POETRY.

Work and Win.

The sweetest cherries, mind you, lad,
Grow highest on the tree;
And would you win the fairest fruit,
One thing I'll say to thee:
It falls not at the clicking gay
Of any iller's self—
You'll have to climb the rugged tree,
And gather for yourself.

'Tis vain to wait the fruit to fall,
Or peep the tree with stones—
You'll have to struggle heavily up,
And risk some broken bones;
You only waste your time below,
And get indifferent pay—
If you would reach the ripest fruit,
Just throw your fears away.

'Tis so with everything in life
That's worth the owning, lad—
With learning, wealth and character—
The best, the good and great have had,
They come not at the nod or heave
Of any idle hand—
'Tis only those who bravely toil
May have them at command.

If, then, you want the ripest fruit,
Just labor till you win;
But mind thee, boy, while up you climb,
Keep heart and hand from sin;
The best and grandest garden, lad,
If fought with wicked wage,
No peace and comfort yields at last,
But curses on your age.

STORY.

Waiting to Serve.

Rodney Shipton was a southern boy, and like many a northern lad, was ambitious. Like many a northern lad, too, his parents were poor and unable to do for their son as they could have wished. But they sent him to school until he was 14 years old, and then, at Rod's earnest request, they sent him to a school of telegraphy for a year, where Rodney learned to send and receive messages over the wonderful and mysterious wires.

For Rod was by no means content with the humdrum of life on the twenty-acre lot in Mississippi which his father called the farm. It was well enough, he always said to himself and his chums, for "old folks" who were satisfied to raise corn and tobacco and know nothing of the great world around them, save what they read in the weekly paper. But that wouldn't suit Rod Shipton—"not much it would."

No, Rodney was anxious to start bright and early into the thick of the fight—into the front rank of those who are taking part in life's great battles.

But Rodney Shipton soon discovered that even those who are willing to do brave and arduous work are not the ones always selected for the most important duties. He had to learn, as so many of us will have to, that, as a great poet once wrote:

"They also serve who only stand and wait."

He found very speedily that the great telegraph companies and newspapers were not in need of inexperienced lads of fifteen to place in charge of their offices in large cities and other centres of life and activity.

First, he applied for a position in Washington, and did not so much as get answer to his application. Then he tried New York, and the manager of the concern wrote back and kindly told the lad that he had better try "nearer home."

At last, much discouraged, Rod did try nearer home. It went much against the grain for him to think that a telegraph operator should be compelled to remain in such a rusty old state as Mississippi. But he braced up and one spring morning he started out on a tramp of more than thirty miles to Jackson. Most of the way he trudged along the railroad track, though he did not mind that. Rob Shipton was used to long tramps and his father had not so many dollars that he could afford to give up two of them for railroad fare.

The lad's shoes were pretty dusty when, early on the second morning he presented himself to the superintendent of telegraph of the Jackson and Richmond railway and asked for a "job."

"Well, my son," said the superintendent, "you're not very old and you've had no experience, but if you are in dead earnest and want to show us what kind of stuff you're made of, I'll offer you a job. We've got an office up at Snowflake City, seventy miles from here, and we find it pretty hard to keep any one. It's a lonely sort of a spot; on one side of the track is a swamp and on the other side a scrubby forest, with a sawmill and a store. You'll have very few neighbors, and those that are there are about as rough as they make 'em. There's very little work and, consequently very little pay. Now then, if you'll go down and try your hand as operator at Snowflake City, I'll engage you at a salary of twenty dollars a month. What do you say?"

Well, it wasn't a very bright picture which the superintendent presented to our young friend, and so Rodney Shipton thought. He "stammered somewhat as he replied:

"You see, sir, I thought some of a job in the city; and then, sir, the pay—its awful small; father pays that for a hired man when he wants one on the farm, but—yes, sir, I guess I'll take the job in Snowflake City."

"Look here, my lad," said the superintendent, laying his hand with much kindly feeling upon Rod's shoulder.

"I know just how you feel about it. I was a boy myself once, just about your size, and with just as much of a desire to do something as big as you have. But I started in clear at the bottom, yes, lower than you will have to do, and I stuck to it, and think I did my duty. You do the same, and we expect no more of the best paid men on the road."

And the very next day Rodney Shipton, instead of tramping back to his father's farm, took the train to Snowflake City.

The friendly words of the official who was now his chief had encouraged him greatly, and he resolved to "stick it out" at Snowflake, no matter what might happen, until his ability should be recognized by his employers.

If the picture of Snowflake City, which Superintendent Stebbins had outlined, was a dark one, the reality was still most uninteresting. Nature had done as little as possible, it seemed; the inhabitants were even more unwholesome than their surroundings. The men were of the roughest and most ignorant type, while such women and children as greeted or disgusted—the settlement were nearly akin to the men in their tastes and habits. Not that there were a great many of these people, for within a very wide radius of Snowflake station there were not more than a hundred human beings, who were about evenly divided between blacks and whites.

"As for Rod, he made his headquarters at the cabin, which was known as "the station," at first he tried boarding at "the store," which was also a hotel and saloon, but he finally came to the conclusion that he had better "keep house" in the little cabin which now became for him kitchen, parlor, bedroom and office all rolled into one.

It was truly a lonesome spot, and through the long summer days and the weird nights when the breezes sighed and sobbed over the dismal swamp, Rod often got homesick for the old farm. He did not have much work; hardly enough to keep him from growing weary; but, remembering the superintendent's word, Rod did his work promptly and well and not a single reprimand came to him over the wire from the train dispatcher.

Rod saw few people, for passenger trains stopped very seldom at Snowflake, and the boy did not encourage visitors from the rough and—generally—half-drunken men from the sawmill.

Three months passed away that were long and dreary ones to Rodney Shipton and one August day he awoke to find himself important.

Yellow fever had broken out at Snowflake City! The state medical officer had been down from Jackson and pronounced four cases of serious sickness as yellow fever of the most pronounced kind. Fortwith a doctor and nurse were dispatched from the capital to Snowflake and the district was laid under quarantine. No one dared leave the fever district now until the pest should be driven away, and for all the communication the wretched people could have with the outside world they might as well have been living on a desert island in the midst of the Pacific ocean. Stay, there was the telegraph! Touching by the deft and willing fingers of the young operator, the throbbing wires carried all over the country the tale of misery which Snowflake City now told.

In the columns of the great daily papers of the north were printed Rodney Shipton's dispatches, wherein folks learned how the poor, wretched, ignorant people of the forest and swamp were dead and dying, how the four cases steadily increased to fourteen and then to forty. Rodney's messages brought nourishing food and healthy clothing to those who were fortunate enough to receive; Rodney's messages brought medicines for the sick and even caskets for the dead. And many coffins were needed in the stricken district—for fully half the people died and through it all Rod stuck to his post. The folks of the settlement moved away as far as they could within the quarantine boundary, but Rob stayed right on at the little telegraph cabin on the edge of the swamp and close to the huts and hovels of the sawmill people.

He knew that the people and the doctor could not do without the telegraph, he knew that no one would come from outside if he should desert his post, and he knew quite well that there was not a soul in Snowflake City, beside himself, who could operate the telegraph. So with a brave heart, he did his duty. Rod did not complain now that his work was light, dear, no! He could hardly give information enough with his little clicking hammer. The eyes of the whole country were upon Snowflake City. The people were sorry enough for the unfortunates shut up by themselves, but they wanted to keep the dread plague at Snowflake.

No trains stopped now. Most of them went flying past, and even on the hottest days the passengers would shut down all the windows, as if they feared to breathe the air in passing. Even the local freight only slowed as she went on her way and the train men carelessly dumped the barrels and boxes of clothing and provisions on the little platform for Rod to gather up as best he might.

So the days and weeks dragged slowly along and one morning the papers had these words at the foot of their usual dispatch from Snowflake City:

"The only telegraph operator in the place has the fever and is fast falling."

Then for days there was no news at all over the wires from the unfortunate village, and the stricken people had to shoot the news and their need to the train men as they passed through the station.

But Rod did not die; he was one of the very few who recovered from the fever, and shortly after he was stricken down the first frost came to gladden and cheer the people of the south, who feared for the spread of the terrible infection.

Yes, Rod recovered, and went, after a while, back to the old farm, to rest and gain strength. And while there he received letters and presents innumerable, congratulating him upon his plucky behavior at Snowflake.

Among them was the official thanks of the governor of the state. But the letter which Rod prizes most of all is one from Superintendent Stebbins and this is what it says:

"MY DEAR SHIPTON.—You did your duty nobly. Accept my thanks and the thanks of our directors. When you are quite well again we shall like to have you take a position as assistant to the chief train dispatcher at Jackson. The salary is $75 a month. Sincerely yours, HENRY STEBBINS."

To-day Rodney Shipton is manager of one of the largest offices of the very largest telegraph company in the world. I stepped in to see him the other day, and on the wall, over his desk, I saw these words in a neat frame:

"They also serve who only stand and wait."

Her Husband's Gravestone.

A citizen named Johnson Cassaway died last autumn in Little Water-pocket, New Mexico. He was better known as "Bull Run" Cassaway, from a popular legend to the effect that he had led the Union forces at the battle of Bull Run—in the retreat rather than in the advance. This he always denied, but, be this as it may, he died, as we have said. He was also buried, and in due course of time Mrs. Cassaway caused a suitable headstone to be erected over his grave. On this stone, after stating in conventional terms that "Johnson Cassaway, better known as Bull Run Cassaway, proprietor of the Blue Front Livery Stable, on Whipsaw ave., departed this life October 31, 1889, aged fifty-four years and six months"—below this, we repeat, we added these words: "Husband, thou art mourned for,"—a line certainly conveying the intelligence of a most praiseworthy state of things. Now it seems that the marble cutter had difficulty in collecting the pay for this stone—in fact he has not got it to this day. All through the winter he amused himself by presenting his bill at frequent intervals, but to no purpose. He tried every way known to the enterprising collector, and we are informed that there are many, but none of them moved the widow. She continued to mourn for her husband and carry on the livery business on Whipsaw ave., but she positively refused to pay for the headstone. The man who had sold it to her despaired at last, and determined on revenge. He accordingly one day took a chisel and an oblong potato masher, such as is used by marble workers, and went to the Pleasant Prospect Cemetery, where the late Cassaway's grave is located and so wrought upon the headstone that shebler part of the inscription read, and still reads like this: "Husband, thou art mourned for, but J. Milliken, the popular and one-priced marble cutter, is not paid for this stone."

Then he slunk away, and the next day the widow saw the change and sewed him for $5000 damages. The defence that Milliken will make is that the stone was not paid for, and therefore it was his and he could do as pleased with it.—New York Tribune.

Beauty of Person.

Some excellent people take serious exception to Grant Allen's remark that, being a man, he took it for granted that the first business of a girl was to be pretty. Now, it may be that Mr. Allen is not so far out of the way after all. It is certainly the duty of every woman, and man, too, to be as good looking as possible, because beauty gives pleasure to other people. Beauty of person is the expression of something corresponding to it in the mind and soul, and is to be prized accordingly.

True beauty comes from the cultivation of the higher graces of the mind and soul, as well as the care of the body, and cannot exist without this. A dried up old professor who knows forty languages, and yet is weak-eyed, lank haired, stoop-shouldered and dyspeptic, is as far from being a perfectly developed man as the prize fighter. Of the two the prize fighter is far the more agreeable object to look at. The Greeks were nearer right than we think when they gave physical culture so high a place. So girls and women of all ages, be as beautiful as you can. Make yourselves handsome by physical exercise, by intellectual work, and by cultivating a sweet temper and generous, kindly spirit to all mankind.

An Engineer's Brave Act.

An act of heroism, performed while the hero was in eminent peril of his life, is occasioning general talk in the neighborhood of Pittston, Pa. On the afternoon of the 13th ult., the little 4 year old child of Walter G. Custer, of Dorranceton, wandered from home while wheeling a wheelbarrow, loaded with toys, and got beyond the Bennett station and upon the Delloware, Lackawana and Western railroad tracks. The little fellow was amusing himself there when the 6:10 passenger train, one of the speediest in the Bloomsburg branch, here in sight around a curve.

The engineer sighted the child, reversed the engine, but soon saw that the train was going too fast to save the child unless heroic measures were adopted. Leaving the throttle, he rushed out to the pilot, stooped out in front of the flying engine, and waited with outstretched arms until the child was reached, when the engineer caught him and drew him off the track. As he did so the wheelbarrow was splintered into a thousand pieces by the drivers, and the toys scattered on all sides of the pilot bars.

Before the parents could learn of their child's escape the train had sped on.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 20, 1890.

Local and Provincial.

Have you tried the new drink—Birch Beer—at Rand's?

WEDDING FAVORS.—We wish to express our thanks to Mr and Mrs F. A. Payne for wedding favors.

REMOVED.—Mr F. J. Larkin has removed his shoe-making establishment to the door east of Sleep's hardware store.

DR RAND.—We notice a nice picture of the late Dr S. T. Rand in the window of our genial druggist, G. V. Rand, Esq.

OFFICER.—Quite a large number of Officers passed through Wolfville on Friday last. They made a halt here but did not remain long.

BAPTIST.—Rev. George Tufts, well and favorably known in Wolfville, is visiting our town and occupied the Baptist pulpit last Sunday, morning and evening.

GOOD PROSPECTS.—The weather this week has been very warm, a decided change over last. Vegetation, which had been retarded by the cold weather, is now going forward with a rush and the country is looking splendid.

PAINT EXTRACTION.—Wm A. Payne, dentist, has lately purchased the right to use the well-known Dr Esterbrook method for the Painless Extraction of Teeth. All teeth extracted absolutely without pain or no charge.

JOURNALISTIC.—We have received a copy of the new Yarmouth paper, the Yarmouth Light. It is published weekly by Mr C. Carry and presents a fine appearance. It is well filled with interesting matter. We wish it well.

Choice Family Flour, Wheat Bran, Germ Meal, Corn Meal. R. PRAT.

Choice Butter.—We have always on hand Choice Butter, made by the best farmers in Kings Co. We can supply our customers with any quantity either Prints, Rolls or Tubs for 20 cents per pound. CALDWELL, CAMBERNS & Co. tf.

Wholesale and Invigorating Spa Springs Ginger Ale at R. PRAT'S.

NEW PROFESSOR.—Mr Eaton, who has charge of the department of Natural Science at Truro Normal school, is mentioned as the possible occupant of the chair in physics to be established at Acadia. He is a graduate of Acadia and Harvard and proposes to go to Germany next year to continue his studies.

LINE, BRICKS, CEMENT AND PORTLAND CEMENT AT R. PRAT'S.

REWARD.—A reward of $10.00 will be paid to any person giving information which will lead to the apprehension and conviction of the person or persons who, on the night of Saturday, June 14th, knocked palpings off or otherwise injured the new fence in front of my property in Wolfville. R. W. STUBBS.

500 Hackmatack Pops, for sale low WALTER BROWN.

APPOINTMENT.—Mr Aubrey B. Caldwell has been appointed Collector of Customs at the port of Lunenburg. Mr Caldwell is a native of Gaspereau, and cousin of Prof. Caldwell. He is well known in Wolfville, having been for some time principal of the Wolfville school, and should be well qualified for the position to which he has been appointed.

NEW LOT 5 cent Room Paper just received at the Wolfville Book Store.

PAPERS.—Mr W. T. Piers has our thanks for a copy of the Onus Daily, containing a full account of the terrible tornado which visited Bradshaw, N.S., and destroyed many lives and a large amount of valuable property.—Mr Harry W. Bishop, formerly of Wolfville, sends us a bundle of late California papers, for which we beg to return hearty thanks.

Wire Fencing, for sale low, by WALTER BROWN.

THE STORM.—A severe thunder storm visited Wolfville on Wednesday morning. For a short time the rain fell in torrents, while the thunder and lightning was very severe. During the storm the American House was struck. The electric fluid entered by the chimney and passed through the house, doing considerable damage. The inmates were all badly scared and more or less injured, but not severely. The house and inmates had a very narrow escape.

Show Case, 6x2x4 ft., for sale. A bargain. R. PRAT.

Gaspereau and Mountain Items.

George Davidson has commenced operations in the barrel business and expects to be able to supply the fruit growers with barrels at a nominal figure, no extortion or undue advantages expected, as has sometimes been the case.

Silas Baker has got the foundation of his house laid and the building materials are accumulating rapidly. George Bezanson has the contract and we have good reason to expect the house finished in good time and in first class style.

John W. Brown's new steam mill at the head of the tide on Gaspereau river is ready for work and all that is wanted is a good supply of logs that will be converted into timber with neatness and despatch.

The Esq. and his followers have left the village very suddenly; rumor has it that they have fitted out another expedition in quest of Kidd's treasure, but as their exit is generally in the night and all their best feats are performed behind the scenes, the public has never had an accurate account of their adventures.

Gordon Benjamin & Sons' mill near Black River Lake is nearly completed, so much so that they have commenced sawing shingles and heading and turn out a first class article.

The temperance organization in Black River is doing finely. It has only been established about six months, and has upwards of twenty members, in good standing. Not a case of insubordination reported as yet.

William Baker is building a saw mill near Black River meeting house and expects to have it ready for sawing this fall.

The Sunday school at Greenfield has opened again with a larger attendance than usual and a new library.

Have you tried the celebrated "Spa Springs Ginger Ale" at R. PRAT'S?

OLD POSTAGE STAMPS.—By a reference to our advertising columns will be found an advertisement for old issues of postage stamps. The advertiser, who is making a collection of the same, is paying big cash prices for the postage stamps used before Confederation. A young lady in Halifax netted over $50 in one afternoon by over-hauling some offices in a large warehouse. Old trunks and barrels will now be besieged by the young folks. From $5 to $10 is offered for an old used shilling stamp of N. B. or N. S., besides big prices for all postage stamps. It will be well for those who have letters written before 1869 to look them up and forward the envelopes with stamp on to G. Hooper, 550 King St, Ottawa, Canada, who is reliable and pays prompt cash. tf.

Shad, Haddies, Brown Bread, choice Table Butter. R. PRAT.

CURIOS ITEMS.—We are informed that Messrs George Thomson and Charles Fitch recently discovered ants carrying canker-worms from their trees.—Mr George Thomson, of this place, has a small pear-tree, not more than an inch in diameter on which he counted 1105 pears. He picked all except a dozen or so which will be allowed to ripen.—Miss Chipman a few days ago found a dead bird in the water tank in the cellar. It seemed strange how it should have got there, but it is thought it must have had a nest near the spout on the house and fallen in. COM.

Window Blinds of all kinds, styles and prices at the Wolfville Book Store.

Shubenaecadie Station, on the I. C. R. ships to Halifax two tons milk, daily average. It is an early rising district.

Two million feet of lumber, &c., were shipped in a recent month. Eighteen feet is the estimate to be sent out this year, being the product of three mills. Twenty-two horse teams are constantly hauling. Some one on a strike-to-day.

Johnson's Quick Drying Floor Paints, for sale by WALTER BROWN.

QUICK TIME.—Mr Charles T. Grantham left here in S. S. Yarmouth, on Saturday June 7th, arrived in Boston next day at noon, in Hamilton, Ont., on Monday morning, and was ready for business at nine o'clock that same forenoon. He could have reached Chicago at ten a.m. had he wished to do so.—Yarmouth Light.

"Stray Leaves from Book of Wonders," for sale at this office.

PRESBYTERIAN.—The pulpit of the Presbyterian church was ably occupied last Sunday by Rev. Mr Begg, of Kentville. Rev. Mr McNab, formerly of Newport, now about to depart for a field in Newfoundland, is expected to fill it next Sunday afternoon.

Minard's Liniment for Rheumatism.

DUCK EGGS.—Master Avar Davidson can furnish any who want them with duck eggs for hatching at reasonable rates.

Promise.

What fairer lands and sky than these? Promote a subject's weal?

What clime more blessed of liberal earth? May other days reveal?

What riper age, what fitter time, To make a nation grow, Can years present to willing men,

Or favoring chance bestow. The day is come, the men are born

Whose kingdom hath begun; A nation enters on the field

Of labor yet undone— A nation set on earth so vast

Its day must linger long; And the bright sun that makes it fair

Will make the people strong; Along the country's hills and plains,

The cities yet to rise, I see like shadows broad and dense

Beneath the lower skies; Far up the North where verdureless

The whaler scans the shore, Beside the oceans East and West

Whence favoring currents pour— This age-prospered land awakes

On every mount and plain; The thrill of purpose high and good

Bestirs the hearts of men. No fervor bends to servitude,

Or, heedless of his toil, Looks for a rank, spontaneous growth

On this ambitious soil. Yet youthful, under strifeless skies,

To bloodless colors bound, No foe has fallen on our dust

To mark a battle-ground. A restless spirit stirs them, yet

Untried in battle-fields, What motto valor dare emblaze

Upon their dintless shields.

To Our Subscribers.

The special announcement which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr B. J. Kendall Co., of Kenosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address (and enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) to renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work.

To every lover of the horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada, make it standard authority. Mention this paper when sending for "Treatise."

The Queen's Prize Competition.

Ten familiar quotations from standard authors appear each month under this heading in The Canadian Queen, and the publishers of this popular magazine offer $50.00 in cash prizes every month to those naming the largest number of the authors from whom the quotations are taken. This is a most practical way of encouraging a study of standard authors and will interest every intelligent reader.

A sample copy of The Queen with full particulars and list of quotations will be mailed to any address for five 2 cent stamps. The subscription price is only $1.00 per year. Address,
