SCHOOL-DAY STRAIN

A parent troubled over a child or a fast-growing youth, could do no better than to utilize the definite help that affords as a strengthening and nourishing factor. A very little of Scott's every day, during a time of stress, furnishes elements of nourishment essential to the blood and tends to confirm a growing child in robustness. For your boy or girl, you will not be satisfied with anything short of Scott's.

CHAPTER XVII

"IF I COULD FIND OUT!"

"Which she undoubtedly is," remarked Viscount Alfred, a young cornet in the Blues, who had fallen head over heels in love with Edna at first sight.

"Which she undoubtedly is," echoed Bromley, "but because she is utterly unimpressible—"

"By your royal highness!" laughed some one.

"By all of us," retorted Bromley, with calm nonchalance. "Is there one of you who has produced any effect?" Truth as well as modesty caused the inevitable silence. "No, she is gentleness and amiability herself; there is not an ounce of vanity in her composition, and she will listen to any of us with the sweetest consideration—even to you, Alfred, my lamb, for I saw you talking to her for three-quarters of an hour at the sufficiency of the other evening."

The young viscount blushed as hotly and prettily as any of his sisters could have done.

"But just as you think you have interested her, and are making a step forward; just as you begin to feel how bewitching she is, there comes over her a gentle abstraction, a dreamy absence and unconsciousness of your humble existence—not to say proximity, that makes you cold with despair."

"That's it, beautifully described, my dear sir!" assented a fox-hunting squire, who had resisted innumerable creases and fallen at Edna's feet without a struggle. "And when you stop and wait patiently for her return to mundane affairs, she comes down from heaven or wherever she has been, and smiling sweetly says: 'I beg your pardon! I was thinking of something else!'"

"Something else? Somebody else?" groaned another admirer.

"No," said Bromley; "not somebody else. I don't think that. She hasn't that look, and she would guard against that dreamy way of hers if it were so."

"Hem!" mused the young squire. "You may be wrong there. Here comes some one who ought to know, if all accounts are true," he added, as Lord Mersey came wandering into the room.

"What are you fellows talking about?" he asked.

"About the one topic—the heiress," replied the squire.

Mersey turned to choose a pipe from the rack before he spoke.

"Do you mean Miss Weston?" he asked. "Scarcely a suitable topic for discussion in a smoking room."

And there was something in his straightforward gaze over his pipe, as he lit it, that silenced any retort, though the young squire whispered behind his back to Bromley:

Backed by a reputation
Windsor Table Salt
THE CANADIAN SALT CO. LIMITED

"Mersey is hit harder than any of us, by Jove!"

There was little chance for any of them, they thought, if that really was the case; for who could resist the heir to the manor and thirty thousand a year?

At least, there was one woman in this world who could not, and that was Grace Bromley; and it is only fair to say that she would have given her hand to Lord Mersey if he had been a commoner with thirty shillings instead of thirty thousand.

We have only seen her for a few hours in the salon at the castle, and it is time, as she plays no unimportant part in our drama, that we would see a little more of her.

Grace was seen to best advantage at the music stool, or beside the harp; but she was possessed of a variety of accomplishments, could ride well to hounds, danced almost, as well as Edna—not quite, for Edna had caught some of the supple grace of the mountain Swiss—could skate, and lastly, had that rare gift of looking interesting and commanding, rather than attracting attention.

"Grace would have made a first-class empress of Rome in the old imperial days," her brother had declared, and he had hit it, as usual. She was a superb figure, slim and straight as an arrow, with such dark hair brushed clean from her brow, and dark eyes that lit up beneath the long, dark brows, and sweeping lashes, when she was excited or angry. A truly imperial kind of beauty, that had borne down all before it, until Edna—sweet, dreamy Edna—had come upon the scene and wrested the sceptre from her hand; scarcely wrested it, but rendered it powerless to command any longer where it most desired to do so. For, at one time, Lord Mersey had shown some signs of yielding himself to the imperial beauty—had begun to feel the charm of her swift black eyes and impassioned voice—had felt a subtle kind of pleasure, half pain, half delight, in sitting beside the piano as she played, as only she could play, making the instrument obey her will and move with her feelings. Then it was pleasant to him to find her, who was so imperious and indifferent to the men about her, so attentive and amiable to him, so ready to listen to his long, rambling dissertations and audible musings on all kinds of subjects, so anxious to learn anything he chose to teach her. All promised well; the friendship which was gradually growing would have developed into a warmer feeling; Lord Mersey, the creature of habit, would have discovered one day that he could not do without the society of the imperial beauty, who was all humility and soft obedience to him, and he would have made her the future Countess of Portfield. Until Edna came!

"Come from whence?" asked Grace, as she sat beside her harp, her brows knitted over her brooding eyes, her long, shapely hands striking a sullen chord in harmony with her own thoughts. "Come from whence? No one knows! Came without a friend, same the old woman who is tied to her body and soul—came without an introduction, without any credentials of respectability!—came, and won him from me! What does he see in her—is she more beautiful than I am?"

A large mirror, reaching from ceiling to floor, was opposite her, and she glanced in it as she replied:

"No, I think not; honestly, I think not. What is it, then, that he—a man of the world, a scholar, supercritical in refinement and culture—can see in her to charm him? Is it that dreamy abstraction, that little trick of wistful sadness? Take care, Lord Mersey! Did any girl with a blank, innocent past, look and behave as she does? If it is that which you find so charming, so irresistible, take care that it does not spring from some secret which you, with all your fine feelings, would scarcely think fitting for the future Countess of Portfield to hold."

Then her sister—much younger than herself, and a great romp, who looked upon her sister Grace with something like contempt, because she took no interest in prize bulls and the improvement of stock, subjects Kate would discuss with her father, Sir George, for hours. Kate was short, thickset and boyish, the image of her father, as they all said—came in, whistling like a boy, stopping to exclaim, in a voice, clear and ringing as a boy's also: "What, Grace! wasting all this beautiful afternoon over that monstrosity in 'catgut! Why don't you come out? I've been—"

"My dear Kate, spare me the details, I beg!" interrupted "my Lady Grace," as Kate called her; "I can guess where you have been—the stables, the pig sty, the kennels. Look at your boots!"

"Rather dirty, aren't they? You should see father's!—but then they're topboots, and don't matter. I wish mamma would let me wear topboots."

"A stable boy's waistcoat and a huntsman's cap. Certainly!" said Grace, sweeping the strings of her harp.

"How shocked you would all be!—all except Mersey."

"Would you oblige me, my dear Kate, by giving gentlemen their title when you speak of them?"

"The Right Honorable Viscount Mersey!" resumed Kate, with due pomposity; "he's the best of the lot, for all his bookwormish propensities. He never scolds and worries and teases me as you do, and I believe he likes me."

"He is interested in any phenomenon, monstrous or otherwise," calmly retorted Grace.

"Thank you, my Lady Grace!" retorted Kate, coloring—she had her father's temper, short and fiery—"don't you wish you were a monstrosity? He doesn't seem to take much interest in you now."

Grace paled, and her eyes shot fire as she bent down to tighten a string; but her voice was quite calm as she said:

"Did he ever do so? Kate, I think I will take your advice, so emphatically if not delicately given, and go out. Would you mind ordering the mare? I am sure you are going to the stables!" and with this parting thrust my Lady Grace rose and sailed from the room.

Kate looked after her ere she in turn went to do as she was bid, for it was noticeable that sharp as Kate was with her tongue and rough in her manner, she was never reluctant to run on Grace's errands or do her bidding. Kate looked after her and whistled.

"Poor Grace! I wonder if she does care for him? What fools girls are to fall in love! I declare I never will!"

Grace's mare came round—a beautiful creature, almost black, and so shapely as a painted horse of Wou-vernans—and Grace got on his back and started for a gallop, and for a time the green-eyed monster that even music would not exorcise, was cast off in the clear, bracing air of the spring afternoon. Grace would have been all the better for that ride, but as fate would have it, after reaching Fox Gorse cover she turned to go home by the More Park Road.

TOOTON'S,
THE KODAK STORE,
320 WATER ST.

and coming into it by a bridle path through the wood, came full upon an elegant little phaeton, drawn by a pair of cream ponies, and driven by Edna. A tiny groom sat behind, with his arms sternly folded and his baby face fixed in stolid impassiveness after the manner of his kind; but it was not by the phaeton, or the ponies, or the groom that Grace's earnest gaze was drawn, but to the beautiful girl who held the reins and whip, and drove as if she were driving in her dream, and her face set with a wistful sadness. Grace was just going to ride up to the phaeton, which was walking up the hill, when a man's figure came through the wood opposite her, and held up his hand to stop the phaeton, and taking off his hat walked across to it.

It was Lord Mersey, and Grace saw that as he approached Edna's face was worth more than all Grace's imperial beauty.

She saw Lord Mersey look at his hands, as if they were too dirty to touch the daintily gloved one of the young charioteer, and then wipe them on his trousers, just as a waterman might do, before he took the little, primrose-colored pair. He had got something to show her, evidently, for he produced something from one of the front pockets of his loose coat, and Edna's head and his went very close together over the something; and then Grace heard Lord Mersey's deep voice explaining or recounting how he had found it, Edna listening all the while with interested attention. Then suddenly there came the old look of abstraction and absence, and Lord Mersey, perhaps, noticing it himself, stepped aside, said good-by, raised his hat, and the phaeton walked on.

Grace watched them part, as she had watched them meet, pale and anxious, then she turned her horse's head toward the road again, and, clinching her whip, murmured:

"She does not care for him—I know it, I feel it!—and yet she will win him, if I know a man's nature at all. That indifference of hers would pluck him into a declaration. She has bewitched him! He will grow still more infatuated, propose to her, marry her, and be miserable—yes, for I know him. It will happen, as sure as fate, unless something prevents it! Surely," she mused, her color coming and going—"surely it were no sin to prevent him making himself miserable for life—to save his happiness? Any means to such an end would be pardonable. What can I do? If I could find out the cause for that manner of hers—if I could but find out something about her!"

Patience, Grace Bromley, and chance—or shall we say fate?—may throw that knowledge in your way.

Household Notes.

Seasoning is the making of a dish. Tomatoes go well with any kind of fish.

Potatoes scalloped with peppers are a novelty.

Never mix salad with dressing till ready to serve it.

Prevent a scum on cocoa by adding the sugar last.

Let raisins satisfy the sweettooth of your child.

Invalids find a straw an easy way to take a beverage.

Junket flavored with coffee makes an agreeable change.

A cushion to kneel on while scrubbing saves the knees.

Beef fat is the best for greasing a stove before polishing.

Fifteen minutes' boiling is enough to sterilize the clothes.

Oysters and celery can be combined in many a tasty dish.

A well-baked cake gives a simple meal the necessary richness.

Simplicity should be the first consideration in the luncheon meal.

All sour milk should be made into cottage cheese or used in cooking.

Be sure that the children are getting the proper lunches at school.

If pork is baked with beans, serve a pickle or sour sauce with them. Tunny fish makes an excellent appetizer served in French dressing. Every child should have one quart of milk a day until it is 8 years old. A cookie-cutter can be used in making attractive party sandwiches. A pinch of salt in the coffee lessens the necessity for so much sugar. Beans baked with tiny sausages are a good luncheon dish on a cold day. Poor laundry work shortens the life of clothing more than anything else. If mayonnaise is covered closely in a jar it will keep in a cool place a week. With dry, white fishes serve a rich butter sauce, with fat fish, plain lemon. Gustards can be sweetened with corn syrup if it is desirable to save sugar.

MEMBER POSTPONES VISIT.

LONDON, Feb. 20. Lord George has postponed his visit to Paris owing to the state of business here especially in connection with the labor unrest. He is expected to attend the labor conference which the government has called for February 27th, hence it is probable he will start for Paris until after the 15th.

TO PREVENT STRIKE.

LONDON, Feb. 20. Lord George has postponed his visit to Paris owing to the state of business here especially in connection with the labor unrest. He is expected to attend the labor conference which the government has called for February 27th, hence it is probable he will start for Paris until after the 15th.

OPENED CANADIAN LEGISLATION.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20. The House of Commons opened today. The day's business consisted of the reading of the address in reply to the speech from the throne. The bill for the amendment of the Criminal Code was also introduced. The bill provides for the appointment of a commission to inquire into the conditions of the labor market in Canada. The bill also provides for the appointment of a commission to inquire into the conditions of the labor market in Canada.

LET PENETRATED LUNGS.

PARIS, Feb. 20. The Premier's bullet which wounded Premier Clemenceau penetrated his lungs, it was reported by the official statement shortly after noon today. The statement reads: "The bullet which penetrated the lungs, an examination disclosed the penetration of the bullet. The condition is satisfactory, temperature 38.42, pulse 72, the nourishment normal. Signed: Gosset, Laury, Combe." After the examination had been completed Premier Clemenceau walked out of the balcony of his house over the garden to take a breath of air. The morning was a delicious one, the first real sunshine since the Premier seemed vigorous when he spat a little blood. The statement made in the official bulletin caused some anxiety in the home, and the news that his condition was more serious than reported spread quickly through Paris, causing widespread excitement.

WORKING TO AVERT STRIKE.

Lloyd George's New Proposals --- Clemenceau Received Callers --- Conference Takes a Holiday --- Jubilee of Cardinal Gibbons.

PREMIER POSTPONES VISIT.
LONDON, Feb. 20. Lloyd George has postponed his visit to Paris owing to the business here especially connected with the labor unrest which the government has decided to attend the labor conference on February 27th, hence it is expected that the full start for Paris will be on the 28th.

MEASURES TO PREVENT STRIKE.
LONDON, Feb. 20. Lloyd George has proposed to the cabinet new proposals to the effect that a conference should be held with a view to preventing a strike which would be likely to occur if the railway men and transporters as well as the miners, the coal and the iron masters, the executive committee of the labor union, and other interested parties immediately consider the government's offer, but any recommendation which the committee might make will have to be submitted to a full meeting of the cabinet. If the executive committee should decide to convoke a conference the strike planned for the 15th, which the ballots of the miners are said to favor by a majority, will be at least delayed.

OPENED CANADIAN LEGISLATION.
OTTAWA, Feb. 20. The cabinet opened to-day. The morning in hanging crepe and the speech from the throne is promised. The bill among other things effecting the extension of the franchise to women to vote and control the privilege of sitting in the Senate will be introduced. There also will be a bill to assist returned soldiers in settling on the land and to provide for aid in highway construction. Bills to promote desirable immigration and settlement, to create a department of public health, for the better housing conditions for the validation of the orders in council, and for the reading of the address the day after tomorrow will be presented to the House.

WOUND PENETRATED LUNGS.
PARIS, Feb. 20. A bullet which wounded Premier Clemenceau penetrated his lungs, it is reported by the official statement of the Ministry of Health. The official statement reads: "The wound which occurred at one of the points of the chest yesterday, demonstrated that the bullet penetrated the lungs. An examination disclosed the penetration of the bullet. The examination is satisfactory, temperature 38.2, pulse 72, the nourishment is normal. Signed: Gosset, Dr. Leubry, Combe." After the examination had been completed Premier Clemenceau walked out of the balcony of his house over the garden to take a breath of fresh air. The morning was a beautiful one, the first real sunshine. The Premier seemed vigorous, though he spat a little blood. The movement made in the official statement caused some anxiety in the press, and the news that at the moment was more serious than at any time since the outbreak of the war, spread quickly through Paris, causing widespread expressions of sympathy.

DOING WELL.
PARIS, Feb. 20. Premier Clemenceau, who was wounded in the shoulder yesterday in the attempt by the young anarchist, Emile Cottin, to assassinate him, was in a satisfactory condition this morning. According to the latest reports no fever has developed.

UKRAINIANS RESUME ATTACK.
LONDON, Feb. 20. Ukrainian forces resumed their attack against the Poles defending Lemburg, on Sunday, and have captured all points between Przemysl and Groek west of Lemburg, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Vienna. Railway communication in that region has been interrupted.

SPARTACANS STILL ACTIVE.
COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20. Spartacan forces are bombarding the town of Roskilde, in Westphalia, with artillery, according to a message received here from Muenster. Assistance to the defenders of Roskilde is being sent from Muenster.

CONFERENCE ADJOURNS.
LONDON, Feb. 20. The Peace Conference at Paris has decided to adjourn as a result of the attack upon Premier Clemenceau, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Paris this morning. There was no session of the conference to-day.

GERMAN INACCURACIES.
PARIS, Feb. 20. Communications and declarations made to the press by the German Government, or Matthias Erzberger, chairman of the German armistice delegation, contain "flagrant inaccuracies which require immediate correction," declares an official report issued late last night. The report says, "First, the text of Chancellor Scheidemann's protest communicated to the press by the German government, differs notably from the original text, handed to Marshal Foch by Erzberger at Tressen on Feb. 16 at 6 o'clock p.m. The first phrase as communicated to the press is as follows: 'The German Government is conscious of the grave consequences that either acceptance or refusal of the convention must entail. In the same way a whole new phrase has been inserted into the text communicated to the press as follows: "It cannot yet be said if we are able to follow the instructions of the Allied high command." This phrase does not figure in the text as given to Marshal Foch by Erzberger. Second, Herr Erzberger declared at Weimar in reference to this protest: "This German note was handed to Marshal Foch, before the signing of the convention was accepted by him from our point of view. Then it must be considered as forming part of the new armistice conventions." Marshal Foch has already informed the President of the German delegation several times that the texts duly signed by the Allies and enemy plenipotentiary states alone formed part of the armistice convention. This note does not come within that category. It is absolutely independent of the convention. It constitutes a mere manifestation of the purely platonic activity of Scheidemann. Finally, Erzberger, alleging certain pretended declarations of Marshal Foch, has affirmed that pour parlers would be opened at an early date on the question of peace preliminaries. The fact is that Marshal Foch categorically refused to give the slightest intimation on this subject, notwithstanding the lively insistence of Erzberger.

HUN TROOPS TO QUELL DISORDER.
AMSTERDAM, Feb. 20. Marshal Foch has agreed to the employment of the German government troops in the neutral zone comprising the ten kilometer districts east of Cologne, but not including Dusseldorf and also in the Rhine region south to Honne in order to suppress local disturbances, according to a telegram here from Muenster.

BERLIN STRIKE SETTLED.
COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20. The strike of store employees at Berlin has been settled and business places are re-opening to-day, according to Berlin advices here.

CARDINAL GIBBONS' JUBILEE.
WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 20. Clergy and laity of Roman Catholicism gathered here to-day to pay homage to the venerable head of the church in the United States, Cardinal Gibbons, at the celebration of his golden episcopal jubilee. Pope Benedict was represented by Archbishop Carretti, who came from Rome to bring the pontifical blessing to the aged prelate in testimony of his services as Bishop for half a century, and a Cardinal since 1886.

ROSA AGAIN REVIVED.
BERLIN, Feb. 20. A bruised and battered body of a woman which apparently had been in the water more than three weeks, has been discovered in the Lauterbach Canal, according to the Tagblatt, and despite the advanced stage of decomposition, acquaintances have identified it as the body of Rosa Luxemburg, the Spartacan leader, who was killed on Jan. 17.

HOSTILITIES SUSPENDED.
BASEL, Feb. 20. An official statement from Berlin says, conforming with the convention prolonging the armistice, hostilities with Poland were suspended on the morning of Feb. 17.

RUMOR DENIED.
PARIS, Feb. 20. The Italian Embassy here denies the report that announcement of the engagement of Princess Yolande, eldest daughter of the King of Italy, and the Prince of Wales, will be made in the near future.

Sea Serpent's Origin.
Professor D'Arcy Thompson, during the course of a recent lecture at the Royal Institute, said that he had no doubt that the cuttle-fish was the strange beast which the ancients had named the sea serpent. They must have seen it during one of its playful gambols, and have mistaken its wedge-shaped tail for the head of the serpent's tail.

No story of orge, giant, or witch was more strange and terrifying than that of the cuttle-fish or octopus. Nevertheless, the cuttle-fish's "bone" had homely associations. It was used for pet canaries to pick at, and for lawyers to clean up parchment. It was also used to polish the doors of carriages and motor-cars, and there was an apothecary's shop at the top of St. Martin's Lane, in the neighbourhood of coach-builders, which always had its window full of pieces of cuttle-fish "bone."

He was told in that very shop that they had been there for at least forty-three years. He believed they had been there over 100 years, and that one of them was used to polish the coach in which Weller drove Mr. Pickwick and his friend on their memorable journey to Ipswich.

Llewellyn Club.

At the Llewellyn Club last night the subject of address was "Saul, the King of a Democratic People; and is Kingship Consistent with Democracy?"

The hall was crowded to its seating capacity. Rev. Dr. Jones spoke briefly, dwelling on the life of Saul, and of Israel as a democratic nation. He touched upon Israel's life, showing how that first the nation was nomadic, and its occupation shepherding flocks, and in this stage its government could be called "A Tribal Unit," the tribe being the social centre. Then when the Israelites entered Canaan they became agriculturists and shepherds and adopted "a town council" as towns grew up. Then because of anarchic conditions and foe-invasions the tribes banded together and they chose a King because they saw that their enemies, headed by a King, were very powerful, and they saw the value of Kingship and also to preserve their religion—Judaism.

They elected a King to be a servant of the people (Kingship consistent with democracy) and it was not until the reign of Solomon that the people became the servants of the King, and this change of ideas resulted in the division of Israel and its ultimate destruction as a nation.

"We have the greatest democracy in the world," said Dr. Jones, and although some say a King is useless and an ornamental expense, yet according to the New Testament Kingship is the Ideal and the Divine thing. He added, however, that hereditary Kingship is detestable, and an elected King preferable, as in such selections unselfish men would not be chosen.

Mr. Morine then spoke. He said that the divisions of Israel resembled somewhat the sectarian divisions of this town, and this sectarianism was bred in us, but he was glad to see Llewellyn Club was non-sectarian. "What is Democracy?" he then queried.

Moreover—in favour of hereditary kings—they have been trained from infancy for their duties, and although they do not rule, their words have an effect reflecting as they do impartiality, integrity, and equity. Mr. Morine declared it his opinion that King George would be elected to-day by public vote if put to the test, because chiefly the people are satisfied with the present governmental system which speaks volumes. When people say Kingship is inconsistent with democracy they do not analyse nor understand. A King provokes no jealousy as does the election of a President, and a hereditary King is essential to our government's machinery.

Mr. Howley, K.C., spoke briefly, saying that a pleasure it was for him to be present, and touching on the need of a common meeting place where sectarianism, the curse of our country, could be buried. He believed our system of rule the best in existence, but would not say that it could not be improved. He emphasized the need of education in order to cultivate higher ideals and better government.

A Carnell, Esq., spoke briefly, dwelling on the need of non-sectarianism and compulsory education.

Hon. John Anderson said King Saul would have been a good politician for Newfoundland, and he wished the people of this town were more democratic, and stated that if our government (?) was democratic it would

At the City Hall.

Deputy Mayor Morris presided at yesterday's meeting. Councillors Ayre, Brownrigg, Mullaly and Vinnicombe attending.

The Col. Secretary wrote again to the Council's protest against granting the waters of Tor's Cove pond to an applicant. The letter stated that the protest had been read at a meeting of the Executive government. The latter were considering certain conditions and regulations which might be advisable to impose upon any applicant to whom the said water power would be granted, which would conserve the rights of the public. So far the application has not been granted.

The Collector, Messrs. Hynes and Ryan, who made application last week for remuneration for extra services in connection with the triennial appraisal were awarded $20.00 each on the casting vote of Deputy Mayor Morris, Councillors Ayre, and Brownrigg voting against, and Councillors Vinnicombe and Mullaly for. On motion of Councillors Mullaly and Vinnicombe $40.00 was awarded accountant, Mr. Larkin who also put in a claim for extra services in the same connection, the casting vote of Deputy Morris being given again.

Councillors Ayre and Brownrigg strongly opposed the granting of these bonuses on the grounds that the services rendered were part of the applicants regular work, and that an increase to all the clerks had only recently been voted. A resolution moved by Coun. Ayre that no further amounts be granted for work done during regular hours, was unanimously carried.

J. T. Doody, Mundy Pond Road asked permission to enlarge workshop. Referred to the Engineer.

R. O'Neil, Southside, asked permission to instal motor in shed situated between Brownrigg's Bridge and the Railroad, Southside. The Engineer will enquire and make report.

With passing of pay rolls, reading of reports from the different departments etc., the meeting adjourned at 7.30.

Ricketts, V.C., Annuity.

We are informed that the second day of the ten thousand dollar campaign promise to be successful, if not more so, than the first, the diurnal sum expected having been in sight at noon. Making it grow.

A Good Beginning.

One day's work is over and in the nine hours $1002.00 has been collected. There are nine days more, however, to continue the same good work. The fund to-day is well underway, as there is two dollars to the good, so that only $898.00 will be required by 6 p.m. All must assist to make this fund a success.

Result First Day's Campaign:

New Uniforms.

For Mr. Grace V. F. E. We understand that arrangements have been made to provide the H.R. Grace Volunteer Fire Brigade with new uniforms, also to install fire alarms at different points throughout the city.

Interesting Pictures.

To-day we had the privilege of gazing at a very interesting and local historical picture. The picture is the property of Mr. A. Hiscock, manager of the Robinson Export Co., and was taken just fifty years ago by Mr. Adams, of the firm of Adams and McKimney, who had a photo studio where Gray & Goodland's bookstores now stands.

GIVE US A TRIAL.

Only a New Pair of Bed Slippers

By RUTH CAMERON.

A few evenings ago I happened to be in the home of one of my neighbors at the hour when the five-year-old daughter of the house had been getting ready for bed and came to say, "Good night" to her mother. She climbed up into the latter's lap, and, as she sat there, her mother noticed that a small pink toe was protruding through one of the little blue bed slippers.

She bent and touched it. "You'll have to have a new pair of bed slippers, daughter," she said. "I must put that on my shopping list."

The little girl said, "I don't want a new pair of slippers. I like these."

She spoke quite placidly, and suddenly with much force there came to me this thought, "I wonder if she realizes how tremendously blessed she is to be able to say that without a sigh?"

Just think a half worn shoe to this woman means nothing but a couple of words written on her shopping list, an order to a clerk, and finally a signed check. It does not mean a worried wonder where the extra money is to come from, a weary reminder of the eternal uphill struggle, or an anxious questioning as to whether the shoe cannot be made to hold out until Christmas when an uncle or aunt may be induced to replace it.

The Half Worn Slipper Is a Symbol.

Of course, I use the half worn slipper as a symbol of all the half worn things in the household that are forever calling to the housemother their warning of needed renewals. There's the dining room rug that really ought to have been renewed two seasons ago and simply can't last another season; there's Robert's best suit out of which he persists in growing, with a speed that fills his mother's heart equally with pride, and with anxiety as to where the new suit is to come from—there's a host of little things like the dipper with its handle off, the stew pan so old and nicked that things are bound to "catch on" in it, the stockings already darned beyond the limit, the cracked shade on the living room lamp—all mutely but noiselessly reminding the housemother of the need for money.

Sometimes when she is happiest the reminder of some particularly imperative need throws its dark shadow across her mood; sometimes when she's most discouraged over other things, some harrowing necessity will seize the opportunity to be the last straw.

Don't Dare To Forget!

Perhaps it isn't possible for people who never lived in a home where sighs were the natural accompaniment of such discoveries to know how blessedly fortunate they are not to have to sigh.

But it is possible for those who have such pictures in their past to know. And I hereby remind them of their duty to remember and be happy. Surely, to fall in such happiness is to prove you don't deserve it. And who knows what that might tempt the fates to do?

Premiers' Wives.

Petticoats Behind the Cabinet.

Many wives of Premiers have played a considerable part in politics, and added much to the social reputation of their husbands.

Lady Palmerston was as indefatigable a politician as her husband, and used all her social prestige in his political service. But she gave to Lady Salisbury the wisdom of experience when she told her that in times of acute controversy it was as well to see as little as possible of political opponents, since awkwardness was avoided, and it was possible to meet again in Society afterwards as if nothing had happened.

Hates Speech-Making.

Lady Salisbury herself would have been terrified at the mere idea of making a speech, but she also used her political influence, though without the open-house plan of Lady Palmerston, for she was rigid in her exclusions.

Lady Derby was a great political talker rather than a great political speaker, and the same might perhaps be said of Mrs. Asquith, who hates speech-making.

Mr. Balfour's Sister.

The wives of Gladstone and Beaconsfield agreed in thinking that their political mission lay chiefly in looking after their husbands, and though Mrs. Gladstone knew more politics than the world guessed, she carefully effaced herself when possible.

Mr. Balfour possesses, instead of a wife, an exceedingly clever sister, who also is not very fond of oratory.

MAKING BOOKS.

WALT MASON.

I'm glad I didn't cross the brine ere Kaiser Bill took in his sign. My friends all said, "You ought to go, and write some rhymes about the foe, and that will make him throw a fit, admit he's had enough and quit." Three times I packed a large valise with pipes and socks and elbow grease, and said, "I'll like across the foam," then changed my mind and stayed at home. It's fortunate I didn't go, oh I'd have multiplied your woes; for I'm the sort of busy gent, who'd jot down notes where'er he went, and then come home and write a book—as everybody does, gadzook! The presses groan away like fun, they turn out warbooks by the ton, and all the gifted inky guys are writing yarns of German spies, of mighty combats here and there, upon the sea or in the air. Consumers cry, "We've had enough of this soul searching, curdling stuff! So give us cheerful tales once more, as in the sunny tales of yore!" But still the presses whang and clack and turn out warbooks, stack on stack. And there'd be one or more by me, had I gone slopping o'er the sea, instead of which I stayed at home and kept a poultice on my dome.

Ingenious Prisoners.

Amongst the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine officers of engineering, who, a few years ago, received a pardon for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape.

Living together in the same hut, these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber, in which, with pieces of drift-wood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterwards to form bolts and rivets. Then with infinite pains, they built an engine to propel the boat, and after labouring for seven years they completed their task. Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow-convict to whom they had confided their plan.

So impressed, however, was the French commandant by their marvellous energy, skill, and patience that he succeeded eventually in obtaining after a year a pardon for them.

War Epigrams.

Several writers have begun to collect for publication some of the epigrams of the war, together with terse sayings or messages of Allied commanders which are likely to live long in history. Among the most famous of these are the words of Sir Douglas Haig addressed to the British army on April 13, 1918, when the Germans, in superior forces, had been forcing the British and French slowly backward for three weeks, striving to separate the two armies and roll the British up upon the Channel ports. "Every position must be held to the last man," said the British Field Marshal. "There must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall, and believing in the justice of our cause, every one of us must fight to the end."

High in the list of historic messages will stand Admiral Beatty's signal after the surrendered German fleet had been moored under guard: "The German flag is to be hauled down at 3.57 and is not to be hoisted again without permission."

The first great battle of the war, at the Marne, was begun after Joffre retreated to the line selected for the beginning of a great counter-offensive. As he prepared to turn upon the foe he said to the French legions: "The hour has come to advance at all costs; to die where you stand rather than to give the way." In that battle Foch, commanding one of the French armies, sent Joffre the memorable message of which there are many versions, this being the most popular: "My right is crushed. My left is in retreat. I am attacking with my centre." That attack forced a wedge into the German line and precipitated a retreat to the Aisne. There is, too, the deathless watchword of the French at Verdun, "They shall not pass," sometimes attributed to Pétain. To the eternal glory of France, they did not pass. The French have given high praise to the words of the American general, Pershing, when, at the head of the first American troops to join the Allies, he placed a wreath on the tomb of Lafayette. The Americans had come to do many things, among others to pay in part the debt they owed to France, and Pershing packed all the significance of the occasion into four words: "Lafayette, we are here!" Later on, when the French and British were exceedingly hard pressed, the Americans agreed that their troops should be brigaded with those of the Allies, under French and British commanders. Foch had just been made generalissimo, and Pershing in turning over the American forces to him said: "Infantry, artillery, aviation, all that we have are yours. Dispose of them as you will." When Vice-Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss informed the German admiral of the naval terms of the armistice the German said: "It is inadmissible that our fleet should be given up without having been beaten." Wemyss retorted briefly: "It had only to come out."—St. John Telegraph.

whether you sit down heavily, whether you unconsciously grip the arms of the chair and lower yourself, whether you flop down quickly, as if to get it over with or whether you slowly unbind and relax and sink gracefully back.

Quite likely the latter achievement is beyond you as yet, if you have been too busy a woman to give much thought to your attractiveness heretofore.

In sitting the body should be well back in the chair. If the muscles are well trained the spine should not quite touch the chair. If they lack training, as is apt to be the case, sit so that the end of the spine is against the back of the chair at its joining with the seat.

You can then lean back gracefully against the chair without spilling the lines of the body. Never slide down in a chair, no matter how comfortable the attitude may seem to you.

Next look at the position of your legs. Are they crossed? Oh, yes, of course they are. The ultra-smart set are making fashionable a pronounced freedom of attitude, but crossed legs are not at all pretty, as your mirror will tell you when you critically examine the lines they produce and it may not be amiss to add, that physicians say, through the pressure of veins and arteries which result, appendicitis and rheumatism quite often follow in their train.

BUD DISCUSSES CLEANLINESS.

First thing in the morning, last I hear at night, Get it when I come from school: "My, you look a sight! Go upstairs this minute, an' roll your sleeves up high An' give your hands a scrubbing and wipe 'em till they're dry! Now don't stand there and argue, and never mind your tears! And this time please remember to wash your neck and ears."

Can't see why ears are fashioned all crinkled like a shell, With lots of fancy carvings that make a feller yell! Each time his Ma digs in them to get a speck of dirt, When plain ones would be easy to wash and wouldn't hurt. And I can't see the reason why every time Ma hears, She thinks she's got to send me to wash my neck and ears.

I never wash to suit her; don't think I ever will, If I was white as sleet, she'd call me dirty still. At night I get a scrubbing and go to bed, and then The first thing in the morning, she makes me wash again. That strikes me as ridiculous; I've thought of it a heap. A feller can't get dirty when he is fast asleep.

When I grow up to be a man like Pa and have a wife And kids to boss around, you bet they'll have an easy life. We won't be at them all the time, the way they keep at me, And kick about a little dirt that no one else can see. And every night at supper time as soon as he appears, We will not chase our boy away to wash his neck and ears.

CONSIDERING PROPOSALS

LONDON, Feb. 20.

A committee of the Federation, after receiving proposals made by Premier Lloyd George on behalf of the government, decided to call a conference of the Federation to consider the government's proposal to the effect that the government should have planned a strike on 15, and are now voting on government, according to one report to meet the miners' question of a Royal Commission to discuss the question of hours. The commission would later than March 31, and the Federation would be in- nominate representatives on the committee. The Vice-President of the Federation, this morning, said, "we are on hopes. That is what government wants us to do now."

REVOLUTION FORECASTED.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 20.

There is prompt government action, no doubt revolution, more than says Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, Superintendent of the Methodist Church, who has just returned from overseas. "The men and women who are in possession of the situation, and do not speedily accept the policy of co-operation with labor, capitalists will be eliminated. The Lloyd George government is coming conference by conference, and capital to an understanding arrangement, whereby labor would a larger share of the pro-

The Fighting Ships of England.

(William Hard Hillyer, in N.Y. Herald.)

The fighting ships of England, they called the seven seas. From the Clyde and rainy Cornwall to the sunlit Cyclades, Vancouver, Yokohama, Pacific isles, the Orkneys, Nova Scotia, round Good Hope and the Horn. And everywhere men wondered and everywhere men saw that the fighting ships of England brought Anglo-Saxon law. Not the law of lawless rulers, misruling in the name of God or of godless kingdoms; but where those great ships came was certain death to tyrants, and so the saying ran: "Trade follows the flag—and justice and the ancient rights of man."

II. The fighting ships of England, those good grey men-of-war, were gathered once at Whitby, from cruising fast and far. When sudden and clear at daybreak the call to action rang. For the German Midgard serpent had with his iron fangs struck, and the whole world shuddered, as if with a mortal wound. But quietly sailed at sunrise the Grand Fleet, eastward bound; and the North Sea kept the secret—how the hell-born powers recoiled. And the world was saved for freedom, and Fafnir's brood was felled. While many a distant harbor and many a far-flung key saw the good ships of England as they kept the ocean free.

III. The right arm of Great Britain—who'd shorten that arm now? The Fleet—who'd grudge the splendor of our victorious prow? Behold our fenceless coast line by foreign foe untrod; Behold our unspotted cities, our vast inviolate sod; Then rail not at the glory that round the Grand Fleet clings, For the Sea Hawk held the Vulture till the Eagle found his wings; More power to the Sea Hawk, however strong we be— To the fighting ships of England, that keep the ocean free!

The New Haven Register says: "We know a chap who received a lieutenant's commission Nov. 10. He bought an outfit costing $410. The armistice was signed Nov. 11."

Covered With Dead Fish.

A Sea Mystery No One Has Solved.

It will be forty years next May since the first "tile fish" was caught. Captain Kirby, of the schooner Hutchings, sailed from Gloucester, Massachusetts, was trawling for cod off Nantucket when suddenly he began to catch not cod but a quite new fish, a large handsome creature covered with yellow spots, which none of his crew had ever seen before. He caught over two tons, brought them back, and found them to be splendid food fish and a good keeper. Naturalists, seeing the fish, said it was not only a new species but an entirely new family. It was called the tile fish because of the tile-like markings on its head.

The fish became the most popular fish on the market, and for three years large quantities were caught, then suddenly at the beginning of 1882 they were no longer to be found in their usual resort. Presently came news that the sea was covered with dead tile fish. It was true! Six thousand square miles of sea were almost hidden by dead tile fish, the number being estimated to exceed one thousand million.

What had happened it was impossible to say. Whether there was a volcanic disturbance or some infectious disease no one could tell. But the tile fish were dead, done for, finished and presumably extinct. At any rate no one caught another. Years passed, a generation went by, the great war broke out, then in 1915 a fishing vessel, working over almost precisely the same spot as that where Captain Kirby made his marvellous catch, suddenly drew up a trawl full of tile fish.

It was soon found that the fish were there again in their millions, and ever since they have been caught in profusion. The story is almost beyond belief, yet the facts are exactly as stated.

Convivial Bequests.

"A hundred pounds apiece to invest in port wine or any other good drink" is very acceptable, although the eleven boon companions of a Kentish gentleman of whose will this was a part would perhaps have thanked him if he had left the spending of the money entirely to their own discretion.

John Rodman, a friend of Fox, the famous statesman by a codicil enjoined his executors to keep his house on for at least a year after his death, and to visit it frequently, taking friends with them. "That each corner may be filled to help drink out the wine in the vault."

Just before the war an instance of a convivial bequest occurred in Berlin. A manufacturer left £500 the interest of which was to be spent on the free distribution of beer weekly to the frequenters of his favourite beer-hall. It is likely the customers of that pub would become even more regular in their attendance for fear of missing the free beer.

Another testator left a sum of money to ten friends on the understanding that as long as one of them survived he would drink the "health" of the dead man on the anniversary of his death. If possible they were to meet and do this in company. If they could not meet, as a guarantee of good faith they were to write to some other member of the fraternity to say they had duly observed the conditions.

M. C. L. I.

Led by Mr. Geo. F. A. Grimes, George Jones and R. King, and opposed by Capt. A. Kean, Joseph Moore and W. Moore, the resolution:—"That the Government should appoint a commission to regulate the prices of fishery products" was debated at the regular weekly meeting of the M. C. L. I. last evening.

As the present mode of handling our fisheries was not conducive to harmony and good-will between fisherman and merchant, argued the affirmative, a commission was necessary. The merchant seemed to make money and to have all he desired, while the fisherman had but enough to keep body and soul together. Most of the trouble arose out of varying prices for the same grade of fish. The present system caused distrust and suspicion, and prices should be regulated according to market conditions, grade of fish, etc. As this was the age of commissions, why not regulate the prices of fish. Our herring fishery needed regulation, as do the lobster, salmon and other products, and as people elected the members to the Government they should have power to control and fix prices for the benefit of the people.

For the negative Capt. Kean and his supporters contended that as commissions of this nature during recent years were a burden upon the people rather than any assistance we did not want any other Government to regulate prices, as the law of supply and demand would take care of the price, provided we looked after catching, curing and proper marketing of our fishery products. The foreign market reports and cable dispatches were open to all, wherein then was the need of a commission. At present prices were good, in fact the best in 100 years, and didn't need attention; and next season's problems could be settled then. The present commission have not given us lower prices on imported articles. Why try the impossible with regard to fish? Uniform price of fish for one month or one year is impossible, and therefore is not feasible. The appointment of a commission would result in Government soap being handed out to friends and party supporters. Competition, the life of trade, would do the needful, and further, as the fishery was largely speculative, merchants must make profits to offset losses that are bound to come sooner or later.

On a vote being taken, the negative side won by a small margin.

The Day Will Come.

"Dear! to be sure, I know'd the 'organ' would 'ave somethin' to say about the education fund for our V.C.'s. Such was the butterings of 'Days' as he went off to his work, after hearing from a pal of his, one Joe Graves, 'Goodness me!' he exclaimed, 'if the members in my young days had done some of the things the present 'pokes' have been guilty of they would 'ave been chucked out, 'bag and baggage,' for long ago."

"Nough" mutters Dave, "people now are givin' them a little more rope for they believe that the time is comin' when the wily politicians of to-day will have no political to-morrow."

Our people have been interested in the fight of civilization for the past four years and they have neglected party politics (of course the politicians didn't forget themselves, why should they?) But now the boys are comin' home and they cry with their actions (perhaps rather quietly as yet, but surely if slowly gathering force), the same as I heard a Frenchman said, a few days ago, "Le Jour Viendra." "The day will come."

"Yes!" he concluded, and he spoke bitterly and in season: "The day will come, and soon all political aspirants of knight-hoods and such like empty titles will be banned, no more will be heard of our V. C. hero being presented with a Governmental 'dole.' Capable men will once more adorn our Parliament, honest men will again take care of our interests, and the present gang of "chronic invalids" will go down. "Unwept, unhonoured and unused."

The high public esteem of OGILVIE'S STANDARD FLOUR is indisputably evidenced by its enormous sales. Every store worth while has it in stock.

"Not Guilty."

The case of the King versus Snow was continued yesterday afternoon, Snow himself being put in the witness box. After all the evidence had been taken, Mr. W. J. Higgins, counsel for the accused made a very eloquent plea, pointing out that no evidence had been put in proving Snow's negligence, and that his after-conduct had nothing to do with the death of Mr. James.

Mr. Howley, K.C., for the crown argued that Snow's running away was an act of guilt. The Chief Justice then charged the jury who retired and at the end of 45 minutes returned, announcing through their foreman, Mr. C. Ellis, the verdict of "not guilty."
