GERMAN EMPEROR WILLIAM KEPT FROM THE WIRE

The Telegraph Kaiser Should be Firmly Advised--Famous Telegram to Kruger--Remedying Consequent Evils is Slow.

London, Aug. 15.—Apropos of Emperor William's telegram to the Prince Regent of Bavaria, says the Vienna correspondent of the Times, The Wiener Allgemeine Zeitung publishes an article headed "The Telegraph Kaiser." The paper says that the Emperor's advisers ought to keep him as far as possible from the facilities for telegraphing, and provide lightning conductors, which would prevent the flashes so easily drawn from the Imperial mind by every passing event, and from causing panic and confusion in public life. That would be of advantage, not only to Germany, but to the Emperor himself, who betakes himself to the wire whenever he is gratified or irritated, amused or saddened. The despatch is sent off in the twinkling of an eye, but the task of remedying the consequent evil is extremely slow. The paper remarks that the famous telegram to Kruger after the Jameson raid was followed by the investiture of Lord Roberts with the order of the Black Eagle.

English Newspaper Men Reach Quebec to See the Sights of Canada.

Quebec, Que., Aug. 15.—The visiting English newspapermen arrived in the city yesterday in two detachments, the first including four members of the party, who came out on the Lake Megantic. The arrivals by the Lake Megantic are: Messrs. Spender, Westminster Gazette and Daily Express, London; T. N. Howe, Highland News, Invernesshire; Mr. Wetherall, Liverpool Post; Mr. Arthur Copping, Daily News, London. Those who arrived by the Tunisian are: E. G. Lesage, Daily Telegraph, London; W. Holt White, Daily Mail, London; L. Thomas, Cardiff Mail; R. W. Wilson, Manchester Guardian and Melbourne Argus; James Proudfoot, Glasgow Herald; J. Lumsden, Leeds Mercury; A. E. Fletcher, Daily Chronicle, London; Rev. F. C. Stewart, representing several ecclesiastical papers.

A FINE PAPER

On August 8th the Manitoba Free Press, the great Winnipeg daily, issued a special crop edition. The issue was a credit even to the Free Press and contained a large amount of valuable information. Staff correspondents of the Free Press covered the whole of the northwest and their crop reports were embodied in the special edition. The Winnipeg Free Press is the great paper of the west. It is to Manitoba and the Northwest what the Mail and Globe are to Ontario, and although it arrives there three days old, it is read in Edmonton with the same eagerness that we read the daily Mail or the Globe here. The special crop edition contained a great deal of valuable information and gives a good and fair idea of the harvest this year in Manitoba and the Northwest. Walter Payne, formerly of The Planet, is news editor of the Winnipeg Free Press.

HISTORIC GROUND

Colonel and Mrs. Rankin have returned from a pleasant trip to Montreal, Quebec and St. Anne Beaupre. At the conclusion of the drainage trial at Cornwall Mr. and Mrs. Rankin left for Quebec. There they met Mrs. Holt, wife of the senior member of the firm of Holt, Renfrew & Co. Mrs. Holt had the entre to all the places of historical interest in the city so that Mr. and Mrs. Rankin considered themselves particularly fortunate. They drove around the Abraham and were shown the ravine up which Gen. Wolfe led his victorious troops. They were also shown through the citadel and the guide outlined Wolfe's plan of attack. He also pointed out the ground over which the British general advanced half way to the citadel before being shot. A monument marks this spot. The next day the Colonel of the 24th Regiment went back to the Plains and walked over the ground on foot in order to study Wolfe's plan of attack in detail. The old French magazine is still standing, but the old roof has been replaced with a metallic roof.

Leaving Quebec, Mr. and Mrs. Rankin visited the Montmorence Falls. Here the water tumbles down 270 feet. The water runs over an apron of uniform depth extending 200 yards, the width of the river. After this the river flows over a rock before it takes the fatal plunge. The water looks brackish when it reaches the edge, but once it begins to tumble it turns white and the Falls look like a white sheet 270 feet high. The drop turns the water into spray. On the following day, the Maple Cityites visited St. Anne Beaupre. They saw the churches and innumerable crutches, canes, steels and belts left off by persons who had visited the shrine of St. Anne's and been cured.

NEW INDUSTRIES

The Board of Trade Will Try to Make Chatham the Birmingham of Ontario.

A meeting of the council of the Board of Trade was held last evening in chairman John Piggott's office. There were present the chairman, secretary-treasurer W. R. Landon, Manson Campbell, Hugh Malcolmson, G. P. Scholfield, Ald. John Waddell, Alf. Westman, Robert Gray and W. A. Hadley.

Important matters came up before the council, one matter was that of a certain factory that guarantees to employ 40 men and want only ten years exemption from taxes and free water.

What was decided on and recommended will come up before the City Council on Monday evening.

Other important matters came up but were left for further consideration.

THE PINES' REUNION

The re-union and retreat of the pupils of "The Pines" is reported to have been a grand success. There was unanimous praise of the sermons of Rev. Father James, O. F. M., who conducted the retreat, and all felt that it was with great spiritual profit that they had again visited their Alma Mater. Besides this, there was the immense pleasure of renewing old acquaintances and associations and talking, aye, and laughing heartily, over school-girl experiences in the past.

"The Pines" staff have great reason to be proud of the good work that is being done in the various walks of life by the pupils who have received their education at the academy, and it is with the utmost satisfaction they welcome them back to their halls, that they may be encouraged and stimulated to even greater efforts to reach ideal womanhood.

OUTLAWED COMPLAINT

Mr. Fisher, of Harwich, visited the Police Station this morning and wanted to lay an information against a neighbor, but he didn't. The Judge refused to take the information and Mr. Fisher went away sad. It was about a year ago that the pig of a neighbor got into Mr. Fisher's field and did a great deal of damage to the growing crop. To-day, a year later, Mr. Fisher came to lay a charge in consequence of the depredations of the porker in 1901. Judge Houston informed the farmer that the crime of the hog was outlawed and therefore the information went unlaid.

Local Briefs

H. L. Hyatt, of Merlin, called on his Chatham friends yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. McFarlane, of Detroit, were in the city yesterday.

John Watts, of Dawn Centre, was a guest at the Rankin House yesterday.

D. F. Seed, of Wallaceburg, spent yesterday with friends in the Maple City.

Dave Stevenson, a member of the Blenheim lacrosse team, is visiting friends in the city to-day.

Miss Mabel McKibben, of Tilbury, who has been visiting friends in Charing Cross, has returned to this city and will take a course of treatment in the mineral bath house.

J. D. Ronalds, of Brussels, was registered at the Rankin House yesterday en route home from a trip to California. Mr. Ronalds is a former Chathamite, having at one time managed a fire engine factory, where the old harvester works is now situated on Adelaide street. One of his engines is now owned by the Chatham fire department.

BRITAIN ADMIRED

London, Aug. 15.—In an article quoted by the Paris correspondent of the Times, the Figaro discussed the future relations between the British and the Boers. The paper says Great Britain's attitude towards the burghers possesses a certain nobleness. Her admiration for heroism is sufficiently strong to cause her to open her arms and heart to the superb, vanquished Boers, who do right to accept the outstretched hand. The Boers and the British, having the same religious faith and sentiment, are in duty bound to understand one another. If, says the Figaro, the Boers agree to be received as brothers, it is because they think the war has been loyally fought, and feel there is no question of crushing them, but that the intention is to cultivate their pride.

PARIS PAPERS ATTACKED SIR WILFRED LAURIER

Canadian Premier Described as a Renegade--More English Than Pitt and More Imperialist than Chamberlain.

London, Aug. 15.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's visit to the Island of Jersey was marked by an enthusiastic welcome from the people and the municipality adn by a vicious attack upon the Premier by a Paris newspaper. Before the welcome was read to Sir Wilfrid, he was asked what language he desired to be addressed in. He replied that he wished to be welcomed in French, and the address was read in French accordingly. A more enthusiastic reception could not have been tendered the distinguished visitor.

The Patrie, of Paris, referring to Sir Wilfrid's visit to Jersey, indulges in some scathing comments. Sir Wilfrid is described as a renegade.

"He is more English than Pitt," continues the Patrie, "more imperialistic than Chamberlain. He owes his success to the clever way in which he hangs to British vanity, by vaunting his French origin while loudly proclaiming himself a Britisher and an Imperialist."

Furthermore, the Patrie charges that Sir Wilfrid has inoculated the virus of Pan-Britannicism in old heroic Canada, and has desecrated the memories of Quebec and Montreal with anti-patriotic doctrines.

WHO'S WHO?

Mysterious Stranger, who Temporarily Identified Himself With Local Store, Vanished.

A very mysterious man made his appearance in town a few day's ago, secured a room in the Merrill House as a boarder and announced that he had come to the city to stay, having secured a position in a local hardware establishment. Not long after he had made his appearance in the Maple City startling rumors began to circulate around town about a certain Pinkerton detective who had come to the city in the disguise of a hardware clerk and expert machinist, while, at the same time, he was here for a far different purpose than doing up parcels of nails and selling binders and lawn mowers. The farther these rumors went the larger they grew, until small groups of men were seen congregating together in Public places and conversing in awed tones concerning a certain mysterious boarder in the Merill House, who did not seem to be what he was represented to be and who made a practice of sleeping in bed with a dangerous looking revolver under his pillow.

In the natural course of events these stories came to the ears of the other employes in the establishment where the mysterious individual was employed. These employes at once kept a weather eye on the gentleman in question, and it soon became evident to them that he knew practically nothing about the work he was trying to do.

Their suspicions were at once aroused, and they were almost forced into the belief that the unknown man was a detective and that the stories that were in circulation concerning him were to all appearances based on truth. Each man in the store seemed to think that he was the man who was being watched and anticipated his arrest at any moment, until one of the employes could stand the suspense no longer and boldly approached the stranger.

"Say, old man," said he, gathering up his nerve, "are you really a hardware man, or are you what they say you are—a detective?"

The other was taken completely by surprise and was entirely nonplused. After a few moments of suspicious hesitation hew finally blurted out an answer that he was no detective, and quickly turned around and resumed the work he was doing before the interruption. He seemed to avoid any conversation with other employees, and the next morning he did not show up.

Upon investigation it was found that his room in the Merrill House was vacant and that the so-called detective had left town. It is claimed was not capable of holding his job in the hardware store.

Whether the stories which were in circulation about him were true or not, it is safe to say that the employes, in the store where he was engaged, are now considerably easier in their minds.

Theatrical

"Brown's in Town" was presented to a medium and somewhat top-heavy house at the Grand last evening.

As farces go it was very fair and occasioned considerable hearty laughter, some of the complicated situations being quite humorous.

There was a tendency, however, to overdue, which, at times considerably deteriorated from the amusement.

An attempt was made to introduce a few specialties. They were only fair.

"Brown's in Town" was only a curtain-raiser. The improvements and decorations of the Grand will be completed ere the show season is formally inaugurated.

St. Joseph's Court, C. O. F., held their regular meeting last Thursday night. Bro. T. McQueen was received as a transfer member from Windsor. Mr. McQueen was gladly welcomed back into St. Joseph's Court.

BOY EATEN

Grizzly Destroys a Seven-Year-old Lad--All that Remained was Arm and Leg.

Ottawa, Aug. 15.—The strange disappearance from home on Tuesday last of the seven-year-old son of Mr. Dupuis, who is the only resident at Les Gave, four miles above Mattawa, was the cause of a search party being formed to find the missing chap. All were fearful of the result, as never in the history of that portion of the country have so many huge bears been seen at this time of the year. A diligent search on Tuesday and Wednesday morning revealed nothing, but the search was continued. While searching in a pile of brush in the afternoon of Wednesday, the searchers were horror-stricken at the sight of an arm and leg, which were undoubtedly segments of a child's body, that of the little one they were hunting for. Blueberry picking has been suspended in consequence—in fact, the advent into that part of the country of the grizzly in such large numbers has become a menace to public safety.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 16.

TRADE WITH SOUTH AFRICA.

The Dominion Government has done a good stroke of business in concluding an arrangement for a steamship service between Canada and South Africa. During the next half dozen years, if peace is maintained, the progress in all South Africa will be enormous.

There is no good reason why Canada should not get a goodly share of the trade which will result from this progress. The African veldt is much similar to our own northwest country and the agricultural machinery made by Canadian firms ought, with little change, to suit conditions there. In these articles there will be a very large trade. As the Boer farmer prospers all he needs in the way of furniture, manufactured and building lumber, and other articles in common use by farmers might easily be turned out in Canada to greater advantage than any other country, except, perhaps, the United States.

Canada's trade with South Africa in the future will depend entirely upon her enterprise, for that country must needs always be a great importer of goods Canada manufactures.

PROFITABLE STUDY.

There are a good many farmers in this province who would enjoy life more than they do if they studied pigs with the same assiduity that they study politics, comments the St. Thomas Journal.

There is money for the farmer in knowing all about hogs. There is only trouble with the neighbors in knowing all about politicians.

How to fatten hogs is knowledge of greater value than how to elect M. P.s.

There is not so much excitement in it, perhaps; but then there is not so much likelihood of a mortgage settling down on a man's property if he pursues the peaceful occupation of raising pork, and leaves politics (as a pursuit) to lawyers.

Every man should keep posted on the politics of the country, but he should not make a steady job of it. There is corn, and wheat, and hay, and pigs to raise and this is the serious business of life on a farm—or should be—politics is his recreation, and only when it occupies that place in his mind is he safe from the loan company and the foreclosure proceedings.

When a farmer knows all about pigs, and how they grow best, he can begin on cattle, and having made his fortune, he can go into politics as a recreation.

INTERESTING CASE.

The Woodstock Express points out that an interesting case has arisen in Buffalo. Over the grave of a child was placed the following epitaph:—"Lucile Sturdevant, died May 28, 1902, aged 6 years. Vaccination poisoning at school 35." The parents claim that the child was the victim of compulsory vaccination, and are suing the doctors for $10,000 damages. The board of health attacks the veracity of the epitaph, and demands its removal. What the outcome of the trouble will be remains to be seen. Heretofore it has been a common saying that doctors were always able to bury their mistakes; but if this epitaph be allowed to stand and it it should become a precedent for perpetuating the memory of doctors' blunders on tombstones, what would become of the sacred privileged of the profession? Imagine a cemetery filled with tombstones recording the failures of the medical profession!

Salt Rheum

You may call it eczema, tetter or milk crust.

But no matter what you call it, this skin disease which comes in patches that burn, itch, discharge a watery matter, dry and scale, owes its existence to the presence of humors in the system.

It will continue to exist, annoy, and perhaps agonize, as long as these humors remain.

It is always radically and permanently cured by which expels all humors, and is positively unequalled for all cutaneous eruptions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

RENFREW'S ONGFONGS TERRIBLE

Renfrew Journal.

There are evidently some parents in this town who have not at heart the moral welfare of their children. These are allowed to roam at will, apparently in some cases as soon as they are able to walk, and, as a result, become wayward and veritable street arabs. Vice and even crime seem to have no horror for them and the result is they will land in prison or perhaps on the gallows in the end.

A THIRST OF THREE YEARS' STANDING.

N. Y. Tribune.

Lord Kitchener upon his return to England has seconded and emphasized the appeal of Lord Roberts that when Tommy Atkins comes home from South Africa his friends and well-wishers shall refrain from clinking the canakin in his honor. Both commanders protest against an "alcoholic welcome" to the weasers of the khaki. Evidently they suspect the rank and file will have a thirst when they see their native land once more.

WHAT HE SAYS GOES.

Hamilton Spectator.

In a speech made at Midland, yesterday, Hon. Israel Tarte intimated that the building of ships should be bonused, and said that protection to our industries was a necessity, and we must follow the lead of the Americans with a tariff framed for Canadian purposes. That is very good talk, and entirely different from the shilly-shallying speeches made by the alleged premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. And what Mr. Tarte says is important, for the reason that he is the leading spirit of the cabinet. What he says goes. It is now up to the Hamilton Times to throw a lot of bad language at that fine old Tory protectionist, Tarte.

Snails.

The popularity of the snail as an article of food is not confined to Paris, but extends throughout southern Europe and some parts of Africa. Dr. Edrard, a French writer, in a pamphlet says that 90,000 pounds of snails are sent daily to Paris from the gardens of Poitou, Burgundy, Champagne and Provence. Those reared in gardens are fed on aromatic herbs to improve their flavor. Their market price is from 2 francs 50 centimes to 3 francs 50 centimes a hundred, while those from the hedges, woods and forests bring only 2 francs to 2 francs 50 centimes. The proprietor of one snailery in the vicinity of Dijon nets over 7,000 francs annually.

The snail is reared and fattened with great care in some cantons of Switzerland as an article of luxury and is exported in a pickled state. It is also eaten as a relish and nutritious article of food in Austria, Spain, Italy and in some sections of the United States. The Ashantees and other African tribes smoke them and eat them as daily food all the year around. In Algeria in the markets large heaps of snails are sold by the bushel and the hundred as an article of food. Venders hawk them in the streets of Cairo. In modern Rome fresh gathered snails are hawked by women from door to door.

Some have such bad luck that life seems one grand confidence game to them.

Township Councils

CAMDEN COUNCIL.

Council met on Monday, Aug. 4th, 1902; all members present.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

A number of accounts were ordered to be paid.

A number of communications were read.

By-law on Greenwood drain was read a first and second time and provisionally adopted, and the clerk instructed to serve the required copies.

A by-law for the repair of bridges over the Little Bear Creek, in the Township of Dover, and served upon the Reeve of Camden, of the Township of Dover, was read and adopted, and the Clerk instructed to prepare a by-law to raise the sum of $26.40, the amount chargeable to Camden lands.

J. Wannamaker and I. Lindsay appeared before the Council, complaining of water flowing from road over their lands. Left with Reeve and Com'r Brown to investigate.

Councillors Hazlett and Blackburn, of the town of Dresden, appeared before the Council with reference to the repair of a culvert in the corporation of Dresden, opposite Bradley farm. The Reeve and Com'r Brown were appointed a committee to meet a committee from Dresden to consider the matter.

Notice from John Parking to repair the Lampman-Parking drain was read.—Entertained.

Petition from John McCutcheon and five others, asking that a portion of the George drain be abandoned and that a new drain be constructed, was read and entertained.

The Council, after considering the question of statute labor, have decided to abolish the old system and repair the roads and bridges out of the general fund, under the supervision of the commissioners of the different divisions, or of others appointed for the purpose by the Council. The Clerk was instructed to prepare a by-law for the purpose of abolishing statute labor.

Wm. Van Allen made complaint of water running off the River road in the 3rd concession onto his land. Left with Com'r of division to investigate.

Council adjourned.

M. S. BLACKBURN, Clerk.

DOVER COUNCIL.

The council met pursuant to adjournment at the Town Hall, Aug. 4th. The members were all present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. Two resolutions of Tilbury East council were read, one offering a grant of $25.00 for the establishment of a passenger ferry at St. Peter's church on the River Thames on the following conditions, namely, 1st, that a suitable ferry shall first be established at or near said church to the satisbaction of the council; 2nd, that the Township of Dover also make an equal grant for the same purpose; 3rd, that it shall be a free ferry on Sundays. The other: Whereas the County Council has made an offer of a grant of $50.00 for the establishment of a suitable ferry at Chalmer's farm, lots 5 and 6, on the River Thames. Be it resolved that this council also make a grant of $50.00 for the same purpose on condition that the Township of Dover make a similar grant of $50.000. Alfred Pinsonneault petitioned the council to grant him the commutation of his statute labor from one Beat to another Beat. W. G. McGeorge's report on the Terry drain was read and considered as per notice to the owners assessed. A petition was read, signed by W. J. Badder and eleven other ratepayers of Dover's part of U. S. S. No. 15, Chatham and Dover Townships, asking that said U. S. S. be dissolved, and that the Dover part of the Union Section be added to the nearest school section thereto in Dover. A notice was read from the County Clerk stating that the amount of county rate levied on the Township of Dover for the current year is $3,400.21, and that the amount due the county from Dover for the maintenance of paupers in the House of Refuge for the year ending May 31st, 1902, is $501.42.

Moved by Trudell and Grant, that whereas Tilbury East council has passed a resolution offering a grant of $25.00 for the establishment of a passenger ferry at St. Peter's church on the River Thames, on condition that the Township of Dover also make an equal grant for the same purpose, and that it be a free ferry on Sundays: resolved that a grant of $25.00 be made by the council of Dover Township, as proposed by the council of Tilbury East.—Carried.

Moved by Trudell and Crawford, that the following accounts be paid paid for work on the 5th concession Mechanical drain, as per order of L. Sterling, commissioner, McKeough & Trotter $1.57, James Sterling $4.75, John Raymond $6.00, Louis Sterling $5.00 for machine oil and extra work.—Carried.

Moved by Wright and Trudell, that the matter of commuting the statute labor of Samuel Mahood be referred to Mr. Crawford with power and report.—Carried.

Moved by Grant and Crawford, that the agreement made with R. J. Dunlop and John Bowes as to the time to have their part of the McFarlane drain embankment removed, be renewed for one year from April 30th, 1902.—Carried.

Moved by Trudell and Wright, that the Banner-News account, $6.00, be paid for advertising Court of Revision.—Carried.

Moved by Wright and Trudell, that W. Drader's account, $1.85, be paid for wood for Mrs. Chute and charged to charity.—Carried.

Moved by Wright and Crawford, that George Gautier's case be referred to the reeve to investigate with power, and if he sees fit to get him a ticket to take him to his people.—Carried.

Moved by Wright and Grant, that the small-pox accounts not settled for be referred to the reeve and clerk to be placed in the solicitor's hands for collection forthwith.—Carried.

Moved by Trudell and Crawford, that W. G. McGeorge's report on the Terry drain having been read to all the ratepayers in attendance and the petition containing the required majority be adopted and the clerk prepare a by-law.—Carried.

Postage account, $1.88, was ordered paid.

The council adjourned.

J. WELSH, Clerk.

Why Do You Submit To a Daily Life of Suffering From A Common Evil?

Paine's Celery Compound.

Is an Infallible Cure for Distressing Summer Dyspepsia and all Digestive Troubles

The tortures and evils of summer dyspepsia are experienced by thousands at this time. The dyspeptic's train of evils may be enumerated as follows: feelings of dizziness, languor, nervousness, sleeplessness, intense headache, distension of the stomach, loss of flesh, difficult breathing, and the heart's action is seriously affected.

All forms of dyspepsia are quickly banished by the use of Paine's Celery Compound. The use of this marvellous medicine allays the inflammation of the nerves centered about the stomach; it opens up the sewers of the body and removes all waste matters; it cleanses the blood; it makes new nerve fibre; it restores digestive power, and promotes bodily strength and activity. Mrs. J. B. Orr, Lennoxville, P. Q., says:

"I have been a very great sufferer from dyspepsia for ten years. At times I would suffer most intensely, notwithstanding great care in dieting and the best medical help I could get. Severe attacks were always attended with very violent headaches, followed by nervousness and sleeplessness. Different physicians exhausted their skill in trying to effect a cure. Finally upon the advice of a friend, I decided to venture an experiment with Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle did me much good, and by the time I had used three bottles I was perfectly restored. I am now free from nervousness, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, headache, and all the sufferings that arise from these distressing troubles."

FORBEARANCE PLEA

HYPERCRITICISM ONE OF THE GREAT SINS OF PRESENT AGE.

OUR RIGHTS AS TO ALL OTHERS.

The Sin of Hypocrisy—The Further We Have Gone Astray the More Apt Are We to Consider Unfavorably the Shortcomings of Others—"Judge Not That Ye Be Not Judged."

Entered According to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1902, by William Bain, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—A plea for forbearance and the magnanimous treatment of offenders is made by Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage in this sermon on the text Matthew vii, 1, "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

After Massillon, the great court preacher of France, had finished one of his sermons, Louis XIV. summoned him to his side and said: "Massillon, how is it you impress me as you do? I have heard many great orators preach. They nearly always please me. But when you preach, instead of being pleased with you, I am always discontented with myself. I always feel that I want to be a better man as well as a better King." "Well," answered the great preacher, "the only way I can account for it, your Majesty, is because I am always preaching against myself. When I am about to make up a sermon, I say to myself, 'Massillon, what is the sin which you have hardest work to battle to-day?' And when I preach against my own sins I generally find that there are similar sins in other hearts which I am also preaching against." If there is any truth in the words which Massillon spoke to Louis XIV., this sermon will carry a message to every pew. Of all sins there is none more easy for speaker as well as hearer to fall into than the sin of hypercriticism.

The sin of censorious criticism is almost universal because one is apt to commit it at first unconsciously and without premeditation or forethought. If a party of young people are together, it is not hard to find fault with the minister, and the doctor, and the dressmaker, and the neighbor's wife and child and house and all that he has. It is not difficult to lay the reputation of an absent member upon the dissecting table of traducement and cut and hack it into pieces with cruel, sharp, merciless tongues. It is not always a disagreeable opportunity to repeat the slanders and the vilifications and the defamations and the wholesale condemnations which have been circulated about the neighborhood in reference to other people's characters.

Now, my text is a divine protest against the hasty and the unjust judgments with which we condemn our fellow men. It is a divine protest to bring men and women to the realization of the awful damage they are doing themselves, as well as others, by the pernicious habit of censorious criticism. It is a protest to prove that, though we can honor men and love men and praise men and help men, yet we must not hate men or deride men or condemn men. Condemnation is a divine prerogative. Condemnation is a thunderbolt which will shatter every human hand that tries to grasp it and to hurl it. Condemnation is a poisonous fang which will destroy our own lives as well as lacerate and instill the fatal poison into their flesh.

Personally we should not condemn men, because, having imperfections in ourselves, we have no right to expect and demand perfection in others. If we were holy, perhaps we might have a right to expect other people to be holy. If we were pure minded, we might have a right to expect other people to be pure minded. If we loved the Lord our God with all our heart and soul and mind and strength; if we were perfect husbands and perfect wives, perfect parents and perfect children, perfect in our love for our fellow men, we might expect others to be perfect. But what right has the raven to croak because her young have wings as black as the night? What right has the Pharisee to stand up and condemn the poor publican, who stood afar off and beat his breast, moaning, "God be merciful to me a sinner," when the Pharisee himself was so sinful that he was like a whited sepulcher, "which indeed appeared beautiful outward, but was within full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness?" And what right have you, O hearer, to say your neighbor is a bad man or a bad woman and should be condemned when you yourself have an evil eye and have not yet, by the grace of God, plucked it out? When you yourself have an evil hand or foot and have not yet amputated it? When you yourself have an evil tongue to speak or an evil ear to listen against the deeds of your neighbors?

What would you think of a dissolute judge condemning a prisoner at the bar for the same sins of which he himself was flagrantly guilty? Why, such a hypocritical and unjust judge would be submerged under a tidal wave of popular scorn. Such a dishonest judge would be treated as mercilessly as was that judge who in the darkest days of Rome's infamies undertook to sentence some conspirators to death while he himself was one of the conspirators. He would be dragged from the judicial bench. And yet this sin of condemning others when we ourselves are guilty of sin is a habit which can be laid at many a door. We superciliously demand perfection in others while we ourselves are imperfect.

And the sad fact about human condemnation is this: The more we ourselves have gone astray, the more we ourselves have followed too much the devices and the desires of our own hearts, the more we ourselves have sinned in mind or in act and not yet been found out by the world, the more apt are we to condemn the shortcomings and weaknesses of others, even as Lord Jeffreys, the unjust English judge, was merciless toward those who were brought before him, although he himself at that time was the greatest criminal in all England. It is not the good father who is hardest upon the daughter that has gone astray; it is the bad father who is not apt to forgive the wayward child. It is not the good brother who is unwilling to save the wayward sister; it is the sinful brother, who would and does demand that his sister should be morally all right while he himself may be morally all wrong.

To illustrate the truth that the more we ourselves have gone astray the more we are apt to condemn shortcomings in others, I would read from a leaf out of the book of memory. I remember many years ago a lady's character was being assailed on a hotel porch. A member of the party at that time denounced the absent woman so severely that I turned and said: "Madam, you have no right to publicly make a charge like that against any one. Even if you had positive proof that what you say is true, you should keep your lips firmly sealed, because no one knows but that some day the bloodhounds of slander may be hunting your own tracks." This lady was very indignant. She said that I charged her with the same crimes of which the absent woman was supposed to be guilty. Within one year that woman who was so bitter in her criticism of her sister was proved guilty of the same offence which she charged against another.

My father in his younger days had almost the same experience.

No man should rashly condemn another, because it is often impossible for him to realize what were the mitigating circumstances in which the sin was conceived. If all men were born free and equal, as the American Declaration of Independence optimistically declares, you could judge them in the bulk. You could judge any two men as you might test two bars of steel which come from the same mold. You could judge them, as you might say that a pound of coffee ought to weigh as much as a pound of tea; but all men are not born free and equal. We are different in hereditary tendencies. Only a short time ago at a convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union a delegate read the record of a woman with criminal tendencies who died in 1827. The name of this woman, for obvious reasons, was not told. This woman of criminal tendencies had had up to date over 800 descendants. Seven hundred of those descendants have been criminals, and all were convicted at least once and most of them more than once for crime. Thirty-six of those descendants have been murderers. "And," said the speaker, "the blood of that one woman of criminal tendencies has cost the nation in eighty years over $3,000,000 for trials and executions and for the property stolen or destroyed." Is not the blood that flows in your veins happily different from that which flowed in the veins of those children?

We are different in the surroundings of babyhood and boyhood and young manhood. Some men never knew the love of a parent. Their father and mother died when they were very young. Instead of being able to get an education, as you and I have been, they were pushed out into the great world unprepared for the struggle of life and told to shift for themselves. We are as different as flowers are different. Some are planted in rich soil, others in poor. Some are cared for by loving hands; others have to fight for their lives among the bristly thorns and the overshadowing weeds. Some have enough sunlight to incubate and develop them and just enough showers and dews to slake their thirst. Other flowers are continually being scorched by the droughts and deluged by the freshets.

We are all different in our inherited temperaments and our power to resist temptation. Oliver Wendell Holmes, the quaint poet and philosopher, once wisely said, "Every child's training should begin at least 100 years before that child is born." Have you and I any right to condemn a man's actions unless we can put ourselves in that man's place? Then, after we have put ourselves in our erring brother's place have we a right to affirm that we, in our own strength, would have done differently than he has done? If we do thus affirm, we are not honest and true to ourselves, for some of the mightiest and best men of God have testified just the opposite. Glorious John Newton, trumpet throated John Newton, Holy Spirit inspired John Newton, once declared that he never saw a murderer being led away to the gallows but he always said to himself, "There goes John Newton unless he had been saved by the grace of God." Horatio Seymour, twice governor of New York, in a large religious meeting once solemnly declared: "In my time, as the chief executive of the state of New York, I have had to examine hundreds of applications for pardons. After I had carefully examined them and fully entered into the lives of the convicted and realized the influences which caused those crimes, I am free to confess that had I had the same influences about me as those men had in every case I should have committed the same crimes, if not blacker ones." Oh, my brother, instead of condemning you brother put yourself in your erring brother's place. Get down on your knees and offer a prayer of gratitude that you have not been tempted as he is tempted. You ought to get down on your knees and thank God that even in your lesser temptations you have been saved solely by an inspiring faith in a divine love which may never have been kindled in your brother's sinful heart.

No human being should condemn his neighbor, because it is only the loving tear of pleading sorrow that can quench the fires of sin and not the sharp tongue that "breaketh the bone." It is only the warm, gentle, protecting, outstretched arm of a friend that draws the sinner toward God and heaven: not the clenched fist of an enemy. Did you ever see a minister who became a better minister through the fault finding of his congregation? Did you ever know of a wife who became a better wife because her husband talked against her to his neighbors? Do you know of one human being who was brought closer to your heart and to God by being demeaned in the eyes of his fellow men through bitter denunciations that you hurled against him? No! No! Slander and vilification and traducement and disparagement and evil rumor, repeated by your lips, never softened or purified a sinful heart. They only drove the sinner farther away from you and farther from God.

It is possible to criticize even the best of men. The story is told that Zeuxis, the famous Greek artist, painted a wonderful picture of a boy holding a dish of grapes. The picture was so wonderful that the birds flew through the open window and with their bills pecked at the grapes which the artist had drawn. But though there were thousands ready to praise, there were still many censorious critics who condemned the picture. "For," said the evil minded critics, "if the boy had been painted as perfectly as the dish of fruit, the birds would have been afraid to approach the dish which the lad is supposed to hold in his hand." It is possible to harshly judge the actions of even the best men. Therefore it is very easy by bitter criticism, to destroy thousands who might be saved by the gentleness of a loving, forgiving, Christlike tongue.

No man should condemn his neighbor, because when he destroys his brother by evil criticism he also equally destroys himself. Some people suppose that my text, "Judge not, that ye be not judged," is only to be applied in a temporal way; that it only alludes to things of this world; that it is to be interpreted in the sense that if we are unjust to others in our censorious criticism, others will be unjust to us. The injustice which we do to others with the tongue will always as a boomerang, come back and strike ourselves. As Dr. Guillotin in his old age is said to have been executed upon the fatal instrument which he had invented in his younger days; as the prime minister of one of the French monarchs was confined in the very cage of torture he had builded for his enemies, a cage so short that the prisoner in it could not lie down and so low that he could not stand upright in it; as Regent Morton was hugged to death by the spikes of the fatal image of torture known as the "Maiden" which he himself had introduced into Scotland, and as Haman was hanged upon the gallows he had erected for the despised Mordecai, so the unjust criticisms which we mete out to others are often the very condemnations with which we ourselves shall be condemned by our fellow men.

But the text has a deeper and wider meaning than merely the interpretation which implies that if we utter condemnation against our brothers our brethren will in turn speak similar condemnations against us. It means that if we condemn our brethren, Christ will condemn us. It means that if we do not speak kindly of those who have gone wrong Christ will not become our divine advocate and plead for our forgiveness. What does the Bible say in order to impress this truth upon our hearts? Christ gave us the Lord's Prayer as the model of our applications. "Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed by thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." In other words, we must pray that we are ready to forgive the sins of others so may God forgive us our own trespasses. My Lord and my God, if thy pardon is to be dependent upon our willingness to forgive and pardon others what chance have most of us for thy forgiveness!

But I have one thought more to develop, and then I am done. No man has a right to condemn his brother, because after the condemnation is once spoken it often happens that it can never be recalled, no matter how much he may repent. Our judgment's are nearly always spoken judgements; therefore those evil words which speak to others about an absent friend or enemy will in all probability be repeated to a second and a third and fourth party until those censorious criticisms are carried everywhere. And then, my brother, the damage which we do unto others will be past recall.

This my text has the same kind of a practical application as that which a mother taught her little boy while they were spending the summer in the woods. The little fellow came running into the house in tears and said: "Mamma, there are some bad boys out there mocking me. When I cried 'Hello!' they shouted back 'Hello!' When I cried 'Keep still!' the bad boys cried 'Keep still!' And when I shouted 'I won't!' the bad boys shouted back 'I won't!'" "Ah," answered the Christian mother, "my son, those were not bad boys answering the 'Hello!' The mocking voices that you heard were only the echo of your own. You were the bad boy. If you had called 'I love you!' you would have heard the supposed bad boys say 'I love you!' If you had called 'Come and sing to me!' they would have answered "Come and sing to me!'" So the gospel invitation to-day is going to be heard a great deal in the echoings of your own voice. If we cry out to suffering and sinful humanity "I love you!" Christ will call back "I love you!" If we cry to those who have done us an injustice "I forgive your sins'" Christ will echo back "I forgive your sins!" Oh, my brother and sister, can we, shall we not, here and now, while we offer the Lord's Prayer, say with sincere and truthful hearts, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us?"

Perfect Health
BY THE USE OF
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Mrs. H. A. Alsbrook, of Austin, Lonoke Co., Ark., writes: "After five months of great suffering with female weakness I write this for the benefit of other sufferers from the same affliction. I doctored with our family physician without any good result, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines—which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

The Story of the Ticket.

"Every ticket has its story," said a man acquainted with the pawnshops, and one of the sad little tales which he told is repeated by the Philadelphia Telegraph. It was a bitter cold day, and a mite of a boy, not over nine years old, had come in, wrapped in his overcoat. This he peeled off and deposited it upon the pawnbroker's counter.

"Give a dollar 'n' quarter?" he asked in pleading tones.

"Dollar," said the money lender.

"Oh, please give me a dollar 'n' a quarter!"

"Can't do it. Dollar."

The boy was almost crying, and he begged earnestly for the sum he asked. "I want to get my sister's coat out," he said as he laid down 8 cents as interest money. This proposition the pawnbroker accepted, and the boy went shivering into the cold with his sister's coat.

"Is your sister going to a dance tonight?" a bystander asked him.

"No, sir; mom's been sick, an' Maggie had to hock her coat for feed. She's got a job now, an' she's got to have a coat to go to work in. I don't mind the cold; I'm used to it."

The Scotch Halfpenny.

Englishmen are familiar with the name "bawbee," applied to the Scotch halfpenny, but to few does it bring the association of a baby queen and a loyal people. Those who meet with the word in their reading do not often stop to ask how it came to be applied. It appears that the first attempt at the portraiture of the unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, was made in her infancy, and her small face was engraved upon the Scottish halfpennies at the time of her coronation in 1543, when she was but nine months old. A number of these small coins are still preserved, and it will be easily understood how the name "bawbee," or baby, came to be given to the coin bearing the effigy of the baby. The halfpenny of Scotland is still commonly called the bawbee, although the baby face no longer appears on it.

It Will Give You an Appetite

And a stomach to take care of it, a digestion that will fill your veins with rich blood; if weak, it will strengthen the heart; will make the liver discharge its proper functions. Ferrozone will do all this, and more, too. Ferrozone will increase your nerve force and capacity for mental labor, and will make work a real pleasure. Every man, woman, and child can derive benefit from Ferrozone. At all druggists.

TO PAY THE FREIGHT.

She has gone down to the sea—
Has forsaken home and me,
For the shore;
She will dally in the sand,
Where the waves, majestic, grand,
Sob and roar.

I will toil on here at home,
While she splashes in the foam;
Such is fate;
I will work ten hours a day,
Just to make enough to pay
All the freight.

Twenty Years of Bronchitis

Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, commander of the steamer "Bohemian," of the R. & O. fleet, suffered unceasingly for twenty years, and although he took treatment all that time permanent relief was not obtained until he used Catarrhozone, which cured him quickly and permanently. The Captain says, "Catarrhozone is the best cure for Bronchitis on the face of the globe, pleasant to use, quick to relieve and sure to cure." Catarrhozone is a wonderful treatment for all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Bronchial Tubes. Two months' treatment, price $1.00, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The correspondent of the Canada Flour Mills Co. at Listowell reports that the crops there are the best they have ever had. Wheat is a good crop and the sample is judged the best in years. Around Guelph, however, they had heard that the wheat had sprouted. The oats were not harvested but promised a large yield, although the correspondents had heard complaints of rest and light weight.

J. J. Ross, managing director and secretary-treasurer of the Chatham Binder Twine Company, has sent out circulars to all of the subscribers for stock who have not paid up, notifying them that if their subscriptions were not paid by the 15th of August, the Company would have to resort to law in order to collect them. He reports that a number of good returns have been received since that time.

Mrs. Gray, a colored woman, visited the police station this morning. She complained that she had gone away for a day and on her return found half the furniture smashed and the rest sold to Harry Ball. She identified some things at Harry Ball's establishment, particularly a clock, and forbade the colonel to dispose of them, as they had been purchased with her own money. She then sought the police to lay an information against her husband, whom she alleged was the cause of all her trouble.

T. Crouch, of Pontiac, Mich., has returned after spending a few days with his parents here.

Fred. Sangster paid us a flying visit last week. He is travelling in the interest of a hardware firm through the Southern States.

Mrs. W. Webster and daughter Gwendoline, of Marenei, Mich., are visiting relatives in town.

Mrs. McDonald, of Harwich, addressed the W. F. M. S. on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. D. Corbett.

J. C. Lawrence sold by public auction on the 14th inst. all his household furniture.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence purpose moving to Grand Rapids to reside with their son Charles.

Our annual picnic, under the auspices of Florence brass band, will be held August 20th in Gunn's Grove. A good entertainment of games and other amusements will be provided. On the same evening the ladies of the Presbyterian congregation purpose holding an open air concert and garden party on the fair grounds. Every arrangement is being made to make this the event of the season.

PAPER EMPORIUM

The office of Sheriff Gemmill looked like the sample room of a wall paper wholesale house yesterday morning. The sheriff was once in the paper business and, when he quit, he thought he had quit it for good, but such are the exigencies of fate that he once again has to take a leading interest in the paper industry. The wall paper was seized at Ridgetown under a writ issued in the County Court of Elgin in the interest of Rudolph and Begg. Under the writ the stock of wall paper of N. W. Porter was seized. The stock will be offered for sale in Ridgetown on Monday at one o'clock p. m.

SUCH IS LIFE.

No time to eat,
No time to drink,
No time to greet,
No time to think,
No time to work,
No time to play,
No time to shrink,
No time to pray,
No time to love,
No time to hate,
No time to rove,
No time to wait,
No time to write,
No time to talk,
No time to fight,
No time to walk,
No time to sleep,
No time to preach,
No time to weep,
No time to teach,
No time to pine,
No time to laugh,
No time to whine,
No time to chaff.

No time to dance,
No time to sing,
No time for any other thing;
Our life's begun,
And then it's done;
We just get here,
Then disappear.
A moment's stop
Upon the brink,
And out we drop,
Quick as wink,
And like as not,
As quick forgot;
Just like a bubble,
Upon the air,
A prick of trouble,
And we are—where?
The Lord only knows,
And our friends little care!

For Diabetic Patients.

In a diet for diabetic patients milk is only occasionally allowed, yet eggs, cream, buttermilk and all kinds of cheese may be taken freely. Tart fruits are permitted, and peaches and strawberries may be eaten with cream, but without sugar. The sweet fruits—pears, plums, grapes, apples, bananas, etc.—are forbidden. Koumiss, coffee with cream, but no sugar, and cereal coffee are the drinks permitted, tea being excluded and no wines or liquors except claret, Rhine or other acid varieties. All vegetables containing sugar or starch are forbidden, which leaves cauliflower, lettuce, string beans, spinach, cucumbers, greens, young onions, etc., to be eaten. Olives are not forbidden. A moderate meat diet is recommended, particularly the fatty parts, and all kinds of fish are allowed.

Good luck is the willing handmaid of upright, energetic character and conscientious observance of duty.

Pickles!!

Why go to the trouble of putting up pickles when you can buy them for so little money, already to use? We have without a doubt the finest pickles on the market for the price.

These pickles are sold for 10c and are good value at that, but our good buying and the quantity we were able to take, gave us a better price, so that we are able to give our customers the benefit and are still selling these A 1 pickles at

CANADIAN ART AND ARTISTS.

Tribute From Duke of Argyll at Opening of Colonial Exhibition.

The British Colonial Art Exhibition was recently opened in London by the Duke of Argyll. Among the large company present were Lord Strathcona, Sir J. Cockburn, Admiral Sir E. R. Freemantle.

The Duke of Argyll, in declaring the exhibition opened, congratulated the promoters on having got together a collection which seemed to him very much superior, larger, and better in quality than any hitherto got together to represent colonial art. Some years ago there was a Colonial Art Exhibition at the Albert Hall, and although that gave promise of better things he confessed to being delighted to find the promises so well fulfilled, and to see so good a representation of the talents of artists in Canada, Australia and New Zealand, collected in the Royal Institute in Piccadilly. It was an excellent thing that they should make familiar to the British public the great scenes of natural beauty in the colonies, and show how the artists there had made the best of their time by training themselves both in the colonies and in Paris and London.

The Prince of Wales had lately expressed a hope that more of the colonial artists would come and prosecute their studies in London, and that was certain to be the case, as they would find here a larger market than elsewhere. But already a large number of them had made an excellent reputation by studying first in Paris. He might mention among them Paul Peel, whose studies of children were so excellent, and Lucius O'Brien, whom he had the pleasure of nominating as the first president of the Canadian Academy. That institution was started in 1879, and they were rather laughed at for their pains. Some of their friends said that the country was too young for such a central institution, but under the able auspices of Mr. O'Brien, it was started, and had maintained a most superior and useful exhibition ever since. He would express the hope that the art classes in Sydney, Melbourne and New Zealand might before long unite and form an Australasian Royal Academy. They would see from the pictures how magnificent was the scenery in many parts of the colonies—indeed, on the Pacific coast of Canada and among the mountains of New Zealand the scenery was unsurpassed by any in the world. He had much pleasure in formally opening the exhibition, trusting that it would bring closer to the knowledge of the people of England the marvellous beauties and resources of the greatest Empire of the world. Lord Strathcona, in moving a vote of thanks to the Duke of Agryll, said he had seen a good deal of Canadian as well as Australian art, and it spoke well for the talent and perseverance of the artists in these countries. They had not heretofore in Canada given that support to their own artists that they ought to have given. They were sure the talent and perseverance of the artists from the colonies would be appreciated in England, and he had little doubt as time went on they would have still better examples from them.

Yellowstone National Park

This famous national park offers to the tourist and sightseer more novelties and curiosities than perhaps any other spot on earth. The stage ride from Monida is through scenery hardly inferior to the park itself, and this ride is one of the very many enjoyments of the trip.

The new route to the Yellowstone is via the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line Railroads to Monida, Montana, thence daily by palatial Concord coaches of the Monida & Yellowstone Stage Company to all points in the Yellowstone National Park.

Ladies' White Shirt Waists

Now is the time to get a good bargain in Shirt Waists. Little enough to pay for a pretty summer shirt waist in any case. Littler yet when you think that the waists were originally $1.00 to $4.00, but they've been inspected a bit too much for the good of their freshness, all somewhat mussed. Need just a washing to set them right. But nothing will restore their prices.

Ladies' Shirt Waists, of very fine white muslin insertion and tucks down each side of plait sizes 32, 42, your choice for 50c.

Shirt Waists of very fine material, insertion put in to form the yoke, also insertion down front of waist, tucked and buttoned down the back, sizes 32, 42, your choice for 75c.

Shirt Waists of very fine material, 3 rows of insertion down front of waist, cuffs also trimmed with embroidery, plaited back, sizes 32, 42, your choice for 98c.

Shirt Waists of very fine lawn, front and back trimmed with insertion and tucks, cuffs also trimmed with insertion, your choice $1.30.

Ladies' Tailored Blouse White Shirt Waists, embroidery trimmed also hemstitched tucks, full front, your choice for $1.70.

Ladies' Shirt Waists of very fine lawn, yoke back and front of insertion and applique, front and cuffs also trimmed with applique, your choice for $3.00.

Women's Summer Vests

We never before made such a showing, had so many high class qualities, nor ever crowded price down to such a fine point. In all this vast collection we cannot point to a single line that is unworthy in any respect. But why should we add further emphasis when a few minutes at the department will give you a better idea of our qualities and values, Come and judge for yourself.

Women's Vests, several styles, made of Egyptian yarns, in White, Cream and Ecru, some with square necks, no sleeves, and trimmed with fancy edge or ribbon, others have short sleeves, all sizes, prices 10c, 12½c and 15c.

Women's Vests, extra fine ribbed, trimmed with fancy edge, no sleeves, white only, price 40c.

Women's Vest,, fine swiss ribbed, extra texture, made of low square neck, back and front trimmed with edging and silk ribbon, draw string, no sleeves, short sleeves and long sleeves, price 25c.

This Case in Hand

Is a case of repair work. A watch that could go but would'nt go was made to go, the owner thought it was a case of no good, but I diagnosed the case at a cost of $1.50 and put it right, and it has gone ever since. If yours is a stop watch bring it in and when I am through with it, it will be a go watch. All kinds of repairing and best workmanship.

Some of the grocers have life-sized pictures of a pretty girl sitting on a vinegar barrel. Richard Slagg, the baker, went into Orville Dolsen's yesterday morning and the girl on the barrel catching his eye, Mr. Slagg absentmindedly but with his accustomed, gallantry touched his hat politely. Orville and his friends then had a good laugh.

The leak in the waterworks main in the Lake Rrie yards was caused by a lead joint blowing out in the pipe leading to the stand-pipe. The yard was pretty well flooded by the time Michael O'Mara reached the place after being notified of the break. The damage was repaired last night. The Lake Erie had to get the water from the C. P. R. stand-pipe yesterday.

Wolsey's Household.

In Cardinal Wolsey's palace no less than 280 beds were provided for strangers, with superb canopies and curtains of silk or velvet. There were bedsteads of alabaster, quilts of down and pillowcases embroidered with silk and gold. The chairs of state were covered with cloth of gold; the tables and cabinets were of the most costly woods. Much of the splendid furniture was emblazoned with "my lord's arms." Everywhere was impressed the cardinal's hat. The same magnificence appeared in the decorations and ornaments of the chapel, but the forty-four gorgeous copes of one suit and the rest of the sacerdotal pomp displayed there were eclipsed by the majesty of Wolsey's secular equipment.

The annual expenses of his household exceeded £30,000, an immense sum for those days. His retinue of 500 persons, his kingly stud, his sumptuous open table, are mentioned in every history. When he rode to and from Westminster in his character of lord chancellor, his mule was attended by a long train of nobles and knights on horseback; his pursuivant, ushers and other officers led the way in rich liveries, while footmen with gilded poleaxes brought up the rear.

SAW TWO CORONATIONS.

Mrs. W. G. Smith, of Toronto, 92 Years Old, Was Present When William IV. and Victoria Were Crowned.

To have witnessed the coronation celebrations of William IV. and Queen Victoria, and to be a hale old person of keen memory and active body at the time fixed for the crowning of Edward VII. is the privilege of a very few. Yet such is the lot of Mrs. W. G. Smith of 18 Morris street, Toronto, who on Saturday, June 28, 1902, completed her 92nd year.

An interesting and eventful career has been that of Mrs. Smith, and her friends tell her she should embody her personal recollections in some permanent form. The suggestion might seem unreasonable for one so advanced in years, but the impression created upon a casual visitor was that Mrs. Smith has mental and physical capacity for a good deal of work yet. She was just taking a mid-afternoon cup of tea, the solace of young and old alike, when a reporter called upon her. The idea of telling for publication something about her life appeared somewhat novel. "You know," she said in explanation, "I am an English woman, not a Canadian." Her daughter, however, urged her to speak for her friends' sake, and she consented. The most active person of the three apparently, Mrs. Smith talked for a few minutes, then with the quickness of a girl in her teens she would turn to another part of the room to bring some memento of her life in England in connection with the royal personages she had seen.

"Yes, I was at the coronation of William IV. and Victoria," she said. "Of course I was too young to remember much of what happened when George IV. came to the throne. I was only ten years old. I remember when George III. died in 1820. I heard the Bow Bells ringing at midnight. We lived in the suburbs of London, and I remember my father kept the house closed for two or three days. When William IV. was crowned I sat in front of the door of Westminster Abbey and watched the great procession enter. I went into the Abbey immediately after, and sat in the King's chair and had a glass of wine from his glass," Mrs. Smith added with a hearty laugh, expressing the view of a nonogenarian of the act of a young girl. "The illuminations at night were grand," she continued, "though there was neither gas nor electric light then. They were of oil lamps with fancy globes."

"When Queen Victoria was crowned seven years later I again sat in front of the Abbey, where I was the other time. I remember the Queen as she walked up, surrounded by the tall guards and yeomanry, the Ambassadors and foreign Princes. She looked so little, just like a child, as she passed through the aisle made by the officers and guards.

"This is just what she looked like," and Mrs. Smith, her eyes lighted with enthusiasm, bounced from her chair and pointed to a picture on the wall, showing the then young Queen, of plump, girlish figure, her curls hanging over her bare shoulders.

"The crowds looked like a fairy tale. You can't describe the scene; you could walk on the people's heads," declared Mrs. Smith. "The illuminations at night were grand and gas was used instead of oil. Thousands of people were out all night."

But the incidents in her life to which Mrs. Smith refers with the greatest pleasure are her visits to Windsor Castle. Her aunt, Mrs. William Pandall, was for forty years in the royal household, attached to the service of George III., George IV. and William IV., and was wardrobe woman to Queen Adelaide.

The late Queen Victoria, Mrs. Smith says, never lost an opportunity of graciously noticing this old and faithful servant of her royal predecessors. Mrs. Randall nursed George IV. in his last illness, and was present when he died.

"My cousin, Mrs. Randall's son, was one of the pages to Queen Victoria. My older sister used to visit Princess Sophia of Gloucester. Once when she was a little girl she lost her way in the castle, and came down the wrong stairs. On the way she met a man who didn't know her, but on learning she was a niece of Mrs. Randall he patted her cheek and kissed her. She afterwards found it was George IV."

Among the mementos which Mrs. Smith shows is a china water bottle which belonged to Charles I.; a copper teapot and a china plate, formerly owned by George IV.; a pin-cushion made by Princess Elizabeth, and a book presented to Mrs. Randall by Queen Adelaide, containing the Queen's autograph, the title being "Some recollections of the last days of his late Majesty King William the Fourth," the Queen herself being the author.

Mrs. Smith says she was not at Windsor much after Queen Victoria came to the throne, but she remembers having seen the present King and the late Empress Frederick playing about when they were children.

"My people wanted me to go to see this coronation, but I did not care to. I have seen enough of the world," said Mrs. Smith, relapsing into a contemplative mood. "I look all right, but I suffer a good deal. The Almighty has been good enough to allow me to live so long. People are not as they used to be. The rising generation need more control from their parents than they are getting. I never knew what it was to go out without an invitation when I was a child."

Mrs. Smith said she was born at Woolwich, Kent, near the arsenal, in 1810. She came to Canada 48 years ago, and has lived most of that time and all of the last 25 years in Toronto. Her husband, who died five years ago, was for years chief bookkeeper for the Queen's Printer at Ottawa.

Mrs. Smith's eyesight is yet good, and her daughter showed some white goods in which she had been busily engaged working button-holes.

A GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

On the right side of the door was a portrait of Sintra Leigh, many years younger, but much the same in feature as now. On the left was the face of a man so like her that only the hair and the clothing showed that the two portraits had not been painted from the same model.

As I looked at these things, wondering, the velvet curtains over the doorway moved.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Power Behind the Throne.

I caught my breath. In an instant I had forgotten the portraits, and had only eyes for what should come out from behind the curtains.

Then they were swept aside; and I saw the man whom I might perhaps have expected, yet had not dreamt of seeing—Roger Cope.

Our eyes met. Instantly all impression of mystery was gone. I felt that I should have known from the first that it would be explained in this way.

"My darling—at last!" he exclaimed, and came towards me quickly, with both hands held out. But I put mine behind my back.

"So you are the 'employer' of whom that woman spoke!" I said, viciously; "and this is your house."

"I thought you might have guessed by this time whose place it was," Roger answered. "Many things might have told you, even if you had forgotten seeing the old photographs of the house taken from the outside, and the great hall with the pillars, which Aunt Ermyntrude kept. It was my Cousin Vincent's place, you know, until on his death it came to me with the title."

Now I understood why I had felt last night that I had lived through the scene of my arrival before; why I had known where to look for the staircase, and why, when I had passed out of the hall, the impression of familiarity disappeared. I had seen the photographs of which Roger spoke, but so long ago that my forgetfulness was scarcely surprising.

"And then, all your pretty gowns and your silver things, and jewels," Roger went on; "who but one who loved you would have thought of having them ready for your arrival? And who on all this earth loves you as I do? I was half afraid, half anxious that you should guess before seeing me whom you were to meet to-day. Oh, Sheila, you don't know what pleasure I took in securing all your things for you—even in the jewelry which the wretched girl Fanny Newlyn confessed to having pawned, and the new clothes which your mother told me you had taken away to sell. And the room where you slept last night; I had everything that was there taken out and new things put in—things which I hoped you would like. You can never doubt my love for you after to-day."

I was bewildered still by the far-reaching cleverness of the trick which had ended by bringing me here. It seemed impossible to me that love, and only love, had prompted a man of Roger Cope's type to such desperate measures; and I understood neither the means by which he had succeeded in carrying out his purpose, why it had been necessary to carry it out at all, nor what he intended to do with me now that I was here. But I wished to understand, and I controlled the angry words that rushed to my lips, meaning to keep them back until I had found out how far Roger was ready to explain. It even entered my mind that Roger might be mad; and the thought added to the need for caution.

"Yours is very strange love," I said, quietly, though my voice was unsteady and a slight trembling shook my body. "And you have taken a strange way of showing it. I don't understand exactly what the way has been, even now."

"You shall understand if you like," he returned, "though there are other things of which I would rather speak, things which I have been waiting impatiently for a long, long time to say."

"I should like to understand," I repeated, ignoring his last words.

"Sit down, then, by my side, on this sofa. Oh, don't look frightened. I don't mean to force you. But if you won't do what I ask, you can't expect me to give up my will to yours."

Without further objections I sat down and Roger sat beside me. I saw him glance at my hands as if he contemplated possessing himself of one; but hurriedly I clasped them together in my lap, and Roger attempted no more aggression.

"Now catechize me, if you choose," he said, "and I will do my best to answer. Afterwards—but there will be time to talk of the 'afterwards' when it has become the present. Begin, my little cousin. I am in a mood to be frank, now that luck has turned my way at last."

I hoped that he might prove mistaken in believing himself so favored, as far as his boasted luck had to do with me. But I did not stop to contradict him, for I was anxious to come at the truth which lay at the bottom of so dark, so deep a well.

"Did you know where I went after I left Easel street?" I asked.

"Not at first. I only wish that I had known. I called at Easel street on the evening of that most eventful day because I couldn't help it, because I couldn't keep away from you. And I had to hear that hardly an hour before you had gone. You can guess a little of what I felt. And I assure you that Mistress Fanny was obliged to listen to some home truths for her brutality."

His words convinced me that John Bourke had been right in his conjectures. Roger had set fire to the train; but the result, just as Mr. Bourke had thought, had come sooner than it was expected. Roger had called, but had been too late to prevent me from leaving the home where I was not wanted.

"I believe that Tom Stephens, Fan's pretended lover, was a tool of yours," I exclaimed, echoing the suggestion that had come from John Bourke.

Roger smiled. "Rather clever for a child like you to have thrashed that out in your mind," he said. "I don't mind saying that you are right, because no woman ever thought the less of a man for employing any means in his power—even means that would be called unscrupulous—to win her for himself. Yes, Tom Stephens was a 'tool' of mine, as you put it."

"He spied on me, and prejudiced the managers of employment agencies against me so that I was unable to get work?"

"Yes. For if you had found work the end would have been delayed. I was cruel only to be kind. Tom Stephens managed matters very well, and though they went rather further than I expected that was hardly his fault."

"Was it he who discovered where I had gone after I left Easel street?"

"No, poor Tom was not skilled detective enough for that. I had to get another man. It took him three days to find you out. Mr. John Bourke, M.P., has my gratitude for saving you—for me. I should never have forgiven myself for what I had done, if you had succeeded in destroying your precious life. But my gratitude to him ends with that episode. His later acts towards you were those of a villain; and it was all I could do not to go myself to his house and snatch my innocent white dove from the claws of the hawk."

The blood sprang to my face and burnt there. "It is like you to speak of him so!" I exclaimed, fiercely. "He was an angel to me, while you—oh! I don't yet half understand what you have been or may be. I only know that you are not worthy to be spoken of in the same breath with John Bourke."

It was Roger's turn now to flush, which he did, slowly, and with tightening lips. "It would please me best if you need not speak of him at all or think of him," he said, evidently controlling himself with an iron hand. "Is there any more catechizing to be gone through, or are you ready to give me the chance which I have earned?"

"There are many questions yet," I hurriedly returned, "and I can think of nothing else till you have answered them. Tell me, since it seems to have distressed you so much that I should be at—at Mrs. Jennett's, not Mr. Bourke's, house, why you did not come yourself and show me reasons for leaving there?"

"Because I was sure that, feeling towards me as you did, anything which I could say would be in vain. I called you 'cousin' just now, as of old. But we are no longer cousins. I have no guardianship, no authority, no tangible right to command your actions; at least, I had none until you came to this house. I could not force you to break with John Bourke against your own will, and, therefore, for your good, I was obliged to proceed in a more subtle way."

A new thought was born in my brain. "Was Lady Feo Ringwood another tool of yours?" I demanded.

"She was not aware of being such. Nevertheless, I used her. You ought to be grateful to me, Sheila, for saving you. The way I chose was a clever one, I think, and cost me a day or two of thought before I hit upon it. Yet, once seen, it was obvious, for everyone who knows Lady Feo well, knows that she is in love with Bourke and he with her—or, at all events, that he will marry her."

I started slightly at the words, and blushed because I knew that Roger had seen the start. "I had never heard of your acquaintance with Lady Feo," I said, quickly, to hide what I felt.

"I have known her, more or less, for years; and though I have never met Bourke we have mutual acquaintances. I had but to call on Lady Feo, hint that enemies of Bourke's had got hold of a scandal connecting him with a mysterious girl who had been seen at his house, to set the machinery working. I knew that she would go to him; indeed, I suggested that it would be well if some true friend of his should do so without a moment's delay, lest his career should be hopelessly ruined by an adventuress. Of course, she was to suppose me ignorant of the girl's identity, and no doubt she thought the denouement all the more dramatic because the information on which she acted had come from me. When I was sure that she would go to Bourke's house, a telegram was sent, calling him out, leaving you at Lady Feo's mercy. I thought the rest might be trusted to her. And my only other act of interference was to request that she should take with her a certain newspaper, to be left at the house when she went away. I alleged, as an excuse for this suggestion, a paragraph which I had inserted, through the influence of a friend, mentioning Bourke name and a rumor regarding him. That was for Lady Feo Ringwood's eye. The advertisement in the 'personal' column was for yours, and I hoped that, if you had not seen it before, you would see it then. As it turned out, my wish was granted."

"Yes, I walked into the trap," I answered, bitterly. "I knew well enough that there might be a trap when I went to the Marble Arch, but I did not guess that your hand had set it. There is just one thing, though, which I can now be thankful for. Your confession has shown me that I haven't really injured Mr. Bourke. The enemies of whom Lady Feo spoke, and the scandal, existed only in your mind. I thank Heaven for that."

"Then you are premature in your gratitude," Roger retorted, the angelic cast of his features betraying the emotion of anger for the first time. "Scandal was busy enough; and Bourke has many more powerful enemies than friends, if only he knew it. As a matter of fact, I have saved him as well as you—though he owes me no thanks for that, since all I did was done for you, with no thought of his salvation."

"It seems to me that all you did was for yourself, with no thought of anyone else's welfare," I cried. "You have been very wicked, very cruel, Roger—even more cruel and wicked than I dreamt."

"That is not a gracious speech, considering that my 'confession,' as you call it, has been made to please you," Roger responded. "It is incorrect to speak of it all as a 'confession.' I have told you the truth, answering with complete frankness every question you have asked, because I chose to do so, not because I was compelled to it by any sense of shame. On the contrary, I glory in what I have done—glory in each step that has brought me to success at last."

"It has not brought you to success, if you mean by that brought us nearer together," I protested. "Though I am in your house, and you could touch me with your hand—if you wished to offend me even more deeply—I was never further from you really than at this moment."

What Mr. Pell Saw.

Mr. J. E. Pell, the aged ex-secretary of the St. George's Society of Toronto, is probably the only person now alive in that city who witnessed the coronation procession of King George IV. of England. Mr. Pell, who is now 92 years of age, was a boy of 10 when in 1821 George IV. came to the throne. Mr. Pell remembers quite clearly seeing Queen Caroline drive up to the door of Westminster Abbey when she was refused admission to the coronation proceedings. Mr. Pell says he also sawGeorge IV. the last time that King drove down Long Windsor Walk. He was seated in a low pony carriage with the Marquis of Cunningham. Mr. Pell witnessed the coronation water procession on the Thames at the time of the crowning of William IV. He also remembers seeing Queen Victoria when as a girl of 12 years of age she walked in Kensington Gardens. He was, however, resident in Canada when the late Queen came to the throne.

An Old Scheme Revived.

The scheme announced from Boston to make Port Hamilton, on the Labrador coast, the terminus of a new transcontinental railway, is not new. Ten or twelve years ago, Mr. E. P. Bender, who achieved considerable celebrity in connection with a dead-meat project in Three Rivers, Que., had a similar scheme before Parliament. After Mr. Bender had explained to the Railway Committee, claiming the Port Hamilton never froze in winter, but was open all the year round, Lord Strathcona, who was then Sir Donald Smith, M.P. for Montreal West, rose and said:—"That is very strange; I remember distinctly that in the year 1840, I walked across the inlet upon snowshoes." The Chairman said "Next," and little more attention was paid to the bill. The fact that Mr. J. J. Hill is up in that direction on one of his annual fishing excursions is probably the warrant for connecting his name with the scheme.

Success of Lady Medical Students.

The Ontario Medical College for Women has just completed one of the most successful years in its history. The classes in attendance have been large, and all of the students going up from the college for their final examinations at Trinity and Toronto Universities have, without exception, been successful, while at the examinations of College of Physicians and Surgeons, although about thirty-five per cent. of all the candidates presenting themselves for examination failed to pass, yet all of the students from the Women's Medical College who tried the examination were successful.

Reduced by $750,000,000.

The national debt of Great Britain was reduced during the reign of Queen Victoria by about £750,000,000.

GLASS FOR WINDOWS

THE METHOD AND THE MATERIALS OF ITS MANUFACTURE.

Enough Arsenic In the Windows of an Ordinary House to Kill a Regiment of Men—Process of the Tankhouse and the Pothouse.

People who have glass windows in their homes do not know that the glass contains enough arsenic to make it a deadly poison. Glassmakers say that the windows of an ordinary home contain enough of this poison to kill a regiment of men. The popular supposition that glass is made of sand is a correct one, but a quantity of other articles enters into its composition.

Window glass factories are divided into two departments, a tankhouse and a pothouse. The process of glassmaking in one of these departments is practically the same as in the other. In the tankhouse the glass is all melted in immense tanks which will hold thousands of tons. In the pothouse the glass is made in pots.

After the fires are lighted and a tank is heated the glass mixture is shoveled in. It includes glass left over from the former season, glass refuse, sand and salt cake. Arsenic is not used in the tankhouse for the reason that the heat is so intense that the drug is volatilized and escapes into the air without entering the mixture. As one mixture melts and flows to one end of a tank fresh supplies are shoveled in at the other end.

The molten mass seethes and "works" in a manner similar to that of a mash in a distillery. From the salt cake comes a salt water that has to be separated from the mass, and the easiest way to remove it is to burn it out. This is done by throwing stove wood into the tank on top of the molten glass. The water is converted into steam, which is destroyed by the intense heat from the glass. The melted glass is then skimmed by an automatic skimmer, and it is ready for the gatherer.

A gatherer thrusts a long steel blowpipe into one of the rings at the lower end of the tank. He twists and turns it until a small ball of glass gathers on the end. This ball is partially cooled, polished by being turned in a box of sawdust and then passed on to the blower, who heats it again until it becomes like taffy. The blower swings the ball over a pit that is twelve feet deep and rapidly blows it into an elongated pear shape. When a blower is through, the melted glass becomes a perfect cylinder about 5 feet long and 2 feet across. It then passes to a "snapper," who takes it to a rack and breaks the roller loose from the blowpipe.

The snapper gathers a small lump of melted glass on the end of a rod and dexterously runs a narrow ribbon of the stuff around the ends of the roller, both at the blowpipe end and the closed end. The little ribbons of melted glass cool in a few seconds, when they are removed, leaving a narrow zone of almost redhot glass around the rollers at each end. Then, taking a tool that resembles a soldering iron, the snapper rubs it for a moment on his forehead, and when the point of it is moistened with perspiration he runs the iron around the rollers at the heated spot. The glass cracks and separates as cleanly as if cut with a diamond, the blowpipe is removed, and the closed cylinder has become a roller and is then ready to go to the flattener.

The flattener works in another part of the building, where are located the flattening ovens. These ovens are heated to a temperature sufficient to soften the glass so that it may be rolled out into sheets. A series of fireclay tables placed in a circle like the spokes of a wheel revolve in the ovens, and on these tables the rollers are flattened. They are placed inside, allowed to become hot, and then a cold iron is run along the inside from end to end. The contact of the iron cuts the glass, which is then straightened out upon the table.

The flattener has a number of billets of green wood attached to long iron handles, and with these billets, which are shaped in such a manner as to do the work expected of them, he "irons" the softened sheet of glass until it is perfectly flat and smooth. The tables inside the oven revolve, the flattened sheet is carried away, and another roller is brought into position before the flattener. As the flattened sheets cool they are lifted to a place on a long traveling rack, on which they are by stages removed from the ovens, being allowed to cool as they go. This is done in order that the glass may not be shattered by too quick an exposure to the air.

When the sheets are taken from the flattening ovens, they are covered with a greasy, dirty looking coat of chemicals—soda, potash, silicates of the different salts, etc.—which must be removed, and for this purpose the rough sheets are placed in an acid bath composed of hydrochloric and sulphuric acids more or less diluted. After their immersion in this bath the sheets are taken to the cutting room, where workmen cut them into sizes and make them ready for the packers. Hardly a scrap of the glass except the rough edges is wasted. In fact, none is wasted, as all refuse goes back to be melted. After the cutters have finished their work the glass is packed in boxes and is then ready for the market

Miss Elizabeth Hesselman, Treasurer of the Neenah, Wis., Schiller Club, Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped Her Monthly Suffering and Improved Her General Health.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was always a healthy girl until about a year ago when I caught a severe cold coming home from a party. For months after that I was very irregular and suffered severe pains for a day or two. I lost flesh and strength, and became alarmed. My mother procured a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and I began to take it faithfully. I soon found that my general health improved, and within a couple of months I became regular to a day, and suffered no further pain, and several of my friends have been helped through its use since." — ELIZABETH HESSELMAN, 129 First St., Neenah, Wis.

"OF THE ONE BLOOD."

An American Paper's Keen Insight Into the Reasons Why U.S. Sympathizes With Britain Just Now.

In Kipling's "Jungle stories," the cry of the jungle folk is always, "We be all of one blood." This blood-kin guarantees peace and safe conduct to the traveler and binds all together against alien attack, Baloo and Bagheera are but little alike and are most content when each goes his own road, but kin they are as against all others. Briton and American are as Baloo, the sturdy bear, and Bagheera, the lithe and alert panther, but "brothers we be of the one blood."

That blood is to-day deeply moved. The King lies helpless in presence of the Terror of Kings. We are big enough to speak out frankly our sorrow and our sympathy. The significant thing is that fine sympathy is not the same in quality as the one which would stir us in the presence of any other monarch. We care little for any king or kaiser as such. We have millions of them at home. But the King of the English folk is much to us. Not to dwell upon the fact that this particular Edward has borne himself right manfully and carried himself in his affliction in the sturdy fashion of one of our own sovereigns, we watch his ebbing and flowing pulses with anxiety because it is our own blood which swells them. We have ownership in Good King Arthur as much as does any Briton. Alfred and the Confessor, and Richard of the Lion Heart are ours just as much as they belong to John Morley or Lord Salisbury. Even after America became a separate nation and the Hanovers became English kings and the two peoples drew apart in sympathy, in fashions, and in ideals, the underlying relationship was never dead or even broken. We detested a bad Hanoverian upon the English throne, but not in the way in which we held a worthless Bourbon on a neighboring throne in contempt, but because of the deep instinct that in some way our own inheritance was being misused. We loved and revered the gracious woman and good Queen Victoria, not alone on account of what she was, but because the longing of kinship was satisfied in her.

The real object or purpose of the coronation rites has not been missed or thwarted by the illness of the King. On the contrary, that purpose is probably being even better fulfilled. It has been pointed out again and again that coronation adds nothing to the constitutional office or prerogatives of the sovereign. The ceremony is in essence a survival of the old custom of our free ancestors, whereby the consent or approval of all the people and all the estates were given to the leadership of the chosen one. It was a family affair, a tribal action. The postponed, or it may be, abandoned, coronation was sagaciously planned with this idea controlling it. All the family from at home and from over sea were gathered. Neighbors were invited as well as visitors from afar, but neither neighbor nor visitor was concerned in it as was the English folk. The special ambassador from our United States represented most of all. In this country the blood has been enriched and invigorated, the speech has been expanded, polished, sharpened, but the dominant strain has not been changed. "We be all of one blood." By blood it is the dominant race. The future of the world, so far as one can see now, is to be determined by the English-speaking people. The politics, the trade, the literature, the commerce— in a word, the power of the world belongs to the family of which the King of the English folk is by courtesy and by history the primate. The real unity and underlying solidarity of this race is probably better knit and solidified by the strong sympathy which flows spontaneously to the stricken King than it would have been by the uninterrupted pageantry of coronation week. As Americans in particular, and as part of the English race, we did and still do pray with all our hearts, God Save the King!

The King and the Boers.

With hope growing stronger each day for the recovery of the King of England, it is hardly the time to talk of epitaphs. But whenever the reign of King Edward VII. ends, upon whatever national memorial of him may be erected, there should be a line telling how the first month that followed peace in South Africa, found Botha and Delarey in conference to frame a message of sympathy and sorrow on behalf of the Boer people to the King who lay in the shadow of death.

The happening of things like this, may not appeal to men who sneer at sentiment. To most people they are heart-warming reminders of the good that is in the world. Admiration is fairly shared by "Edward, the Peacemaker," who is credited with forcing ambitious politicians to yield to his wish that fair terms be offered to the men who had fought him hard, and by those same fighters who now furnish this new testimony that "the bravest are the tenderest."—New York Mail and Express.

Brains Which Sleep in Sections.

Sir James Crichton Browne, the expert on brain diseases, holds that insomnia is not attended with such insomnia is not attended with such disastrous consequences as is commonly supposed. It is not so dangerous as the solicitude of the sufferer. He suggests that the brains of literary men, who are the most frequent victims, acquire the trick of the heart, which takes a doze of a fraction of a second after each beat and so manages to get six hours' rest in twenty-four. Some brains, in cases of insomnia, sleep in sections, different brain centres going off duty in turn.

How About a Giraffe.

Suffered From a Burning Sensation in the Stomach—Food Became Distasteful and She Grew Weak and Despondent.

From the Sun, Orangeville, Ont.

The Sun is enabled this week through the courtesy of Mrs. John Shott, a lady well known and much esteemed by many of the residents of Orangeville, to give the particulars of another of those cures that have made Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a household remedy throughout the civilized world. Mrs. Shott, in conversation with our reporter said:—"About three years ago, while living in Ingersoll, I was a great sufferer from dyspepsia. The trouble first began with severe headaches, dizziness and sometimes vomiting. Next I suffered continually from a burning sensation in my stomach; food distressed me; I did not sleep well at night; lost flesh and became very weak. I was continually doctoring, but it did me no good. In fact I was gradually growing worse and despaired of ever being well again. One day a friend who called to see me strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She spoke so highly of them that I decided to take her advice, and I soon discovered that they were not like the other medicines I had been taking and that I had at last found soemthing to help me. I continued using the pills for perhaps a couple of months, when I found myself fully restored to health. I have always since enjoyed my meals with relish and have had no return of the trouble. With my experience I feel certain that if other sufferers will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial they will find a certain cure."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich and nourish the blood and strengthen the nerves. It is thus that they cure such troubles as dyspepsia, kidney ailments, rheumatism, partial paralysis, heart troubles, St. Vitus' dance and the ailments that make the lives of so many women a source of misery. These pills never fail to drive away pain, bring a glow of health to the whole body and make despondent men and women bright, active and strong. Do not take any pills without the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around the box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Alas! how great the number of folks who have existed without having lived.

e Cause of Dyspeptic Pains

They arise from the formation of gas owing to improper digestion. A very prompt and efficient remedy is Polson's Nerviline. It relieves the distention instantly, and by its stimulating action on the stomach, aids digestion. Nerviline cures dyspeptic pains by removing the cause. Nerviline is also highly recommended for cramps, colic, summer complaint and inflammation. Sold in large 25 cent bottles everywhere.

BROTHERHOOD OF DEATH.

In a Veldt Cemetery.

Peace to the quiet dead!
Trooper and burgher here,
True to the men who led,
True to their lights fell near;
Question not right nor wrong,
Question not gain nor loss,
Brothers in death they lie,
Under the starry cross.

Brave men and true alike—
Matters not creed nor race—
All are of one great kin,
Here in the resting place.
Nation 'gainst nation strives,
Endlessly 'neath the sun;
When the "great silence" falls
All are in rest as one.

Tears for the wrongs that keep
Far from us peace and good!
Tears that in life there is
No happy brotherhood!
Peace to the quiet dead!
Life's errors cleared away—
Brothers in hope they wait
The breaking of the day!

EVEN IN 1852.

Were Felt Stirrings of Colonial Heart Beat Round the World.

New Zealand and Its Government—There is a bond of sympathy which unites the colonies of Great Britain to one another, however far removed by distance, scarcely less potent than that which connects them to the mother country. The Briton at home is prone to disregard his children who have left his shores; he looks unsympathetically on their earnest struggles in their new home, and has but a low opinion of the infant communities which are growing rapidly in strength and beauty in every quarters of the earth. . . from his general ignorance of their affairs and the difficulty which he finds in appreciating their position in circumstances so different from his own there is no hearty attachment as between two more equal communities. The colonists of one quarter are, on the contrary, thoroughly able to understand and appreciate the struggles of the other. The English could hardly understand the violence of the Cape people in resisting the landing of convicts; it was so very unlike their views of propriety. The Canadians could thoroughly appreciate it, and obtain an accurate idea of the mode in which it was aroused. The Englishman finds a difficulty in realizing all the hardships of the settler, his roads, his distance from market, his thousand troubles. These may be encountered in raising sheep on the plains of Australia, but in Canada we can estimate them. The construction of the community, the peculiar form into which society is thrown, the cliques which rule and govern, the little dissensions, are all the same in every colony. The British mind, taken from its old seat in the old world and placed in the new, takes the same bent and inclination, whether in the woods of North America or in the fertile valleys of New Zealand. Let us hope that this colonial mind may yet show itself for good among the nations of the earth. Such communities have fewer temptations and trials than independent nations. Untouched by foreign wars, free from the lurings of the desire for national aggrandisement, and from the pecuniary burdens which they create, they are able to direct all their energies towards their material progress, and the improvement of the mental and moral condition of the people. There is ample room and verge enough in these pursuits to occupy all their strength.

The colony of New Zealand is one with which we should have a peculiar sympathy, since in many respects it resembles Canada more than any other.—From The Globe of May 27, 1852.

SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Kidney Trouble, Pain in The Back and Hips.

An Ingersoll Lady's Remarkable Recovery by the use of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

Do not let any lady who is suffering the miseries of backache and derangement of the kidneys, hesitate one moment in procuring Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. These Tablets are the formula of Dr. Zina Pitcher, the eminent Kidney Specialist, and have cured hundreds of cases of the severest type of kidney diseases which ordinary remedies could not benefit. They are small in size, chocolate coated and mild, yet thorough-going in their action—just suited to the requirements of a lady's delicate organism.

Mrs. W. Wallace, whose home is Bell street, Ingersoll, Ont., speaks of the benefits she derived from the Tablets as follows:

"For many years—some ten or twelve—I have had a great deal of trouble with my back and kidneys, the pain getting into my left hip. I have doctored and doctored and tried all sorts of kidney remedies, and finally determined to try Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. I got a bottle from A. E. Gayfer, druggist, and must say they have done me a great deal of good. The pain in my back and hip is gone, the kidney irritation removed, and I sleep well now at night. I am pleased with the Tablets and am glad to recommend them."

Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50 cents a bottle or 3 for $1.25 at all druggists or by mail. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto, Ont.

Some people pay as they go, and others when the collectors come after them.

Beauty is born in the blood. Beauty is more than "skin deep," it is blood deep. When the blood is tainted by disease the flesh will feel it and the skin will show it. Sallow or muddy complexions, pimples, blotches, and eruptions are only the surface signs of impure blood. Face washes, lotions, complexion powders, may palliate the evils but they cannot cure the disease. The only cure is to cleanse the blood of the poisonous matter which is the cause of the outbreak in the flesh and skin. Impure blood can be absolutely purified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Its effect on flesh and skin is marked. Sores heal and disappear. The skin becomes smooth, and regains its natural color. The eyes brighten and sparkle, the whole body is radiant with the brightness and beauty of health. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant, and is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics. The use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assists the action of the "Discovery," by cleansing the system of clogging matter.

She Believed in Fair Play.

Here is a story the women will be glad to read: Lady Pauncefote, widow of the British ambassador, has had a great deal of trouble in finding and keeping a good cook, an annoyance which most householders suffer. Finally Lord Pauncefote's footman heard of a most excellent cook who was working in the family of a butcher. Thinking to do his employers a great service the footman hunted up the cook, told her what a fine job and good wages she could get at the embassy, and by these means coaxed her away from the butcher's kitchen. At the embassy she gave the best of satisfaction, and after a service of several weeks was hailed as a jewel of rare price—a skilful and steady cook. So proud was he of his achievement that the footman told his mistress how he had turned the trick.

To his great surprise, Lady Pauncefote, instead of complimenting him on his energy, severely reprimanded him. Then she ordered her carriage, drove to the butcher's house, and apologized to the butcher's wife for what her footman had done without her knowledge. On returning home, she discharged both the cook and the footman. Thus did this lady of quality show her determination to play the game fairly and according to the code, even if the neighbor who had been wronged was only a butcher's wife.

The Mosquito's Hum.

It seems likely that the "hum" of the mosquito is produced in a similar manner to the characteristic sound made by the locust, the katydid, the cricket and other insects of that species. At a recent meeting of the Royal Society of Edinburgh two of the members announced that they had discovered a hitherto overlooked arrangement at the base of the mosquito's wings, by which it is possible that the peculiar hum of the insect may be made. This arrangement consists of a bar slightly movable, provided with teeth, which, as the wings are moved up and down, is drawn across a series of ridges. It has heretofore been thought that the humming was caused by the rapid movement of the wings alone.

FEET SCALDED COULDN'T WALK

A Serious case of Foot Trouble Completely Cured by one Box of "Foot Elm."

Mr. John F. Downs, a well known clerk of Wiarton, Ont., writes:—"I have great pleasure in recommending "Foot Elm." I was laid up with scalded and sweating feet so that I couldn't walk. I tried many things but all failed to do me good. Then I started using "Foot Elm" and one box completely cured me. I heartily recommend "Foot Elm" to everyone suffering from sore feet."

"Foot Elm" is a purely vegetable white powder, which has a wonderful cooling, soothing and healing action on the feet. It prevents blistering and chafing of the feet, rests tired, hot, aching feet, does away with all sweaty odors, and just works like magic in relieving painful corns, bunions and ingrowing toe-nails.

Price 25 cents a box of 18 powders at all druggists. Beware of counterfeits and imitations which injure the feet and ruin the shoes. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

Birds-Eye View of Lagoon Park.

St. Joseph Court No. 241, Catholic Order of Foresters, of Chatham, have decided to run their annual excursion per Steamer City of Chatham, on Tuesday, Aug. 19th, to this beautiful spot on the Detroit river, of which the Detroit Tribune of July 27th says:—"An enterprise of magnitude is a summer resort known as Lagoon Park. A charming view may be obtained from the ark, looking up and down the river and across at Fort Wayne, which is directly opposite. A wide canal or lagoon runs from the river into the heart of the park and in summer it is completely covered over with interlacing trees which spring from either bank. The park contains about 25 acres of ground and is situated facing the Sandwich road, part which street car lines run from Windsor. In the centre of the space is a dancing pavillion, and on the eastern side is a beautiful grove which has rustic seats and tablos for the accomodation of excursion parties. In the rear of the grove is a large summer theatre, ball grounds, bowling greens, tennis courts, etc. A Detroit orchestra furnishes music every afternoon."

Come with the C. O. F. on the 19th and have a pleasant day's outing. First-class orchestra on boat.

Boat leaves Rankin dock at 7:30 a. m. Fare—adults 50c, children 25c.

Now that the date of our annual fall fair is approaching, it becomes the duty of every citizen of the town and every resident of the country to unite and make a huge success. This exhibition, which has always been a success in former years, ought to be made a great success this year. It is true that some of the vegetables and field crops will not be as good as in former years, but a good yield of fruit is expected. If every farmer would try his best and exert every effort to make a showing we are sure that our fall exhibit would not fail.—Ridgetown Dominion.

The Ridgetown Dominion laments that the Howard people haven't vegetables and field crops among them, this year, fit to furnish their usual little fall fair. Keep up your courage Brer Bowyer, your Howard folks have always spent the week of the great Peninsular Fair here, admiring the products of the best farms in Ontario, and perhaps some of the prosperous farmers around Chatham may help you out from their splendid crops of this season. We have a good kitchen garden ourselves, and if those who are in arrears for this G. H. J. will only cash up in time to furnish our membership fee, president Walter Latimer may yet have a better show than he ever saw before.

• • •

Dear Satellite,—Knowing your penchant for frivolities I send you the following story of a true incident. Yours Alright Yes.

Boating as a pastime has again become popular in Chatham and now many canoes are seen gliding noiselessly up stream where there used to be none. Judging by the occupants, canoeing is about equally as popular with the girls as the boys. There are generally two in each boat. Those who have been deterred by either their strength or temerity from venturing up above the waterworks have but little idea of the beautiful stretches of river that lie beyond. The foliage creeps down to the water's edge and in many places the boughs are overhanging the river, touching the water's surface, forming most picturesque and attractive retreats. It is not the scenery that appears to attract the canoeists, however, although there is no question but that it is fine. The nooks formed by the afore-mentioned over hanging boughs seem to be places of popularity. There is one of these sylvan and water bound retreats about two miles above Chatham that has this year attained great popularity with one of the clerks of this city who labors in the Bank of Montreal. Others have sought this nook but they have always found the best place taken. Why this one particular spot should be so attractive I know not but if any of your readers desire to see the place, I will tell them where it is, and I venture to say that if they visit the nook they will find that some one there, but I further venture to say that he will not be alone.

THE OLD HAND ORGAN.

The old hand organ in the street
Has not the gaudy gold and gilt
The new ones have—but, oh, the sweet
Old tunes it plays with limping lilt!
"The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls,"
"Jim Crow" and "Annie Lauric," too—
And, answering its bugle calls,
The old times rise for me and you.

"Then You'll Remember Me," it plays,
And straight our memories go back
Through all the dead years mellow haze,
With frequent pauses along the track.
And when we see the grass-grown streets,
The orchards gleaming in the sun,
Where crooning bees seek out the sweets
And shadows o'er the grasses run.

We see the flash of merry eyes;
We see the gleam of old-time smiles;
And, ere the old-time music dies,
We live again the old-time whiles.
We walk the pathway in the lane,
And day-dream as we used to then,
For on the rippling old refrain
The old times come to life again.

Play! Old hand organ in the street;
Play every song we used to sing,
And let our hearts in cadence beat
With each glad memory they bring.
Play, in your halting, careless way,
The fine old tunes that softly tell
Of every God-made happy day
In those old times we love so well.

International Bible Lesson for To-Morrow—Journeying toward Canaan—Ex. x., 11-13, 29-36.

Golden Text—"For Thy name's sake guide me."

Israel's camp had stood before Sinai for about a year, and they had advanced from a mob of fugitive slaves with a citizen soldiery. God will guide these millions of His people through barren desert and hostile peoples to the promised land by the cloud of His presence, and as a great national object lesson to the idolatrous Canaanites. As the cloud lifted from the Tabernacle the watchful priests sounded the march, then all tents were struck, baggage packed and the cloud leading, the ark of the covenant followed, carried by the Levites, the whole host with ranks arranged—see Num. ix., 15-23—were on the move, directed and commanded by no human judgment, but by God alone. When the cloud stood still the ark rested, and the Tabernacle was reared and the host encamped around it, every tribe, family and tent just where God directed it should be. The silver trumpets of the priests directs the flocks—not the rams' horns of judgment — so now the gospel as a trumpet sounds repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit, like the cloud, leads God's people to-day, for as many as are led by the Spirit of God these are sons of God. Moses longs for the company of his brother-in-law; as Andrew died for Simon Peter, so souls are won to Christ and God.

We Seek

A larger result than mere notoriety. We mean to have it understood that this is a first class clothing store, not only because one's money goes farthest here but also because the things we sell are new and stylish and right.

Everything belonging to Summer will sell now regardless of cost, for the sake of clean stocks we carry nothing over. Never do! And nothing makes us more in favor to-day than the fact that everything is new and thoroughly up-to-date.

No need of startling prices and panicky advertisements. Present values are unquestionably the best ever offered. See for yourself.

ONLY A MASK.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system."

I bought a horse with a supposedly incurable ringbone for $30.00, cured him with $1.00 worth of MINARD'S LINIMENT, and sold him in four months for $85.00. Profit on Liniment, $54.00.

HEALTH RESORTS AND ATTRACTIONS

There is no region in America richer in mineral springs than Colorado, while throughout the state there are pleasure resorts and splendid places of attraction of various kinds in great numebrs. It has been truly said that all of Colorado is a health resort, and this statement is sustained by the most eminent physicians of the country. What with its beautiful cities on the plains, its gorgeous mountain peaks and lovely valleys, its awful canons and their rushing torrents, its forests and streams, its broad green parks, and charming crystal lakes amid the mountains, what more could nature provide or man desire for his welfare or his delights. Not only the health-giving mineral and thermal springs, which gush spontaneously from the mountain sides invite the invalid andt he weary, but in all the rest of these charms of nature is found a panacea for the ills and cares of body and mind diseased.

To enable persons to reach these favored localities without unnecessary expenditure of time or money, the Union Pacific has put in effect very low rates and splendid train service, three trains leaving Missouri River daily for Denver, one of which is "The Colorado Special," which is the finest train in the West. Accommodations are provided for all classes of passengers, the equipment including free reclining chair cars, dining cars, buffet, smoking cars, drawing room sleepers and day coaches.
