THE OLD CASTLE. BY WILLIAM MORRIS.

Midways of a walled garden, In the happy poplar land, Did an ancient castle stand, With an old knight for a warden.

Many scarlet bricks there were, In its wall, and old grey stone, Over which red apples shone: As the right time of the year.

On the bricks the green moss grew, Yellow lichen on the stone, Over which red apples shone: Little war that castle knew.

Deep green water filled the moat; Each side had a red-brick lip, Green and mossy with the drip Of dew and rain: there was a boat

Of carven wood, with hangings green About the stern; it was great bliss For lovers to sit there and kiss In the hot summer noons, not seen.

The painted draw-bridges over it Went up and down with gilded chains. 'Twas pleasant in the summer rains Within the bridge house there to sit.

There were five swans that never did eat The water-weeds for ladies came Each day, and young knights did the same, And gave them cakes and bread for meat.

They had a house of painted wood, A red roof gold-spiked over it, Wherein upon their eggs to sit Week after week; no drop of blood

Drawn from men's bodies by sword-blows, Came ever there, or any tear; Most certainly from year to year 'Twas pleasant as a Provence rose.

THE DEAN OF DENHAM.

Conclusion.

She drove to the Earl of Avon's residence. He was not at home; his servants believed he might be at the club. Away to the club went Lady Grace. The earl was there, and the message was taken into him. A lady wanted to see him.

A titter went round the table, and the earl exploded a little at the waiter. What the deuce? A lady, to see him? What next? Who was she?

The waiter could not say. She was in a cab.

'What's her name?' returned the earl, 'Impudence! Go and ask.'

The man went and came back again. 'It is Lady Grace Baumgarten, my Lord.'

Lord Avon gave a prolonging stare, and then hurried out. 'Why Grace, what's up now?' cried he, as he approached the cab. 'Is Berkeley square on fire. Or is Baumgarten made Primate of All England?'

'Come inside, Henry, for a minute. I want to you. The dean's arrested for three thousand pounds.'

'Oh, is he?' equally returned Lord Avon. 'He has been a clever fellow to keep out of it so long. Nobody but a dean could have done it.'

'And you must find the money to release him.'

'Anything else?' inquired Lord Avon.

'You will, Henry; you must.'

'Look here, Grace,' said the Earl. 'Thousands are not so plentiful with me; but if they were, and I went to the old Jew's to-night, and paid the money down, there'd be he came to do over again to-morrow.'

'Went to where?'

'Where's he taken to?'

'He is at home. They have gone out of their usual way, he said, and allowed him to be at home to-night; a man is there, and will take him in the morning. Henry, it must not be; you must come to his aid.'

'But I say that it will be of no use. I know more of Baumgarten's affairs than you do: in fact I have already helped him out of one or two pits: though of course things have been kept from you.'

'But what is to be done?' uttered Lady Grace: 'The Dean of Denham can't go to prison; such a scandal never was heard of. Henry, I won't stir from your side, this night, till you give me the money.'

'Where am I to get it from?' quietly asked the dean.

'Nonsense. You possess a chequebook, I suppose!'

'All this comes of marrying beneath—'

'Hold your tongue,' interrupted Lady Grace. 'He is an honour to the family; and I know, if he has gone beyond his means, it has been for my sake. Will you get some with me now, and talk things over with him?'

'No,' said the earl. 'I can't go to-night. But I'll be in Berkeley square the first thing in the morning, and see if anything can be done.'

'What time? By nine o'clock, or it will be too late.'

'I'll be there by nine. Good night, Grace.'

Lady Grace returned home. She was entering the drawing room, when the butler came suddenly out of it to meet her, and in a very unbutler-like way closed the door in her face to prevent her entrance. His usually florid complexion had turned yellow, and he spoke in a flurry, as if he did not weigh his words.

'Oh, my lady—not in there, please.'

Lady Grace wondered if he had not been visiting the deacons. 'Open the door,' she calmly said. 'Is the dean there still?'

The butler put his back against it, and held the handle firmly. 'I beg your pardon, my lady, you must not go in.'

She was alarmed now: she saw the man's agitation. Her imagination pictured the dean surrounded by a shoal of sheriff's officers, with perhaps Mr. Calcraft in the rear, or some other myrmidon of justice equally awful: her ideas were not very clear upon the distinctions of law. At that moment a servant came in view, the same who had gone with her to seek Lord Avon.

'Pull him away from the door,' shrieked Lady Grace, in her tremor, to the footman, a powerful fellow six feet high. 'He is mad, or has been drinking.'

The butler made a sign to the man. 'My lady, the dean is taken ill,' he stammered, 'that's the truth. I thought your ladyship had best not see him.'

She waved him away in her wifely manner: she would have had him removed by force, had he held out, and the butler knew it. He stepped aside: 'The nearest doctor instantly,' he whispered to the man: and then he followed her in.

Leaning back in a low easy chair, almost at full length, his head resting on the back of it, lay the dean. His face was white, his mouth was open; but his eyes were closed as if in a calm sleep. Nevertheless, there was in his face which struck terror to the heart of his wife. She grasped hold of the butler's arm and shrieked aloud.

'Yes, my lady,' he whispered, believing that she saw as well as he, 'I fear it is death.'

Far too deep now for shrieking, for violent outward signs, was the terror, the anguish of Lady Grace. Her thoughts flew to—knowing the situation of her husband, the exposure and disgrace hanging over him—her fears flew to self destruction.

'I came in, my lady, just before you returned, said the butler, 'and I saw him lying in this way. I could not rouse him and I was about to send for medical aid when I met your ladyship.'

Lady Grace had knelt down, and clasped her husband. In that moment of horror, what cared she who was present? She called him by endearing names, she kissed his face, she besought him to speak to her; but there was no answering response, and conviction told her that there never would be again.

Never in this world. But it was no act of self destruction; he had died from disease of the heart. Cyrus Baumgarten came home that night and passed it alone with his father, in a storm of passionate sobs, reckless man as he was deemed. And the world, next day, was busy with the news that the Very Reverend Ryle Baumgarten had been gathered to his fathers, and that the rich deanery of Denham was in the clerical market.

CHATHAM VOLUNTEERS.—On Thursday evening last the Chatham Volunteers turned out, and marched around town, headed by the Amateur band. Their marching was excellent and altogether they made a very creditable appearance.

A JUVENILE MOTHER.—While the census-taker was collecting his statistics in Seasmouth he found a girl about thirteen years old who was the mother of a child of ten months!

In boring for an artesian well at Provincetown a day or two since, clam shells were found at a depth of one hundred and thirty six feet from the surface.

How a ROUGH HEART WAS WON.—Dr. Arnold, in the Rugby School, often secured the reform of refractory pupils by trusting them. This is happily illustrated in the recent work entitled 'The school days at Rugby.' The story is founded on fact.

Tom Brown, the hero, after two years of comparative idleness and disorder, is converted into a confiding friend and a supporter of discipline, purely by the confidence of his teacher, and the delightful exhibition of his youthful piety in a delicate little boy entrusted to his guardianship.

Brown had been famous for fishing and hunting on forbidden ground, and had been often reprimanded and sometimes flogged for misdemeanors. But Dr. Arnold discovered a noble nature beneath his rough exterior. He determined to develop his good qualities. He therefore placed under his care, as a room-mate, a timid, feeble lad, who had just entered school, and who could hardly make his way among the rude boys without a protector.

Brown felt at once the responsibility of his new position, and determined not to disappoint the confidence of his teacher. Rough as he was, he was melted by the kind and loving deportment of his ward.

A scene in the hall, containing twelve beds where the younger pupils slept with their overseers, reveals the first rising of virtuous resolution in the soul of Tom Brown. His room-mate, Arthur, after a whispered request for leave to wash his face and hands before retiring, in obedience to the instructions of his mother knelt in prayer. The scene is thus described: 'On went the talk and laughter, Arthur finished his washing and undressing, and put on his night-gown. He then looked round more nervously than ever. Two or three of the little-boys were already in bed, sitting up with their chins on their knees. The light burned clearly, the noise went on. It was a trying moment for the poor lonely boy; however, this time he didn't ask Tom what he might or might not do, but dropped on his knees by the bed-side, as he had done every-day from his childhood, to open his heart to Him who heareth the cry and bareth the sorrows of the tender child and the strong man in agony.'

Tom was sitting at the bottom of his bed, unlacing his boots, so that his back was towards Arthur, and as he didn't see what had happened he looked up in wonder at the sudden silence. Then two or three boys laughed and sneered, and a big, brutal fellow who was standing in the middle of the room picked up a slipper and shied it at the kneeling boy, calling him a sniveling young shaver. Then Tom saw the whole, and the next moment the boot he had just pulled off flew straight at the head of the bully, who had just time to throw up his arm and catch it in his elbow.

'Confound you, Brown, what is that for?' roared he, stamping with pain.

'Never mind what I mean,' said Tom stepping on the floor, every drop of blood in his body tingling; 'if any fellow wants the other boot, he knows how to get it.'

Tom thus frightened the scoffer and conquered himself. It was the turning point in his history. While he protected his good-principled ward, the boy became his guide, teacher and friend.

EXTRAORDINARY SEIZURE OF BEES.

The inhabitants of the New Forest in the neighborhood of Ringwood have long been acquainted with an eccentric character named Cutler, who some years ago quitted his farm, leaving the gathered crops in the waggon mill both the home-stead, the grain and the waggons fell into complete decay, and erected a wretched hovel on some property belonging to the Earl of Normanton, at Ashley Heath, where he was locally designated the forest 'Robinson Crusoe.' At this place he turned his attention to bee keeping, a profitable investigation on an extensive scale. The bees proved a great annoyance to a neighbouring farmer, who represented the annoyance to which he was subjected to the Earl of Normanton, but neither entreaty nor the offer of money, or an offer of another piece of land on the part of the noble earl's agents could induce Cutler to move from the land where he had chosen to pitch his tent, and he had held possession for a dozen years—viz. from May 2, 1848. A warrant of ejectment was recently obtained in the Court of Exchequer by Mr. Robert Davy, solicitor, of Ringwood; and it was placed for execution in the hands of Mr. Leslie, of Southampton, the sheriff's officer. It authorized him, at the suit of the Right Hon. the Earl of Romanton, against William Cutler, to take possession of a piece of land, containing about 25 acres, together with all tenements thereon, being part of North Ashley Heath, and near to Lyon's Hill Farm, in the parish of Ringwood. It was the occupier of this farm who had reason to complain of the bees, as his cattle were frequently and severely stung, Cutler's hovel being pitched close to the gate leading to the farm. On Friday Cutler was informed that Mr. Leslie was coming; still he refused to quit, and on Saturday the Sheriff's officer procured plenty of help and proceeded to put the warrant into execution. He found upon the premises between 200 and 300 hives of five bees, and about another 100 hives, in which the bees were dead. How the bees were to be removed was a difficult question. Cutler moved among them in safety; they lodged upon his arms and body, without stinging him; but the sheriff's representatives experienced a sharp reception. After some manoeuvring, Mr. Leslie and his assistants got Cutler to the hedge bounding the place, and as far as possible from the hives, which they were much afraid he would upset; he declared he was determined to stop; and he was therefore put into a cart, the horse driven on, and he was left on the highway at considerable distance from the place at which he commenced his involuntary journey. Cutler's wife, an invalid, was next carefully removed to some females, whom Mr. Leslie especially employed for the purpose; she was placed in a four-wheeled chaise, and as she declined to go into a union workhouse she was conveyed to Ringwood and left with some friends. The bees could not be safely meddled with in the daytime, and it took the men three whole nights to remove the hives to a piece of Cutler's land, an orchard seven miles distant. It was altogether a rather expensive proceeding—the calves and string for wrapping in which to tie up the hives cost nearly £5, the hire of waggons another £5 and £6 8s. 6d. expended on the hire of men. Mr. Leslie and his men were stung severely, and were heartily glad when they had concluded their novel and unpleasant task.

THE PRINCE'S RECEPTION AT TORONTO.

[Correspondence of the New York Times]

Toronto, Sept. 7—10 P. M.—The Orangemen have been parading the streets all day with banners, bands and robes, but just before the arrival of the Prince they took off their gowns, as has been pre-arranged, as they passed under the arch, and emerged on the other side of it as a body of private citizens. The only mark upon their arch which could be taken is a paragon emblem was the likeness of the Prince of Wales over its center in the traditional costume of King William the Third, at the crossing of the Boyne.

The landing of His Royal Highness here occurred just half an hour before dark. It was a spectacle which for magnificence, has probably never been equalled in the modern world. Just as the Montreal ball was the finest thing ever seen upon a roof, so the display here was by far the most thing ever seen out of doors. A circular platform, whose radius was at least 100 feet, had been erected, and tier upon tier of seats were arranged around, each behind above the other. This was ornamented with shields, banners, &c. Ten thousand people were in position upon it. In the open space was a troop of cavalry. In the center was a great level platform with a dais throne under a gorgeous canopy where the Prince and his suite, the members of the corporation, Judges, many members of parliament, the press, and a brilliant array of officers of the militia and regulars stood.

When the Prince landed from the Kingston he stood for several minutes, silently contemplating the scene. The noblemen in his train, to were ardently impressed with a sense of the absolute sublimity of the scene. After a brief pause during which a thousand children sang the national anthem in capital time and time, the people following it up with deafening cheers, the Corporation presented their addresses, and then the procession—the equal of which the writer has never seen—began to pour in on each side at the great gate, which had been made for that purpose, in a breast. The militia, fire companies, national societies and associations of every imaginable kind, marched past in endless succession, dropping their banners, and cheering as they proceeded. This delighted the Prince, who had advanced to the front of the platform. Unfortunately, it was dark before the whole body of men and youths had passed, and some of the grandeur of the effect was consequently lost. When all had defiled the Prince and suite took carriages and followed the procession through the city, up one street and down another for miles.

The illuminations were very fine, and light was not in any way lacking. Every man in the long file cheered the whole way, making himself heard. Every window, every house, was either lighted up with gas, candles or lanterns, or was filled with ladies waving their hands, fans, handkerchiefs, and throwing flowers before the Prince. It was a universal jubilee, a complete carnival, and as to enter into details would be impossible when writing by telegraph, this account ends here.

The Prince finally proceeded to the government House, where his quarters were prepared—reaching it at about 8 1/2 o'clock, for dinner.

Toronto, C. W., Sept. 6.—It is considered by those who have been with the Prince of Wales since his arrival in America, that the reception and illuminations here last night in his honor, surpassed anything yet seen.

Much excitement exists this afternoon in consequence of a report that the Duke of Newcastle had written the Mayor to say that the Duke had been entrapped into a Toronto reception by misrepresentations in regard to the Orange arch which he considered quite objectionable. A secret session of the City Council was held, but neither the Duke's letter or Council's proceedings are made public. It is understood that the matter has been arranged in some way and that the demonstration will proceed.

There is now growing in the gardens of Moor-send, near Cheltenham, England, an extraordinary white rose tree, thirty feet in height. It is a perfect picture, and is estimated to have between 18,000 and 20,000 blossoms upon it, being literally smothered in bloom, besides having thrown of a whole heap of petals, which lie in a cluster around it, and present the appearance of a bed of snow.

The Hay crop in Newfoundland is abundant. Potatoes and oats look well.

Selling & Clearing Out

As the above appears to be the order of the day the Subscriber begs to intimate to the purchasers of Dry Goods in Town and Country, that he is NOW and has been for EIGHT YEARS SELLING OFF large quantities of goods annually, but still has on hand a large assortment of NEW GOODS just received and ready for sale, and as he does not intend CLEARING OUT until they are disposed of, he begs most respectfully to request the attention of buyers to a personal inspection, as it is a well-known fact that they can buy as low at his establishment, and be as well suited, as at those places where they are continually "SELLING OFF UNDER COST, &c."

The Stock on hand is large and varied, and suited to the wants of all, viz:
 Bonnets, Parasols,
 Ribbons, and Hats;
 Muslins, Barages, Chalks, and other Dress materials; Blonds, Flowers, Laces, and Sewed Muslins in great variety; a few dozen real French Kids, in Black and Colored; Grey and White Printed Cottons, Shirting and Sheetings; Linens, Lawns, Muslins; Towelling and Tickings; Chambray and Silk Hair Nets; Head Dresses, Tassels, Goggles, &c. with the usual assortment of FANCY DRY GOODS, Brushes, Combs, Fans, PERFUMERY, &c., &c., &c.

LADIES' & CHILDREN'S
Boots & Shoes.

Men's & Boy's Hats & Caps,
Braces, Neck Hdks. & Ties.
COLLARS, SHIRTS & DRAWERS,
 &c., &c., &c.

Persons requiring MOURNING GOODS will always find a full assortment to select from, or they will be ordered from St. John at a small advance on cost.

COFFEE MOUNTING,

in Black and White, all sizes, with some new DESIGNS: Caps, Gloves, Muffin, Hat Bands, and every article requisite for Funerals. A full stock constantly on hand and lower than can be purchased elsewhere in Town.
 The above goods, which only comprise part of a very large lot, were bought as low as possible, and will be sold either wholesale or Retail upon as reasonable terms as any in this Town.
 Call and judge for yourselves, and you will feel fully satisfied,
 G. STRICKLAND.

The NEW YORK TRIBUNE. PREPARE FOR THE GREAT POLITICAL CAMPAIGN. Inducements to Clubs. NO IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

THE TRIBUNE—now more than eighteen years old, and having over a quarter of a million subscribers, or constant purchasers, diffused through every State and Territory of our Union—will continue in essence what it has been—the earnest champion of Liberty, Progress, and of whatever will conduce to our national growth in Virtue, Industry, Knowledge and Prosperity.

THE NEW YORK DAILY TRIBUNE is printed on a large improved sheet, and published every morning and evening (Sundays excepted). It contains Editorials on the topics of the times, employing a large corps of the best newspaper writers of the day; Domestic and Foreign Correspondence; Proceedings of Congress; and Political, Literary, and Scientific news, none costing over $15,000 per annum.

TERMS: THE DAILY TRIBUNE is mailed to subscribers at $6 per annum, in advance; $4 for six months.

THE NEW-YORK SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE is published every Tuesday and Friday, and contains all the Editorials of the Daily, with the Cable, Horse, and General Market, religiously reported, and expressly for THE TRIBUNE; Notices of the Sessions of Congress; and Domestic Correspondence; and Articles on Cookery; and during the Sessions of Congress, it contains a summary of Congressional doings, with the more important speeches. We shall, as heretofore, make THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE a Literary as well as Political Newspaper, and for a club of one Hundred THE DAILY TRIBUNE will be sent gratis.

Any person sending us a club of twenty or over, will be entitled to an extra copy. For a club of forty, we will send The Daily Tribune one year.

THE NEW-YORK WEEKLY TRIBUNE, a large eight page paper, for the country, is published every Saturday, and contains Editorials on the important topics of the times, the news of the week, interesting correspondence from all parts of the world, the New York Cattle, Horse, and Produce Markets, interesting and reliable Political, Mechanical and Agricultural articles, Papers on Cookery, &c., &c.

We shall, during this year, as heretofore, constantly labor to improve the quality of the narrative entertainment afforded by THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE, which, we intend, shall continue to be the best Family Weekly Newspaper published in the world. We consider the Cattle Market Reports alone richly worth to cattle raisers a year's subscription price.
