Monumental Business

We devote all our time and energies to this line only. We employ tradesmen who thoroughly understand their business—some of them having served their time with the old reliable firm of Cairns & McLean.

Proportion is one of the most particular branches of our trade; without it a Monument cannot look well. This is one of the places where some competitors are continually going astray.

We do not import condemned stock full of cracks and stains because it is cheap, but we pay the right price and get the right goods.

"Brevity is the Soul of Wit."

Wit is wisdom. Blood is life. Impure blood is living death. Health depends on good blood. Disease is due to bad blood. The blood can be purified. Legions say Hood's Sarsaparilla, America's Greatest Blood Medicine, purifies it. A brief story but it tells the tale.

Nervous Weakness—"I suffered from nervous weakness and loss of appetite. My blood was impure, my stomach disordered and I could not sleep. Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured me entirely." Mrs. E. Lockwood, Belleville, Ont.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

THE LATIN TONGUE.

George Giesing is contributing to the Fortnightly Review a series of descriptive papers, called, "By the Ionian Sea." In a recent number, he describes the city of Reggio, better known to us as Rhegium, that southernmost city and seaport of Italy mentioned in the last chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. "Compassing the shore," as our version reads, "we came to Rhegium." This is why Mr. Giesing was so deeply impressed, as we shall see by what he writes, "I found myself in front of the cathedral. As a structure it makes small appeal, dating only from the seventeenth century, and heavily restored in times more recent; but the first sight of the facade is strangely stirring. For across the whole front, in great letters which one who runs may read, is carved a line from the Acts of the Apostles: 'Circumlegentes devenimus Rhegium.' Save only one sonorous word which circles the dome of St. Peter's, I have seen no inscription on Christian temple which seemed to me so impressive. 'We fetched a compass, and came to Rhegium.' Paul was on his journey from Caesarea to Rome, and here his ship touched, here at the haven beneath Aspromonte. The fact is familiar enough, but, occupied as I was with other thoughts, it had not yet occurred to me; the most pious pilgrim of another day could not have felt himself more strongly arrested than I when I caught sight of those words. Were I to inhabit Reggio, I should never pass the cathedral without stopping to read and think; the carving would never lose its power over my imagination. It notes for me two elements of moving interest: a vivid fact from the ancient world, recorded in the music of the ancient tongue. All day the words rang in my head, even as at Rome I had gone about murmuring to myself: 'Adhucabo ecclesiam meam.' ('Upon this rock I will build My Church') What a noble solemnity in this Latin speech! And how vast the historic significance of such monumental words! Moralists who will; enough for me to hear with delight that deep-toned harmony, and to thrill with the strangeness of old things made new." This testimony to the impressiveness of the Latin language, its power of arousing intense emotion and delight, its use in foreign lands to convey knowledge to the traveler, affords much pleasure to the Catholic whose universal mother-tongue it may be said to be. It was the union of these two things,—"a vivid fact from the ancient world," and its record "in the music of the ancient tongue," that moved Mr. Giesing's mind so strongly, by the Ionian Sea.

We referred, in a recent number of the Review, to the noble example set to the employers of working people by Monsieur Harmel in France. Another beautiful feature of his admirable methods has come under our notice. Some years ago, in commemoration of his buildings at Val-des-Bons being saved from a conflagration which stopped short at the foot of a statue of Our Lady, Monsieur Harmel put all his works, and then all his workers, under her special care. Finally, letters apostolic raised his new society into an arch-confraternity for the entire world. It is a Catholic social institution, aiming not only at the working man's spiritual, but also his material, improvement, and striving to promote Catholic unity.

between various classes of society. A statue of our Lady, under the title of "Our Lady of the Factory, the Patroness of Work," has been solemnly crowned in the cathedral at Rheims. May the devotion quickly and widely spread! S. H. Review.

HIS LIFE FOR HIS FLOCK.

Intelligence from Nagpur, India, refer in touching terms to the last illness and death of the lamented Bishop Pelvat of that place. The famine and cholera were raging throughout his diocese and his people were dying in hundreds. The holy Bishop was constantly among his afflicted flock doing everything possible to relieve their sufferings and minister to their spiritual wants. At length he fell a victim to cholera. Indeed it is thought he offered his life for his flock—that the famine might come to an end. At all events it is an authenticated fact that long-hoped-for rains were coincident with his saintly death. Following is an extract from a letter on the matter sent to the Ave Maria: As soon as it became known that our dear Bishop was dying of cholera, far from being panic-stricken as is ordinarily the case, the people flocked around his residence (a single room.) At every window and door were seen forms kneeling and weeping. The good Bishop was conscious almost to the end. Not a groan, not a sigh of pain, not a murmur escaped his lips; nor would he make any effort to ease himself in his sufferings. Only those who lead mortified lives can thus overcome themselves when nature is so weak. "Precious is the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints," and Bishop Pelvat was a saint. He gave his life "that not one of those little ones should perish." He was very popular with all classes. His indomitable zeal was admired by all, and everyone that came in contact with him must have felt the emanation of his sanctity. The highest authorities here have sent telegrams of sympathy to the clergy. The funeral was most solemn and imposing. Government officers, people of every rank—Europeans, Russians, natives of all classes and creeds—showed their esteem and regard for our saintly Bishop. Even Protestant ministers and the native rajahs came to the burial. Everyone loved him. What a loss for our poor mission. This fame was the cause of his death. But how many orphans he has reared, how many hardships he has endured! It would have moved any one to tears to see the poor little famine boy who attended the Bishop to the end—he was the only one with him the night he was seized with his last illness, and was often his sole companion in long journeys—fanning the corpse, his beads in the other hand. He prayed as best he could, his tears falling into the coffin. "The famine children and the Sisters received the news only yesterday, the roads are so bad. The rain has been abundant. One would say the Bishop obtained it for us from heaven. We had only local showers before. On the morning of his burial the sun was bright and radiant, enhancing the solemnity of the funeral. Beg the prayers of the readers of The Ave Maria for the repose of his soul."

Interesting Happenings The World Over.

In the work which he has just published through M. Tequi, 29 Rue de Tournon, Paris, "Les Grands Guerissons de Lourdes," Dr. Boissarie, the eminent head of the medical bureau at Lourdes, gives the details of many a marvelous cure which has taken place at the well known shrine of Our Lady. There has been no cessation of the remarkable phenomena. The number of cures on the occasion of the French national pilgrimage have been numerous. Some ten thousand pilgrims visited the grotto in one day, and forty doctors from different countries were kept busy examining the effects of bathing in the water. The names of sufferers who were relieved from illness and pains were as usual, set forth in full. For instance, it was recorded that Marie Louise Debois, of Porquin (Ardeche), aged 38 years, who could not leave her bed for two years, felt a great change come over her, and was able to walk in a procession of the Blessed Sacrament. Marier Equier, of Rouen, aged 23, was suddenly cured of lameness, and various other instances are mentioned of pilgrims having all their pains regained perfect health. Skeptics may avail at such reports, but for all that they cannot deny that facts are stubborn things.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 100 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK.

When the present Pontiff was a boy his favorite amusements consisted in the chase and in long rambles over the thickly wooded hills overlooking his home, the castellated manor house of Carpineto. Many a time the woodman found "il Signor Vincenzio," as he was affectionately called, resting after a long morning's tramp on the top of Mount Capreo, one of the loftiest points of the Volcanic Mountains, and it was to this solitary spot that young Pocioli would often resort in order to indulge in those reveries of which he was so fond. It was therefore a touching homage to the Pontiff on the part of the villagers of Carpineto to mark this spot with a monumental cross, which will be seen from all the surrounding country. The ceremony of placing the foundation-stone was to have taken place on the feast of St. Joachim, but owing to the bad weather was put off till the 26th ultimo, when Count Ludovico Poci, the Pope's nephew, performed it. Among those present, besides all the authorities of Carpineto, there was also Pio Centra, the Pope's faithful valet. Henceforth Mount Capreo will be known as "punta Leone XIII."

The disciples of St. John Baptist de la Salle, like all Christian teachers, have many bitter critics, says the "London Catholic Times." The Brothers reply not in words, but they make effective answer by their works. The awards they have carried off at the Paris Exhibition constitute a signal triumph for their educational system. They have secured three "grands prix," thirteen gold medals, fourteen bronze medals, six "honorable mentions" and a total of fifty-seven prizes. In the department for "Popular Primary Instruction" they gained a first prize, five gold, nine silver and two bronze medals. When it is stated that the jury in this department was presided over by M. Leon Bourgeois, and that amongst its members were M. Buisson, honorary director, and M. Bayet, acting director of primary teaching at the Ministry of Public Instruction, it will be freely acknowledged that the Brothers received no undue favor. The truth is, they could not fail to be successful in education, for people who make an apostolate of any work and devote their lives to it for the love of God are bound to execute it with the highest degree of efficiency.

We have heard the daily press referred to more than once by inaccurate speakers as "the university of the common people," which means that the common people are receiving their education from the daily press. The kind of education received by those people who read the daily papers and little else is thus defined by the Monitor and New Era of London: "The amount of foolish drivel that passes muster in the press nowadays as 'elevating literature' is the despair of educationalists. Its readers pass from one subject to another in the effort to digest 'this elevating literature' until their minds become as sieves, in which nothing can remain. The hazy recollection of innumerable useless 'facts' makes all real study impossible, and leads to a condition of inebriated mental conceit that demands sensation as its necessary food, and thus the 'newer journalism' creates the demand it satisfies, and seems in its own opinion to fully justify its existence."

Of the large store of anecdote which the death of Lord Russell brought out, this bit from the Manchester Guardian is one of the most pleasant:

Once, when he first came to London and was laying the foundation of his great career, the future Lord Chief Justice went to the pit of a theatre. The piece was popular, the pit was crowded, and the young advocate had only standing-room. All of a sudden a man at his side cried out that his watch was stolen. Mr. Russell and two other men were summoned. "It is one of you three!" cried the man minus the watch.—"Well, we had better go out and be searched," said Mr. Russell, with the alertness of mind that did not fail him as a trying moment amidst an excited crowd. A detective was at hand, and the suggestion was accepted. As Mr. Russell walked out the idea flashed through his mind that if the man behind him had the stolen property, he would probably try to secure it in the pocket of his front rank man. Quick as thought he drew his coat-tails about him—only to feel, to his horror, something large and smooth and round already in his pocket. While he was still wondering what this might mean for him, the detective energetically seized the hindmost man, exclaiming: "What, you rascal! At it again!" To Mr. Russell and the other man he apologized and bade them go free. But Mr. Russell, before he had taken many steps, reflected that he could not keep the watch. He went back to the box-office and explained, with a courage on which he afterward said he rarely experienced greater demands, that, though he did not take the watch, he had it. So saying he put his hand into his pocket and pulled out—a forgotten snuff-box.

Prince Max of Saxony, recently consecrated Bishop of Kalin, is the youngest Bishop of any of the great churches of Christendom. He is not quite 28. After his ordination four years ago "Father Max" came to London to labour among the East End poor, and attached himself to the Church of St. Boniface, Union Street, Whitechapel. There his charm and eloquence won him a reputation, which he took back to his own land.

Provincial General Election.

We understand that his Honor, the Lieutenant Governor, signs an order today dissolving the Legislature, and it is further stated that the general election for the Province will be held on the 12th of December. This is certainly very short notice; but the Government are doubtless anxious to spring the election on the people in the hope of obtaining a snap verdict. This, however, is what the electorate should not allow them to secure. The Government certainly cannot appeal to the people on their record, with any hope of success; therefore, they seek to profit by the recent victory of the Dominion Government and, as it were, to steal a march on the electors before they recover from the excitement incident to the elections of last week. Now, this is just what the people should not allow the Government to do. Knowing the weakness of their cause and their unpopularity with the people, in consequence of their mal-administration and extravagance, they avail themselves of this opportunity to bring on the elections in the hope that the real issues before the public may be obscured. This is a most unsuitable time of the year to bring on an election, and the Government could have had another session of the Legislature before dissolution; consequently the present appeal cannot be regarded as anything else than an attempt to catch the people napping. In consequence of the recent elections the people of the country must be behind with much of their work, and moreover, from this time forward the weather is likely to be very disagreeable and the roads will be very bad. But the Government takes no account of these things; they pay no respect to the difficulties and inconveniences of the people. They undertake to treat the people as if the latter had no rights; but were so many chattels to be at the beck and call of the Government. Let the people rise in their might and give the Government to understand in the most emphatic manner that they resent this attempt of the Government to insult the intelligence of the electorate.

Sir Charles Tupper Retires from Public Life.

A MONTREAL despatch of the 9th says:—Perhaps there never was tendered to any public man in Canada such a testimonial as awaited Sir Charles Tupper on his arrival in Montreal this morning. There were letters and telegrams from every part of the Dominion, expressive of sympathy and good will, and amongst them were messages from six provinces, from sitting members, offering to resign their seats and promising to work to elect Sir Charles. When asked what his decision was to be, Sir Charles Tupper was firm in the declaration that under no circumstances, even if offered a seat by acclamation, would he consent to re-enter political life. "I am deeply moved," said Sir Charles, "by these expressions of good will." "But my decision is final. For four years I have worked in season and out of season for the good of the party to the best of my ability. I have shortened my life by privations incident to campaign work. My friends, colleagues in the house, are good enough to say very kind things about me and that work they are too considerate, but I thank them cordially for their expression of good will. In the quiet of my home life I will not be an indifferent spectator of public events. I will take the greatest pleasure in seeing the conservative party, now united to a man, taking its place in the house and before the country, waging their battle by younger men, full of vigor, hope, endurance and having behind them a good cause, securing for the people of Canada wise legislation, righteous laws, and fair play to all creeds and nationalities. As I step out of public life, I am proud to be able to say that I never used nor countenanced the using of any but one policy in each and all the provinces. I defy any man to say that I have ever reflected upon any nationality, or done other than help to cement the bond of union between all races as Canadians with a common heritage and a common future. God forbid that there should be anything but peace and good will throughout the Dominion. There is a great future for the conservative party, and its future has not at any time in four years looked as bright as to-day."

GENEROUS MESSAGE OF HOPE.
A bystander said, at these words, "That is very generous of you, Sir Charles, as you are quitting public life to give the new men a message so full of hope."
When the aged statesman reached the conservative rooms in the Standard chambers there were a large number of prominent conservatives waiting to express their sympathy and hope that he would change his decision. To all these Sir Charles bowed his acknowledgments and said:
"Gentlemen, with all seriousness, this relief from public life is a boon, the greatest I have enjoyed for years. Remember my age. The party would not listen to the idea of my resigning. I could not insist upon doing so against their united protest, and made no great effort to hold Cape Breton, for I felt my duty to my party was to be in the fight to help my supporters rather than to concentrate my efforts upon one seat. I was in the county only four days. I have nothing but what is pleasant to say of the electors of Cape Breton, and at this moment, as I leave the arena, my heart goes out to all Canada in the hope that peace and prosperity may abound."

Result of the Elections.

The result of the Dominion general election held on Wednesday last, is the return of the Liberal Government to power with a somewhat reduced majority. Needless to say we are disappointed, as we had expected the people would have rendered a different verdict, and we can scarcely believe the result of the balloting is the free and independent, unbiased and untampered with conviction of the great majority of the Canadian electorate. The public issues, as presented to the people during the election campaign told altogether against the administration and must have emphatically condemned, in the opinion of reasoning men, the Government's conduct of the trust confided to them. The exposure of the Government's mal-administration and extravagance evidently has not had the weight with the people that was expected, and their triumph at the polls must, therefore be attributed to other causes. There is too much reason to believe that the "resources of civilization," or, as some of our United States politicians would say, "the persuasive power of public plunder," has been a very considerable factor in returning the Government to power. However, they are in power for another term, and it will now be the duty of the Opposition to begin at once to prepare for their overthrow. The Conservatives were singularly unfortunate in the loss of their leaders. No doubt, the Government concentrated their forces against these and left nothing undone to accomplish their defeat. Sir Charles Tupper was defeated in Sydney by nearly 500 votes; Mr. Foster was beaten by Blair in St. John by upwards of a thousand votes; Hugh John McDonald fell in his terrible fight against Sifton in Brandon; Bergeron, Tailion, Garon, Montague, Powell and McInerney and Quinn were all defeated. In Pictou, Sir Hibbert Tupper and his colleague Mr. Bell were elected with fair majorities. In Halifax, Borden, Conservative was elected; but Mr. Kenny, his colleague seems to be defeated by a small majority. On the whole Nova Scotia did very badly for the Conservatives, and New Brunswick not much better. Our own Province, although suffering some surprises in the loss of King's, and the close vote in East Queen's seems to have elected three Conservatives to two Liberals. Ontario gave a majority of about twenty four Conservatives; but Quebec went almost entirely Liberal, electing only seven or eight Conservatives. Following is a summary of the general result, subject to some slight corrections on declaration day.

AS will be seen elsewhere, Sir Charles Tupper has emphatically decided to retire from public life. He takes advantage of the opportunity afforded him by the electors of Cape Breton County and gracefully steps into private life. This is the first time, during his forty-five years of political life that he suffered a personal defeat at the polls. In the many elections he contested since he first appeared in the political arena he won them all, but this one. It is our opinion that the electors of Cape Breton County have done a thing that does not redound to their credit by defeating, in his old age, the great statesman who has done so much for Canada. The impartial historian of the future will give Sir Charles Tupper his due of credit for his great statesmanship, for his enlightened, liberal and broad-minded ideas on all great public questions. His exit from the stage of public life in the highest degree, and the veteran statesman carries with him in his retirement the best wishes of hosts of his appreciative countrymen.

LAST week was a great week for elections. Not only in Canada were the electors called upon to exercise their franchise; but also in the United States and Newfoundland. Tuesday of last week was the day of the Presidential election in the United States. The result shows that President McKinley was re-elected by a large majority. The returns show that he carried twenty states, representing 259 votes in the electoral college against fifteen states, with 139 votes for Bryan. This gives McKinley a majority of 120 electoral votes. All the Eastern, Middle and a number of the Western States went Republican, while the Southern and a few of the Western States supported the Democrats. The Vice-President elect, is Theodore Roosevelt, Governor of the State of New York, and known in the Spanish-American War, as the commander of "Roosevelt's rough riders." McKinley & Roosevelt are therefore, the President and Vice-President of the neighboring Republic for the next four years.

The complimentary banquet given in Home's Hall, Kent street to the returned members of the South African Contingent was a grand success in every way.

The F. R. McLaughlin's representative through the South African war was tendered a grand banquet by the people of Fowal on Thursday night.

The Cunard liner Saxonia ran into and sank the fishing schooner Mary Mosquito, off Gloucester harbor on Saturday night. One member of the schooner's crew was drowned.

MAJOR WEEKS is not coming home with the other members of the contingent. A despatch from Pretoria announces that he is laid up in Kroonstadt with fever, but is not seriously ill.

MESSRS. CARVELL BROS. shipped by the steamer Elliott on Friday evening for Newfoundland, a cargo consisting of 14,000 bushels of oats, 200 bags of vegetables, 100 boxes of butter and cheese and fifty sheep.

The Stanley's crew have been paid off preparatory to placing the steamer last week for the winter's work, says the Patriot. There are some poor chaps who will not return to work. They did not vote for Sir Louis.

The casualties in the Gloucester fleet during the fishing year just ended comprise six fishing schooners, one small steamer and 35 men who left seven wives and 20 children, about one third of the latter being adults. The average annual loss of men for the past 25 years has been about 100.

The Wanderers football team, of Halifax, defeated the Abegweit here 5 points to 0 on Saturday afternoon, thus regaining the Maritime Championship which the Island boys captured from them last year. The Abegweit and St. Dunast's College will meet in battle array next Saturday.

The body of Patrick Gormley, a man of about 50 years of age was found on the beach near Fowal's wharf on Saturday, by a lad named Shepherd. The last seen of him alive was at seven o'clock Friday night on Queen street. It is supposed that he must have gone to the wharf that night and fallen over in the dark. A jury after deliberation returned a verdict of death by drowning.

NEGOTIATIONS are proceeding in Toronto, Ont. toward the amalgamation of two large bicycle corporations, incorporated a year ago, the Canada Cycle and Motor Company Limited, and the National Cycle and Automobile Company, Limited. If the deal is effected the corporation will practically control the bicycle business in Canada. The Canada Cycle and Motor Company is capitalized at two and a half millions, and the National at two millions.

The American line steamer St. Paul limped into New York the other day under her port engine. On October 21 she struck a submerged wreck which carried away her starboard propeller, causing the engine to run so fast that the shaft broke and all connections were snapped. The starboard engine was so severely wrecked that they were useless, and it will take six months to replace them with a new set. The ship was leaking considerably. When the accident occurred the cabin passengers were excited, but they were soon restored to quiet by the prompt assurance that the steamer was in no danger.

RENNISTON was the scene of a grand patriotic demonstration on the return of the late Mr. Bowser to his home there on Tuesday last week. The Summer-side Cornet Band played patriotic airs for the occasion, and the little town had a "hot time" that night. Over two hundred people came to the home to take part in the fun. After a procession of the societies through the streets, addresses of welcome were delivered from a stand erected for the purpose. The procession then re-formed and carried Mr. Bowser in triumph to his home, where he received a warm welcome.

A sad tragedy occurred at Belle River on Thursday night last. There had been a ploughing frolic that day at Mr. Allan Macdonald's. At the supper table, two men—Donald Stewart, and Allan Stewart, relatives, got into a dispute over some matter. They both left the table and went out of the house together. In the argument, which followed, Allan Stewart lost complete control of his temper, and struck Donald a heavy blow with a stick just over the eye, breaking his skull. He lived only a few minutes after being struck, and never spoke. The jury rendered a verdict to the effect that the deceased died by his death by a blow administered by Allan Stewart. No ill-feeling is known to have existed between the two men previous to this quarrel, and Allan Stewart is frantic with grief over the result.

The Biograph moving pictures shown at the Opera House every night this week are well worth the patronage of everybody who desires to be instructed and entertained. This machine, it is under the management of Mr. LeRoy Kenny, and the exhibition is incomparably superior to anything of the kind seen here. It is simply a splendid entertainment. Among the many pictures shown are three very distinct views of his Holiness Pope Leo XIII. The Canadian Contingent leaving the battle of Paardeberg, the House of Cavalry and the City of London Imperial Volunteers leaving for the war, the Gordon Highlanders, and the 2nd Battalion of the Buffs, as well as the battle of Lord Roberts. General Gao White, the battle of the Tugela River, the Ladies' Ambulance, stretcher bearers bringing in the wounded after the battle of Paardeberg, and other scenes during the war. A number of comic scenes are also presented. Mr. Kenny is in himself a good entertainer, and his songs and recitations are all excellent. Next to an actual trip around the world, there is nothing better than to see this wonderful exhibition, and we would advise every person to take advantage of it while it is here.

Rev. Father O'Leary on his arrival in Quebec on Saturday the 8th inst., accorded a magnificent reception. The reverend gentleman says that when Cronje surrendered to the Boers, he was in the line. The Boers had no respect for the white flag, and moreover had frequently been ordered to retreat. He speaks in the highest terms of the Revs. Almond and Fullerton and of the Canadian Contingent, and that they were splendid companions. They were both disappointed at being unable to accompany the regiment in the engagement at Paardeberg, but strict orders had been received from Kitchener that no chaplain nor correspondent was to accompany the column. Father O'Leary's presence, and subsequently orders were received that Father O'Leary only was to accompany the column. The Sunday following the battle of Paardeberg, accompanied by a detachment of troops, Father O'Leary went to the battlefield and arranged the graves of his dead comrades, placing a cross on each with the name and number of the deceased. He buried all the Canadian soldiers who were killed on the battlefield, so that if any measures are ever taken to bring their bodies back to Canada there would be no difficulty in doing so. As to the Boers, they treated him well enough when he went into their camp, but they were as a rule ignorant and uneducated. Father O'Leary could not speak too highly of the men as to their conduct and courage on the battlefield. He received a gold watch and $500 in gold were presented Father O'Leary.

Terrible Tragedy of the Sea.

In sight of the house tops of Yarmouth the steamer City of Monticello foundered at sea Saturday morning. Thirty six persons were drowned and dashed to death on the rock-bound coast. All on board except four perished in the furious storm that sent the old side wheel to the bottom. The disaster occurred off Cranberry Head, just outside Yarmouth Light and almost within rifle shot of the shore. The Monticello battered by the gale that lashed the Bay of Fundy into a fury sprang a leak off Yarmouth. Unavailing efforts were made to head the doomed vessel for her home port. She lay in the grip of the storm, plunging in the rough of the sea. Life boats were quickly cleared and passengers and crew attempted to go ashore. One boat with several men got safely away but was dashed to pieces in the surf and only four occupants got safely to land. Three minutes later the Monticello careened and sank. Two other boats got away but capsized in the heavy seas and were battered to atoms on the rocks. Seven passengers, including three commercial travellers, were aboard and only one was saved. Casso Dorrons for Smith, of the steamer Pharsalia, who brought the news to Yarmouth, says each boat with several men got safely to the three women aboard. They were safely placed in the first boat, but one of the crew was washed overboard; the other two being lost. Captain Smith, commander, was brave to the end; cool directing the work of rescue, and saving the bottom with the ship. Monday Sunday the bodies of the victims of the wreck drifted ashore and before Captain Smith's heavy boat had been recovered. The Monticello did not come near a reef. She foundered in deep water. The cause of the disaster is chiefly that she was pounded for hours by wind and sea, sprang a leak, gradually filled, became unmanageable, and broke apart and foundered. The town of Yarmouth is grief stricken by the disaster, which is one of the most tragic in the history of Nova Scotia.

Obituary.

Again the people of Waterford and more especially the young people are called upon to mourn the loss of one of their most beloved companions, Miss Mary Elizabeth Shea, daughter of Richard Shea, who passed to her eternal reward on Tuesday Oct. 30th, in the nineteenth year of her age. Miss Shea was taken ill last spring; since then her health has been gradually failing until the above date, when the angel of death came and brought her sweet release. She died comforted and consoled by the last Sacraments of the holy Catholic Church. Deceased was ever a generous, kind-hearted girl who always had a kind greeting for everyone, and will long be remembered by her large circle of friends and acquaintances. She leaves a sorrowing mother and father four sisters and a brother to mourn the loss of an obedient daughter and a kind and affectionate sister. The interment took place on Thursday and the funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Father Chalmers. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Francis Shea, Peter W. Aylward, William Kinoh, Patrick O'Keefe and Harry Keane. The church over, they carry all that was mortal of our dear friend to the beautiful little cemetery and there in a secluded spot, near loved ones who had gone before, they laid her down to rest to await the great judgment day. Deceased was a member of the League of the Sacred Heart.

COME HERE

If You Want to Get Fleeced.

Come to Thayer & Co. Not many stores will come out in plain print and say they'll fleece you—but many of them will do so and not say a word—let you find it out for yourself. There are more ways than one to fleece a man, however—one way you lose—our way you win. We'll fleece you with genuine heavy weight, fleeced lined underwear for 50c, a garment—$1.00 a suit. Nobody else sells this quality for less than 60c, a garment, $1.20 a suit—and then they don't fleece you out of a cent in money—they simply charge you what these goods are worth. There ARE stores in this city that charge 75c a garment—5c more for one garment than we charge for a whole suit—furnish no better quality—and they FLEECE you in every sense and cent of the word. We carry many kinds of fleeced underwear—up to pink and blue with fleeced lining, and heavy weight lamb's wool underwear, which we sell for 90c, and $1.00 a garment, fully a third under the next lowest price in the city. If you want to get fleeced—come here—or if you don't want fleeced—we carry every sort of good underwear that a good store ought to carry.

Treasure Island

"Trelawney," said the doctor, contrary to all my notions, I believe you have managed to get two honest men on board with you—that man and John Silver."

"Silver, if you like," cried the squire, "but as for that intolerable bumbag, I declare I think his conduct unmanly, unseemly, and downright un-English."

"Well," said the doctor, "we shall see."

When we came on deck the men had begun already to take out the arms and powder, yo-hoing at their work, while the captain and Mr. Arrow stood by superintending.

The new arrangement was quite to my liking. The whole schooner had been overhauled; six berths had been made astern, out of what had been the afterpart of the main hold, and these of cabins was only joined to the galley and forecabin by a sparred passage on the port side.

"Orboard!" said the captain. "Well, gentlemen, that saves the trouble of putting him in irons."

But there were, without a mate; and it was necessary, of course, to advance one of the men. The boatswain, Job Anderson, was the likeliest man aboard, and though he kept his old title, he served in a way as mate.

"We're a changing the powder, Jack," answered one. "Why, by the powers," cried Long John, "if we do, we'll miss the morning tide!"

"My orders!" said the captain, shortly. "You may go below, my man. Hands will want supper."

"Ay, ay, sir," answered the cook, touching his forehead, he disappeared at once in the direction of the galley.

"That's a good man, captain," said the doctor. "Very likely, sir," replied Captain Smollett. "Easy with that, men—easy," he ran on, to the fellows who were shifting the powder; and then suddenly observing me examining the swivel we carried amidships, a long brass nine—"Here, 'you ship's boy," he cried, "out of that! Off with you to the cook and get some work."

And then as I was hurrying off I heard him say, quite loudly, to the doctor: "I'll have no favorites on my ship."

I assure you I was quite of the squire's way of thinking, and hated the captain deeply.

CHAPTER X. THE VOYAGE.

All that night we were in a great bustle getting things stowed in their place, and hostings of the squire's friends, Mr. Blandly and the like, coming off to wish him a good voyage and safe return. We never had a night at the Admiral Benbow when I had half the work; and I was dog-tired when, a little before dawn, the boatswain sounded his pipe, and the crew began to man the cabin-bars. I might have been twice as weary, yet I would not have left the deck, all was so new and interesting to me—the brief copmande, the shrill notes of the whistle, the men bustling to their places in the glimmer of the ship's lanterns.

"Now, Barbecue, tip us a stove," cried one voice. "The old one," cried another. "Ay, ay, mates," said Long John, who was standing by, with his crutch under his arm, and at once broke out in the air and words I knew so well:

"Fifteen men on the dead man's chest— And then the whole crew bore chorus: "Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum!"

And at the third "ho" drove the bars before them with a will. Even at that exciting moment it carried me back to the old Admiral Benbow in a second, and I seemed to hear the voice of the captain piping in the chorus. But soon the anchor was short up; soon it was banging dripping at the bows; and the sails began to draw, and the lead and shipping to flit by on either side, and before I could lie down to snatch an hour of slumber the Hispaniola had begun her voyage to the Isle of Treasure.

I am not going to relate the voyage in detail. It was fairly prosperous. The ship proved to be a good ship, the crew were capable seamen, and the captain thoroughly understood his business. But before we came the length of Treasure Island, two or three things happened which require to be known.

Mr. Arrow, first of all, turned out even worse than the captain had feared. He had no command among the men, and people did what they pleased with him. But that was by no means the worst of it; for, after a day or two at sea he began to appear on deck with heavy eyes, red cheeks, stuttering tongue, and other marks of drunkenness. Time after time he was ordered below in disgrace. Sometimes he fell out and himself; sometimes he lay all day long in his little bunk at one side of the companion; sometimes for a day or two he would be almost sober and attend to his work at least passably.

In the meantime we could never make out where he got the drink. That was the ship's mystery. Watch him as we pleased, we could do nothing to solve it, and when he sneaked him to his face, he would only laugh if he were drunk, and if he were sober deny solemnly that he ever tasted anything but water.

He was not only useless as an officer, and had a bad influence among the men, but it was plain that at this rate he must soon kill himself outright, so nobody was much surprised, nor very sorry, when one dark night, with a head sea, he disappeared entirely and was seen no more.

"Orboard!" said the captain. "Well, gentlemen, that saves the trouble of putting him in irons."

But there were, without a mate; and it was necessary, of course, to advance one of the men. The boatswain, Job Anderson, was the likeliest man aboard, and though he kept his old title, he served in a way as mate.

"We're a changing the powder, Jack," answered one. "Why, by the powers," cried Long John, "if we do, we'll miss the morning tide!"

"My orders!" said the captain, shortly. "You may go below, my man. Hands will want supper."

"Ay, ay, sir," answered the cook, touching his forehead, he disappeared at once in the direction of the galley.

"Easy with that, men—easy," he ran on, to the fellows who were shifting the powder; and then suddenly observing me examining the swivel we carried amidships, a long brass nine—"Here, 'you ship's boy," he cried, "out of that! Off with you to the cook and get some work."

And then as I was hurrying off I heard him say, quite loudly, to the doctor: "I'll have no favorites on my ship."

I assure you I was quite of the squire's way of thinking, and hated the captain deeply.

Off with you to the cook and get some work."

was something to see him wedge the foot of the crutch against a bulkhead, and propped against it, yielding to every movement of the ship, get on with his cooking like some one safe ashore. Still more strange was it to see him in the heaviest of weather cross the deck. He had a line or two rigged up to help him across the widest spaces—Long John's ear-rings, they were called; and he would hand himself from one place to another, now using the crutch, now trailing it alongside by the lanyard, as quickly as another man could walk. Yet some of the men who had sailed with him before expressed their pity to see him so reduced.

"He's no common man, Barbecue," said the cookwain to me. "He had good schooling in his young days, and can speak like a book when so minded, and brave—a lion's nothing alongside of Long John! I see him grapple four, and knock their heads together—him unarmed."

All the crew respected and even obeyed him. He had a way of talking to each, and doing everybody some particular service. To me he was unweariedly kind; and always glad to see me in the gally, which he kept as clean as a new pin; the dishes hanging up burnished, and his parrot in the cage in the corner.

"Come away, Hawkins," he would say; "come and have a yarn with John. Nobody more welcome than yourself, my son. Sit you down and hear the news. Here's Cap'n Flint—I call my parrot Cap'n Flint, after the famous buccaner—here's Cap'n Flint predicting success to our voyage. Wasn't you, cap'n?"

And the parrot would say, with great rapidity, "Pieces of eight! pieces of eight! pieces of eight!" till you wondered that it was not out of breath, or till John threw his handkerchief over the cage.

"Now, that bird," he would say, "is, may be two hundred years old, Hawkins—they live forever mostly; and if anybody's seen more wicked nesses, it must be the devil himself. She's sailed with England—the great Cap'n England, pirate. She's been at Madagascar, and at Malabar, and Surinam, and Providence, and Portobello. She was at the fishing up of the wrecked plate ships. It's there she learned 'Pieces of eight,' and little wonder; three hundred and fifty thousand of 'em, Hawkins! She was at the boarding of the 'Viceroy of the Indies' out of Goa, she was; and to look at her you would think she was a baby. But you smelled powder—didn't you, cap'n?"

"Stand by to go about," the parrot would scream. "Ah, she's a handsome craft, she is," the cook would say, and give her sugar from his pocket, and then the bird would peck at the bars and swear straight on, passing belief for wickedness. "There," John would add, "you can't touch pitch and not be muddled, lad. Here's this poor old innocent bird of mine swearing blue fire, and none the wiser, you may lay to that. She would swear the same, in a manner of speaking, before the chaplain." And John would touch his forehead with a solemn way he had, that made me think he was the best of men.

In the meantime, squire and Captain Smollett were still on pretty distant terms with one another. The squire made no bones about the matter; he despised the captain. The captain, on his part, never spoke but when he was spoken to, and then sharp and short and dry, and not a word wasted. He owned, when driven into a corner, that he seemed to have been wrong about the crew, that some of them were as brisk as he wanted to see, and all had behaved fairly well. As for the ship, he had taken a downright fancy to her. "She'll lie a point nearer the wind than a man has a right to expect of his own married wife, sir. But," he would add, "all I say is, we're not home again, and I don't like the cruise."

The squire, at this, would turn away and march up and down the deck, chin in air. "A trifle more of that man," he would say, "and I should explode. We had some heavy weather, which only proved the qualities of the 'Hispaniola.' Every man on board seemed well content and they had been here for a week; for it is my belief there was never a ship's company so spoiled since Noah put to sea. Double grog was going on the least excuse; there was duff on odd days, as for instance, if the squire heard it as any man's birthday; and always a barrel of apples standing broached in the waist, for any one to help himself that had a fancy."

"Never knew good to come of it yet," the captain said to Dr. Livesey. "Spoil folk's hands, make devils that's my belief."

But good did come of the apple barrel, as you shall hear; for if it had not been for that, we should have had no note of warning and might all have perished by the hand of treachery.

This is how it came about. We had run up the trades to get the wind of the island we were after—I am not allowed to be more plain—and now we were running down for it with a bright looking day and night. It was about the last day of our outward voyage, by the largest computation; some time that night, at latest, before noon of the 17th,

White Watery Pimples.

Five years ago my body broke out in white watery pimples, which grew so bad that the suffering was almost unbearable. I took doctors' medicine and various remedies for two years but they were of little benefit, whenever I got warmed up or sweat the pimples would come out again.

A neighbor advised Burdock Blood Bitters, and I am glad I followed his advice, for four bottles completely cured me. That was three years ago and there has never been a spot or pimple on me since. James Lashoue, Brechin P.O., Ont.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"I dunno how Bill's a-goin' to vote in this election," said a campaign worker last week, "I've heard tell he's on the fence."

"He wuz thar," replied his neighbor, "but one o' the candidates let fall a dollar on the off side o' the fence, and Bill got dizzy an' fell over."

What Would You Give

To be cured of Catarh? If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headaches, capricious appetite, and constant discharge of mucus.

Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take. If you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great constitutional remedy, which thoroughly purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, you may expect to be completely and permanently cured. The good blood which Hood's Sarsaparilla makes, reaching the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues and ultimately cures all symptoms of catarh.
