The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER IV.

Leah looked out at the golden sunshine and the bright blue sky. How fair the earth was! It seemed hard that every one could not be happy, that hopes must perish, love be wrecked, life all spoiled. Then she began to write. That moment presented the supreme temptation of her life. She longed so intensely to tell him that she knew all, to reproach him that he had preferred another, to tell him that it was the knowledge of this fact which had killed her. She longed to say this to him. It seemed so hard to die and make no sign. He would live and be happy, and no one would ever know what she had suffered or why she had died. She sat for some time with the pen in her hand. It was the one great temptation of her life. Should she tell him or not? When she came to die, should she feel any happier that she had left him with this sting in his breast, this memory which would always be to him one of bitter pain? It would be ample vengeance. If he knew that her unhappiness had killed her, he could never be happy again. He was honorable and sensitive; the chances were that if he knew the truth he would never marry Hettie. He was not one to build his happiness on the grave of the woman who had loved him so well. She judged him rightly. If ever he knew or suspected the truth, he would never have another happy moment. It was a great temptation. Her heart throbbed with it, her whole frame trembled; and then with a supreme effort she conquered it. They—may, even he whom she loved, when he heard her story—had pronounced her selfish. She could prove now that that was untrue. She could make the greatest sacrifice that any woman could make, all the more noble that it would remain for ever a secret between Hettie and herself. She would not tell him one word. If in that past life of hers she had been selfish, her selfishness would be atoned for now. She could write a simple letter, saying nothing of love or reproach, nothing of life or death, but telling him that she had found the wedding-ring broken. "My very dear Basil: To my surprise this

Stops Pain Instantly
The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in two forms—a colorless, clear liquid (one drop does it!) and in extra thin plasters. Use whichever form you prefer, plasters or the liquid—the action is the same. Safe, gentle. Made in a world-famous laboratory. Sold by all druggists.

morning, on opening my jewel-case, I found the wedding-ring broken. I enclose it. You know better what to do with it than I—Swiftly, suddenly, as had been foretold, death came to her, without pain, without bitterness, without agony. The pen dropped from the white fingers; her head fell upon the paper. She died with a smile on her lips. There was not even a spasm of pain, no faint murmur or cry. The throbbing, laboring, broken heart had stopped at last. With the wind that chanted a requiem among the great trees her soul rose to heaven, and the body left behind grew cold and beautiful in the embrace of death.

So they found her, dead, with the half-written letter and the broken wedding-ring.

The duchess was almost frantic. She refused to believe that Leah was dead. It was utterly impossible, she declared. She called for brandy, wine, hot water—every possible restorative. She would not see the mark of death on the beautiful face. She sent for doctors, and one of the first was Dr. Evan Griffiths.

He recognized her at once. This was the despairing girl who had come to him long ago with her whole heart to die; and the longing had been granted. He was accustomed to many a sad sight and scene, to every kind of sickness and distress; but he had seen nothing which touched him more than the dead face of this hapless girl. Tears came into his eyes.

The duchess told him of the broken wedding-ring; she thought it a most marvellous coincidence. And the little story conveyed to the doctor almost all that he wanted to know. Of course there was nothing to be done. Dr. Griffiths said that there was no need for an inquiry; the cause of death was heart disease—there was no doubt of it.

"The duchess raised her hands in astonishment.
"Heart disease!" she cried. "I have never heard her complain of her heart!"
"I have," sobbed Hettie. "I have frequently heard her complain of a sharp, strange pain, and of her heart beating slowly."

Woodall Forest

CHAPTER III.
Swintford Park was one of the most beautiful stretches of wooded land in England. It was densely stocked with trees of many kinds, but the sweet-smelling lime and fragrant fir predominated. There were magnificent oaks, under which the Roundheads had held high revelry after the ancient castle of Dudley had been bombarded and cannonaded by Cromwell. There were caverns where the unhappy royalists had secreted themselves, glades of deep, velvety grass, fairy dells, and valleys of flowering moss.
Beyond the ancient park were hundreds of rolling acres of meadow land, and it was in one of these fields, under the shadow of a belt of lindens, that the flower shows, bazars, and fetes of Swintford were usually held. The flower show and bazaar in which Lady Diana Howard was so interested was favored, by queen's weather. There was not a cloud in all the blue sky, and just breeze enough to temper the heat of the sun and gently ripple the gayly colored streamers that floated merrily from the centre-poles of the pavilions, where tea and other refreshments were to be sold.

Workmen had been busy since early morning, but by midday all was in readiness for the visitors, and at three o'clock the gates were opened, and people began to arrive in carriage and on foot. The vicar had spared no pains to advertise the bazaar, and had secured for the flower-stalls half-a-dozen ladies of title, all young and lovely, and full of a bountiful harvest when his eye fell upon the picturesque and animated scene.

The highest and the poorest of several parishes were mingling together, all dressed in holiday attire. There were ladies wearing rich silk and costly lace, and ladies in print and calico. There were men in showy blazers and flannels; men in morning dress, as though just fresh from Piccadilly, and men in fustian coats. But all were happy and smiling, and impressed by the beauty, the sunshine, the rich coloring, the fragrance, and music about them.

Until four o'clock the flowers were on view, after that hour the bazaar began. Besides the flower-stalls, there were stalls where trinkets, laces, and knock-knacks of all kinds were to be sold. All these things had been presented to the bazaar by the well-to-do people of the parish.

There was a private pavilion set apart for the use of the ladies and their friends who were to preside at the various stalls, and long before four o'clock this shelter for the beautiful was surrounded by a crowd of fashionable young men.

As the ladies arrived, there was a great flourishing of hats and caps, hurried introductions, glances of admiration, and amiable whispers.
"Here are the Craythornes, Charles," cried a fair-haired, blue-eyed young girl. "The two girls, Ada and Flossie, and their mamma, Lady Craythorne! Do you know them?"
"I think I have heard of them, Cecil, and remember meeting Lady Craythorne in London some time ago, but I never had an introduction."
"Then come along; they are going in at the other side. The girls are fine!"
Lord Cecil seized his friend's arm, and in another minute was introducing Sir Charles Hastings to Lady Craythorne and her two dashing daughters. Both favored the young baronet with their most bewitching smiles, and hoped that he would patronize their stall.

Sir Charles bowed his handsome head. He had no particular use for any of their trinkets, but he promised to buy some flowers.
"You must spend all your money with us!" said Ada, coquettishly.
"But that would scarcely be fair," Sir Charles laughed. "I understand that the vicar has artfully created a friendly rivalry among you ladies."
"That is just the reason why I make the request, Sir Charles! Our stall is Number Seven."
"What a splendid fellow!" she whispered to her sister, and Lady Craythorne resolved to make some inquiries about him. It would never do to allow an "eligible" to escape her. Ada was not yet provided for, and Flossie did not appear to be able to bring Lord Cecil to the point.

Prince at Egyptian Capital.

Enthusiastic Reception by Cairenes -- Satisfactory Progress With Anglo-Irish Treaty -- Hottentot Insurgent Leaders Killed -- Scorching Heat in Boston.

PRINCE AT CAIRO.
LONDON, June 9. The Prince of Wales arrived at the Egyptian capital at 11 o'clock yesterday where he was given a tremendous reception. He was received by the Premier, High Commissioner, Egyptian and Crown representatives. The last stop of the Prince on the Egyptian trip will be at Gibraltar.

DIFFERENCES ELIMINATED.
LONDON, June 9. The main difficulties of the Signature to the Anglo-Irish Treaty over the proposed Irish Constitution are eliminated in consequence of the agreement reached at the Conference in London, in which Mr. Lloyd George and Arthur Balfour, President of the House of Commons, have taken the lead.

TO REVIEW EXPERTS WORK.
LONDON, June 9. A plenary meeting of the signatories of the Irish Treaty is expected to deal mainly with a review of the work of the legal experts who have been examining the draft of the constitution. Satisfactory progress is understood to have been made in the work of drafting the clauses of the constitution to which the British cabinet objected and everything is said to tend towards an amicable settlement of discussions.

BANKERS ADJOURN.
PARIS, June 9. The International Bankers' at a meeting tonight decided to adjourn for two months and then resume consideration of a proposed loan to Germany.

TRACK WAS SHORT.
HELSINGFORS, June 9. The mark set by Hannes Kolehmainen, Finnish-American runner, will stand as a world record, a measurement of the track showing it to be 10 metres short of twenty-five kilometres. The record for twenty-five kilometres is one hour, 26 mins., 28 seconds, established by Kolehmainen in 1920. His run over the short track yesterday was completed in one hour, 22 minutes and 43 seconds.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

ANY WOMAN CAN.

Give two women exactly the same clothes give them equally attractive features and figures, and one would still look far more attractive than the other if they differed in a certain respect.

The respect to which I refer is in regard to grooming. If one woman knew how to put her clothes on well and groom herself properly, and the other didn't, there would still be a big difference in their appearance.

What Grooming Means.

Grooming of course includes many things—bathing, the care of the nails and the hair, the care of the skin and the care of the clothes themselves. When we speak of a well-groomed woman we mean a woman "immaculately clean" (that goes without saying) with well-kept hands, hair shampooed at proper intervals and attractively dressed, shoes well shined and not run down at the heels, clothes properly pressed and brushed.

Putting on the clothes well is another branch of the same art. It is really marvelous how different clothes put on carefully can look from the same clothes that are just scrambled into. It is interesting to watch a woman who has a talent for putting on her clothes well as she adjusts herself to her gown or her gowns to herself. (I don't really know which it is), places a hat at just the right angle, and deftly arranges that final test of feminine skill at adjusting clothes—the veil.

The Placing of a Hat.
There is no better touchstone of the different effect clothes can give when properly and improperly put on than the placing of a hat. We all know that a hat never looks quite the same at home as it does when Madame of the Hat Shop deftly lowers it at just the right angle upon our heads and she stands back to hypnotize us with admiration while the birds us regard ourselves in a carefully chosen mirror, carefully placed in the most flattering of lights. Part of the hat's greater charm at this time is the effect of the lights, the becoming error and the excitement of a new hat, but part is also Madame's perfect art in the matter of placing. There are some amateurs, to be sure, who acquire such virtuosity as the professional that they are comparatively few.

Let the amateur be carelessly put on, too far back and with not enough cant to one side and it may cease entirely to become.

Absolutely perfect grooming, like perfection in anything, is the result of an innate capacity for taking pains, and a willingness to spend a great deal of time. It is an admirable thing to have if you've the time to spend, for perfect clothes are an admirable thing to have if you have the money that you have the right to and that way.

One is Pay Back Too Much.
But one can spend time unjustifiably as well as money. With both it must be a question of the things you want and what you can afford to spend. A woman whose sister has the reputation of being perfectly groomed told me of a visit the latter once paid her. They were going on a trip for the day, the dishes had to be done, the house put in order, children dressed. Her sister spent an hour and a half getting herself dressed to go out, doing her hair three times before she was satisfied. She did not lift a hand to help with any of the work.

The hairdresser in an expensive hotel told me that many of the women at the hotel came in twice a day for a light wave because that gave the best effect.

I call such things paying too high a price for grooming. But between that and going about with ill tended nails, ill dressed hair, constantly dropping hair pins, wrinkled clothes and sloppy shoes is a golden medium of reasonable care in grooming and adjustment which almost any woman can attain.

A DRESSY COSTUME.

3518-3908. Just to prove that Fashion is not all a thing of straight lines and "slip on" styles comes this attractive gown, with its broad vest and "apron" drapery. This is a very unique model and one that may be developed in any of the materials now in vogue. Foulard in one of the new patterns is here combined with crepe. One could have this design in gingham and organdy, or in plain and figured voile.

The Waist Pattern 3518 is cut in 7 Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. The Skirt Pattern 3908 is cut in 6 Sizes: 25, 27, 29, 31, 33 and 35 inches waist measure. To make this style for a medium size and of one material will require 6 1/2 yards of 40 inches wide. As illustrated vest, collar, cuffs and drapery will require 2 1/2 yards. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 2 1/4 yards.

TWO separate patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

A GOOD SCHOOL DRESS.

3214. The smart collar and long waist effect makes this design very becoming to growing girls. It will develop well in chambray with plaid or check gingham for collar and cuffs, or in serge, or gabardine if a warmer dress is desired.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 4 yards of 22 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

W. M. S. Convention.

FINAL MEETING AND ELECTION OF OFFICERS. MORNING.

The Friday morning session opened at 10 o'clock with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Lavell. There was a good attendance, and many of the ladies spoke of the help and inspiration received at the convention. Business was transacted, and a quiet half-hour followed, led by Rev. E. G. East, M.A. of St. Thomas's Church. After singing and prayer, Mr. East addressed the gathering, and gave a message that he once gave to a battalion of 5,000 men in France before going over the top, the story of the love of Jesus. There are certain duties devolving upon us as Christians, and, if we neglect them, we have not the true missionary spirit. There is no need for me to say this here, as your presence at this convention, your work and your achievements denote that missions are part of your heart and life. I want to remind you that we have duties in life to perform, and duty becomes delight, when we have once seen the face of Jesus. It brings us to the point where we find it better to give than to receive. It is the doctrine of the second mile. Jesus said "If a man ask you to go a mile, go with him twain." There is a higher law than compulsion. It should be our pleasure to say with the Psalmist: "I delight to do Thy will, O God." There is nothing that can take God's love from us. It is on our part that love is transitory. A story is told of a famous artist, who painted a picture of the Lord's Supper. A friend came in to see the picture. In looking at it he remarked: "What a beautiful chalice Jesus is holding in His hand." The painter did not say a word but went and painted it out. He turned round and said: "I want nothing to be seen in this picture, save the face of Jesus." When blind Bartimaeus received his sight, the first thing he saw was the face of Jesus. When you really get a glimpse of that face it easily becomes the first thing. We are ready enough to take our troubles to God, but how often do we take our joys? It is not so much success as our faithfulness. God will not say, "Well done, good and successful servant," but "Well done, good and faithful servant." Let me pass on to you the message that I gave to the children a few days ago the secret of Joy. This should be the secret of every heart. J-O-Y. Jesus first, Others second, Yourself last. A short prayer followed this address and the morning session closed with the hymn: "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."

AFTERNOON.

At one o'clock an excellent lunch was served by the ladies of Gover Street in the Lecture Room of the Church. The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises. A memorial service was held for the members who died during the year. The Misses Moore and Bishop sang a duet—"There shall be Light at Eventide." Mrs. Lavell then conducted the consecration service. Entire consecration is the keynote of success in the Christian life. Unless we consecrate our lives entirely to the Lord there is sure to be something lacking. We cannot see what is best nor know what is best, but we can trust God to see for us. So in fitting before we close that we should reconsecrate ourselves to the work. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Through faith we can triumph over all our difficulties. Mrs. Lavell then read a few verses from Mat. 18, the story of the woman of Canaan whose daughter was grievously vexed with a devil, and who came to Jesus because she had heard of His wonderful healing power. She told her story, but Jesus answered her not a word. This was her first disappointment and test of her faith. Then the disciples came and said to Jesus: "Send her away." This was a second test of her faith. Jesus then said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Even this, but she did not daunt the woman, for she came and worshipped Him, saying, "Lord help me." Jesus answered and said: "It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to dogs." Her answer was, "Truth, Lord, yet the dog eat of the crumbs that fall from the master's table." Then Jesus answered and said: "O woman, great is thy faith." He it unto thee even as thou wilt," and her daughter was made whole from that hour. This address was followed by the consecration service. Unfinished business was then taken up. It was decided to send to Mrs. Ross, ex-President of the Board of Managers thanks for her kind message sent through Mrs. Lavell to the Convention. This brought the convention to a close. In the evening the delegates were taken on motor drives through the kindness of a number of their hosts and friends. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Holyrood Notes.

Caplins have struck in here in abundance, but as yet no bankers have arrived. Last year on the 10th inst. two were baited.

Codfish are plentiful, and of a very large size. One fish weighing 10 lbs. was jigged by a chap named Hickey.

Times are dull here and there is no employment, except for a few destitute men who are engaged putting a block to Mr. Kirby's wharf. The public wharf is in a dilapidated condition and needs instant attention.

Notwithstanding the poorness of the times, a few weddings will take place here in short.

Annoying.

When M. Viviani, the famous French statesman, went to America, he was annoyed because no one heard of him and everyone had heard of Joffre, and he (the statesman) had only his eloquence to gain a reputation among people who did not understand his language.

There had never been any love lost between the two, the Hon. Neville Lytton says, in his book, "The Press and the General Staff." It was evidently humorous to find that in the audience of M. Viviani addressed the only person who was moved was Joffre, who, while annoyed at the "civillian," could not remain dry-eyed.

On the other hand, Viviani, mad at finding himself second fiddle, threw the utmost passion into his speeches, only to succeed in moving the one man whom he probably wished at the bottom of the sea.

What Actually Happened

A farmer sued a railway company for damages resulting from the death of one of his cows, the poor animal having been run into by a goods train. The engine-driver was giving evidence. The barrister for the farmer heckled the witness on all kinds of technicalities, but kept reverting to his one pet question, which was: "Now tell me, was the cow on the line?"

The engine-driver became peeved and, having been asked the same question so often answered: "Well, if you want me to tell the real truth, the cow was bathing in the stream on the other side of the bank. But the engine saw it, left the rails, dashed over the bank, and landing clean on the cow, strangled it to death without a word."

Sold!

Past stall after stall went the rich merchant, followed by a smart footman in livery, for the annual bazaar was in full swing.

"Ah, Mr. Goldington," gushed a pretty girl at one of the stalls, "what are you going to buy? Auntie and I are in charge of this stall. We have cushions, pen-wipers, and all sorts of—"

"There's one thing I should like to buy," said the amorous visitor. "Do you sell kisses at your stall?"
"Oh, certainly," came the prompt reply. "A sovereign each!"
"Right!" said the merchant. "I'll take two, please."

"Auntie," cried the wily damsel, "forward, please. Two kisses for this gentleman!"
For a moment the wealthy one was nonplused, but only for a moment. He turned to his footman.

"James," he said, coolly, "just take this purchase, please."

"Not Worth His Salt."

With salt numbered among the cheapest articles of food, to say that a man is "not worth his salt" sounds like a very radical expression of worthlessness.

It should be remembered, however, that there was a time when salt was a highly-prized commodity. An examination of the word "salary" will prove in what esteem salt was held, for the Latin salarium was the allowance made to the Roman soldier in order that he might provide himself with salt.

Moreover, the ceremonial importance of salt is shown in the salt-stand which appeared on the Saxon table. Its position marked the upper and lower board, separating the lord of the house and those who shared his salt as honoured guests from those who earned their salt.

Very Queer Cargoes.

The oddest cargo on record was probably that carried lately by a British steamer bound for Morocco. It consisted of some two million gallons of water. To carry that amount of water a distance of three hundred miles sounds too absurd, but the matter becomes clearer when we are told that the water was specially purified drinking water for the use of the Spanish troops fighting the rebels in Morocco.

Another cargo sent to Spain consisted of an immense quantity of bank notes. There were several millions of these, most of them of small value. It is a testimonial to our printing that Spain gave us such an order, and is due to the fact that notes printed in Spain have been so largely counterfeited.

A master stevedore, working at the Albert Docks, recently received compensation for being hit on the head by a bundle of old horse-shoes which were being loaded into a steamer's hold.

In court the judge asked the stevedore for sending old horse-shoes out of the country. Counsel told him that they were being sent to China, where they were made into spades, a purpose for which they were specially suitable.

Speaking of exports to the East, there is a certain English firm which, in the course of its ordinary business, produces large quantities of waste splinter and lead. This material is melted up, run into moulds, and exported in the form of images of various Eastern gods.

Tarvia Prevents Dust; Tarvia Preserves Roads.

In the United States and Canada Tarvia is the standard by which all other road-binders and preservatives are judged.

Tarvia is made in three grades.—"Tarvia X" for road construction, "Tarvia B" for preservation of road surface and "Tarvia K-P" for repairing roads. Both "Tarvia B" and "Tarvia K-P" have been used in St. John's Municipal works for several years.

"Tarvia B" actually enters the road surface, acts as a cement and resists the tear and wear of traffic. By cementing together the dust particles "Tarvia B" prevents the formation of dust.

After the application of "Tarvia B" to a road surface a thin layer of sand should be applied to take care of the excess liquid and to prevent tracking. This layer of sand will prevent horses from slipping and automobiles from skidding and will prolong the life of the road surface. Broken stone is not as satisfactory or as economical as sand for this purpose.

A road after being treated with "Tarvia B" does not become muddy in rainy weather, but sheds the water and dries off quickly after the rain, leaving the road in admirable condition while untreated roads are still deep with mud.

"Tarvia B" surfacing should be applied annually but only when roads are in good condition and free from surplus dust. All holes and depressions should be repaired with fine broken stone and "Tarvia K-P."

When "Tarvia B" is applied by mechanical sprinker, care should be taken to have men with brooms and hand sprinklers go over the ground so that excess "Tarvia B" may be brushed out and not allowed to run waste and so that bare spots be treated and the entire road surface secured.

A loose, "happy-go-lucky" application is sheer waste of time and money, "whatever is worth doing, is worth doing well."

"Tarvia B" is admirably adapted to the treatment of sidewalks and walks in parks, hospital grounds and cemeteries. Wooden planking of bridges will last longer if treated with "Tarvia B." Fences, posts, sills and houses etc., will be greatly benefited by treatment with "Tarvia B."

A Musical Education!

Next time you are in a house where there's a Diamond Amberola, watch the youngsters. They can handle the machine and records without Mother worrying about breakages. Notice the tiny tots trying to sing, and then ask yourself whether the way is being paved for your own children to acquire that greatest of accomplishments—a musical education. The New Edison Diamond Amberola is on view at 178 Water Street.

Portuguese Regulations.

DECLARATION OF CARGO VALUES ARE CALLED FOR.

Writing from Oporto under date of 25th. says to-day's issue of the Review, Messrs. J. T. Costa & Co. send the following information regarding new regulations just adopted by the Portuguese Government:

We consider it to your advantage to acquaint you of a decree No. 7399 of the Portuguese Government concerning the shipment of goods in general shipped in foreign ports and to Portugal, says our correspondents.

The said decree the quantity of cargo inserted in each Bill of Lading must be provided with a "Declaração de Valor" (Declaration of value) in triplicate, signed by the shipper and used by the Portuguese Consulate at the port where vessel comes to anchor. It may be written in Portuguese, French, English, Spanish or Italian, the right value of the merchandise must be inserted there, and the fees chargeable by the Portuguese Consul for this document 1 per cent on fish cargoes upon their receipt.

A receiver or consignee of a cargo presenting Bills of Lading at the Custom House of the destination must be provided with the double declaration, in fact with the double value (2 per cent) of the value of goods.

When the value declared is found to be inferior to the right value, the Custom House at the port of destination will collect the difference due to the Portuguese State.

When the vessel proceeds from a port where there is no Portuguese Consul, a declaration of cargo certified by the Newfoundland Custom House at the port of loading has been accepted, although this latter part is in discussion, and the fees of 2 per cent, which should have been paid at the loading port, are collectable at port of destination.

Two per cent is the maximum of Consular fees as per Government tariff, in which fish is included, but there are other articles of merchandise where the Consular tax is between 1/2 per cent. to 1 per cent.

It would fine complication at the Custom House at the port of destination and detention to ships, a legalization of the Consul's declaration would be brought by the vessel containing the goods.

Insured by Live Wire.

REPAIRERS' NARROW ESCAPE.

Yesterday afternoon Arch Rice, an employee of the St. John's Light and Power Co., had both his hands badly injured as a result of coming in contact with a live wire. Rice, who is an experienced linesman, was engaged working in an electric service near T. J. Winter's on Duckworth Street, when he came in contact with a live wire which rendered him partially unconscious. He fell across the wires, which he lay until rescued by Foreman John Day and assistant T. Murphy. Rice was taken to Dr. Fallon's hospital, where his injuries were attended to. He was afterwards conveyed to the General Hospital, where he will be confined for some weeks.

Forty-five Minutes From Broadway."

The name of George M. Cohan is conjure with in the theatrical circles. His genius has kept him at the top for many years in America.

His fame is international. So it is stated that "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" is the work of his hands, it is unnecessary to say that this production ran for two weeks at the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York. It contains some catchy numbers such as "Mary Had an Old Name" and "Easy Pickens."

The three W's, Henry White, Walter White and Thomas Wall will be the "Pickens," and it is warranted to bring down the house. A new feature will be three songs by the "Ladies"—"Macushea," "Mother," and "What an Irishman." Mrs. Macushea, Miss Oswald will be heard in some beautiful solos.

"Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" show that will delight everyone.

Doing Well on the Banks

THE MENNEN COMPANY Newark, N.J., U.S.A.

TRINITY.

Some twenty-five years ago I was watching an old sea captain in Cape Breton getting ready to paint his vessel inside. He had just brought on board a half-gallon tin of paint. He opened the tin, stirred the contents well, and then poured out about two-thirds of it into another tin. Then, to my surprise, he dipped up some water from over the side of the vessel, and putting a pint of it into the tin that was one-third full of mixed paint, he began to stir the water and paint. To my greater surprise it began to mix, and in a few minutes the water had disappeared, and he had a quart of good looking paint. It was a little too thick, so he thinned it with oil and turpentine, and then went on with his painting. He saw that I was interested and surprised and he told me that he had always done this with his paint for the vessel, as he found that sea-water was just as good as oil, when used in the proper proportions—and, of course, cheaper.

He also told me that only sea water could be used in this way, and that no other water would mix with paint. Though it was still a surprise to me, I took it for granted that it was a result of chemical action, and left it at that. I intended to experiment with it some day, as I had in the habit of painting; but I had not the time to do it just then, and by the next painting season I had forgotten all about it. A few weeks ago, however, I looked up my paint and brushes that I had put away after my decorative work last fall. In a quart tin I found about three inches of mixed water paint. As I stirred it to find if it was any good, I recalled what I had seen the captain do in Cape Breton, twenty-five years before, and I decided to test it. I went down to the wharf and filled a half-pint bottle with sea-water. I poured it on the mixed paint in the tin and began to stir. In a few minutes it had mixed all right, and I had more than a pint of what looked like excellent paint. It was too thick for use, so I thinned it with equal parts of oil and turpentine, and then I had a pint and a half of paint ready for use.

By way of experiment I painted the facings outside of a building, and also the window boxes of the building inside. The paint went on beautifully with the brush, and three days afterwards it had dried thoroughly, and to-day it is hard and firm, and with no tendency whatever to rub off. So far, my experiment has proved the mixture to be all right; but I shall not be quite satisfied with it, till it has had, at least, three months of exposure to sun and rain. There is nothing new about this, so far as I know. It was used here in Trinity for limited outside work some forty-three years ago; and I presume the majority of sea-captains are familiar with it. There is nothing of the "pebble-soup" trick about it, as every pint of water, in proper proportions, means a pint of paint. The question is—will it last long enough to justify its use? I shall be glad to hear from persons who have used it, and to get the results of their experiments. I don't know enough about it yet, to recommend it; but the thing sure, it cannot be much worse than some other preparations on the market. In the meantime it would be advisable not to say much about it, for if the Government finds out that seawater is being used to increase the paint supply, there will be a tax put on the sea-water, for sun; at least inside the three-mile limit. I may add that in my experiments I did not use the salt-water mixture as a first coat; and I used it as a second coat only as white over white, and grey over grey—and as such it acts and looks all right. What will the harvest be?

Thirty and Adjoining Settlements Two Hundred and Fifty Years Ago. A I of mine who knows the history of Newfoundland "like a book" and who call up the misty past at will; realizing that I have been playing the greater number of my Trinity historical tunes on the string of "a hundred years ago," has kindly sent me some material of two hundred and forty-five years ago, such as will en-mouth; 80 tons, 4 guns, 10 men, 2 boats, 1 stage. Salomon Cove—Nicholas Ballard, Mary, Jersey; 40 tons, 19 men, 2 boats, 1 stage. English Harbor—Joseph Grigg, Dartmouth; 75 tons, 40 men, 19 boats, 1 stage. Nicholas Newell, Brixham; 80 tons, 60 men, 12 boats, 2 stages. Bonavista—Sedrac Beale, Poole; 90 tons, 3 guns, 44 men, 8 boats, 2 stages. Robert Baker, Weymouth; 100 tons, 9 guns, 55 men, 10 boats, 2 stages. John Caswage, Weymouth; 70 tons, 39 men, 6 boats, 1 stage. John Edwards, Poole; 60 tons, 4 guns, 29 men, 6 boats, 1 stage. John Sweet, Dartmouth; 90 tons, 10 men, 21 boats, 1 stage. Jas. Stoke, Hampton; 48 tons, 3 men John Bennett, London; 60 tons, 3 guns, 14 men, 2 boats, 1 stage. Simon Sherton, Dartmouth; 30 tons, 6 men. Thos. Rose, Topson; 48 tons, 7 men. Henry Winard, Topson; 40 tons, 2 guns, 8 men. Wm. Surrey, Weymouth; 40 tons, 6 men. John Crist, London; 170 tons, 16 guns, 30 men.

In looking over these lists and seeing the number of guns carried by those vessels at that time, I was at a loss to know why guns constituted a part of the outfit. At first I thought they were for sealing; but when I recalled the fact that all sealing at that time was done by nets, history then reminded me that the guns (small cannon) were carried as protection against pirates: French, Turks, Algerines, Spanish, Portuguese, etc. who visited our shore with decidedly selfish intentions. Those were lively times. There were no "nickels" in those days, and the fishermen, as well as the pirates had to have some amusement.

In 1675 the Taverners were the principal people in Bay-de-Verde, and eventually they moved to Trinity, where they are still represented by one family, and "Taverner's Point". There are two copies of Capt. James Cook's charts (1783) in Trinity; one is owned by Mr. Martin Lawlor, of Trinity East, and the other by Mr. Wm. W. White, of H.M. Customs, Trinity. They are as rare to-day as they are still minutely accurate, showing as they do, the indomitable perseverance and genius of the man who, from the very lowest origin—a poor cabin boy, solely by his own exertions, rose to the rank of Captain in the Navy, and the highest position in his age as a navigator, nautical astronomer, and scientific observer. One of these charts, I understand, will be placed in the Museum at St. John's.

S.S. Neptune and Blanc Sablon. We were all glad to see the good ship Neptune in port again on Friday (8rd) looking like a veritable ice-hunter on a summer holiday. She came in here on her way from St. John's to Blanc Sablon, having called at Bay Roberts and Hant's Hr. for fishermen. After taking on board the balance of men, girls and supplies here, she left again on Saturday morning direct for Blanc Sablon. She is in charge of Capt. Kennedy. Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Grant, Miss Florence Grant and Master Robert Miller were passengers by her, together with 300 men, boys and girls, to take part in the summer fishery. The Neptune will lay up at Bras d'Or during the summer, and be

The steamer "Walter Kennedy" will follow from Hawke's Bay to Blanc Sablon with a load of pit-prop wood, to be spun into fish-cask staves, etc. in the mill there, and for use in cask-making for fish packing, etc. The steamer will then lay up too in Bras d'Or for the summer. Mr. Job Taylor, nephew of the owner, Mr. Job Grant, will learn some practical lessons of the business. Mr. and Mrs. Grant and Miss Grant will go to Blanc Sablon by way of Humbermouth.

Mr. Grant, after thirty-five years of conscious responsibility for the business, has (with Mr. Job's approval) handed over the general management to his son—Mr. Samuel Grant—whilst he—Mr. Grant—goes in charge of the local interests connected with the supplying and looking after the fishery by the natives; and will, of course, always be on hand for professional consultations. The limits of the present season's fishery will extend from Middle Bight to Blanc Sablon, covering thirty miles of coast line, and including 182 active fishermen; making a total of 450 fishermen, including Blanc Sablon. Mr. Grant will superintend the shipment of fish, and the work of several other departments—and will never find himself short of a job. Two cargoes of salt and a cargo of coal will be delivered at Blanc Sablon within the next few weeks. Five practical coopers have been taken there for local work.

Mr. Grant—as well as Trinity—has abundant cause to be thankful that he has raised a son like "Mr. Sam," to hand over the business to. In the best interests of the owners, the men and himself. We are all proud of "Mr. Sam" as a citizen; and with that personal endowment of calm, quiet, level-headedness, together with a high sense of his duty to God and man, no better man could be placed in charge of such a business, and "we wish him good luck in the Name of the Lord."

One of our funniest local characters of fifty years ago was known as "Poshey Ann." She and her cat lived together in a little ten by twelve house. Some caller complimented "Poshey" on the sleekness of her cat; and "Poshey" remarked: "No wonder she's fat! for she gets lots to eat, and she has the run of the house." The extensive exercise area did the trick.

"The Sample Alone Healed Me After Years of Suffering." I had been a sufferer from facial eczema for about ten years. I was treated unavailingly by several doctors and remedies. About two years ago I saw D.D.D. advertised. I at once desired to give it a trial and sent for a sample bottle. The sample alone healed me and I have had no return of the trouble since. D.D.D. has been a godsend to me as well as to many others. I give you full permission to use these few lines to help to tell other poor sufferers about D.D.D. MRS. HENRY HARVEY, Black Lake, Que. You write too, to the D.D.D. Company of Toronto, for a sample and get immediate relief. Or, ask your druggist and he will tell you what D.D.D. has accomplished in your own neighborhood. Cut Your Fuel Bills 1/3 You should know how important it is to weather strip your house and buildings. Weatherstrips keep out cold and actually save one third of your fuel expense. Fuel is as high as ever and there is very little chance that its cost will come down soon. It is too expensive to waste. Not only can you keep out cold by installing Ceco Metal Weatherstrips, but your house is kept free from dust, dirt and soot, and the disturbance of street noise. Ceco Metal Weatherstrips are economically installed, they last as long as the building. They are cheaper than storm and sash doors. No matter whether your house is in the process of construction or old as the hills, let us show you without obligation the convenience and effectiveness of this most practical weather strip on the market. Fashions and Fads. Striped rathme makes the newest sports dresses. A new lace in gunmetal color is used as trimming. A red hat is smart with a red-and-white costume. White crepe de chine sports skirts are accented plaid. Plain white flannel skirts are favored for sports wear.

Music as She's Taught in the Highlands.

(Contributed.) TOO MUCH LIGHT AND TOO LITTLE. A Parish Minister in Strathgairn, noted for his pious habits, had his globe land wholly cropped with corn upon one occasion. After the ingathering of harvest, news reached him that a considerable fall in prices was expected, and he ordered his servicable "man," John, to get the corn threshed and taken to market with all possible speed. Now the beadle, having a well-founded hatred for his master's greed, set about his work in his ordinary style—a slow, if sure process. John's style, however, did not, on this occasion please the minister, who ordered him to get through with the task, even though he should get it done by candle-light.

"Weel, weel," said the beadle; "asy nae mair about it; it'll be done, sir, e'en as ye desire." Next day the minister, hearing the sound of the fall, entered the barn to see what progress was being made with the work, when, to his astonishment and anger, he found his beadle "falling" away with might and main, and a candle burning brightly on each side of the threshing floor.

"What's this I see? What's the meaning of this?" demanded his master. "Candles burning in broad daylight!" "Oh, contain yerself, sir—contain yerself!" replied John with provoking coolness, "I'm daein' as mair than ye bade me, for I'm daein' the job baith by day-light and by candle-light." The beadle after being severely lectured on his extravagant conduct, was ordered to take the candles to the kitchen and henceforth—and at all times he was to be deprived of their use. One night shortly after, a message came to the minister that one of his parishioners, who lived at a distance, was supposed to be dying, and was anxious to see him. John was despatched to saddle the horse; and his master set about equipping himself for the journey. He then stepped across to where John was waiting with the animal, and seizing the reins, was about to mount, when suddenly, seeing a pair of horns on the crest of the steed, he shouted: "What in all the earth is this you have done, John?" The beadle comically peering in the darkness at the creature exclaimed: "I declare, sir, if I hawna saddled the ooc instead o' the horse, for the want o' candle-light."

SCOTCH HUMOUR. Not very long ago a countryman got married, and soon after invited a friend to his house and introduced him to his new wife, who, by the way, was a person of a remarkable plain appearance. "What do you think of her, John?" he asked his friend, when the good lady had retired from the room for a little. "She's no very bonnie!" was the candid and discomfiting reply. "That's true," said the husband; "she's no muckle to look at, but she's a rare gude-hearted woman. Positively ugly outside, but a' that's lovely inside." "Lord, man, I am," said the friend, gravely, "it's a peety, ye couldna glype her!"

THE WIFE OF A SMALL FARMER IN Perthshire some time ago went to a chemist in the "Fair City" with two prescriptions—one for her husband, the other for her cow. Finding she had not enough of money to pay for both, the chemist asked her which she would take. "Give me the stuff for the cow," she said; "the morn will do well-enough for him, pur body. Gin he were to dee I could sune get another mair, but I'm no sure that I could sase sune get another ooc."

SCREENS O' TARTAN. There is a characteristic story which Highlanders themselves delight to tell, to the effect, that once upon a time, when one of their countrymen was passing a farm—steading, the dog attached thereto came rushing and barking towards him, and latterly added injury to the insult which had been offered by inserting its fangs in the naked calf of one of the branny Celt's legs. Maddened by the pain, the Highlander seized a hay-fork which happened to be conveniently near, and with one fell thrust transfixed the sparkling tyke to the earth. The howl of agony quickly brought the farmer on the scene, who on seeing his favourite collic writhing on the ground, exclaimed in wrath. "Why the devil did ye no tak the other end o' the fork to the dog, You stupid ass?"

MUSICAL COMEDY. Let us now glance in full Highland costume of an instance showing rare shrewdness and wit combined. A Highland piper having a pupil placed in his hands by his chief, and not knowing the notes of music—the tambourine, minimo, crochets, and quavers, etc.—by the proper designations, although he knew each one by head mark, and its musical value very well, set to work in this way. "Here, Donald," said he, "took your pipe, my good lad, and blow a blast." Donald did as requested. "So, so!" exclaimed the old man, "at his well blown, indeed—just beautiful. But what is sound, Donald, without sense? Just so, You may blow for ever without making a tune of it if I do not tell you how to queer things on to paper are to help you. Look here lad, You see that big fellow with his round open face (pointing to a semibreve, between the two lines of a bar), he moves slowly from tail line to the while you beat one with your foot and give a long blast. Now you put a leg to him. You make two of him, and he will move twice as fast. If you blacken him face he will run four times faster as a fellow with a white face; but, besides blackenin' him face, if you will bend him knees, or tie him legs, he will hop eight times faster as to white-faced fellow I showed you at first time. And now whenever you blow your pipe, Donald, remember this, the tighter you will tie these fellows legs to faster they will run to quicker they will be sure to dance.

THE OLD SCOTTISH BEADLE. When beadle meets beadle, as is the common practice with persons in other walks of life, they enter glibly into a free-and-easy criticism of their respective chiefs. One is admittedly "strong in prayer," whilst another is set aside as "weak in doctrine" and so forth. "I think our minister does well," said one. "Man hoo he gars the stour, see out o' the cushions!" sneered another. "If ye've a notion o' power!" preached one come over an' gie us a day's hearin'. Wad ye believe it? for at the short time you man o' ours has delivered word among us, he has knockt three popoos, a' to shivers, an' has dung the guts out o' five Bibles!"

Not long ago a funeral party in the North of Scotland on arriving at the Kirkyard and placing the coffin over the grave, discovered that the latter was not long enough to admit of the interment. "Man, John," said the chief mourner to the beadle, "ye've made the grave awter short."

"Ye made a mistak' in the measurin', then, John," said the party, "or ye've gane wrong w' the howkin'."

"Me wrong!" snorted the beadle, livid with rage; "see that ye haven't broocht the wrong corp."

Fads and Fashions. A frock of tan crepe has knife plaitings of brown crepe. The short-sleeve silk-on sweater is favored by the flapper. Periwinkle is a favorite color, both in dress and millinery. Ribbed mercerized cotton stockings are worn with oxfords. White and yellow are a favored combination for sports wear. A new jersey with a crepe surface is favored for sports wear. For both formal and informal wear, white is very fashionable. Some charming palamas are of pink and white checked gingham. A fitted coat of black moire is worn with a white pique dress. Fabric flowers are quite the smartest trimming one can have. The draped gown is very new and becoming to the staid-looking type. Kiddies are wearing smocks of cretonne over black eaten bloomers.

Just Folks

"Why?" from the cradle to the grave, is man's persistent cry. "Why do we work?" and "why do we save?" "Why do we live and die?" Ever it's ringing in our ears, With never a clear reply; "What is the reason for our tears?" "Sorrow is ours, but why?" The great man questions day by day, Even as you and I; Many must work and few may play, But nobody tells us why.

Why do we lose and why do we gain? Why do we smile or sigh? Ever we stand at life's window pane Seeking the reason why? Yet still believe it is ordered so, Though our joys in ashes lie. Some day the purpose of life we'll know And our God shall tell us why.

A LITTLE SLUMBER.

At night I lay me down to sleep, worn out by toilsome jobs; the bed on which I rest is cheap, the pillow stuffed with coals; the slats on which the mattress lies oft dump me on the floor, and yawning, from the wreck I rise, fix things, and sleep some more. Sometimes my idle neighbors weep, and wring their hands and say, "Alas, alas, we cannot sleep! In vain we seek the hay! On downy beds that were too dear, through sleepless nights we lie, and every hour seems like a year, as it goes dragging by." They file through the golden days, they have no work to do; they do not hoe the growing maize, they have no logs to hew; they do not trim the stringless bean, or prune the climbing squash; they burn up pecks of gasoline, and read some hectic tosh. Their flabby muscles never know the stimulant of work, and all they witness here below is bound to bore andirk. So when they to their beds repair, to saw off sundry snores, the rest they get for isn't there, no balmy sleep restores. But I go weaving through the town on useful tasks all day, and when at night I cuddle down, I sleep the hours away.

ADDRESS TO MEMBERS OF THE ROTARY CLUB ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., JUNE 6, 1922, BY MR. E. B. MCINERNEY.

Mr. Chairman, Rotarians, Fellow Guests:

Much as I appreciate being asked to say a few words here to-day, I must confess that it is with no little trepidation that I accepted, for the reason that I am in the midst of pulling up stakes and striking tent, and I felt that the scant time and attention that I would be able to give to so important a subject as International Exchange—which was the subject suggested to me—would be such as hardly to do justice to you, to the subject itself or to myself. However, I shall bear in mind the last of three rules an erstwhile elocution teacher of mine used to impress on me. He contended that the three fundamental principles of public speaking were, "to stand up, to speak up and to shut up"; so, gentlemen, as I have said, I shall remember at least the last of these three rules.

I propose to trace very briefly indeed the history of Exchange, to "count the rings on its horns," as it were, and refer briefly to its operation and the various factors that influence it. Just as a few years ago an aeroplane was a rarity to many of us and to-day is a familiar object to most of us, so Exchange has come to be familiar and to have a very definite and vital meaning to countless numbers. This is only as it should be, for a moment's reflection brings one to the realization that Exchange is the end of all production, and indeed, in its broadest sense the ultimate object of nearly all our efforts. Then too, during the past seven years the principal countries of the world have been seriously disturbed by the spectacular depression and violent fluctuations in the principal foreign currencies—a situation which had its effect on each and every one of us.

THE ORIGIN OF EXCHANGE.

International or Inter-tribal Exchange reaches back to those early days when the nomadic tribes formed the unit of society. When one tribe came in contact with a tribe from another country, opportunity arose for exchange. One tribe would possess what the other would not, and wanted, and an exchange of articles would follow. Thus, International Exchange was one of the earliest phases of civilization. Then, with the settling down of the nomadic tribes in fixed localities, a division of labor became necessary, the husbandman remaining at home to till the soil, whilst the hunter and fighter went abroad. An exchange of commodities ensued, and as the community developed into the village, the village into the town and the town through all the varying degrees, into the Nation, Exchange became wider and wider, until to-day it may be said that every one makes for Exchange. Now the discontinuance of barter and the invention of money was a most important development in Exchange, and that barter involves three outstanding difficulties: first, there must be two parties each desirous of disposing of the thing or things the other wants; the things to be exchanged require to be of equal value and the things must be exchanged simultaneously. Money solved all these difficulties, in that money, whether it be metallic money, paper money or credit, is the universally accepted third commodity by which the relative value of all other commodities is expressed. The evolution of money is a very interesting study, and much has been written on the subject, but time will hardly permit of more than a passing reference to the various processes leading up to the choice of the precious metals which have been found to be the most satisfactory basis and means of Exchange. The thing first used as money was something possessing intrinsic value; for instance, the primitive savages used shells, and until such times as they were used for money they were worn by the women as ornaments round their necks. At another stage the wandering tribes used cattle, because they were self-portable; in fact, the cattle were used at a much later stage by the Latins and Greeks, hence our word "pecuniary," derived from the Latin "pecus," meaning cattle. Various other things were used, such as tea, coffee, tobacco and furs. From these early days there developed the use of metals, and as the baser metals became more plentiful, the precious metals came into use. Gold and silver were first used in the form of ingots, the first coins being used by the Greeks and the Romans. Then token money came into use, such as our silver pieces, which, as silver, do not possess their real legal value. Then, when it came to be recognized that intrinsic value was not essential, that metal was resorted to; and perhaps it is not generally known that Canada led the way on the North American Continent in the use of paper money.

"CARD MONEY"

In the days of the old French Legion in Canada, the Intendant of the Army stationed at Quebec ran out of gold. He had no ready means of procuring it from France; his men were becoming restless and threatening mutiny. He was at his wits' end, but finally hit on a bright idea. He cut up into pieces several packs of playing cards, wrote on each piece the promise of the Government of France to pay a sum certain in money and impressed upon each piece the seal of France; and this "card money" circulated first amongst those men and later throughout Canada; and, indeed, it has only been within comparatively recent years that the name "card money" has given way to that of "paper money." From paper money there developed the use of Bank Drafts, Bills of Exchange and Cheques until to-day we have metallic money, paper money and credit.

Now, as we all know, most of the principal countries of the world have adopted gold as their money standard, and under the gold standard all money circulating in one country has a definitely fixed value for conversion into the money of all other countries adhering to the gold standard. So long as a country is able and willing to pay its debts in gold, Bills of Exchange on that country are tantamount to a call on an equivalent amount of gold. In normal times, the method of ultimately settling international debts is by the shipment of gold; and as the cost of shipment is subject only to slight variations, Bills of Exchange can fluctuate only from par to the extent of the cost of shipping. This was the situation up to the outbreak of the War in 1914. For instance, during the period of thirty-three years, from 1881 to 1914, the pound sterling fluctuated to the extent of only nine points. During the years between 1914 and 1920, exports from the United States to European countries expanded enormously, whilst owing to the low productive capacity of Europe, imports fell off correspondingly. Then, in addition, the United States owed less for what are known as "invisible items," such as insurance, freights and expenditures of American tourists abroad. Consequently, the debit balances against Europe increased vastly year by year. At first Europe attempted to settle by shipments of gold but it was soon found that there was not sufficient gold in existence to settle on this basis, with the result that the Governments of most of the European countries imposed embargoes upon the shipment of gold, which resulted disastrously for all European currencies, which were offered in unprecedented volume in the New York market. To aggravate the situation still more, speculators took positions on the short side of the market, with the ultimate result that the bottom fell right out of Exchange.

INFLUENCES ON EXCHANGE.

Exchange continued to vary with the varying fortunes of War, and since the War, more than ever before, Exchange is influenced by political, commercial and financial conditions the world over. In addition to commodity movements, security imports and exports and interest payments—which generally are accepted as the three most vital factors influencing the rise and fall of the Exchanges—the money markets in the chief centres of the world have a decided influence. For instance, a situation arises which sends up the rates for short and long term money in New York; a movement immediately starts in to loan money in New York for account of European Bankers. The money brokers draw on their European correspondents for the foreign equivalent of the amounts so placed, which, of course, has a depressing effect on European Exchanges. Should the reverse situation arise—that is, should interest rates go down in New York and rise in London—the reverse operation takes place. Another important factor—and a relatively new one—influencing Exchange is the price level of goods. Before the War practically the same amount of money would buy the same amount of the same merchandise the world over. This, however, is no longer the case. Owing to the fact that the production of merchandise in Europe did not keep pace with the production of paper money, more money, which was plentiful, was paid for merchandise, which was not so plentiful—in other words, prices rose. Now, owing to different conditions, this situation did not exist in the United States. It is not obvious, therefore, that an opportunity might present itself to a merchant living in New York to buy Marks at the market, which, in turn, he would send to Germany, buy merchandise with them there, bring the merchandise back to New York and sell it for more than the original cost of the marks. Without labouring the point further, the effect on Exchange is obvious. It should be borne in mind that Exchange operates on the principle of a see-saw. One end cannot be disturbed without affecting the other, and if momentarily there should be a discrepancy between, say, pounds sterling in New York and dollars in London, this discrepancy is very quickly adjusted by the operation of arbitrage. To illustrate, assuming that pounds sterling are ruling in New York at 4.50 and dollars are selling in London at 4.50% with the fast cable service now existing between London and New York, an alert Exchange trader would immediately take advantage of the situation, buy sterling in New York and buy dollars or sell sterling in London, thereby making a clear profit of half a point. Again, when the situation is reversed, the reverse operation follows.

DEFLATION SET IN.

The history of Foreign Exchange over the spread of the past one hundred and twenty-five years has been marked by three outstanding disturbances—the French Revolution and the Napoleonic Wars, the Civil War and the World War; and had not the tendency been checked in Europe to work the printing presses overtime rather than the factories, I fear that those War-ridden countries would have suffered an experience similar to that through which the United States passed after the Revolutionary War, when the walls of barber shops and saloons were papered with worthless Continental notes—whence, by the way, came the expression "not worth a Continental."

However, undoubtedly deflation has set in; and though the return to that Happy Hunting Ground called "Normalcy" may be slow, hazardous and at times discouraging, still, with all the countries of the world on the same mission bent, and with the record of time as a guide, some, at least, will overcome the difficulties that beset the way and will arrive at their destination. I may be pardoned for quoting four lines of a bit of verse I came across some time ago, which seems not inappropriate:

"East from the Mahanadi and north of the Nicobar
You will come to Evening Island, where the santalingos are;
Their tails are sunrise orange and their wings are skylight blue.
You catch a santalingo and all your dreams come true."

Our Total Regatta

HIS DIARY.

June 9th.—To the Railway Offices, where meeting Mr. H. D. Reid, I did ask him concerning the truth of the report that the trains will operate till June 30th. He tells me how it do be a matter for his attorney, but thinks it little like to come about unless the Cabal will give promise for a settlement. To the Board of Trade and did have discourse of the fish exporters' meeting with Capt. Kean. So to call with Sir P. T. McGrath and Sir M. P. Cashin of the railway situation. To dinner, when Povey comes whom I vexed devilishly with telling him that he was making shift to avoid paying his Poll Tax, which is so true that he blushed and could not in words deny it. Whereat my wife did turn on him and advise him that he should take a wife for himself, but he complains that none will have him. I meet Col. Nangle and learn how the Memorial Fund is now beyond the objective, and the Padre tells me he will publish the names of those who gave to it, next evening. I am made a Committee man on the Regatta this year, which is the first time of my being so honored, nor indeed have I seen a Regatta these ten years.

Navy Blue!

It's always fashionable, always serviceable for Men's, Women's or Children's clothing. Navy Blue will dye over almost any color except black. It will be a true blue and a fast blue if SUNSET Navy Blue is used. The cost is a mere trifle and the results are sure and easy to accomplish.

Old dyeing methods are entirely superseded by the simple, scientific, modern SUNSET process.

It costs only 15c a cake at your Dealer's. If difficult to obtain, write direct to the makers, NORTH AMERICAN DYE CORPORATION, Ltd., Dep't 58 TORONTO, CANADA, enclosing 15c for each cake required.

Hauled in German Flag While Crowd Jeers.

BROOKLYN, June 1.—Fritz Knorr, of 611 Glasson Avenue, Brooklyn, nearly caused a riot in front of his home when he hung an American flag and a German flag on the same pole extending from the roof over the street. As the pole was shot, he hung them side by side, so that it appeared to be an American flag on one side and a German flag on the other.

Knorr then went for a walk. Soon a crowd gathered and yelled for the German flag to be taken down. Nobody in the house paid any attention to the crowd below until somebody telephoned to the Grand Ave. Station, and Knorr found a patrolman at the house when he returned from his walk.

Knorr protested seriously that it was all right because he had hung the American flag on the right side. There was a peace celebration at the Thirtieth Regiment Armoury by the German Singing Societies and he wanted to help make the occasion a notable one. But the patrolman told him that regulations forbade him crowding the American flag in any such manner, and Knorr finally took the German flag from the pole and tied it to the chimney.

While he was making the change the crowd jeered and booed at him. The patrolman scattered them, but they continued to yell, and Knorr felt so upset about it that he went to the edge of the roof and shook his fist at them. He protested that he was an American citizen, having been in this country for thirty-five years, and that he bought Liberty Bonds during the war.

Splendid Vessels Built in Newfoundland.

Lloyd Ellison and Two Brothers very Credible Crafts.

There are two new schooners in port this week which are attracting the admiration of all who are interested in marine matters. One is "Lloyd Ellison" of about 65 tons, built at Fort Union the past winter by Captain James Jones, for the Union Shipbuilding Co., Ltd., and was purchased when she came off the stocks by Skipper A. Samson, of Flat Islands, B. B., for $3,850 and will be used in the Labrador trade by him.

The other craft is the scho. "Two Brothers," about 49 tons, built the past winter by George Crewe, at Indian Arm (Summerville) for Skipper William Fry who will go to Labrador in her to prosecute the fishery. She is now being fitted with new sails. Both schooners are strongly built of the best procurable lumber and reflect great credit on the builders.

There are two other new schooners at Fort Union which were built at the shipyard there the past winter. One about 60 tons has been sold Robert Burton, of Weeleyville, and is now being fitted with rigging etc. The other vessel is not quite finished and is still on the stocks and is of about the same tonnage. It is likely that both will be used in the Labrador fishery.—Trade Review.

The Unknown Millionaire.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jun., the American millionaire, told a gathering in New York the other day that the photographers were always looking for him but could never find him, even when he walked about among them.

"I don't know how it is," he said, "but probably I don't dress well enough."

"I must try to dress better," he added. "My wife has told me on several times, but after I've worn a suit ten or fifteen years I get rather fond of it. My wife's affection for it, of course, wanes."

Oliver Twisted.

The class was being examined by the local school inspector, and after a lapse of an hour or so the pupils were set to write an essay on "Oliver Twist." Whilst correcting the essays the inspector came across this sentence: "In the corner of the kitchen stood the statue of a policeman."

Having no recollection of reading this in Dickens's famous book he called the scholar and asked: "Miss Smith, would you mind telling me where you read this?"

"Oh, certainly!" she answered. "It says in the book, 'In the corner of the kitchen stood a stone copper.'"

Cultivate Cheerfulness.

(Trade Review.)

Quite a noticeable improvement in business was in evidence the past week on Water Street and along the water front, where many schooners were taking on supplies for the season's fishery. The cash trade done by the dry goods, clothing and grocery stores was the best for the season and the free circulation of money was a pleasurable surprise to the merchants and their employees.

"There is no doubt," said a prominent dry goods merchant to the Trade Review, "the fine weather has a marvellously good mental effect on both purchaser and seller. More money moves freely when the sun shines. There is nothing in foggy or rainy or cold days to cheer people up. But when the sun comes out and fine day succeeds fine day people cease to pity themselves; they become cheerful and happy in their outlook on life; they inspire cheerfulness and optimism in others and things become brighter and better as people believe and will them to be so. Pessimism is contagious; so is optimism." As iron sharpens iron, so does a man the countenance of his friends."

That Altered Matters.

Miss Millie Brown, the prettiest girl in the village, was blessed with a father who snubbed all young men who came to see her.

One evening Charles Newton, a bashful young man, called Mr. Brown and old Mr. Newton were close friends, but the boy had grown so rapidly that the old man did not recognize the visitor.

"It looks as if it might rain," the young fellow ventured, timidly.

"Taint goin' to rain," was the gruff response.

For about a quarter of an hour they sat in silence. Finally, the old man's curiosity got the better of him.

"Who are you?" he growled.

"Charles Newton, sir."

"What! Not old Tom Newton's son?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, well," said Mr. Brown, more kindly, "it may rain. It may rain."

Letters Worth Fortunes.

The French National Library has just been enriched by a great gift on the part of Baron Edmond de Rothschild, who has handed over to it the incomparable collection of historic autographs collected by his mother, Mme. James de Rothschild.

It is known all over the world as the most complete and valuable collection of letters and autographs of illustrious persons.

The collection includes letters from most of the former kings and queens of France, including Philippe le Bel, Francois I. Henry IV, Marie de Medici, and Marie Antoinette.

There are also letters from eminent public men like Sully and Colbert, leading soldiers such as Gaston de Foix, Condé, Turenne, and Marshal Saxe, to say nothing of artists, poets, and writers like Villon, Corneille, Racine, and Mme. de Sevigne.

Light colored frocks of linen are worn with high drooping picture hats. A small hat of taffeta is trimmed with wheat and narrow velvet ribbons.

Who Discovered America?

Columbus was not the first European to set foot in America. Nearly a thousand years before his time the Vikings of Norway crossed the Atlantic and landed on the coast of the Western World.

There had long been a tradition to this effect, but all doubts were set at rest a few years ago when a Viking ship was discovered in the mid of an American river. Recently, too, one of their graves, containing spears and other weapons and even a skin clothing preserved for centuries by the cold, was found in Greenland.

All these great voyages were made in small open boats, rigged with a single mast and sail, by men who had no maps or charts; they were without compasses, and had nothing but the stars to guide them.

The Vikings invaded Britain in the time of Alfred the Great, and there are few of us who cannot claim descent from them. Many of them settled in the North of France, where they called themselves Normans, or North-men; it was they, and not Frenchmen, who sailed to Britain with William the Conqueror.

ADDRESS.
Dear Mrs. Anthony.—The members of the Ladies' Aid of Glovertown (Central) wish to thank you on this occasion for your services rendered us during your stay of three years. Notwithstanding the discouragements and adverse circumstances of the present day the world over, nevertheless you have, through your untiring efforts and constancy, brought success to our Aid. We feel very much indebted to both you and Mr. Anthony, and are constrained to express our gratitude for your faithfulness.

We regret that the time has come when we can no longer gather together under your management as President as you are about to leave us. But this we ask, that you accept with our best wishes this autograph quilt as a token of our esteem.

We trust that some day we shall meet in a higher circle where there are no farewells, and it shall be said of us: "She had done what she could."

REPLY.
My Dear Fellow Workers.—You have certainly taken me by surprise. Words fail to express my feelings. I more than appreciate your address and presentation; and shall cherish them as a souvenir of Glovertown. Whatever success may have come to our Aid during the past three years I attribute to your loyalty, liberality and love. It has been a joy to work among you, and both Mr. Anthony and myself shall carry with us to our new sphere of labor pleasant and happy memories of Glovertown (Central) Ladies' Aid. Again, thanking you and wishing you continued success both temporarily and spiritually, I remain,
Yours in the Master's service,
NELLIE E. L. ANTHONY.

Presentation to Rev. W. J. Bradbury.
LEAVING CHURCH OF ST. JAMES THE APOSTLE TO BECOME RECTOR OF ST. ALBAN'S.
Many gifts and good wishes were showered on Rev. W. J. Bradbury, Son of Mr. William Bradbury, Bay Roberts, assistant to the rector of the Church of St. James the Apostle, yesterday afternoon, to mark his translation from that church to become rector of St. Alban's Church.

There was a large attendance at the church school room for the ceremony, which took place at five o'clock. The chair was taken by the rector, Rev. Canon A. P. Shatford, who after a brief opening speech, read an illuminated address from the members of the congregation, expressing appreciation of Rev. Mr. Bradbury's services. The address was accompanied by a purse of $500 subscribed by members of the congregation.

This was followed by several other presentations. The King's Daughters presented Rev. Mr. Bradbury a pair of table book brackets; the church choir presented a desk clock, and the teachers and members of the Sunday School, a leather travelling bag.

After the presentations Rev. Mr. Bradbury made a short address in which he spoke of his agreeable relations with the members of the congregation of the church, and expressed gratitude for the manner in which the congregation and all connected with the various social activities of the church had aided him in his work. In expressing his regret at leaving so many old friends at the Church of St. James the Apostle, Mr. Bradbury expressed the hope that as rector of St. Alban's he would have opportunity to meet them again for mutual work in the advance of the work of the Church.

The induction of Rev. Mr. Bradbury as rector of St. Alban's Church will take place at that church on Sunday evening, June 11th. The services will be taken by Rev. Canon J. J. Seaman, and the sermon will be preached by Rev. Canon A. P. Shatford.—Montreal Gazette, June 1.

"Our Dumb Animals."
Report of Chief Agent S.P.A., Mr. Jonas Barter, for Week Ending June 10.
Was called to Field Street to shoot a dog suffering from distemper; also shot an aged dog on Barnes' Road. Consulted the Veterinary Surgeon in reference to two truck horses suffering from splints and spavin. These horses have been ordered off the street. Attended two sales of cattle and say that everything in connection with them was transacted humanely. Called to the West End to shoot a horse suffering from lockjaw. The owner then had it towed out the Harbor as that particular disease is contagious under certain conditions. Shot a mare suffering from inflammation. Received phone message to the effect that two boys were ill-treating a horse on Waterford Bridge Road; investigated and had boys brought to court. They were fined $5 and $3 respectively. All complaints have been attended to as far as possible and the public are asked to co-operate by phoning all complaints to No. 523 Mr. Barter's house. He would like to see all truckmen with placards on their carts and in use when horses are standing with loads.

LOSS OF CHURCH A SEVERE BLOW
On Friday, June 2nd, the historic Church of The Assumption was destroyed by fire, the origin of which is unknown. In the short space of two hours from the time the congregation had left after mass, the building was in ruins. This fire coming so close on the disastrous fire of June 6th, 1920, which swept away the Presbytery and adjoining chapel, is a heavy blow to both Pastor and people. Owing to poor fisheries of late, and the heavy cost of re-erection, there is still considerable debt on the Presbytery. Therefore this recent disaster deals us a severe blow indeed.

Panel 1: A man in a hat and coat is talking to a woman. He says, "I'm awful tired, Pop! ARE WE NEARLY THERE YET? WILL WE TAKE THE TROLLEY?"

Panel 2: The man is now on a trolley. He says, "WE ONLY HAVE ANOTHER HALF MILE! IT WOULD BE A SHAME TO TAKE A TROLLEY ON A BEAUTIFUL DAY LIKE THIS."

Panel 3: The man is walking. He says, "PAPA KNOWS, JIMMIE, WOULD RATHER HAVE A NICE WALK THAN A TROLLEY RIDE! WOULD'NT YOU?"

Panel 4: The man is walking with a woman. He says, "YEAH! IF YOU'LL CARRY ME!"

Those letters stand for "I Can Succeed", the motto of any ambitious young fellow. They also are the one letters of the International Correspondence Schools, the best medium for the attainment of knowledge. Business will not always be had and your employer is probably running on minimum staff. Are you prepared for the increase in staff and the job higher up when better times come back? If not, get busy this summer and give yourself an hour a day.
