required in relation to any amendment to be proposed at the report stage of a bill, at least twenty-four hours written notice shall be given of the said recommendation and proposed amendment.

This practice, the practice followed in Bill C-155 with regard to the amendments to which the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) made reference and objects to, is the precise procedure that has been followed in such cases for the past 15 years. I suggest the only error that was made is the error made by the Hon. Member for Yukon in not noticing that procedures had changed in 1968 and that these references he cited in Beauchesne were badly out of date.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) gave the Government arguments why Government motions, in our opinion, should be acceptable. I will not repeat those. I just have some concerns about eight consequential motions that I would like to address.

The New Democratic Party attempted in committee, and again today their House leader attempted, to shift a number of definitions from the interpretation clauses No. 34 and No. 54 to the interpretation clause at the beginning of the Bill, which is Clause 2. In committee this was voted through. The majority felt that definitions such as "base rate-scale", "Crow benefit", "estimated eligible costs", are better off in Clause 34, in Part II, where the Bill deals with rates.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the arguments at the moment are as to the procedural acceptability and not as to whether or not the amendments should be in one section of the Bill or another. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary is speaking about whether or not they should be in a different section of the Bill. The argument is really about their procedural acceptability and we remind him of that.

Mr. Flis: That is exactly what I am leading up to, Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member would just hang on to his seat for a while.

Madam Speaker had ruled out of order the insertion of definitions in Clause 2, Motions Nos. 2 to 7 inclusive, Motions Nos. 12, 15 and 17, but she did not rule out of order the consequential deletions of the respective definitions from Clauses 34 and 54 to which I referred earlier, Motions Nos. 60, 62, 65, 100, 103, 128, 132 and 137.

I would like to draw to the attention of the Hon. Member who just intervened that Motion No. 60 is consequential to Motions Nos. 2 and 3; Motion No. 62 is consequential to Motion No. 5; Motion No. 65 is consequential to Motion No. 7; Motion No. 100 is consequential to Motion No. 4; Motion No. 103 is consequential to Motion No. 6; Motion No. 128 is consequential to Motion No. 12; Motion No. 132 is consequential to Motion No. 15; and Motion No. 137 is consequential to Motion No. 17. In the Government's view, the consequential motions should also be ruled out of order.

If the consequential Motions are accepted but the main motions are not, we could have some difficulty later on at debate stage and at division stage. I would ask Madam Speaker to take my intervention into consideration when she is deciding whether or not these consequential amendments should be out of order.

Second, the House Leader for the New Democratic Party went on at great length before we broke for lunch, stating that the coal lands should not be included in the Bill. He was attempting again to split the Bill into three parts. I do not feel that debate has any place here, yet the Hon. Member did not call order when his House Leader was talking about the coal lands.

I would like to draw to Madam Speaker's attention that Clause 62 is included in this Bill because the coal lands were included in the Crow's Nest Pass Act.

Mr. Mazankowski: That has no bearing.

Mr. Flis: The title of the Bill is "An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof". I think this clause pertains to that section of the title where it says "certain Acts in consequence thereof". What Clause 62 attempts to do is to remove the $2 per tonne limit in extracting this coal which, by inference, would indicate and imply that the coal could not be exported. By lifting this $2 per tonne limit the inference now would be that the coal can be exported. Is this not what the Bill is all about—to improve our transportation system so we can improve our exports?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak specifically to Motion No. 1. I deferred to our House Leader yesterday because he outlined in a much broader perspective our Party's position with respect to the Speaker's preliminary ruling. I think it is fair to say, if you have followed the debate, Sir, that the dilemma with which the Speaker and indeed the House is faced is that there seems to be some confusion or lack of clear definition as to the intent and purpose of this Bill. The whole procedural debate has seemed to centre around that point. I think that caused the committee some difficulty as well. I know the distinguished Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport wrestled with that very issue.

It was interesting to note the Speaker's remarks yesterday. She pointed out that she had placed an interpretation on the intent of the Bill and she stated:

> The purpose of the Bill, as I understand it, is to provide for new rates for the movement of grain through the Crowsnest Pass.

● (1420)

In the title of the Bill there is no mention of the Crow's Nest Pass Act or of the Crowsnest Pass freight rates. Bill C-155 simply indicates that it is:

> An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

It is very clear, according to the submission of my House Leader and that of the House Leader of the New Democratic Party, that as long as there is not a clear statement of intent and purpose attached to the Act, it will be very difficult to rule with any degree of accuracy I know the final decision will rest in your hands, Sir, but the fact remains, notwithstanding the ruling being made, one would have to say that under that broad title a lot of latitude should be provided for debating and considering motions which affect the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. Unless there is entertained in the course of report stage a clear statement of purpose and intent, it will be compelling upon you to ensure that the widest possible latitude be allowed in the consideration of the presented motions.

In Motion No. 1, I attempted to define the statement of purpose and intent. It is consistent with the title of the Bill and with the contents of the Bill. Perhaps it is not all-encompassing but it more clearly defines what the Bill is actually setting out to do. It was patterned after a similar statement of purpose and intent contained in corresponding pieces of legislation relating to transportation, namely, the National Transportation Act, which really should be considered as the umbrella piece of legislation under which this Bill will function, and the ports Bill. In my motion I attempted to define a similar statement of purpose. In part my motion reads:

It is hereby declared that an economic, efficient and reliable grain transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest total cost is essential to protect the interests of the grain producers and to maintain the economic well-being and growth of western Canada, and that these objectives are most likely to be achieved under conditions ensuring that

(a) grain producers retain the benefit of a statutory freight rate and are protected from freight rate increases disproportionate to international grain prices;

(b) the railway companies and the Government of Canada accept a continuing obligation to provide producers with a special transportation rate for the movement of grain;

(c) the Government of Canada makes an annual financial contribution to the grain transportation system to ensure fair compensation for the movement of grain;—

It was patterned after the thrust of Section 3 of the National Transportation Act which outlined the stated objective and purpose of that Bill. Unless we pull it all together, unless there is some clause that clearly defines the total objective of the legislation, we could bootleg clauses such as the one under Section 62 which, for all intents and purposes and for all times, transfers the Dominion coal lands to the federal Government and lifts the $2 per tonne freeze.

In terms of the necessity of its being included in the Bill, it is not required from a legal or technical point of view. Unless there is a broad statement of purpose, we could throw in everything but the kitchen sink. I submit that is wrong, but if we get away with it, Mr. Speaker, you will have to broaden the latitude under which you assess the procedural acceptability of the amendments being advanced.

The National Transportation Act is the umbrella piece of legislation under which most transportation laws and Acts are governed. In part, Section 3 reads:

It is hereby declared that an economic, efficient and adequate transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest total cost is essential to protect the interests of the users of transportation and to maintain the economic well-being and growth of Canada, and that these objectives are most likely to be achieved when all modes of transport are able to compete under conditions ensuring that having due regard to national policy and to legal and constitutional requirements

(a) regulation of all modes of transport will not be of such a nature as to restrict the ability of any mode of transport to compete freely with any other modes of transport;

(b) each mode of transport, so far as practicable, bears a fair proportion of the real costs of the resources, facilities and services provided that mode of transport at public expense;—

Then it outlines the essential components of achieving that objective. If we look at the ports Bill which was recently considered by the House in this session, it is consistent with the aims and objectives of the National Transportation Act and the aims and objectives set out in the clause of this Bill. Again under Section 3 there is a statement of purpose and intent which reads:

It is hereby declared that the objective of the national ports policy for Canada is to create a port system that

(a) is an effective instrument of support for the achievement of Canadian international trade objectives and of national, regional and local economic and social objectives;

(b) is efficient;

(c) provides accessibility and equitable treatment in the movement of goods and persons to users of Canadian ports;

(d) provides local port corporations with a high degree of autonomy—

The basic thrust of the new ports policy was to give local ports a greater amount of autonomy to run their own shop, so to speak. It is not only enshrined in the clause but it is enshrined in a statement of purpose and intent. It is very easy for a Speaker or anyone to rule whether in fact we are stepping beyond the bounds of the parameters contained therein.

My statement of purpose enshrined in Motion No. 1 clearly serves to fit that bill, clearly tries to help consolidate all the main objectives the piece of legislation attempts to achieve. I humbly submit that it is totally consistent with the thrust of the Bill and that it should be considered in terms of rounding out a piece of legislation which will be so all-encompassing. Unless you are prepared to accept such a statement of purpose as being procedurally acceptable, I submit the confusion in terms of whether or not an amendment is in order or consistent with the intent will continue to exist.

If you persist in suggesting in your preliminary ruling, Mr. Speaker, that Motion No. 1, which is a statement of purpose, is out of order, it will be important for you to give widest possible consideration to the motions included for debate because of the broadness of this piece of legislation. The sky is almost the limit when it comes to dealing with amendments and debate having regard to the facilitating, shipping and handling of western grain.

Failing the acceptability of Motion No. 1, I humbly suggest and plead with you, Sir, that you give the widest possible latitude in considering the amendments presented herewith, unless the bulk of the amendments go beyond the Royal Recommendation; that is clearly a very different matter. But in terms of going beyond the intent, my humble submission is that the sky is practically the limit when you have a Bill with the title "An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof". That is a very all-encompassing title. As I have reviewed the motions, they are very specifically and directly attached to that broad objective. Moreover, they are pertinent to the clauses of the Bill. I hope you will consider that when you make your final ruling.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I want to comment very briefly on this. From a personal point of view, it makes little difference to me whether there is a preamble to the Bill. I can understand the desire on the part of some Members to have a preamble. In cases of complex legislation, it might be good to have it accompanied by a preamble. It would make more definite the purpose and intent of the Bill, and would make committee work more precise.

In presenting his argument yesterday, the Opposition House Leader clearly stated at page 27832 of Hansard, referring to Motion No. 1:

> It would appear that the precedents would support the Chair. Citation 779 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition reads:
> (2) Substantive amendments to the preamble are inadmissible unless the modification is proposed for purposes of clarification or uniformity.

This is not an amendment to a preamble. He further quoted:

> (3) Where the Bill, as introduced, does not contain a preamble, it is not competent for the committee to introduce one.

I hasten to add that while this is not the committee, it would seem that if it is incompetent for the committee to introduce a preamble, then at report stage it is also incompetent for the House to introduce a preamble. If you read the preamble, it introduces some intention at least that is not within the Bill. I simply make those comments for the benefit of the Chair in making its ruling.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, in committee we discussed at some length Motion No. 1 in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). I wish I had the minutes with me. However, they are available for the Chair and the staff to peruse. Before getting into Motion No. 1, I want to refer briefly now, and I may refer later, to some remarks by the Parliamentary Secretary who emphasized in the long title of the Bill the words "and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof".

It is drawing a very long bow, to put it mildly, to amend an Act allegedly in the long title that is in consequence of the object of the legislation when the Act being amended has nothing to do with the intent, limits or purposes of the legislation. For the Parliamentary Secretary to suggest that the opening up of the Dominion coal lands is in consequence of facilitating the transportation and handling of western grain is totally beyond me. That is why we have argued on many occasions that that section of the Bill is totally unrelated to the long title and should be split.

We in the Opposition had no choice but to move amendments to the Crow's Nest Pass Act of 1897 as it relates to the Dominion coal lands which in a preliminary ruling have been ruled out of order. On this issue we have to go back to square one. All that is in the Act of 1897 relating to coal is the price per ton of the coal. If you, Mr. Speaker, your advisers, the Parliamentary Secretary or anybody else can show me how that relates to an Act in consequence of the facilitating of the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain, I will be a monkey's uncle. I leave that point for now. There may be more said later.

I return to the arguments of the Hon. Member for Vegreville on the matter of a preamble. We have some Bills introduced with a preamble and some without. The argument is not whether a preamble is in order. The argument is whether Motion No. 1 goes beyond the Royal Recommendation and the intent of the legislation.

The Hon. Member for Vegreville has moved an excellent amendment. If it is accepted, we will want to move a lot of amendments to it. The Hon. Member has done something the Government should have done. The long title is only two and one-half lines long. The Government, as the Chair has found, has run all over the lot with this Bill. Whether it is with regard to definitions or dealing with other pieces of legislation, the Government has not done its homework.

At a press conference at the end of May, the Government announced certain amendments to the Bill. When we waltzed into the committee, there sat the Government with egg on its face. It had not done its homework. It had the whole month of June to change the Royal Recommendation and bring in the preamble. If I recall, it was in the month of June that the Hon. Member for Vegreville was asking why there was no preamble. The Government had the whole month of June in which to prepare a preamble and bring in amendments to the Royal Recommendation. Instead of that, it came to committee with a boar's nest of a Bill on which it had not done its homework, and now it is asking the Chair and the Opposition Parties to sit back and correct its errors of omission and commission.

As I read Motion No. 1, Mr. Speaker, it does not go beyond the Royal Recommendation and it does not go beyond the intent of the Bill. It spells out in seven paragraphs the intent of the Bill. I do not know how that can be found to be out of order.

The Chair has said in its preliminary ruling that this motion is an attempt to introduce into the Bill a disguised preamble. In the first place, there is nothing disguised about it. It is my understanding after reading the motion that the Hon. Member for Vegreville is being perfectly straightforward. He is introducing a preamble.

Mr. Mazankowski: A statement of purpose.

Mr. Benjamin: It is a statement of purpose. That is what a preamble is. There is nothing disguised about it whatsoever. Preambles to legislation, are not unusual or to constitutions or a host of other things.

The Chair said in its preliminary ruling that this point is an interesting one. I am glad to know that the Chair is interested because we are as well. As the Chair has said, it is not often, it is true, that an Hon. Member attempts to amend a Bill in such a way as to include a clause setting out the objectives of Parliament in relation to the transportation of grain. However, Mr. Speaker, the long title says that the objective is to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of grain. I do not find that so unusual. The Hon. Member for Vegreville is only enlarging upon what is already in the long title.

In its preliminary ruling, the Chair also went on to say that the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville did not include the normal "whereas" paragraphs. If it will be helpful to the Chair and to the Hon. Member for Vegreville, I would be willing to move some subamendments that would add the "whereas's", which would be perfectly in order under the rules of the House at report stage.

The Chair went on to say that the Hon. Member is attempting to do indirectly what he cannot do directly. Well, Mr. Speaker, I dispute that. The Hon. Member is trying to do directly what the Government could do directly. He does not go beyond the Royal Recommendation or the purpose of the legislation. I believe that preambles should exist, particularly in the most important of legislation.

Mr. Lewycky: We've got one in our Constitution.

Mr. Benjamin: Yes, there is one in our Constitution, as my hon. colleague has said.

Motion No. 1, Mr. Speaker, allows for the inclusion in the legislation of an item which will allow the House to interpret the intent, purpose and royal prerogative of the legislation. Surely the proper forum to discuss and vote upon whether or not there should be a preamble, and the proper forum to discuss what is or is not allowable in that preamble, is the House of Commons.

There are precedents for and against preambles. There are examples in this country and many others, whether it be in Parliament or a portion of Parliament or in any of the host of organizations with constitutions and bylaws, of the existence of preambles. A preamble is almost a prerequisite.

I fail to understand the Chair's concern. A preamble should be admissible as long as it falls within the rules that guide us, the Royal Recommendation and the intent of the legislation. As long as it falls within those bounds, then surely an amendment from either the Government side or the Opposition side to incorporate a preamble, whether it be disguised or not, is perfectly in order.

I am intrigued by the wording used by the Hon. Member in his preamble. I know he has laboured long and hard on this and I think Members from all sides can agree with some parts of his preamble. There are some portions about which there will be debate and amendments, but in that case the House of Commons will sort out what the long time really means, and that is all a preamble is.

Consequential to a preamble, which is nothing more than an extension of the long time of a Bill, are amendments, and I know the Chair will hurriedly rule if an amendment goes beyond not only the long title but the preamble. We will all be guided by that.

I tried to move a motion in committee to amend the long title. My motion was contrary to what the Parliamentary Secretary had to say about the Dominion coal lands having something to do with the handling and transportation of grain. The only avenue to have left is to move amendments regarding the long title of the Bill. We could perhaps move to make the long title read like a preamble. Would it be in order if we were to move an amendment to an amendment here at report stage that would make the long title read like a preamble? I doubt if anyone wants to see that on the front page of an Act of Parliament.

I submit, Sir, and urge upon the Chair that you reconsider most seriously the acceptability of the proposed Motion No. 1 moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville, find that it does not go beyond the bounds of the legislation and that it is nothing more than ancillary to the long title and the purposes of the legislation, because that is all it is.

If there are words, a paragraph, a sentence or a phrase in Motion No. 1 that go beyond the Royal Recommendation or beyond the purpose of the legislation, and it could be argued later, then I am sure the Hon. Member for Vegreville or any of his colleagues would be prepared to move a subamendment to correct it.

It seems to me that a long bow is being drawn, as was the case with the coal lands, and that extra lengths have been gone to to find out why we cannot have a preamble. If the preamble had to do with an operative clause or if it were an operative clause, then I suppose the Hon. Member for Vegreville would not have moved it in the first place. But it is not an operative clause; it spells out in very good language what the long title is all about. Surely the House should be entitled to discuss the pros and cons of what should be in a preamble. I think it opens up an area for the House of Commons. Even if it is a new regime—and I do not think it is—it places a requirement upon Government and Opposition Parties to discuss what the purport of the legislation is.

I close by saying to you, Mr. Speaker, that his is not really an issue requiring details of parliamentary precedents going back to 1066; this is a matter which is properly not only political, but also has to do with good legislative form. There is nothing wrong in the rules, and whether it is a new practice or whether there are precedents to allow it or disallow it is really not the point. This does not do violence to the purport of the legislation, nor does it do violence to the Royal Recommendation. Unless that can be shown, then it seems to me that Motion No. 1 is in order.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring to the attention of the Chair some points on Motion No. 1 and the reasons why we on this side feel it is very important to have a statement of purpose included in the Bill. I will start by referring to the Speaker's initial ruling. On page 3 of the ruling, in the second paragraph, the Speaker states:

> The purpose of the Bill, as I understand it—

I should like to emphasize the Speaker's words "as I understand it".

> —is to provide for new rates for the movement of grain through the Crowsnest Pass.

As simple as that may sound, when you study the Bill and spend four months on it as the members of the Standing Committee on Transportation did, you find that is not its sole purpose.

To go back to previous Acts of Parliament, for instance, when the National Transportation Act was revised and brought in, it started with a preamble. That preamble, compared to the statement of purpose proposed by the Hon.

Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), has been used not only by the people the National Transportation Act serves, but by the courts, by the Canadian Transport Commission, and to clarify and direct the interpretation of every subsequent piece of legislation included in the National Transportation Act.

I should like to go through the purposes that are included in Bill C-155. When we travelled the country we were asked what the Bill is designed to do. When you look at it, you wonder if it is designed to increase rail capacity, if it is designed to move more grain compared to coal, sulphur, potash, lumber and other commodities. We have heard in this House that it is a job-creation Bill. Is the purpose of the Bill to create more employment in Canada? You wonder if it is to establish a new grain administration act, because that is included in it. Is it a Bill to provide more funding only for the railroads? Is it a Bill to make producers pay more for the movement of their products? Other Members have asked if it is to lift the freeze on the Dominion coal lands, or is it simply a Bill to dismantle the Crow rate?

The initial ruling of the Chair says:

—as I understand it, is to provide for new rates for the movement of grain through the Crowsnest Pass.

As I mentioned before, there are several other points included in the Bill. As you review the statement of purpose that the Hon. Member for Vegreville has presented, it has placed what Members on this side consider to be important points before the House.

If there are some things that other Members or the previous Minister of Transport find inconsistent with the objectives of Bill C-155, I should like to hear from them. When you look at the preamble you may find some definitions that are not actually consistent, but everything included in the statement of purpose proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville is consistent with the Act.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think we would find this debate much more helpful if we could stick to what we are supposed to be debating, and that is the acceptability of Motion No. 1. The House Leader for the Official Opposition said on October 6, as reported at p. 27832 of Hansard:

I find myself in agreement with the Chair's concern with respect to Motion No. 1.

I should like Members of the Opposition to give reasons why Madam Speaker should accept the preamble. The House Leader of that Party said that it was not acceptable. I do not think the debate is on whether the Bill should have a preamble or not; that is not what we are debating. The debate is whether Madam Speaker can accept Motion No. 1. The Conservative House Leader said, and I quote him again:

I find myself in agreement with the Chair's concern with respect to Motion No. 1.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I think it is quite apparent that the Speaker made the ruling "—as I understand it, is to provide for new rates". That is the case that is being argued now, with the object of increasing understanding and knowledge so that decisions can be made to put a statement of purpose in the Bill. I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary would agree that the statement of purpose does not go beyond the Royal Recommendation. It does not increase the moneys expended by the Crown and it does not change the intent of the Bill in any way. If in the eyes of the Parliamentary Secretary that statement of purpose does change the intent of the Bill in some way, then I am sure the Hon. Member for Vegreville and other Members on this side would be pleased to hear about it. We would take a very conciliatory attitude toward changes that Members of the Government would like to see included or excluded from the statement of purpose. However, Mr. Speaker, it does not change the Royal Recommendation or the economic package in which it comes, the financial burden on the Crown, and it does not distort the meaning of the Bill, but only in our opinion clarifies and enhances the ability of people to know what the intent of Bill C-155 is. The long title of the Bill is:

● (1500)

An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The first words of Motion No. 1 read:

1. It is hereby declared that an economic, efficient and reliable transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest total cost is essential to protect the interests of the grain producers and to maintain the economic well-being and growth of western Canada—

There is nothing inconsistent in those words. But if one continues to read one sees that it enunciates the other directions which are in this Act. Those of us who have taken part in this debate, and those of us who are in this Chamber now, will not be the only people interpreting this Act. If by some chance this Bill passes, there will be generations of grain producers, railroaders, legal counsel and Parliamentarians all trying to interpret the meaning of Bill C-155. I am not a suspicious man, but the reason could be that the Government would wish to have this open to other interpretations which we have not foreseen. I would not say that of the previous Minister of Transport because he worked on this Bill in a very open and forthright manner. I am sure he would like to see a statement of purpose for the Bill on which he spent 18 months. The previous Minister of Transport, on several occasions when he met with the standing committee, asked us to assist him in defining the purpose of Bill C-155. I see the former Minister of Transport now in the House and he is smiling. The present Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy), who is not in the House, also asked for our assistance when he came to the Standing Committee on Transport. The Government has even presented amendments which have been beyond the scope of the Bill and which have been found in the eyes of the Chair not to be in order. However, through the art of conciliation and through an understanding that we are working as a group to make this Bill the best Bill we possibly can, there will be discussion and debate on other pieces of this legislation which have been found out of order.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that unless the Parliamentary Secretary or the Minister can point out where this motion goes beyond the Royal Recommendation, beyond the expenditures of the Crown, or changes the interpretation and meaning of this Bill, I feel it would be incumbent on us, for the sake of generations to come, to clarify the rationale of Bill C-155 with a statement of purpose. I am certainly waiting to hear from the Parliamentary Secretary. I hope he will consider the feeling people might have when they view Bill C-155 without a statement of purpose. It may well be that once again the Government does not want to clarify it, because the railroads continue to interpret transportation Acts, and if the railroads are allowed to continue to do that, it may well be the reason why the Government does not want a statement of purpose in the Bill. That way the railroads could continue to have their own way with Bill C-155.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Hon. Members will realize I have just this moment occupied the chair. As I understand it, the House is presently considering points of order related to the Bill before the House. Therefore, I would need to understand whether the Hon. Member is rising to debate Motion No. 33 or whether he is rising on a point of order.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): At three o'clock in the afternoon of the Thanksgiving weekend, I do not need a lecture upon what is going on in the Chamber.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member has not received a lecture. I indicated that because I am newly arrived in the chair I would appreciate the Hon. Member's instruction as to whether he is rising on a point of order or is rising to debate Motion No. 33. It was a simple request.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, my understanding is that the Chair is now entertaining interventions with respect to the procedural acceptability of motions. It may well be that in the Chair's judgment and wisdom, the debate being on the first motion presented by the distinguished Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), it may be somewhat improper for me to intervene. If it is quite proper, I assure you that I do know what the Chamber is doing. God knows, at three o'clock on a Friday afternoon of Thanksgiving weekend, everyone here not only knows the purpose for which the House is sitting, but is here because the matter is somewhat serious.

The intervention I would like to make, Mr. Speaker, flows in part from the intervention made by our House Leader yesterday in which he quite clearly, and I believe quite properly, interpreted part of Beauchesne's citations with respect to an amending Bill. My purpose in intervening at this point is to argue that in fact the Bill is not an amending Bill but is a Bill which stands on its own. Beauchesne, in a number of places—and other authorities—quite properly deals with the two different types of Bills. I would like to suggest that Bill C-155 is not an amending Bill but rather is a Bill which stands on its own.

The National Transportation Act, that ancient and not very venerable piece of legislation which governs transportation in Canada today, after 10 or 15 years is somewhat out of date, a fact to which the former Minister of Transport can attest. However, it does have a statement of purpose, a statement of objectives. Whether it is called a preamble, or whatever, I suggest is a matter of semantics. It does have the same intent and the same impact. I suggest that the Bill presently in front of us is a Bill of the same nature as the National Transportation Act itself. In other words, it is a Bill which stands on its own. The National Transportation Act, other than in character, does not refer to this Bill. The National Transportation Act, as the former Minister of Transport is well aware, is one which this Chamber must deal with. Had we, in fact, dealt with any uncertainty with respect to the nature of that legislation, the present Bill in front of us might not have arisen.

There is no doubt, Mr. Speaker, that Bill C-155 does not contain a statement of purpose, nor a preamble. We are basing our arguments in large measure with respect to the extension or the clarification of the long title—which I believe is quite possible on the admissibility of the motion. The motion is one which I believe the Chair must, in some respects, look at closely. It must determine in its wisdom whether or not technically such a motion is or is not admissible, because in the final analysis this Chamber, by unanimous consent, can do whatever it wants.

Before the Opposition House Leader rose to make his main interventions, we knew that the Minister was in fact quite open and amenable to such a statement of purpose. So it is not a question of whether or not there is a strong position for or against the preamble as set out by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) in his amendment.

I might just add that it is not just the National Transportation Act to which I relate this Act as an Act standing on its own. Just recently this Chamber dealt with a new national ports Bill. I contend it can be argued that that was not an amending Bill but rather it stood on its own. In fact it contained a preamble, a statement of purpose, which was the product of debate of an amendment, of consensus and agreement. So it is not in that sense unique. While the Chair's ruling with respect to the introduction of a preamble, when in fact one is not there, may stand as technically correct, I suggest that it does not stand up very well to any other test you want to apply. Mr. Speaker Lamoureux's ruling some ten years ago made this point relatively clear, at least in my judgment. If it has been quoted extensively in this debate I assure the House and the Chair I will not deal with it at any undue length. However, in a ruling at page 395 of the Journals of June 11, 1973, Mr. Speaker Lamoureux, ruling on a motion by the distinguished then Hon. Member for Calgary North, Mr. Woolliams, said:

> In other words, we cannot amend the enacting clause of the bill. What the honourable Member for Calgary North sought to do by amending the enacting clause and making it a combination of enacting clause and preamble is to introduce a preamble which is not before us in the bill. That of course would be a logical consequence of the action of the House if we decided to consider this amendment and if it were passed.

Well, we are not dealing with that, although it would seem quite natural and logical to draw upon the Chair's ruling that that in fact had to be followed. I am suggesting that in my judgment I do not believe it does.

Again, I say this is not an amendment to an existing preamble, it is rather a statement of purposes and objectives which have the effect of expanding the long title. We know from Beauchesne's, Mr. Speaker, that in fact that is possible. The Opposition House Leader, in his quite brilliant summation yesterday of the Chair's position, cited Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, Citation 779, and I will simply repeat it. It reads:

> Substantive amendments to the preamble are inadmissible unless the modification is proposed for purposes of clarification or uniformity. Journals, January 19, 1970, p. 323.

But we are not substantially altering anything; we are clarifying the objectives, usefulness and utility of the Bill itself. I think the failure to do this will call into question down the road how this Chamber and the Ministries will have to deal with the form and structure of motions in front of us. It seems to me this Chamber has no right to dictate the form and structure of matters which will in the future come before us. It seems to me that where there is a doubt, and here there would appear to be a question at least, the Chair might consider in its wisdom the advisability of allowing the distinguished Hon. Member for Vegreville to put his motion so that in fact we might get on with debating it in its proper sequence in time.

I thank you for the opportunity to intervene briefly, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address what I think to be a very important point of order raised by Motion No. 1. If I may, I want to take a slightly different point of view than I think has been put forward to you up to this point. In dealing with legislation there is a well established rule which has been followed across the land that whenever courts are reviewing legislation passed in the House of Commons they are restricted to the words of the legislation. I do not have a list of the authorities, but there are many cases in which courts have held that in determining the meaning or the interpretation to be given to any legislation passed by the House of Commons they are not able to go behind the legislation. Rather, they have to look at the statute and make their interpretation based on that wording.

While the debates of the House of Commons as recorded in Hansard are all very interesting, the courts are not obliged, indeed they are discouraged from looking at that kind of ancilliary matter in order to determine what the proper intention of Parliament is, was or should be. The reason I mention that principle of procedure in the courts is that I think it is very germane when we consider the content of Motion No. 1.

I see at this point in time, Mr. Speaker, that I will have a receptive ear to what I want to say. Not that I would not have had it from your predecessor in the Chair a moment ago, but by the colour of your coat and the way you are listening with such great interest I know you will be very agreeable to and support what I say now.

Mr. Lewycky: Let's have a ruling now.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Now is our chance to take control, boys! Of course, I jest.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, is it proper in this House for an Hon. Member to try to influence the Chair through flattery?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The answer is yes.

I see the Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin) is here today. When he was Minister of Transport I wish he had made the same sort of proposition with respect to this legislation and sent a peace corps out to western Canada rather than to Central America. We would have had far more success in getting a consensus in western Canada.

Mr. Pepin: I was a one-man peace corps.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: A one-man peace corps!

• (1520)

Mr. Speaker, I want to put forth the serious proposition concerning what has been proposed in the amendment of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), that quite a different point of view should be taken by the Chair and, indeed, by Hon. Members on the Government side who appear to be arguing against the acceptance of the motion. It seems to me that there is a kind of reverse onus on the propositions put forward in the motion and upon Government Members. I say that the Hon. Member for Vegreville, in the amendment that is now being discussed, Motion No. 1, has stated some of the essential objectives of the legislation.

If, in fact, Government Members want to stand up and suggest that it is not an objective of the Bill that "an economic, efficient and reliable grain transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest total cost is essential to protect the interest of the grain producer and to maintain the economic well-being and growth of western Canada, and that these objectives are most likely to be achieved under conditions ensuring that, and then going on with the specific items in Motion No. 1, it is up to them to say that that is not the intention of the legislation. They should say that that is inconsistent with what is contained in the legislation. It is that simple. In other words, they cannot have it both ways.

I respect the fact that Madam Speaker raised some concern with regard to the actual nature of the amendment being proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville. In one sense, it was a preliminary ruling. With the greatest of deference let me say that anyone who is of the opinion that the proposals and statements contained in the motion are not fundamental and essential to a proper understanding and interpretation of the Bill is doing a disservice to the legislation. Coming from western Canada, I feel it is absolutely essential for people who will be administering the legislation to have a clear statement of its principles so that when it comes to a question of interpretation of any part, provision, section, sentence, or concept, they will be able to go to the statement contained in the legislation for interpretation.

Is there anyone on the Government side who is prepared to stand up and suggest that it is objectionable to the Government that grain producers should retain the benefit of a statutory freight rate and be protected from freight rate increases disproportionate to international grain prices? Are Government Members suggesting that that should not be part of the objectives of the Bill?

Mr. Flis: What does that have to do with what is before us as to whether the motion is acceptable or not? Speak to what is before the House.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Precisely. Of course, the Parliamentary Secretary is so terribly sensitive. I have now struck a chord with the Government spokesman on the Bill. The Parliamentary Secretary is nervous and twitchy, knowing how it is almost impossible to stand up and simply state a fact as to whether that is the Government's position. If that is inconsistent, let him rise and argue that the amendment bears no relationship to the intentions of the Bill. That is the relevance, and that is what I am discussing. I am suggesting that now is the time for Hon. Members opposite to stand up and tell the people in western Canada, indeed across the whole country, whether or not what is contained in Motion No. 1 is a fair statement of the purposes of the legislation. I am not requesting a long statement, but let the Hon. Member just stand and say, for example, "No. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Government, we do not agree that the railway companies and the Government of Canada should accept a continuing obligation to provide producers with a special transportation rate for the movement of grain". If that is not the Government's policy, let him stand up.

Here comes the Minister now. He is probably the man who is best able to speak on behalf of the Government in the matter. If the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) feels that that is not an objective of the legislation, let him rise during the debate and say so in front of the people of Canada. Then we can understand how the Speaker will be able to suggest that that is not appropriate because it is a new, novel item, that is not part of the intention of the legislation. Then we will not be under any illusions.

The Minister of Transport is ready to be involved in this procedural debate. He should speak to the question as to whether or not the Government believes that the Government of Canada should make an annual financial contribution to the grain transportation system to ensure fair compensation for the movement of grain. Is this part of the intention contained in the legislation? Is it part of the intention of the Government in the legislation that the railway companies provide adequate equipment and plant capacity to move grain efficiently and reliably? I ask the Minister simply to stand in his place and tell me whether it is inconsistent with the Government's intention in the legislation that the natural advantages of western agriculture be recognized and strengthened. I use these only as examples of the very simple way in which the matter could be disposed of and dispatched. I make this proposition to you, Mr. Speaker, as strongly as I can. However, I see that since another person has just taken the chair, my argument will probably have to be repeated.

An Hon. Member: No, don't do that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It was so forceful and effective on the previous occupant of the Chair, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), that I think I was actually convincing him. He was nodding in agreement over everything I was saying.

I put forward a very simple proposition that no one from the Government side has yet been heard to say that there is anything stated in Motion No. 1 which is not in agreement with the intention of the Bill. We can argue in the substantive debate that the Bill does not accomplish the purposes set forth in Motion No. 1.

Mr. Flis: Your House Leader ruled it out of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: My House Leader is an eminent procedural expert. If my House Leader ruled it out of order, that means that he has now been appointed as the Speaker of the House. I do not think that that particular appointment would be one the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) would entertain at this time in history. I make no further comment on that.

Mr. Huntington: Maybe the former Minister will.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I think I have made my case very strongly that there have been no nay-sayers from the Government side. Another item in Motion No. 1 is the provision that the economic distortions within the agriculture sector stemming from a statutory rate will be reduced for livestock products and processed agricultural products, and finally, as contained in subparagraph (g), that grain producers will receive adequate guarantees of system performance and service.

Concerning each of these items to which I have referred, if Government Members feel that such is not a reasonable statement of the purpose of the Bill, they can stand up right now and put an end, I suppose, to the entire procedural debate, by saying, "That is not our intention". However, once one starts off with a proposition that there has been no statement to the contrary by the Government spokesman or by the Minister of Transport, then that should set the ground for the legitimacy of the motion, because one would then consider the very narrow point as to whether or not it should be ruled objectionable because it is, in effect, a preamble.

I want to deal with the secondary point very briefly. Should this be considered as a mere preamble, or should it be considered as a fundamental part of the legislation which, in fact, elucidates the provisions of the legislation for greater clarity? In the old days, as my colleague said, of "8-cylinder words", I was able to charge $75 an hour for this kind of dissertation.

Mr. Pepin: Seventy-five cents.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Now I am in politics and work for something like 50 cents an hour.

Mr. Benjamin: You are like the railways. You are overpaid.

Mr. Pepin: Grossly.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The only time that the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) makes an effective statement is when he is either behind the curtains or in the Members' lobby.

Now that I have established the fact that there has been no objection on the part of the Government to the fundamental statements, is it not fair for us to assume that this is an important and justifiable amendment that should be brought forward in this particular legislation? I say to Your Honour, with the greatest of deference with regard to some of the contrary arguments, that, in my estimation, it is the most helpful and reasonable amendment that could be introduced, and we have not heard any objection to its being inconsistent with the intentions of the Government. It is one which will make the legislation far more clear in terms of interpretation by the courts.

I go back to the original proposition. If that is not the case, then it is a very simple matter for Government Members, Members on the Treasury bench, the Minister of Transport, or whoever, to stand up and simply say that this is not an acceptable amendment because these are not the intentions of the Government of Canada with respect to the legislation contained in Bill C-155.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): As was indicated earlier through an exchange between the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall) and myself, I was not clear whether Hon. Members were continuing to rise on points of order. I think the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) has indicated that he wishes to rise on a point of order. Unless Hon. Members indicate that they want to rise on a point of order with those words, it is difficult for the Chair to know. The understanding of the Chair at the moment is that no other Hon. Member, other than the Hon. Member for Assiniboia, wishes to contribute to the points of order. But, of course, I will be guided by any Hon. Member who stands up in that regard.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I wish to rise on a point of order with regard to the acceptability of Motion No. 1 as it relates to Bill C-155. For the record let me read what Bill C-155 states:

> An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Relating to Motion No. 1 put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) in his opening statement on the motion he very clearly indicated, in much the same wording as the Bill:

> It is hereby declared that an economic, efficient and reliable grain transportation system making the best use of all available modes of transportation at the lowest total cost is essential to protect the interests of the grain producers—

Without elaborating on the compatibility of the two statements, namely and on Motion No. 1 and the Bill, the relevance, I would like to go on a little further to subparagraph (a). It deals directly with international grain prices and with freight. It deals with matters relating particularly to grain, its production and transportation. Subparagraph (b) reads:

> (b) the railway companies and the Government of Canada accept a continuing obligation to provide producers with a special transportation rate for the movement of grain.

What could be more relevant to the debate on such a Bill than Subparagraph (b) of Motion No. 1? Subparagraph (c) reads:

> (c) the Government of Canada makes an annual financial contribution to the grain transportation system to ensure fair compensation for the movement of grain.

If there were any motion which would be relevant, Mr. Speaker, certainly it would be the one put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville. Again and again it deals with the product of western Canada with which the Bill deals. The product is named in the Bill as grain, and the amendments are in consequence thereof. This is directly relevant to the Bill. If Motion No. 1 is not relevant, then none of the motions are relevant.

Subparagraph (d) of Motion No. 1 reads:

> (d) the railway companies provide adequate equipment and plant capacity to move grain efficiently and reliably.

And Subparagraph (e) reads:

> (e) the natural advantages of western agriculture are recognized and strengthened.

At this point I would like to read from the policy statement on western rail transportation the words of the former Minister of Transport who said much the same thing as is said in Motion No. 1. He said:

> The Government believes that the arrangements it is now seeking are as important to western economic development in the future as the Statutory rate was in the past. To grain farmers no less than to any group in western Canada, it is essential to have the assurance for the future of a healthy and efficient transportation system capable of moving increasing volumes of their product. In addition, the Government believes that the measures it is proposing will broaden the range of choices open to agricultural producers and thereby lead to a stronger and more diversified western economy.

In a statement of purpose put forward by the former Minister of Transport, we have almost the same wording as that put forward by the Hon. Member for Vegreville in his motion. Subparagraph (g) of Motion No. 1 reads:

> (g) grain producers receive adequate guarantees of system performance and service.

I want to contend that this is most important to the Bill and it is not important to the outcome of the Bill. I would like to say at this point that I believe the committee did an in-depth study and it was dedicated to finding some very serious solutions to problems that exist. We had witnesses' testimony from right across the country, including Ottawa, as to how relevant that is. We heard representation from western producers. In most cases at meetings that I attended the most important thing pointed out was the movement and transportation of grain. At the end of Motion No. 1 we read:

—and this Act is enacted in accordance with and for the attainment of so many of these objectives as fall within the purview of subject matters under the jurisdiction of Parliament relating to grain transportation.

I submit that Motion No. 1 moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville is most relevant. I hope the Chair will see fit to have this become part of the Bill, and that the transportation of grain and the producers affected will benefit most from the work of this House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The understanding of the Chair is that the House may be ready to move to debate on Motion No. 33.

Mr. Benjamin: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I have already indicated that if some Hon. Member rises on a point of order I will recognize him. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Yes, Mr. Speaker. On the preliminary rulings of Madam Speaker on Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, she says specifically that these amendments to Clause 2 of the Bill are substantive amendments. I wish to present arguments to indicate that Motions No. 2 to at least Motion No. 12 are merely housekeeping amendments. If one examines Motion No. 2, one will see that the wording is identical to the wording in the original Bill or perhaps even that in the Bill as reported back. Motion No. 2, as is the case with Motion No. 3, transfers definitions from Clause 34 to Clause 2. They have the same wording. I do not know what is substantive about it.

We argued about and discussed this matter at some length in committee. I refer the Chair to the minutes of the committees' proceedings of August 8 wherein the Chairman indicated that he would like counsel for the officials to answer Mr. Reid's question. Mr. Lefebvre, general counsel for Transport Canada said:

—there are no clear and fast rules as to where you put definitions when you draft a bill. You put them where you think they will be the most helpful, where the access to the definitions will be the easiest. Sometimes, if you look at this particular bill, we have some at the beginning. We judged it best not to put the definitions that are now in Parts II and III at the beginning, for the main reason they are not useful to the first 30 clauses.

Mr. Lefebvre suggested that to have three or four pages of definitions at the beginning of the Bill would make it more difficult to identify the particular definition needed for the first part. Also he suggested that the definitions were quite closely related to Parts II and III and that it would be advisable, when dealing with rates, for example, to have only the definitions that relate to them.

I and others in the committee argued the opposite, that it was more convenient, simpler and easier to peruse the Bill or, if it were to pass, to peruse the Act of Parliament, if we knew we had to go to only one place in the Bill to find the definitions. We argued that it did not matter which clause of the Bill we looked at after Clause 2, that we should only have to go to one place in the Bill to find the definitions. I submit that there is nothing substantive about that. It is purely a matter of opinion as to where is the best place to locate definitions. A number of us in committee took the position that it was better to have them all in the same clause. Counsel for Transport Canada thought it was better to have definitions for each clause at the head of each clause.

The problem we found was that the definition of one clause often applied to another clause and that, in going through the Bill, we were bouncing back and forth between three or four places because a definition which might appear at the head of Clause 3 could also apply to Clause 4 or Clause 5 or even back to Part II. That was another reason for submitting the amendments, which the committee Chairman did not rule out of order.

The initial reaction of the committee Chairman was that we could not move an amendment that amended two clauses at the same time. I was very careful to ensure that my amendment in committee and my Motion No. 2 amended only one clause. Also, in committee we made it clear that should my amendment to consolidate the definitions in Clause 2 carry, at a later proceeding in committee I would move a consequential amendment deleting the definition from Clause 34, Clause 54 or wherever else it might appear.

According to the committee minutes, when the Chairman read my amendment to Clause 2, the following exchange took place:

MR. BENJAMIN: That is in order.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is in order.

MR. BENJAMIN: I see.

THE CHAIRMAN: The definition of "base rate scale" and the definition of "CN adjustment".

MR. BENJAMIN: And I guarantee I will move the consequential amendment when we get to the other part of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN: I thought you would.

How can anyone construe that Motions Nos. 2 to 19 are substantive? They only move a definition from one part of the Bill to another. It escapes me completely. Where my motions move exactly the same words from one part of the Bill to another, I submit they are in order. They are not substantive. They are purely housekeeping, and it is the most convenient and easiest way to find definitions in a Bill. Counsel for Transport Canada and I disagreed, but that did not mean my amendments were out of order. In fact, the committee Chairman allowed them.

If any of the motions from Motion No. 1 to Motion No. 19 or thereafter change the words of the definition in transferring it from one clause to another, then of course the Chair would have to consider whether or not they exceed the Royal Recommendation or go beyond the intent of the Bill. In that event the Chair will have to decide which of my motions affecting definitions not only transfers them from one clause to another but substantively changes the wording. Then we would need to argue whether or not they are substantive changes and go beyond the intent of the legislation or of the Royal Recommendation. Of course, this would only apply in the case where my motions made a change in the wording of the definitions. Even if we have made a change in the wording, if any can be found, then it must be pointed out where they are in violation of the Royal Recommendation and the intent of the legislation or where they go beyond the intent of the legislation. Should the Chair feel in a preliminary way that that is the case with those motions, naturally we would want to make proposals or argue as to any changes in wording.

I was somewhat taken aback with the amount of time spent on, and attention given to, Motion No. 2 by both the Chair and the House Leader for the Official Opposition. All it does is take some words out of Clause 34 and put them in Clause 2. For some reason that has not been explained to me, the Chair, its advisers and the House Leader for the Official Opposition are excited about that. I do not understand all the excitement and fuss.

The argument in committee was to do it one of two ways. The definitions would be all in one clause, so that people would know where to find them, or scattered throughout several clauses. There are good arguments for both sides. We took the view, and hence my amendments in committee and consequently the same amendments at report stage, that for convenience, good housekeeping and orderliness in a Bill all the definitions should be in one clause. It could be called the definitions clause. The definitions would all be in one place. When looking at subsequent clauses in the Bill, you would know where to find the definition because it would state "as defined in Clause 2". It would not matter whether you were dealing with Clause 34, Clause 54 or the Schedule. We tried bringing in a motion which would transfer the definition of grains from the Schedule to Clause 2. Schedule I defines grains. I thought definitions were to be in the Bill, not the Schedule.

The argument is whether or not definitions should be located in one clause. In subsequent clauses it would state "as defined in Clause 2". Without this, in Clause 34 there could be a definition affecting Clause 54. You would have to bounce back and forth in the Bill. Surely that is not good housekeeping. It is not an orderly manner in which to draft legislation.

When the committee was still hearing witnesses, and in particularly during the clause-by-clause study in the past few weeks of our deliberations, it became apparent that the Government had not done its homework, not only on Royal Recommendations but on its own amendments. It had not done its homework on the drafting of the Bill. It was determined to meet the June 30 deadline, then the September 12 deadline and then the Thanksgiving weekend deadline. I do not know what the next deadline will be.

I remind the Parliamentary Secretary of the definition of a deadline. In the North American vernacular, a deadline means a line is drawn and if you cross it, you are dead. I remind the Parliamentary Secretary that if he insists on crossing that line he will be dead, politically that is.

Why all the fuss about these amendments? They merely ask the House to decide on the most orderly, convenient and practical way to house the definitions in the Bill. We submit that all the definitions should be in one clause and that all subsequent clauses have the reference "as defined in Clause 2". The definitions would be in alphabetical order in the marginal notes. Why all the fuss? Why is the Chair so concerned about moving a paragraph from one part of the Bill to another? I do not understand why the Chair is upset.

How can that be construed as substantive? Substantive means substantial. Substantial mean there have to be some kind of changes in the wording that would make it a substantive amendment. There is nothing in these motions which transfer definitions that is substantive.

The Chairman of the committee allowed the committee to deal with those motions. How they were dealt with in the committee is irrelevant. The point is they were in order in the committee and should be in order in this House. This is a housekeeping matter, how a Bill should be consructed and whether the subjects should be located in one part or another. It is not substantive.

Motions Nos. 2 to 19, 59, 64, 66, 67, 71, 129, 134, 139 and 145 which deal with definitions are listed by Madam Speaker when she gave her reasons for the unacceptability of certain motions. The motions she has listed do not make any change in the wording. They do nothing more than transfer the position of a definition from one place in the Bill to another. They are not substantive. This is nothing more than an attempt by the Government, counsel for the Department of Transport, and Members of the Opposition to arrive at a conclusion as to where definitions should be located in the legislation. That is all there is to it. If any of the motions enumerated by Madam Speaker in giving her reasons for unacceptability contain changes of wording as well as transfer a definition from one part of the Bill to Clause 2, we will want to discuss with the Chair whether those motions are substantive, go beyond the intent of the legislation, or exceed the Royal Recommendation.

We may be wrong in some of those, but I do not know whether the Chair has sorted out which of these motions makes no changes in wording and which makes a change in wording. I would be grateful to have from the Chair a list of the motions transferring definitions from Clauses 34 and 54 to Clause 2. Also, I would be grateful to have from the Chair a list of those motions which change the wording of the definition, and then I would like to have reasons from the Chair for their unacceptability, and I would want to discuss this at an appropriate time two or three days hence.

• (1600)

In the meantime, Sir, as far as Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 are concerned, they use the same wording as used in Clauses 34 or 54, and we have only moved to have those words transferred from those clauses to Clause 2 in order to consolidate all the definitions into Clause 2. I am anxious to hear what is substantive about those motions and I am anxious to find out why they are considered substantive. I have not heard any reasons yet but have only heard the straight statement that they are substantive. I would like to know how, since when and why.

Those motions are not substantive. They were not substantive in committee, and, goodness knows, we discussed a whole series of motions for some period of time in committee. We had input from counsel for the committee, counsel for the Ministry of Transport, and we had the decision of the Chairman of the committee. We had discussion in debate, voted on the amendments and dealt with them one way or another.

The motions that are here now at report stage were moved in an attempt to continue to provide for a consolidation of definitions under Clause 2 so that the definitions are not scattered throughout the whole Bill.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that my arguments have proved convincing. I hope that Hon. Members of the Official Opposition and Hon. Members on the Government side will agree that a great deal more has been made of this than was necessary in the first place. The very worthwhile and worthy Chairman of the committee felt that these motions needed to be dealt with, and we dealt with them. I am not sure if I won or if I lost on some, all or any of them, but that is not the point.

In committee, our legal advisers did not find these motions substantive. They said that there was no hard and fast rule as to where definitions should be located. There was agreement about that. Even though there may have been disagreement about the intent of my amendments, there was no disagreement about the fact that the definitions could be located anywhere in the Bill.

We are arguing that all of the definitions should be located in Clause 2 and that every clause thereafter should say, "as defined in Clause 2," which would create a simple, convenient, expedient and well drafted piece of legislation.

I might say, Mr. Speaker, that one of the things that certainly annoyed all the Members on the Opposition side, and even annoyed some of the Government Members in committee, was the fact that we were presented with a legislation that was poorly drafted in terms of its wording and the location of its words, leaving aside any substantive arguments about the Crow rate or anything else. The legislation was a botched-up job.

I certainly resented, and I believe that some of my colleagues in committee also resented, that we were trying to rewrite a Bill that the Government should have written properly itself before it was even presented to Parliament. The Government did not do that. It blew it. Once we got into the nitty-gritty of clause-by-clause examination of the Bill, I am sure the former Minister of Transport knows well that there must have been—and if there was not there should have been—some heads rolling in the legislative drafting department of the Department of Transport or perhaps the Justice Department. The drafting department simply did not do a good job, Mr. Speaker.

A great many of the amendments moved by my friend, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), and by myself were moved in an attempt to do two things. One was to get a piece of legislation that would be the kind that would be drafted if he were the Minister of Transport or to get a piece of legislation that would be the kind that would be drafted if I were the Minister of Transport. The other reason for a great many of his amendments and mine was to try to clean up the act of the Ministry. We were stuck with trying to rewrite legislation in a proper form with proper wording. That really should not be the job of the committee and would not be the job of the committee if, prior to the Bill being submitted, the Government had thoroughly considered it, instead of botching it up in a hurried attempt to meet deadlines of June 30, September 12 and Thanksgiving. I would like to tell the Government that if it meets a deadline set at Christmas 1984, it will be lucky.

The Government should stop setting deadlines because the more often it does so and does not meet that deadline, the more often it is dead. It was dead on June 30, September 12 and Thanksgiving weekend. Until it cleans up its act and is prepared to take certain steps with this legislation that Hon. Members of the Official Opposition and my Party may not agree with, it will not meet the Remembrance Day weekend deadline and it will not meet the Christmas deadline.

Every once in a while, there is an exception to the rule. Most of the time, Parties in Opposition know and understand that the Government has the right to govern and it has the right to pass its legislation. In the overwhelming majority of cases of legislation, that happens. Opposition Parties will oppose, will propose and will vote against legislation, but the Government passes 95 per cent of its legislation. However, once in awhile a piece of legislation will come forward that is an exception to this rule, and this is one of those pieces of legislation.

I remind the former Minister of Transport that his predecessor tried to pilot the first grain stabilization Bill through the House. The Government ended up with egg on its face and had to withdraw the Bill. If it had not been for the Opposition Members and eventually even Members on the Government side saying that this was a dumb piece of legislation, we would have been stuck with a grain stabilization Bill that was worse than the one we finally got. The one we finally got is so bad that if one were to apply the same principle to the Unemployment Insurance Act, the person who worked full time would collect the most money. If one were to apply the same principle to the medicare Act, the person who never got sick would collect the most money. That is what we got out of the Government when it passed a Bill that it did not know anything about, and the same is true for this Bill.

Government Members got all excited about Motion No. 2 which proposes a minor amendment, and even the Chair got excited about it. Even the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) got excited about it, and I do not understand why. If the Government will not learn from previous history, it is condemned to repeat history, and that is exactly what it is doing.

I would refer the Chair to all of the motions listed in the first paragraph on page 2 of yesterday's preliminary ruling. I would ask the Chair to examine Motions Nos. 2 to 19 and Motions Nos. 59, 64, 66, 67, 70, 129, 134, 135 and 145. Where those motions refer to definitions and propose to do nothing more than transfer the same wording from one clause to another, I would suggest that they do not make substantive changes but are in order, unless any of those motions not only makes a transfer but changes the wording. We would like the Chair's reasons for ruling that they are substantive and we would like to have them discussed further. In the meantime, Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6—and I have not had time to look at the rest—are not substantive but only transfer identical words from Clause 34 to Clause 2, so why not have them in order?

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I wish to intervene at this point to deal with two specific motions on which Madam Speaker issued a preliminary ruling on October 6 as reported at pages 27824-5 of Hansard.

I wonder what might happen if some of the arguments that have been brought forward were to prove persuasive and cause the Chair to have second thoughts about the ruling. However, as they are preliminary or tentative rulings, I shall proceed with my argument.

I was very impressed with the line of argumentation on Motions Nos. 165 and 166 made by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) this morning. I wish to reinforce his line of argument. The Speaker said that Motion No. 166 goes beyond the scope of the Bill and Motion No. 165 is contrary to the principle of the Bill. In one case I feel the argument could be built up a little more strongly than in the other, but the case put forward this morning by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain was very convincing.

I wish to speak to the tentative ruling by Madam Speaker at p. 27825 of Hansard on Motion No. 165, which she ruled as being contrary to the principle of the Bill. As was mentioned this morning, the principle of the Bill is outlined in the full title, "An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof". Motion No. 165 is intended to replace Clause 62 with different wording and, as it now stands, Clause 62 is aimed at amending certain other legislation. To that extent at least, changes to that clause would fall within the principle of the Bill, namely, "—to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof".

There is another little niggling thing that is suggested to me in the ruling that it is contrary to the principle of the Bill. I should like to do some hypothesizing about what might happen in the future. What if Clause 62, which has to do with the Dominion coal lands and which in its current form in the post-Committee version of Bill C-155 authorizes "Her Majesty in Right of Canada" to do certain things—what if that clause were to be accepted and Her Majesty in Right of Canada were to hold, dispose of or otherwise deal with those lands by returning them to British Columbia as Motion No. 165 suggests? In other words, at the present time we cannot deal with that motion because the notion is that it has changed that amendment substantially and therefore is contrary to the principle of the Bill. What if the Government should subsequently decide to do just exactly that very thing? Would that become ultra vires by virtue of the Speaker's ruling during the debate? Does that ruling about the principle of the Bill extend into the actions the Government may take subsequently in implementing the wording of Clause 62 as it stands that "—Her Majesty in Right of Canada may hold, dispose of or otherwise deal with the land selected—"?

Suppose the Government did decide in its wisdom—and I would consider it wisdom—to cause this land to revert to British Columbia, would that be contrary to the principle of the Bill? If not, I suggest that the ruling itself is incorrect in that it cannot be contrary to the principle of the Bill if the Government action were not contrary to the principle of the Bill. Therefore, I feel that Motion No. 165 is not contrary to the principle of the Bill and ought to remain there as the basis for discussion and subsequent decision by the House on whether it is acceptable in place of Clause 62 as it stands.

My other comments deal with Motion No. 166. In this case, at p. 27824 of Hansard the Speaker ruled tentatively that the motion goes beyond the scope of the Bill. I think the scope of the Bill has to be considered in the light of what the Bill sets out to do. Again, I revert to the long title. This Bill sets out to do three things. It is "an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping ahd handling of western grain—", those three things. In addition, it is "—to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof".

Motion No. 166 removes a certain preamble to Clause 62 and would cause the Canadian Pacific Railway to be instructed to "—repay all grants received by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company as a result of the Crow's Nest Pass Act or any agreement made pursuant to any such Act plus interest". As I indicated earlier, the case to be made for the maintenance of Motion No. 166 is not, even in my mind, quite as strong as the case to be made for the maintenance of Motion No. 165. In any event, I think if it were to be left in, it would permit those from British Columbia who have very strong feelings about that particular transfer of land and the resources therein, thereunder and thereabout, to debate strenuously for the reversion of the land to the Crown in Right of British Columbia.

Therefore, I urge the Chair to reconsider the rulings as given on October 6 at pages 27824 and 27825 of Hansard in these two lights, that Motion No. 165, by the submission of a number of Hon. Members, is not contrary to the principle of the Bill and that Motion No. 166 does not go beyond the scope of the Bill as elaborated on by myself and other Hon. Members. I do commend the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) on the excellent manner in which he built that case. I do rely on the Chair, and the table officers, to take these considerations into account in making the firm ruling so that there will be an opportunity to debate this particular matter of the Crow's Nest Act and the amendments thereto.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order to respond to the preliminary ruling of the Chair this morning. I would like to confine my remarks to the grouping of Motions Nos. 2 to 19. It seems to me that it is very difficult to deal in an over-all manner with so many motions. That is basically why I rise. The reasons for ruling motions out of order are fairly straightforward. They usually fall into three or four categories. A motion is usually ruled out of scope, or is proposing a substantive change in the intent of the Bill. Also, motions are occasionally ruled out of order because of financial restraints. They cannot interfere with the Royal prerogative of deciding what sort of expenditures may be made. Another reason which is often put forward is that the motion is contrary to the purpose of the Bill.

I am having great difficulty with the announcement presented to us by the Speaker yesterday, as it applied to Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7. Even though the Chair in its ruling did indicate that some of these motions involved a simple transfer of definitions from Part II and Part III of the Bill forward to Clause 2 which offers definitions for the entire Bill, I fail to understand from the ruling of the Chair how this was out of order. I would like some further clarification on those particular motions because, I remind the Chair, those motions used exactly the same wording that is in the Bill. They do not change the wording. The fact that the spot in the Bill has changed does not change the meaning. It simply makes for a neater Bill. The attempt is to put all of the definitions in the initial part. Clause 2 begins "In this Act," and goes on to state the definitions and what those definitions shall mean. Part II and Part III begin, in each case, "In this Part", and go on to outline those definitions.

I would remind the Chair, therefore, that Motion No. 2 is simply a transfer from Clause 34 forward to Clause 2. Motion No. 3 has again exactly the same wording, being transferred from Clause 54 forward to the appropriate place in Clause 2. Motion No. 4 again has the same wording, being transferred from Clause 54 to Clause 2. Therefore, we have a clear definitions Clause in the Bill. Similarly, Motion No. 5 has the same wording one finds in Clause 34. The proposal is to transfer it under the definitions clause. As well, Motion No. 6 has the same wording as appears in the Bill in Clause 54. The same is true of Motion No. 7 which has the same wording one would find in Clause 54. So there is no change in the intent of the Bill. There is no change to the financial requirements and to the scope of the Bill. Nor, would I argue, is it contrary to the purpose and intent of the Bill. I fail to see, therefore, why those particular motions have been ruled out of order, given the reasons stated in the preliminary ruling which was presented to this House yesterday.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I would like to deal with the preliminary rulings made by the Chair relative to the group of Motions Nos. 20 to 23, 28, 36, 41, 54, 57, 80, 81, 85, 89 and 166 going beyond the scope of the Bill. Considering that we have nothing at all in the title of the Bill which deals with the Dominion coal lands, I can accept, perhaps, that Motion No. 20 is not within the scope of the Bill. However, the portion of the Bill dealing with Dominion coal lands has been accepted. Therefore, it is quite obviously within the scope of the Bill. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Kootenay-East Revelstoke (Mr. Parker) will deal with this subject more thoroughly, but I will say that Motion No. 20 should be recognized as well within the scope of the Bill since this Bill, although it does not say so in the title or in the preamble, does take into consideration those Dominion coal lands.

Motions Nos. 21 and 22 also are amendments dealing with the amount of money which is going to be paid to the railways. It seems quite logical to me, Mr. Speaker, that there should be some give and take in this matter. Is this Bill intended only to decide how much money is going to be given to the CPR or to the CNR, and it will not impose any requirements on those corporations in return? We require service in return. If they do not fulfil that service, we should put some penalties on them. Motion No. 22 really establishes penalties which should be levied against Canadian Pacific Railway if it accepts certain funds without providing the service which is needed.

Motion No. 28, Mr. Speaker, is also in that group. Again, Madam Speaker suggested that the motion was out of the scope of the Bill. I ask that you review that because all it is really doing is establishing the membership of certain groups which have a great deal to do with the Bill. Therefore, it would seem to me that adding or deleting members of that group would be quite within the scope of the Bill.

I think Madam Speaker's definition of "scope" takes in a lot of territory. If the mention of the coal lands, for example, is acceptable and we pass that as part of the Bill, then there is no reason why we cannot amend that part of the Bill which deals with the coal lands in Clause 20.

I also want to spend a couple of minutes on the second grouping, namely Motions Nos. 2 to 19 inclusive, including Motions Nos. 59, 64, 66, and so on. All of these amendments are housekeeping motions to make the Bill more clear as far as the public is concerned. Being a layman and having to refer to these kinds of Acts of Parliament quite often during my life, I always found it valuable to know exactly where the definitions were so that I did not have to spend a lot of time going to other parts of the Bill to find out what the particular definitions were.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Before I recognize the next speaker on a point of order, the House has given a considerable amount of time to examining the Speaker's tentative rulings. We do not have rules which specify how much time can be used by an Hon. Member on a point of order. Yet at the same time there is a responsibility on the part of the Chair to attempt to assist in bringing matters forward. I gave a great length of time particularly to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), the spokesman for the NDP on matters of transport, but I urge Hon. Members to determine whether it is in fact their intention to continue on points of order. If so, I think the time has come when the Chair should indicate that Hon. Members could be asked to be somewhat briefer. At least we might proceed that far to brevity.

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, I will try to be brief. I think it is important that I get on the record my concerns regarding the preliminary recommendations made by Madam Speaker. I want to deal specifically with Motion No. 20 and Clause 62 of the Bill regarding the coal lands. They are situated in my riding of Kootenay East-Revelstoke, 50,000 acres of them.

Clause 62 of the original Bill reads:

Notwithstanding the Crow's Nest Pass Act and any agreement—

This is the part I take exception to:

—any agreement made pursuant thereto, the Government of Canada may hold, dispose of or otherwise deal with the lands it selected under Paragraph 1(i.) of that Act . . . and on any conditions it thinks fit.

The Provinces have the right to be able to develop—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. I have to indicate to the Hon. Member that what is happening now is precisely the problem to which I was attempting to refer a few moments ago. The Chair has respected the right of all Hon. Members to rise on points of order throughout the entire afternoon. In some cases, Members have used a considerable part of their right to make a point of order to address themselves, in some degree or other, to the substance of the Bill. I am now asking Hon. Members if it would be appropriate and if the mood of the House is such that the Chair ought to suggest that points of order ought to be relevant to the procedures of the House. That is the issue in front of the Hon. Member who now has the floor.

This is not an opportunity to discuss the merits of the Bill. I think it is in order at this time to point out that points of order ought to be restricted to matters pertaining to the order of debate, the Standing Orders and the rulings of the Speaker.

Mr. Parker: Mr. Speaker, I will go directly to that point of order. I was trying to build up to it.

When the committee was travelling across the country it heard a submission from the Province of British Columbia. I think it is important that this amendment be able to stand, and I just want to outline very briefly the concerns of the Province of British Columbia as to why the amendment should stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I have to indicate to the Hon. Member that the merits of a political issue, if I may refer to it that way, or the merits of debate concerning a particular Bill, are not essentially the same thing as points of order. It makes no difference whether the Hon. Member's argument is the most justified political argument on the face of the earth; it stands as political argument. What the House is now involved in is points of order on the Speaker's ruling. This is not the time or place to make arguments as to the substance of the Bill.

I know I am becoming difficult in one sense because the Chair has recognized many other Hon. Members throughout the day. However, I think it has reached the point where Hon. Members should at least consider the request of the Chair to make sure that the debate on points of order is restricted to the technicalities of points of order, not the substance of the Bill.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, you are almost entirely right but Members should not only consider the position of the Chair, they should follow the position of the Chair. That is why we have a Chair. When Members are discussing presentations or representations made before the committee rather than discussing the procedural acceptability of these amendments, they are clearly out of order.

Mr. Parker: Mr. Speaker, the problem I am having is the title of the Bill. It says:

An Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Motion No. 20 has been turned down by the Speaker on a preliminary basis. It is imperative to me as a Member of Parliament to discuss this legislation or this amendment in the House. This Bill will call upon me as a Member of Parliament to vote for $450 billion worth of coal reserves to be turned over to the federal Government. If I want to vote against that, I have to vote against some very important improvements to rail transportation in my area which every one of us feels must be done.

The title of the Bill has caused the problem. I say to you with all sincerity that I think it is an unjust act not even to consider that amendment which deals with coal, which has nothing to do with the transportation of grain or—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) is rising on an intervening point of order.

• (1640)

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, obviously, not only does the Hon. Member misunderstand the point of procedure but he also misunderstands the Bill. The Bill does not turn the coal lands in British Columbia over to the federal Government. The federal Government already owns those coal lands. All the Bill does is to lift the freeze in price, and he is arguing—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. I am having as much problem with that intervention as the one preceding it. The difficulty for the Chair is that over a period of time it appears appropriate to accept interventions by Hon. Members which are known and called by those Hon. Members as points of order, because it gives the House an opportunity to review the ruling by Madam Speaker and to determine whether or not there are certain points of parliamentary procedure which need to be addressed.

At a certain point, it is also the responsibility of the Chair to summarize in one's mind what is taking place in the House. I want to assure the Hon. Member that I regret that it is he, in fact, who happens to be subject to my intervention at this point, but I would have had to do it at some point or other. It is clear that during the course of the afternoon there has been an increasing tendency to use points of order to, in fact, cause debate. The Chair cannot go on all day and all week, or for whatever length of time, accepting a point of order which is not under a Standing Order as a point of order but which is in fact debate on the substance of the Bill.

I do most sincerely ask the Hon. Member to understand that it is not his case in particular that causes the Chair to come to this point, but the day is wearing on and I think the Chair must alert Hon. Members that there must be a distinction between debate on the substance of the Bill and debate on points of order.

Therefore, I ask for Hon. Members' kindness and consideration, if I may put it that way, but I will now ask Hon. Members first to be brief and, second, to ensure that their remarks are related to points of order. If an Hon. Member wants very seriously to make a point of order, I would want to ensure that he has that right. If he begins to quote Beauchesne at the beginning of his remarks, I will listen longer and more carefully. Without that, I will start cutting off people. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Kootenay East-Revelstoke.

Mr. Parker: Mr. Speaker, I have not tried to use up some extra time, however. I have been trying to make one specific point with regard to Motion No. 20.

Mr. Pepin: Hasn't it been made before?

Mr. Parker: I feel that there has been a preliminary decision made on this matter. It is important that my views be heard as to why I feel that this particular motion should be heard.

Mr. Evans: Procedurally.

Mr. Parker: I have not taken up additional time of the House. I will speak on this one motion and then I will sit down. I would like to be heard for another minute, if at all possible. We have been afforded some leniency.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): One minute.

Mr. Parker: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is imperative that Motion No. 20 be given full consideration. It has nothing to do with the transportation of our grain. It is a consequential issue. It is one that we have asked to be separated from the Bill.

Mr. Pepin: You've said that 15 times.

Mr. Parker: Not only do I not want to support it being turned over to the federal Government, but the Province of British Columbia also feels it is the rightful owner and should not be included in this part of the Bill.

Mr. Pepin: You've said that 15 times, to my knowledge. There must be a limit somewhere.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Regina West has already spoken this afternoon on a point of order. Is it a fresh point of order?

Mr. Benjamin: Yes, Mr. Speaker. On the preliminary ruling of the Chair regarding Motion No. 20, the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) and I had some discussion on this matter in the committee. However, I want to ask the Chair to reconsider your preliminary ruling on Motion No. 20 on grounds that, according to the Chair, it goes beyond the scope of the Bill.

Since the intent of the legislation is to open up those lands as to the price, and the lands are under the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government according to the Crow's Nest Pass Act, I want to submit that since the Dominion Government has done nothing with those lands since 1897, has only held them in trust, therefore—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order.

Mr. Benjamin: —it is not beyond the Bill—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please, I think that as an exercise in parliamentary debate, from this point on the Chair ought to indicate that Hon. Members should proceed to give the Chair a capsuled understanding, within the first 30 seconds, of what the point of order is. I must make a distinction between debate on the substance of the Bill or any of the amendments and debate or comments that are related to a point of order. Otherwise, the House could continue for six months on what are called points of order. The reason Hon. Members place me and other people in the Chair is to ensure that the Standing Orders are enforced. I will listen for 30 seconds to the Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, my 30 seconds were on the preliminary ruling of Madam Speaker, about the motion going beyond the scope of the Bill. I was trying to ask the Chair to reconsider that in fact it does not go beyond the scope of the Bill for the Bill to state the lands should be returned to the Province of British Columbia. I say that it does not go beyond the scope of the Bill because the lands have only been held in trust, formerly held by the Province of British Columbia. There is no impingement on the royal Recommendation. There is no impingement on the intent of the Bill to deal with the handling, transportation and shipping of grain.

I defy anyone to show that returning Dominion coal lands to the original providers, namely, the Province of British Columbia, goes beyond the handling, shipping and transportation of grain.

It is not a substantive amendment. I hope the Chair will take that into consideration.

Now I would like to refer to Motion No. 16.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Since the Hon. Member, himself specified that he was rising on a point of order on Motion No. 20, the Chair will recognize another Hon. Member who had sought the floor. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone).

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I was just rising in an attempt to try to be helpful to you. Since I noted that you were having some difficulty with points of order raised by Members of the New Democratic Party, might I commend to your attention how the Speaker in the legislature in British Columbia handles that Party.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I will recognize the Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, on a similar point of order, I am not as heavy as the fellow in British Columbia, so I suppose I would be easier to remove, but I know Your Honour would not want to be bereft of my company.

I do not think I need to remind the Chair that the Chair invited the House to comment on three efficient sets of documents on which the Chair made preliminary rulings and, in the third document, reasons for unacceptability, on a total of 174 amendments. In all reasonableness, how are Hon. Members of the House, in the matter of a day or two, to go over every individual amendment, to check it with the Speaker's preliminary ruling, to compare it with—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order.

Mr. Benjamin: —what went on in the committee, to compare it to the original Bill, the Bill as it was reported back? I defy anyone to be able to deal with that in that amount of time. We have had an open invitation from the Chair, quite properly I submit, for Hon. Members to rise on a point of order to put forth arguments as to why they think a motion is acceptable and in order or why it is not acceptable or in order, and that is a proper decision of the Chair. I want to tell Your Honour that I have points of order to raise with regard to a number of other amendments, as to their acceptability, their admissibility, and so do my colleagues. Since these coal lands are all located in the riding of my colleague, Your Honour can understand and appreciate that he may stray for a moment or two from the point of order, but I am sure Your Honour can understand it. You would, too, if those lands were in your riding. Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I think the Hon. Member for Regina West has done a very considerable favour to the House. He and I have now had an exchange of views. I understand he and other Members of his Party have a number of points of order to raise. At the same time he has indicated that he wants to keep his points of order brief, to the point, and within the procedural understanding of the House of Commons. I think that is a perfect understanding. Hopefully, the Hon. Member will proceed and perhaps allow other Hon. Members to have the floor in as short a time period as possible so they, too, will have their rights.

• (1650)

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) for a moment.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to appear to be monopolizing the floor. If other Members wish to speak, I will gladly give way to them on points of order on any of the motions which the Chair has some doubts about.

On Motion No. 16 the Chair has a preliminary ruling that says Motions Nos. 15, 16, 17 and 134 give the Chair similar problems. It appears to the Chair to be a substantive amendment to the interpretation clause and beyond the scope of the Bill. I want to argue in the case of Motion No. 16, the effect of which is to retain the statutory grain rate for the producers. It does not violate the long title. It does not call upon larger government expenditures. The funds provided for in the legislation, $651 million, will still be paid out. It in no way affects the Royal Recommendation. Now to the scope of the Bill. The Bill outlines a scale of rates in Schedule II, what is called the base rate scale. That Bill is the statutory grain rate as it relates to mileage. Motion No. 16 does nothing more than maintain the base rate scale outlined in Schedule II of the Bill. How in the devil does that go beyond the scope of the Bill? All it does is to maintain what is provided in the Bill, namely the base rate scale in Schedule II. I will not presume upon the patience of the Chair and read the whole darn thing, much as I would like to.

The maximum shipper share of the rate of cost change means zero, which is what my Motion No. 16 is. All it does is to maintain Schedule II which is in the Bill. How the dickens does that go beyond the scope of the Bill? Please, Mr. Speaker, will you and your officials spend this weekend coming up with an answer to that? I would appreciate it. On all sides of the House as well as across the country the pros and cons of maintaining the statutory grain rate for the grain producers are well known. The Bill outlines the statutory grain rate in Schedule II. Therefore, I submit to the Chair that Motion No. 16 does not go beyond the scope of the Bill.

Let us look at Motion No. 15.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I think it is only fair, and the Hon. Member for Regina West is known for his views of fairness, that other Hon. Members who might want to speak to amendments in terms of points of order, be given that opportunity. The Chair will recognize other Hon. Members. Of course, I will return to the Hon. Member for Regina West on the next amendment. As I do not see another Hon. Member rising, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Regina West on Motion No. 17, I believe?

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I want to make the same submission as it relates to Motion No. 17. Pardon me, Motion No. 19 and Motion No. 70 appear beyond the scope of the Bill and in effect seek to destroy the Bill. Motion No. 19 reads:

—"tariff" means the tariff of rates and conditions of carriage for the movement of grain that were in effect on the sixteenth day of June, 1983.

The only reason June 16 is in the motion is that that was the day we drafted the amendment. It could just as well be October 1 or whatever. This does nothing more than maintain what is in the Bill, Schedule II, namely the base rate scale. Surely that is not beyond the scope of the Bill. Surely it is worthy of consideration by the House and of a political decision being taken by a vote in the House of Commons.

Motion No. 70 is in the same category. It reads:

—"tariff" means the tariffs of rates and conditions of carriage for the movmeent of grain in effect on the sixteenth day of June, 1983.

That is an amendment to Clause 34. The other one is an amendment to Clause 2.

Motion No. 70 would be consequential to Motion No. 19. But the argument still applies in both cases that this does nothing more than maintain a tariff that is already in Schedule II of the Bill. Surely you will want to spend the long weekend considering that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Malone: It would take a long weekend to comprehend it.

Mr. Benjamin: Let us go to Motions Nos. 22 and 23, which the Chair also in a preliminary way feels are beyond the scope of the Bill. We do not have to argue whether or not they go beyond the Royal Recommendation. Obviously the Chair does not feel they do. Therefore, it is the scope of the Bill.

The Bill is amending the Crow's Nest Pass Act of 1897 and all the agreements pursuant thereto. Part of the Crow's Nest Pass Act and all agreements pursuant thereto relate to the things provided to by way of grants, by way of lands or mineral rights and cash to Canadian Pacific Railway. Since the Bill purports to amend the Crow's Nest Pass Act of 1897 and all agreements pursuant thereto, surely it is not beyond the scope of the Bill to place in it any or all of the various conditions of the Crow's Nest Pass Act of 1897 and any agreements pursuant thereto.

If you are going to amend an Act then anything that is in that Act is not beyond the scope of this Bill because this Bill says we are amending that Act. I want to submit to the Chair that what we request in Motions Nos. 22 and 23 is nothing more than a further amendment to the Crow's Nest Pass Act of 1897 and agreements pursuant thereto and does not go beyond the scope of the Bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. First I should begin by indicating that the Hon. Member for Regina West has wished upon me on Thanksgiving weekend an enormous amount of work. It has been brought to my attention that I have a habit on Friday afternoon of wishing Hon. Members a pleasant weekend. I would want to do that more than ever because it is Thanksgiving weekend, except of course with respect to the Hon. Member for Regina West. To him I extend not only my best wishes for Thanksgiving weekend but I would suggest a very extensive study of the Standing Orders of the House of Commons, in particular Standing Order 79(10). He will find therein that it is the responsibility of the Chair to encourage Hon. Members to bring their points of order in a brief and very direct manner to the attention of the House.

With that, the House stands adjourned until Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock. Have a good weekend.

At 5.02 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Friday, October 7, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 33 (Mr. Mazankowski).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): When the House adjourned on Friday, the Chair was listening to Hon. Members on the procedural admissibility of motions in amendment to Bill C-155. So far, almost five and a half hours have been devoted to these points of order and the Chair feels that the major procedural issues have been addressed and will want to begin consideration of the points that Members have made in order that a final ruling may be rendered as soon as possible.

However, as a courtesy to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), who had the floor when the House adjourned last Friday, the Chair will hear his argument and invites him to complete his statement. After the Hon. Member has been heard, the Chair feels that the House should resume consideration of Motion No. 33.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I recognize that it is the Chair's prerogative to make such decisions. However, during my presentation I indicated that the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) would raise a particular argument on one matter that I felt was beyond my competence in terms of its technicalities. I wonder if you would consider allowing a brief intervention by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre.

• (1110)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the Chair to take it, then, that the Hon. Member for Regina West does not wish to contribute further to his point of order?

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have an intervention on one more motion and my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre, has an intervention on another motion, as the House Leader has said. If we can proceed with those two interventions, then I think we will have pretty well completed our interventions on the matter of the admissibility of motions.

I would particularly like to refer to Motion No. 51; I did not speak to that motion on Friday. I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that that motion does not exceed the Royal Recommendation because the funds for branch line rehabilitation are provided for both in this Bill and in other measures. Therefore, the Royal Recommendation for the expenditure of funds is not exceeded in Motion No. 51.

Second, the Government has announced on numerous occasions its commitment to provide for the rehabilitation of branch lines, particularly those that have been put in the basic network, until the year 2000. All this motion does, Sir, is place in the Statute a provision for the carrying out of that commitment.

Rehabilitation is now taking place and has been for the last two or three years. It was the Government's intention, I believe, to have that branch line rehabilitation completed by the year 1986. My motion provides for it to be completed by July 31, 1987. This is another one of the fears of the people of western Canada. They want to see that that commitment by the Government cannot be undermined or revoked by either this Government or any succeeding government.

We were very careful with the wording of Motion No. 51. It does not go beyond the scope of the Bill because provision for the rehabilitation of those lines is in accordance with the long title of the Bill, which is to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. It is certainly within the scope of the Bill. It does not provide for any additional funding by the federal Government. Those funds were already committed both in this Bill and, as in previous years, through other means. Therefore on both counts, Mr. Speaker, I submit that Motion No. 51 is in order. I would urge upon the Chair that the final ruling of the Chair would be that it is in order and that it can be debated and voted upon.

The passing of Motion No. 51 is very crucial to the three prairie Provinces. As I said, we were most careful with the wording of it so that we would not go beyond either the scope of the Bill or the scope of the Royal Recommendation. I would urge the Chair and the officials to take a second look at that motion and I would hope that Madam Speaker would agree in her final ruling that it is in order.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order and I will be very brief. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) outlined the acceptability of the motion and the necessity for it. I should like to elaborate on some of the reasons why we would like to support the motion if it can be found to be in order—and we think it is in order.

I think the way the Bill stands indicates that the motion is admissible. The Government has made commitments for the next three years on branch line rehabilitation. There is no change in the Royal Recommendation with respect to the expenditure of funds.

Without presuming to say whether Motion No. 33 will pass or not, we know there is a recommendation for the retention of branch lines to the year 2000 and that exchanges of branch lines have been required by the Canadian Transport Commission to be extended to the year 2000. An example is the CN takeover from CP on the Matador sub in my part of the country, and the Dodsland sub with the reverse taking place. Those transfers cannot take place until the rehabilitation has been completed.

We would like to see this motion put because it would be consistent with the rulings of the CTC and the expressed desire of the Government that those transfers should take place. As things stand, they cannot take place until the lines have been rehabilitated or upgraded. Therefore, the requirement in the Bill for that that to take place does not change the intent or the Royal prerogative. It only puts into legislation something that would make the people who use the branch lines feel more secure than they would if it rested in an order in council or some other place. I hope that, in considering Motion No. 51 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West, the Chair will consider the statements of the Government and the fact that this does not in any way change the intent of the Government with regard to Bill C-155.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to discuss the ruling made on Motion No. 89 which was referred to my colleague, the House Leader of this Party.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I am sure the Hon. Member appreciates that he is not questioning a ruling but a preliminary ruling. We are still discussing the general matter in that spirit, naturally.

Mr. Althouse: Thank you, Mr. Speaker; I had temporarily forgotten the word "preliminary". We have been discussing a preliminary ruling in the last day or so. The point I was making referred to the preliminary ruling on Motion No. 89. The preliminary assessment was that it was considered to be beyond the scope of the Bill.

I would remind the Chair that the Bill deals with the transportation of western grain. Motion No. 89 is a motion to clarify in that it describes what is and what has been the current practice. The motion itself is consistent with current practice regarding the rates for rapeseed and canola beyond Thunder Bay. Those rates are currently set at a minimum compensatory rate under Section 23 of the National Transportation Act. In committee the shippers expressed concern that, as it stands, the Bill may leave the impression that those rates would no longer be applicable. We are therefore anxious to have the Bill make clear that the rate provisions now available to them would still be available for shipment beyond Thunder Bay. In fairness, I think that is the intent of the Government.

During consideration of the Bill we heard many arguments from Members of the Government and the Minister to the effect that one of the secondary purposes of the Bill is to encourage processing in western Canada. The maintenance of these minimum compensatory rates would assist in this. I believe, therefore, that the title of the Bill, "an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain", should be interpreted broadly enough to include rapeseed and canola oil, and for clarification purposes the policy outlined in Motion No. 89 should be described in the Bill, so that what is now in effect can continue and the producers of those particular products in western Canada will continue to be treated on a basis consistent with what has been the case up until this point in time.

I suggest that the Chair review its initial ruling to call this particular motion beyond the scope of the Bill. Given these circumstances, I hope you will find that it is indeed within the scope of the Bill and should be allowed to be debated.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I would like to add to what my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre, has said on Motion No. 89. The intent of the motion is to continue the present practice. I would again like to remind you, Mr. Speaker, that this does not exceed the Royal Recommendation and it does not go beyond the scope of the Bill, which says it is "to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain".

Without Motion No. 89 Mr. Speaker, the intent of this legislation can be thwarted. Without this motion the intent of the Bill could be prevented from being carried out. That is the reason for the motion. We endeavoured to word the motion carefully so as to remain within the two bounds which must guide us on motions at report stage—that it does not exceed the Royal Recommendation and that it stays within the scope of the legislation. Surely, the scope of the legislation is the facilitation of the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. Without this motion, Sir, the intent and scope of this legislation can be prevented in the case of a number of grains which move to eastern Canada either raw or processed. Certainly, it was obvious in committee from all sides that this was one area which needed to be addressed in this legislation, so that the intent of the legislation could be completely carried out. Therefore, Sir, I ask you to consider this additional point raised by myself in the course of the consideration by the Chair and by the officials in reaching a final ruling. I urge this motion be considered in order.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I would simply want to support the two Hon. Members who have just spoken with respect to the admissibility of Motion No. 89.

There are two points which I want to make very quickly, Mr. Speaker. My first point relates to facilitating the movement of grain. As "grain" is described under the interpretation clause of the Bill, it is clear that the production of rapeseed or canola oil are included within the context of this Bill. Those products should be included when dealing with the movement, collection and handling of grain. Therefore, it really does not go beyond the scope of the Bill in so far as the definition of the product is concerned.

Second, if there should be any suggestion that it goes beyond the Royal Recommendation, I would simply like to say to you, Sir, that in my humble view it does not. What this motion is really asking for is the retention of the status quo on the freight rate beyond Thunder Bay, namely the minimum compensatory freight rate which is established by a formula through the Canadian Transport Commission. The amendment seeks to ensure the retention of that rate, because quite frankly with rapeseed and canola considered as grains under the statutory freight rate regime, it would move at the statutory freight rate from any point in western Canada to Thunder Bay and beyond that at a commercial rate. So the net effect on those two products would be perhaps worse than it was before. All this motion will do is compel the railway to prescribe a minimum compenstory rate beyond the Port of Thunder Bay. That in no way affects the Royal prerogative or the money package included in this Bill. I think that point has to be made abundantly clear.

• (1125)

To reiterate, if you are talking about the broad concept of the Bill, and since it appears the statement of purpose I so eloquently described is under attack, it is fair to say that one can only rely upon the broad title, which is an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. Processed canola and rapeseed is classified as a grain.

So on those two counts, Mr. Speaker, the Royal prerogative, and qualification within the content and purpose of the Bill, I think this motion qualifies on both counts.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Just briefly, Mr. Speaker, and I see the Parliamentary Secretary and the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport here, if the Allan Report had been made available to the Committee as we had requested, in al likelihood there would have been more amendments similar to Motion No. 89. That report was a study done by the Government which directly reflected what my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), has expressed on the ramifications of this motion. If the report was available to you, Mr. Speaker, I am sure you would be able to see that it does not in any way affect the Royal prerogative.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I am afraid the Hon. Member is discussing the relative merits of the substance of the amendment, not its procedural acceptability in the strict sense of the word. I invite him to address himself to that point.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, that brief statement of purpose was so that Table officers and you, Sir, could ask for something we have been unable to obtain, the Allan report, which would allow them to reflect clearly on your judgment to be made on Motion No. 89, as to whether it is admissible and, within the Royal prerogative, whether it changes the intent of the Bill and its interpretation of grain as put forward by my colleague for Vegreville or the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), and whether that interpretation in any way, shape or form changes the intent of the Bill. That is the reason I was addressing myself to that report. It has not been available to members of the Standing Committee on Transport, but it may be made available to you, Sir.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House will now proceed with debate, resuming consideration of Motion No. 33. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-North (Mr. Orlikow).

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, while we have been debating the Bill for some weeks now, I could not help but think of last Thursday afternoon when we heard the very eloquent speeches of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the Leader of the Official Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic Party about how they foresaw Canada in the future as being a democratic, tolerant country in which the people who helped form this country, with its two official languages, would have equal rights. I could not help but think that none of that could have been made possible—in fact, we would not have had a country—if the Fathers of Confederation had not been far-seeing and daring enough to ensure that a railway was built from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Any person who looks at a map of North America will realize that the economic line in this continent runs not east to west, but, rather, north to south. The people of Vancouver have much more in common with the people of Los Angeles and San Francisco than they have with those in Ottawa. The people of Halifax have much more in common with the people of Boston, New York and Philadelphia than they do with those in Winnipeg. The people in Winnipeg have much more in common with the people of Minnesota and Minneapolis than they have with those in Halifax. Therefore, without the railway there would not have been a country.

Sir John A. Macdonald gave all the support necessary, and that meant tens of millions of dollars and millions of acres of land, to the promoters who built the CPR. Then certain other businessmen who thought they could make a profit started to develop other railways. Eventually, we had not two railways but, rather, at least five railways. We had the Grand Trunk, the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Grand Trunk Northern, and several other railways.

Then it was realized that we had overbuilt railways and that they could not manage financially. They certainly could not all operate and make a profit. If they had not already become bankrupt they would shortly be bankrupt. Therefore, the Government of the day nationalized the railways, took them over and amalgamated them, and created the CNR. We essentially had two transcontinental railways, the CPR and the CNR, one privately owned and the other supposedly publicly owned.

Both railways, like most other corporations, try to operate as profitably as possible, and that means profitable for themselves, not necessarily in the best interests of ordinary people. Therefore, we have two railways, each one determined, and we can understand why, to handle as much traffic as possible and to receive as much revenue as possible.

There is a ridiculous situation in many parts of Canada, although I will speak only of how it affects the movement of grain in western Canada, where grain is being shipped on cars belonging to the CPR or the CNR for hundreds of miles unnecessarily because the CNR and the CPR do not have lines which go directly to Vancouver, where most of the grain is going.

Let me just quote from the testimony of Mr. Justice Hall, who has done a great deal of work and headed a Royal Commission in this field. On August 9 of this year, he gave testimony to the Standing Committee on Transport, and I will just quote a part of it as follows:

> We heard a lot about efficiency, and the whole idea of the railways about efficiency was to get rid of the branchlines. That would have been very efficient from their standpoint. But on this question of efficiency, I am told by senior railway people, there is a railway philosophy that once the line gets hold of a commodity for transport, it will hang onto that commodity to the delivery points, come hell or high water. That works out this way and this is what we found, great quantities of grain grown on, say, the Goose Lake line . . . and now that may not mean too much to members from the east, but it is one of the great grain-producing areas in Saskatchewan between Saskatoon and Calgary served by the Canadian National Railways; it is closer to Vancouver at Rosetown than to Thunder Bay, so the trend is westward. Grain was taken to Calgary, but the CN has no line going from Calgary to Vancouver. So they hauled it then northward 200 miles to Edmonton so they can take it south again to Vancouver. That was the CN.

Then he went on to give a similar example about the CP, and I will quote again as follows:

> CP with the Hardisty line, which is another line going through Edmonton . . . all that CPR grain went to Edmonton, but there is no line from Edmonton into Vancouver—so it went south to go to Vancouver. Trainloads of grain were passing each other like ships in the night between Calgary and Edmonton.

I am not being critical of the railways. As I have indicated, they are out to move as much freight on their tracks as possible, to have as much traffic as possible, to move as many cars as possible and to make as great a profit as possible. However, that is not the efficient way. That adds to the cost and reduces the net return which the farmer receives. Because that is the situation, we believe it is necessary to give the Administrator the power to direct the railways to move grain as efficiently and expeditiously as possible.

While we argue there is no need for the Grain Transportation Agency, and that the Administrator already has too much power in the sense that his power would encroach upon the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board, we believe this is a good amendment and should be supported, because no matter what public agency has control over the transportation of grain, whether it be the Wheat Board, the Canadian Grain Commission, the Grain Transportation Agency or whatever, that person or agency should have the ability to direct the railroads to exchange cars to promote efficiency.

Mr. Justice Hall pointed out that the railways now hang on to loaded cars of grain for movement to export position even though the other line could move them to port over a more direct line, cutting the distance and costs and adding to the efficiency of the system. We say that this tends to undermine the assertions of the railroads that they lose money every time they move a carload of grain. If that were so, presumably they would lose more money for each additional mile they haul it and would do everything possible to get rid of it as soon as possible and stick their competition with the losses. We say that without the authority of the amendment, which we support, which would be vested in the hands of a public agency, we can be sure that there would be little, if any, exchange of cars of grain between the railroads for efficiency's sake.

What the Government is proposing in fact is that the railways should be paid for the grain they move on a cost-plus basis; in other words, the more their costs, the greater their profits. The longer they hang on to the grain, the more miles they move it, the greater the cost, and therefore their profits.

The Administrator on the Wheat Board—and in this case the Hon. Member proposes that there be an Administrator—must have the power to direct the railway to move the grain as quickly and as expeditiously as possible. There has been a great deal of evidence over many years that the railways have not done that and that they will not do it voluntarily. That is why we support the amendment.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support Motion No. 33 which is in the name of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). The effect of this motion is simply to change Clause 17(1)(d) so that it would then read: "The Administrator may "promote and shall require if necessary"—the words "shall require if necessary" are vital parts of this amendment—"reciprocal and other arrangements between the railway companies to facilitate the efficient and reliable movement of grain for the purpose of maximizing returns to producers". We support this amendment because we see the Administrator as being part of the Canadian Wheat Board, as was proposed in our Motion No. 32 which is yet to be voted on.

We believe that this authority is necessary for several reasons. Let me outline two or three cases in which we think this power could be used to increase the efficiency of the grain transportation system. Basically, the problem lies in the railways' insistence upon maintaining control of carloads of their own grain traffic over their own lines regardless of whether it is the shortest route to the port. In fact, as the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) just stated, since the rates are distance related, the further that grain is transported the more money the railways can make because this Bill provides for their being paid on a cost-plus basis.

In spite of their allegations of losses, the railways seem to insist upon holding on to their own traffic over longer routes even though they allege the current rate structure loses them money. Their actions are not very supportive of their argument, however, since it is very difficult to believe that any corporate body would do something which would increase their losses.

The prime example which has been used in this debate to show how railways could co-operate and save producers money is that which Justice Hall raised in committee. Canadian National grain that is gathered in southern Saskatchewan must make the trip from Calgary to Edmonton in order to get across the mountains on CN lines. Meanwhile, Canadian Pacific grain which is gathered in northern Saskatchewan is normally transported to Edmonton and then south to Calgary in order to link with their main line across the mountains to get to the Pacific ports.

The railways have been convinced of the necessity to switch that traffic and have been doing so an experimental basis for a number of years now by simply switching cars at Edmonton and Calgary so that CP cars would go down CN lines and an equal number of CN cars would go through the mountains on the CP main line to Vancouver as well. This has been accomplished quite easily by keeping an equitable accounting of the bushels of grain transported. At the end of the year when an accounting is done, accommodation is made to equalize things between the companies at that time.

The grain companies established a similar arrangement through the Canadian Wheat Board where only certain amounts and grades are dumped at terminal locations on the West Coast and at Thunder Bay in order to avoid the necessity of breaking up the trains and sorting each individual company's grain for disposal at the required terminal. This procedure of dumping all the grain in each train at the terminal and using on accounting method to ensure that each gets its kind and grade of grain which has been shipped over a period of weeks or months has worked out quite well.

Rapeseed has been dealt with separately for some time but I understand that an agreement has been reached whereby rapeseed is bulked together and dumped at the terminal where the train is sent. An accounting is simply kept of who owns the rapeseed.

The interchange of rail company lines is extremely important not only in the Edmonton to Calgary corridor, where that co-operation pays the railways very well, but in the Vancouver area and in the shipment of grains to Churchill.

Travacon Research Limited issued a report on Vancouver rail access. It suggested that the rail lines in that area should be treated as if they belong to one company which could do an accounting procedure very similar to what the Canadian Wheat Board does with respect to the various grain companies. In other words, the transportation services could be treated as one company while ensuring that each participant is paid for the amount of work completed. It suggests that rather than a company shipping grain up to 60 miles further in a long, extended loop, simply to stay on its own tracks, the shorter distance provided by another company's line could be used to get the grain to port a day or two earlier. This would speed up efficiency while providing a lower cost to the companies involved, and ultimately a lower cost to the user, who in this case is the grain producer.

The use of other companies' lines has been practised at Churchill only in one season. While the CNR owns the line to Churchill, a good part of the CP gathering area exists in that Churchill corridor. Churchill usually requires one particular type of grain. Recently, this requirement has been barley, which is mostly grown in northeastern Saskatchewan and northwestern Manitoba. Half of that area is serviced by CP Rail, which has no access to Churchill without a reciprocal agreement. Therefore, the requirement of a reciprocal agreement would hasten the gathering of that grain, provide a shorter route to Churchill and make it far more efficient for both the railway company and the marketing system itself.

The railways say they are loath to do this because they like to maintain control of their cars. I suggest that is an important point to remember, particularly when one considers to whom these cars belong. The railways have not bought grain cars on their own since the early 1950s. Those boxcars are fully depreciated and they are only used in the rail system because the federal Government paid to have them refurbished so they could still be used on the low volume branch lines that are unable to facilitate hopper cars. The cars that the railways are fighting over are essentially cars that were brought by the people and farmers of Canada. Therefore, the railways' argument as to ownership and control is fairly weak.

The administration which has the overview of transportation—whether under the Wheat Board, as we prefer, or a separate transport authority, as the Government prefers—should have the power to require the railways to enter into reciprocal agreements to provide the shortest haul and reduce the costs to producers and, if this Bill becomes law, the federal treasury. We believe that it makes no sense to pay the railways for shipping on a circuitous route simply because they are being paid for the number of miles they must travel. When a shorter route exists, the Administrator should be able, as this amendment would provide, to force them to reach a reciprocal agreement to move the grain over the shortest possible haul.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In my opinion, the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. After having discussions with the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) and the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), I ask leave of the House to introduce a motion and to withdraw by leave Motion No. 10 standing in my name.

The motion I wish to introduce at this time with leave of the House reads as follows:

"export" in respect of grain means shipment by vessel within the meaning of the Canada Shipping Act to any destination outside Canada and shipment by any other mode of transport to the United States for use of the grain in that country and not for shipment out of that country;—

When I gave notice to the Chair last Thursday, I provided one English translation and two French translations of the motion. I would leave the correctness of that to the discretion of the Table officers. This motion would be seconded by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), and I hope the unanimous agreement of the House would occur when it comes time to vote affirmatively on the motion.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, there was lengthy discussion on this in committee. Both the Hon. Member and I had motions in the committee attempting to accomplish what we were all agreed upon. The wording the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) has now presented was on the advice of the legal counsel for the Department of Transport. We are perfectly prepared to give unanimous consent to Motion No. 10 being withdrawn by leave and to have the substitute motion put on the Order Paper in its place. Would Mr. Speaker entertain argument now as to its acceptability, or would you prefer to obtain unanimous consent first?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair would want clarification by the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) as to whether or not the lead-in to the text of the proposed new amendment is the same as Motion No. 10 as printed on page VI of today's Order Paper, which has the effect of striking out certain lines and substituting the following therefor. Is that the intent of the new amendment?

Mr. McKnight: Yes it is, Mr. Speaker. The lead-in is to amend Clause 2 by striking out lines 7 to 9 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor. It would remove those words that appear in the Bill as amended from committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I am sure the Table officers will be satisfied with that explanation.

Is there unanimous consent to withdraw the existing Motion No. 10 as printed on today's Order Paper?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 10 (Mr. McKnight) withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Does the House give leave to the Hon. Member to present his new Motion No. 10?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I should indicate that this does not infringe in any way on the Speaker's obligation to rule as to its procedural acceptability.

If Hon. Members wish to contribute argument as to its procedural acceptability, the Chair is disposed to hear those arguments at this time.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, the Chair made a preliminary ruling on the original Motion No. 10. We now have a motion from the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster reworded in a manner recommended by legal counsel for the Department of Transport on which there was unanimous agreement in committee and unanimous agreement in the House.

That does not gainsay that the Chair may have a problem about its acceptability. It is within the scope of the legislation. The legislation would provide for a statutory rate regime to export position which would be Prince Rupert, Vancouver, Churchill, Thunder Bay or any other port of exit between Canada and the United States in the western region. Up to the point of exit, whether it is a sea port, an inland port or a port of exit along the forty-ninth parallel, it would be eligible for the statutory regime.

This would ensure that grain or grain products from western Canada would not get the statutory regime, then cross the border into the United States and be exported a second time from the United States to some overseas point at the expense of Canadian shippers and Canadian ports. By Canadian shippers, I am thinking of barley maltsters and other grain producers who would be put in somewhat difficult positions.

The motion does not exceed the Royal Recommendation. The cost will be no more with this amendment than it would be without it. It is purely for the protection of Canadian grain producers and processors.

Second, it remains within the scope of the legislation. As was argued on the first dozen or 15 motions following Madam Speaker's preliminary ruling, on both those grounds those motions, like Motions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 and so forth, remain within the scope of the Bill and do not exceed the Royal prerogative. We appreciate that the Chair and the officials may not be fully up to date on all the details and ramifications regarding the movement of grain and grain products to export positions in Canada, but we want to assure the Chair that Members on all sides were very alert when presenting motions at report stage after what we found in committee. We made every effort to word it in such manner as to be acceptable.

I find no grounds for its not being acceptable. The motion meets the two criteria. I urge that the Chair rule that it is in order, not only because it is, but because there is unanimous agreement on it following much discussion and consultation among ourselves and with legal counsel. I hope the Chair will be guided by that and will find the motion acceptable.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few remarks on the acceptability of Motion No. 10. The guides used to present this motion were guides that Members of this House and members of the Standing Committee on Transport used in presenting all of our motions. The rationale for the motion which makes it acceptable is that it treats all parts of Canada equally.

When the Bill was presented, the intent of the Government was to provide a less than commercial rate for the movement of grain and grain products both east and west. Through an oversight, the transportation of grains to western Canada for export to the United States was not included whereas the transportation of grain east to Armstrong and Thunder Bay and for export to the United States was included. The intent of the Bill was to facilitate the movement of grain and grain products. Through an oversight, the drafters neglected to look at western Canada in the same way as they looked at the eastern section.

After consultation among all Parties in the House and with the Department of Transport on the acceptability of Motion No. 10, it was agreed that the intent was carried out in this motion. The increase in cost to the public treasury was not evident. Grains moving westerly would be at the statutory or less than compensatory rate regardless. If they are moved west at the statutory rate, the final destination of those grains does not impinge upon the public purse. That is movement from the western part of Canada into the western United States for consumption.

That briefly is the rationale as to why Members feel that Motion No. 10 is in order. It carries out the intent of the Bill. It may in some way relieve the public purse of some transportation costs, because it is very explicit that grains shipped under the statutory rate or less than compensatory rate are not for export after arrival in the United States. The concern has been expressed by some people across Canada and by some members of the Transport Committee that the cost to the public purse could be increased by the movement of grain into the United States and then further exported.

I thank my colleagues for consent in giving me leave. I await the Chair's ruling as to the acceptability of this motion.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief in, hopefully, assisting you in making a ruling. The original definition for export in the Bill was a very easy one, but it caused a great deal of difficulty, particularly for maltsters in western Canada.

The Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) made several attempts in committee to amend that definition. He was finally successful, only for the committee to find that it would cause great consternation for the Port of Vancouver, a consternation which some members of the committee did not share but which nevertheless was very disturbing to port authorities in the Port of Vancouver.

In committee we made several attempts to find an acceptable definition of "export". I believe the definition which the Hon. Member is proposing is acceptable and will not cause difficulty for either the Port of Vancouver or the maltsters. In fact, it will include the maltsters in the purview of this Bill. I am sure I speak on behalf of the Minister and his Parliamentary Secretary when I say that we find the motion in order and acceptable. I would therefore urge the Chair to rule in that regard. It is my opinion that the motion does not exceed the Royal Recommendation and will not place an additional financial burden on the Crown. Nor will it in any way subvert the meaning and intent of Bill C-155.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out lines 20 to 25 at page 8.

He said: Mr. Speaker, Motions Nos. 34 and 35 are related. Madam Speaker said that they should be debated separately and voted on separately. The intent of my motion is to delete lines 20 to 25 at page 8.

Before speaking in support of my motion, as all Members are aware, tens of thousands of farmers truck their grain to the shipping points. Many hundreds of small commercial truckers haul grain for grain producers to the local shipping point, alternate delivery point, flour mill or rapeseed crushing plant. They have been doing that for a number of years and they have been doing an excellent job of it. Those small commercial truckers have meshed in well with the farmers' own trucking operations. However, Mr. Speaker, the legislation without this amendment allows for a commercial trucking system that can do nothing more than speed up the abandonment of branch lines and transfer costs from the federal treasury to the treasuries of the municipalities and provincial Government.

A week ago, Mr. Speaker, some members of the railway unions reminded me of their experience with the railways. As soon as officials of the railways saw an opening that would allow them to move into the trucking business, no matter what the commodities were, that is exactly what they did and they did it in a big way. I recall many years ago a railway officer said to me: "Heck, if we can haul it on a right-of-way that has been built and maintained by somebody else instead of ourselves, we are going into the trucking business". In my own experience with the railways, Mr. Speaker, I have seen many little commercial truckers run right off the road by the big guys who quite often were from CN and CP.

I say that this legislation would hasten the abandonment of branch lines, but I would like to remind the House that the Government gave a commitment of $1,072,000,000 for the rehabilitation of branch lines. Department of Transport officials have said that it will cost $1,600,000,000, leaving a $528 million shortfall, to rehabilitate the remaining branch lines that are in the basic network of lines which are supposedly guaranteed until at least the year 2000. The Government, on the pretext of giving the little truckers a share of statutory and subsidized grain rates and products, is doing nothing more than abandoning at least another 1,500 miles of railway lines in western Canada, an area that has already lost something in the order of 3,000 miles of railway lines.

I would like to bring to the attention of the House a telex sent by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool to the Minister on September 21. That telex pointed out the extreme concern of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool at the inadequate level of funding to upgrade the western network of grain-dependent branch lines and it pointed out the shortfall. It was obvious from the answers of the Minister in the House the other day that at the moment the Government wants to be able to abandon 1,200, 1,500 or 1,800 miles of branch lines and shift the cost of moving the grains from those lines to the municipalities and the provincial Governments.

I would like to describe the experience of the State of Iowa a few years ago. A large number of branch lines were to be abandoned in Iowa and many of them were abandoned. The State of Iowa after a few years found that it would have been cheaper, as a result of the higher county and State road and highway construction and maintenance costs, to subsidize the railway to allow for it to maintain the branch line. Iowa then began to do so because it had already lived through the bitter experience that is now being planned for us in western Canada.

I want to assure you, Mr. Speaker, that this motion is not intended to harm and will not do any harm or damage to the many hundreds of small commercial truckers who are currently trucking grain in western Canada. They will still have an important part to play. However, if the door were left open for the Administrator to make agreements, that Administrator would, I predict, make agreements in relatively large volumes and would endeavour to make those agreements with one or two of the larger trucking companies. The little commercial trucker would be left out in the cold. That is the reason for this motion, Mr. Speaker.

The main purpose of this motion is to preserve that basic network of branch lines so that an opening would not be provided for CN and CP trucks to move into the large towns and small cities in rural parts of the Prairies and run the little commercial truckers off the road. This has been known to happen on many other occasions with many other kinds of commodities.

It is most important that the Government has made a commitment to rehabilitate those branch lines. We look upon the provision for the Administrator to make agreements as a neat method for the Government to get out of that commitment and transfer costs that would otherwise fall upon the railways and the Government of Canada. I submit that those increased costs would fall upon the grain producers, rural municipalities and provincial Governments.

The national railway systems are the responsibility of the federal Government. I would not like to see the situation that occurred in the State of Iowa occur in my Province. If that were to happen, the Province would find itself faced with two choices. It could either pay more direct expenditures for provincial highway and municipal road construction and maintenance or pay a subsidy to keep the branch lines. Surely that is not the role for a municipality or provincial Government to play. That is the responsibility of the federal Government.

There are several kinds of betrayals contained within this legislation and I think this is another one. Announcements have been made two and three times a year in the last six or seven years with reference to the Government's commitment to rehabilitate the lines in the basic network. Some lines are still in question, Mr. Speaker. A decision has not yet been made as to whether some of those lines would go into the basic network or would be subject to abandonment. Until all that is sorted out, the Government should not have the opportunity through this legislation to speed up the abandonment of lines so that those lines cannot be put in the basic network or to allow the abandonment of lines that are already in the basic network. That is the intent and the purpose of this legislation.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, you might think that I am being a little paranoid or falling victim to a conspiracy theory, but our experience with the federal Government regarding branch lines has in the past been bitter, to put it mildly. I believe that in this instance it is the intent of the Government to use the little truckers as the vehicle by which it can abandon more lines. As larger and larger trucks haul for longer and longer distances, the big trucking companies move in and the little commercial truckers on the Prairies have not got a chance to compete with them. The small truckers do not have the capital and resources to purchase a fleet of trucks. I know one of my colleagues will illustrate how a little trucker in Saskatchewan has already been taken over by CP trucks in anticipation of this kind of legislation, because CP wants one of its branch lines abandoned.

As I said, if my motion were to be accepted by the House, it will do no harm to the many hundreds of small commercial truckers who are presently operating in the three prairie Provinces and it will certainly do much to protect and preserve the branch line system and get the balance of it rehabilitated.

● (1220)

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to speak on this amendment which is meant to undo the harm done by the Conservative-Liberal coalition in committee. The motion would amend Clause 17(4), which reads as follows:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

We recognize that truckers need a fair deal, even to the extent that, in the situation in which they find themselves on the Prairies when moving grain, there is possible justification for a subsidy. The trouble with subsidies is that they seem to help out the larger operations the most. At the present time the grain on the Prairies that is moved by truck is moved by the small operators basically, although they are having a difficult time making a go of it. Although we would support the truckers in this way, we do not want to assist by allowing this clause to stand and our amendment would delete it. If the clause were to stand, we believe it would assist in the abandonment of branch lines and we do not want to assist the CNR and the CP to take over the small trucking industry on the Prairies, which would be the result.

Our amendment would delete Clause 17(4) of the Bill and it is based on trust. If we could trust the Government of Canada not to use the clause to abandon lines which are necessary for the continued movement of grain, we might consider its retention.

Anyone who has attended a hearing on rail line abandonment anywhere in Canada will recognize that the railways have a propensity for using any excuse available in order to abandon lines. When the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and I attended a hearing on the Carleton line which goes through communities in both our constituencies, the railways took a variety of suspect positions to attempt to put that line in a light that would justify the CTC's abandoning it.

This Party believes that if the clause is retained it will give the railways one more vehicle, one more trick, one more instrument with which to aid the abandonment of lines in western Canada which are needed to move grain. Those lines should be retained in order to keep down costs, not only for the farmer but for the municipalities and Provinces which are responsible for road building. We feel strongly that the clause should be deleted, Mr. Speaker.

It may be asked why we are so sure that the clause would be used to promote the abandonment of railway lines. I just have to refer to the proceedings of the Transport Committee which show that a number of members asked where the money would come from. Obviously if it were to come from the Crow benefit fund, the clause would have been ruled out of order because its effect would have been to increase costs. It was not ruled out of order, however, and so it is still in the Bill. Members asked where the money would come from to pay for the implied cost of agreements with truckers. It would not come from the Crow benefit but from the money allocated for the rehabilitation of branch lines.

We have the word of the Deputy Minister of Transport for this. In answer to a question by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) in Committee, as reported at page 128:9 of the proceedings, Mr. Kroeger said:

> No, Mr. Chairman. I think the trade-off most likely to be made, certainly the trade-off foreshadowed in the CCA Task Force report, is a trade-off between branch line rehabilitation money, which is not part of this bill, and some kind of trucking assistance program. The analysis in the CCA Task Force report indicates that potentially very large savings could be achieved if instead of transporting grain on certain high-cost branch lines—

I put it to you, Mr. Speaker, that this is proof enough for us who have little trust that either the railways or the Government wants to maintain those branch lines. This is proof enough that the clause is meant to eliminate as many branch lines as possible. The money for the rehabilitation of branch lines is available to keep them going. If that money is going to be available, there is the implication that it is because the branch lines are to be abandoned and therefore it could be used to assist truckers.

The Central Co-ordinating Agency Task Force report referred to in Committee by Mr. Kroeger states that payment should be made not only to the truckers but also to producers in order to help them effectively deliver to alternate points, if they are on an abandoned branch line, to municipalities which, in many cases, will have to improve the roads and pay considerably more to maintain them when the amount of grain being carried is increased. This task force report suggests that payment would also have to be made to the elevator companies who may require some capital increase. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the money which is to come from the rehabilitating of branch lines is going to be used to abandon those branch lines, and this clause will assist them to do that.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity once again to enter into the debate on the Crow rate. I wait with interest to see whether or not the Tories are going to take their turn and enter into this debate, but they continue to sit there and allow this Crow Bill to go through the House, easing its passage in order to facilitate a quick adoption. It is really sad, Mr. Speaker, that the Tories are not speaking on this amendment and are not really helping us to fight this Crow legislation, particularly with this amendment.

When the Party first enunciated its position with regard to the Crow rate, Mr. Speaker, it was not sure whether what the Government was doing was right or wrong. It was pretty wishy-washy about its position. Later on, though, Mr. Speaker, we welcomed the fact that it firmed up its position and indicated the Crow rate should not be changed, "at least right now", as it was put.

Therefore it is with some dismay that I observe the lack of participation by the Tory Members of Parliament in this debate. I call upon those Hon. Members to rise to their feet at the earliest opportunity in order to offer their views with regard to this amendment. I would like to hear the Conservative Party speak out with regard to this amendment, which allows the Government to subsidize the trucking of grain—

Mr. Mazankowski: It does not say that at all.

Mr. Keeper: —because I would like to know whether or not it is going to support our amendment. I wonder if that Party is as concerned as we are with the abandonment of branch lines and the closing of country elevators. I wonder if it is as concerned as we are with the threat that this change in the Crow rate has—particularly this aspect of the Bill—with the continued survival of small town prairie Canada.

We have put forward this amendment, Mr. Speaker, to eliminate the possibility of the Minister entering into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport in a subsidized fashion. We are concerned, Mr. Speaker, that what is going on here is not a way of making the transportation of grain more economical and efficient, but rather is a move which simply involves the transfer of the cost of the transportation of grain from the railroads to provincial and municipal governments and farmers. If grain starts to be moved on the Prairies in an increasing way by trucks rather than by railways, this will cause greater wear and tear on the roads and increased expenditures for provincial Governments.

I see one of my Liberal colleagues smiling. I would say to him, Sir, that in the case of Manitoba, for example, this particular move by the Government will mean an additional $40 million in road costs. This is a significant figure for a Province like Manitoba. Not only is it a matter of dollars and cents, Mr. Speaker, and the transfer of costs from the railways to provincial and municipal Governments and the property taxpayer, but it is also going to cause considerable inconvenience. We know that once these heavy trucks start chewing up the small country roads and wearing them down, the people who presently live along those roads, which were not designed for this heavy traffic, will have to suffer the inconvenience of cut up roads. In these days when governments are so reluctant to spend money, obviously these people will have to wait a long time in order to have those roads repaired.

We in this Party are concerned that, if we allow this provision of the Bill to go through, advantage will be given to the private sector of the grain industry and much will be taken away from the orderly marketing of grain. Larger costs will be placed on the pools. In this country, Mr. Speaker, there is a long tradition of the orderly marketing of grain, with good reason. Farmers in this country have experienced the wilful action of international grain markets which can bankrupt the farmer and leave a family without income, and can even leave whole communities devastated because of the difficulties associated with not being sure of a fair price for their grain at the end.

Because of the vagaries of the international grain markets, it has been necessary in this country to move to a system of orderly grain marketing. This has benefited not only the farmer but the consumer as well, because it assures people of a continuous supply of grain, that the basic ingredients for the making of bread are there and are not subject to the whimsy of some fluctuation in international markets. We have set up a system to supply ourselves with these basic human needs. We in this Party are concerned that this provision in the Bill will mean that the orderly marketing of grain will be threatened, that the prairie Wheat Pools, along with the provincial and local governments, will be paying the costs, and the real beneficiaires of this change in policy will be the railroads.

I would like to give an example of the reason why this change, which envisages the greater movement of grain by trucking rather than by rail line, is not necessarily a cost saving arrangement. There is some experience in this area. The State of Iowa went into a program which involved the transfer of grain movement from rail to road and from country elevators to inland terminals. It was very similar to the program envisaged today. The result of that program was that the State of Iowa found its highway system being worn out by trucks at a rate two to three times as fast as the government of Iowa could afford to repair those roads. Are we asking the Governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to face this kind of situation?

It is not good enough simply to bow to pressure from the railroads. It is not good enough for the Conservative caucus to sit in silence while this Government moves to transfer costs from the railroads to provincial and municipal governments, to the farmers and to property taxpayers. I call upon the Conservative Party, Mr. Speaker, to enter into this debate with regard to this specific amendment. Speak up for the Prairies! Join our Party and fight this transfer of costs from the railways on to the backs of the farmers.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, my colleague says I should not really bother speaking, but I am sure those who are watching this debate must find it amusing to watch the NDP. They say they are engaged in this all-out fight against the dismantling of the Crow, but instead of dealing with the specifics of this legislation and chastising its authors, they choose to fight the Conservative Party.

I think it is fast becoming quite evident that their so-called fight to retain the Crow is becoming phonier every day. It is pretty shallow because we all know that through the course of this summer the Bill was fought in committee by the "Lone Ranger", the very dedicated Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). All these fellows come in here now, the instant experts, and read out speeches prepared by their researchers which really do not add a whole lot to the debate.

Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, I think the NDP should be ashamed, because if anyone is responsible for this legislation, they are. They are the ones responsible for returning the Liberal Government to office and thereby bringing forth this legislation. They should hang their heads in shame. I will tell you something else, Mr. Speaker. If they were given the chance, I would lay you ten to one odds they would do the same thing again. Rather than attacking the authors of this Bill, they choose to attack the Conservative Party. That is consistent with the same old hypocrisy we have heard from that corner ever since I have been a Member of Parliament.

The NDP proposes to delete those words which say that the Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Mazankowski: The Chairman of the Committee asks, how did it get there? It got there because of an amendment proposed by our Party and supported by the majority of Members on the Transport Committee. The actions of the NDP, in its desire to withdraw that particular clause, demonstrate two things. First of all, the NDP are against the trucking industry, the little trucker who buys his vehicle, has it serviced in a small town and hires local people to do the job. They are against the small trucking industry in western Canada. They are also against the producer because the motive behind this amendment is to maximize the return to the producer.

The authority of the Administrator is based upon the fact that the trucking of grain should be done only when it is in the best interests of the producer to do so. So that is a concomitant of this Party's determination to bring about a transportation system which is not only effective, efficient and reliable, but indeed one which will utilize all modes of transport to the greatest possible extent to ensure we can move more grain efficiently and reliably.

I find it very difficult to follow the twisted and warped logic of the NDP. I guess it is because they really do not know what is going on. They do not have representation in the farming community. If they had, they would know that producers are very keenly interested in bringing about a system which will be efficient, reliable and utilize all modes of transport. But once again they are employing their traditional scare tactics. They are saying: "If you do this, you are going to wipe out all the branch lines, destroy the Wheat Board and orderly marketing". That is all they rely on, scare tactics and their own ideological and philosophical beliefs. I submit to you, Sir, that following that logic is not in the best interests of the grain producer. That should be the bottom line of this whole Bill, even though there is much in it which will be very detrimental to the producer.

It has been universally accepted by everyone in this House, and anyone who knows anything about grain handling and transportation, that we do need an efficient, effective and reliable handling system. That really has a nice ring to it, but really there is not much in this legislation to promote efficiency. What we are doing is promoting the status quo, promoting a cost-plus regime. We are promoting a guaranteed annual income for the railways, which the NDP so universally embraces. They support that guaranteed annual income to the railroads and then cry about the fact that there is not enough efficiency. There again is the hypocrisy of the NDP. There are no rewards in this Bill for cost cutting, streamlining, speeding up deliveries or improving dependability. This particular clause we believe at least opens the door to allowing some of those things to develop.

In order to have the kind of system we are all desirous of achieving, we must make the best available use of all transport modes. Very basically, Mr. Speaker, trucks can play a complementary role in facilitating grain movement, all in the name of the producer. The trucking industry has been involved in the movement of grain for many years, they are not strangers to it, but this Bill really closes the door to their involvement. The fact that the Government switched its option of payment really closed the door to any meaningful participation by the trucking industry.

We should really consider this very carefully, Mr. Speaker, because I think it is fair to say that in some instances savings can be accrued. The NDP asks who is going to pay the additional subsidy. We are looking at this as a cost saving to the producer and taxpayer, not as an additional expenditure. That is why the Chairman of the Committee ruled this particular provision in order. The Central Co-ordinating Agency Task Force report outlines the potential on some light and medium density branch lines to save something in the order of 41 cents a bushel. That is the difference between maintaining a branch line with light density and moving grain by truck. I suspect in some cases the individual producer would end up getting better service. So those are things which should in fact be taken into consideration.

We have the concept of the off-line elevator advanced in the Hall Report, which goes on to say this:

> There are stations where some type of transportation service to grain elevators is imperative in order that producers in that area are not left in an impossible situation. The Commission has examined and evaluated a number of suggestions for the retention of service. In many cases present rail service was the more expensive option available. The Commission examined in some depth the concept of a mini-train operation, involving the use of lighter power and car equipment and transloading facilities. The Commission found that the mini-train concept while operationally feasible was not as practical a solution as the establishment of certain elevators as "off-line elevators". Grain receipts at these elevators would be transported to main line elevators by commercial truck at no additional cost to the producer.

Here we have the NDP wanting to close that option, a very important recommendation advanced by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall. We always hear them heaping accolades of praise on the former Chief Justice, but here is one very important recommendation, and all this enabling provision will do is give the Administrator the power to do some of those things advanced by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall.

I could go on and speak of the importance of the trucking industry and how it can play a more vital and integral part in facilitating the movement of grain, but perhaps I can save that for the debate on the next clause.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, it may be a good idea to set the record straight with a few facts.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): First, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) accused the Government of putting this amendment in the Bill because it wanted to abandon branch lines. I think that was his contention. I would like to point out to Your Honour and to the House that the Government did not have this provision in the original draft of the Bill. As the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) said, it was he who proposed the amendment in committee, the amendment that the New Democratic Party would now like to remove. It concerns a subclause of Clause 17.

Mr. Mazankowski: They don't believe in democracy, either.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): The committee decided to accept the amendment because, in its view, it would provide more efficient transportation of grain.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper) really said nothing, because I suspect he does not know anything about the Bill. Rather, he filled his speech up with "Mr. Speaker', repeated over and over again. Whenever one hears that, one knows an Hon. Member does not know very much about what he is discussing. Otherwise, he would be able to make a speech without constant reference to Mr. Speaker every second or third word.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What he said was "Mr. Keeper".

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I can discount that intervention because it did not have any substance to it whatsoever.

There are areas in western Canada, and we had these kinds of representations before the committee, where at times it is more efficient and cheaper to move grain by truck than by rail. The NDP has constantly harked back to the damage it will do the highways of the various Provinces if the grain is hauled by truck. I have some difficulty accepting that argument because trucks move on the highways all the time, whether they are hauling grain, gravel, fertilizer or any other commodity. The highways, one would assume, are built to a standard that will sustain that kind of traffic. If they are not, then I suggest it is time they were.

An Hon. Member: They are heavily subsidized.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): The various provincial Governments have means at their disposal to raise funds for the construction of highways, and trucks pay a very heavy part of those means of raising funds for the construction and maintenance of highways. I do not believe it is the concern of the Bill or the role of this Parliament to decide how the highways in any particular Province are to be utilized. I think it is the role of the House at this time to deal with the provisions of the Bill. I hope we can go on and do that without, as the Hon. Member for Vegreville has said, the instant experts, suddenly rising to remind us that there is a Speaker in the House by constant reference to him, without there being any substance to their speeches.

I agree with him that the Hon. Member for Regina West spent much time in the committee. In fact, he barely missed a sitting at all. The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) spent much time in committee as well and certainly knows the Bill. The same is true of the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo). When those three Hon. Members speak, I assume they have something to say and at least they know what they are talking about.

However, this particular amendment by the Hon. Member for Regina West is, in my opinion, one which will weaken the Bill. I believe the Bill was strengthened in committee with the 89 amendments that were accepted, this particular subclause being one of them. I would certainly hope that the House would now deal with it expeditiously and defeat the amendment so that that subclause will stay in the Bill.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few comments with respect to this particular amendment presented by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I have waited this long to comment on the amendment. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper) has asked where Members of the Conservative Party are with respect to this matter. Quite frankly, I was waiting to see whether or not I would hear an explanation of the purpose of the amendment. I was unable to understand its purpose on the basis of the provisions of the particular subsection of Clause 17 of the Bill, which does provide for the possibility, in the interest of the producer, that provision will be made for the trucking of grain.

I simply want to bring a couple of examples of the availability of such provision, as brought forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), in the committee stage, with reference to my own constituency. I know the New Democratic Party has now trained its guns on the Conservative Party. Its Leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), said that his Party's preoccupation is now to attack the Conservative Party. That was his objective at the beginning of this sitting of the session.

I want to tell the NDP that that has never succeeded in the past as a way by which to accomplish what must be done for western Canadians. The people of western Canada are fed up with the kind of attitude that has been taken by the Leader of the NDP, of cosying up to the Government on every occasion, supporting it whenever it comes close to a confidence vote, and attacking the Official Opposition, the Conservative Party. The people of western Canada do not understand that. What they do understand is circumstances such as those in my own constituency.

In the Asquith subdivision, there was a very serious situation over the course of the last year, one in which we came very close to violence. I called upon the former Minister of Transport to have a meeting with representatives in my constituency regarding rail line abandonment. The Minister would not meet with my constituents and the order proceeded for the removal of the branch line. The results are now being manifested in the village of Arelee, which has now lost its village status. It has turned in its village status because the elevators are gone.

One of the proposals that I wanted to make to the Minister at that time concerned alternatives which should have been considered in terms of keeping the elevators operating in that particular community. One of the possibilities concerned trucking. However, the Minister refused to meet. He was insensitive to the needs of people in that very important area, one which is growing in terms of production of grain and population, but which is now faced with the situation where the branch line has been torn up, removed by the CPR. What is wrong with having the option available under this legislation, in the interest of keeping the elevators operating in the community, to allow the community to carry on with its small businesses as a centre of commerce for farmers who come in to deliver grain? What is wrong, I ask Members of the NDP, with having the option available in Arelee Saskatchewan, to truck grain?

Mr. McKnight: And Sonningdale.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The same situation obtains in Sonningdale, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight), points out. Members of the NDP want to remove from the legislation the possibility of alternative methods with respect to the shipment of grain and maintenance of elevators.

What about the other branch line which is under review in my constituency, the Carleton line, as mentioned by the Hon. Member for Prince Albert? This line extends from my constituency. Mr. Justice Hall, in his examination of that particular line, did not allow it to be maintained as part of the permanent network.

I see, Mr. Speaker, that it is now one o'clock. I would like to continue my remarks after resumption of the debate.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SOVIET MISSILE STRENGTH

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Madam Speaker, world history has proven that the matching of aggressive power with the balancing power structure tends to maintain peace, but any signs of weakness simply invite an aggressor to move forward.

Let us remember and state very clearly that we wanted no missiles but that the Soviets would not have a zero zero solution. Let us not forget that while Cruise missiles are said to be unverifiable, Soviet proposals have never allowed for verification. Let us remind ourselves also that the Soviet Union has already tested the Cruise missile.

When we weary of being told that we must not deploy, that we must negotiate, and that we are fuelling the arms race, recollect for a moment just who has hundreds of intermediate range nuclear forces in the field and who has none. NATO has none at the present time but, as a contrast in part, the Soviet Union has more than 360 SS-20s with a range of 5,000 kilometres, or more than 3,100 miles, and each SS-20 has three warheads.

Who proposed negotiations in the first place? NATO. Who dismissed negotiation out of hand four years ago? The Soviets. Who is withdrawing more warheads than may be deployed? NATO. Who deploys new missiles and keeps the old ones as well? The Soviet Union. Who is seeking balance? NATO. Who is threatening to field even more weapons if current imbalances are remedied even partially? The Soviets.

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member's time is finished.

INDUSTRY

COST OF ESTABLISHING HELICOPTER MANUFACTURING PLANT

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, it has finally been announced publicly that Bell Textron has received the contract to build helicopters. Every Canadian man, woman, and child will be subsidizing the plant to the tune of $10.60. That represents over $5 million from the Niagara region alone, a region that is known as the unemployment capital of Canada, with a staggering unemployment rate of 21.7 per cent as of January, 1983. In September that figure was still 16.3 per cent, the highest in the country. Yet the Niagara region, where plant, facilities and skilled workers are available, loses contracts to other areas of the country where unemployment is less serious.

The Bell helicopter decision is only one example. Another is the case of the Port Weller drydock which did not receive a contract for building an icebreaker despite all the money which has been directed to improving the shipbuilding industry.

Most of these funds, unfortunately, end up in the ridings or home towns of Liberal front benchers. When will the Government throw aside political considerations and give thought to the crucial issue of regional unemployment levels, expertise, and plant facilities, in deciding where the taxpayers' money is directed for creating jobs in this country called Canada?

ESTABLISHMENT OF HELICOPTER MANUFACTURING PLANT AT MIRABEL, P.Q.

Mr. Robert Gourd (Argenteuil-Papineau): Madam Speaker, last Friday, the Government of Canada announced that Bell Helicopter would establish a plant at Mirabel for the manufacture of light twin-engine helicopters. Contrary to what my hon.

colleague said earlier, this plant will represent an investment of $514 million and create 2,775 high tech jobs. The Canadian Government will contribute $165.2 million or 60 per cent of total government subsidies.

Bell Textron will create a new Canadian company that will build and run a plant covering 27,000 square metres in the Mirabel industrial park. The plant will start manufacturing helicopters in 1985. The Canadian Government will invest another $100 million in the manufacture of helicopter engines at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft of Canada in Longeuil. Together, these two projects will create 3,775 high tech jobs, in addition to considerable economic spin-offs for the greater Montreal area and neighbouring counties.

Through these subsidies, the Canadian Government is demonstrating the importance of maintaining and developing expertise in the Quebec aerospace industry. Job creation is the Government's foremost priority, and I think this proves once again that it has not forgotten the Mirabel area.

Madam Speaker: Order! The Hon. Member's time has expired.

CONSEQUENCES OF GOVERNMENT'S ECONOMIC POLICY

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, the Government announced last Friday that the unemployment rate was declining. That was good news. However, good news sometimes covers up the reality of the situation.

I would like to bring to the attention of the House that there were 499,000 more unemployed Canadians last month than were unemployed on the day that the Liberal Government took office in 1980. That is one-half million more unemployed Canadians as a direct consequence of government economic policy.

We have heard statements in the House about public expenditures for huge signs to be put on buildings that are make-work projects. While that is good news for the few Canadians who get to work on those projects, it is Government economic policy over all that has thrown an additional one-half million Canadians out of work in the last three and a half years. It is time for all Members of this Chamber to consider Government economic policy and examine whether a proposed change in policy will have a positive or negative impact on the labour force.

When the Minister stands outside the Chamber and announces he will pinpoint the new job locations in the future, we are wise to remember—

Madam Speaker: Order.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

INCREASED TOLLS—COST TO WESTERN GRAIN PRODUCERS

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Madam Speaker, I would like to raise the problem created by legislated increases to costs. I am speaking of the proposed increases to St. Lawrence Seaway tolls. Just over half of western Canadian grain goes through the St. Lawrence Seaway. The tolls are set by the federal Government through law. This year they averaged more than $1.60 per tonne, and are paid in full by the western grain producers. Last year's toll cost western grain producers just over $24 million. These increases have been ongoing from the period 1977 to 1980 when the tolls increased by just over 100 per cent. In the last two years, notwithstanding the six and five guidelines, the increases were a total of 28 per cent in the two years.

Through an Act of Parliament the Government is required to recover all operating costs regardless of traffic conditions. I suggest that when considering these traffic conditions we should take into account that grain traffic has increased but the rest of the traffic through the Seaway has declined abysmally to the point where the formula will require a large increase in grain tolls even though the Seaway is well maintained and has shown a real cost decline per unit of about 12 per cent over the last two years.

I submit that an increase is unfair and uncalled for in light of current economics, and that the whole process should be reviewed.

LABOUR RELATIONS

HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT RATE IN GASPÉ REGION OF QUEBEC

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, on February 7 of this year, I said the following in the House: "If the situation continues, the entire Gaspé area is heading for an economic and social catastrophe in 1983". Today, Madam Speaker, I would like to talk about that situation. It is often said that where there is a will, there is a way. However, when the decision-making power is in the hands of Government, what are people going to do, when they have been waiting for years and years? Something had to give, and it finally did last week at Grande-Vallée, which is typical of the situation in the Gaspé area, and especially in the riding of Gaspé which is now in a very serious economic slump. Four sawmills are shut down, the newsprint industry in Chandler and the copper mine in Murdochville are operating at a fraction of their capacity, the fishing season was one of the worst we ever had and the tourism industry is only seasonal. Elected representatives and organizations that are concerned about the region's economic development have submitted briefs to government authorities and have even suggested solutions, but all this is taking a very long time. The people have no choice but to demonstrate openly. It is sad but true. It is high time both Ottawa and Quebec showed some political will and tackled these problems seriously. We have been able to clear up worse situation in the past, and it is time to show that distributory justice is possible.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

RESIGNATION OF UNITED STATES SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, the sudden resignation of James Watt as U.S. Interior Secretary drew cheers from a wide array of Watt's foes. As someone put it, for people concerned with natural resources, the environment, acid rain, and so on, he was the epitome of all that is not good. Now that all of the politicking and fuss is over, let us get back to the important issues.

Over the weekend I was delighted to hear the Governors and officials from various midnorthern U.S. States met and discussed in earnest the issue of acid rain. In view of Mr. Watt's resignation and the importance Canada places upon his position, it is hoped the American administration will make an early appointment of someone who is more acutely aware of and sensitive to the international importance of air pollution, especially the acid rain issue.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

STATUS OF NATIVE WOMEN

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, in marking the tenth anniversary of the Murdoch case last week I was able to note that substantial progress had been made in redressing the injustices committed on Canadian women. The House will remember that the amendments passed last Spring on unemployment insurance corrected the discriminatory measures against which Stella Bliss had unsuccessfully complained. Regrettably the same cannot be said for injustices to native women.

Ten years ago the Supreme Court of Canada decided against Lavell and Bedard. With an astonishing lack of logic the Supreme Court held that no discrimination had taken place, although the loss of Indian status through Section 12(1)(b) of the Indian Act deprived these women of the right to live on their reserves, run for band council or chief, be eligible for education grants, housing, welfare, and ultimately even burial on reserves. Since then Canada has been humiliated internationally by being convicted of violation of the United Nations Human Rights Convention.

There is still no action on the part of the federal Government, only excuses about the delicacy of the situation and advice to native women to be patient. The word "soon" has become a four-letter word to Canada's native people. We need a firm promise and an early date for repeal of Section 12(1)(b) of the Indian Act and reinstatement of the women who were deprived of their status, with their children.

HOSPITAL INSURANCE PREMIUMS—SUGGESTION GOVERNMENT DISCONTINUE CONTRIBUTIONS

Mr. Hal Herbert (Vaudreuil): Madam Speaker, last Thursday in an exchange with the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray) I suggested that the federal Government should discontinue its tacit support for a regressive form of taxation in its contribution to hospital insurance premiums of federal public servants. In a subsequent exchange between the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) and the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp), the Minister said that the premiums were a very regressive form of taxation. I was happy to hear the Hon. Member for Provencher say in response:

—if the Minister says this is a regressive form of taxation, I agree.

I suggest that the federal Government discontinue as quickly as possible its contribution to the payment of hospital insurance premiums of federal public servants in the three provinces where they are paid, inasmuch as the Provinces are now using the non-payment of a regressive form of taxation in order to stop benefits to which every citizen should be entitled.

INCOME TAX

INTERPRETATION OF NORTHERN REMISSION ORDER

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, everyone knows that the taxation problems facing residents of northern Canada will not be solved until the Income Tax Act is amended to reflect northern financial realities. Indeed it is unfortunate the liberal Government obstinately refuses to address the issue except to demand more and more taxes from northerners. Now the Government has sunk to a new low as it seeks to penalize and harass employees of small businesses.

Ottawa tax sleuths have been examining the books of small companies and, if there has been the slightest possibility that their accounting terminology or practices do not correspond with the Remission Order, employees have been assessed back taxes of which they had no prior anticipation. It is grossly unfair to single out employees of small usiness for discriminatory and arbitrary tax treatment. The Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Bussières) ought to reconsider his jaundiced procedures in light of the spirit, not just the strict legal interpretation, of the Northern Remission Order.

REQUEST FOR NEW INITIATIVES TO COMBAT YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Over the weekend the Minister mused publicly about new initiatives, saying that new training programs aimed at young people would be announced within a few weeks. Given the fact that, even though the figures, generally speaking, are encouraging, the labour force survey on Friday indicated that we still have 19 per cent unemployment among young people, representing about 556,000 unemployed young people, are there new initiatives? Why cannot we have these new initiatives announced now because the need is urgent?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, it is not a problem that was discovered by us simply last Friday. We have a variety of proposals, programs and initiatives which we are considering. There have not been definitive decisions taken about which of these would be the most cost effective way of responding to the problem. I would hope we could bring forward these initiatives in the broad framework of a Speech from the Throne so that it could be seen how they would relate to the whole variety of government programs we would like to bring forward. I urge Hon. Members on the opposite side of the House to help us arrive at that position by expediting the passage of the Crow Bill.

Mr. McGrath: The only program we have so far is the Access Program. It represents if it reaches its target—and it is just starting—31,000 jobs and 4,000 conservation jobs, or about 6 per cent of the total unemployed youth in the country.

REQUEST FOR EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT OF PROGRAMS

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, since youth unemployment has been at 20 per cent proportions for the last several months, why is it necessary to wait for a new session of Parliament? If there is anything left in the cupboard, why cannot the Minister announce the programs now so that desperate young people can take advantage of them?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I would partially reiterate my previous answer. We are considering a whole variety of approaches that we think would be beneficial. It is a question of trying to determine which of these will be most effective.

I would like to point out to the Hon. Member, as we have in the past—and I suppose we will have to do it again in the House—that at the present time the federal Government is spending approximately $2.5 million a day to help young people with employment problems, across the country. Close to $1.5 billion for the year 1983-84 will go to assist young people with training, job creation, and matching their capacities to job opportunities. A great deal is being done within the context of the revival of the economy as a whole to help them, but we have some new ideas we want to bring forward. We want to bring them forward in the proper way after we have ascertained they are cost efficient and see how they relate to other government programs.

USE OF SKILLS TRAINING FUNDS

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, the Minister complained about having surplus funds in a program called the Critical Trade Skills Training Program. So far this year only 11 per cent of those funds has been spent. This means there is still $70 million sitting in that Program; we know that is in the cupboard. Last year only 66 per cent of funds for that Program was spent. Why cannot that money, which is not being utilized, be redirected to wage subsidies to the private sector to provide jobs now, not some pie in the sky musings of the Minister about some pre-election Speech from the Throne?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, as I have already pointed out to the Hon. Member, there is money available now under the Career Access Program which is directed toward providing, through job subsidies, assistance to young people entering the labour force. Our estimate is that something close to 25,000 young people have been helped by that Program or predecessor programs in this year. We expect another 33,000 or so to be assisted in the forthcoming year. There are already these programs in place.

The reason the Skills Training funds have not been taken up to the degree we expected has been a certain reluctance in the private sector to use the funds, given the overhead costs involved. Given the strength of the recovery that is taking place in the country we believe there will be an opportunity, not only this year but next year, to use these funds. I am not convinced by the Hon. Member's argument that the appropriate thing to do at this time would be to shift funds away from training into the Career Access job creation program. As I said earlier, that program is operating and seems to be operating effectively and, who knows, may be able to be expanded in years ahead.

SPECIAL RECOVERY CAPITAL PROJECTS PROGRAM

IMPLEMENTATION OF PROJECTS

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct my question to one of the Government's harshest critics, the Minister of State for Economic Development. According to reliable reports the Government is lagging by one-third, $250 million in the present fiscal year alone, on the planned projects which were to be fast-tracked under the Special Recovery Capital Projects Program announced by the Minister of Finance on April 19. Are these delays in any way a consequence of the kind of ministerial laziness or incompetence cited in the documents authored by the Minister of State for Economic Development and widely publicized in Macleans's magazine last week?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I will deal with the last part of the question first. There is no such criticism that has been uttered by me verbally or in writing to my colleagues, as they testified during their responses to a barrage of questions last week.

With respect to the fast-track program, I hope the Hon. Member has had the opportunity of reviewing the material which I promised to send to him and which I have now provided to him. Indeed, there is less money being spent this year because of the management of the program as we tried to ensure that it was managed effectively and efficiently. We are certainly not going to throw out money in order to meet a target which was established before even preliminary project approval had been given to a number of these projects. However, I am pleased to report that, as matters stand, more than the 60 per cent that is to be spent within the first two years will in fact be spent by March, 1985.

During the period when Canadians will be looking for work across this country, in hamlets, towns, villages and major centres, we will have a lot of work that will be performed. I might also say that a great deal of construction is already under way in the current period, as the Hon. Member knows from the material which I furnished to him.

REPORTED DELAYS

Mr. Thomas Siddon (Richmond-South Delta): Madam Speaker, noted economists have indicated that these delays could indeed contribute to further inflationary pressure by the middle of this decade. If these delays are not the fault of Ministers, how does the Minister of State explain statements in his own secret status report to Cabinet on the Special Recovery Capital Projects Program, dated September 16, to the effect that "the New Brunswick regional Minister has yet to advance proposals", and how does he explain Annex F to that report which lists specific projects valued at over $1 billion where slippage has occurred or acceleration is required? What success has the Minister of State had in getting these negligent Ministers, who are fingered in this cabinet document, moving down the fast track, or are Canada's unemployed to be left sitting in the station?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Frankly, Madam Speaker, I find those allegations quite extraordinary. Since the Hon. Member likes to read publications, I suggest he look at The Financial Post of last week where he will see an article which expressed surprise at the extent to which this program has been implemented in such a short period of time. With respect to New Brunswick and his statement that projects have not proceeded, some of the most significant projects which have been undertaken within this program are taking place in New Brunswick. Ask the people what they think of the work created at the Saint John Drydock and the Maritime Forestry Research Centre at Fredericton. The facts are there for all to see. New Brunswick has been looking ahead rapidly. Those are only two of a number of examples which are available.

COST EFFECTIVENESS OF PROPOSED YOUTH PROGRAMS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. It concerns the fact that over 500,000 young people are unemployed today, as they were in September, August, July, June, May, all the way back. I return to the Minister's answer which he gave just a minute ago. He said the reason the Government has not announced something, if I got the phrase correctly, is that it wants to get the cost effectiveness of the programs assessed. The Minister has now had this job for about two months. Is he telling us that two months are insufficient time for him as Minister, with that important kind of responsibility, to make up his mind on the relevance of his own programs?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): No, Madam Speaker, that is not what I was saying. I was saying that there are a whole variety of programs worth examining. That examination is taking place within the Cabinet system. Ministers, including myself, are assessing the alternatives available to us to try to understand the way in which we can get the most effective creation of jobs for young people, given the funds available to us.

REQUEST FOR EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT OF JOB-CREATION PROGRAMS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the Minister has had the job for over two months. The problem for one out of five young people has gone on for over six months. The Minister's own Department says that one out of five people will remain unemployed through 1985. As every Canadian knows, the situation worsens in the months and weeks ahead of Christmas. Will the Minister tell us why the Government will not make an announcement within the next week in terms of job-creation programs so that young people who want work instead of collecting some form of welfare will be able to get jobs?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker. I indicated to the Hon. Member earlier my view about that. The problem has been a continuing one and a great deal has been done about it in terms of the funds which we are expending this year. As I mentioned earlier, we are spending something like $2.5 million a day. In the year 1983-84, close to 180,000 young people will have been assisted by these programs. The most expeditious way the Hon. Member could help would be by getting his Party to let the Crow legislation pass through the House because that would create jobs for young people as well as others. It would enable us to bring forward within the structure of a Speech from the Throne those programs which are needed by this country. He can help a lot more. He has been in his job more than two months and he still has not responded to that problem.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MAKE ANNOUNCEMENT WITHIN TEN DAYS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the Minister talks about what the Government has done. I repeat, there are over 500,000 young Canadians who are out of work. The Government's total program so far for the youth of this land are concerned will provide jobs for fewer than 5 per cent. Considering that legislation is not required, will the Minister give a promise to the young people of this country that, within the next week or ten days, he will make an announcement about job-creation programs so that at least a number of them will have jobs by Christmas who would not otherwise have a job?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the implications of the Hon. Member's question, which are in effect that nothing has been done, are entirely inaccurate. Close to $600 billion has been spent on training programs. Almost $400 million has been spent on direct job creation. Something like $136 million was spent on matching opportunities and training for jobs for young people. A great deal has been done. He could get a lot more done quickly if he would get the Crow through the House.

APPOINTMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND REPRESENTATIVE TO CABINET

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Is it his intention to delay the appointment of a Newfoundland Minister and Minister of State for Mines until the charges now pending against the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's have been finally disposed of by the courts?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Possibly, but not necessarily, Madam Speaker.

POSSIBLE REAPPOINTMENT OF FORMER MINISTER

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister has bungled this appointment, caused great disappointment to the people of Newfoundland, and has left a very important portfolio vacant while he muses about whether or not to make an appointment. I would like a clear answer as to whether it is now the Prime Minister's position that, if the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's is successful in his defence of this particular charge, which we all hope he will be, he will be reappointed to the Cabinet in the position from which he resigned? Also has the Prime Minister any thoughts at all about the position he takes as Prime Minister of interfering with the judicial process, that is to say, giving clear signals to the prosecutors and judges that, if the Member for Burin-St. George's is successful in his defence, he will receive the reward of being reappointed to the Cabinet?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, on the first part of the question regarding portfolios, the Hon. Member will know that we already have an excellent Minister of Mines, Energy and Resources.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Not in that order.

Mr. Trudeau: He is doing a very good job. I am not saying that assistance would not be welcome, but I am sure he can bear the burden for another few weeks or months according to what the Cabinet decides. So far as the second part of the question is concerned, if the Hon. Member is concerned about the judicial process in the sense that he indicates, he should rule himself out of order.

AIR CANADA

GIMLI ACCIDENT—REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY INTO SAFETY PROCEDURES

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, in what appears to be a sham and a cover-up, the President of Air Canada, Mr. Claude Taylor, has seriously, intentionally or otherwise, misled the Minister of Transport on matters relating to the safety procedures of Air Canada. In turn, the Minister, intentionally or otherwise, has misled the House and the Canadian people into believing that Air Canada is clear and free of any problems dealing with safety. We have learned just today that the Gimli incident was not—

• (1430)

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I wonder if the Hon. Member is aware that this is Question Period.

Mr. Domm: Madam Speaker, we have learned just today that the Gimli incident in which an airplane ran out of fuel was not discussed at the hearings on air safety conducted by Bob Buck. Would the Minister now call for a public inquiry without asking the Cabinet for permission? Will he demand a public inquiry into the safety of Air Canada, and not go by the word of the President of that Crown corporation?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is either unintentionally or deliberately misleading the Canadian public with the kind of question that he is asking. If he would examine the facts he would see that we are proceeding with the utmost care to ensure the safety of the travelling public. One of the important steps in that direction was to have a discussion with the management of Air Canada to determine what steps they have taken in terms of their own authority, and at the same time to come to an agreement to go ahead with a public examination of the Gimli incident. That is exactly what the Hon. Member has said should be done and in fact that is what we are doing. However, we must follow the proper procedures, acquire the proper person, and develop terms of reference which must be approved by Cabinet. If the Hon. Member is not aware of those basic preliminary steps, then he should go back to school for a primer course.

Mr. Domm: Madam Speaker, I would suggest that the Minister review his own statements about the public inquiry. After eight weeks of questioning in the House, we had not been assured of a public inquiry until just now.

DISCIPLINING OF EMPLOYEES—REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough): Madam Speaker, my second question is also directed to the Minister. Would he agree to a stay of execution for five employees of Air Canada until such time as the public investigation takes place? Why is the Minister prejudging five employees of a Crown corporation, using information wrongly supplied to him by the President of Air Canada?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, if anyone in the House is guilty of prejudging it is the Hon. Member who in his statements and questions has made a number of assertions concerning the actions taken by the management of Air Canada, without knowing whether they are correct or not. That, Madam Speaker, is the height of irresponsibility for a Member of Parliament.

We are proceeding as we should by asking for an open public examination, and that examination will reveal all of the relevant and pertinent facts. I would expect that the Hon. Member would wait for that open examination without going ahead with the kind of witch burning that he is engaged in this afternoon.

THE ARTS

TAX DEPARTMENT'S TREATMENT OF WEST COAST ARTIST

Hon. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Communications. The Minister will of course know that a very prominent Canadian artist from the West coast will be burning a number of his art works on Thursday morning rather than be forced to pay income tax on art works that are not yet sold. He is doing this as a consequence of a long period of harassment by tax officials of this particular artist and of artists in general. I would ask the Minister if he has done anything to intervene with his Cabinet colleagues in order to put a stop to this shameful situation and save this Canadian art, or if he expects to sit there while the art burns.

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the question he is raising at the moment is essentially a tax matter and should be directed to my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue. As Minister of Communications I personally have indicated, time and time again, our interest in seeing that people in the cultural and artistic community are dealt with as fairly as are other Canadians under the tax Act. I have already drawn this case to the attention of the Minister of National Revenue and I am told that he is examining the real facts of the case.

Mr. Fraser: Madam Speaker, for a Minister whose responsibilities include defending and advancing the causes of artists, that answer is a cop-out.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Hon. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Madam Speaker, on Thursday morning that artist will burn his art works unless something is done. As recently as September 23, 1983, the Minister received a copy of a long letter from representatives of Canadian artists. That letter described this situation and asked for a moratorium on harassment until the tax laws dealing with artists can be re-examined. Is the Minister prepared to stand in the House today and say that that will be done and that this shameful situation will be put right? If not, we will become the laughing stock of the art community.

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, I know that the Hon. Member very much enjoys playing games in Parliament, and he very much enjoys the charade he has just put on. He knows full well that this is a matter that falls under the jurisdiction of my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue. He also knows full well that these questions must be handled directly by the Minister of National Revenue. I have clearly indicated to the Hon. Member, in response to his first question, that I had already brought the matter to the attention of the Minister of National Revenue. I have done so, and I will continue to pursue the matter with the Minister of National Revenue. To take the attitude taken by the Hon. Member is to play a charade in an attempt to score a few political points.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PROPOSED SASKATCHEWAN WATER AND SEWAGE PROJECTS

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. He, on behalf of his Government, has entered into agreements under the Special Recovery Program with the Regional Municipality of Sudbury, the Regional Municipality of Niagara, the City of Timmins, and the Province of Ontario. These agreements provide for the federal Government to share 50 per cent of the costs of water and sewage projects in those areas. Will the Minister enter into the same agreement with the Province of Saskatchewan and the City of Regina in order that Regina may receive the same treatment as those other municipalities?

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, the agreements the Hon. Member has just referred to were made under that special program. We have taken into consideration the elements of high priority and urgency which are the main guiding principles under which these projects are undertaken. Each case has been and will be considered on its own merits.

Mr. McKnight: Madam Speaker, the municipalities involved are of equal or larger size than the City of Regina. The matters of putting people back to work in steel mills in Regina and of supplying the citizens of Regina with drinkable water should have high priority.

REGINA WATER SUPPLY

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I would ask the Minister again if he would consider treating the Province of Saskatchewan and the City of Regina in the same way as he has treated the Province and municipalities that I mentioned previously.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that the people of Regina do have drinkable water. However, I will keep my mind open to further suggestions made by the Hon. Member.

BANKS AND BANKING

PENALTIES IMPOSED FOR RENEGOTIATION OF MORTGAGES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I would suspect that every Member of Parliament has, on his or her desk, a stack of letters from constituents who have been trying to renegotiate their mortgages out of the 18 per cent to 22 per cent range and are quite prepared to provide the necessary prepayment of a three-month penalty but have in some cases been asked to pay many thousands of dollars more.

My question is directed to the Minister of Finance who, in March, said that a three-month penalty would seem reasonable and that if there were such cases as those that had been mentioned, they should be brought to his attention and he would undertake to have them submitted to the institutions involved in an effort to prevent those financial institutions from being unfair to some citizens. We have received letters two and three times from those same people saying that absolutely nothing has been done. I know it would not be the intent of the Minister of Finance to mislead the people, but what on earth did he mean by that comment?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I myself have received many similar letters and have handled them personally. When Hon. Members referred the letters to me, I had them sent to the authorities concerned at the various financial institutions, asking them to give particular attention to those cases. The Hon. Member is of course aware that I sent each Member of this House a list of the names and addresses of mortgage officers in all financial institutions. From the results that were obtained, I know that in many cases it was possible to renegotiate mortgages on the basis of a three-month payment. It seems there are a number of cases that have not yet been settled, and I shall continue to put pressure on the institutions and hope my hon. colleague will do the same, as is his duty, so that only a three-month penalty will be required.

• (1440)

[English]

Mr. Riis: I want to remind the Minister that he is responsible for the banks.

PROVISIONS OF BANK ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): We understand that the Minister and the Government are now prepared to open up the Bank Act for the first time in some 60 years that this has been contemplated, other than on the regular ten-year period. The Minister is prepared to do that to assist the foreign banks in this country. Is he prepared to do the same thing to assist the hard pressed Canadian home owners? Is he prepared to give them the same treatment that he is giving the foreign banks?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the probem concerns not only the banks but all lending institutions in Canada, including trust companies and all other institutions that are involved in loans.

I feel that my hon. colleague is making a very superficial analysis of the situation. The point he has raised is one that I am concerned about, however, and quite frankly, I think the financial institutions in question should be satisfied with a three-month payment, and I am now re-examining—

[English]

Mr. Riis: Do something. You said you would do something in this House.

Mr. Lalonde: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member should be as polite as I was in listening to his question and try to listen to my answer. It will not cost him anything.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, I said that I was re-examining the situation in the light of the fact that a number of institutions do not seem to be willing to co-operate.

I am discussing the matter with my colleague, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, and we are trying to find out whether there are any specific measures that should be taken in this respect.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT IN BOW RIVER CONSTITUENCY—ALLOCATION OF FUNDS

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. In 1982, 685 people were unemployed in Bow River and we received a grant of $200,000. In 1983, 1,893 people were unemployed and we received a grant of $100,000. Could the Minister outline the formula that gives this result?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker. Indeed, the formula is outlined in the correspondence that was sent to the Hon. Member and he might refer to it. In the allocation of funds under the Canada Works Program, which is the equivalent of the Community Development Program of the past, a minimum of $100,000 was spent for the constituency and the rest of the funds was allocated to those areas which had a higher than average labour surplus rate. The information is contained in the material that has already been sent to the Hon. Member. He can find it in great detail in that kit.

Mr. Taylor: Madam Speaker, it is an odd formula that provides that, the higher the unemployment, the lower the grant.

APPLICATION OF GRANT FORMULA

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, I should like to ask the Hon. Minister if the same formula is used in the ridings held by Liberal Members.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker, the answer is—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Roberts: The answer is yes, Madam Speaker. I admit that this sometimes brings forward rather bizarre results.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Look at them all over there.

Mr. McDermid: Keep going.

Mr. Roberts: For instance, the allocation to the constituency of Central has dramatically increased this year.

UNITED EMPIRE LOYALISTS

BICENTENNIAL ACTIVITIES IN ONTARIO

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State. On previous occasions I have asked the Minister what he would do to assist the United Empire Loyalists' bicentennial activities in the Province of Ontario during 1984. At that time he indicated the possibility of joint financing. What is the Government presently doing to encourage United Empire Loyalists' bicentennial activities in the Province of Ontario during 1984?

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to announce to the House that I have already written to the Intergovernmental Affairs Minister of Ontario to announce that the Canadian Government would participate in the celebration of the centennial of the major early settlements of Ontario. There is no doubt but that in forthcoming days a detailed statement will come from us explaining how the plans will be implemented.

Mr. Vankoughnet: Madam Speaker, this event marks a very significant and important aspect of the heritage of Canada, and I certainly hope the Minister will take it under consideration very soon.

FUNDING OF CELEBRATIONS

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Madam Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister what plans are under way to make funds available. Does the Minister have anything concrete to tell us? Many municipalities, organizations and individuals are making plans, but they do not know how far to go. Does the Minister have anything to tell them now—not weeks or months from now, but today?

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Yes, Madam Speaker. Our plans are twofold. Money will be made available for the enrichment of already existing programs such as that of the Canada War Museums which has put together an exhibition on the Loyalist history of the country, that will tour Ontario; the enrichment of the Fort William activities; the exchange of youth programs during the summer period, and an additional tour of the National Arts Centre. Moreover, funds will be made available to all citizens, groups, municipalities and localities in Ontario interested in applying for grants in the same format as that in which we implement the Canada Day celebration programs. Next week the details will be made public so that everyone who wants to participate in the celebrations will have an opportunity to file a request.

ENERGY

PROPOSAL TO SHIP PRUDHOE BAY GAS VIA COOK INLET

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, if he could put his coffee down and come into the House.

Is the Minister aware of a serious proposal being made by an American company, the Yukon Pacific Corporation, on the board of directors of which sit two former Governors of Alaska, to pipe Prudhoe Bay gas to Cook Inlet where it would be liquefied for shipment to Asian markets? If so, does the Minister share my view that were the United States administration to approve such an undertaking it would constitute a breach of the spirit of the 1977 treaty between Canada and the United States which contemplates shipping Prudhoe Bay gas to the lower 48 States through a pipeline via Canada?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, of course I had to take a coffee because the Opposition is so dull that I wanted to remain awake.

Mr. Nielsen: When are you going to start?

Mr. Chrétien: Madam Speaker, we made a deal with the American administration many years ago, and I think it will want to keep its word. If the administration in Washington decides to take gas from Alaska to its markets it will use the Canadian route.

CANADIAN POSITION

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Since this proposal has been advanced, can the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, or perhaps the Secretary of State for External Affairs, tell us what formal communication has taken place between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States to reiterate our position, that it was in keeping with the original treaty that the gas not go to Cook Inlet and be exported that way but, rather through a pipeline built on Canadian soil?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I do not think that I need to reaffirm our position to the American administration. It is well aware of it. The proposition is not one advanced by the public sector in the United States; it is a project of private entrepreneurs. Personally, I do not think that it seriously threatens the building of the pipeline. That is not being built at this time because there is no need for the gas in the American market.

FUNDING FOR YOUTH JOB-CREATION PROGRAMS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. On numerous occasions he has indicated that one of the stumbling blocks to creating employment is a shortage of working capital to fulfil the Government's needs. Last year the Government handed out $1 billion in PIP grants to the oil industry. The industry has indicated that this encourages the drilling of dry wells rather than encouraging self-sufficiency in energy. Will the Minister meet with his colleagues, the Minister of Energy and the Minister of Finance, and redirect that $1 billion into youth employment in order that we might have sufficient money to begin to meet some of their needs?

● (1450)

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, my recollection is that those grants were brought in to replace the change in various tax provisions which had been designed to encourage that kind of activity. I am not sure whether it would be appropriate to refocus them in the way in which the Hon. Member has suggested. However, since he has asked me to discuss this with my colleagues, I will follow his advice and do so.

USE OF PIP GRANTS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The Minister is well aware, from his previous involvement, of the actual use to which the PIP grants are now being put. He surely must recognize that the PIP grants are not creating energy self-sufficiency but are in fact simply government money being handed over to oil companies without any tangible return. Does the Minister of Finance not agree that this billion dollars could be better spent in creating employment for the half million young people who, up to this point in time, have not been able to find any employment, rather than simply handing it over to the oil companies without any return?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is showing incredible ignorance of the situation in the energy field and how the tax system operates in Canada. As my hon. colleague said earlier, the grant system was introduced to replace a measure that provided for deductions on the basis of depreciation, which tended to be particularly profitable for foreign companies. We introduced a new system that encourages the expansion of Canadian companies in the gas and oil industry. Companies that are in the oil and gas discovery and exploration business contribute to Canada's self-sufficiency in oil products and also spend money in Canada that is used to employ Canadians. This money does not disappear into thin air. It is used in prospecting for the resources Canada needs today and will need in the years to come. Meanwhile, I repeat that this money is being spent inside the country to employ Canadians.

CITIZENSHIP

APPLICATION OF SIDNEY JAFFE

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. As a result of last week's Florida court decision Mr. Sidney Jaffe may now return to Canada, thereby addressing the larger question of our sovereignty rights. My question concerns Mr. Jaffe's citizenship status. Is the Minister and is the Government now satisfied that Mr. Jaffe's application for Canadian citizenship contained no false representations, or concealment of any circumstances material to his application?

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, according to the information provided by Mr. Jaffe, a citizenship judge has already determined that he has fulfilled his citizenship requirements. No evidence has been provided to date establishing that at the time the information was given by Mr. Jaffe, it was false or erroneous, in which case I could exercise the authority I have under the Citizenship Act to review a decision made previously by a citizenship judge.

[English]

RESIDENCE REQUIREMENTS

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, in view of the fact that Mr. Jaffe claimed three years of residence at 1000 Green Street in San Francisco, California, on a bail bond application dated August 7, 1980, and that, according to the Secretary of State, he was granted citizenship under Section 5(1) of the Act, Mr. Jaffe may not have fulfilled the sesidence requirements under Section 5(1)(b) of the Citizenship Act. Will the Minister now meet his commitment to provide the information requested to the House, or in writing, particularly the date of application and the date on which Mr. Jaffe received his citizenship?

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, the question which the Hon. Member has asked me in the House before is an important one, because it raises the possibility of a conflict between the Citizenship Act and the Privacy Act. On the Basis of Section 3 of the Privacy Act, unless the person concerned gives his consent, I am not prepared to disclose the date on which a person was granted citizenship.

AGRICULTURE

CANADIAN EGG MARKETING AGENCY—APPLICATION OF GOVERNMENT RESTRAINT PROGRAM

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture. Marketing boards which come under the National Farm Products Marketing Act, specifically CEMA, have a built in formula whereby prices paid to farmers for products sold are based on costs of production formulae. Is that cost of production formula subject to the six and five program of the Government?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I know full well what the Hon. Member is talking about. It is a dispute which CEMA has with the Government of Canada on the six and five formula. CEMA had agreed to that. We are asking it to stay within the six and five formula as best it can.

EGG PRICING FORMULA

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, along with the problems Canadian farmers are facing with cash flow, the cost-price squeeze, the withholding of money in the western grain stabilization program, we have a situation where farmers, under formulae agreed to by the Government and the farming community that they would be entitled to a 4 cents per dozen Grade A large egg increase, have now been told by Cabinet, through CEMA, that they would be restricted to two cents of the price increase in order to stay within the six and five program. Could the Minister of Agriculture explain how he is protecting Canadian farm interests? How can Canadian farmers, facing increased costs—for instance, feed has gone up tremendously in the last few weeks—survive under broken agreements which they entered into with the Government in good faith?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member knows that the formula which farmers abide by has been a good formula. It is working well. Of all the farmers who, it has been reported to me, have gone bankrupt, not one egg producer has gone broke. They are under a marketing board. It runs supply management. The efficient operators are still making a dollar. We are reviewing the problem with which they are confronted at the present time because of the extra increase costs of protein and grain, due mainly to the dry weather, and also because of the payment in kind program in the United States of America.

Oral Questions

INCOME TAX

DEPARTMENT'S TREATMENT OF ARTISTS

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. It concerns the current tax treatment of artists in Canada. A moment ago the Minister of Communications indicated in answer to a question that he had intervened with the Minister of National Revenue on a number of occasions with respect to artists. As the Minister knows, we have a current problem which needs a quick solution. Would the Minister not now commit himself and his Government to imposing a moratorium on the tax situation for artists until he can carry out a review of the interpretations mentioned by the Minister of Communications?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I am a little surprised at the question and especially at the member's request. I may remind him that the general provisions of the Income Tax Act that apply to individuals who deduct expenses from their income should also apply to artists. I realize there may be special circumstances a person may encounter in the exercise of his profession and that this may be the case for a great many artists. I would therefore like to point out to the Hon. Member that when applying the general rules of the Income Tax Act, departmental officers responsible for assessing the situation allow for any special circumstances mentioned by the taxpayer, so that when artists submit their expenses with their income, they are given special treatment because of the particular circumstances in which they exercise their professional activities.

[English]

REQUEST FOR MORATORIUM

Hon. David Crombie (Rosedale): Madam Speaker, surely the Minister understands that his own Department is treating the artists of this country as manufacturers for the purpose of tax. That is the issue. Surely the Minister can understand that if we are to have creative arts in this country, artists must be treated as creative human beings and not as manufacturers of plastic hose. The reality is, Madam Speaker, that unless the Minister acts now, we will have a demonstration in Vancouver and in other parts of the country, with artists trying to speak out in order to get a tax situation which is only fair and congenial to them. Why will the Minister not at least place a moratorium on those interpretations so that artists can have a chance, as the Minister of Communications, as well as we and the artists, would like him to do?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I am rather surprised at the Hon. Member's question and at his interpretation of the facts. If the Hon. Member knew what he was talking about, that is, how the Department of National Revenue treats artists—like other taxpayers—he would not ask such questions. We do allow for special circumstances as I indicated in the first part of my answer. I also wish to remind the Hon. Member that an artist's inventory is not taxable. They can deduct expenses on each piece they sell, and income is not taxed until it is actually received by the artist. There is a set of special conditions that applies to artists and does not apply to manufacturers, and we treat them as individuals, which is the same way we treat other taxpayers in our society.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 4,639, 4,809, and 4,816.

GOVERNMENT POLICY CONCERNING FOREIGN SPIES

Question No. 4,639—Mr. Kilgour:

Is it government policy to try to convert foreign spies to work for Canada rather than prosecuting them and, if so, has there been any change in this policy?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): On detecting foreign intelligence activity in Canada, it is the policy of the Government to consider how best to protect Canada's over-all interests given the particular circumstances of each case. Seeking the co-operation of individuals suspected of involvement in such activities is one action that may be considered in the execution of this policy. In the event that the most appropriate action is judged to include the institution of a prosecution under the Official Secrets Act, it is a requirement of that Act that in each case the consent of the Attorney General of Canada must be obtained in order for such a prosecution to proceed. Such a decision is made in relation to the particular facts of each case. This approach cannot be considered to be a change of policy.

CANADIAN HOME INSULATION PROGRAM

Question No. 4,809—Mr. Blenkarn:

1. Are audit proceedings made by the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources in managing the CHIP program to make sure that materials allegedly supplied on insulation contracts are in fact supplied and are in fact a fair valuation for the materials intended to be supplied and, if so, what are such proceedings?

2. Did the Department investigate Imperial Ener-Sav Inc. of 3710 Chesswood Drive, Downsview, Ontario, with respect to a contract made between it and Mr. George Gow of Cedar Grove Park at 1749 Dundas Street East in Mississauga, Ontario, concerning the charge of $282 for two tubes of silicone construction sealant?

3. Did the Department price the cost of the tubes and the sealant and did the Department determine that the price of $141 per tube was at least six times higher than fair market value for the sealant?

4. Does the Department intend to prosecute Imperial Ener-Sav Inc. for attempting to defraud the government with respect to a contract dated

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The Department of Energy, Mines and Resources reports as follows:

1. Approximately 8 per cent of all homes insulated under the Canadian Home Insulation Program are inspected to ensure that the materials specified on the CHIP grant application have been installed.

Incoming grant applications are screened for the prices charged for caulking and weatherstripping. Price guidelines for determining CHIP contributions for these products were implemented in November, 1982.

2. Prices charged by Imperial Enersave Inc. and other companies were considered for instances of inflated materials costs. These considerations resulted in the introduction of price guidelines for determining CHIP contributions. The account of Mr. George Gow has been looked into by departmental officers and legal counsel.

3. The Department agrees that the amount Mr. Gow charged was substantially above the going rate. The regulatory mechanism required to enable the Department to refuse payment in cases such as this was put in place as of May 12, 1983, but was not in place at the time of the incident referred to by the Hon. Member. In formulating the policy which led to a change in the Regulations, various factors were taken into consideration, including the desire not to interfere more than necessary in the normal workings of the marketplace and the degree of success of the less formal pricing guidelines instituted by CHIP in November, 1982.

4. Mr. Gow's case was referred to EM&R's Legal Services Branch for legal advice and recommendations. The Department does not expect to instigate a prosecution against Imperial Enersave Inc. in connection with the contract in question.

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 34 (Mr. Benjamin).

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, prior to the luncheon recess I was addressing myself to Motion No. 34 and asking in a rhetorical way what the NDP hoped to accomplish with it. Unfortunately, notwithstanding the fact that they had a number of people stand up and speak to this issue, the answer is still unclear to me. I was making the point that on occasion there are times of legitimate concern with respect to the provision of trucking services to communities in western Canada. I gave the example of the Asquith subdivision in my constituency where communities are now simply folding up. The village of Arelect had handed in its charter as a village because people and businesses are moving out. Now these communities are simply shrivelling up, an unfortunate happening we have experienced in western Canada because of the transportation policies generally of the Liberal Government over the years.

Another area which has been affected in my province is that of the Carleton subdivision. Mr. Justice Emmett Hall, considering the rail line abandonment question, indicated that the Carleton subdivision would not be part of the permanent network but suggested that the elevators remain in towns like Waldheim, Saskatchewan, a thriving and progressive place, and Hepburn, Saskatchewan. These towns are very vital parts of Sasktachewan and of Canada. The suggestion was that the elevators remain and provision be made to truck out the grain from these elevators.

I am glad to say that due to the intervention of people in the area, together with representations made by Members of Parliament such as the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo), who was there and spoke up on behalf of his constituents as I attempted to do, the western branch of the CTC has now recommended that a good portion of the Carleton subdivision be included in the permanent network. We are awaiting the final decision in that regard.

No matter what we think of the pre-eminence of the railway system in western Canada—and I stand second to no person in supporting proposals and policies which will give us a viable rail network in western Canada and stop this disintegration of branch lines—we have to look to efficient alternatives. I hope the NDP can clarify this for me because all I see this motion as being is a blind, cleaver-like approach to this legislation. It goes against the interests of the communities I have referred to in my constituency. I have had representations from the Great Lakes Waterways Development Association with respect to the increased cost to the western producer.

We should be looking at ways to increase efficiency. From 1977 to 1980 St. Lawrence Seaway tolls have increased by 100 per cent, 28 per cent in the last two years, the six and five guidelines notwithstanding. These are direct costs to the producer. Even though this affects grain shipped through the Lakehead, the fact is that because of the pooling system it diminishes the price received by the producer. We can bring forward, and I suggest we tried, constructive suggestions to this unfortunate Bill to try and demonstrate that we at least are trying to improve as much as possible this very badly thought out and unfortunate legislation.

I see my time has expired, Mr. Speaker, but I wanted to make a strong representation on behalf of the people in my area concerning some of the realities in western Canada today.

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in commenting on Motion No. 34 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), the Transport critic for the NDP, I would comment first of all in response to the question raised by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) who has just concluded his remarks. He said he was unclear as to the purpose of the amendment now before us, although he says he listened with care. The reason is very obvious. The NDP wants the best service possible for the least possible money, and rail, not roads, is the way to get it.

That is the object of our amendment and I would have thought that, if the Hon. Member was listening with anything like the degree of care he suggested, this should have been obvious even to a Conservative. The Hon. Member for Saskatoon West had some good facts but, as usual, he, as a Conservative, drew the wrong conclusions from them. Judging by the substance, as opposed to the form, of his comments, at least those made before lunch, with regard to the situation facing the community of Arelee, Saskatchewan, it appears that he drew his base information from a recent fourpart series in the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix by a Mr. John Gallagher. I would say that the Hon. Member is to be congratulated for his source. Mr. Gallagher is, after all, a research assistant to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), the Transport critic for our Party and our key spokesman on all of the matters relating to the Crow rate. Mr. Gallagher is also the author of "To Kill the Crow", one of the best, definitive studies of that entire issue currently available to the people of Canada. However, we in the New Democratic Party do wish that if the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West wants to use our material, although he is very welcome, he would read and use it all rather than just selected parts of it.

● (1510)

The Hon. Member for Saskatoon West, in reference to the Arelee line, suggested that trucking would save money as compared to using the railway. For his edification, I should like, in correcting his error, to quote the segment of the Star-Phoenix series that he either failed to read in full or failed to understand. I quote from the third article in the four-part series entitled "Few Savings in Abandonment". This article of very recent vintage states:

> We have seen how, abandoning the CPR line through Arelee, Struan and Sonningdale will about double the cost of shipping grain to area farmers and how highway costs will increase because of greater truck traffic. It remains to be seen whether or not abandonment will increase total transportation costs, but it is a distinct possibility.
> The 1981 hearings that confirmed the abandonment of the line concluded the CPR had expenses in 1979 of $447,219 on the 29.2 miles of line while grain shipped from it generated $137,181 in revenues to the company for an "actual loss" of $310,038. This does not take into account the branch line subsidy paid to the company by the federal government.
> According to the Canadian Wheat Board, 236 farmers designated the three stations on the line as their primary delivery point in 1981. Assuming they ship the provincial average of 7,254.3 bushels of wheat the average extra distance of 20 miles, according to the University of Regina study, then the increased cost to them will be $213,816.
> In other words the CPR, by abandoning that line, has transferred $213,816 of the ost of transporting that grain from itself to the farmers. The net gain to the railroad, however, is the full $447,219,since it will still receive the same payment to move the grain to export position from the alternate delivery points.
> The CPR grains; the farmer loses.
>
> And the public loses too.
> Working from the same averages, it would require 1,863 semi-trailers loaded to a gross weight of 72,000 pounds to move the grain from this line 20 miles for delivery.
> As noted previously, construction and maintenance costs for a road surface vary directly with the number and weight of axle loadings.
> Every semi-trailer that moves over asphalt concrete highway would cost the taxpayer between 52 cents and $1.11 per mile in construction and maintenance costs according to the Iowa Department of Transportation formula.
> Each mile over gravel roads would cost the taxpayers about 84 cents in maintenance costs according to a formula published by the Transportation Agency of Saskatchewan.
> On intermediate paved highways, the first four semi-trailer loads per day each way would add about $1,250 per mile to the annual maintenance costs, or $1.25 per truck mile. And these figures presume there is no other truck traffic contributing to traffic volumes greater than the structural capacity of the highways.
> Maintenance figures like that make continued repair of intermediate pavement uneconomic and it is necessary to rebuild and upgrade. That means costs between $100,000 and $200,000 per mile in 1980 dollars, according to the TAS, depending upon what standard the highway has to be built to.
> The CPR estimated it would cost $4,078,203 to bring this line up to standard, but it did not include the revenues the company would receive from salvage during upgrading.
> But highway 376, which runs alongside the railroad from Sonningdale to Asquith, is topped with intermediate pavement. To bring it up to the structural capacity needed to move the grain produced in the area would cost $8,470,000 in 1982 dollars, more than double the cost of upgrading the rail line.

Again, I wish that the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West and other speakers for the Conservative Party, who say they cannot understand, would read a little more fully the documents from which they derive their information and opinions and would listen a little more carefully when we submit and clearly state, time and time again, that our objective, both in this amendment and others that we are placing before the House of Commons on this whole issue, is to get the best results for the people of Canada for the least possible dollars. That makes sense to us. It may not make sense to a Conservative, and judging by all of their past performance it certainly does not make sense to Liberals. However, to us, ordinary people who represent ordinary people, it just happens to make a lot of common sense. I would think that if they would look, listen and read a little more carefuly, a little more completely, then maybe, just maybe, it would make sense to them as well.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I would like to defer to my good friend, the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp), if I could, or the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta), for that matter.

Mr. Epp: Or any one of us.

Mr. Nystrom: "Either" one.

Mr. Epp: Either one.

Mr. Nystrom: Either one. Watch your grammar.

I think Motion No. 34 is fairly important. It is a motion placed on the Order Paper by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) and would amend Clause 17 of the Act. The clause, Mr. Speaker, just to refresh your memory, gives the Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, the power to "enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producer".

I have a couple of concerns about this as a Member who comes from a very rural riding with many branch lines and small towns. I have concern about the small towns themselves and their future. My second concern, and it is the reason I think the Conservatives should be supporting the motion, is that I hesitated once again to give one person so much power. Why centralize so much power in the hands of one person, in the hands of the Administrator? That is a very valid criticism of our bureaucracy today, that too few people have too much power here in Ottawa. That works against the wishes and the best intent of what we want this country to be all about.

I know my friend, the Hon. Member for Provencher, who sat for many long hours on our Constitution committee a couple of years ago, certainly agrees with that as a principle. We should certainly work toward a more centralized Canada, more local control, local people having more say over their lives and more input over the direction of their communities. Therefore, I believe the Hon. Member for Regina West is going in the right direction here by ensuring that the Administrator, acting in concert with the Minister, would not have the power arbitrarily to abandon, in effect, certain rail lines. That is the power we are asked to give this individual if Motion No. 34 does not pass. In fact, it is a Conservative motion, and I am sure that Members of that Party are not very proud of that fact, I just ask Hon. Members to consider it very closely because it does give the Administrator tremendous discretionary power.

I am very leery of giving a public servant or any one person, be it a public servant or a private bureaucrat in a private company, that much power. I believe we should decentralize powers as much as possible for the benefit of the ordinary people of Canada, because they know best what decisions to make affecting their own community, whether it be Lethbridge, Yorkton, Trois-Rivières or anywhere else in Canada. I just do not like this trend of centralization that I hear being discussed by so many Members of the Liberals and Conservative Parties. I know my friend, the Hon. Member for Provencher, would certainly not agree with that trend and that is why he will be rising in a few minutes to agree with the Hon. Member for Regina West, because he, too, does not want to centralize more and more power in the hands of one bureaucrat. He also wants to have a more democratic society and a more decentralized society where ordinary citizens have more power.

● (1520)

An Hon. Member: A community of communities.

Mr. Nystrom: I am sure he is very interested in a community of communities. That cannot occur when we centralize power in the hands of the Administrator to make arbitrary decisions over rail lines.

Under a democratic socialist government, I am sure there would be a very decentralized economy. Let me cite some history for the Member from New Brunswick. Saskatchewan has the most decentralized economy in the country. We have the country elevator systems which are very decentralized. The Wheat Pool ships over half of our grain that is owned by the farmers themselves, with one farmer, one vote. There are co-op stores found in every community as well as co-op pharmacies, co-op cafeterias, co-op garages and so on. It is very decentralized.

An Hon. Member: Co-ops are not socialist. That is capitalism.

Mr. Nystrom: In all of these places we have co-op committees, Wheat Pool committees and UGG committees. In this democratic socialist society, or economic model, they make the decisions that control those economic enterprises. I would like to see a greater economic democratic system in our country.

Mr. Thacker: People had to leave for generations to get a job.

Mr. Nystrom: People had to leave for generations because we had Jimmy Gardiner, Patterson, that famous Conservative, R. B. Bennett, and Ross Thatcher, another famous Conservative who called himself a Liberal. Of course, when Allan Blakeney was elected, the population of the Province went up.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I call to the attention of the Hon. Member that debate at report stage should be strictly relevant to the amendments before the House.

Mr. Benjamin: He was reasonably provoked.

Mr. Nystrom: I guess I am no more unreasonable than the hecklers, Mr. Speaker. I should refrain from replying. I just wanted to say that unemployment has almost doubled in our Province in the last 18 months and I think that answers the question.

Mr. Epp: Manitoba's went up too.

Mr. Nystrom: The reason I support Motion No. 34 is that I come from a very rural riding. There are many rail lines in that community and the farmers in my constituency overwhelmingly support the idea of maintaining their rail lines and not trucking their grain to market. They support that contention for a number of reasons. First, it is more convenient for them from a cost point of view that the rail lines remain and be there as a service to the farmer for shipping grain to market. It is a system that works well. It can even be more efficient with rehabilitation of the rail lines.

As well, this not only affects the farmer but small-business people in all the towns and villages through which those rail lines pass. If a rail line is abandoned, many of the farmers will shop elsewhere and many businesses will be forced to close down. It even affects the people who live in the community, including many senior citizens. There are many people in communities such as Kelvington and Lintlaw and many other communities in my riding who have told me that even their senior citizens are concerned about rail line abandonment. If the rail line goes, fewer people will shop in town and fewer businesses will be in town. Therefore the services will be that much poorer and senior citizens will not be able to get the medical and dental facilities they want in their senior years. For those reasons they believe the rail lines should stay. I think those are important points.

In my riding during the last few years there have been a number of fights with the CTC, the CNR, the CPR, Otto Lang and others over maintaining the rail lines. For example, I can think of the tremendous fight we had to maintain a rail line that went into Preeceville, which is a very large community in my constituency. In that instance many people got together to form a "save our rail line committee". They wanted to make sure that the rail line to the community of Preeceville was preserved. After going to the CTC, lobbying and fighting for a number of months, they were able to maintain and preserve the rail line.

Another success story in my riding concerned the rail line that goes to Rosthern Calder and MacNutt. Once again, the people of those communities banded together. They are from small communities: Rosthern has perhaps 100 people, Calder has approximately 300 and MacNutt is somewhat smaller. They did their research and lobbying and put up a fight. They persuaded the CTC and the powers that be that those rail lines should stay and be upgraded. Their present concern over upgrading those rail lines is that the money in the rail line rehabilitation fund actually goes into upgrading rail lines and will not be spent in trucking grain to market.

I am very concerned about this because the smaller a community and the smaller the group of people affected, the more difficult it is to persuade the CTC or the Minister that they are important. It is more difficult for smaller groups to present their arguments. It is more difficult for a smaller community to get a share of the money which is in the rail line rehabilitation fund. If some of that money is diverted to trucking, the likelihood of remaining funds being used in smaller communities will diminish. For those reasons I cannot sit idly by and allow that to happen without speaking out. It is important to the Rostherns, Calders and MacNutts of the country that the money be used to upgrade their rail lines and ensure their efficiency.

There are other rail lines that are being seriously considered in my riding and which may be affected by Bills such as this. I am holding a copy of the Western Producer dated September 29, which carries an article entitled "Rail Lines Under Study". It has a list compiled by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool of rail lines that are under study by Transport Canada. It lists approximately 35 different rail lines of which two happen to be in my constituency. One subdivision which is under review is Rhein, a town of about 500 people. According to the Wheat Pool, Transport Canada is studying 25 miles of that rail line. There are 475 producers who deliver their grain to points along that rail line.

The second review taking place in my riding is on a subdivision point called Tonkin. That community is much smaller, with a line of only approximately 17 miles. However, there are 197 people who deliver their grain to points along that line. The line is very important to them and they are very concerned that the rail line rehabilitation funds are used to upgrade the lines and preserve them and not be drained for trucking. If that happens, the rail lines and elevators disappear and we see more centralizing with huge inland terminals. Where does it stop?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Laverne Lewycky (Dauphin-Swan River): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Motion No. 34 which was moved by my colleague the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). The effect of this motion is to strike out Clause 17(4) which gives the Administrator power to enter into agreements which would basically provide funds for those who want to move grain through the trucking mode.

In rising to support this motion, I would like to use my constituency of Dauphin-Swan River as an illustration since the situation there is not unlike that outlined by my hon. friend for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) with respect to some of the problems and issues we face in our rural ridings. I want to underline some of the concerns that we have and perhaps give some concrete illustrations. Sometimes a picture is worth a thousand words, and if we can give a concrete illustration of our situation perhaps it would help Hon. Members opposite and some of my friends to my right understand the situation better. Hopefully it will enlighten them. Their situations and problems are somewhat different as they are south of the Trans-Canada Highway and have easy access to large highways, big trucks and all the other benefits of living in that particular part of Manitoba. They do not really appreciate some of the difficulties in areas further north.

In striking out lines 20 to 25 of the trucking subsidy, we are trying to stand up for the small towns of our areas. If a trucking subsidy is provided by way of inducement or encouragement for the movement of grain by trucking companies, we can rest assured that there will be a greater degree of branch line abandonment. It would then become somewhat more economic for trucks to compete with the shipment of grain on branch lines. When the western division of the Canadian Transport Commission looks at branch line abandonment, it does not look at branch line abandonment, it does not look at the viability of small towns. In fact, I have never found any economic impact assessment in any of the CTC hearings. I have always been concerned that in any branch line abandonment induced by trucking subsidies there has never been any mention of the community-wide impact.

Small towns such as Fork River and others in my constituency at this stage have perhaps only one general store. The people of the area should not have to travel 30 miles or 40 miles to shop. The viability of many of these small towns is maintained when they have elevators in their communities. With branch line abandonment there is also the abandonment of elevators. As the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) mentioned earlier, many pools have established elevators and, if there were a continuation of branch line abandonment, the pool elevators would be disproportionately affected. It would also affect farmers because they are the people who co-operate and work together to build and maintain these elevators. It, as a result of branch line abandonment and trucking subsidies, many more inland terminals were to be developed, the pools would have to invest inordinate amount of moneys to build new elevators when they already have existing ones which they could maintain if the branch lines were kept. In addition, there is a disproportionate impact in terms of highway costs. The Government is not prepared to pick up the cost of maintaining highways in these areas. In many areas where there is branch line abandonment, the highways are of poor quality and do not have the necessary strength to accommodate heavy trucks such as the highways in the ridings of the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp) or the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta).

I would like to give an indication of why people in constituencies such as mine are concerned. For example, I received a letter from the former Minister of Transport after I wrote to him concerning highway costs. He wrote:

Dear Mr. Lewycky:

Thank you for your letter of June 1, 1981, concerning financial assistance for road upgrading which might be necessary as a consequence of rail line abandonment.

As former Minister of Transport surely he knew that it would be necessary, not might be necessary. He went on to indicate:

At the present time I am not contemplating the provision of such assistance.

His letter was dated July 22, 1981. He continued:

As you know the federal Government is faced with very limited resources for the purpose of initiating new assistance programs. In the case of road and highway construction, this is principally a provincial and municipal responsibility . . . I would find it very difficult at the present time to consider initiating new programs of the type you have suggested.

Yours sincerely,

Jean-Luc Pepin.

I have it in black and white. The Government clearly indicated that it would be unable and unwilling to look after the added road costs. He should travel to constituencies such as mine and ask the municipalities, some of which are poor, whether they can afford additional road costs that would result if elevators were not functioning in their areas. If we take a look at the 1981 census results, we find constituencies such as Dauphin-Swan River have average incomes that are almost two-thirds the national average. How can we ask these farmers to face the added burden of higher costs for transporting grain? They cannot afford to purchase new trucks. They cannot afford to do what would be necessary to haul grain to a larger area. Their land values have dropped in light of possible rail line abandonment. These farmers are in dire straits and would be seriously jeopardized if there were further rail line abandonments. Some of these areas are not even full-fledged municipalities. They are local government districts. They do not even have the base to support or sustain a municipal structure.

It is on behalf of such areas that we plead when we fight this piece of legislation or certain clauses in Bill C-155. I know it might be difficult for Members with different situations. I empathize somewhat with them and understand why they cannot experientially feel for these smaller areas because in their situation it might be beneficial to take the angle they are taking. When pools such as these are disproportionately affected, when there is a potential for elevators to close down and for communities to die, I think the House will understand why I support the motion of my colleague the Hon. Member for Regina West. I thank the House for the opportunity to share our concerns on behalf of constituents—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise to take part in the debate. The amendment put forward by the New Democratic Party is typical of what it has been trying to do in this Bill. Whenever anything is put forward, regardless of what we in the Conservative Party see as being wrong with it—and they are too numerous to go into in ten minutes—our job is to try as hard as possible to amend a bad Bill. It is to this that we have devoted the last three months, to trying to point out what is wrong with the Bill. There are still many glaring errors in the draftsmanship in the way it affects producers in western Canada. Therefore, it is impossible for anyone on this side of the House to support this Bill.

● (1540)

In coming to that conclusion, we started from a different place than the NDP. The Bill was put forward. We in the Opposition have a responsibility to our constituents to try as best we can to change the mind of the Government on this Bill, what it thinks is good in the Bill and what we think is good. At times we can come to mutual agreement, even with the NDP. There were times in committee when amendments were passed unanimously. In fact, the first amendment accepted was put forward by the NDP which was going to kill the Bill.

With this amendment, the NDP is attempting to remove an amendment which states "if the Administrator enters into an agreement by motor vehicle to move grain, he does so in the best interests of the producers". It is in the best interest of the producers, not in the best interests about which we hear from the NDP railroad flakes and not in the best interest of the railroads, but of the producers, the grain farmers, the men and women who grow and sell the grain. It is not in the best interest of the railroads, the elevator companies or the provincial Governments, but in the best interests of the producers.

We hear a lot of crying from the Members on our left about saving branch lines. I hear one of those Members "crowing" now. Let us go back in history. In 1979 when the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) was Minister of Transport, he appointed the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) to make a report on branch lines in western Canada, including the region I represent as well as those represented by some NDP Members.

The Hon. Member for Moose Jaw made a decision and made recommendations to the Hon. Member for Vegreville as Minister. He recommended that 490 miles of branch lines in western Canada be maintained in the permanent network until the year 2000. He made another recommendation, that is, that 236 miles—there are three of those branch lines in my riding—be frozen for five years so that we can review the proposal put forward by former Justice Emmett Hall as to the effectiveness of off-line elevators. He wanted to try them at Fisher Branch. He felt the producers in that area could benefit from an experiment. The Members for Moose Jaw and Vegreville wanted to freeze those lines, not abandon them, not to tear up the steel as they did in Arelee and Summingdale and the riding of the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp). They wanted to freeze them until they had time to assess the benefits of off-line elevators.

What happened in the meantime? The NDP Members voted that Government out of office. They, along with the Liberals, said that the Member for Vegreville and the Member for Moose Jaw, who tried to save branch lines, are not serving the best interests of the producers of western Canada. They voted that Government out of office. They let the Liberals come in.

Do you know what the present Government did as soon as it was elected? It rescinded the Order in Council which would have saved 236 miles of branch lines. That is the way the NDP Members protected the branch lines in Saskatchewan. That is how they did it. They brought those people in to take away that freeze. The Minister who did that is in the Chamber at this time. I am sure we will hear from him. Brass-Kelfield is a line that runs from Brass to Kelfield in my riding. We went through the process of a CTC hearing. We did not have to go through that process so long as the Hon. Member for Vegreville was Minister of Transport, but the NDP Members did not like that. They said he was not serving the best interest, they would have the Liberals in. What did the Liberals do? They abandoned 236 miles. This is the way they serve their constituents.

Now what did the people in Kelfield, Handel and Leipzig have to do? They no longer have a rail line. CTC said, "No, dont blame the trucker". The people responsible for that, along with the former Minister of Transport, are the NDP. They helped the Liberals come in. That is what they have done for branch lines. If I sat down now, would the former Minister of Transport like to speak?

Mr. Pepin: I would not dare intervene in a personal quarrel with the NDP.

Mr. McKnight: The people on the Kelfield branch will now have to haul their grain an additional 23 miles, on average. They have one hope with this amendment. Their line has been abandoned effective October 31. With this amendment and with the Bill, when it is put through, if ever, or even without it, with the good graces of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy), he could establish a trial off-line elevator service. The people in Leipzig, Kelfield and Handel will say that it will be harder on the roads. It will be. However, it won't be harder on the roads than hauling gravel or moving an oil rig or construction machinery. If its hard to haul grain, it will be no harder on the highways and grid roads of Saskatchewan than if the farmers hauled it themselves. Somebody will have to pay.

These people want to save their branch line. That is their first choice. Their second choice would be to have a form of transportation so that they do not have to haul it. The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) knows the cost of a tandem straight rig or a tractor to haul grain, or even the price of an ordinary three-to single-axle truck. Farmers do not have the ability to adjust that readily to those changes. However, the Administrator, working only in the best interests of the producers, has the ability to enter into agreements with trucking companies to move grain from a country elevator to another point. The cost of that would not be borne by the producer but by the Administrator out of the general revenues of this country.

I listened to the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and other Members talk about the vibrancy of the rural towns. I recognize that. The community I come from has a population of about 25. We have a post office and a couple of elevators. We want to keep our elevators and our branch lines.

Do not be fooled by thinking it is only the elevators and railroad companies which make the small towns in Saskatchewan vibrant. It is the people. In their belief, it has nothing whatsoever to do with elevators and railroads. It is a benefit, but it has nothing to do with the strength and fabric of those communities.

In conclusion I want to say that that is not only my idea. Former Chief Justice Emmett Hall at pages 79 and 80 of the Hall Report said: "It is the people and the spirit of the people which gives a community viability, not the railroads, not the elevators". If we had our druthers, we would have the elevator served by trucks rather than elevators served by nothing.

● (1550)

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, in taking part in this debate I would like to tell the House just exactly how wrong Members of the NDP are in trying to debate the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). If NDP Members could remember as far back as the time the Hall Report was tabled in the House of Commons, they would remember that certain rail lines were taken out and at that time there was supposed to be a trucking program put in place for those farmers who were going to be affected by the abandonment of that rail line and money would be paid to a central agency. In this case, the line from Cremona to Crossfield, which is in my constituency, was affected. Farmers in Cremona now have to haul their grain over a distance of approximately 30 miles. However, it is interesting to note that those farmers are not necessarily hauling that grain to Crossfield where it must be put through an elevator system and would further clog up the grain handling industry. Instead, the farmers went to British Columbia to find a market for their grain and are shipping it in that direction, thereby relieving the rail system of the overload. That makes sense to me.

If farmers were to have the freedom of choice to receive a portion of the funding, then the system would be relieved of the overload and trucks would be allowed to roll. I find it incomprehensible that if this amendment is deleted, farmers in that area will have to accept the extra cost of moving grain on their own when their tax dollars go right to the railway.

The railway is to receive $650 million, but there is no money for the truckers or the farmers. The money is going straight to the railways. Not only do the farmers have to pay for transporting their grain into central British Columbia, they must also pay for the other farmers who are moving grain on the rails.

That notion is grossly unfair, and I hope that Hon. Members of the Party to my left who claim to have a conscience—and I sometimes wonder if they have one at all—will give consideration to this motion. After all, it hits the people very, very hard.

There is a great deal of grain, primarily barley and feed grain, moving out of central Alberta into the central British Columbia market as well as the southern Alberta market. Some of these hauls are anywhere from 2 to 500 miles in distance. It would seem to me that it is only honest, straightforward and reasonable that consideration be given not only to the producers but to the truckers as well. The truckers are taxpayers as well. They are also competitive. Hon. Members opposite do not really care whether or not taxpayers have to subsidize Crown corporations that operate in competition with those taxpayers. My hon. friend over there is smiling. He recognizes what the Government is doing. Government Members should change their minds about this and allow for friendly competition.

There has been a great deal of talk about the effect the implementation of this motion would have on the highways. It is true enough that it will have a certain effect on the highways. However, every time a trainload of grain goes over a track, it too has an effect on that track and that track must be upgraded. Besides, many of these truckers travel at night when the traffic is not very heavy and they do not interfere with the automobile traffic to any great extent.

These are matters to which Hon. Members of the NDP should give consideration if they are going to keep on proposing that this amendment be deleted. The amendment is of fundamental and basic importance to the people who live in our constituencies. Perhaps Hon. Members of the NDP do not realize that in southern Alberta, large numbers of cattle are fed. A large amount of barley is produced in my constituency. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave), recognizes this fact. His constituency relies on my constituency for moving that barley to Medicine Hat and southern Alberta where the cattle are fed. It only makes sense that if there are producers who want to move their grain in that direction and if there are feeders there who require that grain, the truckers who have to move that grain should have compensation for doing so.

Members of the NDP are isolated and narrow-minded in their thinking. They have tunnel vision, if you will. It is totally incomprehensible to me that they should want to delete this amendment. I suppose, Mr. Speaker, that that spells out exactly why there are no NDP Members from the Province of Alberta. We in Alberta are far beyond that type of thinking. I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Hon. Members to my left would reconsider their amendment to delete the amendment proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski).

Mr. Jack Murta (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, you are quick on the draw today. I am happy to participate in this debate on what I consider to be a very important question and one that is fundamental to many, many areas of western Canada. It is generally felt in most areas of the Prairies that in order to maintain the small communities, there may be from time to time some supplementary form of transportation needed. That supplementary form of tranportation, of course, must in many cases be the trucking industry. That is why the amendment which proposes to delete an entire transportation industry is one that I believe is ill-advised, ill-considered and has been put forward by a group of people who keep trying to harken back to a time in the 1940s and 1950s when everything on the Prairies occurred in a way which they would like to see now. In other words, they are harkening back to a time that is not applicable to the present time.

The amendment that has been proposed, Mr. Speaker, would delete the following from the Bill:

The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

Hon. Members of the NDP want to delete that portion from the Bill and lock the farmer into hauling grain by rail and by rail alone.

If we could ultimately design a system in the country that was ideal, I believe that most farmers from the Prairies, and probably from any country of the world that sells grain, would ideally like to move grain by rail. Of course, the ideal situation does not and cannot occur.

Literally millions of bushels of grain have been moved from Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan by truck over the last number of years. That grain has been transported by truck primarily because farmers have felt that in many cases the railways have not done a good enough job. Farmers have to keep money for their own needs and to use for cash flow within their own farms. If the railways were not going to move their grain, then some other method had to be found. Of course, that method was trucking.

Many farmers began to haul grain by truck because they had no other choice, and if you look at those farmers now, Mr. Speaker, you will see that almost without exception they are in a better financial position than the farmers who sat back and, as many of the Members of the NDP would like us to believe, did nothing but cry, complain and scream. The farmers who were aggressive and found a way to move their grain by truck are now in a better cashflow position and a better financial position than are the farmers who were not aggressive.

The history of the whole question of trucking goes back some years to the Hall Commission Report which has been mentioned by other Hon. Members in the House today. Members of the NDP have described this as the Magna Carta of western Canada. The Hall Commission Report contains Mr. Justice Hall's recommendations for the establishment of a grain handling system on the Prairies.

In those recommendations, Mr. Justice Hall very wisely recognized that in a perfect world, we would all like to move our grain by rail. However, the situation is not perfect and never has been. The report dealt with the many small communities on the Prairies that, because of isolation, topography and a number of other factors, could not support a rail service but were perhaps able to support another method by which grain would be delivered to the local elevator thereby keeping that particular community viable. From that point, grain would be trucked to an elevator on a main line with a higher throughput which could move greater volumes of grain than by other methods.

This idea of hydbridization between truck and rail would make sense. Judge Hall came out clearly in favour of it. At that time it was called the off-line elevator concept, and the Conservative Party was giving consideration to establishing it in the very area recommended by Judge Hall, Fisher Branch, in the central part of the Province. Because of the location and the facilities and the grain production in the area, however, it was judged that a rail link with that particular community would no longer be viable. Judge Hall said that there should be an off-line elevator-trucking experiment. Grain within 40 or 50 miles of the elevator could be brought in more cheaply and efficiently by truck than by running half empty rail cars over a line that would cost millions and millions of dollars to upgrade. It would also keep Fisher Branch as a viable marketing community. If this motion were accepted, we would not be able to have trucking supplement movement by rail.

I come from a part of Manitoba that has a long history of trucking. In southern Manitoba all kinds of grain has been trucked fairly long distances for a number of years. Most of the trucking was done by very small firms. If this motion were passed, again the NDP would lock out the very people they claim to support in the House of Commons, the small businessman and the small firms. Most of the trucking in southern Manitoba is done by the small trucking companies, using semi-trailers.

There has been very little damage to the road system in southern Manitoba because the people who operate the trucks, the small independents, operate according to the weight and other regulations set down by the Government of Manitoba. The local area benefits because the truckers buy their fuel, oil, meals and have repairs done, in the local communities. We all know that this is not the case with the railways. A trucking program brings many benefits. I do not speak of a trucking program that would do away with the railways, because that is impossible and impractical, nor a trucking program that would establish five or eight or ten large inland terminals on the Prairies, because we all know that will not happen either. Anyone who raises that spectre is being dishonest with the producers of western Canada. I speak of a trucking program that would supplement, where needed, the movement of grain to the main lines and allow the railways to move fully loaded hopper cars in unitrains, perhaps, or certainly in large numbers to Vancouver or Thunder Bay.

This amendment should be defeated, Mr. Speaker. It is a foolish amendment, ill-thought out, proposed by a Party that is trying desperately to cling to the past.

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 34 (Mr. Benjamin).

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I want to put some comments on record regarding the motion proposed by the NDP to amend Bill C-155. It would allow the Administrator to make arrangements with the trucking companies for one purpose and one purpose only. Clause 17(4) of the Bill, referring to the Administrator, states as follows:

—in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

I can only surmise that the NDP wants to delete this section because it is not interested in what is in the best interests of the grain producers, and I want to show why I think so.

My good friend, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), said that if we do not accept this amendment then we are interested in the centralizing of powers. If he looked at the effect of the amendment he would see that it would centralize all grain movement in the hands of the boardrooms of the CPR and the CNR. That is what Members of the NDP want, apparently. When they talk about centalization they should look very carefully at the effect of the amendment.

It is beyond question that if trucking of grain were allowed, we would get a competitive system which is sorely needed in the transportation of grain in western Canada.

I should like to give an example not related to the grain industry to make a point. At one time almost all new cars manufactured in Ontario were moved to western Canada by truck. Previously they had been moved by rail, but for two reasons the change to truck was made. The first reason the switch was made to trucking was that delivery dates could be more closely met, and the second reason was that damage to the vehicles was less than when they were delivered by rail. At that time most cars were put on boxcars at an angle and damage resulted. Today cars from Ontario and Quebec are moved to western Canada almost totally by rail. The reason for this is that the trucking industry was competitive and forced the railways to give better service and bring in new modes of handling the cars. That would be the effect of this amendment.

At the present time grain on the Prairies is moved by truck. I do not want to refer to my home community but I know that when people say communities cannot survive because they do not have a railway, it simply is not true. My home community never had a railroad. For certain historical reasons, when the railroad was to go to that community, the people asked that it not come through. Perhaps it was the only exception on the Prairies; I do not know that. The fact remains that it never had a railroad, but two excellent highways go into the community and serve the area. This means there is competition within the trucking industry.

When the NDP says time after time, that trucking communities will suffer in that way, they are expressing a valid fear, but I do not think history backs that up.

I can give another example of what trucking will do for competition. In Manitoba there was a virtual monopoly on cement. What the producers discovered was that they could buy cement in Ontario, in Central Canada, put it on an empty grain lake carrier and drop it into Duluth, Minnesota. From there a fleet of trucks would haul that cement from Duluth, Minnesota, right through Manitoba. There is no duty on it because it is a Canadian product in transit. They are delivering cement, Mr. Speaker, by truck and boat into Manitoba from Ontario cheaper than they could buy it in Manitoba. That is what monopolies do, Mr. Speaker. The only reason I point this out is that the more modes of transportation there are, the more competitive will be the market, the better will be the price for the movement of grain and the better will be the service to the producers. That is why this clause appeals to me, because it can be put into effect in the best interests of the producer. I cannot understand why the Hon. Members in the New Democratic Party—and I am not trying to belittle their arguments and the regions they represent—if their argument is as valid as they honestly and sincerely put to the House, would not allow another mode of transport that might be valid in terms of that competitive edge in another part of the Prairies. It is one way or the other. They do not want to see it any other way, Mr. Speaker.

What is also of importance is the brief the Manitoba trucking industry presented before the committee. We find out, for example, that in Manitoba alone, a Province of one million people, 10,000 people are employed in the trucking industry, with an annual payroll of $140 million. Hon. Members from the NDP are saying, "We want to give it all to the railroads. We want the railroads to have the monopoly. We want to give all the money to the railroads and we do not want these Manitobans to have a share of the market." That is what these Hon. Members say in the House. What do they say out in the country when they are confronted by the trucking industry? We should listen to no better an authority than the transport critic, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) who, before the Manitoba Trucking Commission in Winnipeg, said this—his words, I believe, should be immortalized in Hansard—and I quote:

—I have a large amount of sympathy for the small, independent truckers because in my years in the railroad I watched a lot of good, independent little truckers with one, two, three or four trucks get run right off the road by the railroads when they went into the trucking business.

The NDP motion would do just that, Mr. Speaker. Not only would it run the truckers off the road, it would not even allow them on the road. Are we really to believe that Members of the NDP are saying one thing in the House against trucking, against 10,000 employees in Manitoba, against companies which are just asking to be competitive, but when faced by these people in Manitoba it is a different story? They say there, "Look, fellows, we have a lot of sympathy. We understand. We like you". When they come in here, however, they move motions against the very people they are trying to say they understand.

Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Speaker, I had a conversation with a trucker and a farmer. The trucker is independent. He has one truck. The farmer is very progressive. We talked about this very subject, and in the five minute conversation we had, those two fellows were ready to make a deal if the Crow rate would allow it. It was the marketplace in action, Mr. Speaker. The trucker was willing to move the grain. The farmer wanted the grain moved. What these two people were asking for was a fair deal under the Crow Act. The New Democratic Party would say, "No, you cannot make those deals. But if you make those deals, the railroads will still get the money, and the trucker will not and the farmer will not". When the New Democratic Party Members rise in their seats time after time and say they are for the little guy, it is time their motions showed it rather than again and again defeating the competitive edge which so many ordinary Canadians want.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, this is really a notable day. I never thought I would see the day in the House of Commons when the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp) would defend in such glowing terms a Liberal piece of legislation. I never thought I would see the day when the Hon. Member for Provencher would be favouring programs which would inevitably lead to the death of many prairie towns. I found it surprising when he said there was no historical evidence of that ever happening. All the Hon. Member has to do is to look around the Prairies. Indeed, he should turn to his right and talk to the gentleman beside him, the Hon. Member for Saskatoon (Mr. Hnatyshyn) who spoke of a community by the name of Arelee which had that very thing happen to it. I never thought I would see the day when the Hon. Member for Provencher, who I would have thought was an otherwise intelligent person, would so completely misconstrue the sense of the amendment which we have put before the House.

This Party has proposed a number of amendments to this piece of legislation. Indeed, I believe it is over 100. If Hon. Members in the Party to my right will take a look at these amendments as a whole they will realize that these amendments have to be accepted as a whole. If they are viewed, in this way, it will be seen that, what we will be doing is saving the Crowsnest Pass rates as they now exist. We are not prepared merely to modify the Bill to make it slightly less harmful to western farmers, as Hon. Members in the Conservative Party seem inclined to do. I am really quite disappointed, Mr. Speaker, in some of the speeches we have heard this afternoon from the Conservative Party. However, that is not entirely surprising. That Party has been all over the map on the Crowsnest Pass legislation for some time now. I am sure that before this piece of legislation finally gets through the House of Commons, it will be further all over the map.

I would like to speak a little more specifically to Motion No. 34. It is an amendment which is particularly important to people trying to farm in relatively remote grain growing regions of the Prairies. I am thinking particularly of farmers in areas such as Fisher Branch, which has been mentioned once or twice this afternoon, and other communities in my constituency such as Riverton and Arborg which sit at the end of rail lines. Defending branch lines against railway plans to abandon them has become a life and death struggle for many of these prairie communities. That may sound like a bit of an overstatement. However, when one sees elevator after elevator closed because the branch line has been abandoned, and when one sees countless prairie towns and villages, which are dependent on those elevators for their survival, die and all but blow away, it becomes very clear that what we are talking about is indeed a life and death struggle. For communities like Riverton and Fisher Branch, saving branch line abandonment is doubly critical. Not only are these towns, like many prairie towns, dependent on the branch line and the country elevator for their wellbeing, but because of the greater distance to major grain delivery points, the farmers in those regions depend to a greater extent on the maintenance of branch line service in order to keep their costs of production somewhat manageable.

Motion No. 34, which was put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), would strike from Bill C-155 Clause 17(4). By doing that this motion would strike from the Bill a clause which would only encourage branch line abandonment. Most Hon. Members will know, I am sure, that with abandonment go the elevators. In their place we would get large inland grain terminals serviced by truck rather than rail.

I am not supporting this motion because I want to make it tough for small trucking firms on the Prairies, but rather because I think it is in their interest, just as it is in the interest of prairie communities and farmers, to preserve our system of branch lines and country elevators. What benefit can there be to these small trucking companies in the slow demise of prairie communities? Without this amendment it will be wide open for the Administrator of the Grain Transportation Agency to give subsidies to truck grain or ship it by rail. By doing that, the Bill will open the door for trucks to compete with the shipment of grain by rail on branch lines. That will lower the traffic and revenue on those branch lines and contribute to the statistical justification that the railways are always looking for excuses to seek abandonment of their branch lines.

Who loses in that kind of situation, Mr. Speaker? The community itself loses. Most of our prairie communities are dependent for their very survival on these branch lines, but when it comes to a situation where the railways are able to argue that the line is no longer economical, then it is only a matter of time before the CTC gives its okay to abandon it. Once that happens there is no reason for the country elevator to continue operation, so it goes and takes a handful of jobs with it. After that there is no grain traffi to the elevators. Then the implement dealer, the grocery store and cafes see their business dry up. Once the decline starts there is not much to stop it. But that is not where it ends. It is common sense that if you increase the heavy truck traffic on a road, you are going to increase the maintenance costs of that road as well. Who is going to pay for that road maintenance? Not the railways, not the federal Government. It is the rural municipalities and the provinces that end up paying for it.

Mr. Speaker, I have been working for the people in the Fisher Branch, Broad Valley area of my constituency to save the CN branch line from Grosse Isle to Fisher Branch. The hearings were held last October. Then on March 17 of this year, the Canadian Transport Commission ruled in favour of CN's bid to abandon the line. We appealed that decision to the review committee of the CTC, but on August 22 of this year, we learned that the review committee too had decided in favour of CN. We are now at the last stage open to us to stop this abandonment; we have appealed the decision to the Privy Council.

One of the important points we raised with the CTC, Mr. Speaker, was the highway construction and maintenance costs that would have to be picked up by the Province and the rural municipalities. The Province of Manitoba estimated that if that branch line were abandoned, an additional $8 million in costs would accrue to the Province alone as a result of the increased traffic on the highway system. Eight million dollars, Mr. Speaker, and that is only one branch line.

In the State of Iowa, grain used to be shipped primarily by rail, as it is shipped in our own prairie Provinces. But then the railways started to abandon the branch lines in Iowa, and grain transportation moved from rail to road. The result of that, Mr. Speaker, was that the State of Iowa found its roads and highways deteriorating under the traffic of heavy trucks at a rate two to three times faster than the State could afford to repair them. What did they do? Did they encourage more branch line abandonment? No, they did not. They decided to introduce a program to subsidize existing railway branch lines in order to keep as much of the grain as possible moving by rail. And you know, Mr. Speaker, they found that to be less expensive than paying for the extra highway maintenance and road repair. Iowa State learned its lesson, Mr. Speaker. It is now warning other jurisdictions not to permit branch lines to be abandoned and grain traffic transferred from rail to road.

The other big loser in this kind of situation, Mr. Speaker, is the prairie Wheat Pools. The pools, owned by farmers themselves, now own most of the existing country elevator system. When branch lines are abandoned and grain delivery is consolidated into large inland grain terminals, the pools will lose the capital they have invested in the country elevators. They do not stand to gain very much at all from selling the elevators or from scrapping them. At the same time, they will have to invest incredible amounts to construct inland grain terminals themselves if they hope to be able to carry on competing with the prairie grain companies.

Let me wrap up, Mr. Speaker, by saying that without this amendment, the Bill we are debating will do much to encourage branch line abandonment and, as a result, the deterioration of our grain delivery system. Railways are the most efficient way to move heavy loading bulk goods like grain. Without this amendment, this Bill will undoubtedly lead to more branch line abandonment and elevator consolidation. Rather than saving money or providing for a more efficient delivery system, it could very well increase the total cost of getting grain from the field to port. The losers there would be the producers, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Bert Hargrave (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in this trucking amendment, and I do so with considerable pleasure in that I follow the last three speakers from the Conservative Party, the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp), the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta) and the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers). Those three Members are very knowledgeable about the importance of the trucking of grain throughout the western Prairies. As far as I am concerned, they are exceedingly knowledgeable about its special importance to the livestock sector and that of feed grains for cattle and hogs. That is an enormously important industry in western Canada. That has been overlooked to a great extent in this legislation.

I am speaking in total opposition to Motion No. 34 in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). While I have great respect for his tenacity and the service he has given to the committee, especially when we were travelling, on this particular amendment he is way out to lunch. He is talking nonsense. I have to say it as bluntly as that. It is regrettable that this amendment would negate our, and I emphasize "our", Conservative committee stage amendment, already agreed to, which would allow the Administrator to enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where in his opinion such agreements would be in the best interests of grain producers. That is nothing but plain common sense. It will certainly improve the Bill, in fact it already has in that it is now part of the Bill. We should never, never take it out.

The thrust of Bill C-155 is to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain. That is the purpose, and surely our amendment goes right to the heart of fulfilling that purpose. Our amendment simply says that, where appropriate, trucks be used in the best interests of grain producers. It allows the natural and most efficient use of a grain transportation system which is most efficient, especially for the short haul. Surely that is where trucking comes into its own. I would say very bluntly that the use of truckers is an invitation for private enterprise to function properly.

• (1630)

I want to digress a moment and talk about an interesting part of the committee stage when we were travelling. On one occasion when we were spending a weekend in Regina, various people arranged, for the benefit of some of the members of the committee and some of the staff people, to visit the Weyburn terminal grain elevator, which is a marvellous piece of construction that is a great credit and tribute to the number of farmers who were behind it and built it a number of years ago. When we had some time off, we were taken on a tour. It was a beautiful day, a Sunday afternoon. We stopped in at one of the grain farmer's on the southwest corner of the city of Regina. He was just getting ready for harvest and told us about trucking his own grain well over 100 miles to the Weyburn terminal elevator, which he decided entirely on his own. He had no trouble making the decision because he felt it was worthwhile for him to hire commercial truckers to haul that grain well over 100 miles from his farm, just on the outskirts of Regina, to the Weyburn terminal.

When we arrived down at the terminal, we found 50 loaded hoppers cars on a track ready to be hauled away, and another 50 that had been spotted on the very day we were there. So here was a total of 100 grain hopper cars ready to be moved. However, the grain was coming in, of course, by truck. The think that made the system work in this case, according to the farmer we saw from over 100 miles away, was that he was able to pay the trucking, hauling it those 100 miles, then receiving cash for his dockage and screenings, enough to pay the costs of the trucking. Surely that was a lesson to us all on that occasion. I see the Chairman of the committee nodding his head. I think it is regrettable that the whole committee did not have the opportunity to see that special demonstration, if you like, of what a combination of a good, modern, efficient trucking system and railway system can do for our grain handling and transportation system.

I want to say very briefly that I cannot agree with some of the arguments that have been advanced by the New Democratic Party on this particular amendment, when it was in committee stage, suggesting that by encouraging, shall we say, a modern network of market roads and an efficient trucking system, we will damage those roads. This is nonsense, of course. There was a time when we were travelling with perhaps fairly heavily loaded grain grucks on dirt roads that were not properly built, but no longer. Surely, this is the situation, that no longer is it a viable argument at all to say that just be trucking grain we will wear out our roads. they are well constructed now, and it is nothing but nonsense to advance that argument.

I want to describe another situation where the trucking industry, closer to my own home on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border, is of special significance. I cite the branch line to a branch line that ends up at the towns of Schuler and Hilda, very close to the Saskatchewan-Alberta border. From those points, there is no connecting railway direct to the main line into Medicine Hat or, for that matter, directly into Swift Current. There is a very roundabout way. One must travel a long way north to reach the subdivision that runs between Swift Current-Empress and ends up on the CPR main line again at Bassano. One must travel well over 100 miles to haul grain from Schuler and Hilda by rail into Medicine Hat, a distance of only about 40 miles. Here is a situation where grain trucking by the private sector, by the farmer himself, by the flour mills in Medicine Hat, is just nothing but good common sense in moving grain.

I would like to describe one other situation for the House. Throughout southern Alberta and a good bit of southwestern Saskatchewan, we have only one railway system. That is the CPR. There have never been branch lines of the CNR in southern Alberta or southwestern Saskatchewan. It is true that in the very early days there were reported to have been branch lines surveyed and the possibility of building them into both Medicine Hat and Swift Current was discussed, but they were never built. Today we have what I would describe as an adequate system of branch lines and the main line, of course, all CPR, supplemented by a very good, efficient, market road system in both our Provinces and a good commercial trucking system whereby the farmers themselves are willing and able to truck their own grain.

I see that Your Honour is becoming anxious. I would just like to end by saying that to deny in any way or even to discourage grain trucking when appropriate would be a seriously retrograde step.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I, too, wish to join in the debate on Motion No. 34 that would strike out the section in the Bill that would allow the Administrator to enter into agreements to move grain by motor vehicle. This is one of the most mischievous aspects of the Bill in front of us, one of the most mischievous clauses. We have heard today, mainly from Members of the Conservative Party, all sorts of reasons for which trucking should be encouraged and that trucking can indeed help grain producers. Some sexy arguments have been advanced in favour of trucking. Of course, the long-term effects, the over-all effects, the more global effects that trucking would have on the grain transportation system in western Canada have not been discussed or mentioned by Members of the Official Opposition.

There might be cases in which it can be argued that trucking is to the immediate advantage of certain individuals at a particular time. However, what the amendment allows is trucking on a much larger scale. It opens the door to trucking as a major competitor against the rail system of moving grain. Some Members of the Conservative Party would object to this; but surely, going through the speeches we have heard this afternoon, we find it is admitted by most of the Conservatives speakers that they want to see a competitive system where trucking competes against the railroad. I do not understand that argument. One does not have two different highways running beside each other, competing with each other. One does not have two different power lines and power companies running side by side, competing with each other, nor does one have two different sewage lines or telephone lines, because it does not make economic sense.

To advance the argument that we need competition between trucking and railroads is to say that we need competition between the power lines and that we need competition between telephone companies. The capital cost of having two viable systems of transporting and shipping grain would be so prohibitive that, in the end, it would be the taxpayers of Canada and the farmers, the producers, who would end up having to pay for the maintenance of those two systems. Personally, I suspect that in the end we will have only one major system, and that will be roads, if the Bill, plus its amendment, is passed.

● (1640)

This clause, proposed by the Conservatives and voted for by the Conservatives and Liberals in the committee and which the present amendment by the Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is seeking to delete, will allow the gradual introduction of trucking of grain on a piecemeal basis. It will allow certain lines to become abandoned.

When we talk about trucking, we are really talking about CP and CN. They are the major truckers, and this measure would allow them to move shipments of grain from their railway lines to their trucks. Why should they not be in favour of that? The roads are maintained through municipal and provincial taxes. That is one less responsibility for the railroads, so they would obviously like to see many lines abandoned and grain shipments revert to being trucked. It is in their interest to have this particular amendment introduced and passed. Therefore, when we hear Members of the Conservative Party talk about the interest of the producers, it is really the talk of George Orwell in "1984" where words are one thing but their real meaning and intent is something else.

Why is it so important for us in the NDP to support this amendment and fight against opening the door to trucking? First, we feel that the branch lines must be protected. We must establish the principle once and for all that the major vehicle for moving grain in western Canada is our railroad system. We should not allow little tricks like this piece of legislation begin to whittle away at our rail line system.

Our second concern is that by allowing trucking we are only encouraging more inland terminals. The Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers), who just spoke, essentially proved that point when he gave his impression of how great the Weyburn inland terminal is and how it is able to exist because of trucking. A few inland terminals in Saskatchewan would undoubtedly destroy the social fabric of our Province. Trucking would lay town after town in ruin.

We will fight this because we believe that people should be able to control their own destiny rather than that the railroads and a few large grain companies should control the health and well being of rural Saskatchewan. It should be in the hands of the people and not just in a few corporate boardrooms.

The other big loser as a result of this legislation will be the whole pool system. The Wheat Pools are based upon the notion of a decentralized grain collecting and handling system. They are based on a notion which keeps many small towns and rural communities viable. There is a tremendous capital investment in that system. If trucking is allowed to take place, many of those rural elevators and towns will become obsolete and a major capital investment by the pools will be wiped out. The Cargills and major private grain companies will be encouraged to move in.

I predict that if this piece of legislation passes and our amendment today is defeated, the pools will see a steady erosion of their market position over the next decade. Instead of being the major handler of grain in western Canada, their importance will decline steadily. The private grain handlers such as Cargill will have achieved their victory and we will see the destruction of the pools.

The other major loser from this will be the local municipalities. We have heard arguments suggesting that our roads are of such good quality today that grain trucks could travel on municipal roads without doing any damage to them or necessitating an increase in municipal and provincial taxes for their upkeep. I wish that were true, but surely the facts speak against that. We have heard Members of my Party use the State of Iowa as an example. It has been found that large scale trucking of grain in that State was so expensive that it decided to supply subsidies to the railroads and use them as the major source of grain transportation. That was my experience as well when I visited the States of North Dakota and Montana in the spring of 1982. At that time I talked to elevator operators, producers and to the Commissioner of Agriculture in the State of North Dakota. Without exception, they told me time and again that trucking of grain was detrimental to the small elevator points and that it meant tremendous increases in the cost of road maintenance. I believe that to suggest otherwise is very foolish indeed.

In closing I wish to talk briefly about the role of the small trucker. Small truckers to whom I have talked have said that the majors are not allowing them to exist. In Sasktachewan, for example, as recently as September 22 of this year, CP trucking bought four of our larger trucking firms in Saskatchewan. This deal with the four firms, which had revenues of over $10 million last year, is another illustration of the concentration of powers by the railroads in the trucking business.

I see that my time is up, Mr. Speaker. I seek unanimous consent of the House to close my remarks.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member to continue his remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I would like to make a few comments this afternoon concerning Motion No. 34 to Bill C-155 which has become better known in the area that I represent as the Crow Bill. The motion itself, which was presented by our Party, seeks to delete Clause 17(4) of the Bill which states:

(4) The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

While this may sound acceptable, when one analyses this clause further it causes some concern. First, the best interests of the grain producers are to be judged by some Administrator whom the Liberals want to be responsible to the Cabinet. I could perhaps agree with this provision if the best interests of the grain producers had been protected up to this point, but I do not think this Liberal bag Government has protected the interests of the producers. In fact, their interest have been eroded. Otherwise, why would we be even debating this Bill in terms of the content that specifically refers to the statutory rate or the removal of the Crow rate on which western Canada has come to rely for so many years to keep farming viable and which we really felt is part of our Confederation bargain?

I really question whether the Government ever had the best interests of the grain producers at heart. If it did and had demonstrated so in the past, perhaps I could agree with leaving this clause within Bill C-155. We have heard some talk this afternoon that it would be the large trucking companies which would benefit from this. That may be so. There should be some subsidy given to people who have to truck grain through no fault of their own. By moving to delete this part of the Bill, I am not against grain producers or small independent truckers. There are areas within my constituency where there is a need for more fair and equitable treatment of farmers who have to get their grain to market through the existing elevator system. I could think of places like Goodsoil in my constituency where producers and farmers have to truck grain in some cases 45 miles to the nearest elevators. Why do they do that? They do it because there is no rail line in the area which could be used to get the grain out.

As I mentioned in earlier speeches on Bill C-155, there are other areas in my constituency where elevators are plugged for a good part of the year. The rail transportation system is so bad that the elevators are plugged because the grain is not moved out when it is supposed to be. Farmers who want to haul grain to the elevators find they cannot do so because the elevators are plugged. The rail into the Meadow Lake delivery point, the steel and track, is in such a state of bad repair that they cannot take in hopper cars, load them fully and haul them back out.

If this clause contained conditions that were in the best interests of grain producers, I would not support the amendment, but I feel I have to support it because such conditions are not outlined in the Bill. We are being asked to rely on the Government to protect the best interests of grain producers. I would never do that on behalf of grain producers in my constituency because the Government has not demonstrated in its past performance, that it has protected the interests of producers. It has not demonstrated it through the Farm Credit Corporation, rail transportation or preservation of the statutory rate. Why should we suddenly trust the Administration responsible to Cabinet for transportation to enter into agreements in the best interests of producers? I just do not think it will happen.

If conditions were included in the Bill in the best interests of individual farmers, such as my cousin in Meadow Lake who has a semi-trailer and sometimes hauls grain great distances because he cannot sell it in The Meadow Lake with its poor transportation system, then I would agree with them. If small local contractors, who are farmers by definition, have semi-trailers and haul grain for their neighbours and friends, they should be able to obtain the benefit of subsidization for helping their neighbours and for displaying business incentive to subsidize their farming incomes, because most farms in western Canada are in a shambles right now. In the case of small independent truckers, I could see it happening where it was absolutely necessary because of the terrible condition of the grain transportation system in western Canada, particularly in the constituency I represent. Grain companies through the co-ordination system cannot get the cars in there to move the grain. When they do, the rails are not in a good enough state of repair to get the fully loaded cars out.

All Hon. Members should realize that with a good and efficient rail transportation system there would be no need to truck grain any farther than the closest delivery point, which should be only a few miles away. Farmers should be able to haul their product to elevators when they need money and have the time to do so. This does not happen right now. Has it been in the best interest of producers for the rail transportation system to have deteriorated to its present condition, as we have seen over the years? I do not think we can buy the argument saying that it is in the best interests of producers.

If those conditions are not included in the Bill, what will happen to the grain Administrator who will be answerable to Cabinet and to the federal Liberal Government opposite? It will not be the people in Goodsoil who will benefit, those people who have to truck their grain right now. It will not be to the benefit of little independent truckers, whether they be full-time in the trucking business or part-time farmers/truckers. I maintain that it will benefit the larger trucking companies. Maybe Maislin will be out in Saskatchewan trucking grain pretty soon.

Mr. Towers: No thanks.

Mr. Anguish: It seems to have ripped off enough from the federal Government. I hear a Member to my right saying, "No thanks". I agree with him. Maislin can stay the heck out of our Territory, tearing up our roads, ripping off and leeching off Canadian taxpayers. We do not want them leeching off prairie farmers as well.

There is a fairly large trucking company in The Meadow Lake which just sold out to Canadian Pacific Transport. The deal will become effective within the next month or so. It is good that that local businessman was able to develop his company and finally sell it when it was in his best interests to do so. I admire his enterprising spirit, but I do not like to see Canadian Pacific Transport coming in to truck our grain. That is what it plans on doing. It knows this Bill will erode our transportation system. It knows that it will be on the milk line. The next thing we know Canadian Pacific Transport will be trucking grain from Saskatchewan to the ports.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting for one who understands what is going on in rural areas to note the contradiction in the New Democratic Party camp on this motion. Obviously the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) did not understand what was happening. It is important to look at the flexibility in trucking and the reality of what is happening in rural areas. There are areas where the lines have alreay been taken out and where there are major problems for farmers who find themselves several miles from elevators. It would be in the best interests of producers to have something in the Bill to give them an equal opportunity to get their grain to market as persons who happen to have their farms situated alongside a main line or large elevator.

There are two important matters to mention when we talk about this problem. First, we have the value of land and second, the impact of what will happen to land costs on someone who does not have an elevator within a few miles of his farm. We are living in a day when advancement is taking place. It would be ludicrous not to recognize that or the fact that there are some problems for producers out there. While no one wants to see rail lines taken out, farmers are faced with other problems at the present time. This is why the NDP motion is not in the best interests of producers. Returning to the subject of the price of land, I say that it is a very important aspect. If there is unequal opportunity to deliver grain and get it into the system, and if the cost is 30 cents or 40 cents higher for some farmers who happen to be miles away from the main line, major problems result. Anyone familiar with the Prairies knows that in Saskatchewan, an elevator was put in every nine miles on the line. That may be the case in Alberta and Manitoba as well.

● (1700)

Mr. Benjamin: Six miles.

Mr. Gustafson: One Member says that in some places it is every six miles. At many of those points the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and the elevator companies have removed the elevators.

A problem exists on the basis of the system we now have where, without any further deterioration, trucks could become of very vital interest to the primary producer. For any prairie Member to speak against truckers having the right to operate in a way that is in the best interest of the primary producer is unthinkable. I support the amendment as it now stands. Subclause 17(4) now reads:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

It is clear that it is to protect the producer.

There are several examples in my riding of producers who are many miles from an elevator. If the Administrator brought forward a program to enhance the position of producers, I would support it. That is what the Bill does in Clause 17. The amendment would disregard subclause 17(4), taking that advantage away from the producer.

With regard to the cost of land, there is a vast difference between parcels of land which are close to the main lines and those more removed. The trucking industry would strengthen the position of those farmers, reinforcing their investment as opposed to depleting their assets.

It is certainly more fair to have subclause 17(4). If the clause were removed, there would be no way of dealing with the problem. While none of us like to see the abandonment of rail lines, there is no way that it is practical to run a line for 20 or 30 miles. Obviously the best approach is trucking.

The NDP says this will wreck the roads. We live in an advanced age. There are 18-wheel trucks, and these should be used in the best interests of the grain producers and other industries. To say that we cannot build roads to handle these trucks is not correct. There are trucks that are not hard on these roads. That argument has never sat right with me. The truck that is hardest on a rural road is a one-tone truck with a 750 tire carrying 100 bushels of grain. It plunges right into the pavement. A tandem truck with four 1,000 by 20 inch tires rolls over the road. It is not hard on the road. That is just an argument that the NDP use—

Mr. Benjamin: That is not your small farmer.

Mr. Gustafson: The small farmer can hire a large truck if necessary. It would be cheaper. In addition, it would allow the Government to pay for bringing in the grain. It restricts the small producer, in fact the whole agriculture industry, to have this kind of amendment which stifles growth and stands in the way of progress.

I want to make it abundantly clear that we do not stand for, nor do we like to see, the removal of any rail line, but there are areas now where the farmers are in a serious situation beause of distance. This type of clause will enhance and strengthen their position.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, the debate on the amendments to Bill C-155 has been a series of wonderful opportunities to point out the difference between the New Democratic Party and the Progressive Conservative Party when it comes to things western Canadian. If we are honest in our beliefs about the way the western economy, and in this case the western transportation system, ought to be organized, we should be glad for this opportunity to make clear the differences which exist between us on these issues. This amendment, like the one I had the opportunity to speak to having to do with the role of the Canadian Wheat Board, is another example of how far apart we are from our Progressive Conservative colleagues, who in this case have joined with the Liberals to have a clause in the Bill which we are attempting to remove through our amendment.

What are the differences? The differences have to do with our differing views of the marketplace and the way in which the marketplace can be expected to discipline the railways. If I understand the arguments of my Conservative colleagues correctly, they want greater flexibility and opportunity for trucking in the system and for more producer choices. They believe it is only in that way that the railways may be made to provide the services that they otherwise might not provide. We are saying we should not do it through the market but, rather, through a Government which is willing to stand up to the railways and make them do what they are chartered to do, that is to provide service, in this case to grain producers, in other cases to passengers or whatever it may be. Here we have two very different views. We should not use this opportunity to confuse or provoke each other, but to make clear what the differences are between us. The Progressive Conservative position is that the railways cannot be disciplined by Government. They believe that the railways cannot be made to do what they are chartered to do by the Government and that only an increased use of the marketplace as a disciplining force will make the railways provide that service. There exists on the part of the Progressive Conservative Party what I would call the politics of despair or the politics of capitulation. Conservative Members are saying that they have given up on the idea of ever having a Government that could bring the railways into line and make the railways do what they are chartered to do and what they are subsidized to do and ought to be required to do. Members of the Progressive Conservative Party have basically said that that will never happen.

I can understand this attitude, having watched the Liberal Government do nothing for so many years to make the railways do what they should do. I can understand that kind of despair but I cannot understand why, in the final analysis, anyone would give in to that despair. Surely we ought to be able to imagine a situation in which the Government would stand up to the railways and make them do what they are supposed to do. That is the hope that we in this Party are not willing to give up. We are not willing to give up on the idea of a transportation system, in this case the railways, that could actually fulfil its obligations to the Canadian people.

Second, we are very cynical indeed about whether or not the marketplace will actually do what our friends on the right claim it will do. Will giving producers more choices about whether or not they transport grain by truck or rail in fact bring the railways into line or will the railways, because they have so much power in any case, simply adapt themselves to that reality and go into the trucking business so that they can pass on even more of the costs to the people through the municipal Governments and provincial Governments?

The marketplace does not work in the naive, simplistic and innocent way that my friends on the right would have us believe when they speak about how wonderful it would be if we increased producer choices and if we allowed a greater role for trucking. It simply does not work that way, but they believe that it does. They believe that it does and we believe that it does not. There is a very clear distinction between the position taken by the two Parties on this particular issue.

I shall now address myself to an irony which has been pointed out on a number of occasions. I do admit that an irony exists in that we appear to be defending the role of the railways. We appear to be defending the monopoly that the railways have over the transportation of grain. However, I point out now, as I did just a few minutes ago, Mr. Speaker, that we are not so much defending the railways as they exist now and as they have performed up to date; rather, we are defending the hope that some day we will have an integrated rail transportation system in the country that will provide the services that the railways were chartered to provide and that will act in the best interests of the Canadian people and economy. I admit that that is not the kind of railway system that we have always had, and indeed that we have at the present time. However, we do not want to give up on the idea of one day having that kind of transportation system.

Liberal Government Members and Progressive Conservative Opposition Members have together given up on ever having that kind of railway system in the country. Together, they have surrendered the fate of western Canada and the economic institutions, which have been built up over the years in that part of the country, to the marketplace through these kinds of amendments. That will be the long-term consequence of the Bill that we have before us. We cannot prove that; we can only make good arguments which thinking people will take seriously. They are quite right, Mr. Speaker, in saying that we cannot prove it. However, we do make such predictions. We ask that all people who may be listening to this debate or who until now have not paid much attention to the debate on changes to the Crow rate take the arguments that we are making seriously and see what is going on between the Liberals and the Conservatives. We ask them to write the Government and let the Government know that they do not like what is going on and that they think that Members of the NDP are doing the country a favour by trying to point out at every opportunity the cosy deals that are being made between the Liberals and the Conservatives, amendment by amendment.

We hope that the Government will yet see the wisdom of the criticisms we are making and change the Bill. Indeed, we hope that the Government would withdraw it altogether and split it up so that we can go ahead with railway upgrading and the coal question but leave the question of changes to the Crow rate to a much later date; perhaps about 100 years from now.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, before I became a Member of Parliament, I was a Member of the Manitoba Legislature for four years. I remember that at that time, as is still the case, one of the very largest items of expenditure for any provincial Government was the building and maintenance of highways. It was a large expenditure when I was a Member of the Legislature some 25 years ago and it is still a big item today. In fact, road maintenance uses a bigger percentage of a provincial budget now than it ever did before, Mr. Speaker.

Every Province in the country is now operating with a deficit. Yet we have here a proposal to increase—

Mr. Blaikie: Saskatchewan wasn't until the Tories got in.

Mr. Orlikow: My colleague says that Saskatchewan did not have a deficit until the Tories got in. Well, that is a fact but perhaps this is not the time to discuss that.

We have here a proposal made by the Government which inevitably will mean that more and more grain will be shipped by truck rather than by rail. It seems pretty obvious to me that that means that the farmers may have a short-term gain but they will have long-term pain.

The occupation of a farmer, Mr. Speaker, is to produce grain. They are also citizens of the Provinces in which they live and, as citizens, they have to help meet the cost of operating the Province. One of the biggest items in the cost of operating a Province is the construction and maintenance of highways.

We heard the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) a few moments ago tell us that the new 18-wheel trucks do not affect the highways. I am not an expert on highways but I will put on the record some of the views that are held on that question by people who are experts. I believe that the Hon. Member for Assiniboia is wrong, but let us assume for a moment that the larger trucks that are carrying heavier and heavier loads of grain will not have an adverse effect on the main highways such as the Trans-Canada Highway and others.

I am not now speaking about the Province of Saskatchewan which has more roads than any other Province in the country. I am speaking about my own Province of Manitoba. Half of the geographic area of my constituency is farm country. This area is served by provincial trunk highways and local roads. Those roads are not covered in concrete or asphalt and if they are, it is a very thin coating at most. Many of those roads are still covered with gravel or oil. I would ask Hon. Members to give some thought to—

Mr. McKnight: Maybe you didn't do such a good job.

Mr. Orlikow: I did not hear the Hon. Member's interjection but I do not suppose it is of very much consequence.

I would ask Hon. Members to give some thought to what will happen in two, three, four or five years if heavy trucks carrying tonnes of grain travel on those roads. Those roads will disappear. They will need major repairs if not complete rebuilding. Who will pay for that, Mr. Speaker? It will be the city worker and the farmer who saved a little money at the beginning because he could truck his grain. He will now have to pay for the major reconstruction of those roads which he has used. Again I say, Mr. Speaker, that what we are looking at is possible short-term gain and certain long-term gain.

• (1720)

Let me deal with the argument presented by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia to the effect that trucks do not harm the highways. I should like to quote a couple of paragraphs from a paper delivered to a Minneapolis conference on agricultural transportation in November, 1981, by Jerry E. Fruin, an associate professor of agricultural and applied economics, at the University of Minnesota. In its physical characteristics, Minnesota is very much like my part of Manitoba, Mr. Speaker. There are lots of people spread out thinly and lots of access roads to main highways. In that paper Prof. Fruin said:

> The stress exerted on highway pavement increases as the fourth power of the axle load. When axle weight increases from 18,000 pounds to 20,000 pounds, stress from that axle increases by roughly 50 percent. An 80,000-pound truck weighs 20 times as much as an automobile, but its combined axles cause 9,600 times as much stress on the payment and roadbed.
> A U.S. Department of Transportation study concluded that a 10 percent increase in maximum truck weight would decrease fuel consumption by 0.37 percent, but this might be offset by accelerated highway deterioration. If pavement deterioration continues to exceed repavement efforts at current rates, vehicle fuel efficiency in 1985 could decrease by 2.4 per cent. Fuel consumption at 40 miles per hour over badly patched asphalt increases 34 percent over fuel consumption on high quality pavement. Poor road surface increases energy consumption for all vehicles, not just trucks.

There is no question but that the roads will deteriorate. It will cost money to rebuild those roads and, as the professor indicates, eventually it will mean increased fuel consumption.

Who will benefit by encouraging the transportation of grain by truck? Oddly enough, the beneficiaries will be the railways. Both CN and CP are actively involved in the trucking business. CN recently consolidated the 3,000 pieces of highway equipment from its 13 trucking companies into a single entity to form its nation-wide Route Canada Trucking Service, now the largest trucking company in the country.

Canadian Pacific Express and Transport Limited is stationed in 194 locations across Canada and the eastern United States. These subsidiaries operate about 1,000 trucks, 3,000 highway trailers, 400 city trailers, 500 city tractors and 500 highway tractors. It is not difficult to imagine that both companies will be actively engaged in trucking grain from branch lines to centralized delivery points on their own rail lines.

This circumstance casts an interesting sidelight on the total concept of competition as between the CP and CN vertically integrated ownership trucking companies and independent truckers who have been gearing up to get part of the action. The problem is that in this country we have never really thought of integrating all modes of transportation. A few years ago I was in Germany and met with the equivalent of the Deputy Minister of Transport. He told our Party that the bus companies had requested permission to operate at a higher speed limit on the autobahn, which is the equivalent of our throughways. He said that it would not be permitted because it would mean that the buses could compete with the railways for passenger service and the Government wanted to keep the railways operating and cost efficient, moving as many passengers as possible. On the morning that we left Bonn we saw the Minister and the Deputy Minister on the platform, waiting for a train. I wonder when was the last time that a minister or deputy minister of the Canadian Government travelled by train.

We have done everything possible to persuade people to travel by air. We have not thought of transportation as an integrated service where the railways, buses, airlines or the private car could be used in the most efficient and economical way. We have looked at each mode separately, and that is why they are all in trouble.

This amendment would keep as many farmers as possible moving their grain by rail, and that is why I support it.

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I was hoping that an Hon. Member to my left from an Ontario riding might have stood up so that I could attack him on a few of the points that Party has brought out today. The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) talks continually about small business, but collectively the NDP is abusing small businessmen through this amendment.

What we are talking about is the use of trucks as opposed to the railroad—that involves the independent, small businessman. Why is the Hon. Member from British Columbia not here saying the things that other Members of his Party have been saying today so that we can attack him?

Some Members of the NDP talk of the jobs created in Ontario by the production of trucks. The automobile industry is in critical shape, Mr. Speaker, but the truck industry is surviving. It seems that the NDP is determined to get rid of those jobs.

There is room for everyone to benefit in this large segment of the export economy in Canada. Over $7 billion worth of goods will be shipped out of this country next year; 50 per cent of the tolls on the St. Lawrence Seaway come from grain transportation, and I understand that 50 per cent of the revenue of the Port of Vancouver comes from grain transportation. It is therefore important to the entire country. This clause would be a deterrent to the truck industry in Ontario, and I am sure that the Hon. Member for Brant (Mr. Blackburn) would endorse what I am saying. He has not spoken on the motion, however, because he knows he would have to speak against it.

This Party believes in free enterprise, Mr. Speaker, and the trucker is an entrepreneur. He is the person we are trying to protect. We are also trying to protect the producer so that he can get his product to market most efficiently.

The railroads are being doubly subsidized through this Bill, in my opinion. They are another bureaucracy. The NDP agrees with the railroads because the Canadian National is a Crown corporation. They would love the CPR to become a Crown corporation—indeed, they want everything to become a Crown corporation. They are trying to nationalize everything, they do not want entrepreneurs or independent businessmen to succeed. That means they have an axe to grind. They believe in national ownership and we do not, because we have seen it fail. Canadair is a prime example of that. We want the entrepreneur to succeed. The NDP talks about the roads. I agree with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), that these new tractor trailers with their large tires can go over any roads, even in Ontario when the half-load limit is on, and particularly around Oshawa where the automobile industry is important. They do not damage the roads the way the small trucks do, the half-ton, the one-ton, the three-ton and the five-ton. The single axles are the ones which cause the damage, and they do not cause the damage because they are that size but because the independent owner overloads them. Therefore, the argument that it is going to destroy the roads is not valid.

• (1730)

What the NDP wants us to do is to build hopper cars. How long does a hopper car last in comparison with a truck? We all know the answer because the Government never replaces hopper cars until they fall apart. So there is very little employment created by the replacement of hopper cars.

Mr. Pepin: You are talking about boxcars.

Mr. Fennell: Boxcars then. I do not care what they are, boxcars or hopper cars. They are railroad cars. Trailers do wear out. They do not last as long. They have to be built with lighter material such as aluminum. Their replacement creates jobs, and that is what we are lacking in this country. The NDP is trying to remove the potential for more employment in its own Provinces. This is shocking to me. It is literally trying to get rid of employment in its own Provinces. One railroad engineer can drive the equivalent of 20 trucks. That is 20 times the number of direct jobs. Then there is the number of indirect jobs created in the production of the trucks.

I do not know how many Hon. Members have spoken on this Bill, but the one thing on which the Province of Ontario has been solidly behind our Party is that there must be equal sharing between the farmer and the railways. That has not been acknowledged by the Government. It wants it all to go to the railroads. It wants to protect its own bureaucracy and its own friends, such as Ian Sinclair. It will not allow a fair share to the producer. If the Government did that, the potential for the trucking industry would probably be even greater. The potential of secondary manufacturing of those products would be even greater. The livestock industry would also probably benefit from it. I cannot see one bit of benefit to this Bill by the amendment which is presented by the New Democratic Party. The Bill needs many changes, but this is one which is not required.

The NDP keeps saying we are in bed with the Liberals. It is the NDP which threw us out of power in 1979. It is the NDP which has endorsed the National Energy Program. So when we are told that we are in bed with the Liberals, I would say that things have been switched around and that that Party is trying to protect itself for the next election.

I thank the House for bearing with me in my few remarks on this motion. I hope I have a further chance to speak on other portions of this Bill.

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate on Motion No. 34, wherein this Party is asking for the removal of Clause 17(4) which states:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreement to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

I believe it is only common sense that our request should be agreed to. We have seen a spectacle today which is hard to believe. On the opposite side of the House we saw the former Minister of Transport sitting there while the Conservatives stood up to support this legislation. Is that not something! To suggest that we should be looking to the trucking industry as an alternative way of transporting our grains is unbelievable. In April, the Government came forward with legislation requesting that moneys be made available for the transfer to other forms of energy, when one of the most efficient forms of energy is the rail transportation system. Transportation of our grain by rail is the ultimate method and we should not be looking at giving subsidies to trucking firms.

I can remember back in the 1950s when I was working for CP Rail in Revelstoke. One day all the officials came to town. They were worried about the trucks taking over. They had a theme at that time, "Ship by Rail". They were telling us all about how it would be. A list compiled by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool of rail lines under study by Transport Canada was printed in the Western Producer. This list was under study in order to do away with these branch lines. There are 20 of them under the CNR which are under study. There are another 19 under CP Rail. According to this article there are 817 miles of CN Rail which presently serves 8,001 producers which is being looked at. If this kind of legislation is allowed, these producers will be forced to look at alternative means, such as trucking. The Canadian Pacific has 19 rail lines which serve 1,145 miles which are being considered at this time. We know what takes place at these hearings. We know the railway jobs which are lost. We know the maintenance jobs which are lost.

There are 1733 producers who will be affected if trucking is considered. To put that amount of traffic on the highways is absolutely ludricrous. I have been to these hearings and heard discussions on rail line abandonments before. The argument which is put forward is that transportation is available now. The trucks can do it. CPR has so many trucks. CNR has so many. There is Smith Transport. They will name all their subsidiary groups. If it were the individual farmer who would get the benefits from this perhaps we could see some rationale. But for the Conservatives to stand up in this House and support that kind of legislation is exactly what it is doing in British Columbia. Conservatives and Liberals are joining together, forming what they call the Social Credit Party of British Columbia.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Parker: Sure they are. We know it. Everyone else knows it. And the Conservatives talk about us in the New Democratic Party. We heard the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) talk about how the NDP defeated this Government in 1979, all 32 Members. It was the people of Canada. When are the Conservatives ever going to recognize the fact that the people of Canada would not accept the kind of legislation they would bring forward?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I would invite the Hon. Member to return to the amendment now before the House.

Mr. Parker: Mr. Speaker, it appears that some Hon. Members in the House can refer to what takes place, but others cannot.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I am sure the Hon. Member is not imputing discrimination on the part of the Chair. I must admit that it is sometimes difficult for the Chair to follow the logic of the arguments of Hon. Members. However, in this case I must say that there was a clear-cut departure from the amendment now before the House. I invite the Hon. Member to address his remarks to that amendment.

● (1740)

Mr. Parker: Mr. Speaker, what I said was not with reference to the Chair, it was with regard to prior speakers.

I say it is imperative that we take a serious look at what is happening. If we are indeed looking at abandonment of some lines, then the railways should be told, "You will pay the producer's cost to carry his grain to the main line". Then we would be doing something constructive instead of using taxpayers' money to pay the railways which are not living up to their obligations. I urge the Conservatives to look at that theory rather than get in bed with the Liberal Government and its theory of subsidizing the trucking companies, which in fact will be the railways companies, whether it be CN, what they call a Crown corporation although certainly not what I call a Crown corporation, or CP rail.

Mr. McKnight: Nationalize them.

Mr. Parker: There are other ways of doing this without paying subsidies for trucking. To look at the idea of trucks hauling grain is like trying to fill a wheelbarrow with a spoon. It is only common sense to have a transportation system which collects the grain, brings it to the main line, and helps the communities to survive through the use of country elevators and so on. If we allow this amendment, then we are opening the door for the railways to abandon more branch lines. We cannot allow that to happen. We in this Party recognize the ramifications of this legislation and we want to ensure that this does not happen.

I want to get back to the subject of energy costs, Mr. Speaker. Surely to goodness if we are in the midst of conserving our energy, we would not be looking at this kind of system of gathering grain and shipping it to the railhead or ports. It does not make sense. On one hand you give grants to conserve energy, on the other hand you give grants to the trucking industry which will use more energy. Every railroader knows the significance of branch lines and the importance of jobs in those communities on the rail system. For us to even consider using the trucking system to carry grain to the railhead or port is ridiculous. I am very pleased to say that our Party is opposed to that and I am in full agreement with it.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak on Motion No. 34, which attempts to negate a Conservative and Liberal amendment concerning the use of trucking to haul grain, we think this should be done because the amendment does not specify that such trucking arrangements should take place only where the CTC has approved an abandonment. It would allow trucking to be used by the railway or elevator companies to drain off business from existing branch lines in an effort to set up a line for abandonment. It would drain away business from the line to the point where they could then apply to have the whole thing abandoned.

We are opposed not because we are opposed to the use of trucks. They are vital to every bushel of grain moved off the Prairies. It is an integrated system where trucks take grain from the combines and the farms to the elevator for loading on to rail cars. That is not at issue, although I will go into it a little later in my remarks. What is at issue is the economic fact that once you allow trucking from existing branch lines on an ad hoc basis at the initiative of a trucking or elevator company, you are setting yourself up for complete domination by both railway companies. They do not involve themselves in trucking except in areas where they get a firm high volume business. That is what we are doing with this kind of amendment. Previous speakers from my Party have pointed out that CPR has already taken over some of the largest private trucking firms in Saskatchewan in anticipation of this kind of amendment being part of the Bill. It does not give us a competitive situation; it leaves us more in the hands of the railway corporate decision-making than is the case now with a proliferation of small trucking firms.

I cannot let go unchallenged some of the remarks made in the House today, Mr. Speaker, particularly by some Conservative Members who indicated they thought the NDP was not supportive of the trucking industry or small business. I think the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) pointed out the basic problem. He said they had started from a different space than the NDP. Indeed they have. He went on to say they find some good in this Bill. We find very little good in this Bill. He says their job is to amend it, to make it an even better Bill. We say the Bill is so bad there is not much we can do except stop the Bill. We will use whatever legitimate legislative means we have to slow the process and give the public an opportunity to put pressure on the Conservative and Liberal Parties to see the error of their ways.

I think the fact that the main points of the argument for having these proposed changes, which were put forward by the Government in the form of major amendments to the Bill, were all ruled out of order indicates we should be going back to square one and starting with a new Bill based on some of the information we heard from farmers and businessmen, the residents of rural areas on the Prairies where the committee travelled in order to find out what they thought of this Bill. We had a very good back-to-back presentation given on the effects of railways and trucks on these communities presented to us by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp). If I may paraphrase Peter Ustinov, they found themselves of two minds on the issue, one more or less in disagreement with the other.

The Hon. Member for Saskatoon West cited a town in his riding which had its rail line abandoned. He made it very clear that a grain town like that almost does not exist without a rail line. He pointed out that the village had now applied to be disbanded because there are no railway tracks and no more function for the village. The Hon. Member for Provencher pointed out, perhaps rightly, that you do not need a railway to have a town. He cited the fact that the town where he was born never had a railway and still exists. I think he went on to reach some conclusions based on that, and he went beyond that to reach the point where I was almost convinced by the argument of the Hon. Member for Provencher that if people wanted to fish hard enough, they could set up a fishing village on top of a mountain and somehow it would succeed. That kind of faith, I think, is the other side of the argument that we have been hearing from Hon. Members beside us.

With regard to trucks as an alternative to rail service, I do not think anyone, even my hon. friends to my right, seriously feels that it would be a true alternative to rail service. Although they did not make it very clear, I am sure they are not foolish enough to think that trucks could transport our export grain. Anyone who thinks that this is possible should just stop for a moment to think of the massive movement that would be required. It takes three or four large trucking rigs to fill one hopper car. There are 110 hopper cars per trainload, which means that it would be necessary to have 350 to 450 trucks moving from somewhere on the Prairies out to port in British Columbia or Thunder Bay just to move the equivalent of one trainload. I do not think anyone should really be arguing that trucks will provide serious competition for the railways, but I heard Hon. Members attempting to make that argument.

The Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell), who just spoke, pointed out the great benefits of using trucks to move grain over rail. He said it had so many advantages and created so many more jobs as, indeed, it probably would. He said that the equipment wears out far faster so that one is always employing people, rebuilding the trucks and the trailers they are using, and is that not fine? Perhaps it is, except that we must be able to move the grain at a price that will put it in competition in world markets. Spending that kind of money will not do it. The Hon. Member for Ontario probably could have gone even further with his argument, if he was only going to take an employment argument, and pointed out all the advantages that could be gained by packsacking it to the coast. It would have produced far more jobs making shoes and packsacks than is even the case with trucks. However, he did not go that far.

I think that the trucking argument has been carried to this ultimate, ridiculous point, and we should not be fooled into thinking that trucks have any place in forming real competition for rails in the transportation system. As I pointed out earlier, trucks do have a place in the movement from farm to rail and should continue to be used that way.

Mr. Thacker: That's the point.

Mr. Althouse: "That is the point", the Hon. Member says. However, it has nothing to do with the amendment that we have before us.

Mr. Thacker: Sure it has.

Mr. Althouse: It has none, because there is nothing in the Act or any of the testimony we have heard from the witnesses concerning the provision of any funds for those kinds of trucking operations. The only kind of trucking operation that is being discussed here under the Administrator is the kind that would move grain from one elevator to another. It would be transshipping, an unecessary kind of trucking, because the grain must be trucked, initially, from the farm to the elevator in any case. Why not send it to the elevator where it will end up being transshipped on to an elevator instead of having a second unnecessary stop in the interval? Motion No. 35 which we have proposed will deal with this, and we will get to that next.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I could not let the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) continue with his misleading statements, trying to alarm people out on the western Prairies unduly by saying that the rail will be stripped up between Calgary and Vancouver, because that is what he was saying.

Mr. Althouse: Who said that?

Mr. Thacker: He was saying—

Mr. Althouse: I did not. I pointed out that it did not have place in competition.

Mr. Thacker: —that for a 120-car or 120-car trip to Vancouver, there would have to be over 300 trucks, implying that that is what the motion means. It is sheer nonsense.

Mr. Althouse: We are just extending Tory logic. It is sheer nonsense.

Mr. Thacker: The Hon. Member has now admitted that his speech was sheer nonsense and that he was trying to waste time.

Mrs. Mitchell: Your argument was.

Mr. Thacker: That is the only thing he has said in the last six months with which I agree, that he speaks nonsense most of the time.

On the one hand the Hon. Member was saying that we were going to use trucks but, on the other hand, that we need to have trains. He wants to protect the monopoly of the CPR to haul grain to the West Coat. Clearly, from those central collection points, that is exactly what will happen because one cannot beat steel on those long hauls. However, what we are discussing, and what Clause 17(3) and the amendment that was accepted deal with, is the branch line collection system. Even under the Crow rate, half of those villages mentioned by the Hon. Member were disappearing in any event. My own home village was going, under the Crow, because things have happened which the New Democratic Party just does not appreciate. Trucks have come on the scene. We have better tractors and other machinery. We have good highways now. People like to go to larger centres. We are now becoming an urban society rather than a rural society. The dinosaurs in the NDP are trying to maintain a system that was designed for the horse and buggy, where there was an elevator every nine miles. Now the efficient collection points should be every 30 or 40 miles.

The one thing the Hon. Member did mention that was correct concerned the international marketplace. If we maintain railways on these branch collection systems, we will not be able to put a bushel of grain at tidewater to compete with the Americans, the Australians or the Argentinians, because they are going to these collection centres. The idea is to get one's grain to a centre like that in the most efficient way possible. Sometimes it will be by railways, if one happens to be in a part of a country that can justify the cost of a railway. In other places, it will be by trucks to haul into a central location. We could then have 110-car spots or 52-car spots that could be loaded, the grain could be cleaned there, it could go to the West Coast and be dumped strictly on to a ship, and those cars could be back in seven days. That is what is being done in the United States. There one can put a bushel of grain at tidewater far cheaper than we can. Interestingly enough, the railway can give the farmer a saving, a rate that is 14 cents cheaper per bushel, of which the farmer can keep 8 cents, because it only costs him 6 cents to send it with his truck. What an amazing thing is that, 8 cents in the farmer's pocket! He could go out and buy cars and trucks that are produced by our fellow Canadians. However, the NDP wants it to go to the railway because, for some reason, it wants the shareholders of the CPR to get richer. We know what it really wants with regard to its long-term strategy. It ultimately wants to have the railways so powerful that they can be nationalized. Members of the NDP think that they will be in Cabinet and make decisions to force the railway to do this and do that. Of course, as the Liberals have found out when they tried to do that to the energy industry, $14 billion left the country. Half of the unemployed people could be working today if it were not for the National Energy Program and the concentration of power. So, Members of the NDP can ruin the country. They will keep the Liberals in. They will keep concentrating power. Money will keep flowing out of the country. Here, even though we are only 24 million people sitting on the resources of a whole half a continent, we will all be on the dole. We will be lining up in food stores, because they are destroying agriculture, too. Just like in Poland, which once exported food, we will be standing in line. Just like in Russia, which once exported grain, we will be standing in line to get our food. That is the combination of the NDP keeping the Liberals in power.

May I call it six o'clock.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

EMPLOYMENT—REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT DISCLOSE PLANS. (B) NEED FOR LONG-TERM JOBS

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, I rose in the House one day after taking my seat and questioned the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) on the serious unemployment crises in Canada today. I asked the Minister what plans the Government has to bring about a long term solution to the unemployment problem. The Minister could not answer the question. All he could do was rattle off all of the meaningless programs the Liberal Government has devised as short term relief. The Government opposite does not have any long term solutions and the Canadian people know that.

The unemployment issue was a priority issue during the byelection when I was recently elected to represent the people of Mission-Port Moody. At every meeting I attended during the campaign the plight of the jobless was the primary topic of discussion. Almost every voter I met wanted to know what hope there was for the hundreds of thousands of unemployed in our country.

Unemployment touches nearly every voter in my riding and in this country. Canadians are truly suffering. There are more than 14,000 people registered to receive unemployment insurance in my riding alone. That number does not include the hundreds of people in the Mission-Port Moody area who have exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits or those who have just given up looking for jobs.

We in this House cannot just sit back and receive our regular paycheques without doing something significant to help those thousands of Canadians who are really struggling to feed their families. I was not elected to the House to just sit here and listen to Members opposite blame everyone except themselves for the serious economic problems we have in this country. The people in my riding and, indeed, people right across Canada want to see positive change and positive results.

The Minister of Employment and Immigration can stand up a thousand times in the House and recite the same old lines about the programs the Liberal regime has instituted to redistribute our tax dollars. He can talk about the Canada Community Development Program, the Canada Works Program or the Special Response Program. He can talk about NEED, LEAD and all those other so-called job creation schemes the Government has devised to mask the real severity of unemployment in Canada. These, however, are all band-aid programs. They are nothing more than patchwork spending schemes to cover up the Government's mismanagement. They are all short-term programs riddled with bureaucracy and red tape. They are not long-term solutions to the serious structural problems plaguing our economy.

Workers in Mission-Port Moody do not want short-term jobs just so that they can requalify for unemployment insurance benefits. Men and women in my riding, as in all of Canada, want real jobs. They want long-term employment and career opportunities. They want to use their talents to take advantage of the tremendous opportunities that the climate and natural resources of this country and our Province have to offer.

The people of Canada have had enough of this tired, arrogant regime seated opposite. They have had enough of the smoke and mirrors of the Liberal game playing. Canadians have seen the Liberal wrecking crew at work, destroying our economy. They have seen the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) turn his back on ordinary Canadians and have witnessed rude gestures in western Canada.

The byelections in Mission-Port Moody and Central Nova have demonstrated what Canadians want to see. They want to see this incompetent Government out. The voters demonstrated their feelings in Mission-Port Moody on August 29 when the Liberal candidate received less than 5 per cent of the vote. That was a message. Feelings of Canadians right across the country were reflected in the results of that byelection. Canadians are awaiting the chance to throw these wreckers out of office and elect a government that will restore confidence in our country and put Canadians back to work. The Government opposite does not have the answers.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me, on behalf of the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) to reply to the question put by the Hon. Member for Mission-Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) concerning the measures taken by the federal Government, and more specifically by the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, regarding the creation of long-term jobs for Canadians. The Member for Mission-Port Moody will be glad to know that for a number of years, the Commission has been providing Canadians with various long-term job creation programs. The Local Employment Assistance Program, for instance, has helped many jobless Canadians set up businesses that, after termination of Government financial assistance, continued to be so successful that they are still employing thousands of Canadians today. As the Minister said before in the House, the Government has redoubled its efforts this year to substantially increase funding for job creation, with special emphasis on long-term job creation projects. One of the strategies that will help us achieve this objective consists in increased involvement of the private sector in joint job creation efforts. When businesses realized that the NEED program could help them prepare for economic recovery through activities involving expansion, modernization and pre-production, they supported this program wholeheartedly, and participation in the program has increased. The success of NEED has been such that in many cases, when projects were terminated, short-term jobs were converted into permanent additional jobs.

The consolidation of direct job creation programs undertaken by the Department and effective as of September 12, 1983, places even greater emphasis on the private sector involvement already begun under the NEED program. The information kit on Canada Works, distributed to all Members by the Minister, makes it quite clear that private sector projects will be encouraged this coming winter. The Local Employment Assistance and Development Program (LEAD) provides fund for creating LEAD corporations, whose purpose is to promote the creation of new businesses or expand existing ones. The businesses and jobs created in this manner are set up in such a way that they can continue to operate after the Government financing period expires. The Job Corps program will be used to finance businesses, organizations, communities and individuals for periods of up to three years in order to create full-time jobs for individuals experiencing serious problems in finding a job. The Career-Access Program, through wage subsidies, enables employers to provide employment opportunities for those who have trouble finding employment. Here again, it is felt that many jobs may be continued after the initial financing period. As the Hon. Member can see, the Government has launched a number of projects and is redoubling its efforts to increase the number of long-term jobs. As the Minister himself has indicated, nearly $1.5 billion will be spent this year and next year on creating jobs for over 300,000 unemployed Canadians.

THE ADMINISTRATION—PERSONAL CORRESPONDENCE OF MINISTERS. (B) INTERDEPARTMENTAL CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, all of us in the House are familiar with the phenomenon of the Government changing the order of the Treasury benches. We witnessed it particularly last summer when the former Minister of Transport became the new Minister of State for External Relations (Mr. Pepin), when the Minister of the Environment became the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) and when the Minister of Employment and Immigration became the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). We had a shuffling of chairs like that on the deck of The Titanic which has not made much of a difference, in terms of the policy of the Government. That particular practice raises a very important point regarding the security of information which ought to be at the disposal of Canadian citizens.

We in the House understand the practice that when a Minister is transferred from one portfolio to another we are not allowed to ask him questions about his previous responsibilities. We understand that, but I do not know if the Canadian public understands that very well. The corollary to it relates to the information he has built up over the years of his responsibility in the previous portfolio. For example, the former Minister of Transport built up a considerable dossier of file of information with people across Canada relative to his responsibilities in that portfolio. We understand that when he left that porfolio to go to his new one he was entitled to take all his personal correspondence with him, that which is labelled "personal".

• (1810)

That is why I very specifically asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) last Friday the definition of "personal correspondence", because that becomes a very operative and critical definition if the rights of citizens are to be protected in relation to the retrieval of information about themselves. The freedom of access to information measure really becomes useless if we cannot retrieve information which that particular Act says we can have access to, because it was non-existent. Is it possible for a Minister of the Crown when leaving a particular responsibility to go to a new Department to take his so-called personal correspondence with him and shred it? Can he shred information that might relate to the rights and privileges of private citizens all across Canada? My question to the Prime Minister very simply dealt with that.

I would like to add corollaries to that. Hopefully one of the two Parliamentary Secretaries here can answer the particular question. What are the guidelines, if any, that have been established by the Prime Minister for his Cabinet Ministers defining personal correspondence? Correspondence between a Minister and private citizens on issues relating to his portfolio, is that considered personal correspondence? Can he take it with him when he leaves that responsibility making it unavailable to anyone else? Correspondence between a Minister and departmental officials regarding a submission by a private citizen, is that considered personal correspondence? Can you imagine the awesome nightmare of trying to help our constituents regarding their dealings with a Minister in his previous responsibility if all that information has been taken away and shredded? There is no such thing as retrieval of that information. Freedom of access to information really becomes a bizarre term if that access is no longer there because the information no longer exists.

I am not going to take my full seven minutes. I simply ask whether the Parliament Secretary is empowered to tell us now what the definition of personal correspondence is so that private citizens across Canada, or we on their behalf, can retrieve information that relates to their rights and privileges as citizens of Canada, rather than having that destroyed because of a very loose and broad definition of what really is, in the Minister's terms, "personal correspondence".

Mr. Peter Lang (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the status of personal and interdepartmental correspondence of Ministers under the Access to Information Act has been queried. In response, I would like to make four points.

First, where the correspondence constitutes a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada, the Act does not apply to it. These confidences are described in Section 69 of the Act. The essence of the provisions in this section is that confidences in general are not subject to the legislation for 20 years. After that time, the legislation applies.

Second, where the correspondence reflects political and constituency issues, as opposed to departmental business, it is not subject to the Act. This is because such correspondence is not deemed to be under the control of a Government institution. Rather, this correspondence is considered to be part of the Minister's personal records and to be under the Minister's control.

Third, where the correspondence pertains to the operations or administration of a Government institution, it is considered to be under the control of the Government institution concerned and therefore subject to the legislation. As such, it is accessible under the Act unless it is a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada less than 20 years old, or it is protected from disclosure by an exemption provision in the Act?

• (1815)

Four, Section 19 of the Access to Information Act requires that personal information not be released under this Act. Personal information includes, among other information, the personal opinions or views of an individual and correspondence sent to a Government institution by an individual that is implicitly of a private or confidential nature and replies to such correspondence that would reveal the contents of the original correspondence.

In summary, correspondence which does not constitute a confidence of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada and which is not in the nature of a Minister's personal records is subject to the Access to Information Act. Correspondence subject to the Act is accessible unless it qualifies for an exemption.

Finally, Departments and agencies have received instructions on the status of ministerial records in relation to the Access to Information Act. The circular that was sent out by the Secretary to the Treasury Board to all Department heads is available and I have a copy for the Hon. Member if he would like to take a look at it.

Adjournment Debate

LABOUR CONDITIONS—UNEMPLOYMENT IN SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, on Friday last, I asked a question of the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) in relation to the high unemployment rate in Saskatchewan. My question dealt with the fact that in the last year the number of people looking for work has gone up by 82 per cent, and also that the number of people on welfare has gone up by 46 per cent in the last two years. I remind you, Mr. Speaker, that all of this has occurred since the election of the Conservative Government under the Premiership of Grant Devine in April, 1982.

I think it is important that I put on the record some of these very important facts. As I said first, this is information I have received from the 11 Canada Manpower Centres in Saskatchewan and it shows that in the last year the number of people seeking work has gone up by 82 per cent. I will deal with the figures one by one, Mr. Speaker.

In Estevan, there has been a drop from 827 people looking for work to 584 people looking for work between August, 1982 and August, 1983. In La Ronge, there was an increase from 1,545 to 1,905. In Melfort, there was an increase from 1,061 to 1,221. In Moose Jaw, there was increase from 1,794 to 2,153. In North Battleford, there was an increase from 2,849 to 3,090. In Prince Albert, there was an increase from 2,465 to 4,148. That is an increase, by the way, of 68 per cent in one year in the number of people who are seeking work in Prince Albert. In Regina, there was an increase from 4,998 to 10,550 people looking for work, an increase in one year of 111 per cent. In Saskatoon, the figures went from 10,348 to 13,592, an increase of 31 per cent. In Swift Current, there was an increase from 726 to 847 people looking for work, an increase of 17 per cent. In Weyburn, 449 people were looking for work a year ago and now there are 358 people looking for work, a decrease of 20 per cent. In my hometown of Yorkton, a year ago there were 3,407 people looking for work. In August of this year, there were 5,878 people looking for work, an increase of 78 per cent, Mr. Speaker.

In the Province as a whole, there were 30,469 people registered as seeking employment as of August, 1982. In August, 1983, there were 55,316 people registered as seeking employment, an increase of 82 per cent across the Province of Saskatchewan. This has occurred in one year of Conservative Government in the Province of Saskatchewan. This shows, Mr. Speaker, that Tory times are indeed tough times for the Province of Saskatchewan.

There is an increase of 82 per cent in the number of people who are looking for work in Saskatchewan. I remind you, Mr. Speaker, that in eight out of ten Provinces in the last year, the unemployment rate has gone down. In Saskatchewan and Alberta, both Provinces with Conservative Governments, unemployment rates have gone up.

I would also draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the welfare situation. I have statistics here from the Department of Social Services' statistical bulletin for Saskatchewan and we find that the total beneficiaries of welfare in Saskatchewan in July, 1982 were 49,299. In July, 1983, there were 57,504 beneficiaries, an increase of 17 per cent.

Let us look at the Yorkton region, Mr. Speaker. A year ago the figure was 1,495 and this year it is 2,017, an increase of 35 per cent. Tory times are tough times for poor people.

Across the Province as a whole there has been an increase of 17 per cent. The Tories have been in power for a year and a half. If we go back to July 1981 we see that 39,494 people were on welfare, and now there are 57,504, an increase of 46 per cent. Since the Conservative Government took office in May, 1982 there has been an increase of 18 per cent in welfare, 19 per cent in the total case load and 51 per cent in the unemployed employable cases in Saskatchewan.

Tory times are tough times indeed. There have been 207 business bankruptcies in Saskatchewan thus far in 1983, compared to 184 in the same period in 1982. Since the Conservatives took office in May, 1982, there have been 388 business bankruptcies in Saskatchewan. Thus far in 1983 there have been 29 farm bankruptcies in the Province compared to 24 for all of 1982.

Although there were only 19,000 more employed people in Saskatchewan in August, 1983, than in August, 1982, there was no increase in employment of young people between the ages of 15 and 24. Statistics Canada reports that there were 33,000 more persons unemployed in August than in July, and 4,000 more than in August, 1982. Statistics Canada also reports that the unemployment rate for Saskatoon in August was 10 per cent.

I see that my time is almost up, Mr. Speaker. Despite the insensitivity and the total betrayal of the Premier of Saskatchewan of the people of the Province, I have asked the federal Government to come up with special projects for the Province. The Minister or someone should meet with the Premier and try to hammer some sense into his head. We need special projects so the Province can be part of any recovery there might be in the country as a whole.

There is a lot of wealth and resources in Saskatchewan. It strikes me as ironic that Saskatchewan and Alberta are the only two Provinces where unemployment has increased in the last year. It has gone down in the rest of the country. It is a disgrace that unemployment has increased by 82 per cent in one year of Tory rule. I expect some action from the federal Government. I hope it does not hide behind the skirts of Grant Devine.

Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): I am quite sure that the Hon. Member will send that speech out in the next Householder to his riding, and perhaps even to other ridings to show what is going on in Saskatchewan.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister, I am pleased to advise the member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and his fellow Members from Saskatchewan of the measures introduced by the federal Government to create jobs in that province. As the Minister stated previously in the House on October 7 of this year, there has been a considerable improvement in the employment picture across the country. The Government realizes that as a result of regional factors, some areas in Canada will not be able to benefit immediately from this fact, and that is why the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission has recently consolidated its various job creation programs into four major programs. One of these, Canada Works, is primarily aimed at quickly creating temporary jobs at times when the economy is slack or the labour market is temporarily disturbed. It applies, for instance, to temporary or permanent shutdowns of plants or industries. Over $5.8 million was earmarked for Saskatchewan under this program to create new jobs during the current and coming financial year. If we add the programs now included under Canada Works, job creation projects will receive a total of $20.8 million during the current and coming financial year in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister mentioned previously in the House the need for further involvement of the private sector in our job creation projects. This strategy will help us meet our regional priorities. The Local Employment Assistance and Development program (LEAD) provides funding to create LEAD corporations, whose purpose is to promote the creation of new businesses or expansion of existing ones. This year and next year, $5.3 million will be spent in Saskatchewan under this program. The recent recession, coupled with rapidly changing technologies, has shown that many Canadians lack the experience, skills and training they need to meet the requirements of industry. The Career Access and Job Corps programs will assist them in this respect. Career Access will help employers provide employment opportunities by subsidizing wages for individuals who experience great difficulty in finding employment. The Job Corps will be used to finance businesses, organizations, communities and individuals who create full-time jobs for those experiencing serious problems in finding employment.

These programs are therefore aimed at developing basic skills that will help integrate these people in the labour market. Funding for Career Access has been set at $8.2 million, while $2.6 million has been earmarked for the Job Corps in Saskatchewan for 1983-84 and 1985-86.

Mr. Speaker, a total of $36.8 million will be spent on job creation in Saskatchewan during the current and coming year. I am sure the Hon. Member will agree that by creating thousands of jobs in Saskatchewan, these programs will help economic recovery in this area.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock.

At 6.26 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

LIBERAL PROMISE TO CONSTRUCT NATURAL GAS PIPELINE TO MARITIMES

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, the Government has been making overtures to the Canadian public in anticipation of the impending election. Before it begins making new election promises I would like to remind it of one promise it made Canadians almost four years ago.

In a series of remarks before the Halifax Board of Trade, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said, "I am announcing today, as part of our program, that a Liberal Government will take immediate action to ensure the full co-operation of all Parties in the construction of a natural gas pipeline to Quebec City and the Maritimes. The pipeline will have a reversible capacity so that Maritimers will have the opportunity, both to use western natural gas now and to send offshore gas to central Canada later".

Today we see that the Government has fulfilled its promise to the Quebec electorate but not to the Maritimers who are still dependent on oil imported from abroad. It is unreasonable to force Maritimers to buy foreign oil when Canada has the resources not only to satisfy our domestic needs but to export these resources abroad.

It would appear that the heady talk of energy self-sufficiency by 1990 was merely an election ploy designed to seduce Canadians with what they wanted to hear. It was not the talk of a responsible Government concerned with energy security and self-sufficiency, but of an irresponsible Party concerned with political security and self-sufficiency.

CHURCHES' BRIEF ON CONDITIONS IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Madam Speaker, yesterday a high level ecumenical delegation representing the major Canadian churches met with the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen). The delegation included Archbishop James Hayes, the Archbishop of Halifax, who was representing the Canadian Catholic Bishops, the Reverend Harry Hilchey who was representing the General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada, and Dr. John Foster who was representing the United Church of Canada and the Inter-Church Committee on Human Rights in Latin America. They presented the Secretary of State for External Affairs with a brief on Canadian policy in Central America.

I thank the Minister for seeing them and discussing these matters with them. I would now call upon the Minister to consider seriously the wide range of recommendations that were made by the group. These policy recommendations dealt with El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Guatemala. Some members of the delegation had recently returned from that area and spoke of the massive human rights violations in Guatemala.

In the brief the delegation asked that Canada support particularly the Contadora group and the efforts that it is making to bring about peace in that area. Secondly, they asked for a clear and public statement to be made to the United States and Honduran Governments regarding Canada's opposition to the military manœuvres and to the construction of new military bases, on the grounds that they undermine the spirit and the letter of the Contadora group. Finally, I would ask the Minister to immediately release the $18 million line of credit that was pledged to Nicaragua.

INDUSTRY

PERFORMANCE OF ECONOMY IN LAVAL AND LOWER LAURENTIAN REGIONS OF QUEBEC

Mr. Yves Demers (Duvernay): Madam Speaker, it is a fact that the Laval and Lower Laurentian regions are showing the best economic performance in the Province of Quebec at the present time. There are a number of reasons for this, and I would like to mention two of them: the people have a level of education that is above the national average, and co-operation among federal members, the Minister responsible and municipal representatives is very effective. I wish to thank the Cabinet for taking advantage of these facts in less than a year, the federal Government has established several high technology projects in the region, including the Institut d'ordinatique, an investment of $12 million, the Institut de bureautique, costing $11 million and last weekend, the project of the century in the aerospace industry, namely, the construction of a Bell Helicopter plant at Mirabel backed by a federal investment of $265 million which will create 3,700 jobs. All these jobs will be in the high technology industry and will provide a solid basis for future investments in similar industries in Laval and the Lower Laurentians.

S.O. 21

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

AUCTION OF MUKLUKS

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, a week ago on October 5 the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) attacked me in the House in my absence, about a concert which is to be held in Toronto at the Roy Thompson Hall on Monday evening, October 17. By the way, Madam Speaker, the concert is at 8 p.m. and it is a fund raiser.

The Hon. Member claimed that I was being sexist because one of four performers at the concert is to be Miss Shannon Tweed, former Playboy playmate of the year. Mad Mike McGee is the chairman, Helen Reddy is the singer, and André Gagnon is the pianist.

Miss Tweed was born in Dildo, Trinity Bay, Madam Speaker, not far from Come-By-Chance. She is the daughter of a mainland mink farmer. Her talents will be used on the evening in question to auction the mukluks I wore when I brought down the budget on December 11, 1979. I ask the Hon. Member if the art of auctioning is sexist. Why does the Hon. Member attack my auctioneer? Having wrecked my budget together with the Liberal Members opposite, he now seeks to wreck my auctioneer. The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) is certainly a bilious blue stocking, Madam Speaker. He is a yappy yokel and a slippery and sly sexual stereotyper, because that is what he has done. His actions are those of a sleveen.

Miss Tweed is, or was, a constituent of the Hon. Member for Bonavista-Trinity-Conception (Mr. Rooney). Where was he when she needed him to defend her? Together, Miss Tweed and I will give the boots to the nasty Nystrom—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Crosbie: We will sell the mukluks to the highest bidder.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

POLITICAL PARTIES

BILINGUALISM AND NATIVE RIGHTS—POSITION OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, I rise to speak about the Conservative Party's position regarding minority rights. Last Thursday the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party spoke eloquently in favour of the constitutional protection of French-language services in Manitoba. We congratulate him for this action. However, the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party also claimed to be speaking for his entire Party. Immediately after he spoke, the Deputy Leader of the Progressive Conservative Caucus in Manitoba, Bud Sherman, said that he was 100 per cent behind Sterling Lyon in opposing the entrenchment of these rights. It is interesting to note that Mr. Sherman will run for the Conservative Party in the next federal election.

As well, that same afternoon the Conservative Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) told Manitobans to work against the very resolution we had passed in the House. The fact that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine has contradicted his Leader on minority rights should not surprise Canadians. We recall that it was the same Hon. Member who, upon returning from South Africa, said that there were methods employed in that country that we could use when dealing with our native population.

Natives are also concerned about the words of Senator Donahoe who spoke about the genocide of Newfoundland natives as a possible solution for Canadian aboriginal problems. Whether said in jest or not, those remarks are completely unacceptable to the Canadian public, and he should be rebuked publicly by the Conservative Leader. Any less action by the—

BROADCASTING

SUPPORT FOR TELEVISED EXERCISE PROGRAMS

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Madam Speaker, I refer to the statement made recently by Abby Hoffman, Director General of Sports Canada, to the conference, "A Renaissance in Sports and Fitness", when she condemned the latest television exercise programs for being obscene, erotic, and not athletic.

I have no quarrel with Ms. Hoffman's athletic ability; indeed she is to be commended for her outstanding achievements, not only as an athlete, but also for her promotion of non-stereotype role-playing by female athletes so as to encourage them to pursue and excel in sports of their choice.

However, I do quarrel with the Sports Canada director's criticism of television exercise programs, suggesting in effect, that they be boycotted. Ms. Hoffman's statement is diametrically opposed to the Government's own objective and the mandate of Fitness and Amateur Sport, which encourages active participation by the Canadian people in some form of fitness program to improve their physical state of health.

The majority of television exercise programs are of excellent content, utilizing skilled and competent individuals, and are far removed from degenerating into the type of program Ms. Hoffman accuses them of being. I would suggest that Ms. Hoffman seek the more appropriate medium available through the CRTC to vent her criticism, rather than condemning active participation in physical fitness via television exercise programs.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SUMMIT MEETING PROPOSAL

Mr. Bill Yurko (Edmonton East): Madam Speaker, on June 14 this year I stated in this assembly, and I quote:

> A nuclear war can come about because of three reasons . . . . The first reason is that it may come about by aggressive design or intent by one of the superpowers. This is highly unlikely because they will destroy the world and themselves. The second is by escalation of a minor conflict such as a triggering conflict in the Middle East. The potential for escalation is massive and scary in the world today . . . . The third way a nuclear war can occur is through accident. There is real potential in this area due to a failure of equipment, a failure of systems, or a failure on the part of humans who man the systems.

Well, Madam Speaker, a deplorable and unacceptable incident has occurred because of failure on the part of humans who man the systems. Good sense prevailed and escalation did not occur this time. But what about next time?

If there ever was a need for instant communication and a desire to so communicate, it is in today's and tomorrow's world. Some shall shake their fist, at another such incident, and it will happen, but some will dialogue, and for all our sakes let us hope they are heard. There is a desperate need for an arms limitation agreement and a reversal of the present nuclear insanity. This Parliament should support fiercely a summit meeting, as is being considered by President Reagan and Chairman Andropov. Once again I propose that Edmonton is a suitable site for a summit meeting.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

CALL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, the Committee of Parliamentarians, Scientists and Engineers, the acronym of which is COPSE, is the successor to the parliamentary and scientific committee which held a number of meetings on Parliament Hill between 1976 and 1979. COPSE has as its objective the building of understanding between parliamentarians and the scientific and engineering communities of Canada, based on an appreciation of each other's concerns and aspirations.

While COPSE is a highly successful forum for exchange of information, science and technology are playing such an increasingly significant role in shaping our society and economy that I feel consideration should be given by the House to establishing a full-fledged standing committee on science and technology.

In this way issues relating to Canada's development of science and technology could be discussed by Members of the House, with appropriate input by scientists and engineers, so that reports and policy suggestions could be made on an all-party basis to the House and to the Government, and be duly recorded.

THE ECONOMY

ECONOMIC COUNCIL PROJECTIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION ON WAGES AND PRICES

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Economic Council of Canada, which is adviser to the Prime Minister by statute, has warned that our country faces not only five more years of double digit unemployment but also a gradual rekindling of inflation. It has called for the Government to provide selective wage and price controls, to obtain powers to monitor wage and price increases and to roll back any increases it thinks will boost inflation above 5 per cent. Do you agree with the accuracy of these warnings of your Economic Council? Never mind the finger pointing, I am asking the question of the Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Crosbie: Do you agree with the accuracy of these warnings?

An Hon. Member: You have to address the Speaker.

Mr. Crosbie: And does the Government intend to obtain powers to roll back increases in prices or wages such as your advisers have advised you?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member should be addressing the question to you. He should know better.

Madam Speaker: For the second question, I am going to warn the Hon. Member that he should address the Chair.

GOVERNMENT INTENTIONS

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam speaker, if I could put the same question to the Prime Minister, this is a serious question and the people of this country are entitled to an answer, not a Prime Minister who shoves his finger around and—

Madam Speaker: Order. Order, please. Will the Hon. Member please put his question? The trouble comes from the fact that the question has not yet been put.

Mr. Crosbie: My question was just put, and I will put it again, Madam Speaker. Does the Prime Minister agree with the accuracy of these warnings of the Economic Council of Canada? Do the Prime Minister and his Government intend to obtain powers to roll back increases in prices or wages?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Government has read with interest the report of the Economic Council of Canada. The Economic Council has a number of forecasts, and their short term forecasts are similar to those which have been made by the Government, particularly in my budget of last April, for 1984-85. The forecasts for 1986-87 are obviously much more hypothetical and are different from those contained in my budget. I must remind the Hon. Member, however, that the targets put forward in the report of the Economic Council are very similar to the forecasts which I had in my budget, for 1986 and 1987. In that sense the curve which I had foreseen over the next four years is very similar to the targets set by the Economic Council for 1986 and 1987.

As to the specific proposal put forward by the Hon. Member, he will have noticed that the Economic Council is proposing a monitoring agency—not a price or wage control agency—over prices and wages after the expiration of the six and five program. Obviously this is a matter which the Government will take into consideration in discussions with its economic partners, labour, management, and the Provinces, regarding the steps that should be taken after the expiration of the six and five program.

CHAIRMAN'S COMMENTS ON ECONOMIC PERFORMANCE

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): My supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister—to the puppet master, not to the puppet. The question is this—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

An Hon. Member: That is pretty good order.

Mr. Nowlan: You do not know anything about order.

Mr. Crosbie: The Economic Council of Canada is an adviser to the Prime Minister, and its Chairman has said that an unemployment level of 11 per cent is unacceptable. Does the Prime Minister agree with the Chairman who has said, "We will be ill-served if we accept the type of performance we seem to be getting. We believe we can do better."? Does the Prime Minister agree that we have been ill-served by the Government's performance, and does he believe that we can do better? And, if so, why do we not do better?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, indeed, we are not satisfied with 11 per cent or 12 per cent unemployment. The best evidence of this is the type of measures which have been announced in the June, 1982, budget, my October economic statement, and the budget of last April.

We have succeeded in bringing down unemployment faster than what has been forecast. We have succeeded in creating jobs faster than any other industrialized country. I refer my hon. friend to the forecast contained in the April budget to the effect that, indeed, in the next few years we will reach a level of unemployment which will be well below 11 per cent and below 9 per cent. We are even trying to do better than the forecast which was contained in the budget, in which we were forecasting around 8 per cent unemployment by 1987.

Mr. Crosbie: I will go to the Minister of Finance because the Prime Minister is bored with this subject.

RECOMMENDED UNEMPLOYMENT TARGET

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Madam Speaker, the Economic Council wants the Government to set a five-year goal of reducing unemployment to 6 per cent or 8 per cent, and not just to accept the prediction of the Minister of Finance of over 10 per cent unemployment indefinitely. My question to the Minister of Finance is, why, once you set this goal and why, once you take measures to achieve it, will you not do what the Economic Council has recommended, instead of throwing up your hands as you have?

● (1420)

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member must address the Chair. I know it is difficult to speak in the third person, I find it difficult myself, but the Hon. Member has been in the House long enough to have acquired the habit.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member not only knew the rules of the House but showed a little more respect for his colleagues and was less insulting towards them, he might be getting better answers once in a while.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lalonde: Nonetheless, I will tell my hon. friend that, very honestly, we are trying to do even better than the targets set out by the Economic Council of Canada. I have indicated that our targets in my budget forecast are around 8 per cent unemployment by 1987. We are trying to do better than that. If we can reach 6 per cent before then, we will certainly do it. We are doing everything we can and it has shown results. Indeed, in the very last few months that we have succeeded in bringing unemployment down further than had been anticipated, even by my hon. friend, as recently as six months ago. This is a record that demonstrates what we have done, and we want to do even better in the months and years to come.

COUNCIL'S RECOMMENDATIONS—REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT REPORT

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Economic Council report contains 19 very constructive recommendations aimed at improving our economic performance and also some of the safety net programs in our country. In order to give some meaning to the Economic Council's function, will the Government commit to this House to report in detail on each of those of 19 recommendations by the end of November of this year?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Economic Council's report does, in fact, contain many recommendations. However, I can inform the hon. gentleman that the Government of Canada is already implementing many of these. For instance, the ECC recommends that the Government pursue a monetary policy that will bring down interest rates in real terms in Canada. The hon. gentleman is of course aware that during the past four months, short-term interest rates in Canada have been lower than those in the United States, despite the fact that our inflation rate is slightly higher than in the U.S.

The ECC wants to maintain universality of medicare. I can only hope that the Progressive Conservatives will support us in our struggle to maintain the universality of medicare as well as the social programs we have been able to continue despite the recession, since so many Progressive Conservative are criticizing these programs right and left. The ECC has asked us to actively pursue implementation of a direct job creation and employee training program. In fact, we have invested billions of dollars in the projects in recent years. My hon. colleague, the Minister of Employment and Immigration, indicated a few days ago that he was looking into further alternatives in this respect, and I could say the same about the 16 other recommendations. We do not have to wait until November, since they are already being implemented, and this was being done even before the report was published.

[English]

Mr. Wilson: Madam Speaker, that is not good enough. The Minister referred to four recommendations, and there are 15 more. Surely we can get a report from the Government on what it is going to do about the other 15 recommendations, and not have to wait another two or three years for an $800 a day Royal Commissioner to produce a report on some of the same things.

BURDEN OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PREMIUMS ON SMALL BUSINESS

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, I will put a more specific question to the Minister relating to a decision the Government is going to make on Unemployment Insurance premiums, I understand on October 18.

Small business today employs about two-thirds of Canadians, yet it is discouraged from creating jobs by the high level of Unemployment Insurance premiums which are directly related to the number of employees. Since this report projects aggregate benefits of $60 billion to $65 billion over the next five years, which is a tremendous burden for small business, would the Government defer any increase in Unemployment Insurance premiums? It is clear these premiums are taxing job creation and are a clear disincentive to the hiring of young, untrained workers, which is probably the most important unemployment problem today.

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, Unemployment Insurance premiums are set after consultation with the Advisory Committee on Unemployment Insurance which is made up of representatives of management and labour.

As the Hon. Member said before, a decision is due around October 18, but we have not reached that stage yet, and as soon as the Government is able to announce a decision in this respect, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) will be happy to announce that decision to Hon. Members and the House in general.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

NEED FOR JOB CREATION IN GASPÉ REGION OF QUEBEC

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns a specific promise that he made. As everyone in the House knows, the situation in the Gaspé region in the Province of Quebec, in Canada, is one of the most horrible in terms of unemployment, averaging around 25 per cent and, in some communities, 80 per cent. Two years ago, on May 4, 1982, the Prime Minister went to the region and promised a specific development program. Last May no fewer than three Cabinet Ministers, with considerable fanfare, went to the same region and promised to spend some $224 million in seven different parts of the economy to create jobs.

Given his commitment, and given the fanfare created by three Cabinet Ministers last May, to spend money to create jobs, why has there not been a single new job created in the Gaspé within the framework of these programs?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member could turn to his own Members. Then he would know part of the reasons for the delay. We were hoping to reach a joint agreement with the Province of Quebec in order to help develop this region. That has not been possible. We are opening within a few days, in Rimouski, I believe, an office which will be entrusted with the beginning of the expenditure of the $250 million as announced by the Minister of Finance some months ago.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister should do a better job of his homework.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I have in my hand a press release, released by the three Ministers, who underlined the fact that the federal Government alone, without the participation of the Government of Quebec, is going ahead with these initiatives. Therefore he cannot blame the Government of Quebec for the failure this time.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ACT TO PROVIDE JOBS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I would like to ask a supplementary question of the Prime Minister. I repeat that there are Canadians who are suffering. Considering the fact that the Member for the region, the Hon. Member for Gaspé, has said that when he raises this matter in caucus "Ministers turn a deaf ear", why, in the face of this suffering, in the face of the fact that the Government is committed to spending money in the area, does the Government not get on with the job and provide jobs for those who need them?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, with respect, the Hon. Member did not get the gist of my previous answer. It is true that we want to spend the money ourselves. It would be better if we spent it in co-operation with the Province of Quebec, as we have in other Provinces, where each Government spends its money in areas within its jurisdiction, but where they do it after joint planning. That has not proved possible. Therefore, we will go ahead without any joint planning.

Insofar as the rest of his questions is concerned, I did admit that there were some delays, but I also said that we will be opening the office in Rimouski within a few days.

TIMING OF JOB-CREATION PROJECTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I would direct my question either to the Prime Minister or to the Minister responsible for Development, or to the Minister for Finance, who is responsible for patronage in Quebec. I do not care who answers, but I would like to ask the Prime Minister, particularly, to answer.

One Member of the Liberal caucus has said that some $10 million which has been approved for tourism, which would provide many jobs now, will not be spent until next spring. Would the Prime Minister confirm that the sense of timing about these projects has absolutely nothing to do with the human and economic need but has everything to do with the forthcoming federal election?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the difference between our Party and the New Democratic Party is that—

Mr. Andre: It's hard to see.

Mr. Trudeau: —when we allocate funds, we raise taxes in order that the money can be obtained and then we spend it. The New Democratic Party always comes along after we have announced our programs and says it would have done it, except it would have done it yesterday, with more money. That is the only difference.

THE CONSTITUTION

SENATE PASSAGE OF ACCORD ON ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Indian, Inuit and Métis peoples of Canada are very patiently waiting for final passage of the constitutional Accord, which is the first amendment to our new Constitution. That passage has been delayed in the Senate, and the problem in the other place has been compounded by a thoughtless remark by the vice-chairman of the Senate Committee on Aboriginal Affairs, leading the Assembly of First Nations to cancel their appearance before that committee. Will the Prime Minister tell the House whether he has been advised by the Government Leader in the Senate as to just how much longer their sober second thought will take?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, as far as the timing is concerned I am advised that the report will be brought in tomorrow or the next day of this week. Therefore we should not have to wait long for that report.

The committee has done very good work. It is true that one Senator made some unfortunate remarks which were condemned by Ministers on this side, but that is a matter for the Leader of the Opposition to settle within his own caucus. The Senator is not a member of our caucus, as the Member knows.

EMPLOYMENT

ECONOMIC COUNCIL RECOMMENDATION ON ESTABLISHMENT OF TAX CREDIT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance dealing with the Economic Council of Canada Report. The Council goes on to repeat its recommendation for an employment tax credit which the Minister, for some reason, continues to ignore. Council members support their repeated recommendation by saying:

The principal target population of the program would be those who bear a disproportionate share of the unemployment burden, particularly the long-term unemployed.

We are dealing with older workers who are the most difficult to rehire, and the young people who are finding it most difficult to find jobs. Both groups can be targeted by use of an employment tax credit. Why does the Government not bring in an employment tax credit in accordance with the repeated recommendation of the Economic Council of Canada?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I think I have already replied to this question in the House at least twice. The answer is that we do have presently in existence job subsidy programs which have the same effect.

We found, in looking at the tax credit proposals, that that is less attractive to the private sector because the entry into the cash flow businesses, particularly small businesses, is delayed until the completion of the tax form and tax return. However, a direct job subsidy program has a greater impact and is more cost effective because it translates into the immediate cash situation of a firm to its advantage.

We have found, in looking at the dividend program which the Hon. Member has mentioned, and looking at the experience of other countries, that a better mechanism is the kind of job subsidy program which we already have in place.

Mr. McGrath: The Minister knows that the Access Program is targeted to a very small percentage of the unemployed, whereas this program has the advantage of being targeted to all young people who are unemployed, and all unemployed older people.

PROPOSAL TO RESTRUCTURE UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE SYSTEM

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, let me ask the Minister a question which he seemed to dismiss out of hand earlier today. Does he intend to accept the recommendation of the Council that the Government join with employers and employee associations to study the possibility of restructuring the unemployment insurance system with a view to integrating it much more effectively with job creation and training programs? On the surface that seems to be a very reasonable proposal, given the fact that we are paying out so much money in unemployment insurance. Does the Government intend to accept that recommendation and, if not, why not?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, we do intend to consider very seriously all the recommendations in what is a very serious study. I think the recommendations are very much worthy of review.

I believe I should say at the outset that my major concern and highest priority is job creation. I am not sure that tinkering away or fundamentally changing the basic unemployment insurance structure which we now have is the best way to accomplish that objective. We will study the recommendations very seriously. Whether we will be prepared to act in a way which is recommended to us is something which will require some reflection.

STATUS OF WOMEN

RECOMMENDED CHANGE IN INCOME TAX ACT

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Status of Women. She will be aware that the Economic Council of Canada has a complete section on women and women's issues in its 1983 Report. Recommendation 15 reads, "that the federal Government should consider revising the Income Tax Act so as to convert what are now exemptions for wholly dependent children to income tax credits." Will she tell the House whether she supports the proposal that all deductions—I repeat "all deductions"—be shifted to credits as recommended by the Economic Council of Canada and the National Council on Welfare?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I am delighted that the Hon. Member has taken time to read that particular chapter. We had a great deal of co-operation take place between Status of Women Canada and the Economic Council of Canada. I am particularly pleased with the results of that work.

While I have not had a chance to examine the complete Report, I will say to the Hon. Member that many of the suggestions are very useful and this is one which I will take under consideration.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, the Minister has ducked the question. The question is whether she will personnally support the proposal that all deductions be shifted to credits. We hear her affirmations about the work that has been done and share that view, but is she prepared, herself, personally to support that shift?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, my record is very clear. I have always said that we must examine the taxation system in order to have a better understanding of how taxation affects women and families. But those decisions are made collectively by Cabinet, of course.

MEDICAL CARE

DEVELOPMENT OF PREVENTIVE HEALTH CARE SYSTEMS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. She will recall that the Commonwealth Health Ministers' Conference concluded last week with the view that we need to move toward preventive health care systems as quickly as possible, and to develop alternatives to the present physician dominated curative health care model. This is a view that has long been advanced by the NDP and other groups such as the Canadian Nurses' Association.

When we finally see the long awaited Canada Health Act, could the Minister tell the House if we will also see anything in that Act that will address the need for the development of alternative health care models, and will we see anything which will provide for federal Government leadership in developing those health care models? Can we look forward to anything in that vein?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, unfortunately it will not be done through the Canada Health Act because of the division of powers as defined by the Constitution. I have often discussed this with groups such as the nurses, who are very good supporters of Medicare. All those health workers and Canadians generally who have adopted the now internationally famous "New Perspectives on Health for Canadians", which was published by this Government in 1975 by my predecessor, the present Minister of Finance, accept the fact that we must move toward that goal. However, the Constitution only permits us the basic conditions attached to the spending power. Therefore, we have taken some leadership which I am interested in seeing grow through seminars, panels, health promotion programs, as well as funding for demonstrations and pilot projects all over the country. Any other such suggestions are welcomed.

HEALTH CARE FUNDING

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, the Minister will know that one course of action she does have the opportunity to take, and I have urged her to do so a number of times, is to reopen the question of the adequacy of federal funding for Medicare.

While reopening the question of federal funding, if she finally did so, the Minister could also consider ways in which the federal Government, through direct cost-sharing of new approaches to health care, might show some leadership? That is within the constitutional purview of the Government. It has the ability to do that. Indeed, that is how Medicare was originally established. Does the Minister intend to take action in this area?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I know that the Hon. Member is a strong supporter of Medicare. We on this side are as well. However, I feel like asking him to make up his mind. In his first question the Hon. Member told me the conclusion of the Commonwealth Health Ministers' meeting was to redistribute existing resources, that we must go preventive and improve the health status of Canadians, and that no new money is needed. That is what we have always said. Several experts in Canada have established that funding for health care is adequate but there is still room for lots of improvement within it to yield better results.

GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, GASPÉ AND BONAVENTURE DEEP SEA FISHERMEN—POSSIBILITY OF AMENDING JOB-CREATION PROGRAM REGULATIONS

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration. Deep sea fishermen in the Gulf, especially from the ridings of Gaspé and Bonaventure, are having financial problems now that the cod quotas are full and the fishing grounds have been closed down. Furthermore, these fishermen are not eligible for NEED projects because they are self-employed. Could the Hon. Minister inform the House whether he could let the benefit period start on October 10 instead of November 1, and could he amend the regulations of the job creation program so that fishermen could be employed right away under NEED projects.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for drawing my attention to this problem. I shall certainly look into it, but I am not sure how a change could be made in the date on which benefits are to begin. However, I will give it some thought and find out whether something could be done under the NEED program. I shall give the Hon. Member a reply as soon as possible.

AIR CANADA

PURCHASE OF MONTREAL HEADQUARTERS—RCMP INVESTIGATION

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. Last December in a response to a request from the then Minister of Transport, the RCMP launched an investigation into the purchase by Air Canada of a new headquarters site in Montreal. Can the Minister tell us the status of that investigation? Has it been completed? Has he received the report? Can he tell us what action, if any, he is going to take as a result of that investigation?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, the investigation is not entirely complete in all respects. In any event, I think it would be the role of the Attorney General of the Province in question to take any follow-up action with respect to prosecution. I can assure my hon. friend that we take this issue very seriously.

ROLE OF STANDING COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORT

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Transport. Quite apart from the criminal investigation and any ramifications that might flow therefrom, can the Minister assure this House that the Government supports the transportation committee in its continued but stalled examination into Air Canada matters, or are there reasons why the Government does not want the Committee to be convened at this time, after a two-week delay, such reasons being an imminent resignation or resignations?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think it has been quite clear that we have always supported the active work of the Transport Committee. But I think the Hon. Member knows the rules of this House which are that committees set their own rules, decide their own agendas, and carry out their own activities.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: While that may not be the standard the Hon. Member follows, I am sure it is the standard other Members of the Committee follow.

POSITION OF CHAIRMAN

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport. Does the Minister of Transport anticipate the resignation of Mr. Amyot?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): No, Madam Speaker.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

INCREASE IN TOLLS—APPLICATION OF GOVERNMENT RESTRAINT PROGRAM

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Bearing in mind that in the two years between 1978 to 1980 St. Lawrence Seaway tolls went up 100 per cent, that in 1982 they went up 18 per cent, and this year they have gone up another 10 per cent, making a total increase of 28 per cent in the last two years, and bearing in mind the cost price squeeze on farmers, whatever happened to six and five?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think in part the answer to the question was contained in the question itself. The tolls are designed in order to maintain the Seaway. The tolls are based upon a user-pay concept. The users pay a charge which has not gone up exorbitantly compared to the over-all price of transportation across the country, and they are within the guidelines set by the Government.

Mr. Malone: Madam Speaker, knowing the Rules of this House, I will not comment on that despicable answer.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

REQUEST THAT MINISTER FREEZE TOLLS

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, I want to ask the Minister of Transport a supplementary question. How is it that he can give such a flippant answer in light of the fact that there has been an enormous doubling and tripling of costs for farmers in the last five years? Farmers' receipts are the same as a decade ago. Bearing in mind that between 1976 and 1982 there has been a 115 per cent cost increase for farm producers and only a 36 per cent increase in receipts, and bearing in mind the Minister is dealing with a Crown corporation, will he freeze the tolls on the St. Lawrence Seaway because all farmers pay, with a reduced final payment on grain, whether or not they use the Seaway? Will the Minister freeze that cost, bearing in mind he is trying to make us pay five times as much for the Crow rate by 1991?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I want to repeat again that, according to the refinancing of the Seaway in 1977, the formula that is used is designed to make sure the Seaway is able to recover the cost of its normal operation, and that is subject to negotiation with the United States Government, which is also a partner in the Seaway. Those negotiations, of course, go on. I think it has been pointed out before that there has been no increase in lockage fees in the Welland Canal in that period of time. The pricing mechanism is reviewed annually. However, I would want to point out again, Madam Speaker, the constant inconsistency we receive from members of the Opposition. On the one hand the Leader of the Opposition stands up continually and says the Government is spending too much money, and then his Members get up and ask, "Why don't you spend more and have heavier subsidies?" You cannot have it both ways.

FINANCE

RENEGOTIATION OF MORTGAGES THROUGH CROWN AGENCIES

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my question is directed through you to the Minister of Finance. Yesterday the Minister indicated that he would continue to put pressure on lending institutions to ensure they would allow renegotiation of mortgages with the traditional lending institutions for a three-month penalty charge. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has also indicated that she is looking at changes to the Interest Act. As the Minister of Finance is ultimately responsible for the Farm Credit Corporation and for the Federal Business Development Bank, could he tell us whether or not he will allow those Canadians who are mortgaging through those two Crown corporations to renegotiate their mortgages for the three month penalty?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I have indicated already that I have made a large number of representations to the various financial institutions concerning specific cases. I still believe that a large number of cases have been taken care of on a voluntary basis by the institutions. I urged them to do so, but I have indicated already that we are also reviewing the situation in terms of the Interest Act.

RENEGOTIATION PENALTY

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Finance. He has completely ignored the question. The question is the hyprocrisy of the Liberal Government in expecting the traditional lending institutions to treat Canadians one way, when the Government itself and the institutions for which it is responsible are putting the screws on borrowers across the country, farmers, businessmen and other people who have been loaned money at 16 per cent to 22 per cent, with no relief. Will the Minister allow those borrowers to refinance with those institutions for the three-month penalty?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Louis Duclos (Montmorency-Orléans): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who undoubtedly knows that the Hon. Member for Edmonton East has introduced a Bill to grant a pardon to Louis Riel with a view to restoring his good name. Would the Prime Minister tell the House whether the Government would be prepared to support the initiative of the Hon. Member for Edmonton East by introducing a similar Bill in the next session, and to make the necessary representations to the Leader of the Official Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic Party so as to ensure swift passage of that Bill by the Parliament of Canada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that I share the sentiments of admiration which many people in this House have for the memory of Louis Riel, but I am not convinced that it would be useful to try to rewrite history, as proposed by the Hon. Member. History is history and I fail to see how any legislation might possibly change history facts which occurred over a century ago. Still, my mind is not made up and I am open to arguments to the contrary.

LABOUR RELATIONS

STRIKE AT "MACLEAN'S" MAGAZINE—REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Communications. As the Minister knows, his Government helped Maclean-Hunter to create Maclean's news weekly magazine with a $6 million tax break in 1978 and a postal subsidy of over $1.5 million. Now that Maclean-Hunter has forced Maclean's employees to strike for a first contract, job security, and pay levels nearer to industry rates, will the Minister use his good offices to persuade this publicly subsidized employer which, with $24 million profits, can afford a quick and just settlement of this strike?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, what the Hon. Member is talking about is a general program which is applicable only to magazines published in Canada. It is not a subsidy in the sense of which he speaks. The Hon. Member knows full well that then the Government of Canada does not give a subsidy to a corporation, it does not start running the corporation's industrial relations. We do not believe in that type of society.

FAIR LABOUR PRACTICES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, in view of this abuse of public funds by Maclean-Hunter, will the Minister undertake to introduce amendments to the appropriate legislation that will make fair labour practice a condition of receiving such generous subsidies from the public purse?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows full well that when we talk about labour legislation in Canada, it applies in an indiscriminate fashion to all companies in this country. They obviously have to follow fair labour practices. Once again, that is the general law of the land. It is not something that the Department of Communications can or should be involved in directly.

FINANCE

CONSIDERATION OF ACTION TO REDUCE MORTGAGE RENEWAL PENALTIES

Mr. Paul Dick (Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton): Madam Speaker, Members of all three Parties from time to time have expressed their concern about the high mortgage interest rates. Yesterday in the House of Commons the Minister of Finance indicated that he was now looking at the high mortgage interest problem affecting thousands of Canadians, and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs indicated outside the House that they were looking specifically at the Interest Act. Can the Minister put a time frame on this consideration and decision-making process, and can he tell this House when in days or weeks he might have a proposal to put forth?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): That is a question which the Government will study in due time and to which it will reply in due time as well. The Hon. I would hope that six months would be enough time to consider it. In view of the fact that as of January of this year, according to CMHC figures, 700,000 Canadians had mortgages with interest rates of 17 per cent and higher, and in view of the fact that the Minister of Finance has concluded that moral suasion has not been sufficient, will the Minister set a time when representatives of all three Parties can sit down with him to discuss the problem in the hope of getting a speedy resolution?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADIAN REPRESENTATION AT KOREAN NATIONAL FUNERAL SERVICE

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is for the secretary of State for External Affairs. Will he indicate to the House which Cabinet Minister or Ministers will be representing Canada at the national funeral service in Korea for the Koreans who were killed by a bomb in Burma, including four Cabinet Ministers? Will he also indicate what specific instructions have been given to our representative that he may offer in the form of assistance to the Koreans with respect to the ensuing investigation?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member has raised the matter of the great tragedy that has occurred. We, as Canadians and Members of the House of Commons, have been very saddened and shocked at the loss of life as a result of the assassinations that have taken place. We have expressed our condolences to the Government of Korea. I have sent a message, and the Prime Minister has sent a message.

With respect to representation at the funeral, I authorized the head of the Canadian delegation attending the Inter-Parliamentary Union meeting in Seoul to represent the Government of Canada. I thought that was the appropriate way to have the House of Commons and the Government represented, by designating the Chairman of the Canadian delegation to the Inter-Parliamentary Union now meeting in Seoul, Korea.

INVESTIGATION OF BOMBING

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, will the Minister indicate specifically whether our representative has been authorized to offer any specific assistance to the Korean Government with respect to the ongoing investigation of this tragic bombing? If the delegate has not been so authorized, will that offer be forthcoming?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I have not asked the representative to make that offer to the Government of Korea, but I think that we would help in any way we could. I will certainly bear in mind the suggestion made by the Hon. Member and ascertain whether there is any assistance we could offer in the investigation that is being conducted not only, presumably, by the Government of South Korea but by the Government of Burma.

SIDNEY JAFFE—REQUEST FOR CHECK ON PLACE OF RESIDENCE

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. In order legally to establish his residence in San Francisco, Mr. Sidney Jaffe testified at a July, 1979, bankruptcy hearing in a United States district court in San Francisco that he had moved with his wife and all of his business records to San Francisco in 1977. In view of this statement, will the Government check Mr. Jaffe's T-1 and T-40 income tax returns for the four years immediately preceding his application under the Canadian Citizenship Act as a legal statement regarding the residency intentions of Mr. Jaffe during this period?

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, so far as the residence statement on any application for citizenship is concerned, I draw the attention of the Hon. Member to a judgment of a federal judge of the Court of Appeal dated June 30, 1978, where Judge Thurlow established a precedent on which a decision is made on the residency requirements in the contents of the Citizenship Act. As far as the income tax return is concerned, that question should be addressed to the Minister responsible for Revenue Canada.

MEDICAL CARE

POLICY STATEMENT BY ONTARIO LIBERAL PARTY LEADER

Mr. Gordon Gilchrist (Scarborough East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Last week the Leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario, the Leader of Her Majesty's Opposition in Ontario, publicly repudiated the policies of the federal Minister of National Health and Welfare in the matter of extra billing. He said it was a matter of practising brinkmanship and he disagreed fundamentally with that. In the interest of securing good, sound medical coverage for all Canadians, will the Prime Minister consider instructing the Minister of National Health and Welfare to cease this brinkmanship and undertake good sound negotiating practices with the Provinces?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I can say nothing about the Liberal Leader of Ontario, but I can say that I support the Minister of National Health and Welfare one hundred per cent.

PRIVILEGE

MR. DOMM—ACTIONS OF METRIC COMMISSION—RULING BY MADAM SPEAKER

Madam Speaker: I would now like to rule on the question of privilege which was raised in the House by the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm) on October 4, 1983. I have, of course, carefully examined the documents supplied to me by the Hon. Member.

Mr. McGrath: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Madam Speaker: While I am making a ruling, there cannot be a point of order.

Mr. McGrath: Hon. Members should sit down.

Madam Speaker: I know they should. Thank you very much. I usually look around me in a very cross manner so that all Hon. Members will understand that I would like them to listen to me, but it is hard to be cross now. The House is very silent. Thank you very much.

I have examined all of those documents and of course listened to the presentation made by the Hon. Member for Peterborought and by other Hon. Members who expressed themselves on this particular question. I have also taken note of the citations from Beauchesne and Erskine May which were quoted in the submissions of Hon. Members. Nobody, of course, questions their validity as part of the traditional interpretation of the application of privilege. That is, of course, what the interventions were all about.

It is very clear, of course, that an act or omission which obstructs or impedes the House or its Members in the discharge of their functions would constitute a breach of privilege or contempt. The Hon. Member for Peterborough claims that the letter concerned has had precisely this effect, and this is the issue on which the Chair must base a prima facie judgment.

The House has a long and honourable tradition of protecting the freedom of speech, not only of its own Members but of all the citizens of this country. The Hon. Member himself emphasized that he was not questioning a private citizen's freedom of speech, but freedom of speech, if it is to mean anything at all, must allow for the use of strong and even offensive language. Comments may be made which are unjust, inaccurate or even outrageous. If we believe in the right of comment, we must allow it even when it is mistaken, misguided or impulsive.

There are numerous controversial issues which are fiercely debated, not only in Parliament but in the columns of the press and in the country as a whole. Metric conversion is one such issue. The Hon. Member for Peterborough is a leading champion of those who oppose metric conversion. He has fought for his position with determination both inside and outside the House. He has every right to do so and to go on doing so. Similarly, we must uphold the right of those who support metric conversion to argue their case with equal force.

Parliamentary privilege is limited in its application. I think all Hon. Members realize this. If Members engage in public debate outside the House, they enjoy no special protection. To invoke privilege, the offence must be attached to a parliamentary proceeding. The Hon. Member referred in his submission to Citation 56(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition which deals with a case involving the Roman Corporation. In this case, a proceeding which took place outside Parliament was deemed by the court to be an extension of a parliamentary proceeding. However, the proceeding concerned, namely a telegram and press release, repeated a ministerial statement which had already been made in the House. One cannot interpret this precedent to mean that public debate on an issue which has occupied the attention of Parliament is, ipso facto, an extension of a parliamentary proceeding.

The Hon. Member for Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis) attempted to draw a parallel between the question of privilege raised by the Hon. Member for Lincoln (Mr. Mackasey), on which I ruled on March 22, 1983, and the present case. I would point out to the House that the basis of the submission of the Hon. Member for Lincoln was entirely different. He had been accused of a dishonourable act directly related to his status as a Member of Parliament. The law specifically prohibits Members of Parliament from engaging in the kind of activity of which the Hon. Member was accused. No such accusation has been made in the present case. I should like to quote a passage from that ruling because I feel it is appropriate in the present context. That ruling reads:

> The effect of parliamentary privilege is to place a Member of Parliament above the law in circumstances where it provides his only protection in the fulfilment of his duties as a Member. It is not designed to create a privileged class of citizens as such. The Member enjoys his privileges on behalf of those he represents, not for his personal advantage.

I then went on to read an extract from the report of the British Select Committee on Parliamentary Privilege presented in 1967, which can be referred to in the ruling.

On February 24, 1982, I had occasion to rule on another question of privilege, also raised by the Hon. Member for Peterborough, which is not dissimilar to the one with which we are now dealing. My ruling on that particular issue included the following paragraphs, and I think I can do no better than to repeat them as they apply equally in this case:

> Parliamentary privilege is based on the need to protect members from any action tending to obstruct, or intimidate them or impair their effectiveness in the discharge of their duties. It is not designed to protect them from criticism, however strong, even when the language used might be excessive. The Hon. Member himself quoted the words of a British Select Committee report, cited in a ruling of my predecessor on June 23, 1977, which is as follows:
> —the House should be slow and reluctant to use its penal powers to stifle criticism or even abuse, whether of the machinery of the House, of a Member or of an identifiable group of Members, however strongly the criticism may be expressed and however unjustifiable it may appear.

I would point out that the whole thrust of the report from which the Hon. Member quoted was to discourage the raising of questions of privilege based upon abusive language. It is recommended that where a Member feels he has been libelled or slandered, he should seek his remedy through the courts. I shall quote two of the recommendations of the Select Committee report as follows:

> In the future exercise of its penal jurisdiction the House should follow the general rule that it should be exercised (a) in any event as sparingly as possible and (b) only when the House is satisfied that to exercise it is essential in order to provide reasonable protection for the House, its Members or its officers, from such improper obstruction or attempt at or any threat of obstruction as is causing, or is likely to cause, substantial interference with the performance of their respective functions.

I should like to add one more quotation of direct relevance, an extract from a report of the British Select Committee on Parliamentary Privilege presented on June 16, 1964. It reads:

> It seems to them particularly important that the law of parliamentary privilege should not, except in the clearest case, be invoked so as to inhibit or discourage the formation and free expression of opinion outside the house by Members equally with other citizens in relation to the conduct of the affairs of the nation.

In conclusion, while I recognize that the Hon. Member sincerely believes that his ability to function effectively has been impaired, I doubt that the circulation of the letter he complains of has prevented him from attending to his duties. He has not been threatened, his movements have not been obstructed and his freedom of speech and action has not been inhibited.

The assertions contained in the offending letter represent the views of a single individual, and the matter should not be over-inflated. As to the propriety of a public servant commenting publicly in such a manner, this is not related to parliamentary privilege. It is for the Government to decide whether this official has exceeded the limits of acceptable conduct and whether some kind of disciplinary action might be warranted. I am, therefore, unable to give this matter precedence as a prima facie question of privilege.

PETITIONS

BROADCASTING ACT—AMENDMENT RESPECTING PORNOGRAPHY

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House a petition signed by 18 residents of my constituency of Brandon-Souris, a petition which was drafted in support of a Private Member's Bill, an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act, introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). Even though that Bill has now been withdrawn and the issue has gone to committee, I believe it would be appropriate for the House to receive this petition.

Mr. Sid Parker (Kootenay East-Revelstoke): Madam Speaker, I have a petition submitted by the women of the community of Golden, British Columbia, which is in the riding of Kootenay East-Revelstoke. These women are concerned about the proliferation of pornography in various media and the Government's failure to act to deal with this insidious problem. They have asked Parliament to demonstrate its opposition to the denigration of women by enacting an Act to amend the Broadcasting Act, which was introduced by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) and was recently discussed in the House.

COUNCIL FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF FRENCH IN LOUISIANA

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): The Department of External Affairs does not provide subsidies to the "Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (CODOFIL)". However, the Department does co-operate with the Council in the same manner as the French and the Belgian or the Quebec and New Brunswick Governments for the implementation of certain programs in the cultural field aimed at the promotion of the Francophonie:

(a) A cultural community animation program initiated in 1980/81 whose cost in 1983/84 is $15,000; (b) In association with the University of Moncton, a scholarship program was initiated in 1982/83; its cost this year will be $8,500.

The Department has also implemented cultural programs in association with "Action for the Franco-Americans of New England (ACTFANE)" and with "Association of Franco-Americans (AFA)". The benefits from these cultural programs are not negligible in term of human exchanges. The costs of these programs this year will amount to $12,000.

THE BUDGET, APRIL, 1983

ADVISABILITY OF ESTABLISHING SPECIAL COMMITTEE RESPECTING DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, I am almost 15 minutes late for a House Leaders' meeting. I wonder if I might seek the unanimous consent of the House to permit the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) to speak to the motion standing in my name. He is even more capable than I of doing so.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I agree with the first part of the request.

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker, I agree with everything that has been said as well.

The Budget

Mr. Nielsen moved:

That a Special Committee be appointed to inquire into all the circumstances relating to or associated with the disclosure of Budget information by the Minister of Finance on Monday, April 18, 1983;

That the Committee consist of elevent (11) Members of the House; and

That the Committee have the power to send for persons, papers and records.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, I hope that this will be another Opposition motion that the Government will accept, because it is certainly reasonable and rational. It is time that the question of budget secrecy or otherwise in Canada had ventilation.

The motion refers to an incident which occurred on last April 18. We have had a number of instances of budget leaks but that was the first time in Canadian history that the budget leaker was actually caught in the process of leaking. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) was caught in the process of leaking, by television. The television cameras were actually in the room and took photographs of the Minister leaking. This is the first time in history, as far as I know, that the situation has actually occurred.

All we ask is that a committee be appointed to inquire into the circumstances and send for persons, papers and records. This was originally raised as a breach of privilege by the Opposition House Leader on April 19. The incident came about because, as the Minister said in a statement that he added to his budget on April 19, he received a group of photographers in his office on April 18 as part of a pre-budget photo opportunity session. That Minister in particular should not be one to give photo opportunities. He did give a photo opportunity, however, and a copy of the budget speech was on his desk. He held it up, he turned the pages, and he had a cameraman standing behind him. The cameraman took pictures of the pages with a zoom lens as he turned them, and it became clear later when the pictures were developed that they had budget information. They had the amount that was going to be spent on a recovery program and the amount the Government deficit was going to be—$31.2 billion. This was all revealed on the night of April 18 rather than as part of the budget on April 19. That was the information that was disclosed before the House received the budget.

It was held by Her Honour, the Speaker, that the violation of budget secrecy, if there was one, did not necessarily breach the privileges of the House of Commons. She did not find that there had been a breach of the privileges of the House.

What is budget secrecy? It is a tradition of Parliament based on the common law of this House. It is based on the traditions of this House. There is no statute that I know of, no particular law that requires the Minister of Finance to keep secret the details of the contents of a budget until they are announced in the House. In England and in the Commonwealth and in parliamentary countries of the world there are these traditions of budget secrecy. They are necessary so that conflicts of interest will not arise and so that unauthorized people will not make money through having advance knowledge of what is in the budget.

In other countries, particularly the United Kingdom, this is treated with a great deal of strictness. Any kind of budget leak, no matter how apparently minor, results in the resignation of the Minister of Finance, except in Canada. We all remember the 1947 incident when Hugh Dalton, the Labour Chancellor of the Exchequer, resigned because, on his way into the House to give the budget speech, when a reporter in the lobby asked him if there would be a change in the tobacco tax, he indicated that there would be. Because that became public and was in the newspapers before he gave the information to the House, he was forced to resign.

Even in this country, Madam Speaker, in earlier years the Liberal Party used to be sensitive to some degree to the traditions of Parliament. In 1963, Walter Gordon, then the Minister of Finance, tendered his resignation. Prime Minister Pearson did not accept it, but Mr. Gordon did tender it because he had consulted four economists. Four persons had been involved in the preparation of his budget who were not members of the Department of Finance. They were from outside Government and they knew the details of the budget. Because he had done that and because of the furore when it became public knowledge, he tendered his resignation. That was at a time when the Liberal Party had some kind of conscience. When it started out in 1963, 20 long years ago, it paid some attention to the traditions of Parliament in the House of Commons and the Minister of Finance of the day tendered his resignation, even though it was not accepted.

Today, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is uncaring about parliamentary traditions. When the Gillespie affair was debated some months ago, even he seemed to recognize that a violation of budget secrecy required the resignation of the Minister of Finance. On February 18 in this House, as reported at page 22978 of Hansard, he referred to the Dalton case, saying that Dalton had inadvertently let out a budget secret and, according to tradition, that is something you should not do and that Dalton chose to resign.

The Dalton case is on all fours with the Lalonde case, Mr. Speaker. They both inadvertently—and we will agree it was inadvertent—leaked important contents of their budgets to the press just before a budget speech. The case we refer to of last April is even more grave than the Dalton case, because it occurred over a day before the budget was brought down. In England, the Chancellor of the Exchequer resigned immediately. But in Canada, no. Mr. Speaker, you could not get this Minister of Finance out with a charge of dynamite. You would have to have a very, very stiff charge of dynamite or a major earthquake to move the Minister of Finance from his office in this Government. It would not matter what happened, he has no intention of leaving. What did he do? Instead of offering his resignation, he attempted to weasel out of his dilemma by changing the leaked portions of the budget before he read them to the House on April 19. And this was sanctioned by the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker.

I have a document here which gives the changes and what was added to the budget. The Minister increased spending by $200 million for the so-called job creation program, which is still not creating jobs. He increased the size of the deficit by $200 million over the coming two years. The deficit became $31.3 billion for 1983. What difference did it make, you might ask yourself, Mr. Speaker? Well, it made this difference. On April 19, the day following this leak, at 10 a.m., the Canadian Dow Jones reported, and I quote:

> Dealers said reports of a leak of Finance Minister Marc Lalonde's budget presentation tonight, which allegedly will show an estimated deficit of $31.2 billion for the current fiscal year, have added to the Canadian fund's weakness. Dealers said the Canadian fund has slipped as low as 80.66 this morning before the Bank of Canada intervened.

That is some of the damage which the budget leak did, Mr. Speaker. It weakened the Canadian dollar the next morning. Even more than that kind of damage, it undermined the confidence of the public in the credibility of the Minister; that is, if it had any such confidence. I, frankly, have never had much confidence in the Minister's credibility. I will say, though, that he is competent. I believe him to be a competent Minister. As to his credibility, the economic record of the Government over the last three or four years and the new energy program of the Minister certainly undermine his credibility. This kind of budget leak, this kind of sneaky and scurrilous behaviour, and this kind of pattern of conduct of sleveenery by a Minister of Finance certainly does away with any credibility he may have.

The Minister gives a budget speech. He mails it across the country. A document then follows telling the people of the country who just read the budget speech that the special recovery program is not $4.6 billion, but should be $4.8 billion. Perhaps we are in 1984 already. Perhaps this is the era of newspeak. You read a budget just produced and printed, then you receive another document from the Minister saying, no, it is not $4.6 billion, it is $4.8 billion. It is not a deficit of $31.2 billion, it is $31.3 billion. And the changes have all been made overnight.

This is similar, Mr. Speaker, to what happened with reference to the conflict of interest guidelines of the Prime Minister. We all recall during the Gillespie affair how the Prime Minister rationalized what was happening. On April 28, 1980 he sent to every one of his Ministers a letter containing the conflict of interest guidelines which said:

> Ministers . . . have an obligation to meet the highest standards of conduct and to arrange and conduct their personal affairs in a manner which does not conflcit or appear to conflict with their public duties and responsibilities.

That was the Prime Minister's view in April, 1980. Then, of course, the Gillespie incident came to public light. It was clear that both the Minister of Finance and the now Minister of Energy (Mr. Chrétien) had violated those guidelines. They had ignored them in order to help their friend, Alastair Gillespie—who is now a corporate basket case—who apparently needed the assistance of the Government in the project in Cape Breton.

When this came to public light, what happened, Mr. Speaker? It was not the Ministers who were changed. No. It was the guidelines which had to be changed. It was not the Ministers' conduct which was wrong. If was the Prime Minister's guidelines which were wrong. Now we have a task force headed by Michael Starr and Mitchell Sharp which is going to devise a new set of guidelines. Is that not a similar pattern of conduct as the episode of the budget speech and the leak of April 18? There is a budget leak and the Prime Minister produces a magician's hat and says it is no longer a leak because the Government changed it after it was leaked. I can refer you to the actual words of the Prime Minister, as reported in Hansard of April 19 at page 24633. He said:

If there is a leak and we change them—

That is, the leak provisions.

—there is no more leak.

That is the reasoning of the Prime Minister. There was a leak. We changed what was leaked. So now it is a leak no longer. At one time you see it, at another time you do not. It is the same as the conflict of interest guidelines. At one time there are guidelines. The Minister violates them. It is not the Minister who is wrong. It is the guidelines which are wrong. Therefore, we redo the guidelines. That is where this Government has ended up after 20 years in power, self-serving, self-seeking. There is nothing too scurrilous or slimy that it will not attempt in its desperate effort to keep itself in office. It has ex-Ministers who will continue to support their former colleagues in those piteous ways. I say, thank God for men like Walter Gordon, who at least had the backbone, the courage, the good sense and credibility to offer his resignation when he made a mistake. You will never see that lot opposite admit to a mistake. You will never see them offer their resignation or put themselves in jeopardy, no matter what. That is because they are determined to stay in power, no matter what happens to their credibility, or whatever.

I do not want to chastise Hon. Members opposite too strongly. It is a waste of time, Mr. Speaker. That is why I am speaking calmly and not getting excited today. I did mention the special recovery program, Mr. Speaker. This is another pattern of this Government. It was supposed to be a special recovery capital projects program in which $4.8 billion was going to be spent over the next several years, nearly all of it in temporary Liberal districts in this country. In the Province of Newfoundland there are seven federal districts. Two of them are held and represented by Progressive Conservative Members who execute their duties brilliantly. There are five districts represented by Liberal Members, and the less said the better. A lot of them are very busy with their own pursuits at the moment. There are five Liberal districts and two Progressive Conservative districts. Where are the moneys going which are being invested in the special recovery projects in Newfoundland? Why, they are going into the five Liberal districts, with the exception of a highway which they could not avoid having located in the district of St. John's East, because that is where it was. They could not move the highway, the connecting road.

I have information which indicates this whole program is political. Do you know, Mr. Speaker, that the projects which make up that special recovery program—which was one of the Minister's leaks—were approved by people who do not even belong in this House? Otto Lang, the late unlamented Member from Saskatchewan, a former Liberal Minister, decided where these projects should go. He decides for the West. Ron Basford, the late unlamented Minister from British Columbia, decides for British Columbia. The Minister of Labour (Mr. Ouellet) decides for Quebec. And lo and behold, the old Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. MacEachen), old Allan Twist himself, decides for the Maritimes and Newfoundland. I guess Ontario fits in there somewhere. I think it is under the Minister of Labour as part of the process of increasing our co-operation in this country between the different language groups.

So there are four of them who have to agree. Two of them are not even members of Cabinet, and two of them are not even Members of this House. And they are deciding how $4.8 billion is being spent. Otto Lang and Ron Basford, turfed out by the voters. I believe Ron Basford resigned before he could be turfed out, but if he gives them another chance, they will turf him out, so there is no doubt about that. Otto Lang, of course, was junked out by the taxpayers. However, these four decide and everything has to be checked by numbers one, two and three. Number one is Mr. Trudeau. Number two is Mr. Pitfield, now in the other place. Number three is Keith Davey, also in the other place. These three, the terrible trio, join the four brutes in deciding where all this money is going to be spent in projects across Canada. You call this government administration? I call it degradation, Mr. Speaker. I believe you are looking at me as if I were getting near the end of my time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. I should indicate to the Hon. Member that he may be getting near the end of his rope, not his time. There is a problem about using the Christian names of Hon. Members. That is a problem for the Chair. I understand that may change shortly and we will not have that problem. However, I would ask the Hon. Member to be kind enough to co-operate in that regard until such time as changes will be made. The other thing I want to say is that, hopefully, he will address his own motion.

• (1530)

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker, knowing the great respect I have for him, his patience is monumental and naturally I am going to be guided by his every wish. I am surprised that I am still here and not whisked away somewhere. This is a serious subject, Mr. Speaker, but I am coming near the end. I got going on that special recovery project's business because I did not know how I would be able to get it in otherwise.

To come back to the whole business of budget secrecy, surely it demeans this House and our whole process, surely it lowers us all in the eyes of the Canadian public, if a Minister can make a serious mistake like that and then escape the consequences simply by getting one more page ready during the night to stick in his budget speech. It says at the top here:

It sounds like an instruction from the drugstore:

> Insert after paragraph 1, page 3 in this addendum.

Then it goes on. It costs the Canadian taxpayer $200 million to give the Minister an excuse that he had not engaged in a budget leak. That is the most expensive leak anyone we know of in Canada ever had, a $200 million leak. The whole process was just to save the Minister's neck when he should have come in here and resigned following his budget speech and accepted the responsibility and said that these were the rules.

Can the Prime Minister not find another Minister of Finance? There are, what is it, 146 Hon. Members opposite, and yet there are not enough of them so that one other person could be found to be Minister of Finance? We know he tried the Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs, and we would like to have him back. We think it would be a definite plus for electoral purposes if we could get the Celtic Sphinx back. The hon. Celtic Sphinx, I guess I should say, Mr. Speaker. I am not going to use his name, I am saying he is the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-Highlands-Canso, now the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Surely someone else could take over as Minister of Finance.

We know this motion is not going to be accepted by the Government, unless it continues with its changed practices of the last several weeks. All its says is, let us have a committee appointed, have the circumstances looked into and decide whether or not there should be budget secrecy. Perhaps it is time to throw the whole thing out. I notice that the Ontario Provincial Treasurer, Larry Grossman, said today in The Globe and Mail that they are going to open up the budgetary preparation process to allow Opposition politicians and the public to contribute to the development of the budget. He said:

> We believe the veil of secrecy surrounding the development of budgets should be lifted—

He goes on to say:

> In an era when economic problems are complex and need as much analysis and consultation as possible, the current preoccupation with secrecy is, we believe, over-emphasized.

Well, why not have somebody in the House look at this problem, Mr. Speaker, and devise some sensible guidelines that will not be changed whenever the Prime Minister finds someone in conflict with them, which will define what is today a violation of budget secrecy and what is not, and for what kind of actions the Minister should or should not be found culpable and responsible and open up the budget process? I started that trend myself in 1979. It was the first budget, of course, in which Canadian problems were dealt with in any kind of an honest fashion in the last 20 years. The result was that the NDP and Liberals went berserk and made sure it was defeated, because they do not want to see problems dealt with honestly or straightforwardly or difficult solutions attempted. But we did start to open up the process then.

As a matter of fact, it was in that budget that for the first time five-year forecasts were given. We can see the five-year forecast the present Minister of Finance has brought down. It shows the miserable prospects for us over the next five years, but at least we know what the official thinking is in connection with those forecasts. In the brief eight months we were in power considerable changes for the better were implemented, and it is time now for the Government to open up the budget process, as Ontario says it is going to do. It is time for this House to decide what the rules should be.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I think the Parliamentary Secretary is going to address himself to this. He sits there looking very pleased, and I think he is going to announce that he accepts this motion. I suggest to him that he do that and that we get this matter thought about and have a report that we can consider to bring Canada into a new modern age of honesty, which of course is not too likely as long as they remain in power.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Before I recognize the next Hon. Member may I draw the attention of Hon. Members to the fact that procedurally I made an error earlier today, as I often do. I indicated that the motion stood in the name of the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen), and seconded by the Hon. Member for St. John's West, (Mr. Crosbie), but because the Hon. Member for St. John's West then took the floor, that apparently is not acceptable under our rules. If I might have the unanimous consent of the House, we can fix the problem. Accordingly, the motion moved by Mr. Nielsen and seconded by Mr. Crosbie would be withdrawn and, with the unanimous consent of the House, replaced by the same motion moved by the Hon. Member for St. John's West and seconded by the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm).

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few words to this motion proposed, according to your ruling, by the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie). I would like to go on record as saying we support the general idea of this motion that a special committee be appointed to inquire into the circumstances of the disclosure of budget information by the Minister on April 18, 1983. We are concerned about that incident and we would like to see this special committee set up to investigate it.

I realize that history has passed us by and nothing can be done about that particular incident or what happened following it. As the Hon. Member for St. John's West pointed out, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) did not resign after the breaking of secrecy, as it was understood in this House, and the proceedings of the House continued without having the problem addressed in the form of a resignation and another budget. We cannot undo what has taken place. But I do think the fact that it did take place, that secrecy was broken and the Minister did not resign would certainly justify a committee of this House seriously looking at the whole notion of secrecy as it relates to the budget. It could question our traditions, indeed question us as well as people across the country, to see whether or not there has to be some change made in the whole approach.

I understand and appreciate the reason behind the secrecy. As the Hon. Member pointed out, it is so that some groups or some people will not make windfall gains by having premature knowledge of what is going to take place at budget time. That is an important point. However, the point I would like to bring forward is that when the tradition began hundreds of years ago it was done without an Act of Parliament but was accepted in the Parliamentary process not only in our country and other Commonwealth countries, because at that time the possibility of having secrecy broken by modern technological means was not present. Today it is very important to look at the possibility of keeping secret something like the budget, and whether or not a Minister, depending on what Government he happens to be with, would be expected to resign simply because some reporter somewhere found something that gave him a little piece of information that he was able to demonstrate prior to the actual reading of the budget. We had two instances of it in our country this year. Concerning the Ontario budget, there was a form of a leak made around the fact that someone had found some discarded printing material and was able to get some information about the budget. In the incident that was mentioned with regard to the motion, a television cameraman with a zoom lens was able to pick a little bit off the budget that was being shown during a photo session. I believe that everyone in the House and people in general now realize how difficult it is to keep something absolutely secret. Technology and the availability of machines and instruments which extend the possibility of hearing and seeing, extend the senses about something that formerly could not possibly have been imagined when the whole process of secrecy was introduced.

● (1540)

My own reaction to the event when it took place, the question that came immediately to my mind, concerned the morality of the media when it comes to a situation like this where, by a fluke or because there is an instrument of which the other person is not aware, one is able to get a small piece of information that can be blown up into what becomes an incident. It seems to me, with my own background of working in the church, and to many others who have similar professions, doctors, lawyers, ministers, priests and teachers, that it has been taken for granted that many things we do will be kept secret. People expect and demand that a person like myself and many others, and all of us, I suspect, in some instances, will keep information secret. I can think of many things in my life about which I have information which could be found by someone who really wanted to find it by getting into my files and looking at my notes, and I keep extensive notes.

Someone could use machinery or technical equipment to listen to a conversation in my office, or could tap my telephone or do many other things. I would say that if any of those devices were to be used and information gained made public afterwards, it would be morally wrong. So I question the morality of someone in the media who, because of a similar accident or intended accident, is able to procure material that is secret and is able to turn it into an incident afterward, to the embarrassment of some person. I think it is wrong. I do not think that is covering news in the way people expect news to be covered.

Just a few days ago I read of a recent incident in the United States concerning someone who was able to procure the pre-medical examinations to be written by students coming from other countries. As Hon. Members know, if someone is able to find the answers to that kind of an exam prior to the examination, one's odds of passing will naturally be much higher than those of people who must use their own knowledge. I understand that as much as $10 million was made from this event. People from various countries were able to get the answers to the exam prior to writing it, which finally meant that the exams had to be written all over again. I do not think anyone would question me on my belief that that is wrong. It would also be illegal, I suspect, to steal that kind of knowledge and sell it so that someone else would benefit.

I appreciate the fact that what took place at the time of the budget is not a case exactly parallel to stealing of exams. Nevertheless, I suggest that the media should somehow examine its conscience concerning all the news that it prints about an incident like this, as to who finally benefits from the embarrassment of the Government. But how much restriction should the Government have to use? What is the human dimension that is required of someone to keep a secret in a place like this? I would say that at certain times in history it was not that difficult. If someone did let a secret out, there was greater responsibility than today, especially when technological machines are being used to acquire the information. If someone gives his colleague a note or makes a vocal statement prior to the budget, letting out a piece of information himself simply by not caring, that is different. But when it comes right down to seeking out, with earnestness, information that obviously has not been intentionally put out, then I question that morality.

I think it would be proper for the House of Commons or representatives of the committee such as that proposed by the Hon. Member for St. John's West, to question the level of secrecy that must be demanded and the morality involved in seeking information when it is still supposed to be secret. I would like to see such a committee struck.

At budget time it is much more important to have serious consultation by groups across the country that will be affected by the budget to find out exactly what people are thinking and saying about the economics of the country, about labour, business, senior citizens, hospitals and universities. It is more important to look for more information to make a just budget, than it is to make the whole point of it a secret. The value of the research and preparation on a much broader spectrum is more important than the final, total, absolute secrecy, and keeping the secrecy with these new machines is next to impossible when the possibility of them being broken is so much greater.

The New Democrats would support in general the motion that has been proposed by the Hon. Member for St. John's

West that a special committee study the incident that took place in the House on April 18 and April 19. However, it would only be the case on which to study much more serious questions about the whole notion of secrecy related to the budget and the morality of the media interfering in a way that could break that secrecy unecessarily.

Mr. Douglas Fisher (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it is a real pleasure to be able to stand and comment on the motion of the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), to whose advice I listened with great pleasure and enjoyment. I regard him as an authority on these matters, particularly since he was the only Finance Minister of whom I know who resigned over a leaky budget after he read it rather than before. That is a great electoral tradition for the Tory Party to follow in the future. I hope all the struggling and ambitious Finance-Ministers-to-be over on the other side absorb the procedure and the advice of the Hon. Member for St. John's West. He set a great tradition for Tories that all of us hope will be followed.

To put the issue into perspective, this motion is totally unnecessary. Let me remind Members of the House of three studies that are taking place right now which are creating some change and reform in our institution. The first is the Committee on Standing Orders and Procedures. It has already indicated that it intends to take this matter into consideration and make recommendations on it.

● (1550)

The second is the green paper on the budget process which was published by the former Minister of Finance and followed by the current Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) in the presentation and preparation of his April budget.

The third study to which I bring everyone's attention is the work of the Standing Committee on Finance, which has been looking into some very delicate tax matters and making some good, sensible recommendations before they become final policies in the legislation.

Let me read the observations made in the Montreal Gazette on April 20, in the midst of all this uproar we saw last April on the budget. At that time, Mr. Ian MacDonald said:

> It was the world's first high technology budget leak.
>
> And it was kind of fitting, since Marc Lalonde has discarded the hidebound notions of budget secrecy in the last six months.
>
> In the six months since Lalonde effectively took the wraps off the budget-making process, there's been a steady stream of well sourced leaks and trial balloons.
> Depending on which paper you picked up, the government would either let the deficit grow to some $30 billion and so allow for some job creation, or cap the deficit at $25 billion in an effort to hold down interest rates.
>
> The other pre-budget trial balloons ran the gamut from Lalonde raising the child tax credit to give poor families some relief from the worst of the recession, to allowing investors inflation relief from their dividend taxes.
> Whatever the verdict on the budget itself, Lalonde has changed the rules of the game.
>
> 'I've tried to open up the system,' he was saying the other day. 'It's now a process of concertation. The consultations have been very useful for the government.'

The final observation by Mr. MacDonald in this article is:

> Lalonde has revolutionized the budget process.

I believe that the April budget was a great success. I think that in the months since it has come into effect business groups, communities, individuals and labour groups right across the country have said that the budget has had a key role in Canada's burgeoning economic recovery. The April budget was a budget for its time. It succeeded marvelously to get our economy going. It is still adding stimulus to the recovery. There is much evidence that people all across the country agree with that observation.

Let us take a look at the events of April 18 and the consequences that would have been brought about if we had followed the advice of various Members of the Opposition. What happened during this famous press conference? We know that a CHCH television careraman was there and that he did a good job. We know that he got a lucky break and pursued it to the best of his ability. We know that he got some photographs of some information on the deficit and on job creation statistics.

We also know that the next day, during the budget, the Minister made some comments about that incident and that he adapted his budget to preserve some of the standards in budget secrecy and parliamentary tradition. What was the result of that incident in the press conference? We had an embarrassed Minister of Finance. We had a very happy newsman. But we did not have any revelation of tax information. We did not have any groups that benefited artificially or prematurely across the country. In other words, we did not have any violation of the traditional standards that have set out budget secrecy.

We heard many irate comments from Opposition politicians. For example, if we look at Hansard of Tuesday, April 19, the then Leader of the Opposition—and many would say the real Leader of the Opposition even today—the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) stood up and said as reported at page 24610:

> The credibility of his budget has been placed in question along with his own credibility.

That statement tells us why the Member for Yukon is paid to oppose rather than to give us economic advice. Let me continue:

> This leaves the Minister the only option of resignation and the production and presentation of a new budget by a new Minister to be appointed to replace him.

That bald statement is made without any real evidence, without any regard for the traditional rules of budget secrecy. It is just an Opposition demand based on some clowning around.

When we look at the real world, we see that Canadians from coast to coast were very worried indeeed lest the Minister of Finance should follow that advice. People definitely did not need that kind of disruption in the economy just as it was about to take off again. What we needed was some stimulation that a budget would have provided. To counsel a Minister of Finance to resign at that juncture was irresponsible and totally disregarded the real needs of the Canadian economy. We needed that budget at that time. We did not need that kind of harassment and opposition, particularly harassment and opposition that ignored real parliamentary tradition.

Of course, the Minister did change some of the budget figures. He wanted to follow the existing budget standards. Let me quote directly from his speech of April 19, later on in the day, as reported at page 24659 of Hansard:

Traditionally a budget leak involves premature disclosure of a tax matter. Fortunately this is not the case. However, in some quarters any matter or fact connected with the budget might be considered to be of this character. To remove any doubt, I have decided to change the portion of the budget which would otherwise have been prematurely in the public domain.

As the Minister indicated very clearly there, there were no disclosures of vital secret matters. There was no early disclosure of information that would have led to undue financial gain by other interested parties in the country.

Let me continue and read another statement from the Minister. Before doing so, let me say that I see the Member for Yukon here. I look forward to hearing his comments in a few minutes. He was the one who urged the Minister to resign. It would be interesting to see if, in his second round of debate, he can produce the odd fact this time rather than simply bluff and nonsense.

The Minister went on to say in his statement, as recorded at page 24659:

There is some irony in all of this. During the past week, I have debated with myself and with my advisors about the precise nature the budget measures should take. My concern has been that in my desire to be fiscally responsible, I would not provide enough stimulus for the economy to secure the recovery and generate employment. Obviously, this is a matter of delicate judgment and there is no absolutely correct answer. Be that as it may, the events of the past 24 hours have led me to follow what my instincts have been urging me to do all along. If I err in this budget, I want to do it on the side of more jobs.

That was the correction. That reason alone was the basis for the correction.

What was the role of the newspaper man? That was an interesting point. I believe the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ogle) raised some issues that were of great interest to all of us. I am sure that they are equally interesting to people in the media as well as to politicians. I think that the television man was doing his job as he should. As I mentioned, I think he had some extraordinary luck. Let us listen to what Charles Lynch said two or three days after the event. He said:

—it has long been my view that a press photographer or TV cameraman will take a picture of anything newsworthy that shows up in the lens, whether invited to do so or not. My impression is that this is what photo-journalists are paid to do.

● (1600)

I agree with Mr. Lynch. His article continues:

As to whether high-principled print journalists, like myself, would have peeked and printed, my attitude is that we are in the business of disclosure, and leaks are part of it.

I agree with him.

The Winnipeg Free Press, in a positive development, moving the issue a little bit further along, wrote this in May of this year:

The Budget

When federal Finance Minister Marc Lalonde allowed a cameraman to film a couple of pages of his budget during one of the "photo opportunities" which governments now stage in place of providing information, Ontario's minister, Frank Miller, tut-tutted along with a lot of others.

Now, Mr. Miller finds himself the victim not so much of a leak as of an inundation. A Toronto Globe and Mail reporter has found page after page of his proposed budget sharing a green garbage bag with a banana peel, some used plastic coffee cups and some juice containers.

That is the sort of unsettling experience that leads finance ministers to think gloomily about resignation. It should instead prompt politicians at all levels to think again about how important absolute budget secrecy really is.

A little further in the editorial, the Winnipeg Free Press reports:

New secrecy rules which are less obsessively absolute would serve everybody's interests.

One thing is certain: the more politicians try to keep things secret, the more reporters will try to find them out.

I think all of us as politicians would agree that is their habit, and we usually have a secret or an open admiration for those who are most successful at indulging in that habit. Parliamentary tradition, of course, demands that a Minister of Finance should quit if he discloses tax information or financial information that would provide an individual with an undue advantage.

Let me quote what the Toronto Star revealed about Eugene Forsey's ideas on this topic. On April 20, 1983, a day after the incident, we read this:

Forsey, Canada's greatest Constitution expert, said the inadvertent leak should not cost Lalonde his job because the documents revealed had nothing to do with taxation.

A little further on we read:

"We hear about deficit projections practically on the hour," Forsey said. "They aren't especially startling."

It is interesting to note that his observation ties in exactly with the observation in the Montreal Gazette written by a financial writer about the pre-budget trial balloons that were sent up. The Toronto Star column about Forsey went on in this way:

And he added that "it would take a pretty smart cookie" to make a quick killing in the market on the strength of information the government would be spending $4.6 billion on job-creation provisions.

"If these matters had something to do with taxation, then he would have little choice," Forsey said.

Forsey added it is unlikely Lalonde will be forced to resign.

Tax matters and confidential financial information are the core of the argument here. We have discussed all of this quite widely. The Hon. Member for St. John's West went down the list of Finance Ministers who have been disciplined in various ways over the years. He referred to Hugh Dalton in the United Kingdom in 1947 who resigned because of some premature disclosure of cigarette tax information. As the Hon. Member for St. John's West pointed out, Walter Gordon, the first Finance Minister in the Pearson Government, in 1963 offered his resignation, but it was refused because the then Prime Minister did not feel Mr. Gordon's advisers had had undue advantage or had spread information far and wide.

Donald Fleming, the Minister of Finance in the Diefenbaker Government, offered his resignation when he was the butt of a joke by a reporter. When later information revealed that Mr. Fleming's leg was being pulled and no information had been revealed publicly, Mr. Fleming withdrew his resignation.

There are other cases when a resignation did not occur. The most recent and notable is Ontario's Frank Miller. We just heard about his budget turning up in a garbage can outside a printing company. It was interesting, as reported by the Toronto Sun on April 20, 1983, to read this:

Ontario Treasurer Frank Miller said before the budget was tabled that Lalonde should resign if actual details were leaked.

Miller, who will introduce his own budget at Queen's Park next month, said it is his opinion and that of senior officials in his ministry that Lalonde's breach of budget secrecy was serious enough to warrant resignation.

In Mr. Miller's opinion two numbers were bad enough to force a resignation from the federal Minister, but a whole bag full of garbage was not enough to force his.

In 1981, Quebec's Jacques Parizeau was about to reveal his budget and a Member of the Opposition had it several hours early and apparently was showing it around. Despite that, Mr. Parizeau did not resign. In 1978, the current Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien), shared his budget information with Quebec's Jacques Parizeau. He did so in an exercise to attempt some co-operative pre-budget decision-making. When this was revealed, the Minister said it had been deliberate, that confidentiality had been maintained and that there was no need for his resignation. Of course, in 1983 with our own Minister of Finance, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) pointed out that there was no real, vital economic information disclosed and, therefore, no reason to treat this as a traditional budget leak.

What about the results for Canada as a whole? The Toronto Star on April 21, 1983, wrote, and I will quote just a short part of a very good editorial as follows:

We doubt if the disclosure that the budget deficit is expected to rise to $31 billion surprised many knowledgeable people. Radio, TV and newspapers have been filled with speculation about the size of the deficit, and $31 billion is hardly a new figure.

Further down we read:

The Conservatives argue that a budget leak automatically requires the resignation of the minister of finance.

The article continues:

What they conveniently ignore is the contrary precedents.

In another paragraph, we find this:

What's more, Canada's foremost expert on constitutional matters, former senator Eugene Forsey, is of the opinion that Lalonde's resignation is not required, because the leak had nothing to do with taxation matters.

The final excerpts reads:

But in the absence of any sign of damage from the budget leak—there was no evidence of material effect on the external value of the dollar or on interest rates, the two markets particularly sensitive to the size of the budget—the circumstances do not require Lalonde's resignation.

The Winnipeg Free Press joined in that assessment. On April 20, we find these words:

The opposition, not surprisingly, is calling now for his resignation, citing the case of Hugh Dalton, the British chancellor of the exchequer, who resigned after giving reporters a hint of changes in the tax on beer.

This article has beer, we have it as cigarettes.

Mr. Deans: They are wrong on the whole thing.

Mr. Fisher: The Winnipeg Free Press article goes on:

The situations are not identical, Mr. Lalonde did not himself reveal any part of the budget . . . Three pages did not include any tax changes. The size of the deficit which it predicted was already well known in the community and the revelation had no effect on financial markets. If anything, the incident underlined how out-of-date much of the current obsession with budget secrecy has become.

The then finance critic is from Vancouver. She was irate, overheated and steaming about this leak. She felt apoplectic and she felt it was just about the most terrible thing she had ever seen. However, the Vancouver Sun did not agree with her. On April 20, the Vancouver Sun printed this in an article:

And, arguments of a budget leak notwithstanding, most of the facts and figures in the document have been the subject of analysis and reporting for almost a month now.

It was Lalonde's unfortunate accident with the camera crew that focused attention on how tentative the budget really is, and hence how believable it may be in the face of sustained opposition attack in the House of Commons.

The Times Colonist, also on April 20, 1983, wrote this:

It's hard to tell who deserves the most scorn—those Opposition MPs calling for Finance Minister Marc Lalonde's resignation or the unprincipled media types who pounced on this so-called budget "leak."

What, after all, really happened?

The article concludes with these words:

As for the opposition members demanding Lalonde's resignation, notably PC leader Erik Nielsen and the NDP's Nelson Riis, their incredulous expressions of shock reveal either the quality of their acting or just how removed they are from genuine public concerns.

● (1610)

I conclude by drawing attention to a more recent document, "Canadian Tax News" published by Coopers and Lybrand. It contains some very good advice for all of us.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Will the Parliamentary Secretary either do that in 30 seconds or seek the unanimous consent of the House to continue his remarks?

Mr. Fisher: Thirty seconds will be more than adequate. I will read very quickly. I quote:

As Mr. Lalonde said, budget secrecy is an outdated tradition—and so it is. But the principle cannot be changed without the consent of Parliament and it is a pity that the problem has not yet been addressed. The Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedures of the House of Commons has indicated that it would consider reforms relating to the opening up of the budget process and about all one can say at this stage is "Get on with it!"

This is an unnecessary motion. We are already hard at work on this problem.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, it is déjà vu to be speaking on this topic today on the motion put forward by the Hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). Prior to the Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr. Fisher), I was the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance. I was exposed to the kinds of problems that were raised with regard to budget secrecy. I remember the kind of security that surrounded budget making and the documentation that was in preparation for budgets, the confidentiality of that information, the kind of security that had to be enforced in the Department of Finance, for example, and other Departments, and the kinds of problems raised with lock-ups for the press, Members of the Opposition and Members on the Government side who might be critics or vitally interested in commenting immediately upon presentation of a budget. Along with some other matters, those difficulties led to the introduction of a green paper by the former Minister of Finance, now Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), on how we might open up the whole budget process.

I agree with the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance that this motion is totally unnecessary. There is no reason for us to refer to any committee of the House the question of budget secrecy or whether or not there was a budget leak, which should lead to an inquiry by the House, by the current Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) at the time of the last budget. It is clear from all the commentary my colleague brought forth that there was not such a leak. Leaks of that nature have never led to serious concern by Ministers of Finance. I agree entirely with my colleague as to the kind of matters that should give rise to concern.

If the Minister of Finance had made reference to a matter in some way that got out to the public which related to a tax matter or expenditure matter whereby the individual who received that information could obtain personal gain as a result of that information at the expense of the public or at the expense of a small group of taxpayers, then the Minister had made a fundamental error which would require his resignation. However, that was obviously not the case, as my colleague pointed out quite clearly.

With regard to the other matters the inquiry might consider such as the question of budget secrecy as opposed to this specific incident, I think they have been looked at very carefully in other forums. The Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure certainly looked at that matter. The Finance Committee looked at that matter in relation to the green paper. We have had a new opening up of the procedures in budgets. Ways and Means motions are now as a matter of course referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. We go over Ways and Means motions prior to the introduction of legislation which is to be considered by the House. This facilitates the process and involves individual Members in the committee process, and the bringing in of witnesses to look at matters of taxation prior to the consideration by Committee of the Whole, which is the way tax matters are considered.

We have made great strides. We have undertaken the kinds of issues this motion asks be undertaken by a special inquiry. Therefore, there is no need for a special inquiry. If the special inquiry to which the Hon. Member for Yukon is referring is in any way to be a witch-hunt, and I do not believe that it is, there are no grounds upon which the hunt for witches can be pursued, as my friend from Mississauga North showed so clearly in his earlier remarks.

I understand you are about to rise, Mr. Speaker, to indicate that my time has expired.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Parliamentary Secretary is correct. Pursuant to Standing Order 24(2), it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings because the hour for that section of Private Members' business has now expired.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding Order No. 487 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT (INTERNAL ECONOMY)

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Gérald Laniel (Beauharnois-Salaberry) moved that Bill C-687, to amend the House of Commons Act (internal economy), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased with this opportunity to speak to Bill C-687, an Act to amend the House of Commons Act (internal economy), which was given first reading on June 14, 1983 in this House. At the time, I commented as follows: "The purpose of this Bill is to increase the autonomy of the House of Commons with respect to its internal administration. It defines the Executive of the Commissioners of Internal Economy which the present Act does not do, and provides for the appointment of two more Members as Commissioners, to be chosen from among the backbenchers, one from each side of the House, to increase the involvement of the House in its own administration."

The whole question of internal economy and involvement of backbenchers (by delegation) in decisions affecting the administration of the House of Commons has been debated several times on the floor of the House in recent years, but I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that it is still a matter of concern for most Members.

On October 30, 1969, our former colleague, Mr. Frank Howard, the then Member for Skeena, introduced Bill C-32 which was debated on February 24, 1970 and whose purpose was to abolish the rights of Privy Council Members regarding the internal economy of the House by simply repealing sections 16 and 18 of the House of Commons Act.

The weakness of his proposal, Mr. Speaker, lies herein that the Hon. Member failed to provide any alternatives, substitutes or replacements. During the present session, the subject was debated twice when the House considered Bill C-273, introduced by the Hon. Member opposite, the Member for Edmonton-West (Mr. Lambert), on November 6, 1981 and again on May 18, 1983. The purpose of this Bill was to replace the four members of the Privy Council who are also Members of the House of Commons by five backbenchers, who, with the Speaker, would form the Internal Economy Commission of the House of Commons.

In each debate a number of suggestions were made by Hon. Members, and I am sure that further proposals may be made this afternoon if the debate is prolonged.

However, there is unanimity on one point, and that is the need to change an administrative structure that is now obsolete and that was established when the staff and services of the House of Commons were not as numerous and Parliament was sitting only a few weeks a year so that Members were not in Ottawa for the same periods of time they are now.

● (1620)

Mr. Speaker, the concern about this matter has reached the point that in its ninth report, the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure made a concrete proposal to restructure the Internal Economy Commission, more specifically by reducing Cabinet participation and adding a number of private members. In fact, these proposals were aimed at bringing administrative decision-making closer to the members themselves.

I have neither the intention nor the time at this stage to go through all these suggestions, and there are several, although I do feel that the majority are acceptable or can at least be considered an improvement. I shall be dealing mostly with my own plan, which has one advantage in that it does not try to change everything and could be considered as a step, a kind of trial balloon that would eventually lead to further changes if Hon. Members feel they are appropriate. The reasons for my interest in this matter are many. First of all, nine years experience in the Chair brought me closer to the administrative concerns of the House in general. There is also my membership in the Advisory Council, which does not always gives the impression it is very advisory and which still has no specific terms of reference, and finally, my membership on the executive of various parliamentary associations, in addition to the 21 years I spent in this institution.

I believe that lines of communication in the House of Commons have never been as poor as they are now. The general discontent is creating a situation I quite seriously would call explosive. I have never heard so many complaints and so much grumbling among Hon. Members and House of Commons staff, but nobody seems to care. The House is no longer a pleasant place to work, Mr. Speaker. I agree that some things had to be changed, certain controls were lacking, but although these changes were well-intentioned, for many people they have become so many constraints and elements of divisiveness and oppression. A system based on favoritism has been replaced by a another, more sophisticated system. It used to be that Hon. Members could discuss their problems and difficulties with the Speaker, the Clerk or the Sergeant-at-Arms, who were all part of the administrative structure of the House of Commons, where incumbents reacted quickly to complaints or representations by Hon. Members. I am told that the Clerk is no longer interested in administrative concerns, and the House is aware that the Sergeant-at-Arms has lost most of his powers. Today, the number of executive positions has been increased tremendously, and responsibility for all these people lies with the Administrator, who has no inkling of the political, social and human repercussions some of his initiatives may have, and who is waiting or hoping for the day when he himself, as is being whispered, will become Deputy Minister of the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker, I believe all this is evidence of the fact that the Internal Economy Commission has become far removed from Members and the House of Commons staff in general. The Commission's members are all too busy elsewhere, and its decisions are made on the basis of information or the interpretation of the Administrator. Up to now, the Internal Economy Commission has always refused to hear Members of the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services at one of its meetings, because the Committee is supposed to address its complaints and recommendations to the Administrator. I suggest we ask those who work night and day for the parliamentary associations what they think about the present rules on consultation and budgetary policies, which, in the final instance, will cost more because they encourage spending instead of "economy".

In any case, my proposal might have led to the same unfortunate results, but at least we would have the satisfaction of being consulted and would not have the impression which is anathema for a parliamentarian that a public servant is making most of the decisions without consultation or communication with Members. When we mention the dissastisfaction of Members to the members of the Internal Economy Commission, they run off a list of everything the Commission has done to improve services to Members, and this is all quite true, so that they feel somewhat aggrieved by our representations. I can understand that, but that is not the point, Mr. Speaker. All we want, all I want is for them to understand, and all I want the Chair to understand is that a proposal like mine is, in fact, aimed at doing away with the frustration of not being heard, not being consulted, a frustration that would not exist, or not to the same extent, if two backbenchers were to sit on the Board of Internal Economy, the Board of Commissioners of Internal Economy for the House of the Commons, as I said in my proposal. In fact, it is an administrative structure not, as yet, defined by law and whose powers have not yet been described.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to adding two backbenchers to the Commission of Internal Economy, the purpose of Bill C-687 is also to describe and define the Board of Commissioners of Internal Economy and its specific responsibilities, especially the major responsibility for approving the estimates of the Speaker, the Clerk and the Sergeant-at-Arms and submitting them to the Minister of Finance, who subsequently submits them separately to the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill is as well-intentioned as all the others, but it also demonstrates a concern for ensuring that the House of Commons again becomes what it was before, an instrument that provides services to Members, and that is administered to their satisfaction, with the consent and under the control of the Members.

[English]

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I would like to compliment the Hon. Member for Beauharnois-Salaberry (Mr. Laniel). I am very interested in the Bill and the arguments as presented.

As some Hon. Members already know, Mr. Speaker, I have been involved in the Public Accounts Committee and in the whole question of a new form of the Estimates. I have also been involved in dealing with the fact that spending within the federal system is out of control. I have been working with the former Auditor General and the Public Accounts Committee on this matter, and we have been trying to address it with a new way of disclosing information.

As I look at this Bill, I remember the many hours of debate and struggle within the committees and the steering committees that were involved in setting up new disclosure of information provisions to allow for a better accountability factor for Government spending specifically dealing with the House of Commons. We on this side of the House would have been very pleased to hear a motion to the effect that the subject matter of Bill C-687 go to committee for study because, as the Hon. Member said, the Bill is one of several Bills dealing with the matter of better use of information for better accountability and a more effective use of taxation resources attributed to the House of Commons for its various functions.

Section 16(2) of this Bill, dealing with appointments, talks about the appointment of four Privy Councillors and two Members from the backbench of the Opposition. I should like to see members other than Government Privy Councillors sitting on this Board of Internal Economy, Mr. Speaker. As things are structured now, the Government has all the control, the spending powers and everything else. As a witness who appeared before the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure said, if you are dealing with the knot in the rope in the tug of war of power between Government and the House of Commons, that knot has to move back toward the House of Commons.

I think the House of Commons has lost control over its expenditure watchdog functions. We are not functioning as elected directors of the taxpayers in the examination of expenditures. We are not properly using the information that is made public because it is not organized in a useful fashion. We are buried under an avalanche of paper. We get grocery baskets full of mail, reports, ministerial statements, Crown corporation reports, the subject matter of task forces, special committees and royal commissions. It all comes as an avalanche and we are buried under it. Much of it is trivia and is not organized in a form that would allow those of us with certain special interests or who represent ridings with an interest to use it.

I would not want to see four Members of the Privy Council who are incumbent Members of the Government sitting on any board that deals with the House. I should like to see Members of the Privy Council on that board, but if we are to move the knot of power back to the House so that we will have a higher standard of accountability over the Government, then we common Members should be deciding more things. We should be improving and strengthening our powers of inquiry, improving our efforts to hold the Government answerable for its actions.

I should like to see the subject matter of the Bill go to Committee so that some of our concerns can be discussed there. We should be able to improve the Bill to allow a new phase of operations to take place in the House of Commons.

The Hon. Member who presented the Bill spoke of discontent. He said that the kettle is boiling; that the House of Commons is no longer an agreeable place to work; that the best intentions of Members of Parliament are often frustrated by the oppressive measures they have to deal with; that we get more and more studies; that we are always referring things to committee but get no decisions and no tangible corrections. I share his frustration, as I am sure other Hon. Members do. I was once told by the former member for Peace River that one must not be impatient in this place. One must figure oneself lucky if three years of effort on one tiny segment of business moves it forward one notch and brings about an improvement for the people of Canada or an improvement in the processes of the House of Commons or of Government.

I have had trouble learning that, Mr. Speaker. I came here out of a taxpayer frustration. I know how hard it is to pay taxes and watch them be dissipated and spilled on carpets so that new carpets can be rolled in. I know the absolute disregard for the hours of labour and toil that go into the real taxes that come in to support the place. That is one of the reasons I am here going into my tenth year, although I have nothing like the experience or, probably, the depth of frustration of the Hon. Member who presented the Bill, who said he has been here 21 years. But before I allow myself to succumb to a shrug, Mr. Speaker, I had better get out and let someone else come in who is fresh and can carry the anger that I had when I arrived.

In spite of nine years of hard work on committees along with many colleagues, I see no improvement in the care and delivery of services or in the care for the tremendous amount of effort that goes into earning a taxpayer's dollar. A dollar of savings is so expensive and so precious that it cannot be risked in any equity. We have to go to Hong Kong or Switzerland or other places where there is less oppressive taxation. That is where we must borrow the money that the private sector needs to take a risk in the marketplace.

The Government is out of control. I am not going to speak just of the Government; the whole system, Government and the bureaucracy, is out of control. I have to ask who controls the bureaucracy. If the Government is going to stay in power it is not going to risk any attack on a bureaucracy or a correction of it. Where is anyone going to bite the bullet? Indeed, is it possible to bite the bullet in our type of political system so that care and common sense can be put back in the Government when dealing with the wealth-creating sectors of the country?

I stand here totally frustrated, Mr. Speaker. I say to you and to the Member who presented the Bill that that is the kettle that is boiling. If there is frustration in the hearts and minds of some of us here, then I want to tell you that there is anger in the land because this place does not function properly. If we are not doing our jobs as Members, then the kettle is boiling. The reason I stay, the reason I work here and the reason I do not play too much around here is that I am afraid that the kettle is boiling over. We are threatening the survival of a social system that requires the tender loving care of the wealth we produce in order for it to survive. That is what is at stake.

When we do improper things—with the Crow Bill, for instance—when we do not figure out the spin-off effects on future generations so that they can pay for our extravagance, then the country is in very serious trouble. What we are talking about is accountability and control. I have to blame each and every one of us here for that. I do not think there are 30 Members of the House of Commons who are prepared to man the four accountability committees recommended by the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure. We must try to pull the knot of accountability back to the House of Commons, away from the Government and away from the bureaucracy. I do not think there is a will to do that. A few of us are breaking our hearts trying to, but there is no will to haul it back in here or to train and discipline ourselves to ask the questions that expose things.

I have to live with the ghost of James Macdonell Mr. Speaker. When I was Chairman of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, he and I spent hours and hours together. I happened to be present when the new Auditor General's Bill was allowed through by the late Robert Andras, then President of the Treasury Board. Following that, he allowed the Comptroller General's Bill to go through and then we put in place a marvellous new acronym called IMPAC—improved in management practices and control. We have had Auditor General's Report after Auditor General's Report since 1976, and all dealt with accountability and control of the public purse. But the situation today is worse than it was in 1974 when James Macdonell started his work. It is absolutely out of control. There is no one in the House of Commons who is prepared to get to work, to bite the bullet and bring it under control for the sake of the freedom of our kids tomorrow.

That is the issue and that is what this kind of Bill addresses. That is why I would like to see the subject matter of this Bill discussed in committee, so we could bring something about.

Having complimented the Hon. Member, I must say I differ with him in respect of the fact he is worried about the powers of an Administrator. As an Hon. Member who has served on the Public Accounts Committee, I agree with the Administrator. I do not know why we are so secretive in the House of Commons about the tremendous amount of work which the present Speaker has done. I believe, when the whole story is known, that we are going to find that Madam Speaker has indeed been a marvellous manager and that she has put together the right division of responsibilities for the Table to function more effectively, for the Sergeant-at-Arms to function more effectively, and for the Administrator to function and organize the information in a manner in which all of us, with all our warts, pimples and acne, can understand.

I do not know why the Management and Members' Services Committee and the other committee want to keep some of the progress which is being made in the management of the House of Commons under wraps. If they were truly concerned about the need for a new form of estimates which organizes the information we need on all Departments, they would want the form of the estimates of the House of Commons widely published. I can tell you, Sir, that in the new form of estimates which are coming from the Treasury Board under the Comptroller General, the Part I is very good but the big Part II is the same old thing. It is organized in such a manner that a few Hon. Members with 26 years of experience can perhaps handle it. Then there is Part III of the estimates, and these volumes which are coming down from departments and various commissions are so well massaged, Sir, they are almost advertisements. They are not delivering anything, really, in a tangible, usable form to bring about a better accountability equation or effort on the part of Members of Parliament.

I asked the Administrator of the House of Commons some questions and he referred to a book and gave me answers, bang, bang, bang. I asked what the book was and found it was his form of the estimates for the House of Commons, which was organized in such a manner that if the Comptroller General of Canada used it for the organization of the estimates of all departments, if he just took what exists here in the House of Commons and used that over in his department, he would resolve the problem his departments are having with the new form of the estimates.

There might be some here, Mr. Speaker, who think that a departmental manual on Part III should be no thicker than a quarter of an inch. However, I want to tell you that the original concept was that it would be a fairly small book on a department, but it would grow much larger and would be organized in such a manner that those who want to inquire and ask questions and receive the public information which is available would have it in a totally organized form, suitable for the average abilities of a Member of Parliament.

I do not stand as any academic, Sir. I am a very average guy, like most other Hon. Members here. That is why I am here. I am a commoner who is representing the people and the taxpayers. But by God, Sir, the kettle is boiling. If we do not get this new form of estimates finished, we fail; we threaten the system and the freedom of our kids tomorrow, because I do not know how they are going to pay for the extravagant spending which we have been guilty of in the ten years I have been here.

I compliment Madam Speaker for the job she has done and I will defend, as long as I am a Member here in the House of Commons, the quality of her work in organizing the information—which is public knowledge, in any case—in terms of running this place. If the Comptroller General will take the format which this House of Commons has under its Speaker and organize the information in all other departments in that form, it would be one giant leap ahead for the freedom and future of Canada.

That is why I stand here and make an appeal to Hon. Members on this important Bill. I believe it is a tragedy that we cannot get its subject matter to committee so that the matter could be discussed. I feel we need every opportunity we can get to discuss this subject of accountability and answerability in order to bring a runaway system back under control.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I was very interested in the comments of both the mover of the Bill, the Hon. Member for Beauharnois-Salaberry (Mr. Laniel), and the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington). I believe the mover of the Bill expressed concern primarily about the operations of the House of Commons, much of which, I might say, has validity. The Hon. Member for Capilano extrapolated that argument into a discussion, perhaps a little beyond the Bill itself, but nevertheless an important one for the purposes of Members of Parliament.

I would like to say to the Hon. Member, however, that when he says he is just a very average guy, we do not agree with that.

Mr. Ellis: One above average.

Mr. Deans: I did not say that.

Mr. Ellis: I did.

Mr. Deans: I would like, however, to deal with the subject matter. To begin with, I would like to say there is no doubt that the House of Commons and certain of its emanations must be under the control of the Members of the House of Commons. The day to day operations of the House, the expenditures undertaken on behalf of the Members of the House of Commons, the provision of services to the Members of the House of Commons, the questions which arise as a result of providing access to the House by way of television and other media for the public, the question of the environs of the House of Commons, surely must be clearly dealt with and dealt with in a straightforward way by the Members of the House themselves. For that reason, I subscribe wholeheartedly to the principle of Bill C-687 which was brought forward by the Hon. Member for Beauharnois-Salaberry.

I do have a little knowledge of a similar kind of situation which is in place at the moment in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario. The Hon. Member for Capilano may well be aware of this, but perhaps he is not. The Board of Internal Economy of the Province of Ontario Legislative Assembly is an all-party board which is made up of the representatives of the Crown, together with a representative of the caucus supporting the Government, a Member of the Official Opposition and a Member, in this case, of the New Democratic Party. They, together with the Speaker, comprise the Board of Internal Economy.

This started, I believe, in 1975, although it may have happened just prior to that. The experiment probably was viewed with some skepticism by Members of the Government who, up until that point of time, had complete control and total say over what happened in the general management of the Legislative Assembly of the Province. However, at the time the restructuring of the Legislative Assembly was before the Assembly itself, it was proposed by those of us on the Opposition side, and supported by the Government, that there ought to be Opposition Members there for balance. The House, after all, was made up of both the Government and the Opposition. We recognized that no government works efficiently without an effective opposition and no opposition works efficiently if it does not work in harmony with the House itself in an effort to try to find ways of dealing with public business.

Therefore, we made a judgement at that time which was quite simply that concern for the operations of the House—it goes beyond that and I will speak about that in a moment—and its environs was a concern of all Members. The responsibility for good and orderly operations, including good fiscal management, was the responsibility of all Members. It was not a Government responsibility and the Government need not accept unto itself all of the criticism which can be levelled in cases where there may, at least in the public's view, have been expenditures that were not easily understood or perhaps were unjustified. Those expenditures were taken on behalf of all Members. The provincial Legislature, recognizing that, proceeded to amend its proposal and in doing so included as part of the Board of Internal Economy, both, as I say, Members from outside Cabinet, including a representative of the Government caucus, if you will, outside of the Cabinet, and Members from the two Opposition Parties.

In addition to the sort of normal functions one might envisage, the Board had control over the expenditures of the Ombudsman inasmuch as he came before the Board and presented his estimates complete with his staff justification. The Board analysed it with the benefit of their administrative officers and took responsibility for its approval, just as a Minister would take responsibility for the approval of the estimates of his or her ministry. The Board of Internal Economy in the Ontario Legislature appeared annually before the estimates committee, if I recall correctly, and answered for their decisions. They were questioned by their colleagues from both sides of the House and I can recall taking my turn as one being questioned. It happened to be the three House leaders who were primarily answerable at that point. That is not necessarily the only formula, I concede, but on that occasion the Government House leader would be answerable for a period of time and then the question would go to the Opposition House leader and subsequently to the third House leader. As representatives of the House of Commons they would share, as would the Government caucus representative, in being answerable for decisions taken.

I happen to believe that was a very valuable contribution to bring the provincial Legislature into a position of more respect than it had been previously. Members of the House knew they could make representations either through their own individual representative, although we never felt as if we were representing a particular caucus, or directly to the Board itself. The Board, almost without exception, arrived at its decision unanimously. I say that with some pride because that was putting aside what could by some be viewed as an opportunity for partisan differences. But we worked very hard at finding adequate and suitable compromises. Where we could not agree, we did not go ahead until we had tried to find a workable alternative formula.

I say this to you, Mr. Speaker, because I think it may be important and that Members should understand that what is being proposed by the Hon. Member is workable, practical, not revolutionary and does not dilute the power of the Government. It in fact transfers certain responsibilities to where they rightfully belong.

From my own point of view, I think, and I hope I speak for my colleagues, that we could have a better understanding of the day to day operations of the House and its various parts and we could avoid the situation which continues to arise as a result of the structure we presently have. At the moment we have an advisory committee, the Management and Members' Services Committee. They work extremely hard. I have sat on that Committee from time to time and they put in very long hours and devote a great deal of time to careful consideration of questions placed before them. But unfortunately they have no direct input, neither do they have any responsibility. What we have is a Committee, which surely should be charged with the ultimate authority, being asked simply to make recommendations, the future course of which they have no control over. They have no direct representation with the existing Commissioners of Internal Economy and certainly much can be and likely is lost in transmittal of their ideas. At least some members of the Members' Services Committee feel quite frustrated because there is no two-way communication. There is the communication from the Committee through the Speaker, presumably to the Commissioners of Internal Economy, but there is no communication in return indicating why or in what way their suggestions were not worthy of consideration and could not be dealt with.

I think the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) mentioned that the Auditor General's Report has recommended this kind of structure should be in place to protect the integrity of the House of Commons in the broadest possible sense. I think there is a need for the Government to acknowledge there is value in further consideration of this matter.

I do not anticipate this Bill will pass this afternoon, neither do I propose for one minute that this form is exactly the form. I think you could well appreciate that I might want to put in additional safeguards for a situation such as the one we are in or for future situations. But I think the subject matter is valuable. I think the Government would be prepared to allow it to go to committee for consideration; that would be of long-term value. It would show the Government's attitude is not sort of narrow. I do not think it is in fact. I know I have raised this question on previous occasions privately with people who have a responsibility for things such as this and I did not find their attitude at all negative towards its consideration. So I would like to urge that we accept this as a workable proposition. It is desirable and would have a long-term, beneficial effect both on the operations of the House of Commons and on a day to day basis; and it would also transfer the responsibility for decision-making where it rightfully belongs. It would charge those who are the beneficiaries of the decisions of the Board with the responsibility for making the decisions. It would also charge them with the responsibility for making the decisions on all other matters pertaining directly to the House of Commons as they affect expenditures or fiscal matters.

Mr. Evans: What about the ninth report of the Special Committee?

Mr. Deans: The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) says quietly to me, what about the ninth report of the Special Committee. The problem we have, of course, is that we must deal with what is before us when it is before us. At the moment this Bill is what we are dealing with. I would like to suggest that if the Parliamentary Secretary is prepared to rise and say he has been authorized to give us an assurance that the ninth report of the Committee, together with the eighth, seventh, sixth, fifth and so on, are to be approved—

Mr. Huntington: And the tenth.

Mr. Deans: And the tenth, are to be approved, then the need for further study on this matter may not be evident. But I do not think he is going to do that so I would like to suggest that we support a reference if it were to be allowed. We will certainly support going in the direction that this particular Bill proposes. We would argue, quite strongly, that there is overwhelming evidence to show that what the Hon. Member is requesting is already in place in other parts of the country and works extremely well and to everyone's satisfaction.

• (1700)

Mr. Douglas Fisher (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I will take about two minutes, because I would like to use the Bill to remind the next speaker that I have had a hobbyhorse in front of him and his Management and Members' Services group for some time. I have just had the good news from some of the Chief Electoral Officer's estimates that my riding has 125,000 to 140,000 voters. We have about 200,000 people living in Mississauga North. This is the third time I have stood in the House and requested some fairness from the people at Management and Members' Services and Internal Economy for big ridings like mine.

Population makes work, just as geography makes work. In our regulations, we have made allowances for geography. We have said that there are remote ridings in this country and those ridings receive extra allowances to permit Members of Parliament to do a better job on behalf of their constituents. Since my riding happens to be the biggest in Canada by population, that is unfair treatment of the people in my district.

Of course, every ten years there is a redistribution which adjusts the situation. I have made a proposal to the Commission that it be a little more flexible in between redistribution so that we could have some allowance and help for the individual voters in big ridings. Our proposals was that we use the number of electors on the electoral list to measure the top 10 per cent of ridings across Canada by population. Those people would then have an extra staff member, or perhaps two staff members, to handle personal and business problems.

We petitioned the group which includes the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac (Mr. Vankoughnet). The petition included names from every Party and every region in this country. We requested that there at least be consideration, but we have not even received an answer. I would like to receive a little bit of an answer from the committee so that we could home to the electors in our area and give them an answer as to why we are not getting proper representation for them.

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, my notes are scrambled and slightly rambling. I admit to not having the eloquence of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) or perhaps the passion of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington). However, in the next few minutes I hope to answer some of the comments that have been made and make some points with regard to the Bill, which I support. Because I feel it should be made, I would like to put on the record a motion I had hoped the Hon. Member would make.

Let me begin by saying that the Bill is one that has been supported by most of the members of the Management and Members' Services Committee. In fact, a colleague of mine, the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert), who has been on the Committee almost since its inception, has placed a similar motion before the House at different times in the past. His perhaps went a little further in that he wanted to make all members of the Commission non-Privy Councillors, but that is a very minor distinction.

Second, the Hon. Member for Dauphin-Swan River (Mr. Lewycky), a Member of the New Democratic Party who also sits on the Committee, has indicated his support and, through him, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain also supported the Bill.

The fact is that it is the unwillingness of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), as represented here today by his Parliamentary Secretary, to refer the subject matter of the Bill that exemplifies the problem we have had. There is indeed and has been a stranglehold on the Commissioners of Internal Economy and the operations of the House of Commons by the President of the Privy Council. That is the reason we have not progressed. If the Hon. Member for Mississauga North (Mr. Fisher) will listen, I will tell him that that is the reason we have not had an answer to his question.

The fact is that the Members' Services Committee has produced, on behalf of Members, a number of changes, and many more are coming about. Most of those things concerning which we have petitioned the Commissioners have indeed come to pass.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council will be as aware as anyone in the House of the Office Automation System and Information Services now being prepared and under way. The acronym OASIS is the one that we use for the most part. He is aware that that system is under way. He must also be aware that it would have been in place had it not been for the opposition of the President of the Privy Council. That is the sort of thing that has held us up.

You will find, Mr. Speaker, that in the last two days of February, 1984 there will be tremendous change in the telephone service of the House of Commons. It is something we have been looking for over the years. That could have been in place two years ago had we had an Administrator such as we have now in the person of Mr. Silverman. I would go a step further than my friend, the Hon. Member for Capilano, and add some support to his Chief of Support Services, Mr. Desramaux, because the two of them have worked on behalf of the Members of the House of Commons to provide services well above and beyond those we have had in the past.

While I know the Hon. Member for Beauharnois-Salaberry has some problems there, I suggest to him, through Your Honour, that those problems are not the result of the coming into place of a proper Administrator and that the savings of $22 million in last year's budget alone are not causing the discontent that he finds—"a kettle boiling in risk of explosion", as I believe he said. The discontent that he finds is being fostered because the patronage, the porkbarrelling that was exclusively the premise of the President of the Privy Council to this point, is being slowly eroded away from him.

The Hon. Member for Capilano is absolutely right when he says that the Speaker has done a magnificent job of administration. There are those in the House who may disagree with some of the things that have happened in the House under the Speaker, but when it comes to administration and the implementation of services for the House through an Administrator who is competent, qualified and prepared to show us where the money has been spent, she has been really quite magnificent. The staff that have been put together under the Administrator are all extremely competent. They know what they are doing. They have cut down on expenses. They have actually, for a change, made me proud to be a Member of this House of Commons.

Considering the fact that all of these positions are not porkbarrelled, there will certainly be some discontent. However, I suggest there are further changes needed. Eventually, once the civil service, if you will, of the House of Commons becomes the professional civil service that it should be, then we will begin to see the esprit de corps that I know can and will exist within this House of Commons.

The reason services have been slowed, the reason the promises of a competent Administrator have not yet been fulfilled, the reason that the Report of the Auditor General has not been finally completed—and I admit fully to being a party to the originating of the Report—is that we have been opposed, step by step, by the President of the Privy Council. I want to go on record as saying that I would like to think that we will in fact see those changes come about in the near future.

● (1710)

Before I move the motion I intend to make, may I say one brief word. The Hon. Member for Capilano mentioned briefly that he felt frustrated because he had not been able to achieve those things which he believed we should have been able to achieve in his nine years here. He mentioned the Hon. Robert Andras, in terms that I thought were complimentary, and the former Auditor General.

I suggest to the Hon. Member that while things may be worse now, thanks to him in his position as chairman of the committee and others like him, they are not as bad as they might have been. While it is relative, at least we are slightly better off. When there are people in the House who are prepared to bite the bullet, it seems to me a crying shame that we should not be allowed to have the Member who presented the Bill move that it go to committee. Therefore, I will move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie):

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word that and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-687, an Act to amend the House of Commons Act (internal economy) be not now read a second time but that the order be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services".

That will put the issue before the House. We still have lots of time to deal with it and vote on it. Let us see if the President of the Privy Council or his Parliamentary Secretary has the courage of his convictions to let us act in the way this House should act.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think there was some question at issue with regard to the Bill itself. The Bill put forward a specific configuration for the Commission of Internal Economy.

Mr. McGrath: It is the subject matter.

Mr. Evans: The Hon. Member says that it is the subject matter. The difficulty with referring the subject matter to a committee is that a committee of the House has already dealt with this subject matter and has tabled a report, the ninth report of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedures. It has tabled a report that dealt with this issue and which puts forward a new configuration. It takes into consideration all the issues raised by the House today.

Let me quote from the report that deals with this. Paragraph 5 of the ninth report of the Committee states that:

5. Consequently your Committee proposes that a new Board of Internal Economy be set up, and we have included a draft bill with this Report to effect this change. The draft bill is aimed at modifying the make-up of the Board by enlarging the range of its members to ensure the participation of Members of Parliament who are not Cabinet members. The Board would in the future be composed of the Speaker, the Deputy Speaker, two Ministers of the Crown, the Leader of the Official Opposition or a Member designated by the Leader, and four others: two Members appointed by the government caucus, and two from the opposition caucuses including at least one from the Official Opposition. The draft bill does not specify how the representatives of each caucus are to be chosen. We recognize that this is a question to be dealt with by each caucus independently, but we favour the idea of organizing elections within each caucus for this purpose.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Would the Hon. Member accept a question at this point concerning what he is saying?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Does the Hon. Member accept a question?

Mr. Evans: It is not a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary says that it is not a point of order. This is the usual way of inquiring if the Hon. Member would accept a question. In any case, the Hon. Member has the floor.

Mr. Blaikie: Say yes or no.

Mr. Evans: Obviously the answer is no. I want to finish my remarks. Time is running out.

Mr. Huntington: Why do you not move concurrence in report No. 9?

Mr. Evans: The Hon. Member asks if we are going to concur in the report. It is under discussion right now.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In view of the words and views expressed by the Parliamentary Secretary, I would like to move concurrence in the ninth report of the Special Committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Pursuant to Standing Order 24(2), it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings.

SEARCH AND RESCUE

ADVISABILITY OF INITIATING INDEPENDENT COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

The House resumed from Friday, January 16, 1981, consideration of the motion of Mr. Siddon:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of initiating an independent commission of inquiry to investigate the serious deficiencies within the administration of Search and Rescue services on Canada's West Coast.

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to address this most serious question. It is now approximately one year and seven months since the sinking of the Ocean Ranger with the loss of 84 lives off the south coast of Newfoundland. That sparked an evaluation of our search and rescue capability on the East Coast.

Of course, this motion deals specifically with the West Coast and I congratulate the Hon. Member for Richmond-South Delta (Mr. Siddon) for introducing it. I want to serve notice now that it would be my intention to amend the motion so that the inquiry which is called for under the resolution would include the East Coast as well as the West Coast.

Following the sinking of the Ocean Ranger, we had the release of the report on the evaluation of search and rescue. This was the interdepartmental study that was released approximately a year ago in September of 1982.

It is nothing short of a national disgrace, a blot on the record of this Parliament, that this report has not been the subject of committee study and that the sinking of the Ocean Ranger has yet to be examined by a committee of the House. This is notwithstanding the fact that shortly after that tragedy it was the subject matter of a study by a congressional committee in the U.S. House of Representatives. It was also the subject of a study by the U.S. Coast Guard and I believe there was one other U.S. study into the sinking of the Ocean Ranger that was completed.

● (1720)

That rig was operating under a Canadian licence, it was operating in Canada's economic zone, under Canadian jurisdiction and primarily with a Canadian crew. Yet we have yet to address ourselves to an inquiry into the cause of that disaster and the impact or adequacy of our search and rescue capability in dealing with this kind of a disaster, and this is difficult, if not impossible, to understand.

The purpose of this motion is to point out that Canada's search and rescue on both coasts is in a mess, an incredible mess. The fact the Government has been able to circumvent Parliament by not having this subject before a parliamentary committee speaks to the ingenuity of the management of the business of this House, but it does not get away from the fact that search and rescue is nevertheless in a mess. We will probably be just on the verge of another disaster before we have another evaluation of the capability of our search and rescue.

I know from my own experience as Minister of Fisheries and Oceans that many of our fishermen on the West Coast of Canada have to depend upon the U.S. Coast Guard for protection. That is a disgrace and it should not be allowed to continue. On the East Coast dispersal is such that only a small area is adequately covered. That speaks to the tragedies surrounding the sinking of the Ocean Ranger.

I want to speak for a moment about the report on "Evaluation of Search and Rescue" from the perspective of my own Province and the inadequacy of search and rescue in Newfoundland. First, the report does not concern itself with the loss of life. The statistics in the report relate to incidents. The DND internal report, which objectively ignores the lives lost, explains that such figures would distort their basic statistics and set the fluctuation in activity statistics "wild" by one or two incidents, such as the Ocean Ranger.

In other words, although 83 people were lost in the Ocean Ranger, if you were to use that figure in the statistical compilation it would set the whole thing awry. That is the kind of convoluted logic that we get. It is more than that: the Ocean Ranger was a warning to us all. The sobering conclusion to be drawn from this is that since all major incidents are to be found in and around Newfoundland, they are not to be used statistically to reinforce the argument.

The greater the distance the rescue co-ordinating centre is from the scene of an incident, the longer the decision time and thus the longer the response time. I am making these points as briefly as I can to allow other Hon. Members to address this motion. I make these observations on the evaluation of search and rescue.

Newfoundland, it has to be said, by virtue of the configuration of the Atlantic region which takes in millions of square kilometres, is permanently locked into what has to be an inherent time delay because of the location of the rescue co-ordination centre in Halifax. This lag in response time has been a major factor, or has been referred to in just about every inquiry into every incident on the East Coast, certainly every incident off the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador.

The fixed-wing aircraft based in the Halifax area, which includes P.E.I., are such that they are not suitable to respond to offshore incidents off the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador. This speaks to the desperate need for the location of fixed-wing aircraft in the East Coast area off Newfoundland.

The report also makes reference to the fact that there should be a separate marine rescue co-ordination centre. I have made the point, and I make it here again today, that there should be separate rescue co-ordination centre in St. John's, Newfoundland, to cover the area of the northwest Atlantic to satisfy our obligations under the International Aviation Agreements, whereby we take in a vast area of ocean in terms of international air traffic, and also to protect our mariners, fishermen and offshore workers.

We should have a rescue co-ordination centre in St. John's with decision-making capabilities supported by adequate personnel and fixed-wing aircraft. The Newfoundland question has to be addressed separately. There are no policies, no standards for performance and levels of service, and no objectives for the current search and rescue program. That is a fact; I defy anyone to tell me otherwise. Therefore, there is no method by which to decide or even to measure what is adequate and what is not.

The marine industrial environment has changed over the past decade by the advent of offshore exploration, and this will ultimately increase. It is increasing now. Once the question of jurisdiction has been settled, there will be further increases in activity out there. The massiveness of those offshore structures—and we have the tragic evidence of the Ocean Ranger to stand there as testimony—and their exposure to the ravages of the unique environment of the northwest Atlantic correspondingly increase the chances of still further major marine disasters off the coast of Newfoundland.

I emphasize and parenthesize "the coast of Newfoundland". If you take a look at the offshore activity that is taking place off Nova Scotia, you find there is adequate coverage there provided by the fixed-wing aircraft based in Summerside, P.E.I., in Nova Scotia and by the MoT vessels and fisheries vessels based in Halifax. I do not even have to mention the fishing grounds of the northwest Atlantic, the Hamilton Banks, the northern fishing grounds which are now used by our fishermen on a year round basis and, of course, the area of the Banks of Newfoundland where we have thousands of our fishermen daily exposed, especially from now until June of next year, to the extreme hazards of a very hostile environment.

In order to arrive at a reasonable and realistic conclusion on the adequacy and deployment of search and rescue resources in Newfoundland, certain factors must be considered. We are talking about adequacy because we have an internal report, additional to "An Evaluation of Search and Rescue", commissioned by a Minister of National Defence and released by the Minister which shows there are adequate resources, that there is adequate deployment. I am making the point that the resources are far from adequate and the deployment is most inadequate.

Standards will have to be developed so that there will be similar rules applicable throughout the region. Those standards must be based on all pertinent factors, such as distances to be covered, miles of coastline, marine activity, environmental factors, capability of SAR vehicles, time factors in response, causes of delays and so on.

Further, independent statistics must be developed that take into account the reason for disparity in incident rate at different levels of SAR service availability, preparedness of mariners and boaters for the missions undertaken, the incidence of self-help and mutual assistance and the recording and reporting thereof, the number of lives lost per incident and in total. I repeat, the number of lives lost per incident and in total.

A value must be placed on the different activities, that is, commercial, petroleum exploration and production activity, fishing, and pleasure and priorities assigned. Obviously, if we have an oil rig in trouble off the coast of Newfoundland, Labrador or Nova Scotia with 80 to 100 men on board, that has to receive much higher priority than a pleasure boat which has probably run afoul of weather and where there is no immediate threat to life.

In my opinion, only a fact-finding body could attempt to find answers to some of the questions I have tried to place on the record. That is why I am pleased and welcome the opportunity to stand and speak in support of the motion put foward by my hon. colleague. The first step for the long term is to establish a basis based on a solid statistical and practical background.

In the short run, the existing service resources should be deployed on the basis of a set of common factors so that all may have equal access and we can eliminate once and for all this often tragic but certainly regrettable time lag.

I have risen in this House time and time again after every accident off our coast to speak to the inadequacy of search and rescue in our country. We are one of the major, if not the major, fishing nations of the world. Our coastline touches three oceans. Apart altogether from our sovereignty, it strikes me as passing strange, and I certainly find it difficult to understand, why our search and rescue on our East and West Coasts is so woefully inadequate. I do not in any way reflect on the capability of our search and rescue personnel, both in the Canadian Coast Guard and in the Armed Forces. They are extremely dedicated people working under very difficult circumstances without adequate equipment. That is what it is all about.

Why is there not adequate equipment Why must they continue to operate under difficult and almost impossible circumstances? Why can there not be adequate equipment deployed on both coasts? Why should the fishermen off the Queen Charlotte Islands have to depend upon the U.S. Coast Guard for their protection?

As Members of Parliament, the representatives of the taxpayers of this country, we are entitled to an answer to that question. Why can we not have fixed-wing aircraft support in Newfoundland to protect our offshore oil workers and fishermen? It was not until the sinking of the Ocean Ranger that the three search and rescue helicopters now stationed in Gander were equipped with all-weather radar, and that was in response to another tragedy. Because they were not so equipped, it affected their ability to respond to the Ocean

Ranger disaster. It is possible that lives could have, I do not say would have, been saved. That will have to await the report of the Royal Commission into the sinking of the Ocean Ranger. I understand it will issue a report shortly on the adequacy of search and rescue as it impacts on that particular tragedy.

I make the case to the House that it is about time the Government dealt with this and not wait until there is another tragedy. Why should we have to wait for another tragedy? Why should we wait for more lives to be lost to stand in our place in this House and raise these questions with the Government?

If we build a subdivision in one of our cities, the first thing we do is ensure that there is adequate fire protection. So we build a fire station. We make sure there is access to hospitals and that there is adequate ambulance service. We have not taken into account what is happening on our East Coast in terms of offshore drilling and exploration. We have not made provision to deal with that new fact of life, not to mention our ability to be able to protect our mariners and fishermen. It is in the interest of saving lives that I once again make the case and support the position put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Richmond-South Delta.

I understand the motion that I was going to move has already been moved by the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons). In any event, if it is in order, I would move:

That all the words after the word "Canada's" be struck out and the following added thereto:

"East and West Coasts".

I presume that motion would be seconded by the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's, who is now rising in his place.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It is moved by Mr. McGrath, seconded by Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich):

That all the words after the word "Canada's" be struck out and the following added thereto:

"East and West Coasts".

Hon. Roger Simmons (Burin-St. George's): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words on the motion, and in particular on the amendment. I am surprised that my friend from St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) felt it necessary to move the amendment, given his concluding remarks in which he said that he understands that very soon the Royal Commission on the Ocean Ranger tragedy will be addressing itself in an interim statement to the very issue that he would embody in his amendment.

I am a firm believer that if a study can achieve some worth-while result, we ought to have it. If a study can answer some questions that are not being addressed elsewhere, we ought to have it. The House will agree that the most expensive, and hopefully the most thorough, inquiry into a marine disaster is now under way. It is being funded jointly by the Government of Canada and the Government of the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador. I refer, of course, to the Ocean Ranger inquiry. As the Hon. Member just pointed out, that inquiry will soon address the very matter that he seeks to have embodied in the resolution. The issue for which he shows some concern is already being addressed in a fairly expeditious manner, I would hope, to the point that he can inform the House that we are about to hear the results of it in so far as search and rescue adequacy on the East Coast is concerned. After we hear that, if he has some further concerns, let him come back to the House and we can perhaps look at the question at that time.

The motion addresses itself to alleged deficiencies in search and rescue on the West Coast of Canada. While my friend from St. John's East did not spend much time addressing himself to that part of the motion, the rules of the House require that we do that, at least in part. At the same time, I would like the same liberty that he exercised to say something about East Coast search and rescue.

The search and rescue program is and has to be of vital importance because, in the final analysis, search and rescue is concerned with the saving of lives. This Government has long been committed to making sure that the Canadian search and rescue program meets that objective so far as is humanly and reasonably possible. The nature of this undertaking is such that it is always easy to point the finger. It is always easy to talk about what might have been, what could have been done that was not done, how things could have been different if there was a different arrangement for search and rescue capability at any time.

The Hon. Member for St. John's East knows, as all Members of this House know, that the Ocean Ranger tragedy is a subject which is very close to the hearts and minds of every Newfoundlander, indeed every Canadian who is aware of the impact of that tragedy. Because the Hon. Member for St. John's East is so aware of it, he ought to exercise all the more care when talking about that tragedy. It is all very well to refer to that tragedy when making a point as long as in the process we do not misuse that tragedy or misrepresent our point. He knows full well, Mr. Speaker, that we do not need to wait for an Ocean Ranger inquiry. He knows full well that we do not need any new inquiries to tell us what the awful result would have been on that night a year or two ago. He knows full well that if the entire search and rescue capability of St. John's and St. John's alone, the nearest point of land to the site of that terrible tragedy, were mustered that night, the result could not and would not have been any less tragic.

● (1740)

Mr. McGrath: That's not true and you know it. Helicopters need to operate from St. John's and not Gander. There are no helicopters in St. John's and I am surprised at your ignorance of the facts. Tell the truth for once.

An Hon. Member: You shouldn't be surprised at that.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. McGrath: You should know all the facts about that because it is your constituency.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, order.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for St. John's East is justifiably excited about this particular issue. However, that should not mean and must not mean that I will feel obligated to give the House his version of the facts. The facts are tragic enough without our having to bicker about them.

For the deliberation of the House, Mr. Speaker, let me present a few facts which relate to the hon. gentleman from St. John's East, since he wants to be the focus of the debate. He is known by every living soul in Newfoundland. There can be no person in Newfoundland who does not know exactly where the Hon. Member for St. John's East stands on search and rescue. To his credit, every living Newfoundlander knows where he stand on this subject. To their credit as Newfoundlanders, they also know where he stood when he was in a position to do something about it. That is the acid test, Mr. Speaker. The test is not how loudly he can shout, how incriminating he can become, how much he can impute the other fellow's motives and alleged ignorance of the facts, but it is what he does about the facts when he, the Hon. Member for St. John's East, is in a position to do something about them.

When would he have been in a position to do something about those facts, Mr. Speaker? How about the period from June, 1979 to March, 1980, when he was a member of the Cabinet of the Government of Canada? During that period, he never lifted one finger to improve the search and rescue capability on the East Coast of Canada. He talked long and hard. He throws allegations across the House. He stands with an attitude that is holier than thou. But given nine months to do something about the problem, he was too busy doing other things.

Mr. Taylor: You've had ten long years.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Simmons: Oh, they do not like that! I have upset them.

Mr. Taylor: You've had ten years, what have you done?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Does the Hon. Member rise on a point of order?

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, may I rise on a point of order to correct the record? The Hon. Member is misleading the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I would invite Hon. Members first to observe the normal rules of debate, which require as a matter of courtesy that the Member who has the floor be allowed to speak uninterrupted. I appreciate that perhaps the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) may want to seek redress as a consequence of certain remarks made by the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons), but that could well fall under the category of debate. In any case, I will give the Hon. Member the benefit of the doubt and hear him out for a moment or two.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman was not in the Cabinet long enough to determine what the facts were. He was only there for ten days.

During our brief period in office, we commissioned an interdepartmental study into certain—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, order. That is debate. The Hon. Member for St. John's East is an experienced Member of Parliament and I invite him to co-operate with the Chair.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I did not particularly want to raise the blood pressure of Hon. Members of the Conservative Party this late in the day. I just wanted to present to the House some facts. They may not be facts that are pleasant to the ears of the Hon. Member for St. John's East, but as he has confirmed himself in the last few moments, they are facts. His response to my comment is that they did another study. His response is to get abusive and personal.

An Hon. Member: Oh, listen to that.

Mr. Simmons: I will be the first to admit to the Chamber that I now have something in common with the Hon. Member for St. John's East and with several other Members on his side of the House. I admit, as he reminds me, that I was not in Cabinet for a very long time. I admit that I have something in common with Tories in the country because we all went through Cabinet on a conveyor belt. I admit that, but that does not allow him the privilege of hiding behind his short time in Cabinet. His time in Cabinet was not ten days, it was ten months.

Mr. Taylor: Yours was ten years.

Mr. Simmons: What does he do? He waves a report of another interdepartmental study.

Mr. Taylor: You've been there for years.

Mr. Simmons: The Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) has come briefly awake, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Taylor: Tell us what you've done in ten years.

Mr. McGrath: What have you done since 1979? You have been in the House since 1979. What have you done? Tell us what the Government has done since 1979 to improve search and rescue in Newfoundland? Tell us.

An Hon. Member: Nothing. They are incapable of doing anything.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Chair seeks the co-operation of all Hon. Members to respect the right of the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's.

An Hon. Member: He is not even sitting down properly.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Hon. Members should not interrupt the Chair. I am trying to get the House to proceed in an orderly fashion with debate. Hon. Members may agree or disagree with what is being said, but traditionally we must respect the Hon. Member's right to submit an opinion to the House. He was recognized to make a speech and I invite him to continue.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, as I was saying a moment ago, during the nine or ten months the Tories were in office, despite their pontifications about what needs to be done for search and rescue, they did not use that golden opportunity to put their money where their mouths were. They did nothing. They did absolutely big, fat zero.

The Hon. Member for St. John's East has just indicated that in making this statement I am misleading the House. I challenge him to demonstrate how that is true. I challenge him to tell the House and the people of Newfoundland, for whom he pontificates so loudly about search and rescue, what he did when he had a chance to do something about it. I know the answer to that question but it is best coming from him because he is an honest man. He will tell the truth if put to the test. Let him tell the people of Newfoundland what he did. If he tells them what he did and documents the facts, and if I have in any respect misled the House, I shall be the first to correct the record, Mr. Speaker. The issue is—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, on the West Coast at least, search and rescue is in the hands of the Department of National Defence.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I must invite the Hon. Member to state his point of order. He is indulging in debate at this stage.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): I was stating a fact.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. This is beginning to be an abuse of the rules. Hon. Members should not rise on points of order to participate directly in debate. Surely if they have not already spoken, their turn will come eventually, I trust.

Again, it is incumbent on the Chair to protect the right of the Hon. Member who was recognized to make a speech. I say that it is incumbent on the Chair to allow him to proceed and to make sure that the proper rules of debate are respected. He should not be interrupted, as is very clearly indicated by the Standing Orders.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, the resolution would call for another study. If the Hon. Member for St. John's East has in his possession a study that was done two or three years ago, why is he not advocating some of the solutions presented in that particular study? Surely he has found something. Surely the Cross report found something. Surely the Ocean Ranger inquiry will find something. Do we need another study? If we believe the drafter of this resolution, he wants a study for the West Coast and, I presume, another for the East Coast and perhaps another for the Arctic. We do not need more studies, Mr. Speaker. We need a little dialogue around here.

• (1750)

In the last few minutes we have demonstrated that none is so deaf as those who will not hear. On the benches opposite the whole game in the last few minutes, on a quiet Wednesday afternoon, is to interrupt and prevent a Member of the House from saying what needs to be said in the debate.

Mr. Taylor: Don't start crying.

Mr. Simmons: I do not expect the Hon. Member for Bow River to get excited about search and rescue, Mr. Speaker. I do not believe he can get excited about many things.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, would the Hon. Member accept a question?

Mr. Simmons: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McGrath: The Hon. Member is determined to deal with the past. Perhaps as spokesman for the Government he can explain to the House why it has refused to accept the recommendations of the Mahoney inquiry commissioned by the Government into the sinking of the Arctic Explorer. That report called for adequate deployment, for fixed-wing aircraft, and it made a number of recommendations which have been ignored. Perhaps the Hon. Member would address that question.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, as recently as last Spring when the then Minister of National Defence was in St. John's, he announced a new deployment and there have been a number of new deployments since that particular report. The capability available to the Government through DOT and DND is constantly being redeployed. That is not to say that the redeployment, however adequate or brilliant, will ever have the approbation of the Hon. Member for St. John's East, because once he gives that, he removes the whole basis of his argument. He removes his entire platform. He has the village reputation of a crusader—not a doer, Mr. Speaker.

I know he does not want to hear about the past, even the recent past. I have challenged him and I do so again, now that I have answered his question. Again I ask him where the proof is that the Government of which he was a senior and prominent member did anything to address the very concerns he now raises and has raised for a number of years? That is the acid test.

On a continuing basis the Government has deployed and redeployed. If the Hon. Member is asking whether the system is perfect, the answer is no, it is not perfect. No matter what the resources or how many dollars are applied to this particular activity, there will always be room enough to point the finger. This motion is another finger pointing exercise. As soon as a Member on this side of the House tries to put the other side of the argument, Hon. Members opposite do not want to hear.

Is it a perfect system? No, it is not. Is there a need for a study? No, there is no need for another study. We have studies coming out of our ears. What we need is a little less rhetoric, a little less pointing of the finger and cheap politics, a little less undermining, a little less bad mouthing of the men and women involved in search and rescue in the country. They get a raw deal from people who continually shout that everything is wrong. They get a raw deal from people who keep saying that everything is bad. Those people are doing a very good job and if they had more resources they would do a better job. No one argues that point.

I suppose if we had an unlimited number of helicopters in every community, things would be better. There are 135 communities in my riding and I am sure every one of them can see the need for one place in or near that particular community. This whole thing could be carried to the ridiculous, as I have done in the last few moments, in order to make a point.

Mr. McGrath: You are the disgrace.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, if the yardstick for my disgrace is that I take a position different from that taken by the Hon. Member for St. John's East on search and rescue, I am glad to be the disgrace.

Mr. McGrath: You are when you are the only Newfoundlander to—

Mr. Simmons: The Hon. Member says I am the only Newfoundlander, etc. I will give him a unique category. He is the only Newfoundlander who went into a Cabinet without lifting a finger on an issue which he says is important, and that is the issue of search and rescue. He never lifted his finger for nine or ten months. That is the kind of action we got from the man who now would be the solver of all problems. Search and rescue needs less rhetoric and a little more support for what is a good system and would be a better system if it were not continually undermined by people like the Hon. Member for St. John's East.

Mr. Taylor: Look who is talking.

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As the mover of the main motion I should like to ask the indulgence of Hon. Members present to extend the sitting until 6.15 p.m. so that the full hour might be accorded to this important debate and a more positive light might be placed upon it than has been the case by the speaker who just resumed his seat.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Richmond-South Delta (Mr. Siddon). Is there consent to that proposal?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this motion although I regret the tone of debate in the last half hour with name calling on both sides of the House rather than dealing with the very serious issue. The motion that stands in the name of the Member for Richmond-South Delta calls for an independent commission to inquire into the whole question of search and rescue on Canada's West Coast. Incidentally, I support the amendment that would extend this to Canada's East Coast. We have to take the broad view of this subject.

There are certainly some very serious problems on the East Coast. In this Party we recognize that it is a difficult coast to monitor. It has a sparse population in some areas, the costs are high, but there have been some very tragic losses of life on that coast. It is the responsibility of the Government to provide adequate search and rescue facilities there.

Another interdepartmental study would do nothing to help deal with the many problems associated with search and rescue on the coast. An independent commission with members who would look at the whole context of search and rescue—for example, the use of volunteers, the need for helicopters, the kind of vessels that could service the area—all this would be helpful, rather than people who are concerned with protecting their departments.

The motion came up as a result of the tragic accident that occurred on Christmas Day of 1979 when 30 crewmen lost their lives in the sinking of the Lee Wang Zin off the northern coast of British Columbia. Sometimes it takes a major accident like that to arouse the public and bring its attention to what is really happening. This situation has been raised time and again in the House. While a tragedy the scope of the Lee Wang Zin has not been repeated on the West Coast in the last four years, it has been on the East Coast so the problem is a continuing one. In any given year there are dozens of smaller sinkings and smaller incidents. It has been estimated that an average of 50 lives are lost per year in incidents off our coasts.

As a United Church minister, it has been my responsibility at different times in the past to deal with the families of some of the people who lost their lives. It is a difficult task at best but how much more difficult and tragic it is when the situation could have been prevented had proper search and rescue facilities been in place and proper procedures followed. This, Mr. Speaker, is why we urge that this motion be adopted and a commission appointed.

We have raised this issue a number of times but progress is very slow. It seems that the Government has trouble in responding to distress calls along the Pacific Coast. When comparing the facilities and the equipment which are available to the Pacific Coast with that which is available to the East Coast, we find that in terms of the miles of coast which have to be covered and the number of incidents, we are far behind in the apportionment of money and resources.

The Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) has raised the problem of the type-400 search and rescue vessels which were recently deployed on the West Coast. They had to be taken out of service, Mr. Speaker, because it was found that the welding was defective. Those vessels are now back in service. However, a letter from the former Minister of Transport to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Skeena, pointed out that it has been demonstrated that after two years in operation:

—the Type 400 vessel has some shortcomings for operations in the worst conditions encountered at certain times of the year in northern British Columbia waters. Therefore, to provide effective SAR coverage in the areas of Hecate Strait, Queen Charlotte Sound and Dixon Entrance, where regional SAR authorities had originally planned Type 400 vessels, the CCG is investigating other options.

The Canadian Coast Guard are investigating other options, but in the meantime, Mr. Speaker, we have a continuing situation where human lives are at risk.

The Hon. Member for Skeena has repeatedly urged that there should be a properly equipped helicopter stationed either on the Queen Charlotte Island of Masset or in Prince Rupert. However, this is not a request which the Minister has seen fit to accept. The Government promised two more search and rescue vessels earlier this year, one for Bella Bella and one for Prince Rupert. The money has been made available by the Treasury Board. But it is not just money which has to be voted for the acquisition of these boats; the boats have to be put in place.

There is a need for multi-tasking of all Government vessels. Certainly, it is required by law that all Government vessels, and indeed all vessels on the coast, should respond to a distress call. However, Government vessels are not all properly equipped or co-ordinated to take part in such services. Studies have repeatedly pinpointed the lengthy delays in alerting search and rescue systems after the initial notification has gone in.

This underlines the continuing need for better co-ordination of the facilities which we already have. It underlines the need for greater use of volunteers. One very simple suggestion which has been made is that volunteers should have paging devices issued to them so that if there were an incident for which they were to be called out, it would be easy to contact them.

The Canadian Marine Rescue Auxiliary, the CMRA, has been formed recently, but it has not been properly utilized. It has been utilized in a way which has, in fact, left many of the smaller lifeboat societies out in the cold. This is really ignoring the very important resource of volunteers. If there is going to be an adequate search and rescue component on the West Coast of Canada, we must use volunteers. The very length of the coast and the sparseness of the population in some areas require that we use adequately trained volunteers, but we have not done that. It is almost as though volunteers are looked upon as somehow getting in the way of the professionals.

The overview presented by the British Columbia Lifeboat Society has a description of the volunteer, and I would like to read it into the record because I think it accurately describes the kind of person these volunteers are and their dedication:

He typically expends a considerable amount of his available resources, be it time, vessel and equipment or money on his avocation—frequently equipping his vessel in a manner improving efficiency in handling Search and Rescue tasks. Small vessel handling skills and knowledge of local marine conditions have been generally developed over a long period of time, he is most frequently a respected individual in his chosen vocation or profession. These are resources that cannot be purchased much less contracted.

He gives much, asks little—in general—deems to have received less from the authorities.

So I urge there be greater attention paid to the whole question of volunteers.

Another area I think the Commission should be directing more attention to is that of prevention. This is especially important in the southern part of the coast, the part I represent, including the Gulf Islands where there is increasing use of pleasure boats. I believe it should be mandatory to require licensing not only of the vessels but of the operators, especially smaller vessels, because there is nothing to prevent someone from going out and buying a boat, putting a high-powered motor on it and go roaring off into the ocean without any training whatsoever. A test or examination should be required for vessel operators similar to that which we require for people who are going to drive automobiles. We should ensure vessel operators are properly equipped with the knowledge and training which will enable them to provide for their own safety and also be of some use in the event another boat gets into difficulty.

Another preventive measure I strongly advocate is that Coast Guard officials be given the power to terminate voyages which in their opinion are manifestly unsafe. I refer, for example, to situations where the people in the boat have been drinking to the extent they are no longer capable of safely handling a boat. We are able to do that with automobiles but Coast Guard officials do not have that power, only the RCMP has.

I know there are other people who wish to take part in this debate so I will conclude simply by emphasizing that we support the motion. We want to see some positive improvements made in search and rescue. We believe one way to do that would be an independent inquiry which can look into all facets of search and rescue on both Canadian coasts and come up with recommendations that a Government which has the will can implement.

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I must first indicate my concern and displeasure at the approach and direction this debate has taken. The motion expressly indicated the West Coast and the problems facing search and rescue. I, through the Department, have taken time to take that concern to heart and have pointed out exactly what has been accomplished since the issuing of the Cross Report.

I think there has been so much rhetoric as to make it impossible to get that information across in the time allotted. So rather than going over the steps taken, some of which have been brought forward by the previous speaker, I will quickly indicate what has happened and what is being done in this particular field.

First of all, the Cross Report was tabled in the House of Commons in December, 1982. Since then, the Cabinet decision called for a new management system, the goal of which was to establish more clearly the fine line of responsibility for policy making, planning, programming, monitoring and review of search and rescue. The line of responsibility would run from the lead Minister, the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Blais), through a single chairman of the interdepartmental committee supported by an independent secretariat to the line departments.

● (1810)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I beg the indulgence of the Parliamentary Secretary. There was a mixup on the Chair's part as to who the next speaker should be. The Chair recognized the Parliamentary Secretary but at the same time the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) rose. The Chair should have recognized, in all fairness in terms of the usual rotation of speakers in the House, the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Having recognized the Hon. Member, I cannot unrecognize him strictly speaking, at this time. I would ask him, though, without prejudicing his right to speak further in the debate, if he would now cede to the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Mr. Hudecki: I will follow your directions, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair is not actually directing the Hon. Member. I am explaining the situation the Chair has put itself into, not in a deliberate way, I suppose, but I appreciate the Hon. Member's co-operation and the Hon. Member reserves his right to speak after the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich if he so wishes.

Mr. Hudecki: I feel I should reserve the right to speak again after the Hon. Member has completed his remarks.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Such should be clearly understood. I now recognize the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary.

I will draw to your attention. Mr. Speaker, the importance of this matter as far as the West Coast is concerned in terms of numbers. However, in a matter of this importance, it is vital that there be advance notice of the appearance on the Order Paper of motions of this sort. In fact, concerning Private Members' days, I know the Table is having trouble lining people up two or three days in advance. However, last night at six o'clock, the Hon. Member for Richmond-South Delta (Mr. Siddon) was informed that his motion would be on for debate today. A motion of such importance deserves more notice than this. There is a great deal of preparation involved. There is statistical preparation. I plead with the Chair and the Table to twist arms a little more strongly and see that things are organized on Monday so that we know, well in advance, that a certain motion is coming forward.

I did mention to Your Honour that I would indicate the importance of the motion in statistical terms. It has been estimated that something of the order of 200,000 pleasures boats sail waters on the West Coast and that 5,000 to 6,000 commercial fishermen also work those waters. I would say that we are roughly talking somewhere in the order of half a million people whose lives are at the whim of the elements. For that reason, it is vitally important that we have an improved system of search and rescue on the West and East Coasts.

I am delighted that we had this broadening of the motion because it gives us an opportunity to insist that this study be carried out on both coasts. Do I have until 6.15 or 6.17, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I suppose the intent was to provide for the whole hour. The Hon. Member for Richmond-South Delta (Mr. Siddon) did refer, in his motion, to 6.15. I take it that he meant 6.17 p.m., which would take us to the full hour.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): That gives me two minutes to add a few comments. We have already had the tragedy of the Ocean Ranger brought to our attention. We have also heard mention of the Christmas tragedy of the Lee Wang Zin. While the Prinzendam was a tragedy in terms of a vessel, it was happily not a tragedy in terms of human lives. In that instance, however, we had to rely on the U.S. Coast Guard, and that is unfortunate.

This highlights in a manner which we apparently are unable to do in a debate in the House the importance of a broadened search and rescue system on both coasts. That being the case, along with the one report we have seen and the recommendations that it made, I think it is worth mentioning that there were something in the order of 53 recommendations put forward by the evaluation team. It indicated for example, that faster response comes in more often than not. We talked about the 32 hours before anyone responded to the tragedy of the Taiwanese vessel, the Lee Wang Zin.

Our time has almost expired and therefore I move:

That the question be now put.

Mr. Hudecki: I was given assurance that I could speak.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair is prepared to recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary but our time has now expired. Therefore this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at eleven o'clock a.m.

At 6.17 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Tuesday, October 11, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 34 (Mr. Benjamin).

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak to Motion No. 34 today, a motion which, as Hon. Members know, provides for the elimination of Subclause (4) of Clause 17. This subclause in its present form provides that the Administrator:

—may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

I am pleased to speak to the amendment put forward by this Party, because unless the amendment is passed by this House, the economic, social and cultural effects will be devastating. I am speaking not only about farmers facing the spectre of widespread branch line abandonment, the Wheat Pools facing elevator abandonment and the heavy capital costs associated with the development of inland terminals, but also the effects we can expect on the social fabric of this country as a whole through the undermining of rural communities and the co-operative system.

Thus, I would submit that Clause 17(4) is not "in the best interests of the grain producers". It is really the opening of a back door branch line abandonment policy, despite the Government's avowed commitment to the upgrading of branch lines. The move toward trucking an increased percentage of grain now served by rail through, in many cases, branch lines threatens the viability of small communities, many of which will be crippled by the closure of these lines. This is a phenomenon we have witnessed all too often in the past, as many of my colleagues have attested. As well, the resulting longer hauls and the increased expenditures for producers, while leading to a reduction of costs to the railways, will result in a higher total system cost to the producers.

The proposal of the Government touches upon the whole system of gathering, marketing and transporting Canadian grain. First, the decision with respect to the use of trucks and the concomitant rail line abandonment is centralized in the hands of the Administrator. One must question to what degree the Administrator's decisions will be based on very narrowly defined economic criteria and the "fudged" facts put forth too often by the railroads, and not on full economic and social impact studies.

My colleagues have also identified the effect which the closing of branch lines will have on small businesses and rural communities. No less important than the economic impact is the social impact on the network of small and vibrant farming communities which are often held together by rail service and wheat co-operatives. These are a legacy of our past and an important part of our future Canadian mosaic, one we cannot destroy to help the railroads simply gain more money and provide less service.

As well, I wonder if the Administrator, in taking the decision to move to trucks, will consider the very important negative impact such a move will have on the consequent financial burden to municipalities and provincial governments. Of course, the burden of keeping our railways in good condition is a federal one. The burden of maintaining road services is a provincial or municipal one. Under the system proposed by the Government, in which the heavy, bulky agricultural products of concern to us here are moved by large trucks, the maintenance costs will be tremendous. Is the Government, then, proposing to keep up the roads which will be overused as a result of its policies? Of course not. The burden of paying for the trucking of grain products will be shifted to the taxpayers of the Provinces involved, increasing the tax burden on the producers. I would submit that this is not "in the best interests of the grain producers".

There is nothing contained in the Bill to redress this problem. Cost transfers, which are provided by this clause, do nothing to reduce the total system costs. This represents simply another form of cost transfers, not cost savings.

It is primarily for these reasons, and for many of the reasons which my colleagues have given throughout the course of debate on our motion, that I would urge all Members of the House to pass Motion No. 34.

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to be able to join with my colleagues this morning in supporting Motion No. 34, put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), because I believe that in this motion we have come to terms with the very important social reality which could have great influence in the Province in which I live. Transportation has been the backbone of life in Saskatchewan since I was a child, and will continue to be so I am sure. The distances one must travel in Saskatchewan are unique. The pioneers who came to the country realized that unless there was an adequate transportation system put in place, they could not continue to exist there.

● (1115)

Today we are discussing a Bill dealing with the essence of that lifestyle which was built on the growing and transportation of grain. The motion we are advancing ensures that truckers will not be subsidized for carrying grain in areas where there is existing railroad transportation. To my mind that has a very reasonable ring to it. The transportation system in western Canada is what you might call the arteries of the economic life of western Canada. This motion is attempting to sustain that economic life system.

If a person has had an opportunity to visit Europe or other countries, he will find there are different ways to move things, naturally. The easiest way to move large-scale products like grain or ore is by water. Unfortunately, Saskatchewan does not have that system.

Mr. Malone: Saskatchewan canal.

Mr. Ogle: My colleague from Alberta suggests we build a Saskatchewan canal. I think that would only be an Alberta idea; we could not possibly do that in Saskatchewan. However, the most economic way of moving goods is by water through canals and rivers.

The second most economical way to move large quantities of goods is by rail; there is no question about that. If a person has had the opportunity to visit Europe, he will see that the Europeans have engineered their rivers and canals. Indeed, they have set up a network in almost the whole of Europe in which water is the major transportation mode. However, in parallel to that, double-railed all the time, they have the rail transportation system. Economically that is the simplest way to move heavy, bulky products like grain or ore, plus passengers or anything else which has to be moved in a particular direction at a particular time. They have a trucking system but that is at the bottom; it is not the lifeblood of the whole system. I think in North America there has always been a very strong automotive lobby which has pushed the production of automobiles and trucks out of proportion to their value in the long run. That lobby has forced many places to build road systems to carry that traffic.

However, Mr. Speaker, this motion simply says that we do not want a subsidy to be paid to truckers for trucking grain in areas where there is an existing rail line. We feel, and I think rightly believe, that will bring about the abandonment of particular rail lines. When that happens—and I can use many examples from Saskatchewan, when railroad lines are abandoned and track is pulled out—the lives of the people who live along that particular area are changed. They are changed in a way which causes them to abandon their homes. It means the abandonment of schools and social structures that are part and parcel of the province from which I come.

Also, I would like clearly to mark out that the reason we are proposing the motion is that we are basically thinking of the farmer, the person who is at the bottom, for whom the whole structure has been set up. The farmer who is at the bottom will be the last one to be protected in the Bill. What we are requesting is that the farmer be the first one to be looked after in the Bill, because the trucking system will not be set up to help the farmer. As we know now, if the motion is not carried, most of the trucking firms that will get the work will be the big trucking companies, many times also operated by the railroad. Therefore, a subsidy would be going to those very routes that would be least interested in keeping the railroad in that particular place.

I call upon my colleagues in the House and all those who are concerned with the welfare of the western Canadian farmer in the rural areas of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba to consider seriously what we are proposing here, and to use the power of Parliament to carry the motion that we have proposed to ensure that the rail lines will not be abandoned because of something that is legislated in the House.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, like my colleagues, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on Motion No. 34, which would eliminate Subclause (4) of Clause 17. Subclause (4) allows the Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, to enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

It is the contention of our Party that such agreements would never be in the best interests of the grain producers and certainly would not be in the best interests of the many communities across the Prairies, because, in effect, Subclause (4) would facilitate branch line abandonment on the Prairies. This would have disastrous effects on a great many Prairie communities.

I think all Hon. Members in the House are aware that branch line abandonment is not a new phenomenon. It is something that the railways have been attempting for years, something at which they have been disastrously successful. Branch line abandonment is not a phenomenon that is limited to the Prairies. In the last two years, in my own riding on Vancouver Island, there have been attempts by both Canadian National and Canadian Pacific to abandon branch lines to Lake Cowichan. In the submissions that I have made at different times to try to prevent such abandonment, I have pointed out the effects that this would have on our communities.

The increased movement of lumber by truck would mean that already crowded highways would be further crowded and the cost of highway building would be shifted directly on to the taxpayers of British Columbia. The Social Credit Government of British Columbia has never done a tremendously good job of providing good highways for the people of Lake Cowichan anyhow.

There would be an increased use of energy. I am not sure about the shipment of grain, but for shipping lumber, approximately four times as much energy is required to ship lumber by truck as to ship by train. By putting more traffic, especially heavy truck traffic, on already crowded highways, we would be increasing the danger of accidents. I know the difficulty of trying to drive on some of those highways on Vancouver Island with some of those large, articulated trailer trucks, with both lumber and logs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I think the Hon. Member is straying somewhat from the purpose of the amendment now before the House. The Bill, I remind him, deals basically with the transport of grain. He is now speaking of lumber on Vancouver Island. I would invite him to come back to the amendment.

Mr. Manly: I am very pleased to come back to the amendment, Mr. Speaker, but I was trying to use the situation on Vancouver Island as an illustration of the fact that branch line abandonment all across Canada does have a disastrous effect upon communities. In fact, when we consider the social, environmental and the total economic costs, it really argues against abandonment. Clause 17(4) is basically a move to facilitate branch line abandonment. While it talks about being "in the best interests of the grain producers", it is in fact not.

• (1125)

In returning to the point, I would like to emphasize that, if anything, the situation is more critical for communities on the Prairies than it is even in my own riding. I suggest that it is clauses such as this which make people on the Prairies very suspicious about the intent of the entire Bill to change the basic Crow structure. They see this Bill as an attempt to destroy the infrastructure which has been built up over the years, including not only the branch lines but the local elevators that will be left unserviced by those branch lines as trucks are used to haul grain directly to the larger inland terminals. Branch line abandonment would be served by giving subsidies to trucking so that they would be able to syphon off increased volumes of grain hauling. The trucking firms which would get the subsidy would obtain more of this business and that, in turn, would result in lesser use of the branch lines, which would ultimately lead to the promotion of the argument by the railways that the branch lines themselves were not successful.

Therefore it is on that basis that we in our Party are very concerned that Motion No. 34 to withdraw Clause 17(4) be accepted and that the Government commit itself to maintain the infrastructure that is needed on the Canadian Prairies so that those communities, those farms and services, will continue.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to enter into the debate on our motion which I believe all Members of the House should support if they closely review the economics of our reasoning. Motion No. 34 specifically seeks to strike from the Bill Clause 17(4), which is a provision to facilitate branch line abandonment, the closing of country elevators and the development of a system of inland terminals through a diversion of a portion of funds available for transportation subsidies to trucking.

I understand that this measure evolved from the proposals put forward by the Tory Transport critic, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), in some ways supported by the Deputy Minister of Transport, to get back in the Bill a means of providing subsidies to the various trucking companies that would ordinarily be going to the railways.

I believe that most people who have followed the debate closely know that the general impact of the Crow changes on the Prairies will mean a loss of 30,000 or 40,000 of the smaller rural farms, particularly in northern and more rural areas. In some cases, these areas are not even served by branch lines but are basically being served presently by some form of trucking into the rural elevators, on to the branch lines and on into the central pools to the eventual destination of Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Churchill or the Lakehead.

I believe all Members need to be reminded from time to time of what is happening in terms of the consolidation of certain trucking interests who are very clearly interested in seeing this kind of Crow Bill go through unchanged. Clearly, they would not want to see the NDP amendment accepted and would prefer to see the special deal that has been made between the Tories and the Liberals go through.

I believe it is worth reflecting on the announcement which was made in March of this year and was noted in a story by Albert Sigurdson in a story in The Globe and Mail. The headline was "Trucking: CN Now Runs the Nation's Biggest Trucking Network". All that delayed CN from getting that trucking network up to that point was obtaining "the missing link operating licences it needed in Quebec". What CN is now operating in Canada is some 3,000 pieces of highway equipment. They claim this is the most efficient and effective marketing operation for trucking in the country.

• (1130)

There are three key areas we have to look at if we are going to pass this part of the Crow Bill unamended. I believe, and my colleagues from the Prairies also believe, that we need to have Clause 34 changed in the way that we have proposed to take away the possibility of trucking companies picking up the freight subsidies. In our estimation, three key things will occur if the trucking companies can dig in, whether it is CN, which is now the largest trucking network in the country, CP or any other operation. These three things are branch line abandonment, elevator abandonment and the massive development of inland terminals.

Let me deal first with branch line abandonment, something that has been occurring at a great rate for many years. Branch line abandonment would be compounded by allowing federal funds, particularly federal subsidies, to go to trucking companies, which in some cases may be more efficient. I am certainly not arguing that we for some strange, unknown reason go to some less efficient mode of transportation. My colleague the Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly) made the point quite correctly. Anyone who has studied the costs per unit of moving heavy commodities, whether wood, grain, iron ore or coal, knows it is more cost efficient, almost regardless of what quality of highway is constructed, to move by rail instead of by road. You simply shift very extensive costs to municipalities and provinces if you move very heavy axle weights at certain times of the year either on gravel or on paved highways.

Branch line abandonment would be compounded, certainly in a lot of rural and northern areas of the Prairies, for a very simple and obvious reason. If the subsidy would make the trucking even marginally more competitive and the Administrator had the power or the authority to say "Okay, we are going to have trucking firms bringing all of the grain from the north Peace down into the main line areas," the smaller elevators would have to consolidate.

The ones who would lose in this operation, as most Members know, are the existing country elevator systems which are really the three prairie Wheat Pools. And getting the gravy on the other side will be the private grain trade. One does not have to go too far to find a political connection between the private grain trade and the two larger Parties in this House.

Mr. Malone: The next thing you know, people will be making a profit.

Mr. Fulton: The Hon. Member from Alberta says the first thing you know is somebody will be making a profit. I have watched with some degree of pain what has been happening in my area as certain products have been shifted from rail on to the road. For a very short period of time it appears there is some kind of job creation going on, that the truckers are getting more jobs, that there are more trucks on the road and there are a few more service operations open. But you have to look at it in a more global context in terms of what happens when a branch line is abandoned. I think Mr. Justice Emmett Hall's Royal Commission's evidence on this made it quite clear. When the branch line closes and the country elevator goes, what happens? What is associated with the country elevator? There might be a butcher shop and a little grocery store, perhaps a gas station. If those go, then what happens? Kids have to be bussed farther to school because the small school in the community has moved. What you have is a complete reconsolidation.

A very dramatic facelift on the Canadian Prairies would occur if there are not changes made such as the one that we are making. It is all very good for the Liberals and the Tories to say, "Well, trucking is more competitive". I would be the first one to be calling for an amendment if all that we were talking about was making it more competitive. We have to look at the global and social costs of these kinds of massive changes. It is abundantly clear that if trucking corporations in certain areas—I am not saying in all areas—of the grain trade are to get this kind of subsidy, we will see branch line abandonment; and immediately behind that, as demonstrated historically decade after decade already, we will see elevator abandonment and the pools will start to lose their own members from the existing elevator system. The trucks will be going right by into the centralized inland pool operations.

It will have a direct impact on the largest and one of the most efficient grain elevator systems ever constructed in the world, namely the one now being constructed in my constituency of Prince Rupert. Both of the main pools, the Alberta and Saskatchewan pools which are the key components of and key financial participants in that elevator system which will cost about $300 million, stand to lose if the Liberals and Tories continue with their existing position on this amendment. We stand to lose with Motion No. 34 by allowing the subsidies to go to the trucking operations, because the majority of the grain that is going to be moving through the Port of Prince Rupert comes from the northern and rural areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan, areas that are now served in some sense by branch lines and by rural pools. They will simply no longer operate in that way.

If we were more sensitive, we would be calling for a much broader and careful articulation and evaluation of what the impact of the over-all Crow legislation is going to be four or five years from now. The farmers are saying that they will lose 30,000 or 40,000 rural farms. If this amendment does not carry, we will lose X number of country pools, we will lose more branch lines and we will see increased costs shifted to municipalities to keep the roads open and provide the depth of pavement required for the axle weights needed for hauling grain by rubber.

The costs to Canadians generally of not being very careful with amendments such as this and including them in the Crow legislation go far beyond what a Liberal or a Tory Member might say. We might hear them say: "Well, all we are saying is that if it is more cost competitive to go by rubber, then go by rubber." That is true, Mr. Speaker, very true. What we need to do in this country is to become more efficient and more cost caring. But at the same time we have to take a look at the history of what has happened in the farming community by not being very careful about applying principles that are in the long-term interests of the farming community, which are in the long-term interests of the Port of Prince Rupert and to a balance of trade in this country which is $6 billion a year from grain. I think all Members of this House have a responsibility to look very carefully at this amendment and to support it.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to enter this debate, which is my first opportunity at this stage of the Bill. This Bill affects my riding and the people of the Peace country very much. It will have an impact that cannot be measured in terms of today but in terms of the future of our whole area.

First, I want to pay a compliment to the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and to various other Members of my Party who worked so hard all summer long on this particular piece of legislation. They put in hours and hours of tedious work. Their work has been well done and the people in my area want me to pay them the most sincere compliment.

I also wish to compliment the Chairman of the Committee. I have worked with him in the past and I know he is a very fair and capable individual. I know from the comments I have had from my colleagues who served on the Committee that they were very pleased with his chairmanship, and I just want to relay that message to him.

As far as I am concerned, this amendment we are dealing with today is probably one of the most significant amendments to this particular piece of legislation as it relates to the people of the Peace country. The reason is simple. We are in a unique situation in our part of the country. We have large pockets of farming population that simply do not have rail lines in the immediate area. The Canadian national average is something like 20 miles. For every farmer to move his grain from his fields, his farm, into the elevators, he has to transport it about 20 miles. In my area I have several people who have to transport their grain something like 120 miles, six times the national average. Obviously, this is six times the cost to those individual farmers who are already dealing with very high costs because of the region of the country in which they live.

I am shocked and stunned that the New Democratic Party can put forward an amendment such as this and have us believe that it is in the interests of producers. It is incredible because the very people hurt by this amendment are none other than the producers, in particular the producers of the Peace country. Clause 17(4), as it presently stands, reads:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

There are two parts of that clause which I really like. One is "in the best interests of the grain producers", and the second is the whole business of "the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport". I think this is significant, as a Member of Parliament representing that part of the country. It is the only means of transportation in much of my riding simply because we do not have rail lines. Now the NDP is saying that we should do away with trucking not allow it to exist in the system. The NDP is saying that we should not allow the Minister or the Administrator to make a payment to farmers who have to truck their grain 120 miles.

Mr. Kristiansen: Why don't we just build a railway?

Mr. Cooper: I hear the Hon. Member. That is a wonderful solution, I really appreciate it. I wish he would sit down with the Minister and convince him of that. He knows as well as I that that is not a viable solution or possibility at this point. We would love it to happen. We are working toward it, but we know that in the short term we have to have some form of trucking subsidy for our farmers. This amendment will simply not allow it.

We have been fighting for the particular concerns of this area for a long time. My predecessor, Ged Baldwin, worked for years to bring to the attention of the Government across the way the concerns of our farmers in terms of the difficulties they face in grain transportation. We worked hard to bring that to the Government's attention. When there was a change in administration in 1979, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) worked very hard for our region and was making some progress. In a very short period of time we would have seen an off-line elevator concept which would have met the needs of those people. Now, because of the NDP-Leberal coalition, that has been eliminated. The NDP wants to go even further and eliminate the possibility of those farmers ever receiving any kind of help with a very expensive proposition they virtually face every day of their farming lives.

The whole purpose of looking at the Bill was to look after the concerns and difficulties of producers. Of course, Members of the New Democratic Party have pretended to be the great champions of those people, but I would like to know who they are representing with this amendment. It sounds to me as if it is the people in Regina, central Edmonton or perhaps even Winnipeg. It is certainly not the farmers, especially those in the Peace country. Those farmers need recognition for the difficulties they face because of the uniqueness of that particular region of Canada.

The region to which I refer is one of much potential and opportunity. We have literally thousands of agricultural acres which are not in production. They could be and will be brought into production when it becomes feasible to develop the land and the costs of production become a viable option. The only way we could see that happening would be if we allowed some kind of recognition of the unique difficulties faced by these people.

This particular amendment is a totally regressive motion, a backward movement rather than a forward one. I speak in the strongest possible terms against it. The present wording in the Bill is important because it recognizes the unique needs of the people of the Peace country. I will vote against this motion with the greatest of pleasure.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to enter this debate and to talk a little sense after the words of the previous speaker. I support this NDP amendment.

An Hon. Member: How many grain farmers do you have?

Ms. McDonald: It is true that I do not have a large number of farmers in my riding. There are certainly a large number of ex-farmers and a large number of garden plots. That is an important question. We have excellent fruit markets and vegetable markets. We are not high in agriculture, but I want to address the system.

Certainly the people in my riding are concerned about transportation policy, agricultural policy and about having an efficient system which works equitably for all concerned and is fair to producers. Many people in my riding are former farmers and producers. They are sympathetic, and I am certain they very much favour my speaking on behalf of the farming producers of the country. All my constituents like to eat and want to continue to do so. Agriculture affects everyone in the country. I should have thought that was perfectly obvious.

The purpose of this amendment is to delete Clause 17(4), which reads:

The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

We have heard a little nonsense and we have certainly seen crocodile tears about poor truckers and about more subsidies to truckers. I would like to give an example of what is happening in the trucking industry. This example suggests that it is not the poor little truckers about whom we have to be concerned but about who is behind all this. We have trucking companies now being taken over by CP in anticipation of the House not passing this amendment, going along with the Government's plans and making the trucking industry more profitable.

I would like to refer to an article which appeared in The Leader-Post of Regina, Saskatchewan, on September 22, 1983. It reads:

CP trucks announced this week it has purchased four Saskatchewan trucking firms, including one in Regina, which have been merged to form a new company.

The new company consist of personnel, facilities and equipment of Kissner Transport Ltd. of Regina, Lay's Transport Ltd. of Meadow Lake, North Central Expressways Ltd. of Saskatoon—

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Clause 17(4) does not deals not deal with the trucking industry. It deals with providing a mechanism by which producers can choose to ship by truck and receive the Crow benefit.

Mr. Benjamin: It has to do with the trucking industry.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I thank the Hon. Member for reminding the Chair of its duties. The Chair was listening attentively to the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). My contention was that she was leading into the subject matter of the amendment before the House.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, that is certainly what I was doing.

Mr. Evans: Nonsense.

Ms. McDonald: If the Hon. Member will let me continue the quotation, I think he will see that it is relevant. I want to deal with this as a system. One aspect of the policy is that it has long-term implications. It affects the trucking industry, rail, the size of communities, rural communities and families across the Prairies. There are many implications. I want to deal with as many as I can in the ten minutes available to me. I would like to suggest how they are all connected. The neck bone is connected to the shoulder bone, etc.

Mr. Cullen: That is a great song but not much of a speech.

Ms. McDonald: We live in a system. What one part does affects the other. There are four companies which have been bought out in anticipation of changes in the Crow legislation. The new company will operate as a wholly-owned subsidiary of CP Trucks, according to the news release. I think that is extremely important. Who would deny the relevance of CP to every discussion we have had on the Crow so far? The article continued:

● (1150)

The agreement, which is conditional on the approval of provincial and federal regulatory agencies—

That is the agreement we are talking about now.

—is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1.

Kissner, who will be general manager of the new company, said the companies will operate much the same as before except under CP Trucks ownership. "Were owned by CP, but we're running it as a separate company totally."

The four firms had revenues totalling $10 million last year and covered almost the entire Province.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to have to interrupt the Hon. Member but I am beginning to wonder if the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) did not have reason in the first place. I have been patient with the Hon. Member and, as usual, have given the benefit of the doubt to Hon. Members who are addressing the amendment.

I should remind the Hon. Member and all Hon. Members that we are dealing with the duties of the Administrator and not the corporate structures of companies. There may be a faint or distant relationship to the subject matter now at hand, but again, as I have mentioned on previous occasions, the Standing Orders, traditions and procedures require that at report stage in the House of Commons we address our remarks specifically to the amendment at hand. This is not an opportunity like the one Hon. Members have on second or third reading stages to wander in many directions, as provided for in the rules. I would invite the Hon. Member to attempt to relate more specifically to the amendment as it is written.

Ms. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This subclause relates to motor vehicle traffic in the western region which is made up mostly of the three prairie Provinces. My colleague is speaking about the enlargement of a railway trucking firm in the Province of Saskatchewan that is doing so in anticipation of trucking grain and getting branch lines abandoned. That is the whole point of the Hon. Member's argument. I submit, Sir, that she is perfectly in order when talking about motor vehicle transportation in the western region.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I take at face value the comments of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Nevertheless, the Chair has an obligation to attempt to relate the remarks being made by the Hon. Member who has the floor to the text of the amendment. I do not want to engage in debate with Hon. Members, but it seems to me that we sometimes wander very far afield. I do not criticize or question in any way the validity of the arguments being made. I would simply ask Hon. Members to try to relate more clearly and specifically to the amendments. I give the Hon. Member the benefit of the doubt.

Ms. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In any event, I had only one further sentence to quote which I think will help to make very, very clear the relationship my remarks have to the amendment. I hope the House will be patient. I am a sociologist and I am interested in social systems. I do think we must look at this situation rather more globally. Other Hon. Members have referred to the social impact of the legislation before us and I do not see why I should not be allowed to do so also.

In any event, I wish to quote only one further sentence from The Leader-Post article, and it reads as follows:

> He said the consolidation was in line with the rationalization of trucking services proposed by the Saskatchewan Highway Traffic Board and the Saskatchewan Transportation Agency. He denied that any of the companies were in financial difficulties.
> "It hasn't been done because people are in difficulty. It's a business move. They (CP Trucks) came along and we were agreeable."

This is clearly relevant to the whole question that is before us, Mr. Speaker. Let me return to that question so that there will be no doubt. The subclause that is before us reads as follows:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

My argument, Mr. Speaker, is that unless we look at the subject globally and see it as an economic system, we may come to the wrong conclusion about what is in the best interests of producers. There are direct costs and there are indirect costs. One of the indirect costs will be increases in taxes to producers to pay for the additional roads that would be required and the additional upkeep of those roads due to additional road traffic. This becomes a direct cost to the producer when he pays his taxes. We should take that cost into consideration; it may seem invisible right now. It is not actually contained in the Bill but it is a cost that will eventually be borne by the producer and it is something that we must look at. In order to have an efficient system, we must look at direct and indirect costs, immediate costs and subsequent costs.

Let us look at a few of the economic facts, Mr. Speaker. I would like to read from the testimony of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) who has obviously been concerned with returns to producers but is also concerned with the efficiency of the whole system. His testimony reads as follows:

> Mr. Chairman, further to the reasons for my subamendment, it is an economic fact that when you reduce volumes on a rail line, that increases the costs of the rail line and the losses per bushel on the rail line. So on an existing branch line, the minute you make agreements to provide for movement of grain off that line by motor vehicle transport—

Motor vehicle transport is clearly the issue that is before us.

> —you thereby reduce the volume on that rail line, increasing the costs and the losses per bushel on the rail line, which then provides the railroads with the perfect excuse to apply for the abandonment of the line.

This policy will lead to further branch line abandonment and branch line abandonment will lead to higher community costs, higher social costs to families and to small rural communities. The Hon. Member went on to say:

> So where lines have already been abandoned—and I think it is about 2,500 miles—it would make some sense for the administrator on behalf of not only the minister but also on behalf the grain producers to enter into agreements . . . But where there is a branch line in existence, surely we would not want to contribute to the excuse to abandon the thing.

Now, this is being practical and realistic. It is agreeing that there are problems which we cannot turn back the clock to solve. This indicates that we must protect the communities that are currently being served by branch lines. We do not want to see those branch lines abandoned. We would like to see that those communities do have adequate protection and that will not happen unless we remove the subclause that is before us now.

Let me continue by reading some of the economic implications contained in the Hon. Member's argument:

> There are extra elevation charges the minute you start hauling grain. It means an extra loading and unloading when you haul grain by truck; it adds an additional loading and unloading. It adds one set of additional elevation charges if you take it from one country elevator to another one on a different line. When the farmer brings it to his country elevator and the truck takes it out to another elevator, it adds an additional loading and unloading of that truck, additional elevation charges and handling charges, compared to what the case would be if the farmer took it to his country elevator and the rail picked it up.

That is the efficient system, the system we have had so far and the system we do not want to see abandoned. The Hon. Member continued:

> If you insert an additional movement, that is an additional cost to the grain producer.

We do not want to see additional costs incurred by the grain producer and that is why we see some hypocrisy in the clause that we would like to see deleted when it talks about returns to the grain producers. We wonder what position the grain producers will be in if this provision is allowed to go through.

I shall continue reading the economic argument of the Hon. Member:

> If you start moving grain, export grain or non-board grain, off existing branch lines from primary elevators, to a primary elevator on another branch line, as I said earlier, all you have done is reduce the volume of movement on that branch line, increased the costs to the railroad and increased the losses per bushel. So why jeopardize a branch line that is viable? Ones that were considered light grain-dependent lines 10 years ago, with increased production, are now medium to heavy grain lines. Why place them in jeopardy? We are having enough problems keeping the branch lines we have left as it is.

I think we do have to consider the ecological aspects of this policy, Mr. Speaker. If we are to move from rail transportation to trucking, that means that we already have the disruption of the environment created by the rail lines as they exist and there will be additional disruption of the environment and additional use of scarce energy resources. Trucking is certainly a form of transportation that requires extensive use of non-renewable resources. It means that we are not using resources that are scarce as wisely and as frugally as we should.

I would also like to make a pitch for "small is beautiful", Mr. Speaker. We have small communities to protect. There is a certain wisdom in keeping things on a reasonable scale. I think we ought to have more respect for that.

Social costs are costs that we cannot put a dollar figure on. There are social costs when communities are disrupted, whole towns closed down, people forced to move and services decline as the people who have services to offer move out to a larger town seeking more business. Those are social costs which have not been calculated, but there are economic costs that can be calculated more directly. When communities have to close down, families have to move, schools have to be relocated, churches have to close and reopen somewhere else. All kinds of voluntary associations that have been the backbone of rural community life are disrupted.

● (1200)

This is the kind of society that is precious to Canadians and we want to protect it. We must look at the social consequences of the policy that is before us. I strongly urge Hon. Members to support this very reasonable amendment as it will allow greater protection of community life and will be in the best interests of our ecology and of using non renewable resources very carefully. It is a reasonable amendment and I would ask support for it.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, after listening to five Members of the NDP speak this morning, I would like to deal with Clause 17(4). The five NDP Members talked all around it and about some other clause, but not about Subclause (4). I want to outline for them exactly why Subclause (4) is in the Bill, why I support it, why it is in the interests of producers and in the interests of the country as a whole.

In the first place, the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) spoke of undermining social structures. Where there is a rail line, Mr. Speaker, and you suddenly have a rock fall, sometimes it is hard to get repair equipment in so it might take several days to have the rock fall removed. In the meantime, the elevator is jammed and producers have to get their wheat to market or there is no money coming in for them. Are they to sit and twiddle their thumbs, as the NDP suggests, waiting for the rail line to be fixed? No, Mr. Speaker. The Administrator will make arrangements for trucks to haul the grain.

The Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly) said this subclause is not in the best interests of producers. I can tell him that it is in the best interests of the producers. The sociologist NDP Members had better stay and listen, because if we do what the NDP wants us to do, it would undermine the livelihood of prairie producers and put them out of business. They want their grain moved to market, and whether a Member comes from Toronto or anywhere else, she should know that. The grain must be moved to market and if there is something which impedes the railway, then it must be moved by other means. That is only common sense.

There are times when the railway lines are hauling canola or coal or something else and are completely jammed. There are times when the rail cannot get into the station. Members to my left from B.C. do not know what they are talking about. I have seen 50 farm trucks in a line, waiting for the elevators to clear and for a train that cannot come. Surely in those circumstances the Administrator should have the right to make arrangements to truck the wheat to the next elevator where there is no blockage. The wheat could then go to market and the farmers would have money in their pockets.

The NDP talk about the social structure being undermined, but the very thing they put forward would undermine the social structure of the prairie farmer. And they talk about subsidizing truckers. There is nothing in the Bill about that. Truckers do not want to be subsidized; they want to haul for a reasonable price. This clause would do nothing to subsidize truckers. Where does the NDP dream all this stuff up? Where do they find it? It is not in the Bill.

If anyone is away off the beam, in the Prairies we have a saying—"You are all haywire". Everyone who spoke for the NDP this morning is haywire. None of them talked about the right Bill. This Bill would help the prairie producer, not hinder him.

In wintertime I have seen the rail lines so blocked that an engine or a snowplow cannot get in. Sometimes the snowplows are busy on the main lines so the branch lines suffer. But what happens on the highways? The snowplows get in next morning. Sometimes the rail lines are blocked for a week and B.C. Members who know all about this should put that in their hat. The trains cannot get in. What is to be done then? Are the farmers to sit there and let their wives go without any money, or their kids have no money to by a school lunch, because they cannot sell their wheat? The Administrator will arrange to hire the trucks and move the wheat on the highway that has been cleared. That would be in the interests of the producers and the truckers would make a dollar. They will not be subsidized.

The Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) spoke of the global effects of this clause. Let him talk to the farmer on the quarter section who needs some money in his pocket about global effects and he will tell you where to go. He will not say you are "haywire" either; he will use the proper language.

Truckers cannot be nationalized so the global effect is adverse to the CCF—or the NDP philosophy. Truckers are independent. They want to work for a living and they want to get a dollar when they earn a dollar, but they do not want to be subsidized. The NDP should know that. It is easy to nationalize a railway. We did it with the CNR and the NDP wants it done with the CPR. That is the global effect the Hon. Member is talking about.

I am talking about the welfare of the individual farmer, the man on the soil, the man who milks ten cows every morning to make a living, the man whose wife has to go out and gather the eggs, whose kids go out and pick the carrots. They are not rich but they have a desire to work and to do things for the country. They want to make their own way but the NDP want to deny them the right to earn their own living by selling their wheat. They say the wheat has to go by train.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Taylor: The man from the Island says "No". He says there is never a time when you can use a truck in the best interests of the producer. Such nonsense. Truckers contribute to the economy of the country just as much as the railways do. Truckers are able to step in and fill the gap when the railways cannot deliver.

I can go along with the arguments the NDP make about abandonment of lines, but there is nothing in this subclause about that. I have gone through abandonment. I have sat in homes and have seen the farmer and his wife cry because the line was being abandoned. I have gone to the Board of Transport Commissioners and pleaded with them to leave the railway lines, so I know what I am talking about. This clause has nothing to do with abandonment. Its purpose is to get the grain to market so that the producer can put the money in his pocket.

The NDP talk about trucks ruining the highways, but I wonder if they know what they are talking about. The hopper trailers used by trucks today carry 110,000 pounds or about 900 to 1,000 bushels. They have sufficient axles that the actual toll on the road is less than that of a small truck with one axle and a small tire.

Highway construction is not immature in this country; it is mature. Highways are built for the type of axle that is used on them. A proper subgrade is built and a proper base course, so the only thing that wears out after years and years is the surface and that is a very small part of the costs. The surface can be renewed and the axle load can be regulated. The Member from B.C. who knows so much about trucking should put that in his hat. Highways will not be ruined. A lot of this happens in wintertime when the highways are frozen, but even the inadequate roads constructed by some municipalities because they do not have sufficient money are able to carry heavy loads. They are gravel and they are frozen. Every road in Alberta in winter is hard surfaced, not with asphalt. Jack Frost does the job for them. Those roads carry the traffic.

When one talks about wearing out roads, what better way to wear out roads, if they have to wear out, than by hauling the grain of the producer so we can put some money into the pocket of the producer? Every one of those five speakers of the NDP was completely haywire. They are talking about the wrong clause altogether. We are talking about the interests of the producers and the economy of this country.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, it is always a privilege to speak in this Chamber and to follow the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). He has had a long and very creditable career in politics in Canada. Much of what he said in the last ten minutes reflects his enormous amount of experience after 30 years as a Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Malone: In the Province of Alberta he was the Minister of Highways and the good people of his area, and throughout the whole Province, I might add, always referred to having "Taylor-made" roads in that Province.

It is with that wisdom, I am sure, that he tells us something very important which relates to this amendment, and that is that the fundamental issue which we are talking about is the question of efficiency. The New Democratic Party has used the word "efficiency" and I intend to use it also. The NDP believes it is efficient to keep a railway system because it wants to keep the railway system. I submit, Sir, that efficiency is not desire. It is the bottom line as measured in dollars and cents.

I would like to use an example which I believe even the NDP can understand. In a nearby constituency there is a branch line which serves one community. In that community they use four trains a year to remove the grain. Calculating a train at 100 cars, it would mean that train would have to make some 66 trips on the average of 4.5 cars per stock lot. An engine, Sir, is around 80 tonnes. In addition to the engine there is the caboose, plus the cars, plus a whole network for fixing up the railway bed. In virtually everyone's judgment, that rail line is not likely to stay in service ad infinitum. What is the answer of the NDP? When the line is abandoned there will be no service for the farmers, although the NDP claims it is looking after the farmers. The reality is that trucks are more efficient in some instances. In the majority of other instances, the train is more efficient.

Surely it is not difficult to comprehend that to have a rail line which moves only grain, which has sometimes as many as four 80-tonne engines, would be a cheaper way of moving grain. The actual data indicate that a train can move grain at one-fifth the cost and one-twentieth the pollution. However, surely on the short hauls in some directions, to have a whole network which services the train, its engine, its caboose and all of its line people, may not be as efficient and trucks may be more viable.

That is the data I have and I submit, Sir, that when those situations come into play, obviously the farmer ought not to be the one denied the service, but rather Government should opt for different modes of transportation. There is a $651 million subsidy, not for transportation but for the railways, and under what philosophical judgment should the railways receive that support from the Government at the expense of any other mode of transportation?

If it could be clearly demonstrated that many persons with little baskets could carry the grain to Vancouver, the Port of Churchill, or the Port at Thunder Bay, cheaper and more efficiently and our economy could be enriched, then all those social arguments which the Hon. member for Bow River said were for naught would in fact come into play in the argument of the NDP. There is always a dollar left over as a result of efficiency, so there can be a social heart and concern. It is just utter nonsense to hear people say we should spend more money to keep up inefficient policies because of a social conscience. One does not have to be a socialist to have a social conscience. But one must be able to recognize that if one can operate a society with efficiency, then the wealth in the nation is assured and one is able to have that social conscience.

We must look at the fact, then, that it takes approximately 60,000 bushels of grain per mile to make a railway efficient. We do have some branch lines in which trucking would operate very efficiently. That gives different options and alternatives. From 1974 to 1979 the then Minister of Transport, Otto Lang, removed 2,300 miles of branch lines from the Prairies. I submit to you, Sir, that had the NDP policy been in place then, none of those people on the abandoned branch lines would have had any option. Their railway would have been gone. There would have been no support for trucking. Those communities would have shrivelled and died. That would have been the answer of the NDP.

When the facts dictate it is more efficient to move by truck, and the Grain Transportation Authority makes that judgment, then the trucking mechanism should be available. There is lots of business for the railways. There can be flexibility. It may well be that farmers will not easily be able to get rid of some of their wheat because it will not sell for export or for flour, but he will then have the choice of selling it to a nearby feedlot and he will be able to use the trucking system to deliver to a place where the railway does not run.

I submit to you therefore, Sir, that the argument which has been put forward by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald), as well as other Members of the NDP, that what the Government is really doing is shedding itself of a federal burden and transferring it to the Provinces, is not the main point. It is not the dispute between the federal and provincial governments; it is the case that there is only one taxpayer. That taxpayer wants the most efficient transportation system irrespective of how it is accomplished.

The argument which should be made is that, while we will pay a certain amount of money for the maintenance of railway beds, the railway grain lines move one commodity. When one spends money for highways, one not only moves grain but uses those highways for many other purposes.

● (1220)

Basically, Mr. Speaker, the rail system is used today when carload shipments are made. The lumber train hauls a full load of lumber, the potash train hauls a full load of potash. The same with coal, grain and the like. The days of a train hauling mail, groceries for the store, parts for the machinery shop and a few cream cans are long gone. I submit, Sir, that the cost burden which must fall on the grain producer for the shipping of grain in less than trainload quantities is such that, if there is a more economical option available to the Grain Transportation Authority, then surely the NDP would not deny that saving to the region involved.

The bottom line, Sir, is efficiency. We need to have the greatest level of efficiency possible, and rail is demonstrably most efficient only when you can move larger volumes. Many farmers will be denied service unless they are able to use the trucking option. It increases their ability to deliver products to markets other than export markets.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

Motion No. 35

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out line 25 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission."

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I find it a little bit incongruous to be standing to speak to this motion because it assumes that Motion No. 34 is lost. I am sure that you, along with other Members of the House, will recognize that Motion No. 34 was really the key motion and that the arguments our Party made over the last couple of days on that motion have persuaded both the Liberals and Conservatives to vote for it. I am also sure that it is incomprehensible to the audience watching to have us arguing about a motion which assumes another motion has already been lost when we have not even voted on it. But such is the case so we have to argue as if Clause 17(4) has not been deleted.

I think to get the sense of this it is necessary to read the clause as well as the amendment. Clause 17(4) provides:

The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interest of the grain producers.

The amendment reads:

—but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission.

That makes it impossible, Mr. Speaker, for the Administrator to have grain hauled by truck from an elevator where a rail line is operational. If you were to review the arguments of many Conservative Members over the last couple of days, as I did to some extent, I am sure you would find that in arguing against Motion No. 34 they put up a good number of arguments in favour of Motion No. 35. So I am sure that we will have the support of the Conservatives for this particular amendment.

For example, the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) thoroughly explained the need for trucking in his area of the country where there are no railways. I submit that Motion No. 34 would not have made any difference to his particular situation because if there are no railways, trucking must be and will continue to be used. It was a little difficult to follow his arguments on that basis.

I also noted that the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) spoke about the irrelevance of the arguments of the NDP and was himself—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member. However, I should remind him that the House has come to a decision relative to Motion No. 34 and the debate on that motion should not carry on any longer. His comments must now be addressed to Motion No. 35 which is before the House.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, the two motions are so intertwined that it is impossible to eliminate a reference to one without the other. We have not voted on Motion No. 34 so we have to assume that it is still there.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): No. I am sorry, that is not the way things should be considered. For all practical purposes the House has left Motion No. 34. It is quite true that the determining outcome of that will occur at the time of the recorded vote. However, in a sense, there has been a preliminary determination. A voice vote has taken place.

• (1230)

However, there must be a clear distinction that what we are now debating is no longer Motion No. 34 but, rather, Motion No. 35. It is contrary to proper procedure, to logic itself, to come back to Motion No. 34 at this time. The Hon. Member, if he so wishes, if I may be helpful, may bring forward any argument he wishes, but if he keeps on relating to Motion No. 34, he is clearly out of order. I invite him to proceed with Motion No. 35.

Mr. Hovdebo: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I recognize your ruling.

Mr. Evans: Do you understand?

Mr. Fisher: Will you live by it?

Mr. Hovdebo: In discussion on Motion No. 35, what we are attempting to do is to ensure that the clause which is being amended, Clause 17(4), cannot be used to assist the railways, the CTC and the Government of Canada in the abandonment of railway branch lines. Clause 17(4) could obviously be used by the railways in the process of abandonment. This particular clause will ensure that Clause 17(4) cannot be used for the abandonment of railways.

Even now, in many parts of Canada, in many parts of the Prairies, movement of grain by truck is being used to assist the abandonment of railways. For instance, in my constituency is the Carleton line, which is a short line just north of Saskatoon going into the Prince Albert district. The Carleton line has been partially abandoned but is still operating to some extent. Last week I received a number of calls concerning the line from farmers who said that they are not getting cars and, therefore, the grain is being trucked from those elevators to Saskatoon or to a main line. Therefore, when we review the abandonment of that line next year, the CNR will say: "Look, we did not move the 60,000 tonnes required to keep the line in business and, consequently, we will have to abandon it."

The amendment would disallow the Administrator, the CTC and the CNR the right to use trucking as a method of abandoning the lines. So, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Flis: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Flis: I know you have been very lenient, Mr. Speaker, with the New Democratic Party speakers, but we are discussing Clause 17 which has to do with the duties and functions of the Administrator. There is nothing in Clause 17(4) that refers to abandonment or even suggests that it would lead to abandonment. The NDP moved Motion No. 35 and, as Your Honour ruled earlier, I wish its Members would stick to Motion No. 35 as it relates to Clause 17(4). All we have heard from speaker after speaker is "abandonment", which has nothing to do with the duties and functions of the Administrator.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Prince Albert heard the Parliamentary Secretary's comment. I am in the middle, and I must come to some kind of judgment. The Chair, in terms of relevancy of remarks concerning the amendments at report stage, has time and time again invited a number of Hon. Members to make an effort at least to demonstrate to the Chair in what way their remarks are related to the amendments. Once again, I would invite the Hon. Member for Prince Albert to do just that.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, I could make a considerable argument on that particular point, but just to bring the arguments into context as far as the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) is concerned, the amendment which we are discussing very specifically states:

"the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission".

I submit that Clause 17(4), without the amendment, will be used by the CPR, the CNR, the Canadian Transport Commission and the Government of Canada to go ahead with their planned abandonment of branch lines on the Prairies. Therefore, the reason this amendment is being put before the House by our Party, in view of the arguments that the Conservatives have been putting before us in the last two days against the Clause that we are trying to amend, is to ensure that the Administrator, by the authority that he is given in Clause 17(4), will not be able to use trucking to assist in the abandonment of branch lines. Therefore, the whole impact of our arguments on Motion No. 35 is based on the fact that it would be possible to use that amendment to abandon rail lines.

A number of Hon. Members have spoken on the effects of trucking and the efficiency of lines. That is the key to this particular amendment. If efficiency is used as an argument to abandon lines, it ignores the social impact of abandonment. It ignores the needs of rural communities. It ignores all the other factors which are part of abandonment of branch lines on the Prairies.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but I must inform him that his allotted time has expired.

Some Hon. Members: Continue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member could be allowed to continue if there was unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat disappointed that the other Hon. Members in the Chamber did not choose to allow my hon. colleague to continue.

Mr. Fisher: We're not.

Mr. Keeper: I know there is no disappointment on that side of the House, but certainly on this side of the House we were deeply impressed with the wisdom of his remarks. I am sure that every Member of the House knows in his heart that my colleague was making very telling arguments. That is why they would not let him continue.

Mr. Evans: Of course, it was irrelevant to the amendment.

Mr. Keeper: A colleague of mine suggests that other Members in the Chamber do not have hearts. I would not say that at all.

At this moment in the Chamber we are dealing with Motion No. 35, which is a motion to amend Motion No. 34, relating to trucking of grain, and Clause 17(4), all of which comes under the purview of the Crow legislation which is now before the House.

The policy that is being promoted by the Bill that is before us, whether it applies to subsidized trucking or to the handling of the Crow rate itself, has the same fundamental flaw in it; that is, that the action being undertaken by the Government in this instance, I understand, supported by the Conservative Party, is detrimental to the farming community and to grain producers. What is being debated is the fact that the Administrator, by virtue of the Government's action, would be given authority to subsidize the movement of grain by truck, by motor vehicle.

Our Party has suggested that this provision be amended so that the subsidies would be limited to cases where rail lines have already been abandoned. We put forward this amendment because grain transportation is a vital part of the grain industry which, in itself, is essential to the western economy and economic health of Canada as a whole. Our Party fears that if these subsidies are permitted to take place on existing branch lines, the railways could use their own trucking companies to haul the grain and thereby reduce the amount of grain being transported over the branch line. This would provide the Government with statistical justification for further abandonment of branch lines.

We oppose trucking subsidies where branch lines already exist because the whole process of branch line abandonment across western Canada and particularly in Saskatchewan has been very detrtimental to small rural communities. We believe that the removal of branch lines is the elimination of the most efficient and cost-effective way to transport grain.

We are appalled that not only is the Government contemplating the abandonment of these lines, but it is proposing a subsidy for trucking which would naturally lead to the further abandonment of branch lines. We know that branch line abandonment is a sensitive issue in the West since there has been a great deal of protest over previous efforts to abandon branch lines.

Our amendment makes it clear that we would limit these subsidies on lines that have already been authorized for abandonment by the Canadian Transport Commission. In those cases there has already been an opportunity for public hearings at which communities could state their case. There has been the opportunity to examine the social and economic impact of the abandonment of a particular branch line.

While there may be some debate whether a certain branch line is economically viable, we should at least grant the people and the communities who depend on those branch lines the opportunity to present their views with regard to the necessity for the continuation of those branch lines.

That is the central part of our amendment. We make reference to the Canadian Transport Commission because we believe it could hold public hearings before branch lines are abandoned in order to give communities the opportunity to state whether they believe a railway's argument that a branch line is uneconomical is valid. As well, they could indicate to the Commission the extent to which the subsidy of truck transportation has contributed to the reduction of transportation on the branch line. This may then indicate to what extent the Government has actually subsidized the creation of a situation which it has then used to justify abandoning a branch line.

Citizens could document the increased costs in terms of road maintenance as a result of branch line abandonment. They could then argue whether the abandonment of a particular branch line would be a saving to the economy or a simple cost transfer from the railroad, which is under federal jurisdiction, to the roads, which are under provincial and municipal jurisdiction. Canadians already carry a heavy burden with their property taxes and it is unimaginable that the federal Government would subsidize something which would lead to increased property taxes for Canadians. If the Government wishes to do this, the people in those communities which are affected should have the opportunity to be heard since it is a simple principle of democracy that every citizen have the right to speak out on Government policies before they are implemented. This gives the Government the opportunity to reconsider its policies and possibly abandon them.

I believe our motion is reasonable. If trucking subsidies are to take place, it should only be in those areas where there are no branch lines. The subsidization of trucking on branch lines is the same as subsidizing a reduction of branch line use, which will provide the justification for the abandonment of that branch line. If the Government decides to permit the subsidies, it must allow the local people who will be affected by this drastic change in policy to voice their opinion so the Government can reconsider its action and withdraw its policy.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, when I perused the newspaper this morning, I found that the Conservative Party stood at an unprecedented 62 per cent in the polls and that the NDP, at the same time, stood at an unprecedented low of 14 per cent. I wondered why this had happened, but now, after having listened to the speeches by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper) and the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo), I know the reason full well. The people of Canada know full well why they stand so lowly in the polls.

We on this side of the House have had one aim in mind when dealing with western grain transportation. That is to secure the lowest cost and most effective system to benefit the farmers. Just think what would happen if this amendment were to carry. Let us consider a branch line which services two or three elevators. Suppose that the culvert is washed out and that line is inoperable until repairs can be made. In our view, it should be possible for the farmer to have his grain trucked to another elevator without having to bear the full cost that he would entail if the Senior Grain Transportation Commissioner had not had the power available to him which we propose. This would be impossible if what the gentlemen to my left are saying was accepted.

I wanted to make a very brief presentation in order to demonstrate that what they are saying is nonsense and that the amendment does not make sense. If they continue in this vein they will not stand at 14 per cent in the polls, they will stand at 4 per cent.

• (1250)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Evans: Question.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Question.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Given the extraordinarily brief presentation, would the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) entertain a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Does the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) wish to entertain a question?

Mr. Nickerson: I certainly would, Mr. Speaker, but I think it would be necessary for you to get the consent of the House for the Member to ask his question because it is not permitted under the rules governing report stage.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I should perhaps explain to the Hon. Member that he has not exhausted his full ten minutes. Within that time span he can, if he wishes, receive a question, but that is his decision.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, I would be very pleased if I am allowed by the rules to receive a question from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James.

Mr. Keeper: I thank the Hon. Member for having the courage to submit to a question, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Keeper: I noted the Hon. Member was mesmerized by today's Gallup poll. I took note of the fact that his speech was so short that it is facilitating the passage of the Crow Bill through the House. Is the Hon. Member more concerned with fleeting popularity than with the actual economic circumstances of the prairie farmers?

Mr. Kempling: That is a dumb question.

Mr. Fisher: And the answer is yes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In a sense, even though questions are allowed, they must be relevant to the amendment. The extraneous matter brought in by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic was, in the Chair's opinion, a lead-in to the substantive discussion of the motion. However, the question having been put, I will allow the answer.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, the simple answer is it is not fleeting. It is a long-term trend.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nickerson: I can assure the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St.James that there are very many Members within the Conservative Party who are quite prepared to argue at length so that the Crow Bill can be improved, and it will, as I said before, facilitate the transportation of western grain to the benefit of the producers of western Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Evans: The answer was a lot better than the question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House ready for the question? I see the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse). Is he rising to speak?

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, this motion we are speaking to at the moment would amend an amendment to the original Bill, an amendment from the committee. It attempts to spell out some further duties for the Administrator, as you know. It is correct, as the Hon. Member points out, that we opposed this provision in committee. We opposed the addition of specifying powers to the Administrator to enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers. We have had that debate. We just finished it. You begged us, Mr. Speaker, not to go back to that debate.

We thought in committee and argued in the House that this was an unnecessary power to mention. I would remind the House that the Administrator has a considerable amount of power in the Act already without making those extra powers quite explicit. The problem with making the powers more explicit is that it is not a completed circuit. The Administrator is being asked on behalf of producers to enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport, but there are no funds being allowed. There are no funds in this Bill. There are no funds available to complete those agreements.

What we are left with is a conclusion based on the testimony given at the committee hearings, where the former Deputy Minister of Transport indicated that the only source of such funds would be the funds available for keeping up branch lines. The funds would have to come from the branch line program. This is why many of my colleagues referred to branch line abandonment. We concluded, I think correctly, that this particular provision would permit the Administrator to provide funds, which would be in the form of a subsidy over and above what the farmer or the elevator company is prepared to pay, to move grain—to trans-ship it from an existing branch line to a larger volume line with a heavier traffic flow not too far distant from it.

I think the conclusions drawn in the arguments made up to this point are probably correct. The effects were laid out quite clearly. What we have proposed, since this is part of the Bill at this stage, is to ameliorate the problems that it creates the way it is worded. We have attempted to restrict those subsidies, which we have assumed are going to be there, for use only on lines that have already been abandoned. We think this is the second best option.

I remind the House that during the course of discussions concerning branch line abandonments there were both task force reports and, at actual CTV hearings, suggestions that there should be short-term subsidies to producers and elevator companies to provide trucking service and off-line elevator services. None of them has ever been implemented for any period of time, but that has been discussed a great many times.

I would argue, if we are going to persist in having Clause 17(4) as it is now in the Bill before us, that to protect the interests of producers in those communities which do not have high-volume lines, an amendment such as we have proposed in Motion No. 35 is vital to those people. In Saskatchewan about 15 per cent to 20 per cent of the producers use lines that could be so affected. It is not something that is not relevant to a lot of producers; it is. It is something that we think could have been addressed by the Administrator who is, as the Act says, an agent of the Government of Canada through the powers, duties and functions previously described in the Act in the same provision. It gave the Administrator powers, according to the original Act and the Bill as it has come to us from committee, to:

—make recommendations to the Minister and such system participants as the Administrator considers appropriate to increase the capacity, reliability and efficiency of the grain transportation, shipping and handling system—

I think that would give the Administrator all the powers he needs to include truckers and trucking in those instances where it was deemed possible. Yet in committee it was felt necessary to spell that out, and so we have Clause 17(4). The fact it is spelled out now draws attention to some of the misuses to which it could be put. I would like to go into that for a few moments after the lunch hour.

May I call it one o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

APPLICATION TO ABANDON COLLINGWOOD TO MEAFORD, ONT. LINE

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, there is an application in place before the Canadian Transport Commission by the CNR to abandon the Collingwood to Meaford, Ontario, rail line located in the riding of Grey-Simcoe. The CNR claims that this section of the line has been a losing proposition as far as freight revenue and the cost of maintenance are concerned. However, what has not been realized by the CNR is that there is already a plan afoot to develop this portion of the line into a tourist railway operation to serve our four seasons tourist area, an area that depends heavily on tourism as a major part of its economy.

Therefore I call upon the CNR and the Government to withdraw this application and hold reconsideration of this decision in abeyance for some three years to give the area the necessary time to develop and to put into operation such a tourist railway oriented operation. This would be a shot in the arm which would not only benefit all aspects of the southern Georgian Bay area but other areas of the country as well.

MULTICULTURALISM

UKRAINIAN CONGRESS—CONDEMNATION OF MINISTER'S SPEECH

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I rise to speak on a serious matter today which primarily concerns Canadians of Ukrainian heritage but in many ways affects all Canadians concerned with the preservation and enhancement of the multi-ethnic and multicultural nature of the country.

The facts are that two Cabinet Ministers, who were scheduled to address the Fourteenth Ukrainian Canadian Congress in Winnipeg on October 8, cancelled their speaking engagement without an explanation. Their replacement to speak to the Congress, the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. MacLaren), would have done better to stay away. Instead, he delivered such an offensive address to the delegates of the Ukrainian Canadian Congress that it prompted 500 delegates to send a letter of complaint to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) describing the Minister's remarks as "inappropriate, condescending and . . . totally lacked perception of the nature and tone of this Congress". One delegate, reflecting the views of many, said that passages of the Minister's speech were "patronizing and playing on stereotypes".

Also he was quoted as saying about Ukrainian ancestors:

—stalwart peasant in a sheepskin coat, born on the soil, whose forefathers have been farmers for ten generations, with a stout wife and a half-dozen children—

We on this side of the House call on the Prime Minister to demand a total public retraction of those statements from the Minister concerned, and that the Minister of State for Finance be required to send a letter of apology to each delegate at the Canadian Ukrainian Congress for his discriminatory remarks.

More appropriate words would have been those of the Prime Minister in 1961, the late Right Hon. John Diefenbaker, when he said about multiculturalism:

—Canada is a garden . . . into which has been transplanted the hardiest and brightest flowers of many lands, each retaining in its new environment the best of the qualities for which it was loved and prized in its native lands.

That is the quote the Canadian Ukrainian Congress will hear when the Conservative Party and our new Leader form the next Government of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

TREATMENT OF NATIVE PEOPLE IN NORTH

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, it is about time Parliament faced a few unpleasant facts about the administration of criminal justice in the two northern Territories. The proportion of the population in prison is two, three and four times as high in the Territories as in the South, yet we have no reason to believe that northerners are any more immoral or criminal than anyone else in Canada. In fact a recent report of the Solicitor General (Mr. Kaplan) indicated very clearly that crime in the Northwest Territories "refers mainly to disorderliness and minor anti-social behaviour", unlike the case for the South where there is more serious, premeditated crime.

The prison population in the Territories consists disproportionately of native people, yet again we have no reason to believe that native people are any more immoral or criminal than non-native people. Indeed, common sense and humanity suggest otherwise.

The criminal justice system in the North is overwhelmingly our responsibility, from policing through prosecutions, to the courts, unlike the case for the rest of Canada where the Provinces have prime responsibility. Thus I have asked the Justice Committee of the House to take up the issue of the administration of criminal justice in the North as a subject for study and resolution. We must explore with our colleagues in the territorial legislatures, native organizations, and the people who run the current system, better ways to adapt it to the needs of the North. Experiments in the involvement of native people and their justice councils have begun and should be further explored.

GARRISON DIVERSION

CONSTRUCTION OF LONETREE RESERVOIR—DEMAND FOR SAFEGUARDS

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) and the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Caccia) are scheduled to meet in Halifax this weekend with the Secretary of State for the United States and with other American environmental officials. It is an excellent opportunity for Canada to state strongly its objection to the Garrison Diversion Project which threatens our country's waterways, particularly in my home Province of Manitoba. Canada has not fared well in its efforts to halt the project, and I submit that the federal Government is largely responsible for that failure. Its efforts have been half-hearted.

This failure was most apparent when a contract was awarded for the construction of phase one of theLonetree Reservoir Dam. With this weekend's meeting in Halifax, and with the recent resignation of the American Secretary of the Interior who was an ardent Garrison proponent, Canada now has a real fighting chance of halting further construction. I strongly urge the Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Minister of the Environment to tell the United States in no uncertain terms that we want, at the very least, safety features built into phase one of the Lonetree Reservoir, and that we want the American Government to abandon future phases.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

TELEVISING OF BASEBALL WORLD SERIES TO NORTHERN AREAS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, Members of Parliament such as myself, the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), and the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish), find ourselves each year having to ask the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to allow the World Series to be shown in northern areas through the use of CBC microwave facilities. It seems incredible that the CBC, which prides itself on fulfilling its mandate of service to all Canada, should force this kind of game each year. No one is happy with the results. Northern viewers are kept waiting until the last moment before they know if the games are on. Northerners feel discriminated against again because of their place of residence.

Therefore I ask the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) to instruct the President of the CBC to begin a policy review which will cover the kinds of instances where the CBC has to break its schedule in order to broadcast major events to the North. A change in policy would allow northerners to enjoy the same service as southern Canadians and would give the CBC the necessary lead time to supply that service.

CONDEMNATION OF GOVERNMENT POLICIES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, this Liberal Government is all mixed up. With a lot of fanfare the Government appointed a commission to ascertain how to remove the economic distortion in the agricultural sector stemming from the statutory rate. Then, when Gilson and his committee said to pay the shortfall to the producers, the Government did the reverse and is paying it all to the railways—all $625 million.

Again, the Government spends money to increase jobs. Then the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) removes part of the capital cost allowance on farm machinery for the first year, with the result that scores of farmers cancel orders for new combines and put up with their old equipment, and hundreds of jobs are lost.

The Government talks about the private sector making investments, and then enacts a capital gains tax on instalment buying of land in western Canada where the retiring farmer is required to pay the total capital gains tax at once, so aging farmers cannot sell, and this freezes investment in land in western Canada.

Even when the Government comes out with a good policy, for example, the Canadian Home Ownership Stimulation Plan, it blows it by cancelling the program just when it is speeding up, leaving hundreds of Canadians with footings but no houses and no money.

This Government is as mixed up as Mulligan's stew. That is a bad example, as Mullingan's stew is good to eat and this Government is good for nothing, except to hand millions to the railways while a million unemployed Canadians exist on UIC and welfare. The Liberals are really a mixed-up crowd.

Some Hon. Members: More! More!

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT

AGE OF MAJORITY PROVISION

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, eighteen months ago the House was debating legislation affecting young offenders. One of the major provisions of the Bill was to change the year of majority from 16 or 17 to 18 years. We were warned at that time to go slowly, not only because of the social adjustment that would need to take place but also because of the tremendous cost that would involve for the Provinces.

• (1410)

Officials of the Province of Ontario appeared at that time and said that there would be $80 million in capital costs alone to make that adjustment. For Saskatchewan it would cost $20 million, and now we have heard that for the Province of British Columbia it will cost $20 million for this year, plus $20 million in increased operating costs this year, and an additional $20 million for operating costs next year, making a total of $60 million.

The Attorneys General of the Provinces have asked the Solicitor General (Mr. Kaplan) and the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) to move slowly and not implement that legislation in the foreseeable future. I would urge the Minister of Justice to listen to the Attorneys General and not implement that legislation until the Provinces are ready to enact it in a proper way. If the Minister is interested in good and just legislation, and in justice for all, he will listen to his provincial counterparts.

EDUCATION

FUNDING REQUIREMENTS OF UNIVERSITIES

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Madam Speaker, a major institution in the constituency of Saskatoon East is the University of Saskatchewan. The University of Saskatchewan, like many other universities across Canada, has found itself in an extremely grave financial situation this year because of the large number of students who have been forced to go back to school because there are no jobs in the marketplace.

I received a letter today from a fifth year student in the University of Saskatchewan, Wayne Schlapkohl. His letter explains very clearly the difficulties that lack of financing is causing for students. Library hours have been shortened, and the library has cancelled a massive number of journal subscriptions. The hardware in the various physical sciences laboratories is becoming outdated. The computer facilities are scarce. Classes are incredibly large. He cites as an example the fact that the Psychology 110 class has 550 students this year. Buildings are in need of repair, and major problems are being created because of lack of funding for the administration and professors. Mr. Schlapkohl claims that, because of this, the professors are frustrated and the general quality of teaching has gone down.

I say to the Government of Canada, the Governments of the Provinces, and everyone who is interested in post-secondary education, that because the unemployment situation in Canada means that many young people do not have jobs, a new strain is being put on university and other post-secondary education facilities. I would call for immediate solutions to that problem.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS

SUGGESTED LOCATION FOR MEMORIAL TO PEACE OFFICERS

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that the Solicitor General (Mr. Kaplan) was present at a ceremony in memory of peace officers killed in the line of duty. At that service which was held recently, he was given, on behalf of the Canadian people and the spouses of those who died, a book of names and a plaque, to hold in trust until an appropriate place could be found in the Parliament Buildings for their display.

This is not the first time, Madam Speaker, that I have stood in my place to ask that action be taken on this matter. It has been over a year since I passed on a similar request to the appropriate authorities. I thought that some action would already have been taken.

May I suggest once again that the Peace Tower would be an appropriate location for such a memorial? The atmosphere of hushed dignity and reverence makes the Peace Tower a fitting place to remember the valour of these brave men and women. I urge the Solicitor General, now that the book and plaque are in his possession, to take immediate action to ensure that they are placed promptly in a prominent and appropriate location in the Centre Block of the Parliament Buildings.

MINES AND MINING

VACANCY IN CABINET PORTFOLIO

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Madam Speaker, this week marks the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Macassa gold mine in the Kirkland Lake region of my riding. This week also marks the eighth consecutive week that the Canadian mining industry has not had a voice in Cabinet since the resignation of the former Minister because of tax evasion charges.

The Canadian mining industry employs over 274,000 people from coast to coast, and in 1980 it represented 4.7 per cent of the Gross National Product. It is an industry that is far too important to ignore for this length of time.

A former Minister of State for Mines released a mineral policy discussion paper in March, 1982, and the House has yet to see any concrete or constructive policy proposals made by the Government based on this lengthy report.

As a Member of Parliament who represents a riding in which mining is of the utmost priority, I urge the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to make the appointment of a Minister of Mines one of his top priorities. Now is the time for the Canadian mining industry and the hundreds of thousands of people associated with it to have a strong voice to represent their interests and concerns in the federal Cabinet.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT RATE IN GASPÉ REGION OF QUEBEC

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Right Hon. Prime Minister, I wish to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister.

Considering the human drama that is unfolding in the Gaspé, is the Acting Prime Minister . . . But here is the Prime Minister! I shall repeat my question.

Considering the human drama that is unfolding in the Gaspé, has the Right Hon. Prime Minister met or tried to meet personally with the Premier of Quebec in order to break the stalemate on a matter that is absolutaly vital to the Gaspé area?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Mulroney: I have a supplementary, Madam Speaker.

I know the Prime Minister is starting another series of trips across the country, as he announced and will spend two or three weeks trying to meet other heads of government in order to conclude agreements. It is therefore rather surprising that he does not take five minutes to call the Premier of Quebec on behalf of the people of the Gaspé—

An Hon. Member: Did you call him?

Mr. Mulroney: The Prime Minister has referred to a $250 million program for the Gaspé Peninsula, announced more than five months ago by a number of his ministers. Could the Prime Minister inform the House when the people in the Gaspé will be hired under this program, and could he also inform the House how many people will be involved and what the duration of their employment in the Gaspé will be under this $250 million program?

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party is asking me the same question I was asked yesterday by the Leader of the New Democratic Party.

An Hon. Member: He was not here!

Mr. Trudeau: He could have asked about what I told the Leader of the New Democratic Party yesterday, namely, that the office in Rimouski would be opened within the next few days, and that the funds we had committed would be spent as the projects were carried out. For instance, I know that as far as transportation is concerned, we have already spent $20 million of the $50 million that were allocated, and I can say that everything is proceeding according to plan, as far as the creation of jobs is concerned. Again, I am sorry we were unable to reach an agreement on priorities with the Government of Quebec, but as I told the Leader of the New Democratic Party yesterday, that should not prevent us from earmarking these funds for a disadvantaged area of the province—the member for Central Nova knows what I mean—that must be helped with public funds.

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, it is just like the Government to appoint a public servant in an office in Rimouski to help people in the Gaspé Peninsula. That really makes a lot of sense.

An Hon. Member: Ask your question!

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, the question, in this increasingly sad and difficult situation, is as follows: In view of the fact that the plan was announced five months ago by his own Cabinet colleagues—two years ago he himself went to the Gaspé to announce the program—five months ago, he was advised that the program was imminent, will the Prime Minister, in view of the emergency situation that continues in the Gaspé and is affecting human beings, both individuals and their families, could the Prime Minister table in the House a schedule specifying the amounts to be spent and the jobs that will be created in the days, weeks and months to come in the Gaspé Peninsula, and could he do so as of today?

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, I fail to understand why the Leader of the Opposition is so upset about the fact we are opening an office in Rimouski. The alternative would be to run everything from Ottawa, but I think it makes sense to have Government employees in this area to help the ministers implement these projects, and I fail to see why the Leader of the Opposition should criticize this form of decentralized administration.

As far as the actual projects are concerned, as I said in my first reply, certain funds have already been committed for airports and harbour facilities. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) has gone to announce other projects as well. However, I repeat that when we announced the major development plan for this very disadvantaged region of the province, we did not do so on impulse, spontaneously, without preparation, a little like the Leader of the Opposition seems to ask questions. The problem has been given serious thought and has given rise to a program that will be spread out over 15 years, and it would be misleading the people of this area to say, as the Leader of the Opposition seems to want me to say, that we are going to spend all this money in the first month or the first year. It will be spread out over a number of years, just as the problems in this area of the province have grown over many decades. A major decision was necessary to help this region, and our ministers have done their share. Once again, I am sorry this has to be a federal rather than a federal-provincial undertaking, but I really do not see why the Leader of the Opposition is so upset.

• (1420)

Mr. Mulroney: Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister referred to a plan that was given serious thought, so serious, in fact, that in 1980, in January and February, the unemployment rate in the area was 9.5 per cent, and has now risen to 18.4 per cent, in a highly disadvantaged area.

My question is very simple and very straightforward. Could the Prime Minister table in the House a schedule specifying the number of jobs to be created and when, when the local population will be able to benefit from the programs promised under $250 agreement? To date, nobody, not even his dog has been hired! Table your schedule.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is complaining that no dogs have been hired. Madam Speaker, dogs may be his priority but our priority is human beings, and we are hiring them.

Many of the projects announced are already underway, and believe me, these are not projects for cats and dogs but for human beings.

The press releases were published. If the Leader of the Opposition wants us to buy advertising space with public funds to announce what we are already doing, we shall do so. However, perhaps his research office would be better off asking the Government for the press releases we published as we were announcing the projects. Let him do his homework and study his lessons, first, before asking questions.

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary, and it is not about homework and lessons. Today, in the poll results, Canadians are reminding the Prime Minister that whatever his lessons were, their practical application has not been successful.

Madam Speaker, my question is the following. If the Government was so serious about its proposals for a recovery program for the Gaspé, why is the Prime Minister today refusing to engage in a direct dialogue with the Premier of Quebec, after acknowledging yesterday that it had not been possible to conclude a joint agreement between Quebec and Ottawa on this long-term program?

In the circumstances, should not a responsible Prime Minister promise the House today to get in touch with his Quebec counterpart, for the sake of a region that has suffered more than enough?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I wish to appeal to the Hon. Member's common sense. He referred to a dialogue with the Quebec Premier. I am constantly in touch with him. For instance, on the matter of the community funds we want to spend in the municipalities, we have been seeking ways to solve this problem, and I have been doing so personally for many months.

It is a simple matter, Madam Speaker, and perhaps the Hon. Member for Joliette could give us the benefit of his innate knowledge. We want to spend public funds to create jobs in the municipal sectors. We have been trying for months to get permission to spend those funds. Municipal councils and mayors have complained to me. I got in touch with the Premier of Quebec, and we are trying to find a formula under which, as I said before, we will be able to spends public funds in Quebec municipalities.

If the Hon. Member believes he has a magic solution, let him call up the Premier of Quebec and tell him what it is. As far as accusing me of not having a dialogue with the Premier . . . Madam Speaker, I have been trying to find a solution.

The Hon. Member knows how stubborn and unpredictable the péquiste government is. It does not like co-operating with the federal Government.

Why are the Hon. Member and his leader hiding behind an ideology I know they do not support, to blame me for not co-operating with a government that wants the province to separate from Canada?

Mr. La Salle: Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister was talking about co-operation with the provinces, but if I recall correctly, he himself repeated not long ago that as far as he was concerned, co-operative federalism was dead, and now he is complaining about a lack of co-operation on the part of the provinces! My question is as follows: If the Prime Minister wants a solution, I would ask him to inform the House, whether in the circumstances, he feels co-operative federalism is really dead. If so, then why is he trying to mislead people by referring to genuine co-operation and consultation with the provincial premiers?

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, I would not be surprised if the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party did not know the answer to this question, since he is a newcomer on the political scene, but the member for Joliette ought to know—unless he is asking questions for the sake of indulging in rhetoric—that the kind of co-operative federalism I criticized consists in the federal Government giving funds to various provinical governments to spend, while they get all the credit. That is exactly what is happening in the case of the municipalities I referred to earlier.

Mr. La Salle: That is not federal business, and you had better reach an agreement with Quebec!

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, I wish the Hon. Member would listen. We have public funds, we want to create jobs, we want to spend those funds to create jobs through community projects which, for the most part, do not come under the direct jurisdiction of the municipalities but are initiated by individuals or groups that apply for funds. The Government of Quebec is saying: Give us the money, we are going to spend it. That is the kind of co-operative federalism I am against, when the federal Government does not exist as far as the people are concerned, when the federal Government can only exist through a proxy, the provincial premiers. That is not how we see federalism and I do not think the Hon. Member's leader sees it that way either. That is why we are quarrelling with the provinces because they want to spend the federal Government's money.

Madam Speaker: Order!

FINANCE

REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FOR HOME OWNERS WITH HIGH INTEREST RATE MORTGAGES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I thought the questions put by the Leader of the Official Opposition today were excellent, and if I may say so, I thought they were pretty good yesterday when I asked them the first time.

• (1430)

[English]

My question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The fact is that right now thousands of Canadian families are paying anywhere from $200 to $300 more per month on a mortgage than they should have to pay, given the prevailing rates, because they are locked into mortgages which they took out at 18 per cent to 23 per cent some time ago. Considering that the Minister of Finance had questions put to him two days ago by this Party, and yesterday by the Conservative Party, on this important matter, and he has not provided a specific answer, will he now give us a commitment and, more important, will he give a commitment to those families who are suffering, that the Government of Canada will do something about the overpayment which these families must make at this time?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, first of all I would like to thank the Leader of the New Democratic Party for having pointed out that we have had the opportunity of taking our weekly peek at the Leader of the Opposition, whom we are happy to receive in this House today.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): What a sweet tempered man you are.

Some Hon. Members: Twenty-three per cent!

Madam Speaker: Order, Order, please.

Mr. Lalonde: Madam Speaker, it seems the Conservatives would like me to say the "bi-weekly" peek. Perhaps I made a mistake.

An Hon. Member: You made your mistake a long time ago.

Mr. Lalonde: As far as the question raised by the Hon. Member is concerned—

Mr. McDermid: You are off on another month's trip. Tell us about your next trip, Pierre.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Chair cannot follow the debate, so I expect that many Hon. Members cannot.

Mr. Lalonde: Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, I have made strenuous representations to a large number of financial institutions to bear in mind the plight of individual Canadians. In a very large number of cases action has been taken, not only following my own representations but following representations by individual Members of Parliament.

An Hon. Member: Not true.

Mr. Lalonde: I hear a Member of the New Democratic Party saying that he has not been successful.

An Hon. Member: Not in my riding.

Mr. Lalonde: I would suggest it is probably because the Hon. Member has not done his job properly. I can point out to the Hon. Member a number of cases which Hon. Members on this side have settled on their own without asking the Minister of Finance to do their job. Steps have been taken. A large number of cases have been settled and arranged.

The Hon. Member wants us to go further and legislate in this regard. I have also received representations, as I indicated, from a number of Hon. Members on this side of the House on this subject over the last few weeks. We have been examining this question. There are obvious advantages to it, but there are also problems. One of the problems which the Hon. Member should bear in mind is that anything we do will have a cost implicit in it. We are concerned that this should not mean that it would lead to some increase in the total amount of interest rates which people will have to pay for mortgages, because if you force institutions to allow repayment, let us say with a three month penalty in all instances, you may face a situation where institutions may have to bear that in mind in terms of the total amount they have to charge in terms of the rate of interest.

We are examining this matter. If it can be resolved in a way which will be to the advantage of the consumer, you can be assured that this Government will take steps in that regard.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE WITH CHARTERED BANKS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I point out to the Minister of Finance that during the 18 month period when Canadians had to renew their mortgages at that exorbitant level of 18 per cent to 23 per cent interest, the chartered banks of Canada made $2.5 billion in profits. I would say to the Minister of Finance that the banks are not exactly suffering. In the United States at the time when President Kennedy had comparable concern with the steel industry in his country, he took immediate action by telling the Companies either to bring down the price of steel or expect Government action against them. Will the Minister of Finance take comparable action with the banks in Canada, and tell them to renew those mortgages at a rate where Canadians can now save money which they ought to be saving, or the Government of Canada will take immediate legislative action?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I would tell the Leader of the New Democratic Party that his question deals with only a small part of the problem. If he looks at the correspondence which he has received, and certainly I have received such correspondence from citizens and Members of Parliament, he will see, no doubt, that a very large number of those cases do not deal with banks. They deal with trust companies and other financial institutions which have had to go into the market to borrow, let us say, on five, ten and 15-year bonds. These institutions have loaned also on a long-term basis, five or ten years. They are in a situation where they have borrowed money on the long term and which they have loaned long term also. Now the Hon. Member wants the Government to tell them they should renew on short term at a different rate. There is a cost to these institutions for that. That is what I am trying to tell the Hon. Member.

We are examining the situation so that institutions will not take the opportunity, on the pretext of any action the Government might decide to take, to charge the consumer at large more than they would otherwise have charged. I believe this is a serious problem which needs and deserves careful consideration. Anything we do here should be for the—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Order.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, the point we make is simply that the financial institutions were making lots of profit at that time and the least they could do now is to share some of the burden with the families who are affected by exorbitant mortgage rates.

REQUEST THAT INTEREST ACT BE AMENDED

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs who has responsibility for the Interest Act. Considering what the Minister of Finance has just said, that institutions other than the banks are involved, will the Minister bring in, say next week, a bill which will amend the Interest Act, to permit families to renew their mortgages by paying only a three month penalty? That would be an example of concrete action which would show Canadians that the Government actually cares, and would replace the empty rhetoric of which we have heard so much from the Government?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, as the Minister of Finance has pointed out, we have been consulting. We are very much aware of this problem. I would like to point out to the Hon. Member that mortgages which have been put out by trust companies are under provincial legislation and many of them are not subject to federal law. That is also one of the problems which we face.

An Hon. Member: Nonsense.

Mr. Trudeau: Study the law.

Mrs. Erola: I want to stress that we are very much aware of the problem. We are examining all ways in which we feel we can make sure that both the borrower and those who are doing the lending are treated fairly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF MR. FUAD K. MOHAMED, MINISTER OF DEVELOPMENT FOR THE YEMEN ARAB REPUBLIC

Madam Speaker: I would like to draw to the attention of the House the distinguished presence in our gallery today of Mr. Fuad K. Mohamed, the Minister of Development for the Yemen Arab Republic.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

MECHANISM TO CREATE JOBS—POLICY INQUIRY

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Government will be shortly announcing its decision on Unemployment Insurance premium rates for 1984. We know that expenditures under the Unemployment Insurance Program for this year are estimated to be $11 billion. Given the Government's track record, that situation is going to get worse. I raise my question to the Minister in the context of the recommendations made by the Economic Council of Canada and the statements made by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business. Will the Government be announcing, along with the premium rate schedules, what steps it proposes to take to make the Unemployment Insurance fund a more efficient mechanism for job creation?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I do not anticipate making the kind of statement which the Hon. Member has described at that time. There is now, as I think the Hon. Member knows, a mechanism within the Unemployment Insurance Act, namely, Section 38, which does provide a method by which funds which would otherwise be paid out for income support can be used to support workers in job creation. We have had considerable success with the use of that provision over the past year. It may be that at some particular time we might focus in again on whether there is some way in which that mechanism can be improved. However, I do not anticipate making the kind of suggestion for changes which the Hon. Member has described at the same time at which we bring forward the establishment of rates for the coming year.

PREMIUM RATES

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I assume the Government has had consultations with the other two partners in the unemployment insurance scheme, namely, employee and employer representatives. If so, is the Government satisfied, following those consultations, that a further substantial premium increase can now be absorbed on top of last year's substantial increase, without curtailing job creation? That is the question which the Government has to address.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the consultations to which the Hon. Member refers have indeed taken place. I will be making recommendations to Cabinet very shortly about what the levels should be for the forthcoming year.

HUMAN RIGHTS

PAKISTAN—DETENTION OF TARIQ ASHAN

Mrs. Ursula Appolloni (York South-Weston): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs I would like to address my question to the Minister of State for External Relations.

On Tuesday of this week Carleton University held a benefit for Tariq Ahsan, a Ph.D. student who has been a political prisoner in his homeland for approximately 24 months. It was fully 16 months before a charge was brought against Mr. Ahsan, and he still awaits trial for a charge unrelated in any way to violence or sedition. He is what one non-governmental organization terms a "prisoner of conscience". I know the Secretary of State for External Affairs is aware of this case. Could the Minister tell us what measures the Canadian Government is undertaking on behalf of this gentleman, and, by extension, all citizens of the world who are incarcerated without the assurance of a prompt and fair trial?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, I am also familiar with the matter. Given the state of international law today, it is not possible for the Government to intervene in a foreign country on behalf of non-Canadian citizens. This is one of those instances. The only thing we can do, and we do it in the framework of bilateral relationships with Pakistan, is dialogue with officials of that country regularly on matters of common interest. Human rights is one of those. We have done that repeatedly. The Secretary of State for External Affairs on his last visit to that country had conversations on that subject at the highest level. The Department is continuing these efforts. The case of this gentleman, Mr. Ahsan, has been talked about.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NICARAGUA—UNITED STATES INVOLVEMENT IN CIVIL STRIFE

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs perhaps I could direct my question to the Prime Minister. I had not realized that the Minister would be leaving for his meeting with U.S. Secretary of State Shultz this soon.

In light of the bombing raids inside Nicaragua last month, with at least one plane being provided by the CIA, and the combined air and sea attack on Nicaragua's main oil port this week by the CIA-backed group FDN, does the Prime Minister know if the Secretary of State for External Affairs, in his meeting with Secretary of State Shultz this weekend, plans to discuss our very grave concern about the growing number of CIA-backed attempts to cripple the economy of Nicaragua and ultimately overthrow its Government?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, the subject of sending arms to Central America has been condemned by us on a number of occasions, the last time by the Secretary of State for External Affairs at the UN General Assembly meeting. I do not know specifically if that particular point will come up in the discussion to be held tomorrow or the day after between Secretary Shultz and our Secretary of State for External Affairs, but I think so. I will make sure and I will call my friend this afternoon.

Miss Jewett: Would the Minister or the Prime Minister get in touch with the Secretary of State specifically on the CIA-backed attacks? That is what I was asking about.

EXTENSION OF CREDIT BY CANADA

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, would the Minister of State for External Relations be able to inform the House today whether the Government has now approved its pledge of an $18 million line of credit to Nicaragua?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): I am not too sure. I am sorry, I am a new man in the game.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: I saw a report on that subject. I will make sure and communicate this afternoon with my hon. friend.

SPECIAL RECOVERY CAPITAL PROJECTS PROGRAM

NEW BRUNSWICK PROJECTS

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy–Royal): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Economic Development. I have in my hand a Cabinet document marked "Confidential", dated September 16, 1983, entitled "Special Recovery Capital Projects Program", and under a section entitled "Status of Preliminary Project Approvals" it states that, with two exceptions, preliminary project approval has now been given to all the—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will please refrain from quoting from documents and go immediately to a question.

Mr. Nielsen: Why not? Is that a new rule?

Mr. Corbett: Madam Speaker, in view of the fact the Minister brought to the attention of his Cabinet colleagues that it was the Minister responsible for Public Works who was foot dragging and abrogating his responsibility to the residents of New Brunswick, I ask him if he would now give assurance to the tens of thousands of unemployed people in that Province, including the 76.8 per cent of the construction work force who are jobless in the city of Saint John, that these projects will indeed be implemented, with or without the approval of the Minister responsible for Public Works?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I have some difficulty in understanding what the Hon. Member is referring to.

Mr. Stevens: You usually do.

Mr. Johnston: When this question was addressed to me the other day I pointed out that people in New Brunswick, I believe, are very happy, as I am sure he is, with the enormous amount of work which has gone into that Province under the Special Recovery Capital Projects.

You can ask the people of New Brunswick about route 11, about Newcastle, and about the Moncton Core development, or about the Saint John drydock, which I know is a matter of concern to them. Ask them about the Maritime Forestry Research Institute. I have not heard the Hon. Member for York-Sunbury complaining about that. It is in Fredericton and is one of the most important research institutes going in under this program. Ask them about the Forest Rangers School. As I recall, that is in New Brunswick. So I do not understand what the Hon. Member is talking about.

Mr. Corbett: Madam Speaker, that is ridiculous. He indicates everything is tickety-boo in New Brunswick, and he knows full well that is not the case.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, will the Minister go down there and ask the four or five hundred people about to be laid off from the Saint John drydock what they think of his program, or the 3,500 people about to be laid off in Chatham, New Brunswick? Will he go down there and clean up that mess in New Brunswick which the Minister responsible for Public Works is either unwilling or unable to do?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, it is true I have not had the opportunity of asking all the people in New Brunswick, but I have had the opportunity of asking the Premier of New Brunswick and he seems to be very happy with the Program, very pleased with it, as a matter of fact. My colleague, the Minister of Public Works, participated in that meeting, and I am sure that if the people of New Brunswick really felt the concerns expressed by the Hon. Member, the Premier might have raised them with us during that meeting.

AIR CANADA

SELECTION OF MONTREAL HEADQUARTERS—MINISTER'S STATEMENTS ON RCMP INVESTIGATION

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. I am sorry the Solicitor General is not here but I am sure the Minister of Justice will have seen today's media reports which state that the Solicitor General said yesterday the RCMP submitted a report to the federal Government on the investigation into alleged improprieties in the selection of Air Canada's new headquarters office in Montreal.

The Minister will recall yesterday he informed this House, as reported at page 27940 of Hansard, in responding to a question by the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants, that "the investigation is not entirely complete in all respects".

One of those statements is false. Is it the statement of the Solicitor General or is it the statement of the Minister of Justice that is false?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for raising the point. I advised the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants this morning, and I notified the Chair, that I would be rising at three o'clock to say that after Question Period yesterday I learned from my departmental officials that the RCMP have now in fact completed that investigation into the purchase by Air Canada of its new headquarters site in Montreal. They have communicated their findings to the Department of the Attorney General of Quebec. The matter is therefore now entirely in the hands of the Attorney General of Quebec.

POSITION OF CHAIRMAN

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I fully expect that the Minister has read the report, and I fully expect the Minister of Transport has read the report. Quite apart from any recommendations which may exist in that report with respect to the laying of criminal charges, can the Minister of Transport tell us whether there is anything in that report suggesting any conflict of interest involving Mr. Amyot in the selection of the building in Montreal? Is the Government now considering, or is it to consider, anything in the report which might affect the continued employment of Mr. Amyot in Air Canada?

● (1450)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think that, as the Minister of Justice has already pointed out, the matter of conflict of interest is one which will now be referred to the Attorney General in Quebec.

Some Hon. Members: No, no.

Mr. Dick: That's for criminal matters.

Mr. Axworthy: That is a matter that was purely and completely in the hands of the legal process. I have just received a report on the particular situation this morning. I will be having an opportunity over the weekend, I hope, to review it carefully, to discuss it and examine it with the appropriate officials. At that time we would have to make some judgments, but at this time we have not had the opportunity to do so.

REFERENCES TO CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Transport. He cannot weasel out of it that way. I said, quite apart from any criminal charges that are possibly being considered, the question of conflict of interest stands apart. Is the Government considering the references in the report to conflict of interest which would affect the continued employment of Mr. Amyot? He told the House yesterday that there was no anticipation that Mr. Amyot would resign. Is he just as certain today as he was yesterday?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I would like to make it very clear to the Hon. Member that it is a matter that I treat with some degree of seriousness and will therefore give the report the proper attention it deserves. When we can make those kinds of judgments, we will make them, not according to the timetable of the Hon. Member.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McDermid: A little nervous over there.

MULTICULTURALISM

UKRAINIAN CONGRESS—COMPLAINT ABOUT MINISTER'S SPEECH

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. On October 8, over the past weekend, the Ukrainian Canadian Committee held its fourteenth Triennial Congress in Winnipeg. The federal Government was represented by the Minister of State for Finance, who gave a speech on behalf of the Government which was received by that body, and by Ukrainian Canadians, as being offensive and containing racist stereotyping. The Minister quoted, with approval, the speech of Clifford Sifton wherein he described central Europeans as follows:

> I think a stalwart peasant in a sheep-skin coat, born on the soil, whose forefathers have been farmers for ten generations, with a stout wife and a half-dozen children, is good quality.

The Congress has written to the Prime Minister complaining about the speech and the references made by the Minister of State for Finance. What is the Prime Minister going to do about this matter?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I do not know of the speech, but I do know the Minister and I am absolutely certain that he intended no racial or other slur.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I can only describe the remarks of the Minister of State for Finance made to the Congress as being in the tradition of Earl Butz.

POSITION OF PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): I want to ask the Prime Minister a supplementary question. He gave a lot of free advice yesterday as to the activities of a member of the other place. I want to ask him whether or not, since this man is involved in the policy-making of the Government, he will tolerate this kind of racist statement with respect to a very important component of our population, or whether he will try to slough it off and suggest that this is not an inappropriate, offensive kind of speech, as indicated in a letter from the Congress, which was adopted unanimously.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I repeat, I do not know the speech. I would be happy to look at it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It's been delivered to everybody's office.

Mr. Trudeau: I do know the Minister. He is a man of high sensitivity and culture. The Hon. Member says that he was quoting something?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The speech that was delivered to my office and to your office, too.

Mr. Trudeau: No, but I understood the Hon. Member said that he was quoting something about—

Mr. Andre: Another Grit.

Mr. Trudeau: Who was he quoting, Madam Speaker, and in what context?

Mr. McGrath: He was quoting from the speech.

Mr. Trudeau: No, no, I undestand—

Mr. Epp: Clifford Sifton.

Mr. Trudeau: The Hon. Member, in asking his question, referred to a quote in the speech. Who was he quoting?

Mr. Andre: A Grit.

Mr. Trudeau: Who was the Minister quoting? That is what I am asking him.

Mr. Epp: Supplementary!

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It was a quote of your friend, Clifford Sifton.

Mr. McDermid: Double standard again, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: With approval, with approval!

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: Order.

Mr. Trudeau: Come on. Have the courage to say it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: With approval!

Mr. Trudeau: What a lot of—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You're good at giving advice, but—

Mr. Trudeau: What a coward!

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. McDermid: Double standard!

Mr. Trudeau: What standard? What does Clifford Sifton have to do with me, you imbecile?

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I heard the Hon. Member. He was asking for a supplementary. However, at this time we are already five minutes late in recognizing the NDP. Therefore, I must recognize the NDP because we are five minutes late moving to that party. I recognize the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville.

Mr. Epp: Madam Speaker—

Mr. Nystrom: My question is for the Minister of Industry.

Mr. McGrath: Saved by the NDP.

Mr. Epp: I don't think it is funny either.

Mr. Trudeau: Why don't you have the honesty to say who you are quoting, somebody who has been dead one hundred years, you creep? What a phony.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Oral Questions

FOREIGN INVESTMENT REVIEW AGENCY

OBSERVANCE OF COMMITMENTS BY FOREIGN INVESTORS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): My question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, Madam Speaker. Last week a senior official of FIRA said that an increasing number of foreign investors are not keeping the promises they made as a condition of entering Canada. The Minister knows that he has the legal sanctions of the Act to ensure that those conditions are kept. Why has the Minister not taken action to ensure that they keep the conditions when they enter this country? If he does not take any action, how can he expect us to take FIRA seriously?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member raises a very good point, and the officials of FIRA have been most vigilant in looking at each one of these cases which, I understand, represent only about 6 or 7 per cent of the total cases that have been decided, where the company in question has not lived up to its original commitment. After investigation, we discovered that most of those conditions were not lived up to because of market conditions. As the Hon. Member knows, the capacity utilization throughout the industrialized world is 50 per cent, 60 per cent, or 70 per cent, in many sectors. So, it is very difficult for an applicant to live up to a commitment of investment when those conditions exist internationally.

Mr. Epp: Supplementary.

Mr. Nystrom: Madam Speaker, in the last three months, the Minister has allowed 99 per cent of the takeover applications to go ahead, which is even worse than Jack Horner.

CONNAUGHT LABORATORIES—LEASING OF INSULIN FACILITIES

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, I think we know that one of the most important inventions by Canadians was insulin, by Banting and Best. Last week Connaught Laboratories, owned by the CDC, let it be known that it intends to lease its insulin-producing facilities to a foreign firm. I would like to know what the Minister is doing, or what FIRA will do to ensure that the production of this very important product remains here in Canadian hands.

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): First of all, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is very specific in his choice of figures about approvals. He also forgot to mention that last year, through FIRA approvals, we negotiated $3 billion of investment by firms in this country. That investment will create jobs, and I have always thought that is what the NDP is pushing. He also forgot to mention that we created or preserved over 30,000 jobs through FIRA proposals last year.

Mr. Nystrom: How about insulin?

Mr. Lumley: I think he should just broaden his scope a little bit in the selection of his statistics.

With respect to the second part of his question, the Hon. Member knows that I cannot divulge, by law, the specifics of any application. However, he can be assured that we will look at that application very closely in keeping with the recommendation that was made.

Madam Speaker: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Provencher on a supplementary.

MULTICULTURALISM

UKRAINIAN CONGRESS—CRITICISM OF MINISTER'S SPEECH

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister regarding the affair in Winnipeg, at which Ukrainian Canadians commemorated the famine of 1932-33 in which approximately seven million people died. On that solemn occasion his Minister of State for Finance made remarks of which the Prime Minister has now heard. However, if he had not even heard about those, he received a letter from the delegates in which they describe the Minister's statements as "inappropriate, condescending and totally lacking perception of the nature and tone of this Congress". In light of those words, and in light of the Prime Minister's constant commitment to the Constitution and the enhancement of multiculturalism in the Constitution, what will he do about those kinds of statements from his Ministers?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I have just had a word of explanation from the Minister. He tells me he was quoting from Sifton, a well known politician and Minister who was responsible for immigration from the European countries to the West. I understand the offensive quotation is one in which he would have spoken about the sturdy families, and stout women, and so on. I do not know who was being insulted. I know if I were told that my great-great grandfather came from France in homespun cloth and in wooden shoes, and that he was not very clean, I would not be ashamed of him. I am proud of my ancestors and I do not feel slurred because someone is describing how they arrived from Europe decades or centuries ago.

• (1500)

If the Hon. Member is trying to get this House to forget a recent slur by a Senator from his Party, on the Indians and about how they should be killed, that shows that is the name of the game.

Mr. Epp: A supplementary, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for St. Boniface.

Mr. Bockstael: Madam Speaker, my question—

Some Hon. Members: Supplementary!

Mr. Epp: A supplementary, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker: Order. I have to be fair to all Members in this House. I have allowed the Hon. Member a supplementary question, and now I must go to the Hon. Member for St. Boniface who has been seeking the floor since the beginning of the Question Period.

PETRO-CANADA

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF HIGHWAY RESTAURANT

Mr. Robert Bockstael (St. Boniface): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who is responsible for Petro-Canada. At Warren's Corner on the TransCanada Highway opposite the Royal Mint in St. Boniface, Petro-Canada owns a 24-hour truck stop service station and restaurant which has provided valued service to local residents, tourists and truckers for 30 years. Petro-Canada has announced the replacement of this facility with a simple self-serve gas bar without a restaurant.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McDermid: "It's Ours." Fix it up.

Madam Speaker: Order. I think the Hon. Member could save us all those details—

Mr. Andre: Axworthy, your Cabinet seat is safe.

Madam Speaker: —and go to his question.

Mr. Bockstael: Could the Minister obtain a commitment from Petro-Canada that proper tourist and truck stop facilities will be restored on this site concurrent with the reopening of the gas bar service?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I would—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Build a post office.

Madam Speaker: Order. Every Member is at least entitled to be able to listen to his answer. I believe that is what the Hon. Member for St. Boniface would like to do, and I would ask the House to co-operate.

Mr. Chrétien: Madam Speaker, I am not aware of the particulars of this question. Of course, it is a decision for the corporation to make. I know that there are some people in Winnipeg who have been complaining about this problem in serving the local population. I will get in touch with the corporation and ask them when they are making changes to make sure that the public receives the best service possible from the corporation.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I have the usual Thursday question for the Government House Leader and request that he inform the House what business we will be dealing with for the remainder of this week and as far into next week as he can take us.

I have also spoken with him, and he realizes that I will be making this offer today, concerning the seven outstanding reports of the special committee on parliamentary reform which, after one and one-half years of steady work, produced ten reports—seven of which are still on the table—with total unanimity from the committee. They have now completed their work with the tenth report.

I discussed this with the Government House Leader at a House Leaders' meeting on September 14. At that time, he indicated that he would be speaking to his Cabinet colleagues to see whether or not we could pass all of those reports before prorogation which, I understand, is to happen some time before Christmas.

Anticipating that he might say something about consultation, I would think that the month that has transpired since September 14 would have been sufficient time for that kind of consultation. Since I believe, unlike he, that those reports will die with prorogation unless they are passed, we, and I understand the NDP also, are very concerned about implementing those seven reports which go to the very heart of meaningful parliamentary reform. I am informed by the Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) that there was no agreement not to move concurrence in those reports. He informs me that no such agreement was entered into.

In any event, I am prepared to ask the Chair to seek unanimous consent to pass all seven of those reports today, at once, without any debate. I understand from talking with the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) that he is prepared to commit his Party to such consent. It will take two or three minutes to complete that process so we will not hold up any time in the House of Commons, and we will have those seven excellent reports in place which will give some substance and meaning to the reform which we have all been seeking for so many years. I would ask the Chair to seek that consent from the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, the first part of the Hon. Member's question refers to the business of the House for the next few days. We shall continue, and I hope complete, the debate on Bill C-155, the legislation we shall be considering today, tomorrow and next Monday and Tuesday, unless otherwise specified. Regarding the latter part of the Hon. Member's remarks, I am surprised, and agreeably so, that the Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) should show an interest in parliamentary reform. I am prepared to believe that this suggestion is not a matter of political expediency but reflects a new desire for improving our parliamentary institution without drum rolls or trumpet flourishes and also, I should hope, without bells. In the circumstances, if the Hon. Member for Yukon wishes to make concrete proposals for parliamentary reform in general, covering both the House of Commons and the Senate, an important part of our Parliament, for reform that also reflects the present experiment, I can assure him that we are prepared to collaborate fully in order to negotiate these changes in a reasonable manner that will provide the basis for a sound and lasting reform. I can assure the Hon. Member that we are now examining these reports and are prepared to negotiate their application, and meanwhile, I hope he will follow up on his undertaking to negotiate in good faith on adjustments to be made in the light of our present experiment based on a major reform proposed in the third report of the same special committee on parliamentary reform.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I still request that you put that question seeking unanimous consent. It might appeal more to the Government House Leader, who now appears to be shying away from the adoption of those reports which have been approved by all Parties in committee and are ready for approval, that while I cannot make a more reasonable offer than to pass them all without debate, since it will only take two or three minutes, I will sweeten the pot for him and say that we are also prepared to pass all of those reports standing on the Order Paper dealing with Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments without debate, because they come from that joint committee with the approval of all Parties and with unanimity. We will pass all of those and it will take only two or three minutes to do that.

I also offer to him to pass Bill C-96 through all stages in one day and Bill C-168 through all stages in one day. I cannot be more reasonable than that, but I would ask you, Madam Speaker, to seek consent for dealing with those seven unanimous all-Party reports from the committee and see who opposes that consent.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, we are now testing a number of changes in the Standing Orders proposed in just one of the Committee's reports, the third report. I fail to understand, and once again, I do not doubt the Hon. Member's good faith or I prefer not to doubt it, but I fail to understand, when Parliament agreed unanimously to a trial period of at least a year to implement just one of the Committee's reports, why today, the Hon. Member is suggesting that we implement immediately, without a trial period, not just one but seven reports that go to the very heart of our parliamentary system, since some of them concern the supply procedure.

If the Hon. Member could explain his motives, perhaps we would harbour fewer doubts as to his good faith and the sincerity of his desire to improve the institution. That was why the members of the Committee agreed not to propose adoption of the reports to which the Hon. Member is referring. So once again—and I checked with the Committee chairman who is in the House today and who declared publicly that I was right—the members of the Special Committee decided not to play politics with parliamentary reform and agreed not to propose adoption of the reports, because we must take into account the general context of parliamentary reform and because we want changes that have been tested before they become permanent.

In the circumstances, I would again refer the Hon. Member to the members of this committee. I would ask him not to play politics with reform, and I again wish to express my sincere desire for negotiating these changes in good faith, keeping in mind the general context of parliamentary reform.

● (1510)

[English]

Mr. Lefebvre: Madam Speaker, because my position as Chairman of the Committee was brought into question by the words that were spoken, I want to say that there definitely was an understanding by the members of that Committee that these reports would be arrived at by consensus, that there would be unanimous decisions on the understanding there would be no move to concur in the House.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, what we are dealing with now is quite important. With regard to the question of understandings, that this Committee would work for a year and a half within a vacuum, with nothing being done and nothing flowing from it, was not the case. I have to say that to the House. Many Members can attest to that. There were members on the Committee who worried very much as to whether or not the work of the Committee would be acceptable to the Parties and whether or not, under those circumstances, the work would lie on the Order Paper as part of history. That was a concern of members of the Committee. But to take that to the stage of saying there would never be parliamentary action, especially when the Committee did act by way of consensus, if in the event there was consensus in the House of Commons, is to carry this matter much too far.

I say to my hon. friend, for whom I have a great regard and who is Chairman of the Committee, that what is happening today, at least with respect to my Party, is that we are indicating unanimity in terms of those reports. I do not know what the position of the New Democratic Party is with respect to this matter, but it would be interesting to hear that. I am not saying the NDP has held back in any way. I believe it is important that the questions be put so that we understand in the House whether, if it is found there is resistance to consensus, that resistance can be overcome. It was not done on the basis put to me and to the House by the Government House Leader.

Surely there is not a member of that Special Committee in the House of Commons who would not take the position that if the reports are accepted unanimously in the House of Commons, we ought not to proceed with them. Surely that is not the case at all. That Committee was not working for nothing. We did not invest 18 months of our lives in that work, we did not compromise and come to understandings, to have these reports lie on the Order Paper. We hoped they would not die.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): I am going to put it strongly to you, Madam Speaker, that we worked damned hard and damned well to have this matter come to some fruition. An offer has been made. Whether or not it is accepted will lie in the hands of the Government, but an offer has been made. I assume my friends in the new Democratic Party who worked hard on this matter feel the same way. But there was never any understanding that the matters would not be proceeded with.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I do not want to deal with the understanding. It is quite clear that we cannot achieve parliamentary reform unless we are prepared to adopt the recommendations of the Committee.

I want to suggest two things in answer to questions posed to me. First, as far as the rules that are apparently in place on a trial basis are concerned, we are prepared to implement those, either permanently or to negotiate in a short period of time any minor changes that might be necessary, in order to make those the Standing Orders and rules of the House of Commons.

Second, as far as the seven outstanding reports are concerned—and I use outstanding in both terms; they are outstanding and they are indeed outstanding—I want to suggest that, as far as this Party is concerned, we would be prepared to pass them forthwith, without debate. If we can do so today, all the better. We believe the reform of Parliament is essential and that Parliament, given that there is a much better mood here today than there was, say, a year ago, would work even better if we were to undertake to put into place the recommendations of the Committee. I was a member of that Committee for a period of time, on which my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie), sits as Vice-Chairman along with the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker). We believe that the implementation of those reports in total would make for a more workable and more responsive and responsible Parliament.

Mr. McGrath: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre), who was such an outstanding impartial Chairman of that Committee—and I say that to him in all sincerity—has implied that there has been a breach of an agreement. I think the hon. gentleman misunderstood the agreement because I made it very clear on the last meeting day of that Committee that the agreement that we would not move concurrence only held while the Committee was deliberating. Once it had completed its work that deal was off, and that was clearly understood by most, if not all, members of the Committee. That certainly was my understanding. I regret very much that the hon. gentleman would suggest we would be a party to a breach of such an agreement.

Mr. Lefebvre: Madam Speaker, an agreement to me is an agreement. There was no such understanding as explained by the Member who just spoke.

Mr. Collenette: Madam Speaker, as a member of this Committee before I was elevated to Cabinet—

Mr. Beatty: Being appointed to this Cabinet is not an elevation.

Mr. Collenette: —I must take issue with my colleagues on the other side and support the Chairman of the Committee. It is true we did not have any agreement in the words of "an agreement", but there was a general understanding along the lines explained by my colleague from Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre). I regret that this kind of debate is taking place on the floor of the Chamber. Perhaps we could settle it outside the Chamber.

Madam Speaker: At any rate, perhaps that is a good suggestion. I leave it to Hon. Members, but I do have an obligation to ask the House if it will give its unanimous consent to move acceptance of the seven reports on parliamentary reform.

Mr. Nielsen: Without debate.

Madam Speaker: Does the House give its unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Huntington: One big game after another. What a phony show.

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-692, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act.

Madam Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the Hon. Member shall have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Beatty: Madam Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to ensure that all Canadians, no matter where they reside, will be able to exercise one of the most fundamental rights in a democracy, the right to participate in an election. If this Bill passes, it will prevent the repetition of a shocking incident during the Central Nova by-election where a Canadian citizen living in the United States was investigated for participating in the by-election.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

[English]

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There is a rather ancient tradition in the Chamber that Starred Questions are attended to with some degree of promptness, usually within 48 hours but certainly where it might be somewhat difficult, not more than three or four days.

I placed Starred Question No. 5,038 on the Order Paper on September 21. It is now October 13. About a week or ten days ago I asked the distinguished Parliamentary Secretary whether he could look into the matter, if not to avoid being seen as not responding to the question, at least to preserve the tradition and right. I wonder whether he has now had a chance to look at it.

Mr. Evans: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member's remarks about his Starred Question is somewhat confused. He alleged on September 30 that Starred Question No. 5,038 had been around for some ten days or two weeks. In fact it was dated September 21 and would have appeared on the notice paper only on September 22. His Starred Question had not been around for that length of time; it had only been around for some six to seven days. We will certainly get to that question at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary was quite unintentional in what he said. In order for it to have appeared on the Order Paper on September 21, it would have to have been submitted somewhat earlier. I appreciate his attention and reiterate my concern that, in accordance with the tradition of the House, urgent Starred Questions are dealt with as expeditiously as possible.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 35 (Mr. Benjamin).

Madam Speaker: Last Thursday I expressed a number of reservations concerning certain motions in amendment to Bill C-155. I am now prepared to rule on the procedural acceptability of these motions.

Before doing so, may I take this opportunity to thank all Hon. Members who participated in the extensive procedural debate for their very valuable contributions. I must say that these contributions have facilitated the Chair's deeper understanding of a very complex and technical piece of legislation. I am grateful for the arguments they have set forth.

During the debate Hon. Members often referred to the desirability or merit of certain proposed motions. Of course, that puts the Chair in a rather awkward position. I must remind Hon. Members that unfortunately such remarks could not be taken into consideration by the Chair in reaching a decision since only the procedural acceptability of motions concern it.

When I made my preliminary remarks in relation to Motion No. 1, I indicated to the House that this was an attempt to place into the Bill a disguised preamble. Although the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) in presenting his argument used the term "statement of purpose and intent", I am not convinced that there is a substantial difference between such a statement and a preamble.

In his very valuable contribution to the procedural debate, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) quoted Citation 779(3) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition as follows:

> Where the Bill, as introduced, does not contain a preamble, it is not competent for the committee to introduce one.

In my view, the effect of Motion No. 1 would be to introduce a preamble into the Bill. However desirable it may be to some Hon. Members—and I understand that it is to many Hon. Members—the introduction of such a preamble is contrary to our rules and practice. Therefore I have no alternative but to rule that Motion No. 1 is not acceptable.

With reference to Motions Nos. 2 to 19 inclusive, 59, 64, 66, 67, 70, 129, 134 and 135 to which I referred in my statement to the House last Thursday as substantive amendments to an interpretation clause, I have not been convinced otherwise. Hon. Members argued that a great many of these motions attempted to move definitions from clauses later on in the Bill and place them in Clause 2, which is the general interpretation clause in the Bill. Of course, this is a novel approach.

In his presentation the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) quoted from May's Nineteenth Edition that it was perfectly in order to move clauses from one part of a Bill to another part of a Bill. The Hon. Member is quite right in this regard. However, the motions in question do not attempt to move clauses but to move definitions into an interpretation clause which covers the whole Bill. This is the dilemma faced by the Chair. The fact that these motions, as argued by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain, could be considered to be within the scope of the Bill and within the terms of the Royal Recommendation does not necessarily ensure that they are in order, and this is not the Chair's main concern. What concerns the Chair is that substantive amendments are being proposed to an interpretation clause.

In my preliminary statement I referred to a ruling of one of my predecessors in this regard. For the benefit of Hon. Members I would like to quote from Citation 773(10) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, which reads:

> A substantive amendment may not be introduced by way of a modification to the interpretation clause of a bill.

In my view to transfer definitions limited in scope to parts of a Bill to the general interpretation clause which applies to the whole Bill enlarges substantially the effect of the definitions, and this is not an acceptable procedure. Likewise, to modify existing definitions substantially or to add new definitions substantive in scope is not procedurally acceptable.

Hon. Members have argued that Motion No. 14 was consequential to Motion No. 164 and therefore should be put to the House for debate. This does not alter the fact that Motion No. 14 proposes a substantive change to an interpretation clause and as such is irregular. The fact that the Chair has not accepted Motion No. 14 does not affect the admissibility of Motion No. 164, which can stand on its own.

The Hon. Member for Yukon argued that Motion No. 145 was not necessarily consequential to Motion No. 129. After having reviewed the Hon. Member's arguments and having reconsidered the two motions, I am still convinced that Motion No. 129 proposes a substantial change to an interpretation clause and therefore is not acceptable. However, in relation to Motion No. 145, I have to agree with the Hon. Member that it is not necessarily consequential to Motion No. 129 and that it should be put to the House.

The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) referred to the fact that several motions to delete certain definitions in Clause 34 and Clause 54 were consequential to motions upon which the Chair had some doubt as to their acceptability. While there might appear to be some relationship between those motions, it does not alter the fact that certain of the motions delete lines in the Bill, and a motion to delete stands by itself. Therefore, with regret, I have no alternative but to rule Motions Nos. 2 to 19 inclusive, 59, 64, 66, 67, 70, 129, 134 and 135 out of order.

I would like to turn to the next grouping of motions about which I had some doubt as to their procedural acceptability, namely Motions Nos. 20 to 23 inclusive, 28, 36, 41, 54, 57, 80, 81, 85, 89 and 166. In my statement to the House on October 6 I indicated to Hon. Members that these motions appeared to go beyond the scope of the Bill.

After hearing the arguments, the Chair has not been convinced otherwise, with two exceptions. Motions Nos. 36 and 41, as argued by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), merely restrict the powers of the Administrator as provided for in the Bill. The Hon. Member's explanation has raised enough doubt in the mind of the Chair to allow these two motions to be put to the House. It is my intention to group Motion No. 36 with a previous grouping, namely, Motion Nos. 37 and 38. Each motion should be voted on separately. Motion No. 41 will be grouped with Motions Nos. 42, 43, 44, 45 and 46, with separate votes on each motion.

Before concluding my ruling on this grouping, I wish to inform the House that I have carefully studied the extensive remarks of Hon. Members in relation to Motion No. 57. Even though it was argued that the intent of this motion was similar to that of Motion No. 156, it is not the role of the Chair to rule on the intent of Hon. Members in proposing motions but only to rule on the procedural acceptability of these motions. The Chair still finds Motion No. 57 to be outside the scope of the Bill. I must therefore rule that Motions Nos. 20 to 23 inclusive, 28, 54, 57, 80, 81, 85, 89 and 166 are out of order.

The next grouping concerns Motions Nos. 87, 139, 146, 147, 150, 153, 155 and 165. All of these motions, with the exception of Motion No. 153, go beyond the principle of the Bill as agreed to at second reading.

In the case of Motion No. 153, the contribution of the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has raised sufficient doubts in my mind and I propose to allow this motion to be put to the House. I intend to group this motion with Motion No. 154 for debate, but they will be voted on separately.

The Hon. Member for Yukon also commented on Motion No. 155. This motion seeks to authorize payments to parties other than the railway companies, which is not contemplated in the Bill. This is contrary to the principle of the Bill as agreed to at second reading. For this reason I must rule Motion No. 155 out of order.

After careful study, the Chair is still convinced that Motion Nos. 87, 139, 146, 147, 150 and 165 are contrary to or beyond the principle of the Bill, and I therefore rule them out of order.

Motions Nos. 104 to 114 inclusive, 172 and 173 infringe upon the financial initiative of the Crown, as I indicated in my preliminary statement on Thursday last. Motions Nos. 104 to 114 inclusive, if allowed, would permit a shipment in excess of 31.1 million tonnes to qualify for the Crow benefit, and Motions Nos. 172 and 173 would add new crops to Schedule I. These motions would involve expenditures not covered by the Royal Recommendation or would extend the objects and purposes or relax the conditions and qualifications as expressed in that Recommendation. For the benefit of Hon. Members, I refer them to Citation 773(7) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition.

As I indicated on Thursday last, Motions Nos. 51, 73, 86 and 151 are contrary to the principle of the Bill and infringe upon the Crown's financial initiative. The Hon. Member for Yukon suggested that Motion No. 86 would have the effect of decreasing the charges on the public purse and hence does not infringe upon the financial initiative of the Crown. While the Chair is persuaded by this argument, the motion is, nonetheless, still contrary to the principle of the Bill in that it proposes to freeze the prescribed rate charged by railway companies to producers for the movement of grain, whereas the Bill, as agreed to at second reading, contemplates an annual rate change under certain conditions. In my mind, this renders the motion contrary to the principle of the Bill and is therefore unacceptable. Motions Nos. 51, 73 and 151 are also ruled out of order.

On October 6 I stated that Motions Nos. 74, 152 and 157 are new propositions which are clearly outside the scope of the Bill. I went on to say that Motion No. 157 proposes to place in the Bill a new Part IV concerning "Shipper Share Limitations". The argument presented by Hon. Members has not convinced me that this is not a new concept. While protecting the farmers may be a highly desirable addition to the Bill and is, as far as the Chair can see, acceptable to many Members of the House, it is not procedurally in order, and that is the only aspect that concerns the Chair. As Motion No. 74 is consequential to Motion No. 157, a decision with respect to Motion No. 157 would also apply to Motion No. 74. Thus I find Motions Nos. 157 and 74 out of order.

Motion No. 152 proposes to extend the Crow benefit to the grain producers of the Peace River district, which, likewise, is not covered by the Bill as read a second time. Thus I also find it out of order.

Motions Nos. 75 and 116 to 126 inclusive are clearly irrelevant to the Bill as amended by the committee and reported to the House and thus they are out of order for the reasons I gave on October 6. Members are referred to Citation 773(4) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. Motion No. 174 proposing to amend the title, as I said on October 6, will be ruled on by the Chair when the motion is reached.

The Hon. Member for Yukon has suggested a grouping of certain motions in relation to the rate structure proposed in the Bill. I am prepared to accept this suggestion. However, in order to accommodate this proposal, certain other motions will have to be grouped with them for the purpose of debate.

Therefore, Motions Nos. 63, 68, 69, 99 to 103 inclusive, 115, 127, 128, 130 to 133 inclusive, 136 to 138 inclusive, 140 to 144 inclusive, and 148 and 149, are grouped for debate with the voting steps as follows: Motions Nos. 63, 68, 69, 103, 115, 130, 133, 138 and 142 are to be voted on separately. A vote on Motion No. 99 will dispose of Motion No. 100. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 101 will dispose of Motion No. 102; a negative vote on Motion No. 101 will require a vote on Motion No. 102.

A vote on Motion No. 127 will dispose of Motion No. 128; a vote on Motion No. 131 will dispose of Motion No. 132; a vote on Motion No. 136 will dispose of Motion No. 137; a vote on Motion No. 140 will dispose of Motion No. 141; a vote on Motion No. 143 will dispose of Motion No. 144, and a vote on Motion No. 148 will dispose of Motion No. 149.

In summary, and for the convenience of Hon. Members, I will enumerate all those motions ruled out of order. They are Motions Nos. 1 to 23 inclusive, 28, 51, 54, 57, 59, 64, 66, 67, 70, 73, 74, 75, 80, 81, 85, 86, 87, 89, 104 to 114 inclusive, 116 to 126 inclusive, 129, 134, 135, 139, 146, 147, 150 to 152 inclusive, 155, 157, 165, 166, 172 and 173.

Madam Speaker: You can debate the rest.

There are other points that I must address which arise from the able arguments put forward by Hon. Members during the procedural debate. The Hon. Member for Yukon has questioned whether or not the Royal Recommendation which the Government has attached to its amendments has been provided in the required form. This is an interesting point. It is also novel in that such arguments have not been raised since 1969 when the present report stage was first introduced and adopted by the House.

The Hon. Member had no objection to the original Royal Recommendation accompanying Bill C-155 and, to this end, quoted Citation 541 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. However, the Hon. Member feels that Citation 548 of Beauchesne's is in conflict with Standing Order 79(6), which states:

> (6) When a recommendation of the Governor General is required in relation to any amendment to be proposed at the report stage of a bill, at least twenty-four hours written notice shall be given of the said recommendation and proposed amendment.

I can understand the Hon. Member's point of view but I do not agree with it. He bases his argument on the words "once for all (unless withdrawn and replaced)" which can be found in Citation 540 of Beauchesne's. However, it is clear to me that the present practice of covering a report stage motion with a specific Royal Recommendation as required by Standing Order 79(6) goes back to 1969. It is the final sentence of Citation 540 which convinces the Chair That the Hon. Member does not have a case on this point, and I quote that citation:

> And this standard is binding not only on private Members but also on Minister whose only advantage is that, as advisors of the Crown, they can present new or supplementary estimates or secure the Royal Recommendation to new or supplementary resolutions.

● (1540)

I am in agreement with the views expressed by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) that the interpretation to be given to this sentence is that Ministers may obtain new or supplementary Royal Recommendations which are attached to report stage motions and printed on the notice paper.

I thank the Hon. Member for Yukon for having brought this point to the attention of the House, but I can only suggest that the apparent anomalies or inconsistencies ought to be considered by the Procedure Committee.

The other matter I wish to address was brought to the attention of the House by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain when he expressed his concern that the Bill was not properly before the House. The Hon. Member argued that the long title does not cover the content of the Bill. With respect, I must disagree with this view. As I stated in a ruling I made on June 20 of this year, when the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain raised a similar point during the second reading debate, the Bill is properly before the House.

The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) has the floor.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, before lunch I was pointing out some of the powers given to the Administrator in this Bill and was commenting on Motion No. 35 which would amend one of the provisions of the Bill that was added in committee. It seemed to me that the powers of the Administrator had been quite generally stated in the original Bill and that the addition of Clause 4 simply spelled out a power concerning agreements for the trucking of grain which had already been available to the Administrator, but did not deal with the question of where the money would come from.

In committee, the former deputy minister said that the only source of funds was the branch line fund. I should like to draw it to the attention of the House, however, that the funds for developing branch lines are inadequate. Approximately $1.6 billion will be required to upgrade all the lines already guaranteed by the CTC to the year 2000, but under $1.1 billion has been allocated for that purpose, leaving a shortfall of $500 million. There was some doubt about where the funds would come from to provide the trucking proposed in Clause 4.

In previous speeches my colleagues have shown that there would have to be some qualifications on the use of subsidies for the trucking of grain from other elevator points and from other branch lines. We therefore added the requirement that such agreements for the trucking of grain from branch lines should only apply to those lines where the CTC has had a hearing and heard the views of all the affected parties in the communities and has decided that the rail line should go out. Only in those instances should trucks be used to transfer grain to main line points. I think there is no other choice. The question of who gets the subsidy or what trucks should be subsidized, has not been properly dealt with in the Bill and it leaves the whole question of where the subsidy starts and where it ends. Should we adopt the system of having the grain moved f.o.b. from the farmer's combine? If some trucking is done under subsidy for some farmers, then who should be eligible and who should not?

We are trying to clarify those questions by simply stating that any agreements that would include subsidization should apply only to areas where elevator points exist and where the CTC, through the normal, legitimate process, decided to close down the line. That would leave the farmers in the area with no choice but to haul the grain long distances themselves. As an interim measure, for an adjustment period, the Administrator would be permitted the option of setting up a trucking program for a few years until adjustments could be made if the motion were to pass.

I think it is only fair that the clause be restricted to those instances because it is too difficult to decide where the subsidy should go. There are already many arrangements between farmers and truckers and between elevator companies and truckers. To interject a partial form of subsidy into that system would only make things uncertain. We would not know which companies could survive and which could not. From some of the statements that have been made it would seem that the program would aid the amalgamation of trucking firms under the aegis of the two major railway companies which are already running the largest trucking firms but have not yet gone into the business of trucking grain, although they seem to be moving in that direction.

I see that my time is almost up, Mr. Speaker. I hope the House will consider this amendment which would limit the funds the Administrator could spend on a trucking program to those branch lines closed down by a CTC ruling.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, it is with pleasure that I rise to participate in the debate on Motion No. 35 introduced by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Like Motion No. 34, it seeks to restrict the use of trucks for hauling grain. We proposed Motion No. 35 to cover the situation in the event that Motion No. 34 is defeated. Our preference would be for Motion No. 34 but if it is rejected by the House, then we urge serious consideration of Motion No. 35.

We are pleading with the House to ensure that rail lines not be abandoned. We are imploring Members of the House not to allow a whole new radical system of grain transportation to be introduced on a gradual—or not so gradual—basis in western Canada.

As was mentioned during debate on Motion No. 34 and on Motion No. 35, the rail line system is essential to the movement of grain, particularly in Saskatchewan. Large numbers of small towns and villages are scattered through the Province, connected by a network of roads. The population is scattered over a larger area than in Alberta or Manitoba. The rail system is essential to get grain from various points collected into a central system so that it can be sent to both coasts and to Hudson Bay. To introduce the possibility of moving significant amounts of grain by truck would be devastating to that rail system as well as to our road system. What we in this Party are afraid of, Mr. Speaker, is that the Bill as it now stands will allow the Administrator, the Government and the railroads to start the process of moving grain by truck and producing statistics to indicate it is no longer justifiable to move grain along certain rail lines, then eventually abandoning those lines.

Some Hon. Members in the Conservative Party and, I believe, some Members of the Liberal Party have accused the New Democratic Party of being reactionary, of trying to protect an outdated system. What we are trying to protect, Mr. Speaker, is a way of life in Saskatchewan, a diversified agricultural community. We are trying to protect all these small rural villages and towns because we believe that this is an essential way of life in Saskatchewan which must be protected and should not be destroyed. Sheer economics alone should not determine the social fabric of rural Saskatchewan. There are other considerations to be taken into account as well. That is why we implore Hon. Members of the House to accept the amendments which we are proposing.

The economic arguments which have been advanced are mischievous arguments in some ways because only certain economic aspects are taken into account, not the whole. Very often the cost to rural municipalities and to the Province for maintaining a road system is ignored. For the record, Mr. Speaker, I wish to quote from the submission to the Transport Committee hearings in Regina on August 8, 1983 by Mr. Charles Phelps, President of the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities. He said as follows:

> If the Crow rate is abolished the railways will have the flexibility to charge different rates on different lines by charging higher rates on lines that are less profitable, lower rates on lines that are profitable. The railways will have an economic level to persuade farmers to truck their grain to certain points and abandon others. This tactic, coupled with the presence of large inland terminals, will force the farmers to haul to inland terminals or pay higher freight rates to keep their local elevators open. If they are forced by this economic pressure to haul to inland terminals, the local elevator will close and, as recent studies have shown, the local community will decline very quickly after the local elevator has been shut down. This will have a serious negative impact on the nature and viability of rural life in small towns.

I implore Hon. Members to listen to these words. Mr. Phelps is pleading for the hundreds of small towns and villages in Saskatchewan, for a way of life. Surely neither the Conservative Party nor the Liberal Party believe it is socially desirable to only have three or four large communities in Saskatchewan with no viable small towns and villages throughout that Province. Surely Hon. Members of both these Parties do not believe that the good life is just in the large urban centres. These Hon. Members cannot ignore the study which was filed with the Committee by Randy Passmore of the Planning and Research Branch, Saskatchewan Department of Municipal Affairs, and prepared in May of 1982. The study is called "The Impact of Increased Grain Movement on Rural Roads". It is a fascinating study which goes into specific detail about the impact of road costs on various districts if abandonment occurs. For the record, I would like to read his general statement in the opening paragraph:

A 50 per cent increase in grain truck traffic on the rural road system over the next five years could mean an additional 5.6 per cent per year in incremental maintenance and reconstruction costs, or roughly $3.4 million per year in 1981 dollars. Rail line abandonment will amplify the effects of increased grain handling. Limited abandonment could add another $1.8 million per year to maintenance and reconstruction costs. In some areas this may be great enough to warrant special consideration—including the possible reconstruction to pavement standard of a portion of the Primary Grid system. If the Crow rate is changed in such a way that it results in an inland terminal system, the cost of municipal and provincial road maintenance could reach $150 million per year (in 1981 dollars).

This study is predicting major increases in costs to the Province of Saskatchewan and to the taxpayers of Saskatchewan if there is large-scale trucking and the abandonment of branch line systems. Who will bear those costs? The taxpayers of Saskatchewan. What is occurring, Mr. Speaker, is a transfer of costs from the railroads to the public of Saskatchewan. This is unfair. It is unfair that the federal Government, through this legislation, should pass that cost on the Province of Saskatchewan and to the provincial taxpayers.

I am surprised that the Official Opposition is in fact encouraging this. That is a Party which has stood on many occasions for the interests of our western provinces. Yet with this particular piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, it is opening the door for the transfer of costs to the Province and its taxpayers. I am surprised that Hon. Members of the Conservative Party who represent Saskatchewan are not on their feet opposing the original piece of legislation with repect to trucking. In fact, they were responsible for the amendment which allows for trucking to be introduced. I am surprised they did not consult with their provincial colleagues in Saskatchewan and were not warned by the Department of Municipal Affairs as to what it would mean to the taxpayers of that Province, and I am surprised they have indicated to the House that they will be opposing our amendment. I implore them to reconsider, Mr. Speaker. I can understand that Hon. Members from Alberta, where the population is not as dispersed as it is in Saskatchewan might not understand how important it is for Saskatchewan to maintain the railroad system.

In conclusion, I plead with Hon. Members of the Conservative Party to reconsider their stand, particularly on Motion No. 35, and I hope that they will join with us in voting for it.

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few comments on Motion No. 35 which we are debating this afternoon. I support the motion which basically protects the branch lines going into many of the small delivery points we have throughout western Canada. Without this amendment some trucking firms, specifically Canadian Pacific Transport, could force the closure of a number of branch lines in the constituency I represent, as well as throughout western Canada, especially small delivery points. I say there can be a conflict of interest there, Mr. Speaker, and it is developing now and could come about if we do not accept Motion No. 35. Just this past week Canadian Pacific Transport announced it is purchasing four trucking companies in the Province of Saskatchewan: Lays Transport of Meadow Lake, North Central Expressways of Saskatoon, Swift Current Freight Lines Ltd. and Kissner Transport Ltd. of Regina. It makes me wonder why all of a sudden CP Transport is purchasing small and medium-sized independent trucking companies in Saskatchewan. I place no blame on the trucking companies which have sold out. It shows the good management and enterprising spirit with which they built up those trucking companies over the years, and they now have the opportunity to sell, hopefully, for a profit on their investment. But I believe CP is buying these trucking companies in anticipation of Bill C-155 passing, which would provide not only their rail lines with a guaranteed annual income but also their trucking division as well.

• (1600)

My fear, Mr. Speaker, is that if this amendment is not passed, wherever CP has a branch line and they see they can maximize their profit by taking grain out by truck instead of rail, they will surely bring grain out by truck and allow some of those branch lines to die. Their argument would be that the grain is not going out over the rails so there is no need for the rails to be in place because the main reason for the rail was the movement of grain. However, if the Administrator, who is responsible to the Cabinet, enters into an arrangement with CP to truck grain out from that delivery point, they have a conflict of interest because they are not doing it in the interest of that branch line but in the interests of maximizing their profits. I suppose that is a good business deal for CP but it is not a very good deal, socially or economically, for the people who live in the communities serviced by those branch lines.

With that conflict of interest which could, and I expect will, exist there, we will find that some branch lines have to suffer to the benefit of none other than Canadian Pacific. Previous speakers in this debate have mentioned that with the removal of a branch line the delivery point would die altogether. There would be no real need for the elevator if the branch line is gone, because the grain would be trucked out directly from the farm or possibly some gathering area to a larger terminal elsewhere, either on the main line or at some inland terminal. Once the elevator is gone there is a ripple effect which takes place throughout the community. If there happens to be a town at that delivery point, it will suffer because revenue generated and turned over many times because of the grain hauled into the local delivery point will no longer exist for the community. Of course, if that happens it can lead to many other social problems for the specific community or delivery point. The local butcher, the grocery store, whoever may have a business at that particular delivery point, will be out of pocket, and I do not think that is a very good situation.

In connection with this, Mr. Speaker, regarding Madam Speaker's ruling this afternoon on the motion to include the Peace River area under the statutory rate, I thought back to a community in my own riding which would have been affected as well, the Goodsoil area. They used to have an elevator very close to Goodsoil at a community called Peerless. That community eventually had its elevator closed down because of the high cost of trucking grain to another point. I say that because you are not aware, Mr. Speaker, that the elevator at Peerless had no branch line to service it. It was actually a gathering point where farmers hauled their grain. The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool was thoughtful enough to service the farmers in that area, but because of the branch line not being there, eventually the elevator closed up and the farmers now have to truck their grain much farther.

I suppose the point I am trying to make is that an elevator without a branch line will not last very long if it relies totally on trucking. Under this amendment there may be some branch line sometime down the road that the Government would see fit to phase out or close down or refuse to upgrade, forcing trucking of our grain out of those areas, and as soon as that happens the elevator surely will die. If that happens, if the local farmers and officials have no control, I suppose so be it, we tried to do everything we could to prevent it. But in this situation, if this motion is not put in place, we will have Canadian Pacific Transport taking away business which could have gone over the rail lines which sustain the life of many of our rural areas. In some of these communities there might not even be a store at the delivery point, but there is a focal point because there is a branch line and an elevator and they add to the local economic and social good of those communities. It is one of the things which has held communities together in Saskatchewan so well, and I am sure in Alberta and Manitoba too.

I would be very concerned if the branch lines were to die because of conflict of interest between Canadian Pacific and CP Rail, the railway company. I would ask that other Hon. Members within the House support Motion No. 35 put forth by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Incidentally, if my memory serves me correctly, it was supported by the Progressive Conservatives in committee. I would very much like to see them stand and give support to the motion which, as I have outlined, would be a sustaining force within this piece of legislation. I would still prefer to see the legislation not through as a Bill encompassing the statutory rate, rail line upgrading and the Dominion coal blocks. However, if we cannot have the Bill split and it does go through, amendments like that found in Motion No. 35 would do something to protect not only the farmers who live in western Canada on smaller branch lines, but also our communities along those branch lines that go into the districts, hamlets and towns that are so much a way of our life in western Canada. If we do not put in motions like this, we will eventually lose our way of life, which is very unique, just as each region of Canada has a unique way of life.

I believe in co-operative federalism. This is one of the things on which the Government, the Conservatives and the New Democratic Party can come together and show that there is co-operative federalism in Canada.

I see that Your Honour is motioning that my allotted time has run out. I thank you for the opportunity to intervene here this afternoon.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, once again we are getting a taste of the NDP hypocrisy. In Motion No. 34, it proposed a motion which—

Mr. Benjamin: Order.

Mr. Mazankowski: —which would lock out the—

Mr. Benjamin: Order. The Speaker called him to order this morning.

Mr. Mazankowski: —which would lock out the trucking industry in terms of the whole scheme of grain transportation. In Motion No. 35 it is saying, "Trucking, yes, but only in those areas where the branch lines have been abandoned."

Mr. Benjamin: Subsidies in those areas.

Mr. Mazankowski: I notice that the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish) tried to skate around those motions somewhat because I sense that he realizes that there is some merit in allowing the trucking industry to become more deeply involved in the whole scheme of grain handling and transportation. I should also say that I always enjoy the comments of the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake because he always does make a very positive contribution and certainly speaks with much more knowledge than some of the other Hon. Members in his corner of the House. I think he has pointed out some areas where trucking can play a very useful role, not only by enhancing the entire grain gathering and handling system, but also in terms of providing better and more efficient service to the producers.

We have dealt with this motion in committee. The NDP wants to restrict the application of trucking only on those lines that have been abandoned by the order of the Canadian Transport Commission. We can certainly support the spirit and thrust of that. We did in committee and we will do so here again, because it is not this Party's desire to accelerate the abandonment of branch lines in western Canada. As a matter of fact, our record is pretty clear on that account. I think that our record of performance clearly speaks for itself. However, placing this particular motion before the House and having it incorporated into Clause 17(4), notwithstanding the good intention of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), in the event a branch line became unserviceable for a period of time if there was a bridge washout or if the line was soft, would preclude the opportunity to truck that grain, affecting the ability of producers to deliver, thereby affecting their cash flow position. I point that out because, notwithstanding the good intention, it could very well tie the hands of the Administrator if this particular amendment were to be incorporated.

I know that the New Democratic Party seems to be trying to make the case that if one allows trucking one will accelerate the demise of the branch line system. They carry this point a little too far, so much so that they tend to deliberately mislead and spread fear and anxiety. I think it clearly overstated the situation. If we read Clause 17(4), we find that it states:

That the administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

That is pretty clear. It certainly does not set out to accelerate the branch line system as the NDP suggests. That is simply not true. We are really proposing to provide a service to the grain producer in areas where farmers have in fact lost their branch line, or where they have never had a branch line. As the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) and the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake pointed out, there are areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan which have never had branch lines in existence or have lost them through the abandonment process.

I repeat that our Party's commitment to the retention of the branch line system is very clear. When we were in Government, our policy was that we would maintain branch lines in those areas where the elevator companies thought that they would be providing facilities and service to the year 2000. We believed it was the elevator companies that were in the best position to determine whether they would maintain an elevator system or whether they would build such a system on a given branch line.

It was based upon their knowledge of the facts that we assessed and indeed rationalized the branch line system. In the course of so doing, the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) commissioned a one-man study to consider the retention of branch lines which were up for abandonment under the previous administration. Concerning some 1,500 miles put under the aegis of PRAC, the Prairie Rail Action Committee, he recommended that a good portion be guaranteed to the year 2000. That recommendation was ratified by the Governor-in-Council, with some 500 miles placed in the permanent network and 236 miles frozen for five years pending the testing of the off-line elevator concept, which was a recommendation advanced by the Hall Commission. Seven hundred miles were referred to the CTC for the purpose of examining the necessities and conditions surrounding the maintenance or abandonment of those particular lines.

We certainly are not a Party which designs our policies around the rationalization of the branch line system to the extent that we will end up with 50 or 60 centralized locations—quite the contrary. Where there is a need for service, where the line can be developed and the elevator system is developed in the interest of serving the producer, it is in everyone's interest to ensure that that branch line system remains in place.

I repeat, that those producers who are situated in isolated areas, such as the northern parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, are the ones who have been shortchanged concerning the grain handling and transportation system.

● (1620)

We have a system that has been developed on the basis of equity in which there is a pooling of all the receipts and expenses. However, when we look at northern Saskatchewan and northern Alberta, we see that many of those producers must haul their grain over a distance of from 60 miles to 100 miles. That imposes a very heavy cost upon them. If we consider the freight rate under the new regime, the increase in the freight rate will escalate more dramatically for them than for the producer in Regina or Saskatoon. Therefore, they will be doubly affected. I submit that there could have been an important role for the off-line elevator concept to serve those producers in the northern parts of all three prairie Provinces if that concept could have been tested. It could have restored some sense of equity and equality in the whole system, but unfortunately that has not been done. I very much regret the fact that the Government chose not to test the off-line elevator concept.

I believe the New Democratic Party is really working against the principle of equality and greater equity for all grain producers by trying to lock out the trucking system. By virtue of its tactics, the NDP is denying producers that opportunity, and the amendments which it has proposed deny the trucking industry, and therefore the producers, that opportunity, particularly those producers who have not heretofore experienced a sense of equity or fairness.

Fairness, equity and a semblance of equality is a cornerstone and a very fundamental principle of our entire grain handling and marketing system. Since many areas have been shortchanged in terms of the fulfilment of that principle, I believe that, as we are debating this important piece of legislation, we should try our very best to restore equity and fairness so that all producers would be treated equally in terms of their handling and transportation costs. We believe that subclause (4) which would allow the Administrator to become involved in negotiating a contract for the trucking industry to provide a service to producers which they have not yet received would go a long way in fulfiling an objective which I am sure all Members of the House want to achieve.

In conclusion, our Party's position is certainly not one which would aid and abet the demise of the branch-line system. That is not the principal aim of our amendment. The object of our proposal is to try to develop the best system, using all modes of transportation available under the most effective and efficient system so that it can increase the producers' cash flow, improve their welfare and thereby permit the spin-off benefits associated with the grain industry to permeate the total economy. For that reason we will have no difficulty in supporting this particular motion. However, I want again to draw to the attention of the mover of the motion the fact that it is somewhat restrictive and may very well be defeating a purpose which I am sure Hon. Members would want to achieve.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Motion No. 35 which is an amendment that would protect the farmers who now use branch lines from having those branch lines unnecessarily abandoned. The amendment states:

—the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission.

This is a very useful amendment and one which, I have noticed, has received some positive arguments from some Conservatives. We have not heard this today but, as I said before, they are very flexible. For example, a couple of days ago the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) commented on the situation of the Kelfield branch and pointed out that people in the area wanted to save their branch line because it was their preference. My impression is that branch lines are the preference of most farmers on the Prairies and that they want to save their branch lines. Of course, if this is not possible, they will want assistance with long distance trucking, and no one disagrees with that.

This motion provides for both those situations precisely. It provides that long distance trucking should not be used to undermine or destroy the viability of a branch line, but also allows for the provision of a suitable substitute if the branch line, for good reasons, I would hope, is abandoned. While I have not heard this raised this afternoon, I hope the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster and some of his colleagues will speak on that very point.

The problem with the Bill as it stands without this amendment is that we would see the railroads working on both sides of the street. They would be running the trucking company that would be competing with their own rail lines. While we have been told, and it may be, that small truckers would be involved in this transportation system, the fact is that the pattern has been for the railroads to buy up or force out the small truckers. Undoubtedly, not every last one has been forced out of business or bought out, but perhaps this will be done if the railways encourage this House and succeed in having this Bill passed without this amendment. This pattern of buying smaller trucking companies has been evident in many parts of the country. In fact, one does not have to live in Saskatchewan to know that the effect of allowing railroads to dominate the trucking industry is very damaging to branch lines and to the communities that depend on those branch lines. We have certainly seen what happens in Ontario when rail lines are abandoned and railway supported trucking companies are allowed to run alleged competition with the railroad. Since companies like CP can arrange their cost figures internally, they can make rail transportation appear expensive and therefore inefficient to the point where it must be abandoned. At that time, of course, the railway trucking company will find itself with a monopoly, one which it had arranged. This is the type of eventuality we want to prevent from happening to the farmers in Saskatchewan.

It is unfortunate that the Government has not done any studies to compare the total costs of grain transportation by rail and grain transportation by truck. However, there is a comparable case in a study that was done by the State of Iowa. I submit that before such a step is taken in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta there should be a study conducted that is comparable to that done in Iowa. That study compared the total benefits to the user, to the railroad and the public with the total costs of paying both the railroad and the trucks to haul the grain. Those are the direct costs to the producer. Of course it is necessary to give primary consideration to these, but they are not the only costs to the producer. The producer may very well be paying other costs for road transportation. This is what the State of Iowa provided for in its study. The costs that a producer pays as a citizen of his municipality and a taxpayer—and as a citizen of his Province and taxpayer—are for the maintenance of the highways on which these trucks travel. It is possible to reckon those costs to get a reasonably reliable objective figure. No doubt it would be different from place to place. Canadian weather perhaps would be a little different from Iowa weather, but this would not put the costs totally out of the ballpark. The Iowa study estimated the amount of grain that was being moved by the railroads and converted that into the number of truck loads. It was estimated what it would cost in added maintenance for the highways to move goods by way of highways. That is not the cost the farmer pays to the trucking companies. That is the additional costs farmers and other citizens of that State pay to maintain the road, in effect to subsidize the trucking company. It is not just the subsidy paid perhaps to the truckers directly or perhaps to the producer to pay the trucker; that is an open and above board subsidy. The hidden subsidy is not being reckoned by the supporters of this Bill. It should be reckoned before we plunge the farmers into paying the hidden cost. The hidden cost is the cost of maintaining the highways for the extra wear and tear exacted by these large trucks. Trucking companies do not pay much of that. According to any reckonings in Ontario, Iowa and other places, what they pay for the use of the road is less than what it costs in the wearing out of the road.

Therefore, what will happen if this Bill goes forward without the amendment in Motion No. 35 is that the railroad will be dumping part of its cost on to the local farmer producers, on to the municipalities, which includes the farmers, and on to the provincial Governments, which also includes the farmers. It does not include for the most part the shareholders of the railroad.

If the railroads claim they have a case for dumping that cost on to the farmers, let them put forward that case. They have not done that. They have not attempted to. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) in promoting the Crow Bill has also not attempted to estimate that cost or to bring any figures forward for public examination.

One example of how very heavily this cost will affect the farmers has been suggested in the area around Arelee where farmers who had this experience found transportation payments doubled. This is leaving aside the cost of maintaining the roads through the Province and the municipality. As well as paying 13.8 cents per bushel to ship to Thunder Bay, according to the Crow rate, they also have to pay 13.6 cents per bushel to ship by road. Previously, they could haul it just two miles to the northeast branch line elevator. Once that was taken from them, some of the other elevators were sometimes small and full and there were varying distances they had to ship, the cost to a great many of them was almost the same as the cost of shipping on the rail from that larger central point to the Lakehead. In other words, by closing the branch line the railroad doubled the cost to the farmer to ship his or her grain. This is in addition to the further hidden cost which those producers must pay as taxpayers in Saskatchewan to maintain the highway. The railway would prefer not to pay the cost of maintaining the railway. Therefore, by a back door route the railway dumps the equivalent of that cost on to the farmers whom they are supposed to be serving. One of the primary objects of the creation of the railroad and of the massive subsidies given to the railroad was to have them haul the grain and other such necessary commodities.

I think it is very important that Motion No. 35 be unanimously supported by this House. It does not in any sense disadvantage farmers who find their rail line has been abandoned. It does not in any sense hinder provision to them of adequate trucking services. It is very carefully defined so as to indicate that the only restriction, the provision of trucking services, perhaps by the railroad itself, shall not be used to destroy present branch line service.

I see that you are indicating my time is up, Mr. Speaker. I hope we will hear further from our friends to the far right who previously have spoken up in defence of the farmers.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Before I recognize the next Hon. Member, may I deal with the proceedings on the adjournment motion?

It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall)—Shipping—Monitoring of UNCTAD agreement—Effect on Canada. (b) Request for release of studies; the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers)—National Defence—Fatal accident at Lac-la-Biche—Establishment of board of inquiry. (b) Age of equipment; and the Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly)—Employment—Request for forestry job-creation program.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 35 (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I had not originally intended to speak to this motion, but having sat through most of the day listening mainly to Members of the New Democratic Party talking in defence of this motion, I feel I should put a few facts on the record.

First, the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is an amendment to Section 17(4), which reads:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

The amendment would alter the effect of that subclause only on those branch lines which have already been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission. The original Bill as referred to the committee did not contain Clause 17(4). It was an amendment moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) and adopted by the committee. The committee adopted it obviously because it thought it would make Bill C-155 a better Bill. While I did not vote on it, I agreed with it. I thought it was a sensible amendment to provide greater latitude in the transport of grain and to make better use of other modes of transport.

All day we have listened to tales of woe about how this will mean the end of branch lines in western Canada. I think it is nothing more than a red herring being hauled across the trail of this Bill to continue a filibuster which the NDP has obviously mounted against this Bill. That should come as no surprise to any of us because Members of the NDP said forthrightly from the very beginning that they would use every tactic in the book to delay passage of this legislation.

The effect of the amendment which was defeated in committee would be to provide the opportunity for the Administrator to enter into agreements with trucking firms or to allow producers to enter into agreements with trucking firms for the transport of grain by truck when it was in their best interests. It is only logical to conclude that although Clause 17(4) indicates that the Administrator may form an opinion, he would not form an opinion unless he consulted with the shippers and producers involved. I find it rather strange that Hon. Members of the House would believe that the Administrator would be so incompetent as to enter into such an agreement based only on his opinion. Of course this is a legal way of phrasing legislation and does not mean that it precludes consultation. The effect of the amendment would be that he has the ability to enter into agreements only in areas where branch lines have already been abandoned and where there is no longer the opportunity to move grain by rail.

What is the point of having Clause 17(4) if we virtually negate its purpose by accepting Motion No. 35? What surprises me most is that the Conservatives, having achieved the inclusion of Clause 17(4) in the Bill, will now emasculate it by supporting the NDP counterproductive amendment. I do not know how they can square that with their desire to have Clause 17(4) in the first place. It is not what I would have expected from that Party.

I know that all committee members have worked at this diligently. I was surprised in committee when the Tories supported this rather nonsensical amendment. I say "nonsensical" in the sense that it destroys the sense of the subclause it amends. This clause does not deal with the abandonment of branch lines, with the corporate make-up of trucking firms or with how they operate. It deals only with the powers of the Administrator. In my opinion most of the debate we have heard today has been extraneous to the issue. I agreed this morning with the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) when he indicated the necessity for Clause 17(4), but I believe that that necessity will be almost totally negated if we accept the NDP amendment. Therefore, I urge the Official Opposition to change its position on this, to be consistent and to support the amendment achieved at committee stage of the Bill.

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in supporting the amendment of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), I would first like to clarify for the record what that amendment is. It reads:

> That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out line 25 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:
> "the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission."

It would clearly limit any subsidy paid for the trucking of grain to delivery points which are not served by a branch line.

In speaking on Motion No. 34, I stated clearly that the New Democratic Party position could be summed up, in relation to both this amendment and the previous one, as being that we want the best possible results for the grain producers of western Canada and for the people of Canada at the least possible cost. As far as we are concerned, this would rule out any proposal which would end up giving grants and subsidies to anybody and everybody who comes along.

I was somewhat mystified by some of the comments on this amendment by Members of the Progressive Conservative Party, as I was when the previous amendment was before the House. The Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) made comments which led some of my colleagues and me to believe that he was opposing our amendment. Later he suggested that he was supporting it. I can only conclude that the Progressive Conservative Party has shown a remarkable degree of consistent inconsistency throughout the entire Crow debate. Not only has it changed position as to whether or not it supported the so-called reform of the entire package, as it shilly-shallied, flim-flammed and went back and forth on whether it was for or "agin" it, it appears that the same representative, the Hon. Member for Vegreville, seems undecided as to whether or not he is in favour of, or opposed to, the amendment before us. I suppose we should not be surprised. It is rather typical of the schizophrenia implicit in the nature of any Party with a contradictory name like "Progressive Conservative"—two words with opposite meanings. Its record in this whole debate, as has been the case in many others since the resumption of this session on September 12, has indicated that as well.

Before lunch the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) seemed to suggest in a brief dissertation that the Gallup poll result reported this morning was somehow indicative of the position that Party had taken since September 12, forgetting that the polling was conducted prior to the recommencement of this session. I am willing to bet that the Conservative Party will fall in the next Gallup poll; there is not much dispute of that. One of the major reasons for that will be what the Hon. Member for Western Arctic mistakenly suggested was the cause of the current result, what has been going on in the House over the last month, as that Party changed its position two or three times on the reform of the Crow and took a schizophrenic position on this particular amendment. If it is not a schizophrenic position, I hope one of its Members will rise to make its position clear.

In the same way as the new Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party wants to provide jobs for all living and breathing Conservatives, to people with only that qualification, Conservative Members also want to ensure that they can give out subsidies and contracts to every Tory contractor for the next 15 years before considering anyone else. If that is their only purpose, I suggest that they had better come clean. Perhaps one of them will edify us as to what is their real purpose in either supporting or opposing the amendment before us. We are having a difficult time trying to analyse—never mind their motivations, we would never question those—what they intend to do. Do they know what they are doing, Mr. Speaker? With this point as with many others, it seems to be a matter of just offering contracts to their friends. This is illustrated by the speech of the Conservative Party Leader as reported in the Montreal Gazette on May 18 dealing with the subject of jobs for the boys. The Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Mulroney) said, "Oh, there'll be jobs for Liberals and NDPers . . . but only after I've been Prime Minister for 15 years and can't find a single living, breathing Tory to appoint". Is that their reasoning? I would not suggest that it is, but perhaps it is the reason they have taken their position or non-position on this amendment as it relates to passing out grants and subsidies helter-skelter to either truckers or railways or anybody else they can find.

• (1650)

According to statements that Members of that Party have often made, that position is so untypical because the tories are always knocking subsidies and grants. They want to let the market work. Now not only do they want or not want to provide subsidies for western grain, which have a very good historical reason which still continues, but they want to extend it to others and they go on and on. They want to give subsidies to anybody who seems to want them.

Conservative Members are now going to trust a bureaucrat to make the decision as to whether or not these subsidies are worthwhile. The Conservative Members who are knocking big Government and the bureaucrats are now going to trust a bureaucrat to make the decision as to whether something is a worthwhile objective or not without any other kind of supervision. They want to hand out subsidies and grants by the truckful to all the boys. I leave it to my colleagues on my right to decide whether or not that is relevant to their purpose in this debate or the larger debate on the Crow rate. Do they still even know what their position is?

Underlying the positions taken by the various Parties on this particular amendment and on the matter of the Crow as a whole is the basic nature and purpose of the various political Parties. Where do we get our support and campaign funds from? Looking back, Mr. Speaker, the official record of political contributions in Canada shows that in 1982, the Liberal Party received $50,000 from Canadian Pacific Limited and the Conservative Party received $50,000 from Canadian Pacific Limited. In the three previous years, 1981, 1980 and 1979, $128,000 was given to the Liberals by CP Limited and 12 affiliates and $134,000 was given to the Conservative Party by CP Limited and 12 affiliates. It is interesting to note that the figures for CP Limited alone indicate that its contribution to both Parties has doubled in the last year. Why is that?

I refer to another article which is related to this matter, "Unshackled from Crow, Profits Flow" by Barry Wilson published in the Western Producer at the end of September, 1983. That report shows very clearly that the profits for CP Limited have absolutely skyrocketed in the period of time since CP has begun to smell the gravy train coming. Is there perhaps a relationship between where political Parties get their money from and the positions they take and which corporations in our society profit from those positions? No one is suggesting that an individual politician is corrupt and no one is suggesting that a Party is corrupt, but perhaps a political and economic system that allows this sort of thing—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I had the intuition to ask you to remind the Hon. Member who is speaking what clause we are dealing with, but I have decided instead to ask you to remind him what Bill we are dealing with.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has been listening closely to the Hon. Member and attempting to relate his remarks to the amendment before us. However, the Hon. Member for Kootenay West has the floor for another minute.

Mr. Kristiansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now that political donations can be traced through official Government records, we can see that there may indeed be a relationship between where political Parties get their financing and what position they take on issues in the House of Commons. That position can be measured against the profit performance of such companies as Canadian Pacific Limited and CP Transport at a time when we have amendments and resolutions before us such as we have today.

One has to wonder if in fact Members of the Conservative Party have a position on this question and whether or not they will make up their minds. We hope that they will. We hope that they will support this amendment and join the New Democratic Party in trying to get the best results for the people of Canada at the lowest possible cost. Let us not simply shovel out money by the truckload from the gravy train. That serves no useful purpose.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair hesitates to interrupt the Hon. Member but his allotted time has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be afforded the opportunity to speak on Motion No. 35. I have listened with a great deal of attention to the various contributions that have been made to this motion as well as previous motions by Hon. Members of the NDP and very occasionally by Hon. Members of the Conservative Party and even more occasionally by Hon. Members of the Liberal Party.

When listening to Members of the Progressive Conservative Party, I have noticed that many of them have made a great deal out of the fact that some of us from the New Democratic Party who are speaking on this motion come from British Columbia or from Toronto or from other parts of the country other than from the Prairies. This is quite true. Our entire Party is involved in the struggle over the Crow rate. I suppose that prairie farmers would much sooner listen to someone from Vancouver Island defend their interests than put up with the rather horrifying silence from some of the Members of the Conservative Party who have not had the gumption to get up and speak on these amendments.

It was rather interesting although depressing to note than when an amendment moved by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) was before the House earlier this week and last, at one point ten Members from the New Democratic Party spoke on his amendment and only one Member from the Tory Party spoke. It makes us wonder about the kind of support that these Members are giving to their own constituents who are concerned about this issue.

I shall refer specifically to Motion No. 35, Mr. Speaker, to would amend Clause 17(4) of the Bill which now reads as follows:

The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

Motion No. 35 would amend that by adding the following words:

"—but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission".

Very frankly, Mr. Speaker, this amendment is at best our third choice. Our first choice is to keep the Crow rate intact. We believe that this entire Bill is harmful to the prairie communities and to the Canadian economy in general. We would like to see the Government withdraw this Bill. That has been the basic intent of our Party and continues to be the basic intent of our Party. However, in some particular cases, we have some recommendations to make that would help to ease the hardship that this Bill will cause. Those recommendations represent our second choice.

With regard to the use of trucks to haul grain, our second choice was represented by Motion No. 34, which would have deleted the entire section, because we feel that subsidies to the trucking of grain will in fact be used to facilitate the abandonment of many branch lines on the Prairies by the railways. It is not true that we are trying to lock out the trucking industry; we simply do not want to subsidize it through branch line abandonment. We do not want to subsidize the trucking industry at the expense of many small communities that would suffer a great deal if the lines were abandoned.

I would like to quote briefly from the testimony of Mr. Charles Phelps, President of the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities, when he appeared before the Transport Committee in Regina on August 8, this year. He said:

Local governments are required to spend twice as much for road building and maintenance every time hauling mileage of farm products is doubled. Furthermore, rail line abandonment in many areas of Saskatchewan has become a significant contributor to the overall strain on the rural road system. This change has produced a direct reduction in the elevator delivery points in Saskatchewan, but has also concentrated traffic on some road lengths and added to the hauling distances.

Later in his testimony he said:

Continued rail line attrition will have a significant impact on municipalities' budget allocations and priorization. There is no doubt in our mind that the proposed Crow rate change will make necessary demands of the municipalities for additional services. Policing roads and enforcement of traffic load limits on each and every municipal road will become a necessity. This adds to the total cost of every rate payer within the municipality as well as to the taxpayers of Saskatchewan. All additional direct costs, whether maintenance, construction, or reconstruction related, will affect the disposable income and the taxable income of the rural producer. As the costs escalate, greater discrepancies will occur rurally, and the family farm will be eliminated, never to return.

In this Party we hope that Members of the House will support Motion No. 34 which would eliminate Clause 17(4) altogether. If it is not supported, then we urge upon the House the wisdom and justice of Motion No. 35, which also stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Motion No. 35 would limit subsidies to truckers to those areas which are not presently served by branch lines. We do not want to pay for a system of subsidies that will subvert the basic life of the community and will subvert the transportation system already in place. Some of my colleagues have pointed out the links between some trucking companies and the CPR. It is a well known fact that if any subsidies are available, Canadian Pacific will find some way to get its hands on them. It is a fact that over the years Canadian Pacific has received a total of $106 million in subsidies and 43 million acres of land for building the railway and putting the infrastructure in place. Now it wants to get out of its agreements and be subsidized for introducing a system of trucking.

I was interested in the speech given by the Hon. Member for Vegreville who brought up the question of bridge washouts. I would be interested to know where he was when this issue came up and was answered in committee on September 8.

Mr. Towers: He was there.

Mr. Manly: He might have been there, but it would have been helpful if he had paid attention to the question and answer. The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) asked the same basic question as follows:

The problem I see with Mr. Benjamin's subamendment "shall not from the primary elevator system" is that in my riding there is a branch line that goes down to Cardston, which is quite a ways off the Lethbridge-Medicine Hat line, and periodically the bridge goes out, and it seems to me that under those circumstances your subamendment would block the administrator from paying for that grain to go from the Cardston primary elevator.

The Hon. Member for Regina West answered that by saying—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Chair hesitates to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I have listened intently and with some concern to the debate on Motion

No. 35. On the one hand, the Liberal Party decided to give everything to the railroads and on the other hand, the NDP decided to stand in the way of any advancement whatsoever. I should like to make the position of this Party perfectly clear.

The situation of the primary producer in the wheat producing areas of the Prairies must be recognized. Certainly some rail lines have been abandoned. There are some people, however, who would suggest that more lines should be abandoned. I should like to put on record some of the work done by the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil). After an investigation, he recommended that 490 miles of line be placed in the permanent network up to the year 2000. He also recommended that 236 miles of line be frozen for five years pending the Hall recommendation to test the off-line elevator concept at Fisher Branch in Manitoba. This is basically what we are dealing with in Motion No. 34, which was debated yesterday, and in Motion No. 35, which was debated yesterday and today.

There is a good deal of confusion on the subject, Mr. Speaker. Apparently the Liberals are willing to give everything to the railroads, saying, "We cannot look at the position of the primary producer". The NDP, however, say, "We stand in the way of any advancement whatsoever". But this is the twentieth century, Mr. Speaker, and we have trucks that have 18 wheels under them. This Party would like to see better railroads and better roads and advancement in all areas of grain transportation. The result would be a better position for the primary producer.

Some Members of the NDP have said that the Conservative Party is all for rail line abandonment. I want to say to the NDP through you, Mr. Speaker, and to the producers, that no one has fought harder for the preservation of rail lines than the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw. At several hearings in my own riding we have made strong representations for the preservation of the rail lines. To disregard the suggestion that there might not be points where trucking would be useful for off-line elevators is irresponsible, and that is the position of the NDP.

It is probably no coincidence that newspaper headlines today show that the NDP has dropped to a new low of 14 per cent in the polls. That is a reflection on the type of irresponsible argument we have heard for a number of days. The Liberals have also dropped to a new low—23 per cent, which indicates that they want to give everything to the railways. Do not think for one minute, Mr. Speaker, that possibly the primary producer does not understand the situation better than anyone sitting in this House. He is out there on what I would call the firing line. He realizes the problem as it exists. It seems that the New Democratic Party has disregarded the fact that there may be a producer who is 50 or 100 miles from a rail line and where trucks would certainly be an advantage. That advantage should be used in the best interests of the primary producer. If we must, let us build better roads. If one goes back in the history of agriculture, in 1905 some 95 per cent of the people were involved in agriculture. They produced enough food to feed themselves, basically.

• (1710)

Mr. Flis: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The history of agriculture is very important and very interesting. However, I would remind the Hon. Member that we are concerned with a transportation Bill. What would guide Hon. Members on this side in how to vote for this subamendment proposed by the New Democratic Party would be if the Hon. Member could explain to the House why Conservative Members are willing to support the NDP subamendment to their Clause 17(4), which almost makes it null and void. I am having great difficulty in knowing how to vote on this because Clause 17(4) is a clause brought in by the Conservative Party. Now it is willing to support the NDP amendment which wipes out its own clause, which was proposed in committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I call to the attention of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) that debate at report stage must be strictly relevant to amendments which are before the House.

Mr. Gustafson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was just coming to the relevant part of why trucking is so important to the primary producer and to grain transportation. This is what we are talking about. If Hon. Members opposite do not understand that, then we are going to have a very difficult time to communicate the greater import of Motion No. 35. What I was saying—which was very relevant to the motion we are discussing—was that in 1905, 95 per cent of all the people in North America were directly related to agriculture. Today it is less than 4 per cent. Yet they produce enough food to feed everyone. If we are going to stand in the way of progress and say we are not going to build roads and, on the other hand, as the Government would say, we are going to abandon all branch lines, then we are going to have some problems. We must take the best of both, and that is what we in this Party have tried to do in respect of Clause 17, so that the producer can benefit both from a better branch line—as my colleague, the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) pointed out in his recommendations—better trucking and better roads. This would strengthen the position of the primary producer.

It has been my observation that on Motions Nos. 34 and 35, the New Democratic Party, particularly, has been playing politics. It has been digging itself deeper and deeper. If it is not careful, the headlines will not read only 14 per cent in the polls but the pools will show that Party going down to 10 per cent or 12 per cent. I believe what we are seeing here is a Party struggling for survival. In order to save their seats, Hon. Members are making some irresponsible statements in the House with regard to the situation of transportation which exists, in reality, for the primary producer.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to hear my good friend, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) talk about how irresponsible this Party is with respect to Motion No. 35. I understand, though, he is going to be supporting Motion No. 35. I wonder, therefore, why he is making those kinds of comments. I believe it shows that he is speaking for the sake of speaking. I am not sure if I could really trust him when he makes that kind of speech, then later on votes for the motion.

Mr. Gustafson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. My direct reference was to Motion No. 34, which was absolutely out of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House is debating Motion No. 35. The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville.

Mr. Nystrom: The debate, Mr. Speaker, is on Motion No. 35. I know the Hon. Member for Assiniboia is a relatively new Member of the House, but he has been here for at least four years, I believe, and he should realize that we have finished with Motion No. 34. He is out of order in speaking about something which the House has already dealt with. There is going to be a deferred vote. He cannot go back and reflect on Motion No. 34.

Another comment of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia which I found very strange coming from a person who is a farmer, was that this Party is totally anti-trucking. I wish he would read Motion No. 35, because what that motion says, if paraphrased, is that where there is not a branch line or a rail line, we should be subsidizing trucking for the farmers who have to live there. Therefore, if the Hon. Member is concerned about trucking, this is the motion which would allow some money to subsidize trucking for communities such as Jedburgh, Wishart, Bankend and West Bend. I hear the Tories making fun of some very nice towns and villages in my riding, and in the riding of the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Anguish). I feel those people are great people and deserve help. Under Motion No. 35 those people would get some assistance. They would receive that assistance in a way that would not punish people who live on branch lines. Under the current legislation, the money which would go to subsidized trucking—the Hon. Member for Assiniboia knows this—would come out of the rail line rehabilitation fund. In other words, some money is taken out of one pocket and put in a different pocket. People who live on branch lines would not have enough money to have these lines rehabilitated.

What we in this Party are saying is that there should be some subsidization for trucking for people who do not have a rail line. That money should come out of the money which is going to be allocated by the Crow Bill, which is before the House today. Therefore, Motion No. 35 would amend the Bill. In fact, it would amend Clause 17(4) of the Bill. It would allow for grain producers to be subsidized to truck their grain where there is no branch line, and I believe that is fair. I believe that is an argument which should be supported, not just by the Conservative Members of this House but by my friends in the Liberal Party as well.

I know the Hon. Member across the way, the Hon. Member for Gaspé (Mr. Cyr), is concerned about people who live in far-reaching communities. He is nodding his head. I am sure he would be concerned with making sure that people who live in small and isolated communities are not discriminated against by a very centralized and bureaucratic transportation system.

In trying to persuade you, Mr. Speaker, as a well-intentioned soul from Ottawa West, I will give you four very good examples from my riding. We have four rail lines which we have fought to keep in the Yorkton-Melville area. One goes into Humboldt-Lake Centre. In fact, one also goes into McKenzie, and I do not see the Hon. Member for McKenzie (Mr. Korchinski) in this House very often.

An Hon. Member: Never!

Mr. Nystrom: Someone said "Never", but it is not quite never. I saw him here once, I believe, this session. One of our rail lines goes from Preeceville to Kelvington. It goes through a lot of small villages and through some bigger towns. Those people, about four or five years ago, banded together to form a "Save Our Rail Line" committee, Mr. Speaker, and they were successful to a certain extent. They were able to persuade the CTC and the powers that be, through a lot of work and lobbying, that the rail line as far as Preeceville, the largest town, should be preserved. But so far we have not had that kind of luck with the rest of the rail line. It runs on through Lintlaw, into Kelvington, which are in the riding of the Hon. Member for Mackenzie. I remember that about 13 months ago I and the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) went to the CTC hearings in Kelvington to present a brief, along with hundreds of other farmers, to save this rail line.

• (1720)

If this rail line is not saved, Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 35 would allow some funds to be used to subsidize the trucking of grain for those farmers who live in the towns and divisional points along that particular rail line. The priority is to save the rail line, rehabilitate it, but if it is not, then this Party would like to see those farmers subsidized in trucking their grain.

Another example, Mr. Speaker, is a line in my riding which also formed a "Save Our Rail Line" committee. A couple of little places, one called Willowbrook, the other called Jedburgh, with a line into the city of Yorkton. We tried to save that line but we lost the fight. What are the people in Jedburgh and Willowbrook going to do?

Mr. Malone: VIA Rail.

Mr. Nystrom: There is no VIA Rail going into Jedburgh. In fact, at one time Jedburgh was a booming little town. It had a few stores, a barbershop, service stations and garages, a good school, grain elevators, but then gradually it went downhill. The final blow was when the railway was pulled out of Jedburgh, because when that happened farmers decided to haul their grain to other places like Theodore or Melville and other communities in the area.

Mr. Friesen: Elbow.

Mr. Nystrom: Once again, I have wealthy Conservatives from Alberta and B.C. making fun of my small towns and villages, Mr. Speaker. But I am very proud of those people in those towns. They deserve some help and assistance in hauling their grain to market because they help feed some of these wealthy Tories from Alberta and British Columbia.

Mr. Friesen: You are so pious.

Mr. Nystrom: They help build a strong economy. In many cases these people came from eastern and central Europe as pioneers and built a province and country. They settled land which was difficult to clear, some of it submarginal. They worked hard and they must be defended in this House, as should their sons and daughters. So I do not appreciate any smart-aleck remarks by city Tories of British Columbia or Alberta about the poor and ordinary people in some of our villages in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Malone: My city has 160 people.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, whether there are 160 people in a town or 80 or 50, they are important to me.

Mr. Malone: That is right.

Mr. Nystrom: I do not apologize for that. I know all Tories do not feel that way. I know some who respect people, but obviously some of them do not.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, I call his attention to the rule that requires strict relevance in debate on amendments at report stage.

Mr. Kristiansen: It is hard to be relevant with all those irrelevant Tories around.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I have given you a couple of very good examples which I think would persuade a fair person such as yourself from Ottawa that we have a case for making sure people in the small villages, towns and hamlets are not discriminated against. I know the Hon. Member for Assiniboia agrees with me; I can see crocodile tears now rolling from his eyes. I think sometimes he understands that we should not discriminate against people in small communities.

There is another rail line which starts in the town of Foam Lake in my riding and goes into the riding of Humboldt-Lake Centre. It goes through a little village in my riding called West Bend, into a town called Bankend and Wishart, both in Humboldt-Lake Centre. Once again a valiant fight was put up for people in those communities to try to save that rail line. But it was not saved, and Motion No. 35 will say that where there is not a rail line, such as on the line from Wishart to Foam Lake, we should subsidize the trucking of grain and help those farmers haul their grain to market. In this case it will be perhaps the town of Wynyard, Lestock, Foam Lake, Elfros, or any other villages which might be nearby. That is what Motion No. 35 is going to do. That is why we have to make sure it passes. I am thankful that, I think from what I am hearing, Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Party would agree with that. I hope we can persuade Government Members across the way that it is important that the funding be there under the Crow Bill and it not be taken from the rail line rehabilitation program.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Mazankowski: A point of order, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Hon. Member would allow me to put a question to him?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With the unanimous consent of the House, because the Hon. Member's time has expired. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Mazankowski: Flis said no.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to speak on this amendment which would ensure that moving grain by truck would not be allowed from shipping points on rail lines not yet abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission. We are concerned about the continued existence of rail branch lines on much of the Prairies. We really do find it disconcerting and disappointing that our friends to the right of us here—

Mr. Malone: Far right.

Mr. Sargeant: Yes, to the far right, as my friend points out. They really are not sharing our concern for small prairie towns. We have also noticed a lot of inconsistency in much of the debate which has come from my friends to my far right, the extreme right, on the subject of preserving rail lines in western Canada as it relates to the shipping of grain by truck. A couple of days ago we heard the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) saying there are areas where lines have already been taken out and there are major problems for farmers who find themselves several miles from elevators. It is in the best interests of producers to have something in this Bill to give them an equal opportunity to get their grain to market as persons who happen to have their farm situated along a main line or large elevator. Here he was seemingly supporting the concerns of the producers, yet this afternoon he is criticizing our Motion No. 35. It does not seem to follow, Mr. Speaker.

An interesting comment came from the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) a few days ago when he said that his Party believes in free enterprise and that the trucker is an entrepreneur. He is the person they are trying to protect. They were also trying to protect the producer so he could get his product to market most efficiently. That is rather amazing, Mr. Speaker, given the fact that the two major trucking companies which have darn near a monopoly on the hauling of grain on the Prairies, are owned by CN and CP. Indeed, I am told that just within the last few months, to protect their already very healthy profits, CP has bought four small trucking companies in Saskatchewan. To me, this indicates that CN and CP, in hauling by truck, will not provide an especially efficient system for the producers. They will probably supply much of the same darned thing that we have right now, with the two rail companies having a monopoly and providing considerably less than satisfactory service to the producers on the Prairies.

• (1730)

In the debate a few days ago on Motion No. 34, we heard the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta) complaining that many farmers had no choice but to ship by truck because there were no branch lines in their areas, much the same as had been said by others. What I found to be contradictory in his comment was that he was supporting a resolution, indeed Clause 17(4), a clause which will lead to more abandonment of rail lines on the Prairies and to more cases such as those he was lamenting in his speech a few days ago.

Protecting the branch lines has really become a matter of life and death for many prairie communities. I do not really exaggerate when I say "life and death", because for many communities the railway is really their raison d'être. Without the rail lines in their area, the elevator goes. Your Honour might have visited smaller prairie towns. Indeed, I could take you into a number of communities in my constituency where the entire focus of the town is the grain elevator. If the rail line goes, the grain elevator goes. If, instead of hauling his grain into Fisher branch, a farmer starts taking it by truck into Ashern or Arborg, more likely Arborg, he will stop there to buy his parts and fertilizer. Indeed, he will do his grocery shopping and make his clothing purchases in a different town. That will affect the businesses already in place in the town to which he previously delivered, perhaps Fisher branch in this scenario. The Government wants to thin down the small businesses in these small towns on the Prairies.

It is equally surprising that my friends to the extreme right who claim to be such good friends of small business show such a lack of concern for small businesses in so many small towns in prairie Canada. It really goes beyond small businesses. Once the businesses die and the people decide to move on to other communities, the services go. Last fall, the Canadian Transport Commission held hearing in Fisher branch, in my constituency, on the subject of abandoning the Inwood subdivision. A number of groups, including students from the high school, made presentations to the CTC, really arguing this same point, that without their rail line their community would go. The high school students made a very good presentation, very well thought out and presented, expressing their fear that abandoning the rail line could eventually lead to the closure of their school. This, I am sure Your Honour will agree, would be a very harmful and sad event to happen in any small community. So when I say that it is a life and death struggle for many of these towns, I really do not think that I am overstating the situation.

When Hon. Members speak of a more efficient system of transporting grain such as hauling grain by truck, they are not really considering the whole scenario or the additional costs to the local areas. For instance, the cost to—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair hesitates to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allocated to him has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Motion No. 35. I hear my friends—I use that word in the meaning that we give to it in the House—from the NDP speaking of inconsistencies. I just want to draw the attention of the Chair to the inconsistencies that I see. First, there is the view that trucking is hard on the highways, as I have heard from Members of the NDP. I have heard that the big trucks rolling over the highways will destroy the roads. One of the Members of that Party even mentioned that the former Premier of a certain Province had done such a terrible job that there are many gravel roads left. However, we all know, and we now see that the NDP is recognizing this, that if one is hauling grain on a single-axle three-ton truck, one is going down the road with six tires under the truck, or if one is hauling grain on a straight tandem, one has ten tires on the road, or if one is hauling it on a semi, one has eighteen tires on the road. It does not take much sense to figure out, in the same way as does any department of highways in any Province in Canada, that that is why loads of more poundage are allowed on tandems and on semis than on single-axle trucks or, indeed, a three-ton with dual wheels.

Speaking of inconsistencies, it is strange what I heard in this House the other day, that trucks would destroy the roads, trucks would destroy the community and trucks would add an additional burden to the municipalities. It is now apparent that Members of the NDP, with their amendment, have realized that it makes for more efficiency and for more sense to have an organized movement of grain through using larger trucks than most farmers, in my area anyway, have the ability to purchase.

We heard the last Hon. Member speaking of the big companies that would haul the grain. I am not sure, with the amendment put forth by the NDP, who will haul the grain. I am not sure, and I hope someone can tell me, if there is to be an off-line elevator concept with this motion, or are the lines to be completely abandoned and, along with that, the elevators abandoned and, the farmers hauling their own grain through an arrangement with the Administrator, when the NDP said he should not have such authority? Or will there be elevators maintained in an off-line concept? There would be duplication in that case. There would be a handle when the grain came in, a handle when it went out and a handle when it was unloaded at the other end. We do not know the exact meaning of this amendment.

Mr. Nystrom: Are you supporting it?

Mr. McKnight: We do not know whether Members of the NDP will use their influence, and I really hope they do, because in all the areas in my riding where abandonment has taken place, the farmers have gone to the local elevator companies and asked, "Would you leave the elevator here?" The elevator companies all say, "Oh, no, we cannot leave our elevators here because there is not a rail line". The farmers ask, "Will you upgrade your elevator to handle a tandem truck and a semi?" They say, "No, we cannot because there is not a rail line". I hope that the NDP and Members in the western part of Canada will use their influence to persuade those elevator companies to leave their facilities where the lines are abandoned. It makes sense to have off-line elevators where there is not a railroad. We have discussed that in the House on several occasions.

The other day I heard the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish), and I believe he was speaking from experience, speak concerning areas in the northern part of his riding that could be served by a trucking amendment. We know that in the Peace River district a trucking amendment could be to the advantage of the people in those ridings. However, as we have often said in the House, what the producers in western Canada want most is to have their rail lines. The Government has made a commitment to upgrade those lines. We were shocked when, after we put forward our amendment, we heard the deputy minister say that his undersdanding was that there would be a trade-off between branch line rehabilitation money, which is not part of this Bill, and some form of trucking assistance. We had not anticipated that occurence at all because the Government had made its commitment for branch line rehabilitation. In my riding where there is the Dodsland sub and the Matador sub, they will no longer be able to haul grain without the continued rehabilitation funds. The commitments made by the federal Government were accepted in good faith by the elevator companies as well as by the producers in those areas.

Therefore, when we consider the off-line elevator concept, I hope the New Democratic Party means that it will use its influence, as we would and the producers will, to maintain an elevator system where a line has been abandoned. If it does not do that, the whole amendment will fall through the slats. There will not be any advantage to the producers of grain in western Canada.

We have heard, and continue to hear, about the large trucking companies. I know of approximately six trucking companies in my area, such as Loppacher Turners, the Leys Brothers, Roberge, Kindersley Freighters and Biggar Transport. All of those firms have four or five trucks. There is also Smith Transport in my area—I do not want the NDP to get upset. It belongs to Hershel Smith in Sanctuary which is a town of 15 people where he has five employees. It is small businesses such as those which we are talking about when we deal with the trucking companies. We are not concerned about companies that have had the ability to generate over $10 million in revenue in the last year, such as those four companies which Canadian Pacific took over in Saskatchewan. While I have not seen them hauling grain, I am not concerned about them because they have their licensing and their authorities. That is why Canadian Pacific purchased them, not to haul grain.

The people who will benefit from a trucking amendment will be primarily the producers and the small independent truckers who own from three to six rigs. Those truckers spend their money in the local community, buy their fuel from the local bulk dealers, buy their tires from the local garage and have their maintenance done locally. In addition, they provide a payroll in those small communities in western Canada which essentially do not have any other industry. When one considers the benefits coming from an employer who employs five people in small communities, and I mean small communities such as mine which has 25 people, one realize that be is probably more beneficial than the railroads are in Melville, Biggar in my constituency, or Wilkie. They spend their total income within those small communities.

I hope the next New Democratic Party speaker will be able to explain whether their amendment will provide for an off-line elevator system or whether the elevators will be removed as they have been in the past, because there is no railroad. That has happened on every line in my part of Canada that has been abandoned. I hope those Members will use their influence, as we have, to maintain the off-line elevator.

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, since Hon. Members may have forgotten, Motion No. 35 reads:

> That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out line 25 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:
> the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. Beatty: Could we hear that again?

Miss Jewett: Seriously, I believe that Hon. Members have forgotten that the motion simply asks that the agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on the rail lines which have not been abandoned, and I emphasize, on rail lines that have not been abandoned.

Another point I think I should reiterate is that the federal Government, under Transport Canada or the CTC, has not conducted any studies to ascertain the impact on highway and road costs, provincial and municipal budgets or total system costs.

While I do not know if Hon. Members have looked to comparable areas to see how problems have been dealt with there, I have studied the State of Iowa, which is an intensive grain growing area. That State underwent a transfer of grain movement from railway to road into inland terminals similar to the proposal in Bill C-155. It was discovered that the highways there had been worn out by heavy trucks up to three times faster than the Government of Iowa could afford to repair or replace them. As a result, the State of Iowa developed a program to subsidize existing railroad branch lines by keeping the grain moving by rail. I refer Members particularly to the 1982 Iowa railroad analysis update, which I read some time ago and feel would be useful to introduce in this debate.

I am sorry that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) is not here, but I wish to read the following excerpt, for the benefit of Government Members, from the railroad analysis update:

The assault on Iowa's railroad system has resulted in a sense of urgency on the part of the Iowa Department of Transportation and the General Assembly to develop means for preserving those lines necessary to the state's economy.

An article by John Gallagher states:

The first thing the Iowa Department of Transport did was to conduct an economic analysis—

Which is what we are asking for among other things.

—of all the branch lines in the state which provided the basis for the 1978 Iowa Railroad Plan. This plan was updated in 1980 and 1982.

● (1750)

Basically, it compares the benefits which the state will receive from the preservation of service on the various segments of the railroad system with the cost of maintaining such service. The analysis of the state railroad system is computerized and can easily be drawn upon and updated.

When a railroad requests permission to abandon a branchline in Iowa, the benefits and costs derived from the 1978 study are updated and a revised benefit/costs ratio is computed. The state can then intercede in the hearings and protect the interests of shippers and the public.

I am sure Hon. Members have not realized—and I see one sleeping.

An Hon. Member: What is his riding?

Miss Jewett: It is the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen) who is sleeping.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: Now he is awake.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, is the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) referring to Highway 30 which runs from Cedar Rapids to Clinton, Iowa, or is she referring to Highway 64 which goes from Dubuque to Davenport, Iowa, and includes the community of Comanche?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I am glad the Hon. Member asked that question because what Iowa did was not to pick one or the other. It looked at the whole system.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): I hope all the people in the gallery are enjoying this.

Miss Jewett: Let me continue. We are talking about the cost-benefit question. The article continues:

Benefits are calculated in three parts:

User benefits—the "total annual transportation and handling costs savings" to shippers if a line is upgraded and not abandoned.

Railroad benefits—the "net contribution a rail line makes to a railroad's viability if the line is rehabilitated rather than abandoned." If this is a profit it is added to the benefits; if it is a loss it is subtracted.

Public benefits—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the Chair is having difficulty relating the documents to the amendments specifically before the House.

An Hon. Member: And so is she.

Mr. Anguish: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that you are very quick to call our Members to relevancy.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Anguish: It is very hard for a Member in this House to stand up and try to be relevant to the Bill when there is all this chatter over here. If you did your job in the Chair—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. With all due respect to the Hon. Member, the Chair has listened very carefully.

Mr. Anguish: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please sit down? The Chair has been listening very carefully to the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) and invites the Hon. Member to continue and relate her remarks to the amendment before the House.

Miss Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I do believe they are quite relevant. I am talking about the cost-benefit analysis that ought to be done.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I think it is very clear that the New Democratic Party has run out of speakers who know anything about Bill C-155.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is not making a point of order.

Mr. Anguish: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam has the floor, and she has an opportunity to make her point.

Miss Jewett: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I was trying very hard to show why there should not be an abandonment until there is a cost-benefit analysis done. I was referring to the Iowa study because Iowa did abandon railways and then discovered, on the basis of the cost-benefit analysis, that it had made a mistake. I thought that was really quite relevant to the motion. Also, I just wanted to convince my friends that I did know what I was discussing.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Jewett: I just wanted to make the third and last point which concerns public benefits. It does relate to the cost-benefit analysis that I think we should be undertaking and are not. The article continues:

Public benefits—"the primary public benefit from an upgrading project is highway cost savings resulting from additional trucking avoided if the line is upgraded rather than abandoned." The quantities shipped in the past on the line in question are converted to equivalent truckloads, their destinations determined, and the impact on the highway system computed.

The point I wanted to make is that that kind of analysis has not been done by the CTC and that it should be done before we proceed any further with the Government's Bill. By passing this motion we would facilitate such studies being done.

Some Hon. Members: More.

Some Hon. Members: Continue.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to enter into debate on Motion No. 35. Before I begin my remarks I want to compliment the Hon. Member who preceded me on her excellent speech.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Cooper: I found it extremely informative and it is one that I will be quite happy to circulate in my riding.

This whole business of trucking and the transportation of grain, as I have expressed earlier in speaking to Motion No. 34, is extremely important to the Peace country. As I have said so many times in the House, it is extremely important because we have a really serious problem with a lack of railway facilities. When you lack rail facilities, you do not have any alternative but to use trucks.

Motion No. 34 caused me a great deal of concern. I was surprised the NDP brought in such an amendment because I know its Members have spoken time and time again about representing the producers who are represented by those people in the Peace country. They could not accomplish that with Motion No. 34.

In Motion No. 35 we are into a little different situation. In that motion it is stated grain can be shipped from points which have not been abandoned on existing rail lines. That is why in my riding that does not affect me. I do not have rail lines that have been abandoned. It is difficult to abandon something that has never been put there in the first place. I see some Government Members on the other side. I want to bring that to their attention. I would very much like a rail line in this part of the country. Failing that, we want the opportunity to use trucks. I think it is important at this point in the debate to bring into focus how serious and how important trucking has been to the Canadian people and the various Canadian industries over the last few years.

In the mid-1940s, shortly after the Second World War, things were beginning to happen in the Peace country in the North. In that particular region of the country there was really only one form of transportation. Of course, it was trucking. We in the North have grown up with a real sense of gratitude for truckers and a real sense of their significance and importance. Had it not been for the truckers, the entire North, right up into the Territories, areas like Yellowknife and Hay River, would simply have not been opened up and developed. The same thing applies when we talk about grain in my area, areas that are still new land, land that has to be brought onstream, brought into production, and land that will create employment and employment opportunities for the people in my region. That will filter throughout Canada. You cannot accomplish that with railways when they do not exist. Your only alternative is to look at trucks.

I can see that the time is running out very quickly. I want to say very clearly that any motion that deals with trucking and transportation of grain is an absolute must. We must allow that to happen because it has to be allowed to exist in order to protect regions such as the one I represent in the Peace country.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

SHIPPING—MONITORING OF UNCTAD AGREEMENT—EFFECT ON CANADA. (B) REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF STUDIES

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, I rise to discuss further a concern with respect to the ratification or the putting in place about a week ago of new UNCTAD arrangements respecting liner conferences. I originally expressed my concern, in a question to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy), about the apparent absence of monitoring or any ongoing analysis which might give direction to the Canadian maritime industry; indeed, not only them but the users of vessels for import and export.

I was concerned because at the time, as reported in Hansard for October 3, the Minister indicated:

I recognize his concern and would certainly undertake again to ensure that a proper monitoring and analysis are done. We would try to prepare such an assessment for him.

That was the first time I had heard that any monitoring would in fact take place, but we do not know the form of that monitoring. We are not clear as to what kind of analysis will be prepared. In any event, the Minister should not do it for me, he should do it for the industry that is so vitally and deeply involved. It is of some major consequence because it involves 40 per cent of our exports, 40 per cent of our imports and a massive amount of trading. I think we are up around $5 billion in waterborne transport trade annually. That is an enormous amount of money for the movement of goods both in and out of the country.

Perhaps I could express my concern a little more directly. Now that the Government has in fact indicated that it is considering certain measures with respect to the new agreement, will the Parliamentary Secretary undertake to make these measures or proposals known to the marine industry or those who use that industry before they are implemented, so that the community of interest can make an input from its point of view? Then the Government, trade people, external people and transport people will understand exactly what they need to learn from the experience under this form of control in the liner conferences. I ask the Parliamentary Secretary whether he will give some undertaking to review what is under consideration before it is in fact put in place. There is an obvious advantage to this both from the point of view of the industry and the point of view of the Government. I am sure it would be facilitated by the extension of such a courtesy.

More generally we are concerned about the absence of a policy. We have known we were approaching 57, 58 or 60 signatories that would represent the required percentage of volume by movement exported and imported. We have known this for some time. We knew that the latest round of UNCTAD talks would likely produce an agreement, but we still had no policy in place. This is what we are concerned about.

This can be demonstrated by the fact that shipping lines—some Canadian-owned offshore registered, some offshore-owned but shipping in and out of Canada on a quasi-regular basis—have already approached Canadian embassies in South America and elsewhere in the developing world seeking that policy and certification which might in fact lend them the opportunity to claim they are in fact designated Canadian carriers. We have a vital concern about that, but the policy should be clearly stated. It should reflect industry's concern and be clearly stated. It should be an understandable policy and one that clearly enables our embassies to give proper direction so that confusion will not flow to carriers who seek to act as designated Canadian carriers.

The Parliamentary Secretary's advice to us on this matter tonight will be appreciated. I know it will be concise and I know it will be informative. He certainly is aware of the difficulties being faced by waterborne carriers now that in fact the new code of ethics is a matter of practice.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as someone who chaired a special parliamentary task force on how Canada can improve its trade with other countries, and as someone who has a Private Member's Bill in the House dealing with a Canadian merchant marine, I would like to compliment the Hon. Member on being such a champion of the marine industry. I know of the interventions he has made with the previous Minister, and now with the new Minister, on the establishment of a Canadian merchant marine, on all related issues and on the issue of UNCTAD that he raises tonight.

At the United Nations Diplomatic Conference on the Code of Conduct for Liner Conferences, Canada abstained in the vote for three reasons which I would like to give to the Hon. Member. First, Canada feared that the implementation of the cargo-sharing provisions, of the code which were 40-40-20, and the rights afforded national lines might lead to higher freight rates. Second, it was felt that some uncertainties existed in the text in regard to the nomination of national lines, their right to membership in conferences and the dispute settlement procedure. Third, it was feared that the implementation of the code might result in a marked change in the competition in international shipping on which Canada has relied and benefited.

Because these concerns remain, it has appeared preferable for Canada not to accede to the code but to keep the question under continuing review in the light of developments in Canadian shipping policy, international shipping policy generally and in the implementation of the code in particular.

In May, 1982, the Government of Canada organized a seminar on the code where various interested parties such as representatives of shippers, ship owners, labour and Government expressed their views on the implications of the code as well as on the options open to Canada. Both Canadian shippers and ship owners firmly opposed Canada's ratification of the code. I know that many of these shippers and ship owners are well known to the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall).

It is believed that the effects of the code on Canadian shipping interests will be limited as the code will apply only between two contracting countries. The majority of the Canadian trade is with other OECD or developed countries and only two of these countries have adopted the convention to date. These countries, Germany and the Netherlands, have entered a reservation stating that the provisions of the code will not be applied to intra-EEC trades and intra-OECD trades on a reciprocal basis. It is understood that some other OECD countries will likely adopt the code and that all EEC countries have agreed to enter the same reservation.

Although our liner trade with developing countries is small, there is concern nonetheless with the practices of some developing countries which have unilaterally applied the cargo-sharing provisions of the code and, in some cases, gone beyond the code. Canada is considering what actions might be taken on a bilateral basis to protect Canadian interests in such situations.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the Government will be pleased to keep the Hon. Member informed of any change in the Government's approach as it continues to monitor this question.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—FATAL ACCIDENT AT LAC LA BICHE—ESTABLISHMENT OF BOARD OF INQUIRY. (B) AGE OF EQUIPMENT

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, it is with sadness that I rise to speak at this time but I must deal with that tragic accident that occurred at Lac La Biche, Alberta, on September 30, in which three young lives were snuffed out.

● (1810)

I appreciate having received the letters General Thériault sent to members of the families and I should like to put them on record. The first one is to Mr. and Mrs. Ian McKinnon, R.R. 2, Lousana, Alberta. He wrote:

1. Please accept my most sincere condolences, and those of the Canadian Forces, following the death of your son, Richard Hebert Norton, in a vehicle accident at Lac La Biche, Alberta

2. I very much regret that such peacetime military service accidents do occur from time to time. Canada and the Canadian Forces are indebted to your son for his service to his country. Signed G.C.E. Thériault, General

The same letter went out to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Duguay at 203-4811, 67th Street in Red Deer. The third young man was from Airdrie just outside my constituency. His name was McDonald.

One of the concerns I expressed in the question I put to the Minister that day was that no one would be made a scapegoat as a result of the malfunctioning of any equipment that they used. We all know that the trucks that those members of the force used were anywhere from 30 to 40 years old. It is very easy to understand how a vehicle of that vintage could malfunction. I was as concerned with the Minister's answer to my question, reported at p. 27665 of Hansard, when he said:

I would indicate to the hon. gentleman that indeed there is going to be a board of inquiry. I will seriously consider, having received the report, what portion of that report can be made public.

We are not at war, Mr. Speaker. Surely the parents of those young men are entitled to know exactly what happened. If the Government failed to provide the proper equipment for members of the force we should know about it. Neither the Minister nor anyone in Cabinet nor Government should hide behind someone in the forces and use them as a scapegoat. If there was a malfunction of equipment, then it is easy to understand how the accident happened. I would hope that members of the force would give a little more credence to the human aspects when something like this happens.

I was contacted by neighbours of the families involved who were very upset and angry at the lack of consideration shown by the Department toward the families. The accident happened at noon on a Friday. There is a very fine gentleman who is padre at the Canadian Forces Base, Penhold. I know that if the Department of National Defence had contacted him he would have driven over to see both families and to notify them of what took place. Instead, a call went through from the Colonel Belcher Hospital in Calgary and a minister in Three Hills, which is quite far from where the family lived, went to see them. He did not know the family or any of the details of the accident. It is too bad that things happened this way. I think that in time of peace greater consideration could be given to people caught up in this sad situation.

The padre from Penhold is a friend of mine and I know he would have gone to see the family and help explain things to them. There were only two boys in the McKinnon family and now the oldest one is gone. The neighbours speak very highly of the family and certainly the family is suffering. More consideration should have been shown. I understand they were told a car would pick them up to take them to the funeral which was supposed to be at two o'clock on a Wednesday. They waited until a quarter after one. There was still no car. The car had broken down, but they had not been notified of this. To me, this is totally unacceptable. As I said earlier, the minister from Three Hills was the one who told them on the Friday night that their boy had been killed and that they should call the funeral home on Saturday morning. They could then find out exactly what the details were. They phoned the funeral home and found it had not been contacted at all. It was not until Sunday night that they actually knew what was going on.

Certainly I feel that the Department was really lacking insofar as its treatment of this family is concerned. I believe we can do better. I know that you and I agree on that, Mr. Speaker. It is the responsibility of all of us because when anyone joins the force, that person becomes a part of us and we are a part of that person. I would hope that the members of the force would take this into consideration and not be so impersonal when it comes to deaths in a family, especially tragic deaths such as these.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Hudecki) and on behalf of the Minister himself, I am pleased that the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) has given me an opportunity to discuss matters relating to the tragic accident at Lac La Biche. I would like to join him, the Parliamentary Secretary and the Minister in offering condolences, not only to the families mentioned by the Hon. Member in the House today, but to the extended families and friends of those who died as a result of this tragic accident.

I was in this Chamber when the Hon. Member directed his question and his supplementary on October 3, 1983 to the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Blais). I want to strongly object to the inference made in his supplementary question considering the road worthiness of this type of vehicle. Although the fleet is aging, all the vehicles are maintained to a set standard and in accordance with stringently laid down CF vehicle maintenance policy. If the vehicle cannot meet those standards, it is not used.

It is much too early to make judgments on the cause of this accident. I can only repeat what the Minister stated in the House in response to the Hon. Member's question, that it is a given that the board of inquiry is competent and that an objective analysis of the facts surrounding the accident will be made.

The inspection policy specifies that the driver will check the following before the vehicle is taken on the road each day: tires for wear, inflation, pressure and security, all lights and turn signals, windshield wipers, horn, handbrake, fluid levels, all engine belts for wear and tightness, and must ensure that the fire extinguisher functions. Any defects noted must be corrected either by the driver or vehicle technicians before the vehicle is taken on the road. Technical inspections are carried out by unit technicians every six months or 10,000 kilometers, whichever comes first. These inspections are detailed checks of the complete vehicle and associated systems. All detected deficiencies are corrected after these inspections and the vehicles are grounded or taken out of service until these deficiencies are corrected.

In effect, semi-annual inspections serve as a preventive maintenance measure because partially worn components which are about to fail are replaced. In addition to the semi-annual inspections, independent teams are formed in brigade groups and bases across Canada and Europe to validate the standard of maintenance in units.

I see you are indicating that my time is up, Mr. Speaker. I would just like to conclude by saying that, knowing the Minister as well as I do, I know he will give credence to the human aspect of such a tragedy. I know that this humanity will be reflected in the Department of National Defence under his leadership.

EMPLOYMENT—REQUEST FOR FORESTRY JOB-CREATION PROGRAM

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, on September 28 I asked the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) about the need for a job creation program in the forest industry which would begin to meet the needs of some of Canada's young people. I mentioned a continuing rate of 22 per cent among Canada's youth, to which the Minister objected, saying that in fact the unemployment rate for young people was under 20 per cent. In fact, Mr. Speaker, an OECD report released the day before had predicted that the 22 per cent unemployment rate would continue through 1984 and only drop by one percentage point in 1985. But whether the rate is 22 per cent, 20 per cent, 19 per cent or even 18 per cent or down to 10 per cent, the fact is that right now there is a tragic waste of our young people.

● (1820)

This was brought home to me earlier in September when I, along with my colleague in the British Columbia legislature, met with a group of about 60 young workers who were part of an EBAP program working out of Sooke. During the last several months they have been involved in thinning and pruning and soil rehabilitation. They knew the program was coming to an end at the end of the month and they asked us what hope there was of a continuation.

I made some investigations and found that all EBAP applications were finished as of September 30 and there was no specific forestry component in the new Canada Works Program. When I asked the Minister about this he finally admitted that the forestry program was indeed coming to an end. He said the Government was considering ways of supplementing it. He quite frankly pointed to the Government of British Columbia for its failure to support federal initiatives in forestry. Mr. Speaker, I would be the last person to defend the Social Credit Government in British Columbia with its abysmal record in forestry as in every field of human endeavour. Right now it is engaged in a repressive restraint program involving a cut of 25 per cent across the board in all Government staff. This will seriously hurt the forest industry in British Columbia. Of course, the Province has consistently dragged its feet in concluding a federal/provincial forestry agreement that would enable federal funds to flow into a decent forestry program. However, Mr. Speaker, my point is that provincial failure cannot be an excuse for the federal Government's refusal to act. Forestry is just too important, not only to British Columbia but to Canada as a whole. This is an area where the need of our young people for jobs is directly related to the need for a forestry regeneration program and job creation, not only now but ten, twenty, thirty, fourty or even one hundred years down the road. We should be putting some of our young people to work in this area.

I was very impressed with the submission made to the Royal Commission on the Economic Union and Development Prospects for Canada by the Association of British Columbia Professional Foresters. I wish every Member in the House could read that submission. I would like to read just a few of the facts they have in their brief. In Canada more than 800,000 hectares are harvested annually in our country, but less than 25 per cent are planted or seeded. The Canadian Forestry Service estimates that 25 per cent to 50 per cent of the area harvested annually fails to regenerate or reverts to non-commercial weeds. In British Columbia more than one million hectares need reforestation and that Province is adding 20,000 to 50,000 hectares to the situation annually. Recent B.C. budget cuts will increase the problems, as I pointed out.

If we look at the Canadian Forestry Service we see that the number of person years available for research has declined by more than 50 per cent since 1968. This is indicative of the federal Government's neglect of that area. If we were going to properly meet the needs in British Columbia alone there would be a need for another 2,000 provincial foresters, 400 more specialists and 7,000 additional forest technologists.

● (1825)

The Canadian Forest Service is part of Environment Canada. The amount of $69.4 million was allocated to this branch. In the same Environment Ministry, $146 million has been budgeted for the Atmospheric Environment Service and $275 million for Parks Canada. It is a national disgrace that the federal Government spends twice as much money monitoring the weather and climate as it does of our forests.

The federal Government's own Department estimates that the benefits of improved management would create 100,000 new jobs, increase product sales by $22 billion, increase exports by $12 billion, and create additional tax revenues of $3 billion. Therefore, the Commission recommended that federal initiatives in forestry job creation programs be continued and expanded.

While we believe that forest management work, silvaculture and other activities should not be viewed as a source of low income employment, we do support any initiatives that result in improved management. I urge the Government not only to consider the question, but also to act now and bring in a long term program that will meet the needs of our young people and the needs of our forests.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Transport Committee was in the Province of British Columbia in August hearing various witnesses from the Government of British Columbia, the Mayors of British Columbia and representatives of the various industries, such as the forest industry. The one thing all of these witnesses told us was, "Get on with Bill C-155 because it means more jobs for British Columbia". This is why I fail to understand why the Hon. Member will stand up and say what he is saying tonight, yet daily oppose Bill C-155 which will create much needed jobs in the Province of British Columbia.

In putting on my other hat on behalf of the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts), I would like to provide the Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly) with a more detailed reply to the Hon. Member's questions raised in the House on September 28. The Hon. Member posed two questions. I will expand on the Minister's response to the question concerning the Government's initiative to help unemployed youth first, and then on the efforts being undertaken by the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission to help the unemployed forestry workers.

In the past few weeks, the Minister has announced several initiatives to help unemployed youth. The consolidated direct job creation program announced on September 12, 1983, has a major thrust directed toward providing opportunities for young people to learn, develop and practice the skills necessary to enter into and remain in the labour market. The Job Corps and Career Access Programs are geared to offer this kind of assistance to young people.

The Canada Works Program, and the Local Employment Assistance and Development Program, known as the LEAD Program, will also provide many young people with employment opportunities to gain valuable work experience. Including the recent Summer Initiatives, CEIC will spend approximately $474.1 million this fiscal year to provide 179,200 youth with work experience.

The Hon. Member also had a question concerning initiatives to help forestry workers, especially in British Columbia. As the Minister stated, the Employment Bridging Assistance Program, which was a joint federal-provincial initiative, was seriously jeopardized by the British Columbia Government's decision to withdraw funding. Although provincial funding ceased on June 30, 1983, the federal Government, through CEIC, made up the provincial shortfall and continued support for the forestry projects for another three months.

The EBAP was designed to provide term employment to unemployed forestry workers to maintain their skills and livelihood during the recession. Funding for the program was providing through provisions of Section 38 of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

I see that Your Honour is giving me the signal to close. I would just like to close on this note, by telling the Hon. Member that if he is really serious about creating jobs in British Columbia then he should get up on his feet and be counted in support of Bill C-155.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted.

Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock.

At 6.30 p.m., the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

HUMAN RIGHTS

IRAN—PERSECUTION OF BAHA'I COMMUNITY

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, the latest reports out of Iran remind us that the systematic genocide of the Baha'i community in Iran continues. Sadly, the reports have an all too familiar ring—imprisonment, torture, beatings, and executions. One estimate puts the death toll at well over 5,000 since February of 1979. These shocking reports ought to jar us all into the realization that the Iranian Government continues to torture, with shocking regularity, innocent people who only desire their religious freedom. The Baha'is' only crime is their refusal to renounce their faith.

Women of the Baha'i faith have, as of late, faced increased danger. Because they are regarded as equals within their faith, the Iranian Government, which does not share that belief, has begun to arrest, torture and execute Baha'i women in much greater numbers than before.

Here in Canada it is perhaps difficult to imagine a land where people pay for their religious beliefs with their lives. But in Iran the persecution against the Baha'i community has neared the point of a holocaust.

I urge Canadians, and indeed the entire international community, not to become complacent. For as long as the persecution continues, we must continue to express publicly our utter abhorrence of these horrible acts of violence.

CANADIAN HERITAGE

THEFT OF PETROGLYPHS—PROTECTION OF ARTIFACTS

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, recently on a remote site along the Pacific coast, north of Vancouver, stones decorated with prehistoric Indian carvings, known as petroglyphs, and weighing several tons, were stolen. These petroglyphs which have been in existence for thousands of years are among Canada's major archeological treasures and their seizure represents a great loss not only to the Canadian archeological community but to Canadians in general.

These petroglyphs provide vital information on man's ancestral beginnings in Canada. According to the director of the National Museum of Man in Ottawa, new archeological techniques make possible more accurate interpretation of information contained on these stones which date back 10,000 years. These records give evidence of cultural cross-ties with the Soviet Far East, suggesting people crossed the Bering Strait from what is Soviet Siberia. It is a shame that, as new skills are being developed to understand our distant past as recorded on petroglyphs, these pages of ancient history are being ripped out and senselessly destroyed even before being read.

It is my concern that this site and similar sites in Canada are vulnerable to treasure hunters and vandals who have little concern about our nation's past. For this reason I urge the federal Government, in co-operation with the Provinces, to co-ordinate activities to ensure as far as possible that artifacts of Canadian historical significance are protected from vandalism.

TOURISM

IMPACT OF TAX INCREASES

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, taxes, like death, may be inevitable, but Canada's tourism and hospitality industries say they are tired of bearing the burden of too many tax hikes. The latest dose of bad news is the 13.3 per cent hike in the federal excise tax on liquor, with all the concurrent increases in provincial and sales taxes. Not only do consumers feel the pinch of price hikes but the effects ripple across to the airline industry, hotels and restaurants, all of which make up the tourism and hospitality industries.

It has already been said by me that the tourism industry is the largest employer in Canada, providing jobs to 11 per cent of the work-force, and represents 5 per cent of total gross GNP. When everyone speaks of recovery, need I remind everyone that this industry only faces tax increases, decreasing revenues, and less demand, particularly applicable to alcohol and tobacco.

S.O. 21

THE LATE PATRICK MacDONNELL

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Madam Speaker, on July 14 of this year they found Patrick MacDonnell dead. He had killed himself. He was 35 years old.

On November 5 of last year he was laid off as a result of a government cutback. Pat went on unemployment insurance. It devastated him. He did not want unemployment insurance; he wanted to work. He applied for jobs far beneath what he was capable of accomplishing, but he was told he was overqualified. That did not stop him. He created his own make-work project. Pat used up all his personal life savings creating and developing his idea. He made around $100 and reported this on his unemployment insurance card. On February 6 he was cut off because they deemed him self-employed.

Reading through all the letters and memos of the next four months, a Kafka nightmare emerges. Pat, broke, mortgage in arrears, with an empty fridge and no income, tried to correct this situation. He appealed. He wrote me. He wrote the Minister. He wrote the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). But nothing changed. Pat was defeated. On July 14 he attached a hose to his car's exhaust system and gassed himself.

Patrick was a big, strong, curly-haired, good natured Irishman. He was honest. He was creative. He was intelligent. He had initiative and skills. He had all the qualities a civilized society would hope its members would have. Patrick MacDonnell did not survive in our society.

Something is dreadfully wrong when the Patrick MacDonnells at the age of 35 die by their own hand. Something is terribly amiss with the world created by our corporate boardrooms and government offices. It is killing our best people.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

EFFECT OF FREIGHT RATES ON PORT OF HALIFAX

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, the Port of Halifax must compete for international marine cargo with other national ports on the east coast of Canada, particularly the Port of Montreal. The Port of Halifax provides a deep water facility, equipment, and labour force, which together ensure an effective service for ocean vessels of all types, especially container ships. However, the weak link in the chain of service is the rail line between the East Coast and inland destinations.

Canadian National Railway Company is the sole provider of railway service to and from the Port of Halifax. Freight rates are a vital factor in determining the economy of utilizing the Port of Halifax for marine shipments. Now CNR has threatened to add to the cost burden for users of the Port of Halifax by increasing freight rates an additional 5 per cent. This would be a unilateral decision of CN management, not based on any cost analysis or documented expenditures. I ask the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) to review carefully any action taken by the CNR respecting freight rates so that this delicate competitive balance will not be disturbed.

POLITICAL PARTIES

NORTHERN ONTARIO LIBERAL PARTY MEMBERS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, open revolt has broken out in the ranks of northern Ontario Liberal Members of Parliament. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mrs. Erola), the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt, has been doing everything in her power to fight the changes to her riding boundaries proposed as a result of the upcoming federal redistribution. The Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner) went so far as to accuse the embattled Minister of "reprehensible behaviour" for putting her own self-interest ahead of northern Ontario and the interests of her fellow northern Liberals, surely an endangered species in these troubled times.

As well, the Hon. Member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Irwin) has bitterly complained that loyal Liberals in northern Ontario are not getting enough patronage appointments. He went on to say that he was reluctant to criticize his esteemed colleague, the Minister, because "she is my regional Minister and she is a woman". The Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) accused the Minister of ignoring the wishes of the vast majority of her northern Liberal colleagues in the redistribution process.

I would like to invite the aggrieved Minister to rise in her place at some point today and defend herself from these scurrilous attacks by her fellow Liberals in northern Ontario on her good name and reputation. I am sure all Members of the House would want to extend our heartfelt sympathy to the embattled Minister in her plight, and remind her colleagues from northern Ontario, specifically Sault Ste. Marie, Algoma—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

ENERGY

MANITOBA TELEPHONE SYSTEM—TESTING OF METHANOL FUELED CARS

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, in Winnipeg a program is currently under way to determine the efficiency of specially manufactured cars running on 90 per cent methanol fuel. The program will examine how well cars start in cold weather, the wear and tear on engines, and fuel consumption. This testing began on July 27 and will ascertain over the next two years the commercial potential of methanol fuel.

This project is being carried out as a Manitoba/Canada conservation and renewable energy demonstration project for alternate fuels. The Manitoba Telephone System has been actively involved for the past three years in experimenting with propane, gasohol, and now, in this program, methanol fuels. System maintenance and repair, as well as supervisory staff, will be using the methanol test cars. The cars will only be used in Winnipeg where special methanol fuel is available.

The Manitoba Telephone System has shown leadership in this field, and on behalf of my colleagues in the House of Commons I would like to congratulate the Manitoba Telephone System on its fine and outstanding efforts.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

DISAPPEARANCE OF MURDER SUSPECT AFTER RELEASE ON BAIL

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, like many Canadians, not the least of them Ontario's Attorney General Roy McMurtry, I am incensed over the release on bail of a man charged with paralysing an 18 year-old girl for life. Indeed, the suspect, one Clive Brown, age 19 of Mississauga, faces charges of forcible confinement, armed robbery, attempted murder, and using firearms.

An 18-year-old Becker's Milk Store employee, Barbara Turnbull, was shot in the throat during a $200 robbery. The spinal cord damage that Ms. Turnbull suffered will leave her paralysed from the neck down for the rest of her life. So what does Brampton provincial court judge Kenneth Langdon do last week? He releases Clive Brown on $40,000 bail, on condition that he show up at Clarkson Secondary School in Mississauga. He did not show up, and has not been heard from since. He is not at home, not at school, and the judge says, "I don't know where he is".

I say, on behalf of every law-abiding Canadian, Madam Speaker, that I am thoroughly disgusted with a judicial system which lets a known criminally-minded individual out on the loose again after committing such a horrible, senseless crime for 200 bucks. I join the Peel Regional Police Force and the Attorney General of Ontario in opposing this disgusting release of an attempted murderer. Because of that punk, Barbara is ruined for life. Her assailant is free, and the Crown Prosecutor says he does not know where he is. Where, in the name of heaven, is there justice in this country for innocent people like Barbara Turnbull?

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

FINANCE

TRUST COMPANIES' RESTRICTIONS ON RENEWAL OF MORTGAGES

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Madam Speaker, my question was to be directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, but I will ask it of the Minister of Finance. It is with regard to approximately 750,000 Canadians who are locked into high interest rate mortgages. This matter was first raised in the Speech from the Throne in 1980. Since that time six Ministers of the Government have played with the problem, two Ministers of Finance, two Ministers of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, and two Ministers who report for CMHC. All of them have clawed the air and implied through their replies, inside and outside the House, that they would do something about it, but nothing substantive has happened in three and one half years.

Yesterday the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, after stating that she would seek an amendment to the Interest Act, informed the Hon. Member for Oshawa that—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Kempling: —mortgages—all right.

Madam Speaker: I really must interrupt the Hon. Member. He has not come to a question and he has already taken three minutes of his time.

Mr. Kempling: She informed the Hon. Member that trust companies were under provincial legislation.

Madam Speaker: No, no, I really meant the Hon. Member had to ask his question immediately.

Mr. Kempling: What does the Minister propose to do about some of our trust companies which put clauses in their mortgage agreements that require mortgagors to waive their rights under Section 10 of the Canada Interest Act and other federal-provincial acts dealing with the prepayment of mortgage contracts?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, this is indeed a very long question, and I contest the allegations contained in the preamble. I would start, first of all, by answering the preamble, and then I will address the question.

As far as the preamble is concerned, the Hon. Member is quite wrong. We have taken a number of steps to help Canadians who were caught with high mortgages. One of the steps, for instance, cost the federal Treasury $75 million in help to Canadian consumers. That was the Canada Mortgage Renewal Plan that the Minister of Public Works introduced to help those who were facing difficulties in renewing their mortgages when the interest rates were quite high. The Hon. Member will remember that at that time the federal Government was giving up to $3,000 in subsidies for mortgage renewal. That program has been used by tens of thousands of Canadians and it helped them at a very, very difficult time.

In addition, when it comes to current renewal at lower rates, as the Hon. Member knows I have provided Members of Parliament with a list of senior officials in all the banks and trust companies in Canada to which representations could be made on behalf of constituents. I, myself, have made representations on behalf of constituents and Members of Parliament, repeatedly. The president of a trust company, for instance, appeared before the parliamentary committee on Finance two weeks ago, saying that in a single day he had received 36 letters from me addressing the issue on behalf of a number of Canadians who were facing difficulties, and steps have been taken following those representations, in a very large number of cases.

Finally, as far as the question raised by the Hon. Member is concerned, I have indicated to him, as the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs indicated to him yesterday, that in a number of instances those trust companies are under provincial authority. As well, Canadian consumers, when they enter into contracts, must look at those contracts carefully and also shop around to find out whether they can get a better deal elsewhere.

An Hon. Member: Statements by Ministers.

Mr. Lalonde: As far as the specific point is concerned, these are the steps that we have already taken.

REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION TO ASSIST HOME OWNERS

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Surely the Minister knows that, under Section 91(19) of the Constitution Act, interest is the jurisdiction of the federal Government, and it does have jurisdiction.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kempling: In the United States, under the Federal Housing Act it is illegal to charge a fee or penalty for a prepayment of a mortgage.

In 1976 the Government introduced Bill C-16, the Borrowers and Depositors Protection Act, that included a clause in Section 15 which dealt with this very matter. Is the Government prepared to introduce such legislation again, and will it attempt to deal with the 750,000 Canadians who are trapped in this mess?

• (1120)

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member mentions the figure of 750,000 citizens. I would urge him to be careful in terms of the numbers he is using. He may find himself very much off base in that regard.

The Hon. Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and I have indicated that we are examining the situation, reviewing it, and will continue to do so. When we have reached a decision we will make it known promptly.

It is important that we avoid any steps that will mean that Canadian citizens in general will end up paying more than they are presently paying for mortgages as a result of Government intervention, or which may lead to a situation where certain types of mortgages that are available now would disappear from the market. The Hon. Member knows that interest rates fluctuate and that we cannot have a situation where one can benefit from interest rates going down and be fully protected when they go up. No country in the world has been able to arrange that.

Mr. Kempling: The 750,000 figure is established by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation which advises that 715,000 people are trapped with mortgages above 17 per cent. I am sure there are another 35,000 people out there somewhere. That is the basis for the figure.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Madam Speaker, the Minister's rationale does not stand up. In the United States where they have lower rates, and interest deductibility, there is no shortage of mortgage money.

In this mortgage monopoly game that is being played, the prize is $3.5 billion to $4 billion. The Minister should realize that, and make some calculations. Does the Government stand with a handful of trust companies or with the 750,000 people who are trapped in this mess?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I believe I have demonstrated to the Hon. Member that the Government stands quite clearly not only with the 750,000 people who have mortgages whom he is talking about but with the 24 million Canadians who will eventually have mortgages in many instances. We want to avoid taking any steps that would not be carefully planned and would cause more trouble and prejudice to those Canadian citizens than they may face at the present time in some instances resulting from their own decisions. This is something that must be looked at very carefully before steps are taken which would hurt Canadian consumers.

AMENDMENT OF INTEREST ACT

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Finance. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is on record as saying that the federal Government is considering changes to the Canada Interest Act in order to allow all home owners who are caught in the trap of mortgage interest as high as 22 per cent, to renegotiate their mortgages. Is the Government in fact considering this legislation and, if so, when does the Minister intend to introduce it in the House?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member mentioned that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs was considering certain measures in connection with the Canada Interest Act. The Minister did not say what conclusion was reached. We are keeping our options open, while in addition to this approach we are also considering a number of other options. As I said before, as soon as the Government decides whether or not further action is necessary, the House will be informed accordingly. At the present time, we are reviewing the situation very carefully, since we particularly wish to avoid taking measures that in the final analysis would add to the interest rates citizens are carrying on their mortgages or lead to a situation where some kinds of mortgages now available to Canadians would disappear from the market altogether because it would no longer pay the financial institutions to maintain them.

[English]

PROTECTION OF HOME OWNERS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, Canadians went through this review nonsense for two years while interest rates were as high as 21 per cent. Now we are still going through the review nonsense while the banks and the trust companies are charging these bonuses. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs says there has to be something more permanent. When will the Government introduce something more permanent which will protect Canadian home owners?

● (1125)

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Progressive Conservative Party is hardly in a position to tell the Government what to do in this respect.

Regarding the measures taken by the Government with respect to housing, we have, over the years, shown an abiding concern for the interests of Canadians in this area. As far as interest rates are concerned the Hon. Member is aware that we spent over $75 million to help Canadians at a time when they were faced with having to renew their mortgages at very high rates. These measures were particularly effective in helping Canadians who were genuinely in need.

As for the matter raised by the Hon. Member, I informed him in my first answer that as soon as the Government has reached a final conclusion on the matter and has something to announce, I should be glad to inform the House accordingly.

THE ECONOMY

UNEMPLOYMENT TARGET

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of Finance. This week the Economic Council in its report indicated that the Government should move now to set a target level for unemployment. Other countries, like Japan and Sweden, with very diverse economies have set economic targets for unemployment and they have been able in the main to match the targets they have set. Has Canada set a target level above which it believes unemployment is unacceptable? If so, what is it? When will it be reached? And what are the people who are presently unemployed supposed to do in the meantime?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, as long as there will be one person unemployed in this country this Government will not be satisfied.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lalonde: Our target is to provide employment to all Canadians in so far as we can do it and in so far as the economy can do it. It is as simple as that. Do not ask me when we will be satisfied with the level of unemployment. We will never be satisfied with any unemployment.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, that will be small comfort for those who are unemployed and out of benefits.

PLIGHT OF UNEMPLOYED

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, what are the people of Canada who are currently unemployed, and who are at this point in time unable to receive benefits from unemployment insurance, supposed to do in the meantime while the Government dreams of some day having absolutely no one unemployed in the land?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, instead of dreaming, the Government has taken many measures to help the unemployed in this country. If the Hon. Member would care to compare the measures taken by the Canadian Government with measures taken by almost any other industrialized country, he would realize that Canada's policies in this respect are among the most advanced. In fact, Canada is one of the countries with the best record for protecting its social security measures during the recent recession, while everywhere else in the world, in other industrialized countries, there was a period during the recession when those countries made cuts in their social security measures.

The Standing Orders do not permit a detailed account of the measures we took, but perhaps I may remind the Hon. Member that last year, we spent more than $1.5 billion on manpower training.

Billions of dollars were also spent on direct job creation. In fact, we are now spending more on direct assistance to Canadian citizens than we have ever done before in our history.

Finally, the last budget I brought down in April made it quite clear that we were introducing a series of measures to help the private sector create the jobs this country needs.

[English]

Mr. Deans: What the Minister says, Madam Speaker, is a lot of rubbish.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Oral Questions

PERSONS BEREFT OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BENEFITS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, there are 1.5 million people in this country presently unemployed. Upwards of 20 per cent of those people are on the verge of or have already run out of unemployment insurance payments. Those people cannot find employment because there is no employment, notwithstanding what the Minister says. What does he suggest that those people should do, given that they cannot find a job, given that they cannot get unemployment insurance, and given that the Government seems incapable of coming forward with any rational policies that will offer them any kind of hope?

• (1130)

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, not only is what the Hon. Member says rubbish, it is also damaging. I have to tell him that, if he wants to quote numbers, there are over 30 million unemployed in the industrial countries, in the OECD countries at the present time.

Mr. Deans: Who gives a damn? You operate here.

Mr. Lalonde: I know the Hon. Member does not give a damn. We give a damn about that situation.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lalonde: We have taken steps consistently over the years. As I indicated, we have allocated more public funds to help Canadian people during this period of recession than at any other time in our history.

Mr. Deans: Answer my question.

Mr. Lalonde: I have to tell the Hon. Member that these measures are producing results. We are creating jobs in the country as fast as any other industrialized country at the present time.

Mr. Deans: Answer the question.

Mr. Lalonde: That is what we are doing. The record is there to show quite clearly that no only have we taken steps to protect the social safety net in the country while other countries have cut it, but we have also announced in the budget a series of measures which are having an effect at the present time and are showing growth in employment in our country as fast if not faster than any other country. This is the record.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN SPEAKER'S GALLERY OF MR. LORNE GREENE, CANADIAN AMBASSADOR TO 1984 OLYMPICS

Madam Speaker: I would like to draw the attention of the House to the presence in our gallery of Mr. Lorne Greene, Canada's Ambassador to the 1984 Olympics at Los Angeles.

DANGEROUS PRODUCTS

EXPLODING SOFT DRINK BOTTLES

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, that is a "Bonanza" of a presence in the gallery.

My question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Following recent and very serious allegations about the safety of the 750-millilitre-size pop bottles which can explode under certain conditions, has the Minister contacted industry representatives? If so, what has been their reaction? If not, what will be her recommendation when she meets with the industry?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. His timing is nothing short of terrific. I am meeting with the industry this afternoon. We have already had a meeting of my Department and the industrial technical committee. This afternoon we will discuss further measures based on those earlier discussions.

The Hon. Member brought out the fact that the 750-millilitre bottle is a very real problem. We are looking at various methods. The first one is a public awareness campaign to make the people of the country aware that indeed this is a problem and that it should be treated with great care.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): I am sure the industry will be interested to learn and pleased to know about the Minister's acceptance of a public awareness campaign, which I think is needed.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, I am also interested in the Minister's statement on CBC "Marketplace" last week when she held a 750-millilitre Coke bottle and she said, "I don't understand why they can't do it". Do what? And, whatever it is, is that a reflection of Government policy? Has the Minister made up her mind in terms of protecting the public?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): As I said earlier, Madam Speaker, yes, the first move is a public awareness campaign. Do what? Make people aware that this is and could be a dangerous object. That is the first measure we will take. There are other measures, and those measures, as I mentioned earlier, will be discussed at a meeting this afternoon.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

PURPOSE OF PRESIDENT'S TRIP TO EUROPE

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for Canada Post. Will the Minister inform the House about the purpose of the current trip to Europe of the President and Chief Executive Officer of Canada Post, Mr. Michael Warren?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, as part of his duties, I believe the President will be meeting with Post Office representatives in Great Britain to discuss a new postal service he would like to introduce in Canada. The President will be visiting another country as well for consultations with local postal authorities, with a view to improving services between that country and Canada.

[English]

Mr. Wenman: I would like to thank the Minister for his detailed response.

COST OF TRAVELLING EXPENSES

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, would the minister also tell the House what benefits will accrue to Canada by virtue of the presence on the same trip of an individual named Miss E. Mylrea, as well as Mr. Warren's executive assistant, especially in view of the fact that Mr. Warren and another person are using first-class seats for their trip to London, Zurich, Bern, and Paris, at a cost to the taxpayer of a cool $4,000 per ticket?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, I think this is the kind of question that belongs on the Order Paper instead of being dealt with during oral question period. I must say I disapprove entirely of the Hon. Member's attitude and his assuming that some impropriety has taken place. It is typical of the Progressive Conservatives to indulge in mudslinging. I am sure that the President of Canada Post will be able to explain the reasons for his trip very satisfactorily, and quite probably, as soon as he comes back, he will be able to provide a satisfactory answer to the questions put by the Hon. Member, who would rather tarnish someone's reputation instead of asking a straight question.

LABOUR RELATIONS

EASTERN PROVINCIAL AIRWAYS DISPUTE—DISMISSAL OF PILOTS

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. It concerns the management and labour dispute at Eastern Provincial Airways. The dispute with EPA pilots was settled in May, 1983, by a decision of the Canada Labour Relations Board which was recently quashed by the Federal Court, even though Labour Board decisions are final and conclusive.

What action can the Minister take to protect EPA pilots and to ensure a quick resolution of the dispute? Right now EPA is dismissing senior pilots and employing outside pilots in their place, which is contrary to the collective agreement endorsed by the Labour Relations Board. And of course it creates difficulties among pilots in the operation of aircraft.

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, I believe the Airline Pilots Association has now asked the Canada Labour Relations Board to be heard again on a series of complaints formulated by the Association. I have been informed that a hearing will be held as soon as possible, and meanwhile, it is up to the Board to rule on the new complaints submitted by the Pilots Association.

[English]

Mr. Crosby: I merely want to point out to the Minister of Labour through you, Madam Speaker, that the whole purpose of labour laws in Canada is to ensure fair play and stability in labour relations, It is difficult to believe the Minister would be powerless in this situation when there is such provocation from management with respect to its employees.

REQUEST FOR LEGISLATIVE ACTION

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, is the Minister considering any new laws or any changes in the laws which will preclude an organization like the Federal Court of Canada from stepping into a labour dispute which has been settled and completely destroying the work done by the Canada Labour Relations Board? Is he considering any action or provision that might be placed on the statute books to stop such action in the future?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is asking me to deny one of the parties the right to appeal a decision. I realize that he may be anxious to see this matter settled, and I share his feeling, but I think he should consider the wisdom of waiting until the Board reaches a decision and acknowledge the right of both parties to appeal the decision.

[English]

CARRIER'S COMMITMENTS

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Labour. Given that EPA services have been disrupted because of the current labour-management dispute, has the Minister consulted his colleague, the Minister of Transport, to ensure that EPA is not using this labour dispute as an excuse to circumvent its firm commitments to the Atlantic Provinces as the regional carrier under federal charter?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Indeed, Madam Speaker, I have had discussions with my colleague the Minister of Transport about the EPA dispute, and I am satisfied that justice is being served in the current proceedings.

PROVISION OF SERVICE TO ATLANTIC REGION

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Is it the position of the Government that it will not intervene in the EPA dispute, even if that dispute leads to permanent reductions in service throughout the Atlantic region, in contravention of the federal charter?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member is jumping to a false conclusion. Through the Department of Labour, the Government did what it had to do in this case and, along with its mediation or conciliation services, it made available all facilities at its disposal with a view to reaching a settlement. When both sides claim that they have been wronged under the Canada Labour Code, they may appeal to the Canada Labour Relations Board, and that is exactly what they did. I would urge the Hon. Member to give free rein to the Canada Labour Relations Board which was established pursuant to an Act of Parliament adopted by all Hon. Members of the House.

FISHERIES

EFFECT OF NORTHERN COASTAL DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. I am sure he is aware that the Berger inquiry in 1978 evaluated years of biological and physical information, and concluded that there should be no industrial development on the North Slope of the Yukon. That was supported at that time by the Cabinet and the National Energy Board, including an Order in Council for the withdrawal of certain lands in the northern Yukon.

The Minister's Department is on record as vehemently opposing developments at King and Stokes Points because of seal-pupping grounds, and of both fresh and salt water spawning grounds for fish. First, does the Minister support his Department in opposing development of those two sites? Second, will he inform the Members of this House, and Canadians generally, whether he and his Cabinet colleagues believe that the recommendations of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger were false or wrong when they were made in 1978?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, on the question of fish habitat generally on the Pacific Coast, I have now benefited from the most recent study of Dr. Pearse. On the question of fish habitat and how to offset the conservation of the renewable resource compared to other economic development on the Pacific Coast, I am happy to report to the Hon. Member that the Department in the very near future will be publishing a comprehensive policy concerning fish habitat which I hope will have the support of the Hon. Member.

DEPARTMENTAL CONCERN

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, obviously this is why the country is in trouble. I am talking about the Beaufort Sea. The Yukon borders on the Beaufort, not on the Pacific. My question is with regard to the opposition of his departmental officials to the development by Gulf of Stokes Point and by Kiewit and Sons of King Point, supported by Dome, Esso and others. On Monday of next week a project review group is going to make a decision on need regarding one of those two sites. Will the Minister make a commitment that he will raise this matter with his Cabinet colleagues, educate them on the fact that his Department at least is opposed to these two sites, and assure all Canadians that, if one of those sites is to be developed, there will be an Order in Council and we will not see the kind of frivolous land use permit that is being proposed by his colleague, the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member should recognize that the report to which I have alluded concerns specifically the Yukon, Northwest Territories, and the Pacific Coast. When dealing with fish habitat it is the duty of the Department to come up with a comprehensive policy so that all developers in Canada know what are the rules of the game. It is my policy that, every time we have a major economic development, one of the prerequisites is that public hearings be held so that all sides have the chance to express their views.

IMMIGRATION

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS—ROLE OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Given the appropriate decision of his predecessor not to grant a general amnesty to illegal immigrants, and given the former and present Minister's intention to deal with these people on a case-by-case basis, however, they are going to do it anonymously—I can see that with a lawyer, given his solicitor-client privilege—is the Minister not concerned that where a Member of Parliament acts as a third party in an application and the application fails, the Member of Parliament is in the invidious position that he knows the individual, knows the law has been broken, and knows the person is here as an illegal immigrant and cannot report that fact?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member raises an important and rather difficult question. The procedure which we established is the one which was recommended by the Robinson Report in dealing with the problem of illegal migrants in Canada.

As the Hon. Member correctly said, the proposal put forward by some Members of the public for general amnesty was rejected. It was believed that special arrangements should be put in place to review on a case-by-case basis those which are brought to our attention. It seems reasonable to have a process by which people can bring forward their cases without putting themselves in jeopardy of automatically being subjected to the processes of the law in case the humanitarian review of their case is not successful. If there were not such provision, very few people would be likely to come forward.

My inclination would be to accept the responsibility of the Member of Parliament in this area. It would be similar to that of the lawyer-client relationship, in other words, acting as an agent for those who want to take advantage of this procedure. I should point out to the Hon. Member clearly that no one is given final entry anonymously. A recommendation is made on a set of facts alleged, and an indication is given by the committee that the individual meeting those facts would likely be accepted, subject to the ordinary reviews done on the basis of security and health.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT IN CALGARY—ALLOCATION OF JOB-CREATION FUNDS

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Employment and Immigration a question on behalf of the unemployed in the City of Calgary. It is Liberal Government policies which have destroyed about 20 per cent of the jobs that existed two or three years ago. The people of Calgary would like to know why the allocation of employment-creation funds is based on a four-year average. How does the unemployment rate in Calgary, four, three or two years ago, have anything to do with the need for jobs today?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I believe that the Hon. Member is referring to the constituency allocations under the Canada Works Program. There is a common allocation base for every constituency across the country, a minimum level. The application of Canada Works funds above and beyond that is on the basis of a figure related to the labour surplus, not over four years, but over the past year. The four-year figure refers to the LEAD funds which would be allocated in that way from April on. In so far as the Canada Works allocations are concerned, which are those which would be applied in the Alberta area, it is not a four-year average which is relevant.

Mr. Hawkes: It is an allocation formula based on information that is four years out of date. I think the current situation should be the only criterion used.

CALCULATIONS BASED ON RATE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The Minister of Employment and Immigration uses an 8 per cent rate of unemployment and characterizes it as normal. Labour surplus for Employment and Immigration is calculated as that rate which is above 8 per cent. Does the Minister of Finance agree with the Minister of Employment and Immigration that 8 per cent unemployment is normal and we just have to be concerned about that unemployment rate which is in excess of 8 per cent?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Minister of Employment and Immigration never made any such statement. I already answered this question on this very subject in response to the Hon. Member from Hamilton.

• (1150)

DISPARITY BETWEEN MALE AND FEMALE INCOMES

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. It deals with the report of the Economic Council of Canada, and particularly the Council's description of the disparity between the incomes of males and females in the work place, which it describes as follows:

—the size and persistence of the gap is striking, even within distinct occupational groups, whether measured in relative or absolute terms.

Does the Minister agree with that assessment of the Economic Council and, if he does, what policies or measures does he intend to put in place to reduce the gap?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Obviously, Madam Speaker, this is a question which must be dealt with not only by my Department, but by several Government Departments. In light of the report of the Economic Council of Canada, I intend to raise the issue with the President of the Treasury Board and a number of other Cabinet colleagues to hammer out the Government position in that respect.

[English]

EFFECT OF HIGH TECHNOLOGY ON FEMALE WORKERS

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): Madam Speaker, that leads me directly to my supplementary question. I am trying to find out about ministerial responsibility with respect to high technology. The Economic Council has said:

The introduction of new technology, if it were accompanied by appropriate adjustments of skills, could be a vehicle for further improvements; or it could erect barriers in the form of dead-end or part-time work—

That was referring to female workers. Are the challenges and threats posed to female workers by high technology regarded as a direct responsibility of the Minister of Labour? If that is the case, then what policies and mechanisms does the Minister intend to put in place to meet the challenge and to deal with the threat to female workers in the work place?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, I think that by asking the question, the Hon. Member realizes that several Ministers share responsibilities in that field. In the case of Government female workers, the President of the Treasury Board is reponsible as Minister who looks after public servants as a whole. In the case of female workers in the private sector, depending on prevailing conditions in that sector, and if they are covered by the Canada Labour Code, they may come under the responsibility of the Minister of Labour.

As you know, the Government has launched a dynamic technological program under the direction of the Minister of State for Economic Development. That is why I said in the first part of my answer to the Hon. Member that several Ministers share responsibilities in that field and that the report of the Economic Council of Canada will be examined by a Cabinet committee.

PENITENTIARIES

LAVAL PENAL INSTITUTE—DECISION TO END LAVAL UNIVERSITY EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General.

The Minister knows full well that his decision to end the excellent education program offered by Laval University at the Laval Institution has been condemned by all Canadian and Quebec associations concerned with criminal justice. How can the Minister justify that ill-advised decision which program Director Mario Ferland has described as being unwitting, irresponsible and disastrous for the development of education in prisons?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General): Madam Speaker, I have stated in this House that I strongly support postsecondary training in our institutions. The problem is that Director Ferland's program—BAGIL—which was set up at Laval and offered to the 3,500 federal inmates in the Province of Quebec has not been very successful during those three years. Indeed, of late there were 12 students out of 3,500 inmates in the Province. I would prefer a program such as the one we now have in British Columbia where hundreds of students are registered. I think that we can have a program which would gain wider support among the inmates and which would cost a lot less, considering that we are now paying over $8,000 a year for each student in the program which I have just refused to extend.

STATISTICS

PROPOSAL TO SURVEY CITIZENS' ACTIVITIES MINUTE BY MINUTE

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Communications. He will know that in June of this year his Department sent a letter to a number of Canadian industries which began as follows:

In 1984, the Department of Communications in conjunction with Statistics Canada is planning to conduct a survey on how individuals spend their time, minute-by-minute, over a 24 hour period.

The letter goes on to say that it is proposed to survey 11,000 people in 1984 at a cost of $465,000.

Will the Minister tell the House today that such an outrageous expenditure should be abandoned, and will he say that the letter that he sent to me earlier this week saying that the proposal is still under consideration, should be abandoned as well?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, the hon. gentleman refers to a time-use survey that was planned by a number of federal agencies, including Stats Canada. I have now had an opportunity of reviewing that proposal to do a time-use survey and decided that it would be inappropriate at the moment.

PUBLIC WORKS

CUSTOMS FACILITY PROJECT IN SURREY, B.C.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Public Works. When the special recovery program was announced, Pacific Highway customs facilities in Surrey were part of that list of special targeted programs for fast tracking. The consultant had been hired and had almost finished his report when the program was withdrawn. I believe that was because of the Minister's directive. Another consultant was hired to do the work all over again. I should like to ask the Minister why that happened? Is it his version of fast tracking? If the funds have been withdrawn, to what other part of Canada have they been assigned?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, one of the things I have learned in my years in the House is to check that sort of allegation to make sure it is factual. I will obviously try to do that within the next couple of days.

HUMAN RIGHTS

TREATMENT OF JAPANESE CANADIANS DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Laverne Lewycky (Dauphin-Swan River): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of State for Multiculturalism and of his Parliamentary Secretary, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Justice.

In view of the fact that we will be celebrating the thirty-fifth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights soon, and considering that the treatment of Japanese Canadians in World War II is a black mark on our history, will the Minister of Justice indicate that progress has been made toward making moral and material restitution to Japanese Canadians? Will he consider, as part of that restitution, the establishment of a Chair of Human Rights or, perhaps in conjunction with the ethnic chairs, a Chair of Japanese Canadian Studies in Canada?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, I think there is a general disposition in Canadian society and Parliament to recognize there were serious excesses in the way that Japanese Canadians were treated during the Second World War. As the Hon. Member knows, as a result of the Bird Commission after the war, that was recognized in part by compensation paid to some 1,300 claimants in 1950 for property claims. Of course that does not exhaust the range of possibilities. Once one gets beyond property claims, however, one gets into undefined areas where there can be a considerable amount of disagreement.

As Japanese Canadian spokesmen have said themselves, it is not just or even primarily, a question of compensation. It is something that has to be worked out by our society with the assistance of the Japanese Canadian communities. There is a considerable disagreement still, as I understand it, among members of that community about how we can best make up for the excesses of the past. I think some further maturing time is required for a consensus to develop on the best way to proceed.

Personally, I have no problems with the suggestions made by the Hon. Member, but I do not think at this point we could adopt one suggestion or another.

Report of Special Committee

IMMIGRATION

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS—RESPONSIBILITY OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. John McDermid (Brampton-Georgetown): Madam Speaker, I want to follow up on the questions put by the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton regarding the position of a Member of Parliament who applies anonymously on behalf of an illegal immigrant. If the illegal immigrant is turned down, what is the position of the Member of Parliament regarding his oath to uphold the laws of Canada? Must he report that person, then, to the Immigration Department as an illegal? Has the Minister had a report from the Department of Justice on the position of a Member of Parliament in that particular case?

• (1200)

May I finally ask him why he appointed his Parliamentary Secretary to be the chairman of the committee which decides which illegal immigrants are allowed landed immigrant status and which are not? Why was it not left with the bureaucracy? Why does he bring politics into it now?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I believe the answer to the first question is that I am not in a position, nor is it customary, to give legal opinions to Hon. Members. The answer to his second question would be that I do not think it appropriate for me to determine or dictate to Hon. Members of Parliament how they perform their duties. It seems to me the procedure for review is there and it is quite proper for a Member of Parliament to bring cases to it. I would leave it entirely up to an Hon. Member's discretion and conscience as to whether he or she think they are acting wisely in taking advantage of that procedure.

To answer the third question, Madam Speaker, the reason why I appointed my Parliamentary Secretary to chair that committee was that I thought it was very useful to add to the bureaucratic assessment the views of the kind of person who is in regular contact with constituents. It seems to me there is in this process not simply a question of bureaucratic determination, but also the application of compassion and political—I do not mean partisan—judgment in the best sense.

Mr. McDermid: Not at all.

STANDING ORDERS AND PROCEDURE

CONCURRENCE IN FIFTH REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, there are seven motions standing in my name, which are reports from the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure. The first one would be the fourth report, the second would be the fifth report. I would be grateful if the Chair would call the motion with respect to the fifth report.

I move:

That the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure presented to the House on Thursday, March 3, 1983, be concurred in.

This is the first opportunity, Madam Speaker, that any member of that committee has had to address the House with respect to concurrence in the reports, beyond the third report, setting forth the temporary rules we are living under at the moment. Therefore, in my preliminary remarks, Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to certain people who have laboured long and hard on the work of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, the committee, generally, of parliamentary reform.

The first group I would like to mention is the very distinguished staff of the committee. We had two co-ordinators on the committee, Mr. Alistair Fraser, who was a Clerk of the House, and Mr. John Holtby, who is a distinguished student of Parliament and who learned his craft over many years in the Ontario Legislature. I am so pleased he was able to help our committee in such a competent way. The Clerk's department was represented by Mr. Marcel Pelletier, Mr. Robert Marleau, Mr. Philip Laundy, Mr. David Gussow, Mrs. Susan Baldwin, Lucie Gratton, Hugh Stewart, Nino Travella, Rita Blais-Beaudoin and Marjolaine Morrisette.

The Library of Parliament was represented by Mr. Gerald Schmitz, Mr. Gary Levy, Mr. Bruce Carson, Mr. Louis Massicotte and Mr. Brooke Jeffery. As well—

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, may I refer you to page 27998 of yesterday's Hansard? The Chairman of the Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform (Mr. Lefebvre) said the following—this is very short—and I quote:

Madam Speaker, because my position as Chairman of the Committee was brought into question by the words that were spoken, I want to say that there definitely was an understanding by the members of that Committee that these reports——and one of these reports is the one the Hon. Member is debating——would be arrived at by consensus, that there would be unanimous decisions on the understanding there would be no move to concur in the House.

The Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) is betraying his colleagues, the members of the Committee, and he is breaking his word, and in the circumstances I submit, with respect, that he is acting contrary to an understanding among Committee Members and that he should not be heard in the House today, because—

An Hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I quoted the Chairman of the Special Committee on Parliamentary Procedure who said on the floor of the House yesterday that there was an understanding among Committee Members that there would be no move to concur in the House, including the report the Member for Nepean-Carleton wishes to debate. I can only say that he is betraying his fellow Committee members, that he is out of order and that he does not have the right to move his motion today. I am simply making a point of order, and I ask the Chair to interrupt the debate in order to respect the undertaking that was given and observe, purely and simply—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I thought the President of the Privy Council was proceeding to a motion of one sort or another. For that reason, I have allowed him to go on. There is nothing coming out of the point being made by the President of the Privy Council. If there is indeed a point of order which he wants to make, I will obviously hear it. However, so far I have not heard a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I am asking the Chair to declare this debate out of order, considering the fact that, as the Chairman of the Committee said yesterday in the House, there was an understanding among members of the Committee according to which—

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: That is an abuse of the rules.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. That is a dispute between, in this case, the President of the Privy Council and the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton. I need to have a motion of some kind before me relating to unparliamentary statements made on either side of the House, or something of that order, before I could deal with a point of order. I do not yet see a reason for interrupting the debate or for calling the debate out of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, a dispute between the President of the Privy Council and the Member who was speaking? I quoted the member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre) Chairman of the Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform. The dispute is not between me and the member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) but between the Chairman of the Committee and the Member for Nepean-Carleton.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: That is not a point of order.

Mr. McGrath: Why do you not quote what I said?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The President of the Privy Council does not, in my view, advance an argument which causes the Chair to become responsible for interrupting the debate. The essence of the remarks made by the President of the Privy Council are to the effect that there is a dispute between two Members.

Mr. Nielsen: More than two.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I know of nothing in our Standing Orders, nor in Beauchesne and other authorities, which would cause that to constitute a responsibility of the Chair to interrupt the debate or to call the debate out of order. However, I will recognize the President of the Privy Council again.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I am not abusing the Standing Orders and I am not questioning your ruling. I think you are probably correct in saying that if we adhere strictly to the Standing Orders, you do not have much choice in the matter. What we have here is mainly a matter of honour among Members, and if the Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) wishes to go on breaching the understanding that was reached among Committee Members, let him!

[English]

Mr. McGrath: I rise on a question of privilege.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I will recognize the Hon. Member for St. John's East on a question of privilege. However, I was about to say that that is precisely the route which would appear to me to be available. I believe the President of the Privy Council was referring to the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre), who is the Chairman of the particular committee. There might be an argument of privilege; that was certainly the argument I understood the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) was making. But again, even if there is a case of privilege, I would not know how to go from there to saying that this debate is out of order.

• (1210)

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I for one did not breach an agreement. I will not pursue that now as a question of privilege. I will wait until my colleague has concluded his remarks.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I worry very much about the process of parliamentary reform when the Government House Leader stands up and, in defence of his apparent inability to accept the unanimous work of the committee, begins accusing Members of Parliament of acting in bad faith.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): I think it is very important to realize, if one reads yesterday's Hansard, that I made a statement which reflected my understanding of the understanding that was reached, as refined by the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath).

Mr. Evans: Revised.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): I understand he spoke to the Hon. Member for Gatineau-Pontiac-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre) and informed him—

Mr. McGrath: I raised it in committee as well.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): He raised it in committee as well, that at a meeting when the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle was not there, nor was I there, it was made clear that there would be no concurrences while the committee work was being done. But that arrangement, which no one disputes, would be off when the committee's work was completed.

Mr. McGrath: Precisely.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): That is the position. I frankly tell the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) that I resent—

Mr. Pinard: You don't tell me anything, you just—

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): —the way he has decided to do this. I am not going to waste the time of the House—

Mr. Pinard: That is what you are doing now.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): —by getting into petty questions of privilege because I see on the face of the Government a complete abandonment of what it said it would do regarding parliamentary reform. That is what I see.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pinard: He should be ashamed, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Cullen: When you have a weak case, about and pound the table, Walter. That is what you are doing.

Mr. Pinard: You should be ashamed.

Mr. Cullen: You blew it all, Walter.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Oh, yes, you blew it all.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I have allowed the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) to make his point because earlier the President of the Privy Council wanted to make a point. I had to find that the point made by the President of the Privy Council was not in order, and I now have to ask the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, with courtesy, to address himself to the motion now before the House.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I thought I was doing that. Nonetheless, I am going to deal with the report because it is very important and very simple. I have chosen it very carefully because I think it is something the Government should not turn down. It rounds out the work of the third report.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that during the proceedings on the third report of that committee, which was adopted unanimously in the House on, I think, one day's debate, a provision was established for independent references by committees. In other words, committees could begin to act independently and take up references from matters arising out of the Estimates as they saw fit. They were not hampered in their investigations because the time for Estimates came to an end. But one of the things pointed out to us in that debate by Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition House Leader, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen), was that there was no provision in that report for the calling of committees. That was recognized by the committee as something we overlooked in the third report. So one of the first things we undertook to do as a committee was to bring forward a proposal, contained in the fifth report, which would remedy that situation.

We considered a number of the matters which took place in the debate on November 29—Mr. Speaker, I am having very great difficulty. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) is talking from his seat as usual and I am having very great difficulty—

Mr. Evans: Quit playing politics.

Mr. Dick: Shut up, Evans.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): —with that buzz of heckling from the other side of the House. I ask the hon. gentleman to show me the courtesy I try to show him when he is addressing the House.

Mr. Evans: Get it on the record.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): In order that there could be some assurance to minorities on the committee, not the Government majority but minorities, there was a proposal that Standing Order 69 be amended by adding a new subsection, which would read:

> Within ten sitting days following the adoption by the House of a report of the Striking Committee the Clerk of the House shall convene a meeting of each Standing Committee reported on for the purpose of electing a Chairman and Vice-Chairman.

In other words, there could be no delay in convening committees; it would have to be done within ten days by the chief administrative officer of the House. The second subsection goes on to read:

> Upon the written request signed by any four Members of a Standing Committee the Chairman of the Committee shall convene a meeting of the Committee within ten sitting days following the receipt of such request by the Clerk of the Committee. The reasons for convening such a meeting shall be stated in the request.

Now, the committees have not used it very much yet, but they have the power to carry out an investigation. The purpose of that report was to ensure that the question as to whether or not a committee should be struck would be set aside and handled through the machinery of the House. More important, those who were interested in a particular issue would know that that issue could not lie buried. It could be brought forward publicly before that organized committee. The decision taken as to whether that issue would be investigated would be taken publicly, openly, notoriously and in the light of day so that judgments could be made as to the effective operation of the system. It is a very simple but very important right because, as it stands now, if this is not adopted—and I hope it will be today—then Members of Parliament will have no complete right to exercise the new powers given to them in the third report under which we are operating at this time.

I do not intend to speak very long on this matter because it is very simple and straightforward. But I do want to say to the House that there was a first-class feeling in that committee. I think it is important that the House knows that in the course of those proceedings we had 73 meetings from June, 1982, to September, 1983. We heard valuable testimony from a host of individuals who are interested in and worried about the operation of the House of Commons. Many Members of Parliament came forward. The wishes of some Members do not appear in those committee reports, but many do. We are grateful as a committee that all of them came forward. We addressed a number of issues, and in all those hearings that committee, made up of people from all Parties, was able to conduct its business without a vote or division on any occasion. We operated by consensus, and I honestly and earnestly hope that the Government House Leader and Members of the Government will, if there are personal differences, set them aside for purposes of improving upon the temporary Standing Orders. There may well be differences. My friend makes statements from time to time which, when the history of this time is written, he will regret, because he will be proven to have been wrong. I now forgive him for that because it is absolutely essential that the work of the committee not slide by the board.

I also want to express my thanks to the Members of my own caucus. We have argued long and hard over these issues. Members of my caucus should agree unanimously, as they did through the mouth of our House Leader yesterday, to the acceptance of these reports, hopefully without debate. I think that it is a tribute to the reform work that has been advocated in this Party by the Hon. Robert L. Stanfield when he was Leader, by the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) when he was Leader, and now under the Hon. Member for Central Nova (Mr. Mulroney), that this tradition of reform is being carried on.

I also want to express thanks to my friends in the New Democratic Party. I gather one of them will be speaking today with respect to the importance of these reports, this one and others, in the work of the committee. I want to thank them for unanimously agreeing yesterday to going forward without debate, so as not to cut into the Government's time, in order to have all seven of these remaining reports approved.

I think the House Leaders of both Parties have done a great service in terms of the process of reform. If there was ever an indication that there must be changes in this institution, it was evident in a poll that was brought forward some time ago. No matter what we may think of one another in the House, the process of reform is much too important to allow it to stumble over the feet of discord. I think that we now, at the end of this session, have an opportunity to bring into place the work of the committee members who worked unanimously, by consensus, without a vote, every one of whom had the idea that this place is worth preserving, enhancing and enriching and that all of those things were badly needed.

It is in that spirit, ignoring whatever will be said personally, that I ask the House to concur today in the fifth report of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedures, which is a simple, straightforward matter, to augment and round out what we did in the third report, under which the House is now operating.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, in the first place, even if I indicated earlier, when I rose on a point of order, that I thought it was most unfortunate to have a situation where we are forced to debate the matter at this time, I am prepared to set aside those grievances for the time being and to address the substance of the question and at the same time take advantage of this opportunity to try and be as objective and fair as possible, and—without further reference to the attitude of the Hon. Member who just spoke—draw the attention of the House in all sincerity to the extraordinary work that has been accomplished by all members of the Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform during the last 18 months. I wish to stress the impartiality and good judgment of and the excellent work done by, the Chairman, the Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre) who managed to make the members of his Committee work on a sustained and regular basis, while at the same time being flexible enough to set aside differences of opinion in order to reach a consensus on matters that were often delicate and always very important. I think he has shown extraordinary ability and that his work is fully deserving of praise at this time.

I also want to congratulate in general the Members on both sides of the House who gave the Committee the benefit of their experience and expertise and who via common effort attempted to find the necessary means by which Parliament could be more progressive, could improve itself and reform its procedure.

Having said this, I would like to understand why, under the leadership of the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen), certain Members of the Committee believe that now is the appropriate time for the immediate concurrence of the seven reports of the Committee although they have not yet been considered by the House of Commons. I am honestly trying to understand what rationale or explanation would justify—

An Hon. Member: Because Parliament is going to be proroged!

Mr. Pinard: I do not believe that shouting or interrupting me can add anything significant to the debate. I am simply asking a question. Following your comments, Mr. Speaker, I did not interrupt the previous speaker and I would like the opportunitty to express my views because I am very much in favour of parliamentary reform and I would not want what happened yesterday and today to jeopardize in any way sooner or later the improvement of the Standing Orders of the House of Commons and the rules of the Canadian Parliament. On the contrary I believe that, these last few years, Members on this side, as well as across the way admittedly, have showed their willingness to bring about certain changes. We have made some in the past. We are now making some more and we shall continue to do so.

Where some might disagree is as to the way to proceed, and this is important. The third report deals with the changes we are now putting to the test. This report suggests a whole series of important changes to our rules. If it was felt necessary to have an experiment of at least one year before considering a permanent implementation of these changes, why should seven other reports be suddenly implemented at once as was suggested yesterday and earlier today? Should they be implemented without any preliminary experience, without waiting for the results of the experiment now being made even though many of the changes proposed in these seven reports are even more complex and would have more serious consequences than those we are now trying? I ask the question sincerely and honestly. If an experience of at least twelve months was required for a single important report, which was also the result of a consensus and which had received the unanimous agreement of the Committee, why, suddenly at this time, near the end of the debate on the Crow rate, are some members attempting to have us implement at once seven reports, without the benefit of experience?

I believe that this question should be answered. I should like to know the reasons for such a rush. I respectfully point out that these reports do not necessarily result from our present experience. One of them, the fourth, deals with the appointment of the Speaker of the House. The fifth would force the Government to establish the committees without delay. As for me, I have nothing against it but it must be considered in the larger context. In the other reports provision is made for the appointment of special legislative committees made up of 20 members in addition to the 20 or so existing committees, to deal specifically with bills following the second reading stage. Another report proposes the establishment of four additional committees to examine the fiscal framework, the spending habits of the Government and the use of Crown corporations. Another report provides for a change in the accountability of those in charge of administering public funds. We know that this is the Government's responsibility. It is proposed that Members of the Opposition attend the meetings of the Commissioners of Internal Economy and share in the administration of over $100 million a year of taxpayers' money and that, in case of a disagreement, the Chairman would have the deciding vote and thus lose his objectivity.

These are matters which can be considered and should be examined. They are matters on which about 20 Members of Parliament have agreed, but they must be analyzed in the larger context. First of all our experience is not yet completed. Should we agree permanently upon the principle of 25 committees, each made up of 10 members? Would it not be desirable, in view of the number of additional committees proposed by the Committee on Parliamentary Reform, to consider reducing the number of committees?

Mr. McGrath: Ten-Member committees were not on.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. If the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) wants to ask a question, I am willing to give an answer. However, I am asking him an important question. I know he has studied seriously this matter, because together we attended a seminar on parliamentary procedure in Great Britain seven years ago, in 1976. I know his question is by no means futile, but I would like to direct a question to him, and after my comments he will have ten minutes for questions. Could he tell me whether the various committees recommended in the seven reports, in which concurrence is now requested, will be added to the twenty standing committees of the House and five joint committees of the House and Senate? We know that at present there are some 80 out of 284 members who make the committee system work. This is not new. It has been like that since I have been sitting here. No more than 80 members take part, in committee proceedings. There are 25 committees and we are asked to add ten or twelve depending on the number of bills passed on second reading. Is it realistic to think that 80 members who can hardly keep 25 committees going will be able to sit on 35 or 40 committees? Those are serious questions and if we want Parliament to operate effectively they deserve in-depth consideration.

Mr. Speaker, the point I want to make is that the Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform has considered the changes to be made in specific areas, but it is essential now to consider those reports and recommendations in the whole context of the parliamentary system and the reform process. As far as the reform process is concerned, several changes have been made since 1968. We have now made an experience which should normally end on December 21. A Senate committee is now working on Senate reform but major changes in the way of dealing with the estimates cannot be strictly considered for the House of Commons, if it is not known what will happen to Senate reform, because all those changes must be looked at as a whole and seriously considered so that once they are enforced they will become part of permanent reform. But to rush through, under these circumstances would seem to me to be both ill-advised and ill-timed, to say the least. Members of the opposition may be trying to make political gains, while delaying the debate on a controversial bill, perhaps in the hope of embarrassing the government. There could not be any other motivation behind the position which some members of the Progressive Conservative Party have adopted. The fact that on the basis of only one report, they insist on our accepting the seven subsequent reports without debate, while the current experience has not yet been completed, seems to support sy argument.

As I was saying, Mr. Speaker—and we have had the opportunity to deal with this previously—there has been a constant and very real progress since 1968, although I wish it had been more rapid. Hon. members will remember that in 1968 the budget for each and everyone of our caucus research bureau was some $30,000 or $35,000. Now, it has increased considerably, so that we can carry out better our duties as Parliamentarians, which include preparing our bills better for introduction, discussion and debate in the House and, generally, assuming our responsibilities. I first quoted these figures in a speech which I delivered in the House on or about March 18, 1982.

On or about March 18, 1982—what am I saying?—on November 29, 1982, I indicated that the funds provided for each caucus research bureau had been increased from the $35,000 level of the fiscal year 1969-70. For the fiscal year 1982-83, the funds provided to the caucus research bureaus are $601,000 in the case of the government party, $541,000 in the case of the official opposition party, and $285,000 for the NDP. Mr. Speaker, the funds provided to the caucus research bureaus have been increased, from $35,000 in the fiscal year 1969-70, to over half a million in the case of the two main political parties and to some $300,000 in the case of the NDP. Over and above that, the Leader of the Official Opposition was entitled to $87,500 in 1969-70 for the operation of his office. At this time, he is entitled in this regard to over one million dollars. The Hon. Member for Central Nova (Mr. Mulroney), the Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, is entitled today to over a million dollars per year to hire the personnel required to prepare the questions he directs to us on the few occasions he chooses to come to the House. This involves more than $1 million a year, whereas in 1968-69, that same office occupied by another Leader of the Opposition, nonetheless the same Official Opposition Leader's office was getting only $87,000.

Those are figures that relate to a significant area of our parliamentary system. There has been very significant trend, an openmindedness. The Liberal Government has provided Members of this House with more tools, and all this has happened since 1968-69. So much for the funds provided for Hon. Members to better perform their duties in this Parliament, and for the Leader of the Opposition.

In 1969, Mr. Speaker, by unanimous consent, and I repeat by unanimous consent of this House, a new procedure was adopted for dealing with the business of supply, the one we are now following. It will be remembered that at that time, the House of Commons was overloaded. It was then decided to refer to the Committees the estimates on an area basis, thus giving the House a chance to better deal with its own business, with other pieces of legislation. This is another major reform concerning the business of supply, and it was accepted in 1969 with the unanimous consent of the House.

Since then, we have introduced the television of the proceedings of the House, an other major reform. Since then we have held, in 1975-76 quite a number of meetings of the Committee for Procedure and Organization, which have led to numerous reports that have proved to be most useful to the Committee on Parliamentary Reform in the course of its meetings these last 18 months, and have inspired its members in making recommendations mainly in the third report, which have been put to the test here on the floor of the House for some months now. There are other reforms that have been brought about in the last 10, 12, 15 years, Mr. Speaker.

And, just recently, the Committee on Parliamentary Reform produced this third report which is now undergoing a running test and which hopefully will allow changes to become permanent practice and allow this institution to modernize and hopefully become more efficient.

Those seven additional reports will be useful, whatever the prorogation date may be. The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) is indulging in chicanery. If he had been actively practicing law these last few years, he would easily understand that such chicanery, or procedural bickering will not alter the facts. If the Committee on Parliamentary Reform could refer to a report that had not even been tabled in the House, namely the report of the Committee on Procedural organization in 1975-76, in order that we could proceed with the current experiment, there can be no doubt that the House could next month or the month after, next year or the year after, make use of the reports submitted by that Committee. It will still be able to refer to any or a number of those seven reports to allow for the continuation of the parliamentary reform process. It is misleading and entirely unrealistic to claim that if we prorogue within a month or two, or three, these reports are going to die. That is just not true. The reports continue to exist, they are printed in the Votes and Proceedings, they have been tabled in the House and will always continue to exist. When are we going to apply them? Before or after proroguing Parliament? That has nothing to do with parliamentary procedure. The reports have been prepared, and they will still be there. Some aspects of the reports will, I hope, be implemented very shortly, while others will be implemented later on, and others even later or perhaps never, but proroguing will not make any difference. Even if we were to prorogue this afternoon, there would be nothing to prevent Hon. Members who are in good faith from continuing negotiations to try and improve Parliament and taking these reports as the basis for such negotiations. That is the situation.

I would say that trying to push through seven reports, without a trial period, before the end of the trial period based on Report No. 3, is more likely to be damaging for negotiations and for parliamentary reform in the short term, and I deplore it. But in spite of all that, the position of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) is in open contradiction with that of the committee chairman whose remarks of yesterday I quoted on the floor of the House, or again with the views of other Members who intend to speak later today and who will refer to the gentleman's agreement in committee. I exclude the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) because he gives a subjective interpretation of that agreement. I do not question his good faith. But the interpretation given by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton is different and altogether inconsistent with that given by the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre) and the other committee members who have spoken so far and who might take the floor later on.

Mr. Speaker, I see that my time has run out. I am prepared to answer questions, because I did ask a few in the course of my remarks. We want a thorough parliamentary reform, but why? How can we explain such a major reform as the one advocated in seven reports, a drastic and even more complex reform which is certainly more than an aftermath of the third report, why would anyone insist at this time, during the debate on the Crow rate, that they be implemented as a whole, without any experiment and even before the end of the first experiment on the third report, without considering the Senate reform and without allowing the Parliamentary Leaders, or at least those who act in good faith, to negotiate the implementation first, to complete the experiment we are now making, and to negotiate as well the consideration of those seven reports in the overall context of parliamentary reform?

We are in favour of parliamentary reform, Mr. Speaker, and we have proved that in the past. We will continue to work constructively in spite of this setback, in spite of this unfortunate incident. It will not prevent us from negotiating and trying to improve conditions in Parliament. We are doing that at all levels, whether it has to do with the Standing Orders, Members' allowances or Members' pension which are the object of a Bill I have prepared and introduced in the House. We are trying to improve the overall situation for Members of Parliament and for the Canadian public. I would not want this unfortunate incident to mark the end of our efforts. We will continue even if the seven reports are not implemented before the end of this session. They are under serious consideration by the Government and we will make sure that changes are made on a regular, reasonable and logical basis, so that once they have been implemented they will be permanent and lasting, enabling us indeed to update and humanize this institution and make it more efficient.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Are there any questions, comments or answers?

Report of Special Committee

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to rise today and speak in support of this motion moved by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker). Given that it is the wish of the Members on this side of the House to pursue this report, and indeed all seven reports, as expeditiously as possible with little or no debate, I will make my comments very brief.

First, I would like to second the comments made by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton in his expression of thanks to the staff members who worked very, very hard and did a very good job in the year and a half life of the special committee. I must say I joined this committee rather late in its life. I became part of it in the winter, in February of this year. In some ways it was like arriving at a party late in the evening to find that everyone else was well into enjoying the evening's events and it was rather impossible to catch up. However, it was quite an experience for me. I was quickly impressed by the special dynamics of this committee in that Members of all three parties in the House worked together and worked together very well. It was said this afternoon and also in debate on the third report some months ago, that we set aside partisan differences for the common goal, the common goal being to make this House work better, indeed, to make the House more relevant to the Canadian public. We cannot easily ignore the recent Gallup poll which indicated that almost two-thirds of Canadians are not too sure of the relevance of this House of Commons.

There was no doubt the committee worked long and hard. I think the results are excellent. The results have been accepted and were well received by the public, at least the public that is aware of what we are doing, and it has been well received by Members of the House on all sides. Notably, I think the results have been well received by observers of the House of Commons, the professional media who work here, academics, business groups and indeed any number of groups who are concerend with how the House of Commons works.

I think it was a remarkable day last fall when the House of Commons accepted the third report through which it was accepted that the House try out the recommendations in that report for a one-year period. From my observation, this trial period has been well received and received positively by the Members of the House. I admit there is some room for some fine tuning of the changes under which we have been operating during the last year, but I doubt very much whether we would find very much call in this House to return to the rules that were in effect before the beginning of this year.

Having said that, and recognizing that the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedures has tabled seven more reports, all of which, as has been pointed out by my friend, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, were adopted unanimously without there ever having been a vote in committee and all of which were designed to improve the operations of this House, I must say I am somewhat disappointed that the House has yet to adopt these reports. I am disappointed and somewhat surprised at the reaction of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) today. He has said he is indeed committed to reform of the House of Commons, and yet he asked why we want to bring in our recommendations so quickly. I think a number of us on the committee have some very particular fears that all of the work we did over the last year and a half, which included dozens and dozens of meetings and dozens and dozens of testimonials and presentations by witnesses, a lot of work by Members of the House, a lot of work by staff people, might all go for nought. How will the public view us, Mr. Speaker, if all of this work and all of the attendant costs for this work, were thrown into the dustbin? I think we might find that more than 64 per cent will view us as being irrelevant.

● (1250)

The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) asked why the Opposition was concerned with getting agreement on the remaining seven reports so quickly. If he believes that we need parliamentary reform, and given that the reports have been tabled, does it not make sense to bring them in as soon as possible? Does it not make sense to reform this institution as soon as we can and carry on from there? The sooner we have a better House of Commons in which to operate, the better it is for this place and for the people of Canada.

He also said that the Government wanted to look at all these reports in the general context of the operations of the House of Commons. Does he not think that the committee did that? Does he not think that the committee looked at these changes in the over-all context of the operations of Parliament? I remind him that the majority of members on that committee were Members of the Government Party. They agreed with Members of the Opposition Parties that these changes were for the good of Parliament. They viewed them in the general context of the operations of the House of Commons.

Speaking specifically to the fifth report, I do not think there is much call for debate. The Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton in introducing it pointed out that it stemmed from some of the specific recommendations of the third report. In particular, it allows for independent references to committee by four members of the committee. I cannot see that there would be any argument in the House of Commons. Just to repeat myself, it was agreed to by all members of the committee. It is a simple, straightforward proposition. I cannot see any opposition to its approval today.

I really do not have much more to say. I think the reports should be accepted as soon as possible. For my part and on behalf of my Party, we would be more than willing to adopt the remaining seven reports very quickly with little or even no debate. We believe that this place needs to be reformed. We believe in the reports tabled by the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure. Having said that, I urge the House to adopt the fifth report today. Also I urge it to adopt very soon the remaining reports which have yet to be looked at.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Questions, comments? Debate.

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the issue before us today goes much deeper than just the reports. The issue raised by the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen), to which the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) and the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) referred, is fundamental. At the time the committee was meeting, there was an agreement that no motion for concurrence would be put.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, you have already ruled that out of order once.

Mr. Evans: With regard to the fifth report, the fact of the matter is that the notices are there. Motions can be put, and certainly they have been put. The question is: What was the agreement? Whether or not it was proper, in my mind—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I knew at the beginning that Hon. Members wanted to ventilate the subject to some degree as to what agreement had been made between various members of the committee. I then asked Hon. Members if they could resist that temptation and address themselves to the motion, and I have to do the same with the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans).

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I address myself to the fifth report. The fifth report of the committee deals with the matter. While the committee was in process, there was some disagreement. With regard to every report brought down by the committee and tabled in the House, there were members of the committee who had disagreements.

Mr. Nielsen: You were not even there.

Mr. Evans: They would say that they did not necessarily agree but that, if it was the consensus of the committee and since no concurrence would be moved, they would let it go ahead.

One interesting report is the one dealing with the new committees for financial accountability. That is in the report. The proposition put before us at one point earlier with regard to all the motions was that all reports would be adopted without debate. However, there are serious reservations in the minds of people who understand the concept of financial accountability and responsibility in Government with regard to the implementation and the actual operations of these additional committees which will be set up by the reports.

Effectively, if we vote concurrence now, we are saying that Hon. Members of the House should adopt these reports as House orders to change dramatically and immediately the rules of the House. I say without equivocation that 95 per cent of Members of the House have not fully digested or do not fully understand at this time the contents of the reports.

Mr. Nielsen: Why not?

Mr. Evans: That is the reason—

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the Parliamentary Secretary owes the House the favour of being relevant to the issue, to the motion. The motion is with respect to the fifth report only. It has nothing to do with the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth or tenth reports. Because of the exalted position he holds in the House, being Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, I would ask him to direct his attention to, and give the Government's position with respect to, that single report.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. On the matter that this is a point of order, I have to reply that it is not a point of order. On the matter that relevance be required, I do not think Hon. Members would necessarily have to restrict themselves only to the single motion now before the House without being able to refer to other motions which may be connected. I do not think it is irrelevant for Hon. Members to include considerations concerning the other motions.

Mr. Nielsen: The rule of relevancy is gone.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Unfortunately the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) mentions that we no longer have the relevancy rule. He well knows that it is a particularly difficult one to apply. I am doing the best I can.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your ruling and I completely concur with it. We are talking about parliamentary reform. I ask Hon. Members opposite if they can show me one report, including the fifth, which does not have ramifications running through the whole question of the operations of Parliament. The final report of the committee changes the operations of the third report which are now in implementation in the House until December 21.

A question arose in committee as to whether or not it should try to refine the third report, whether or not it should try to correct the anomalies everyone in the House recognizes exist in the third report and the temporary rules under which we are now operating. Of course it was said that we would not re-evaluate our work, that it would be negotiated among House Leaders. That negotiation was supposed to take place among House Leaders to refine the rules and to find ways of implementing each successive report and the new changes to come forward. That was supposed to be done over a period of time. It was not supposed to be done by coming in and saying that, by unanimous consent, there would be no debate and suddenly implementing the entire series of reports in the House of Commons before 95 per cent of our colleagues have even read them. That is unacceptable. If we are to have parliamentary reform, it has to be done in a reasoned, rational and phased evolutionary way, not in a revolutionary way by snapping the fingers and adopting seven or eight reports of a committee which just reported within the last month.

May I call it one o'clock Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

Report of Special Committee

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, when the House rose for lunch I was speaking about the nature of parliamentary reform in our system and the situation in which the House finds itself regarding some of the suggestions put forward about how we should proceed with the outstanding reports tabled by the special committee, and the suggestion that we not debate these items but, by unanimous consent, adopt all the reports.

We are dealing with one report today. I am concerned that Members of the House have not given full attention to the matters that have been brought before it in those reports. It is quite clear that there have been preliminary discussions in each caucus with regard to parliamentary reform and what we should do when the current temporary rules expire on December 21. That has been the basic context of the discussion. In addition, there has been preliminary discussion on the proposals brought forward in the outstanding reports.

After talking to Members on both sides of the House, Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that there has not been thorough discussion on the contents of each report and the implications of each of them. The fifth report that we are debating today is probably the most innocuous. It deals with issues that all of us could probably agree with most readily.

There are other reports outstanding. I will not get into the argument about whether concurrence was agreed to have been moved or not moved. Certainly Members on this side of the House who were involved in the committee were under the distinct impression that a consensual report would be tabled in the House, that a notice of motion would not be put, and that concurrence in those reports would not be asked for. As a result, they went along with some recommendations in the reports that, had they been voted in the committee or had there been a decision that concurrence would be moved once the report had been tabled, they would not have agreed to.

Of all the reports, the most contentious would be the so-called Huntington-Lachance report. It was an excellent report which dealt with a fundamental change in the nature of the way Parliament does business. It might not be an improvement but the recommedations went to the very heart of the way Parliament operates. I would defy any Member of the House to say that the full ramifications of those proposals are understood by Members of the House. They are not. The whole question of financial accountability in Parliament is well understood by a few Members. The Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) has that understanding and has spoken eloquently in the House in the past about fiscal responsibility, financial management, and the accountability of Government and the bureacracy to Parliament. I suggest that the recommendations that were largely a part of the Huntington-Lachance report—where they understand the nature of those recommendations and where they understand clearly what it is they are trying to achieve—are not understood by the vast majority of Members. That is not to say that Members of Parliament are not interested; it is simply to say that this is a very complex area.

Mr. Malone: Shame!

Mr. Evans: I suggest that regardless of whether it is five, six or seven Members of the House who clearly have a grasp of the question of fiscal responsibility and accountability and say that this is what the House should do, it is so fundamental that it is something that all Members of the House should clearly understand en masse. It is not something that should be adopted holus-bolus by unanimous consent at the drop of a hat. It is too important. If we are to make such a change, we would be in a difficult position to make further changes in that area. For a long time we would be saddled with something that not many Members understand fully.

Parliament, by its very nature, is an evolutionary institution. That is why we go through three readings of Bills and report stage, why we send them to the Senate for three readings, why we have public hearings—we want to make sure that we get it right.

The kind of procedure we are engaged in today and would be engaged in under some of the proposals for adopting these reports holus-bolus, is not an evolutionary procedure, it is a revolutionary procedure. Some may say that Parliament may be revolutionized. I would not agree. I think my colleagues would agree that I have been very supportive of the notion of reform, the need for change, the need to make us more accountable, to make us seem more relevant to our constituents and the country. This cannot be overlooked, but it cannot be satisfied by a revolutionary change that institutes new policies and procedures in the House of Commons that are not fully understood by Members who will have to live under them. That is why I say, Mr. Speaker, that we should be taking the parliamentary reform process in a regular step by step way.

The Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) asked me about the third report. Yes, Mr. Speaker, the third report is in place. We have had experience with that for 12 months. But there are parts of the third report, parts of the procedures and rules under which we are now living, that Hon. Members in the House today, if they had an opportunity, would say need to be changed. For example, Mr. Speaker, we have the whole day on Wednesday devoted to Private Members' Business. As a result, it breaks the week. Hon. Members have said this. Those Private Members' days, being the sole business of Wednesday, break up the week, but it has led, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker—and you know it as well as I do—to the problem of attendance in the House at times, and that should be changed. Recommendations have been put forward from many circles as to how we should change it. Perhaps we should have Private Members' Business on Monday, or perhaps on Monday evening. Perhaps we should do it in some other way. Certainly there are issues with which we are now living under the new revised procedures which need to be dealt with. It seems to me only logical that we would refine and perfect that under which we are now operating before we add additional major changes to the system which would not only compound the newness and uncertainty under which Hon. Members in the House are operating, but would also compound the problem of the existing rules. Some of the parts of the final report, for example, modify procedures with which we are now living. There are at least two recommendations in the final report of the committee which would change the provisional rules under which we are now living and under which we are supposed to be living until December 21.

I believe we must consider what has to happen if a House order were passed today with regard to the fifth report. Presumably tomorrow we would be operating under different rules. That would mean that the Standing Orders of the House would have to be changed, because Hon. Members would not know what rules they were operating under, and they certainly would not understand the changes to the rules themselves. There is a logical time for us to make these changes, Mr. Speaker, and that is when we go into a recess, for example, the Christmas recess, as we did last year. On December 22 we passed the House order which said that when we come back on January 17, the new rules will take effect. It is not appropriate, to my mind, to change the rules overnight in the middle of a session. Hon. Members would come back on Monday morning and be told, "Well, the rules are changed now. The rules are not the same as they used to be." I believe there has to be an orderly process to parliamentary reform. In addition, it has to be an evolutionary process, not a revolutionary process.

I believe the time is inappropriate and, quite frankly, I feel it is unfortunate that the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton moved concurrence in this report today, not only for the reasons which will be raised very clearly by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen) later, but also because I feel that if we are going to implement parliamentary reform, it must be done in a way which continues the consensual process under which the special committee operated. That consensual process would have to involve negotiation among the House leaders, discussion with the caucuses to ensure the Members were in agreement and understood, and agreement that the process could carry on in an evolutionary fashion, not the kind of revolutionary fashion which would be the case if we were to concur in this report today.

The process which has been started by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, I feel, is regrettable. We were making progress. There was a feeling that we could negotiate some kind of changes with regard to the reports. However, that attitude and that good will has been largely damaged by the action which has been taken in this House today by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there Hon. Members rising to make comments or ask questions? The rules at this point provide for a ten minute period of questions and answers. If there are no Hon. Members seeking to be recognized, the Chair will recognize the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons).

Hon. Roger Simmons (Burin-St. George's): The subject of this particular motion is the report of the special committee which grew out of a recognized need for some change. The House determined 16 months ago that 20 or so Members of this Chamber ought to devote their time to the question of what is wrong with the rules of the House and how they could be changed to better facilitate the purpose for which we have been sent here by the people of Canada. For 16 months those Hon. Members, representing all three Parties, of whom I was pleased to be one, worked long and hard, week in, week out, month in, month out. We asked ourselves the question, what changes are required to better facilitate the work of the House of Commons? I can tell you that there were many disagreements. Many proposals came across the table about which at first hearing I could not get very excited as a member of that committee. However, hearing the rationale of the proposer of a particular change, be it an Hon. Member from the New Democratic Party, the Conservative Party or my own Party, I found myself, along with 18 or 19 other people, seeing the wisdom of some fairly far-reaching proposals for change. As I said, I was pretty dubious about these changes when I first heard them. If one becomes accustomed to a status quo, a set of rules which has served us reasonably well over the years—with some glaring exceptions—one wants to hear a very good reason why they ought to be changed. At the beginning, there was no very clear consensus among the Members on the committee as to what rules needed to be changed, although there was consensus on the length of speeches. That has already been addressed in the third report, under which rules we are operating in this Chamber today. Aside from two or three very obvious areas, such as the length of speeches and the old Standing Order 43 procedure immediately preceding Question Period, and apart from the two or three areas which were very glaring in terms of their need for change, there were Members on the committee, I can say without misrepresenting anyone on that committee, who wanted particular changes to which I was opposed. I wanted changes to which other Members were opposed. That is the nature of the exercise. That is the reason why we needed a committee in the first place.

Those Hon. Members from all parties who spearheaded the effort to strike a committee long before the committee was ever established, recognized that you cannot ask a committee of 282 Members to focus on this issue. They recognized, in their wisdom, the need to delegate this matter to a smaller group of people with a particular interest in the issue who could focus on it day in and day out. This they did. The result is the fifth report which is before us, and several other reports which await the decision of the House.

Why, Mr. Speaker, have these reports not been concurred is in weeks, in some cases in months, after they came to the floor of this House? That is the easy question. Of course, the easy answer, the flippant, partisan answer, the answer that would destroy the very noble initiative taken by the House in establishing the committee in the first place, the destructive answer to that question, is that somebody is sitting on the reports. Somebody does not want something in those reports to go forward. I have news for you, Mr. Speaker, and for everyone in this Chamber, especially for my colleagues on that committee. I am one of the people who would be just as happy if certain things in those reports never saw the light of day. Why do I say that? Do I betray everything I stood for as a Member of that committee? No, I articulate what must be common knowledge and common sense for every person in this Chamber.

As a member of that committee I can say that there were items I disagreed with but to which I gave my support. I swallowed my disagreement in the interests of getting a compromise around that particular table. I did nothing any more laudable than anyone else around that table. We all did that kind of swallowing to achieve through compromise a set of initiatives to be agreed upon and then to be brought before the larger committee, the committee of 282, the entire membership of this House.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if as a member of that committee, focusing on a fairly continuing basis on the ramifications of the proposed changes, I can stand in my place today and say that I have some reservations, the operative question is, then, how many more reservations and how much deeper are they in this Chamber of men and women who, on the one hand, will have to be governed by whatever new rules we introduce and agree to here, and, on the other hand, have only had a passing glance at the substance of those other reports which have yet to be concurred in? What I have just said is not a brief for non-concurrence, Mr. Speaker. It is not an argument to undo the work of that all-Party committee. It is not a cloaked suggestion that we ought to go back to square one. But is a plea that we recall why this exercise was started in the first place. That was in part because the rules, or some of them, were not serving us in the best possible way. Also, because partisanship in this House was getting the upper hand. I think you know my views on partisanship, Mr. Speaker. It is a very healthy phenomenon, and the day some Member tells you he is not partisan, he is lying to you. But when partisanship becomes the objective, when it becomes the end in itself, it is time to rein in the rules to see if we cannot have the rules dictate rather than partisanship. That is what brought the House to a determination that it was time to rewrite some of the rules.

That was a fairly hefty exercise. It has taken a committee of 20 people some 16 months to lay the groundwork. What are we doing today? I hope I am wrong in what I am going to say next—

Mr. Taylor: Probably you are.

Mr. Heap: Usually you are.

Mr. Simmons: I believe what we are doing today is running the risk of undoing the very excellent groundwork laid by that committee. You see, Mr. Speaker, I find a certain contradiction in some of the things being said today.

Mr. McLean: So do I as I listen.

Mr. Simmons: I hear the gentleman, my good friend, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker), Vice-Chairman of the committee, a man who has made a marvellous contribution to this House and a remarkable contribution to the committee's work.

Mr. McLean: There is more to say.

Mr. Simmons: I hear him say in effect, these are not his words but in essence he said that we ought not to allow this effort to founder on the rocks of partisanship. I heard him say that.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): I said, "Stumble over the feet of discord".

Mr. Simmons: I agree he said it more eloquently, as he always does, but I think that was the substance of what he said. We ought not to allow this effort to founder on the rocks of partisanship. I agree with him. I believe that he believes that with all that is in him. He has put a lot of work into this, as have we all. It ought not now to come apart at the seams because of undue haste. That is where I hear the contradiction. I say to my good friend from Nepean-Carleton that if this was worth waiting 16 months for, the wait from now will not be long. We are not talking about another 16 months.

Mr. Heap: Two years.

Mr. Simmons: He knows, as I know and as the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) knows, that an earlier House order dictates, de facto, that we have to address this problem before December 21.

What are we fighting over today, Mr. Speaker? After all the good will, the good intentions, after all the hours or work which have gone into this for 16 months, what are we bickering over today? We are bickering over whether we should rush headlong into adopting the fifth report, and maybe tomorrow or on Monday there will be a similar motion, because there are several on the Order Paper. We are bickering about whether we should rush headlong into it today and in the process invite, rightly so, the disapproval of the various private Members in this House who do not yet, I say with respect, understand the full implications of these reports.

Let me tell you by way of example one of the things I object to in the committee's findings and recommendations. It might be my good friend, the gentleman who sits in this Chamber as an independent Member from Edmonton. It might be a Member in the Official Opposition, in the NDP or in this Party. It might be any other Member who in the future might choose to sit as an independent or be elected to this House outside the umbrella of a particular Party. But I object to such a Member not having the opportunity to respond under the ministerial statement procedure. If one would check the report, one would find no provision for that. It is not an earthshaking situation, but it does have ramifications for the first-class versus the second-class status of private Members in this particular Chamber. I say it ought to be addressed. I made an effort and was given full opportunity to address it in committee. I lost my point in committee. If it is only I who feel very strongly on that issue—

• (1440)

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): You argued it eloquently.

Mr. Simmons: —that is fair ball. However, there may be other Hon. Members in the House who, in their respective caucuses, might want to latch on to that particular issue. I say that I, as a private Member, want to have the same opportunity to respond to ministerial statements as I were the official spokesman for my Party on the subject under discussion in that particular statement on that given day. I do not introduce that as a matter of substance now but as a matter of example only to show that if individual Members of the House were to scrutinize those reports, they would find a number of items about which they would understandably have some reservations.

What is the solution? Is the solution to wait until I can have my way on every point? Is the solution to wait until every Hon. Member in this Chamber can have his or her way on every point? We know the answer to that. The answer is no. However, the answer, equally, must be that we must wait a reasonable amount of time until either every Member of the House or a healthy majority of the House comes to the realization that the proposed set of rule changes, though not perfection of themselves, are an improvement on the previous set of rules. I yielded on my objections, as cited in the example a moment ago, not because I am happy about what the committee is doing on that particular point, but because I recognize that, in the over-all, the committee was proposing to the House a package of rule changes which would create a situation eminently better than what is now or what was before we adopted the third report some months ago. That is the point.

Why the headlong rush? What is it we are bickering about? We are bickering today. Those of us who say in one mouthful, "Let us not allow it to founder on partisanship", are saying in the next mouthful that there are people in this Chamber who are procrastinating and filibustering. Those people who make that charge know full well that that is not the issue. The issue is not even whether we had an agreement in committee or what kind of an agreement it was. I can tell Hon. Members what agreement we had, and my good friend, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans), reflected very accurately what the agreement was. However, that is besides the point. Suppose he is dead wrong. Suppose I am dead wrong on that issue. That is the mechanic. That is a bit of semantics.

The real issue is whether we want this experiment to work and whether we are prepared to put our money where our mouth is, whether we are prepared to take what action is necessary to have these reports or the substance of these reports, adopted by this Chamber.

As one member of the committee, I am prepared to go that route. If it takes being the brunt of some name-calling, if it takes a little healthy partisanship in this House, that is fair ball. We are not babes in the wood. We have had that before. However, let us not lose sight of the objective. Let us keep our eye on the ball. Surely the ball, the objective, is to get as much of the substance of those reports embodied in a set of future rules of this House as possible.

Now, how to do that? Let me set up two possibilities. One can use the old railroad approach. One can say to 282 Members of the House, "You can have this now whether your like it or lump it. We will ram it down your throats". So, Hon. Members have not read the report. We happened to get a few reports in the House. I must admit that I have not yet read all the reports that have been tabled. I would say that there are Hon. Members in the Chamber who have not yet memorized the several reports from this committee. I would venture to say that. Therefore, we have two choices. Shall we use the old railroad approach and ram it down their throats, let them like it or lump it, or shall we say, "Let us take what reasonable steps are necessary to have these reports become the consensus of the three caucuses represented in this Chamber"? I advocate the latter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Continue.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): There is.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is unanimous consent? There is unanimous consent for the Hon. Member to continue.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Certainly.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I shall finish in a moment or so. I thank the House.

Mr. Benjamin: Don't do that. Take as long as you want.

Mr. Simmons: I become suspicious when I get support from such quarters. However, I am grateful.

Mr. Benjamin: It might never happen again.

Mr. Simmons: I am grateful for it, anyway, it being such a unique occasion.

Mr. Speaker, I advocate the latter course. I believe we ought to take some time, not a lot of time. I believe the earlier House order to which I referred has, in effect, boxed us into a time frame, in any event. I am not advocating that we ought to wait until the midnight hour, until December 21. However, we are bickering over whether we will do it on October 14 or some time subsequent, but before December 21. That is what we are arguing over.

After putting 16 months into this exercise, we are now here for a full day bickering about whether we should do it today, next week, or maybe the week after, or sometime, hopefully, very soon. We must do it, in conscience. If we believe what we instructed the committee to do in the first place 16 months ago, in conscience we must have something to supplant, to take over, when the interim arrangement runs out on December 21. That is common sense. It would be a betrayal of the House if we did not do something, put in place an adequate replacement for the interim rules that are now operative in this Chamber.

Therefore, I make a plea to those who support the motion, because I can support the spirit of the motion. I can support it in the sense that we would like to have the concurrence of this House in this report. I would seek the indulgence of those who say it must be done today. I would ask them to stand back a moment and think about what damage they may be doing to the over-all process, because surely the over-all process, the over-all objective, is to get as much as possible of the package which the committee has produced over 16 months embodied in the new rules of the House.

I say to Your Honour that the most hopeful way, the best way of doing that, is to allow Members of the House an opportunity to deliberate on the implication, not an unduly long opportunity. However, when I hear Hon. Members of the House who are not members of the committee standing in their place and pleading with the House, in effect, "Give us a little time so we know what it is we are getting ourselves into", I think that is a fair request and one which ought to be heard.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are Hon. Members rising to ask questions of the Hon. Member who has just spoken?

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I ask the unanimous consent of this House so that the debate on this motion be merely adjourned—

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Pinard: —and that we proceed to the Orders of the Day so that we can resume debate forthwith on Bill C-155. I can assure Your Honour that you will receive this consent from the Government side of the House.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, when this business began today, I was quite frankly hoping that the Government would have reflected on its rejection last night, yesterday, of the reports. Now we are dealing with this particular report, it would reflect upon the rejection of this simple report. We are not prepared to consent to a process that would eliminate the possibility of agreement today with respect to this very small but very important adjunct to the third report of the committee. That is why it is there. Therefore, the simple answer to my friend's request is no, there is no unanimous consent.

• (1450)

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, normally I would say that I am pleased to participate in a debate, but I would be less than honest if I made that particular statement today because I frankly feel that this debate is inappropriate at this particular time, given the approximately 16 months of splendid work done by the special committee which was established by this House in order to find ways in which we can make Parliament more relevant and the work of the individual Member of Parliament more relevant.

I wish to join with the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) in paying tribute to the Chairman of that committee, the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre). I am sure all Hon. Members agree that he handled his assignments in an able, direct and non-partisan fashion. We also saw fit to name two vice-chairmen, one of whom is the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton. When he was called upon to fulfil that particular responsibility, he worked admirably and in a way as commendable as that of the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle.

The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), who is the House Leader for the New Democratic Party, was also named as a vice-chairman. Due to the fact that there are few of them and the other responsibilities given to that Member, I understand that that task was subsequently taken over from time to time by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) and the Hon. Member for Selkirk-Interlake (Mr. Sargeant), particularly during the latter portion of the committee hearings when they saw fit to attend each and every meeting. This shows that there was a positive response not only from every Member on the committee but every Party in the House on a strictly non-partisan basis.

This was an enjoyable committee because our work was worth-while. Our hearings were conducted in a wonderful atmosphere. Let me give an example of the importance we gave to the committee and the sense of humour which made it enjoyable. We had a rather long debate about whether we should go to Mont Ste.-Marie for a day or two to work full-time on a particular report, to Montebello or to remain here in Ottawa. The feeling was that Mont Ste.-Marie would be the choice. Unfortunately, one of the members of the committee left the meeting before we finally made our decision, although he was the one who emphasized that if we were going to Mont Ste.-Marie we should be there to begin work at 9:30. When it came to 9:30, this particular Member did not show up. As a matter of fact he did not show up until approximately one o'clock in the afternoon. We had determined that instead of leaving for Mont Ste.-Marie he had gone to Montebello and therefore had to find his way to Mont Ste.-Marie from there. We will not mention his name because it is with a sense of humour that we are not letting that individual forget that he went to the wrong place. We certainly chided him for missing four valuable hours of debate in the committee.

I am one who has spent almost 15 years in this place but it did not take me long to learn from the Member for Winnipeg-North Centre (Mr. Knowles) or a former Member, Max Saltzman, that rule changes can only properly be made if they are made with the consent of Members of Parliament from both sides of the House. Mr. Saltzman said that one can make all the rules in the world, but if an individual or a Party feels it is being shortchanged, all those rules will not make Parliament more productive or relevant and certainly not make the individual Member of Parliament feel more important in his particular role. There must be consensus and agreement from all sides.

I stated that I am disappointed in this particular debate because our previous experience with the third report shows that we can agree. Our third report was adopted unanimously after each committee member from each Party took this report to his respective caucus saying that it had to go through as a complete package or not at all. We were able to convince our individual caucuses that we could make this work by experimenting on a temporary basis to see how it worked. I believe that precedent showed that this procedure works and can be completed in a very short period of time.

It was my hope that the reports subsequent to the third report could be dealt with in exactly the same way and, according to my understanding of the mechanics, that is precisely what we were supposed to do. It was on that basis that our chairman, who happens to be a Member of our Party, in co-operation with those of us on the Liberal side, demanded and received a full caucus hearing at which we would discuss solely the rule changes contained in the reports of that particular committee. I hope that I am not betraying the confidence of the caucus, but that meeting was to take place next Wednesday when we would go over each report to try to point out the strengths and weaknesses and arrive at a consensus. We would then put our submission to the House Leader who could meet with the House Leaders of the other Parties.

It has worked before. We presently have temporary rules in place which, I submit, are working very well. We did that on the basis of consensus. Unfortunately, I think the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton has moved out of the consensus arena and into the political arena. Frankly, I feel that I am not talking to Members of Parliament but to the public, because we now seem to be trying to make a political point. The Opposition Party says that it is prepared to adopt all of these reports without any debate. However, there are some flaws in some of these reports. For instance, the Huntington-Lachance report was made by a Member of the Conservative Party and a Member of the Liberal Party. That report which dealt with accountability was debated during several long committee hearings. We felt that the accountability concept was good but the procedure for setting up all of the committees would, in effect, work to the detriment of accountability because we would not be able to get people who were prepared to serve on committees such as the Public Accounts Committee on a full-time basis. We felt that that system was too cumbersome and needed improvement. However, we put that in the report because it highlighted one of the concerns of all Members of Parliament, which is accountability.

One of our reports deals with the Commission of internal economy and we discussed how that might better be handled other than by a Privy Councillor or former Privy Councillors as was suggested. There is enough of them around now on both sides of the House.

In any event, we felt that the backbenchers should have some opportunity to have a final say on such things as whether we should have committee rooms, particularly for those important committees meeting on a constant basis.

I hear some people saying "filibuster". I worked 16 months on this particular committee and I feel very strongly about this issue. I was angry today and lost my temper when criticizing the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, but those who know me realize that that is not my usual demeanor. However, I felt let down today and yesterday as a result of these particular motions. I am afraid it will do irreparable damage to the splendid work that we did over that 16 months.

The Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) was making the point that it was agreed that we could move, after we finished our final report, in any direction we wished. It would be acceptable to move concurrence, and this was discussed at the last meeting. The last meeting was specifically set up to give final approval to the report. I know that because I was unable to attend the last meeting and I asked for a copy of the report a day in advance. I sent it back to one of the staff on the committee indicating that I thought it was a splendid report and a great summary. That was the sole reason for that particular meeting.

Let me substantiate my position. If we had not agreed on a consensus and not moved concurrence, the Government, with its majority on the committee, would then have been in a position to prevent the proposal of several suggestions because we would vote against it with the knowledge that there might be several Members who felt very strongly that it should not take place. Therefore, the consensus was there, and no vote was required. We were essentially trying to raise issues that were of concern to backbenchers. We were not necessarily agreeing with how it was dealt with. The response to the Lachance-Huntington report is an example. I personally feel it is too cumbersome. I think something like that can be done.

• (1500)

The Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) was here earlier. He said "Yes, hammer it through like 1969." I agree with him. I think 1969 was a mistake. As it turned out we had 112 new Members when I came here in 1968. We had come from the business community, from farms and from various sectors of the community and we were anxious to get on with the business. We were fed up with the slow pace of things taking place. I remember the first speech I ever made in the House of Commons. I said "Let's get out from behind our newspapers. Let's get down to work and let's make this chamber more relevant to the people out there." That was the sum and substance of what I was endeavouring to get across, as was everyone else back in 1968.

We moved too quickly. What happened? I have forgotten the numbers, but I think the rule was No. 17A, B and C, or something like that. There were flaws in it because we moved too quickly. Subsequently we had to move an amendment and we ended up with what is today Standing Order 75A, B, and C. I think it is a better rule, but if we had spent a bit more time we could have done an even better job.

There are areas in these reports, this one included, although it is a fairly minor one, that are favourable, or something the Opposition would like. Some of these rules we rather like, and there are some that every Member in the House feels are necessary. The Commissioners of Economy is, I think, a case in point. We have rules in place on a temporary basis now. I think most of us agree that replacing Standing Order 43 with Standing Order 21 was a good idea. I think the semester system is a good idea, as well as the 20 minute speeches with a ten-minute response. At least when a Member is making a speech he knows he may be asked questions. I think he will be a little bit more careful about what he has to say.

There are some who feel, and I happen to be one, that dealing with Private Members' Business on one day does split up the week. Maybe some changes could be made, but they will be made only with co-operation. Not all of these rules will be adopted by either side. In fact, I am fairly well satisfied that the Opposition had tongue in cheek, knowing that no government could automatically say yes, we are going to accept all of these without looking to the ramifications.

In the interests of getting back some degree of co-operation and negotiation, I move:

That the House do now proceed to the Orders of the Day.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Call in the Members.

[And the division bells having stopped at 4.59 p.m.]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. On the word of the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), it is now five o'clock. That being the case, the motion now before the House has lapsed. Under the provisions of Standing Order 8(1), therefore, the House stands adjourned until Monday next at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

I am told that I am in the habit of wishing Hon. Members a good weekend. I would not want to break my own habit, so I wish Hon. Members a good weekend.

At 5.01 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Thursday, October 13, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 35 (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to rise today to speak on this important amendment introduced by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) to Clause 17 of Bill C-155. Since I am the first speaker this morning, perhaps I could clarify the purpose of this amendment.

Clause 17 sets out the duties and functions of the Administrator under the Act. He has a number of duties set out in Clause 1 through Clause 4 and Members of the House will recall that an amendment was introduced at committee stage introducing Subclause (4). Motion No. 35 would change Subclause (4). As it now stands, Subclause (4) gives the Administrator certain powers which we in this Party believe to be detrimental to the long-term interests of the farming community in Canada. It reads as follows:

> The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

The purpose of our amendment is to ensure that where such agreements are entered into, they are not done so in a way which could lead to the abandonment of rail lines, particularly in rural parts of Canada such as the proposed abandonment of the E & N Railway on Vancouver Island. The amendment would permit this substitution to take place only in certain circumstances. My colleague's amendment would strike out line 25 at page 8 and substitute the following:

> —the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission.

This amendment is of absolutely fundamental importance, Mr. Speaker. Were it not to be included in the provisions of the legislation, what would happen very quickly is that the rail shippers would argue that the shipment of grain by rail on certain branch lines had become unprofitable because their volumes had gone down. That would have happened because they would have substituted transportation by truck.

Among other things, we are concerned that the trucking companies in question are none other than those owned by the railway companies, whether it be CPR or CNR. They will use the device of transfer to trucking as a means of accelerating the abandonment of these branch lines which are so vital in so many rural communities.

Questions have been raised by some Members of the Official Opposition about the possibility that this could cause hardship in the event a branch line became unserviceable for a period of time through, for example, a bridge washout or if the line was soft and the producer would not have an opportunity to transport grain by rail. The Official Opposition has claimed that this amendment would somehow preclude the producer from shipping in the most efficient manner.

I believe my distinguished colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West, answered that objection admirably in committee, but since the objection has been raised in the House, I think it is important to deal with it. The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) said if there was a washout on the Medicine Hat line, for example, that under the circumstances of the amendment that is before the House it would block the Administrator from paying for that grain to go from the Cardston primary elevator. The Hon. Member for Regina West pointed out that in those circumstances the Canadian Wheat Board will make alternate arrangements and these arrangements will often be for trucking. It has done that on a number of occasions in the past, and certainly if this amendment were to be implemented—as I know the House will see fit to do—there would be no problem whatsoever with the Wheat Board picking up the slack in the event of a bridge washout on one of these lines. What we are attempting to do is to ensure that the branch lines are not abandoned by a mechanism which would accelerate its profit to go to CP.

Some people would ask in whose interest this is, and I will come to that in a moment in terms of the contributions made by CP and CN to the Government and the Official Opposition. I think it is relevant and important that, in examining the purpose of the amendment, we know precisely in whose interests we are dealing.

I should like to turn to another area now and examine the experience of the State of Iowa which I believe is most relevant. As Hon. Members will know, Iowa is an intensive grain growing area and there has been a transfer from grain movement by rail to road to inland terminals similar to what would be implied by the provisions of Bill C-155 if our amendment were not adopted. The State of Iowa found that its highway system was being worn out by heavy trucks two or three times as fast as the government of Iowa could afford to repair or replace it. As a result, it went back to the old system of subsidizing existing railroad branch lines to keep the grain moving by rail. It found this to be much cheaper than looking after the additional costs of highway maintenance and upgrading.

The only interest which would be served by allowing Subclause (4) of Clause 17 to go through in its present form would be the interests of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. As is documented in the official records of political contributions in Canada, in 1982 the Liberal Party of Canada received some $50,000 from Canadian Pacific and the Conservative Party of Canada received $50,000 from Canadian Pacific. In the three previous years, 1981, 1980 and 1979, $128,000 was given to the Liberals by CP and its 12 affiliates and $134,000 was given to the Conservative Party by CP and its 12 affiliates. So we see in whose interests the proposed Subclause (4) of Clause 17 was written, and it is for that reason that we believe it has to be qualified in the manner suggested here.

I would also like to note that in a submission before the Transport Committee in Regina on August 8, 1983, a Mr. Charles Phelps, president of the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities, made this statement with respect to the amendment which is now before the House:

> If the Crow rate is abolished the railways will have the flexibility to charge different rates on different lines by charing higher rates on lines that are less profitable, lower rates on lines that are profitable. The railways will have an economic level to persuade farmers to truck their grain to certain points and abandon others. This tactic, coupled with the presence of large inland terminals, will force the farmers to haul to inland terminals or pay higher freight rates to keep their local elevators open. If they are forced by this economic pressure to haul to inland terminals, the local elevator will close and, as recent studies have shown, the local community will decline very quickly after the local elevator has been shut down.

We know the vital importance of keeping the local elevators open in rural Saskatchewan communities.

> This will have a serious negative impact on the nature and viability of rural life in small towns.

In terms of the substance of the amendment itself, it is very important to note that this amendment would insist that there be no alternate shipping of grain by truck unless the Canadian Transport Commission ordered the abandonment of the alternate rail line. The reason this provision is so important is to allow people in these rural communities the opportunity to make submissions to the CTC with respect to the importance of a particular rail line.

We are all aware of this Liberal Government's policy on rail line abandonment, including the Esquimalt and Northern rail line on Vancouver Island. The intent of this amendment is to ensure that those people in rural communities who are vitally affected by the abandonment of a rail line would have an opportunity for input into that decision.

Were this amendment not to be accepted, there is a real possibility that CP Rail could proceed to enter into cozy little arrangements with the Administrator within the provisions of Clause 17(4) so it can move grain by trucks which are owned by a CP subsidiary. Following that, CP would then argue that the traffic on the rail line itself has declined in importance and ultimately suggest that that particular rail line has outlived its usefulness even though it may be the lifeblood of a particular community and the elevator in question may be vitally important to that community. CP would then appear before the CTC to make its appeal, as it has in the past. We know this Government's record and I do not think we can suggest that any other government headed by the Official Opposition would treat the matter any differently. Thus we would see an essential branch line abandoned without any input whatsoever from the citizens in that particular community.

Therefore I believe it is essential that this motion be adopted. I have mentioned the example of the State of Iowa and, in the context of other Provinces and States, the Iowa state transportation agency has given us a clear warning that we should not permit the mistake that was made in Iowa to be repeated in other grain growing jurisdictions.

This motion would prohibit the use of subsidized trucking to compete for traffic with existing branch lines. Certainly where a branch line has been formally abandoned by order of the CTC, we would want to ensure that the grain in question would be effectively and efficiently carried to the nearest rail line. However, when a branch line is still an essential element of a particular community, we certainly would not want to see a callous abandonment of that line as is possible under Clause 17(4) in its existing form. We would also note that Clause 17(4) as it exists could be used to facilitate other undesirable steps, such as making the abandonment of elevators and branch lines more palatable or the establishment of a system of inland terminals as a result of permitting the growth of trucking to them.

I will not go on at great length because I believe I have stated the essential points I wanted to make. I see you are rising, Mr. Speaker. Are you indicating that my time is up?

● (1120)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to enter into this debate which, as most Members of this House know, has a great bearing on my constituency because of the construction of the world-class grain elevator system in the Port of Prince Rupert.

Before us now is Motion No. 35, to amend Clause 17(4) which reads as follows:

The Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements to provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport where, in his opinion, such agreements would be in the best interests of the grain producers.

Our amendment adds the following words:

—the grain producers, but such agreements shall not provide for the movement of grain by motor vehicle transport from shipping points on rail lines which have not been abandoned by order of the Canadian Transport Commission.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), made it quite clear that simply in terms of process this is a very important route to take to ensure that those residents of small rural communities have an opportunity to appear before the CTC to make their views known in terms of what the impact on their community would be if grain that was traditionally and historically moving from a country elevator on a branch line was to be moved by a different mode of transport, primarily that of rubber.

A point made in committee, one which has been made by my colleagues in the House, that is the money to pay for the rubber hauling of grain as opposed to its movement by rail would not come from the Crow Bill as is proposed before this House. There is a bit of mythology being circulated in this country that the money that would subsidize the movement of grain by rubber would somehow come from the Crow Bill itself. That simply is not true, as is pointed out by Government officials who appeared before the Transport Committee. They pointed out the money would come from the branch line rehabilitation fund which we know is already short about $600 million. We have seen, certainly since the 1977 hearings held by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall, that an awful lot of branch line funds that were supposedly going to be used by CN and CP to bring their branch lines into a reasonable state of quality simply were not used by the rail lines, and now Parliament has already had to introduce special funds in terms of another rehabilitation fund to ensure that those lines are picked up.

What we would see by leaving Clause 17(4) as it now stands is a self-fulfilling prophecy in many ways; for instance, the competition that would be coming from the rubber haul, I know Members of the Official Opposition have been saying, and certainly the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) was saying on Thursday, that what the NDP is trying to do is to stop any kind of subsidy payments going to those commercial haulers and producers who are hauling grain in areas where there are no branch lines. Far be it the position of this Party to say that where there are no branch lines there should not be some kind of compensatory payments to those individuals, farmers and producers who have to haul simply to get to the branch lines.

What we are saying in terms of this amendment specifically is that there should not be abuse of the branch line rehabilitation fund in areas where there is an existing branch line and country elevator to bring rubber hauling into a more competitive position.

My colleague from Burnaby made a very important point that I plead with Government Members to listen and pay some attention to. I refer to the information given to the Transport Committee regarding the difficulties which the State of Iowa encountered when it made a very unfortunate move and allowed legislation very similar to the existing Clause 17(4) to come into existence, which was to make rubber movement of grain competitive to rail. The State of Iowa discovered that its highway system was being worn out by heavy commercial trucks hauling grain two to three times as fast as the government of Iowa could afford to repair and replace it with its existing system of financing roads. The State of Iowa moved to introduce a system of law similar, if not identical, to what is being proposed by the NDP and should be supported simply for economic and fiscal reasons, above and beyond some other points which I will be raising in a few minutes. What the State of Iowa found after bringing in legislation, similar to Motion No. 35 that we are proposing, was that it was cheaper by an enormous amount to move grain once again by rail. They had gone to rail, then they went to rubber, and now they are back to rail. The Iowa state transportation agency has warned other jurisdictions, in particular Canada, not to permit the mistake of transferring such movement from rail to road.

• (1125)

There has been an enormous abandonment of branch lines in Canada already, simply as a result of the legislation passed through the House. The Crow Bill would dramatically exacerbate the abandonment of rail lines because of the self-fulfilling design of Clause 17(4) which indicates that the Administrator, on behalf of the Minister, may enter into agreements that are deemed to be in the best interests of grain producers. We are talking about a Bill which is making use of hundreds of millions of taxpayers' dollars. We know already from evidence given by farmers that they are worried about losing 30,000 or 40,000 farms because of the impact of Crow changes above and beyond those we are talking about in Clause 17(4). We are talking about losing 30,000 or 40,000 farms in the Peace area and in northern Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The impact of losing that number of farms will be felt by schools, those who pay municipal taxes and small enterprises, whether it be farm implement suppliers, fertilizer suppliers, local butcher stores or hardware stores. We are talking about a very dramatic shift in population on the Prairies as a result of the Crow Bill as a whole.

We are pleading for common sense in terms of economics and that we follow the warning signal of the State of Iowa and not allow a massive shifting over from rail to road. As I said in previous speeches, it might look good for a little while. CP and CN—CN has one of the largest trucking firms in Canada—say that we should look at all the jobs being created for truckers and commercial haulers, that we should look at the tires being sold, the new repair shops coming on line, and so on. It is a myth that those are real jobs. We can only talk about that kind of job creation out of one side of our mouths, because we know at the other end or in other areas of the system that we are losing farms and tens of thousands of jobs as a result of poorly thought out legislation.

As my colleagues and I have said before, the Government of Canada stands indicted for not having brought before the House the proper economic information on the number of farms which will be lost as a result of the Crow Bill as it now stands in comparison with the number of farms that will be lost as a result of the amendments of the New Democratic Party. We should know what will be the impact of going ahead with Clause 17(4) without the kind of process about which we are talking. It would mean a branch line must be abandoned by the Canadian Transport Commission. The butcher, the hardware store owner, the school teacher or persons living in rural Saskatchewan or the Peace area of British Columbia for their whole lives or three or four generations should have the opportunity of not only sending postcards to their Members of Parliament but of appearing before the CTC to indicate what they think the costs will be to their municipalities for moving grain by road and to say: "Sure, we are getting the subsidy from the branch line rehabilitation fund, but by not having money in that fund, it is a self-fulfilling prophecy". As we lose the branch lines by using the money to rubber haul, we lose communities and farmers, and the grain trade in Canada becomes less competitive and less in the interests of Canadians.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) introduced this motion. He is presumed to have spoken when he introduced it. Is he seeking to be recognized to speak?

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I appreciate the rules. The motion is in my name but the lead-off speaker was my colleague, the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo). I have not made my ten-minute speech yet. However, if the Chair is to enforce the rule, I would be grateful if it would enforce it with the next series of motions. On Motions Nos. 31 and 32 this occurred. It occurred dozens of times in the committee. I am sure the Chair will appreciate that when you have to file motions in advance with the Chairman and the clerk of the committee, you do not know who will be available to speak one day, two days, or a week later. Similarly at report stage, when motions have to be filed within a certain deadline, you have no way of knowing what Members will be in the House days later. Therefore, you have no choice but to put motions in under one or two names.

● (1130)

I am not quarrelling with the rule. I am just asking if the Chair would be good enough to start applying the rule, if it chooses to do so, with the next series of motions. With the short notice on this one, I would be grateful for the indulgence of the Chair and the House to make my ten-minute speech.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The rule and procedure of the House is clear. When a motion is introduced in a Member's name, he is presumed to have spoken. The Hon. Member would need the unanimous consent of the House to be recognized at this stage. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Regina West to be recognized?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Section (11) of Standing Order 79, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

According to the interpretation given by the Chair previously, Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38 will be grouped for debate at this point.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

Motion No. 36

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 18 by striking out lines 44 to 47 at page 8 and lines 1 to 41 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"should be met by any railway company

(d) monitor the performance of the railway companies to ascertain whether or not they are meeting the performance objectives referred to in paragraph (c); and

(e) develop, for possible implementation under section 21, a scheme of sanctions applicable to railway companies and make recommendations to the Minister on the advisability of implementing that scheme."

Motion No. 37

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 18 by striking out line 18 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"mented under section 21, but awards and sanctions for system participants other than the railway companies shall be non-pecuniary in nature;"

Motion No. 38

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 18 by striking out line 18 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"mented under section 21, but such awards and sanctions shall not involve the allocation of railway cars nor affect the quota system of the Canadian Wheat Board.

He said: Mr. Speaker, these three motions have to do with the part of the system having to do with awards and sanctions that can be applied by the Senior Grain Transportation Administrator. It is a one-man position, but the legislation calls for him to be an agency of the Crown. I do not know of any other one-man agency anywhere in government. There may be, I do not know, but I have never heard of it.

We have a ridiculous situation within the legislation as it now reads. One Crown agency can place sanctions on or make awards to another Crown agency. If the Grain Transportation Administrator was mad at the Canadian Wheat Board, he could impose sanctions, monetary or otherwise, on the Canadian Wheat Board. The Canadian Wheat Board is under the jurisdiction of the Minister in the other place and the Grain Transportation Administrator will be under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy).

I have never heard of one Cabinet Minister relishing another Cabinet Minister's interfering with something that comes under his responsibility. The Administrator could issue sanctions against the Canadian Grain Commission. The Canadian Grain Commission is under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). The Administrator is under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Transport. I can see the Minister of Transport and the Minister of Agriculture in a boxing match out behind the Centre Block if that were to happen! It is ridiculous.

Second, if a sanction is awarded against the Canadian Wheat Board, it involves the grain producers' money. If the Chief Commissioner, any other Commissioner or the administration of the Canadian Wheat Board fouled up and made some good goofs, it is up to the Minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board to fire him or do something about it. There should be no possibility of one Crown agency imposing sanctions on or making awards to another Crown agency, particularly when they come under different Departments.

Third, it allows the Administrator to make sanctions against and awards for elevator companies. The Canadian Wheat Board already has a system for sanctions against grain companies. If they ship the wrong grade, quality or kind of grain, there are sanctions provided and implemented by the Canadian Wheat Board against that grain company. It may lose a certain number of car allocations or there may be some other kind of penalty. Similarly, the Canadian Grain Commission has a method for penalties. If a grain company grades a grain wrongly, abuses a grain producer by way of the dockage that is permitted or the handling or elevation charges, the Canadian Grain Commission has the authority over that company.

We submit that the only place the Administrator should have the power to make sanctions is with regard to the railroads. This is a transportation Bill. It is not a farm Bill but an anti-farm Bill. If there are to be sanctions and awards made by anybody on the system participants, as they are called, it should be on the railroads or on some ports or the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, because they are part of the transportation system for grain as well as other commodities.

Motions Nos. 37 and 38 are designed to remove any possibility of weakening or removing the authority and scope of the operations of the Canadian Wheat Board. Those authorities should remain with the Canadian Wheat Board. It should have the authority to ensure that there is an adequate supply of railway cars to move board grain which constitutes the overwhelming majority of grain shipments. It should have the authority to ensure that no grain company is treated unfairly in the allocation of railway cars. I am particularly concerned, as are all of us from the west, with the possibility of a lessening of the share of grain movement placed upon the three Wheat Pools and the United Grain Growers.

These motions are designed to prevent the private grain trade and particularly foreign-owned grain companies from moving in on a market to which they are not entitled. They are designed to ensure that the Canadian Wheat Board quota system is not distorted through sanctions imposed which could cause car shortages, and to ensure that the block system, which is functioning extremely well under the aegis of the Canadian Wheat Board, is not disrupted. They are also designed to ensure that sanctions in themselves are not disruptive to the system as a whole.

I simply do not understand why we would need the capacity in the legislation to allow a one-man agency to have the authority to impose sanctions and awards on an organization such as the Canadian Wheat Board, which is recognized as the most efficient and competent grain marketing agency in the world. It does a better job than any other agency in any other exporting nation. It is recognized by its customers as being dependable and honest in its dealings with its customers. It is held in the highest regard by all people in western Canada and by all people who support the principle of the orderly marketing of grain.

Our Motion No. 37 would limit the capacity of the Senior Grain Transportation Administrator, an agency of the Crown, to applying sanctions and awards only to the railroads. The legislation now provides for him to apply sanctions and awards to all system participants. That could include the Canadian Transport Commission, the Railway Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission, the Canadian Grain Commission and the Canadian Wheat Board. It could provide for sanctions and awards to be applied to any grain company and, I suspect, even to producers.

It is inconceivable to me, Mr. Speaker, as it was to many of us on the committee, that we could see this spectable of several Crown agencies fighting and squabbling over the whole matter of an award or sanction, whether it was monetary or not. What could the Grain Transportation Administrator do by way of a sanction on the Canadian Grain Commission, for example? Can he fire any of its employees who may have made serious errors and caused harm to the movement, handling and transportation of grain? Can he levy fines? Can he fire members of the Canadian Grain Commission? What can he do, Mr. Speaker?

When we in committee asked these questions of the Deputy Minister, he said: "Everbody agrees that the Canadian Wheat Board is doing a good job and that the Canadian Grain Commission is doing a good job, but we thought it would be a good idea to have this in the legislation to see whether or not it would work or how it would work". If the bureaucrats want to experiment, Mr. Speaker, they can darn well experiment with something other than the Canadian Wheat Board or the Canadian Grain Commission.

I hope, Sir, that we have the support of Hon. Members on all sides of the House. I think the Government itself must be questioning this nonsense of one Crown agency being able to levy a sanction or award on another. It simply is not practical, it will not work and can do nothing but cause more harm to the system of the handling, storage and transportation of grain.

I hope that these amendments will be supported, Mr. Speaker. I am asking for their support because of what occurred in the Transport Committee. I am confident that the amendments make sense, are practical and retain the powers and authorities of the Canadian Wheat Board, the mandate of which is to operate on behalf of the grain producers and no one else.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, the intent of Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38 is to limit the authority of the Grain Transportation Administrator over the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canadian Grain Commission. I really do not see how Members of the House could have any problem with that.

We all know, and it has been documented time and time again, that the problem with our grain delivery system when it does break down is not with the Wheat Board or the Grain Commission. The problem is with the railway companies. It is the railway companies that leave grain cars sitting for as long as 90 days at country elevators when the grain in those cars is needed for export sales. It is the representatives of the railway companies who tell the agent of a country elevator that they will pick up a car on Monday, making it necessary for the agent to work through the weekend filling that car, when in the end the car is left sitting for another two or three days.

The problem with our grain delivery system, Mr. Speaker, is not that producers cannot get the grain to the elevator in time to be marshalled for export. It is not that when the grain gets to the terminals in Prince Rupert, Thunder Bay, Vancouver or Churchill that it is needlessly held up. The problem is and has been for some time now that the railways cannot seem to meet their obligations to move grain from the elevators to port quickly and efficiently. The railways have been responsible for leaving millions of dollars worth of grain sitting in rail cars on sidings by country elevators when it should be at the terminals being loaded on to ships for export.

The first of this group of amendments, Mr. Speaker, is Motion No. 36. What does it do? This motion restricts the authority of the Grain Transportation Administrator to apply sanctions for failing to meet performance objectives only to the railways. It also removes the authority of the Administrator to grant awards to the railways for meeting their performance objectives. Motion No. 36 is the broadest of the three in this group and it is the one that I think the House should accept, Mr. Speaker. Since Motions Nos. 37 and 38 are consequential to Motion No. 36, I will focus my attention on Motion No. 36.

First, why do we want to restrict the authority of the Administrator to apply sanctions only to the railway companies? Would it not be valuable to have those sanctions applied to the Wheat Board and to the Grain Commission as well? I think it is pretty evident that those sanctions should not apply to the Wheat Board and to the Grain Commission. I have already mentioned the documented fact that it is the railways that have been, and continue to be, the problem in the grain delivery system. It is the railways that leave grain cars sitting on the sidings by country elevators when those cars, as I have said, are needed in Thunder Bay, Churchill or one of the other terminals.

That is not the only reason for applying sanctions only to the railways. As my diligent colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), tried to explain time and again in committee, the Canadian Grain Commission is itself responsible for regulating the quality of grain and the allocation of grain cars. It is already responsible to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). The Canadian Wheat Board is responsible for marshalling grain and selling it for export and is already responsible to the Wheat Board Minister. It seems to me that either of these agencies ball up the delivery of grain to port. Their respective Ministers already have the authority to do what has to be done to straighten the problem out. What is the need of another regulatory agency overseeing these regulatory agencies?

Without this amendment, Mr. Speaker, we will find ourselves in the ludicrous situation of having a system of awards and sanctions established by one regulatory agency, the Grain Transportation Administrator, to regulate another regulatory agency, the Canadian Wheat Board, itself responsible for regulating other system participants such as the elevator companies and the terminal elevators. We will have a situation where one regulatory agent, the Grain Transportation Administrator, is regulating another regulatory agency, the Canadian Grain Commission, itself responsible for regulating producer cars, grades and type and quality of grains. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we would have regulatory agencies or top of regulatory agencies.

The Liberals and the Tories, who have accepted this scheme in committee, have already given new meaning to bureaucratic overkill, and that is not all. There is a very real danger that in accepting this Tory and Liberal scheme of regulatory agencies regulating regulatory agencies, we could be doing a great deal of harm to farmers. If the Administrator of the Grain Transportation Committee is left with the ability to tamper with the allocation of rail cars or interfere with the quota system as part of the system of notional sanctions, it will be the farmers who will pay. If the Grain Commission is prevented by the Administrator from allocating producer cars, it will be grain producers who are left holding the bag. If the quota system is tampered with, it will not be the Wheat Board which suffers, it will not be the elevator companies which suffer, it will be the farmers who suffer.

When the Transport Committee was dealing with this Bill, the Deputy Minister of Transport tried to explain why he wanted the Administrator to have the power to impose sanctions on the Wheat Board and the Grain Commission. I have read that exchange very carefully and this is how he summed it up, and I quote:

If you granted immunity to some of them from even the notional system of awards and sanctions, would that somehow weaken the idea that they are just as accountable as everybody else?

For the Deputy Minister, the answer is obviously yes. But I must disagree with him. The Wheat Board and the Grain Commission are already held responsible for meeting their performance objectives. They do not need the Senior Grain Transportation Committee to make sure they live up to their responsibilities. Railways, on the other hand, have shown time and again that they need this kind of regulation to ensure they live up to their responsibilities.

I would also like to deal with the proposal to grant the railways awards for meeting their performance objectives. I can hardly believe that the Government and the Tories would even consider that kind of scheme. We are already expected to hand over to the railway companies some $650 million annually in the form of a Crow subsidy. The Government is making much of its intention to invest billions of dollars in upgrading our grain delivery system. Added to that are the billions of dollars over the years in subsidies, the provision of hopper cars and deferred income tax. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the railways have already been rewarded handsomely for what could at best be described as a pretty spotty record in meeting their performance objectives. In fact, it seems to me the whole idea of scrapping the Crow rate is only another reward to the railways; only this time it is coming directly out of the farmers' pockets. We do not even have to consider giving awards to the railways for meeting their performance objectives; we have given them enough already. I believe the railways should be required to meet their performance objectives, pure and simple. If they fail to do that, the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee should level sanctions against them.

In closing, I must comment again, as I did at the beginning, that I cannot see how the House cannot accept these three amendments. I urge all Hon. Members of this House to do so in order to take one more step in the efficiency of our grain handling system on the Prairies.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of our amendments to Bill C-155 as proposed in Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38. These motions have the effect of amending some of the powers which have been given to the Administrator in Clause 18 of Bill C-155. This clause spells out in great detail the powers of the Administrator. It spells out when his report should be filed. There must be tonnage forecasts for the movement of grain in the next crop year filed on or before February 28 of each year. He must file a report forecasting the movement of grain in the current crop year and he must consult with the various participants in the system which have been alluded to in previous amendments as the Bill has progressed through the House. The Administrator must also monitor the performance of the railway companies and other system participants.

As well, the clause describes a requirement that the Administrator develop a notional scheme of sanctions applicable to the railway companies, and then goes on to work out a system of awards and sanctions applicable to such system participants, other than the railway companies, as the Administrator may consider appropriate. I believe it is at this point that these amendments come into play, because what we are proposing by our motions is to make the pecuniary penalties applicable only to the rail side.

Any time one is making a law, a good place to start is to review what now exists and what now works, and if we are going to improve the system, we should be focusing on the part of the system which is not now working. When you go through the various participants in the system, it is pretty clear that the part which is not now always working is in fact the railway part. A number of agencies are accountable and responsible for the movement of grain, as some of my colleagues have reported to the House. The Canadian Wheat Board markets the grain and sets out the process by which it will be forwarded by the farmers to the final buyer; and the Canadian Grain Commission monitors the system of grading the grain and sees that the proper grade and types of grain are matched up with the documentation. As well, the Canadian Grain Commission is responsible for issuing producer cards to those who wish to ship their grain directly to terminal elevators and avoid the country elevator. Then we have the Canadian Transport Commission which, through the branch line rehabilitation program, is responsible for keeping up some designated branch lines.

If this Bill passes the way it was introduced, we will have the Department of Transport involved in the operations of the Administrator who would be overseeing all of the other agencies which have been in place for many years. So ultimately, instead of the grain handling and marketing system being a joint effort between the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and the Minister in charge of the Wheat Board, we would leave all of the power of arbitration to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) who directs the Administrator. This was essentially why we proposed to put the Administrator under the Canadian Wheat Board where he traditionally carried on for many years.

The Wheat Board and the Grain Commission can impose sanctions in order to achieve compliance with their shipping orders. If the wrong grade of grain is loaded at the country elevator—wheat graded three is loaded to fill an order for number one grade—the railway company will lose the privilege of shipping two carloads of grain. That action affects the volume of business of that particular company and they would then instruct their agents to make certain they ship exactly the kind of grain they were supposed to ship. Similarly, the Canadian Grain Commission monitors the shipment of cars in the same way.

The office of Administrator, Mr. Speaker, has been filled for the last three or four years on a sort of voluntary or co-operative basis. The appointee took personnel and expertise from various existing agencies in an attempt to find a more fair way of allocating boxcars to system participants. Ultimately, after three years of experience, they reverted to the kind of system the Wheat Board had been using when it had the administrative functions. I am a little concerned, as are members of my caucus, with the proposed growth in administration and administrators which would come about because this office is being written into law.

We have been told that the Administrator currently uses something like 17 to 19 members of his staff, but once this change is made that will double. Because this worries a lot of people, we think it would be much better if we put some restrictions and qualifications on the role the Administrator plays. Clearly the railways are not now responsible to the grain industry and we think this is a needed improvement which could be and should be applied. Therefore, we have proposed these amendments to bring that about.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I want to rise and speak to Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38. It might be appropriate to review Clause 18, which Motion No. 36 addresses. Clause 18, Subclause (1)(c), provides that the Administrator shall:

—from time to time, in consultation with such system participants as the Administrator deems appropriate, establish, on the basis of tonnage and on any other basis found to be reasonable—

I might add, Mr. Speaker, it was our Party which incorporated the words "and on any other basis found to be reasonable", because we felt that to measure performance simply on the basis of tonnage, while it is a very valid benchmark, may not be far enough encompassing to take in all elements. The clause continues:

—the grain transportation, shipping and handling performance objectives that, in any period, can and should be met by any system participants that the Administrator considers appropriate;

The NDP amendment sets out to remove that phrase having to do with the performance objectives which should be met by system participants. The NDP are simply trying to make the point that it is only the railroads that should be monitored because they feel only they have the power to inhibit or accelerate the movement of grain.

We, Mr. Speaker, certainly do not agree with the thrust of Motion No. 36. We all recognize that the railways have a lot to do with the movement of grain, but they certainly do not have a monopoly on whether it will move or not. We know through the course of this debate and many others which have taken place in this Chamber and in committee with respect to grain handling and transportation that we have a very complex and interdependent system. It is big business, there are many players involved, and the railways certainly share a very major responsibility for the proper movement of grain on time. But I have to remind you, Mr. Speaker, and other Members of this House that there are many other components to this system. The country elevator system consists of some 3,000 elevators and 1,200 to 1,500 delivery points. That in itself is a huge network. We have the Canadian Wheat Board, the Canadian Grain Commission, we have government involvement. We have terminals, we have the Great Lakes shipping system. There are something like 25 to 30 unions involved who can tie up the movement of grain. We have the railroad unions, the people who grade and weigh the grain, the people who load the ships, the grain handlers and longshoremen, as well as the men who man the ships. They all play a very significant role. To suggest, as the NDP does in this motion, that only the railways' performance should be monitored and only they should have objectives set I say is simply ludicrous. It is not in accordance with the way things are.

There are other conditions which affect the movement of grain, such as weather, acts of God, a whole variety of things which all have a bearing. If we are to look at the whole operation, perhaps the House should be reminded that railways work seven days a week and the country elevator system works five days a week. Sometimes that is extended during a busy season or harvest season or when a quota is open. Terminals operate, basically, five days per week. I talked about the complexity of the system. Grain is weighed six different times and graded three times before it is loaded on the boat for final disposition. Any number of things can cause a breakdown or bottleneck, and to single out the railways as the only culprit that can allow grain to move or prevent it is irresponsible.

Canada has an outstanding record in terms of providing top quality grain and for guaranteeing the grade, but there are six different grades of wheat alone. When you take into consideration the possibility of those six grades being tough, or damp, then there are 18 potential grades. There are five grades of durum and with the potential all those five grades for being tough or damp, you have the potential of 15 grades. With oats you could have 18 grades; barley, 21 different grades; rye, 12 different grades; flaxseed, nine different grades and rapeseed, nine different grades. We could end up handling well in excess of 100 different grades of grain.

There is also the possibility that grain is rejected because it is too dirty or does not meet standards. All this illustrates that we have a very complex system and the chance of breakdown is very real. The chance for a mixup is also very real. It is quite possible to have the wrong grain, the wrong grade, in the wrong place at the wrong time. To suggest that the railways have a total monopoly on the situation is irresponsible and ludicrous.

We agree with the thrust of Motion No. 37 where it says:

—awards and sanctions for system participants other than the railway companies shall be non-pecuniary in nature;

There is no reason one agency of Government should assess a fine in the form of sanction against another agency, particularly when that agency represents the producers. In that case, the burden would fall back on the producer. We agree with that because we have a similar amendment in Motion No. 44 which was moved in committee by the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) and was debated there. It reads as follows:

(ii) sanctions to be applied to system participants or any classes thereof, other than the railways, that do not meet the performance objectives referred to in paragraph (a), shall be non-pecuniary.

I think that is fairly clear. There should not be a system of sanctions levied against the producers or a government agency which acts on behalf of producers.

It is rather interesting to see what happened in committee. The NDP took quite a different approach when the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) moved a subamendment to the motion I just read to strike out the words "be non-pecuniary" and substitute the following:

—be limited to an assessment against storage, elevation and handling charges.

He was going to allow sanctions to be applied against elevator companies in the form of additional storage, elevation and handling charges. This would have the effect of increasing the burden on producers. But now another Hon. Member says how important it is to relieve producers from any form of sanctions. In this we see the hypocrisy of the NDP. They are not really supporting the producers. They did not want the railway companies on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee and they did not want farmers on it either. They said that the Chairman of the advisory committee of the Canadian Wheat Board could represent the farmers' interests, but we said that we wanted at least five farmers on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. And we want the railways there as well so that the farmers can deal directly with the railroads. That is democracy and that is performance, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on these three amendments to Clause 18 of the Bill. Regarding the comments of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), I can only say that if sanctions are put on such areas as handling charges and storage for elevator companies, it would reduce the amount that producers would have to pay. The sanction would be on the elevator company and it would release the total effect of—

Mr. Mazankowski: Sanctions.

Mr. Hovdebo: Those kinds of sanctions are not against the producer but are against the elevator company.

Mr. Mazankowski: I would say that would be an award.

Mr. Hovdebo: An award to the producer, yes, but sanctions against the elevators.

Mr. Mazankowski: Nonsense. You are as bad as the Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Hovdebo: As far as participants are concerned, I think it is necessary to go back and see what the clause said. On page 2 beginning at lines 47, Clause 2 reads as follows:

"system participant" means any corporation, partnership or organization engaged in the transportation of grain by rail or the shipping or handling of grain for transportation by rail, as designated by the Governor in Council, individually or by class.

The point we have been trying to make here and which the Hon. Member for Vegreville has been trying to deny is that in the whole structure of the movement of grain, the agencies responsible for regulation of it are already regulated and there are sanctions which can be imposed upon them. This also applies to the railways. The Railway Act gives the Government authority to apply sanctions against the railways. It has neglected to do so, however, and that particular group of participants, the railways, has not fulfilled its duty. The sanctions on the other groups have worked and consequently we do not feel that it is necessary to increase the bureaucracy that the Bill would put in place which would only make it more difficult to ship the grain.

It is interesting also that the Party which says we should not regulate everything in this particular case wants to regulate everybody. Let us consider who are the participants in the movement of grain. That Party would put the producer under the single-man agency because the producer is responsible for the movement of grain to the elevator by rail. The way the clause stands now, the producer could be sanctioned in some peculiar way by the Administrator, the one-man agency. The trucker, whether he be a farmer moving his grain to the elevator or a commercial trucker, comes under the Administrator. The Hon. Member for Vegreville says that all of these people should be regulated by this one-man agency.

Mr. Mazankowski: I did not say that at all.

Mr. Hovdebo: The elevator is already a part of this. He is suggesting that the elevator companies, which are already well regulated through their relationship with the Wheat Board and the Grain Commission, should also come under this one-man agency, the Grain Administrator. As well, the Hon. Member for Vegreville is suggesting that the rail companies and the terminals should come under the regulation of this one-man agency. It is his Party which prides itself on stating deregulation as a basic Government policy.

● (1220)

Let me talk about another type of regulation. We believe that the Government has established a great number of awards to the railways for the movement of grain over the years as a result of its close relationship with them. This includes Canadian National which almost operates as a private enterprise corporation apart from the Government. These awards include the provision of railway cars at no cost which the railway companies are paid to use. These companies have been given a great deal of money over the years for the rehabilitation of branch lines even though the railways own that property which was awarded to them. They have been awarded huge amounts of money to rehabilitate those branch lines despite the fact they may not have fulfilled their contracts.

The only reason for the introduction of this Bill is to award the railways a guaranteed income at 20 per cent above their investment in the movement of grain. Therefore I believe it is logical to establish sanctions to control that guaranteed income so that it can be removed if the railways do not perform their duty. We know that over the years the provisions under the Railway Act to regulate and put sanctions on the railways have not been used. Since this has not been done and the Government is either incapable or unwilling to attack its friends financially since it may need the money, we believe that if these sanctions are to be provided under this legislation they should apply only to the railways.

Motions Nos. 37 and 38, in anticipation of the defeat of Motion No. 36, make two conditions. If Clause 18(1)(c) through 18(1)(g) remain as is, Motion No. 37 and Motion No. 38 put conditions on these sanctions. First, they require that if participants other than the railways are affected, sanctions should apply in such a way as not to hurt the other participants financially. Motion No. 38 states that if the sanctions are established——such awards and sanctions shall not involve the allocation of railway cars nor affect the quota system of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Even the quota system of the Canadian Wheat Board is largely dependent on its authority to assign cars.

It is interesting to note that during the committee hearings the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) strongly supported the idea of Motion No. 37 and Motion No. 38, which I hope the Conservatives will continue to support if they decide not to support Motion No. 36, saying that there is a real danger in this clause of the Administrator being able to change the allocation of cars and the quota system in a way which could partially destroy the grain transportation system.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few comments on these amendments. First I wish to point out that at least Motion No. 37 is a belated attempt on the part of the NDP to cover up a faux pas which it had perpetuated in the committee stage. At that time the NDP had a completely different position in terms of the kinds of sanctions that were going to be imposed on producer-owned grain companies and pools in particular. They indicated that any sanctions that were to be imposed with respect to unsatisfactory performance would be pecuniary.

We now see the NDP attempting to cover their tracks in the House as a result of the very negative feedback it received from western producers when it brought in this amendment at committee stage. It is nice to see the NDP following the leadership displayed by my colleagues in our Party at the committee stage in order to have a proper perspective since it was the Conservatives who moved at committee stage that sanctions not be pecuniary as far as the pools and producer-owned grain companies were concerned.

That was a very important consideration because Members will understand that when we are dealing with sanctions against producer-owned companies, we are really penalizing the producers.

I wanted to deal with the general thrust of some of these amendments since this is our first opportunity to look at some of the provisions of Clause 18 which deal with the concept of sanctions against the railways, for failure, among other things, to perform to the expectations placed upon them under legislation and by the Government of the day. This particular part of the legislation has been subject to very serious attack by almost everyone who is knowledgeable in this particular area. I suggest it is one of the greatest flaws in this legislation. Legislatively speaking, it is one of the most cockamamie set of provisions I have seem in attempting to bring some accountability in the future to any group. In terms of its legislative wording, it is almost unenforceable.

I want to bring to the attention of the House some of the evidence which we received in the course of the committee hearings. First, let me point out that Clause 18(1)(e) provides:

● (1230)

(e) develop a notional scheme of—

I underline the word notional.

(i) sanctions applicable to the railway companies, and

(ii) awards and sanctions applicable to such system participants, other than the railway companies, as the Administrator considers appropriate.

You may ask yourself, Mr. Speaker, as a student of legislation, what does this concept "notional" mean after all? I know that if you were thinking of this word, it means very little at law indeed. It is the most arbitrary term one can think of. The Deputy Minister on behalf of the Department of Transport was questioned with respect to the meaning of this particular subclause. At page 133 of the committee hearings held on September 8, 1983 Mr. Kroeger, in responding to questions put by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer), stated:

That is the analogy that underlies the concept of a system of awards and sanctions. First of all, you design a hypothetical or notional set of awards and sanctions and then you match those against the performance of system participants in ensuing weeks and months. Then at the end of six months you conclude that this would have involved withholding X millions from CN, or that it might have involved some type of penalty vis-a-vis Manitoba pool elevators. You look at those results and say, well, that really does not make any sense in relation to what actually happened and why, so we had better change our system of awards and sanctions in the following ways and let us see how that works against grain movements in the ensuing six months, and you would go on correcting the elements of your awards and sanction system until, if all went well, you would arrive at something that really did seem to make sense. But if all went badly, at the end of the three years you would probably report to the minister that this was unworkable.

I want you to ask the question rhetorically, Mr. Speaker. If this is the Government's view of the operation of that particular sub-provision of this Bill, God help the western producer with respect to his ability to expect any sort of accountability on the part of the railways for their operation.

This is the objection brought forward time after time after time. People in western Canada, the grain producers, are being asked to buy a pig in a poke. They are being asked to embrace enthusiastically some crazy concept of accountability to which the Deputy Minister gives what I would term an equivocal answer. He has not the foggiest idea of what these concepts and sanctions are going to be. The Deputy Minister is an intelligent man. He is a person who has spent his life in the Public Service and who has been thinking seriously about this matter night and day over the course of months and I would venture to say years. He gives an answer with respect to what the sanctions are going to be with respect to the railways. If I may be permitted to paraphrase, he said it is "a hit and miss system".

Eventually we hope that, after the benefit of some years of experience, maybe we will come to some conclusions as to what we should do to hold the railways accountable. But Mr. Kroeger's last sentence was quite revealing. He said that maybe we will find that the whole thing is unworkable. That gives precious little hope to the people of western Canada who have been sold a bill of goods, if we pass this legislation, that we will have an improved railway system to deliver the goods, that we will have a system efficient in the highest degree, and second to none in the world in terms of the transportation of grain. Yet when we look at the actual reality, what is contained in the legislation, no one can make any sense out of it. Even the Deputy Minister is not sure how it is going to work and refers to the concept of "notional" as being a hit and miss proposition. I simply say that is not satisfactory.

This is one of the reasons those of us who are privileged to come from western Canada and represent agricultural areas cannot in conscience support this legislation. We can make attempts, as the NDP for whatever reason are making attempts, to amend this legislation to bring some reality to it, and I give the NDP credit for that attempt. But this is badly thought out in terms of having the railways and other components of the grain delivery area made accountable to the Administrator with respect to failing to live up to reasonable expectations.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that this is one of the fundamental reasons, if I may be permitted to say so, that it is impossible for us to support this legislation. In this case the NDP is attempting to limit accountability for all intents and purposes to the railways. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), has pointed out very well recently that we cannot limit this accountability to the railways because there are so many components in terms of delivery and the efficient delivery of grain in western Canada. All of these components must be accountable and all of these different areas must have accountability to the western producer and the people of Canada.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, in dealing with the grouping of motions relating to the work of the Administrator with regard to sanctions, there are two things that I would like to point out. First is the importance of the work of the Administrator as it refers to the actual movement of grain in the bottlenecks that may occur on the Prairies. It is interesting to note that the NDP have tried to be on both sides of this issue at the same time.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Gustafson: I hear someone say no. But if you go back and identify exactly who the Grain Administrator is, Mr. Speaker, you will see that the Conservatives under our administration introduced a grains co-ordinator, Mr. Hugh Horner. He identified many of the problems and many of the bottlenecks that were in the system. Actually we have a grains administrator in place. At that time Members will remember the hue and cry from the NDP. The NDP did not want a grains co-ordinator at all. If Members of the NDP would go back over their records and statements in this House, they will find their statements were diametrically opposed to what is happening here.

I think we have a situation where we must take the best of both worlds and try to amend these areas so that things will work in the best interests of the producer. The Hon. Member for Vegreville pointed out that there is more to the movement of grain than just the component of the railroads. It is most important the railroads move grain efficiently and effectively. It is most important that a grain collecting system—the grain elevators on the Prairies—is able to co-ordinate with the railroads.

By way of example, I had a phone call this morning from Boyle, Alberta, where one of the grain elevators in Boyle is absolutely congested. As you know, the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board has increased the initial price for barley. He has done that in order to get some barley into the system. He told me that there were many carloads of barley in that little town in northern Alberta which were not being shipped into the system and had not arrived at Thunder Bay. At the same time the Canadian Wheat Board tells us that there have been major problems in meeting its barley obligations. This is what I would call a bit of a bottleneck. Hopefully that situation will be straightened out in a telephone call today.

● (1240)

An administrator could identify these bottlenecks and attempt to straighten them out. On one hand, the New Democratic Party is giving the Administrator some power to deal directly with the railroads but not with the terminals, grain elevators or areas which are faced with strikes that can be very detrimental to the whole business of grain transportation. When prairie farmers hear of strikes, they are very, very concerned. If there has been one area of bottleneck in the whole system, it has been the area of strikes. Practically without exception every fall at the ports in Vancouver and Thunder Bay, just before freeze-up, there are strike scares. There have been hold-ups in the movement of grain because of strikes which have cost farmers millions and millions of dollars. A grain Administrator, working in the capacity which was set by the example of Dr. Hugh Horner, could be of great benefit by bringing to the attention of the Government, producers and all those people involved in grain handling the situation that exists. It would work in the best interests of producers and the larger system.

We have some problems with the approach of the NDP. As pointed out by the Hon. Member for Vegreville, we are in agreement with Motion No. 37 which, of course, would not penalize primary producers in a financial manner by penalizing grain elevators on the local scene. That is important.

However, let us not find ourselves throwing out the baby with the bath water. We should come up with a system that works in the best interests of farmers and of the grain handling system, which could well turn out to be one of the best in the world. The Government has specifically keyed in on the expectations of the railways and their best interests. There has been an unfair balance in looking at the problems of primary producers in terms of sanctions and better grain movement.

That is about all I have to say on the motions before the House. However, I suggest it is most important to look at a balance so that grain elevators, terminals, ports, railways and producers can work together in the best interests of a better grain movement system.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to enter into the debate on the three motions before the House. I was glad the Chair ruled that Motion No. 36 was in order. I think it is important for a number of reasons. Particularly, it amends Clause 18 by striking out lines 44 to 47.

Clause 18 was described by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) as being the most cockamamie set of regulations he has ever seen. That does not seem to be born out by the voting record of the Tories in committee. On the Crow Bill they just happened to vote with the Liberals all the way through. Most grain producers in western Canada recognize that there is an alliance behind the scenes in committee and in private meetings between the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) and the Tory Party. However, when they are out on the Prairies or giving speeches in the House of Commons, they certainly attempt to show a different side than they demonstrate in their voting record.

Motion No. 36 reads:

> That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 18 by striking out lines 44 to 47 at page 8 and lines 1 to 41 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:
> "should be met by any railway company
> (d) monitor the performance of the railway companies to ascertain whether or not they are meeting the performance objectives referred to in paragraph (c); and
> (e) develop, for possible implementation under section 21, a scheme of sanctions applicable to railway companies and make recommendations to the Minister on the advisability of implementing that scheme."

The reference to railway companies, of course, includes CN, CP or whoever happens to be moving grain. I concur with one of the comments made by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West, that western Canadians are really being asked to buy a pig in a poke. It is clear that the Government and its "experts" in the field have no idea what will be the real medium or long-term impact of the Crow Bill. Prairie farmers recognize that 30,000 or 40,000 farms will disappear, will simply go up in mortgage smoke as a result of the Crow Bill. At the same time there are certain real estate interests readying themselves to buy up all these farms because the information available from the Global 2000 Report and other reports is that one of the most valuable long-term assets in the world is Canadian farms and farm lands.

The last speaker proposed that we have two agencies to do one job. We recognize—certainly I do in Prince Rupert—that something had to be done a long time ago. When the Tories were in office they brought someone in to say that there were bottlenecks. Every one on the Prairies knew where the bottlenecks were. They did not go away by having a grain Administrator observe them.

The powers being proposed by the Liberals through Clause 18 and other clauses in the Bill are ludicrous. The proposals would take sanctions against those one would think the Government of Canada would not take sanctions against. I will finish my remarks on Motion No. 36, then deal with Motions Nos. 37 and 38 and point out the serious problems with the Liberals and the Tories being together on Clause 18.

The intent of Motion No. 36 is to ensure that sanctions for failing to meet performance objectives apply only to the railroads. Other speakers from my Party have made it clear that there is not a great deal of sense in financial penalties against the Canadian Wheat Board, individual elevators or individual producers, whether they be a direct financial attack or holding back on the available number of boxcars. It is clear that the holding back of the available number of boxcars will penalize producers once again, either directly through pool funds or by simply backlogging elevators so that they cannot make deliveries. What happens is that the person holding the grain is supposed to be penalized by not getting the boxcars, but in fact he is obtaining funds for "storing" the grain in the interim period.

The powers which are proposed to be handed over are ludicrous. I wonder whether many of the powers are really required. The system under the Canadian Wheat Board seems to be working reasonably well. There is no doubt that there are bottlenecks, but to propose the powers in the legislation will not streamline the system; they will simply create more bottlenecks and more difficulties for Canadian farmers.

There are four key points in Motion No. 36. The first is that the legislation would give the Administrator the power to impose sanctions on the Canadian Wheat Board and the pools, if he so chose, and the ability of the Administrator to do so is removed by the amendment. In our view and in the view of most Canadian farmers, it is clear that to give the Administrator those powers over the Canadian Wheat Board and the Wheat Pools is unacceptable.

Second, there is no need to have a provision for imposing sanctions on anyone but the railroads. We recognize that the problems we have had, whether getting grain to Prince Rupert, Vancouver, the Lakehead or Churchill, have in almost every situation resulted from the railroads. If we go back a few years to 1977 and those years when Parliament was turning over huge barrels of money to the railroads to upgrade certain branch lines, we see that the money never made it to the branch lines. There was no new grade, no new ties, no new rails and no new crossings. CN and CP have demonstrated a near total disregard for the desire of Parliament. We say that if Clause 18 passes as it stands, there will be chaos in the system. Certain changes have to be obtained.

The Hon. Member for Saskatoon West and other Tory speakers have said that Motion No. 37 is an attempt to rectify a faux pas from the committee stage. We know what the Government and the Tories accepted and rejected while they were working out certain deals together behind the scene. We see what is now being brought before Parliament. We recognize in Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38 that there are steps that we have to take to protect the farmers and the interests of the Canadian economy, which benefits from about $6 billion a year from the grain trade.

The third point on Motion No. 36 is that under Bill C-155 the railways will already be overpaid enormous sums for moving the grain. In our view and the view of most farmers, there is no justification to pay them even more for meeting performance objectives which are simply the bottom line. They are the minimum that the railways should be meeting.

The fourth point with regard to Motion No. 36 is that the Bill would place the Canadian Wheat Board in a position subordinate to the Minister. We do not believe that is appropriate. We have scrutinized, as I am sure most producers have, the ability to place the Administrator over and beyond the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. That does not strike us as sensible. Whether the Tories think it is a notional or national idea, there is no logic to it. We believe the track record of the Wheat Board is quite good. The bottlenecks have primarily been created by the railroads.

Motion No. 37 adds to Clause 18(e) on awards and sanctions to the rail system the words "but awards and sanctions for system participants other than the railway companies shall be non-pecuniary in nature".

A Tory Member said that strikes are the real problem. He did not go so far as to say that perhaps there should be an anti-strike clause written in, but that seemed to be the theme of his speech. We say it does not make a great deal of sense to take financial sanctions against the Wheat Board, the pools or the farmers in almost every situation imaginable for occurrences that are beyond their control. Once a boxcar is at the elevator and the grain is loaded, it is out of their hands. Their responsibility is to till the land under all weather conditions, such as drought. There may be a lack of money to buy fertilizer or pay road hauling costs outside the branch line system. The farmer has to meet those responsibilities first. To propose in legislation that someone other than the railroad be taken to task is completely illogical.

Motion No. 38 would add to Clause 18(e) which was described by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West as the most cockamamie set of regulations he has ever seen. We in this Party will be interested to see if the Tories vote as they did in committee, voting with the Liberals for this set of regulations, or voting with us to change the regulations in order to meet the interests of the farmers and the Canadian economy instead of the railroads.

I see you are rising to indicate my time is up, Mr. Speaker. Motion No. 38 adds the words "but such awards and sanctions shall not involve the allocation of railway cars nor affect the quota system of the Canadian Wheat Board." That motion speaks for itself.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I would like to re-emphasize some of what my colleagues have said about the importance of these amendments, particularly as they pertain to requiring performance from the railways and providing for sanctions in the event that the railways do not live up to performance expectations as far as grain hauling is concerned or, for that matter, anything else.

It is a historical fact in this country that the railways have not lived up to the expectations which they have often created as a way of getting from the Canadian people and the Government various subsidies and other moneys, whether in the form of money for branch line rehabilitation, hopper cars built by governments because the railways would not keep up their rolling stock fleet, or for passenger rail services, calculated by the railways in such a way as to get as much subsidy as possible from Government invested in trying to improve passenger service in this country. The list goes on and on of ways in which the railways of this country have milked the Government and thereby the Canadian people. It is abominable that Governments have lacked the courage to make the railways perform according to the expectations they have created in order to get these subsidies.

These amendments propose finally getting tough with the railways, putting a structure in the Bill which would make that possible. We do not have confidence in the existing rules and regulations pertaining to performance by the railways. We do not have confidence in the existing agencies. We note with regularity the way in which the railways escape harsh treatment while other Canadians and institutions have to meet difficult requirements. That is one reason we have introduced this amendment, finally to correct what we perceive to be a consistent and undesirable part of the relationship between the railways and the Government. They have received a variety of subsidies over the years but have not been required to perform up to the expectations created at the time the subsidies were made. In the past they have failed to meet performance objectives on a consistent and recurring basis. This is why we believe a penalty clause is needed for the railways. I just came into the Chamber, but I understand the Tories are supporting us on this amendment.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

SPEEDY PASSAGE URGED BY PRESIDENT OF CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

Mrs. Ursula Appolloni (York South-Weston): Madam Speaker, The Toronto Star reports that the President of the Canadian Labour Congress has now added his voice to those of the growing number of people who are asking for speedy passage of Bill C-155, the Western Grain Transportation Act. Mr. McDermott is reported as having asked his allies in the NDP to end their attempts to delay the legislation, and as urging all Parties to get on with the job of enabling improvements to the Canadian rail system in a way that protects the interests of producers. This is exactly what Bill C-155 seeks to accomplish.

The Bill has now received extensive debate. At second reading, 97 speakers participated in the debate. The Standing Committee on Transport sat for 31 days, travelled across the country, heard 240 witnesses, and made 89 amendments which improved the Bill considerably.

Nine days have now been spent on the Bill at report stage during which time further amendments have been accepted, including a proposal by members of the NDP to add a representative of labour to the Senior Grain Transportation Committee.

The task of improving Canada's railway system must proceed. More important, Madam Speaker, this legislation will create thousands of badly needed jobs across the country. I therefore join Mr. McDermott and the Canadian Labour Congress in urging the Opposition to allow this Bill to proceed quickly so that many unemployed people can be put back to work.

ABORTION

ANNOUNCED REOPENING OF TORONTO CLINIC

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, a Toronto newspaper story reads in part: "Dr. Henry Morgentaler will defy the law and reopen his Toronto abortion clinic—". I can see nothing noble about this man breaking and defying the laws of Canada. Abortions to protect the life of the mother are legal today, but Dr. Morgentaler wants abortion on demand. He wants abortion to be a birth control measure, and he thinks freedom of choice should be extended to allow for the murder of another human being—yes, even an unborn child.

World famous scientists like Professor A. W. Liley of Auckland, New Zealand, confirm that what is in the womb is "a person, a full human being that can cry, hiccup, dream, kick, suck a thumb, take 'food', regulate fluid volume, have heart beats and fingerprints—a totally separate individual who stops his mother's periods and who decides when labour should begin".

Murder is murder, whether it occurs before birth or after birth. If we permit unborn and so-called unwanted babies to be killed, the next step may be to permit the killing of the crippled, the abnormal, and the aged. Freedom of choice was never meant to include the freedom to murder. Dr. Morgentaler has a responsibility to obey the laws of Canada just the same as do the rest of us.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

REFUSAL OF OLD AGE PENSION ON BASIS OF RESIDENCY REQUIREMENT

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Madam Speaker, I would like to call to the attention of the House the plight of Mr. Doug Wright, a Canadian born war veteran who cannot draw old age pension because he is 55 days short of the 20 years of required residency in Canada after age 18. At age 27 Mr. Wright joined the Royal Canadian Air Force and was posted overseas with the 401 Squadron. He was given a Spitfire, and for two years he saw active service.

Mr. Wright was shot down off the English coast in 1943. His right leg was crushed and he spent a year in British hospitals undergoing bone transplants to save the leg. His kneecap was removed. He then returned to his job in Canada. However, his leg could not function in the cold. He tried to start a new business, and his wife worked to supplement their income.

Finally, a Department of Veterans Affairs doctor told Mr. Wright that he could expect constant pain unless he moved to a warmer climate. He and his wife moved to California, and they returned to Canada annually from 1952 until 1979 to visit Mr. Wright's mother. Canada was their home. It was because of the war wounds Mr. Wright received fighting for Canada that they had to move. It was a painful experience for the Wrights to move away from family, jobs, and friends.

Can we not find 55 days for Mr. Wright? He should at least expect and receive an ex gratia payment to cover this amount from the Department of Veterans Affairs.

HUMAN RIGHTS

NICARAGUA—ATTACKS ON JEWISH POPULATION

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, this year is the thirty-fifth year since the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and I think it bears stressing that a Mulroney Government would make human rights an important part of its foreign policy. I believe that most Canadians reject the view that rights in some parts of the world are more important than those in others. I say to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) that what happens to a nun in the Philippines, or to a follower of the Dalai Lama in Tibet, or to a Tamil in Sri Lanka, constitutes matters of equal importance.

Obviously Canada's ability to apply pressure is greater in some parts of the world than others, but unless our national concern about people everywhere is well understood around the world, expressed concern about conditions in some places can only be unconvincing.

Dealing with Central America, for example, it seems to me that Ottawa should not approve the requested $15 million aid package to Nicaragua unless and until the Sandinistas cease their systematic attacks on Jewish Nicaraguans. Our Government has refused to reinstate aid for El Salvador and Guatemala on human rights considerations, and the same considerations should apply to Managua as well. Basic rights, Madam Speaker, should not be divisible on the basis of geography.

CALL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF DEPARTMENT OF CO-OPERATIVES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, the New Democratic Party has long supported the principles of the co-operative movement. In fact the roots of our Party are the same as those of the co-operative movement in the West.

Over the last 20 years co-operatives have experienced a tremendous growth and now have about 10.5 million members and over $45 billion worth of assets. Co-ops market some 45 per cent of all Canadian agricultural products, including 80 per cent of the wheat crop and 60 per cent of dairy products. Canadian farmers buy 30 per cent of their farm supplies, including machinery, through co-operatives. Credit unions and caisses populaires provide from 25 per cent to 75 per cent of all retail financial services in the four western Provinces and Quebec. North America's largest consumer and financial co-ops are located in Calgary and Vancouver respectively.

In order to recognize the contribution of co-operatives to the economy, we call upon the Government to make them a permanent part of the economic structure by establishing a Department of Co-operatives, or at least a division, with the duty to co-ordinate co-operative involvement through the Government. Co-ops have more than proven the worth of their contribution to society, and it is high time that the Government officially recognized this contribution.

QUEBEC LIBERAL PARTY LEADERSHIP CONVENTION—IMPACT OF ROBERT BOURASSA'S VICTORY

Mr. Robert Gourd (Argenteuil-Papineau): Madam Speaker, on Saturday, October 15, the Quebec Liberal Party elected Robert Bourassa as its new leader. His brilliant and overwhelming victory is a clear demonstration of what Mr. Bourassa represents for the people of Quebec. His words are incisive and his attitude inspires confidence. There is no doubt he will be able to draw the people of Quebec to the Quebec Liberal Party, which, with him as leader, brings new hope to Quebecers who have had enough of a péquiste and separatist Government. Madam Speaker, Mr. Bourassa's victory is a first step that may put Quebec back on the road to economic recovery.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

STATE OF ACCOMMODATION IN QUESNEL, B.C.

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, as is the case in many Canadian towns and cities, Quesnel, British Columbia, has been long and well served by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The detachment has joint municipal and provincial policing responsibilities, and costs are divided accordingly.

The Quesnel RCMP detachment, with its 42 officers and staff, has been housed in a section of the local Post Office-Manpower building for a number of years. This accommodation is an absolute disgrace, a fact that is well known to the city, the Province, the force, and the Department of Public Works.

Of a total area of approximately 2,400 square feet, which includes the cell blocks, working areas are restricted to 29 square feet per employee. This space, which is approximately five feet by six feet, must accommodate desks, chairs, filing cabinets and the like.

Air conditioning is a wild dream and the heating system is so bad that moisture condenses on the office floor, and frost often develops on the walls of the cells. The electrical wiring has been condemned by municipal, provincial, and federal inspectors. The staff sergeant must vacate his office for every private interview and breathalyzer test conducted as his is the only office with a door.

The officers working under these unbearable conditions must suffer in silence, but the staff has registered grievances with their respective unions. The situation is critical and can no longer be tolerated. The Solicitor General (Mr. Kaplan) must move to correct it immediately.

DISARMAMENT

DANGERS OF ARMS RACE

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, we are now beginning Disarmament Week, an internationally recognized observance of the dangers of the arms race and of the paramount need to take bold initiatives toward multilateral nuclear weapons disarmament. Two years ago the Liberal Government observed Disarmament Week by inviting foreign nuclear warships into the Port of Vancouver. This year the Government has invited the NATO nuclear weapons planning group to meet at Montebello, Quebec. The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) began Disarmament Week in Canada last night by toasting the U.S. Secretary of State and accepting his praise for Canada's allowing the testing of Cruise missiles in this country. These are not the actions Canadians want or need from their Government in Disarmament Week, or at any other time.

The prospect of a major escalation of the nuclear arms race is now only weeks away. United States Pershing II and Cruise missiles will soon be deployed in Europe, gravely escalating the level of nuclear armament, the level of East-West tension and mistrust, and the risk of nuclear war. These missiles will be deployed because NATO strategists believe they are necessary as a response to Soviet SS-20 missiles in eastern Europe, and because NATO politicians appear convinced that the Geneva arms reduction talks have failed to produce progress.

We are caught now in a new escalation of the super power game of nuclear weapons chicken. Canada could help end this dangerous nuclear escalation and help derail the headlong rush of the super powers toward nuclear confrontation in Europe by proposing a postponement of new weapons deployment, and insisting on a continuation of the talks at Geneva. That could be our contribution to Disarmament Week.

HEALTH

SMOKING IN PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE ROOMS

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, on May 24 I spoke under the provisions of Standing Order 21 and mentioned to the House the serious health effects of second-hand cigarette and cigar smoke. At that time I advised of the respiratory impairment suffered by smokers and non-smokers exposed to a chronically smoke-filled environment, and called upon the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services to regulate smoking in parliamentary committee rooms in order to improve the quality of our indoor air and thereby to set an example for the Canadian public to control smoking in public areas. That was approximately four months ago and, to my knowledge, the recommendations I made at that time, which were based on recently reported clinical studies, have not been implemented.

Because of the proven serious health effects of such second-hand smoke, it is of great concern to me that serious consideration has not been given to regulating smoking in public areas. I can think of no better place to demonstrate this concern than in the parliamentary committee rooms.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

LEVEL OF INITIAL PRICES

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, the increase of the initial price of barley, as announced by the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, was welcomed by farmers. However, the question remains as to why the initial price of wheat and durum was not increased as well. The asking price for Red Spring Wheat in Thunder Bay is 98 cents per bushel higher today. The asking price for durum wheat at Thunder Bay is $1.50 higher today. In checking back on the asking price of wheat over the last few months it has been found that asking prices have been considerably higher than the price the farmer is receiving. I am, therefore, calling on the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board to take the necessary steps to increase the initial price of wheat and durum so that farmers can meet the serious cash flow problems which they face at this time.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

AEROSPACE INDUSTRY—NEED FOR INCENTIVE BASED STRATEGY

Mr. Robert Wenman (Fraser Valley West): Madam Speaker, the astonishing sweep of technological advance seems to have brought us to the threshold of war in space and war from space. Already nations routinely rely on military satellites for surveillance and communications. Surveillance satellites are a vital component of both super powers' capacity to verify each other's adherence to arms limitation agreements, and to guard against a secret mobilization which would precede a pre-emptive war.

The leading edge of space technology has now moved toward killer satellites which can destroy the surveillance and communications satellites of other nations. There is even discussion of laser and particle beam weapons deployed from space stations.

The peaceful use of space as a place for industry, communications, and surveillance, is every bit as significant as the potential military uses. The incredible innovation of the Canada Space Arm has revealed to the world that Canada is among the world leaders in space age technology. Canada must maintain the capability to participate in the leading edges of high technology if Canada is to preserve or better her place in the world.

I, therefore, urge the Government to institute an incentive based strategy to expand Canada's role in research and development in the high frontier of aerospace technology and to expand its efforts in securing industrial agreements in international defence related industries. Canada should seek to secure larger portions of these expenditures as a condition or component of international, bilateral or multilateral agreements, thereby securing an important corner in a rapidly expanding present and futuristic field of employment and productivity.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT BLAMED FOR INCREASE IN VIOLENT CRIME

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Economic Development. I am sure the Minister is aware of the concerns expressed over the weekend by Mr. Phil Givens, the Chairman of the Toronto Metropolitan Police Commission, relating to the substantial increase in violent crime. Mr. Givens stated that the bitterness, anguish and suffering of unemployed youth are the number one reason for this sharp increase in violent crime. First, does the Minister agree with Mr. Given's comments? Second, what is the Government doing to address this problem?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I am not entirely clear why the question on violent crime in Toronto is addressed to me as Minister of State for Economic Development.

Mr. Epp: He just gave you the reason.

Mr. Johnston: I have not considered the comments of that gentleman.

I would not at this point want to go through the numerous measures which the Government has taken to deal with the problem of youth unemployment, in particular, unless the House would wish me to do so. The former two Ministers of Employment and Immigration have addressed this problem, and we are continuing to address it. It remains a major priority of this Government, as the Hon. Member knows. However, it seems to me that there may be a lot of reasons why there are problems of violent crime in Toronto and other urban areas, not only in Canada but in the United States and elsewhere around the world, other than this particular issue of youth unemployment.

Mr. Wilson: Madam Speaker, I addressed the question to the Minister because the Minister of Employment and Immigration was not in the House. I thought the Minister of State for Economic Development would have some interest in youth unemployment.

INTRODUCTION OF JOB-CREATION POLICIES

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, all we have heard from the Minister of Employment and Immigration are his statements about some phantom policies which he is going to bring in with the Throne Speech. Would the Minister explain to this House why these policies cannot be brought into effect right now when the problem is so severe, rather than wait for some indefinite time in the future when a Speech from the Throne will be brought down?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I believe that is a repetition of a question which was addressed last week to the responsible Minister. The Hon. Member is fully aware of the programs which are in effect. Never in the history of this country has so much money been devoted to job creation as has been devoted by this Government.

Mr. McDermid: There have never been so many unemployed, either.

Mr. Johnston: We still recognize, and will continue to recognize, as the Minister said in this House last week, that youth unemployment is a major priority of this Government, and will continue to be so. This problem has been addressed, is being addressed, and will continue to be addressed.

Mr. Wilson: Madam Speaker, the Minister knows that the policies which have been set out apply to 31,000 youth, or 6 per cent of the unemployment problem. That is not action.

IMPACT OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PREMIUMS ON YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Last week in the House, Madam Speaker, I made reference to a long term problem and to something which could create longer term jobs for our youth when I referred to what the Canadian Federation of Independent Business was saying, to the effect that the unemployment insurance program is far broader than just an insurance program, that it is a social program. Yet it is still funded by a payroll tax which hits small business far harder than large business, and inhibits the creation of permanent youth jobs.

Mr. Rossi: Question.

Madam Speaker: Order.

Mr. Wilson: Does the Minister agree that a further increase in unemployment insurance premiums will aggravate this problem of youth unemployment?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I am happy to take notice of questions which are being put by the Hon. Member and to address the questions which seem to be puzzling him. The whole issue of unemployment insurance has been under review for many years. It has been modified. The Act has been updated. It is obviously a program which has to be revised constantly, fine tuned, and designed to meet the circumstances of the day. However, surely everyone in this House, in fact everyone in Canada, will have to admit that the program has served this country very well indeed during one of the most difficult periods the country has ever faced, the worst depression since the 1930s.

● (1420)

The Hon. Member talks about violence in Toronto, Madam Speaker. I suggest it is programs like unemployment insurance, cost-sharing work programs and the other safety nets established by Liberal Governments over the years which have provided for stability and, perhaps not eliminated, but certainly made the social stability in Canada the envy of many other countries in this world, including our neighbour to the south. That has been the effect of existing programs, but the Government has never been satisfied with the status quo. We are always looking forward. Indeed, if further modifications can be made that will help improve that situation, they will be made.

JOB-CREATION INITIATIVES—TIMING OF ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, it is because of this forward looking Government that I would like to direct a question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister in the absence of the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Again on the weekend, and this is the third time now, the Minister of Employment and Immigration said in Saskatoon:

> The country's unemployed will get some welcome news in the next Throne Speech. Roberts told an employment seminar the speech will outline new employment initiatives concentrating mostly on young people who need experience to get jobs.

When are we going to get these initiatives? Why can we not get them now? When we do get them, will these young people be hired now, or will we have to await commencement of the next fiscal year?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member's quotation indicated the announcement would be made in the Throne Speech. As the House knows, we have been hoping to start this new session, and we have been saying that for at least six months.

Mr. McDermid: Four years.

Mr. Trudeau: As soon as the Opposition gets its act together and passes the Crow and the Government Organization Act—

Mr. McDermid: What a phony.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the Leader of the Opposition that he talked about civility in this House and he was distressed not to see it on this side. Perhaps he could look at his own side.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR EARLY INTRODUCTION OF INITIATIVES

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, there are one in five young people unemployed today, a total of 566,000, who are told by this Government they have to wait for the Speech from the Throne. Given the fact that youth unemployment has been hovering around 20 per cent for about six months, why can the Government not act for these young people, and act now? The Prime Minister knows this House is prepared to set aside its business to hear whatever new programs the Government has to put in place for young people, and to hear them now.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, that is the trouble with the Hon. Member's Party. It wants to set aside the business, which is the Crow, business which will cause investment in Canada of some $33 billion over the next four years. This is a lot of jobs. Instead of setting aside the business, why does it not deal with the business at hand rather than hiding behind the curtains?

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

INELIGIBILITY OF NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERMEN

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Over the course of the last two or three weeks he and I have been looking at the problem of people who are unemployed and are not eligible for unemployment insurance. Given that the federal Department of Employment and Immigration estimates that over 2,300 inshore fishermen and seasonal plant workers in Newfoundland will not be eligible for unemployment insurance this year because they have not worked a sufficient number of weeks to qualify, what does he suggest they should do?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, we have already had this question in the House, I think, twice. Perhaps the Hon. Member missed the response. I indicated I had been discussing with my officials special efforts which might be made to respond to this problem. There are a variety of things that could be done and we are examining them, as I indicated to the House a couple of weeks ago. It has been difficult for us to decide on a course of action until the fishing season was at an end so we could see what was the full extent of the problem.

PLIGHT OF PEOPLE WITHOUT BENEFITS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, if the Minister wants to answer for the Minister of Finance, that is fine.

When the Minister develops his program for dealing with the problems of these inshore fishermen and plant workers, will he offer the same kind of programs to all the other people in Canada who do not now qualify for unemployment insurance, who cannot find employment, and who are faced today with an inability to meet their basic financial commitments and requirements, and have been forced onto welfare by the Government's inaction?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, one of the possible approaches to take to this problem is to change the regulations in connection with the number of weeks of fishing required in order to obtain benefits. Obviously, if we are talking about that kind of approach to the fishing situation, we could not apply that generally to a whole range of other occupations.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT IN CALGARY AND CAPE BRETON—EXTENT OF GOVERNMENT GRANTS

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration who will know that the city of Calgary has had an unemployment rate greater than the national average for several months in a row. In that context, Canada Works and the LEAD Program will be providing $500,000 for 40,000 unemployed people in that city. That is $12.50 a year per unemployed person. In the meantime, in Cape Breton, the Minister is providing $6,509,000 for 11,000 unemployed people, or $591.72 per person.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. This enumeration of statistics, I suppose, is going to lead to a question, but it must do so immediately.

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, is that the Minister's view of Liberal justice? Is that his view of Liberal fair pay? Does he think that candidates in western Canada will be proud to go on the hustings with that kind of information to convince western Canadians to stay in this country?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, as I have explained to the House, the allocations are based on a formula which has been communicated quite clearly to Members. That formula essentially reflects the labour surplus in each of the constituencies, either over a short-term period if we are discussing Canada Works, or over a four-year period if we are talking about the LEAD Program. The same formula is applied to all constituencies and produces results which are sometimes more favourable or less favourable to constituencies depending upon what the labour surplus has been.

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, with those kinds of explanations I think youth unemployment will be higher than the Liberal standing in the Gallup fairly quickly.

Mr. Deans: It is already higher.

RATIO OF GRANTS PROVIDED CALGARY AND CAPE BRETON

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Madam Speaker, I ask the Minister as clearly as I can whether or not he thinks it is fair to provide the people in Cape Breton with 47 times as much money per unemployed person as he provides in the city of Calgary? Is that the Liberals' idea of a just and fair formula for allocating employment funds?

Mr. Lalonde: Get your figures right.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Madam Speaker, I think the formula is fair because it does focus the funds into those areas where there is the greatest need as defined by the labour surplus rate.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SENATE REPORT ON MARITIME COMMAND

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. In June of this year the Senate Subcommittee on National Defence issued a report on Canada's Maritime Command, which used to be called the Navy, which was in effect a devastating critique of Canada's naval capabilities. The Minister has had this report for four months. Is his Department preparing a response? If so, when might it be made public? If not, why not?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, first of all I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member on his having been made official Opposition defence critic and his having been recognized to ask his first question.

Indeed, Madam Speaker, there has been a report tabled in the Senate and a response is being prepared. I have been urging that the response be brought forward as rapidly as possible, and of course, it would be dealt with in the Senate because that is where the initial report was tabled.

Mr. Andre: Madam Speaker, I would just remind the Minister that he was not here one day and I asked a question of the Prime Minister.

STRENGTH OF NAVAL FORCES

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, after examining Canada's naval capabilities the Subcommittee reached the inescapable conclusion, which many other people have reached, that the Navy, in both current and projected manpower and equipment, simply cannot fulfil the country's defence objectives. Is it the Minister's intention to press for more resources for Maritime Command or the Navy? Alternatively, does he feel that the ten warships to which we will be reduced, basically, by 1992, are sufficient to defend 59,000 miles of coastline?

• (1430)

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I do not accept the allegation made by the Hon. Member relating to the number of warships we will have in 1992. As he knows, we have met the time frame that we had identified relating to the replacement of the first six frigates, the St. Lawrence class; the contract has been let and the Government is seeing to its responsibilities relating to the capacity of the maritime forces. As well, we welcome the report from the Senate. I will be addressing the recommendations of the Senate within that particular Chamber.

AIR SAFETY

DANGERS POSED BY CIGARETTE SMOKING

Mr. Maurice Harquail (Restigouche): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport and concerns a question that has been raised before with regard to safety and regulations on smoking, and the consideration of banning smoking on aircraft. It is not only a question of smoke and the health hazard of smoking on aircraft, but butane flames, matches and the lighting of that material which can be explosive.

An Hon. Member: Do you smoke?

Mr. Harquail: As a matter of fact I do not smoke.

Miss Campbell: That is why you are asking.

Mr. Harquail: I was just confirming that the Hon. Member was quite correct. I gave up that habit some time ago.

Is the Minister considering any action within his Ministry to have the Canadian Transport Commission investigate the danger to passengers inherent in allowing smoking on aircraft, and the measures that could be taken to avoid such danger, by considering the banning of smoking on aircraft?

Miss Campbell: With larger ashtrays.

Mr. Harquail: Could the Minister inform the House if any steps are being considered within his Ministry, or within the Canadian Transport Commission, to protect all Canadians travelling in Canada, indeed including Members of this House, Madam Speaker.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member asks a very serious question and it deserves a serious answer. We are carefully considering the whole question relating to fire safety. We are working very closely with the United States Federal Aviation Agency which has just put forward a new series of regulations on fire resistant materials. They have promulgated orders and we will be looking at the responses to see if they can also be applied in Canadian aircraft because of the close linkage and the shared air routes between the two countries.

At the same time, my colleague's Department of National Health and Welfare is also looking at questions relating to smoking generally, as a health hazard. I think the combination of those two investigations will ensure that we provide the most effective balance of measures to protect the Canadian public in their air travel.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—INTERNAL POLITICAL SITUATION

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Prime Minister or to the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs. It concerns the continuing confusion over the status of the island of Grenada in the Caribbean. I wonder if the Prime Minister or the Acting Minister could indicate what the situation in Grenada is, not only for the edification of the House but as well for the literally thousands of Canadians of Grenadian heritage who are in Canada.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member will be reassured to know that while the situation in relation to the form of the future government in Grenada is unclear, the situation today is calm. There is a representative of our mission in Barbados who is presently in Grenada to observe the situation. There appears to be no danger whatsoever to the 81 or so Canadians who are resident in that island for one reason or another, or to the few Canadian tourists who are there at the present time.

COMMUNICATIONS INQUIRY

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): I thank the Minister for that answer, Madam Speaker. May I ask him whether he is in a position to indicate to the House if air flights and the normal means of communication, air and boat and as well telecommunications, telephones, are in working order with Grenada? Granada is a beautiful city, but it is in Spain.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, I am unable to confirm to the Hon. Member the situation in relation to telecommunications at the moment, but they have been normalized, and flights have been arriving on and departing from the island.

GARRISON DIVERSION

CANADIAN REPRESENTATIONS

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment who, this past weekend, met in Halifax with American officials, including the U.S. Secretary of State and the head of the environmental Protection Agency. I should like to ask the Minister what, if any, representations he made with regard to the Garrison diversion issue, and what response he received from the Americans.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, in conjunction with our Secretary of State for External Affairs, we made representations on the Garrison proposal both on Phase One and Phase Two. We registered Canadian concerns very strongly and very firmly once again.

They were well received, and I think it was a worth-while exchange of views which might lead to an improvement in mutual understanding of what the proposal will lead to in the long term.

REPORTED USE OF FALSIFIED INFORMATION BY PROJECT SUPPORTERS

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister. Last week we learned that the United States Department of the Interior has used bogus information to justify claims that Garrison will not adversely affect wet lands and wildlife habitat in northern Dakota. Can the Minister tell us whether this item was discussed on the weekend, and can he tell us what the Canadian Government is doing to check whether any such falsified information has been used by Garrison supporters to justify portions of the project which may have possible adverse effects on the Manitoba ecology?

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member's question I should like to add that yesterday we obtained agreement to a meeting to be held in Washington between Canadian and American officials in November. They will work out a number of irritants related to Phase One. If that takes place in a satisfactory manner, I hope that some of the concerns of the Hon. Member will be met.

AIR CANADA

RCMP REPORT ON SELECTION OF MONTREAL HEADQUARTERS

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. In view of his commitment of last week, I wonder if he has had an opportunity to review the RCMP report on the Air Canada matter. If so, what action does he intend to take, separate and apart from anything that has been referred to the Attorney General of Quebec, in regard to criminal implications?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, surely the Hon. Member should know that when a matter is still being considered by an officer of the law, it is a matter on which I cannot comment. I have not had a chance to look at the report. As the Attorney General still has the report on the legal side under advisement, it is a matter on which I cannot comment in the House.

REQUEST THAT TRANSPORT COMMITTEE BE CONVENED

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is addressed to the Chairman of the Transport Committee. There has been some discussion, and a letter, separate and apart from any alleged criminal activities or implications with regard to the RCMP report. Could the Chairman take steps to convene the Transport Committee forthwith—which has not been sitting for two weeks and which is seized of the Air Canada matter—so that other areas of interest which affect the administration of Air Canada and its operation could be properly examined by the Committee?

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member well knows, the Committee has not been sitting for two weeks, but it sat continuously for three months. There is a very important piece of legislation before the House in which members of the Committee are interested, and many Members feel they should be in the House for that debate.

Furthermore, it is my understanding that the President of Air Canada is out of the country for this week and next. It seems to me it would be unfair to call that Committee when he is not available.

MARINE TRANSPORT

SINKING OF LAKE ERIE FISHING TUG

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Transport. He is undoubtedly aware of the recent sinking of the Jorge B, a fishing tug, in Lake Erie, with the resultant tragic loss of three lives. Since that accident concerns have been raised about the seaworthiness of the vessels used in that operation, the inadequacy of the safety equipment, and the lack of proper inspections and proper training for captains. In light of this tragic loss of life, may I ask the Minister if he has looked into the matter? What steps is he taking to improve the situation there in order to prevent further loss of life and further tragedies of this nature?

• (1440)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, as in all cases of this kind the Coast Guard makes an immediate examination, and an investigation will take place. I think many of the judgments made by the Hon. Member will have to wait for a full accounting from that kind of an examination. If some of those in fact prove to be the case, we would take the appropriate action to correct them. But I would ask the Hon. Member to await the full examination and assessment that we can make and I will share that information with him.

ABSENCE OF LIFEBOATS

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I appreciate the Minister's answer. However, the Windsor Star surveyed the fleets in the Wheatley and Kingsville area and found that of 37 boats moored at Wheatley on one afternoon, six did not have lifeboats on deck, and of 20 boats which were moored in Kingsville, eight had no lifeboats. In view of that situation would the Minister not consider it urgent enough to take action immediately to ensure that immediate steps are taken, rather than waiting for the full fledged inquiry that is going on?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I will certainly take the Hon. Member's representations and speak with Coast Guard officials in that area to determine the accuracy of those reports. If they are accurate, we will take the proper action.

INDUSTRY

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT LIMITED—DELAYS IN DELIVERIES OF PARTS

Mr. W. C. Scott (Victoria-Haliburton): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. I understand that the receiver of the White Farm Equipment Company is releasing parts to dealers. However, the parent company in the United States is giving delivery times of several months. It appears that it is holding up delivery of parts until the ownership of the Canadian firm is settled. Has the Minister been advised of this and, if so, what action has he or will he take to get these parts delivered to Canadian dealers immediately?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, this is the first time I have heard of that situation so I obviously cannot respond positively to the Hon. Member. I will look into the case.

NATIONAL SECURITY

SOVIET ESPIONAGE IN CANADA

Mr. Chris Speyer (Cambridge): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. In Sudbury recently the Solicitor General said that "there is a lot of Soviet espionage in Canada and I do not think most Canadians realize it". In order for the Minister to give Canadians and Members of the House a better idea of what he meant, would he state exactly how much Soviet espionage there is in Canada? Has he communicated and explained his views to the Secretary of State for External Affairs?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, this gives me the opportunity to comment on a report which attributed to me a certain quantification of the number of Soviet spies in Canada. I want to assure the House that I gave no such precise quantification. I indicated that there obviously is in this country—as Canadians know from the occasional Png-s, the expulsion of Soviet diplomats—a threat to our national security from agents of the Soviet government in this country. Of course the numbers that are png-ed are a small proportion of the total amount of activity under surveillance in that respect by the Security Service.

REPORT OF MINISTER'S SPEECH

Mr. Chris Speyer (Cambridge): The Solicitor General, in his speech in Sudbury to the Canadian Bar Association, said that the KGB's role was continuing to expand. Will the Minister quantify his statement that "there is a lot of Soviet espionage in Canada, and I do not think Canadians realize how much there is"? Just how much is there?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, I do not feel it is in the public interest to give precise figures about that, neither did my predecessor from the Hon. Member's Party when he was Solicitor General.

I would remind him that if we can move quickly to the establishment of the new Security Intelligence Service, something that I advocate to the House, we would be in a position to have an external review committee which would, for the first time, have the power to overrule, in effect, the Solicitor General and decide that it might be in the public interest to give out that type of concrete information. I am not prepared to do it, but I invite the Hon. Member to support a system in which he would have access to a review of a decision about national security by the Solicitor General.

PUBLIC WORKS

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE—RESPONSIBILITY FOR STRUCTURAL DEFECTS

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. It concerns structural problems in the National Arts Centre. Sidewalks are crumbling, and water penetration is being found in the recently renovated mechanical room. As well, there are such bizarre conditions as a faked expansion joint, continuous water leaks from unidentified sources, and drains solidly plugged with concrete. Who, and what, are responsible for these conditions?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I will obviously inquire into the accuracy of the details alleged by the Hon. Member and I will give him an answer.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER LAUNCH INQUIRY

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, these repairs will cost the Canadian taxpayers some $300,000. Is the Minister prepared to launch an independent inquiry into the structural problems to determine why there has been no quality control and proper inspection of concrete work at the National Arts Centre?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, if the problems alleged by the Hon. Member are more than normal problems of maintenance, I will obviously want to find out why.

DANGEROUS PRODUCTS

INJURIES CAUSED BY SOFT DRINK BOTTLES

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Four years ago the Government banned the use of 1.5 litre pop bottles after reports of widespread injuries, including several children who lost their eyes. Although the injury record of 750 mililitre bottles was just as bad, no similar action was taken whatsoever, with the result of some 300 injuries reported since then. Now that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has met with the industry, what action will the Government finally take to ban the use of these dangerous bottles or, at the very least, to impose the same standards on these bottles as it earlier imposed on the 1.5 litre bottles?

Mr. David Berger (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is aware that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs met with representatives of the industry on Friday. While I have not yet had the opportunity to speak with her, I am sure he is also aware of press reports stating that the industry is prepared to conduct an advertising campaign to make consumers aware of the dangers of these bottles. Furthermore, I think he will understand that there was tremendous concern over the previous ban in that it imposed tremendous costs on the industry. Apparently studies have indicated that the costs of such a ban on the 750 mililitre bottle would be prohibitive. I think he should take these arguments into consideration.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): The Minister admits that the bottles are a hazard, yet all she is doing is sweet-talking the industry into some sort of PR campaign.

REQUEST THAT BOTTLES BE PLASTIC COATED

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, in view of the fact that the industry has a plastic bottle coating plant in Ontario which has been sitting idle since January of this year, why does the Government not use its power effectively to ban these bottles or, at the very least, require that they be coated as the 1.5 litre bottles were coated, and stop mimicking the industry in claiming it costs too much? What is the cost of an eye or arm to a family whose child is hurt by these bottles?

Mr. David Berger (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, I do not think it is correct to characterize the Minister's action as sweet-talking. However, we are accustomed to that kind of hyperbole on the part of the Hon. Member. The suggestion he makes is one of those which, I understand, is being considered by the Minister and the industry.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Burnaby.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

PROMISE OF NEW STANDARDS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, three years ago the industry promised new standards for this bottle, yet it has done absolutely nothing. How many more children will have to lose their eyes or arms before these dangerous bottles, one of which I will—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member knows that he is not to exhibit any object in the House. I would urge him to do away with that object. The Hon. Member for Burnaby.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): I will certainly send a sample bottle to the Prime Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Madam Speaker: Order. Will the Hon. Member please resume his seat? The Hon. Member for York-Peel.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

FRANCE—FURNISHING OF JET FIGHTERS TO IRAQ

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for External Relations. Would the Minister indicate whether the Government of Canada has warned France of the danger of furnishing advanced jet fighters to Iraq, as have the Governments of the United States, the United Kingdom, the West German Republic, and many of the Gulf nations themselves?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, we are quite aware of the fact that the provision of those planes to Iraq may cause greater tension between Iraq and Iran, but we have made no formal representation, to my knowledge, to the French Government on this matter.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MAKE REPRESENTATIONS TO FRANCE

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of State for External Relations. Surely he will agree this is perhaps the most delicate region in the world today. Would the Minister at least consider making representations to France and explain the concern of the Canadian Government with respect to its action in furnishing these aircraft?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of State (External Relations)): Madam Speaker, the Government is very much aware of that, and that is one of the reasons why the Secretary of State for External Affairs will be travelling in the region very soon.

HUMAN RIGHTS

NICARAGUA—PERSECUTION OF JEWISH COMMUNITY—AMOUNT OF CANADIAN AID

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for External Relations. The Minister will be aware that the Jewish community in Nicaragua has been reduced to 50 persons and the Sandinistas have waged a systematic campaign against them since 1977. Will the Minister tell us whether this factor and other human rights factors will play a significant role in deciding whether or not Nicaragua will get the $15 million aid package that has been asked for it by the NDP?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member will recognize that the aid packages determined by CIDA are not based upon the findings of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Stevens: Since when?

Mr. Kilgour: Madam Speaker, the point is that human rights in El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua are equally important.

EXTERNAL AID

SOMALIA—AMOUNT OF CANADIAN ASSISTANCE

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, on the question of double standards, will either the Minister of State for International Trade or the Minister of State for External Relations tell me why Somalia got $2 million in development aid from Canada last year when it is one of the ten poorest countries? I remind the Minister it is one of strategic importance to the free world and it has been a country staunchly in favour of the free world for about seven years now.

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, Somalia is certainly one of the poorest countries in the world. It is not a country that had received a substantial amount of aid from Canada over a long period of time. I think the fact that that amount of aid has been given indicates an increased interest on the part of Canada in that country and in that area.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—APPLICATION TO AMERICAN SUBSIDIARIES

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister advise this House whether wholly-owned subsidiaries, American subsidiaries of Crown-owned corporations, are subject to the same conflict of interest guidelines as regular Crown corporations?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I understand the Hon. Member is talking about a Canadian Crown corporation which would own a subsidiary in the United States. I would think so, Madam Speaker.

THE ADMINISTRATION

REQUEST FOR APPOINTMENT OF MINISTER OF STATE FOR MINES

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Last week in response to a question the Prime Minister left the impression that it is not his intention to replace a Minister of Mines to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of his only Minister from Newfoundland. The Prime Minister knows of the reaction of the mining industry to that statement. He left the impression that it might take months, if ever, before a new Minister is appointed. Would the Prime Minister be willing today to be more precise as to what his intentions are with respect to that, namely, will there be another Minister of Mines and a more precise date when the appointment will take place?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I cannot make out what the Hon. Member is allegedly saying about the mining industry. Those who are in the mining industry and know their business know that they have a perfectly good mining Minister in the person of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

An Hon. Member: Why do we need another Minister then?

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Two days ago a person could buy one litre of unleaded regular gasoline in the United States for 33 cents. Why does it cost a person up to 38 per cent more in Canada for that same litre of unleaded gas?

Mr. Lalonde: Which Province?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I can reply to that question. The big difference in the prices in Canada is very often caused by the provincial taxes.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: In the case of Quebec, for example, the Province of Quebec takes much more money than any other Province. There is no provincial tax in Alberta. There is a substantial tax in Ontario and, if you compare the level of provincial tax in Ontario and the tax levied in most of the neighbouring States of the United States, the take by the American States is much less than that taken by the Ontario provincial Government or the Quebec provincial Government.

LIBERAL PARTY PROMISE ON PRICE

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, I am sure the Minister will know that the federal Government is taking at least the largest portion out of every dollar of gasoline purchased at the pump.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Gurbin: Can the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources tell us where his promise and the Liberal promise that prices would not elevate beyond 75 per cent of world levels has gone? Where is that promise now? Does that mean Canadian voters, consumers, farmers, business men, and everyone who uses gas, should forget about any promise or commitment to 75 per cent of the world level?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is not too familiar with the last campaign. In the last campaign we said that there was not to be the 18-cent tax above normal prices.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: I would like to correct the Hon. Member when he says that the federal tax in Canada is much higher than in the United States. It is at about the same level as in the United States. The big difference in Canada is caused by provincial taxes which are much more in most Provinces than the taxes charged by the States in the United States. Of course the Province of Alberta, and Saskatchewan, have no sales tax and that is why the prices are competitive there.

FISHERIES

RESTRUCTURING OF EAST COAST INDUSTRY—AGREEMENT WITH BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. It is my understanding from the court proceedings in the fisheries products reorganization in Newfoundland that there is a secret agreement between the Government of Canada and the Bank of Nova Scotia relating to the restructuring of the fisheries. Is it the Government's intention to disclose the details of this agreement to Parliament? If not, why not?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I can say to my hon. friend that this agreement reached between the federal negotiator and the president of the Bank of Nova Scotia has been transmitted in confidence to the Premier of Newfoundland and Labrador, and I think also to the Premier of Nova Scotia. As for making it public, I do not think, because of the sensitive commercial nature of that document, that I am at liberty to make it public at this moment.

Mr. Crouse: I thank the Minister for that answer, Madam Speaker.

NATURE OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT'S COMMITMENTS

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Did this secret agreement involve the Government in making unusual or special commitments? If so, what are they? What are the amounts committed, and was Nova Scotia's restructuring agreement contingent upon access to the Gulf fishery in 1983 and beyond?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, there is absolutely nothing secret. The agreement that has been reached with the Bank of Nova Scotia and Premier Peckford has been made public by Premier Peckford and myself at a joint press conference. We gave all the figures.

As for fishing allocations, I can assure the Hon. Member that the federal Minister of Fisheries today or in the future will never allocate fish on a bilateral basis. All Provinces participate in that question. For instance, last week all the Deputy Ministers of Fisheries, including the one from Nova Scotia from where the Hon. Member comes, participated in a meeting in Ottawa precisely on that topic, among others. This is the only way we can keep the confidence of all the participants. If I start doing secret deals with one Government, at that point of course there will be a lot of skepticism.

STANDING ORDERS AND PROCEDURE

CONCURRENCE IN SIXTH REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

On the Order: Motions:

October 3, 1983—Mr. Baker (Nepean—Carleton) (Vice-Chairman of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure):

That the Sixth Report of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, presented to the House on Tuesday, March 29, 1983, be concurred in.

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) cannot be in the House today because he is attending the funeral of the police officer who was so tragically shot last Friday. On the weekend he asked me if I would move concurrence in the sixth report on his behalf.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) to move this motion in the absence of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker)?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: There is no consent.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I submit that consent is not required. I anticipated this kind of situation arising. I am prepared for it, and I want to make submissions to the Chair.

There has been a long standing practice in the House that, where there has been a specific request by an absent Member in whose name a motion stands on the Order Paper for another Member to move it, it has been done as a matter of routine. I wish to cite some precedents for consideration by the Chair. The first is Citation 402 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, wherein the following is set forth:

> Merely formal motions for the adoption of reports or for certain papers, to which there is no objection, are usually permitted to be made in the absence of the Member who has placed the notice on the Order Paper.

I ask the Chair and its advisers to pay particular attention to the position of the commas in that sentence, because I propose referring to the Fourth Edition as well as to the French edition of Beauchesne for an elaboration on this submission.

Citation 402 at first glance would appear to preclude motions for the adoption of reports to be made in the absence of the Member who placed the notice on the Order Paper in cases where there has been an objection heard. However, reference to the Fourth Edition of Beauchesne shows that Citation 402 was drawn from previous Citation 188(4). The only change to the words of the citation from edition to edition was the inclusion of a comma after the word "papers". By placing the words "to which there is no objection" within commas, the effect has been to change the original intent of the citation.

In the original citation the matter of the raising of an objection referred only to motions for the production of papers. This interpretation is consistent with the French text of Citation 402 in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition and with Bourinot's Fourth Edition from which the words are taken. I refer the Chair to the French text to be found at page 147 of Beauchesne. I do not wish to fracture the French language by reading the citation, but the Chair will notice immediately the validity of the comparison I draw, supporting the contention I make, which seems to be bolstered by a reading of the French text.

As well, Bourinot provides references to instances where motions have been moved in the absence of the Members who gave notice of these motions. Footnote (c) at the bottom of page 299 of Bourinot's Fourth Edition—and I will not burden the Chair by reading it—cites instances where motions were moved in the absence of the Member in whose name the motion was standing on the Order Paper. I have dug up the citations to which Bourinot referred that indicate the practice goes all the way back to 1878.

In this instance the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) informed the Chair that he was specifically requested by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) to rise today to move the motion on behalf of the Hon. Member, who is unavoidably absent. It would be different if that specific request were not present. There would be some merit in the suggestion that a Member could not rise to move a motion standing in the name of another Member if that specific request were not present. If that were to be the case, there could be chaos in this place.

However, here we have a specific request by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton in whose name the motion stands, a specific request made of the Hon. Member for St. John's East who is now attempting to exercise the right of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton to have the motion which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton heard.

Therefore I submit that inasmuch as the Hon. Member for St. John's East has been authorized to move concurrence in the sixth report of the Special Committee—

Mr. McGrath: And is a member of the Committee.

Mr. Nielsen: —is also a member of that Committee and has been authorized by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton in whose name the notice of motion stands, the Hon. Member is within his rights to proceed with moving concurrence in that report and should be permitted to do so.

On the basis of those precedents, I submit that the Chair has no obligation to seek consent. Indeed, what is being sought by seeking unanimous consent is the right of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton himself to make that specific request of another Member and specifically to authorize that other Hon. Member to move the motion standing in his name.

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, there are three points I wish to make. First of all, the Chair asked the unanimous consent of the House, and we made it clear that we were not giving our consent. Consequently, the remarks made by the Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) are somewhat belated, and if the Chair agrees to consider them, I submit this would be tantamount to allowing an appeal from a ruling made by the Chair, because asking for unanimous consent means the Chair had decided that such consent was necessary for the motion to be moved. In fact, the Chair was correct in saying that unanimous consent was required, because my second point refers to Citation 402 of Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, as interpreted by the Hon. Member for Yukon.

The Member for Yukon mentioned a difference between the texts of the Fifth and the Fourth Editions. He said that a comma in the Fourth Edition was deleted in the Fifth Edition. However, aside from the adjustment that may have been made, I think his interpretation—in the Fifth Edition a number of adjustments were made in texts that were erroneous in the Fourth Edition, and the purpose of the Fifth Edition was to adjust and modernize the Fourth Edition. However, upon reading Citation 402, we realize that taking the text in its entirety, no other conclusion is possible: the requirement that there should be no objection applies both to tabling documents and the adoption of a report. Practically speaking, which of the two is more likely to raise objections, tabling documents or presenting a report? As far as I know, there has never been any objection to tabling documents, while when a report is tabled, if there are no objections, requesting concurrence becomes a formality, since the Parties will have consulted beforehand, and if the chairman of a committee or anyone else who was to move a motion for concurrence is absent for some reason, since consultations have been held and no objections raised, there is agreement and unanimous consent is given, although according to Citation 402, it would not be necessary. However, sometimes there are objections to committee reports, and that is the case today. I therefore submit that Citation 402 does cover this case and that the Chair was correct in requesting unanimous consent before allowing the Hon. Member to move the motion on behalf of another Member. In the circumstances, Citation 402 seems quite clear: it does not allow another Member to move a motion or the adoption of a report if objections are anticipated. In this particular case, no one indicated to the Chair that consultations had taken place between the parties and that everyone was prepared to concur in the adoption of this report. On the contrary. Therefore, since the Chair has not been notified of the absence of any objections, the Chair must apply the general rule and, since this is a departure from our usual practice, request the unanimous consent of the House, which was denied. We did so for two very simple reasons, and I would like to put them on the record, because I do not wish to cast any doubts on the reasons that the Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) may have for being absent.

The first reason is that the House has before it a very controversial bill, and that obviously, debating the report today will prevent us from proceeding with the debate on Bill C-155. That is the first reason why we did not give our unanimous consent, and why we object to the report being tabled, which was ample justification for the Chair to request the unanimous consent of the House. This is a dilatory manoeuvre to prevent us from continuing debate on Bill C-155, as the Progressive Conservatives did last Friday. They are doing so now. They are wasting the time of the House of Commons by debating subjects other than those the Government wishes to introduce for debate under the Standing Orders as is its prerogative.

The second reason is that by moving the adoption of this report, as we said before during the debate last Friday the Chairman of the Committee on Procedure and Organization, that is of the Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform, stressed this in the House, as did Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen) and other Members as well; it is all on the record the Progressive Conservative Members are reneging on an understanding that was reached in committee that no motion to concur would be moved for the time being, and since they are not respecting the understanding that was reached by committee members, there is no reason why we should agree to support their lack of ethics vis-à-vis their colleagues. In the circumstances, we definitely object to a debate on this report today, and the Chair was entirely correct in requesting the unanimous consent of the House, and allowing the Member for Yukon to proceed is tantamount to allowing an appeal from the Chair's ruling.

[English]

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): Madam Speaker, I will be very brief. I want to deal with three points which are novel and new with respect to this issue. First, my colleague for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) did not in the course of standing on this motion ask for unanimous consent. It was not a question of his proceeding on that basis.

The second point which is relevant is that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) imputes motives with respect to moving a legitimate and quite proper motion in the course of Orders of the Day. Any Member imputing motives with respect to a legitimate motion regarding parliamentary reform is out of order. How preposterous that is. I will not comment further because I do not want to be in the same position as the President of the Privy Council when he enters into argument as to whether or not this motion should be supported.

Third, I want to talk in terms of analagous situations on which Your Honour has ruled on many occasions. When a Member has initiated proceedings on the Order Paper, we in this House have accepted the proposition that, notwithstanding the absence from the House of that Member, valid motions or petitions are dealt with and sustained.

The most obvious example I can give is that the former Member for Leeds, the late Mr. Cossitt, had a number of motions on the Order Paper, I dare say hundreds, with respect to the production of documents and Questions on the Order Paper. It was ruled and held that those questions remain extant and can be pursued by any Member of this House. The analogy is there with respect to a legitimate proceeding of the House.

We have here a situation where the Member in question, performing his responsibilities as a Member of Parliament, has specifically authorized and directed a Member of the House of Commons to move or proceed on a motion which is properly before the House. With the greatest deference, I do not see how any of the arguments made by the President of the Privy Council are relevant.

In my experience, unanimous consent is never asked for with respect to analogous situations in this House. There have been specific rulings with regard to Questions on the Order Paper and motions for the production of papers. I say, Madam Speaker, that you are quite justified in saying whether or not it meets the pleasure of the House. However, when we have a situation of this nature, it does not mean that that particular statement which is made by you is willy-nilly a ruling of the House. In other words, I do not think the President of the Privy Council can come forward and say that you have ruled for all time forward that this circumstance is barred from argument. I would hate to see the day when the House of Commons, by virtue of your initial reaction to matters, would be barred from bringing forward a motion which is of the essence of the parliamentary system and our House of Commons procedure.

I simply urge you, Madam Speaker, to allow my colleague for St. John's East to proceed with this motion, which is on the Order Paper legitimately and has been properly brought forward by my colleague.

Mr. McGrath: I will be brief, Madam Speaker. When I rose to move concurrence on behalf of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker), I did not request unanimous consent because, with respect, I did not think it was necessary for me to do so. I say to the Chair, with the same respect, that the Chair inadvertently sought the consent of the House when it was not necessary.

The reason I did not seek unanimous consent to move concurrence in the sixth report on behalf of my absent colleague, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, whose absence today is for a very good and honourable reason, was because when your distinguished predecessor, Speaker Lamoureux, ruled that any Member could move concurrence, there were no restrictions placed on it. I was rising in my place today not only as a colleague of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, having been requested to act on his behalf, but as a member of the committee wanting to get along with the business of the House in moving concurrence in a report on which notice had been served by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton.

I believe, Your Honour, with respect, that requiring unanimous consent was not at all necessary because the practices of the House since the ruling of Speaker Lamoureux are such that it is not unusual for an Hon. Member to nod to move concurrence or to move a motion on behalf of an absent Member. It is a frequent occurrence on all sides of the House. If we were to be restricted in that, you would not only be restricting Members of the House but also Members of the Treasury benches who could not in fact move motions on behalf of their absent colleagues. That would seriously hamstring the business of the House.

Madam Speaker: I have listened to all of the arguments and I am certainly confirmed in my first move that it was necessary to ask for unanimous consent in this particular case. The fact that the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) did not ask for unanimous consent does not apply, I feel, because the practice of the House is that if someone else but the one who has given notice of such a motion moves a motion, he must get the unanimous consent of the House.

● (1520)

I will read to the Hon. Member from the portion of Bourinot which was quoted by the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen):

A Member may not propose a motion in the absence of another who has placed it on the notice paper—

The Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) had placed it on the notice paper. The Hon. Member for St. John's East is moving in his place.

—except with the general consent of the House.

The argument made by the Hon. Member for Yukon in which he quoted Beauchesne is addressed here:

Merely formal motions for the adoption of reports or for certain papers to which there is no objection, are frequently permitted to be made, but all motions involving discussion—

That is the key word.

—must be proposed by the Member in whose name they appear on the paper.

This is confirmed in Citation 402 of Beauchesne in the French which the Hon. Member said was clear to him. It is also clear to me and I shall read it in French:

402. La motion de pure forme tendant à l'adoption d'un rapport ou à la production de documents ne faisant l'objet d'aucune contestation peut généralement être présentée en l'absence du député qui l'a inscrite au Feuilleton.

"De pure forme", or merely formal!

That is to say, a formal motion to adopt a report may be made by someone else but a motion as described by Bourinot which involves discussion must be proposed by the Member in whose name it appears on the Order Paper. The English version of Beauchesne is also quite clear. Therefore, I must maintain my decision that there was no unanimous consent; and therefore, I cannot accept that motion.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38 (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Madam Speaker, when speaking to Motion No. 36 moved by an Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party, I would particularly like to look at the proposal that the focus of attention of any performance obligations would rest singularly on the railways. While I understand the sentiments of Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party in putting forward such a motion, it seems to me that it is in the wisdom of the House to bear in mind that, when looking at the question of performance objectives, we must necessarily look at a systems analysis. It would be wrong, both academically and technically, to presume that to focus our attention on only one link of the chain would give us an appropriate analysis of the entire chain.

To suggest that all of the performance obligations within the authority of the Grain Transportation Administrator should focus only on the railways would, I submit, leave void the question of what problems might exist within many other areas. These include the areas of trucking, loading at country elevators, the country elevators themselves, inland terminals, the terminals at port, the hopper car allocation system, the grain inspectors, the port facilities, tugboats and tugboat operators, the international shipping arrangements and the international shipping contracts, the Canadian Wheat Board as it applies to its capacity for international sales, labour organizations and a host of other dimensions, all of which need to be considered.

In essence, Sir, the New Democratic Party is suggesting that the concept of performance guarantees is important, and that is a position that does not differ from that of the Government or the Official Opposition. However, to focus singularly the concept of performance guarantees on only one element, that of the railways, implies to me more of a vindictive attack on a national organization than an intent to solve a problem.

Mr. Althouse: Everybody else is regulated except them.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, you will again hear the Hon. Members of the NDP who have taken their morning steroids exercising their vocal cords at a much higher volume than is usual.

The truth of the matter is that the whole system, if it is to function, must function with all of its dimensions in place. Just moments ago when Madam Speaker rose, she asked if any Hon. Member wished to speak. The NDP did not put up any speakers then but now that I am up, their Members want to speak. That does not surprise me but perhaps they can rest for a while because I will be sitting down shortly. I would like to hear how they can possibly defend the position that the Grain Transportation Authority should be able to have all of its power focused only on the railways and on none of the other dimensions.

If we turn to those persons who are most affected by a slowdown in the movement of grain, the prairie farmers, and ask them what their concerns are with regard to the movement of grain, certainly very high on their list would be the question of strikes and physical breakdowns in the system, particularly through the Rocky Mountains. I commend to your attention, Sir, the period of time in 1974 when, out of the 52 weeks available for movement of grain in that crop year, only 13 weeks were trouble free and most of the problems were caused by strikes or rockslides through the Rocky Mountains. That means that when there are performance guarantees that must be met, we obviously cannot simply make sure that the railway is the only one that has to measure up. There is a great deal of room for the country elevators to simply not perform in a proper manner.

Mr. Benjamin: No, the Board has sanctions.

Mr. Malone: As I am being told by the people who sit beside me to my far left, there is also the question of the Canadian Wheat Board. The Wheat Board in itself may not allocate the cars appropriately. Surely there ought to be the right of investigation into the Wheat Board. It could well be, Sir, that the terminals are not putting the grain through. We simply cannot make the presumption that once the grain gets to the port terminal, it will automatically be loaded. If that presumption could justifiably be made, then, of course, the grain transportation authority would not need to investigate. But surely we ought not to tread on such dangerous ground as to presume that the port authority would always automatically load grain efficiently, and that same fact holds true of the Canadian Wheat Board in the making of its contracts in the international marketplace. Surely it is prima facie evidence that if the Canadian Wheat Board did not act in the international markets to bring onstream viable sales for Canadian grain, no matter how efficient the transportation systems of CN and CP are, if the sales are not there, obviously the grain is not going to be moved. All that becomes a part of the dimension of the question of how we put together a system where the authority has the right to check every part of the system.

I do not know what protection the New Democratic Party is trying to provide to which people, and for what motive it wants to pull out from a whole system of grain transportation one element and say it is only that element for which the authority has the right to investigate on the record of performance. It is nothing other than clear logic to say that if performance is your end result, all of the factors which lead to improved performance ought to be considered. Even the Wheat Board ought to be subject to questions.

I hear some coaching from behind me, from the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) who is trying to protect the Wheat Board from questions. The New Democratic Party would like to make the Canadian Wheat Board a Crown corporation like Petro-Canada, Air Canada and the CBC, and just give it taxpayers dollars and never have it accountable to anyone. The truth of the matter is, Sir, that we need to have a system which is viable and in which every dimension of the system is ready to be checked. Any program which is put forward which says that the fundamental basis of this program is the question of performance, and then only one dimension of performance is focused on, is naive at best, and I will not tell you what it would be at its worst, Sir. I conclude simply by saying that the amendment is naive and falls short of meeting its objectives. The original motion is a better one because in fact we have the capability of carrying out a full investigation of all sections of the system. It is that kind of investigation which is necessary if we are going to have as the ultimate result the high rate of performance which the authority can demand.

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to follow the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), and to listen once again to the oracles from that end of the House continue on in their efforts to attempt to downgrade the Canadian Wheat Board and other agencies. It is rather puzzling to listen to the Conservatives adopt what is almost the philosophy of one of the more famous Liberals in this country's history, William Lyon Mackenzie King, a former Prime Minister. To quote from a poem by Frank Scott entitled, "W.L.M.K."

> The height of his ambition
> Was to pile a Parliamentary Committee on a Royal Commission.

In this case we are not piling a parliamentary committee on a Royal commission, but what the Tories and the Liberals are asking for is an investigator to investigate the investigators to investigate the investigators. Joe McCarthy would have a field day in this place.

It is ridiculous for those who talk about bureaucracies and who attempt to lecture the Canadian public and the Members of the Canadian House of Commons about the evils of bureaucracy, to at the same time, want to pile another bureaucracy upon another bureaucracy, to police self-policing organizations, whether these be labour organizations or the Canadian Wheat Board for example, which already has a series of second looks built into its very structure involving both Ministers of the Crown and the Parliament of Canada. It is ridiculous to pile investigators upon investigators and bureaucracies upon bureaucracies and still claim we care about the public purse and that we care about having Government agencies which people can understand. It is indeed puzzling.

Hon. Members, of which the Hon. Member for Crowfoot was one, wanted to know why the New Democratic Party—to paraphrase his words—wanted to single out the railways. We do not believe that is really what is happening. We believe, as many contributors to this debate have made clear up to this point, that the Canadian Wheat Board and the other agencies which the Tories may or may not want—it is very vague—to come under the purview of the new super czar, already have their own self-policing mechanisms or policing and investigative mechanisms set in place by the Government of Canada or one of its agencies. We do not believe it is necessary to extend overseeing powers further.

Why do we believe that the CPR is not one of those which can be totally counted upon to police itself in terms of the public welfare? We do not believe that the CPR or the other railways, have up to this point been sufficiently supervised, in terms of the public interest, since the initial railway agreements were signed with the Government of Canada shortly after the time of Confederation. One way of looking at Canadian history, Mr. Speaker, is that Canada was created because the CPR needed someone to pay for its railway. It needed taxpayers and it needed a government to pay the cost of building its railway and to ensure that its future position would be secure. Canada was developed because the CPR needed someone to build its railway, and the Hudson Bay Company needed someone to pay for the policing of its territories. And we have behaved that way ever since. All one has to do is to look at how free and easy it has been for that major railway to have its own way with governments, whether they be Liberal or Conservative, since Confederation. One begins to wonder who is policing whom in this country. I feel that we in the New Democratic Party, and that portion of the Canadian electorate which has continuously given its support to us, can be forgiven for believing that if any corporation or any institution in Canadian society needs a second look into its operations from time to time to ensure that it is behaving in such a way as not to come into major conflict with the public interest, surely that institution is the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the railways in general.

It is interesting to note that underlying the debate, not only on these amendments but the entire debate on the reform, if you will, of the Crow rate, is the question of the investment plans of the Canadian railway system. Considering the huge bonus they are going to get as the result of the Government's program—sometimes supported by the Progressive Conservative Party sometimes not—why is it that the investment plans of CN Rail for the first year in which the Government proposals are intended to come into effect are down by 22.9 per cent? Why is it that the investment plans of CP Rail are down by some 20.4 per cent just at the time that they will begin to reap the bonanza handed to them on a silver platter by that Government, and by the Official Opposition because of its shilly-shallying and indecision over whether it supports or does not support the proposals now before us? If that does not suggest that perhaps there ought to be some singling out, some special second look, some special supervision, then I do not know what does.

We have nothing against the argument that if these agencies or companies receive large influxes of taxpayers' money there should be some authority vested in the new commissioner or some other agency to ensure they are performing up to snuff. But, if we already have institutions with a built-in self-policing function, where either their membership or participants are able to exert from a multiplicity of disciplines some control over their behaviour in accordance with the broad interests of all of those in the industry or in Canada as a whole, then we in this Party believe, because it is part of our general philosophy, that they should be allowed to continue with that function. But if we have evidence that the major parties to all of this, the railways, particularly the CPR, the one agency which will receive billions of dollars over the next few years as a result of the generosity of the Government and of the Opposition—and we have a century of history to give us a lot of evidence which suggests they need watching carefully, then there are mechanisms by which we can ensure that they do follow through on the commitments they have made. It is quite proper that they should be "singled out", for special observation and control.

So we have no apologies to make for what some Conservative Members, I think the Hon. Member for Crowfoot among them, have at least inferred is the "discriminatory" attitude we have taken in this matter.

The railways are the ones getting the money, they are being given the authority. There is no structure built in to ensure they meet both their moral and financial commitments to the people of Canada. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I support the amendments and invite Members of good faith and good will from both the Official Opposition and, hopefully, the Government to join with us in ensuring that those who need some supervision get it and that we allow those with self-discipline, as I indicated before, to continue to be free.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make just a brief intervention on this motion. As Members will know, I come from a city riding and it is sometimes difficult to keep all the details in mind given such a complex piece of legislation. But if one reads over at least a portion of the committee hearings, and tries to stay alert to the general intent of the proposed amendments, I think one should come to the position of having real doubt about supporting the NDP amendment in this particular case.

The NDP sometimes suffers perhaps from a lack of membership, therefore a lack of resources and people to do adequate research. Sometimes the left hand does not really know what the right hand is doing. I guess the classic example of that is the NDP's hasty decision on December 13, 1979, to defeat a budget which was good for the country and in particular good for western Canada. When they did that it became clear subsequently—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all due respect to the Hon. Member, I must call to his attention the fact that debate at report stage must be strictly relevant to the amendments before us.

Mr. Deans: It is about time you brought them to order.

Mr. Hawkes: I was simply trying to make the point that in this amendment I think we have a Party, the NDP, which has not done its homework on the implications. In 1979, Mr. Speaker, we put in place a Grain Commissioner. I bring to your attention the fact that he was empowered to deal with the entire system of grain movement. At the committee meeting held on Wednesday, August 31, 1983, the deputy minister had this to say about the Commissioner:

> No, Mr. Chairman. That has not been the experience of the past four years. The general sense of most of the agricultural organizations in western Canada was that the existing entity was working well—

That entity, Mr. Speaker, was put in place by the Conservatives in 1979. He went on to say:

> —that, indeed, there was a potential to do more. That is why there was such broad agreement in both the Gilson process and in the Central Co-ordinating Agency Task Force among those organizations to set up the kind of organizations as provided for in this bill.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, to have a co-ordinator empowered to look at the entire grain system was a Conservative Government innovation in 1979. I suggest to the House that looking back over the last three and a half years we have seen it work and we must be alert to amendments which would remove from that administrative person the power, authority and responsibility to look at the entire system.

I bring to the attention of the House that the Conservative Party moved a motion in committee, which was supported by the NDP, and the chief spokesman on this matter for the NDP agreed with us that it really should be political people, Cabinet Ministers, who should decide who the system participants are. The Cabinet should decide what aspects of the grain handling system need to be looked at to make it cost effective and efficient in order to meet our commitments to our customers from other nations. But, Mr. Speaker, the intent of the amendments before us today is to restrict the power and authority which the Administrator would have so as to ensure that the system meets those commitments and obligations. Even when one comes from the city, it is a bit of a puzzle why the New Democratic Party would support this Party in its basic thrust to deal with the entire system at one time and then today, move an amendment that would have the effect of restricting the degree to which we can work to make the entire grain handling system a better system. The only explanation is that the New Democratic Party has not done its homework. That was the case in 1979 as well when it brought down a government that was doing good things for the nation and for the West. It threw that Government out of office. Today there is that same lack of research and lack of understanding of the basic implications of the specific words in the motions being moved by the NDP.

I should like to remind Members of the New Democratic Party that in committee they vacillated back and forth on this issue. I can well understand their desire to filibuster the Bill in the House. It has the potential to throw western Canadian farmers into bankruptcy in the same way the National Energy Program threw thousands and thousands of western Canadians out of work and put thousands and thousands of western Canadians into bankruptcy. The piece of legislation before us has that same kind of potential.

If we were to vote for this amendment and take away the powers of the Administrator to deal with the entire system, we would be inviting the system to be overly expensive and not meet the goals and the objectives set out for it. When that happens, all Canadian taxpayers pay for it in one form or another. It is something that is not said in the House often enough to the people in Montreal or Toronto—that what the Government is moving here is a piece of legislation the total impact of which will make the production of grain more expensive. It will result in the cost of a loaf of bread in Montreal or Toronto being greater than it is today.

That is what the Government is doing when it tries to throw this unknown burden on the backs of producers. That is what we would all be doing in this Chamber if we voted for any amendment that would hamstring the ability of the Administrator to make the system less costly. If we lower the cost of transportation we will lower the price of grain. In the retail markets of Toronto and Montreal we will have lowered the cost of meat, lowered the cost of bread, lowered the cost of flour. If we vote for amendments that have the potential to make the system more expensive and to waste money, we will have raised the cost of beef, raised the cost of bread and raised the cost of flour.

I urge Members on all sides of the House to reconsider the amendments and vote them down because they would have the effect of building inefficiencies into the system and, therefore, additional wasteful costs.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I find it interesting to follow the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes).

An Hon. Member: And pretty difficult.

Mr. Deans: It is easy to follow in the sense that I speak after him, but it is difficult to follow in the sense of understanding what he said.

I noticed with interest his comparison between our position taken in 1979 with regard to the budget of the then Conservative Government and the position we take today with regard to the amendments we have placed before the House.

I want to say something that I know you are well aware of, Mr. Speaker. The decision we took in 1979 was supported wholeheartedly by the people of Canada in February, 1980. The decision we are taking today will be supported wholeheartedly by the people of Canada for years to come. Unfortunately, because of the coalition that has developed between the Government and its Conservative allies, the chance that we will be able to implement what we consider to be a more rational approach to the administration and handling of grain, will not be allowed to occur. I am as positive today about the correctness of what we are doing in these particular amendments as I was about what we did in 1979 in our motion which spoke out clearly against what the Conservatives were trying to do to the country economically.

I want to reinforce that by saying that just as in February, 1980, the people of Canada expressed their opinion, which was exactly the same as ours, that the Conservatives should not be allowed to govern, today, given the opportunity to vote on these three amendments, they would rise en force and say to the Conservatives, "Get out of bed with the Liberals. This is an unholy alliance. You must stop this destruction of the West. We will vote against you on these matters."

I can think of nothing that makes more sense or is more logical than what we are proposing today. You know as I do, Mr. Speaker, that when you give one body authority over another self-regulating body, you just put a further impediment in the way of progress. It is clear to me that we have already established in law and in practice that when you have agencies that currently deal with the handling and disposition of wheat and other grains, but primarily the Wheat Board and the Grain Commission, when you have bodies which have operated as effectively and efficiently as they have over the years and which fully understand the complexities of the marketplace and have been able to develop procedures and processes to gain markets for the farmers of western Canada, the last thing you want is to superimpose another body to second guess them at every turn. But that is what the Government is proposing and that is why we are trying to stop it.

We have a history that goes back 100 years, more or less, of effective operations with regard to the Wheat Board for as long as it goes back and as far back as the old Canada Grain Act goes. Suddenly to come up with a program that would give one person the power to second guess this most efficient, effective group and give that person the right to decide whether it was doing its job in conformity with what is in the best interests of the Canadian farmer and of Canada as a whole as we continue to find markets for our products—to give that individual, whose primary purpose as set out in the Bill is to guarantee that there will be a grain transportation system, and his or her two or three employees the right to—

An Hon. Member: Twenty-five or 30.

Mr. Deans: My colleague says 25 or 30 employees—to give that person and those employees a mandate to begin the process of interfering in the extremely good work of the Grain Commission and the Wheat Board, makes no sense at all. I do not know what it is the Conservatives are talking about. For the life of me I cannot understand why they continuously rise and mumble into their beards about some sort of overseeing capacity that is necessary. Not a soul in western Canada believes that. Why they would align themselves with the scourge of the West, the Liberal Party, on this matter—why they would choose to creep into the still warm bed they just got out of last week in order to appease the Liberals in their squeeze for the destruction of the entire farming community, is beyond comprehension.

• (1600)

When I see what is going on here, I must ask why the Conservatives are doing this. The Conservatives almost gained respectability in the last three weeks by moving toward the position we have been putting forward ever since the Bill was introduced. The Conservatives have been sitting on the fence since the introduction of this Bill, never quite sure what position to adopt. Finally they decided that they would like to see the entire matter delayed for three years, which I quite frankly feel is not long enough. But at least it showed that they were moving in the right direction. When confronted with a most reasonable proposal, which we are now offering and which has been consistent with our view of this Bill from its introduction, they suddenly decide to jump ship and leap back into the sinking boat of the Liberal Party. That is beyond my understanding. The 62 per cent in the Gallup poll has clearly gone to their heads.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) always speaks to the topic and remains relevant. I am amazed that today he seems to be straying completely away from Motions No. 36, No. 37 and No. 38. I suggest he would be more in order if he could explain to the House why Dennis McDermott, President of the Canadian Labour Congress, has asked his Party to end their attempts to delay this legislation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member will have an opportunity to enter debate. That is not a point of order. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am grateful to you for putting him in his place. It would be better if he listened rather than spoke. I have been carefully setting out what we have been attempting to achieve. I wish to say that you well know, Mr. Speaker, that the President of the Canadian Labour Congress is in full support of our actions. What he did not understand was why the Government would not listen to reason. I also know that the President of the Canadian Labour Congress supports these sets of amendments in particular which we put forward. He stands four square behind us on these particular amendments.

What he is questioning, as I am today, is why the Government is so reluctant to accept these useful suggestions. We would like to complete this debate by putting forward a practical solution, and I will complete my part of it in two seconds. I suggest to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) that one small step toward finding that practical solution would certainly be the acceptance of these three amendments.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I believe Motions No. 36, No. 37 and No. 38 are very important in terms of curtailing the power of the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. I would rather see more power given to the farmers, their organizations and the Wheat Pools of this country through the Canadian Wheat Board. These organizations are very important indeed.

The three motions before us today seek to amend Clause 18 of Bill C-155. That clause defines the duties and functions of the Administrator. The Government opposite is attempting through this legislation to give considerable power to the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. One of those powers will be the authority to impose sanctions on participants in the grain transportation and hauling system in this country. The clause goes into considerable detail about the type of power the Administrator would have. It also allows the Administrator to make forecasts in the movement of grain and to ensure that all the participants in that system act appropriately. The Administrator will monitor not only the railway system but the other participants in the grain handling system as well. It seems to me that giving the Administrator so much power means that we are setting up another level of bureaucracy that will compete with other Government institutions which already exist. Therefore, one must ask, which institution will have the final say in various matters?

According to Clause 18, the Senior Grain Trnasportation Committee and the Administrator come under the authority of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). However, the Administrator will have the power to impose sanctions on the Canadian Wheat Board for which there is a Minister responsible. Presently, the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board is Senator Hazen Argue, who does not sit in this House but in the Senate. Therefore the Administrator who is answerable to the Minister of Transport will have the power to impose sanctions on the Wheat Board, which is represented by a different federal Minister. As well, there is the Canada Grain Commission, which is under the authority of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). According to this clause, the Administrator can impose sanctions and monitor the performance of the Canada Grain Commission. Therefore, we see another level of bureaucracy in which one Government agency will have the power to regulate two other Government agencies. In light of that, I am surprised that the Conservative Party does not support the motions moved by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Since Canadian farmers are very supportive of the Canadian Wheat Board, I believe it is important that we do not permit the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee to hold authority over the Wheat Board. I believe it is time for greater economic democracy in our country where ordinary farmers, in this case, can have more say over their work and the manner in which their grain is transported and sold. An example of this economic democracy is the Wheat Board Advisory Committee which is elected by the farmers and overwhelmingly supports the Canadian Wheat Board. Yet a majority of Members in the House support an agency that will have the power to impose sanctions on the Canadian Wheat Board. As a Member from a mixed farming area where the Wheat Board has much support, I do not want to give the Administrator, a bureaucrat who is not directly accountable to Members of Parliament, that kind of power.

While I wish the Conservatives would call for more economical democracy and freedom for the ordinary farmers of this land, the opposite is taking place as a result of this singular power being given to an Administrator.

Mr. Malone: Like Jack Horner.

Mr. Nystrom: It is like giving Jack Horner all that power in his new job as head of CN. The Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) is concerned about Jack Horner. That is why he should support Motions No. 36, No. 37 and No. 38.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), is suggesting that sanctions should only apply to the railway companies, the Jack Horners of the world in the CN and CP. If we are going to have the Grain Transportation Committee, then it should have the power to impose sanctions only on the rail line companies.

● (1610)

Mr. Malone: On the line.

Mr. Nystrom: We do have a Wheat Board and we do have a Grain Commission and we have farmers who are involved in the Wheat Board and in the UGG. Therefore, it is for reasons such as these that I think my friends in the Conservative Party should be very enthusiastic to lend their support to this particular motion before the House. I do not think there are any farmers in my riding who would support a Bill that would place the Canadian Wheat Board in a position which is subordinate to the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. We should be responding to the wishes of those farmers when we debate legislation in the House.

The three amendments before us—as I think everyone knows, but just to make it clear—would take away the ability of the Administrator to levy fines on any system participants, except for the two railway companies. I think that is very important. I have already mentioned the reasons that I think it is very important. The Administrator would not have the right, if we pass these motions before the House, to fine the Canadian Wheat Board, and it is the farmers' funds that are in the pool account in the Canadian Wheat Board. It is as if the Government through the Administrator imposed a fine on the farmers of this country, and I do not support that. I do not think the Conservative Party should be supporting that since many of their Members represent prairie ridings in Saskatchewan and elsewhere.

Mr. Malone: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: I see that we have now the conversion on the road to Damascus of the Hon. Member for Crowfoot. Perhaps he will convince his big city colleague, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) to support this very reasonable and very democratic amendment which will give the farmers a little more freedom and more liberty in our economic system in Canada.

Mr. Malone: Freedom to starve.

Mr. Blenkarn: This is nonsense.

Mr. Nystrom: The Conservative Party's Member from Toronto, who is an expert on the Prairies of course, says it is nonsense—

An Hon. Member: He is as great an expert as the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

Mr. Nystrom: —to make sure that the farmers have more freedom and more clout in the marketplace. I am sure my farmers will be very interested to hear that a Conservative Member from the big city of Toronto thinks they have too much power and authority and wants to impose another bureaucrat on the farmers to police them, to impose sanctions on them, to take money from them. That, Mr. Speaker, is not at all what I stand for in this House.

Mr. Blenkarn: You don't know what to stand for.

Mr. Nystrom: I think it is very important that this power be given to police the railways. In my riding we have all kinds of rail lines over which farmers have had trouble with the rail line companies. I think of a line that goes from Preeceville through Lintlaw, through Nut Mountain and on to Kelvington. I have met many times with farmers who live along that rail line and who have shown me how the rail line is not being kept up, how the tracks have been warped and how the trains when going down that line could go only at a few miles per hour. I can think of other rail lines in my constituency. I could name many, many examples of rail lines that have not been kept up properly by CN and CP. We all know that the two railways have immense power, in many ways they have absolute power over the future of some of these small communities. When a rail line goes, often the community goes as well.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his allotted time has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport, and Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38 (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I might draw to the attention of the House that while Motions Nos. 36, 37 and 38 have been grouped for debate, they are to be voted on separately.

All those in favour of Motion No. 36, will please say yea?

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

All those in favour of Motion No. 37, will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

All those in favour of Motion No. 38, will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Motions Nos. 39 and 40 will be grouped for debate but voted on separately.

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia) moved:

Motion No. 39

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 19 by adding immediately after line 20 at page 10 the following:

"(2) The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of producers."

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

Motion No. 40

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 19 by striking out lines 27 to 32 at page 10 and substituting the following therefor:

"(3) The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, or any Orders of the Governor in Council, to make available the quantities and types of grain needed to achieve sales commitments."

Mr. Gustafson: I am pleased to speak to Motion No. 39, which indeed was voted on in committee, opposed and defeated by the Liberals. I think any prairie boy who knows anything about the Canadian Wheat Board would stand in his place and defend a strong Canadian Wheat Board. The NDP, on the other hand, has tried to indicate that somehow or other the Conservatives were out to destroy the Canadian Wheat Board. Nothing could be further from the truth. We have heard this kind of talk again and again in the House.

● (1620)

When I ran in the riding of Assiniboia, I recall very clearly that in local newspaper ads one of the first points was a strong Canadian Wheat Board. Anyone who knows the history of the Prairies in the dirty thirties can go back to the time before the inception of the Canadian Wheat Board when there were some very difficult periods for farmers. Certainly prairie farmers depend on the Canadian Wheat Board, a strong Canadian Wheat Board. This is not to suggest that the Canadian Wheat Board has made no mistake. At times there have been questions and certainly there must continue to be improvements. However, this motion deals with the ability of the Administrator to undermine the Canadian Wheat Board. In part it reads:

—the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of producers.

The objectives of our Party are very clear. We have taken a balanced approach to the Bill and to the amendments we have put forward. We have made it clear in our amendments that we want a freeze, particularly relating to increased freight rates which farmers cannot afford. While we have made it clear that this is a bad Bill, at the same time we have tried to do everything possible and in the best interests of producers to have our amendments address problems faced by farmers and certainly serve in their best interests.

Motion No. 39 does exactly that. It speaks out and says that the Administrator does not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board. I would be very surprised if in the next few minutes I do not see Members of the New Democratic Party standing in their places and saying exactly the opposite. I want it clearly on the record that Motion No. 39 standing in my name indicates the direction of the Progressive Conservative Party.

Another important factor alluded to in the last paragraph of the motion is, "to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of producers". One problem producers and farmers will face in the near future will be competition in the international marketplace. The motion clearly indicates that the Administrator would in no way interfere with the best interests of primary producers. We talked in committee and in the House particularly about the types of subsidies granted by different countries around the world. These will certainly have an impact upon sales commitments. Also we talked about the subsidies granted by the European common market, by the United States of America and by countries like Japan and the Pacific Rim countries, which will create a special challenge. We believe the Canadian Wheat Board is up to this challenge, but in no way do we want restrictions on the part of the Administrator.

The wording in Motion No. 39 reads, "on behalf of, and in the interest of producers". We in the Progressive Conservative Party have displayed in our amendments a keen awareness of the situation on the Prairies. First is the ability to pay. Today I raised in the House the fact that the Minister had increased the initial price of barley but failed to do what he should have done, that is, increase the initial price of wheat, hard red wheat which is selling at 90 cents per bushel more today at Thunder Bay and Durum which is selling at $1.60 per bushel more at Thunder Bay than what farmers are receiving. The Minister is not acting in the best interests of primary producers. Here we have $1 per bushel which farmers cannot get their hands on. While it might be safe to say there is some flexibility, the truth of the matter is that farmers, particularly young farmers, are paying very high interest rates on money borrowed from the banks. Farmers' money is being held by the Government for a period of time, money which could be a source of cash flow they desperately need.

Another example would be western grain stabilization. There is $860 million in a fund which could be paid out to farmers, if the Government and the Minister had the will to make some slight changes in the direction of their administration. Motion No. 39 deals exactly with that type of direction. It allows the Canadian Wheat Board to act in the best interests of producers. It is important that this be done. This is why I am pleased to rise in my place and put forward this motion. I hope the NDP will support it, not misinterpret it and try to go the full cycle and be on both sides of the fence. I hope Members of that Party do not try to create the contortion they have in the past.

I see Mr. Speaker is rising. Is my time up?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May the Hon. Member continue with unanimous consent of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I compliment the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) on his motion. I suspect it is not his fault that it is in the wrong place and is insufficiently worded. His motion and mine attempt, in a slightly different way, to accomplish the same objective.

I find it interesting that the Tories want a regulator regulating another regulator, namely the Canadian Wheat Board. They support the idea that the Administrator can put sanctions on the Canadian Wheat Board. In the next breath, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia comes up with his motion, all for motherhood and against sin, in favour of the Canadian Wheat Board.

● (1630)

The Hon. Member made the mistake of using the word "contortion". The Tories have exercised all of the proverbial positions. In the committee and in this House we have had a litany of Tory attacks on orderly marketing through the Canadian Wheat Board. We witnessed that until they got into trouble. As soon as they started getting static from the folks back home, they flopped. They made an attack on the co-operative movement. They are the birds who moved amendments, supported by Liberals. To do what? To reduce the representation of the Wheat Pools.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I call the attention of the Hon. Member to the fact that debate at report stage should be strictly relevant to the debate before us.

Mr. Benjamin: I mentioned earlier how they flopped. Now with Motion No. 39 they have flipped. They flopped in the previous motions so that the Canadian Wheat Board could be sanctioned and have producers' money used up by some other agency of the Crown. Now they have flipped with one for the Canadian Wheat Board. They flipped and flopped in committee and earlier in this House on the Canadian Wheat Board and the co-operative movement.

Much has been said about accountability and authority. My motion asks that nothing interfere with the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act or any orders of the Governor in Council to make available the quantity and types of grain needed to achieve sales commitments. The words "and in the interests of producers" at the tail end of the motion of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia is fine because that is already the mandate of the Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act. The Board operates only in the interests of the grain producers and no one else. If the Member wants to add those words, I am agreeable.

Today I received some words of support for what we are trying to do. They came from the President of the Canadian Labour Congress. He supports the position we have taken. He supports the retention of the statutory grain rate for grain producers, the rebuilding of railways lines and the taking of equity ownership for any capital investment into railways upgrading. That person speaks on behalf of two million workers in this country. He is enunciating a policy resolution of the Canadian Labour Congress and the 100-odd unions which belong to it.

I have been particularly saddened listening to the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski). I have always thought highly of him. I still do, but it bothers me and, I am sure, many other of his good friends to listen to him and his colleagues continually crying and whining about 1979. They are the guys who manufactured their own defeat. They are the dummies who, with a minority Government, said they were going to govern as if they had a majority. That has to be the dumbest thing that anybody in politics has said since Charles II lost his head. Now they are whining and crying. They have no class. They do not know how to win well, they do not know how to lose well—no class.

The Hon. Member for Assiniboia talked about their keen awareness. Their awareness was not so keen in committee when they voted to weaken the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board, when they supported the Liberals. They brought in amendments to weaken the powers of the Wheat Board. Now they are keenly aware. They have Motion No. 39 of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia. The Progressive Conservative Party, like the Liberal Party, is in favour of killing the statutory Crowsnest Pass freight rate. They still support that.

The Hon. Member for Vegreville is trying to cover their political backsides by saying "Let us not do it for three years because we may have an election out of the way by then". They have yet to come out opposed to the destruction of the statutory grain rates for our grain producers. They support that destruction. The architect of the legislation is a guy that the Hon. Member for Vegreville hired when he was Minister of Transport. He is the architect of the legislation. The Tories support the killing of the statutory grain rate.

We will vote for the Conservative Motion No. 39, but my Motion No. 40 does better. It contains the wording asked for by the Canadian Wheat Board when its officials appeared before the Committee on Transport. Mr. Esmond Jarvis, the Chief Commissioner, appeared before the committee and cited what should be in the Bill by way of an amendment. That is my motion, not this namby-pamby motherhood notion of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia, who is trying to cover his tracks in a riding where 90 per cent of the people support the orderly marketing principle of the Canadian Wheat Board. He is in favour of an Administrator being able to sanction the Wheat Board and being able to fine the Wheat Board, such fine to be paid with grain producers' money.

On one page of these motions the Tories want to undermine and weaken the Canadian Wheat Board; on the next page of these motions, they are keenly aware. Isn't that interesting. When it comes to contortions, they make the people of Asia look like amateurs. The most expert people in the world on stage and on screen when it comes to physical contortions are those from East Asia. However, when it comes to politial contortion, this Tory outfit puts everybody else to shame. This outfit is all over the lot. I wish they would quit crying and moaning about things of their own doing. They should quit trying to blame everybody else for their own errors of commission and omission. They should give up on this blatant, crass political opportunism in trying to save their neck in the Prairies. They are doing this because they attacked and continue to support the weakening of the Canadian Wheat Board. They attack, then frantically try to cover their tracks. They are busier than a cat on a tin roof. When they realize what kind of trouble they are in, they want to put the representation back on for the wheat pools. They have flopped and flipped and flipped and flopped repeatedly since this legislation was introduced in May. We will vote for Motion No. 39, but No. 40 is better. Motion No. 40 complies with what is needed by the Canadian Wheat Board in the best interests of grain producers. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that when we get to Motion No. 40 on a deferred vote, I will see the Conservative Members voting for a motion that is better located, better worded and will perhaps help them improve upon their flip-flopping. I am all for helping them if they will help get more protection for the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, it is rather entertaining for me to see Hon. Members of the NDP on the run. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) has stooped to the lowest of all lows. I suppose that if I were a Member of a Party that stood at 14 per cent in the polls, I would use every act of desperation as well.

The fact of the matter is that Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party continue to make fools of themselves. They have lost their credibility here in the Chamber and I suspect that they are losing it very quickly out there in the country as well. The NDP is the Party that was going to stonewall and obstruct and kill this Bill. What do we see now? We see this Party bringing forward 174 amendments to try to improve the Bill. They were not too successful because they stretched the point a little bit.

Only 46 of those 109 motions were found in order and 64 of them were simply frivolous motions that made no sense. As a matter of fact, a good portion of those motions were what I would refer to as musical clauses. All that the NDP Members were proposing to do was to move a clause from one section of the Bill to another section. They were playing the game of musical clauses and trying to convince the people that they were really digging in for an all-out fight. It was simply frivolous though, Mr. Speaker.

The fact is that this issue is one that is too important to be dealt with in the frivolous manner employed by Hon. Members of the NDP. This issue is too important simply to stonewall, block or propose frivolous amendments in order to engage in innocuous debate. The issue simply goes beyond the responsibility of all Members of the House.

Quite frankly, the Hon. Member suggested that we were prepared to accept sanctions as applied against the Canadian Wheat Board. The Hon. Member should know very well that our Party moved an amendment in committee which now stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight) to remove sanctions as applied to system participants other than the railways. The Hon. Member for Regina West thought that it was a pretty good idea when it was brought up in committee and he supported it. He moved that amendment here and it will be dealt with. I could say to him that our Motion No. 44 is considerably better than his Motion No. 38. Quite frankly, we are glad to have him on board.

The other thing that the Hon. Member for Regina West has suggested is that we in committee were trying to take away and undermine the integrity and the power of the Wheat Board, and that now here in the House we are trying to do something different. I only draw to the attention of the House and of the people who may be watching today the fact that it is clearly on record that the Hon. Member for Regina West agreed to support this very same amendment that we are dealing with right now. I will read from page 129:31 of the committee's Proceedings and Evidence where the Hon. Member for Regina West is reported to have said:

> If Mr. McKnight's amendment covers the ground that I am concerned about as well as any ground he is concerned about, I will be quite happy to withdraw mine and move his in. But I need more out of our legal counsel and our officials.

The legal counsel to the committee, Mr. Keith Thompson, said, as reported at page 129:36 of the committee's Proceedings and Evidence:

> What is important to the farmers, of course, is the ultimate ability of the Wheat Board to sell. Without that, there would be no movement of the product.
> So in my opinion, these final three lines of this particular proposal capture the essence for the existence of the Wheat Board and identify its principal functions.

That was said by the committee's legal counsel. We should not have to hear any namby-pamby suggestions from the Hon. Member for Regina West which would indicate that we were moving amendments deliberately to undermine the role of the Wheat Board. As a matter of fact, the thrust of the amendment is simply to do just the opposite.

There is absolutely no doubt, Mr. Speaker, that the Canadian Wheat Board is an institution that enjoys broad based support in western Canada. It enjoys the broad based support of the farmers who produce grain and who want to market their grain at a price that will give them a reasonable return for their investment and for their efforts. Very simply put, this motion seeks to reaffirm that fact.

As the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) pointed out, there are criticisms of the Canadian Wheat Board. There are some farmers who are not always happy with it, but fair, just and constructive criticism certainly has a place. Some farmers do not like the fact the commissioners are appointed at pleasure for a period of time until they reach the age of 70. We talk about accountability and there are some farmers who do not really like that. However, in the final analysis, the farmers line up in support of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party, like a herd of fox terriers, have always tried to make the case that any improvements that are advanced by anyone in an attempt to make the system more efficient, responsive and reliable are simply undermining the Canadian Wheat Board or the Canadian Grain Commission. If we were to follow the NDP strategy, we would surely be moving grain with horse and buggy and we would have elevators every five or six miles.

Such has been the case with the Administrator. Members of the New Democratic Party, the membership of the pools and some other farm organizations used the same fear tactics, innuendo and hysteria when we talked about the introduction of the grain transport co-ordinator when that office was set up in 1979. My goodness gracious, we were going to undermine the Canadian Wheat Board and the whole concept of orderly marketing. Everything was going to go out the window. What did happen, Mr. Speaker? The fact is that when the GTA was set up, it was the best thing that ever happened because it prevented the Canadian Wheat Board from getting involved in all of the little dog fights that occurred with respect to the allocation between Board and non-Board grains. As a matter of fact, if anything, Mr. Speaker, it enhanced the integrity of the Canadian Wheat Board. Members of the Canadian Wheat Board will say that privately and publicly.

This kind of a transportation agency must be a neutral body. It must act as sort of a referee bringing all parties together and ensuring that when there is a breakdown, the onus or blame is laid upon the right party. At the very least, that cuts out the finger-pointing and it gets people talking and working together rather than fighting through the issuance of statements in the press.

The role of the Administrator must be clear. He must have a clear mandate and he should have adequate resources to do the job. The Agency must be responsive to the needs of the grain handling and transportation industry and it must have accountability to that industry. There is no question about that. It must be equipped to deal effectively with the grain producers' concerns in order to ensure that the transportation system serves the interests of the producers effectively. It must also have the necessary stature to deal with the transportation system on an equal footing with all other participants. These are the kinds of things that are required. That is why, when we reviewed the development of this particular concept in the form of this legislation, it became quite clear that the agricultural organizations in western Canada felt that the concept of the grain transportation co-ordinator or, as it is now called, the GTA, was working well. There was broad agreement between all organizations in western Canada.

Members of the Canadian Wheat Board itself, in their presentation to the committee on August 18, 1983, said that the current system with the GTA making the initial splits in car allocations has not become too cumbersome, and they went on to say that it is working well. Hon. Members of the NDP say that there is no one in western Canada who supports the concept of the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator. Well, I shall read from page 14 of the brief presented by the pools:

> The Pools accept the formal establishment of a Grain Transportation Agency Administrator with co-ordinating functions and powers.

There it is. That group speaks for a hundred and some thousand farmers. The United Grain Growers speaks for some 90,000 farmers. They all support the concept of the grain transportation agency co-ordinator. What are Hon. Members of the NDP harping about, Mr. Speaker? They are again simply trying to spread fear, innuendo and hysteria.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that when we as a Government set up the concept of the grain transportation co-ordinator, or Administrator as the position is now called, it was never our intention to undermine the integrity, the role or the power of the Canadian Wheat Board. That has not happened to date and, I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, it will not happen in the future. In order to ensure that it does not happen in the future, we have proposed this motion which will ensure that it does not happen so that there can be absolutely no doubt and no question about our intentions. There should be absolutely no question and no doubt as to where we stand and where the producers stand in so far as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned. Let that be fundamentally clear. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I hope that in spite of the flim-flammery which we have heard from it, the New Democratic Party will join forces with the Conservative Party to support the integrity and the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board. We welcome its support.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Saskatoon East.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon West): West. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you are sitting in your chair wondering—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Saskatoon West, of course.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Saskatoon West. East is east and west is west. I am from the West.

You may be asking yourself the question, Mr. Speaker, what is the essence of this debate in terms of this amendment and, indeed, almost every other amendment which has been brought forward, in terms of this legislation? It is extremely important legislation as far as all Canadians are concerned, but is of particular concern and interest to us in western Canada. I know you will be bemused, Mr. Speaker, over the fact that the debate is taking place on this side of the House. There are differences of opinion which are being expressed between the New democratic Party and the Conservative Party, and sometimes we agree. However, it is really distressing, when we have an important statement of principle put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), that this legislation shall not in any way have a negative impact upon the operations of the Wheat Board, having as it does such influence on western Canada, that Government benches are absolutely mute. Not a word is being said by those Hon. Members. They have no interest in this legislation. Any time anyone gets up and addresses this issue with respect to western Canada, the Government benches are absolutely quiet. Those Hon. Members sit there and watch. They listen. They attempt to suggest that if we speak on behalf of our constituents in western Canada about the importance of the Wheat Board, that somehow—to put it in the words of an Hon. Member on the Government benches—we are filibustering. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, and the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen), that they will have precious little comfort when the people of western Canada discover the arrogant way in which the Liberals address this important legislation. That Party has not a thing to say. Where does it stand in connection with the Wheat Board? What is its position? I may disagree entirely with the New Democratic Party but I know where it stands—at least I know where it stands today.

I suppose the position taken by the Liberal Government is simply this; it really does not have to participate because its allies are speaking on its behalf. In western Canada there is a question which is asked, "What do you get when you add 23 per cent to 14 per cent?" The answer in western Canada is that you get the old Liberal-NDP coalition. That is what one finds if one looks at the Gallup poll. When it comes to Wheat Board issues or matters pertaining to western Canada, the Liberals know they have their allies to support and sustain them in government on every important issue. It is understandable, I suppose, that Hon. Members opposite are not speaking.

I would like to deal with the essence of what has been said here. This matter came up in committee. It is a question of looking at the amendment which was put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia. There were all sorts of legal advice which committee members received about the precise way in which this legislation should be put. The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) makes reference to his motion No. 40, which states:

The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act—

The Hon Member says that is a superior protection for the Wheat Board. I know we had the benefit of legal counsel but, quite frankly, I like the unequivocal way in which it was put by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia. He has not limited the matter. He has said, "This legislation shall not impinge negatively on the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board." He does refer to one section. He does not refer to one subsection of the legislation. He says that we in this Party, unlike the New Democratic Party, are behind the Canadian Wheat Board 100 per cent. We are not behind them with respect to just Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act. We want every power, either those stated as law or those determined by the courts of this land, supported, if it comes down to a contest between this legislation and the powers of the Wheat Board. It is very simple. We believe in putting things in very simple form. The matter was raised in those very terms by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight). These people have been working on that committee for very long hours. Much attention has been paid to give support to the Canadian Wheat Board. They attempted to deal with this legislation in a responsible manner and attempted to bring forward constructive suggestions. Hon. Members, such as the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) and the Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek (Mr. Hamilton), who were prominent with respect to this legislation, are Members of the Conservative Party. If it were not for the Hon. Member for Regina West, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) and the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo), the New Democratic Party would have had no representation on that committee. Therefore there are no lectures needed in this House from the NDP as to whether our Members are flip-flopping. As far as we in this Party are concerned, we say what we mean to the western Canadian citizens and the farmers. They understand straight talk. They understand when we make an unequivocal statement in support of the Canadian Wheat Board in this legislation. We do not have to couch it in equivocal terms. We do not have to refer to a section of the Canadian Wheat Board Act. We simply say that we support it absolutely, categorically and without equivocation. That, Mr. Speaker, is understood.

I would like to refer to some of the complaints made by the Hon. Member for Regina West with respect to this matter. The Hon. Member said that there was some concern in his Party with respect to the pools and how supportive the New Democratic Party has been for the Wheat Pools and the producer-owned grain companies in western Canada. I blanched, quite frankly, when I heard those statements, because I sat through the hearings in my native Province of Saskatchewan. We sat long hours, from 9 a.m. to midnight every day, and I was proud to be able to sit with my colleagues and try to come to terms with what people were telling us. Anyone who wants to read the transcripts of what transpired at those hearings in Regina will find an unadulterated tirade against the Wheat Pool movement by Hon. Members in the New Democratic Party. It was unceasing and consistent. That Party was up every day, with every one of the witnesses, attacking the Wheat Pools, attacking the whole purpose of the Wheat Pools in Saskatchewan, attacking the delegate system, attacking every fabric of the Wheat Pool movement in western Canada to the point where I could hardly believe it. The CCF Party, which was so supportive, now apparently has changed its tune because it is now apparently under the direction of the CLC and Mr. McDermott. The Hon. Member for Regina West was always talking about how proud he was to be able to reflect the position of the CLC with respect to this legislation.

I tell you, Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that it is hard to believe that the NDP has sunk to the position it has now when one thinks back with a certain amount of pride, as a western Canadian, to the principles which were behind the evolution, the creation of the CCF Party. What has happened to that Party now? What has happened to the New Democratic Party? The fact is that it is prepared to support the Liberals as any cost. Any time the Government is in any trouble at all, it always has its western wing there ready to support it. This is of very serious concern, and when we hear the kind of attack which the Hon. Member for Regina West attempted to launch on this particular amendment, we see how desperate that Party is. It does not give us the exact truth. In fact, it makes statements with respect to the position of our Party which are contrary to the truth.

• (1700)

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise and speak on Motions Nos. 39 and 40. As has been pointed out before, they are somewhat the same although the wording is different. As I suppose is to be expected, the NDP motion is stronger and much more supportive of the Canadian Wheat Board. I guess we can say that the NDP has been consistent all the way through this Bill in its protection of the Board at every opportunity. I suppose we also could say that the Liberal-Conservative coalition has been consistent in weakening both the Wheat Board and the Prairie Pools. The Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) heavily attacked the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) on subjects he never brought up in his speech or presentation at all. Methinks they protest too much.

These motions deal with the need to protect the Wheat Board, something we should not have had to discuss in this particular Bill. Unfortunately, orderly marketing is not a central belief of either the Conservative or Liberal Parties and they are quite willing to attack and weaken it whenever they possibly can.

The Canadian Wheat Board is probably one of the most accountable agencies in Canada. The money used to operate it comes entirely from the producers, not a cent from the Government of Canada. It produces an annual report which is delivered to the farmers in every community concerned. Members of the Board fan out and speak to farmers in communities in all parts of the prairie Provinces. As I said, these kinds of motions should not have been necessary, but they are because the other Parties have coalesced to weaken the Wheat Board and they decided that the Administrator will have more power than the Wheat Board.

Mr. McDermid: You know that is not true and you do not believe it.

Mr. Hovdebo: I hope the Conservative Party will vote against Motion No. 39 and vote for Motion No. 40 because it covers the area better than Motion No. 39.

In this area of grain transportation, Mr. Speaker, we have a combination of statutes, regulations and Orders in Council which are administered by different entities. Therefore, it is necessary to protect certain things in this Bill which we know are the responsibility of certain agencies. In this case we need to protect the Canadian Wheat Board and, in the same clause but not in these amendments, the Canadian Grain Commission. Right now the Governor in Council, under this Bill, can change the powers of the Canadian Grain Commission, the Canadian Wheat Board and the grain transportation coordinator. He can take powers from the Canadian Wheat Board and give them to the Administrator, take them from the Administrator and give them to the Grain Commission. Therefore, it is necessary to take an amendment like that presented by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), and put it in the Bill to protect the existing powers of these agencies. But as the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West said, the wording of Motion No. 39 is so broad, it does not really protect those powers. We need to say that the powers are protected as they exist in the Canadian Wheat Board Act, not just broadly protected because that does not specifically say they are protected in the way we would like to see them protected.

The intent of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, is basically, and I suppose inevitably, an attempt to allocate to the railways the right of return in the movement of cars, but it does not establish how those cars will be allocated. At present that is done by the Wheat Board with the assistance of the Grain Transportation Administrator, who has the right to interfere or adjust to some extent. However, I think we should go back, as did the Hon. Member for Vegreville, to the presentation made by the Canadian Wheat Board Commissioner. Here we have a very good example of selective quotations by the Hon. Member for Vegreville because I am going to read the same quotation he read except I will read another line. Mr. Jarvis said:

> "It is an economic fact in the grain industry . . . transportation and sales are inextricably linked; but transportation must effectively serve sales needs. The current system with the GTA making the initial splits in cars has not become too cumbersome. But a danger exists. Policy makers—and we say this to you—should be very careful in not separating further the vital link between transportation and sales.

The implication is that we cannot take the allocation of cars away from the Canadian Wheat Board. We must protect that power of the Wheat Board and do it in every way we can. The Canadian Wheat Board Advisory Committee also made a presentation to the Standing Committee on Transport and said exactly the same thing, if not in exactly the same words. Mr. Gibbings, who had just completed about 12 years or 15 years as a Wheat Board Commissioner and who was before that the President of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, also stated that:

> It is imperative that grain sales and grain transportation not be separated. The Canadian Wheat Board must be able to arrange the transportation of its own product or it cannot fulfil its obligations to western grain producers or their customers overseas. The board's marketing success, meaning sales success, depends on its ability to make day-by-day or even hour-by-hour decisions on grain movement. Its flexibility must not be compromised.

● (1710)

These agencies, which know what is going on in the movement of grain across the country, and know that we have been the most successful country in the world in terms of moving grain considering our most difficult circumstances, all say that we must leave the power with the Canadian Wheat Board. It is therefore very important that the best of these two amendments be passed.

As I mentioned earlier, I hope the Conservative Party will look at the two motions and choose the best one to protect the producers of the West. There are no ifs and buts about it.

The legislation is designed to gather, under a new agency, the power and authority presented and exercised by the Canadian Wheat Board. What we must do is to make sure that the powers that make the Wheat Board successful are not undermined by this legislation.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the common effect of these two motions is to enshrine in Bill C-155 the current role of the Canadian Wheat Board with respect to car allocation. In Motion No. 39, proposed by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), there appears the following phrase:

> —to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments—

It is not clear whether such a responsibility is already defined in the Canadian Wheat Board Act, nor is it entirely clear what the legal intent of the phrase is. It may be an attempt to preserve the Wheat Board's responsibilities with respect to the block shipping system. However, the block shipping system is not mentioned in the Canadian Wheat Board Act.

Motion No. 40, put forward by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) would have the effect of preventing the Governor in Council from determining what agency of the Government should have the power to allocate cars.

I should like to remind those Hon. Members who sat on the Transport Committee and the two movers of these motions that to Clause 19 we added subclause (3), which reads as follows:

> The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act respecting the purchasing and selling of grain.

To an amendment proposed by the Opposition, the Government added a subamendement which resulted in subclause (3) of Clause 19. We feel that it is a great improvement to the Bill and pretty well covers the intent of Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40. We therefore do not feel that those motions are necessary at this stage of the Bill and we will vote against them.

Subclause (3) of Clause 19 was drafted in parallel with subclause (2) of Clause 19, which reads as follows:

> The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Grain Commission under the Canada Grain Act respecting the handling of grain in elevators.

Those two subclauses clearly cover the intent of Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40, and therefore I do not feel those motions are required at this stage. If they were accepted they might cause confusion and might be interpreted as restricting the power of the Governor in Council under another Act to give the new grain transportation Administrator the responsibility for car allocation. I know the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) would not want this as I believe he and his Party created the position of the Grain Transportation Agency Administrator.

For these reasons we will vote against Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40, but I thank Hon. Members for bringing them forward.

This afternoon I have listened very intently and I think it has been a very productive afternoon. We disposed of four amendments with very brief debate. This is the kind of co-operation that we had in committee. There was a spirit of co-operation and bargaining in good faith. Because of that spirit, we accepted 89 amendments in committee, including that to Clause 19(3) which pretty well covers the intent of Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40.

Sensing this spirit of co-operation, I would seek the unanimous consent of the House to sit extended hours in order to conclude debate of report stage of Bill C-155. We have had a very productive afternoon. This is the kind of productivity and co-operation that we saw in committee. If we could extend this kind of co-operation and debate in good spirit by extending the hours, I think we could get a lot accomplished. The constituents who elected all of us would be very proud of this attempt to increase productivy. At a time when we are asking Canadians, farmers and industry to increase productivity, I think this would be a sign that we too are tightening our belts and want to increase productivity.

In that spirit of good faith—

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) on a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, as a point of order, I do not know whether the Hon. Member has been in consultation with the Government House Leader; I have. I am here now waiting for our critic on agriculture. He has consulted me regarding the provisions of the Standing Order which would impose limitations on debate. We are going to consider the request of the Government House Leader with respect to the limitations that he has proposed.

I can say to the Hon. Member that those considerations and those discussions under the Standing Order providing for limitation of debate would be shot down in flames if he were to make any motion now with respect to extending hours. I have given my undertaking to the Government House Leader, and I will call him back this afternoon as soon as I have had the opportunity to speak to our critic, the Hon. Member for Vegreville, to see if we can meet the suggestion made by the Government House Leader. It would be totally self-defeating if any motion to extend hours were to occur in the middle of those negotiations.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Who is in charge over there?

Mr. Friesen: There are three of them.

Mr. Blaikie: Take one stooge at a time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I want to indicate that the House has a motion before it which is faulty in that I would require a seconder for it. In any event, the House has also heard a point of order from the Hon. Member for Yukon. I see that certain Hon. Members want to rise on the point of order and I think it is proper that I hear those Hon. Members. I will recognize next the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans).

• (1720)

Mr. Nielsen: The Chair recognized me before the motion was moved.

Mr. Evans: I believe I have the floor, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member was not trying to move a motion under Standing Order 30; he was simply saying that if there were unanimous consent perhaps it would be possible to extend the hours. But it was clear that the Hon. Member knew the provisions of Standing Order 30 and specifically did not move a motion under Standing Order 30.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I want to make it very clear that I did not move any motion, nor did I intend to move any motion. I made it very clear that I sense the same kind of co-operation and spirit of good faith that I felt in committee and based on that, I simply asked for an extended sitting so that we can be as productive as we were this afternoon when we disposed of four amendments.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I am not sure what is happening. I will simply indicate that I thought I heard the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary move a motion indicating a desire for extended hours. I also recognized the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). I would say that even though the Hon. Member for Yukon was speaking off the microphone, both he and I recognize that the motion by the Parliamentary Secretary had a certain fault in it, if it was a motion.

I think we are reaching a point where it may not be appropriate to continue. Apparently the Parliamentary Secretary, who made certain comments just now, indicates that he was not moving a motion. In that case, there is no motion. Would the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary like to continue his remarks in debate but not on a point of order?

Mr. Flis: Your ruling is correct. I was seeking unanimous consent of the House, not moving any motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): If the Parliamentary Secretary was seeking unanimous consent, I can only presume he was doing so on a motion.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This seems to reflect what is really wrong with our country. The Government cannot gets its act together.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. We are having some difficulty with the House of Commons, let alone the country. Perhaps the Hon. Member would come to his point of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I agree that the first statement was somewhat gratuitous but it was accurate. I would like to get clarification. My House Leader says that there are certain consultations going on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is a tradition, if I may call it that, that the House pays particular attention to those Hon. Members who may represent their Party on either side of the House, such as in the moments gone by, the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Evans) or the Hon. House Leader for the Official Opposition (Mr. Nielsen), as well as others.

I do not believe we should add to that. Unless certain of those Party spokesmen may wish to rise and claim the floor on a point of order, I think I should recognize the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) in debate. If I see Hon. Member who wishes to comment on a point of order with respect to his Party's position, of course I will hear that Hon. Member.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: I do not think we should complicate matters, Mr. Speaker. It is quite simple. I have been informed that the Parliamentary Secretary has merely asked unanimous consent for extending the sitting hours of the House beyond the normal time of adjournment so as to complete debate at the report stage.

I submit, with respect, that all the Chair has to do is ask whether there is unanimous consent. If there is not, that settles the matter. The Hon. Member said he did not want to move a motion.

When I came in I heard the Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) say that I had asked him to discuss agreeing, under Standing Orders 80 and 81, to time allocation for debate. That has nothing to do with sitting beyond the normal time of adjournment. If Hon. Members object, they are free to do so, but I certainly do not deny the right of the Parliamentary Secretary to ask for the unanimous consent of the House.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Nor do I wish to deny the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary that right. If he wishes to seek unanimous consent, as far as I know, the best way he can do that is by a motion. He can either use his time on his feet to debate or to seek unanimous consent. It is his choice.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, that is all that I was seeking. I was not seeking permission to extend debate. I had finished debate. I said that in conclusion I am seeking unanimous consent of the House to extend the sitting hours so that we can complete the report stage of this Bill. That is all I seek, unanimous consent to extend the sitting hours.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): In that case, I hear the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary seeking unanimous consent, seconded by Mr. Burghardt.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, surely you are putting a question which must be in the form of a motion in writing. If we are going to seek consent on whatever you might have, we would like to see it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I must answer the Hon. Member for Yukon. It is the tradition of the House that a motion should be put in writing and read by the Chair. If the Hon. Member for Yukon wants that formality, I will insist upon it.

Mr. Nielsen: The Standing Orders require it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I understand that. However, normally the House proceeds day to day without the absolute formality of a written notice. On the other hand, the Hon. Member for Yukon has asked that that formality be observed. Accordingly, I will require notice in writing of the motion proposed by the Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to increase the productivity of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blenkarn: You have done a good job.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): What I now require from the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary is a notice in writing. Unless the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary stands to withdraw the motion—then I get into other procedural difficulties as well.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, since it is very clear that the Opposition is there just to filibuster, I withdraw my request.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Unfortunately, it is not a request, it is a motion. I do not have it either.

I might be inclined to suggest that to withdraw the motion unanimous consent is required, but since I never received the motion I do not think that I need unanimous consent to ask that it be withdrawn. May we continue in debate.

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, you will forgive me if I, as a newcomer, confess that some of the proceedings in the last few moments have left me somewhat confused. I certainly would not expect Members to my left to be confused by events before the House.

I was working very diligently in my office while listening to the debate at the same time. I heard some comments from the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) with respect to the debate which has been taking place on this Bill in the last few months with respect to the Crow as well as on the history of the Canadian Wheat Board. I felt it was important to express my views on this issue, particularly bearing in mind that this issue was discussed to some degree during the recent byelection in Brandon-Souris last spring. At that time we had ample opportunity to discuss this very important issue before the electorate of western Canada. We also had an opportunity at that time to have the electorate of western Canada express their opiniion on the issue before them. Some Members of this House were present at that byelection and participated in the campaign. One of the points I want to make very clear to you, Mr. Speaker, and to Members of the House is that the Progressive Conservative Party since the very beginning of that byelection, which takes us back to the early months of this year, expressed sincere and severe doubts about the legislation presented by the Government of the day, particularly with respect to the farmers' ability to pay for the transportation costs, which were hopefully to be improved by the legislation, and that share of the cost passed on to the farmer. During the course of that byelection there was considerable discussion in which I and other Members who campaigned on my behalf took part about the need to protect the farmer from being held accountable for an undue proportion of the transportation costs. Even before the Government talked in terms of introducing an amendment, described as a safety net of some 10 per cent of the costs to be paid to the farmer, we were talking in that byelection about the need to protect the farmer and I was proposing a safety net of some 7 per cent. That figure of 7 per cent was selected because that has been the historic average which the farmer has paid in the last quarter century. Having considered the evidence presented to the committee during the course cf the summer months, we on this side of the House have come to the conclusion that the farmer is unable at this time to pay the kind of money the Government is asking for. We have decided, and it seems very appropriately so, that any increase in farmers' costs must be delayed for a certain period of time and for the very minimum of three years.

I think it is very important for Members of the House and for the public at large to understand that the Progressive Conservative Party has been very consistent in questioning the ability of farmers to pay the amount of money which the Liberal Government was asking of them. We have been very concerned that this historic right, which has been viewed by the farmers of western Canada as a historic right, must not be destroyed in any haphazard manner. It is material that this House go on record as recognizing the question of the ability of the farmer to pay and recognize the concern we have expressed for several months. It is also important that the House and the public at large understand those of us who were involved in any way in the western Canadian grain industry and that we in the Progressive Conservative Party recognize the importance of the Wheat Board as an ongoing part of the marketing system that must be preserved.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the Wheat Board was developed in Canada in a series of stages. It had its beginning during the period of World War I and then more recently, of course, in the depression of the 1930s. We in this Party are very proud of the part which the Government of the day, the R. B. Bennett Government, played in the development of the Canadian Wheat Board in the 1930s. At that time it was the central selling agency. Eventually, it became the Wheat Board as we know it. We have done everything we can throughout the years in which we have had some responsibility to preserve the importance of the Wheat Board and to guarantee that it will be an ongoing part of the western Canadian grain industry.

It would be fair to say that the activities of the Wheat Board and the powers of the Wheat Board were very much enhanced during the period of time in which the Hon. Member for Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain (Mr. Hamilton) had the responsibility for administering the agricultural concerns of western Canada. I think it is important this is recognized, and we reaffirm it over and over again because there are those in this House who would attempt to take the opportunity to confuse the electorate and to suggest that we, as a Party, would do something to weaken the Wheat Board. I wish to say unequivocally that I and other Members of this Party recognize the importance of the Wheat Board, and even though we recognize that there are some deficiencies, it has played a very important part in the history of western Canada and will continue to do so.

It is therefore most important that the amendment in Motion No. 39 be supported, because it indicates that the Wheat Board's authority will not in any way be impaired by the role of the Administrator. It is that point I wish to make at this time and it is with those remarks that I conclude.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is the House ready for the question?

The Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin.

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in support of the motion moved of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). The words of this motion are very important. I recall that when we were in Government we set up the office of co-ordinator. I was one of the members of the task force who set up the rules and regulations by which that co-ordinator should act. It was never the intention at that time or at this time that the co-ordinator—or the Administrator as the position is now called—would in any way inhibit the Canadian Wheat Board's powers. It was felt there was a need at that time for a person or an organization in place that would assist the Canadian Wheat Board in allocating powers.

We have a very complicated system that has developed in the delivery of grain in the West. We have the Wheat Board grains and we have off-Board grains. Some of the latter are delivered to agents of the Wheat Board and sold under its auspices. Others, such as oilseeds, are sold by farmers directly through producer cars or sold through agents of the Wheat Boards, the pools, the UGG and Pioneer to be delivered to ports by those agencies.

It seemed to us at that time that the Canadian Wheat Board would find itself in a dilemma as to whom to allocate cars. For example, if it had just sold a large quantity of grain to a customer and ships were arriving, would it allocate cars for that type of grain and at the same time jeopardize a much needed feeding requirement, say, in eastern Canada or B.C.? How would it make its decision at cross purposes with itself?

We felt at that time it would be in order to create a body or a person which we called a co-ordinator, now called the GTA, who would take into account all these various problems and make a decision as to which elevator, which line, would get the cars that were required.

A problem has also developed in certain areas. Perhaps the cars have been allocated on past experience of that line. For example, if the Alberta Wheat Pool on a specific branch line has been receiving so many cars per week over the last year, then it would be very easy to give them the same number of cars per week in the coming year. Perhaps a farm co-operative or another elevator company, a private company, has built an elevator on that line and farmers, concluding that that facility can provide better service to them, decided to make deliveries to the new elevator instead of the one on the line as in the past. This has been the problem in the past because one company is receiving cars based on tradition on that line and another company which is new is not getting sufficient cars to meet the demand coming on that line.

It is very difficult, then, if we do not have a body set up that is in tune with the allocation of cars day by day, to get some redress to this problem. I remember very well the people at Weyburn, Saskatchewan, who built a high through-put elevator with the ability to provide cleaning services and had the spot of 25 cars capability on that line, and yet they were simply not receiving the cars requested to move the farmers' product. In fact, elevators that had been on the line in previous years were getting more cars in place than they had grain delivered to them. This was not fair to the elevator company. We felt that by putting the grain transport co-ordinator in place that that situation could be rectified.

We set in place a number of very important objectives which had to be followed. The first objective was that the authority had to be neutral. It could not in any way favour one company over another, one agency over another, or offboard over onboard delivery. This was very important, otherwise the agency would lose its credibility. We insisted that it had to be neutral.

Also it was very important that the co-ordinator had a set of rules by which that body had to live. This became difficult without legislation. Over time the role of that agency was more and more defined. As well, it was felt that the agency had to be responsive to the needs of producers. I just gave the example of the Weyburn terminal. I could prove in many situations that even today cars are not being allocated according to the deliveries of farmers to individual elevators. Some elevators are getting more cars than they should be getting based upon deliveries, other elevators are plugged. We have some way to go in making the agency responsive.

The agency needed to be equipped with some authority to do as it felt best for producers. This goes to the whole question of what tools it has, whether in fact it can impose penalties if its orders are not delivered by railway companies or agents of the Canadian Wheat Board. This area has to be dealt with to a great extent.

If we look back on what the agency was set up to do and how it has functioned very well on the Prairies in allocating cars and in the transportation of grain either for export or for domestic consumption, we will find very few individuals, companies or groups of people in western Canada who have had anything but praise for the agency. This amendment attempts to say that the Administrator has certain powers. These powers are being granted to him under the Act. There should be no question of an underlying current which takes away any of the legitimate powers of the Canadian Wheat Board. Its duty has always been to producers, to maximize their sales in international markets. It should continue to perform that duty, and the majority of farmers agree.

No one is questioning that the system can be improved. That is always at the backs of the minds of the representatives of western Canadian farmers and of Members of Parliament who represent them. I will always stand in my place to support legitimate amendments to improve the efficiency of the system so that western Canadian producers obtain a better deal. That is what this amendment is attempting to do and why we as Members of Parliament ought to support it.

Before the Parliamentary Secretary became confused about whether he was making a motion or seeking unanimous consent, he rose in his place to say that there were certain amendments in committee which would have changed the clause. He indicated that they supported their amendment which they thought was sufficient. Amendments were put forward in committee by Members of the Progressive Conservative Party and of the New Democratic Party. We feel that the amendment before us today is necessary. It must be absolutely clear that the functions of one agency cannot interfere with those of another. That is all this section of the act is attempting to clarify. If we have an unclear Act, we can have a bureaucracy or agency that gets carried away with itself in the interpretation of the wording of a section.

I commend the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) for bringing forward the amendment. It is worthy of support. We ought to get on with doing just that.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, indeed it is a pleasure once again to have an opportunity to speak on a motion to amend the terrible piece of legislation we are debating, Bill C-155. It is as obvious to me as it is to others in the House that we are moving through amendments today at a rather rapid rate. This was pointed out by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis) in his somewhat confusing contribution. I agree with the Hon. Member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Clark) that many of us were confused by what was going on for a little while, notably by the comments of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport.

I am sure the Government is happy about the rather rapid progress in dealing with the amendments today because the sooner the House finishes with these amendments, the sooner the Government will get down to scrapping the Crow. The sooner the amendments pass through the House, the sooner the Government can throw thousands of prairies farmers off the land by increasing transportation costs some 400 per cent.

Probably the Tories are also very happy about the rapid progress in dealing with the amendments today. Over the last few weeks we have heard them spilling crocodile tears about the dreadful impact of higher freight rates on prairie farmers. How serious are they about saving the Crow? Just a few weeks ago the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) came into the debate as a shining new convert to the "save the Crow" position. He said that farmers cannot afford to pay increased freight rates and that the Government should postpone its plan to kill the Crow for three years to let the income position of farmers improve. I read a while ago in the Western Producer that the Hon. Member has now scrapped in three-year moratorium notion. I suppose that can only mean he is back onside with the Government, supporting an end to the Crow rate. One can only guess.

Also a few days ago I read in The Globe and Mail a report on the Crow debate. I indicated that the hopes of some unnamed Tory insiders was that the Government would hurry up and bring in time allocation, to get their Tory friends off the hook, I suppose. Indeed, we may have some scheming going on now which will come up with yet another unholy alliance of Grits and Tories to screw prairie farmers.

Mr. McDermid: Shame.

Mr. Epp: Order.

Mr. Forrestall: You will become just another pretty face from the Prairies.

Mr. Sargeant: I suppose we have to feel some sympathy for the Tories. The reported position of their Leader is only that he wants a united Tory position on the Crow. That does not give us too much to chew on. However, I think it is prairie Tory Members for whom we have to feel the most sympathy. When they went home this summer they discovered that indeed the Crow rate was very important to grain producers. More than that, it is very important to the whole prairie economy. Our prairie Tory colleagues found out that they had better be seen to be defending the Crow when they come back here.

An Hon. Member: Not really defending it.

Mr. Sargeant: Exactly. They have made much of their new faith in the Crow rate. The Government has clearly come to believe, with reason, that the Tories are willing to deal the Crow away. That should not surprise any of us. It should not be a surprise, especially when we consider the rather poor record of the Tories in fielding speakers for this debate. They have about three times as many Members as us, which gives them the right to three times as many speakers. The best they can do so far is one for one with Members of this Party. Their defence of the Crow has been a paper tiger. I can only hope that farmers in their ridings will come to realize this before it is too late.

The amendments we are discussing at present, Motion No. 39 of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) and Motion No. 40 of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), are both important, although obviously one is better than the other. They both strive to protect the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board from the broad powers this Bill would give to the Senior Grain Transportation Committee and its Administrator. Of the two, Motion No. 40 is clearly the better. It is most in keeping with the concerns raised by the Wheat Board Chief Commissioner, Esmond Jarvis, when he appeared before the Committee on Transport this summer. For that reason, it is Motion No. 40 that we should accept.

• (1750)

Why is that? The wording of the two motions is very similar. The difference is that the amendment proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), specifically mentions that the duties and functions of the Administrator shall not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, or any Order in Council, to make available the quantities and types of grain needed to achieve sales commitments.

The Canadian Wheat Board argued before the committee that the most efficient way to ensure future export sales is to ensure that the Board retains the ability to co-ordinate fully the grain transportation system. I think he is right.

Under Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, the Board is allowed, subject only to Order in Council, to provide for the allocation of railway cars available for the shipment of grain at any delivery point to any elevator, loading platform or person at the delivery point.

That is a very important authority for the Wheat Board. Without control of the quota system and in the allocation of cars, the Wheat Board loses its capacity to complete its sales. We cannot arbitrarily separate the transportation of those grain sales from the sales themselves. As the Wheat Board told the committee:

> Any further reduction in the Board's ability to co-ordinate transportation will be a very important step backward for the export sales program for western Canadian grains.

Clearly any transfer of authority to operate the bloc shipping system from the Wheat Board to the Administrator of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee would result not only in major problems for the efficiency of the transportation system but also for the effectiveness of the Wheat Board's sales efforts. I am a little distressed that this Bill was not amended in committee to take account of this problem. I know my colleague from Regina West tried repeatedly to have the Bill amended to take account of the Wheat Board's concerns.

It seems odd that when the Bill was drafted that little effort was made to address the concern of the Wheat Board to prevent a future shift in authority from the Board to the Senior Grain Commission by Order in Council. Since the ability of the Board, subject to Order in Council, to co-ordinate transportation of its grain sales is so important to its export grain sales, why was provision not made for the protection of the authority in this Bill? When it was raised repeatedly, why did the Government Members on the committee shy away from making the necessary changes? What is the reason for their reluctance to protect the authority of the Wheat Board? It makes little sense to me.

This amendment is not a major change to the Government's legislation. It only seeks to limit the authority of the Grain Transportation Administrator in a way that is reasonable and, I might add, fair. Without this amendment, only the elevator system and the actual buying and selling of grain would remain outside of the Administrator's control. Is it the intention of the Government to establish a czar over the transportation of western grain? I certainly hope not.

This amendment will ensure that the Wheat Board retains the power to order the direct grain cars in a way that allows it to fulfil its mandate and meet export sales. It would ensure the Wheat Board's ability to retain control over the bloc system of shipping necessary for the export sales of western Canadian grains.

Let me close by saying that we should accept Motion No. 40. I do not say that because it is an NDP amendment. I say that because it does not confuse the Bill, as I must say Motion No. 39 does. As Motion No. 39 now reads, it will replace subclause 19(2) of the Bill. By doing that it would remove the protection written into this Bill now for the Canadian Grain Commission. I do not think that was the intent of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). However, whether that was the intent or not, that would be the result.

Motion No. 40 does not replace subclause (2) which deals with the Grain Commission. Rather, it replaces subclause (3) which attempts to deal with the Wheat Board. If we are trying to improve the protection for the Wheat Board, we should be amending the clause that deals with the Wheat Board.

While both Motions Nos. 39 and 40 set out to preserve the authority of the Wheat Board, it is evident that it is Motion No. 40 that we should put forth.

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I want to add my support to Motion No. 39 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). I support it because it makes sense. It makes sense if one understands in any way what has happened in the Prairies in the movement of grain and what farmers have been doing in order that some cash flow will allow them to continue business. That is the reason for the motion.

It is just amazing to watch the NDP grasping with their fingernails in desperation, trying somehow to show that whatever they are doing, they are in favour of the status quo on the Prairies.

Mr. Blaikie: Status Crow.

Mr. Epp: Not only that, but time has passed them by. What about credibility? Where is it? At 14 per cent even they are not crowing any more.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They are the Titanic of western Canadian political Parties.

Mr. Epp: What about the Parliamentary Secretary? Let us look at him, if we can bear the sight for a moment. Obviously the question has been very clearly established by the Government, namely, that it wants closure on this Bill. It does not want to study the Bill any more. It wants to impose high rates of transportation costs on the farmers of western Canada. That is what it wants to do.

The Government would almost have been able to do that today through a parliamentary manoeuvre had the Parliamentary Secretary only followed the script that he was given a little more closely, but I guess he missed it.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It is very clear that the Hon. Member never listens in this Chamber because I did not ask for any time allocation. I wanted to give the Members more time. I was asking for extended hours of debate. Extended hours is not time allocation.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is a difficulty in that if the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp) provokes certain responses of that nature, then perhaps I have to recognize the Hon. Member to answer the provocation. I suggest that if the Hon. Member wants to get on with debate, that is the way to go.

Mr. Epp: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As always, your judgments are accepted by me. I am just appreciative of the Parliamentary Secretary trying to explain the unexplainable because he wanted the Bill dealt with in one evening. He did not give any time allocation. He simply said "Let's continue". That being the case, I would like to continue tomorrow. I therefore call it six o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): By far and away an excellent proposition.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I would like to designate Friday of this week as an Opposition Day.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

LABOUR CONDITIONS—UNEMPLOYMENT IN BOW RIVER CONSTITUENCY—ALLOCATION OF FUNDS. (B) APPLICATION OF GRANT FORMULA

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, October 11, I asked the Hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Roberts) why the constituency of Bow River was only receiving $100,000 from the Canada Works Program for 1983. I pointed out that in 1982, there were 685 people unemployed in the Bow River constituency and it received $200,000. This year, 1983, there are 1,893 people unemployed in the Bow River constituency, three times the number of unemployed in 1982, and it is receiving only half the amount of money, or $100,000.

I advised the Minister that it is an odd formula that provides that the higher the rate of unemployment, the lower the grant. The Minister then stated that the formula does bring forward, as he said, rather bizarre results. The Minister advised me that the formula was explained in a letter to me. All the letter said was that the total constituency allocation is now the sum of Canada Works grants and the Local Employment Assistance Development (LEAD) grants and that the basic allocation from Canada works is $100,000. The LEAD allocation is nil unless there were more than 4,360 persons unemployed in Bow River. In other words, the Canadian Government thinks that having 4,360 persons unemployed is all right. Nothing is provided for Bow River constituency under the LEAD Program. The Canada Works Program grant is a minimum amount which is given to any constituency.

That is not a formula at all. It is a sleazy way of granting larger amounts of money to favoured constituencies and/or providing a Liberal slush fund for the next election. It reminds me of the time I was navigating airplanes in World War II. We used a formula to ascertain the exact position of our aircraft by transcribing through trigonometric tables the shots we took of the moon, certain stars and the sun. Some lazy would-be navigators cooked their shots at navigation school by using their location on the ground and working backwards to get the position of the moon or the star. Most of those people were washed out by the RCAF as they would be useless when they did not know where they were in the air and would therefore endanger the lives of the entire crew.

That is exactly what the Minister is doing. He is cooking the amounts of public money in order to favour Liberal ridings. I suggest that by doing this dirty work behind the scenes, he is endangering the political lives of his comrades and betraying the unemployed, particularly the women, the natives and the disabled, that the program is designed to help. If the Minister disputes my statement, let him make public the amounts allocated under this program to all constituencies in Canada. I dare him to do so.

Let us look at what happened in 1982 when there were 685 people unemployed in the riding of Bow River and it received a grant of $200,000. Here are the results. There were 21 applications from Bow River which, if all had been approved, would have created 153 jobs at a cost of $1,500,000. This would have created 5,555 work weeks of employment. However, we only received $282,806 and so there were only five applications which, if all had been approved, would have created 25 jobs or 909 work weeks of employment. I should note that the amount of $82,806 was given to Bow River by a Calgary riding. If that money had not been received, the picture would have been different as only three applications would have been approved, creating some 13 jobs. The five applications approved included a Sarcee people's museum, a Shilo Wilderness Ranch at Priddis, the Drumheller Chamber of Commerce project, the East Coulee Community Association project and the Village of Beiseker project.

Equally good projects were submitted by Big Country Educational Consortium, the Sarcee Seven Chiefs Sportex, the Sarcee Band Administration, the Sarcee Old Agency Lodge, the Banff Library, the Banff Community Skills Bank, the Canmore Any-Space Theatre Company, the Blackfoot Band Housing Society, the Society for the Handicapped in Airdrie, Airdrie T.I.B.S., the Airdrie Campsite Development, Airdrie is Accessible and Airdrie Ecological Assessment. In other words, it was most frustrating last year for the 16 organizations that drew up proposals and went to the work and expense of presenting the proposals only to be told that there was not enough money to approve them.

What will the situation be this year? The Minister praises the program and builds up the hopes of the people who apply. Then they are frustrated and disillusioned. This year, with only $100,000, it means only about three projects will be approved, with about 12 to 15 new jobs being created. This leaves more than 1,800 people without work. This is certainly a "bizarre" result.

If we were to receive an amount comparable to that of last year, we would have $600,000 or at the very least $500,000. The bizarre way of figuring this out by the new Minister of Employment and Immigration is an insult to the unemployed and an insult to the communities which are going to make applications. This program is a hoax.

If the Minister cannot do any better than this in the Employment and Immigration portfolio, then he should resign. The Minister has never had to meet a payroll. He has never been in business. He does not understand the outside world at all. Perhaps he should leave us and go back behind the sheltered walls of the university and find out how to work out a sensible formula, one which will be fair and one which will raise the grant as the number of unemployed increase.

Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, regarding the first question put by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), I want to inform the Hon. Member that in 1982-1983, the funds allocated to Canada Community Development Projects, totalling $172.5 million, were distributed as follows: first, all ridings received a basic grant of $200,000. Second, ridings with a labour surplus rate of less than 12 per cent over four years received funding for job creation, and this was the case in 33 ridings. Third, ridings with an average monthly labour surplus rate of five per cent or more during the period from October 1981 to March 1982 received a share of the remaining funds calculated according to the difference between the average number of surplus workers during the six-month period ending in March 1981 and during the corresponding period in 1982.

Under the Canada Community Development Programs, Bow River received a basic grant of $200,000. The riding was not eligible for job creation funding, because the average labour surplus rate over four years was 1 per cent. Nor was it eligible for an additional share of the grant, because the average monthly labour surplus rate was 1.4 per cent. The difference in the number of surplus workers in Bow River was 236.

This year, funding for Canada Works and LEAD programs was distributed as follows: first, all ridings received a basic grant of $100,000. Second, ridings with an average labour surplus rate over four years of less than 12 per cent were eligible for LEAD program funding. This was the case in 37 ridings. Third, the remaining funds were distributed proportionally among the ridings where the labour surplus rate exceeded 8 per cent of the labour force. Under the Canada Works and LEAD programs, Bow River again received a basic grant of $100,000. It was not eligible for funding under LEAD, because its average labour surplus rate over four years was 1.7 per cent. Although the number of surplus workers was calculated at 1,893, the riding did not receive an additional share of the grant because its monthly average labour surplus rate was 3.5 per cent. The difference between the amounts allocated to Bow River is therefore due to the fact that the basic grant dropped from $200,000 to $100,000 this year. There are two reasons for the reduction: first, funding for the Canada Works Program was only $109.8 million. Second, since the labour surplus increased last year because of the economic situation, it was necessary to make more substantial funding available to all ridings. Thence the figure of $100,000 for the riding of Bow River. As to whether the same formula was applied to ridings represented by Liberal Members, the answer is that funding for all ridings is calculated in the same way, namely, basic grants of $100,000 for everyone, and depending on the labour surplus rate, certain amounts are allocated under other programs such as LEAD, and that is how funding for the riding of Bow River was allocated.

PENITENTIARIES—DECISION TO END LAVAL UNIVERSITY EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM AT LAVAL PENAL INSTITUTE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, last Friday, I questioned the Solicitor General about the excellent education program offered by Laval University at the Laval Institution in Quebec City. In his reply, the Solicitor General mentioned that the BAGIL program directed by Mr. Mario Ferland, which was set up at Laval and offered to a number of inmates, had not been very successful during the three years of its operation.

Mr. Speaker, I find this conclusion very surprising, since the Minister wrote the following letter to Mr. Ferland on September 14 of this year, in which he said, and I quote:

> I wish to thank you very much for your efforts in developing BAGIL at the Laval Institution. I am aware that, thanks to your efforts, it has become an excellent program that has been beneficial to inmate participants.

● (1810)

Mr. Speaker, there is clearly a considerable discrepancy between what the Solicitor General said in the House last Friday and what he wrote in his letter to Mr. Ferland a month ago, when he described the program as being an excellent one. The question arises why the Minister decided to terminate the program offered by Laval University. I would now like to quote a letter written by Mr. Ferland to the Solicitor General:

> His explanation is far from satisfactory; as for his suggestion to continue university programs in penitentiaries, this could only have an adverse effect on the development of education in the prison environment.

That is clear, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

I think it is most unfortunate, Mr. Speaker, that the Solicitor General (Mr. Kaplan) has apparently refused to listen to the universal advice he received from the Canadian education community, including the Canadian Association for Adult Education, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, the Canadian Association of University Teachers, the Canadian Teachers' Federation, the National Union of Students, the National Associations Active in Criminal Justice, the Church Council on Justice and Corrections, the John Howard Society, and the Canadian Labour Congress, along with a host of individuals right across the country including Members of Parliament on all sides of the House.

These representations were to the effect that, first of all, specialized university programs developed in Canada in several penitentiaries should be continued. They should not be weakened by off-the-shelf courses, for example, or by distance education or correspondence courses. Their budgets should not be reduced.

Most importantly, the idea which the Minister is now proposing of fees for students will in effect kill post-secondary education programs not only in the Atlantic Provinces and Quebec, at Queen's University in Ontario, and Manitoba where the Minister refused to fund such programs, but it will also kill the very successful program in British Columbia which is being operated by the University of Victoria.

The Minister has suggested that there are not enough students involved in the program in Quebec, but I note that the programs in Quebec and Ontario, unlike the very successful program in British Columbia which I strongly support, are very new programs. There has never been a university program in the Atlantic region. Apparently there has not been much interest on the part of the CSC to begin such a program in that region even though St. Francis Xavier University expressed a willingness to consider the possibility a number of years ago. But in the case of the new programs in Quebec and Ontario, there has not been enough time to develop larger enrolments. I would suspect much larger enrolments could be developed, particularly if the programs were offered in penitentiaries closer to the university itself. Laval institution and Laval University are several hundred miles apart. I am quite confident that that is one of the reasons for the low initial enrolment in that program. But, to use that as an excuse for killing the program entirely is, in my view, a very serious mistake.

I would note as well, Mr. Speaker, that this particular program has been strongly supported by educators. In the Province of Quebec a petition has been signed by some 200 professors calling upon the Government to reconsider its decision and effectively keep this rehabilitative program. There are not many programs in the federal penitentiary system which seem to work in terms of rehabilitation. To kill a program in Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba which is getting under way and, admittedly, still does not have a large enrolment, and as a result will have a higher per student cost, is a tragic mistake in my view.

Laval University has just been the recipient of a grant from the Donner Foundation to implement a research and study program on post-secondary education in Canada. This is a recognition of the outstanding job done by Mr. Ferland and that university.

I hope the Minister will consider the conclusions of a study done this summer which showed that if inmates are required to make a significant financial contribution to the cost of their university education, the result will be a substantial decrease in first year enrolments and the eventual disappearance of this important rehabilitation program in its present form.

In view of those conclusions, and in view of the clear success of this program as acknowledged by the Minister as recently as last month in a letter to Mr. Ferland, I hope he will reconsider his decision and reinstate this very worth-while program, not only in the Province of Quebec but in Queen's University in Ontario and in Manitoba and, indeed, expand the existing program in the Province of British Columbia.

It is also essential that the Minister's proposal for contributions by students not be implemented as it would result in the death of the program across Canada. The program has been very successful both in terms of rehabilitation and the recognition it has received from many different groups involved in adult education.

[Translation]

Mr. Alain Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, during oral question period on October 14 of this year, the Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) asked the Solicitor General why he had decided to terminate the education program offered by Laval University at the Laval Institution. As he said himself in his reply to the Hon. Member the same day, the Minister strongly supports providing post-secondary education in federal prison institutions. However, the BAGIL program, set up at the Laval Institution and offered to inmates under federal jurisdiction in the Quebec region who were eligible for university level education, was somewhat limited throughout the three years of its existence. In fact, only 12 student inmates were enrolled at the time the program was suspended. The fact that the program attracted so few students made it very expensive to run, the cost being about $8,000 per student inmate per year. I may add that the low rate of enrolment in programs at Queen's University and the University of Manitoba was one of the factors leading to the suspension of these programs as well. However, the program at the University of Victoria has been expanded, since it has the highest enrolment: 140 full-time and 32 part-time students out of a total of about 190 full-time and 76 part-time students in Canada in 1982. The average cost per student is therefore substantially reduced. Eventually, more inmates may be taking part in programs, and participating universities will be asked to offer such programs in the various regions. Depending on their experience and the variety of programs available, universities will be able to offer certain services including conventional courses, televised courses and correspondence courses.

AGRICULTURE—BEEF STABILIZATION PLAN—MEETING OF PROVINCIAL MINISTERS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, on February 28, I raised a question with the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) concerning the Government's plan to provide stabilization of the red meat industry, especially the beef industry. At that time the provincial ministers of agriculture were meeting. I asked the Minister if he was prepared to co-operate on a national tripartite stabilization program for the red meat industry. I asked a similar question on September 15. I would be interested to know from the Parliamentary Secretary if the Government is prepared to move ahead with this matter at this time.

I understand that the Ministers and the deputy ministers of agriculture across the country have met several times throughout the summer, in July and I believe again later in August. In fact, of the ten provincial Ministers I understand that four of them representing the four largest beef-producing Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario have made some agreement to proceed with a tripartite method of agricultural stabilization for the beef industry. I understand that this also applies to the pork industry.

I ask these questions of the Minister because I believe the situation in the red meat industry is really critical at this time. Prices for red meat are approximately 20 per cent to 25 per cent less than they were four years ago. During that four-year period we have seen interest rates climb to as high as 20 per cent and 24 per cent. There have been farm bankruptcies and foreclosures on a scale we have not witnessed since the 1930s. An Hon. Member of this House introduced Bill C-653, a measure that is similar to the farm bankruptcy legislation which was used in the 1930s. There has been a lot of support from both sides of the House toward the implementation of that legislation.

While I understand that negotiations are proceeding to do something in this regard, this would be treating the symptom rather than the problem. The real problem is that the producers of red meat in this country are not receiving an adequate return for their commodity from the marketplace. Obviously that is the best place to obtain an adequate return, because the consumer would then know what the commodity costs what it is worth. The producer should get an adequate return for his investment and work. This does not happen often enough in the red meat industry for these producers to survive. It seems to me that the best interim solution is a tripartite stabilization program.

If we look at the estimates from the Department of Agriculture we see that some $309 million is spent annually for the dairy producers; that the federal Government put up $145 million for crop insurance; that the Western Grain Stabilization contributions of the federal Government are $140 million; and that other stabilization programs for other commodities are only some $88 million a year, with a total of $682 million for stabilization.

Considering the impact the beef industry across the country has on the economy, it is important to the vitality and long term well being of rural Canada that this industry receive stabilization similar to what is provided other commodities produced in our country. I hope the Minister will work with the provincial Ministers in arriving at an agreement in the next few weeks which will result in stabilization assistance for this hard pressed industry, and industrys that occasionally has a good year but too often and for too long has suffered from inadequate returns on its investment while its input costs have continued to rise. I hope the Parliamentary Secretary will be able to indicate in his response that the Government is planning to move ahead during the next few weeks to establish a viable and equitable stabilization support system for the red meat industry.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Dionne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the task force which had been appointed by the provincial Ministers of Agriculture to develop a tripartite stabilization program for the red meat industry tabled its report at the annual meeting of Ministers of Agriculture at Brudenell, Prince Edward Island, last July. It was unable to come up with a program acceptable to the ten provinces.

The Ministers of Agriculture of Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta made a suggestion to the federal Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan), asking for the establishment of a tripartite program. The latter told them that he was prepared to consider their suggestion, but he requested additional information on the subject. He invited the Deputy Ministers of those four provinces to meet with the Deputy Minister of Agriculture Canada to prepare a detailed program at their earliest convenience.

The Deputy Ministers met three times, most recently here in Ottawa on October 6. They agreed on a feasible program and decided to submit the details to their respective ministers. Each participant is now reviewing the transcript of their proceedings and as soon as the Deputy Ministers confirm that the transcript faithfully reflects their agreement and consult their Ministers, the federal Minister of Agriculture will convene a federal-provincial meeting with his provincial counterparts so as to finalize the agreement.

For the time being, we cannot reveal the details of that agreement in principle among the Deputy Ministers. First, we must give each Minister enough time to become familiar with it and to share his views with his colleagues. Hopefully that will be done within a few days.

The details of the proposed program will not be made public before the Ministers meet and the spokesmen for the producers have been consulted.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Monday, October 17, 1983 consideration of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motions Nos. 39 (Mr. Gustafson) and 40 (Mr. Benjamin).

Hon. Jake Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, when we adjourned last evening at six o'clock, I still had a few minutes left and I would like to put some additional comments on Motion No. 39 and No. 40, specifically Motion No. 39, on the record of the House today.

A number of us who have been involved in this debate for some period of time have some concern this morning as to what actions the Government might take today in parliamentary procedure form in terms of this debate. Our spokesman on this debate, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), and a number of my colleagues who participated in the committee, in the earlier debate and in the debate at report stage, have always been concerned, because of the major impact this Bill has on the western economy and, therefore, on the Canadian economy, that these motions be debated fully, and not only that they be debated fully, but that the public understand the reason for the very full debate.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we have followed the lead of the Hon. Member for Vegreville: we express our points of view and have endeavoured to utilize the parliamentary time as best we could in order to do just that, not only for the western Canadian farmer but for the Canadian economy. One cannot separate the Canadian farmer and the Canadian grain producers as separate entities from the rest of the economy. For that reason we are entering into this debate this morning with some concern that the Government will take steps today which will jeopardize the positive debate which we have been attempting to carry on in the House of Commons.

Motion No. 39 is a motion which will not only protect the function of the Canadian Wheat Board, but also will allow the Administrator to carry out his or her functions. It seems to be a given in this House, Mr. Speaker, that anyone in this House who comes from the Prairies automatically must, and does, pay his allegiance to the Canadian Wheat Board. Throughout the years I have been here listening to various speeches on this subject, it appears to be almost as if one tries to outdo the other in terms of their loyalty to the Canadian Wheat Board. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that point has not escaped you as well, although you do not come from the Prairies.

There is no question that Canadian wheat farmers support the Canadian Wheat Board. They do not want it dismantled. They do not want to see its powers reduced. The farmers want to maintain orderly marketing. They want the Canadian Wheat Board to maintain its ability to get into international markets and to sell grain. That is not our argument. That is not the narrow argument which the New Democratic Party should restrict itself to on this motion; it should look at the issue more broadly. There are other areas of sales potential which possibly the Canadian Wheat Board might not be able to tap or might not have the same contacts with as other agencies. That is the point. We want to utilize every opportunity available not only for the sale of western grain, but to receive the optimum price for the Canadian producer.

I believe this motion, Mr. Speaker, could help in this objective. That is the point we are trying to make in this motion, which stands in the name of Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson), and the principle which we are putting forward is quite clear. The Canadian Wheat Board should not only continue its function as it has before; we hope it will have even greater success than it had in the last crop year and that its powers will not be diminished, while realizing at the same time that there are other realities on the Prairies which can be utilized by farmers and the Administrator. We have seen various examples in areas which can only grow feed grains or course grains where farmers have taken risks in the last number of years with high-risk crops.

Why have they done this? It was not only for diversification but because of cash flow. Therefore if everything was under the control of the Canadian Wheat Board, all farmers would be tied into the quota system or block system. In fact, I suggest it would reduce some of the opportunities that farmers and others have opened for themselves on the Prairies. Therefore, I hope that when the NDP study this motion they will not only see that the Canadian Wheat Board will be protected in all its functions and that those functions would in fact be enhanced, but that there are opportunities which could be taken advantage of as well.

There are a number of people here who are not only Members of Parliament but farmers as well. A number of them have diversified in this manner because they are progressive farmers. Since they know they must meet the financial needs of their farming operations, they cannot only be restricted to one agency. I commend this amendment to them and to Government Members. I have not yet heard whether the Government supports the amendment and I hope someone from the Government will rise in his or her place to say that they support not only this amendment, but the Canadian Wheat Board, the Administrator and the need for extra potential and development on the Prairies. If that were to take place and that spirit was shown, I am sure they would agree with this amendment and we could see its passage before this debate ends.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words in support of Motion No. 39. I become a little tired of some of the things I hear from the NDP. Those Members are forever arguing against multinational and large corporations. They say that there is nothing good about them. However, when it comes to one of the largest corporations in the country, everything about it is perfect. I do not believe that a government monopoly is any better than a private monopoly. While there is a place for government monopoly, we have seen how a monopoly such as the post office has operated. It has come to the point where the post office does not want anyone to compete with it, including the couriers. The post office is now entering the courier business itself. So while there is a place for government corporations, they too can become large and bureaucratic just like any other corporation.

While I support the Canadian Wheat Board, I do not appreciate some of the things it has done. It has not always worked on behalf of the producers and in fact has prosecuted producers. I support it but I do not think that everything it does is right. I believe its actions should be scrutinized carefully to ensure that it will not become a bureaucratic, giant monopoly that will ride over the farmers just like any other corporation.

I have an example of this happening. I hope this is the last time it will happen with the Wheat Board. There was such a large bumper crop in Alberta in 1978 that there was no room in the granaries for the grain and the trains could not handle the shipments. The trains finally moved some grain to make room in the granaries. But the Wheat Board said you cannot use those granaries; you cannot put the wheat in the granaries because that would be overstorage. There was a bumper crop in the area and storage was short; much of it was vital grains. What did the local farmers do? They went to the Alberta Wheat Pool elevator agent. They said: "You have a lot of room in your elevator; how about taking our grain?" He replied: "That seems sensible; we can store it and you can pay a monthly charge for the privilege". However, the Canadian Wheat Board said that any grain in the elevator over and above the quota is an overage, which means any grain in the elevator above the quota.

• (1115)

The elevator had lots of room, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Wheat Pool was prepared to take it and the farmer was prepared to pay the charge. What was the alternative? The only other thing farmers could do was to dump their wheat on the ground, which meant a complete waste of up to 10 per cent. The farmers bought the storage tickets. The tickets were issued, they paid the charge, and the farmers put their wheat in storage. But the Wheat Board came along and said: "That is an overage; you do not have quota". It would be better if the wheat were stored outside and 10 per cent of it was wasted.

Mr. Bloomfield: Shame!

Mr. Taylor: That is what the Wheat Board said. The farmers said that is not sensible. The elevator agent said it is not sensible. The farmers paid for the storage. They weighed all the grains in the elevator. But what did the Wheat Board do? It started proceedings against the producers.

Mr. Bloomfield: Shame!

Mr. Taylor: The Hon. Member talked about a giant monopoly. The Wheat Board in this case acted just as bad as or worse than any giant oil company acts. The Wheat Board charged these farmers. The Alberta Wheat Pool supervisor verbally told the agent that he was at liberty to issue grain cheques for the grain because the offence had already been committed. Over 70,000 bushels of barley was not paid for. What did the Wheat Board do? The Wheat Board sent the RCMP to confiscate those tickets issued for the storage of barley in the elevator. That barley belonged to the farmers, to those producers.

Some Hon. Members: Right on!

Mr. Taylor: Even if the action were correct, the barley still belonged to the producers and they should have been paid for it. But it took the Wheat Board months before it let the farmers get their pay for the barley. In the meantime the Wheat Board forced the farmers into a court case. Many farmers cannot stand that kind of expense. They are producers. They are grain growers. The farmers had to hire lawyers. Some gave in and said: "We will simply plead guilty and pay the fine". One farmer said: "Not on your life. I am not going to give in. I am right. I am not going to destroy my wheat." The Wheat Board came into existence for orderly marketing on behalf of the producers.

An Hon. Member: Tell the whole story.

Mr. Taylor: The NDP is shouting at me. Its Members do not want the producer looked after. They want the corporation looked after.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: I am talking for the producer. Whether that giant corporation is a Wheat Pool or Imperial Oil, I am going to be for the producer and the common man, and the NDP can like it or lump it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: Members of the NDP can keep on hollering; it doesn't bother me a bit.

What happened, Mr. Speaker? The case went on month after month in the courts. One farmer stood the costs and what did the court find? Finally, the court made a decision. The farmer got an absolute discharge. The judge said it was a sensible thing to do. The Wheat Board was condemned.

• (1120)

This is one case and I hope it never happens again. I support the Wheat Board, but everything the Wheat Board does is not lily white. When they start to pick on the producers who created them, it is time for someone to step in and take some action.

I believe in the work of the Administrator. I believe in the resolution of the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). He knows the score. He lives on the farm. He knows the good and the bad. He knows the black and the white. He still supports the Canadian Wheat Board but he wants this amendment included, and I want it included. We want to give the Administrator every possibility to do his job so that producers are looked after. I say again for the benefit of the NDP: "Look after the producers; forget about the corporation, it can look after itself".

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Motions Nos. 39 and 40. I am not sure that has been the case this morning up until now, having listened to the remarks of the previous speakers. Basically we have a choice before us as to which set of wording will make clear in the new Act that the Canadian Wheat Board will continue to have power to allocate cars and to pick up the grain it needs to fill its marketing programs. It buys grain from farmers, finds markets for it overseas and connects the shipping in between.

On the surface the difference between the two amendments is not that great. There is a very real technical difference which leads us to recommend Motion No. 40 over Motion No. 39. Motion No. 39 simply makes a motherhood kind of statement. Motion No. 40 refers directly to the Canadian Wheat Board Act and is very specific about which powers it wants to retain with the Wheat Board as opposed to leaving some doubt as to whether the powers go to the Administrator. I think we should opt for the most explicit motion.

The effective clause in Motion No. 39 which was put forward by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) reads:

—the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of, producers.

It is rather vague. The Speaker said that Motion No. 40 will be dealt with only if Motion No. 39 is defeated. It refers specifically to the powers in the Canadian Wheat Board Act. It reads:

The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act,—

Section 21(k) allows the Wheat Board to provide for "the allocation of available railway cars for the shipment of grain at any delivery point, other than cars placed pursuant to a car order book, to any elevator, loading platform or person at such delivery point." It very specifically indicates that the Wheat Board has the power to allocate cars to the exact points where they will find the grain required to fill their markets.

In light of the speeches and the comments in the House, perhaps it would be in order, since we are dealing with the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board, to review why these powers are necessary, what farmers have done to get us to the point where we have the existing Canadian Wheat Board, and why it is important to maintain those particular powers within the Board so that it can continue to do the job it was designed to do.

• (1125)

Very briefly, early on in the settlement of the West it was clear to farmers that they had to do something about the marketing of their grain as opposed to the dumping they were forced to do at the outset. Initially the railways put in rail lines. They decided which elevator companies would gather grain from those lines.

Mr. Fisher: What about the topic?

Mr. Althouse: This is very much on the topic. Read the amendment. Because of that monopoly in each area, there was much political agitation by the farmers to get the Manitoba and Canada Grain Acts. Once they had a system under the Canada Grain Commission of guaranteeing they would be paid for the kind and grade of grain which they delivered, they focused on the elevator system.

Even though the elevators had a grading system in place according to the law and regulations, they very often did not obey those regulations and were mis-weighing and mis-grading. Therefore, there was a lot of pressure put upon the provincial and federal Governments to establish a Government elevator system that would be a further appendage to the Canadian Grain Commission. That was very difficult to bring about.

In some of the provincial elections around 1910, 1911 and 1912, provincial Governments were elected on a platform of introducing government elevators. We had a typical response from the Liberal Party elected at that time on that platform. They put it in as a platform because they needed the votes. They also had a philosophy which they made very clear in the election. It was that governments cannot run business enterprises as well as business enterprises can. After the election, they began to implement their promise of having government elevators. In those days governments did implement their campaign promises, at least in some manner.

Mr. Pepin: John A. Macdonald?

Mr. Althouse: No, this was the provincial Governments in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and they were Liberal Governments. They contacted all of the elevator companies asking them to sell their weak and lame elevators to be used in putting together a government elevator company. The companies sent along their poor elevators and even sent along the poor managers who made those elevators such low volume points. They put the worst delivery points and the worst management into one company. The result was a government-owned operation that was not as good as the businesses around it. It was almost a failure, so much so that the farmers finally took the elevators over as co-operatives and they became a success almost overnight.

The first Wheat Board was introduced as a wartime measure during World War I. It was a compulsory Wheat Board. It bought and sold grain to the advantage of the farmers. The main difference with the Wheat Board idea over the private grain market was very noticeable then, and it is still recognized by most farmers. It is that the grain is bought at an initial price at the elevator and resold. The main difference is that the surplus from the reselling does not go to the shareholders of the grain company, as it did under the old system, but to the producers. That is what the final payment has been all about to this day. It is taking the profit extracted from the careful marketing of the grain and returning it to the man on the land who produced the goods.

To that extent, it is a slightly Marxist concept and one which some Members of other Parties have some difficulty with because it is a return to labour. It is the old labour value theory which is sometimes seen, even after 50 years of operation, as a very radical concept.

For that reason, I believe, after the First World War was over, government dropped that organization like a hot potato but farmers began agitating for a continuation of it. The government did not seem willing to do this so it went the co-operative route and set up the Wheat Pools with contracts that the producer signed saying that he would sell all of his grain through the pools for five years. That worked well until the 1930s when the grain market collapsed and the pools almost collapsed.

I believe that all of us remember that during the 1930s there was a Conservative Government under Mr. Bennett. In the dying gasps of his administration, he decided that since he was going to go out to face the people and since he had not had a very good run during his years of power, he would introduce a voluntary participation Wheat Board. This was done in 1935. Producers had the option of selling to the Wheat Board or not.

In 1942, again during wartime, we returned to a compulsory participation Wheat Board. Quotas were installed during that time and by 1946 and 1948 barley and oats were included in the operations of the Wheat Board as well.

The only other events of historic consequence occurred in 1959 and 1960, again under a Conservative Government. Wheat Board participation had been compulsory for quite some time and marketing through the Wheat Board was compulsory. There was a move afoot, I think for philosophical reasons, to reduce the power of the Wheat Board over selling feed grains. During that era the Hon. Member who now represents Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain (Mr. Hamilton), and who was at that time the Minister in charge, freed up part of the authority of the Wheat Board and put the selling of feed grains within provincial boundaries back on the open market.

Some years later, from 1969 to 1971, Otto Lang, who was then the Minister in charge of the Wheat Board, made it possible to sell—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I too am happy to rise to speak to Motions Nos. 39 and 40, the former being introduced by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) and the latter by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse), has indicated, the two motions are quite similar but we believe that the motion introduced by the Hon. Member for Regina West is clearer and more certain, and I would hope that Members of the Progressive Conservative Party and the Government will support that motion.

I was very happy to have been afforded the opportunity this morning to listen to the historical background of the Canadian Wheat Board, because I think it is extremely important as we discuss each of these amendments that each Hon. Member of the House has a grasp of the historical background of the subject we are dealing with. I feel that when dealing with legislation that will change a historical reality in the country, it is extremely important that all Members who will vote on that legislation appreciate what they are dealing with.

To digress for a moment, I feel, for instance, that if a person is not completely aware of the historical background of a subject, he will ordinarily make very bad decisions about the present issue. I will return to the motion in a moment, but as a case in point, much of the American policy in Central America right now is based on the fact that the Americans have no concept of the history of the region. I bring that point up because that is the same kind of mistake that can be made with a Bill like this if one believes that history began yesterday afternoon at 3.15.

Oftentimes when a government makes profound judgments about the future, those judgments are out of context because that government does not understand the historical background of an issue. That is why the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre mentioned to our colleagues on the Government side and the Progressive Conservative side the historical background for the reason we feel the motion of the Hon. Member for Regina West is so extremely important for this Bill. It protects in a very clear and specific way the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board.

I have a feeling that very shortly Progressive Conservative Members will join up with the Liberals and cancel this motion out. That is why it is so important that we tell all Hon. Members what is going on and what will happen.

Yesterday I was surprised to hear my good friend and constituent, the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn), who has the intelligence and the foresight to live in my constituency of Saskatoon East—

Mr. Nystrom: "Red" Ray Hnatyshyn.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Don't ask him how I vote!

Mr. Ogle: The Hon. Member for Saskatoon West made what I consider to be a very blatant attack on my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West. I understand the process of debate, Mr. Speaker, and I realize that if one has a good point to make, there is no reason not to make it. However, I felt that the remarks of the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West had nothing to do with the speech made by the Hon. Member for Regina West. The best thing that I could say about the remarks of the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West is that they were a lot of hot air.

I do not know how to reprove my friend, colleague and constituent, the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West, but I feel that I shall have to speak to his mother because his mother has always—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That's taking it too far now!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member is stretching the rule of relevancy beyond on all bounds and limits. I would invite him to return to the two motions which are before the House.

Mr. Ogle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I shall return to the motions before the House. However, I really feel that what I have just said is relevant and I think the Hon. Member's mother is relevant too. She must get in on this.

In any event, the question of orderly marketing is at the core of what we are discussing today. I shall go back to the historical remarks made by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre. The question of orderly marketing is essential to the whole question of grain transportation on the Prairies. If anything is done to weaken the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board with its guarantees to see that orderly marketing would proceed, then we are in for trouble on the Prairies. There is no question about that. The process of orderly grain marketing is essential to western Canada as distinct from other wheat growing areas in the world.

For instance, India actually grows seven times as much wheat as Canada but there is not that basic problem of transportation of grain because the people of India use the grain themselves. Our economy and our lives as western Canadians depend upon the fact that the Canadian Wheat Board is able to gather, transport and sell our grain in an orderly way to the grain markets around the world. As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre, pointed out, it is extremely important that this facility is preserved. Motions Nos. 39 and 40 are working in that direction.

I would call upon my colleagues in the Progressive Conservative Party and in the Government Party to support Motion No. 40 which protects in an absolute way the reality of the situation. That is what Mr. Jarvis insisted upon in the committee hearings. I would like to put on record what Mr. Jarvis asked for at the committee hearings. He said:

"It is an economic fact in the grain industry . . . transportation and sales are inextricably linked; but transportation must effectively serve sales needs. The current system with the GTA making the initial splits in cars has not become too cumbersome. But a danger exists.

● (1140)

Policy makers—and we say this to you—

He is talking now to members of the committee last summer.

—should be very careful in not separating further the vital link between transportation and sales.

Motion No. 40 would guard, finally, totally and into the future, the rights of the Canadian Wheat Board to protect that link between transportation and sales.

Mr. Gibbings happens to be a neighbour of mine from Rosetown, Saskatchewan. I have known him for many, many years. He first served as a member of the co-op board in Rosetown when I was a student working at the store. He has also been president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and has been a Wheat Board commissioner for the last 12 years or more. He also insists that the separation not take place but that the rights of the Canadian Wheat Board be protected. He has said:

It is imperative that grain sales and grain transportation not be separated. The Canadian Wheat Board must be able to arrange the transportation of its own product or it cannot fulfil its obligations to western grain producers or their customers overseas. The board's marketing success, meaning sales success, depends on its ability to make day-by-day or even hour-by-hour decisions on grain movement. Its flexibility must not be compromised.

We believe that unless it is clearly written into the Bill that that power cannot be changed, the power would be taken away, and the transportation of grain on the Prairies would be in jeopardy in the future.

I appreciate that many Progressive Conservatives are worried about this debate. That is why there are very few of them in the House and why few of them speak on it. There is a tension in the Party. I should like to ask my friends to my right—and many of them are talking to me in loud voices—why they do not invite the Leader of the Progressive Conservatives to make a speech. We would all like to hear a speech by the Leader of the Progressive Conservatives.

Mr. Fisher: You will never get any ideas from that.

Mr. Ogle: We would like to hear where that Party stands. I would like to hear some of his Irish wit, Mr. Speaker. He and I share the same Irish background. I would like him to come in and give us a clear statement of where the Progressive Conservative Party stands on the Crow Bill.

An Hon. Member: You have the wit and he has the blarney.

Mr. Ogle: I do not see any reason why he should not do that. That is my last remark on this amendment, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to seeing the Leader of the Progressive Conservatives come in and address the House.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, what we are discussing today is the difference between Motion No. 39, the Progressive Conservative amendment, and Motion No. 40, the NDP amendment. Basically, the difference between them is that Motion No. 39 is a political amendment and Motion No. 40 is a legal amendment. Motion No. 39 is in keeping with the cosmetic, political, both sides of the fence approach that the Progressive Conservatives have taken throughout the debate on the Crow, while Motion No. 40, the NDP amendment, is consistent with the comprehensive and consistent defence we have made of the Crow rate and the Canadian Wheat Board throughout the debate on the future of the Crow rate. That is the difference between the two. One is designed to create the appearance of protecting the Canadian Wheat Board, while the other is designed to implement the reality of protecting the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Once again I find myself on my feet in these debates about amendments, pointing out again that the Progressive Conservative Party is again failing to stand with the NDP for the protection of the Canadian Wheat Board. Only last week I spoke on a similar amendment where the Conservatives failed to stand with the NDP for the protection of the Canadian Wheat Board. I do not know if you were in the Chair at that time, Mr. Speaker, but I pointed out at that time that it was no surprise to us in the NDP because the Canadian Wheat Board is the symbol of orderly marketing for many people, that the Conservatives would want subtly—not vociferously and not too enthusiastically because they know the political consequences of that, but subtly—to erode both the reality of that symbol and the symbolic nature of the Canadian Wheat Board.

When it comes down to it, the Conservatives cannot ideologically live with orderly marketing. They have always had a problem with that. It goes against the neo-Conservative strain in the Party. Historically, there may have been Conservatives who were in favour of orderly marketing and who co-operated in setting up many of the institutions in the country for overcoming the inadequacies of the marketplace and for protecting producers and consumers, et cetera. What now prevails in the Progressive Conservative mind is not that conservatism of years gone by. Of course, I am being overly flattering when I speak of conservatism of years gone by, but it is only to point out that now we have the total ascendency of that neo-Conservative ideology in the Progressive Conservative Party which sees orderly marketing as something to be overcome, to be destroyed; they see it as an evil. Anything that interferes with the marketplace is to be regarded as undesirable.

The Conservatives cannot have it both ways, Mr. Speaker. Do they want to preserve the Canadian Wheat Board and the orderly marketing it represents? If they do, why do they not stand with us and support an amendment that actually does that, rather than simply creating the appearance of doing that?

Earlier in the debate the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) said he was getting tired of listening to the NDP. We were glad that he was not so tired that he could not get up to speak on the amendment, because we always enjoy his interventions. We are glad that we provoked him into using up ten minutes. He told a story about what the Canadian Wheat Board had done to a couple of farmers. I had an opportunity to check with some of my colleagues who know more about the details of the case and I am told that he did not tell the whole story. I know that is unusual for the Hon. Member for Bow River, but he did not tell us that the farmers in question had delivered more grain to the elevators than their quota. He did not tell us that because the grain was there it was holding up the ability of many other farmers—

Mr. Taylor: Baloney!

Mr. Blaikie: —in the area to get their grain to market. We did not hear that from the Hon. Member. Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is heckling me. He says I am not taking the side of the producer. What I am trying to do is take the side of the details, of the truth of what actually happened in this case so that all of us can make an independent judgment about what we think is really the case. We did not get that from the Hon. Member for Bow River. We just got a very selective interpretation of what the truth was about that particular case. That is no surprise. It is in keeping with the way in which Conservatives are always looking for ways to distort the facts and undermine the credibility of institutions like the Canadian Wheat Board. In effect, what the Hon. Member for Bow River did, particularly now that I have had the opportunity to check the rest of the story—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member knows nothing about the case and now he is generalizing. Tell the truth and stop talking about the corporations. Have a heart for the little man for a change.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I am overcome with the piety of the Hon. Member for Bow River. That was not a point of order and I was not talking about the corporations. I was talking about what actually happened in that case. Hon.

Members can make their own judgment about what happened in that particular case.

Mr. Malone: Come on!

Mr. Blaikie: Now the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone) is foaming at the mouth.

Mr. Malone: You are right, I am. Every time you speak you do nothing but perpetuate falsehoods.

Mr. Blaikie: We seem to have struck a nerve, Mr. Speaker. We seem to have—

Mr. Taylor: It is lies. Tell the truth and shame the devil.

• (1150)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) was given the floor to make a speech.

Mr. Malone: What a speech! Terrible, despicable.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to cause too much excitement over here.

Mr. Malone: Well then, tell the truth. You stand there and fabricate and call it a speech.

Mr. Blaikie: The truth seems to excite the Hon. Member.

Mr. Malone: You could not spell "truth".

Mr. Blaikie: It is refreshing to see Progressive Conservatives excited by the truth.

Mr. Taylor: It is the lies that bother us.

Mr. Blaikie: Generally speaking, they are excited by their own falsehoods. Mr. Speaker, I see you are rising to your feet. Is this to call for order once again or am I nearing my time?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair would ask Hon. Members to co-operate. Under our rules, practices and Standing Orders the Hon. Member who is given the floor to make a speech on the motion before the House should not be unduly interrupted. I suppose there is no harm in occasional verbal sniping, but it should not carry on beyond decency.

Mr. Nystrom: Show respect for this institution.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, one of the other things I wanted to say, having to do with the Crow rate had to do with—

Mr. Malone: That would be interesting.

Mr. Fisher: It would be a first.

Mr. Blaikie: —the remarks made earlier by the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ogle) about how we need to understand the history of any particular thing in order to really appreciate what is really going on, is this. Let us just recall for a minute that not too long ago in the House we unanimously passed a resolution concerning French language rights in Manitoba. One of the things we were saying when we did that was that we respected the history of Manitoba and certain rights granted certain Canadians at a certain time. We wanted those rights to be respected even though the situation had changed and Francophones in Manitoba are not in the majority any more as they were when Manitoba came into Confederation. We said that a right is a right, and that is what we are talking about when we talk about the Crow rate. If we want to respect history and the rights established in the history of this country, then the Crow rate is one of those kinds of rights. It cannot simply be abrogated because somebody, in this case the CPR, decides that they no longer think it is as relevant or as practical as it was when it was initially granted.

When you start to talk about rights, Mr. Speaker, practicality and logistics do not enter into it in the same way they would if you were talking about something else. I ask this House, when it is thinking about the Crow rate, to try and do it with the same respect for history as it did concerning the question of French language rights in Manitoba.

Mr. Breau: You are stretching it too far.

Mr. Blaikie: The Hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau) says I am stretching the point. I am not stretching the point at all.

Mr. Breau: Is the Crow rate in the Constitution?

Mr. Blaikie: The Crow rate is part of the understanding of this country, particularly in western Canada. That has to be remembered by Hon. Members when they are considering this matter.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, it is a matter of corporate morality. If the CPR and others want to change the Crow rate, then we say now, as we have said from the very beginning, put the whole deal back on the table. Put everything back on the table, not just change whatever side of a historic agreement one side happens not to like any more.

Mr. Pepin: That is procrastination.

Mr. Blaikie: That is the kind of sell-out bargaining that both the Liberals and Conservatives have fallen victim to in this debate.

Mr. Pepin: No change.

Mr. Blaikie: They are willing to put only that one side of the deal back on the table and let the CPR have its way with the country. It goes on forever and ever like that, Mr. Speaker, unfortunately.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to take part in the debate on Motions Nos. 39 and 40, but I was so moved by the oratory of my distinguished colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie), that I felt—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: Resist temptation.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): I felt, Mr. Speaker, I should rise in my place and express some very serious concerns on behalf not only of my constituents, many of whom are deeply concerned about the implications of these two motions, but also about the broader implications of Bill C-155.

First of all, since I do not believe this has been done yet in the course of debate, I would like to clarify what is in fact before the House. We are now dealing with Clause 19 relating to certain duties and functions of the Administrator under the Act. Motion No. 39 would add to this clause the following:

> The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of producers.

That motion was moved by the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). The amendment proposed in Motion No. 40 would replace Clause 19(3) with the following:

> The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, or any Orders of the Governor in Council, to make available the quantities and types of grain needed to achieve sales commitments.

That motion was moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), who has done such an outstanding job both in committee and in this House in attempting to preserve the historic Crow rate.

Looking at the history of these two motions in the committee hearings, I am not going to take the time of the House to go into detail but I think it is important to note that Motion No. 39 attempts to restore the wording moved by the Conservative Party at committee stage and subsequently weakened by a Liberal Party subamendment. I believe it was the Hon. Member for Parkdale-High Park (Mr. Flis) who moved an amendment in response to the Tory proposal and the Liberal subamendment was carried.

While we support the essence of both motions, clearly Motion No. 40 should be adopted by this House. It is a much stronger version of Motion No. 39 and effectively more in touch with the representations made by the Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board, Esmond Jarvis, who said in his brief that he was very concerned about the shifting of powers to the Administrator and did not want to see any erosion whatsoever of these essential and, I might add, historic powers of the Canadian Wheat Board. His brief very graphically illustrated the need for Motion No. 40 to be adopted by this House. He said:

> The Board still feels that the system operates most efficiently and effectively if grain transportation is fully co-ordinated by the major sales agency.

That, of course, is today and has been historically the Canadian Wheat Board. He went on:

> If this is not permitted, it should be clear that we view any further reduction in the Board's ability to co-ordinate transportation, as a very serious step backward for the export sales program for Western Canadian grains.
> Our strong concern is that with the establishment of a Grain Transportation Agency by this Act . . . and under Paragraph 97(b) of the Canada Grain Act, further powers could be shifted by Order-in-Council from the CWB to this agency at a later date.

It is for that reason that we propose Motion No. 40, Mr. Speaker. We are most concerned that under no circumstances should the existing powers of the Canadian Wheat Board be in any way weakened, particularly by regulatory action which is taken without any opportunity for the producers to have input.

The powers of the Canadian Wheat Board have been set out very clearly by my colleagues in the past. Certainly the central concept of the Board is at the core of our support for the existing Crow rate and the existing system of marketing, and that is the concept of orderly marketing. I know that the concept of orderly marketing is one which the Conservative and Liberal Parties have never felt particularly comfortable with, but certainly in my view that concept of orderly marketing as exemplified by the work of the Canadian Wheat Board is essential. Any actions which might be taken by the Government to erode the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board, particularly by regulation, will be vigorously resisted by us. It will not be just with smoke and mirrors, as is the case with the Conservative amendment in Motion No. 39. What we propose is real and effective powers for the Canadian Wheat Board.

● (1200)

The Canadian Wheat Board is in fact one of the most accountable, open and democratic agencies in Canada. It is not a Government funded agency; it is an agency which is funded entirely by the producers. It has an annual report which is in fact delivered to farmers in every community it serves. Members of the Board fan out and speak to farmers in communities big and small in all parts of the prairie provinces.

Motions Nos. 39 and 40 should not in fact even be necessary. The suggestion that the historic powers of the Canadian Wheat Board be eroded is one which should not be made in this day and age. Yet CP Rail, and a number of other powerful resources, have effectively coalesced in an attempt to weaken the powers of the Board and transfer those important powers to the Administrator, taking them out of the hands of the Canadian Wheat Board. Mr. Gibbings, who is a neighbour of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ogle) and does not live far from the mother of the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn), has had a very distinguished career as a Wheat Board Commissioner. Before that he was president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and played bridge with the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West. He stated, and I quote:

> It is imperative that grain sales and grain transportation not be separated. The Canadian Wheat Board must be able to arrange the transportation of its own product or it cannot fulfil its obligations to western grain producers or their customers overseas. The board's marketing success, meaning sales success, depends on its ability to make day-by-day or even hour-by-hour decisions on grain movement. Its flexibility must not be compromised.

Those were the words, Mr. Speaker, of an individual who certainly is very experienced in both transportation and sales of grain in the prairie provinces. We in this Party certainly support the essence of Motions Nos. 39 and 40. However, I believe it is important to place this in a broader context, that is, that we are fighting for the survival not only of a historically important symbol, but certainly for a system of transportation which is vital to thouands and thousands of prairie farmers.

It is important in that context, Mr. Speaker, to note—and I have just received this information which I am sure the House would be most interested to learn—that so far to date during the course of the debate on this important legislation there have been 102 interventions by Members of the New Democratic Party and 11 interventions by—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. That is not relevant, I must say, to the motion before the House. In reading the text of the motion, I find no reference whatsoever to what the Hon. Member is now bringing up. I would invite him to speak to Motions Nos. 39 and 40.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am just seeking your clarification. I take it you are suggesting that the 102 speeches by the New Democratic Party were not relevant.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): No, of course not. The point I am trying to make, and the invitation I extend to all Hon. Members, is to speak to the amendments and to make their remarks specifically relevant to the amendments. On a number of previous occasions I have asked Hon. Members for their co-operation. We are all experienced Members, and I trust we will abide by the rules and practices of the House in this instance once again.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, perhaps to save the time of the House I might ask unanimous consent that this document be appended to Hansard. It indicates that there were 61 speakers for the Conservative Party and 102 for the New Democratic Party. I see some indication that that consent might not be forthcoming, so I will return—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member has reached the point of no return: his time has expired. Is the Hon. Member seeking to have his time extended? Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I sit here quite patiently as an easterner listening to the poppycock and damn nonsense from Hon. Members who treat this House as if it were a play area. The distortions, Mr. Speaker, which have come from the distinguished and honourable—supposedly—gentleman to my left leave rational and sane people appalled. You have to sit there in the Chair. What in God's name would you do if you were a shut-in trying to get some entertainment and education and listening to that?

An Hon. Member: Order!

An Hon. Member: Relevancy!

Mr. Forrestall: I want to draw to your attention—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but may I inquire if he has risen to make a speech or to make a point of order? Would he please inform the Chair?

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I thought I might bootleg four or five minutes. I rise on a point of order simply to correct the record. Participation from this side of the House with respect to this Bill when dealt with on second reading in principle tells an entirely different story than the story which the New Democratic Party would have the people of this country believe. In actual fact, at second reading debate in principle we had 108 participants from the Progressive Conservative Party, westerners, basically, who are concerned about the producers. The New Democratic Party had 68 participants. As of last night this Party had still put up more speakers on this very important legislation than the NDP have in the entire debate, notwithstanding the fact that it has wasted five days of this House on frivolity.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. That again is totally irrelevant to the matter which is now before the House. The Chair must admit, however, that certain statements having been made, it is only fair to give the opportunity of reply to the Hon. Members who feel under attack. However, I hope we will now let the matter rest and proceed with orderly debate. Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in addressing Motions Nos. 39 and 40, I should first of all express my regrets that we were not able to listen to the easterly winds blow a little while longer. It was most edifying to those of us who have rather deep roots within the western part of the country, either directly related to the Prairies or certainly no more than one step removed.

It does bother me, Mr. Speaker, to hear some of my colleagues to the right exaggerate so profoundly some of the differences between the New Democratic Party and the Conservative Party on these amendments. I feel rather sorry for the people out there in television land who may be watching because they will be suffering from a misapprehension. In fact, what is going to happen, as I understand it, on these two Motions is that the New Democratic Party is going to be voting for Conservative Motion No. 39 and if the Conservative Party is to be believed, it is going to be voting for our Motion No. 40 if its Motion No. 39 does not pass. If that is the case, what is all the fuss all about?

I always enjoy, Mr. Speaker, listening to the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). He is always colourful. I am not, of course, just referring to his jacket. He always makes colourful contributions to this House and he certainly did so on the occasion of his intervention in the debate on the matter now before us. I must question why he went so far out of his way to create the impression that there was some deep, dark division between the two Opposition Parties on this question. After all, the enemy or, rather, our opponents, especially on the matter of these amendments, are on the other side. I will not call them the enemy because that is not what the spirit of this institution is all about.

● (1210)

In any event, given the substantial agreement that exists between the Conservative Party and the New Democratic Party on these two amendments, I would hope that if this debate continues for any extended period we could perhaps have more calm and cool reason in pointing out what small differences may exist between our two positions.

The differences between Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40 appear to be very small. The Conservative amendment, Motion No. 39, states:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 19 by adding immediately after line 20 at page 10 the following:

(2) The provisions of this Part respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under the Canadian Wheat Board Act to make available the quantities and types of grain necessary to achieve sales commitments on behalf of, and in the interests of producers.

In comparison, Motion No. 40 presented by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) states:

That Bill C-155 be amended in Clause 19 by striking out lines 27 to 32 at page 10 and substituting the following therefor:

(3) The provisions of this Party respecting the duties and functions of the Administrator do not restrict the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board under section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, or any Orders of the Governor in Council, to make available the quantities and types of grain needed to achieve sales commitments.

Perhaps our amendment is more specific but most observers believe that we are trying to accomplish the same goal. Obviously, the intent of both amendments is to preserve the ability of the Canadian Wheat Board to co-ordinate the movement of grain. Of course the reasons underlining this attempt to find the most effective way to ensure future export sales and the efficient operation of the grain transportation system is to retain the Board's ability to fully coordinate the system.

Unless Clause 19 is amended, it will make the Administrator a virtual transportation czar over the transportation of western grain. That is basically what this party and we understand the Conservative Party have objected to. According to the Government proposal, only the elevator system and the buying and selling of grain would remain outside the powers of this transportation czar. The Wheat Board would effectively lose control over the block system. The Board needs the power to properly order and direct cars to fulfil its mandate. That is the essential reason for the amendment we have put before the House and, I believe, for the amendment the Conservatives placed before the House.

While we do have some differences in philosophy, as has been illustrated by the Hon. Member for Bow River, and other Conservative Members as well as some from my own Party, let us not exaggerate those differences so that it would give the public a false impression that there is a vast gulf separating us, at least during this part of the debate.

Motion No. 39 attempts to restore the wording that was moved by the Conservatives at the committee stage but weakened by a Liberal subamendment in the committee. The Liberals seem to be unmoved by these appeals and their proposal passed.

Motion No. 40 is basically a stronger version of Motion No. 39 and we believe it is much more in touch with the Canadian Wheat Board Chief Commissioner, Edmund Jarvis, who recommended the wording that the NDP has placed before the House. That wording is found in his brief in which he expressed concern about the shifting of powers to the Grain Transportation Administrator. In arguing for a defence of Section 21(k) of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, the Canadian Wheat Board and our Party are referring to a section which allows the Board, subject only to Order in Council, to provide for the allocation of railway cars available for the shipment of grain at any delivery point to any elevator, loading platform or person at the delivery point. In our view, Motion No. 40 is a better alternative. Motion No. 39 as worded does not replace the existing Section 2 but adds to and confuses it.

Perhaps those are not minor differences but neither are they differences of a nature which justify the exaggerated language and opinions that have been expressed during the course of this reasonably short debate on these motions. Surely there is enough dividing us in our attitude toward institutions such as the Wheat Board, and surely there is enough differing opinion in the House and in the country that legitimately divides us on many serious issues involving the Crow debate and other matters, that we do not have to exaggerate what, on the surface and technically, are relatively minor points.

I submit that Canadians are fed up with hostility being overblown on matters over which the depth of feeling is not really that strong. Why do we not at least get together on those matters on which we can agree? At least as far as the Official Opposition and the NDP are concerned, this is obviously one of those issues where the differences are minor. While the amendments may be relatively important in their impact, I would hope Members on the Government side would pay more heed to the serious arguments that have been made in the midst of the confusion raised by the manufactured antagonism between Conservatives and New Democrats than they did in committee.

I believe that the points we are making are valid. Our proposals will make a difference to the producers and to the Canadian Wheat Board, which has done a reasonably good job on behalf of the grain producers of western Canada and other participants in the Canadian grain industry for many years, despite some of its failings. I would ask the Government to reconsider its position and support either motion—hopefully Motion No. 40—when it comes to a vote.

I thank you for your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, and if I have in any way managed to encourage a little more rationality and peace in this place, at least on this issue, I feel I will have performed some useful function in this debate.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Is the Minister going to enter the debate at this point?

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I will be brief in my remarks in support of Motion No. 39 and Motion No. 40. I would like to say something that may seem strange to some of my colleagues, but I think the last spokesman for the New Democratic Party set a new tone for the debate. It is unfortunate that the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), in beginning the debate for his Party, made some almost incredible statements for one who we have said throughout this debate has spent more time in committee than any other Member from his Party. I compliment the Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Kristiansen) on his tone and contribution to the debate.

We are debating two motions that, in the opinion of all Members on this side, actually strengthen the ability of the Canadian Wheat Board to do the job for which it was originally established. There have been criticism from time to time by some Members and I would like to bring the attention of the House to one in particular. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) spoke of my colleague for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). He is a man who has served Canada as an elected Member for more years than I have been alive.

• (1220)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McKnight: He has served as a Member of the Legislature in Alberta as well as here in the House of Commons. He also served his country as a member of the Armed Forces during the Second World War. I think any Member who would attack the credibility and ability of someone with that kind of a record should take a look within his soul and at himself to see why that would happen.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McKnight: Most of us in this House, no matter from where we come, western Canada, central Canada or eastern Canada, realize the importance of the Canadian Wheat Board to the grain producers of western Canada. I do not think that is debatable. The Wheat Board has to be strengthened and it has to be maintained to buy, sell and move grain.

I would like to speak to some of the Members of the Government side who ultimately through the democratic process will have the last say on Motions Nos. 39 and 40. I ask them to think what would happen if we turned the shoe around and put it on the other foot. What would happen if there were amendments put forth that would dilute or may be perceived to dilute the powers of the Canadian Livestock Feed Board which serves the members of Quebec, Ontario, the Atlantic region and British Columbia. If we put forward an amendment that was just perceived in the minds of their constituents to alter the ability of the Canadian Livestock Feed Board to do the job those producers and farmers and feeders in that area rely upon it to do, they would feel betrayed. It is an institution which they know is important to their ability to continue to produce livestock and go about their way of earning a living, and they would feel that if that was going to be changed in some way detrimental to the functions of the Board, they would stand, as we on this side have stood, and say "Take a second look".

The Canadian Wheat Board is not another Crown agency. I would surmise the majority of wheat producers and Canadian Wheat Board permit card holders in the western part of Canada do not even think of the Canadian Wheat Board as a Crown agency. They do not think of it as something like CN, Air Canada, Petro-Canada or the post office.

Mr. Malone: Or Canadair.

Mr. McKnight: They think of it as their Canadian Wheat Board, they think it belongs to them. As a matter of fact, it is more than just think, Mr. Speaker. Most producers of grain in western Canada know that the Canadian Wheat Board really does belong to them. Producers pay the operating costs which are taken out of sales, and they elect an advisory committee. The only thing that removes the Canadian Wheat Board from the farmer is Order in Council appointments of commissioners and the guarantee of the public purse as the commitments for initial payments are made. When something happens which makes them say "That is not our Canadian Wheat Board", there will be a lot of concern among Canadian wheat producers in western Canada.

That is why we on this side put forward two amendments. I had the opportunity in committee of moving an amendment similar to the one moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson). It was supported by Members of the NDP. We would like to see it supported by all Members in this House. It makes clear the abilities of the Canadian Wheat Board to carry out their duties. I think this amendment does an excellent job, a better job than the amendment in Motion No. 40.

As I read Motion No. 40, the amendment refers to Orders in Council. I am not sure whether that means only Orders in Council under Section 21(k), whether it means Orders in Council relating to the appointment of commissioners, or whether it means Orders in Council relating to the Canadian Wheat Board Act. We have heard some Members say it is a legal definition. Just being a dirt farmer and not knowing that much about legality, I think when doubts are raised as to what is the definition of Order in Council, it means that it should be looked at very closely. In the words of the legal counsel to the committee, the definition put forward by my colleague for Assiniboia fulfils that requirement of establishing without doubt in Bill C-155 the functions and abilities of the Canadian Wheat Board as prescribed by the Canadian Wheat Board Act.

If producers have a feeling that they are losing some control, I do not think the Government that sits opposite or Members in the Opposition would be able to stand still for the hue and cry and for the sheer anger and frustration that producers in western Canada would put forth if they found that any part of this Bill impeded the ability of the Canadian Wheat Board to do what it does best, and that is sell or facilitate the sale of grain on behalf of producers in western Canada.

The Board has gone through a lot of changes. I think it has gone through changes at a measured pace. We have now part of a dual system when it comes to feed grains. There are all kinds of arguments for another day as to the ability of a dual system to function. The people who make the dual system function under the Canadian Wheat Board Act are the very producers who grow that grain and sell it. If they did not want that system to function in that manner if would not. No one is supposed to sell barley either way under the feed grain act. That is a choice individual producers make. It is not a matter that the Board has lost power but the Board has been made, let us use the word "responsible", by the very producers that it has been established to serve.

I will be voting for Motion No. 39. I hope it will carry. if not, I am sure I will be seriously looking at Motion No. 40 as an alternative. I hope though that Members on the Government side will take a second look. I know the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) is going to speak. I hope he has had time to consider the amendments put forward by our Party and he has considered the real purpose of the Canadian Wheat Board. I hope he will be giving us some support in this area. Debate can go on and on, but in reality the matter rests with Government Members to make sure that the Canadian Wheat Board is protected and given the ability to do its job.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I recognize now the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). I see the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I notice the Minister is standing and I do not want to interrupt him. However, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Nanaimo-Alberni (Mr. Miller):

That the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) be now heard.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the terms of the motion. All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Call in the Members.

• (1750)

[And The Speaker having resumed the chair at 5.59 p.m.]

Madam Speaker: This morning the House resumed consideration of the Report Stage of Bill C-155. During the course of the debate, the Chair recognized the Hon. Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy) as the next speaker, at which time the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), pursuant to Standing Order 33 moved:

That the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville be now heard.

The Chair having put the question to the House, the bells were sounded to call in the Members. Some time later the Chair was informed by Party representatives that they did not intend to come into the House today to vote on the question. The bells were stopped since it was futile to call in the Members.

It is now six o'clock p.m. and Standing Order 8 requires the Speaker to adjourn the House until the next sitting day. While Standing Order 33 provides for a motion that a certain Member be now heard, the Chair has no choice but to interpret the word "now" to mean at this sitting. Since it is not possible to assume that either the speaker who had the floor when this motion was moved or the Member who was to be now heard would be present in the House or, for that matter, would necessarily want to be heard or to speak, the motion thus lapses because the situation in the House is unpredictable.

A motion under Standing Order 33 that a certain Member be now heard is not in itself a dilatory motion such as a motion to adjourn the House or the debate. However, since the Chair was informed that Members would not present themselves to vote, and since in effect the House has been prevented from conducting its business, this motion is ipso facto to be considered as a dilatory motion and, therefore, lapses.

It being six o'clock p.m., I declare that the motion of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain is no longer before the House and that this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 6 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HUMAN RIGHTS

PRO-LIFE RALLY IN TORONTO

Mr. Garnet M. Bloomfield (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, so often this House hears about the discouraged, underprivileged, the mistreated, and the very negative side of life. I would like to bring to the attention of the House a very positive occasion, that being a peaceful, non violent rally, as reported by the Canadian Press, of 40,000 Ontario Canadians on behalf of human life. The Metro Toronto Police have stated that this was the largest rally ever held in that city.

These women, men, and children came together to express their deep concern over the many thousands of human beings who have been lost in Canada through abortions every year for the last several years. This show of life support in Canada is in sharp contrast to that of the anti-life group which, notwithstanding the fact that it had been organizing many months for rallies to be held at the same time across the country, was only able to muster less than a thousand people in all of Canada. This lack of attendance at the anti-life rallies points out very dramatically the absence of support for their cause in Canada in 1983.

The anti-life individuals have also attempted to gloss over the fact that they are in support of ending the life of a human being, by stating that they are only for freedom of choice. But their freedom of choice costs a defenceless unborn human being his or her life. Some choice! We, as parliamentarians, would do well to ensure the protection of all Canadians, born and unborn.

STATUS OF WOMEN

APPOINTMENTS TO SENATE URGED

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Madam Speaker, yesterday marked the anniversary of the landmark decision on October 18, 1929, which ruled upon the petition of the indomitable Emily Murphy that women were indeed persons under the BNA Act and, as a consequence, could be appointed to the Senate.

In the 54 years since then women have made great strides toward full legal, social, and economic equality. The struggle to achieve that equality has not ended with the provision for women's rights contained in the Constitution and the Charter passed last year, however. Much yet remains to be done before women can be considered equal in fact as well as in theory.

Women, and their families' dependence upon many of them, remain at a disadvantage in terms of income, social and employment benefits, and pensions. Sexual harassment and violence against women remain commonplace, and women remain under-represented at all levels of government, not the least of which is in this Chamber.

It is to be hoped that in the coming years many more women will stand and be successful candidates in the House of Commons. In the meantime, however, many successful Canadian women from all walks of life continue to make important contributions to our society. On this noteworthy anniversary I urge the Government to give these persons strong consideration in future appointments to fill existing vacancies in the Senate. Emily Murphy would not have accepted that today, 54 years after her victory, only seven out of a possible 104 seats in the Senate are held by women. Nor should we.

THE JUDICIARY

RECOMMENDED INCREASES IN JUDGES' SALARIES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, the other day Mr. Otto Lang, a defeated Liberal Cabinet Minister and a judicial hopeful, reported on judges' salaries. He points out that the average Superior Court judge receives only $85,000 per year. The figure for Supreme Court justices is $98,000. With salaries like these, Otto Lang has displayed his social conscience. He says:

> For some judges, particularly those in large urban areas and in areas with a high cost of living, cash flow is an increasing problem.

He therefore recommends that salaries should be significantly increased. He recommends increases ranging from a low of $22,000 to a high of $31,000 per year. These are increases of 26 per cent to 30 per cent. The proposed increases are not six and five; they are six times five. Mr. Lang is saying that judges should be above the law of six and five. That vicious legislation has been used to roll back signed collective agreements, to force office clerks back down below the poverty line, and to ensure that pensioners never even approach it.

S.O. 21

Mr. Lang uses quotes from the Conservative Prime Minister, R. B. Bennett, to support his case. That quote is, "If men enjoying large incomes have no ambition to go on the bench, then we have to fall back on the second line." Such an approach indicates that those who foreclose on people's mortgages, and those who work with the banks—

THE ECONOMY

DROP IN RATE OF INFLATION

Mr. Ray Chénier (Timmins-Chapleau): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to tell the House that Canada's economic recovery program is working. The annual rate of inflation dropped to 5 per cent last month, which is the lowest rate in more than ten years. Not since August, 1972, has inflation been so low. A period of stabilization has now been reached.

In July and August the inflation rate was recorded at 5.5 per cent, and in May and June the rates were 5.4 per cent and 5.6 per cent respectively. We have reached an important plateau in our fight against inflation, thanks to the Canadian Government's six and five restraint program and to the co-operative efforts of the Canadian people.

There have been further signs of a new economic vitality. Since last November about 325,000 new jobs have been created, and the unemployment rate of 11.8 per cent in July has now dropped to 11.3 per cent. This is the lowest rate of unemployment since 1982. Food prices in September have dropped by one per cent, and this is the largest monthly decline in food prices in over five years. The Liberal Government has also managed to reduce the cost of living to 5 per cent from 12.5 per cent a little over a year ago. I see the Conservatives are starting—

INDIAN AFFAIRS

IMPACT OF MEGAPROJECTS ON BRITISH COLUMBIA INDIAN BANDS

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, having fallen victim to the many negative social, environmental, and ecological impacts usually associated with large resource type megaprojects, the people of the Carrier and Sekanie tribes are in the capital this week to seek recognition and redress for long outstanding injustices which have been perpetrated on them. Two major projects, Alcan Kemano I in 1952, and B.C. Hydro W. A. C. Bennett Dam, have seriously disrupted the economic, social and cultural livelihood of the Sekanie, Inginika and FortWare bands, and the Carrier peoples, Gheslatta, and Ominika bands.

Whole communities have been flooded, trap lines destroyed, and in one instance they had to watch dead bodies float from a flooded cemetery. They live in the poorest conditions of any native communities in our country, often suffering from malnutrition and serious infectious disease. They are here soliciting funds and support to prepare themselves for yet another project of equal dimensions, Kemano II.

They know the world will not stand still for them, but they feel they can no longer be treated merely as part of the landscape. Attempts to meet with the appropriate Ministers have so far failed. Their only recourse will be action in the courts, which will neither serve their cause nor the cause of the proponents of the project. Let me remind the House of the problems associated with the James Bay Project when court action was taken.

I urge the Government and the Minister to listen and to act.

HUMAN RIGHTS

PLIGHT OF CIVIL RIGHTS ADVOCATES IN RUSSIA, SOUTH AFRICA AND GUATEMALA

Mr. Bob Ogle (Saskatoon East): Madam Speaker, each year in mid-October Amnesty International members around the world observe Prisoners of Conscience Week on behalf of people in prison for the non-violent expression of their opinions, the peaceful practice of their chosen religion, or for their colour, sex ethnic origin, or language.

This year Prisoners of Conscience Week is being devoted to men and women who have been punished by their Governments for their work in promoting human rights. This past week in my own City of Saskatoon there has been a cage in front of City Hall in which citizens are placed and where they have to remain until friends come to let them out. But around the world there are many cases of people who cannot be let out so easily.

For instance, seven years in a labour camp, to be followed by five years' internal exile, is the price Ukrainian writer Mykola Rudenko is paying for his efforts to publicize human rights violations in the Soviet Union. His wife, arrested for possessing smuggled copies of her husband's poems, is serving a ten-year sentence. She is in another labour colony 700 kilometres away.

In South Africa, Johnny James Issel, a leading campaigner for black civil and political rights, has spent most of the past ten years under administrative banning orders, or in detention without charge or trial.

In Guatemala, labour lawyer America Yolanda Urizar has "disappeared". A former victim of death threats for her work with local trade unions, she was abducted in March this year by heavily armed men and driven away in an army jeep. She has never been seen again.

Many thousands of other people suffer such treatment.

THE ECONOMY

SUCCESS OF GOVERNMENT'S SIX AND FIVE RESTRAINT PROGRAM

Mr. René Cousineau (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Madam Speaker, Statistics Canada has just revealed that the annual rate of inflation in September was 5 per cent, the lowest in ten years.

In May 1982, when the Minister of Finance launched the voluntary 6 and 5 restraint program, he asked Canadians to help get the country out of the recession and into recovery. The program was not an end in itself but a beginning. It was a matter of self-confidence, of mutual trust among Canadians.

Today, with an annual inflation rate of 5 per cent, we can say that Canadians have responded to the appeal made by the Liberal Government and that we know the meaning of the word co-operation. We have made tangible progress. The threat of unemployment is receding, while we are making every effort to maintain our markets. Our costs have started to drop. Inflation is going down, and as it combines to do so, interest rates will follow suit.

Madam Speaker, all we have to do now is to have confidence in ourselves and try not to forget the common good of all Canadians. We can, individually, put our shoulder to the wheel and raise our voices in protest when others do not act in to their share.

Last October, the Prime Minister of Canada said that our future would be determined by how we achieved the objectives of the 6 and 5 policy. We have achieved part of that objective—

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REVIEW OF FUTURE PLANS—REQUEST FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, I understand there was some confusion about the Prime Minister's birth date when he first entered this House. I am glad to see that it has been clarified, and I am sure all Members of the House would join with me in wishing him a belated and very happy birthday.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: In spite of the cosmetic changes announced yesterday, the Canadair situation, because of the dollars involved and the importance of the technology, has indeed become a national issue and one that goes to the heart of the Government itself of government policy, and not to a given Minister. In view of the growing unease and concern about Canadair and the technology, would the Prime Minister agree to take the initiative as a national priority in establishing a select all-Party committee of the House of Commons so that we could begin immediately the task of working with management, the unions, and the Government, in regard to the future plans and operations of Canadair?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I thank the Leader of the Opposition for his good wishes and those of his Party. It seems to me that the mistake was not so much one of the date of my birthday; it was the fact that the Opposition did not know the times of the sitting yesterday. That is why the wishes are a day late.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: The Leader of the Opposition talked about cosmetic changes. I am afraid that is a misunderstanding of the situation. There are some quite considerable changes going on in Air Canada—

Some Hon. Members: Canadair!

Mr. Trudeau: In Canadair.

Mr. McDermid: A Freudian slip.

Mr. Trudeau: I am concerned about the suggestion of having Crown corporations run jointly by committees of the House or associations of various Parties in the House. The whole theory behind Crown corporations is that on their day-to-day operations they not be run by the politicians of one side or the other of the House, and that their objectives have to be defined in the law and in policy statements. In so far as these are concerned, we are happy to have the Opposition, any time it wants, make its points and criticize our views, as it has in Question Period. I think it would be a complete departure from the very important traditions of Parliament if committees of Parliament attempt to run Crown corporations.

Mr. Mulroney: I think the Prime Minister knows quite well that I am not in any way suggesting that Members of the House involve themselves in the management of Canadair.

Oral Questions

IMPORTANCE OF TECHNOLOGY AND JOBS

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, there was a $1.4 billion write-off last year, which was larger than the amount the Government spent on job creation programs. There has also been a running loss of $107 million in the first six months of this year for Canadair. If we take a look at the past, the Auditor General recommended, contrary to Government, that he be instructed to conduct a comprehensive audit on the company with regard to its past, but I am talking about the future.

Given its importance, the importance of that technology and the number of jobs involved, would the Prime Minister not refert this very important matter to an all-Party Committee so that we could work together to see whether it is possible to save Canadair and that technology, in terms of the future of the nation?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am happy to have the undertaking of the Leader of the Opposition that his Party wants to save Canadair. In view of the criticisms we have heard in the past year from members of that Party, we were concerned lest they wanted to repeat with Canadair the mistake they made 20 years ago with Avro. If they want to save Canadair, I think the best principle to apply once again is to let the management run it and, to have Parliament—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1420)

Mr. Trudeau: —to let Parliament take its responsibilities as it did in committee, in criticizing the financial statements.

In so far as objectives are concerned, I would welcome a statement from the Leader of the Opposition going beyond the one he just made in his question to the effect that Canadair must be saved, that the technology there is worth preserving in Canada, and that his Party supports that. If we can have clarification of these objectives from the other side, then I think we will have unanimity. In other words, if the Leader of the Opposition truly wants to save Canadair, the way to do that is not to put it in the political forum of this House; it is to run Crown corporations as they always have been run, independent of Parliament on a day-to-day basis, and responsibility for long-term objectives on the part of the Government, with reports to parliamentary committees as we have now.

REQUEST THAT SELECT COMMITTEE BE APPOINTED

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister refers to a decision that was taken some 20 or 25 years ago. At that time, of course, he was an active supporter of the CCF-New Democratic Party and he may have taken a very different view. One thing that is unchanged is the requirement for parliamentary accountability.

We are talking about a company that has cost in excess of $1.5 billion and which appears to be running at a rate of a $200 million loss for each of the next two years. We value the technology very strongly, recognize its importance, and are asking the Prime Minister quite simply, not in a partisan spirit, if he will indicate his acceptance of the notion of a select all-Party committee to sit down avec les intervenants to see if the future of Canadair can indeed, in the interest of the nation, be saved.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition refers to my activities 25 years ago. I refer him to the activities of his own caucus in the past year. There are two committees which are now looking at Canadair, the Public Accounts Committee and the Finance Committee.

Mr. Mulroney: That is for the past. This is the future.

Mr. Trudeau: When we have recommendations from those committees and we see the Opposition showing real interest in the future, we will be able to comment on the recommendations of those committees. As I said, as of now all we have had has been negative criticism and a seeming will to destroy Canadair. I am very happy that the Leader of the Opposition now wants to join the Government in its effort to save this. If they want to continue in that spirit, we would very much welcome their participation in the committees that now exist.

Mr. Mulroney: I join the Government, Madam Speaker, because this Government needs every bit of help that it can get.

CORPORATION'S FUTURE PROSPECTS

Mr. Brian Mulroney (Leader of the Opposition): The people of Canada will quite possibly support future plans for Canadair if all of the facts and the dollars are known—this is what parliamentary accountability is all about—if it is not hidden in the cracks or passed off to some committee or to a junior Minister.

I am encouraged by the Prime Minister's initial response. I come back to the question. It may result in a somewhat unusual procedure, but the problem is unusual, and we are talking about $2 billion of taxpayers' money. Will the Prime Minister agree to the establishment of a select committee, duly empowered by this House of Commons, to examine future prospects and plans for Canadair, taking into account the responsibilities of management and labour throughout that enterprise? We would co-operate fully with that kind of initiative.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): For the third time, Madam Speaker, I am happy to take account of the co-operation which the Leader of the Opposition is suggesting. I propose to him that we wait for the reports of the committees of Parliament which are now seized with the subject. I am informed by our House leader that one committee is going to report within a few days. The Minister responsible will appear before that committee. He will set before that committee its long-term plans and objectives. He will set them there clearly for either criticism or approval of the Opposition. I hope it will be for constructive criticism if there is such, but, Madam Speaker, if it is, it will be the kind of co-operation the Hon. Leader of the Opposition is suggesting through the creation of yet a third committee of Parliament.

● (1425)

There are now two committees, Madam Speaker, and the long-term plans and objectives will be presented before the Finance Committee within a very short period of time. Let us hear then if the Opposition is united in its acceptance of Canadair, and if it is really sincere in its desire to co-operate with the management and with the Government in making this a long-term success.

CORPORATION'S BREAK EVEN POINT

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. With respect to Canadair, would the Prime Minister indicate to the House when he sees the present management getting Canadair to at least a break even point, bearing in mind that Joel Bell has indicated that the company is to lose another $400 million in 1983 and 1984?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I suggest the Hon. Member look at all the statements that were made by the Chairman of the Canada Development Investment Corporation. He should also look at those that clearly indicate there has been a definite improvement in the market for the Challenger-type plane, and that drastic measures have been taken by the Corporation to provide for stricter management of Canadair. Bearing this in mind, the financial situation at Canadair can be expected to improve.

[English]

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is again directed to the Prime Minister. Through yesterday's announcement we were notified that vice-presidents of Canadair have been fired for mismanagement. Others among the executive have either been retired or, at least, demoted. Would the Prime Minister indicate which of the present or past Ministers is also responsible for this mismanagement? Specifically, will he tell us if the present President of the Treasury Board had a hand in this gross incompetency, and if the present Minister of Energy had a hand in the mismanagement? Where is their ministerial responsibility in this matter?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member talks about ministerial responsibility in the past. I would point out to him that in the not so distant past the responsibility was with the private sector. It was the private sector that was losing money. It was losing so much money that it wanted to—

Mr. Stevens: Canadair?

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, Madam Speaker. Canadair used to belong to the private sector. Let the Hon. Member catch up.

Mr. Stevens: They didn't lose a billion four.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, they were losing money and that is why they wanted to dump the company. The Hon. Member shakes his head. It is very recent history, Madam Speaker. The Government stepped in to prevent all this technology from flowing out of Canada. The private sector was unable or unwilling to do it. The Government stepped in to rescue Canadair and to try to make it—

Mr. Crosbie: Who's going to rescue the Government?

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, now the Hon. Member for St. John's West is opening his loud mouth. He should have more respect—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for St. John's West did not have the floor. I would urge the Prime Minister to answer the Hon. Member for York-Peel.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: That is the not so distant past, Madam Speaker. It was the private sector that was not able to keep this operating. It is this Government, the Liberal Government, that stepped in and tried to make it a going concern. It was losing money; we continued losing money.

The Hon. Member asked about the intermediate period. I believe that at that time Canadair did fall under the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce of which, for part of the time, the present President of the Treasury Board was Minister. He is in fact the Minister who alerted the Government to the mismanagement and to the mistakes in the company. He is the Minister, or one of his successors was, who presided over the transfer of government assets into a management operation, the CDIC. That is the solution we have brought to this. We do not want it to be run by departmental officials who, willing as they are, do not have the expertise to deal with all of the businesses in which the Government is involved. We do not want it to be dealt with by a parliamentary committee as is suggested by the Leader of the Opposition. We want it to be dealt with by this government-owned, this management company called the CDIC, which is taking the steps which now, I understand, are having the approval of both sides of the House—

Madam Speaker: Order. Order, please. I am afraid I have to interrupt.

Oral Questions

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, since the Minister responsible for Canadair is not in the House, I will direct my question to the Prime Minister as well. We have heard from a number of previous questioners that there are a number of questions that must be answered. There have been accusations in the media and elsewhere about the possibility of bribery and kickbacks. We have had Mr. Joel Bell brought in to clean up the situation and, really, all we find is a person who is covering up the situation.

As the Leader of the Official Opposition indicated, this ought to be dealt with in a non-partisan fashion. Since two parliamentary committees have looked at the matter and have been hamstrung in their operations, I should like to put my question to the Prime Minister. Would he consider taking this matter out of the political arena and calling for a full public inquiry under the Inquiries Act?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, I hope by that response this is not the kind of Crown corporation marketing practice that we will have to expect.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I have said several times in the House that there is no necessity to comment on the answers. Just the questions are important.

LEASING ARRANGEMENTS FOR JET AIRCRAFT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I have a very simple question to put to the Prime Minister. When one of the salesmen for Canadair makes a deal with a company in the United States to buy a jet, and says that Canadair will lease back that jet until it is paid for, is that not a bribe or a kickback?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am informed that the Chairman of CDIC has stated quite explicitly that that kind of practice, though it existed in the private sector, is not one which he would intend to condone or repeat.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. He will recall that the other day he said that the conflict of interest guidelines apply to American subsidiaries of Crown-owned corporations. In view of the obvious breach of the conflict of interest guidelines by three officers of Canadair Inc. in the United States, leasing a plane from themselves for their use around the company—and I point out that it was a Cessna Citation, the opposition's plane at that—why are these people still working for Canadair Inc.? If they are, do the conflict of interest guidelines that the Prime Minister has put in place mean anything at all?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, regarding the Hon. Member's actual question, I would like to remind him that the guidelines prepared by Treasury Board and applying to the Department do not directly apply to Crown Corporations, which draft their own guidelines covering relations between their employees and corporations other than their employer. In the specific case mentioned by the Hon. Member, the Canada Development Investment Corporation made a careful study of the contract and found that the contract had been authorized by Mr. Kearns at the time. Normally, according to the guidelines, the contract should have been approved by the Board of Directors of Canadair before it was approved by Mr. Kearns. That did not happen. Legally, however, the contract, which was signed and, if I am not mistaken, expires in December 1984, still stands. The Chairman of the Canada Development Investment Corporation examined this case thoroughly to make sure that no one connected with Canadair stood to benefit personally by the contract.

[English]

Mr. Blenkarn: Madam Speaker, if the Prime Minister will not get into these difficult situations I will carry on and put my supplementary question to the Minister of National Revenue.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S SALES COMMISSION EARNINGS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): The Minister of National Revenue will know that one David Hurley, Vice-President of Canadair Inc., has made over $1.5 million in sales commissions selling 100 Canadair Challenger jets over and over and over again. This is the same David Hurley who came to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance, trade and Economic Affairs and made misrepresentations about the optimistic sales forecasts; this is the same David Hurley—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Would the Hon. Member ask his question?

Mr. Blenkarn: My question is very simple, Madam Speaker. Why is the Government expecting the House of Commons and the people of Canada to have faith in Canadair when it continues to employ that type of person?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I would ask the Hon. Member to follow the example of his leader who told us not to worry about the past, and who realizes that the Canada Development Investment Corporation will put Canadair back on the right track. I would therefore ask the Hon. Member to do as his leader says: stop worrying about the past and look at the positive measures taken by the Canada Development Investment Corporation to help Canadair get back on its feet and move ahead.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF MR. ALIOUNE BONDIN BEYE, MINISTER OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AND OF INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION, OF MALI

Madam Speaker: I wish to draw the attention of the House to the presence in our Gallery of Mr. Alioune Bondin Beye, Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Co-operation of Mali.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REQUEST FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO RETURN CORPORATION'S CREDIBILITY

Hon. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister and get back to the initial question about the Canadair case.

Although we are invited to look to the future instead of looking back, the Prime Minister must realize that the company's reputation, and we are not out to criticize the objectives of Canadair, has suffered a body blow. In the circumstances, in order to restore the credibility that is essential to any industry that wants to make progress, could the Prime Minister perhaps respond positively to invitation of the Leader of the Opposition to create a special committee, to restore Canadair's much-needed credibility, in the best interests of Canada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I think that has already been done. The Corporation's credibility was restored today, when the Leader of the Opposition, in a departure from the policy practised by his Party for a year or more, when their objective seemed to be to destroy Canadair, with its jobs and technology, when the Leader of the Opposition, followed by the Member for Joliette, said they now want to co-operate and make Canadair into something constructive. I can only repeat to the Member for Joliette what I said to his leader, namely, that we shall consider the reports that will be made in a few days by committees of the House, in fact by the Joint Committees of the House that are examining Canadair's financial situation. Let them listen to the Minister responsible, Senator Austin, who, as soon as the Committee is ready, will make proposals for long-term objectives. Let the Opposition then decide in favour or against, but I hope it will be in favour, and in that case, the credibility that was destroyed by members of his own Party and, I am sorry to say, by a CBC program that was aired a few weeks ago . . . this credibility is being restored, and personally, I welcome the decision of the Opposition Parties to support our policy of continued assistance to Canadair.

Mr. La Salle: I have a supplementary, Madam Speaker.

Is the Prime Minister accusing the Progressive Conservative Party of discrediting this company? The Prime Minister knows perfectly well that the Progressive Conservative Party criticized the administrators appointed by this Government to manage the company, and if it is now evident that the company's administrators have failed in their task, I feel that a Special Committee would be useful in order to expose these administrators, get rid of them and restore the company's credibility. Madam Speaker, that is why I am repeating my question to the Prime Minister and asking him to withdraw his statement that this Party has discredited the company. Our Party has discredited poor managers, and the Prime Minister is certainly the first person to realize that today.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, I appeal to the memory of the Members of this House, which I hope is better than that of the Member for Joliette. Hardly six months ago, when we wanted to bail out Canadair by making new capital advances, this met with the opposition of the Hon. Member's colleagues on the Progressive Conservative benches. They wanted Canadair to die, thus repeating, 20 years later, the destructive impact on aerospace technology when they killed the AVRO program.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—CANADIAN RESPONSE TO UNITED STATES SECRETARY OF STATE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Acid rain is destroying our buildings, killing our lakes, and doing untold damage to the health of our citizens. The Minister himself on the weekend said it had become part of a global crisis. After five years of negotiation, all that the U.S. Secretary of State was able to deliver in his meetings last weekend with our Ministers was a commitment that maybe within a year another proposal will be discussed. Will the Minister tell the House what his response was to this American foot dragging?

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I am glad the Leader of the New Democratic Party has discovered the issue of acid rain at last. I would like to add that his information is a bit mixed up and fuzzy, as quite often is the case. If he wants to know what the Canadian position was in Halifax, which was stated very clearly, I will tell him. We said to the American delegation, and to Mr. Ruckelshaus, that we have a plan in Canada, that we have already moved toward the reduction of acid rain emissions by 25 per cent, that we are anxious to move with the Americans because we know that the ultimate objective of 20 kilograms per hectare per year can only be achieved together, and that we are anxiously waiting for them to be ready with a plan so that we can start negotiations, get a treaty going, and reach our objectives together.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, the Minister has referred to past actions of the Government of Canada which, I point out to him, his predecessor publicly admitted were inadequate.

GASOLINE EMISSIONS CONTROL

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, considering there are important things which the Canadian Government can do independent of what the United States does, why is it that in the United States there are three times as tough regulations or a level of control over gasoline emissions as we have here in Canada? Will the Minister at least match the U.S. level of gasoline emission control here in Canada? That is action he could take. Why does he not do it?

Hon. Chas L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I will not let the Leader of the New Democratic Party get away with a statement about a colleague of mine who has done such good work for all Canadians on the matter of acid rain.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Caccia: The present Minister of Employment and Immigration, if he deserves anything, it is respect, recognition, and praise. Having said that, Madam Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the Hon. Member that the question of gasoline emissions is an important one and is an issue to which my predecessor has addressed himself in recent months. I am now discussing the matter with the Minister of Transport and I hope to be able to make an announcement in a few weeks.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, we hope to have that announcement, and we hope it is a positive one.

SITUATION IN ONTARIO

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, with specific reference to Canada's largest producer of acid rain, namely, the Province of Ontario, and considering that in the Province of Ontario 1,400 lakes have already been killed because of acid rain and, I understand, another 48,000 lakes are seriously threatened, could the Minister tell us if he has approached the Government of Ontario and asked it to establish specific targets for getting rid of this blight in this our largest Province? If he has not done that, why not?

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, it is pathetic to see the Leader of the New Democratic Party—

An Hon. Member: Answer the question.

Mr. Caccia: —being forced to raise this issue because he has so little confidence in the Leader of the New Democratic Party at Queen's Park. Let me say to the Leader of the NDP that, as far as Ontario is concerned, if he has given up on his counterpart at Queen's Park, he should know that Ontario has set objectives of 43 per cent for Ontario Hydro and reduced standards of emissions for INCO which should reach a level of 1,770 tonnes daily in a matter of time.

An. Hon. Member: What time?

Mr. Caccia: An emission reduction of 40 per cent has been set in Quebec for Noranda. At the same time the Province of Ontario, I am told, is intending to buy 20 per cent of its coal requirements in the form of low sulphur content coal. I am making representations, and have made representations to my counterpart at Queen's Park, and I intend to continue to do so.

LABOUR RELATIONS

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS WILDCAT STRIKE AT RAINY RIVER, ONT.

Hon. John M. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Labour. At the present time there is a wildcat strike taking place among CN employees in the Village of Rainy River. It is likely to begin to spread because it deals with technological changes being introduced by the railway over its system. Would the Minister tell us what he can do to ensure that the technological changes, which have been the cause of wilds cat strikes, can be negotiated between the unions and the management, instead of being imposed unilaterally by management as is now the case?

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, like the Hon. Member, I am disappointed to see this illegal strike. Of course my officials are available, should both parties want assistance to quickly settle the issue.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REAPPOINTMENT OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. In his previous response to the Leader of the Opposition he stated he was happy to leave the operations of Canadair to the management of Canadair. In view of the considerable comment made by Senator Austin in reports linking the problems to the directors of Canadair, could the Prime Minister explain why the board was reappointed this summer, with no changes apart from the president?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Madam Speaker, but Senator Austin can be asked that question. He has appeared before the parliamentary committee, and he will appear again very shortly, as I indicated. I am sure he would be very happy to deal with that question.

Mr. Wilson: These appointments are the responsibility of the Prime Minister. Surely the Prime Minister can ask the questions. Why did this $1.5 billion loss to the Canadian taxpayers happen? What was the role of the directors, and what was their responsibility for this?

DIRECTORS' RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Michael Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Madam Speaker, does the Prime Minister attach any responsibility to that board of directors for the loss of $1.5 billion of taxpayers' money?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am not in a position to say if they are responsible or not.

An Hon. Member: Who is?

Mr. Trudeau: Well, Madam Speaker, let the Opposition get its act together. In his first question the Hon. Member asked why did Senator Austin recommend or ensure the reappointment of the same people. I am saying that that Senator, as the Minister responsible, will appear before the committee. He will be happy to answer this question.

TASK FORCE REPORT—DIRECTORS CRITICIZED

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question on the issue of whether the board is responsible. Is the Prime Minister aware that in 1982 a task force report, which was attached to the Treasury Board submission which approved the authorization of $1.3 billion in loan guarantees to this Company, clearly indicated that the board of directors was responsible for at least $150 million of the loss directly? Of course, legally it is responsible for the whole mess. In view of that, can the Prime Minister pleae explain to this House why it was that this June, in a semi-secret fashion, that entire board should be reappointed, in view of the fact that the Government's own internal task force indicated the board was not fulfilling its responsibilities?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, that is a repetition of the very same question which was asked of me by the previous questioner. I told him I did not have the answer, that I refer the question to the Minister who will be appearing before the parliamentary committee very shortly.

REQUEST THAT AUDITOR GENERAL UNDERTAKE COMPREHENSIVE AUDIT

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister has indicated he approved that $1.5 billion, approximately, without the benefit of the information which the task force attached to that approval.

The Prime Minister earlier indicated his theory of parliamentary democracy, that Parliament should not be concerned about day-to-day operations of Crown corporations. Apparently he does not feel that Ministers should be held responsible either, because he has not called any to account for this $2 billion they have lost. Will he at least give some comfort to this House and to the people of Canada who are paying these funds, and show that he cares, by appointing the Auditor General to undertake a comprehensive audit and be there from now on, so that we might know there will not be any more hundreds of millions of dollars wasted?

• (1450)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I am afraid the more recent questions are undoing all the good the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Member for Joliette had established earlier. They are rehashing the questions I heard in this House last Spring at a time when that Opposition was trying to destroy Canadair by preventing the Government from forwarding funds to keep it alive.

Mr. Stevens: That is wrong, and you know it.

Mr. Trudeau: Once again they should get their act together and follow the new lead of the new Leader of the Opposition.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

USE OF INFORMERS BY ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. The RCMP offered a constituent of mine the opportunity to become an informer in return for the dropping of criminal charges against him. This case came to a close in Whitehorse on Monday of this week. Would the Solicitor General advise this House what his views are on the use of bargaining by the RCMP for the dropping of criminal charges so long as the person charged will become an informer?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member stated the proposition I can certainly say that I do not agree with it, and it would not be Force policy to allow that type of negotiation to occur. But I would like to have the opportunity to look into the particular incident he describes before concluding whether his description is accurate and whether steps should be taken by me in connection with it.

REPORTED OFFER TO IMPAIRED DRIVERS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, would the Minister of Justice confirm that he is aware of cases where people charged with criminal offences such as impaired driving have been put in a position where the RCMP have bargained that away on the grounds that those people become informers? Would he also advise that he has been made aware by Judge

Barry Stuart from Whitehorse that he considers this a dangerous practice? Would he also advise if he is aware of any other cases in Canada where this is applied to indictable offences as well as to summary offences, and whether or not he agrees with this kind of plea bargaining and abuse of process?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, I do not have personal knowledge of any of the matters mentioned by the hon. gentleman. I would want to leave a considerable margin for the prosecutors and judges in all cases of plea bargaining.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

UNITED STATES PROPOSAL FOR YEAR-ROUND SHIPPING

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for External Relations, regarding the concern of some municipalities and communities along the St. Marys River over the U.S. House of Representatives Bill HR3678 which provides for year-round shipping in the Seaway and which could have adverse environmental impact on Canada, such as harming the fishery resource and the flooding of adjacent areas.

Can the Minister say what response he has received from the U.S. administration to the Canadian diplomatic note delivered a few weeks ago? Is the U.S. administration going to use its considerable influence to oppose this part of the Bill in the House of Representatives, and what further actions or steps are planned by the federal Government to protect our environment in this matter?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, at the time of my last inquiry there had been no reply from the United States to this note. I want to assure the Hon. Member that the Canadian Government has no plans for extending the navigation season on the Seaway, particularly in view of the current under-utilisation of Seaway capacity. The draft American Bill on the subject is still at an early stage, and developments remain uncertain. But our note very clearly expressed concerns about the potential environmental impact under the season extension proposal.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GRENADA—REPORTED SHOOTING OF PRIME MINISTER

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister on an unrelated matter. Given the reports by Radio Free Grenada of extreme reaction to the house arrest of Prime Minister Bishop and the report, about 2.20 this afternoon, that the Prime Minister had in fact been released but had been shot, and there was no report as to his condition, can the Minister indicate to the House what information he has, for the benefit of thousands of Grenadians here in Canada who will be most anxious and concerned about the well-being of their country and Prime Minister?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, the situation in Grenada is extremely unsettled, as the Hon. Member indicates by the latest of the radio reports to which he referred. However, we have no confirmed reports of the shooting of Prime Minister Bishop. What we do have is an indication that his supporters had released him from house arrest and that there is considerable confusion about what is happening on the island. According to our latest indication, there seems to be no danger for the Canadians who are on the island, and there is no report of widespread violence.

SAFETY OF CANADIAN CITIZENS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, in his continuing monitoring of this situation could the Minister not only determine for sure, because he is somewhat vague, the situation of Canadians, whether tourists or otherwise, who may be there, and whether they are free to leave or return to the island? Would he perhaps take an early opportunity tomorrow to give us an updated report as it has now been one week since there have been those extreme difficulties on that island, and particularly pay attention to whether or not there is any suggestion that this same turmoil might be in the process of being extended to other small islands in that part of the Caribbean Basin?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Madam Speaker, we have absolutely no indication or reason for thinking that there could be any extension of the unsettled conditions from Grenada itself, where a particular situation exists. We are continuing to monitor the situation. There has been a representative of the Canadian diplomatic post in Barbados present in Grenada and in contact with a substantial number of the Canadians in the area. According to my information there are about 81 Canadians resident there. Through answers to questions we certainly will attempt to keep the House informed about the situation as it develops in Grenada.

FINANCE

TAX PROPOSAL AFFECTING CHARITIES

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance whose Department issued a discussion paper entitled "Charities and the Canadian Tax System", in May. The Minister has heard from a wide cross section of Canadian groups such as health care, and religious and social service agencies. There has been widespread criticism of the proposed elimination of the distinction between charities and charitable foundations.

In light of this simplistic proposal circulated for discussion, does the Minister have plans that he can now announce for amending the proposals put forward, and has he had discussions with the Secretary of State about a more suitable response to the voluntary sector in Canada?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, a departmental working paper was published precisely so that all interested parties could express their views, give us their suggestions, and guarantee, on the one hand that there would be no abuses of the fiscal system by the foundations, and on the other, that true charitable organizations would receive all the fiscal benefits provided by the Act. We have had many meetings with representatives from these organizations. We have received many suggestions. We are now examining these proposals and I shall be able to announce in due time certain decisions or conclusions. For the moment, we are still considering the comments and suggestions made to us.

[English]

ROLE SUGGESTED FOR COMMITTEE

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, while the Minister has had individual representations, there has been no opportunity for these groups to appear before a committee of this House, or in any other public forum. Is the Minister now prepared to put the findings he has received before the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs in the same way as the subject of the general support of the voluntary sector has been referred to that committee for discussion?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the suggestion of the Hon. Member is certainly surprising. I have to tell him once again that I made public a working paper which is neither official nor governmental, but simply a departmental working paper, so that the organizations concerned can express their views. I repeat that we have had many meetings. The submissions made by these organizations are in the public domain if these organizations so wish it. When I decide to make a specific legislative proposal to Parliament, this proposal will obviously be considered by Parliament at that time. Until then, I believe that such an initiative would be at the very least premature, and I would invite instead the Parliamentary Committee to concentrate on issues dealing with specific bills.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

NOTICE OF ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER REPORT AND THIRD READING STAGES OF BILL C-155

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I would like to rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Axworthy: I wish to inform the House that there have been consultations among the representatives of the Parties.

Mr. Deans: Point of order!

Mr. Axworthy: It has not been possible to reach an agreement pursuant to Standing Order 80 and Standing Order 81 with regard to the allocation of time on the report stage and third reading stage of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of western grain and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Shame on you!

Mr. Deans: Point of order.

Mr. Axworthy: Therefore, at the next sitting of the House I shall propose a motion, pursuant to Standing Order 82, to allocate two sitting days to the report stage and one sitting day to the third reading stage of the Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I contend that the statement made by the Minister is certainly not a point of order. It may well be a statement by a Minister for which authority has been granted, but there is no point of order that allows a Minister to rise and make a statement.

While I am on my feet, I move:

That we proceed to Orders of the Day.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member is quite wrong. Such motions have been moved before under points of order. I have a list of them here. Therefore, that notice of motion by the Hon. Minister is quite valid in the House.

If the Hon. Member now wants to move another motion, he may do so. But that particular motion was perfectly valid. Furthermore, the Hon. Member should know that he may not move the adjournment of the House on a point of order.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I would have expected the courtesy, by the traditional usages and customs of this place, of being heard on the point of order raised before the Chair made a ruling, for I did have submissions to make. I would like to make them now while the Minister is in his seat. You have made your ruling, and I will not question that.

The way that the Minister functioned here was very sneaky and totally unnecessary.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: He learned it from you, Erik.

Mr. Nielsen: I hear the Hon. Member over there with his usual loud voice, saying that he is learning from me. If the Minister had paid closer attention he would know that there is a way to do this properly and not contemptuously as he has done. This could have prevented the problems from arising yesterday had they done it the right way. The right way is to do it during Routine Proceedings and not on any sneaky, contemptuous point of order. In my submission that is the way it should be done, during Routine Proceedings. The Chair will remember that I presented no less than 28 precedents to the Chair last year when discussing this very subject. The Chair agreed at the time that, in addition to other areas in our proceedings, Routine Proceedings could be used for giving such notice. That is what should have been done yesterday and what should have been done today. The Government would have avoided all of the difficulties that it encountered yesterday.

This contemptuous way of proceeding is indicative, of course, in this whole question. To give notice which triggers closure in this fashion just shows the level to which a ragtag bunch on that Treasury bench are prepared to stoop.

Madam Speaker: For the benefit of the House, I believe I should read Standing Order 82 under which the Hon. Minister acted and the House will see what the restrictions imposed upon a Minister are in such a case. Standing Order 82 reads:

A Minister of the Crown who from his or her place in the House at a previous sitting has stated that an agreement could not be reached—

Those are the restrictions.

Mr. Nielsen: That does not apply.

Madam Speaker: What the Hon. Minister did was perfectly in order.

Mr. Nielsen: That Standing Order does not apply.

Madam Speaker: I remember the Hon. Member's submission last year and a number of cases that he cited, but he should remember that I also cited a number of occasions when such a motion—

Mr. Nielsen: One.

Madam Speaker: Well, that is enough.

Mr. Nielsen: Out of 28.

Madam Speaker: It does not say otherwise that you cannot do it.

Mr. Nielsen: Twenty-eight went the other way.

Madam Speaker: It never said you cannot do it on a point of order, and it has been done. Therefore, I have no choice but to declare that it was perfectly in order.

Mr. Deans: While this matter is being discussed, would the Speaker enlighten us on another question? Since it does not say specifically how the question can be raised, whether or not the Minister can raise it on a point of order, could the Speaker point out which Standing Order says that a motion will lapse at six o'clock?

Madam Speaker: Is the Hon. Member reflecting on a ruling of the Chair?

Mr. Deans: Just asking a question.

Madam Speaker: Will the Hon. Member resume his seat. If he wants to do that—

Mr. Deans: I am asking a question.

Madam Speaker: There is a procedure that he can use and I invite him to do so. Otherwise I would ask him to please not mention anything else in the House. He is reflecting on a ruling of the Chair, and that cannot be allowed.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: On a point of order.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member has another point of order?

Mr. Deans: Yes, thank you.

Madam Speaker: I hope it has nothing to do with the ruling.

Mr. Deans: Nothing at all. Since there are numerous precedents for what the Minister has done. I would like to know if Your Honour would be kind enough to provide for the House the precedents on other motions and how they too should be handled from now on?

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member is again reflecting on a decision I made. I said that this motion was perfectly in order. If the Hon. Member wants supplementary information on precedents of the House on how matters should be handled, he knows—

Mr. Deans: Why don't you go and sit beside them.

Madam Speaker: —that the Table officers are willing to inform him at any time on any procedure he may use, as they always do.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, if I heard correctly what you were reading from in support of the Minister's action, it was Standing Order 82 which deals with the motion which follows the notice. With great respect, that is not applicable in the case of the Minister giving notice. As the Chair and most Members are aware, this process follows three stages: first the notice, second the motion following the notice, which follows 24 hours later if the Government wishes, and third, the allocation process of the allocated days.

Today the Minister was giving notice and, without reflecting on the Chair whatsoever, the Standing Order does not provide for that being done on a point of order. Standing Order 82 from which the Chair read has nothing to do, with great respect, with the process we are embarked upon today.

• (1510)

Madam Speaker: I did not quote the Standing Order to the end but the Standing Order, as the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has quite rightly said, exposes the three stages that are necessary in this particular procedure. It does not indicate that it may be done on a point of order, which does not necessarily mean that it cannot be done on a point of order. Therefore, the only restriction upon a Minister in such a case is that he should be standing in his or her place at a previous sitting of the House.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order on this question. The Speaker has indicated that the Minister can rise and give notice of a motion on a point or order. I would draw to the attention of the Speaker Citation 233—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I have ruled on that.

Mr. Benjamin: Why don't you sit over there?

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I have ruled that this notice of motion is perfectly in order. I will have no more submissions on it. I have ruled.

Mr. Benjamin: Overrule then.

Madam Speaker: Therefore, Hon. Members will know that once the Chair has ruled, they may not comment on the ruling. If they want to challenge it, they know how to do that. There is a procedure for doing that.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It is very clear that points of order are questions raised with the view of calling attention to any departure from the Standing Orders or the customary modes of proceeding in debate or in the conduct of legislative business and may be raised at virtually any time by any Member. That is Citation 233. To use a point of order in a manner which is not specified under Citation 233 is in itself a breach of the rules. If I did not know better, I would say the Speaker was taking her marching orders from the Government in this matter.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

An Hon. Member: Throw him out!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I am afraid I have to ask the Hon. Member, since he has said something which really reflects on the impartiality of the Speaker, to withdraw those words.

Mr. De Bané: Tell him to resign.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I believe the proceedings which have taken place so far are a mockery of this House.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. We are not discussing that now. The House may not proceed to any other kind of debate until the Hon. Member has withdrawn those words which reflect on the impartiality of the Speaker.

Mr. Deans: What words?

Madam Speaker: And as the Hon. Member knows, the House cannot function—

Mr. Benjamin: What words?

Mr. Deans: What words?

Madam Speaker: I will not repeat them because they are not supposed to be spoken in this House. I ask the Hon. Member to please withdraw the words that reflect on the Speaker's impartiality.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I stated very clearly that if I did not know better, I would say the Speaker was taking her marching orders from the Chair because of the abuse which seems to be taking place in this House. It is a shambles.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. "Marching orders from the Chair?" This time the Hon. Member is saying from the Chair. The last time the Hon. Member said from the Government. What exactly does the Hon. Member want to say?

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, let us be clear on what is taking place here. The Speaker is refusing to listen to a legitimate point of order. I said "if I did not know better", because I cannot imagine that the Speaker would seriously take her marching orders from the Minister of Transport (Mr. Axworthy). If I did not know better, it would certainly have appeared to be the case that the Speaker had consulted with the Government and was taking her orders from the Government, because she is not listening—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I have to ask the Hon. Member, and I plead with him to recognize for the proper functioning of this House, that he has gone far beyond what is acceptable in referring to the Chair. I would ask him to withdraw the words used the first time when he made an implication in precise words. His first intervention was quite clear and now he is muddling it up, but I want him to withdraw the words that he used the first time.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I have no intention of withdrawing the statement I made.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Out!

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): I believe what has taken place in this House is a travesty. If I did not know better, I would say that the Speaker was in cahoots with the Government to prevent this Party from putting its position—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. For the last time, will the Hon. Member withdraw those words?

Mr. Benjamin: When is your last time?

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, I chose my words with care. I will stand by those words and I hope that the Speaker might consider in the circumstances Citation 233 of Beauchesne and realize that the Minister had no business doing what he was doing and, in effect, is making a mockery of the processes of this House.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Since I have warned the Hon. Member for the last time, I am afraid that I have to name the Hon. Member.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I move:

That the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) be expelled from the House for the remainder of this sitting.

Madam Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Madam Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Madam Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Madam Speaker: Call in the Members.

Madam Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order to express our very serious reservations about the events that occurred here today.

The Minister is right in what he did but we are still convinced that the time at which he did it is quite wrong. The integrity of this institution was at stake here. We could not support the juvenile and rude conduct of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) who was encouraging anarchy in this institution.

The Chair has mentioned options that are available for Members who are dissatisfied with rulings of the Chair. We are going to review all of the options open to us between now and the next sitting, including those that have been suggested by the Chair. We supported the Chair, which is the symbol of authority and order in this place, of all of us.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Any insulting behavior toward the Chair is insulting behaviour toward all of us.

Mr. Deans: Madam Speaker, I, too, regret what has happened over the course of the last two days.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: I remember the days when the Conservatives charged the Chair. I remember the days when the Conservatives kept the House of Commons tied up on points of order. I remember the 15 days when the House of Commons could not sit while the Conservatives tried to get more benefits for their oil company friends. I regret that the Conservatives have chosen to ignore the rules of Parliament and to support the motion.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: In view of the vote that has just taken place in the House and the way that the motion has been resolved, I must ask the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) to withdraw from the House for the remainder of the sitting.

And Mr. Robinson (Burnaby) having withdrawn:

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

LENGTH OF PERIOD ALLOCATED TO PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I wish to ask for unanimous consent, since we are about to start on private members' business, but perhaps I should explain. Although it is 5.15 p.m., I think it would be advisable, if Hon. Members agree, to keep at least one of the three hours set aside for private members' business. On this side of the House, there is consent for granting a full hour, that is, the first of the three hours provided for private members' business. I am asking the consent of the House for one full hour, but we are not prepared, however, to give consent for two additional hours, since it is already late. I also wish to inform our colleagues that there will be Royal Assent at 5:45 p.m., and that the hour in question does not include the time required for royal assent.

Madam Speaker: Does the House give its unanimous—

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, could the Government House Leader refresh my memory on the order of business that will be discussed in that hour?

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, my hon. colleague knows perfectly well it is the motion that is on the agenda today. The motion was moved by a private Member, on a subject for which the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Solicitor General (Mr. Tardif) is responsible, and that is the motion I am referring to.

[English]

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, we would be very happy to give that consent if the order of business was the business standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington).

Madam Speaker: Then do I take it that there is no unanimous consent?

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, on the order of the day for Private Members' Business which is usually dealt with by my Parliamentary Secretary, I am told that we are talking about Notice of Motion No. 44. That is the offer we are making. We are willing to give unanimous consent to deal with Motion No. 44 and to give it a full hour, not including the time required for Royal Assent.

Mr. Nielsen: We agree.

Madam Speaker: Does the House give unanimous consent for Motion No. 44 to be considered by the House for one full hour?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: Agreed and so ordered.

PETITION

MR. BOCKSTAEL—DEMOLITION OF PETRO-CANADA RESTAURANT

Mr. Robert Bockstael (St. Boniface): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from the undersigned residents of Canada who humbly sheweth that Petro-Canada owns a service station and restaurant at Warren's Corner on the Trans-Canada Highway in St. Boniface; that this restaurant-service station has been serving the local and travelling public effectively since 1948 and that, by proceeding with the demolition of this facility and replacing it with a self-serve gas bar, Petro-Canada will cause a loss of 22 jobs at the end of this week. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament for such measures as the House may think expedient to take to encourage officials of Petro-Canada to construct or cause others to establish a convenient truck-stop restaurant on the site—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is taking a bit too much time for a petition. He knows that all that is required is to give the title and maybe a few sentences in explanation of his petition. We will consider that the Hon. Member's petition has been given in the House and filed with the Clerk.

CONVENTION ON INTERNATIONAL TRADE IN ENDANGERED SPECIES

Question No. 5,006—Mr. Blenkarn:

1. Did the Government participate in the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species in Botswana between April 19 and 30, 1983?

2. Was Canada's delegation the third largest delegation of the ten official delegations at that meeting?

3. Did the Government pay for the cost of six unofficial delegates from the Inuit Circumpolar Conference, the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada, The Assembly of First Nations and the Canadian Sealers Association and, if so, for what reason?

4. What were the names of the delegates sent by Canada, either as official or unofficial delegates?

5. What was the total cost of the Canadian delegation to Botswana?

6. Did sending the delegation of sixteen to the Convention in Botswana constitute an appropriate response by the Government to the 6 and 5 Program?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Canada did participate in the biennial meeting of parties to the Convention of International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) held in Gaborone, Botswana, April 19-30, 1983. One of the principal reasons for this participation was the presentation at this conference of both a proposal and a resolution either of which, if passed, could have seriously damaged the Canadian economy. The proposal called for the inclusion in an "endangered species" list of all phocid seals including those currently harvested in Canada, either commercially or on a subsistence basis by our indigenous people, a proposal which Canadian scientists judged to be groundless but which if passed would likely have removed any hope for a recovery of the Canadian sealing industry. The resolution called for a complete halt in the international trade of furs taken from animals trapped by what were alleged to be inhumane methods, a resolution which ignored the steady progress being made in Canada to ensure that trapping is carried out humanely, but which if passed could have severely damaged the $600 million annual revenue of the Canadian fur industry.

2. Canada's delegation, with ten members, was the third largest of the 53 official delegations, behind the U.S.A. (15) and Botswana (30), although only slightly larger than delegations from countries such as the F.R.G. (9) or Britain (9). No other country, however, would have been proportionately more adversely affected than Canada if the proposal or the resolution had been passed.

3. Individual Canadian Government Departments subsidized the expenses of participation as observers of the following representatives of non-government organizations: Messrs. Enoch Obed and Peter Ernerk of the Inuit Tapirisat, Mr. George Erasmus of The Assembly of First Nations of Canada, Mr. Willie Deraspe of the Canadian Sealers' Association.

It was considered vital to allow representatives of those Canadians likely to be most adversely affected if the proposal or the resolution were passed to be able to speak for themselves on the issue, especially where such persons are from disadvantaged groups unable themselves to pay the high costs of international travel. All of these observers provided persuasive personal touches which were particularly effective in allowing Third World delegates more closely to identify with the human issues involved. CITES meetings allow the participation of NGO representatives as observers, and nearly 150 attended.

4. The official delegation consisted of:

Mr. Bert Tétreault,
Director General,
Canadian Wildlife Service,
Environment Canada,
(Head of Delegation);
Mr. John Heppes,
Administrator for CITES for Canada,
Environment Canada,
(Alternate Head of Delegation);
Mr. Peter Ittinuar, M.P.,
Special Advisor to the Delegation;
Mr. William T. Munro,
Biologist,
Fish and Wildlife Service,
British Columbia Government;
Mr. George Cowley,
Head, Environment Section,
Energy and Environment Division,
Department of External Affairs;
Dr. Nick Novakowski,

Co-ordinator, Wildlife Research,
Canadian Wildlife Service,
Environment Canada;
Dr. William Doubleday,
Director,
Resource Research Branch,
Department of Fisheries and Oceans;
Mr. Paul Montreuil,
Resource Research Branch,
Department of Fisheries and Oceans;
Ms. Judith Swan,
International Directorate,
Department of Fisheries and Oceans;
Ms. Theresa Nahanee,
Senior Policy Analyst,
Department of Indian and Northern Affairs.

The observers listed in part 3 above could not strictly speaking be considered delegates, "unofficial" or otherwise, since they acted in purely independent capacities. Other Canadian non-government organization representatives attending as observers at their own or their organization's expense included: Mr. Jan Duvekot of the Northwest Territories Government, Mr. Goerge Whitman of the Fur Fashion Council, Mme. Denise Angé and Mr. Oscar Respitz of the Fur Trade Association, Mr. William Anderson of the Inuit Circumpolar Conference, Mr. Don Dailley of the Canadian Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, Dr. Nicholas Mrosovski of the Canadian Committee of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature, and Ms. Anne Doncaster of the International Primate Protection League of Canada.

5. The total cost to Canada of participation in the conference included the basic costs of air travel, room, board and incidentals for the 14 federal Government sponsored participants, approximately $75,000, and another $7,000 in expenses associated with participation, bringing the total to approximately $82,000.

6. The Department of External Affairs, in common with all other Federal departments and agencies, continues to observe the 6 and 5 restraints in its over-all conference participation and other budgets. The larger than average size of the delegation to the CITES conference has been compensated for by reductions in or eliminations of other delegations to less crucial conferences. The outcome of the votes of the CITES conference were in doubt until the final counts, and it is reasonable to conjecture that a lesser delegation might not have achieved the singular successes of the one actually sent.

NUMBER OF CANADIANS AT EMBASSY IN MOSCOW

Question No. 5,262—Mr. Gamble:

1. What is the total number of Canadians staffing the Canadian Embassy in Moscow?

2. Are there Canadians, in addition to those referred to in Part 1, performing diplomatic or consular services in the Soviet Union and, if so, how many?

3. What is the total number of citizens of the Soviet Union staffing the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa?

4. Are there Soviets, in addition to those referred to in Part 3, performing diplomatic or consular services in Canada and, if so, how many?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. There are 44 Canadian Embassy staff in Moscow.

2. There are no Canadian diplomatic or consular representatives resident outside Moscow.

3. There are 45 Soviet citizens assigned to the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa.

4. There are 16 Soviet citizens who work at the Soviet Consulate in Montreal. Of these nine enjoy consular status.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. John Evans (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, if question No. 4,493 could be made an order for return, this return would be tabled immediately.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: The return will be tabled forthwith.

PACIFIC NATIONAL EXHIBITION

Question No. 4,493—Mr. Siddon:

1. What was the total cost of the government's participation at the 1982 Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver?

2. What amount did the Government expend for (a) the rental of exhibition and display area and premises (b) the rental or purchase of display equipment, lighting, utilities, decorations and other related paraphernalia (c) staff salaries for personnel attending to the government displays (d) security (e) transportation of equipment, materials, displays and staff (f) remuneration for contractors, special consultants or other outside personnel in relation to designing, constructing, assembling and/or disassembling each display (g) publicity and public relations contracts (h) publications, brochures, other printed matter and promotional or information handouts in relation to its participation at the Exhibition and, in each case, from which department's budget were the funds expended?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Stevens: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I must once again ask the Parliamentary Secretary why we have not had an answer to question No. 2,042 which was asked on January 29, 1981. That simple request for information—asks what was the total cost—of the Prime Minister's December/January world tour. As we know, Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister is warming up again for another tour. I feel it is only fair to the Canadian public that we at least get an accounting for the tour he made in 1980-81 before he leaves on his current tour in a few days' time.

Mr. Nielsen: A three-week tour.

Mr. Evans: I would be glad to look into that particular question for the Hon. Member, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Beatty: Madam Speaker, perhaps I could bring to the attention of the Parliamentary Secretary questions Nos. 2,672 and 3,506. The first question was placed on the Order Paper on June 23, 1981. The second question was placed on the Order Paper December 2, 1981. Both these questions deal with the policy of the Government relating to public opinion surveys and request that the Government declassify those surveys. What is the reason for the delay in answering these two questions?

Mr. Evans: I give the same answer to the Hon. Member as I gave to the Hon. Member for York-Peel, Madam Speaker. I will look into the matter and try to get back to him personally and indicate the answer I am able to find.

Madam Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: Stand.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

FREE VOTE ON REINSTATEMENT

The House resumed, from April 3, 1981, consideration of the motion of Mr. Fennell:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of allowing a free vote in the House of Commons on the reinstatement of capital punishment for first degree murder.

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, this motion touches the core of a matter which has bothered me and other Members of Parliament for some considerable period of time. In every poll taken, every testing of public opinion in, I suspect, virtually every conceivable constituency in Canada over the past 15 and 20 years, somewhere between 70 per cent and 90 per cent of the respondents to these polls have indicated that they wish—even demand—that the punishment for premeditated murder, which in this motion is called first degree murder, that heinous crime of murder with intent, should be a crime for which the death penalty is appropriate. Yet somewhere along the line certain Members of Parliament, particularly Leaders of Parties in this House, have used the authority of the Party system to prevent a decision on this type of treatment in the Criminal Code to come to a free vote.

The consequence of this is that this Parliament, by the use of the Party system and the control it imposes upon Hon. Members, has managed to prevent what the vast consensus of the public demands. There is something wrong. There is something wrong with the Party system which says not that an Hon. Member should use his own discretion as to what he might want, but which dictates that one has to follow the Party line if one is a Member of Cabinet, a Parliamentary Secretary or a Member of the Government Party. Clearly it is, then, not a question of following one's own conscience when one votes as a Member. It is not a question of following the dictates of one's constituents. It is a question of following what a Member is required to do in terms of a Party Whip and the Party's position.

There are some issues which are not matters of Party policy or Party position. The issue of capital punishment for heinous premeditated murder is one of those issues. Perhaps abortion is one of those issues as well. Perhaps the right to smoke marijuana should be one of those issues. There are certain issues in our society which deal with the way we look at what is right and what is wrong, and the way the public of Canada looks at what is right and what is wrong. Those particular questions of what is right and what is wrong are not questions of a Party position. They are questions of the individual conscience, not only of Hon. Members but of individuals in our constituencies.

Some of us may say we are obligated to follow the consciences of the majority of our constituents. I tend to take that view. Some of us may say that we were elected to use our best judgment and we are entitled to use our best judgment even though it might be in total contravention of what our constituents want. I believe all of us must take the position that this is not a matter which should come before the House of Commons as a Government matter. It should come before the House of Commons as an open matter, a matter on which all of us can individually vote the way we individually want to vote, not the way we must vote in order to stay within the controls placed on us by the Party system. Every time this matter has come to a vote in this House it has been on the basis of an amendment to the Criminal Code moved by the Government.

● (1730)

In effect, then, Members of the Government Party have been forced to vote with the Government, the theory being that if they did not they would be voting against Cabinet solidarity, against themselves. It is a Government Bill, therefore they must vote for the Government Bill. That position negates the whole concept of Members of Parliament being able to handle issues such as the capital punishment issue in an independent and sensible way, the way our constituents expect us to handle the issue.

I say to you, Sir, that it is vitally important that this House proceed with this motion because we as Members of Parliament should be allowed to express our concern on issues involving the way we as a nation should be governed, on moral issues. At one time, Mr. Speaker, the Criminal Code provided for the chopping off of arms if you committed theft, or even hanging. Certainly in times past people have been stoned for adultery and so on. The question of punishment appropriate to the offence is determined to a large extent not by people who are in the egghead part of society, as many of us are, but by the ordinary, common person. Surely Members of Parliament should be able to come to this place and, when we are dealing with an issue such as capital punishment, be free from the controls of Whips, free from the controls of the way our Party or Leader views the matter, and free to express ourselves by voting clearly on the matter without any control. Therefore, Sir, I say to you and this House that this motion should be supported.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Marceau (Jonquière): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate, I recall the difficult time we had a few years ago when this important subject was debated in the House. It is clear that the motion now before the House is concerned with a very specific subject, namely capital punishment, but it also reflects the kind of society to which we belong and the kind of society we want.

Mr. Speaker, you will recall, since you were in the House at the time, that on July 14, 1976, there was a free vote, and I agree with the comments of the previous speaker who said that the free vote was perhaps influenced, and I think we should realize this, not by Government policy but by party ideology. When I voted as I did, it was to express a philosophy, to show the kind of society to which I wanted to belong, and I was doing so through the political party of which I was a member. However, I can say quite frankly that no one could have forced me or compelled me to act as I did, if I had not, as a matter of conscience, deliberately decided in favour of abolition of capital punishment.

Mr. Speaker, I realize the issue is a difficult one, that it probably goes beyond political parties as such because it depends on the personality, as it were, of the individual and the environment in which he lives.

I was listening to the previous speaker who said that 79 or 80 per cent of Canadian polled were in favour of capital punishment. With respect, I do not share my hon. colleague's opinion. Mr. Speaker, it is clear that the wording of a question tends to influence the answer given by the respondent. If there is a single question in the poll, such as "Are you for or against the death penalty?", and that the question does not suggest any alternative, it is quite possible that a good many Canadians who have just heard about foul crimes would favour the reinstatement of capital punishment. However, if there is a second question in the poll, such as "Are you in favour of handing out a 25-year jail sentence to a criminal convicted of first degree murder?", most, if not all, Canadians would say yes. In other words, Canadians are expressing fear and they are saying to the Government that criminals should not be set free to roam the streets after relatively short prison terms, as if hardened criminals can regain their freedom after spending very little time behind bars.

Mr. Speaker, I can support that statement with personal experience. I received similar letters from two lifers who did not know each other and were not even in the same institution. Yet, their viewpoint was exactly the same: we would rather face capital punishment than a 25-year jail sentence. It proves that, in a world where we are rightfully seeking punishment for odious crimes, I can say respectfully to those who believe that the death penalty is the solution, and to my colleagues who share that view, that they are mistaken, and that Canadians who support that opinion are mistaken as well, because people who have been convicted of a serious crime punishable by a 25-year jail sentence consider that they are more severely punished when, pursuant to the new legislation, they are kept in jail and deprived of their freedom during 25 years for first degree murder or 15 years for second degree murder.

Mr. Speaker, that is another way of saying that in a debate such as this one, we must try to forget for a moment the nature and circumstances of the crime which has been committed, and think instead about the kind of society in which we want to live.

A criminal is accused of taking someone's life. An individual is thrown in jail because he has committed the most despicable crime, taking the life of a fellow human being. I think it is sometimes difficult to react any other way when confronted with repugnant and totally meaningless crimes. The first impulse of the ordinary man is understandable. He says that the criminal no longer has any right to his freedom or even his life. But should the legislator be influenced and seek vengeance? Should the legislator take a decision when he is emotionally stressed? I do not think so, Mr. Speaker. I think that as spokesmen for all Canadians, our role is to enlighten them and provide them with every means to enable them to make a fair and honest judgment.

Mr. Speaker, when speaking of fair and honest decisions, I think that my colleagues will agree that statistics are undoubtedly a useful tool to make decisions. Polls are the usual procedure to gauge public opinion, but when a decision must be made, we should not make it exclusively to comply with people's wishes. Statistics clearly indicate that since 1956, when the death penalty was abolished, the number of crimes or murders has decreased. But there is a distinction to be made: the number of violent crimes has not diminished. Violence has increased, but the number of murders has fallen. I think that this shows that statistics can be used by both sides on the issue of capital punishment. I suggest that on the whole, the statistics to which I referred tend to support my views, although I do not pretend to be an authority giving confirmed opinion. I am only speaking according to my conscience, since my colleague referred to it a while ago. We all have our conscience. We try to abide by own conscience as legislators when we must cloose a direction which offers true protection and security to Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, as far as public opinion polls are concerned, we realize that some countries have abolished the death penalty. Those countries often have a lower crime rate than before.

On the other hand, there are nations which have both the death penalty and a very high crime rate. Certain countries have chosen to abolish the death penalty for some reason or other, but in this country, in my opinion, we made that decision for a very important reason, and we did so in a non-partisan move.

Moreover, I remember the very eloquent comments of the Right Honourable the then Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark), when he stated: "I have realized that the death penalty is no deterrent for the peculiar type of persons that murderers are". He also added the following: "Our duty is to establish whether the threat of capital punishment would deter those who might be likely to take a human life, that is to commit murder". I have seen no strong evidence that the threat of that penalty could be a deterrent, and I agree with the views put forward by the then Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

The Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) had also stated, and I quote: "I do not believe there are arguments either of reason or of a moral nature in support of capital punishment". He also stated: "The Solicitor General has stressed like others that the information at our disposal is not conclusive to say the least".

Those are statements made by dedicated politicians, by men with just as good and sound a conscience as any citizen who would advocate capital punishment, and those men of experience and distinction did support at that time the very close vote to abolish capital punishment.

Mr. Speaker, there is a fundamental reason why I cannot, as a member of Parliament and as a citizen, support capital punishment. It is not the kind of criminal acts, frequently of a sordid nature, that have been committed and that call for a penalty. It is, in my view, the injustice involved in reinstating capital punishment. I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, and in view of your vast knowledge I know you are aware of them, but I take the liberty of reminding you of the facts. To what class of citizens do criminals belong? Most of them come from the ranks of the have-nots, the poor, the unemployed, and those on welfare. They are the ones that are mostly involved in criminal acts that go as far as murder. Why should our society lay on people who are already underprivileged, why should it lay on them the burden of an error that often is not the fault of those who committed it but that of the society in which they live?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please!

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[Translation]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the Chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, the Speaker with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

And being returned:

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that when the House did attend His Honour the Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General in the Senate Chamber, His Honour was pleased to give in Her Majesty's name the Royal Assent to the following Bill:

An Act to amend the Export Development Act.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

FREE VOTE ON REINSTATEMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Fennell:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of allowing a free vote in the House of Commons on the reinstatement of capital punishment for first degree murder.

Mr. Marceau: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether the three traditional knocks on this door to summon us to the Senate were meant to ask me to reflect on the comments I had already made before Royal Assent, but in any case, I believe that I can repeat these same comments and say once more that the central argument on which I base my decision not to support the reinstatement of capital punishment concerns justice and equity towards the people most often involved in serious crimes of violence.

As I was saying earlier a society which to show its disapproval and express its anger for an infamous act, commits itself such an act by throwing into jail or taking the life of people who are already disadvantaged, is not behaving with fairness and decency.

Mr. Speaker, much has been said about premeditated acts. However, it has been established that 70 per cent of all premeditated murders are committed by people who are on welfare or unemployed. They are not the ones who are responsible; society is to blame, and if we were to commit such a reprehensible act against people who are already disadvantaged, what we would be doing ourselves would also be unacceptable as we would be forcing people who do not deserve it to pay the price that we should all collectively pay for the acts committed.

Needless to say, there are also cases of miscarriage of justice. I remember the famous Coffin case of the fifties. It now seems virtually established that Mr. Coffin, who was hanged for the crime, did not commit the murder for which he died.

In any case, Mr. Speaker, I am convinced that we must be guided in this debate by logic and the interests of the people we want to defend. I invite my colleagues who believe that the reinstatement of capital punishment might be the answer, to reflect on the fact that it is not by adding to the violence which has already been committed and by having the government or the Parliament retaliate with a similar act, that we will solve the problem; on the contrary, we would be playing into the hands of those who want to break up our society by promoting violence, who want to destroy it by making us forget that whatever the act committed, someone is involved, a family is involved, and that while a penalty must be imposed, no government and no Parliament is ever allowed to take the life of someone who received it from God. In view of these facts, I believe that we should not reinstate the death penalty.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Before recognizing the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie), perhaps it would be useful for the Chair to inform the House that the full hour of debate will expire at 6.34 p.m., since the House took nine minutes to go to the other place for Royal Assent.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of comments to make in the course of the debate on Motion No. 44 concerning the advisability of allowing a free vote in the House of Commons on the reinstatement of capital punishment for first degree murder. I would mainly like to direct my comments to the whole question of free votes.

I was interested in the remarks of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) when, in speaking in favour of the motion, he indicated that he saw a lot more room for free votes on matters having to do with what he called moral issues or, as they have also been called, issues of conscience. He cited capital punishment as one of these. There are others which have traditionally been regarded in this way, such as issues having to do with the question of abortion. The Hon. Member for Mississauga South cited the legalization of marijuana as another example of an issue which, in his view, belonged to this category of moral issues and issues of conscience. He felt such issues should stand somewhere beyond the reach of Party discipline where Members of Parliament could make decisions either according to an understanding of having a responsibility to make their own best judgment, which is the traditional conservative view of the role of a Member of Parliament, or according to an understanding of themselves as having a responsibility to respond to majority opinion in their constituencies, which is a more modern, liberal view of politics. In either case, the Hon. Member contended that certain issues ought to be beyond the reach of Party discipline because they belong in the category of moral issues.

I both agree and disagree with the Hon. Member on this and I will try to say why. I agree with him because I think that there ought to be a wider range of issues than at present on which there is occasion for free votes, an occasion for Parliament to express itself without the constraints of Party discipline. In that respect I agree with the Hon. Member.

Where I have some hesitation in agreeing with him is when he wants to limit what is viewed as moral issues to issues such as capital punishment, abortion and so on. That sets up a distinction between those issues and other issues which I find hard to accept. In my view, how we organize our economy is a moral issue. It is not as though we have a little group of issues on one side which have a moral dimension and another group of issues, such as how we organize our economy, how we treat the poor, what our social programs, international relations and policy are as far as the Third World is concerned, on the other side.

Whatever issues lie outside the group of issues which the Hon. Member for Mississauga South articulated also have a moral dimension to them. Everything we do in this House of Commons, every policy that we consider and debate in this House, has a moral dimension to it. My hesitation therefore about that part of the analysis of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South is the danger of setting aside certain questions having to do with morality and, by doing so, implying that there is a broader range of issues which are purely administrative in nature, or technical or managerial and do not have a moral dimension. As I said, everything we consider in this House has a moral dimension.

Returning to the question of free votes, I would agree that there has to be a wider range of issues on which Members of Parliament have occasion to exercise independent judgment and judgments which are independent of Party discipline. I say this for two reasons. The first is that I think there does exist a range of issues on which independent judgment is more appropriate than Party displine and the second is that the heavy hand of Party politics is more omnipresent and pressing in Canadian politics than in the politics of almost any other democratic country of which I am aware.

Now the United States of America is often cited as an example of a political system in which people who belong to one political party or the other feel that there is much more freedom to criticize positions taken by members of their own party or positions taken by Presidents who belong to their own party. That is the Congressional system, but that is not what I am advocating.

I am advocating something that can be found simply by going to the mother Parliament in Britain. As I understand the British parliamentary system from having spent some time there and from having considered these matters as a member of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, there is a much broader range of issues on which it is understood and is conventional that Members of Parliament will exercise their own judgment. This occurs, for instance, on matters having to do with the House of Commons itself. The first example of this sort that comes to my mind is because I remember a vote which caused tensions in all caucuses here dealing with pay raises for Members of Parliament. That is just an example of issues which impinge upon the life of the House of Commons itself. Those are issues on which, in my view, Members of Parliament should exercise independent judgment. Caucuses and Parties should feel no compunction to take a position on every issue in this area.

As I understand it, it is also the case in Britain that there is a much more relaxed acceptance of the fact that on issues such as capital punishment, for instance, there will be independent and individual judgments rendered by Members of Parliament. This was demonstrated most recently by the result of the free vote which was taken in the British House of Commons on the subject or restoring capital punishment. The House of Commons in Britain was fresh from a massive Conservative victory. The Government and the Parliament could easily have been dominated by the policy or at least the tendency of the party in power which, I understand, is in favour of the restoration of capital punishment. However, the vote had a strange outcome. The motion to restore capital punishment was defeated in a House of Commons dominated by Conservative members.

There we can see how the free vote works, though perhaps not in the same way as those who advocate a free vote on capital punishment generally hope it would work. Nevertheless, that is an example of what I mean. We would have liked to see a free vote here in the House, as we so often asked for, on the testing of the Cruise missile. Issues dealing with disarmament are other issues for which I think it would be good if Members of all Parties felt freer to express what they truly felt.

• (1815)

In the final analysis it is not just for the sake of individual Members and their feeling this independence that I should like to see more of this; it is for the sake of Parliament itself. I think there is too much emphasis in Canadian politics on Party discipline and Party unity in the sense that too much negative attention is paid to the fact that people who belong to the same political Party may disagree with each other on certain matters, probably not on what is regarded as the core platform or emphasis of that Party, but on a range of issues that are not regarded as essential to the Party's self-understanding. I do not know which came first, the chicken or the egg, in this case; but I think what reinforces this is the fascination of the media with any disagreement within a political Party. Politicians become almost paranoid about doing anything which can be construed as an attack on either their leader or on their Party policy. Any creative debate within political Parties has become almost impossible as a result of the paranoia created by the negative attention paid by the media to any so-called signs of disunity. Probably the same media people complain about political Parties being monolithic, autocratic and that there is not any real debate going on within the Party. Of course, the minute there was debate going on they would be there like a bunch of vultures trying to exploit it and distort it and make it out to be something other than it was.

For the sake of Parliament and for the sake of the political process, I think there has to be more opportunity for MPs to exercise individual judgment. In the minds of the public there has to be more occasion when they can see that it makes a difference to talk to their MP about an issue—that it makes a difference or at least that it could make a difference, because MPs are not always going to agree with whatever group they happen to meet or that happens to lobby them on a particular issue. Nevertheless, there would be a theoretical possibility that in some instances, and in more instances than is the case now, Members of Parliament could exercise independent judgment and not be expected simply to vote the way the Party votes on that particular issue.

People need to feel that it makes a difference that there are 282 minds in this place, that there are 282 thinking beings in this place and not 282 voting machines which, on every occasion, do exactly what their Party requires them to do.

This takes us back to the life of the House of Commons itself and the need for Members not only to have more independent input into a broader range of issues which may fall outside the reach of Party discipline; it also brings us to the question of Members of Parliament having more control over the life of the House of Commons itself.

This is another matter we discussed in the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure. That is why we recommended, for a start—and I can think of no more appropriate day to mention this—that the House have more genuine control over the selection of the Speaker of the House of Commons. The Speaker would have the moral authority of someone who was genuinely selected by the House of Commons.

We also recommend that the House of Commons have more control over the Commissioners of Internal Economy. I do not want to get too far off topic, Mr. Speaker, but these things are all related to the integrity of Parliament itself as the public sees it. Free votes are related to votes of confidence and the need to rid our Standing Orders of all the procedural ways in which matters which should not be votes of confidence are now regarded as such procedurally in the Standing Orders. If that were eliminated there would be more opportunities for free votes or at least fewer excuses on the part of the Government for demanding of its Members that they regard every vote as a vote of confidence. That would make life more difficult for Government backbenchers, I admit, but in the final analysis it would make life better for them because they would be less robotic, shall we say, in their deliberations and they would feel better about themselves knowing that on occasion they could exercise that kind of freedom.

I believe that these are some of the directions in which we ought to move. I hope a number of Hon. Members were listening to my comments on these matters because I feel there is a consensus in the country that the authenticity of the input of Hon. Members of Parliament has to be greatly enhanced in this institution if it is going to continue to hold what respect it has and to increase that respect.

One of the ways we can do that is by giving to all of our constituents the sense that Members of Parliament make a difference, that what Members of Parliament think and what constituents tell their Members of Parliament makes a difference. The question of free votes and the frequency of them is intimately related to that question. In that respect, I am very happy to have had the opportunity to comment.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I will take only a very few minutes to state my views on this motion. Tragically, this debate could not be more timely. The nation's capital has just experienced the brutal killing of Police Constable David Utman. The alleged killer has been quoted as saying he wanted to kill a policeman, any policeman. This latest incident has once again raised public consciousness and a demand for a debate in this House on the capital punishment question. The need for a full-fledged debate on the death penalty is probably more important in the 1980s than it has ever been, given the rise in the numbers of violent crimes in our society. What is needed even more urgently, Mr. Speaker, is an absolutely free vote on this highly personal, emotional and sensitive issue.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and Members of his Liberal Government not only refuse to bring the capital punishment question back to Parliament for renewed debate, but the Prime Minister has consistently refused to take off the Liberal Party Whips and allow a truly free vote on the death penalty. The reason, I believe, is obvious. He knows that great numbers of Liberal Members of Parliament would vote according to their consciences and reinstate capital punishment.

Quite apart from my own strong feelings about the need to restore the death penalty in this country for first degree murder—and I am on record in this Chamber as giving my reasons for holding that opinion—there is another fundamental reason for which I support this motion in the name of the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell). We have heard recently that a large number of Canadians feel that Parliament is irrelevant. One of the reasons our constituents have a sense of futility about this place is that they do not feel that we, as Members of Parliament, are legitimately representing their interests. Quite rightly, many Canadians feel Members of Parliament are here only to gratify our own egos and to toe the Party line, regardless of the opinions of the majority of people we were sent to Ottawa to represent. Of course, the electors have to make a choice at election time as candidates from different Parties state their opinions on emotional and moral issues like capital punishment.

Yes, there are constraints on those of us in political Parties to adhere to a particular Party line because we are team players, most of us. But there are some issues, moral issues, the conscience questions, where an individual Member of Parliament must weigh very carefully the decision to exercise his or her own judgment on a case, but keeping in mind the majority view of that Member's constituency. Sometimes that is a tricky decision to make but it is one each and every single Member of Parliament should be given the chance to make on a question of conscience through a free vote and not with Party Whips attached.

● (1825)

What I cannot abide, Mr. Speaker, is this Government's defiance of public opinion on this and other moral questions. We all know of the massive public desire for at least a renewed debate on capital punishment, and a substantial majority want the death penalty returned for first degree murder. They want that death penalty returned to the Statute books. I said a substantial majority: the latest Gallup poll shows that 72 per cent to 74 per cent of Canadians sampled wish a return of the death penalty. But more importantly, the issue facing us right now, the question we must resolve in this afternoon's very brief debate, is the urgent need for a completely, totally, absolutely free vote on this question.

The Progressive Conservative Party, under the leadership of the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark), was committed to an absolutely free vote on the death penalty. Under our new Leader, the Hon. Member for Central Nova (Mr. Mulroney), I am confident that it is still the intention of this Party's leadership to reintroduce the capital punishment question at least for debate. I am equally confident that a new Progressive Conservative Government will allow a free vote on capital punishment.

I will conclude by quoting criminal lawyer Louie Nizer, who said it does no good for sheep to pass resolutions in favour of vegetarianism when the wolves think otherwise. This very minute the wolves are slaughtering our loved ones. What in God's name are we waiting for?

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Under Standing Order 41(2) a reply shall be allowed to a Member who has moved a substantive motion. I rise at this point to exercise my right.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member is quite right. However, the Chair has noticed other Members rising to speak at this point and the Chair did recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary in any case. Even if the Chair recognized the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell), it would still have to advise the House under Standing Order 41(3) that the reply of the mover of the original motion closes the debate. At that point in time that then affords an opportunity for any other Member who wishes to contribute to the debate to rise and the Chair would have to recognize that Member. If no other Member rose at that point, of course the Hon. Member for Ontario could be recognized and he would in fact close the debate. But that is not the case because another Hon. Member has risen. It is the Chair's obligation to recognize that other Hon. Member at this time.

● (1830)

I trust that the explanation is satisfactory to the Hon. Member for Ontario.

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, are you then stating that the debate on this motion is not closed if I do not rise within the allotted time?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Absolutely. It is standard practice that once we have reached the full hour of debate in any given sitting of the House when dealing with Private Members' Motions, the motion does not die; it goes to the bottom of the list. Of course, it can be resurrected and given greater priority, if there is an understanding between the Parties. But that is not for the Chair to decide. In any case, it does not deprive the Hon. Member of his right eventually to close the debate.

The Chair is attempting to explain that we have not yet reached that point because another Hon. Member who has not yet spoken wishes to contribute to the debate.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I just want to point out two items. First, the House is now under an order that was agreed to by the entire House that the debate would go for one full hour. This motion states that the mover shall have the right to close the debate. Consequently, when those are put together I contend that the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) should now have the right to close the debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It is my understanding that the Hon. Member is giving an entirely different interpretation to the agreement reached earlier this day with respect to the proceedings now under way. I do not want to take extensive time but Hon. Members will recall that the situation which faced the House following an earlier vote was that we had gone well beyond the time of approximately three o'clock when we usually engage in Private Members' Business; in fact, it was well past five o'clock. It is the Chair's understanding that there was agreement between the Government House Leader and the House Leaders for the other Parties at least to deal with one item today. They agreed what item that would be and this is what we are debating. However, I do not believe that in any way, shape or form it was the intention of the Parties to that agreement that debate should conclude today on the motion now before the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, I am aware that this issue was raised in the House on five or six occasions over the past year and a half, as a result of some motions calling again for the consideration of the capital punishment issue, while others called for a referendum. Again, this afternoon, we are being urged to deal with it in a different way through the following motion, and I quote:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of allowing a free vote in the House of Commons on the reinstatement—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. It being now 6.34 p.m. and in accordance with the agreement reached earlier today, the time allowed for consideration of the motion has expired, and the House stands adjourned until 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 6.34, the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.
