WHEN LOVE HER HOME NO LONGER CHILDLESS

CHAPTER II "The Cherub."

"How nice of Mr. Bradstone to arrange this picnic, Olive," said her aunt, when Mr. Sparrow had sorrowfully taken his departure. "He is always so kind and thoughtful in planning these little parties. Of course you will go, dear."

"I don't know," said Olivia, absently.

She was standing by the window, looking down on the chimneys of The Dell, as her father had done, and thinking of the strange character who had become owner of the cottage.

"You don't know! My dear Olivia, what a strange reply. Why shouldn't you go?"

"Why should I?" said Olivia, without turning her head.

Miss Amelia sniffed, and uttered the little cough which always served as a prelude to the lectures which she frequently felt it "her duty" to deliver to her niece.

"Now, my dear Olivia, I do hope that you will not permit yourself to—disappoint our excellent young friend. It is evident that he has got up this little affair in your honor, and it would surely be ungracious to disappoint him. Ungraciousness, if I may coin a word, in a lady is, my dear Olivia, unpardonable. Often and often have I, at great inconvenience, accepted an invitation rather than appear ungracious. And I do hope—"

"Is there any tea left, auntie?" broke in Olivia. "You forget n't when you are surrounded by your admirers."

Miss Amelia bridled, then smiled, and stammered:

"My dear Olivia, how can you be so ridiculous! My admirers! I'm sure Mr. Sparrow is old enough to be my grandfather"—in which case poor Mr. Sparrow must have been a modern Methuselah—"and as to Mr. Bradstone, it is not me whom he admires."

"No sugar, thanks," said Olivia, cutting in abruptly.

"Not! Any one with half an eye could see who it is that he admires, and whose society he seeks. And I must say, my dear Olivia, while I am on the subject, that for a young girl, scarcely out of her teens, your conduct is too cold."

"This tea is cold," said Olivia, disregarding the interruption.

"Mr. Bartley Bradstone is a young man worthy of every respect."

"It is a pity his horse doesn't share your opinion, auntie," said Olivia, looking through the window. "It doesn't appear to respect him in the least. Some of these days it will carry its disrespect so far as to throw him off."

"Mr. Bradstone may not be a jockey. I repeat, he may not be a jockey; but all the same, he is a young man worth due consideration. Olivia, do you forget that he is a millionaire—a millionaire!"

"Neither I nor he forgets it," said Olivia, succinctly.

"Wealth—wealth, my dear Olivia, has its responsibilities and its—its—"

Operation not Necessary after Taking the Great Medicine for Women.

Miller's Falls, Mass.—"Doctors said I had displacement very badly and I would have to have an operation. I had a soreness in both sides and a pulling sensation in my right side. I could not do much work the pain was so bad. I was also troubled with irregularity and other weaknesses. My blood was poor. We had been married four years and had no children.

After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I became well and strong and was saved from the operation. We are now the parents of a big baby girl and I praise your remedies to others and give you permission to publish my letter."

Mrs. JOSEPH GUILBAULT, JR., Bridge Street, Miller's Falls, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is famous for restoring women to normal health and strength. When this is done wives no longer despair of having children.

A woman should be reluctant to submit to a surgical operation until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. If you have a case that needs special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

may say its claims to our respect."

"Yes, I know," said Olivia. "No one accuses you of forgetting what is due to it, auntie."

"No, my dear. I can lay my hand upon my heart—"

But Olivia had already stepped through the window, and what Miss Amelia would do or say when she laid her hand upon her heart, must remain a mystery.

Olivia paused a moment, looking out upon the view which stretched over an exquisite panorama of wooded vales, and Meadows all bedight With buttercups and daisies, eyes' delight.

Then she wandered down the broad garden path, and, with the same air of dreamy self-communion, passed over by the lodge gate into the road. Two dogs, which had been lying asleep on the lawn, had sprung up at the sound of her light footstep, and followed her, barking and yapping in frantic delight.

As she stopped to speak to and pet them, there came out from behind the lodge a small pony-cart, in which was seated a young girl. She was about seventeen, with a pretty, innocent face, from which a pair of soft, brown eyes looked out appealingly. It was the lodge-keeper's daughter. She colored, with timid pleasure at the sight of Olivia, and pulled up the pony, who resented the operation, and made the courtesy she attempted an impossibility.

"Why, Bessie!" said Olivia, going up to the side of the cart. "Are you going for a drive?"

"Yes, miss," replied the girl, with respectful affection alike in her eyes and in her voice. "I am going to Wainford for father."

"To Wainford?" said Olivia. "I am almost tempted to go with you."

"Oh, Miss Olivia," murmured the girl, with a rapturous delight, "if you would!"

Olivia shook her head laughingly. "I'm afraid I mustn't, Bessie. Wainford is too far; I should be late for dinner, and the squire would never forgive either of us. Never mind," she added, consolingly, as Bessie's face fell from the dizzy heights of eagerness to the uttermost depths of disappointment; "I will go some other time. I have often wanted to have a ride with you behind that famous pony. What a restless little monkey it is! Take care of him, Bessie! But I suppose you understand each other?"

"Oh, yes, Miss Olivia!" said Bessie. "And you won't come?" with a sigh. "Well! Is there anything I can do for you, miss? Anything I can bring you?"

Olivia was about to shake her head, when, divining that the girl would be somewhat consoled for her disappointment if she had some errand to perform, she said:

"Oh, yes, Bessie! Will you bring me a yard of ribbon to match this on my hat?"

"Yes, miss," said Bessie, brightening up. "To match exactly?"

"Oh, near will do," said Olivia. "Stay!" And taking off her hat, she clipped a piece of ribbon off a bow.

"There, as near as you can get it. I hope you will have a pleasant drive, and remember I am coming with you some day—soon."

"Oh, do, Miss!" Bessie exclaimed, or rather jerked out, for the pony, having completely exhausted its patience, declined to wait any longer over such trifles, and dashed off; and Olivia stood watching Bessie's frantic efforts to reduce the gallop to a trot, until the pony and its pretty, innocent-faced mistress were lost in a bend of the road.

Then, all unconsciously, though she was thinking of Mr. Sparrow's account of the new owner of The Dell, Olivia wandered in that direction, and it was almost with a start that she found herself within a few yards of the gate, through which, according to Mr. Sparrow, no female would be allowed to pass.

The Dell was one of those picturesque cottages which all of us have, at some time or other in our lives, had a hankering after. "It stood in a hollow, shaded by some beautiful trees, and in a garden which was literally ablaze with crocuses and hyacinths, and the spring flowers which Wordsworth—Lord Beaconsfield—so dearly loved. The roof was of thatch, the windows diamond-paned, and the whole place as choice a specimen of a country cottage as ever shone on painter's canvass."

Olivia glanced at it for a moment, then turned aside to follow a lane, opposite the gate, when a voice called in accents of delighted greeting:

"Miss Vanley! Olivia!" and a young fellow sprang over a stile and ran toward her.

He was young, not more than twenty, with bright blue eyes, and hair—too short to allow it to curl—a bright golden yellow. When he smiled—as he was doing now—his whole face, eyes, lips, and even his slight yellow mustache, seemed to smile, and his voice rang out soft and musical almost as a girl's. This was Viscount Granville, the Earl of Cardiel's son and heir, though Bertie and the Cherub were his usual appellations, bestowed on him by a vast circle of friends and admirers of both sexes, who did their level best to spoil one of the sweetest natures which Heaven had ever bestowed upon a lad.

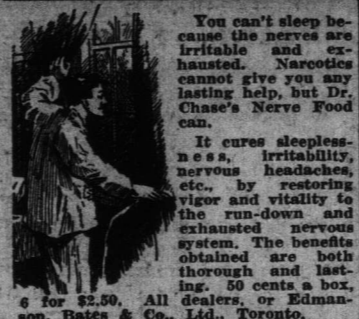

Olivia went to meet him with a smile which Mr. Bartley Bradstone would have given a thousand pounds to have called up.

"Why, Bertie!" she exclaimed. "I'm the luckiest beggar in the world," he said, laughingly, as he wrung her hand in his own ridiculously small one. "Do you know I was going up to the Grange; but I just stepped into the wood to see if I could find an anemone or two—I know you like them—and I saw the dogs. Now, fancy my meeting you, and having you all to myself to walk up to the Grange with! But perhaps you weren't going back? If not, let me come with you, will you?"

"I'm not going anywhere in particular," said Olivia, still smiling at the fat, girlishly boyish face. "I'll go back. Why, what a time it is since I saw you!"

"Isn't it! Isn't it!" he responded, letting go her hand reluctantly, and taking his hat off his forehead, which was the only part of his face un-

"I am so glad to come back! Yes, two years; seems like twenty. Have I got very gray? Now, be candid, Olivia—I mean Miss Vanley," he corrected himself, with a blush.

"Why Miss Vanley?" said Olivia, blushing too, but looking at him with her frank eyes in a sisterly way that was inexpressibly sweet.

"Well," he said, raising his eyes to her face, "you—you have altered so, you know."

"Is that a polite way of informing me that I am gray?" said Olivia, archly.

"You—you have grown such a woman," he said, his blue eyes all aglow with admiring wonder. "You were quite a girl when I left; at least, I seem to remember. And now—the pause was as significant as any verbal finale could be—I suppose I must mind my manners, and call you Miss Vanley."

"Better keep to the old name," said Olivia. "Why, it seems only the other day we used to play cricket together."

"Yes," he said, wistfully. "I suppose you'd rather die than play now."

"Much rather," she said, laughing. "And, besides, look at my long dress! But tell me all about yourself and where you have been and what you've seen."

"All," he said, with a smile. "All right; but perhaps we'd better sit down, for it will take some time; say three weeks. Oh, we had an awfully high old time! Been everywhere. And everybody and everything were so jolly, don't you know. But I'm very glad to get back to the governor and—" he glanced up shyly at the lovely face so intent upon and absorbed in him—"and all of you. I wanted to come up last night after dinner, but my father didn't seem to care about my leaving him for an hour or two. And you are all well? You can't tell how jolly it is to come back to the old place. It's all just the same. No, it isn't, by the way. What on earth is that big red place, like an asylum gone aesthetically mad, on the hill?"

THE FIGHT FOR POZIERES LAST ED ELEVEN DAYS.

PARIS, July 28.—The capture of Pozieres from the Germans puts the British in complete possession of this line in the Somme region. The fight for Pozieres lasted eleven days from July 14th to 25th. The place was defended by 200 Chinese guns, of which all but 30 were destroyed or put out of action by British artillery. A species of machine gun in the centre of the village was destroyed by a company of Bavarian infantry. These troops resisted for twelve hours. At the end of that time only four men were found in the dump. Close by, a heap of bodies remained unburied. The defenders of the village were mostly a Bavarian battalion, who were decimated as they crossed 300 yards between the village and cemetery, where they made the last unsuccessful stand.

ITALIAN AIR CRAFT BOMBED IN EAST AFRICA.

NEW YORK, July 28.—A cable from the Rome Journal says that an official announcement was made today that Italian aircraft yesterday bombed Durazzo, Albania, across the Adriatic. The planes dropped bombs on the Aquila, an aero-hangar and landing station, then returning safely to their base.

LONDON, July 28.—An official statement of the progress in the British campaign in East Africa was given out to-night. Field Marshal Northey reports on the 24th that he drove the main German southern detachment of the enemy from strongly organized positions astride the new Langenburg-Isere road to Mahabara. After counter-attacks, the enemy retired hurriedly in the direction of Israel, abandoning 3 1/2 inch howitzers and many machine guns. Among the number, German Europeans captured previously was Dr. Stir, late Governor of the New Langensuburgen. Stir has since died of wounds. The majority of the surviving members of the crew of the German cruiser Koeningberg form part of the German forces.

NEW YORK, July 28.—A despatch from Switzerland and the Journal, says that carefully sifted information to-day shows that the Germans have about 900,000 men and the Austrians about 800,000 men, of whom, they say, the latter has already lost some 500,000. The total Russian forces are the orders of General Brusiloff, General Kuropatkin, equals 137 divisions of infantry, and 35 divis-

NEW YORK, July 27. A cable from the Rome Journal says that an official announcement was made to-day that Italian air craft yesterday bombed Durazzo in Al- bania, across the Adriatic. The planes dropped bombs on the Austri- an aero-barracks and landing stages, then returning safely to their base.

IN EAST AFRICA.

LONDON, July 27. An official statement of the progress in the British campaign in East Africa, was given out to-night. Brig- adier General Northey reports on July 24th that he drove the main German southern detachment of the enemy from strongly organized positions astride the new Langenburg-Itandi road to Mahlagali. After counter- attacks, the enemy retired hurriedly in the direction of Itandi, abandon- ing 4 1/2 machine guns and two ma- chine guns. Among the number of German Europeans captured pre- viously was Dr. Stir, late Governor of the New Langenburg district. Dr. Stir has since died of wounds. The majority of the surviving members of the crew of the German cruiser Koenigsberg form part of the German forces.

RUSSIAN ARMY.

NEW YORK, July 27. A dispatch from Switzerland to the Journal, says that carefully sifted in- formation to-day shows that the Ger- mans have on the eastern front about 900,000 men and the Austrians about 800,000 men, of whom, they said the latter has already lost some 300,000. The total Russian forces under the orders of General Brusiloff, and General Kuropatkin, equals 137 di- visions of infantry, and 36 divisions of cavalry, or 2,740,000 bayonets, and 162,000 sabres, or a total of 2,902,000 men. General Brussiloff's army alone equals 1,750,000 men.

UNKNOWN CRAFT PASS SANDY HOOK.

SANDY HOOK, July 27. A craft, which appeared to be a submarine, which observers believed might be the German underwater merchantman Brammo, passed Sandy Hook at 9.03 o'clock to-night.

ATTACH MUNITIONS.

DAYTON, Ohio, July 27. Thousands of dollars worth of am- munition, in process of manufacture for European nations, in the Miami valley factories, are tied up to-day by attachment proceedings instituted in the local county courts by the Brownell Company and Blast Iron Works Company, both of this city, against the Canadian Car Foundry Co. and its New York Agency. The sum of $722,974 is claimed by the plain- tiffs on the ground of breach of con- tract.

WILSON LINE STEAMER CAPTURED.

LONDON, July 27. The Wilson Line steamer Eskimo, 3,326 tons, has been captured by a German auxiliary cruiser, according to Reuters's Christiansand correspon- dent. The seizure, says the correspon- dent, occurred in Norwegian territorial waters, according to the crew of a Norwegian ship, while the Ger- mans claim the vessel was five miles from the land.

STILL QUARRELLING.

TURKS MUTINY.

NEW YORK, July 27. The Journal has the following from Athens. Reports received here to-day from Smyrna state that a Tur- kish regiment mutinied at Sevelkeny, and took refuge in the forest of Mit- Sivilon. Turkish forces pursued the mutineers and set fire to the forest. Many mutineers were burned to death.

RUSSIANS' GREAT ADVANCE.

PETROGRAD, July 27. Russian troops covered a hundred miles of their advance on Erzingan within a week. The capture of the city means virtual completion of the Russian occupation of Turkish Ar- menia, gives Russia the benefit of an extremely fertile valley, and opens an easy road of communication from Trebizond to the western and south- erly Caucasian armies. The Russians have now captured Trebizond, Bal- burt, Gumist, Kaneh, and re-occupied Mamakhatur.

DENIES TURKISH REPORT.

LONDON, July 27. A British official statement was is- sued to-day denying the Turkish official report of July 26th that British cavalry forces in the vicinity of the Suez Canal had been dispersed. The statement follows: "The Command- er-in-Chief in Egypt reports, it is stated by German wireless that our cavalry has been driven back at Roman and Katia. Our cavalry is in occupation of Katia and nowhere has been driven back. Complete superiority over the enemy has been established by it, both in pursuing, in reconnaissance and in covering in his covering parties at will. The enemy had not even ven- tured to press any reconnaissance in our direction. Turkish forces at Oghratina did not advance from that place and no Turk has been near Ro- man."

NO REPORT OF NAVAL ACTION.

LONDON, July 27. (Official.) The British Admiralty states to-day that they had no report of a new naval action in Scandinavian waters, and had received nothing in any way confirming the unofficial reports of naval activity in that region.

AMERICAN STEAMER TOTAL WRECK.

LONDON, July 27. The American steamer Carolyne, which went ashore on Kolia Peninsula on June 18th, while taking a cargo of automobile trucks and general mer- chandise from New York to Archangel in Russia, is a hopeless wreck. The cargo is being salvaged.

REPORT DENIED.

WASHINGTON, July 27. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British Am- bassador, informed Acting Secretary of State Polk, to-day, that he had received a message from the command- ing officer of the British squadron on the Atlantic coast, denying that a British warship had entered Ches- apeake Bay, as reported by the com- mander of the battleship Louisiana.

DANISH STEAMER SEIZED.

LONDON, July 27. The Danish steamer Normandiet has been seized by a German torpedo boat, says a Copenhagen despatch to Lloyd's. The vessel was bound from Skelleftea, Sweden, for La Pallice, France, with a cargo of wood pulp.

UNKNOWN CRAFT PASS SANDY HOOK.

The seizure, says the correspon- dent, occurred in Norwegian territorial waters, according to the crew of a Norwegian ship, while the Ger- mans claim the vessel was five miles from the land.

STILL QUARRELLING.

LONDON, July 27. Laurence Ginnell, the Nationalist, whose opposition to the Government has grown more and more aggressive since the Irish insurrection. Last Bas- ter and wise questions to Cabinet Ministers make the most serious charges against the Government, caused a short suspension of the sit- ting of the Commons to-day, owing to his refusal to withdraw when ordered to do so by the Speaker of the House. Ginnell refused to budge when ap- peached by the Sergeant at Arms, who was ordered to remove him. Not until the Sergeant at Arms summoned assistance, and his brother With- ington advised him to do so, did he obey the command of the Speaker. The Nationalist member asked Her- bert Samuel, Secretary for Home Af- fairs, whether the military authorities at the time of the insurrection in Dublin, had the sanction of the Government for bombing the headquarters of the Cumannmhan nurses, cut- ting the red crosses of their dresses, and imprisoning them as criminals. The Home Secretary denied all the allegations, whereupon Ginnell said, that "owing to the insolent reply of the Minister," he got no further, as there were loud cheers of order. He withdrew the word insolent, but in- sisted upon the question, whereupon the Speaker named him to the House. In accordance with practice, Premier Asquith moved that Ginnell be sus- pended. Ginnell alone voted against the motion.

THE IRISH NEGOTIATIONS.

LONDON, July 27. In accordance with Premier As- quith's promise, the official paper giving the heads of the agreement, arrived at recently between Lloyd George and the Irish leaders in the Irish negotiations, was issued to- night. It bears out the contention made in the debate in the Commons, by John Redmond, with regard to the retention of Irish members in the Imperial Parliament, inasmuch as clause four merely says: "Irish representation in the Imperial Parliament shall remain unaltered, namely, 103; and says nothing concerning any substan- tial reduction in their number." As regards the duration of the new bill, the official paper confirms Premier Asquith's statement of July 10, namely, that if Parliament had not by two months after the war, made further permanent provision for the Government of Ireland, then the duration of the operation of the bill shall be extended by Order in Council for such time as may be necessary to make such provision. The clause re- ferring to the exclusion of the Ulster counties merely defines the excluded counties, but says nothing as to whether their exclusion is to be permanent. An interest clause in the agreement, not previously mentioned, gives the Lord Lieut. of Ireland power to summon conferences between members of the constituencies in the excluded area and members for the rest of Ireland, in order to discuss the terms of the bill. The only new feature in the Irish agree- ment is that the position of the hop- pers, largely signed up by the Commons asking for the renewal of negotiations for an Irish compromise on the lines suggested by John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson.

At the City Hall.

Mayor Gosling presided at the regular weekly meeting of the Municipal Council last night. The Mayor re- ferring to the exclusion of the Ulster counties merely defines the excluded counties, but says nothing as to whether their exclusion is to be permanent. An interest clause in the agreement, not previously mentioned, gives the Lord Lieut. of Ireland power to summon conferences between members of the constituencies in the excluded area and members for the rest of Ireland, in order to discuss the terms of the bill. The only new feature in the Irish agree- ment is that the position of the hop- pers, largely signed up by the Commons asking for the renewal of negotiations for an Irish compromise on the lines suggested by John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson.

Every Wage Earner Should Answer Question For Himself.

WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD FOR YOU IF HEALTH GIVES WAY?

In dollars and cents, what is the worth of the brawn of your arm; what is the value of the staying power that permits continuous labor—what are they worth to you?

Suppose you did something so fool- ish as to reduce your strength, vitality or judgment one half, and it were impossible to get them back—how much would you pay to regain the lost portion?

When you let yourself run down you reduce your chances for success in life—if sloppiness comes your score lower still—should appetite or digestion fail, you are started in the face by physical bankruptcy.

Don't let it go so far, take Ferro- zene. It has cured thousands and it will cure you; it builds up bodily strength, makes muscles like steel, re- places Spring tiredness by energy and new life. Ferrozene rebuilds sick folk because it contains the strength- ening elements that every run-down system requires.

Especially before the hot weather comes, everyone needs a purifying tonic—Ferrozene fills the bill exactly—nothing known that juvenates and uplifts so fast.

At once the appetite improves. You rest well and arise next morning feeling fit and fine.

Headaches disappear, weakness gives way to the vigor that only Ferro- zene can supply. Try it, results are guaranteed, 50c. per box or six for $2.50 at all dealers or by mail to any address if price is remitted to the Caisarhazone Co., Kingsford, Ontario.

Beaumont-Hamel.

The last English mail has fulfilled expectations and brought us much fuller and more definite information of the great action in which our Regiment won such glorious distinction. We now know that the scene of their advance was the little hamlet of Beaumont-Hamel. A glance at the map is sufficient to explain to us why our men were set a task relatively more difficult than at most parts of the line. Beaumont-Hamel is well to the north of Thiepval, and the latter place really represents the northern extremity of the British advance. In other words, it was only to the south of Thiepval that the British were able to advance at all, and it is there practically the whole of the subsequent fighting has taken place. Our men, therefore, were stationed over against one of the most strongly defended parts of the German line. In doing what they did, they achieved, in the words of one observer, the almost impossible. Many in the city have received letters, chiefly from those wounded, describing the different phases and fortunes of the day's battle. They all agree upon the fine performance of the advance, the steady bravery of the men in the face of a fire so intense as to be actually visible. He then graphically recounted his experiences when the irresistible closed in to engage the fort and was struck by shells and finally torpedoed. His simple but realistic words transported his audience in imagination to the engine room of the great ship; they could almost feel the shock of the explosion and experience the sensation when she listed over, all lights extinguished and the water pouring in. His own performance, in descending to the boiler room, accompanied by one faithful sailor, and drawing the fire and otherwise saving the ship from danger of an internal explosion, was modestly told and lightly estimated; but the audience showed by their applause their appreciation of the pluck it must have called for. Still more vivid was his account of the leaving of the ship, the explosion of the shell that wounded him almost mortally, and his sensation as he drifted away clinging to a log of wood. It was to this immersion in the salt water, he said, and its healing effects upon his wounds, that he probably owed his life. He concluded his narrative by a short reference to his stay in hospital and final convalescence, and by paying a warm and sincere tribute to the work of the Red Cross, for which he appealed earnestly for support. He showed several interesting relics of his terrible experiences—the trousers which he wore, perforated in many places by the shell fragments; many of the fragments themselves, extracted from the wounds; and the eye-glasses and case which in all probability saved his life.

The lecture was brief, but full of interest from the opening words. It was clear-cut and sailorlike, most pleasant to listen to. At its conclusion, His Excellency the Governor moved a vote of thanks, eloquently voicing the sentiment of all present in his praise of the brave and modest officer. The vote was carried by acclamation.

The Navy in the Dardanelles.

LIEUT. COMMANDER HOWLEY'S LECTURE.

All who attended at the College Hall last night, and they were a good number, were amply repaid. Commander Howley's lecture was all too brief, but no other fault could be found with it. Coming onto the platform after songs by Mr. Cyril Fox and Mrs. Kings, and a recitation by Mr. Chas. Hutton, which were much enjoyed, the lecturer was received with great applause. He prefaced his address with an explanation that it must necessarily be somewhat egotistic, and an account of his personal experiences; yet his audience would willingly have forgiven his offending more than he did in this respect, so entertaining were the personal touches of his narrative. He first briefly sketched the expedition of his ship, H. M. S. Irresistible, in the opening months of the war. Moving from Sheerness to Weymouth, she was engaged for weeks in the fatiguing work of patrolling the English Channel, from which her crew were glad to earn a respite. When the naval attack upon the Dardanelles was undertaken, the Irresistible was one of the British ships selected to be a unit in the fleet. The Commander's description of the operations there, the bombardment and reduction of the Turkish forts, the perils of mine-trawling, the daring pluck of demolition parties and many other incidents of a like nature, was extremely clear and vivid, and was lit up every now and then with light touches of humour which delighted his hearers.

He then graphically recounted his experiences when the Irresistible closed in to engage the fort and was struck by shells and finally torpedoed. His simple but realistic words transported his audience in imagination to the engine room of the great ship; they could almost feel the shock of the explosion and experience the sensation when she listed over, all lights extinguished and the water pouring in. His own performance, in descending to the boiler room, accompanied by one faithful sailor, and drawing the fire and otherwise saving the ship from danger of an internal explosion, was modestly told and lightly estimated; but the audience showed by their applause their appreciation of the pluck it must have called for. Still more vivid was his account of the leaving of the ship, the explosion of the shell that wounded him almost mortally, and his sensation as he drifted away clinging to a log of wood. It was to this immersion in the salt water, he said, and its healing effects upon his wounds, that he probably owed his life. He concluded his narrative by a short reference to his stay in hospital and final convalescence, and by paying a warm and sincere tribute to the work of the Red Cross, for which he appealed earnestly for support. He showed several interesting relics of his terrible experiences—the trousers which he wore, perforated in many places by the shell fragments; many of the fragments themselves, extracted from the wounds; and the eye-glasses and case which in all probability saved his life.

The Dash of the Newfoundlanders.

No Thoughts But to Get Through.

How the gallant Newfoundlanders charged the German trenches during Saturday, was told yesterday by an eye-witness who arrived in London. The way for them was paved by various British regiments, who swept through the first and second lines after a week of terrific bombardment. Then the Newfoundlanders waited for the order to advance, and when it came moved forward in a hall of German fire. The dash was as on parade. Before the day of attack the division was paraded and the general addressed them, telling them of the great assault that was to come, the odds they had to meet, and the issues that hung upon the success of the advance. The men were in high feather and threw fresh zest into the final preparations.

They were further heartened by a highly successful raid on the German trenches by six of their number under two officers. The first night this was tried they partially succeeded in cutting the German entanglements. The next night they repeated the raid, and careful observation showed that the Germans were ready for them and had fixed machine guns to sweep the paths that had been broken through the barbed wire. But our men were soft-footed and swift. Before the machine guns could get into action they were sweeping down upon the gunners with bombs. Others leaped into the German trench and some stationed themselves so as to cover the entrances to dug-outs, killing the Germans as they emerged. At one point a machine gun threatened to do some damage, but into that came a private named Phillips with a bayonet. "That was the last I saw of him," said one of his comrades, "but that machine gun spoke no more." The Newfoundlanders stayed until their work was accomplished and then came home in triumph, with many souvenirs.

"You Just Go Forward." At 7.30 a.m. on Saturday they moved up to the work they had prepared for during the previous fortnight. As each section received its time to advance there was a noticeable increase of cheerfulness, but the sergeant admitted that the half-hour or so of waiting before the order came to advance was a hard time to spend. "Men-at-arms" about and chatted. The minutes were timed off and sergeants could be heard saying, "Twenty minutes." "Fifteen." "Ten." "Five." Then the officers gathered the men together, the leading men swung up over the parapet, and with sloped rifles marched with even greater slowness than usual up the slight elevation that lay between their trench and those of the Germans.

It was curiously void of any feeling except a determination to get through, "and I believe all the boys were the same. The roar of the British artillery seemed but a murmur in that rush, and though the German bullets were sweeping the tops of the grass so completely as to give an impression of a heavy wind, nobody seemed to care. I now recall that in civil life when I saw an accident I felt a horror of it, but in that attack I thought no more of falling men than of flicking the ash off a cigarette." "How does it feel to be in a charge?" "It feels like nothing at all—'you just go forward.'" Dying Man's Order. "Captain R—, leading his men, was hit by a bullet in the hand. He sat down to bind it up, but seeing a disposition on the part of some of the men to go back he cried 'Go on with it, boys! I'll be with you in a minute.' Then he calmly stepped back to a dressing station, had his bandage fixed, and in a very short time came doubling back, urging on the men 'I'll again be with another wounded.'"
So it proceeded, British pluck paying the price of progress all the way over the first German line and into the fire hurricane that lay beyond. "I was going by the side of my corporal," said a scout who had been turned to me and said, "if I go down, you take charge and lead straight ahead." No sooner had he said, so than a bullet hit him square in the breast and he fell into my arms, but his last gasp was, "Push on with it! We went on till we got towards the barbed wire. Then I fell and I rolled into the nearest shell-hole right on top of two officers already wounded and lying there."

Right along the line the same grim tale was told. Not a man faltered. London Daily Mail, July 8.

Old Memories.

My hair to-day is tinged with grey. My steps go slowly now. My shoulders show a bend And here my wrinkles meet my brow. But yet I have a fondness For the faces and the ways Which once I loved in boyhood, In the good old days of long ago. How oft with chums I gaily went O'Brien's farm to see, Bird-nesting there all day we spent, And climbed the apple tree. No joys like those since then I've known. Though many friends I've met, Those boyhood scenes, like pleasant dreams, They are clinging round me yet. To Rennie's River oft we went, And watched its pebbly waters, As they rolled down from "Long Pond." And when the sun's rays shone serene In the evenings after school, Near Pleasantville I have a swim In the old "three corner pond." But many ups and downs since then, Have come across my path, Since first we went to Coesey's field To play with ball and bat. And many in a foreign land, Since then have gone to toil, And many more are cold in death, Beneath their native shore. So as I muse on boyhood shows My heart is stirred within, And for the time I hide myself Far from the city's din. Beside fair Rennie's River side, I sit me down and sigh, I say, For the boys I knew, the friends so true, In the good old days gone by. JAMES MURPHY, June 24th, 1916.

Citizens' Committee Meet.

The Citizens' Committee held their regular meeting last night, Chairman Soper presiding, and over twenty members being present.

A discussion took place causing much diversity of opinion, over the fact that no information had been received in answer to a communication sent the Municipal Council, June 2nd, asking for a statement of houses and names of streets not connected with water and sewerage.

Only one reply had been received from the absent members who were written to two weeks ago. While the Committee has no power to dismiss any member, surely the absent ones are gifted with enough public spirit to attend the meetings and work in the interest of their city or send their resignation to the Secretary.

Mr. Alex Mews reported on the salt nuisance and quoted the opinion of veterinary surgeons and municipal governments in Canada and the United States where salt is prohibited from being used on the streets.

Mr. Peel stated that salt on Water Street owing to its damaging effect on rubber footwear increased the sale of those articles one hundred per cent. Some small bills for stationery and advertising were ordered to be sent to the Colonial Secretary for payment.

Section 92, Sub-Section C, of the Municipal Bill calling for the appointment of arbitrators brought forth considerable discussion. Mr. Kelly and others favoured the Mayor being one of the arbitrators. The following amendment was proposed by Mr. H. E. Cowan and seconded by Mr. James J. Spratt and carried by vote, viz.—

"That the Council appoint one arbitrator not a member of the Council; the owner of the land in question a second, and in case of their disagreeing on the third party, a Judge of the Supreme Court to act. In case the land owner refuse to appoint an arbitrator, he will be chosen by the Supreme Court."

The meeting closed at 10:20 o'clock.

Tommy Gets More Nfld. Socks.

The following letter was received by Miss Heater, 52 Brazil's Square, a few days ago in acknowledgment of a pair of gray socks. A similar letter was published in the Telegram on Wednesday, to Mrs. Cleary, Bay Roberts, which shows that Tommy is well supplied with Newfoundland socks.

June 29th, 1916.

Dear Miss Heater,—I am the lucky boy who has just received your socks today, which I must thank you for very much indeed. Fancy what a long time they have been coming, but never mind, better late than never, and I can assure you they are quite a boon to us boys out here. If you would care to acknowledge my letter, I should be most pleased to hear from you.

Yours sincerely,

TO-DAY'S Messages.

11.00 A.M.

EFFECT OF RUSSIAN SUCCESSSES.

LONDON, To-day.—Since the completion of the capture of Pozieres, the British front in France is mainly of artillery actions and testing encounters at various points of the German line. A comparative lull and hot day weather is assumed to have given the Germans an opportunity to bring up further troops and guns with renewed attempts to recapture Pozieres, where, according to an unofficial report, the British troops have further consolidated their positions. To-night's official report shows that there has been hand-fighting all day, with some fluctuating fortune, but that in the end the British improved their positions northeast of Pozieres and in the vicinity of Longueval and Delville Wood. Similarly from the eastern front there is much comment in European capitals on the effect which the loss of the last great Turkish force in Armenia, from which province the Turks are said to be fleeing owing to the exhaustion of their ammunition supplies, is likely to have in Constantinople; also as to the influence which this defeat, conjoined with the success of the Russians towards Brody, the road to Lemberg, will have in Greece and Rumania. The Associated Press correspondent at Athens learns there is no longer any likelihood of an attack upon the Allied forces at Salonika. The Russian War Minister, according to an interview, desires to dispel the illusion that the war has ended in the autumn. He admits that German technique is so high that Germany can still offer a long resistance.

HARD FIGHTING IN WEST.
LONDON, To-day.—An official to-night reads: To-day there has been hand-fighting northeast of Pozieres and in the vicinity of Longueval and Delville Wood, north of the line of Pozieres, Bazentin and Lepetit we succeeded last night in capturing about 200 yards of important enemy trenches, which hitherto had successfully resisted all our attacks. This morning, after an intense artillery fire, the enemy succeeded in regaining possession of the whole trench, but our troops immediately re-attacked and have re-gained footing in the southern end. On our right flank, after hard fighting, we have driven the enemy from the east and northeast of Delville Wood. Heavy fighting still continues in this vicinity, including Longueval, where we regained a portion of the northern part of the village. About one on Wednesday morning a small enemy party entered our trenches immediately west of Ypres on the Pilken road, but were immediately driven out; further south after artillery preparation, a party of British troops raided the enemy's lines. The Germans were encountered in front of their own wire and sustained a loss of some 30 killed. The British Infantry then fought their way into the trenches in which we found many Germans killed by our bombardment. Some good work was accomplished by the Royal Flying Corps on Wednesday in locating enemy batteries and newly constructed defenses. Owing to clouds and mist our machines had to fly low; two are missing.

RUSSIAN BOOTY.
PETROGRAD, To-day.—An official this evening reads: On the western front, during battle between July 16 and 25th, General Sakharoff's troops captured 34 German and Austrian (officers?), 35 cannon and 71 machine guns. On the Caucasus front at Supker we took 5,000 hand grenades, one thousand shells and five hundred cassettes of cartridges. At Erzingan we captured a depot of rifles, revolvers, bayonets and artillery munitions, together with one thousand pounds of petrol and benzine. The town of Erzingan was not damaged.

KAISER FINDS SITUATION SERIOUS.
LONDON, To-day.—The Geneva, Switzerland, correspondent to the Daily Express writes, "I learn from Innsbruck that the Austro-Hungarian staff appeals several times during July to German headquarters for assistance against the Russians in Galicia. Small numbers of reinforcements were sent with the statement that it was impossible to send troops during the strong Anglo-French offensive on the Somme. Then the Austrian help appealed directly to the Kaiser, who replied: 'When we have beaten the English we shall reconsider the matter, I cannot spare troops at present, as the situation is serious.'"

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

The Case of the Human Mole.

(By John Laurence.)

Johann Bobbe—or the Human Mole, as he became known throughout the world when his amazing and repulsive crimes came to light—was a thin, weak-looking man, but with hands and arms abnormally developed and with thick and heavy finger-nails which resembled claws more than anything else.

With these unnatural claws he dug the tunnels in which he slew his victims. Out of forty years of his life, twenty-three had been spent in prison and he more than once escaped by burrowing his way to freedom.

He was discovered trying to make an escape from Sonnenburg gaol in Germany, and he was seen to use his head for breaking down the earth at intervals, as well as his hands. The mole also uses its head. Like a mole, too, Bobbe had a very thick, short neck, and even more like a mole Bobbe had practically no outer ears.

The Human Mole, too, had extremely small, deep-set eyes like his four-legged rival. These eyes were shaded by very heavy eyebrows which protected them. He often said, indeed, that he could burrow into hard or soft ground without any dirt ever getting into his eyes.

Intended to Kill Rich Customers.

He was only seventeen when he began his extraordinary career of crime, which varied from burglary to murder, from robbery with violence to arson. His first step in his long career of crime was the robbery of the till of his first employer, for which he duly went to prison.

In the spring of 1899, when Johann Bobbe had just turned thirty, he opened a tobacco shop in Berlin with a capital of about £120 which his wife had given him. This wife, by the way, had married him in the hope of reforming him, though she knew that he had recently come out of prison.

Beneath the tobacco shop was a cellar in which he constructed a fiendish man-trap. He first of all made a trap-door in the floor of his shop, a trap-door which could be opened by means of a bolt behind the counter of the shop. Right beneath, in the cellar, he dug a pit, and at the bottom fixed a number of swords.

The idea of the murderer was to kill rich customers, or bank messengers and other officials likely to be carrying large sums of money, by dropping them through the trap-door on to the swords.

That this savage brute could be more certain of victims he offered cigars at a cheaper rate to men in uniform, but "luck" was against him. No one carrying money ever came alone into the shop, so he decided that other and surer means must be taken.

How the Plot Failed.

Close to the tobacco shop was a post office. In Germany sums of money are sent from one person to another through the post office officials in this way. You have a friend to whom you want to send a sovereign. You hand in the sovereign at a post office, and the postman where your friend lives gives him a sovereign in cash, obtaining a receipt for it. It often happens, therefore, that a postman has a considerable amount in cash on him when he starts his rounds.

Bobbe knew this and posted to himself a few shillings so that the postman would bring it the following morning between eight and nine. The murderer's shop was one of the first on the round, and he calculated that the postman would be carrying quite a large sum of money.

In order to pay this money to Bobbe the postman would have actually to stand on the fatal trap-door while the murderer was signing the receipt.

Fortunately the ingenious yet terrible plan was carried out, for, as luck would have it, several other customers were in the shop when the postman arrived. A number of times the same plan was tried, but each time (due to the shape of other customers) came into the shop and saved the unsuspecting post office official.

As the days slipped by bankruptcy stared Bobbe in the face, for he had been too generous with his cheap tobacco and cigars in his efforts to attract victims. To get the money he wanted he filled the pit in the cellar with inflammable materials, locked his wife in her bedroom, and set the shop on fire. Unfortunately for him the fire brigade were on the spot quickly enough to rescue the imprisoned woman, and the dreadful man-trap was discovered.

In Germany, as in the United States, the police have their own method of forcing a prisoner to confess. Bobbe was forced not only to reveal the dreadful object of the pit in the cellar, but confessed also that there was a tunnel beneath the shop. This tunnel was thirty-five feet long and Bobbe said that he dug it for two reasons—one to bury his prospective victims, the other to hide stolen property, for the Human Mole was a "fence" in his spare time.

Deserted His Wife.

For the attempted murder of his wife he got eight years. We next hear of him early in 1901, when, having deserted his wife, he was living with a widow named Stager and her two children in Mariendorf, one of the outlying suburbs of Berlin. Bobbe and the widow and children lived in part of a farm house occupied by a man and his wife named Hemmling.

The farmer could neither read nor write, and Bobbe persuaded him to let him make a copy of the deed of his farm and house for better safe-keeping. Instead of returning the deed, however, he gave Hemmling the copy, keeping the original.

One afternoon the farmer was seen running down the village street, blood streaming from his head. The local policeman, who was promptly on the spot, took him to the nearest doctor. There the victim said that Bobbe had shot him when he went to the latter's room. A search of the farmhouse revealed one of the most amazingly planned crimes, and further inquiries by the police showed that Bobbe was one of the most callous and cunning of modern murderers.

In front of the stove in Bobbe's room was found a big iron plate fast in the floor, similar to the trap-door he had used in the tobacconist's shop several years before. This plate moved on hinges and the searchers opened it.

An Inhuman Monster.

The plate was really the mouth of a pit five feet deep. On the top lay the bodies of the youngest and eldest sons of Frau Stager, and the body of Frau Hemmling. At the bottom of the pit was a German rifle bayonet, fixed upright in the ground. With this bayonet the unhappy farmer's wife had been killed when this inhuman monster had thrown her there. The other two childish victims had been suffocated in this ghastly chamber of death. Luckily for Frau Stager she had gone that day to Berlin and so escaped the fate of her children.

Bobbe closed up the trap-door after his frightful deed, and sat down to wait the coming of Hemmling, who would, he knew, drop in to inquire for Frau Hemmling, who sometimes visited Bobbe's supposed wife. When he arrived Bobbe invited him to have coffee.

While he was drinking it, Bobbe suddenly cried out: "Look at the ceiling; it's raining through!"

The Underground Tunnel.

As Hemmling looked up the murderer twice fired at him, one bullet grazing the back of his head. The frightened man turned to run, but before he could reach the door he received another bullet in his side. Luckily for him, however, he managed to get into the village street before Bobbe could stop him.

When the murder pit came to be examined it was found that it contained in a tunnel which had taken Bobbe three months in his spare time to dig with his claws, for the farmer was certain that the murderer had never used any of the spades on the farm. The tunnel, too, showed no signs whatever of being dug out with either spade or a fork.

Bobbe was destined never to face the "headsmen's" axe—they behead murderers in Germany. When the police arrested him he wratched himself free, and before anyone could stop him shot himself with the revolver he carried.

A great many Directory fashions are to be seen this fall, especially in neckwear.

One of the Finest Charges

The following is an extract from a letter written by Mr. E. R. Morris, of the firm of Whitehead, Morris & Co., London, to Sir George LeMessurier. It will help to comfort any whose sons or other relatives are now in hospital. "I personally visited about 80 of our men in the B wards and found no serious case, all bullet wounds, and the men cheerful. I had 7 visitors at the Hospital yesterday and they met me at the entrance Hall after visiting and they all reported light wounds. I shall be down again shortly and will visit Mr. LeMessurier personally and report to you by letter. There is no need for me to draw on you for money—every comfort is sent down and I can assure you everyone is thoroughly looked after. Lady Morris was at the Hospital last Wednesday, and yesterday both Sir Edward and Lady Morris. We here are all very sad at the news of so many families mourning the loss of their dear ones. The Newfoundland men were fine in the—charge. (See Daily Mail which I have posted to you), from what I can gather it was one of the finest charges to capture machine guns ever made there. We are proud of the men of our Oldest Colony. If you do come across many parents who have sons in the hospital tell them everything that is possible is done for their boys. Here in England we have many sad homes, we know our men are fighting for the freedom of the world and our cause is just and right. With kind regards,
Yours sincerely,
ED. R. MORRIS.

THE BIG LEAGUE SERIES.

By Bert L. Standish, 75c. ea.

Here they are! Just what you've been looking for. Baseball and Romance combined, the most interesting stories ever written.

The author managed a league team a number of years ago and is thoroughly familiar with the doings of baseball players on and off the field. Father and son will find equal delight in reading these magnificent stories.

"Any Boy with Plenty of Grit," "Baseball at its Finest," and "The Girl in the Case"—these are the elements which compose the most successful juvenile fiction ever written. You don't have to be a fan to enjoy these books; all you need to be is really human and alive, with plenty of red blood.
