As we have stated before, this Contest is controlled entirely by the Ontario office. There are no entanglements with outside circulation promoters and their undesirable methods. Everyone is assured by the pledge of the publishers of a fair deal and honest treatment. The Ontario will play no favorites. There will be no special favors. The rules will be adhered to with the utmost strictness.

WEDDING BELLS

SULLIVAN—SMITH

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on June 16th, at 9 a.m. in St. James Minot Church, Stirling, when Alice Marguerite, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Smith of Chatterton, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Matthew Eugene Sullivan, of Murray by Rev. Fr. O'Reilly, assisted by Rev. Father McFadden of Wooler.

The young bride who was attended by her sister, Miss Lena, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, rendered by Mrs. C. McGee and looked very charming in a gown of sky blue silk and shadow lace, her only ornament being a white corsage which she had taken from the Pacific Ocean near Los Angeles, Cal. Her aunt of that place, having worn the same pin six years ago on her wedding day. She also wore the customary wreath and veil and carried a white prayer book and the groom's gift a gold amethyst rosary. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Daniel Forestall of Springbrook.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bar pin set with pearls and the groomsmen gold cuff links with pearl setting.

After a dainty dance and reception at the home of the bride's parents, the happy couple returned to Belleville and left amid showers of rice on the 3:35 train for Toronto, Niagara and other places. The bride travelled in a Belgian blue suit and wore a white Panama hat. The bride received many beautiful presents. On their return they will reside in Murray, where the groom is a prosperous young farmer. Their many friends join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

Model Military Camp

In view of the fact that so many of our Canadian soldiers are fighting on the battlefield of Flanders the model military camp, which will be one of the special features at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, should attract thousands of visitors, a great many of whom, no doubt, have sons or brothers at the front. In this camp will be seen a detachment of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, artillery, Royal Canadian Engineers, Royal Canadian Regiment, Transportation Corps, A.S.C. and Field kitchen will be an interesting feature. The camp, which will vividly portray life under active service conditions, showing even trench digging and the landing of supplies with headquarters staff and field telegraph complete, will be situated west of the Transportation building.

MR. D. V. SINCLAIR VISITS THE TWO WORLD'S EXPOSITIONS

Canada's Splendid Exhibit and Building the Chief Centre of Interest at San Francisco—The Land of Sunshine and Oranges Vividly De- scribed—What Mr. Sinclair Has Seen During Part of His Transcontinental Tour

Glacier, B.C., June 17, 1915.
To the Editor of the Ontario—
Sir—Just before leaving Belleville early in May, you exacted from me a sort of half promise that I would write you. My previous letter was from Colorado Springs. I now write from the very crest of the Rocky Mountains.

To be real candid with you, I was never so busy before in my life as I have been during the past six weeks in fact, letter writing has been side-tracked to a great extent, giving place to the Picture Post Card, by which means we have been able to keep our friends notified as to our whereabouts.

Passing over a very delightful trip through such states as Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, and Arizona, via way of the Great Canyon, to my mind the most wonderful natural phenomenon that I have ever seen, read about or heard of, in this world of scenic grandeur, we found ourselves in California, the land of Sunshine, Fruit and Flowers, of delightful days and cool nights, when after a long tire some day of travel and sight-seeing, one retires to find sleep and awake refreshed beneath the folds of a warm blanket.

Soon after our arrival in California we proceeded to the extreme south of the State and there visited the San Diego end of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which was greatly enjoyed by Mrs. Sinclair and myself, not because of the vastness of the Exposition itself, but rather because of the beauty of the city itself, its situation being ideal, overlooking the bay, with the finest community buildings and grounds as so arranged as to present a very restful appearance, the interiors of the buildings being largely given up to a display of the products of the State and California; the Fruit Exhibit being very prominent.

While travelling through the southern part of the state we met for the first time in the writer's experience all of the following products, oranges, lemons, prunes, grapefruit, bananas, apricots, figs, tangerines, dates, loquats, also, eucalyptus, peppers, palms, walnuts, olives, magnolia etc., together with an endless variety of other products of which it is difficult to do justice in this brief notice to the enjoyment of our trip.

But the one California feature of our trip that will be of special interest to you would doubtless be that of the San Francisco Exposition and while taken as a whole the Exposition is attractive, the outstanding feature to my mind was the wonderful collection of beautiful buildings, so arranged as to form great courts, suggestive of other lands than ours.

One of the greatest disappointments to my mind was found in the many State Buildings, nearly all of which are represented by beautiful buildings, which are used only for reception and state registration purposes, where people from various states meet their friends, but no attempt is made at state displays.

The grounds are very extensive, comprising as they do an inside train service of eight miles, and the following:

GALICIAN CAPITAL HAS FALLEN.

BERLIN, June 23.—Lemberg has been conquered after a very severe battle according to an official report received here from headquarters of the Austro-Hungary army. The Galician capital fell before the advance of the second army.

ALL MUNITIONS AND EQUIPMENT REMOVED.

LONDON, June 23.—A despatch from Petrograd states the Russian withdrawal from Lemberg began Monday. No booty was left, all munitions and equipment were removed. Another despatch say an official statement declares Lemberg was of little strategic value to the Russians. The statement claims important successes for the Russians on both flanks of the enemy particularly on the Neiseter where the Germans have retreated some miles.

RUSSIA IS NOT PAYING CASH.

SEATTLE, Washington, June 23.—Great Northern steamship company announced today that the liner Minnesota scheduled to sail direct from Seattle to Vladivostok on June 27th with practically a full cargo for the Russian government probably would not call at Vladivostok but would follow her usual route to Hong Kong.

This is said to be due to the cancellation of about 75 per cent. of the Russian government shipments because the shippers were unable to obtain cash payments for their products.

June Weddings

HAYES—MCKENNA

At a quarter to nine o'clock this morning St. Basil's church, decorated with palms and flowers, was the scene of the marriage of Miss Lillian McKenna, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. McKenna, to Mr. John Dennis Hayes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hayes, of Belleville, Ont. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Flanagan, O.S.B. Mr. Jules Brazil played the wedding music, and Mr. Nelson sang Schubert's Ave Maria and Because. The bride, who came in with her father, wore a wedding gown of white Brussels lace and a white skirt made full and short, and white hat with satin ribbons. She carried white roses and lilies. Miss Theresa McKenna was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing pink and white. Mrs. Lillian Hayes, who was the bride's maid, wore a white dress with French flowers, and she carried pink roses.

Mr. C. St. Charles was best man, and the ushers were Dr. McKenna and Mr. Rooney. After a reception at the home of the bride's father on College street, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes left for a boat trip down the St. Lawrence, the bride traveling in a tan poplin suit and black hat. On their return they will reside at the Osgood Mansion, Palmerston boulevard and Harbord—Toronto Daily Star.

This morning at nine-thirty at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Mayo, 383 Bleeker Ave., the marriage took place of their daughter, Miss Edith Mayo, to Mr. Albert Percy Strange, of Buffalo, N.Y. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. The bride's dress was of embroidered tulle and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Her traveling suit was of blue gaberdine with black and white hat. They left on a wedding trip to Detroit. They will reside at 1332 West Ave., Buffalo, N.Y.

Close Call For Lightning Stroke

Mr. Arthur Vermyles, son of Mr. Nathaniel Vermyles, reeve of Thurlow, had a very close call from a lightning stroke during yesterday afternoon's electrical storm. He was leaving a three-year-old colt to the pasture field and was in the act of taking off the halter to liberate the colt when a blinding flash of lightning came and killed the animal instantly. Mr. Vermyles was thrown to the ground and was severely injured. He recovered however in less than five minutes and is about again as usual today.

Presentation in Sixth Concession of Sidney

On Monday evening last a number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. Robert Smith and presented his daughter, Miss Alice with a miscellaneous shower. The address was ready by Miss Eva Sine.

ADDRESS

Dear Alice,—
Knowing that very soon you are to leave our neighborhood, we, your friends of the old of Sidney, met tonight to express our regret at your departure.

Although you have resided near us only a few years, we have learned to value your friendship, and to esteem you for your bright and cheery disposition, and for your exemplary every day life.

The vicissitudes of life are many and we must all soon or late experience sorrows as well as happiness; but in the many years of happiness that we believe are before you, may you learn to meet with fortitude the times of trial that will inevitably come.

That you may retain some remembrance of our kindly feelings, we ask you to accept these gifts that only slightly express our sentiments. We all trust that the coming years may bring you real joys, few sorrows, and true friends.

Signed on behalf of the 6th neighborhood of Sidney
Miss Alice made a suitable reply, after which an enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

PRESENTATION TO OFFICERS' MESS FUND OF 39TH BATTALION

Citizen's Bid Farewell to Col. Preston and His Staff-Addresses-List of Honors

A farewell gathering of officers of the 39th Battalion and a number of citizens was held last evening in the officers' mess of the armories. The meeting was not a long one, but it was touching. Representative townsman said goodbye to Lt-Col. J. A. Preston and his staff after their long sojourn in Belleville since the organization of the overseas battalion. Six hundred dollars was presented to the officers' mess of the 39th by the citizens. Most of the officers were present and among those in civilian dress were officers of the Fifteenth Light. The occasion also marked a farewell and presentation by the 15th officers to their three comrades, Capt. Hudson, Lieut. Allen and Lieut. McCorkell of the 39th.

Lt-Col. S. S. Lazier, presided and said in his address of the honor which had been conferred upon him in asking him to take the chair at the farewell function. "You are going to serve," he said, addressing Lt-Col. Preston, "in the greatest war in history in the defense of the weak against the strong. He hoped all would turn out well for them, and that sure if the crisis came, not one of us here would be found wanting. The chairman requested Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., treasurer of the citizens' collection fund, to make the presentation.

Mr. Johnson declared that the collection had been a labor of love. One had but to suggest and the money was forthcoming. "I have the pleasure," Col. Preston said, "of presenting you with a cheque for $600, (applause). The speaker enlarged upon the wonderful adaptability of the Canadian, which had never been so displayed before. "We are officers of the 39th and are gathered from all professions and now you are going out seasoned soldiers to fight the battle of the Empire. Now the supreme test has come, we are confident you are willing to make sure the honor of the Empire. Speaking in behalf of Eastern Ontario as well as for himself, he said, "we can never recompense you, the men who are about to enter the trenches."

Lt-Col. J. A. V.P. made a fitting reply in accepting the gift of Belleville citizens for the officers' mess fund. "Ever since we came here as well as gentlemen have laid us under great obligations. All classes of citizens have given us a welcome and vied in giving every assistance to us. We feel that our people realize we are fighting for them, and this impresses us with the idea that this is a country worth fighting for." For a few years he had felt the present struggle imminent and was glad when the struggle had come that he had not been born too soon. The lot was a happy one which gave us birth in this country. "Your efforts in our behalf will nerve our hearts in the firing line. We will do our little bit to end this struggle. We must avenge those gone before and for any who have fallen we must have ten to take his place. I can only tell you how grateful I am to you and the friends of this city and district. We shall regard the money and confidence as a sacred trust and we will redeem it in a way I trust, which shall honor you."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell in a few words referred to the remarkable spectacle of the unification of the Empire to preserve British institutions. He hoped to see the head of Germany so cut off or curtailed that it will no longer be a menace. "Let us hope Col. Preston that you and your officers may all return and mix with us as conquering heroes."

Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P., said on behalf of Belleville they were happy to meet, sorry to part and hoped to meet again. Speaking of soldiers who fall in battle he asked what better certificate can a man have in approaching the Supreme Judge than that of the soldier who dies fighting for his country, Christianity, home and loved ones.

Col. W. N. Ponton made a short address. "We say God Bless you. The campaign is a stern one. Only sacrifice of body, will and soul, will bring the end. Banked of their goal and aim, the Germans have determined upon the destruction of the Canadians. You are going away soon. If you do not hear on your march through our streets, cheers and bravo, it will not be because of lack of feeling but for depth on the people's part. Recruiting is necessary. The men won't do it until we stir the moribund. He expected another gathering next week for recruiting purposes. "God bless you and take you into his keeping." "I can only say we are going to the front with every confidence," said Lt-Col. Smart, who was asked to speak. "Where one falls, there should be 20 to take his place. I wish to thank you in every possible way for your kindness to us. Col. Smart led the officers in three hearty cheers for the citizens of Belleville."

PRESENTATION TO 15th OFFICERS

Lt-Col. L. W. Marsh was called upon to preside at a farewell to the three 15th officers, Belleville has 11 officers on local and foreign service and 216 men enlisted. The three departing officers are Capt. Hudson, Lieut. Allen and Lieut. McCorkell. "They are taking every best wish with them. We ask them to take something for their personal mess. We know you will carry out on the firing line the traditions of British soldiers. Take the good wishes of the officers of your regiment."

Gospel Temperance Service in the Park a Success

The Gospel Temperance Service, held under the auspices of the Royal Templars in Victoria Park was successful. The meeting opened by singing the hymn, "Yield not to Temptation," and the reading of Psalm by Mr. A. W. Vermilyea.

Mr. T. W. leading in prayer. B. O. Frederick occupied the chair and in his remarks said that he enlisted in the ranks of the Temperance workers while yet a young man, he had been surrounded by temptation, but had chosen the narrow path, and as a young man he had taken the Christ-like and had enlisted for good service and had been engaged in activities for the overthrow of the "Gigantic Evil" of wine and beer.

A. W. Vermilyea was the speaker of the afternoon, he referred to his boyhood days when he became a Christian and a Temperance worker. His association with the Temperance Societies of those early days and the closing of the bar rooms in the Township of St. John and other municipalities, and took Luke 16, 41-42 as the scripture text of the afternoon. "I want to visit other messes, probably in German regiments. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for this token."

Mr. Vermilyea divided his subject into three parts: "The Light of Creation," "The Light of Conscience," and "The Light of the Glorious Gospel of the Son of God," pointing out the necessity of repentance, conversion, regeneration and sanctification. Mr. Vermilyea is almost 80 years of age but preached with the old time power and energy, characteristic of the days of the bygone. Testimonies were given by T. Willis, E. Skotch, W. G. Key and W. J. Embury, and the service closed with the Benediction.

East Hastings Institute Picnic

Anyone who was fortunate enough to be among the crowd in Mr. S. Moults' grove, held, on Wednesday, June 16, spent one of the most enjoyable days he will have this summer. It was the occasion of the Farmers' and Women's Institute Annual Basket Picnic and about 500 people took advantage of it. The grove is convenient to the Shannonville road and is in many respects well suited as a picnic ground. The first event of importance on the day was the dinner, and everyone present seemed willing and capable of taking part. Immediately after dinner the Annual Meetings of the Farmers' and Women's Institutes were held and the officers for 1915-16 elected.

Then followed an afternoon of sports, the most important being a football match between Melrose and the Farmers' Club. The football score was a tie—2-2, while Melrose won at baseball by a score of 16-9. Mr. E. P. Chapman, district agent of the Excelsior Life Insurance Co., provided a capable and interesting refreshment booth under the management of the Halston Women's Institute was well patronized.

At the close of the sports a joint meeting was held, presided at by Mr. Elisha Maynes, President of the Farmer's Institute. He first called upon Mr. Jno. Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank, Belleville, who expressed pleasure at being present and referred briefly to the present prospects in general in Canada. He believed this year would be one of unusual profit to the farmers of this county and stated the bank deposits this year were larger than those of a year ago. He referred to our contribution to the Empire, not only necessary supplies but also our contingents of boys and girls, and taking their places on the battle fields of Europe. The bravery shown by our troops in action was mentioned and an appeal made to all young men who are at liberty to go to enlist for service.

Mr. Martin, representing the Department of Agriculture at Stirling, said, he had heard much of the East Hastings Women's Institute and on coming here his anticipations had been more than realized. The Women's Institute was at first a doubtful experiment, but was now considered an interesting educational development in Ontario in recent years. He referred to the evidence of neglected opportunities one sees in driving through the country in the way of unimproved land, etc., which could in many cases be remedied. He also referred to the proposed change in Institute work by which a new society known as a Board of Farmers' Institutes will amalgamate the Agriculture Organizations in the riding and the Farmers' Institute will cease to exist. This change takes place in 1916.

Short addresses were delivered by Mr. Alex. Moore and Mrs. P. Shannon President of the Women's Institute and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Before the Judge

Claude Caverly was tried on Saturday on a serious charge and judgment was delivered this morning by Judge Deroche. He was found guilty and as he desired to enlist, was given a year's suspended sentence on the understanding that he signs up. T. C. Robinette and W. D. M. Shorey are accused and P. J. M. Anderson for the crowd.

Most Walt was tried yesterday and this morning was acquitted on a similar charge. W. D. M. Shorey for defendant and P. J. M. Anderson for the crowd.

Hard and soft corns both yield to Holloway's Corn Cure, which is entirely safe to use, and certain and satisfactory in its action.

Staff Sergeant Lorne Green Remembered

By Military and Civilian Friends

That Lorne F. Green, Quartermaster Sergeant of "C" Company of the 39th Battalion has been the wish of his hosts of friends in Belleville was demonstrated in no uncertain manner in the sergeants' mess room of the armories last night at an impromptu smoker. Staff Sergeant Green is a former 15th and 39th staff officer and attended the Coronation of His Majesty in 1911 as one of the three representatives of the Fifteenth Regiment. Last evening's farewell smoker was arranged by military and civilian friends of Staff Sergeant Green.

Mr. George Dullmage, an old business associate of the Q.M.S., occupied the chair in grand style and called attention to the overthrow of the "Gigantic Evil" of wine and beer. Mr. E. Mouck, Sergt. Boyd who attended the Coronation along with Sergt. Green expressed his pleasure in asking Mr. Mouck to present the Q.M.S. to his own hometown. This presentation over, the gathering sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and burst into cheers. Sergt. Green was happy in his response, expressing his wish that he is so honored. "I want to visit other messes, probably in German regiments. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for this token."

Lt-Col. Marsh expressed his pleasure in again attending the sergeants' mess. It was gratifying to see this token of appreciation to Sergt. Green. It is a pleasure to his officers and N.C.O.s that he is so honored. The Fifteenth has two officers with the first contingent, two in the second in the ranks, three in the third, two belonging to the base camp, Lt. Downey and Lieut. McCorkell, and Major Braggar and Major Brown on duty in this division. The roll of sergeants on service is large. All the men are looked upon as being responsible.

It is not that the officers and N.C.O.s who have not gone do not want to go. We want to go. Many things keep them home, physical disability, and other hindrances. But when the time comes, I would like to see the young men around town enroll with some regiment and take their share when the time comes. "I wish Sergeant Green, a safe and happy return to his own hometown."

Orderly Room Sergeant C. W. Meath of the 39th Battalion, rendered a monologue "Hard Times in Texas." "I am proud to be a friend of Q.M. Sergt. Green." Others taking part in the program were Capt. Green of "C" Co., F. Burke, Sergt. Chas. Ostrom, B. Taubher, Sergt. Major John A. R. Sergt. Major Howard Sharpe, H. B. Stock and others.

Farewell Words to 39th Soldiers

On Sunday night in the Salvation Army Citadel a farewell service was held in honor of the members of the 39th Battalion who are expected to leave Belleville very shortly. The songs and music were very appropriate for the occasion. And among the large congregation present there were a good number of the military men. Captain Ruston's figure is well known to a great number of the men, and his cheery word and smile have been greatly appreciated. He has, with the help of his own soldiers, done a great deal to make the boys feel at home, and has added to their happiness and spiritual welfare while in the city.

After a very powerful and apt address which was listened to with keenness sixteen men and women volunteered for service in the King of King's service; a large percentage of them soldiers boys. The captain offered to post free of charge a copy of the War Cry each week to any member of the 39th who would like one. Captain chose as his text, I John, "I have written unto you young men because you are strong." I John 11-14.

"Only the weaklings are likely to be attracted by a faith that offers refuge and rest."

"We have emphasized too long the dependent and passive aspects of the religious life. We have said that men must feel weak and helpless, weary and undone, or they could not find this new way of life. As a result we have practically debarred those to whom life meant more than rest."

"We are common to all who labour and only a fool imagines that he is sufficient for every exigency. But neither the aching limbs nor the puzzled brain justify any true man in being supine before the burden or the struggle. He does not welcome a faith that bids him give up and allow a greater power to do all things for him. If religion means simply falling on the arms of the Infinite it cannot mean rising in strength or growing in moral powers. If it means only dependence it cannot mean development. You can never be a man so long as you are satisfied to play a baby's part. If faith means fleeing from the world, from its cares and conflicts it does but make

Cowards of us all.

If it means hiding from foes and from duties it robs us of our own hearts. "Too many saints live like scared rabbits palpitating behind theological bushes, while the world goes surging by. Instead of such faith ever saving the world, it is but sapping strength from it."

"If we go on preaching rest from labor, refuge from the battle of life, and release from punishment for wrong as the cardinal gifts of religion we are working a process of neglecting the cowards and weaklings and leaving the brave and strong. "We divide men and array the best life of the world under the banners of irreligion. But to think of the religious life as one of wealth and cowardly resting is to misrepresent it wholly. That is simply to accept the wish of the lazy hypocrite as our standard. He who believes in a divine order in the universe grows in the faith that life's work is worth doing and its battles worth fighting. Living means not the chance to sigh and slumber, but to serve with all that works eternal good. The rest that religion offers is that which come from learning to work in harmony with the laws of the universe. It substitutes the economy of working with God, for the wasted effort of fighting against the infinite.

The Peace of Religion

is not that slothful calm, but that of harmony with truth and right with eternal purposes of good. "Religion offers man a chance of worthy work. It calls for the best in us, for it is an invitation to take up the greatest task in the world to roll side by side with the Most High in the labor of bringing man to glory and perfection."

"Men who love the fray will heed its call, for it rallies the souls of men against the greatest foes, we know, the foes of greed and lust, the foes that lie entrenched in our own interests and our own hearts. It calls for high courage. "If saints fear not hard blows. If you are a fighter just try living wholly for the truth for a while. "It is time to forsake and forget the pious crutches and sentimental couches, time for men of faith to see that the Lord is making a great fight and needs them just as the King and Country need them now. Clean, upright, honest, righteous men, strong men in principle. The great leaders have pressed before, counting not their own lives dear, if men might find life, might be lifted from bonds and given their rights. "The true saints follow, the man of strength rejoices to serve."

Officers of 39th Held Delightful At-Home

There was a most delightful function at Zwick's Island on Saturday afternoon when Col. Erston and the officers of the 39th regiment received and entertained a large gathering of leading citizens from the city and county.

Mrs. Madames Preston, Smart and Bywater, wives of the commanding officers, received the visitors in a large marquee at the western extremity of the island. After all had become acquainted the party adjourned to another large tent where dancing and refreshments were served.

Outside the tent the excellent 39th regimental band rendered several choice selections.

After all had participated in good things provided by commissariat, Mr. Charles Ketcheson, reeve of Sidney and warden of the county came forward and tendered to Col. Erston a cheque for $1000 which the county council of Hastings had voted for the regimental fund.

Col. Erston in a brief speech expressed his grateful appreciation of the county council in making this splendid contribution towards the comfort and well being of the men who are going to fight the battles of the Empire.

Death of Edward Dulmage

From the Guelph Herald of June 17th, we copy the following account of the demise of Edward Dulmage, a former resident of Belleville and a native of Prince Edward county.

Following an illness covering the greater part of the past winter, but which only took a serious turn at Easter, death came at 6.30 o'clock this morning to Mr. Edward Dulmage, father of Mr. Mark B. Dulmage, city editor of the Herald, at the latter's residence, Alexandra Street. The late Mr. Dulmage celebrated his 82nd birthday just one month ago while he lay on his death bed, and since that time he has gradually sunk, death being due to pernicious anaemia, brought on by old age, and his death was not unexpected. He was a patient sufferer, and was fully conscious up to within a few hours of his passing away.

Deceased was born on May 17, 1833 at Milford, Prince Edward county, Ontario, and was the son of the late Edward Dulmage and Patience Clapp, both of whom were of U.E. Loyalist stock. He is the last member of a large family of children, all of whom lived to a good old age. He learned the trade of carriage maker and worked at this trade for many years at various places in Ontario. He was married on February 26, 1867, to Augusta Benson, of Amherstburg, and shortly afterwards took up their residence in Belleville, where the family resided for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Dulmage later removed to Rochester, N.Y., but for some time past have made their home with their son, Mark B. Dulmage, at Guelph. He leaves to mourn the loss of a loving and faithful husband and father, his widow and four children, Mrs. (Rev. Joseph Mothershead, of Lakewood, Ohio; Harry R. Dulmage, of Rochester, N.Y.; Mark B. Dulmage, Guelph and Arthur S. Dulmage, who is at present in England. The funeral took place at the Union cemetery at 3 o'clock, on Saturday afternoon, from the residence of his son, Alexander Street. Service at 2.30.

The sympathy of a large number of friends will be with the surviving relatives, in which The Herald staff sincerely join. The late Mr. Dulmage was a man of quiet disposition, but of an exemplary and Christian character, which was reflected in his conversation and dealings with other men, and his patience and resignation while awaiting a call which he gladly welcomed as one of closer communion with his Saviour. His loss will be deeply felt by those who knew him.

Presentation to Pte. W. J. Phillip

Private W. J. Phillip, clerk of Batt. Sergt. Major Dunkerley, was made a presentation at Mr. Ed. Thomas' store last evening. Mr. Thomas presented Pte. Phillip with $15 in gold to which the following young men contributed--Messrs. E. A. Thomas, B. McCoy, J. McDonald, W. Clement, W. Bowden, W. Hobbin, M. Weir, J. Anderson, W. Wicks, G. Corneil, N. Goyer, F. Burke, G. Lynch, H. Carter, W. Green, F. Arnot, R. Boland, Chas. Stewart, F. Connell, J. Connolly, F. Johnson, H. Sharpe and T. Sullivan.

The recipient heartily thanked his friends for the gift.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly falling to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

OPPORTUNITY IS OPEN TO ALL TO WIN CALIFORNIA TOURS

Division into Eight Districts Gives Splendid Chance to Win-List of Candidates Will Probably Appear Tomorrow

One of the most favorably commented upon features of The Ontario's great Panama-Pacific Popularity contest is the division into eight districts in which conditions of population, territory to be covered and distance from the centre of publication are equalized in a manner that is eminently fair to all participants.

It should be noted that the districts do not compete with one another in any way except for the cash prizes. Each district will send its own three candidates on the three tours.

Nominations are still being made and will continue to come in for several days yet. The full list of candidates so far received will probably appear in tomorrow's issue.

TWO WAYS TO GET VOTES.

To those entering upon a contest for the first time we would say that there are two ways to get votes. The quicker and better way is to get paid in advance subscriptions to The Daily or The Weekly Ontario. A large number of votes is secured for every one sent in.

The other and slower way is by the collection of coupons from the papers. Each coupon counts 10 votes.

ORGANIZE YOUR FRIENDS. Candidates should get all their friends working for them. Organize just as though you were in a political campaign. Get your relatives and friends to support you before somebody else approaches them. Not only ask them for their subscriptions and coupons, but get them to help you by getting your friends subscriptions.

You can readily see the advantage of starting a sort of endless chain. You secure the support of your friends, they secure the assistance of their many friends, and so on. It does not stop at the first person approached but goes right on. Get some of your friends who are in business to help you organize your friends and your campaign.

Write or phone the Ontario for blanks and full particulars.

CANADIANS AT SHORNCLIFFE HAVE FINE QUARTERS

Pte. Arthur Templeton Tells of His Safe Arrival in England and Describes the New Camp at Shorncliffe

Mr. Robert Templeton has received the following very interesting letter from his son, Arthur, who enlisted with the McGill College contingent and is now at Shorncliffe camp, England. The letter gives the previously unpublished information that they were chased by a German submarine on the way over. The description of Shorncliffe camp is also a strong commendation of the fine arrangements now being made for the reception of our men in England.

Shorncliffe, June 9, '15.

Dear Family,

No doubt you received my cablegram which I sent as soon as we disembarked. I did not write on board ship because I thought it would be only a waste of time as we were expected to be torpedoes at almost every minute. Two got put out of business by the British destroyers and these were the ones that were after us. I enjoyed the ocean voyage immensely and was not the least bit sick although a number were. One fellow discharged his upper and lower set of teeth and was not able to recover them. He can hardly talk and is seriously handicapped at the table.

We arrived at Plymouth about 10 p.m. Monday and landed in the morning and took the G.W.R. to Shorncliffe. We passed through London. The old city and the country through which we passed completely eclipsed anything I ever conceived of. We reached this destination about nine Tuesday evening and marched up to our quarters. I thought we were to have either tents or dirty little huts but imagine my surprise when we were ushered into a tidy little cottage about 20x30, nicely finished and furnished, with about 30 beds and tables down the middle of the cottage. We have little beds about 6 inches off the floor and have a straw mattress and pillow. The ticks are freshly boiled and we filled them with new straw this morning. Every detail in the camp is spick and span and every precaution for sanitation and cleanliness is taken. I am writing this in spasms and have just been informed that the mail closes in about 20 minutes.

From all appearances we are going to be worked very hard, but I guess this young man will be able to hold out. We are to be under very strict discipline, and may not be granted leave, which, under the circumstances I think is very wise. We will have ample opportunity to see the country after the war for we have to remain in the country six months after the termination thereof.

The 21st battalion (Belleville crowd, 2nd contingent) is here about three miles from us so I may go up and see them some day.

The Man With Asthma, almost longs for death to end his suffering. He sees ahead only years of endless torment with intervals of rest which are themselves fraught with never ceasing fear of renewed attacks. Let him turn to Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy and know what complete relief it can bring. Let him but use it faithfully and he will find his asthma a thing of the past.

Art Exhibit at Albert College

(From Tuesday's Daily.)
The spacious Art Room at Albert College was thronged with visitors yesterday afternoon from 3 to 5, to view the work done during the year. All were amazed at the quantity of the display, and Miss Strong was showered with congratulations upon the quality and variety of the work done by her pupils.

The work of the Art Department this year shows a warm appreciation of nature in both the design and color particularly in the China Painting.

In this department, there are many effective pieces, in some of which the range of colours is very satisfactory. The ridgescent or metallic effects, properly controlled, are always pleasing and give zest to the special purposes, for which the medium is intended.

In the simpler efforts, the delicate pinks of the rose or the tender tones of the blue forget-me-nots, the pupils have shown a correctness in the arrangements and handling of the pigments.

To make myself clear, let me say the designs are all of a character suited to the shape and nature of the subjects treated, confined to proper spaces, and not scattered all over the surface without taste or sense.

Compactness in design is as essential as breadth, and depth of tone is as necessary a delicacy. In this, I must congratulate Miss Strong on the success of her pupils, following, as she does, in the footsteps of her former teacher, Miss Emma Clarke.

The designs, when placed on the outer wall or entrance to the gallery, show a judicious consideration of the various forms, academically arranged, and would lend themselves to the construction of tiles, and other ornamental work. I feel that we are entering upon a period of national life, when such work must be produced in Canada, and the time and place to prepare may well be in the Art Department of Albert College.

For many years, I have been an examiner in Albert College, and have always encouraged what I believed to be the most essential element in Art study, namely the application of all Art study to the practical, in the walks of life.

W. A. SHERWOOD.

Mr. Sherwood made special mention of a Madonna painted in sepia by Miss O'Keefe. He noted also a study of a violin, painted by Eva Mitchell and a panel of fish by Florence McCurdy.

Among the collection of china, he praised especially a fish tray by Mrs. C. J. Howell, a large vase with storks by Eva Mitchell, and a Bird Vase by Mrs. McCulloch. Miss Ruby Freeman's dinner and tea set were greatly admired. Of novel interest was the metallic work, exhibited by Misses O'Keefe and McCurdy, also the lustres, silver and mat work exhibited by several pupils. The designing of chair backs, wall paper and oil cloths showed both originality and beauty.

Special pieces of Miss Frances Allan, Miss Cankey, Miss Hazel Wainley, Clara Anderson and Myrtle McCoy received much commendation.

The visitors were served refreshments in the Household Science Rooms, which were tastefully decorated and presided over by the teacher, Miss Ella Spargo.

The Art Room will be open this evening after Convocation.

Elocution Contest At Albert College

(From Tuesday's Daily.)

The prize contest in expression is always one of the favorite features in the Commencement Exercises of Albert College, as was evinced by the large audience assembled last evening. The contest was pronounced one of the best ever held in the college, and the judges asserted that they had never listened to four better consecutive readers. The judges were Mrs. Currie, a graduate in expression and Messrs. O'Flynn and Mikel. They considered Miss Eva Mitchell and Miss Helen Ketcheson equal in merit, and offered an additional prize to the successful competitors. While the judges were comparing their notes, Col. Ponton, in his usual happy style, congratulated the pupils, and exhorted all to persevere.

He mentioned ways in which both young men and women could serve their country in their hour of need. Miss Wallace delighted the audience with her French-Canadian reading of Dr. Drummond's, and was presented with a bouquet of roses. The musical numbers were most creditable, and showed the merit of the music-department of the college.

The following program was presented--

NORTHCLIFFE AND KITCHENER.

Denunciation of Lord Northcliffe's attack on Lord Kitchener, is not confined to the daily press of England, which could hardly be suspected of disinterestedness when dealing with a powerful rival. The London weeklies, also, display a remarkable unanimity in condemning Lord Northcliffe's methods. Typical of the general tone of the weekly comment is an article in the London Nation, headed "The Sowing of Tares," in which the Nation says in part:

"To inform readers that 'Lord Kitchener has starved the Army in France of high explosive shells' is a terrible piece of news. Everyone saw in it not only a tragedy to our own army but information which the enemy might put to hideous use, one member of Parliament publicly denouncing Lord Northcliffe as worse than a German spy—'worse than Kueperle'—for having betrayed such information. It was suspected also, that the knowledge, whether true or not, had been obtained and passed through the censorship by underhand means. . . . The betrayal of information useful to the enemy is serious; so is the suspicion of secret and underhand ways; so is an attack upon the present Secretary for War. But, nevertheless, we think that most editors or proprietors might have told the truth about the shells (if it is the truth) without having their papers publicly burnt by their usual readers. . . . If a newspaper had then published the facts seriously and quietly, we believe no political opponent would have denounced the proprietor as a frenzied office-boy, and no habitual admirer would have burnt it howling.

The difference lies partly in manner, but chiefly, we think, in reputation. It is a queer instance of the saying about the man who may steal a horse, and the other who may not look over the hedge. Lord Northcliffe has a dangerous record. . . . His methods instil the poison of uncertainty into our national mind, and his readers knew (when they burnt his papers) that of all the disastrous miseries which can befall a man or a nation, uncertainty is the worst. In battle every officer knows that when confidence begins to shake all is over but the running, and a soldier who shakes confidence by continual alarms should be shot, even if his alarms are sometimes justified. 'An enemy hath done this' may be said of him as truly as of one who sows tares among the wheat by night."

It would be difficult to find a more scathing condemnation of the part played by the proprietor of the Times and Daily Mail in his onslaught upon Lord Kitchener. In this connection, the London Chronicle complains about the publication in the Times of an uncensored letter dealing with the munitions problem and national service, from Bishop Furse, "an Oxford don of no great eminence, who was appointed some years ago to an African bishopric." This letter, which was of an alarmist nature, and by the way, has been printed on this side of the Atlantic, has been circulated as a half-penny pamphlet, and has been touted by the Harmsworth organs as "The Bishop's Message to the Nation." The Bishop, it seems, is said to have been at the front for four weeks. He had no business to be there, the Chronicle points out, unless he was there as a chaplain, and if he was there as a chaplain, he was an officer subject to the duty which officers have not to discuss or disclose military matters of interest to the enemy.

It suggests, however, that the Bishop may not have been at the front as a chaplain. He may have been on a personal visit to Sir John French, as Lord Northcliffe was immediately before he started attacking the War Office, or as Colonel Repington was when he sent his notorious message, or as at least one other correspondent of the Northcliffe newspapers appears to have been, when he enjoyed the privileges which the military authorities have solemnly and formally denied the Press.

"The public is perhaps not generally aware," says the Chronicle, "that apart from these unexplained examples of apparent favoritism, correspondents of British newspapers and Press agencies are not only forbidden to be at the front, but it is now a penal offence for them while in France to speak to a soldier unless they are members of the authorized corps of correspondents who are carefully guarded at headquarters. Such drastic prohibitions may well be justified; but what cannot possibly be justified is that certain newspapers should through personal influence obtain exemptions from them. Nor is it mainly or chiefly a newspaper question. The British Headquarters is constantly frequented by a swarm of people, for whose presence it is difficult to believe that there is any military justification. Not only is there an enormous personal staff, far exceeding that of French Generals, who command larger armies than ours, but there is a perpetual stream of miscellaneous visitors, including ladies."

This state of things, the Chronicle strongly guesses, can scarcely conduce either to military secrecy or military efficiency. It is in glaring contrast to the Spartan habits of the French commanders, who have sternly banished everything of the kind from their headquarters, and will have nobody about them whose presence is not necessitated by definite and indispensable duties. It demands that these methods be stopped at once.

THE TURNING POINT.

Mr. Hiliare Belloc, who is recognized as one of the most eminent critics of the war on the land side, and whose articles in "Land and Water" are regarded as among the most authoritative criticisms of the campaign, expressed the opinion in a recent address in London that the turning point of the war would come within the next few weeks. After declaring that the great blunder made by Von Kluck in front of Paris saved Europe, Mr. Belloc said that "within the next few weeks you are certain to have the turning point of the war." That, he hastened to explain, did not mean victory. It meant that the enemy would be getting further away from an inconclusive peace. This is the way Mr. Belloc puts it:

"You will get the offensive, and not on one point, but on many; and for some days you will not know where the weakness is showing itself on the German lines. If it succeeds it will be shown by the Germans either shortening their line, or they will hang on too long and it will break. Alternatively it may not succeed, and the test will be that after the expenditure of this mass of accumulated ammunition and after an appalling casualty list the German line remains still unbroken. In this latter alternative our decision to continue must remain. It will be a very critical turning point in the war. If the German line has to retire then you have the war not ended, but decided."

Why, asked the lecturer, could we be certain of the decision if the German line retired? Because they would not be allowed to retire at their ease, but be pressed by a force 50 per cent. stronger than their own, and political reasons would weigh as to the choice of their route, for Prussia must be saved and German soil protected from invasion until the last.

It need hardly be asked why Mr. Zebulon A. Lash, K.C., the chief factotum of the Canadian Northern group, gave orders to burn the telegrams which passed between members of the Roblin Government and Hon. "Bob" Rogers at Ottawa.

When Garibaldi was leaving England where he had been royally entertained, in 1854, he wrote to an English friend: "If ever England should be so circumstanced as to require the help of an ally, cursed be that Italian who would not step forward with me in her defence."

The London Times republished the letter in full the other day as a timely contribution to the literature of the war.

The interview which the Carleton County Conservatives had with Premier Borden at Ottawa recently, throws a flood of light upon the great "reform" effected by the Prime Minister. Two things will astound those simple-minded and trusting souls who believed that the "new order" had been ushered in—first, the patronage system is still "going strong," and, second, Garland, of drug contract fame, "still holds the stranglehold for the County!"

Ex-Premier Watson, of Australia, who was recently in New York, says his Commonwealth plans to equip and send to the European war 60,000 soldiers, with many more held in reserve. "Australia has sent out 50,000 men already," he said, "and we would have had more men ready except for the difficulty in equipping them thoroughly for service. The work of equipping takes time, as you well know, but the work is going on smoothly now, and we expect to have 50,000 more men ready soon."

Another of the peculiar complications arising out of the many close connections between the German and British royal families has occurred in the case of the Duchess of Albany. The Duchess has lived all the years of her married and widowed life in England; but her only son, the Duke of Saxe-Cobourg and Gotha is fighting against England in the ranks of the German army. The Duchess herself is doing all that is possible to alleviate distress and suffering caused by the war, and has undertaken the care of British wounded at Claremont.

The whole of Germany, save East Prussia, is dotted with camps in which prisoners of war are confined. Increasing numbers of prisoners, particularly Russians and French, prefer to work rather than remain in the camps. They thus procure a little more freedom and earn trifling wages, varying from 12 to 36 cents a day. Four thousand prisoners out of a total number of 11,000 in one camp were working for nearby farmers. On Sundays and holidays, great numbers of people visit the camps.

That the Prussian spirit in war and in diplomacy has undergone no change in the centuries is shown by the interesting and important translations from the voluminous writings of Frederick the Great which are made by Mr. Ellis Barker, in the "Nineteenth Century." In these writings are contained the history of the seven Years' War, and in the frank confessions of Frederick we have the same disregard for treaties, the same indifference to the rights of neutrals, the same talent for dissimulation as are exhibited today. It scarcely seems necessary to force the argument that William the Second has based his actions on a study of the writings and acts of Frederick the Great. Rather it is apparent that the Prussian has not changed with the years.

"Surely," writes Lord Rosebery in a preface to a gift book of the Scottish Regiments, which Hodder and Stoughton are about to publish, "it is well when we have a wolf, or rather jackal, at our throats, to garner up from history the description of our ancestors conquering nobler enemies. This is not to say that the Prussian soldier is not, as regards valor, a brave combatant. But he is directed by men who have placed themselves outside the pale of humanity, and shares their responsibility. Let us hope that once more, and soon, it may be given to a Scottish regiment to storm, as in Aytoun's spirited verses an island on the Rhine." The book is entitled "Scotland for Ever!" and it is being published on behalf of the Scottish branch of the Red Cross Society.

Mr. Will Crooks, the well-known labor M.P., confessed at a recruiting meeting that on one occasion when in Berlin, he had proposed the health of the Kaiser. He left no doubt, however, that he was sorry for it. "God forgive me," he said, "I'll never do it again." The British workman, he added, had to remember that he up against the entire German Empire, and that this was a people's war. "We are fighting for our liberty, a liberty for which we had never had to fight before, for the virtue and honor of our womanhood, and our innate love of home."

People who are inclined to be discouraged over the slowness of the Allies' progress should remember that in January Herr von Jagow, the German Secretary for Foreign Affairs, is reported to have made the following statement:

"We do not need to worry. Things are progressing excellently for Germany. Let me make the following forecast. 'By the end of February we will have smashed up the Russians. The end of March will see the end of the French army. In April we will finally start reckoning with Great Britain, which I expect will be finished by the middle of May. All Germany's enemies will be beaten before June at any rate.'"

We can imagine how the German people feel when they recall these boastful prophecies and know that all were vain and empty.

From the eastern States, money, food and clothing to the amount of $7,000,000 per month, is being sent to the destitute in Belgium. The food consists of wheat, flour, rice, peas and beans; bacon and lard, preserved meat and fish, condensed milk, etc., says Goodwin's Weekly. A great call for relief comes from Poland. There are several relief organizations in New York City and other eastern sea-coast cities and the statement is sent out that the call for more help is most urgent and continuous. One fund is for the destitute women and children of northern France; there is even a Persian relief fund and to read what is wanted give one an idea that the whole eastern world will soon be destitute. And this is only June when all the world should look bright and be filled with hope. What will the autumn bring when the harvest of death which is about to be reaped shall all be garnered? The horrors of the present war have never been equalled save in those years which preceded the "dark ages" in Europe.

The Church of Scotland has no doubt about the justice of the war. The Moderator, in closing the General Assembly at Edinburgh, declared that the conflict was one "which the Church of Christ within our Empire can sanction and support."

"And more than that, the Church may legitimately regard it as a holy war, a war undertaken and carried on with a distinctly Christian object in view. More truly than the old Crusades for the recovery from the Saracens of the sacred spots of Palestine is this war a crusade—a crusade against national covenant-breaking and falsehood and cruelty. It is a war in which we may dare to stand before God and pray for victory. It is a war in which the Church of Christ can summon our young men to come forward and leave their homes and the peaceful ways of life, and fight even unto death in defence of the righteous cause their King and country are contending for. . . . Our country has been engaged in many wars, but never in one which the Christian Church in this Empire has so unanimously agreed to bless."

The response to the calls for recruits has nowhere been more prompt and generous than in the region beyond the Tweed; it is well, says the Westminster Gazette, to have an official declaration that the Auld Kirk, at all events, has no misgivings as to the righteousness of the cause which so many have with so much enthusiasm hastened to support.

LOOKING TOWARD THE LIGHT.

I asked the robin as he sprang
From branch to branch and sweetly sang,
What made his breast so round and red.
"Twas looking toward the sun," he said.

I asked the violets sweet and blue,
Sparkling with the morning dew,
Whence came their color. Then, so shy,
They answered, "Looking toward the sky."

I saw the roses one by one
Unfold their petals to the sun,
I asked what made their tints so bright,
They answered, "Looking toward the light."

I asked the thrush whose silvery note
Came like a song from angel's throat,
What made him sing in the twilight dim
He answered, "Looking up to Him."

THE SOLDIER'S EPITAPH.

2260 years old.

The following poetry is found in an oration by Demosthenes, in his defence of his countrymen—the Athenians—against the Macedonians. In this "Oration on the Crown," which has been so carefully preserved, Demosthenes, this most able and distinguished orator, whose equal the world has never named, successfully vindicated his loyalty—and received many public rewards and honors—yet was banished in after years and his death was due to poison, administered by himself, B.C. 322.

These, for their country's sacred cause
In arms tremendous, sought the fatal plain;
Braved the proud foe with courage undimmed
And greatly scorned dishonor's abject stain.

Fair virtue led them to the arduous strife;
Averting terror menaced in their eyes;
For freedom nobly prodigal of life,
Death they proposed their common glorious prize.

For never to tyrannic vile domain
'ould they their generous neck, ignobly bend,
Nor see Greece drag the odious servile chain,
And mourn her ancient glories at an end.

In the kind bosom of their parent-land
Ceased are their toils, and peaceful in their grave;
So Jove decreed (and Jove's supreme command Acts unresisted, to destroy, or save).

Chance to despise, and fortune to control,
Doth to the immortal gods alone pertain;
Their joys, unchanged, in endless currents roll;
But mortals combat with their fate in vain."

"Eschines! hearest thou this? It pertains only to the gods to control fortune and command success. Here the power of assuring victory is ascribed not to the minister, but to Heaven."

Among the few hundred analecta or poetic elections I possess in my Memorabilia, the above I consider among the few named so thoroughly classical and worth the preservation.

Sheridan wrote:
'You write with ease to show your breeding,
But easy writing's cursed hard reading"—if so,
no one will dispute this great scholar, it is well for you to preserve this copy among the many clippings—relating the "War" and your other selections from The Daily Ontario—which in the years to come will comprise the best among your books and treasures, for to many, a "choice library is Dukedom enough."—J.S.S.

THE BERRY PAR EXCELLENCE.

After the wild strawberry has been held up as the strawberry par excellence for generations, the New York Independent comes along and says it is all a myth. It is pure imagination the article says, that wild strawberries were or are sweeter than the cultivated ones. The assertion may pass unnoticed by the man who has lived all his life on paved streets. But ask any man who, as a boy, went out in the early days of summer to the fields or roadsides hunting for wild strawberries. Wild strawberries? What memories they recall. Was there ever a strawberry, hothouse or garden truck variety, that could compare in sweetness or flavor to the strawberry of the countryside and field? Granting that old time memories are faulty, ask the country boy of today. The verdict of the Independent is reversed on appeal to the great American tribunal of boyhood. Nothing can dim the fame of the wild strawberry. It is still the berry par excellence.—Kansas City Times.

GREAT MILESTONES.

Magna Carta and Waterloo are sufficient in themselves to make the year '15 of extraordinary prominence in English history; but as a matter of fact there have been significant century mileposts between 1215 and 1815, both in English history and in world history. Two hundred years after Magna Carta was in Agincourt, the same year, in which the Hohenzollern came into possession of Brandenburg. In 1715 came the Stuart rebellion; in France it was the year of the death of Louis XIV. If instead of the single year '15 we take a five year period with '15 as the middle point, we unquestionably have the most vital time-sector in the evolution of the British Empire, and a period of great world-events. We should then have to include Bannockburn in 1314; the treaty of Utrecht in 1713, and the establishment of England's maritime Empire, followed in the succeeding year by the accession of the Hanoverian dynasty. Within this quinquennium would come the death of Shakespeare. Abroad the year of Magna Carta was the year of the coronation of Frederick II of Germany, the foundation of the Dominican order, the Fourth Lateran Council and the Inquisition, and the conquest of Peking by the Mongols. In 1315 the Swiss won the battle of Morgarten over the Hapsburgs, and established their independence. From 1414 to 1447 the Council of Constance labored for the reunion of Papacy. In 1517 Luther issued his formal challenge to Rome. In 1613 the Romanoffs ascended the throne of Russia. In 1914. No other five-year period can show such a record across the centuries.—New York Evening Post.

THE MANITOBA SCANDAL.

The late revelations in connection with the Manitoba scandal have amazed and staggered the Dominion. It is too soon yet to arrive at anything like final conclusions regarding this whole astonishing affair. The "probe" seems to be in powerful and fearless hands; and much of the evidence already heard—unless it is successfully contradicted—will leave a most unpleasant taste in the mouth of the whole Canadian people.

Certainly when the truth is established, Canada will look to Manitoba—its "first-born" Province—to see that adequate and deterrent punishment be only safety for such a loose democracy as we enjoy in this country is to make it a far too dangerous business to engage in systematic frauds upon the public funds. Any man who sets out to steal from the people ought to know in advance that he is committing a penitentiary offence and that if "he is caught with the goods," he will infallibly go there. We have been far too lenient with such sinners in the past. We may be very sure that so long as the plundering of the public is looked upon as a sporting proposition in which the loser drops little but his time and trouble, we shall see constant efforts to rob the people on these easy terms. As we have said, no final judgments can fairly be delivered as yet; but Canada looks to Manitoba to clear its good name.—Montreal Star (Con.)

NEWS AND EVENTS FROM OUR BELLEVILLE CORRESPONDENT

The general outlook is for a rather small hay crop in many places. Where farmers were fortunate in having a good catch of new seedling there promises a very good yield, as the rains have done much towards bringing out the hay, but where dependence is put on old seedling a drought, there is sure to be a great shortage, and the sowing of other seeds to furnish hay for the place of hay will likely be adopted by some farmers.

There are good reports of the successful taking of this year's seedling down, and unless the hot weather should follow the harvest very severely and burn up the young plants, the indications seem very promising for better hay crops another year. The export of clover and timothy seeds have for some years past, been high and where successful catches have not taken place it has been very discouraging to the farmers, themselves, than to either climatic conditions or the preparation of the land. Whether this be true or not we cannot say, but at the price at which clover is selling, it is something of a wonder to the farmer to find out for sure whether the fault is his or not. Whether he is making a mistake in seeding down with spring fall grain, or whether he is trying to get a catch by seeding down with the wrong kind of spring grain, and perhaps some successful farmers may be able to drop a hint which may prove a boon to the less fortunate brother.

A couple of months ago the fruit growers were looking forward to a bumper crop of apples this fall. Today the prospects have fallen to a very low level. The weather has been so unfavorable that the crop at not over one third at what it was first placed at. It is a fact however, that there will not be a bumper crop, but as the price at which apples are being counted is so low, it is in the season the young apples had every appearance of setting to stay, but during the past month it has been reported that the crop has been shrunken or suddenly struck, the apples have fallen off in great numbers, leaving the trees all most fruitless. In other cases the blossoms present a picture which is frequently stated that when the blossoms are white instead of having a purple cast, it may safely be regarded as a very unsatisfactory outlook for the fruit grower who has proceeded to plant. BRIGHT STUDENTS RECEIVE DIPLOMAS AND MEDALS AT CONVOCATION

Closing Event at Albert College—Work of Year Highly Gratifying—Bright Addresses by Dr. Baker and Visitors—List of Successful Students

(From Wednesday's Daily.) Albert College Convocation which was held last evening in the chapel in Massey Hall marked the close of another successful year. For the past few weeks the college halls have been the scene of intense activity...

The attendance of students and citizens was gratifying in view of the adverse weather, and the number of events held at the same hour in the city. As the faculty procession moved towards the rostrum the girls of the college sang "Tipperary" when Rev. Dr. Baker and the staff had reached the platform...

Prof. Cameron sang in faultless style a song of the Men of Somerset and Miss J. Tuttle in a Scotch reading appeared at her best. Rev. Dr. Baker and staff had with them on the platform as guests, Rev. A. S. Kerr, Dr. Coughlin, Dr. O'Flynn, Dr. McCullough, Dr. A. Ray, Aid. J. O. R. McCurdy, Rev. Wm. McMullen, Toronto and later Mr. F. E. O'Flynn and Rev. W. G. Clarke.

During the presentation of the art certificates, Miss F. Strong was presented with a handsome bouquet of roses, while the girls sang "Albert, Albert, A-R-T". The girls' glee club sang the prize patriotic song, the words and music of which were composed by Miss Sadie Edwards—"To Arms, To Arms, the Motherland is Calling."

The teachers of the departments presented the certificates to the successful students, after which the distribution of prizes and medals was made. In presenting the prizes in expression, Rev. A. S. Kerr paid high praise to Albert's wide range of study "all the way from camp cooking to preaching and that's some distance to travel" (laughter). He was certain the staff and students had been faithful in order to accomplish what had been done.

Dr. McCullough presented the prizes in music after a short address. Dr. Coughlin, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, was introduced as one who had done excellent work at that institution. Dr. Coughlin expressed his pleasure in being privileged to take part on such an occasion as the convocation. He was most happy in a reference to Albert College and Rev. Dr. Baker. "It is well known how well and hard he has worked since coming to Belleville. We have every confidence that Dr. Baker will be successful in his plans and realize to the full his expectations for Albert College."

Dr. Coughlin presented the art prizes. Dr. Baker said the best part of the work at the O.S.D. was not its buildings but was within. Rev. Mr. McMullen, associate editor of the Christian Guardian in presenting the first form prizes said "Dr. Baker has the Methodist Church back of Albert College and back of its

the need of county representatives on the advisory committee along with the Stirling representatives to have in charge the expenditures of the money.

Mr. Vermilyea thought the matter should go to the Ways and Means. All that ought to be done is approved tentatively at present.

Mr. Coultter said this was a perfectly correct stand.

Hawkers and Peddlars. Mr. Coultter introduced a resolution, seconded by Mr. Rollins, as follows:—That this council memorialize the Legislature of Ontario to amend the Municipal Act, section 418, by the addition of the words, "Incorporated Villages" in the second line thereof, making the hawkers and peddlars provisions of the Municipal Institution Act apply to such villages.

A man can peddle, said Mr. Coultter, in Hastings County under a county license and in incorporated villages. Why should not incorporated villages have the same protection as towns and cities.

Mr. Vermilyea said all municipal councils have an advantage of a license granted by a county. The question is coupled.

Mr. Coultter: "Why should we not have the same rights as Deseronto?" A man should not be barred from peddling in Stirling, but he should pay something for that purpose. Every merchant is paying a high tax.

Mr. Newton spoke of amending the resolution.

Mr. Vermilyea said there were people hounded by the peripatetic merchants.

Mr. Tomson said if they are going to apply for legislation they should apply for legislation against mail order houses. The merchant on the country road has to compete against them.

Dr. Harper said he sees very little difference between a peddler and a transient trader. A village has power to pass a transient trader's by-law. If villages had the power against peddlers there would be more suppression of this class of dealers.

Mr. McLaren said the county merchants should be wiped out. What good were they doing to the country. They were in business for their own interests.

Mr. Sills said tea was mainly peddled because the profits were fairly large. These profits peddlers took away from the country village merchants who handle goods on which there is very little profit and which they are unable to sell.

Mr. Grey of Marmora, said it was a protection to the municipalities and the county to have the peddlers checked. They are "smoother than con grease" and dupe the people many times. They can sell where a merchant cannot sell because of their cleverness.

Mr. Montgomery said if any change should be made it should be so as to allow all municipalities the right to impose license fees on peddlers if they wish to adopt it. The villages should have the same protection as towns.

Mr. Welsh thought the peddlers were a great benefit to farmers, many of whom live miles from villages.

Mr. Laycock said peddlers were considered a nuisance in his community.

Mr. Coultter adopted Mr. Montgomery's suggestion and included in his resolution incorporated villages and Municipal Councils.

The resolution carried unanimously.

Council as Guests. Mr. J. Elliott, of the Belleville Branch of the Standard Bank, was heard at the close of council. He extended an invitation to the warden and council to attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Club and the address by Hon. Arthur Meighen, as his guests.

The warden expressed the gratitude of the council and accepted Mr. Elliott's hospitality.

Financial Standing. The present overdraft of the County of Hastings at the Standard Bank is $42,792.00. Required to meet debentures levied for in 1914 . . . 9,388.80

2 P.M. Mr. James Anderson of Marmora appeared before council and petitioned that body to grant him license to peddle various wares without payment of fees. The request was referred to Ways and Means.

Mr. Coultter gave notice of motion to levy certain notes for school purposes.

Council went into committee of the whole on Ways and Means. Mr. Simeon Fox in the chair.

Messrs. Laycock and Thompson spoke in favor of granting Mr. Anderson free license. This was granted.

A claim for gravel was presented by Mr. Wm. Rogers to the amount of $17.30. No action was taken. The gravel was taken from a farm in Rawdon. The statement was made that Mr. Martin had also claimed that he should be paid for this gravel.

$916.92 was the proportion of the County of Hastings towards the salary and travelling expenses of District Officer of Health. A motion prevailed that this amount be paid the deputy treasurer of Ontario.

This account covers two years and two months.

The chairman of Road and Bridges was given power to act in connection with the Allan's Bridge repairs between Hastings and Northumberland. The total cost may be $50,000.

A finding of the Railway Commission read, re C.N.R. service to the north county.

Dealings with Railways. Mr. E. A. Wootton said the northern line could not be blamed for any conditions in other parts of the county, for the C.O.R. One is a paying proposition. The rest is on the other side. It is increasing. Some change ought to be made.

Mr. Tomson suggested that the reeves of the northern townships should get together and consider this matter.

The communication was filed. A communication was read from the secretary of the Board of Railway Commissioners relating to a ditch in the township of Rawdon. An engineering found "not dangerous."

Mr. P. McLaren moved, seconded by Mr. J. L. Newton, "Whereas a letter under date of May 18th, 1915, C.L.O. & W. R. ditch between concessions 2 and 3 of Tyendinaga was received from the secretary of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, and whereas this letter claims an inspection was made by one of the officials of the Board and stated that the ditch was on the county road is not a dangerous one to the travelling public."

Resolved, that this council again refer the matter to the chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada with the information that the report of the Superintendent of Roads for Hastings County, Mr. Montgomery, chairman of roads for 1914, and Mr. McLaren, chairman for 1915, and the deputy-reeve of Tyendinaga, is that this ditch is very dangerous to the travelling public and bridges.

Graham's west of Lodgeroom; one west of this bridge near Marlbank.

Stirling—Both steel bridges have been replanked.

Rawdon—Small bridge, Caupbellford.

Two bridges south of Wellman's Creek to be repaired.

Huntingdon—Bridge south of Crookton.

Rest of County—Many other need repairs during the summer. We need a road to the top of the side which will double the life of the roads.

Oil and the cost of application reach about 2c to 2½c per square yard.

Dust should be swept off. One gallon application of 75 per cent. oil should be sufficient for a season.

The oil comes from the Mexican wells and has an asphaltic base.

Mr. Gray said Marmora had tried this scheme with success in that village this season.

The warden thanked Mr. Irvin for his interesting remarks on the timely subject of oiling.

The woman is a ward of Hastings Society, not being 21 years of age.

REVIEW OF THE 39TH BATTALION BY WARDEN AND COUNTY COUNCIL

March Past on Front Street-Addresses at Armouries-Unique Celebration of Centenary of Waterloo.

(From Friday's Daily)

A grand sight was witnessed on Front street at ten o'clock yesterday when the 39th Battalion marched past the county council with Warden Lt. Col. Preston had taken his station. As platoon after platoon passed by they were cheered to the echo by the warden and councillors. The new colors were carried in the parade and were applauded as they were borne by the saluting station. Councillors and all expressed their admiration of the fine body of troops under Lt. Col. Preston's command.

The regiment paraded to the armouries where an interesting ceremony was carried through. The county councillors stood on the walk on Bridge street and were introduced by Lt. Col. Preston to his officers and men. "I am," said the commanding officer, "delighted to welcome you to this little parade today, particularly so after having learned of your generous act in presenting our regimental fund with $1,000. This is only one of the many acts of kindness shown upon the battalion during the stay in Belleville.

Warden Ketcheson was the first speaker of the council. His address was one of inspiration to the men and was delivered with patriotic fervor. "We feel proud on behalf of the County Council and the County of Hastings to be allowed to address a few words to you. We are proud of the response that Hastings has made to the call for men to make up the 39th Battalion. You will, we are sure, uphold the honor of our forefathers as to our grant, we have done the best we could under the circumstances, for we legislators have our difficulties in war time as well as the soldiers. We hope you will have a safe journey to the front and perform glorious service on the field. The warden closed by asking the blessing of Heaven on the troops. They may be certain that they have the sympathy and support of those at home.

Mr. James Clark, reeve of Hurgford made a speech which will not be forgotten for many a day. "It is a pleasure to this review to see such a fine gathering of men ready to devote their lives if need be to the support of the British Empire, and not only to the support of the nations of Europe but to the upholding of the glorious name which the Canadians who preceded you have won. This fine gathering will surely do as good and great things for the Empire and Canada as those who have preceded you. Those who have gone to the front from this region have revealed facts unknown before by the world. Nations considered that colonial were mere toys, untrained. Hence the Germans thought to annihilate them, but the Canadians proved that they were men of iron and were equal to the

An Original Poem by Alice Pymc McDevitt.

Inspired by hate of fair England's state,
Jealous of her commerce vast,
Germany seeks to rule the world;
Forgetful of Britain's past,
Crowned King William sat, his feet
on a mat,
And he planned the things to be,
When he should reign o'er every land,
While his feet would rule the sea.

He had pledged "The Day" when England should pay,
Had fair Belgium's land o'er-run,
Noble cathedrals to ruins felled;
He'd bomb-shell every one,
His soldiers had burned, while he treasures spurned,
(He sought a place in the sun),
His hordes did pillage fertile France;
He rejoiced at murders done.

The world gazed aghast at the carnage vast,
Canadians crossed the sea,
Australia and India proved their worth,
As they fought the enemy,
Many heroes fell, as they battled well,
And are mourned as heroes are,
Prayers for justice—to God arise,
He decides the fates of war.

King William's dark hate, did no
whit abate,
He would shipwreck commerce fair
Strike as a Python strikes to kill,
From a coward's hidden lair,
Beneath the dark wave, no attempt to save,
Fifteen hundred people died,
One hundred and fifty prattling babes
Murdered—there on the waters wide,
Like Herod of old, with cruelty cold,
Think you that God doth not see?
The wide world arises to vengeance
just,
Punished shall Germany be,
The young, the old—dead, in ocean
cold,
King William doth leer and smile,
Germanian wretches boast of their feat,
And quaff, 'mid the earth's revile,
By the cries that arise to the fair
blue skies,
From the mourners who mourn
their dead,
"Vengeance is mine—I shall repay,"
Here are quoted the words he said,
What Germany's fate shall be, no man
may now see,
But right shall, and must prevail,
William, too, shall receive his due,
Who has caused the earth to wall,

39TH OFFICER'S MAKE REQUEST OF COUNTY COUNCIL

Ask Assistance to Secure Field Kitchens For Regiments—Hastings Loyal Support in Recruits

(From Friday's Daily)

A deputation of the 39th Battalion Lt. Col. Smart, Major Vandewater and Lieut. Colville appeared before the county council this morning and requested a grant for a regimental fund.

Lt. Col. Smart was first heard. He said the battalion had been enjoying the county's hospitality for some time, but now the time was getting limited and soon the regiment would be on its way. The attention of the council was drawn to the need of field kitchens and comforts for the men of the battalion and Col. Smart impressed upon the members their value.

Lieut. Colville wished that the 39th battalion had not much time to accumulate comforts for the men. From the side of economics it is wise to keep them well supplied. Warm food as supplied by field kitchens is of incalculable benefit to troops after a march. Hastings County has done nobly in the matter of enlistment. The 21st battalion of the second contingent took away from the whole of Eastern Ontario $21,000 in cash. Ready money is necessary when a battalion goes to the front. The 39th is drawn from the counties in the western portion of No. 3 Division.

Major Roscoe Vandewater said the Germans when war broke out were ready and had field kitchens for their soldiers. Britain and her colonies were not ready and did not possess these requisites. Consequently they have to be supplied by the people. Hastings has supplied 8 officers and 183 men for the 39th battalion. The officers only ask the people's good will for themselves, but request loyal support for the men. The first contingent has suffered and Hastings has lost a number of men, who would now think of a few paltry dollars, in comparison with the comforts they would bring to men who have sacrificed and are ready to sacrifice their lives.

Warden Ketcheson expressed his pleasure in hearing the deputation and the best wishes of himself and council for the noble service in the defence of the Empire. He said the county council would deal with their request before the close of the session.

Lt. Col. Smart thanked the council for the kind reception and extended an invitation to the warden and council and officials to attend a military reception held under the auspices of the 39th Battalion on Saturday afternoon from 4.30 to 6 o'clock.

As the officers were about to withdraw the council arose and sang God Save the King and gave three rousing cheers for the 39th battalion. Lt. Col. Smart acknowledged this recognition of the regiment.

Recommended as Inspector

Principal Minna of the Picton High School has recently been nominated for the position of Inspector of Public Schools for that inspectorate. Principal Minna is well known here and for his fine reputation by good work in Picton and in his previous schools. The predecessor in Center Hastings was Mr. Wm. McIntosh. High Office for Belleville Boy

At the 38th annual convention of the National Electric Light Association of the world held in San Francisco recently, a Belleville man was made president. This organization is an association of all electrical manufacturers, supply and distribution companies, and is the only body engaged in electrical business. Mr. E. W. Lloyd, the new president of the National Electric Light Association is the general contract agent of the Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago. Mr. Lloyd was born at Belleville, Ontario, on Feb. 1st, 1872. He received his early education at Belleville, his family later moving to Erie, Pa., where Mr. Lloyd was graduated from the local high school in 1890. After working as a draughtsman in the steel mills in Pittsburgh for two years, he accepted a similar position with the Crane Company at Chicago. In June 1893 he accepted a position in the draughting department of the Chicago Edison Co. Later he was transferred to engineering testing work and in 1897 he was made foreman of the company's construction department. In 1900 he entered the company's sales department. In 1901 he was made assistant superintendent of construction and in 1906 was promoted to his present position in the Commonwealth.

BRAVERY WON PROMOTION FOR PAUL ROCHAT

WAS WOUNDED IN NINE PLACES

But Now Returns to the Ranks as Adjutant of His Regiment

Madame Rochat, who is filling the place of her husband, Mons. Paul Rochat, as teacher of modern languages in the Maribon Collegiate Institute, Toronto, has received a medal of honor and was promoted to be adjutant of his regiment, in August last he hastened to join the colors as a French reservist. The greater part of the fall and winter he spent in the trenches, first as corporal and afterwards as sergeant, to which rank he was promoted on the field of battle owing to conspicuous bravery.

Had Close Shave.

He had several narrow escapes. One letter showed ragged holes in the paper, made when a bullet pierced his writing pad in his knapsack. Another was splattered with mud from bullets hitting the trench as he wrote. Late in the winter he was severely wounded, being hit in nine places. After a slow recovery in the hospital at Dijon, he was granted a furlough, and went to Algiers, Africa, to spend his convalescence with relatives. His commanding officer called on him several times in the hospital and promised him a good billet on his return to the firing line.

Has Fine Record.

This promise was fulfilled, as his subsequent promotion shows. A few weeks ago Mons. Rochat received a cable for money, and wondered what it was for. It now transpires to have been for the purpose of buying the officer's outfit. M. Rochat is a graduate of Paris and Oxford Universities, and holds high qualifications in pedagogy from France and Belgium. He is an Ontario high school specialist in French and German, the latter of which he speaks and teaches as readily as his native tongue. He also holds a cadet instructor's certificate and a specialist certificate in physical training. Madame Rochat resides at the family home in Humeval avenue, of St. Clair avenue. She was formerly Miss Norma Dufour of Madoc, and an honor graduate of Albert College.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. Blagrove of Christ church, after which the company sat down to a sumptuous repast. The popularity of the bride was attested by the large number of presents received. "FOR OVERSEAS" SERVICE"

Written For the Ontario by an Occasional Contributor

We who read of the staid women of England who send their men to the front with a cheery smile are being told of things of which we know nothing. Even when we stand and see the troop trains loaded and sweep out of the station loaded with our boys we do not see the real thing. That comes when our men go down to the sea in ships.

Not long since, somewhere in Canada, I saw this phase. Never shall I look on anything grander—certainly on no grimmer stage with a more enchanting background. To most of us, whose idea may very pardonably be based on the neat literature handed out by the ticket agent, we consulted with an ocean liner is a sort of floating palace hotel, consisting mainly of luxurious rugs, orchestras, stewards and five meals a day. The ship here is not a yacht-like in type and appearance, generally appealing to the aesthetes in fresh paint and glittering brass.

The liner of wartime is termed a transport and is a very different ship from the book description. The main deck is hard to pick out from the wireless aerials she is painted a greenish black to harmonize with the sea water. No brass here—nothing to show a mark. One's rods are promptly stowed aside. This ship is no playhouse.

For months past the port in question has had a home regiment in garrison. At another adjacent point an artillery ammunition column. At another point a corps of railway construction experts. Week after week the drill, the march out, the Sunday service, had passed before the citizens and still the men were in garrison. Various headquarters inspected the men, the equipment was ready to a button, yet no orders came. It is only the truth that discipline was hard to maintain, much harder than if the men had been away from home. A call came for another battalion. The men were ordered to "What?" "Enlist and go home for seven months." "Not on your life!" And still no word came to the waiting troops.

On Friday morning my barber was looking forth a bit. Harmsworth was in the harbor. Fog and drizzling rain came on but there was a rush to get a house-top or hill where the sight might be had. Those who didn't look called up the papers. The papers had nothing to give out. There she lay, Harmsworth, a big ship, but not a man had come ashore, nor had a pilot gone out. Wireless could bring her in on the darkest night. Next there was rush for the coal agents and ship's supply men for their news. They had nothing to give out. In point of fact she had been coaled for thirty-five days at another port a little farther out. And not a word in the papers. Hang the censors anyway! Thursday morning she lay at her berth just as though she had been there daily for a month. My horse loomed up. Five hundred and eighty feet over all and standing up sheer black against the foggy skyline, she dwarfed her surroundings completely. Fully fifty feet above the dock, deck on deck, no gangways were down and no crew had shore leave. Only a stream of provisions going up in the slugs—beef, in carloads, mutton, bacon, livers, eggs, poultry, bread, fish and condensed milk—and trams in tin cans waiting to unload. In the rain town—hundreds watched the work in the armories all leave had been cancelled—the public strictly shut out. But word had been sent that good-byes might be said after three o'clock. Here and there corporal's guards were seeking out the men on leave and, he said, some who were not on leave. A troop train rolled in alongside the ship with the artillery aboard, but no men left the cars. On the other side were putting aboard the construction company's steam shovels, derricks, donkey engines, cables and what not.

"When will she sail?" Five o'clock said the man who is always ready to say something. Yet five o'clock came and there was no sign. Everything was "hurry" except the men. Cases of rifles, tons of ammunition, the officers' horses and autos, still so men. The drizzle came out a steady patter at dark. The artillery left the cars for the shed and their relatives swarmed in. After seven here and there, in the rain of the streets and aboard the swifty cars at rush hours, one saw women with rain-soaked children clinging to their skirts, with babes in arms and caring not who saw their anguish while others, older, mothers of men in the ranks stood out more bravely and tried to comfort the rest—trying to be brave after the farewell. Hard as it seemed, there had been no markish public to see their leave-taking. One who were she was going to spend the night by the ship. The next would say she was not going back. One knew by instinct that she could not. After hours of waiting the crowds thinned out. No troops appeared.

Sunday morning bright clear and sunny. At breakfast I felt a tooth, which promised trouble. So I called up my dentist. His word was that the transport would leave at 10.30. After that he would see me. A rush to the waterfront and sure enough she was still there, bathed in the morning sunshine, the harbor fringed by the gray city and, back of it, the hills which, to these men, were home. On the ship, everywhere, from the lowest port-hole to the highest ladder, were the men—infantry, forward, artillery aft, easily picked out by their bandollers. On the hurricane deck were the officers. Ashore was a seething appeal to the members of the Board. This most generous grant was followed by another of $50 to the Cross ladies of Tweed and vicinity or assistance in their work. About 2500 boxes of cheese were boarded, Alexander and Co. buying 200 boxes at 16 1/2 and Cook and Son the balance at 16 7/16.

Hold on Very Serious Charge

A young man named Robert Harvey, of Waupoos, Prince Edward, is under arrest on a very serious charge. He is charged with assisting a soldier, namely unlawfully assisting a soldier of His Majesty's forces to attempt to desert. He was arrested in town yesterday along with Private Earl Zimmerman who is charged with attempted desertion. Zimmerman was handed over to the military authorities by the police. Harvey was remanded a week. The penalty on conviction of assisting to desert is a most severe one.

ST. VITUS DANCE IN YOUNG CHILDREN

Can Only be Cured by Enriching the Blood and Toning Up the Blood

One of the commonest forms of nervous trouble that affects young children is St. Vitus dance. This is because of the great demand made on the body by growth and development together with the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment that St. Vitus dance develops. The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus dance should lead parents to give this great blood-building medicine to their children at the first signs of the approach of the trouble. Pallor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which clearly show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demand upon them. Here is proof of the great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. Mrs. Alfred Schoener, R.R. No. 5, Dunnville, Ont., says: "Our ten-year-old daughter, Violet, suffered very severely from St. Vitus dance. The trouble came on so gradually that she was not alarmed until it affected her legs and arms, which would twitch and jerk to such an extent that she could scarcely walk and could not hold anything in her hands steadily. She suffered for about five months before giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to try. She had not taken these long before we found that they were the right medicine, and after she had taken nine boxes she had fully recovered her former health and strength. I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every parent having a child suffering from St. Vitus dance or any form of nervousness."

June 18—After an illness of some weeks there took place on Sunday, June 13, the death of Mr. Selim Carrinette. The late Mr. Carrinette was a life-long resident of this community, being 78 years of age, and was held in the highest respect by all. His genial disposition endeared him to old and young.

There is left to mourn his loss, the heart-broken widow and four daughters, Mrs. E. Wycott, Mrs. F. Weeks, Mrs. H. Huxley all within a very short distance of home, and Mrs. T. Orser of Trenton. Of his several grand-children, the loss will be felt most keenly by Miss Neva Carrinette, to whom the deceased has been a father since the death of her own parents in her infancy.

The funeral took place from his late home and services were conducted at Salem church by Mr. Williams, of Concession, assisted by Mr. Harston of Belleville. A most impressive and consoling sermon was delivered by Mr. Williams. The pall-bearers were Messrs. L. and B. Orser, M. Huxley and C. Weeks—four grandsons and B. Weeks and L. Lont, grandson-in-law.

The large number of friends present in spite of a heavy fall of rain, testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held. The deepest sympathy is extended Mrs. Carrinette and family. Mrs. R. Vancott spent Sunday with her parents at Mountain View. Mr. R. Scooper of Hillier is the guest of Mr. Chas. Pagar. Mr. and Mrs. Meagher of Picton attended the funeral of the late S. Carrinette. Mrs. Meagher's grandfather.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Mastin of Victoria visited at V. Brown's this week. Several from here attended the bazaar at Victoria last week. Rev. S. Kemp, of Enterprise, made a flying visit to his brother last week. Mr. H. Spence and Master Rae spent a day this week in Wellington. The chicken row is still about on

Took Child From Mother

At a residence on James St. Thursday afternoon a strange thing happened. A man said to be under the influence of liquor came along and asked a lady to be allowed to wheel a baby carriage. Naturally the woman refused and he said he would snatch her and take the child away, carrying it out to the street. Mrs. Alice Moon, the mother of the child called her husband and he went after the man and took the child away from him. The father was later arrested charged with unlawfully taking Charles Moon a child under 14 years, from his parents with intent to deprive the parents of the child's possession. The accused was remanded for a week.

WATERLOO—A CENTURY AGO

WHEN NAPOLEON FELL.

Hundredth Anniversary of the Great Battle Which Saved Europe From Military Despotism Of That Time.

One hundred years ago—on June 18, 1815—Britain, Teuton, Belgian and Frenchman were locked in a death struggle on the plains of Waterloo, on whose outcome hung the fate of Europe. Then, as now, the powers of Europe had combined for self-preservation against the arrogant schemes of a military dictator who aimed at nothing less than world-domination. A century ago, it was Napoleon and his veteran army who menaced the freedom of Europe. Today it is the Kaiser and his war machine which he and his counselors have been assembling for the past 30 years. Napoleon was defeated and his army smashed. History will repeat itself again in our time, and though the days when one decisive battle sealed the fate of a nation's appear to be over, the German war lord's ultimate defeat and overthrow is as certain as that of the great French marshal.

An Army of Veterans. In June, 1815, shortly after he made his escape from Elba, Napoleon's forces numbered upwards of 120,000 men. They were veterans who had shared in his earlier successes, and every one of them was fired with the determination to do or die for the "little corporal."

Maintained Secrecy. Maintaining the utmost secrecy in regard to his intentions and movements, Napoleon threw himself between the two forces. On June 15th he advanced and took Charleroi, in whose vicinity some of the bloodiest fighting of the present war has taken place. On the next day he engaged the Prussians at Ligny and the British at Quatre Bras, his intention being to block the cross roads between the latter village and Soubrefre, and so destroy communications between the British and Prussian armies. Napoleon himself led the French troops who attacked Blucher, and the result of the day's fighting saw the Prussians defeated, with the loss of 14,000 men. Another 12,000 abandoned the colors and went back to Liege.

Fell Back on Brussels. Ney commanded the force against Wellington, whose army hurriedly assembled, stood firm, and thrust back the French columns bent on dislodging it. But Blucher's retirement after Ligny compelled Wellington to fall back on Brussels in order to maintain junction with his ally. This was how matters stood on the evening of the 17th June, 1815. Napoleon, thoroughly believing that the Prussians were demoralized and retreating north, had despatched Grouchy with 30,000 men to follow them up and prevent any possibility of Blucher affecting a junction with the Iron Duke. Grouchy's instructions were not implicit, but he generally failed to size up the situation, with the result that the willfully old Prussian captain outwitted him. But Grouchy's mistake history would have been changed.

Face to Face. So it came that on the morning of Sunday, June 18, Napoleon found himself confronting the British and their Hanoverian and Belgian allies at Waterloo. There is considerable controversy over the number of troops engaged, but according to Major-General Sir Alfred Turner, one of the best modern military critics, Napoleon's force, after he had detached Grouchy's command, amounted to 73,000 men and 248 guns; the British and allies to 68,000 and 155 guns. To these must be added Von Bulow's advance guard of 16,000 men who, however, did not arrive on the battlefield until the afternoon. The number of British troops General Turner estimates at a little over 25,000 of all arms.

The Tactical Keys. Wellington's position sloped down gradually to the road which wound its way to Brussels. To the right of his line, and in advance of it, was the chateau of Hougomont. On the left was the farmhouse of La Haye Sainte. These two positions were the tactical keys to his position. Hougomont was held all day by the Coldstream Guards and detachments of Highland regiments. La Haye Sainte was captured after its defenders, the King's German Legion had run out of cartridges. Before him from the crest of the slope the Iron Duke could watch the French attack unfold itself. Nor after his dispositions had been made, had he long to wait.

Launched Attack. At 11.30 Napoleon was ready to offer battle. He started his attack by launching a strong assault at Hougomont. The attack was in the nature of a feint, but so heavily did his troops become involved that it was necessary to support them with division after division until the whole of an army corps had been thrown into the fight.

Three-quarters of an hour after the battle began, eighty French cannon began to rake the ridge of La Haye Sainte, and the accuracy of their fire drove back the Dutch-Belgian division, which thereafter ceased to take an active share in the operations. D'Erlon had been ordered to charge the British centre, which Napoleon's guns had been pounding for some time, but he was met with such a withering fire from the steel-tipped scarlet squares that the charge broke down.

"Scotland for Ever." The Union Brigade—First Royals, Scots Greys, and Jamikilling Dragoons—galloped at the retreating French infantry, and drove them down the hill. It was in this charge that the 72nd Highlanders, now the 1st Gordons, caught hold of the stirrups of the Grey's troopers, and charged with them to the very of Scotland for ever.

Cavalry Cut Up. Napoleon, learning of Bulow's approach, took command on the right, and after three hours' hard fighting led the Prussians in check. But when he came back to the centre he found that unless a supreme effort was at once made defeat was certain. During his absence the splendid French cavalry had been almost cut to pieces. Thirteen times had they charged the stubborn British squares, and thirteen times had they been driven back. They rode around and between the tiny four-sided islands of red, edged with steel, but never once could they break them.

Sleat of Lead. Beneath the shattered walls of La Haye Sainte, which had been captured, Napoleon addressed the Imperial Guard, and called on them to save the situation. With cheers the veterans responded and advanced in steady columns up the slope. Not until they were within a few yards of the British was any fire opened. Then came such a sleet of lead that the gallant French wavered, stood irresolute, and then retreated down the hill.

Wellington, hat in hand, gave the word to advance, and the whole British line charged at the retiring foe. Meanwhile Zieten's Prussians had arrived on the flank of the discomfited French and the retreat became a rout. Two battalions of the Guard by stubborn fighting enabled Napoleon to effect his escape, but they were annihilated by the allies.

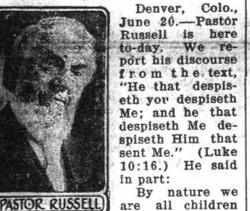

Two Generals Met. A little after nine o'clock Wellington and Blucher met at La Belle Alliance, and it was agreed that the Prussians should maintain the pursuit. This they did to such good effect that they routed the retiring French out of seven successive bivouacs, finally driving them across the Sambre. Whether Blucher saved Wellington, or whether without his aid the Iron Duke would have defeated Napoleon is a controversy which need not be entered into here. Sufficient to say that the Duke's dispositions were made on the distinct understanding that the Prussian leader would effect a junction with his force. The French losses were estimated at 40,000, the British and allies at 17,000, and the Prussians at 7,000.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Denver, Colo., June 20.—Pastor Russell is here to-day to report his discourse from the text, "He that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me, despiseth Him that sent Me." (Luke 10:16.) He said in part: By nature we are all children of wrath, sinners under sentence of death. God indeed tells us that He purposes to bless the world by and by, through the great Mediator of the Kingdom, that will rule upon a thousand years, to help mankind up out of degradation, sin and death, to full perfection of human nature; and that He has appointed Jesus Christ to be the Mediator between Himself and the world during those thousand years. Meantime, He has as yet purposed to take out of the world some who will have the same mind as was in Christ Jesus, and to associate this class with the world in the work of blessing the world. Jesus Himself will be the Head over this company, and they will be the Body of Christ. Whoever desires to become a member of this Body which God is selecting must comply with the required conditions. Evidently the one quality for which God is looking is honesty, sincerity; He desires really true and really loyal hearts. One might be very careful to a penny in respect to money, but carelessly and yet strictly and thoroughly honest. He might overestimate himself and underestimate others. Some people are born with an honest disposition. All whom God "loves" are so. He has thus favored us with the Truth, it is for us to maintain this honesty; for unless honesty enters into the affairs of life, it will be impossible to maintain our relationship with the Lord.

We cannot be too careful with our conscience; we cannot be too honest. We cannot think of the Lord Jesus as being dishonest or of the Apostles as giving misrepresentation. Therefore it is evident that they did not believe in Hell fire and eternal torment; for we cannot think that they would have omitted preaching about eternal torment if they had believed it. We love to think of the Apostles as being honest men, in favor of the Lord.

There is a tendency on the part of all mankind to say, "I am all right." But everybody who is not an idiot knows differently. We do not know righteous, no, not one. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God.—short of that glorious condition which God approved when He created our first parents in the human image. But if we confess our sins, we demonstrate our honesty; and He who arranged for the forgiveness of those sins is faithful to forgive us. If we are not sinners, we make God a liar; and the truth is not in us—we would be dishonest. We should be honest enough to tell God that we desire to be right.—1 John 1:9. There is no one who would become a member of the Body of Christ, must first turn away from sin and turn toward God. To those who have taken that step and are desirous of progressing, the Lord Jesus has said, "I will do all that I can for you, but you must do the cost." The Bible never gives anybody along this line. (Luke 14:27, 28.) People who do not understand the Bible work upon one's emotions in urging others to give themselves to God. They do not understand that God's way is to think everything out carefully; that God's Plan is very cool, and calculating, and that everything concerning it is to be determined intellectually.

There is only one way of becoming a Christian, and that is by entering into a covenant with the Lord. This covenant is a positive agreement, in which we give ourselves in sacrifice to renounce, everything of an earthly nature. This is the kind of covenant which our Lord Jesus made; it is the only kind to be made now. (1 John 3:10.) Jesus made His covenant at the beginning of His ministry, as it is written: "I, come (in the volume of the Book it is written of Me) to do Thy will, O God." (Hebrews 10:7.) Whoever would be a follower of the Lord must make this same covenant. It did not take our Lord long to count the cost; for He had such a high appreciation of the privilege that He delighted to give Himself to God. He manifested loyalty to that consecration throughout His lifetime, even unto the death of the Cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name. of the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.—Philippians 2:9, 10. The Church are to be joint-heirs with Christ. "I, we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him." If we be dead with Him, we shall live with Him." (2 Tim 2:11, 12.) It is no wonder that His will, terms attached to so high a calling! These terms we have in Jesus our words: "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me."—Matthew 16:24.

The first step is to will to be Christ's disciple. The next step is to deny himself—to give up his own will and to take the Lord's will instead of his own. The will represents the man. If we deny ourselves, if we give up our own will, it carries everything absolutely that we possess. But do not give up your will to anybody except the Lord. This does not mean that we shall not be considerate of others, but not try to yield to others. The people of God should be ready to favor our preferences in matters of no importance. But it is another thing to give over what we shall think, to give over our hearts. Whoever does so would not thereafter have control of his body. This is exactly what the evil spirits endeavor to have us do. They desire to get control of our minds and to take over the human body. When a person becomes thus possessed, the evil spirits get control of his mind and he cannot think for himself, because his will is gone. This is a true case of a person who has come under the power of hypnotism. But it is an altogether different matter to yield the will to our Lord Jesus Christ. God has tried and tested our Lord Jesus, and has sent Him to be the Head over the Church, which is His Body; and all members of that Body must give up their wills to their Head. The Spirit of the Head, the mind of Christ, must operate in every member.

From the time one becomes a member of the family of God a great work of transformation is in progress. As members of the Adamic race all are imperfect, morally and physically. But this class who feel their condition and are honest about the matter come meekly to the Lord and accept the riches of His grace in Christ Jesus. He will then receive the change in the glorious First Resurrection there will be nothing ignoble about them, as there is now. Just as surely as they are seeking to know and to do the will of the Lord, the same proportion will they come into harmony with that will, and thus be blessed in their minds and their bodies. The peace of God, that passes all human understanding, will rule in their hearts and in their lives.

Fear and worry constitute a great part of the trouble that is upon the world, bringing all kinds of disease and sorrow upon the people. But we cast all our care upon Him who cares for us, the load of care rolls away from us. Although the Lord has not promised His Church earthly blessings of any kind, neither earthly riches nor wealth, yet He has provided us with many physical blessings. Whoever is with the Lord and His Word and the company of His children is sure to be benefited; for He shows us the way we should take. As whoever associates with cultured people is sure to absorb their ways, no matter how humble the condition in which he has been brought up, so whoever is associated with the Lord Jesus Christ is sure to be blessed.

The point we desire to make is this: whoever is with the Lord, God must be right in heart. No matter how imperfect that person may be by nature, there is something right about him; else God would not have recognized him as being of His people. Therefore, whoever ever receiveth you receiveth Me, and whoever despiseth you despiseth Me; and whoever despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me.

Our Lord is always in the flesh; the flesh of His consecrated members; and the world still despises Him as at first and as He foretold, saying, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hateth Me before it hateth you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own." (John 15:18, 19.) The world is still ashamed of Christ. Nominal Christians, nominal Israelites, are as much ashamed of Him to-day as were the Natural Israelites eighteen centuries ago.

When we consider that our Lord is represented in the flesh by the members of His Body in the flesh, we see that love for the brethren means love for the Lord. Hence the Apostle declares that love of the brethren is one of the great tests of our relationship to the Lord and to the Father. "He who loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20.) Love one another as I have loved you," is, therefore, the recognized test of discipleship; and whoever is ashamed of the brethren is ashamed of the Elder Brother, who counts all the younger brethren as Himself. It may be a new thought to some that in despising the brethren they are despising the Lord; that in being ashamed of the brethren they are ashamed of the Lord, and that thus they are demonstrating that they are not fit for the Kingdom, that they have not reached the mark of perfect love, that they are only not learned to love their neighbors, but not learned to love those who are, striving to walk in the footsteps of Christ. How our Lord's love for them and test our very best thoughts!

On the other hand, we are not so much ashamed that we should be despised. By nature we were children of wrath, and we had no preference above any others of our race. But it surely does surprise us to learn that our Lord Jesus was despised. We remember that He was a price—paid to that extent that He could say:

"It hath pleased My Father to send Me, and I have obeyed." No human being can be a spirit being. But since Adam, who was created perfect, was in the image and likeness of God, whoever would see a perfect human being would see the earthly representative of the Heavenly Father.

Since our Lord Jesus was a perfect man while on earth, in full harmony with the Father, whoever saw Him saw the Father in the only way in which it was possible for the humanity ever to see God. As the Apostle says, "Who hath seen God at any time; the Only Begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He hath revealed Him." Our Lord has made Himself known to us. Hence the Church, which Jesus, were becoming acquainted with the Father. We can very well perceive, then, the purport of our Lord's words that whoever despised Him would be despising the Father who had sent Him.

To us it seems a very different matter when He said, "He that despiseth you despiseth Me." How poorly we represent our Lord! How imperfect our representation of Him! It is very wonderful that our Lord should consider us as His members in any such way as this, a great honor, especially when we consider how imperfect we are. "There is none righteous, no, not one"; hence for our Lord to say that whoever receives one of His little ones is receiving Him, and that whoever despises one of His little ones is despising Him, seems very wonderful. Herein is an important lesson for us.

As we realize, then, that we are given near to the close of the Gospel Age and that the time is at hand for the rendering of our accounts, let us be faithful in confessing the Lord, His Truth and the brethren. Then when we shall have finished our course with joy, we shall hear His "Well done, good and faithful servant! Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!" The Lord's will concerning all His followers is that they should love one another as He loved them. St. John amplified the statement, saying that as Jesus loved the Church and laid down His life for the Church, so also His followers should lay down their lives for the brethren. (1 John 3:16.) If this is the standard which our Lord has set for His people, how sorely disappointed will we be if, instead of loving the brethren and laying down their lives for them, some have said all manner of evil against them, what then? Then those who do these things are surely false brethren!

It is well that Christians not carefully the insidious canker which gnaws at the root of brotherly love, which tends to poison the disposition and to bring forth the evil fruitage of anger, malice, hatred, envy and strife. The wrong spirit is a growth, a development. Apparently, in some cases, the spirit of the spirit of ambition, the spirit of ambition, are the leading incentives to the wrong course, which, if permitted to affect the heart, will develop a bad fruitage, which will produce false brethren, persecuting brethren, heady, high-minded, blind to the real spirit of the Master.

Whoever would be found worthy to be forever with the Lord to share His glory and be associated with Him in His future work must be transformed in character, must be renewed in heart, must become not only pure in heart intention, but so far as possible pure in word and deed.

Oh, how much the true followers of Jesus should seek to impress upon themselves the great lesson that love does not roll to his neighbor, that love is sympathetic, suffering long and is kind, is not puffed up, vaunth not itself, seeketh not its own interest and welfare merely, but the interest and welfare of others!

The supreme test of our loyalty to God is our love for Him; and this love is manifested by our desire to do those things acceptable to Him. (1 John 2:3.) There is little that we can do for the Almighty. He is so great and we are so small! But if we have His Spirit of love, then we shall love Him and love one another and our conduct toward them will demonstrate the real sentiments of our hearts. Thus seen, we are daily making our record in the Lord's sight, daily showing Him to what degree we are worthy or unworthy of His great reward which will go only to those in whom love abounds—in whom the Spirit of Christ abounds. Let us be more and more on guard against the encroachments of the Adversary upon us as New Creatures! Let us more and more show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light! And in no way can we better show forth these praises than by exemplifying in our daily conduct the lessons which we have learned of Him. "Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." According to the riches of His grace He will "do exceedingly abundantly above all that we can ask or think."

The Kaiser of Course. An Asian has just been sentenced to imprisonment, it is reported, for "lese Majeste," the accusation being that he had disgraced the Kaiser's portrait. Perhaps the best instance of that terrible crime on record is that of an Englishman who expressed his views rather freely in a Berlin cafe, and was punished upon immediately by a police spy. He pleaded that he had been referring to the Emperor of Austria. "No, no, that won't do," said the spy. "In this country, when anyone says 'the Emperor is a—d fool,' we know he means our Emperor."

Wounded Soldier Writes From the Hospital

The following letter copied from the "Vancouver Daily Province" will be of interest to friends of Bernard S. Oliver.

St. Thomas' Hospital, London, England, May—, 1915

Dear Mother,—

Just a line to let you know I am back in England once more, I am at present residing opposite to the House of Parliament. I think I told you in my last letter I had a shell wound in my leg. It is in the back of the thigh and on account of it being a very large wound I expect it will be several months healing up; some skin grafting will be necessary later on. I got wounded April 24th at the great battle of Ypres near St. Julien and had a very narrow escape from being taken prisoner and incidentally lost all my belongings. I am now in the position of a new born child; I have no possessions beyond a pair of pajamas and they belong to the hospital. Rather humorous don't you know. I expect to be in bed for at least three months.

rather a pleasant prospect. It is a question whether my leg will ever be the same again. Don't you think I will look rather well walking about with that venerable gray hair, and a cane. Eh! What! This is a grand hospital, one of the largest in London also the best. There are five wards of wounded soldiers, a few Canadians. I was sent here as a special case on account of the skin grafting.

The Canadian division had a terrible time at Ypres during the three days that the Germans tried to break through. I was hit on the last day. There was 12,000 Canadian infantry engaged and we had 6,200 casualties during the three days. The Canadians certainly put up a great scrap and Canada should be proud of them. We were hopelessly outnumbered, had that terrible gas to contend with and the Germans had ten guns to our one, and still the Canadians held their position for three days, with one flank exposed, while the French had fallen back until the British reserves could be brought up. They are very loud in their praise of the Canadians here.

I had to go three miles from where I was wounded to get to a dressing station and I had a terrible time getting there. I got hit on the head by a piece of shrapnel, and while it raised a large lump, it didn't crack anything. That is one advantage of being head-headed. I also have two slight wounds on my left leg so you see I am well fixed. The wound on my right leg was very dirty for a while and they were afraid I would lose my leg, but it has since cleared up in great shape. The doctor at Boulogne said I had great vitality. I am in the Alexandra ward. There are 32 beds, nearly all fellows from the regular regiments. There is one other Canadian in this ward. It is surprising how happy they all seem. It seems as though you can't down the spirits of the British Tommy. They are just the same on the battlefield. One poor fellow had both his legs blown off by a shell and the first thing he said was "I guess I won't play football for a while." That's what you call grit. That is the way they take everything and I think that's a lot to do with making them the great soldiers they are. I could tell you a hundred little incidents like that, but as I am writing this lying on my back will have to cut it short. We have plenty of visitors who bring fruit, cigarettes, etc., and all kinds of dainties to eat. I still have an awful appetite in spite of my damages. Hoping you will all well. I am your damaged but still affectionate son.

Bernard Oliver.

Ward presented Mr. and Mrs. Batstone with a dozen silver knives and forks and teaspoons and a handsome china berry set and a berry set and a berry spoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Batstone made very suitable replies speaking in the highest terms of Stockdale people and expressing the hope that we would not meet many times yet while sojourning here but that we would all be permitted to meet in a better home beyond.

During the evening Mrs. J. W. Wright sang a beautiful solo and Mrs. S. Orr and Mr. M. Davidson rendered some instrumental music. Luncheon being served, the company dispersed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Batstone many years yet to labor in the Master's vineyard.

THE ADDRESS

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Batstone.—

With a few of your many friends, from the Stockdale people and come here tonight to spend an evening with you before you leave us for your new field of labor. While we do not deplore the new ties you will assume, we do regret the loss of the old. A review of the past four years brings the remembrance of the many times you have aided us in the various forms of church work, always giving your best willingly and generously. But all that is past and we have met tonight to spend one more social evening with you ere we bid you farewell. We have always found you sympathetic and helpful in times of trouble and sorrow and we sadly realize that your presence will be hard to fill. We feel your dispensation of God's word has developed in us many kindly feelings, many noble aims; that the seed has not all fallen by the wayside. Many things will remind us of your pastorate amongst us and we feel sure the circuit to which you have been transferred will soon learn to appreciate your sociability and Christian worth. In parting we ask you to accept these presents, not for their intrinsic value, but as a token of our esteem and as you use them we hope they will recall to your mind pleasant memories of your friends at Stockdale.

Signed on behalf of the congregation

Mrs. G. H. Davidson, Mrs. J. S. Maybee, Mrs. E. Walt and Mrs. L. Bryant.

"ONTARIO" PANAMA-PACIFIC PARTY WILL STOP ONLY AT THE BEST HOTELS

The "La Salle" at Chicago, the "Antlers" at Colorado Springs, the "U. S. Grant" at San Diego, and the "Manx" at San Francisco--Tours that Cost Over $400 for each Member of the Party--Personal Guide Will Accompany the Party From Belleville in Special Pullman.

The Daily Ontario Panama-Pacific Touring party, which leaves Belleville in a special Pullman car by the International Limited on Monday, August 9th, will be accommodated at only the highest class hotels at the various stopping places.

At Chicago, they will be received at the palatial Hotel La Salle, where rooms alone cost from three dollars to five dollars per day.

At Colorado Springs they will find accommodation at "The Antlers," one of the most famous and exclusive hostilities in America.

Their four days' stay at San Diego will be at the two-million-dollar "U. S. Grant Hotel," not only the best in that city, but one of the best in the world. There is nothing in Toronto that nearly approaches it either in architectural beauty or elaborately high-class service.

At San Francisco their home will be at the "Manx" where only the best people are received and accommodated.

There will be nothing cheap or tawdry about this great 30-day tour from start to finish. Every feature is under contract and is fully guaranteed. Read over the detailed program of the tour on another page.

TOURS THAT COST OVER $400.

No one can purchase one of these tours to California as planned and guaranteed by The Ontario for less than Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars.

Thus it will be seen that with the additional prizes in gold given to the members of the party and incidentals the cost will be well over Four Hundred Dollars or four times the cost of a first class return ticket from Belleville to San Francisco.

You wonder why or how we are going to carry out so luxurious and costly a program. All we can say is--leave that feature to us. We will do exactly as we have agreed with every one of our patrons.

PARTY WILL BE CAREFULLY CHAPERONED.

No lady or young girl need have any hesitation about joining this party.

In the first place the Contest Managers will not accept nominations from people of objectionable reputation.

Already some of the best people in Belleville, Hastings and Prince Edward have been nominated and are enthusiastically taking up the work. In every one of the eight districts it is now certain there will be spirited and interesting rivalry for popularity honors.

The tours offered are such as appeal to every person of refinement and culture, and this will be the type of candidate who will be sure to win for they will put forth earnest endeavors to make their travel dreams come true.

As we have announced before there will be a special pullman car to receive the party on August 9th at the Grand Trunk Station, and it will leave at 3:05 o'clock in the afternoon by the International Limited and be taken direct to Chicago where the first stopover will take place.

A personal guide or conductor will be in charge of the party and he will see to it that all bills are paid, baggage looked after etc., and provide for their accommodation at hotels and conduct them about the sight-seeing tours at the various cities.

The entire thirty days will be a continuous round of pleasure and wonderful sight-seeing and with luxurious surroundings and accommodations such as only the most wealthy have hitherto been able to enjoy.

All this The Ontario offers without one cent of cost. Is it worth while? Think it over and let us have your name today.

CONTEST OPENS ON MONDAY.

The great Contest for these tours opens on Monday June 21st. It will run on August 5th. Only a little over six weeks in which to work those already nominated should begin to lay their plans, see their friends and get them interested at once. Those who commence the work early will have a great advantage over those coming in later.

SAVE THE COUPONS.

Each day a coupon will appear in The Ontario that will be good for VOTES. The saving and accumulation of these mean victory for some of the candidates.

The list of those already nominated will be published in two or three days.

IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD FOR FALLEN CANADIANS

The following is an impression of a memorial service to Canadian soldiers at St. Paul's, written by Mrs. G. McL. Brown, wife of the European manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which appeared in the Canadian Gazette, published in London, England, May 20th.

A number of Mr. Brown's cables to Lt.-Col. W. N. Ponton relative to messages from Capt. R. D. Ponton have appeared in the local papers.

I sat beneath the great dome of St. Paul's and all about me gathered the people who had come to do homage to Canada's dead. Statesmen, men of high place, admirals of the fleet, generals of divisions, soldiers from the field, royal ladies, sisters of mercy, and women and girls from the factory and shop--they came, an endless throng, to pay tribute to the fallen. Canadians in the flush and vigor of health had come from their camps; and from the hospitals, with shattered bodies and crippled limbs, came the wounded and the broken.

Fathers, whose hopes lay buried in the grave, mothers, whose only sons had been taken; brides widowed in their bloom, met together to share their grief. And the high and the low, the great and the humble, the strong and the weak, the bereaved and the anxious and the distressed, in that solemn hour stood side by side as members of one great family, sharing a common fealty to each other to their country and to their king.

The glorious music rose and fell, and rose again, as if it would say: "Honor the brave, chant for the dead! Exalt them who pass to their reward; and organ and drums and brass and cymbals, and pipes and reeds and strings thundered and rolled and sang in a mighty union of praise. Through the iron gates, and on to the altar's step, the symbols of their faith borne in front of them, passed the long procession of choir and priests and bishops. The music faltered, hushed and died, and the solemn ritual began.

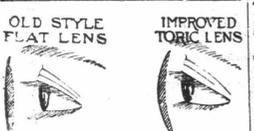

Glory of music and beauty of words homage of people and tribute of king! How shall these comfort us? For they, our beloved are dead. They are gone, in the fullness of their strength, and their hopes and their dreams are lying in the dust. For them the promise of years is not, and in all the days to come we shall know them no more. He that believed in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Oh, stricken father, lift up your head. The son of your youth has passed beyond your mortal vision, yet still he lives and presses forward the banner of his Lord.

But our hearts are heavy. In the morning and in the night they are tortured and cry out, remembering how, though our love stretched out its arms, it could not reach nor succor us, in blood and agony, they, the brave, went from the light and sweetness of life to the silence of their lonely graves.

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, Thou art with me."

Take comfort, poor widowed girl and desolate mother. They were not left alone. Love, greater than yours, upheld them and surrounded them as the overlying mercy.

Better Sight Less Annoyance

Toric Lenses give a larger field of clear vision, and their curved shape makes them appear very much neater than flat lenses. Your eyes will not touch them, nor will you find any rear reflections to confuse and annoy. Let us explain their many advantages to you.

Having our own plant on the premises enables us to grind you new lenses of any style or shape in a couple of hours.

Angus McFee

216 Front St.

Sorrow multiplies on sorrow. To day and tomorrow, the weight of our woes increases, and the earth groans with our anguish. We remember the land across the sea where, even to the borders of another sea, they weep with us for those who will not come again. And to what end? To what end do we bear the burden that presses upon us? For what avail valor and glory and conquest if these our sons are slain?

"Blest are the departed who in the Lord are sleeping. They rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Oh, sorrowing souls, look up! Not alone for valor and glory, for country and king were the lives laid down. It is the battle of Christ we fight. It is His message of mercy and love that must be preserved to a stricken world, they, your gallant ones, endured and agonized and died! Rise up! With streaming eyes but steadfast hearts, rise up, and leave them, the consecrated, these spirits of the glorious-keeping, these brave ones.

Through the vast cathedral poured the solemn measures of the Dead March. Wave upon wave it soared to the distant organ, and about the tombs of the mighty dead. The piercing call of the "last Post" thrilled out, and in the pause we seemed to hear the cry come back: "Ye, we are here, we, whose bodies lie around you! We, who of old fought and died that you who came after might enter into your heritage. Sons of our sons, keep faith." Surely they, these spirits of the departed, when we lifted up our voices and hailed you: "Oh, Canada!" land of our birth, young mother of brave men. And surely they rejoiced, the glorious company of soldiers, saints and martyrs, as we sang anew our father's song, our battle cry of old: "For Christ and King."

Oh, men of Canada, true descendants of the race which bred you, well have you proven your right to sing that song. The sacred love of altar and of throne flames in you as it flamed in your fathers before you. And against it the legions of fear and torment and death hurl themselves in vain. And behind your steadfast fortitude, as behind a rampart, your people stand and look forward unafraid. For they know that the glory and the faith and the honor of the country, and all that they cherish and hold dear, are safe in your hands.

Eleanor McLaren Brown.

KATIE GREY RETURNS TO THIS PORT

Famous Belleville Boat Entered Harbour on Saturday--Capt Dougherty Brought Her From Oswego

When the "Katie Grey" sailed into Belleville Harbor on Saturday evening, the event marked the return of Belleville of a sailing sloop which is known all over the region of Lake Ontario. The vessel which is a pleasure craft was built here about thirty years ago and was owned by the late William H. Campbell, formerly fire chief. For the past twenty years the vessel has been owned in Oswego.

This famous boat competed in a hundred aquatic events in the days gone by and it is a source of much pleasure to local yachtsmen to see it return. Captain James Dougherty is the present owner. The craft was rebuilt at Oswego and is in fine condition for cruising the waters of the old bay and Lake Ontario.

Since its arrival dozens of old-time yachtsmen have visited the docks to catch a glimpse of the vessel.

Soldiers in Picton

A soldier fired a horse and buggy here on Sunday at a local livery drive around town. He went to the island and got in two soldiers as companions and drove to Picton. The livery man got word of the trouble and wired Picton with the result that the fire soldier was arrested. He got away from his captor. The other two soldiers were stranded in Picton as the police would not let the horse and buggy go.

Saturday's Market

Prospects are bright for a bumper crop this harvest time, say farmers who were in town Saturday. The recent rains are bringing along the grass at a wonderful rate. Hay, which is of small acreage, is growing rapidly on account of the rainfall, and the outlook is fairly bright. Fall wheat and spring grain look promising, the latter being rich in color and study in growth. Corn is standing well and looking good.

This morning's rain kept the attendance down at the market and in consequence there was a slight advance in prices here.

Potatoes for instance sold off rapidly at 75c, the demand being too large for the supply. "I could have got a dollar a bag if I held on to mine," said one grower.

Butter was about the same in price 30 to 35c per pound.

Eggs sold at 21 and 22c per dozen. The supply soon ran out.

Hay was represented by one load. The price was $10.50 baled hay; and guded at $18 wholesale.

Shoats sold at $7 to $10 per pair this morning, but hogs are down to $3.50 to $3.75 per cwt. live weight, a considerable drop from two weeks ago and even for last week's figures.

Chickens were irregular in price owing to size, but $1.20 to $1.50 was a reasonable price for fair sized birds of 1914. This year's chickens sold at $1.00 per pair.

Grains are a little easier this week. The hide market is steady with improved quality of hides offered. The figures are 1 1/2% to 1 1/4% for hides and wool brings, washed 29 to 31c, unwashed 22 to 24c.

Beef remains unchanged at 14c per pound for hind quarters wholesale or 12c by the carcass per cwt. Mutton is bought at 13 to 14c per cwt. Strawberries declined to 15c per box. They were eagerly bought up.

PRESENTATION TO 39TH OFFICERS

Informal "At Home" of Ladies Argyle Chapter I. O. O. E. Last Evening at Armonnies.

Argyle Chapter, I.O.O.E., Friday evening, were "at home" to the departing officers of the 39th Battalion in the lecture hall of the Armouries. These ladies have always been ready to give their services during the stay of the regiment in Belleville and have always had the best interests of them at heart. They have shown this in many ways on previous occasions and Friday evening's function was but another token of the good-will of Mrs. L. W. Marsh, regent and members of the chapter towards the officers.

Mrs. Marsh made a short address, presenting the officers with a purse of gold for their nurse fund. The staff of the 39th had the good-will and love of the ladies of Argyle Chapter.

Col. Preston, in a very happy reply, expressed the gratitude of the officers for the gift and all past favors. He mentioned the centenary of Waterloo in connection with the present struggle. Praise was bestowed upon the Chapter for having kindly offered to operate the recreation room for the Battalion. The kindness of Belleville will never be forgotten by the members of the regiment.

The affair was an informal one. The ladies of the Chapter desired to meet the officers and offer them the purse of gold. The evening was spent in dancing.

Mrs. George Wallbridge spent coffee, while Mrs. Ketcheson cut cake. Mrs. L. W. Marsh, regent, and Mrs. A. P. Allen, vice-regent, comprised the reception committee. Mrs. McFee was convener of refreshments.

The ladies are sending a bale of socks to the 39th quarters for the use of the men at the front.

WAS IT MURDER SUICIDE OR ACCIDENT?

John Scott of Marmora Township Found in the Woods Yesterday Morning Shot to Death

MADOC, June 21.—(Special)—John Scott, a bachelor farmer, who lived near Malone, Marmora township was found in the woods yesterday morning about a mile from his home, dead from a bullet wound in his head.

He left his home about 9 o'clock on Saturday morning and intimated that he was going hunting. He did not return at noon nor in the evening as expected and yesterday morning search parties were organized and made the tragic discovery recorded above.

There was a bullet wound in the head above the ear which must have caused instant death.

It scarcely seems probable from the location of the wound that the shot could have been accidental. Neither do his friends credit the theory of suicide. Mr. Scott was not a man of morbid impulses. In opposition to the murder theory are the facts that Mr. Scott was a peaceable man and without known enemies.

Dr. W. S. Harper, coroner of Madoc was notified immediately after the discovery and went at once to the scene of the accident. The body was lying near a log and there were no evidences of a struggle in the vicinity. This morning a jury was enrolled who after viewing the remains adjourned for a week for the taking of evidence.

Mr. Scott was about 55 years of age. He was a bachelor and worked the farm of his sister, Mrs. Brown of Malone.

He was a well known citizen of the township, having been at one time a member of the township council. He was a member of the Church of England and also of the Masonic and Orange orders.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try my Compound. I will recommend it to all I know."—Mrs. DANIEL D. E. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

FIRST INSTALLMENT

"SANFORD QUEST, CRIMINOLOGIST"

The young man from the West had arrived in New York only that afternoon, and his cousin town born and bred, had already embarked upon the task of showing him the great city. They occupied a table in a somewhat insignificant corner of one of New York's most famous roof garden restaurants. The place was crowded with diners. There were many notable figures to be pointed out. The town young man was very busy.

"Tell me, the country cousin inquired, 'who is the man at a table by himself? The waiters speak to him as though he were a little god. Is he a millionaire, or a judge, or what?'"

"You're in luck, Alfred," the New Yorker declared. "That's the most interesting man in New York—one of the most interesting in the world. That's Sanford Quest."

"Who's he?"

"Sanford Quest is the greatest master in criminology the world has ever known. He is a magician, a scientist, the Pierpont Morgan of his profession."

"Say, do you mean that he is a detective?"

"Yes," he said simply "you can call him that—just in the same way that you could call Napoleon a soldier or Lincoln a statesman. He is a detective, if you like to call him that, the master detective in the world."

When Sanford Quest entered his house an hour later he glanced into two of the rooms on the ground floor, in which telegraph and telephone operators sat at their instruments. Then, by means of a small lift, he ascended to the top story and entered a large apartment wrapped in glass until, as he promised: He touched the switches of the electric lights. One realized that this was a man of taste. Quest drew up an easy chair to the wide-fung window, touching a bell as he crossed the room. In a few moments the door was opened and closed noiselessly. A young woman entered with a bundle of papers.

The criminologist glanced through the papers quickly. "No further inquiries, Laura?"

"THE TENEMENT HOUSE MYSTERY"

CHAPTER I.

"This habit of becoming late for breakfast," Lady Ashleigh remarked, as she sat down the coffee pot, "is growing upon your father. Any news, dear?"

Ella glanced up from a pile of correspondence through which she had been looking a little negligently.

"None at all, mother. My correspondence is just the usual sort of rubbish—invitations and gossip. Such a lot of invitations, by the bye."

"At your age," Lady Ashleigh declared, "that is the sort of correspondence which you should find interesting."

"You know I am not like that, mother," she protested. "My music is really the only part of life which absolutely appeals to me. Oh, why doesn't Delaney make up his mind and let father know, as he promised! . . . Here comes daddy, mum."

Lord Ashleigh lolloped for a moment to raise the covers from the dishes upon a side table. Afterwards he seated himself at the table.

"I heard this morning," he said, "from your friend Delaney, Ella. He went into the matter very fully. The substance of it is that for the first year of your musical training he advises New York."

CHAPTER II.

"I am to take it, I believe," Lord Ashleigh began after dinner that evening, "that you have finally decided, Ella, to embrace our friend Delaney's suggestion and to leave us Saturday?"

"You will take your own maid with you, of course," Lord Ashleigh continued. "Lenora is a good girl and I am sure she will look after you quite well, but I have decided to supplement Lenora's surveillance over your comfort by sending with you, also, a sort of courier and general attendant—whom do you think? Well, Macdougall. He has lived in New York for some years, and you will doubtless find this a great advantage, Ella."

Ella glanced over her shoulder at the two servants who were standing discreetly in the background. Her eyes rested upon the pale, expressionless face of the man who during the last few years had enjoyed her father's confidence.

For a moment a queer sense of apprehension troubled her. Was it true, she wondered, that she did not like the man? She banished the thought almost as soon as it was conceived.

"You are spoiling me, daddy," Ella sighed.

"If you think so now," he remarked, "I do not know what you will say to me presently."

He laid upon the table a very familiar morocco case, stamped with a coronet.

"Our diamonds!" Ella exclaimed.

"The Ashleigh diamonds!"

The necklace lay exposed to view, the wonderful stones flashing in the subdued light.

"In New York," Lord Ashleigh continued, "it is the custom to wear jewelry in public more, even than in this country. Allow me!"

He leaned forward. With long, capable fingers he fastened the necklace around his daughter's neck.

"There've been stolen!" She was wearing them when I left the room!"

The inspector turned to the telephone.

"Mr. Marsham," he said, "I am afraid this will be a difficult affair. I am going to take the liberty of calling in an expert. That you, exchange? I want number one, New York city—Mr. Sanford Quest."

CHAPTER III.

The streets of New York were covered with a thin, powdery snow as the very luxurious car of Mrs. Delaney drew up outside the front of the Leland hotel, a little after midnight. Ella leaned over and kissed her hostess.

"Thank you, dear, ever so much, for your delightful dinner," she exclaimed, "and for bringing me home. As for the music, well, I can't talk about it. I am just going upstairs into my room to sit and think."

The car rolled off. Ella, a large umbrella held over her head by the doorman, stepped up the little strip of druggery which led into the softly warmed hall of the Leland. Behind her came her maid, Lenora, and Macdougall, who had been riding on the box with the chauffeur. He paused for a moment to wipe the snow from his clothes as Ella crossed the hall to the left. Lenora turned toward him. He whispered something in her ear. For a moment she shook. Then she turned away and followed her mistress upstairs.

Arrived in her apartment, Ella threw herself with a little sigh of content into a big easy-chair before the fire and gave herself up for a few moments to reverie.

A log stirred upon the fire. She leaned forward lazily to replace it and then stopped short. Exactly opposite to her was a door which opened only to a back hall. It was used only by the servants. Just as she was in the act of leaning forward Ella became conscious of a curious hallucination.

"Lenora, come here at once," the maid hurried in from the next room. Ella pointed to the door.

"Lenora, look outside. See if anyone is on that landing. I fancied that the door opened."

Lenora crossed the room and tried the handle. Then she turned towards her mistress in triumph.

"It is locked, my lady," she reported.

"Go down and ask Macdougall to come up. I am going to have this thing explained."

Something of her mistress' agitation seemed to have become communicated to Lenora.

She walked quickly to the back part of the hotel and ascended to the wing in which the servants' quarters were situated. Here she made her way along a corridor until she reached Macdougall's room. She knocked, and knocked again. There was no answer. She tried the door and found it was locked. Then she returned to the lift and descended once more to the floor upon which her mistress' apartments were situated. She opened the door of the suite without knocking and turned at once to the sitting room.

"I am sorry, my lady," she began. Then she stopped short. The lift boy, who had had a little trouble with his starting apparatus and had not as yet descended, heard the scream which broke from her lips, and a fireman in an adjacent corridor came running up almost at the same moment.

Lenora was still lying in the easy-chair in which she had been seated, but her head was thrown back in an unnatural fashion. There was a red mark just across her throat.

Lenora shrieked, "She's fainted! And the diamonds—the diamonds have gone!"

A doctor, hurriedly summoned, had just completed a hasty examination when a police inspector, followed by a detective, entered.

"This is your affair, gentlemen, not mine," the doctor said gravely. "The young lady is dead. She has been cruelly strangled within the last five or ten minutes."

The inspector made a careful examination of the room.

"Tell me," he inquired, "is this the young lady who owned the wonderful Ashleigh diamonds?"

"They've gone!" Lenora shrieked. "There've been stolen! She was wearing them when I left the room!"

CHAPTER IV.

There seemed to be nothing at all original in the methods pursued by the great criminologist when confronted with this tableau of death and robbery. His remarks to the inspector were few and perfunctory. He asked only a few languid questions of Macdougall and Lenora, who were summoned to his presence.

Macdougall then turned to leave the room. Lenora was about to follow, but Quest signed to her to remain.

"I should like to have a little conversation with you about your mistress," he said to her pleasantly. "If you don't mind, I will ask you to accompany me in my car. I will send the man back with you."

CHAPTER V.

Sanford Quest was naturally a person unaffected by presentiments or nervous fears of any sort, yet, having advanced a couple of yards along the hallway of the house which he had just entered without difficulty, he came to a standstill, oppressed with the sense of impending danger.

"Anyone here?" he asked, raising his voice.

There was no direct response, yet from somewhere upstairs he heard the half-mothered cry of a woman. He gripped his revolver in his fingers. He took a quick step forward. The door opened into blackness.

The fall itself was scarcely a dozen feet. He picked himself up, his shoulder bruised, his head swimming a little. Suddenly a gleam of light shone down. A trap-door above his head was lifted a few inches back. The flare of an electric torch shone upon his face, a man's voice addressed him.

"Not the great Sanford Quest? This surely cannot be the greatest detective in the world walking so easily into the spider's web!"

"Any chance of getting out?" Quest asked laconically.

"None!" was the bitter reply. "You've done enough mischief. You're stuck to rot!"

"Why this animus against me, my friend Macdougall?" Quest demanded.

"You and I have never come up against one another before. I didn't like the life you led in New York ten years ago, or your friends but you've suffered nothing through me."

"I let you go," once more came the man's voice, "I know very well in what chair I shall be sitting before a month has passed. I am James Macdougall, Mr. Sanford Quest, and I have got the Ashleigh diamonds, and I have settled an old grudge, it not of my own, of one greater than you. That's all. A pleasant night to you!"

The door went down with a bang.

"A perfect opportunity," he remarked to himself, as he held a match over his head a moment or two later, "built for the purpose. It must be the house we failed to find which Bill Taylor used to keep before he was shot. Smooth brick walls, smooth brick floor, only exit twelve feet above one's head. Human means, apparently, are useless. Science, you have been my mistress all my days. You must save my life now or lose an earnest disciple."

Quest felt in his overcoat pocket and drew out the small, hard pellet. He gripped it in his fingers, stood as nearly as possible underneath the spot from which he had been projected, coolly swung his arm back, and flung the black pebble against the sliding door. The explosion which followed shook the very ground under his feet. For minutes afterwards everything around him seemed to rock. Then Sanford Quest emerged, dusty but unhurt, and touched a constable on his arm.

"Arrest me," he ordered. "I am Sanford Quest. I must be taken at once to headquarters."

They found a cab without much difficulty. It was a few o'clock when they reached the central police station. Inspector French happened to be just going off duty. He recognized Quest with a little exclamation.

"Got your man to bring me here," Quest explained "so as to get away from the mob."

"Say, you've been in trouble!" the inspector remarked, leading the way into his room.

"Bit of an explosion, that's all," Quest replied. "I shall be all right when you've lent me a clothesbrush."

"The Ashleigh diamonds, eh?" the inspector asked eagerly.

"I shall have them at nine o'clock this morning," Sanford Quest promised, "and had you over the murderer somewhere around midnight."

"Quest slept for a couple of hours, had a bath and made a leisurely toilet. At a quarter to nine he sat down to breakfast in his rooms."

"At nine o'clock," he told his servant, "a young lady will call. Bring her up."

The door was suddenly opened. Lenora walked in. Quest glanced in surprise at the clock.

"My fault!" he exclaimed. "We are slow. Good-morning, Miss Lenora!"

She came straight to the table. She laid a little packet upon the table. Quest opened it coolly. The Ashleigh diamonds flashed up at him. He led Lenora to a chair and rang a bell.

"Prepare a bedroom upstairs," he ordered. "Ask Miss Roche to come here. Laura," he added, as his secretary entered, "will you look after this young lady?"

A few minutes later Inspector French was announced. Quest nodded in a friendly manner.

"Some coffee, inspector?"

"I'd rather have those diamonds!" Quest threw them lightly across the table.

The inspector whistled.

"And now, French, will you be here, please, at midnight, with three men, armed?"

"Here?" the inspector repeated. Quest nodded.

Together they carried the sleeping girl out of the room into a larger apartment. A single electric light was burning on the top of a square mirror fixed upon an easel. Towards this they carried the girl and laid her in an easy chair almost opposite to it.

"The battery is just on the left," Laura whispered.

Quest nodded.

"Give me the band."

She turned away for a moment and disappeared in the shadows. When she returned, she carried a curved band of flexible steel. Quest took it from her, attached it by means of a coil of wire to the battery and with firm, soft fingers slipped it on to Lenora's forehead. Then he stepped back.

"She's a subject, Laura—I'm sure of it! Now for our great experiment!"

They watched Lenora intently.

"Lenora," Quest said, slowly and firmly, "your mind is full of one subject. You see your mistress in her chair by the bedside. She is trying to get the diamonds. Look again. She lies there dead! Who was it entered the room, Lenora? Look! Look! Gaze into that mirror. What do you see there?"

The girl's eyes had opened. They were fixed now upon the mirror—distended, full of unholy things.

"Try harder, Lenora," he muttered, his own breath laboring. "It is there in your brain! Look!"

For a single second the smooth surface of the mirror was obscured. A room crept dimly like a picture into being, a fire upon the hearth, a girl leaning back in her chair. A door in the background opened. A man stole out. He crept nearer to the girl—his eyes fixed upon the diamonds, a thin, silken cord twisted round his wrist. Suddenly she saw him—too late! His hand was upon her lips, his face seemed to start almost from the mirror—then blackness!

Lenora opened her eyes. She was still in the easy-chair before the fire.

"Mr. Quest!" she faltered.

He looked up from some letters which he had been studying.

"I am so sorry," he said politely. "I really had forgotten that you were here. But you know—that you have been to sleep?"

"Can I go now?" she asked.

"Certainly," Quest replied. "To tell you the truth, I find that I shall not need to ask you those questions, after all. A messenger from the police station has been here. He says they are going off duty. He recognized Quest with a little exclamation."

"What About the Young Woman?" the Inspector Asked.

tion has been here. He says they are going off duty. He recognized Quest with a little exclamation.

"My fault!" he exclaimed. "We are slow. Good-morning, Miss Lenora!"

She came straight to the table. She laid a little packet upon the table. Quest opened it coolly. The Ashleigh diamonds flashed up at him. He led Lenora to a chair and rang a bell.

der bruised, his head swimming a little. Suddenly a gleam of light shone down. A trap-door above his head was lifted a few inches back. The flare of an electric torch shone upon his face, a man's voice addressed him.

"Not the great Sanford Quest? This surely cannot be the greatest detective in the world walking so easily into the spider's web!"

"Any chance of getting out?" Quest asked laconically.

"None!" was the bitter reply. "You've done enough mischief. You're stuck to rot!"

"Why this animus against me, my friend Macdougall?" Quest demanded.

"You and I have never come up against one another before. I didn't like the life you led in New York ten years ago, or your friends but you've suffered nothing through me."

"I let you go," once more came the man's voice, "I know very well in what chair I shall be sitting before a month has passed. I am James Macdougall, Mr. Sanford Quest, and I have got the Ashleigh diamonds, and I have settled an old grudge, it not of my own, of one greater than you. That's all. A pleasant night to you!"

The door went down with a bang.

"A perfect opportunity," he remarked to himself, as he held a match over his head a moment or two later, "built for the purpose. It must be the house we failed to find which Bill Taylor used to keep before he was shot. Smooth brick walls, smooth brick floor, only exit twelve feet above one's head. Human means, apparently, are useless. Science, you have been my mistress all my days. You must save my life now or lose an earnest disciple."

Quest felt in his overcoat pocket and drew out the small, hard pellet. He gripped it in his fingers, stood as nearly as possible underneath the spot from which he had been projected, coolly swung his arm back, and flung the black pebble against the sliding door. The explosion which followed shook the very ground under his feet. For minutes afterwards everything around him seemed to rock. Then Sanford Quest emerged, dusty but unhurt, and touched a constable on his arm.

"Arrest me," he ordered. "I am Sanford Quest. I must be taken at once to headquarters."

They found a cab without much difficulty. It was a few o'clock when they reached the central police station. Inspector French happened to be just going off duty. He recognized Quest with a little exclamation.

"Got your man to bring me here," Quest explained "so as to get away from the mob."

"Say, you've been in trouble!" the inspector remarked, leading the way into his room.

"Bit of an explosion, that's all," Quest replied. "I shall be all right when you've lent me a clothesbrush."

"The Ashleigh diamonds, eh?" the inspector asked eagerly.

"I shall have them at nine o'clock this morning," Sanford Quest promised, "and had you over the murderer somewhere around midnight."

Quest slept for a couple of hours, had a bath and made a leisurely toilet. At a quarter to nine he sat down to breakfast in his rooms."

"At nine o'clock," he told his servant, "a young lady will call. Bring her up."

The door was suddenly opened. Lenora walked in. Quest glanced in surprise at the clock.

"My fault!" he exclaimed. "We are slow. Good-morning, Miss Lenora!"

She came straight to the table. She laid a little packet upon the table. Quest opened it coolly. The Ashleigh diamonds flashed up at him. He led Lenora to a chair and rang a bell.

"You've Had a Rough Time, Lenora."

have him here at the time I told you."

"You've a way of your own of doing these things, Mr. Quest, the inspector admitted grudgingly.

"Mostly lucky," Quest replied. "Take a cigar, and so long, inspector. They want me to talk to Chicago on an other little piece of business."

It was a few minutes before midnight when Quest parted the curtains of a room on the ground floor of his house in Georgia square and looked out into the snow-white street. Then he turned around and addressed the figure lying as though asleep upon the sofa by the fire.

"Lenora," he said, "I am going out. Stay here, if you please, until I return."

He left the room. For a few moments there was a profound silence. Then a white face was pressed against the window. There was a crash of glass. A man covered with snow sprang into the apartment. He moved swiftly to the sofa, and something black and ugly swayed in his hand.

"So you've deceived me, have you?" he panted. "Handed over the jewels, chucked me, and given me the double cross! Anything to say?"

Macdougall leaned forward, his white face distorted with passion. The life-preserver bent and quivered behind him, cut the air with a swish and crashed full upon the head.

The man staggered back. The weapon fell from his fingers. For a moment he was paralyzed. There was no blood upon his hand, no cry—silence inhuman, unnatural! He looked again. Then the lights flashed out all around him. There were two detectives in the doorway, their revolvers covering him—Sanford Quest, with Lenora in the background. In the sudden illumination Macdougall's horror turned almost to hysterical rage. He had wasted his fury upon a dummy!

"Take him, men," Quest ordered. "Hands up, Macdougall. Your number's up."

The handcuffs were upon him before he could move.

"What about the young woman?" the inspector asked.

Lenora stood in an attitude of despair, her head downcast. She had turned a little away from Macdougall. Her hands were outstretched. It was as though she were expecting the handcuffs.

"You can let her alone," Sanford Quest said quietly. "A wife cannot give evidence against her husband, and besides, I need her. She is going to work for me."

Macdougall was already at the door, between the two detectives. He swung around. His voice was calm, almost clear—calm with concentration of hatred.

"You are a wonderful man, Mr. Sanford Quest," he said. "Make the most of your triumph. Your time is nearly up, there is one coming whose wit and cunning, science and skill are all-conquering. He will brush you away, Sanford Quest, like a fly. Wait a few weeks."

"You interest me," Quest murmured. "Tell me some more about this great master?"

"I shall tell you nothing," Macdougall replied. "You will hear nothing, you will know nothing. Suddenly you will find yourself opposed. You will struggle—and then the end. It is certain."

They led him away. Only Lenora remained, sobbing. Quest went up to her.

"You've had a rough time, Lenora," he said, with strange gentleness. "Perhaps the brighter days are coming."
