THE VERY LATEST AT GARLAND'S:

The Baked Bread.

By the author of "Boy of My Heart."

PAPER, 65 cts.; CLOTH, 90 cts.

There are few friendships more beautiful than that between mother and son, and rarely has it been more intimately and faithfully described than in this haunting book. The story of a clever, handsome, active, self-willed boy's twenty years of life told only as a proud, just and loving mother could tell it.

A true and human and very beautiful story is "Boy of My Heart." 85c.

The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER X.

"No, no, thank you. I shall be all right in a minute. But I wish you would go."

He stands beside her, looking down at her with more than admiration in his gray eyes.

"Are you so anxious to get rid of me?" he says.

"No; but they will be in such a state—"

"Can you not endure me for a few minutes?" he goes on, taking no notice of her reply. "Let me sit beside you that you may lean against me. Try and forget that you dislike me; try and imagine that I am a post, or a sofa cushion—anything, but lean against me and rest."

His words are sufficient to call up a smile, but, strange to say, Dulcie cannot smile at him, there is a certain tone of command, mingled with chivalrous gentleness, which forbids levity, and she puts her hand within his arm as a compromise.

"I am really all right," she says. "If you would but believe it and go home. Couldn't you—as a bright thought—couldn't you go and send a pony-chaise?"

"Yes," he says, "presently; I cannot leave you now. You might faint again."

"I am sure I shall not."

He is silent for a moment, then he bends his head and looks at her.

"Dulcie—let me call you Dulcie for once!—why is it that you dislike me so? So much that you cannot bear me to be near you?"

She looks away in silence for a moment, during which his eyes seem to grow to her face, upon which a faint color is coming and going.

"I came with you in the dog-cart," she says, with a smile that is rather uncertain.

"I know! Yes, because you wanted the ride, that was all. Why is it that you dislike me so? Is it because of that unfortunate accident at our first meeting?"

She is silent; his voice is like music; no longer firm and grave, but tender and pleading; his face, as she just sees it from under her long lashes, looks more handsome than ever; the gray eyes warm and eloquent with the passion of love. Do what she will she cannot keep her hand from quivering as it rests upon his arm; her whole being, indeed, is quivering with a new sensation which almost frightens her.

"Forget it," he says; "forget it if you will. As for me, I shall always remember it; Rome will always be as—"

FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so sometimes it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains."

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. BROWN, 1109 Auburn Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

sociated in my mind with the vision of the beautiful girl standing looking down at me from the stairs with defiance and daring and mockery in her eyes."

He pauses a moment, as if he were recalling her as he first saw her face to face, then he draws a little nearer, and his voice grows lower and softer:

"Dulcie, will you be very angry if I tell you something?"

She raises her eyes to his face, then looks away, still silent.

"I think I must tell you," he goes on. "I meant to keep it to myself for a little time, until—well, until you had learned to dislike me a little less. I had hoped that in time I might persuade you to like me, and then I intended to speak. But I do not know how it is. I feel that I cannot keep it to you. I mean, Dulcie, that—I love you!"

Slowly, earnestly, eagerly the words fall from his lips, and his hand takes hers that droops at her side, and holds it firmly.

She sits quite motionless, looking at the moss at her feet.

Is it anger that sends the blood in a hot stream to her face, that makes her heart throb, and a sudden light to flash and glow in her eyes? If so, anger can make even beauty more beautiful.

"I love you," he repeats. "I think I loved you that night, even when you treated me most coldly and defiantly. I know, at any rate, that I love you now. Dulcie, are you angry?"

She thrusts her feet into the moss, and bends her head still lower. All her heart seems to go out toward him, but pride stands in the way. It is shameful that she should yield so soon, she who has declared that nothing on earth shall alter her decision.

"You are," he says, with a little sigh. "Well, I am sorry. Forgive me, Dulcie, and if you can, forget what I have said. I see now that my case is hopeless; you are not one to swerve when once you have made up your mind. And you made up your mind to dislike me, to hold me at arm's length from the first, did you not? Well"—he pauses, and his face is very grave and troubled—"I will promise to atone in the only way I can for what I have said; I will not repeat it, Dulcie—I ought to call you Miss Dorrimore. Will you believe me when I now renew the promise that I made that I would not offend you in—in this way? It will make no difference to you, I hope—I mean as to your stay with us? If it should, I will go away; if you like, I will leave the Castle to-night, until the time of your visit has expired."

"Is that necessary?" she says, in a faint voice.

He looks up eagerly.

"I hope not," he responds. "I am in your hands; do with me what you will, only rest assured that I will not annoy you in any way."

"You"—she pauses—"you will not annoy me. It is I who ought to go. I think I will."

"Do not," he pleads, earnestly. "or I shall think you are offended in so-ber earnest. Yes, it will be better for me to go."

She looks at him for a second, and "Why should you?" she murmurs.

"Why should you?" she murmurs, while a faint smile plays on her lips. He looks gratified.

"You will trust me?" he says. "I promise that not a word—well, of my love—shall pass my lips. I accept your decision as final, and will do my best to bear it. It will be hard to bear."

"Will it?"

He inclines his head thoughtfully.

"Very, Dulcie—Miss Dorrimore. There are some men who love often and easily. I am not, unfortunately, one of them—this is the first time I have ever spoken words of love to any woman."

"Not even to Miss Fairfax?"

The words are scarcely audible, but he hears them.

"Not even to Miss Fairfax," he says, decidedly. "So you see that it will take me some time to recover. But you will not care to hear me talk about myself in this way. Are you rested? Shall we go on, or will you wait while I get the pony-carriage?"

He looks at her as he asks the question, and all unconscious that he still holds her hand, is about to rise. There is a look of deep disappointment on his manly face, of more than disappointment—of suppressed pain—and as she raises her eyes she sees it.

"I will wait," she says, "if you want to go." This very softly.

He sinks down beside her again.

"Want to go?" he says, with a little bitter laugh. "I am quite content to stay here with you for a week, for a month, a year—forever! There! I am forgetting—forgive me!"

She is silent for a moment, then she says, with a little flash of her eyes: "You have had a narrow escape, Sir Hugh."

"What?" he says, his eyes fixed on hers, that are averted.

"A very narrow escape," she repeats. "Suppose I had taken you to your word! By this time you would have been engaged to—Dulcie Dorrimore—a young woman who, though I myself personally like her very much indeed, is altogether unsuitable for the wife of Sir Hugh Falconer! Unaccomplished, ill-bred, pert, ill-tempered, and almost unrepresentable."

"Is it a tear, or merely the sunlight that causes her eyes to droop for a moment? "In a word, altogether unfit to be the future mistress of Holme Castle!"

He shakes his head and smiles wistfully.

"It would have been the talk of the county—I think that is the way to put it—the talk of the county; your mother would have been shocked—and not unreasonably; your sister Maud would have plunged into grief, and Miss Fairfax—he makes a sudden gesture of impatience, but she goes on—"would have been bitterly disappointed. And then, as for yourself, how unhappy you would have been! I have the most awful and trying of tempers—"

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A NEW AND PRACTICAL MODEL.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 32-34 inches bust measure; Medium, 36-38; Large, 40-42 and Extra Large, 44-46. Size Medium will require 4 3/4 yards of 36-inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

AN ATTRACTIVE ONE-PIECE DRESS.

2201—This is a very popular style, with its long waist and simple gathered skirt portions. The design is very becoming to slender figures and is nice for silk, cloth or cotton fabrics.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. It requires for a 16-year size, 5 1/4 yards of 44-inch material. The skirt portion measures 2 1/2 yards at the foot.

ENEMY ATTACKS WITHOUT SUCCES.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The text of to-day's statement regarding operations on the Western front, reads: "Latest reports are that yesterday and last night separate attacks were made by the enemy with fresh troops upon a portion of our front between the Ypres-Menin Road and the northeastern corner of Polygon Wood. Another attack was made, without success, against positions at Zonnebeke. Except the loss of two small advances already reported, all six attacks ended in complete failure. The enemy suffered severely in these attacks, gained no advantage. A hostile flying party was repulsed with the loss of the night south of Lens."

THE LONDON PRESS ON AIR RAID DEFENSES.

An Associated Press cable from London this afternoon states: "The London press is becoming more and more critical of the Government's policy of air raids. Semi-official explanations that the British spare machines for reciprocal operations are questioned by the North American press, the Daily Express and others, who point out that the Germans are able to spare airships for operations in England, and have enough spare battle lines to give the British a continuous fighting for supremacy in the air on the fighting front. It is pointed out that the Germans evidently have built the British in air craft which are expected to continue building on a large scale and improve their spare machines, while the British are trying to catch up with their own production that this would be a disadvantage were some of the ships built by experts like Lord Montagu, months ago. Lord Montagu is reported to have been in the experimental stage of operations, and that the Germans will soon be able to attack London in all weathers nearly every night. Several theatres which advertise performances last night with the exception of the last moment, mainly only a handful of people. Others went through their paces in the presence of the police, but removed those in the aisles to the ground floor."

AIR RAIDS.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Bombs were dropped in the western districts of London last night's air raid. One of the bombs struck the pavement in a small working class dwelling, and windows. When warning was given, the occupants of those houses took shelter in the basement of a nearby school, but in injury. Firing was heard in the southern part of London, and spasmodic and irregular firing that the raiders attempted to pass through the barrage singly in pairs. Residents of the northern part of London report the noise of bombardment, but experienced nothing in this is the favorite part of the raiders in their attempts to reach the central part of the city. The use of guns and explosion of bombs coming a matter of fact, and with Londoners these days they are heading the officers to take cover, there are no panic or even great excitement in the raids. The people commended themselves to the need alterations in their sleeping and hurrying home to their offices or workshops at their working hours to their dinner and prepare to spend the night in their homes, and the safety afforded by the use of subways and basements and deground refuges. ENEMY ATTACKS WITHOUT RESULT.

LONDON, Oct. 2. The text of to-day's statement regarding operations on the Belgian front, reads: Latest reports show that yesterday and last night five separate attacks were made by the enemy with fresh troops upon a portion of our new front between the Ypres-Menin Road and the northeast corner of Polygon Wood. Another attack was made, without success, against positions at Zonnebeka. Except for the loss of two small advanced posts, already reported, all six attacks ended in complete failure. The enemy suffered severely in these attacks and gained no advantage. A hostile raiding party was repulsed with loss during the night south of Lens.

THE LONDON PRESS ON AIR RAIDS

NEW YORK, Oct. 2. An Associated Press cable from London this afternoon says: The London press is becoming strongly critical of the Government on the subject of air raids. Semi-official explanations that the British cannot spare machines for reciprocal raids are questioned by the Northcliffe papers, the Daily Express and others, who point out that the Germans are able to spare airships for raiding England, and have enough along the battle lines to give the British continuous fighting for supremacy in the air on the fighting front. It is figured that the Germans evidently have outbuilt the British in air craft, and may be expected to continue building on a large scale and improve the types of their machines, while the British are trying to catch up with them. Predictions that this would be the case were made by some of the papers and by experts like Lord Montagu, months ago. Lord Montagu predicts that the Germans will soon pass the experimental stage of operations and be able to attack London in all kinds of weather nearly every night. Several theatres which advertised performances last night withdrew them at the last moment, mainly because only a handful of people appeared. Others went through their performances in the presence of a few persons, but removed those in the galleries to the ground floor.

AIR RAIDS.

LONDON, Oct. 2. Bombs were dropped in the southwestern districts of London during last night's air raid. One of them struck the pavement in a small square and another fell in the rear of some working class dwellings, smashing windows. When warning of the raid was given, the occupants of all of those houses took shelter in the basement of a nearby school, thus escaping injury. Firing was heard in the southern part of London, and was spasmodic and irregular, indicating that the raiders attempted to get through the barrage singly or in pairs. Residents of the northern part of London report the most intense bombardment yet experienced, showing this is the favorite route of the raiders in their attempts to reach the central part of the city. The firing of guns and explosion of bombs is becoming a matter of fact occurrence with Londoners these days. While they are heeding the official warnings to take cover, there are no signs of a panic or even great excitement during the raids. The people have accommodated themselves to the enforced alterations in their method of living and hurrying home from their offices or workshops at the close of their working hours to take an early dinner and prepare to spend the evening in security in their homes, or in the safety afforded by the protection of subways and basements and underground refuges. They may take with them their wraps and food and make themselves as comfortable as if they were in the corridors of the big hotels, which are becoming favorite places for residents, the walls affording protection against possible flying glass. Through everything the large proportion of the people are continuing their work. Last night was an example. Delivery cars continued their rounds, the drivers taking cover when the bombardment became intense, only to proceed on their way when the guns at intervals ceased firing.

MEAGRE OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 2. A very meagre official statement from Field Marshal Haig to-night on operations in France and Belgium, says that beyond artillery activity on both sides of the battlefield, there is nothing of special interest to report.

THE TURKISTAN SITUATION.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 2. The official news agency issued the following statement, to-day on the Turkistan situation: Political agitators with the support of two local regiments took over the administration of Turkistan, the capital of Russian Turkestan. It is announced they no longer recognized the Provisional Government. The Mussulman population, which disapproved of the town's masters, rose in revolt, and aided by pupils of the military academy occupied the fortress. The Government has appointed as commander of the troops at Kazan, General Korovnichenko, and has placed at his disposal sufficient troops to suppress the disorders.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Oct. 2. British casualties reported for the week ending to-day number 21,172, divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds, officers 161, men 3,773; wounded or missing, officers 331, men 13,724.

TURKISH PRISONERS.

LONDON, Oct. 2. Nearly four thousand prisoners were taken by the British army in Mesopotamia which captured Ramadid, it is reported officially.

WILL STAND BY RUSSIA.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 2. The British, French and Italian Governments, through their representatives here, denied the intention attributed to the Entente Powers of taking advantage of the difficult situation in Russia in order to insure their own interests. The British Ambassador stated officially that Great Britain would never agree to such a policy. The French Ambassador recently informed the Government that a personage occupying an important diplomatic post in Germany had made overtures to some French politicians with a view to the discussion of a question of interest to France, but that this German attempt was indignantly refused. The Italian Ambassador told the Government that Italy will continue to co-operate with Russia in the common cause, and she rejected all thoughts of peace negotiations which neglected Russian interests.

GERMAN CONCESSION ABOLISHED

TOKIO, Oct. 2. An official statement issued to-day announces that the Japanese military administration at Tsing Tau, the former German Concession in China, has been abolished. During the three years it has been in effect, it is pointed out, order has been established in the territory. The civil administration now substituted for it, the statement says, is designed to improve the administration of territory in general and of railways and mines, and promote the welfare of the inhabitants. While bringing about more friendly relations, it is significant, the statement says, that during the occupation the status quo of the territory has not been changed.

TYPHOID ELIMINATED THROUGH VACCINATION.

PARIS, Oct. 2. Professor Charles Richet, of the French Academy, Noble Prize winner for medicine in 1915, declared before the Academy to-day that typhoid fever, which claimed many victims at the beginning of the war, has now been virtually eradicated from the Army through vaccination with serum discovered by Dr. Vincent of Val De Grace military hospital.

WORRYING OVER LUXBURG.

SANTIAGO, Peru, Oct. 2. The seizure of the German Minister to Argentina, from Buenos Aires, is again occupying public attention in Chile. It is believed in Government circles that the presence of Count Von Luxburg in Chile or in any other South American country would affect the solidarity of the republicans in the western hemisphere. Guillermo Mackenna, in an article in the Mercury says that if Chile does not sever diplomatic relations with Germany it would signify the breaking of the bonds which unite Chile with civilized countries.

THE ITALIAN OFFENSIVE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. Alarmed by the success of the Italian drive over the Bainsizza Plateau, Germany is withdrawing large numbers of Austrian troops from France and from Galicia and Bukovina, and rushing them to the front to meet the new offensive of General Cadorna. Official despatches received from Rome to-day say the second phase of the battle is about to open.

A GERMAN RAIDER.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Oct. 2. Officials of an American steamer arriving here to-day, reported sighting what they believed to be a German raider off the Brazilian coast recently. When first seen she appeared to be a three-masted schooner in distress, but as the American boat approached she made off under auxiliary power, the officers said. They declared the strange ship flew no flag; her decks were piled with lumber, with an odd deck house at which they thought concealed guns. They said the ship had a dummy funnel.

WILL NOT GRANT PASSPORTS.

PARIS, Oct. 2. It is announced that the French Government will not grant passports to the French delegates for the Berne conference. This was decided upon at the recent socialist conference in London. The question of the transfer to a neutral city of the headquarters of the International Labor Union, which is now Berlin, was to be discussed at the Berne meeting.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2. More than 2,000 tons of provisions, fodder, maise, oil cakes and other supplies were destroyed to-day by fire in storehouses near Stockholm. The loss, which amounts to more than one million crowns, will be felt severely, particularly as it is impossible to replace these materials under existing restrictions.

ON AERIAL OPERATIONS.

LONDON, Oct. 2. An official statement issued to-day on aerial operations, says: In air-raid raids of the last eight days all of our pilots returned safely.

VIOLENT ARTILLERY.

PARIS, Oct. 2. An official issued by the war office at midnight reads: In Belgium and various points along the Aisne artillery is quite violent. On the right bank of the Meuse, after intense bombardment, it is reported this morning the Germans delivered a strong attack between Hill 344 and Sanqueux. The enemy assaulting detachments, under the violence of our fire, were able to reach our lines only at one point north of Hill 344. After a stubborn combat we recaptured the greater part of the advance elements where the enemy had gained a foothold. Last night enemy airplanes bombed the town of Toul causing several casualties.

AIR FIGHTING.

British Headquarters in France and Belgium, Oct. 2.—The body of the famous German aviator, Lieut. Vosse, who was recently reported in a German statement as missing, has been found within British lines. British aviators have already dropped messages behind German lines giving notification of his death. Lieut. Vosse was killed on Sept. 28 while engaged in a spectacular combat with a British aviator, fighting determinedly and magnificently. It is a peculiar coincidence that the famous French aviator Capt. Guynemere, lost his life about the same time in a battle over enemy territory and was reported missing until the Germans found and identified his body. The opponent of Vosse is one of the most brilliant British aviators who for the purposes of this narrative may be referred to as Brown, that not being his real name. Here is the story: A number of British planes were patrolling on the 23rd flying at a height of seven thousand the air recently and the aviators have had some remarkable experiences. One British lieutenant flying last Wednesday had just forced the enemy to pull down a big balloon when he was engaged by machine guns from the ground. He dived on the gunners and fired more than 100 rounds, dispersing the crew who fled leaving two of their number stretched on the ground. Continuing onward the lieutenant had nine separate combats with the enemy planes. Eight of these were indecisive but in the other case he brought down the German. In this combat he got to the right of the enemy plane, first killing the observer and then firing into the pilot and engine. The enemy spun down to the earth. The British aviator engaged in still some further fighting and returned home very much shot, one bullet having pierced the carbad of his flying cap.

NORWEGIAN LOSSES.

LONDON, Oct. 2. The Norwegian legation announces that during the week to September, 19 Norwegian merchant ships of the aggregate tonnage of 39,000 were lost and 20 Norwegian seamen killed and 11 reported missing.

Service of the Press.

(From the Quebec Telegraph.) The fact that the Montreal Mail has been forced to suspend publication owing to alleged financial difficulties brings home the desperate precariousness of newspaper publication as a business, and should arouse the public-spirited citizens of all communities to the need of a vigorous support of their local press organs. The Montreal Mail had the assistance of large interests and possessed a wide circulation, yet, such is the expense of issuing a paper at the present time, more than this is essential to success. The people as a whole must be brought to a realization of the inestimable value of their local press as a community builder. The avowed aim of the press is the advancement of the well-being both of the nation as a whole and of the centre where it labors. At a ridiculously low figure it performs the most supreme public service of giving to every man a succinct review of the news of the world. Its editorial columns are entirely devoted to his interest as the editor conceives it. In working tirelessly for the economic expansion of the city or town where its lot is cast it confers upon every business man, every citizen, a benefit which is not realized. In asking for the support, therefore, of the community in return—both business and moral support—the newspaper is only demanding its due for services rendered. The Press is the corporate voice of the people. We know of many old and respected business men of the city who have never appreciated the value of their newspaper and accorded them little if any financial support.

The War.

A "pessimist" among the Allies, who can read the war news of the past few days without being cured, is incurable. There is not a bad spot anywhere: even Russia shows an improvement, claiming a victory in the little fighting that has occurred on her long front. Elsewhere all is highly favourable. British victory in Mesopotamia, Italian victory on the Isonzo, British victory in Flanders and the confident expectation of one of the greatest victories of the war soon to be achieved—these summarize the salient features of the situation.

A sharp reaction of feeling has occurred in England in the past week. The Russian collapse, the regular drain upon shipping, air raids on London and apparent inactivity on all fronts had combined to create a widespread depression and even doubt. An electrical change has transformed the outlook, effected by Haig's great victory at Zonnebeke. Cadorna's renewed advance and the big cutting of the submarine losses. With these have synchronised the replies of Germany and Austria to the Pope's note, replies in which, through the insouciance of the one and the vagueness of both, acute opinion could discern a wavering and incipient despair. The cause is assigned to two things which have "happened," which are closely related and which, in the apparent absence of any really decided victories, it may be well for us to recognize clearly. They are to be seen in the present status of the submarine campaign and the present situation in Flanders. Quite apart from the terrible threat held out by the Italians, whose feet are firmly set on the road by which alone, Napoleon declared, Germany could be overcome, they are sufficient explanation of the enemy's falling heart.

It must be remembered that the submarine is still the greatest hope that Germany cherishes, though in fact her only real reliance. Last week's record showed the losses remarkably reduced to a tonnage of about 62,000. This contrasts well with the average August losses of 150,000, and is in fact only a little above the new tonnage output capacity of the Allies. It has induced an optimistic feeling in London based on the conviction that the improvement is due to conditions which make for its continuance. To-morrow's figures will probably show that it is justified. The comparison of the last two months with those previous is certainly very favourable.

As the U-boats are being conquered at sea, so they are being vitally assailed on land, for that is the true meaning of the Flanders battle. How that is progressing to-day's messages give indirect but sufficiently adequate testimony. The desperate German attacks, repeated in the face of terrible losses, demonstrate how highly they value not only the retention of their present positions but the recovery of those just lost. The essence of the situation is this. The great artillery superiority of the British makes attack less costly to them than defence to the Germans, while even the latter possibly find it better to attack than to remain and await the inevitable attack of our troops, the difference between the two being that our attacks invariably succeed while the enemy's as invariably fail. If he stays in his dug-outs he is subjected to a rain of high explosives. If he comes out to attack his ranks are decimated by shrapnel and machine guns. And so it goes on. The mere process of attrition would bring complete victory in time, but Haig is doing more than waste German man power. At Zonnebeke his big guns command the Ostend-Menin railway; will put his forces astride it. Ostend, of course, is served as well from Brussels, Antwerp and Ghent, but not so the battlefield. For its retention and integrity the paralleling Thourout-Houlers-Menin line is an absolute necessity. That line is the British objective. The attack has not yet been launched, but it is coming, and the exhausted Germans have well prepared the way for it. Germany has celebrated with great enthusiasm Field Marshal Hindenburg's seven-tieth birthday. The attention of his devout admirers might be drawn to Psalm 90, verse 10.

Newfoundland's New Governor.

SIR CHARLES ALEXANDER HARRIS, A NEWFOUNDLANDER, SUCCEEDS SIR WALTER DAVIDSON, No. 3506.

Code telegram from Secretary of State.

(Received Oct. 3rd, 1917.)

His Majesty is pleased to approve appointment of Charles Alexander Harris, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.V.O., of the Colonial Department to be Governor and Commander in Chief of Newfoundland in succession to you. Inform Ministers and publish. You will be informed later as to date of arrival.

LONG.
Sir Charles Alexander Harris was born in Newfoundland. His father was the Principal of Queen's College, St. John's.

He is 52 years of age but of exceptionally powerful physique and constitution. The names of his sons, S. S. Harris and S. P. Harris are known to every English schoolboy as famous international players at Association Football. Everybody likes Sir C. A. Harris. He has personal charm and tact, and there is nothing in official life that he does not know thoroughly.

Sir C. A. Harris had a brilliant career at Cambridge (he was at the same college as Sir Walter Davidson). He took his high honors. He was near the top of the Classical Tripos and won a Tancred Studentship at Lincoln's Inn.

He entered the Colonial Office after passing the stiff Civil Service Examination in 1879. His public service has since then been very varied and interesting. Apart from his official life his contributions are notable on economic subjects, and he also has a literary gift, which is so frequently met with in Newfoundlanders.

Sir C. A. Harris has many honours, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.V.O.

Sir,
I regret to inform you that the Admiralty has reported that Patrick J. Hennessey, Seaman of the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reserve, 2245X lost his life when the armed Merchant vessel Saint Ronald was torpedoed on 18th September, 1917.

His next of kin is his sister Mrs. Mary Noonan, of Bay de Verde.

Yours truly,
A. MacDERMOTT, Commander.

Tragic Death of Three Huntsmen.

Inspector General Hutchings is in receipt of information to the effect that a man named Benoit and his two sons, of Conan River, had met their death there recently under strange and mysterious circumstances. It appears that they went game hunting in a canoe and after they had been gone several days, another of Benoit's sons left home to search for the party. He found the bodies of the three men lying on the bank of the river. He concluded that the canoe had capsized and that the occupants were drowned, their bodies washing ashore. The body of the father was somewhat decomposed, the legs being eaten as if by the dog, the body of which was also found near. An investigation is now being held by the authorities.

The Firearm Menace Again.

There is much adverse criticism over the indiscriminate use of firearms where houses are. Yesterday cooper A. Samuelson, of the South Side, had a close call several times from being hit, having to quit work near his home and run under cover. Some of the windows in his house were struck by bullets, several panes of glass being penetrated by the leaden missiles. Detective Byrne is investigating the matter and it is likely that three lads who were shooting birds in that locality will have to report.

Eight lads were summoned to court to-day for shooting at birds in Freshwater Valley. Although outside the city limits, it is against the law, as there are houses close by. Judge Morris stated that the Valley used to be a favourite grounds for sport, but it was forbidden to discharge firearms there now because of the inhabitants close by. Each of the lads was put under bonds and made pay costs of the case.

Homeless Wanderer Sent to poor Asylum.

John Quinn, an unfortunate individual, aged 75 years, whose home has been the forest and the prison for a number of years past, was taken into custody last evening by the police, who were asked to act thus for humanity's sake. He was found in the woods in a pitiable state and he said he slept there all the summer. He appeared to-day before Judge Morris, who intimated that it was the custom of his predecessors to send this old man to prison for the winter, but he was not going to do that and pointed out that the Poor Asylum, maintained by the taxpayers of the city, was the proper place of shelter to send him to, and accordingly he told the Supt. of Police to arrange for poor Quinn's admission there.

A Returned Soldier's Complaint.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words regarding myself and all who have done their bit. When I came back from Ayr we got a royal reception at the station. Hon. J. R. Bennett told us we would be well done for, we would get our jobs back again the same as we were at before we enlisted.

Now I am not going to say anything against any of the committee; it is the business man. I was one of the six or seven returned soldiers which was paid off in the shell factory two weeks ago, and you all know this isn't right. Mr. Angel kept on slackers and everything else and put us off. Now Mr. Merchant, give us a chance; give us some work. How about putting off some of those men that never saw the inside of the C.L.B. Armoury or never went near a recruiting office? Let them do their bit and give the men that did it a chance. I am walking around six months. There are a good many more six months' men besides me and longer. Now, slackers, think of your noble countrymen and go over and help them. Don't let their regiment run down. Don't let it run short of men like it is now. Fill up the gaps that has fallen. We will take your jobs till you come back. I hope Mr. Merchant, we will have work soon.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
I remain yours,
DISGUSTED.

WORKING UP TO A LULL.
LONDON.
That extreme nervousness prevailing in Flanders and the infantry attacks of the Crown Prince Rupprecht of which daily are being made Field Marshal Haig's army is Ypres salient. These attacks are centered upon the salient in the line which is dangerously toward the railway, the ultimate gain by the English, Scotch and regiments would work in replenishing with supplies on a line to the south from base of Ostend and Zeebrugge. A Returned Soldier's Complaint.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words regarding myself and all who have done their bit. When I came back from Arry we got a royal reception at the station. Hon. J. R. Bennett told us we would be well done for, we would get our jobs back again the same as we were at before we enlisted.

Now I am not going to say anything against any of the committee; it is the business man. I was one of the six or seven returned soldiers which was paid off in the shell factory two weeks ago, and you all know this isn't right. Mr. Angel kept on slacking and everything else and put us off. Now Mr. Merchant give us a chance; give us some work. How about putting off some of those men that never saw the inside of the C.L.B. Armoury or never went near a recruiting office? Let them do their bit and give the men that did it a chance. I am walking around six months. There are a good many more six months' men besides me and longer. Now, slackers, think of your noble countrymen and go over and help them. Don't let their regiment run down. Don't let it run short of men like it is now. Fill up the gaps that have fallen. We will take your jobs till you come back. I hope Mr. Merchant, we will have work soon.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain yours, DISGUSTED.

At the Crescent.

The Crescent Picture Palace presents an all feature picture program to-day. "Sunshine" Mary Anderson and William Duncan are featured in a great drama of the west, entitled "Bill Peter's Kid," a Broadway star feature in three reels. Billie Reeves the great English Music Hall comedian and Mae Hotely in "His Body Guard," a very fine comedy drama produced by the Lubin Coy. and the Vitaphone Comedy Co. presents "Have You Heard About Tillie," a great feature comedy. Professor McCarthy plays a high class musical program. Don't miss seeing this big all feature mid-week show.

To-Day's Messages.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, To-Day. A report of the destruction of the United States Consulate at Dunkirk, the French seaport, by shells from German airships was brought here to-day by officers of an American merchant ship while waiting in the harbor. At this port, the officers said, it was necessary to take their ship six miles outside every night because the enemy aircraft were constantly bombing the town and harbor. When they were ready to depart the captain of the ship went to the United States Consul for his papers but found the building in ruins from German bombs dropped from the air.

EXPLOSION IN MUNITION FACTORY. LONDON, To-Day. A serious fire and explosion occurred at a munitions factory in the North of England. According to an official report much damage was done to the factory but thus far there have been no deaths. A number of workers were injured.

GOOD NEWS. STOCKHOLM, To-Day. The Swedish Ministry has resigned, but the King has requested the Ministers to retain their portfolios for the present.

WORKING UP TO A CLIMAX IN THE WEST. LONDON, To-Day. That extreme nervousness over approaching events pervades the German front in Flanders is indicated by the infantry attacks of the forces of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria which daily are being made against Field Marshal Haig's army on the Ypres salient. These attacks are being centred upon the apex of Haig's salient in the line which is pointing dangerously toward the Ostend-Lille railway, the ultimate gaining of which by the English, Scotch and Australian regiments would work havoc to the replenishing with supplies of the German line to the south from the naval base of Ostend and Zeebrugge. In storming ways of great strength the Germans made valiant efforts to wrest from the British the positions taken by them in the recent offensive, but everywhere, except at two small points, met with a decisive repulse under the hurricane of gas which swept against them from guns of all calibres, strewing the ground with dead and wounded. Numerous prisoners have been taken by the British and to a man they have evidenced gratification that they are safe from the inferno of bursting shells which the British without cessation are pouring in on the German holdings. The big guns of the Germans have not been idle during the fighting, but their strength is in no way comparable to that of the great array that Haig has brought up for the purpose of ending the German entrenchments and for warding off attacks and screening his infantry as they surge forward on new exploits. As yet there is no indication that the British Commander-in-Chief has the situation worked out to the point where he is prepared to turn loose his infantry for another smash across No Man's Land for further German-held territory, but doubtless from the great German activity this time is not far off. Meanwhile the French and Germans are engaged in violent artillery duels along the Arras front and Verdun sector, in both of which regions General Petain's armies again have withstood successfully vicious attacks from the troops of the German Crown Prince, especially near Croonne and Beaumont and between Hill 344 and Samagneux. Near Hill 344, the Germans entered French positions which later were recaptured in a counter attack. On the northern front in Russia, in the region south of Riga, the Russians are keeping up their offensive against the Germans. Following up their attacks of Sunday, in which gains of from 800 to 1,000 yards were made, the Russians again have surged forward and beaten back the enemy to a distance of one mile south of the Kroneberg-Spital-Groundell sector. Quiet still prevails on the east front further south and in Galicia and Roumania. In Mesopotamia the victory over the Turks at Ramadi, west of Bagdad, is greater than at first reported. In addition to capturing the town, nearly 4,000 prisoners were taken, and a large number of guns and quantities of war stores were captured, besides heavy casualties inflicted on the Ottomans. British and French armies are continuing the raids against positions held by the lines and French armies are carrying on further reprisals against German cities and towns for the bombardment of open French settlements. Large quantities of explosives have been dropped by French airmen on Stuttgart, Frankfurt-on-Main, Coblenz and Treves, while in conjunction with British aviators railway stations, airdromes and munitions depots have been effectively bombed.

attacks which were attempted were at once checked by our fire. On the Carso our patrols have been active both in the southern and northern sectors. By a surprise attack we gained some ground.

NO LOVE LOST THERE. AMSTERDAM, To-Day. The Vienna Zeitung, published by Count von Metell, who is a close friend of Dr. Vonn Söfzler, the Austrian Premier, says: "We fight for Austria and the Austrians, not for Germany, whose interests are not ours. We do not fight to keep Belgium or Courland."

DISPOSING OF ALSACE-LORRAINE. AMSTERDAM, To-Day. The Frankfurter Zeitung says, the visit of Count Von Hertling, Bavarian Premier, to Berlin is in connection with the pending negotiations respecting Alsace-Lorraine.

THE DELIGHTFUL TURK. LONDON, To-Day. A Turkish official received here says, with reference to operations in Ramadi, Mesopotamia: Early on Friday the enemy bombarded for several hours positions already evacuated, afterwards launching an attack with six battalions of infantry and one of cavalry. Fighting continued. Four enemy airplanes were brought down.

FIGHTING IN EAST AFRICA. LONDON, To-Day. An official statement on the campaign in East Africa reports heavy fighting on the line of the Matari River, 40 miles southwest of Lindi. The British are making good progress in the difficult country against stubborn resistance of the enemy, whose strong counter attacks have been repulsed. The British have retained the ground won.

BRITISH BIRTHDAY GIFT TO COME SOON. AMSTERDAM, To-Day. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's seventieth birthday was celebrated throughout Germany as a national festival. The Emperor and all the Imperial family sent greetings to him, expressing the hope that an early end of the war would crown his works. Various cities bestowed their freedom on him and special celebrations were held by the schools, coupled with collections for the war loan. The recipient of these demonstrations spent a day at headquarters. He was reported to be slightly indisposed.

GIVING THE HUNS A GRUELING. British Headquarters in France and Belgium, To-Day. The badly punished German troops east of Ypres to-day were resting on their arms after the reverses suffered yesterday when they attempted in periods of fierce counter attacks to drive the British back. Possibly the designation "resting" is a misnomer, for the enemy was sitting under a terrific bombardment from hundreds of big guns, which were deluging his back and forward areas with high explosives and tumbling his fortresses into a twisted mass of debris which formed the graves of the defenders and of the nervous wrecked, half stunned Germans. Prisoners who have lived under these bombardments can tell of the tragedy now being enacted along the German front in this section of Belgium. Thanks to the German attacks there has been hardly a moment's cessation of the intense artillery work of the British since last Wednesday, when Field Marshal Haig's troops executed SEVERE BLOCKADE OF NEUTRALS. LONDON, To-Day. The Gazette prints a proclamation prohibiting the exportation to Sweden, Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands of all articles except printed matter of all descriptions and personal effects accompanied by their owners.

REPRISALS WILL BE MADE. LONDON, To-Day. The Evening Standard says on the highest authority that the Government is paying special attention to the question of reprisals for German air raids on London and other places. It says there is no qualification about the decision of the Government to undertake very effective reprisals at the earliest moment consistent with the advice of the higher military command.

LONDON POLICEMEN NOW WEAR SHIRAZELM HELMETS. LONDON, To-Day. Special volunteer policemen who have been assisting the regular police since the beginning of the war in emergencies are receiving shirazelm helmets for protection during air raids. These helmets are similar to those worn in the trenches and hereafter will be a common sight in London. Soldiers on leave and ambulance drivers only used them during the raids. All London expected another raid to-night. Thousands sought early cover in underground tubes and others stayed near shelter ready to seek it in a moment's notice. Up to 10 p.m. London was not raided. There is still a possibility as the moon does not set until after daylight.

GETTING COLD FEET. LONDON, To-Day. The Wilhelmshaven Tageblatt publishes two pages of advice warning people against possible air raids by Entente aviators.

ITALIAN REPORT. ROME, To-Day. There has been moderate artillery activity along the whole front, says to-day's statement from the War Office. On the Bainsizza Plateau local their latest offensive. Captured Germans say their forward defenses have been greatly demoralized by this ceaseless pounding. Relief and rations parties venture out only to be turned back or make their miserable way forward by circuitous routes to the men holding advanced shell holes, who have often been compelled to hold on without water and food. The badly needed ammunition never reaches its destination. Every approach to the German lines is covered by the British guns, making the movements of the enemy infantry an arduous process. Naturally, the question arises what effect this is having on the morale of the German troops. It is generally admitted among the prisoners that the morale of their men has deteriorated since the beginning of the battles in Flanders. Divisions who have been through one siege in the German front lines one time resent being used a second time in this position. This marks a striking change from the former attitude of the German troops, who have worked as untiring machines to carry out the unquestioned orders issued by their officers. Meanwhile the spirit of the British troops is daily climbing higher.

CANADIAN POLITICS. OTTAWA, To-Day. There was no important development in connection with the political situation up to late last night. The Cabinet Council was again in session in the afternoon, but apart from a couple of appointments Sir Robert Borden had no announcement to make. Rumours as to the possible retirement of Laurier from the Liberal leadership persist in some quarters but lack confirmation.

ENGLAND WILL RETALIATE. LONDON, To-Day. That the British Government contemplates some new and effective steps to counteract the German air raids on England is borne out in speeches made by Major General Sir Francis Lloyd, Director of the Defences of London and Dr. Addison, Former Minister of Munitions, at a meeting in the London district yesterday, called to discuss the recent raids. Dr. Addison remarked that the Germans had got the start of humanity in the different forms of ruthlessness, such as sinking unarmed ships with submarines and bombing open towns but he added: "I can tell you this, we have got the mastery of the submarine menace and I am perfectly confident that before long we shall achieve just as great a supremacy in air, whether over this country or over their own."

KEEPING UP APPEARANCES. LONDON, To-Day. Reuter's Correspondent at British Headquarters in France telegraphs as follows: "As a result of the fighting arising from the German counter attacks of Monday, our positions between Cameron House seem largely if not quite restored, whilst elsewhere we advanced over a hundred yards, owing to gallantry of the Welsh troops who drove back the enemy. I learn that the ground in front of our lines is strewn with German corpses. The enemy suffered frightfully in unsuccessful attempts to regain some shell holes in the area which he professes to regard as tactically valuable. There is a considerable proportion of Poles and Alsatians (?) among the new troops which the Germans have hurried up to defend the Menin ridge. The enemy are desperately anxious to impress their people at home with the extent of their victory in Flanders, for which they are resorting to their old tricks. The mere handful of prisoners they have taken in a town where a number of prisoners previously taken had been assembled. The prisoners are marched through the town where they are cinematographed for the benefit of the Berlin public.

SURVIVORS OF FRENCH BARQUE RESCUED. RIO JANEIRO, To-Day. A Brazilian tugboat yesterday picked up off the coast a Shalaboot with 14 members of the crew of the French barque Biarritz, burned at sea on September 30th following an explosion due to spontaneous combustion in her cargo of coal. Another boat containing the captain of the barque and other members of the crew is missing.

EFFECTIVE BOMBING RAIDS. LONDON, To-Day. On the night of Sunday, says an official statement, naval aircraft dropped bombs on the St. Denis Western airdrome, which fell among the hangars and set fire to one on the south side. The fire spread and was visible thirty miles away. Bombs were also dropped on Zeebrugge look gates. Another bombing raid on St. Denis Western was made at midday on Monday, seven direct hits being observed, and also two sheds set on fire

SWEDISH GOVERNMENT RESIGNS. STOCKHOLM, To-Day. The Swedish Cabinet resigned yesterday, following which King Gustave summoned the leaders of the chief party in the Riksdag to urge them to use their best efforts to form a Coalition Cabinet.

NO, BUT A FEW STRONG HINTS. AMSTERDAM, To-Day. Germany has made no proposals whatever for a separate peace either to France or Britain. Dr. von Kuelshorn, German Foreign Secretary, makes this announcement, according to an official despatch received here from Berlin, in answering a speech made by General Verkhovskiy, the Russian Minister of War, before the Democratic Congress in Petrograd.

THE TIMES ON JAPAN AND AMERICA. LONDON, To-Day. The address made in New York last week by Viscount Ishih, head of the Japanese Mission to the United States, the Times in a leading editorial on America and Japan says, as a result as unforeseen by Germany? as it is unwelcome, of years of intrigue on both sides of the Pacific which she has spent in a vain effort to arouse enmity between the United States and Japan. The Times adds that a close union between the two great Pacific Powers, to which the reception of the Ishih Mission gives new strength and new significance, will both hasten the deliverance of the world from the German menace and prepare for future peace in the Far East. "For both reasons," the Times says, "it is welcome to the Allies and doubly welcome to England, whose interest in the tranquility and welfare of these regions is so profound."

in the southeast corner of the airdrome. A large shed on the south side of the airdrome is reported as having been set on fire on Sunday, the hangars being completely gutted. All our machines returned safely.

ALLIED AIRMEN DESTROYING COMMUNICATIONS. LONDON, To-Day.

Despatches from Holland gathered by frontier correspondents say that the Allied airmen are playing havoc with German railway communications and military establishments in Belgium. On Sunday night, according to the Telegram, railway communication with Ghent was interrupted. Another correspondent says that a bridge was destroyed just before the arrival of a military train, the engine of which fell through the opening, derailing several cars, which were then bombed.

PLUCKY FEAT OF AIRMAN. LONDON, To-Day.

One exciting experience was that of one of our young airmen, who crossed the enemy line near Zonnebeke at a height of about two thousand feet. He dived upon a little party of about fifteen Huns and scattered them with his machine gun. A little further on he dropped eight bombs upon an ammunition dump. Being attacked by superior forces he dived and came down right through the artillery barrage into our own lines. His machine was badly crippled and he himself was wounded in the leg. Two stretcher bearers ran out to his assistance and got him into the stretcher. As they were carrying him back a shell burst and killed one and knocked over the other stretcher bearer. The wounded aviator, half dazed though he was, got up to help the injured man when another shell burst in almost the same spot and he was hit himself. Thereupon, although suffering acute pain, the aviator succeeded in limping away to cover. The exploit of flying men in attacking what looked like an entire battalion on the march, inflicting the rest was casualties and dispersing the rest was a fine account of daring. Four British planes fell in with nine German machines and immediately attacked them. As a result, one of the enemy disappeared in flames and three more crashed down out of control and another went down apparently out of control. All our machines returned safely.

THE EXPECTED VERSION. AMSTERDAM, To-Day. A despatch from Stuttgart says: On Sunday night Stuttgart twice was attacked by enemy airplanes. The majority of bombs fell in the streets and open squares, causing no considerable damage, aside from broken windows and smashed pavements. The despatch adds that two men were killed and four women and a boy injured and that the bombing airplanes were driven off by anti aircraft guns.

GETTING A GOVERNMENT FOR RUSSIA. PETROGRAD, To-Day. Confidence is increasing in Government circles that the coalition idea will receive the sanction of the Democratic Congress. There also are indications that the plan for a preliminary Parliament, advocated by certain strong groups in the Congress, will not meet with opposition from the Government, provided that the property-owning classes are given a fair representation in it.

PREMIER PROMISES REPRISALS. LONDON, To-Day. A crowd of poor people in the southwest district of London yesterday appealed to Premier Lloyd George, says the Daily Mail, for reprisals against Germany for air raids on London. The Premier said to the crowd, "We will have to get back at them and we will give it to them soon. We shall bomb Germany with our pound interest." The crowd cheered the promise of the Premier wildly. The Premier had just completed a tour of the districts with Viscount French.

Woman Who Does Not Go Over Her Bills

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

You would hardly think she would exist in any but the richest classes; the woman who does not go over her bills. But she exists everywhere among rich, poor and middle class folks. She is the dishonest tradesman's joy and the struggling husband's heaviest burden.

Of course one may trade with tradesmen of whose honesty one is absolutely sure. But what Tradesman Never Makes Mistakes!

But can one be equally sure that they never make a mistake? I trade with perfectly honest tradesmen. Last night I went over my bills for the past two weeks. In one account I found a duplicated slip. In some way or other my purchase of a dozen oranges and a half pint of cream had been charged twice. I also found a slip on which the total of the day's purchases had been set down and then added in. It was a small matter—(seventeen cents) but the same thing would have happened if it had been several dollars. Besides which, the seventeen cents is as valuable to me as to the grocer and I am not ashamed to ask for it.

He Added In The Day of The Month. On another bill I found that the fruit man had added in the day of the month (which happened to be thirty). I wanted that thirty cents too. These are small items but on one bill this summer I found some lumber charged up at so much the hundred instead of the thousand feet—a mistake which would have lost me about seven dollars. Doubtless the thrifty woman who always goes over her bills is questioning the existence of any other sort of woman. But I know some of them personally and in a magazine the other day I read an article which gives an amusing (if it were not so horrifying) proof of her common-sense.

Eye Women Who Don't Know What They Have Bought. A grocer during a rush hour carried out a ham and put it in his customer's limousine himself. Afterwards he could not remember which customer it was, so he told his clerk to charge it to seven of the limousine owning customers, expecting that those who were wrongly charged would protest. At the date of writing five had paid for that ham without protest.

Another grocer confessed that when he wasn't making enough profit he added some items to the bills of his non question asking customers. Those who protested were entirely satisfied when he adjusted the matter. Some women aren't careful about their bills because they are too lazy. Others hate to be always protesting about little items. They think it is mean.

It is worse than mean to put the extra burden of such carelessness on their husbands. Especially in these times. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited Gents.—A customer of ours cured a very bad case of distemper in a valuable horse by the use of MINARD'S LINIMENT. Yours truly, VILANDIE FRERES.

POLITICS.

Politics is a flourishing industry which provides employment for thousands of American citizens who otherwise would face want.

Politics provides employment for thousands of American citizens who otherwise would face want.

It was the intention of the founders of this republic that every man should be a politician and help sweep out the Augean Stables once in every four years, but the sweeping is now largely confined to professionals. If it were not for the professional politician there would be no primary elections or secondary congressmen, and the country might have to submit to being run by a king. This would do away with a lot of fourth assistant attorney generals and empty the public trough of a large number of feet, but it would entail untold hardship upon a great many worthy citizens who are not inured to labor and compel them to learn some disagreeable trade, like piling up dress goods or working in the garden.

The two principal brands of politics in use are labeled Republican and democratic, and both are used from time to time as a rudder for the ship of State. Whenever the people rise up and change rudders vast hordes of civil service employees prepare to return to the quiet life of the

Fallibility of Engineers

(From the New York Post.)

While the central span of the new St. Lawrence bridge at Quebec is being raised into place, people will be reminded that science has not always been infallible as the layman calmly assures. We always imagine that the decision of capitalists or governments to build a tunnel, erect a tower, or extend a railway constitutes the most important part of the enterprise; that thereafter it will only be necessary to give certain orders to certain engineers, and the thing is as good as done. Several years later when the announcement appears that the two halves of a tunnel have met under a river, only an inch or so out of perfect alignment, or that a railroad has been successfully hung off the face of a cliff on cantilevers, through a Rocky Mountain pass, or a thousand miles of falls have been hung across the desert, nobody is enthusiastic or surprised. The efficiency of modern engineers is taken as a matter of course. Only when there is a failure, as in the case of the St. Lawrence bridge, or the Panama slides, or the right-of-way across Salt Lake, which swallowed up so many of the Southern Pacific's millions, does the public marvel. Here you have the greatest possible compliment to engineers. They are not supposed to have the word "fail" in their bright lexicon. And as a matter of fact they seldom have.

We should all take an interest in politics, but it should not be allowed to interfere with business except on election day.

A SAD BUSINESS.

WALT MASON

I shoot my Germans sadly; I do not butcher gladly, but with a poignant grief; I hate to meet a stranger, and a nd, while my life is in danger, convert him into beef. I don't enjoy my slaying; m u c h rather I'd be having, or milking a blindled c o w s; but forth I go a-scouring to kill the fees by shooting and leave some widowed fraus. In tales of blood and thunder the hero is a wonder who fairly lusts for gore; in every shilling thriller the soldier is a killer who seeks for victims more. But is there any mortal this side the red hot portal who truly loves the fray, who does not shrink and shiver when shooting lights or liver from some unlucky jay? If any gent is killing because he's glad and willing to leave dead men behind, he may be some one's hero; with me he's down to zero—I do not like his kind. Not gaffy; but with sorrow some rusty nails I borrow and load my ancient gun, not smilingly, but weeping, I am to amputh creeping to pot the passing Hun.

Here are Ten Demandments of Business.

A business firm in Western Canada has hung in a conspicuous place in its works the following "Ten Demandments" for the benefit of its employees:

- 1.—Don't lie. It wastes my time and yours. I am sure to catch you in the end, and that is the wrong end.
- 2.—Watch your work, not the clock. A long day's work make a long day short; and a short day's work makes my face long.
- 3.—Give me more than I expect, and I will give more than you expect. I can afford to increase your pay if you increase my profits.
- 4.—You owe so much to yourself you cannot afford to owe anybody else. Keep out of debt, or keep out of my shop.
- 5.—Dishonesty is never an accident. Good men, like good women, never see temptation when they meet it.
- 6.—Mind your own business, and in time you'll have a business of your own to mind.
- 7.—Don't do anything here which hurts your self-respect. An employee who is willing to steal for me is willing to steal from me.
- 8.—It is none of my business what you do at night. But if dissipation affects you the next day and you do half as much as I demand, you'll last half as long as you hoped.
- 9.—Don't tell me what I'd like to hear, but what I ought to hear. I don't want a valet to my vanity, but one for my dollars.
- 10.—Don't kick if I kick. If you're worth while correcting you're worth while keeping. I don't waste time correcting specks out of rotten apples.

Big Bank and Shore Fishery West.

The S. S. Fortia, Capt. J. Keon, returned from Bonne Bay and intermediate ports last evening, after an excellent round trip. On her way east the ship called at North Sydney for bunker. She brought a full freight and the following saloon passengers:

Messrs. J. S. Ayre, S. Butt, C. James, Revs. G. Elliott, G. Hall, Fr. Dubordieu, L.-Corp. Pittman, P. Howlett, M. Way, L. Gorman, S. Bonnell, F. Stapleton, J. Hillier, J. O'Brien, J. Flemming, L. A. Shannon, W. E. Simms, W. J. Walsh, James Daley, Chas. Daley, Jas. Hartery, John Hartery, E. Flemming, Sr., E. Flemming, J. W. Daley, Privates Kilfoy, Willmont, Roberts, Monlton; Messrs. James Somerton, Hall, Baker, Paul Hollett, Nolan, McCornack, Daley, Wood, Gibbons, Yall; Misses J. Walsh, Allen, Way, Frances, Rose, Kilfoy, Pittman, Nolan, Gibbons and fifteen second class.

The shore fishery to the westward has been a phenomenal success, the total voyage landed being the highest on record. Equally good has been the Bank fishery which is now nearly closed. The average catch per sch. at "finish up" time, it is figured, will be about 4,000 quintals, although some of the big 'jowlers' will easily knock down 6,000 each. All the fleet are now on the Labrador coast on their final trip for the season. They will return to their respective home ports within the next three weeks when the voyage ends.

Mother! Give Child "Syrup of Figs" if Tongue is Coated

If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver, and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Listen Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Slight Fires.

A slight fire broke out at the home of Mrs. Conway, Military Road, yesterday afternoon, when sparks from a nearby chimney set fire to the roof, the Central firemen responded but their services were not required as the application of a bucket of water was sufficient to quench the blaze.

At 7.45 p.m. yesterday the Central and West End Companies were summoned to Rossiter's Lane, where a fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp which ignited the walls. The house was occupied by Mrs. W. Parsons and is situated in one of the most congested sections of the city. The house wherein the fire started stands only a few yards from the West End Station, and within two minutes after the "still" alarm was given the blaze was under control.

Boy Makes Gruesome Find.

MISSING FISHERMAN FOUND.

As mentioned in the Telegram yesterday the body of John Murray, the missing fisherman of Fox Harbour, was discovered in the water at Job's wharf, but owing to the lateness of the hour an extended reference could not be made. The facts are as follows:—

About 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon a 14-year-old boy named Charles Johnson, of 16 Young Street, was sitting on a pile of heavy lumber at the western end of Job's premises and at a point between Job's west wharf and Neal's wharf, when on looking down into the water he observed a large dark object sway backwards and forwards in the slow movement of the water. On looking closer he discovered it was the form of a man, and having read in the papers of a man being missing he ran and told his story to Mr. Ernest Yabsley, an employe of Job Bros. & Co., who on learning the facts called Mr. James Dillon, a fellowworker, and together they succeeded in recovering the body. In the meantime the police were informed, Sergt. Savage and three constables responding. The tide being low the depth of the water where the body was discovered was about eight feet. Some difficulty was experienced in pulling the body to the surface, as it was attached to a 60 lb. trap anchor, by means of a piece of rope fastened around the victim's neck. The body on being placed on the wharf was wrapped in a barked sail and conveyed on a stretcher through the street to the morgue where it was stripped of the clothing by the police. Two fishermen of Fox Harbour identified the body as that of the missing man and after a post mortem examination had been held the remains were given to an undertaker to be prepared and sent to Fox Harbour for burial.

MADE PREPARATIONS. In order to secure the anchor which was found attached to his body, the deceased had had to climb over several hundred casks of oil and other barrels situated at the north west corner of Job's premises. Having laid hold of it he must have experienced greater difficulty in removing it to the water's edge, and the fact that he succeeded in doing so without being heard or seen by those nearby shows that the unfortunate man must have laid his plans during the day and at night ended his life in the manner described. It is believed that the man was insane and having decided to do away with himself lay in hiding from the time he left Juke's schooner between the hours of 12 and 1 p.m. on Wednesday.

Deceased did well at the fishery this season but was in a poor state of health, his coming to the city being for the purpose of entering the General Hospital for medical treatment, but owing to every bed being occupied he could not be immediately admitted.

Left to mourn are a widow and six children. He was about 45 years of age.

Warned This Captain That the Kidneys Were Responsible for His Pains and Aches—Freed of Pain and Suffering by a Well-Known Medicine.

Hereford, Que., October 3rd.—Captain Peabody is well known all through this section, and his cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has aroused great interest in this great medicine.

The Captain had been suffering for a long time, and could never get any treatment to afford lasting relief until he began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
Captain A. Peabody, Hereford, Que., writes:—"For years I suffered from indigestion, rheumatism and neuralgia. Lightning-like pains would shoot all through my body, and I also had severe pains over my left kidney and through the hips. I doctored for years and tried all kinds of remedies, but the only result was money spent without relief. At last I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac of his Kidney-Liver Pills and decided to try them. One box made such a change that I sent for five more. Before I had finished them the pains in my kidneys and hips had disappeared, and I was clear of those sharp, shooting pains through the body. I still take these Pills occasionally to keep my bowels regular, and would not be without them, as I have them to thank for my cure."
"I can also speak highly of Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder and Linseed and Turpentine. The former cured me of catarrh in the head, which caused frequent headaches. I am completely cured of this now, and breathe freely as when a boy. The Linseed and Turpentine proved of great benefit for a bad cough which bothered me continually for three winters. Last winter I took one bottle of the Linseed and Turpentine, and have not been bothered with a cough since."
Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Don't be talked into accepting anything said to be just as good. Imitations and substitutes only disappoint.

Your Boys and Girls.
Baby's shirts, whether cotton and wool or silk and wool, should be washed in water that is not too warm and rinsed in water of the same temperature as the first water. Use a good white laundry soap. Never wring out the shirts, but shake them and hang them so that the necks will not stretch, or put them on stretchers.
Rinse out the arms sideways now and then while drying, so they will not get too tight in the armpits. If the mother washes the shirts herself and follows these directions, she will find that a wooden stretcher is scarcely necessary either for the stockings or shirts.
It costs less to buy where CLEANLINESS and SANITATION is the first consideration. Try ELLIS' SAUSAGES, they have made a name already.
