POETRY.

The Ship Comes In.

Oh, joy, joy and gladness,
When the ship comes in,
Forgotten soon the sadness
When safe to port they win
Who late were losing, weary
Of the deep dark sea,
And counting life but dreary
For their air countree.

Oh, blithe, blithe the weather
When the ship comes in!
Folk talk all together,
There is cheer, there's merry din, Shouts waives reef and rafter,
Hails clasp loving hand,
Ripples out happy laughter,
When the ship comes to land.

Oh, swift run the hours
That neither toll nor spin,
But seem to tread on flowers
When the ship comes in!
Yestreen we battled, weary,
Yet bravely held the fort,
But we'll nevermore be dreary--
Our ship's safe in port.

CHAPTER XI.
Wyndham was suggested to Valentine Paget very nearly a year before their wedding. One of the young lady's stipulations was that there be no circumstances, would she enter into the holy estate of matrimony before she was eighteen. Paget made no objection to this proviso on Val's part. In these days he honored her slightest wish, and no happier pair to all appearance could have been seen driving in the Park, or riding in the Row, than this handsome father and daughter.

"What a beautiful expression he has," remarked many people. And when they said this to the daughter she smiled, and a sweet proud light came into her eyes.

"My father is a darling," she would say. "No one knows him as I do. I believe he is about the greatest and the best of men."

When Val, made enthusiastic remarks of this kind, Wyndham looked at her sorrowfully. She was very fond of him by this time--he had learned to fit himself to her ways, to accommodate himself to her caprices, and although she frankly admitted that she could not for an instant compare him to her father, she always owned that she loved him next best, and that she thought it would be a very happy thing to be his wife.

No girl could look sweeter than Val when she made little speeches of this kind, but they had always a queer effect upon her lover, causing him to experience an excitement which was scarcely joy, for nothing could have more fatally upset Mr. Paget's plans than Valentine really to fall in love with Wyndham.

The wedding day was fixed for the first week in July, and Valentine was accompanied to the altar by no less than eight bridesmaids. It was a grand wedding--quite one of the events of the season, and those who saw it spoke of the bride as beautiful, and of the bridegroom as a grave, striking looking man.

If a man constantly practices self-repression there comes a time when, in this special art, he almost reaches perfection. Wyndham had come to this stage; as even Lillias, who read her brother like a book, could see nothing amiss with him on his wedding day.

All, therefore, went merrily on this suspect occasion, and the bride and bridegroom started for the continent after a shower of blessings and good wishes.

"Gerald, dear, I quite forgive you," said Lillias, as at the very last moment she put her arms round her brother's neck.

"What for, Lillias?" he asked, looking down at her.

This a shadow of great bitterness crossed the sunshine of his face. He stooped and kissed her forehead.

"You don't know my sis, so you cannot forgive it, Lillias," he continued.
"Oh, my darling, I know you," she said. "I don't think you could sinicly mean that. I have learned already to love Valentine a little, and I am not surprised at your choice. I forgive you fully, Gerald, for loving another girl better than your sister Lillias-- Good-bye, dear old Gerry. God bless you!"

"He won't do that, Lillias--he can't."
Oh, forgive me, dear, I didn't mean those words. Of course I'm the happiest fellow in the world."

Gerald turned away, and Lillias kissed Valentine, and they watched with a queer feeling of pain at her heart as the bridal pair amid cheers and blessings drove away.

Gerald's last few words had renewed Lillias' anxiety. She felt restless in the great, grand house, and longed to be back in the rectory.

"What's the matter, Lill?" said Marjory; "your face is a yard long, and you are quite white and have dark lines under your eyes. For my part I did not think Gerald's wedding would be half so jolly, and what a nice, unaffected girl Valentine is."

"Oh, yes, I'm not bothering my head about her," said Lillias. "She's all right, just what father said she was.

That is all. I wanted to say this to you. Carr has given me the opportunity. I won't see Val to-day, for I am upset--tomorrow I shall have gained my composure."

I wish we were at home again, Maggie."

"Yes, of course, so do I," said Marjory. "But then we can't be, for we promised Gerald to try and make things bright for Mr. Paget. Isn't he a handsome man, Lillias? I don't think I ever saw anyone with such a beaming sort of benevolent expression."

"He is certainly very fond of Valentine, and she of him," answered Lillias.
"No, I did not particularly notice his expression. The fact is I did not look at anyone much except our Gerald.
Marjory, I think it is an awful thing for girls like us to have an only brother
--he becomes almost too precious.
Marjory, I cannot sympathize with Mr.
Paget, I wish we were at home. I know our dear old dad will want us, and there is no saying what mess Augusta will put things into."

"Father heard from Mr. Carr on the morning we left," responded Marjory.
"I think he is coming to the rectory on Saturday. If so, father won't miss; he'll be quite taken up showing him over the place."

"I shall hate him," responded Lillias, in a very tart voice. "Fancy his taking our Gerald's place. Oh, Maggie, this room stifles me--can't we change our dresses, and go out for a stroll somewhere? Oh, what folly you talk of it's not being the correct thing.
What a hateful place this London is!
Oh, for a breath of the air in the garden at home. Yes, what is it, Mr.
Johnstone?"

Lillias' pretty face looked almost grumpy, and a decidedly discontented expression lurked in the dark, sweet eyes she turned upon the good lady of the establishment.

"Lillias has an attack of the fidgets," said Marjory. "She wants to go out for a walk."

"You shall both come in the carriage with me, my dear. I am coming in to propose it to you. We won't disagree quite late this evening."

"Delightful!" exclaimed Marjory, and the two girls ran out of the room to get ready. Mrs. Johnstone followed them, and a few moments later a couple of young men who were staying in the house sauntered lazily into the drawing-room.

"What do you think of Wyndham's sisters, Exham?" said one to the other.
Exham, a delicate youth of about nineteen, gave a long expressive whistle.
"The girls are handsome enough," he said. "But not in my style. The one they call Lillias is too bravaque. As to Wyndham, well--"

"What a significant 'well,' old fellow --explain yourself."

"Nothing," returned Exham, who seemed to draw out of any further consideration he was beginning to make Wyndham's shoes."

The other man, whose name was Power, gave a short laugh.

"You need not pretend to be so wise and close, Exham," he retorted. Anyone can see with half an eye that Wyndham's wife is not in love with him. All the same, Wyndham has not done a bad thing for himself-- stepping into a business like this.
Why, he'll have everything by-and-by.
I don't see how he can help it."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAR. 15, 1895.

The Dairy Meeting. A public meeting in the interests of dairying was held on Tuesday evening last in Witter's Hall. There was a good attendance of farmers and those interested in dairying from various sections of the county.

After a few remarks by the president, Prof. Hopkins, the chief of the dairying department at Nappan, then addressed the meeting. He complimented the promoters of the factory. He said the butter of the Wolfville creamery had attained a high standard of excellence, and had a firmly established reputation.

Pleasant Drive. Through the kindness of Mr. J. L. Gertrude and his son who furnished the team, a party of eighteen on Wednesday enjoyed a delightful drive to thirteen miles from Georgetown to the logging camp of Mr. S. P. Benjamin, situated by the Little River Lake.

We have received a neat little pamphlet entitled "Wild Flowers, Ferns and Sedges, How to Collect and Preserve them" by A. J. Pines, B. A., provincial secretary for British Columbia, of the Botanical Club of Canada.

The Younger Canadian Poets.

BY EDWARD BLACKADDER.

A nation is great only as she produces great and good men. Commerce, wealth and manufactures are truly valuable only as they conduce to make men better and greater, but in themselves are of a nature changing, fleeting and comparatively valueless.

Among the great and noble of whom a land is proud, the very foremost place has ever been granted the poets. Where lives the Scotchman whose soul does not thrill at the name of Burns? What Irishman but feels his enthusiasm for the Emerald Isle strengthened when he hears the name of Moore pronounced?

Must she of all the nations of the earth, possess no minstrel of enduring worth? Must she alone endure Apollo's scorn, and unto her no tuneful child be born? Nay! Not so! The God of Song has not scorned our country; tuneful offspring have been born to her, and it is of these that I would now write.

The poetic literature of Canada has passed its infant stage and is now entering into the period of vigorous youth. Heavysage, Sangster and others who awakened the first notes are now dead. Their work is done and can be judged as a whole and their abiding place in literature fixed. The past is known, the present is known and filled with great expectations for the future; and it is on account of these considerations that I have made the choice of the younger living Canadian writers; for all they have accomplished, noble as it is, must be regarded in a great measure as but a promise of greater things to come, so I cling to all the present for the promise that it holds. Canada is a country where Nature seems to have tested her powers in the creation of vastness, sublimity and variety.

We should expect to find a great deal of the objective element in her poetry; and this we do find. But natural description, though forming such a large element, is not the only element in our poetic literature. We have a history which, though short in centuries, is filled with many a thrilling event. The roar of cannon has awakened the echoes of her forests; fierce battles have crimsoned her fields; cities have sunk in ruins before hostile armaments, and heroes braved the fumes of Thermopylae, have yielded up their lives in defence of their beloved Canada.

A CLERGYMAN'S LETTER MAGNIFICENT WORK ACCOMPLISHED IN ST. ANNE'S PARISH.

THE SICK AND DISEASED MADE WELL BY PAIN'S CURELY COMPOUND. Thousands in the Commercial Metropolis know what the Great Spring Medicine Has Done.

In the great archdiocese of Montreal, the parish of St. Anne's is one of the largest and most important. The parish is a populous one, and the work of the dozen or more clergymen who devote their talents and talents to the spiritual and charitable interests of the people, is heavy and never-ending.

The Rev. P. Rioux, one of St. Anne's most popular clergymen, knowing about the good work done by Paine's Curely Compound, and having experienced most satisfactory results from its use in his own case, writes as follows:— "I am fully convinced both by personal experience and by the statements of many parishioners entrusted to my care, that the celebrated medicine Paine's Curely Compound is a highly recommended. We have great opportunities and privileges. Let us not let them pass. The revival in Berwick is helping to strengthen the Christian people in the western parts of the county. This work is still in progress and will result in a great spiritual uplifting of the people.

This order which 44 years ago only had one Lodge with about a dozen members, to-day has 13,000 Lodges and 600,000 members. About 60 Lodges have been put up in this province.

The Grand Lodge agent, Mr. B. D. Rogers, has been addressing meetings every night for over two weeks in King's and Annapolis counties. Last week he organized Lodges at South Farmington on Monday, and Paradise West on Wednesday evenings. At South Farmington Rev. W. C. Brown is Deputy, C. H. Shaffer C. T., and H. M. Phinney P. C. T. Evergreen Lodge, at Paradise West, has W. A. Poole for Lodge Deputy, and both Lodges meet on Tuesday and have excellent prospects of success.

On Sunday, 10th inst., Mr. Rogers addressed the children in the Annapolis, W. C. T. U. rooms in the afternoon, and in the evening a Lodge Gospel Temperance meeting in the Methodist church. In the evening Rev. Mr. Stretford, Mayor King and Geo. E. Corbett also delivered stirring addresses on the temperance question.

Mr. Rogers' programme this week is as follows: Monday, 11th, meeting at Kingston Station to organize a Lodge. Tuesday, 12th, at District Lodge meeting 10 a. m. 2 p. m., and a public meeting in the evening at Tremont. And public temperance meetings will be held with the Lodges at Kingsport on Wednesday 13th, Arlington 14th, and Delhaven on Friday 15th. He will probably be present at Acadia Lodge on Saturday evening and may address a meeting in town on Sunday, after which he goes home for a short rest and will then conduct a series of temperance meetings in Halifax and Hants counties.

The following paragraph from the Chicago Standard will be read with pleasure by our Wolfville readers, who are proud of the success attained by their young lawman in his new home: It was a privilege indeed to welcome in Chicago, last week, the popular and successful young president of Shurtliff College, Dr. Austin K. DeBols. What important steps of progress appear under his administration, even thus early, our readers have learned, and we are sure with high satisfaction. Personally, President DeBols is a gentleman whom it is always a pleasure to meet. We are glad to know that both himself and wife had the change of climate and locality so agreeable and so favorable to health.

A fair house greeted the students of Acadia Villa School at their entertainment on Wednesday evening. The interesting programme of recitations, dialogues, original essays, callisthenic exercises and music lasted over two hours, and was executed in a highly praiseworthy manner. The essays were all excellent, displaying much thought and careful preparation. The singing by the boys was very pleasing. The school is evidently holding its own. This week closes the third quarter of the year and there are 51 resident pupils and 20 day students in attendance. Some three or four more boarders have engaged to come next week and an additional excellent teacher. The school photo will be taken this week.

Mr. G. C. Miller, of Middleton, visited the school on Thursday.

The chief topic for discussion in social circles at present is the charming state of the weather and the dangerous condition of the highways. The many deforming vehicles surrounding various repair shops quite conclusively tell their tale of woe.

The merry youth, after long weeks of patient waiting, have once again been favored with the opportunity of indulging in that most enjoyable of all pleasures, skating. But the warmth of the sun at present gives warning that its duration will be brief.

Mr. Geo. Kinsman who has been confined to his home for a few days on account of sickness, is able to be around again.

On Thursday evening, Mar. 7th, we were favored with an address by Mr. Grierson, who is using his influence for the benefit of Sunday Schools.

The following paragraph from the Chicago Standard will be read with pleasure by our Wolfville readers, who are proud of the success attained by their young lawman in his new home: It was a privilege indeed to welcome in Chicago, last week, the popular and successful young president of Shurtliff College, Dr. Austin K. DeBols. What important steps of progress appear under his administration, even thus early, our readers have learned, and we are sure with high satisfaction. Personally, President DeBols is a gentleman whom it is always a pleasure to meet. We are glad to know that both himself and wife had the change of climate and locality so agreeable and so favorable to health.
