CANADA MORE FRENCH THAN FRANCE ITSELF

Prelates from Canada Tell Paris That Purity of Language and Customs Retained Here.

GAINING STRENGTH IN CANADIAN LIFE

Though Holding Fast to Tongue and Traditions, Are True and Loyal Canadians.

(Copyright, 1920, by Cross-Atlantic News Service.)

By HENRY W. FRANCIS.

Paris, July 23.—All that is fine in French culture has been preserved in Canada, French customs and ideas are not being lost or overwhelmed by Anglo-Saxon ideas, but the French element is gaining strength in Canadian life. These deductions were made recently by several Canadian prelates, members of the Canadian Catholic Mission to Rome, in Paris en route for home. The mission includes Cardinal Bégin, Archbishop of Quebec and Primate of Canada; Monsignor Mathieu, Archbishop of Regina, Saskatchewan; Monsignor Cloutier, Apostolic protonotary of Canada; Monsignor de Blanc, Archbishop of St. John; Monsignor Arsenault, vicar-general of Quebec; Monsignor Bouffard, Archbishop of St. Malo, Quebec, and Monsignor Marois, of Regina, Saskatchewan.

"These names," writes Marcel Pains in "Excelsior," are pleasant to hear. They have the perfume of the soil of Normandy and Brittany, of Besace and Burgundy, and sweet language as they are pleasant to see because their fine and energetic features resemble those which old masters loved to paint.

"Perhaps you will think us purists," the Excelsior quotes Monsignor Mathieu as saying, "but it is a principle among us French in Canada never to allow any Anglo-Saxon term to creep into the clear and sweet language of France. Allow me to offer a reproach. We are scandalized at the French, which is spoken in France. We should surely be stoned to death at Canada, we spoke such corrupted French."

"The French language in Canada has remained, not without a struggle, that which it was in Louis XIV's time. No French Canadian ever would speak 'trimway,' 'wattman,' 'tucket,' 'five o'clock tea,' 'dancing,' 'grill room,' or any of the hundred other similar terms which we hear pronounced on every side in French Canada."

"A foreign word in our language is a door open to the invader. We do not wish to be invaded. We are determined to preserve our language, customs and religion and we will present a united front to resist all attempts to encroach upon our national inheritance."

"The French element dominates in the province of Quebec where it represents eighty-five per cent. of the population. The French element constitutes about one-third of the entire population of Canada, in spite of the fact that during the last twenty years the emigration of Anglo-Saxons, Germans, Polish and Italians, has been considerable."

"French culture is ardently sustained and propagated in Canada. I was sent to Regina in Saskatchewan, 1,600 miles from Quebec. I found there men of all races, rough fellows, all engaged in extracting from the soil the maximum of wealth possible. There were only two French members in the parliament of this province out of sixty-eight. I nevertheless was able to obtain a ruling that the French language should be recognized as an official language on the same footing as English. Do not believe that, in our racial particularity, this is the least political particularity. The French Canadian is above all a Canadian. But they believe, with reason, that the very highest national interest is to safeguard in Canada our French culture. The Anglo-Saxons and the French never met on our mixed nation; they live together without interfering with each other; they are in perfect accord."

"The French family in Canada is just what it was in France. It is times, prolific, patriarchal, laborious, firmly attached to their religion, to their home, to their institutions and to their language. The French family intimates as a large measure to the marvellous economic life of Canada, which is becoming one of the granaries of the world.

"The French Canadians do not ask for anything more than to help France which they love. We think, certainly more about you than you think about us, because, even if we have learned a great deal away from France, we have forgotten nothing. You must make yourselves better known to us, above all, make your wants better known. If I had any advice to give the French it would be: Do not forget your brothers across the sea; visit them more often. Make yourselves better acquainted with them. Speak to their hearts—you will be surprised to hear their beating in unison with yours."

CYCLONE STRIKES SASK. DISTRICT

Regina, Sask., July 23.—Two people are dead, a baby missing and fifteen injured as the result of a cyclone which struck Foxborough in the South-west part of the province yesterday. The storm lasted twenty minutes during which a heavy destruction of barns and houses are reported. There are also rumors of heavy damage in the vicinity of Benson and Lampman.

GENERAL DYER'S FRIENDS ACT IN HOUSE OF LORDS

London, July 23.—(By Canadian Associated Press)—The House of Lords, by a vote of 129 to 86, carried Viscount Finlay's motion deploring the conduct of the government in the case of General Dyer, dismissed from the army for ordering the shooting down of natives during the Amritsar riots.

The Morning Post fund for General Dyer now reaches 60,000 pounds.

N. Y. HAS ANOTHER TRUNK MYSTERY

Body of Unidentified Woman Found Jammed in Trunk, Shipped from Detroit.

New York, July 23.—A regular surgeon's autopsy, including the removal of all vital organs except the brain, had been performed on the body of an unidentified woman found today jammed in a trunk in the American railway Express Company warehouse. The gruesome contents had been shipped here from Detroit June 10.

The body had been covered over with feminine wearing apparel of good material. The trunk, which was bound with a clothes line, was so crowded by the contents that it bulged at the side.

The woman was apparently 35 to 40 years old, the police say, and weighed about 150 pounds, had blue eyes and had been fairly good looking. The upper teeth of her left jaw slightly protruded, but this proved to be a natural deformity.

The woman was a brunette, the police say. Her body, which had been jammed into the trunk with her head thrown back and her knees crowded closely against her chin, was wrapped in newspapers and a long piece of cloth.

The body, the police said, was badly mutilated, apparently having been slashed with a knife.

LORD BYNG'S NAME AGAIN MENTIONED AS PROBABLE SUCCESSOR TO THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE AS GOVERNOR GENERAL OF CANADA

London, July 23.—(By Canadian Associated Press.)—Mention of Lord Byng's name in connection with the Governor Generalship of Canada is a revival of statements which appeared some months ago in the newspapers, when the Earl of Athlone's name was also mentioned. The Canadian Associated Press was then officially informed that neither name had been considered in connection with the appointment except by the press.

Recent despatches from London mentioned the name of Lord Byng as the likely successor to the Duke of Devonshire.

Special to The Standard
Moncton, N. B., July 23.—Lorne O'Hara, alias Fred McDonald, who was arraigned this morning in the police court on the double charge of stealing forty dollars from a Georgetown resident and a horse and carriage from a Moncton livery stable keeper, was sent to the higher court for trial, after evidence was heard. O'Hara, who at first gave his name as Fred McDonald, was recognized by a Moncton police officer who knew the prisoner as O'Hara when he was in the military service at Halifax. The prisoner now admits his name is Lorne O'Hara and not McDonald. He was taken to Dorchester this afternoon to await his trial.

ATTACKS ON THE TROOPS AT CORK ARE CONTINUED

Irish Labor Leaders Oppose General Strike and it Fails to Materialize.

SINN FEIN WANT LARKIN BACK AGAIN

Australia Starts Organization to Counteract Disloyal Utterances.—Archbishop Mannix Denounced.

By C. H. BRETHERTON.
Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co. Dublin, July 23.—Cork despatches report persistent firing upon and bombing of troops there by Sinn Fein. Reprisals, it is declared, are bound to result and may degenerate into wholesale fighting unless martial law is proclaimed.

An unsuccessful attempt was made today by Irish labor extremists to call a general strike for one day to emphasize the demand for the release of "Jim" Larkin and afford Irish workers an opportunity to sign a memorial to President Wilson on his behalf. A mass meeting at Dublin, called by the "Larkin release committee," advocated today's strike, but despite the speakers' threats and abuse the labor leaders would not agree to a general stoppage of work.

The Larkin release movement in Ireland is much more earnest than might be supposed, although all this anti-American activity of Irish labor in connection with Larkin is bound to react against the Sinn Fein. American extremists and Irish Bolsheviks are prepared to take the risk, so anxious are they to get Larkin back. At present the men controlling Irish labor, Foran, Johnson and O'Brien, although theoretic adherents of the Third International and disciples of Lenin, are intelligent and cautious. The extremists, however, would like to get rid of the present leaders, but have no hope of doing so without the return of Larkin, in whose leadership and capacity for drastic action they have unlimited faith. They realize in particular that the refusal of Irish railwaymen to carry troops and military stores was a strategic mistake, because a stoppage of the Irish railways, which must hit both the Sinn Fein and the British cause, is steadily being brought about without the possibility of putting the blame on the British Government. Another reason Irish labor is anxious to have Larkin back is because it has at present no orators, no one capable of arousing enthusiasm and action from the platform.

Sydney, Australia, July 23.—Decline to form a "King and Empire Alliance" to counteract what were termed disloyal doctrines, was taken at a big mass meeting here today. Speakers denounced the utterances of Archbishop Mannix of Australia. American Consul Norton, who addressed the meeting, said movements such as the one being inaugurated by the gathering were needed "to counteract the influences aiming at the destruction of the British Empire and the United States."

LIVELY DOINGS AT BANBRIDGE

Unionists, While on Parade, Were Fired Upon, One Death and Several Injuries Resulting.

Belfast, July 23.—There was renewed liveliness last night at Banbridge, about 21 miles South West of Belfast, where Unionists, who were parading, were suddenly fired on near a furnishing store. A youth named Stewart, fifteen years old, was killed and four others wounded.

So many shots were fired the belief was that there was a nest of Sinn Fein in the building and when a detachment of troops from Newry approached with fixed bayonets they also were fired upon. The troops returned the fire, forced an entry into the store and arrested two of the occupants.

STANDARD SECURES EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS TO CABLE AND MAIL SERVICE OF LONDON MAIL

The St. John Daily Standard takes pride in announcing that it has secured exclusive rights in its territory for the publication of the entire mail and cable service of the London Daily Mail, the greatest of the more popular English newspapers, and the most important of Lord Northcliffe's string of newspapers. Arrangements have just been completed in London between Worton Tewson, founder of the Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service, and Lord Northcliffe, by which the Cross-Atlantic is made the sales and distributing agency for the Daily Mail's news and feature services in Canada and the United States. The Daily Standard, as one of the clients of the Cross-Atlantic, gets this great foreign service, in addition to the present carefully selected and specially copyrighted cable service of the Cross-Atlantic.

Lord Northcliffe, in his announcement made from the office of The Times, another of his great English dailies, says: "Mr. Worton Tewson is authorized by me to state that the Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service has the privilege of publication in the United States and Canada of the news service of the Daily Mail before any other American News Agency or Journal."

VILLA'S FORCES BECAME ACTIVE AT COAHUILA

Mexico City, July 23.—General Villa and his forces, said to number a hundred men, are heading toward Coahuila, according to statements of deserters as reported by General Joaquin Amaro, chief of operations at Chihuahua. The rebels are described as poorly equipped.

BOLSHEVIKI THREATENING IN ATTITUDE

Swear Vengeance Against British Should Great Britain Deport Nuorteva, Marten's Agent.

TAKE VENGEANCE ON PRISONERS

Finland Also Warned of Approaching Calamities Should They Injure the Deportee.

London, July 23.—A Bolshevik wireless despatch from Moscow, received here tonight, threatens vengeance against the British and Finns should Great Britain deport Santari Nuorteva, once secretary to L. C. A. K. Martens, the Russian Bolshevik representative in the United States, to Finland and harm should befall him. The wireless communication says: "With reference to the arrest of Nuorteva and the British decision to deliver him to Finland, where he has been condemned to death, the Soviet Government has decided that in the event this infamous act is perpetrated in the House of Commons by the UKing and Azerbaijan will similarly suffer, and that should Finland harm Nuorteva, punishment a hundred times as severe will be meted out to the Finns. The Soviet Government notified the British and Finnish authorities that they will receive a lesson and be taught to be wise."

Officials ignorant.
The allegation of the Soviet that Great Britain has decided to hand over Nuorteva to Finland is not supported by anything known here. Premier Lloyd George, answering a question in the House of Commons yesterday, says Nuorteva had left England and was returning to Russia. His passport had been returned to him. The Premier added that he had been arrested because he had not conformed to the rules regarding immigrants and that anyone else proceeding in a similar manner would have been similarly arrested.

Nuorteva sailed from Montreal for Liverpool late in June and, according to a despatch from London, July 14, was admitted to England by mistake.

R. S. HEALTH CARAVAN DAMAGED BY FIRE

Yarmouth, N. S., July 23.—The Nova Scotia Red Cross Health caravan, which left Halifax some days ago, reached Yarmouth today and proceeded to Tusket and was about half way to that town, when one of the lorries caught fire and before the flames could be extinguished was practically destroyed, together with the Debevoise system for operating the picture machines in the illustrated lectures. It is thought the fire started from a short circuited wire in the mechanism of the car. Stunley, the chauffeur, narrowly escaped injury and as it was he received a singeing in his endeavors to quench the flames. In addition to the loss of the lorry, a few reels of films were also destroyed, but, fortunately, these are in duplicate and the loss is not so serious as it otherwise might have been.

RESOLUTE WINS OVER SHAMROCK IN FOURTH RACE

Yesterday's Race the Fastest of the Series, Resolute Doing Trick in 3 Hrs., 37 M. and 52 S.

TODAY DETERMINES CUP WINNER

Friday's Contest Lacked Thrills But Had Picturesqueness All Its Own.

Sandy Hook, July 23.—Defender Resolute tossed her six minutes and 40 seconds handicap overboard today and defeated the challenger, Shamrock IV, boat for boat, in the fourth race of the 1920 regatta for the America's Cup. The series now stands a tie, and the deciding race will be run tomorrow. Shamrock won the first race last Thursday, when an accident to Resolute's rigging forced her out, while far in the lead. The second attempt last Saturday, ended in no race the yachts being unable to get sufficient breeze to take them around the course for the specified six hours.

Shamrock IV scored the second victory last Tuesday. Resolute came back on Wednesday, running a dead heat with the challenger and winning by her handicap of seven minutes and one second. Resolute will enter tomorrow's race a favorite in the morning her two wins having been more convincing than Shamrock's.

Fastest Race of Series

Today's race was the fastest of the series so far Resolute completing the thirty mile triangular course in under three hours. Sudden breeze built up in seconds. Shamrock followed, three minutes and 42 seconds later, but the actual difference in sailing time was only three minutes and 18 seconds. Resolute having crossed the start line by 23 seconds.

Although it lacked the thrilling race and neck finish that put Resolute's victory on Wednesday in a class by itself, today's encounter had a picturesque quality all its own. A heavy blanket of fog hung over the sea at Ambrose Channel lights, until within a few minutes of the start, totally blotting out the excursion fleet and the tall masted rivals that were coming out from their haven behind Sandy Hook. The hoarse fog horn of the lights was growling out its melancholy warning, a few hundred feet away, but invisible. Suddenly the breeze freshened and the fog began sweeping out to sea. As the sail lifted Shamrock IV, with her tremendous sails set, loomed through and bore down on the mark like a huge grey ghost. Resolute followed hard on her stern and after a bit of jockeying about the lights they were off down the Jersey Coast.

Resolute at Old Trick.
Resolute was at her old tricks on this, the windward leg. She ploughed into the breeze, while Shamrock set off on a reach that took her rapidly shoreward. When they swung about for the first mark, Resolute's work into the weather had gained her an advantage of more than a quarter mile.

Again Captain Adams set Resolute well up against the wind, with the result that he was able to make the mark without tack. Shamrock was ed of more and was compelled to tack which brought her around the mark nearly 27 minutes behind Resolute.

"NEVER AGAIN" SAYS ST. STEPHEN

Special to The Standard
St. Stephen, July 23.—The directors of the St. Stephen Fair in a regular meeting this evening, faced a small deficit from the big race meeting just concluded, charging it all up to experience and to advertising, with a good grace as though it were a profit, but so far as another mid-summer meeting for big purses is concerned it looks like "never again." The weather was ideal, the fields of horses large and the racing gilt-edged but the attendance was lacking due very largely to the prevailing good having weather.

ANNOUNCEMENT REGARDED AS SIGNIFICANT

Belfast, July 23.—The following announcement, which is regarded as significant, was issued from Ulster headquarters in the old Town Hall here today: "Lieut Colonel Spencer, D. S. O., who formerly was connected with the Ulster volunteer force as chief of staff officer, has assumed command of that body. All loyalists should report to their respective battalions."

PRESS COMMENT ON IRISH SITUATION

Called Forth by Irish Secretary's Statements in British Parliament.

London, July 23.—(By Canadian Associated Press.)—Discussing the statement in the house yesterday by Sir Hamar Greenwood, the Irish Secretary, that a bill would be put forward setting up a tribunal to supersede the civil courts, which had failed to function, the Daily Telegraph, editorially, insists that the Government's measure must be proceeded with. It declares that any other course would merely be a return to ploughing the sands in which so vast an amount of political energy has been utterly wasted in the past.

The Daily Graphic says that all along the Government regarded the revolt as a fire which would burn itself out. It must, the Graphic says, drop this fatalistic mood and become a great deal bolder. There is no half-way between smashing conspiracy and surrendering to it, the Graphic concludes.

The Daily News describes the effect of the Government policy as a failure of force. It claims that the almost certain effect of the proposed measures will be to goad the exasperated people into more desperate resistance.

BELFAST MORE QUIET, LOOTING CONTINUES

Estimated That Fourteen Persons Have Been Killed Since Rioting Began.

Belfast, July 23.—Although comparative quiet has prevailed in Belfast today, looting was resumed on Newtown Road, shortly after eight o'clock this evening, and riotous scenes were witnessed in the vicinity of Dee Street, where a leading spirits and grocery store was ransacked. The police made five arrests. The St. Matthews Catholic Church in Ballymacaree, a suburb, was occupied by the military. At the response of the Vicar of Ballymacaree 200 former service men presented themselves tonight as special police.

Altogether it is estimated that fourteen persons have been killed since the rioting began. Order was restored in the disturbed area early this morning, but there was renewed shooting in the Ashmole Street area later. It was in this district and in Cromac Street and in the Newtownards Road that the heaviest casualties occurred.

DIVORCES GRANTED OF NO EFFECT

Montreal, July 23.—Mr. Justice Lacombe this morning decided that a divorce granted by the Senate Committee at Ottawa to two Catholics, was of no effect in the Province of Quebec. The base upon which His Lordship delivered this decision was that of Mrs. Bernadotte David, who sued her husband for alimony, the husband securing a divorce from her subsequent to the commencement of the action. The motion for alimony was upheld by the judge who decided that a marriage between Catholics was indissoluble in the Province of Quebec, except by death.

DEPORTATION OF POLES ORDERED

Montreal, July 23.—Despite an order from the Department of the Minister of the Interior ordering their release, four stowaways of Polish nationality, M. Duchwald, Moses Salz, Frydman Noton and Dinhorn Ydda, were ordered deported by Judge Leranger in the practice court at the instance of the Immigration officers this afternoon. It was pleaded, unsuccessfully on the men's behalf, that if they were sent back to Poland they would be shot as deserters.

SCHOONER BIANCA REPORTED SAFE

San Francisco, Cal., July 23.—The schooner Bianca, Vancouver to South Africa, overdue and given up for lost put in at Port Natal, Africa, Wednesday, according to a despatch received here today by the Marine Department of the Chamber of Commerce.

MOTHER ACCUSED OF KILLING HER INFANT CHILD

Mrs. Matthews of Upper Mills, N. B., Before Police Magistrate at St. Stephen.

CHARGE LAID BY DETECTIVE POWERS

Following Investigation After the Finding of Infant's Body in the St. Croix River

Special to The Standard.
St. Stephen, N. B., July 23.—Magistrate C. N. Vroom has been engaged all day in the hearing of the charge of murder preferred by Detective John Powers against Mrs. Louise Matthews, of Upper Mills, arising from the finding of the body of a female infant floating in the St. Croix River above Milltown on June 5th. Mrs. Matthews, who appeared for the Crown, the accused being unrepresented at the morning session, Robert McIntosh, Marshal of the town of Milltown, gave evidence and produced a tiny shirt, a little night robe, napkins and a shawl taken from the little body, but not until the body had been buried and exhumed. He told of stories current after the body was found that led to enquiries being made at Upper Mills.

Dr. W. H. Laughlin, Mayor of Milltown, gave evidence of the condition of the body when he made an official examination on June 5th, three days after the body had been found. The body was that of a child, about three weeks old, robust and healthy at birth; that it had not died from natural causes and that the body had been in the water a week or ten days was the opinion of the doctor. The water was cool at that time and the body was well preserved. There were no external signs of violence there, but evidence of water in the lungs, but his opinion was that if the child was alive when put in the water, it was in a state of stupor. There was no sign of a struggle.

Damaging Evidence.

An adjournment was made for dinner and on resuming P. Elmer McLaughlin, barrister, appeared in behalf of the accused.

Albert H. Robinson of Upper Mills, was the only witness examined, his cross-examination being made at great length.

Mr. Robinson stated that he is a widower, sixty-three years of age, living alone in a house of his own at Upper Mills. On the night of November 30th, 1919, Mrs. Matthews had appeared at his door, and asked for shelter, and he had taken her in and since treated her as he would a daughter of his own. He had known her by sight, but had no acquaintance with her. Later she had told him that she had been married and that she had four children, but had separated from her husband, and that she was twenty-four years of age last year. A child was born to the woman on May 15th of the present year, and he thought that it was a female child. He had called in a neighbor, Mrs. Hall, but there was no physician present at the birth. He prepared food for the mother and child before he left for his work as a decorator, each morning. Mother and child were at his house when he left for work on the morning of May 27th, but when he returned at night they had gone. Mrs. Hall had only remained for a few hours on the morning that the child was born, and on the morning of May 27th, the mother and child were alone when he left for his work. He never saw the child alive after that. When he returned from work on the evening of May 28, the mother was there. He asked her where she had been and her reply was that she had been almost to Eastport making the trip by train.

Clothing Identified.

He identified the clothing found on the child as some that had been in his house for more than a year, and that had been given him while at work in Eastport to be delivered to another woman whose address he had not been able to find after his return, though he thought that she had moved to some place in Quebec. When the child was born to Mrs. Matthews no clothing had been made for it, and he had given her the clothing that was in the house and intended for the child of the other woman. He had once asked Mrs. Matthews where her child was, but received an evasive answer. It was a bright and healthy baby. This is the gist of the evidence given by Mr. Robinson and which looks very serious for the accused for whom Mr. Robinson expressed sincere sympathy in her trouble.

Mr. McLaughlin stated that as he had been called into the case only at dinner adjournment, and knew but little of it, he felt handicapped in its conduct and after a lengthy cross-examination asked for an adjournment until the morning.

Mr. Mills said that, in view of the seriousness of the charge preferred and of his natural sympathy for the unfortunate young woman, he would readily agree to an adjournment until Saturday morning, which the court then ordered.

Mrs. Matthews who is of bright, intelligent appearance and rather possessing, displayed not the slightest emotion at any stage of the hearing though she gave it her closest attention throughout.

RIOTING AND PILLAGING BY UNIONISTS REPORTED

Shops, Belonging to Nationalists, Attacked and Badly Damaged.

Drummond, County Down, Ireland, July 23.—Rioting and pillaging by Unionists occurred here yesterday evening. During the disorder crowds attacked the house of a prominent Sinn Feiner. The occupants of the house fled upon the approach of the attackers, and slipped through a rear entrance before the building was captured. The house was promptly burned.

Shops belonging to Nationalists were attacked and badly damaged. Military reinforcements were sent this morning to aid the police, who were hard pressed to keep order. During the rioting one man entered a shop and carried off the cash register, while another brought a hand truck and removed the shop fittings. In another case an attempt to carry off a piano failed, whereupon the instrument was burned.

The challenger gained on the second leg, but was still far behind when Skipper Adams, straightened Resolute out on the home stretch. Shamrock was closing up the gap that separated her from Resolute on this leg when a freaky bit of weather blew up that held even the seasoned Jersey Skipper, Captain William P. Burton had on the challenger as an adviser, and robbed Shamrock of her chance of a blow for the lead and winning. The slops were running fast in a 15 knot breeze when signs of a terrific squall became apparent. Shamrock hastily took down her club topsail and her large jib topsail and prepared for rough weather. Resolute ploughed ahead under full sail for a time apparently bent on going in all the east until she could before the squall struck. And the squall didn't strike—at least not with the intensity the Shamrock skipper obviously had expected. There was a break blow for a few minutes and a short torrent of rain, which Resolute weathered without taking in any sail save her jib topsail. When it was over, Shamrock was unable to re-set her club topsail, and was forced to set a smaller topsail, while Resolute set her original rig intact.

A brief rain interceded, and then the wind picked up again. Shamrock caught it first and crawled slowly up until she was nearly, if not fully abreast of Resolute. But when the leader caught the wind, she forged quickly ahead with her superior rig, breaking out a balloon jib topsail to add to her progress. Shamrock piled canvas on then breaking out both balloon or and spinnaker, but the finish was close at hand and she was unable to close the gap. The steam yacht Victoria, carrying Sir Thomas Lipton, led the chase, and the Victoria whistled that acclaimed the victor. A few minutes later a tiny tug was under the bow of the Victoria. Its crowd of yelling enthusiasts were these cheers and "who's all right" "Lipton" for the British sportsman. An excursion steamer and a fleet of smaller craft followed the tug's example and the Victoria whistled the cheers with three sharp blasts of her whistles. Sir Thomas could be seen on the bridge waving his cap faintly, and apparently unmoved by the fact that today's race had not gone according to his predictions and his hopes.

Mr. Graf is president of the International Narrow Fabric Company, and the bride is a well-known trained nurse. Both have been residents of this city for a number of years. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Graf will reside at 357 Water street. The couple were attended by Mr. Ralph Keith, a business partner of the groom and Miss R. J. ONTARIO'S SEPARATE SCHOOL SYSTEM

Calls for Steps to be Taken Immediately to Bring to a Conclusion Unsatisfactory Conditions.

Ottawa, July 23.—The Citizen prints the following in its columns today: "The Ontario Provincial Government has decided to take steps in the immediate future to bring to a conclusion the unsatisfactory conditions which have prevailed with regard to the administration of the separate school system in Ontario during the past year, which were brought about through the refusal of the French speaking representatives and a majority of the French ratepayers to abide by the famous 'Regulation' seven-ten."

"Following several conferences which Hon. R. A. Grant, Minister of Education under the former Government has had with representatives of both factions, it has been decided to appoint a Government Commission, composed of two English speaking and two French speaking members, to investigate the situation, which will take over the administration of the schools and present separate school boards. "The new commission, when formed, will not be forced upon the present administration, but the Minister of Education, through his own efforts and those of Judge Gunn, will endeavor to gain the consent of the majority of the present trustees, to its taking over the schools."

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. THE MAN WHO WINS. Is Always Full of Life and Energy—Failures Are Weak and Bloodless.

Remington Typewriters cost less per year than any other typewriters. A. Milne Fraser, Jas. A. Little, Mgr., 37 Dock street, St. John, N. B.

Some men seem to have all the luck. If there are any good things going on these men seem to get them. They make other people do their will—they are leaders. If they are business men they get the foreman's job. They have the power of influencing people.

The same thing is true of women. Some have the charm that makes men seek them out; others are altogether neglected. But this is not luck. It is due to a personal gift—vitality. Men and women of this sort are never weak, puffy, or infirm. They are full of life and energy. The whole thing is a matter of good blood, good nerves and good health. Everyone would wish to be like this and the qualities that make for vitality and energy are purely a matter of health. By building up the blood and nerves, sleeplessness, want of energy, weakness of the back, drooping shoulders, headaches and the intellectual sort of presence which really comes from weakness can all be got rid of. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made many weak, tired men vigorous and healthy, and many pale and dejected girls and women, plump, rosy and attractive, by improving their blood and toning up their nerves. If you are weak, ailing, low-spirited, or unhealthily, try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and note their speedy, beneficial effect.

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MORE ACTIVE TRADE ON MONTREAL

Pulp and Paper Stocks Again in Prominence, All Issues Showing Improvement.

(F. B. MURPHY & CO.) Montreal, July 23.—Trading on the local market today was more active, with 12,284 shares in the forenoon session, and the tone throughout was firm. The pulp and paper stocks have again come into prominence, all issues showing an improvement. Spanish River Pfd. was somewhat spectacular at the opening, the initial sale taking place 6 1/2 points up from last night's close. Abitibi has recovered and Brompton is up also a little. Weyganuck, also strong. Trading throughout this session was quite active and in some quarters it is said that all paper stocks are booked for higher levels.

The steel group was relatively neglected and prices were unchanged. There was no outstanding feature in the Public Utilities, but sales were made in the more active stocks at firm prices. Ontario Steel was the feature of strength in the iron and steel group. Cement is showing a better tone. Sugar was one of the most active steady.

Stocks of the market but there was no particular change in the price. There was no great volume of trading in the other stocks on the list and prices throughout were generally unimportant.

Why Cox and Harding Will Make League Chief Issue

Both candidates on the Democratic ticket declare that they will make their chief fight on the League of Nations issue. Replying, Senator Harding says that since "the President demands a campaign on this issue," since "the Democratic platform makes the issue paramount," and since "the Democratic candidates unqualifiedly acquiesce," then "the Republican party and candidates gladly accept the challenge." Altho the candidates have thus joined issue on the League of Nations there are independent publicists who agree that many citizens will vote their party ticket quite irrespective of what Governor Cox and Senator Harding may say about the League, and instead of the coming election being a great national referendum on the League of Nations it will be, in the opinion of The Lowell Courier-Citizen, "simply on which party is to be trusted—the Democrats after their prolonged exhibition of their quality or the Republicans after their prolonged absence, which may have made the heart grow fonder."

The leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST this week, July 24th, throws many side-lights upon the reasons why the candidates are pushing the League of Nations to the front as a dominant issue, and it will be highly interesting and instructive reading to the American voter just now.

PRUSSIAN NOBLES LOSE PRIVILEGES

Diet Law Withdraws All Special Advantages Enjoyed by "Higher Nobility."

ALL TITLES NOT ABOLISHED

Names Indicating Sovereignty Prohibited—"Lower Nobility" Retains Cognomens.

Berlin, July 23.—The law abolishing all special privileges of the nobility, prescribed by the Prussian and German constitutions, has passed the Prussian Diet almost without attention or debate. With it disappears in Prussia such predicates as Royal or Serene Highnesses; the right of conferring titles of nobility; and the various traditional legal advantages of the higher nobility, such as exemption from arrest, trial only before special courts, and control over the conduct of members of the family, particularly in the matter of marriage. The law applies in its wording to the entire nobility, but as the so-called "lower nobility," including counts, countesses, barons and baronesses possessed no special privileges, it seriously affects in practice only the members of the "higher nobility," as members of ruling or former sovereign houses or estates.

The provision for which the special "house laws" of such families, governing marriage, divorce, and placing under tutelage of family members, are abolished, is of special interest to a number of American women, married nonorganically or "by the left hand" to members of sovereign or mediocrity houses, and their descendants. As not "equally born," they were denied the full-fulgencies of their consort, and of wives qualified by the necessary "sixteen quarters" (such nobility parents, for four generations) to marry with the elect; they were not entitled to bear the family name and title, but were compelled to pass their life as commoners, and as baronesses by the side of their royal or princely consorts. All distinction between regular and nonorganically married women disappears, and with respect to the future of the American woman who has married, or married, in the future, a Prussian prince of unequal birth, her descendants are entitled to the designation of prince and the family name, instead of the lower title hitherto assigned to them.

The law does not abolish titles of nobility as such, but only those indicating sovereign rights, such as the princes and princesses, counts and countesses, barons and baronesses, are still privileged to distinguish themselves by the old titles, though with one minor and rather amusing restriction, arising from the federal constitution. According to this, the predicate of nobility now is considered only as a part of the name, so that it is no longer legally correct to speak of a "Princess," "Countess" or "Baroness" of So-and-So, but only, for example, of "Mrs. Prince Hohenzollern," "Mrs. Count Eppenberg" or "Mrs. Baron Berckheim."

The exception, abolishing titles based on rights of sovereignty, is to obviate the present legal inequality, under which there was nothing in the law of republican Germany to prevent William of Hohenzollern or his descendants from calling himself "King of Prussia." The Minister of Justice is also given a right of control over the action of formerly sovereign families, who are entitled to the predicate of nobility, as the example of the family one of the various designations which the families have accumulated in the course of the centuries, so that the minister could, should he think fit, lay a veto against selection of a particular designation tending to keep alive territorial pretensions of the monarchial houses. He might perhaps hesitate to approve the use of the word "Prussia" as part of the title of the Hohenzollerns.

Such is the law and such the future legal status of the Prussian nobility. What, however, no law and no decisions of "the masses" can probably affect is the social position and the inner relationship of these old dynasties (family which, as the example of France has shown, persist in the hearts of the family members and of their followers, despite all legislative enactments to the contrary. The leading members of the Hohenzollerns, the Wittelsbachs, the Guelfs and other royal families will probably be as particular to keep alive their prestige and the pretensions of the family by contracting only the proscribed kind of marriages with their "equals" and observing the abolished "house law," as the Bonapartes and Bourbons. The barons and countesses in Germany will continue to enjoy the old social etiquette and the titles the old matrimonial value, as is the case of their counterparts in republican France.

GENERAL TUAN HAS RESIGNED COMMAND

Turns Over Authority in Pekin to President Hsu Shi Chang — Fighting Ceased for Time.

Public Ledger Far East Cable Service (Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Company) BY ROGER AMOS BURR Pekin, July 23.—General Tuau, commander of the Anfu troops, has suddenly resigned authority and responsibility in Pekin in favor of President Hsu Shi Chang. It is unknown whether his action is a ruse or due to weakness following recent victories of the Reformists. This is a fall in the fighting and President Hsu Shi Chang is sending a mission to mediate between the factions. Pekin remains isolated, the Tientsin railway not having yet been opened.

IRISH MEDIATION PLAN OUTLINED BY PLUNKETT

Constitution as Independent as Canada's, Under British Defense, With Ulster in Control of Local Affairs, is Policy Projected.

(Copyright, '20 by Public Ledger Co.)
By CARL W. ACKERMAN
London, July 22.—While in Dublin I had several conversations with Sir Horace Plunkett, one of Ireland's grand old independent statesmen, who, firm in the conviction that Lloyd George's home rule bill is dead, stands today as a champion of the dominion plan and an advocate of mediation. In an interesting and exclusive statement he described Ireland's two governments of today and said he had in mind "some one who belongs to your own country," as mediator between Sinn Fein Ireland and the British Government.

"It is hard," he said, "to give in a brief interview an adequate summary of the recent events in Ireland, adequate in the sense that their full significance will be made intelligible to those who are not actually living and working in the country. The best starting point is the armistice.

"At the outbreak of the war a fatal blunder had been made. Instead of seeing in that crisis a magnificent opportunity for ending the Anglo-Irish conflict, it was seized upon as an excuse for postponing its settlement. I need not enlarge upon this calamitous failure of British statesmanship and its consequences. Anything may be forgiven in such catastrophic times. Nor need I dwell upon several occasions during the war when the blunder might have been retrieved, notably when America came in and the Irish in America found themselves performing fighting on the same side as the British, but again when the armistice came and there was no longer any justification for military usurpation of the civil government in Ireland.

Failure of Government Policy

When, in December, 1918, Lloyd George appealed to the British electorate on the cry 'Hang the Kaiser' and 'Make Germany pay,' he had to have an Irish plank in his platform. Of course, Ireland also was to enjoy general contentment, and prosperity, and, perhaps, when the Kaiser is hanged and when Germany pays, we too shall have a good time all round, but we are not to have home rule or anything like it.

"Of all British failures in Ireland none has been so complete as that of the present government's policy. Indeed the completeness of its failure is its one redeeming quality. It will gradually bring British public opinion to bear upon Parliament for just look at the present situation.

"We have now in Ireland two governments, a de jure government exercising its functions through an army of occupation and a de facto government which has the greater force of the people's will at its back. Sinn Fein has its parliament, its civil and criminal courts, holding that the presence of a British army constitutes a state of war. It has also its courts-martial.

"Naturally there is continuous conflict between these two governments. Each issues its daily official reports. The facts upon which both sides are agreed seem to show that the tide of battle is going steadily against the British forces and in favor of the Irish republic.

Partition of Ireland.

"The miniature civil war which broke out in Derry last week, should make even this government pause. The essence of their Irish policy dictated to them by Sir Edward Carson and his friends, is the partition of Ireland. Upon frankly sectarian lines the bill created for the first time in history a northern Ireland and a southern Ireland. They are so called because it would not look well to call them Protestant and Roman Catholic, but if you look on the map you will observe that the most northern county in Ireland, Donegal, is to be gerrymandered into southern Ireland now.

"The municipal area of Derry happens to be bounded on the east by northern Ireland. Derry with its population almost equally divided in religion and politics, might have gone into either Ireland. The home rulers had the better claim, as the government has a Sinn Fein majority at the present time. Sir Edward Carson did not see his way to any further scrapping of the convention than was involved in assigning three Ulster counties to southern Ireland, so he retains Derry.

"From what I have said, you will see that this city was bound to be the scene of conflict between the two Irelands. Indeed, it is the only spot where one or other Ireland is not so preponderant as to preclude sustained conflict between them. You will observe that Irish supporters of the two nations theory are here furthest from their British base while upholders of Irish nationality and Irish unity are in immediate contact with one of the most virile parts of nationalist Ireland. The lesson of Derry is one while he who runs may read.

"The chief importance of the rail-way trouble is its bearing upon the political situation in England. Here you have Irish workers refusing to earn wages by carrying material which may be used for making war not only upon their own fellow countrymen, but also upon Russians with whose cause they sympathize. It is true that in the case of Poland they have come to an agreement with the government. What they may do in Ireland we do not yet know, but at the time of the hunger strike in Mount Joy prison, they took action which enabled Irish labor to rout Dublin Castle, horse, foot and dragons. But the government must know that they are treading on very dangerous ground. The anomaly, I may add, the gross impartiality of treatment of southern Ireland must lead to searchings of the heart among some of our military rulers, who not so long ago were threatening to resign their commissions rather than risk being ordered to fire upon the irregular forces under the command of the provisional government of northern Ireland.

Independent Constitution Urged.

"The whole situation is so full of dangers that the only sane plan is to scrap the present policy and call upon Irish people, North and South alike, to elect a constituent assembly or constitutional convention representative of the whole of Ireland and to empower that body to adopt any constitution they like within the empire."

"By the form 'within the empire' I understand you mean that the Irish people should be permitted to adopt a constitution as practically as independent as that of Canada," I asked.

"Yes, practically as independent, but there would have to be an agreement in regard to military and naval affairs, which is not required in the case of distant dominions. An overwhelming majority in these islands and not an inconsiderable minority in Ireland are firmly convinced their defenses must be under a single central authority, which would obviously have to be predominantly British and personally provided. It was made perfectly clear that no outside interference with the civil government of Ireland should be possible. I see no difficulty about this limitation, nor would any one, once a friendly settlement had been arrived at. But the matter is too long and complicated to deal with now."

Has American Mediator in Mind.

I asked Sir Horace how, under what he calls "dominion plan," he gets over the Ulster difficulty.

"Exactly as similar difficulties have been met over in Canada, South Africa and in Australia. The rest of Ireland would willingly concede at the outset, complete control of local affairs by Ulster, part of Ulster or any other homogeneous area that wanted it. But these and all other questions can only be hopefully approached by

"I am sure that the only sane plan is to scrap the present policy and call upon Irish people, North and South alike, to elect a constituent assembly or constitutional convention representative of the whole of Ireland and to empower that body to adopt any constitution they like within the empire."

Irishmen in friendly conference in Ireland.

"Would either extreme listen to such a counsel of moderation?" I asked.

"Perhaps not at the moment, although I am convinced any genuine offer—the present bill is the reverse of a genuine offer—to meet the wishes of the great majority of Irish people would be met by a response so generous that it would be difficult for that one-fifth of Irish people for whom alone coalition government seems to have any regard to continue its intransigence. Possibly some mediator of international repute may be found to initiate negotiations. I have in mind one who belongs to your country."

ST. JOHN, N. B., SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1920.

As will be seen from the announcement elsewhere in this issue, The Standard, in its determination to furnish its readers with the most exclusive and down-to-the-minute news, has arranged to get the entire mail and cable service of Lord Northcliffe's great paper, the London Daily Mail. The Mail was the pioneer of the half penny dailies, and its small price, coupled with the immensity of its news service, placed it at one bound in the front rank of English journals, a position it has maintained and strengthened as time has elapsed. The advantage to be gained by our readers in having the benefit of the news gathering agencies of our London contemporary will be at once apparent, and we trust that this further effort to make The Standard of greater service to the community will be appreciated by those for whose benefit it is designed.

THE AMERICA CUP.

Britannians must accept with the best grace they can assume, the fact that in two fairly sailed races, Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock has had to take second place on an equality, with two wins each. After Tuesday's victory for the challenger, the hopes of her owner and his friends were naturally high, and it was regarded as distinctly hard lines that she should be beaten in Wednesday's race only by the amount of the handicap she had to concede to her opponent. In yesterday's race she was apparently out-sailed by the American boat, which had somewhere about three minutes to the good. There remains one more trial of strength to take place between the boats, and interest will now be roused to fever heat as to the outcome.

Some criticism has been called forth regarding the time allowance that the Shamrock has to concede her opponent, and many people do not understand why this should be done. A contemporary points out, however, that "landlubbers" will not be easily convinced by yachting experts that some better system of measuring boats for such races as the America's Cup race could not be devised. They have more confidence in the brains of the designers and rule-makers than the experts themselves. It is conceded on all hands that the rules under which the Resolute and the Shamrock are contending do not represent the limit of yachting wisdom. They differ in some respects from the rule in England and are themselves developments of previous sets of American rules. No doubt they will be further altered and we believe that when the day comes when the best boat in England can meet the best boat in America, with interest in the international races will be greatly increased.

The average landman's opinion, however, does not take cognizance of the difficulties in the way of the rule-makers. To declare that two boats shall be of a certain length on the water line and shall start from scratch merely encourages designers to construct long over-bars, bow and stern, so that as soon as the boat heels to the wind, her water line increases. A combination water-line length and overall length produces a different set of difficulties for the designer, but these, according to the New York Tribune, can equally be evaded. In fact, the race between handicap rule and designer is something like the contest between defensive armor and explosive shell. A victory for Shamrock will be an indication that for the time being the designer has won. It is pointed out that if the America's Cup boats were to be built exactly the same way, the contest then would be between skippers and crews, while the designer would have no encouragement to experiment. The difficulties are to be admitted, but the present race is the only championship event in which a handicap is recognized. Were it not for the personality of Sir Thomas Lipton and the fact that so many vain efforts have been made to lift the cup, the series of races would not attract very much interest in the British Empire.

NATIONAL TRADE MARKS.

Expert opinion from all parts of the British Empire, says the New York Sun, has rendered a verdict against the adoption of a national trade mark to distinguish British goods in the markets of the world. The Board of Trade Committee, which has been deliberating since last year, also went on record against compulsory marking of foreign made goods sold in the British Empire.

The decision against the national trade mark and compulsory marking of foreign goods was prompted by the arguments of international traders, who objected to being hindered in obtaining supplies wherever it best suited them. They asserted that British entrepot trade would be destroyed or severely impaired if all British goods were marked, for any goods imported from overseas and re-sold by an English merchant to a foreign customer, minus the British mark, would be recognized at once as coming from England the jobber and not from England the manufacturer. It was contended also that if foreign goods were barred from British markets unless they displayed the name of the country of origin a free advertisement would be given to foreign merchandise.

The committee did not condemn marking high grade British goods with the words "British made," but it warned against the danger of promiscuously stamping all British goods with the word.

International action was advocated to obtain more nearly uniform methods of registered trade marks. In the United States the committee would like to see the use of British emblems and hall marks as trade marks forbidden. It urges representations to the Federal Trade Commission to this end. The committee is strongly in favor of any measure that will prevent misrepresentation through use of misleading marks. This is aimed, no doubt, at the German manufacturers who have been using Swiss or Scandinavian markings on goods sold in England.

When the committee first started its deliberations there was a strong feeling in England that Germany's successful use of a national mark before the war might well be imitated by England. But the adverse decision is a reflection of the English intuition which utterly condemns anything that would tend to narrow the scope of international practices.

Germany's pre-war trade position differed widely from the present position of England. German's entrepot trade was negligible. England's export trade is large and extremely important. Germany could produce quality merchandise at prices no higher than those asked by other countries for inferior grades. England cannot do this, for her production costs, if not so high as our own, are much higher than the costs of Continental manufacturers. England must meet circumstances almost exactly the reverse of those surrounding German trade before the war.

It is doubtful whether a national trade mark just now would be of use to any country. The war has caused prejudices in all countries in favor of domestic good and has set up foreign exchange barriers in Europe that make it a patriotic duty for Europeans to avoid foreign goods.

MR. WIGMORE AND ST. JOHN.
The banquet tendered to the Hon. R. W. Wigmore on Thursday evening was a tribute by his fellow-citizens to a man who has "made good" in the past, and from whom a good deal is expected in the future. It was unnecessary for the hon. gentleman to assure his friends that he does not intend to be merely an ornamental representative of the province in the Government; those who have watched his public career down to the present time have come to realize that, given reasonable opportunity, he will usually have something to show for his activities.

No man is better acquainted with the needs of the port of St. John than Mr. Wigmore, and knowing these needs as he does, he will know further how to go to work to get them attended to. One thing that should render it easier for him in this respect is the fact that the Prime Minister has seen for himself what an important part the port of St. John must play in the transportation services of the Dominion, and of the consequent necessity that exists for the shipping and other facilities to be increased in order that that part may be played to advantage. It is idle to expect the foreign trade of the country to expand to the extent that it easily may, unless proper inlets and outlets are provided for it; and it must not be forgotten that for six months of the year the chief gateway on the east coast is the port of St. John.

The future welfare of the city and port is not a matter of politics in any sense, every citizen no matter what his opinion may be is equally interested in seeing that St. John gets all that can reasonably be obtained to enhance its usefulness from a national standpoint; and there are few, if any, citizens but will feel that the city's interests are in safe keeping as long as Mr. Wigmore has them in charge.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC IN THE UNITED STATES.

The immediate outlook for those residents of the United States who are compelled to make use of the railways to any great extent either as passengers or as respects freight does not look very promising, for that the award increasing the wages of railroad employees will be passed along in the final settlement to the public goods without saying. There is no other solution. The railroads are still yielding deficits in operation and cannot work out of increased expenses, except by raising their rates, and when this is done the public pays.

The railroad managements suggest that the passenger traffic share in the increase of rates that must be made to take care of the advance in wages. It is probably a fair suggestion. After the railroads were handed back to their owners by the Government, the petition for permission to increase rates was filed by the railroads in order to make it possible for the roads to earn the return that is guaranteed them and which the national treasury must make good if the roads do not obtain sufficient revenue to acquire it.

According to the Bangor Commercial, the roads wish to raise about $1,000,000,000 additional revenue as already asked, and now must raise about $600,000,000 more. The first sum, it is planned to take care of by elevating the freight rates, the second is proposed, or will be proposed, to look after at least in part by increasing passenger tariffs.

If the passenger rates are increased the general public will for the first time realize what the increased railroad wages mean to them. Some gain such knowledge through freight bills, but the facts will be more generally borne in when every traveller finds that the price of his transportation has advanced.

It is to be noted that this week the Pennsylvania railroad has announced its intention to lay off some 12,000 employees in its eastern operating division because they are not needed and it is very likely that many other roads will follow the example set by the Pennsylvania. The latter action may breed trouble, for there are already threats of action against the Pennsylvania and it is claimed that the action is taken because employees have been on strike. But it has been everywhere believed that under Government operation many more employees were used than needed. This does not hold on all roads and may not be a general fact, but evidently the Pennsylvania believes that it can curtail to advantage.

Room at the Top.
(Lethbridge Herald.)
There is room at the top in Canada despite what some say. The proletariat claim, Arthur Melghen, Canada's new Premier, was a chore boy on a farm not so long ago and it is only fifteen years since the new Minister of Customs was driving a milk wagon in St. John, N. B. Hard work and confidence in one's self are assets worth while to men in any occupation.

More Fatal Than the War.
(Quebec Telegraph.)
Sir Arthur Currie has made the important statement to the Presbyterian assembly in Ottawa, that we had lost more men through tuberculosis than on the battlefield, and that this matter, as well as that of venereal diseases, must be dealt with in an outspoken manner. The ex-commander of the Canadian army in Europe is in a position to know what he is talking about and his utterances on such matters as these command attention. Other authorities, medical and otherwise, whose dictum is beyond question, have given us the same assurance. The foe so indicated by them demand our serious study and attention.

Bird Protection.
(Hamilton Times.)
Within the past few years bird protection has become a live question in Canada and in the United States. The needless slaughter of the feathered tribes that was carried on for years was having its natural result; many races of birds were being exterminated. Everybody who had a gun went out to shoot and slay, and great was the slaughter thereof. Now a better sense of the value of bird life prevails, and instead of the shot-gun many carry a camera with which to take snapshots of their bird friends.

FRENCH PLANNING BIG THINGS IN AVIATION

Official Outlines Military and Commercial Program Now Under Way.

Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co. Paris, July 23.—Under Secretary of State for Aviation M. Flandrin, before departure via the air route yesterday to attend the international aviation meeting at Antwerp, made a statement of plans for the future of French aviation.

"The programme," he said, "has two distinct parts—military and civil. One military air fleet is not yet re-organized. It awaits the report the Minister of War will soon make to Parliament, but while waiting for this we are transporting all our old machines, making the fleet as up to date as possible without building new airplanes.

"The civil part of the programme is proceeding faster. All our factories are turning out machines so fast that there is a great demand for pilots in addition to many passenger lines. There are now the Paris-Brussels, Paris-Geneva and Paris-London aerial mail routes, and we are about to start the Paris-Deauville air post for the summer season. At Antwerp our best military civil pilots—Pilon, Fovial, Nungesser and Ponck—will represent us in the face of England, Italy, Belgium and Holland—the last country, I understand is sending German machines. It is admitted that to keep our supremacy in this branch of national activity we will have to work

FRANCE RENEWS PRAISE OF FOCH AS ARMISTICE STORY IS MADE PUBLIC

Ex-Minister Asserts Marshal Feared Driving Germany to Bolshevism, in Answer to Facts in House-Mantoux-Letters from Public Ledger.

By WYTHE WILLIAMS. Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co. Paris, July 23.—Every newspaper in Paris reprints in full from the Public Ledger the letters exchanged by Colonel E. M. House and Paul Mantoux, interpreter of the Peace Conference, referring to the role of Marshal Foch at the time of the armistice. There has not yet been time for much comment, but the news agencies have telegraphed the letters to the entire provincial press, so an immense amount of editorial opinion is bound to follow.

The Marshal himself left Paris late last night for his summer home on the coast of Brittany, where he intends to remain a month. I called this morning at the superior war council and saw the Marshal's chief of staff, General Weygand, who had already read the letters, but declined to comment, saying it was a subject for the personal attention of Marshal Foch.

Locheur Opposed Foch's Views. Qual d'Orsay's opinion is that hard, but while our military programme is submitted to Parliament our ambitions will be realized.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S SHABBY LONDON OFFICE

Visitor Describes it as a Disgrace to the Province—Other Provinces Have Decent Quarters.

By CAPTAIN J. R. C. STURDIE. Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co. London, July 23.—Many New Brunswickers calling at the Province's London bureau, are astonished to find it a shabby, gloomy den in a side street off the Strand, and they duly compare it with the palatial building newly put up by the Australian Government, the offices of the New Zealand, New South Wales, British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba and Nova Scotia Governments, with their display of manufactures, products, etc.—much to N. B.'s disadvantage.

During a conversation with Commissioner Bowler, I was agreeably surprised at the number of people calling to ask for information regarding New Brunswick, its resources, farms, etc., and I must say I was ashamed of my own province to look around and see what a little he had to work on in the way of samples and products of New Brunswick. The dingy office, worn-out furniture, oil-cloth and general office equipment gave one the idea of gloom.

All New Brunswickers visiting this office make the same remark, to the effect that if the people at home know the conditions under which their representative had to work, there certainly would be an uproar against the Local Government for permitting such a thing to exist.

New Brunswick needs a large influx of settlers; there are thousands of unemployed demobilized men of good character in the British Isles today of the kind we want at home. Why are we not getting our share? Simply because, for the want of a few extra pounds of decent office, proper furnishings, etc., the emigration is going to other countries and provinces. I must say I am ashamed of New Brunswick.

JAPANESE GUNBOAT TO WATCH FOR REDS

Canneries and Wireless Station on Sea of Okhotsk Coast Burned by Bolsheviks.

Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co. Tokyo, July 23.—A navy office communiqué says the Japanese gunboat Chibaya has arrived at Tausyk, a port on the sea of Okhotsk to protect Japanese fishing interests against Bolshevik raids. The gunboat found the canneries and other establishments in the neighborhood destroyed by the Reds, who also burned wireless station at Okhotsk. The Japanese residents, however, are safe. In view of the importance of the Japanese fishing interests along the northern coast of the sea of Okhotsk and Kamchatka peninsula, the dispatch of further naval and military forces is under consideration. A large amount of American capital is invested in the canneries in those regions where Bolshevik raids are feared. It is estimated that 20,000 Japanese fishermen visit those coasts each summer.

POLAND IS FIGHTING FOR CIVILIZATION

Is Only Continuing Action Begun by Allies is Claim of Paderewski, Polish Statesmen.

IMPERIALISTIC IDEAS OF NEW NATION DENIED

Country Longs for Peace—Looks to Allies for Aid in Present Crisis.

(Special Cable Dispatch) (Copyright 1920 by Public Ledger Company)

London, July 23.—Colonel House today made the following statement for the Public Ledger foreign service: "Within the last two years Paderewski, the greatest living Pole, has swept across the political horizon like a brilliant comet. Great as was his reputation as a musician, he has overshadowed it as a statesman. He was the most picturesque figure at the Versailles Peace Conference and no one but Poland's foreign secretary, Paderewski, had a more profound knowledge of the ethnical and political history of Europe."

By CARL W. ACKERMAN (Special Cable Dispatch) (Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Company)

Poland today is on the verge of a great crisis, if not calamity. Ignace Paderewski, Poland's first premier, today in an exclusive statement to the Public Ledger foreign service, not only denied the charge that Poland is making war on Russia, but declared "she continues the action which the Allies began," and "she expects the civilized world will not leave her alone."

Paderewski would not put the blame for Poland's action upon any one or any group of powers, but to me it was quite evident that what actually happened in Poland was that that country undertook an offensive against Russia, discouraged by none of the great powers and encouraged by one of them, while all the time Europe hoped that Poland would save the chestnuts of European civilization from the fires of Bolshevism without burning her fingers. If she had succeeded against Russia she would have been praised to the skies; falling in the attempt to defend herself against the threatened Bolshevik offensive, it is now the subject of world criticism. Paderewski shows how unfair this criticism is.

Accusations Are "Absurd"

"First of all," he said "let me say the accusation that Poland wages war against Russia is perfectly absurd. If Poland makes war on Russia, then Judenich, Kolchak and Denikin also made war on Poland. It is difficult to admit, recognizing the fact that all three gentlemen were good Russian patriots themselves. I would be useless to describe the situation in Russia as it is, as well as the conditions in the various provinces. Cities are dying and industry are practically dead, agriculture is not even 20 per cent what it was before the calamity of October, 1917. Since the revolution the peasants have had to adopt the most primitive and prohibitive style of living. There is no production of food."

"Aware of these facts, the Entente nations from the first month when the Bolsheviks obtained their hold on Russia made considerable attempts to help the Russian people establish normal conditions, but for some reason these enterprises resulted in total failure. Of all the forces which have fought against Russian rule, Poland is now alone in the field. "Several months before her recognition as an independent country she was involved in armed conflict with the Soviet forces in provinces, which prior to the first partition of Poland had for centuries formed an integral part of the Polish republic. Several million Polish people inhabited those provinces. The Bolsheviks had occupied these provinces and introduced a regime of cruelty and terror with-out parallel in the history of mankind. Thousands of Poles, belonging to the educated classes, were tortured mercilessly.

"It was Poland's right and duty to protect her nationals. At first that right and duty were performed by a few units who volunteered to protect the unfortunate population against the Bolsheviks, but as soon as the Diet was convoked the government of Poland recognized the necessity of them some technical support and assistance in the form of arms and munitions, secured chiefly from France.

Reds Ready for Peace The formation of a regular army began and in a short time a small army was ready to oppose the Bolshevik invasion. The success obtained by the army in April and May, 1919, was so immediate as it was decisive. In a few weeks Vilna and districts with a decided Polish majority were taken and so was Minsk, with its mixed population of white Russians, Poles and Jews. There was a moment when the Bolsheviks were surrounded by Judenich, Kolchak and Denikin, armies, when their war materials were exhausted, and their means of transportation greatly impaired, when the Soviets were willing to offer peace under very tempting conditions. Some intimations to that effect were made to the Polish Government in August of last year. Peace Declared Impossible The principal allied and associated governments were immediately approached and the Supreme Council was asked what should be done; whether peace ought to be concluded or war continued. On behalf of the Supreme Council M. Clemenceau answered that peace with the Bolsheviks was impossible. So the war went on, and it could not be otherwise, because at the time the Entente Powers were still supporting Judenich, Kolchak and particularly Denikin with arms and ammunition, and even with July 1920

Peter Farren In Fredericton

St. John Pacer Will Make His First Start in Maritime and Maine Circuit—Other Horses and Horsemen Arrived in Capital Yesterday.

Fredericton, N. B., July 23.—Peter Farren, 2:07, the St. John speed marvel, is making his first trip to the races. The pacer that will represent St. John in the free-for-all this year, arrived in Fredericton today and will make his first start on the Maritime and Maine Circuit this season at the meeting here next week.

This season Peter Farren is back under the care of William Brickley, the St. John trainer, and followers of racing declare there is every indication that he will have one of his best years since he came east. The recent breaking news he paced over Moosepath Park last week have shown the horsemen that the son of Peter the Great had all his old time speed and he will step into the ring here practically fresh while the rest of the bunch have been having a lot of hard racing.

There will be a lot of tough bits in that race for all when they turn for the word next Wednesday. The probable starters including Cro Pmo, 2:03 1/2, The Problem, 2:04, Fern Hill, 2:04 1/2, John A. Hal, 2:05 1/2, The Ghost, 2:05 1/2, John Q. 2:05 1/2, and Baby Doll, 2:05 1/2. It is the first $1,000 purse since the recent racing ever seen in the east.

With Peter Farren there arrived five other horses from St. John today, the lot including Toss, 2:15 1/2, and Native Worry, one untraced trotter, both owned by S. E. Rice, the Mill street merchant; Porofath, 2:24 1/2, and Ike Parker, also owned by O'Keefe, owner of Peter Farren and thought by Robert Brown of St. John.

A large party of horsemen arrived this morning from St. Stephen, where the racing closed yesterday and hotel accommodations for the next week are being rapidly booked up.

Of the big influx of visitors expected next week a lodging and information bureau, such as only used during exhibition week in the past, has been established.

Chicago, July 23.—Supplices for sixty United States railroad officials and union leaders to appear before the Federal Grand Jury next Wednesday were issued today at the request of the District Attorney, Charles F. Clyne.

The witnesses are to testify in the indictment of the activities of John Grinnam, President of the Chicago Yardmen's Association, and twenty-seven other leaders in the unauthorized railroad strikes last April.

DEFENDER RESOLUTE WON YESTERDAY'S RACE WITHOUT NEED OF ANY TIME ALLOWANCE

Local Yachtsmen in Reading Account of Race Yesterday Still Believe That Shamrock is Better Boat, But Think That Her Skipper, Capt. Burton Displayed Faulty Seamanship During the Race—Words Hard Luck No Excuse for Man at the Wheel—Shamrock's Best Chance to Lift the Cup Yesterday—Her Backers Disappointed—Burton Would Not Listen to Seabright Pilot, Who Knew Jersey Squalls, But Shortened Sails, While Resolute Carried On.

Although the city telephone calls to the Standard last evening were very numerous, there was a great many calls from out districts. St. George St. Stephen, Chatham, Sussex, Hampton and many other long distance calls were the suburban calls were many. In fact the Standard's telephone service was kept constantly busy for some hours. One call from St. Stephen was worth talking about. The gentleman asked how the yacht race finished and when he was told that Resolute won, he said: "Would you wait, just a few seconds until I say something." The request was granted and then the word came distinctly over the wire: "Damn. Thank you for the information."

Local yachtsmen who have considered to do with racing in former days, and those who have been seen for pleasure but on many occasions obtained as much from the days on the water as from the shore.

Local yachtsmen who had the privilege of reading the account of the race yesterday were disappointed. The Shamrock lost the race on the second leg and only gained 44 seconds which greatly disappointed her backers. Then came the turn of the second mark when the Resolute had nearly a minute to the good of the turn and the run home was looked for anxiously by those who were looking for Shamrock to outrun the Resolute.

The skipper of the Resolute, Captain Adams, only waited until the squall was about a half a mile away and then he only took in his jib to get the boat out of the squall. For half an hour the squall did nothing but splattered the yachts with rain while the Shamrock lost ground the defender went along in good shape. It was by noon that the squall was over the yachtsmen for the Lipton slipper to hang on and take a chance when he realized the time allowance against him, but he failed to come up to the expectations of some local yachtsmen who have sailed both in races and for pleasure and from reading the press account of the race it is generally felt that perhaps a question as to the outcome of the race, provided the defender's rigging held.

Again the start had to be postponed an hour, this time to wait for a fog bank to blow away. The mist lifted at 12:30 and the committee of ones set signals for the best south-southwest to a mark ten miles off, then a reach out to sea, and another reach to the finish.

There was not much more than a four knot breeze when the two preliminary signals were set. For the first time in the series, Captain Burton held back and allowed Resolute to lead the way. But Captain

Adams was in no hurry and he sailed Resolute down the line for a minute and a half after the starting signal had crossed.

Shamrock worked across four seconds before the two minute handicap expired, with Resolute to leeward and back winding her, both yachts started on the starboard tack, but Shamrock soon swung round to port and headed inshore. Resolute followed as usual and held a fine breeze, while the two boats took starboard tacks. It was seen that Resolute had worked out more than a quarter of a mile in the lead. A mile from the start both yachts swung round to port and carried off this tack down the coast until Shamrock nearly ran into a fish pond off Seabright. All the way down just under 12 knots an hour was worked to windward, so when Shamrock finally headed off shore on the starboard tack, the defender was well to weather.

Resolute did not tack to port until two minutes after Shamrock and the reason for this was not at once evident, but it afterwards proved that Captain Adams had the mark in view and made it on the score of shore. Shamrock could not fetch the buoy and she was compelled to make two short litches before rounding.

Resolute had her jib jib topped on the bow-wire half a minute before turning and her big reaching jib on the stay and broken out a minute after rounding the mark. Shamrock sailed nearly a mile on the starboard tack before breaking out her reaching jib.

The yachts sailed the second leg in very nearly record time, averaging just under 12 knots an hour. The expected Shamrock outraced Resolute but her total gain of 44 seconds under exactly the same conditions of wind and sea was disappointing to her backers.

The two yachts jibbed round the second mark with a fresh, and with the breeze over the port quarter headed for the first mark. Resolute being nearly a minute in the lead and having the race seemingly well in hand.

The yachts had sailed about half a mile when a squall of black and threatening rain, in spite of his Seabright pilot, familiar with Jersey squalls and knowing that his bark is usually worse than his bite, Captain Burton decided to take no chance with his top hamper and not only doused his reaching jib topsail but hauled down his big club topsail. Resolute waited until the squall was half a mile away and then shortened sail by taking in her jib topsail only.

The squall did nothing except fill the southwest and jumble up the weather. The two yachts wooed the fickle winds as they did on Tuesday trying one jib topsail after another. Shamrock sailed all this time with her jib topsail and finally working to windward which filled much less than half the upper trilled. After dumping several buckets of rain on the deck the squall passed to leeward and the southwest resumed its business, but not at its old pace. Shamrock picked it up first and overhauled Resolute. It looked at one time as if she would go by, but noon for half an hour the squall was over and there was never a question as to the result.

In the last mile Resolute tacked to leeward under balloon sail while Shamrock crossed the finish line with spinnaker to starboard.

The yachts will sail their final race tomorrow, over a windward and leeward course, which is said to favor the defender.

What Jarvis Says.
New York, July 23.—This is what Commodore Amelius Jarvis, of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, has to say of today's race.
"Shamrock was running in bad luck today. After getting the start she immediately ran into a soft spot in the wind. Resolute was just coming about in the same tack when she saw her position and came back at once on the old tack.
"On the last leg she never ran out of sail, but she called around her rival, gaining many minutes thereby.
"Afterwards Shamrock lost nothing in her windward work, in the reach she gained a little. In the last mile she had a heavy squall was brewing and both yachts pulled sails, but Resolute hung on to her club spinnaker while Shamrock pulled hers and later set a small working sail, and the wind shifted from Westery to easterly several times and fell very light. On each occasion Resolute's luck was best. While luck was much against Shamrock it is doubtful whether today, she could have worked out her time allowance.

"It was good judgment on Mr. Burton's part to take in Shamrock's club topsail, as at this stage of the race it was impossible to work off her. Had a squall materialized this was quite possible with the latter swinging her topsail, while Shamrock angled down and prepared. She might have stiched a victory at the last moment."

What Sir Thomas Says.
On Board Steam Yacht Victoria, July 23.—The loss of two yacht races in succession, with the commanding officer of being within one race of lifting the cup, has not discouraged Sir Thomas Lipton, owner of the challenging craft. Neither has he lost confidence in his boat, or the men who man her, and the conclusion of today's race saw him optimistic of the final result. Of the winner, Sir Thomas said: "Resolute is a wonderful boat, in all points of sailing. The crew is a very good class of men, very smart, efficient and certainly well trained."
Of his own boat and her men, he said: "I am positive that my crew has done the very best it could under the existing circumstances. I want to go alongside to lead the cheering. If I had won they would have cheered me."
Asked if in the event that tomorrow's race went against him, he would re-challenge, Sir Thomas replied it would be necessary at the beginning to consult with the Royal Yacht Club. He intimated, however, that he had such a thought in mind.
The skillful handling of Resolute in the face of a squall today aroused both admiration and condemnation among yachting experts on board the Victoria. "It was taking a gambler's chance, and Captain Adams won," commented Commodore Jarvis, who is one of Lipton's yachting advisers.

Will Race Today.
Sandy Hook, July 23.—Each yacht was given until 9 o'clock tonight to ask for a postponement in the event of a squall. The yachts were in good condition to race tomorrow, but that hour no word had been received from the rival skippers and the committee went ahead with the plans to run the race at Island shipyard, where race is scheduled.

A Staten Island shipyard, where both yachts had requested skyhook for tomorrow, would not get into clearing their hulls reported tonight that both orders had been cancelled.
Resolute's time allowance will remain at six minutes and 40 seconds, the regatta committee announced.

The Six County Cricket Games

Rain Seriously Interfered With Course in London Fixed for the Twenty-First—Some of the Results.

London, July 23.—(By Canadian Associated Press)—Rain seriously interfered with the course of the six county championship cricket games fixed for the twenty-first. At Huddersfield, Yorkshire versus Gloucestershire match was abandoned, there being only two hours batting in all.

Warwick vs. Hampshire at Birmingham was also abandoned when an exciting finished seemed likely. Haits declared 333 runs, for six wickets, Tennyson scoring 151 not out, leaving the home side 142 to get. Six wickets were down for 100 when rain stopped the play.

Nottingham defeated Sussex by six wickets at Eastbourne. J. Gunn was not out, scoring 108 out of 257 for Nottingham, who dismissing Sussex for 108 and 185 were left to get only twenty-five to win, but lost four wickets before reaching the required total. Wilson taking them for nineteen runs. Richmond took seven wickets for 88 runs.

Despite a splendid 105 by Hayward for Northampton the second innings closed at 163, Maldstone. Keat winning by an innings and 26. For the victors Woolley scored 156 and captured 9 wickets for sixty-six.

Somers and Essex drew, playing an innings each, the former secured a lead of seven runs, the score being 339 and 323.

United States Won The Final

Antwerp, July 23.—The United States team won the final of the Olympic team trapshooting competition here today. The United States team broke 547 out of a possible 600 six-year marks. The other scores were: Belgium 503; Sweden 500; Great Britain 488, and Canada 478.

The individual scores of the Canadians were: Beattie, 87; Hamilton, 81; Vance, 82; Oliver, 76; Montgomery, 78, and McLaren, 70.

The winning by the Belgian team of second place in the match came somewhat as a surprise, one of the team being blind in one eye.

In the individual championship shoot this afternoon the Canadians did not do as well as had been hoped for. Only Montgomery, who broke 33 targets, and Vance 30, finished in the first half. Other scores were: Beattie, 29; Hutchinson-Black, 28, and Hamilton, 25.—All five of the United States team entered in the event survived the elimination round and will compete in the finals. Troeh and Airie each broke 34 targets and led the team being blind in one eye.

Eight of the nine countries which had representatives survived the first round, these being Britain, Canada, the United States, Sweden, Norway, Belgium, Holland and France. Finland's three representatives were eliminated in the first round.

HIS 33RD HOME RUN.

New York, July 23.—"Babe" Ruth, former batsman of the New York American League baseball club to-day added another home run to his record, making his total 33 for the season.

When a Man Buys a Newspaper

It may naturally be supposed that he does so in order to read the news.

And every man is interested in some particular kind of news. Perhaps one fellow likes the cable matter which tells what is doing in other parts of the world. This man will find more foreign news in The Standard than in any other newspaper ever published in this province.

Another chap may like Canadian news, the talk from Ottawa, Upper Canada and the West. And this man can find in The Standard more Canadian news than was ever published in any other newspaper in this province.

Some folks follow the doings in the financial world. And there never was a page, or two pages, in the Maritime Province to compare in news value with those appearing in The Standard today.

A good many like to read about sport. Well, when it comes to sport just take a look at The Standard any day in the week and compare it with other newspapers in this territory.

As a matter of actual fact The Standard is carrying today more real live news than has previously appeared in any Maritime Province newspaper.

The trouble from which events were to come began. Everard Dominey, who has fighting his way through the ser for the last three quarters of an ho towards those hills, spiral whips smoke, urged his pony to a last d spurring effort and came crash through the great, slender shrub trockle bed, between thin sheet with a cool bamboo-wreath roof l twice him and the relentless sun. I tressed himself a little in the bed. "Where the mischief am I?" he d mander. "The devil! Then I am in Germa Back Africa!" "Without a doubt." "And you are German?" "I have the honour." Dominey whistled softly. "Awfully whistled softly, intruded, he said. "I left Marlinton two an half months ago, with twenty boy and plenty of stores. We were doi a big trek after Hunt. I took som of my men and the men and me crew Askaria in and the men and crew, looted the stores one night and there was the devil to pay. I wa 300 and shot one or two and the rest deserted. They took my compass damn them, and I've nearly a hundre miles out of my bearings. You could n't give me a drink, could you?" "With pleasure," the doctor ap proved, "with the courteous answer 'Here, Jani'." The boy sprang up, listened to a word or two of brief command in his own language, and disappeared through the hanging grass which led into another hut. The two men exchanged glances of rather more than ordinary interest. Then Dominey laughed. "I know what you're thinking," he said. "It gave me quite a start when you came in. We've devilishly alike aren't we?" "There is a very strong likeness between us," the other admitted. Dominey leaned his head upon his hand and studied his boot. "The likeness is clear enough, although the advantage was all in favour of the man who stood by the side of the camp bedstead with folded arms. Everard Dominey, for the first time in six years of his life, had lived as an ordinary young Englishman of his position.—Eton, Oxford, a few years in the army, a few years about town, during which he had been making a making a 425 more hopeless muddle of his tragedy, and then a blank. Afterwards ten years—at first in the cities, then in the dark places of Africa—years which no man knew anything. The Everard Dominey of ten years ago had been, without a doubt, good-looking. The finely shaped features remained, but the eyes had lost their lustre, his figure its elasticity his mouth its firmness. He had the look of a man run prematurely to seed, wrayed by fevers and indisposition. Not so the other companion. His features were as finely shaped, cast in an even stranger though similar mould. His eyes were bright and full of fire, his nose and chin firm, bespeaking a man of deeds, his tall, figure like and supple. He had the air of being in perfect health, in perfect mental and physical condition, a man who lives with dignity and some measure of content, notwithstanding the slight gravity of his expression.

"Yes," the Englishman muttered, "there's no doubt about the likeness, though I suppose I should look more like you than I do if I'd taken care of myself. But I haven't. I've gone the other way; tried to chuck my life away and pretty near succeeded, too."

The dried grasses were thrust on one side, and the doctor entered, a little round man, also clad in immaculate white, with yellow-gold hair and thick spectacles. His countryman pointed towards the bed, and the doctor, "Will you examine our patient, Herr Doctor, and prescribe for him what is necessary? Let him have wine, or whatever is good for him. If he is well enough he will join our evening meal. I present my excuses. I have a despatch to write."

The man on the couch turned his head and watched the departing figure with a shade of envy in his eyes. "What is my preserver's name?" he asked the doctor.

The latter looked as though the question were irrelevant.

"It is His Excellency the Major-General Baron Leopold von Ragsstein."

"All that!" Dominey muttered. "Is he the Governor, or something of that sort?"

"It is Military Commandant of the Colony," the doctor replied. "He has also a special mission here."

"Dammed fine-looking fellow for a German," Dominey remarked, with unthinking insolence.

The doctor was unmoved. He was feeling his patient's pulse. He concluded his examination in a few minutes later.

"You have drunk much whisky lately?" he asked.

"I don't know what the devil it got do with you," was the curt reply. "I don't drink whisky whenever I can get it. Who wouldn't in this position of things?"

The doctor shook his head.

THE GREAT IMPERSONATION

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

Chapter I.

The trouble from which great events were to come began when Everard Dominey, who had been fighting his way through the scrub for the last three-quarters of an hour towards those thin, spiral wisps of smoke, urged his pony to a last despairing effort and came crashing through the great, slender shrub to pit forward on his head in the little clearing, it developed the next morning when he found himself for the first time for many months on a truckle bed, between linen sheets, with a cool, bamboo-twisted roof between him and the relentless sun. He relieved himself a little in this bed.

"Where the mischief am I?" he demanded.

A black boy, seated cross-legged in the entrance of the banda, rose to his feet, mumbled something and disappeared. In a few moments the tall, slim figure of a European, in spotless white riding clothes, stepped down and came over to Dominey's side.

"You are better?" he enquired politely.

"Yes, I am," was the somewhat brusque rejoinder. "Where the mischief am I, and who are you?"

The newcomer's manner stiffened. He was a person of dignified carriage, and his tone conveyed some measure of rebuke.

"You are within half a mile of the Rivarri River. If you know where that is," he replied, "about seventy miles southeast of the Daruwaga Settlement."

"The devil! Then I am in German East Africa?"

"Without a doubt."

"And you are German?"

"I have the honour."

Dominey smiled softly.

"Awfully sorry to have intruded," he said. "I left Marlinton two and a half months ago, with twenty boys and plenty of stores. We were doing a big trek after lions. I took some traps, and then they muddled me, and there was the devil to pay. I was obliged to shoot one or two and the rest deserted. They took my compass and my gun, and then a hundred miles out of my bearings. You wouldn't give me a drink, could you?"

"With pleasure, if the doctor approves," was the courteous answer.

"Here, Jan!"

The boy sprang up, listened to a word or two of brief command in his own language, and disappeared through the hanging grass which led into another hut. The two men exchanged glances of rather more than ordinary interest. Then Dominey laughed.

"I know what you're thinking," he said. "It gave me quite a start when you came in. We're devilishly alike, aren't we?"

"There is a very strong likeness between us," the other admitted.

Dominey leaned his head upon his hand and studied his host. The likeness was clear enough, although the doubt, good-looking, the finely shaped features remained, but the eyes had lost their lustre, his figure its elasticity, his mouth its firmness. He had the look of a man run prematurely to seed, wasted by fevers and an ordinary year of political business for its own sake, not for sport.

"Entirely so. I do not use a sporting rifle once a month, except for necessity. I came to Africa for different reasons."

Dominey drank deep of his hook and settler and leaned back, watching the fireflies rise above the tall-blumped grass, and hang like miniature stars in the clear, violet air.

"What a world!" he soliloquized.

"Siggy Devinter, Baron von Ragastein, out here, slaving for God knows what, drilling niggers to fight God knows whom, a political machine, I suppose, future Governor-General of German Africa eh? You were always proud of your country, Devinter?"

"My country is a country to be proud of, was the solemn reply.

"Well, you're in earnest, anyhow," Dominey continued. "In earnest about something. And I—well, it's finished with me. It would have been finished just night if I hadn't seen the smoke from your fire, and I don't smoke care—that's the trouble. I go blundering on. I suppose the end will come somehow, sometime.—Can I have some rum or whiskey, Devinter?"

"I mean Von Ragastein—Your Excellency—or whatever I ought to say? You see those wreaths of mist down by the river? They mean malaria for me unless I have spirits."

"I have something better than either," Ragastein replied. "You shall give me your opinion of this."

The orderly who stood behind his master's chair, received a whispered order, disappeared into the commiseration, and came back presently with a bottle at the sight of which the Englishman gasped.

"Napoleon!" he exclaimed.

"Just a few bottles I had sent to my host explained. 'I am delighted to offer it to some one who will appreciate it.'

"By Jove, there's no mistake about that!" Dominey declared, rolling it around in his glass. "What a world! I rolled up here last night, and drunk nothing but filthy water for days. Tonight, fricassee of chicken, white bread, canned hock and Napoleon brandy. And tomorrow again—well, who knows? When do you move on, Von Ragastein?"

"Not for several days."

"What the mischief do you find to do so far from headquarters, if you don't shoot lions or elephants?" his guest asked curiously.

"You really wish to know," Von Ragastein replied. "I am an annoying political agent immensely busy moving from place to place, collecting natives for drill."

"But what do you want to drill them for?" Dominey persisted. "I follow my time ago that you have four times as many natives under arms as we have. You're not likely to quarrel with the Portuguese."

"It is our custom," Von Ragastein declared a little didactically, "in Germany and wherever we Germans go, to be prepared not only for what is likely to happen but for what might possibly happen."

"A war in my younger days, when I was in the Army," Dominey mused. "I might have made a man of me."

"Surely you had your chance out here!"

Dominey shook his head.

"My battalion never left the country," he said. "We were shut up in Ireland all the time. That was the reason I chucked the Army when I was really only a boy."

Later on they dragged their chairs which is inculcated into the youth of our country and which is not inculcated into yours. In England, with a little money, a little birth, your young men expect to find the world a playground for sport, a garden for loves. The mightiest German noble who ever lived has his work to do. It is work which makes fibre, which gives balance to life."

Dominey sighed. His cigar, dearly prized though it had been, was cold. "Who's that mysterious Do between his fingers. In that perturbed be a different man.—You must excuse, I have work."

Dominey spent three restless days. Even the sight of a herd of elephants in the river and that strange, fierce chorus of night sounds, as beasts of prey crept noiselessly around the camp, failed to move him. For the moment his love of sport, his last hold upon the world of real things seemed dead. What did it matter, the killing of an animal more or less? His mind was fixed unseeingly upon the past, searching always for something which your life in Germany before you came out here."

Von Ragastein made no immediate reply, and a curious silence ebbed and flowed between the two men. Every now and then a star shot across the sky. The red rim of the moon rose a little higher from behind the mountains. The bush stillness, always the most mysterious of silences, seemed gradually to become charged with unvoiced passion. Soon the animals began to call around them, to creep nearer and nearer to the fire which burned at the end of the open space.

"My friend," Von Ragastein said at last, speaking with the air of a man who has spent much time in deliberation, "you speak to me of Germany, of your homeland. Perhaps you have guessed that it is not duty alone which has brought me here to these wild places. I, too, left behind me a tragedy."

Dominey's quick impulse of sympathy was smothered by the stern, almost harsh repression of the other's manner. The words seemed to have been torn from his throat. There was no spark of tenderness or regret in his set face.

"Tonight the day of my banishment," he went on, "no word of this matter has passed my lips. Tonight it is not weakness which assails me, but a desire to yield to the strange arm of coincidence. You and I, schoolmates in different country, meet here in the wilderness, each with the iron in our souls. I shall tell you the thing which happened to me, and you shall speak to me of your own career."

"I cannot!" Dominey groaned.

"But you will," was the stern reply.

"Listen."

An hour passed, and the voices of the two men had ceased. The howling of the animals had lessened with the palling of the fires, and a slow, melancholy ripple of breeze was passing through the bush and lapping the surface of the river. It was Von Ragastein who broke through what might almost have seemed a trance. He rose to his feet, vanished inside the banda, and reappeared a moment or two later with two tumblers. One he set down in the space provided for it in the arm of his guest's chair.

"Tonight I break what has become a rule with me," he announced. "I shall drink a whisky and soda. I shall drink to the new things that may yet come to both of us."

"You are giving up your work here?" Dominey asked curiously.

"I am part of a great machine," he said. "I have nothing to do but obey."

A flicker of passion distorted Dominey's face, flamed for a moment in his tone.

"Are you content to live and die like this?" he demanded. "Don't you want to go back to where a different sort of sun will warm your heart and fill your pulses? This primitive world is in its way colossal, but it isn't human. It isn't a life for humans. We want the tide of people and the flow around us, the roar of wheels and the hum of human voices. Curse these animals! If I live in this country much longer, I shall go on all fours."

"You yield too much to environment," his companion observed. "In the life of the cities you would be a sentimentalist."

"No city nor any civilized country will ever claim me again," Dominey sighed. "I should never have the courage to face what might come."

Von Ragastein rose to his feet. The dim outline of his erect form was in a way majestic. He seemed to tower over the man who lounged in the chair below him.

"Fitz your whisky and soda to our next meeting, friend of my school days," he begged. "Tomorrow, before you awake, I shall be gone."

"So soon?"

"By tomorrow night," Von Ragastein replied, "I must be on the other side of those mountains. This must be our farewell."

Dominey was querulous, almost peevish. He had a sudden hatred of solitude.

"I must trek westward myself directly," he protested, "or eastward, or northward—it doesn't so much matter. Can't we travel together?"

Von Ragastein shook his head and smiled. "I travel officially, and I must travel alone," he replied. "As for yourself, they will be breaking up here tomorrow, but they will send you an escort and put you in the direction you wish to take. This, alas, is as much as I can do for you. For us it must be farewell."

"Well, I can't force myself upon you," Dominey said a little wistfully. "It seems strange, though, to meet right out here, far away even from the ways of life, just to shake hands and pass on. I am sick to death of niggers and animals."

"It is Fate," Von Ragastein decided. "Where I go, I must go alone. Farewell, dear friend! We will drink the toast we drank our last night in your rooms at Margdale. That Sanscrit man translated it for us: 'May each find what he seeks! We must follow our star.'"

Dominey laughed a little bitterly. He pointed to a light glowing fitfully in the bush.

"My 'will-o'-the-wisp,'" he muttered recklessly, "leading where I shall follow—into the swamps!"

A few minutes later Dominey threw himself upon his couch, curiously and unaccountably drowsy. Von Ragastein, who had come in to wish him good night, stood looking down at him for several moments with significant intonations. Then, satisfied that his guest really slept, he turned and passed through the hanging curtain of dried grasses into the next banda, where the doctor, still fully dressed, was awaiting him. They spoke together in German and with lowered voices. Von Ragastein had lost something of his imperturbability.

"Everything progresses according to my orders," he demanded. "Everything is excellently. The boys are being loaded, and a runner has gone on to Wadhwan for ponies to be prepared."

"They know that I wish to start at dawn?"

"All will be prepared, Excellency," Von Ragastein laid his hand upon the doctor's shoulder.

"Come outside, Schmidt," he said. "I have something to tell you of my plans."

The two men seated themselves in the long, wicker chairs, the doctor in an attitude of strict attention. Von Ragastein turned his head and listened. From Dominey's quarters came the sound of deep and regular breathing.

"I have formed a great plan, Schmidt," Von Ragastein proceeded. "You know what news has come to me."

"Your Excellency has told me little," the doctor reminded him.

"The day arrives," Von Ragastein pronounced, his voice shaking with deep emotion. He paused a moment in thought and continued, "I am even the mouth, is fired. I am recalled from here to take the place for which I was destined. You know what the place is? You know why I was sent to an English public school and college?"

"I can guess."

"I am to take up my residence in England. I am to have a special mission. I am to find a man, and there as an Englishman. The means are left to my ingenuity. Listen, Schmidt. A great idea has come to me."

The doctor lit a cigar.

"I listen, Excellency."

Von Ragastein rose to his feet. Not content with the sound of that regular breathing, he made his way to the opening of the banda and gazed in at Dominey's slumbering form. Then he returned.

"It is something which you do not wish the Englishman to hear?" the doctor asked.

"It is."

"We speak in German."

"Languages," was the cautious reply, "happen to be that man's only accomplishment. He can speak German as fluently as you or I. That, however, is of no consequence. He sleeps and he will continue to sleep if I mix him a sleeping draught with his whisky and soda."

"Ah!" the doctor grunted.

"My principal need in England is identity. Von Ragastein points out to me. 'I have made up my mind. I shall take this Englishman's name. I shall return to England as Sir Everard Dominey.'"

"So?"

"There is a remarkable likeness between us, and Dominey has not seen an Englishman who knows him for eight or ten years. Any school or college friends whom I may encounter I shall be able to satisfy. I have stayed at Dominey's. I know Dominey's relatives. Tonight he has babbled for hours, telling me many things that it is well for me to know."

"What about his near relatives?"

"He has none nearer than cousins."

"No wife?"

Von Ragastein paused and turned his head. The deep breathing inside the banda had certainly ceased. He rose to his feet and stealing unobtrusively to the opening, gazed down upon his guest's outstretched form. To all appearance, Dominey still slept deeply. After a moment or two's watch, Von Ragastein returned to his place.

"Therein lies his tragedy," he confessed, dropping his voice a little lower. "She is insane—insane, it seems through a shock for which he is responsible. She might have been the only stumbling block, and she is as though she did not exist."

"It is a great scheme," the doctor murmured enthusiastically.

"It is a wonderful one! That great and unrequited love, Schmidt, which watches over our country and which will make her mistress of the world, must have guided this man to us. My position in England will be unique. As Sir Everard Dominey I shall be able to penetrate into the inner circles of Society—perhaps even of political life. I shall be able, if necessary, to remain in England even after the storm bursts."

"Supposing," the doctor suggested, "this man Dominey should return to England?"

Von Ragastein turned his head and looked towards his questioner.

"He will not," he pronounced.

"So?" the doctor murmured.

Late in the afternoon of the following day, Dominey, with a couple of boys for escort and his rifle slung across his shoulder, rode into the bush along the way he had come. The little fat doctor sat and watched him, waving his hat until he was out of sight. Then he called to the orderly.

"Heinrich," he said, "you are sure that the Herr Englishman has the whisky?"

"The water bottles are filled with nothing else, Herr Doctor," the man replied.

"There is no water or soda water in the pack?"

"Not one drop, Herr Doctor."

"How much food?"

"One day's rations."

"The beef is salt?"

"It is very salt, Herr Doctor."

"And the compass wrong?"

"It is ten degrees wrong."

"The boys have their orders?"

"They understand perfectly, Herr Doctor. If the Englishman does not drink, they will take him at midnight to where His Excellency will be encamped at the bend of the Blue River."

The doctor sighed. He was not at heart an unkindly man.

"I think," he murmured, "it will be better for the Englishman that he drinks."

"Tonight," said Von Ragastein, "I drink to the things that may yet come to the both of us."

darkness, illuminated only by the faint gleam of the shaded lamp behind him, his face seemed suddenly white and old. His host turned towards him and spoke for the first time in the kindlier tones of his youth.

"You hinted at tragedy, my friend. You are not alone. Tragedy also has entered my life. Perhaps if things had been otherwise, I should have found you in more joyous places, but sorrow came to me, and I am here."

A quick flash of sympathy lit up Dominey's face.

"We met trouble in a different fashion," he groaned.

Chapter II.

Dominey slept till late the following morning, and when he woke at last from a long, dreamless slumber, he was conscious of a curious quietness in the camp. The doctor, who came in to see him, explained it immediately after his morning greeting.

"His Excellency," he announced, "has received important despatches from home. He has come to meet an envoy from Dar-es-Salaam. He will be away for three days. He desired that you would remain his guest until his return."

"Very good of him," Dominey murmured. "Is there any European news?"

"I do not know," was the stolid reply. "His Excellency desired me to inform you that if you cared for a short trip along the banks of the river, southward, there are a dozen boys left and some ponies. There are plenty of lions, and also may be met with at one or two places which the natives know of."

Dominey lathered and dressed, sipped his excellent coffee and lounged about the place in uncertain mood. He unburdened himself to the doctor as they drank tea together late in the afternoon.

"I am not in the least keen on hunting," he confessed, "and I feel like a horrible sponge, but all the same I have a queer sort of feeling that I'd like to meet Von Ragastein again. Your silent chief rather fascinates me, Herr Doctor. He is a man. He has something which I have lost."

"I suppose I am pretty rocky, eh?"

"Your constitution has been abused. You still, however, have much vitality. If you cared to exercise self-control for a few months, you would

"Good God, do you see this, Harrison?" he exclaimed, passing it over to his manager, with whom he had been in consultation. "Dominey—Sir Everard Dominey—back here in England!"

The head clerk glanced at the narrow piece of pasteboard and sighed.

"I'm afraid you will find him rather a troublesome client, sir," he remarked.

RED HOT JULY DAYS

HARD ON THE BABY

July.—The month of oppressive heat; red hot days and sweltering nights; as extremely hard on little ones. Diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and cholera infantum carry off thousands of precious little lives every summer. The mother must be constantly on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they come on suddenly to fight them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during the hot summer as Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach, and an occasional dose given to the well child will prevent summer complaint, or if the trouble does come on suddenly will banish it. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Weekly Chat Answers To Letters

Dearest Christmas— The novelty of having holidays to enjoy yourselves is probably about over and you are not settled down to the free life the same as you were to the school life of a few weeks and months ago.

DELLA S.—You are quite a strange girl, Della, and I enjoyed your letter very much indeed. You were fortunate in having such good weather too, as that is so important to camp life.

OTTY T.—I think the magazine which would interest you the most is the Canadian Boy, but I don't know if you have it or not. I am sure you are one of our happy club members.

ALICE G.—So pleased with your nicely written letter and I am sure you are having happy holidays with the new pup. He is probably very playful as well as very mischievous.

CHARLIE F.—Glad indeed that you were clever enough to attend the circus too. Yes, indeed that jumping through the ring while it was on fire was wonderful, particularly as animals are so frightened of fire.

DAISY L.—Your letter was also a very welcome one and I am sure you are delighted with the new baby sister. You will need to wait a while before you can play with her.

ESTELLA M.—I was pleased to hear from you again and also to know that you had had letters from some of our members. Of course you will be sure to tell us what a busy girl you must be too, and can do things which are your lot quite cheerfully.

R. MYLES A.—So glad to hear from you too and have you join our C. C. Letters from the members are always welcome and I am sure you will have a big family to care for with so many chicks and goslings and the lambs always seemed to me too much for the farm animals, they look so cute when their wool gets nicely over their bodies.

LEON B.—Indeed I can feel quite well acquainted now since your letter came. That is a funny name for a dog, almost as much so as another name I hear of. Yes, a chap called his dog "Ask him," and everyone who knows asks the dog's name so this chap used to have lots of fun answering the usual question.

Her aunt, an unbeliever, happened along at this moment. The aunt was mindful of Mary's faith and with a mocking smile, she said: "Why, Mary, are you hurt?" "No, I ain't hurt," sobbed the little girl, "because I can't feel I ain't hurt."

THE WESTMOUNT BOYS' CLUB STORIES

CHAPTER III. Larry Falls Into Luck. "What if the boy had fallen down there?" The thought flashed through Larry's mind, and the next instant he started on a run, followed by several of the boys who had come up. Throwing himself down on the ground at the edge of the hole, Larry peered down. "There doesn't seem to be any sign of him here below," he said as he started to regain his feet. Suddenly the edge of the hole crumpled away and the next instant the boys saw him vanish from sight. They advanced cautiously and peered fearfully over expecting to see his lifeless body, but Larry, fortunately falling on the piled up snow at the bottom, was more frightened than hurt.

WHERE DAINTY GIRLS PREPARE THE TEA YOU DRINK.

One of the most unusual sights to be seen in the Westmount, is that presented by the girls who pick the tea which later comes to the tea table of this country. It is said that about 90 per cent. of Formosan oolong tea is marketed in the United States. The rest goes to England, where it is mostly employed in the blending of fine teas. The girls who serve as tea-pickers are generally very young, because old hands are not able to perform the deft manipulation of the tea leaves. To them the tea is brought from the fields and dumped on huge wicker trays. In great buildings in Daitoel they sit together chattering away at a great rate as they work. They usually are dressed in peacock-blue smocks, their front hair clipped in bangs and with a gay pony stick in the braided knots at the back of their necks. And on each hand there usually is a carefully trimmed finger-nail, a relic of the plays when long nails indicated those who did not work.

Puzzles Uncle Wiggily and Alice's Pies

By Howard R. Garis. "Uncle Wiggily! Oh, Uncle Wiggily! Where are you going?" quacked Alice Wibble-wobble, the duck girl one morning, as she saw the rabbit gentleman giving his airship a drink of gasoline.

"Oh, I'm just going to take a little ride down to the seashore and back," answered Uncle Wiggily. "Nurse Jane is not feeling very well, and a trip to the shore will do her good."

"What does Alice want of them shells?" asked Nurse Jane. "I'll bring them!" promised Uncle Wiggily. "What does Alice want of them shells?" asked Nurse Jane.

On and on he flew in his airship with Nurse Jane, and soon they reached the seashore. There, while the meek lady housekeeper breathed the salty air, which made her feel better, Uncle Wiggily gathered clam shells for Alice, and, a little later, he and Nurse Jane started back.

"Did you see my there were pies in that basket?" asked the Skeezicks of Uncle Wiggily. "Yes," answered the bunny. "They are pies that Alice baked, and she is going to take some to Grandma Goosey and—"

"Oh, no! Mad pies!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Well, it served him right!" And if the egg doesn't try to be like Humpty Dumpty, and fall off the wall when it ought to fall into the pie pudding, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Jimmie's jinx.

THE PIXIE MARKET

The Pixies held their market (at least so some folk say) Under the tents of brocken. And some have Shepherd's purse. At the first streak of morning They are setting out their wares. Then sit awaiting customers. On paddock-stools for chairs. They've milk-weed, mallow cheese Beech mast, "butter-and-eggs." And acorn cups of honey. And heather ale in kegs; Ripe bilberries and dewberries. And elder berries too. Spear mint and water pepper, With tansy tea and rue. Soon all the Pixie People, Come thronging through the furze With bags and spindle pouches. And some have Shepherd's purse. Mammy and little Pixies, Pop, Peep, Peep, Peance, and Pry All carry chestnut baskets; They've heaps of things to buy. On bird cherries and pig-nuts The boys have set their hearts. While little Peep says, "Mammy, Please buy some dewberry tart!" For the other Pixie children, Are clamouring round the stalls For red and yellow rattles, Oak apples, and puff balls.

RECORD YEAR FOR FLAGS

This will be a record year for flags, for not only will the various new countries created by the Peace Treaty hasten to fit themselves out with national emblems, but new flags will also be designed for this country and allied nations, says Pearson's Weekly. Of these latter two are already in existence. One is the League of Nations Ensign. It has three broad horizontal stripes, the top and bottom being white and the center blue. It is really the flag representing the letter "J" in the international code—which is the universal language of the sea—with the colors reversed; and the design was selected principally because it clashes in no way with any existing national flag, even Japan's.

Our Own Upsetting Exercises

6. Try and get the stockings on over the shoes. This is one of the most intensive of the upsetting exercises. When accomplished, try and get the garters on which is the nearest approach to a Whiteley exercise we have had in yrs. but twice as intense if the elastic is the kind you can place any confidence in it. But don't pull them too hard, and keep breathing all the while.
7. On each of the shoe exercises, they're no more use of you leaning over to eat the oatmeal so try and get it up to the lips with some implement like a spoon or a niblick.

THE EARLY COLD.

The Early Cold is a soul-satisfying imitation of the mid-winter influenza which takes hold with enthusiasm and lets go with regret.

Year after year, in our northern climate, a long, hot summer is almost always succeeded by something else. Just when people get accustomed to wearing fewer clothes than a Greek dancer, the weather will change overnight and cause every red corpuscle to freeze in its tracks. This makes a bright opening for the Early Cold, which settles in the nose of its victim and wrings shrill, agonized sneezes from the same.

The Early Cold is caused by lack of foresight and heavy underclothes. One of the worst habits anybody can fall into is to pack up his winter underwear just as soon as summer opens up and lay it away in the bottom of an attic trunk after spraying it with moth balls. When fall comes, with its bracing atmosphere and hard coal nightmare, no-

THE THRONE AT LAST

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

The International Sunday School Lesson for July 25 is, "David Succeeds Saul as King."—11. Samuel 21:7; 5: 1-5.

"The mills of God grind slowly—but they never cease to grind. Be everywhere the gentleman, and you shall conquer in the end; Boast not nor think too much of skill, Be patient in each trying hour, Be humble here and kindly still, Even though you should rise to power."

Just as David found it a long weary way to the throne of Judah, and a longer way to the throne of united Israel, so it is with most persons in pursuit of life's goals. David had traveled by the diversified route of battle and courtship, and royal favor and exile and persecution and the caves and the mountains and the wilderness. He had run the gamut of normal experience, in his eventful journey between a sheepfold and a palace.

The Belgian Artist's Feat.

A great goal is worth a long journey. For a day's provisions one may feast on the rarer sort: but for the feasting of the spirit upon the riches of the Old World one must take a long and costly trip. Little things are easily gained; great ends are secured at the cost of time and effort and skill. A Belgian young woman has spent thirteen years, and undergone great privations and toils, in order to make a tapestry rivaling those of the old masters. Now that she has succeeded, she has been honored by king and by court, by her native city and by the masters of art, and the tapestry is to be sold at a fabulous price. She could have painted a thousand "pot-boilers" during this time, as most of us would have done in her place, but she would not have given the world a treasure. Her road to a throne, like David's, was long and hard, but it was worth travelling.

All that David underwent was essential to his arrival. Not an experience could have been foregone, else there would have been missing a necessary span of the bridge. All was required for his training and equipment. Well could the harried and distressed hero repeat to himself his own Shepherd Psalm: "He leadeth me." No person has ever greatly served his world who has not learned to see that the experiences which he must endure and fretted were necessary for his preparation. God does not put His children through needless discipline.

I have watched the Japanese workmen make cloisonne, and the process, after it had proceeded to a certain extent, seems to be merely one of repeated burnings and polishings. Long after a visitor would suppose the vase to be finished, the maker subjects it to rubbing after rubbing; and, in the case of the finer grades, the last stage is a slow, careful rubbing by the human hand alone. Such pains does art take to complete its work. Shall the human soul therefore grumble because it takes time, and patient experience, to bring it to its true worth?

Mushrooms and Oaks.

Spurgeon once said something to the effect that when Nature wanted a mushroom it could be produced overnight; but when an oak tree was wanted, it needed decades and centuries. One of the problems of the newly rich, who seek to create great estates in a few months or years, is to secure old trees that shall be properly placed. Only partly has the skill of the nursermen in plant removal come to their aid, for trees can be grown only by time. Similarly, when God wanted a David for the throne of Israel, He would not pluck him from a manger, but He would make the great and beautiful tree was employed, and the first element in that time. No wonder the Psalmist was continually exhorting his soul to wait patiently upon the Lord.

Discipline is but another word for discipling—training for the task. David was being prepared as the great king, whose glory in the sacred story was to be eclipsed only by that of his own Greater Son. David might have reassured himself, all along the way, that he was on the way to a throne, that he was being made fit to become a king. A lumberman once told me that the finest grades of timber are those which come from the tree that has been standing out in the open, where all the winds of heaven have buffeted it. The fiber is tougher and more closely wrought than in a forest-grown tree. Adversity has been the blessing of the tree, as it were; just as the life which has not been too highly sheltered is fittest to serve its time. Difficult experiences are almost a sure sign that God is doing something special with one's life.

Place or Fitness?

There are more young persons who are looking for jobs today than are seeking work. From every quarter comes the cry that workers, of all kinds and degrees, are more interested in wages than in production. Quality has deteriorated in almost all lines of merchandise. This is because we court places rather than fitness. Now it is clear that God cares more for quality than for place, and for character than for reputation. Even more than He wanted David to be king of Israel, the Lord wanted him to be a kingly man. He was supremely interested in the soul of David. It is a commonplace that it is more a matter of the man than of the place. It is more a matter of the man than of the place. It is more a matter of the man than of the place.

conceit which is a sure mark of lack of real greatness.

David in power proved himself as magnanimous as he had been when he spared the life of King Saul. He had won to a kingly character before ever he came to the throne. This quality of detachment, largeness of view, of greatness of spirit, came directly from his consciousness that his times were in the hands of Jehovah. He was sensibly in the keeping of God. His it was to wait the Lord's time, and to play the man meanwhile. He was a great king because he had learned obedience in a divine school. He became king over his people by first becoming king over his own spirit, and an obedient subject of the King of Kings.
