TVRANNY IN BANKING INSTITU-

Referring to an article in our yesterday's issue, we doem it in the interests of all hanks in the country ts add some facts bearing on the subject of the late James C. Law. The gentheman at present acting as manager of the bank of British North America in this city does not appear to have acted in a similar ca-pacity in any other branch of the bank, nor, it is stated, has he ever filled the customary preliminary positions of accountant, teller, etc., and therefore, possibly, the weight of the great responsibilities suddenly thrust upon him after he came to Toronto were a trial to frail humanity; and consequently all blame (if any be due at all) should not fall on him alone. Still, if the enquiry, such as we suggested, were instituted, it would probably have the good effect of disposing of all rumors as to the treatment of the ill-fated youth at the hands of the bank or its adicials, and be a satisfaction to the surviving friends of the deceased. We think some explanate should be given as to the sum of $400 exact 900 men, or 235 lodges, which are situated from the late Mr. Law by the bank on the oc in all parts of the United States, Canada and Mexico. A formal reception will be and Mexico. A formal reception will be given to the delegates at Shaftesbury hall on the morning of Sept. 23, by the lieut. country, or to pay the expenses of bringing out a new clerk in his place, but surely this was a most excessive demand, seeing that a fourth of the sum, or say $125, would be amply sufficient for such purposes; and again, is it equitable that the demand should have been made at all? It is true that an agreement to serve the bank for three years may have been entered into by the deceased, of which it is stated two or two and a half years only had take another or better situation elsewhere, but simply because he found the position he stand it, according to his statements made to several friends here) we are of opinion it was not, and should not have been, held to be binding; and we venture a belief that the legal representatives of the deceased have a claim for a refund of this four hundred dol-

We have been looking for the denial to that rumor which asserted that Mr. Mac kenzie was likely to accept office under Sir John. It has come at last in the form of a speech on the evils of mismanagement, etc. Liberals will at once see that as yet the expremier is all O. K .- sound as a bell. Now we come to think of it, however, there is a couple of sentences which sound suspicious in a faint and far off kind of way. had not the utmost possible confidence in the wisdom, politically, of Sir Hector or any of his friends; that might, however, be on his part mere prejudice, but he could say this, that nothing would give him greater cause of rejoicing than to know that something would be done soon that had not been done before to give prosperity to the country." Does this mean that the Ottawa Sun has had "a dream which was not at all a dream?" Or is it an interpre- able, and something important will come tation of one of the "emotions" depicted of it some day.

of provision for the educational needs of the masses, and the giving of themselves up to the pursuit of mere animal pleasures: these were the primary causes of the death of patriotism and of national decay. Furthermore, Mr. Mackenzie will have to show, to make his illustration apposite, that it was not a good thing for the prov inces that Rome did withdraw her legions History says it was. And in the same way how any particular political change may affect Canada, not how it may affect the mother country, must be the test. Mr. Mackenzie still sees through his British spectacles; we intend to use our Canadian We respect England and English traditions, but we are bound up in our country, and we want her all to ourselves, "for better, for worse." But the Globe has been overdoing itself in criticism of the company. It hurt the project in one spot, viz., in the English money market, where the Globe's articles were used to effect, by the Grand Trunk and other rivals of the Canadian Pacific railway. The Grand Trunk, it is known, has influence on the directorate of the Globe: moreover there is more or less or an alliance springing up between the Grand Trunk and the reform party. It will thus be seen that a desire to serve its party and its ally, rather than conserve the interests of the country, has instigated the attack on the Canadian Pacific railway. The Pacific company has made blunders for which it ought to be criticised, but the spirit of the criticism ought to be the general good, not a mere party

The Chinese Commission. the Pacific coast, and the Montreal Gazette gives us what is probably an authentic indication of his views on the Chinese question. The commissioners began work in hearing what both Americans and Chinese in the north. had to say on the subject was afforded. Next they spent three weeks in Victoria, and afterwards visited New Westminster, Nanaimo, and other important points. What the nature of the commission's report will probably be is thus foreshadowed indigration. On the whole, however, we are inclined to think, from what we can hear that some well-considered and well-digested scheme, whereby a supply of Chinese labor car continue to be afforded to the people of that province, will generally receive public approval. At the same time no scheme which does not provide for a means of restricting the number of incomers would be endorsed. Looking at the subject, however, from a dominion standpoint, and looking also at the advantage which, in some respects, might

Looking at the subject, however, from a dominion standpoint, and looking also at the advantage which, in some respects, might flow from a limited immigration of those people into the older parts of the dominion, and looking, moreover, at the larger national interests which a free intercommunication between the people of Asia and Canada must produce, and the necessity for that intercommunication if our Pacific Railway is to accomplish anything like what its projectors have wished for, we are inclined to think that parliament will consult the best interests of the country by carefully considering the whole subject by the light which the commission will be able to lay before it and dealing with it in a broad, statesmanlike and judicial spirit. By thus dealing with it, the fears of British Columbia can be safely allayed, the best interests of the dominion secured and all the advantages of free intercommunication afforded, as well to the people of Asia, India, Australia and the Pacific islands as to the people of the dominion of Canada.

What the Gazette says on the subject is what the Gazette says on the subject nportant, because it is the first apparently authentic intimation of what the drift of the commission's report is to be. At present we will add just this much, that the people of Canada and our workingmen above all, will watch jealously the ourse of the government on a matter so vitally affecting their interests.

"Ships, Colonies and Commerce. We said yesterday that the hunger of European governments for distant posessions in Asia and Africa had brought us to the opening of a new era of commercial war. The fight for getting hold of markets liar enough to people of our own race.

Now, however, not only Germany, but even Austria is astir in the matter of con merce with countries beyond the sea. A Vienna despatch says that the governmen is about to send five war vessels around the world in hope that they may do some thing to promote Austrian commercial interests. Just now the push among the powers of contienental Europe for "ships, colonies, and commerce" is most remark.

It is all very well for the Globe te crow over the testimony of English scientific visitors to the Guelph agricultural college. Nobody disputes the fact that much is to be seen there, for much public money of that it became us as zealous Britons to exercise whatever influence we have in preventing such a catastrophe."

Now about Rome, if the withdrawal of her forces from the countries she had conquered had been all the trouble, she need never have fallen. The luxurious living of the servicians and consecurent growth of the servicians and other colonies, her could be described and the security of the servicians are colours. It says that it merely mistook "the Lord Wilton" herd for "Lord Wilton" herd for "Lo over the testimony of English scientific never have fallen. The luxurious living of this province gets any return, and if so, the patricians, and consequent growth of what? Has anybody ever met a Guelph tal want college graduate yet, who is working an bors at it because he once learned the chemical analysis of the manure pile? Are not most of the scholars young men from England who mean to farm in the North west? We can all see the money go, but where comes in the practical good to Ontario? Among the exhibitors at the approaching fair, how many will have been chooled at Guelph? Go easy, Mr. Globe, or you may rouse a hornet's nest.

> The Czar at Warsaw. "Order reigns in Warsaw," or at events it ought to, seeing that the czar himself is there. The czarina accom panies him, and great popular enthusiasm s manifested, say the despatches. The other evening the imperial pair drove to the theatre in an open carriage, rather an unusual mark of confidence, which was appreciated by the people. Still, it is found ecessary to show some regard for truth very recently were, of daily occurrence in Warsaw. The czar's appearance in the historic old city probably means that, owing to the formidable nature of the nihilist movement, he deems it best to conciliate the Poles. He may well think that, when St. Petersburg and Moscow have become so dangerous, it may be wise to scatter some seeds of conciliation in Warsaw. What measure of success may attend the effort does not yet appear.

Land Law Agitation. A congress of trades unions comi its sittings at Aberdeen on Monday. An important part of its business is the con sideration of such reform of the land laws as will bring into cultivation the millions of acres of land in Great Britain which are now waste, as far as any benefit to the people is concerned. The agitation of land law reform will not be confined to Ireland. It is already a pressing one in Scotland, which comes next to Ireland in Home "? the atrocity of its land law abuses. England's turn for the same agitation may come some day, though there the people have not the twentieth part to complain of that the people of Ireland and Scotland bers of the family, if not naturally hand have. Very probably the English landowners will themselves promote or agree to substantial reform in practice, without much alteration of the letters of the law. Mr. Chapleau has just returned from But in Scotland, as in Ireland, the strong arm of the law will have to interfere before anything can be effected. It will be seen that whilst a large number of people are opposed to the Chinese on various grounds, another and not insignificant section is disposed to believe that their residence in British [Columbia has done much to develop that province, and that their confinued residence is highly desirable. It will be found that a good deal of difference of opinion exists as to the precise number which the province can utilize, and that a fear, more or less well grounded, exists, that the white population may at some distant date, not very

At Chicago September wheat sold for cash to-day for 75c, being the lowest price this year and the lowest price this year and the lowest price since 1875, the market afterwards rallied as shown below. Wheat—October advanced ½ to 77%. November ½ to 79%, and December was quoted at the opening at 80% and closed at 80% to 80%. Corn—September dropped from 46½ to 45% and for the year dropped 15 40%. Pork for the year dropped from 46½ to 45% and for the year dropped 15 40%. Pork for the year dropped from $11.37½ to $11.15. Lard closed at yester-day's figures.

The visible supply according to the Chicago computation is, wheat 17,773,559 bush., corn 4127,227 bush.

THE NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.—

"The demands for currency from the interior are not as yet being felt by the banks of this city, says the Herald. The cotton crop is late and has not begun to move freely yet, and the cereal crops are being held back by the farmers, who look for better prices. The hope is vain, we think, as the surplus of wheat is alone sufficient to supply the wants of England, and there are Russis and India to compete with us for that market. An increase of loans points to speculation in stocks, as there is nothing in the trade returns that would warrant it.

It is a serious question whether the insolvnothing in the trade returns that would warrant it."

It is a serious question whether the insolvency among the leading corporations is past. It is thought, says the Chicago Tribune, that many of the manufacturing concerns in the east are in a bad way and will have difficulty in meeting their notes. As for the railways, it is clear that they are not out of the woods. Their special sorrow just at this time is the floating debt. It is a sorrow that they have long-suffered in silence, heroically sparing the feelings of the public. Among the roads whose floating debts are making serious trouble may be mentioned the St. Paul, the New York Central, Erie, Louisville and Nashville, and Union Pacific.

The distribution of merchandise shows some increase. The dry goods market is a little stronger, sales now being in excess of production, but it is by no means certain that the restriction policy of the mills will be continued long enough to give sellers control of the market. Iron is unquestionably firmer than it has been before this summer, but coal is weak and must apparently go lower. There are no serious labor troubles except in the nining districts. The failure record is about on an average.

THE FARMERS' MARKET.—The receipts of grain to-day were moderate, and prices vary but slightly. Wheat is rather easier, with sales of 200 bushels at $2c to $8c, the latter for No. 1 spring. Barley steady, there being sales of three loads of No. 3 extra at 57c 60c. Oats unchanged; 200 bushels sold at 38c for new, and 42c for old. One load of peas sold at 7tc per bushel, and rye is purely nominal. Hay in good supply and prices easier; some sixty loads sold at $8.50 to $14 a ton. Straw steady, with sales of fifteen loads at $7 to $9 a ton. Hogs firm at $8.25 to $8.50. Beef, forequarters $4.50 to $6.50; hindquarters $7 to $9. Mutton, carcase $6 to $6.50. aside and saw a face that seemed to have come from the grave—it was so still, so white, the look in the eyes so fixed and story. She shrank and shuddered, a stifled scream left her lips, but with a strong effort she controlled herself, and laughed off her agitation. Robert was lost in the crowd, and she could have believed that her imagination had played her the trick of conjuring him up there.

But Robert was avenged, although, perhaps, he never knew it.

"Never did the fair young marchioness," It was a lover who spoke—an ardent and Marion looked up with a half laugh, and wished in her inmost heart that she could tell this man, who loved her so, that there were women in the world who could love even as he did, and that he would do well to seek such a one, and leave her to find a lover more of her own stamp; her conscience, or what she called by that name, told her that she should do so. But she would not listen to the inward voice. Robert's caresses and passionate outbursts Robert's caresses and passionate outbursts of tenderness were dear to her; it gratified her vanity and touched her heart, such as death, and when her husband and his serit was, more than any incense of the same kind had ever done before. She anmotionless, lifeless.

"I love you as well as I can, Robert,

Marion had ever made to him, and the luminous, joyful look in his eyes thanked her more eloquently than words.

"You have filled my heart with joy, dearest—those kind words have given me courage to say that bitter word—Farewell! May all good angels guard you, Marion, till I hold you in these arms again. Do not fear for me, dear one; with your love as my promised reward, I can attain to anything. You shall yet hear my name with true wifely pride. For your love! I can dear all things, and can win them too; but without that to look forward to—dare not think of that."

"And don't, dear Robert, for my love you will always have;" and for the moment Marion meant what she said, and really telt quite heroic.

Robert once more clasped her close to his heart with a vehemence that almost hurt her; but this time she did not complain, and a tearful mist dimmed her eyes when she found herself alone.

fore heaven to be ha wife. She leaned proudly on her husband's arm, a fine-looking old gentleman, the English marquis, for whose title she would have bartered much more than her promise to Robert Norton. For one instant, as she passed him, Marion glanced aside and saw a face that seemed to have come from the growth of the control of t stream the stead determined and characteristic, and his large blue eyes were so dark and so heavily fringed with long, thick lashes, that they seemed bleck. The girl, whe stood before him, and who returned his steadfast, loving gaze, with half averted eyes and a smile half fond, half scornful, was the bort of woman who is often dangerour, to men and always troublesome to herzelf. She was a beauty and a coquette, and she was not wholly hardened or selfish. She had just enough heart to make trouble for herself and others, and to make her pley badly in many small games of the abections which she had previously arranged in her head with great accuracy.

When she had begun her flirtation with Robert Norton, Marion Swayne had not in the least meant to be serious herself. She had intended all that sort of thing for her victim; but, to her dismay, she discovered that her own feelings was considerably entant by the sheal previously arranged in her head with great accuracy.

"You don't speak to me, sweetheart," her lover continued, having waited some moments for a response. "Cannot you say that you love me, Marion, truly as I love you?"

"Don't be so tragic, Robert," was the playful ars, swer, while her lips parted in a bewitching smile. "Just see how you have burt my hands. They are absolutely red and bruised from your violence. You know well enough that I love you—more than I love any one else at all. Will that satisfy you?

For answer the impetuous lover covered the ill-treated little hands with kisses, gathered the child-like form in his arms, and held it close pressed to his heart.

"It must satisfy me, my darling—I suppose you could not love me as I do youperhaps no woman could." He added, with a sigh: "It may be that I am unreasonable to ask it—women must be so different forced her to go close to the figure and to look up into its face.

It was Robert Norton—more pale, more shadowy than on that far off day when she last saw him at the church door—but not Robert Norton alive and in the flesh; that she knew; for, looking straight at him,

The young marchioness never recovered—she only revived from one swoon to fall dear—for your sake I wish I was capable of a greater love."

But Robert was satisfied—it was the most sincere and affectionate speech that Marion had ever made to him, and the luminous, joyful look in his eyes thanked her more elequently than words.

and she carried it about in her bosom for several days. Under the effect of it she replied at once, and her answer was a very fair love letter. It remained for the rest of his life Robert's most precious earthly possession, and it was found close against his heart after he was dead.

Marion received Robert's frequent letters with less and less delight, as they came more rapidly, and now and then a gentle reproach for her scanty replies, till at last she pooh-poohed them altogether, and ceased to answer them at all.

And ceased to answer them at all.

Rumors had reached Robert of an elderly, wealthy marquis, who, according to common report, was about to confer a title on the fair Marion, and bear her off to his ancestral home beyond the seas; but Robert would not believe it. He resolutely closed his heart against a doubt of her. "To doubt her," he said, "is to die and report and he accounted for his darling's silence by assuring himself that she was ill. At last he could bear it no lon ger, and he resolved to see her at any price.

It was a lovely day in early summer when Robert reached the pretty town of A—s and as his way toward Miss Swayne's house led directly past the pretty Gothic cathedral where he had first seen her, her lovely eyes devoutily fixed on the minister in the pulpit, he paused a moment, though his haste was great, to pay it the tribute of one loving look. As he did so the church door opened and a gay wedding party issued forth. With a smile, and something like a half-murmured benediction, Robert stood aside and waited to see the bride. And he did see her. The light left his eyes and the color fled to see the bride. And he did see her. The light left his eyes and the color fled to see the bride. And he did see her. Wm. McDougall Among the Prairie Hon. Wm. McDougall arrived at the Queen's hotel last evening, after a month's tour through Manitoba. The World met hon, gentleman after his arrival and istened for over an hour to a lucid delistened for over an hour to a lucid description of his present convictions of the future of the great province. Mr. McDougall confined himself almost exclusively to its possibities as an agricultural country. During the month or so of his stay he traveled extensively throughout the province, and as he put it, "slept, eat and talked with many intelligent farmers." He wanted to acquaint himself with the various phases of its farming, the effect of the land laws, what the farmers' union was doing, and generally to find out what the farmers t the farmers' union was doing, and rally to find out what the farmers really wanted to make them contented and happy. Mr. McDougall, after his mature enquiries, came to the conclusion that with the abolition of the tax on farm enquiries, came to the conclusion that with the abolition of the tax on farm implements and certain necessaries of life, a revision of the land laws, a reasonable hope that Jack Frost would keep away from the crops, pooling of their internal interests, and a share of God's blessing, he predicted a life of peace and plenty for the denizens of the great country south of the Saskatchewan.

Mr. McDougall collected a vast amount of valuable information, which he will probably put to good use. He delivered an address in Winnipeg after the meetings held by Mr. Mackenzie and Sir Richard Cartwright, and a number of his friends were so pleased with its independent tones that they presented him with a piece of valuable plate as a souvenir of the occasion. The plate bears the inscription: To Hon. William McDougall, C. B.

This is presented at Victoria hall, at Winnipeg, by a few of those who have admired his independence as a politician and ability as a statesman, and who offer it as a tribute to his unwavering devotion to the national interests of Canada—his native country.

Mr. McDougall will attend the opening of the fair to-day and will leave for Ottawa to-morrow.

From the Regina Leader. On 31st August Pi-a-pot, the Indian chief, paid a visit to the mounted police barracks at Regina. In an interview he had with the commissioner, Col. Irvine, he requested permission to see those Indians of his tribe at present in the guarddians of his trice at present in the guard-room, numbering twelve, who had been sentenced to imprisonment here for bring-ing in stolen horses into Canada and of-fences of a similar nature. On obtaining permission he was taken to the guard-room and the Indians brought before room and the Indians brought before him. He then made them a speech, tell-ing them that they deserved the punish-ment that they had received, as they had broken the law; that he had in former times, as a big chief, stolen many horses from the Americans, but that as soon as from the Americans, but that as soon as he knew i was against the law, he ceased doing so, and that he wished all of his nation to follow his example, and hoped that when they were released they would do so; this they promised to do, and he left them, well satisfied with his visit and ith the effects of his speech, thanking Col. Irvine for having allowed him the privilege of speaking with his followers.

"Look here!" roared the paying teller he jumped into the cashier's office and held out a newspaper with his thumb on a paragraph. "Look here! Has this bank any political influence?" "What's the matter?" inquired the ashier, turning pale.
"This paper is urging the annexation of Canada! Now, how are we going to stop that?"

"Let it alone," said the cashier, with assuring smile, as he poked another ackage of bonds into the tail of his coat. "Be faithful and earnest in your attention to your duties. The bank directors will take care of that annexation scheme. What securities have we in stock on long

A Barbecue in Georgia. From the Philadelphia Item

Late on Friday night the woods on the outskirts of Clarkston presented a weird appearance. The night was intensely dark and here and there were blazing fires in the background. The attendant cooks for the feast of the morrow could be seen placthe feast of the morrow could be seen placing carcasses upon spits, and all night long using long poles, having at the ends swabs of mustard, with which the meats were kept thoroughly saturated. Ten o'clock Saturday found perhaps 5000 country folks assembled. The smell of the first woods the areas from the antis fresh woods, the aroma from the spits, the jocular salutations, so much recalling was called and put three stitches in the wound.

By a reference to the advertising column it will be seen that W. J. Harper, who formerly carried on an extensive readestate and insurance agency business at 23 Adelaide street east, has resumed the business in all its departments at 39 King street west.

Longstreet's Georgia scenes, all conspired to give an exhilarating effect to the scene. The orators were also there, at the head of whom was ex-Congressman Milton Chandler. The government was redeemed in flights of eloquence and hearty cheers showed the approbation of the people. A little distance off were arranged long tables, capable of accommodating 100 persons each. The fragrant meats were temptingly arranged, and when the street's Georgia scenes, all co persons each. The fragrant fleats were temptingly arranged, and when the word was given that the feast was ready a rush was made for best places. One table was specially reserved for distinguished guests. The master of ceremonies, in calling the eaters to order drew their attaction to one heavifully browned their attention to one beautifully browned carcass. He parrated that it was none other than the famous billy goat so familiar to all who have ever visited Stone mountain. Twelve years ago, as a goat of mature judgment, the animal had appeared on the mountain. For eight years he jumped from crag to crag and won a state reputation. Growing older he took up his residence in Clarkston, where for four years he butted his way. A citizen shot at a mad dog on Friday. He missed the dog, but fatally struck the renowned goat; hence the goat's appearance on the table as the chief dish. It was not long before the whole party were discussing the delito all who have ever visited Stone moun the whole party were discussing the delicacy of the old goat's flesh.

From a London Letter.
"Why is it," I asked a medical friend, 'why is it that there are no beautiful wonen in England?" "It is because poor people feed so badly from necessity that they cannot look healthful, and because the rich aristocracy drink burgundy and champagne in place of pure water. Beer, bread and old cheese," continued the doctor, "will not cheese," continued the doctor, "will not make good looking women, neither will burgundy, champagne and lobster salad. The poor live poorly from ignorance and necessity, and the rich live on unhealthy food because it is fashionable. If all our women would stop a moment and think about their food; if they would consume a bowl of health-giving rice, oatmeal, or plain bread and milk twice a day, roses would come to their cheeks again, their cham-pagney breaths would become sweet as the breath of a baby, and dimples would come to their chins. And if our men, too," continued the doctor, "would stop drinking beer and rum, and stop eating salads and beer and rum, and stop eating salads and 'rare-bits' at night, and astonish their stomachs with pure water and bread and milk, diabetes, Bright's disease and dyspepsia would cease. As it is, all our rich people are bucking their stomachs and kidneys against a copper distillery. They are redistilling all their food, for nature absorbs nothing but pure water and pure food. If we drink fermented liquor or wines our stomachs have to redistill it. Nature absorbs the food and water, and Nature absorbs the food and water, and the poison is pushed off through the sewers of the body, making a poison-bloated nose or a burgundy-colored face. That's what is the matter with the faces of our English aristocracy. That's why our women look aristocracy. That's why our women look coarse. That's why the purple and red nose takes the place of the pink cheek of your youthful American girl."

So beautiful she seemed, and pure Ah, me! how I should miss her; Unable longer to endure My wish, I asked to kiss her. A blush of deepest rose o'erspread Her face, as if to mask it: As, with a woman's art, she said: "Why, Frank, you should not ask it."
