The Imprisoned Heiress

—OR—

The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER XIV.

The apartments of Lord and Lady Egremont were situated directly beneath these "haunted rooms," and a private staircase led from her ladyship's dressing-room to the ante-chamber of the closed suite.

While the mysterious young girl was thus reclining in her pretty retreat, Toplift ascended the private stairs, came through the ante-room and the larger apartment, and entered her presence.

The woman appeared to be in an excellent humor, held up her hand, in which she clasped a small leathern case, with something of triumph in her air.

"Taking possession of an easy-chair she said, pleasantly:

"Dreaming as usual, Lady Almee. Are you thinking what you shall do to-day, whether you will paint, or draw, or play and sing, or embroider those pretty white velvet slippers?"

"I have not been thinking of any of those things, nurse," answered the young girl, in tones as sad and musical as the voice of an Aeolian harp. "I've been reading 'Childe Harold,' and that made me think what a riddle 'he is. I should so love to see those countries I've been reading about. I wish I could sail down between 'those banks of the Rhine,' and see those storied castles—"

"But you can't," interrupted Toplift, "and your vain wishes can only harm you. Make up your mind to make the best of your lot. I am sure it is pleasant enough. Half the girls in the world would give anything to be in your place."

"Even at the cost of their liberty?"

"Yes, indeed. What is liberty worth if one's life must be spent in the cold and the storm, ill-fed and worse clothed? I am shut up here nearly as much as you are, but I am thankful and graceful instead of repining. It is happiness to me to have such a home after my early life."

"But you were free then?"

"Yes, I was free, Almee, if freedom consists in earning one's own bread, and being turned away at the caprice of one's employer. But I found it a hard life. I never had a half-penny at the end of the year, for I must dress well, and if I had been taken ill I must go to a hospital. How I longed for a permanent home then! Heaven only knows the temptation I had—"

She paused abruptly, as if she had unconsciously drifted upon a painful subject. The next moment she continued:

"Lady Egremont took compassion upon me—I was a governess in the family of one of her relatives—and offered me a situation as your governess and nurse. That was sixteen years ago nearly."

"And I am sixteen now?"

"Yes, you are sixteen now. I came here when the heiress was about two years old, and you were a tiny infant. You are two years younger than she. But I was talking about your enviable lot. You ought to be the happiest girl in the world, my pet. What is there you can wish for that you have not?"

"A great deal," answered Almee, wistfully. "Do you suppose, nurse, that I will be shut up here always?"

"I don't know. You must ask Lady Egremont. You know if there is anything you would like to have you have only to mention it."

"I cannot have what I want—my freedom," sighed the young prisoner, letting fall her book. "But we won't talk about it. What have you in your hand, nurse?"

Toplift lifted the leather case from her lap, and drew nearer her youthful mistress.

"It's a present my lady just gave me, my pet," she said, opening it. "See there!"

She displayed the garnet set which Lady Egremont had given her, and the Lady Almee praised its beauty sufficient to please her governess, who tried on the jewels before the long mirror, declaring that they must have been purchased for her, and that she had always thought them too simple and inexpensive for Lady Egremont.

"She was very good to give them to you, Dorcas," said Almee.

Toplift shrugged her shoulders.

"Good!" she said. "So she was good to herself! You see, Lady Almee my lady gave me a downright scolding yesterday, and began it again this morning, and I wouldn't stand it. I told her so. I said, here have I been faithful to you all these years, and at the first remissness you find fault and blame me. I said, I will not endure it. Then her ladyship answered that she had not meant to hurt my feelings, but only to make me more careful for the future, and she gave me this set which I have always wanted. Her ladyship is very kind when she likes to be."

The governess resumed her seat opposite the mirror, and regarded the reflection of her newly acquired treasures.

"I suppose she blamed you on my account?"

"Yes, on your account, Lady Almee. My lord and my lady are both very angry on account of your visit to Lord Ashcroft's room."

"Is his name Lord Ashcroft?" interrupted the maiden, musingly.

"Yes, Lionel! Lord Ashcroft—that's his name. My lady doesn't know for certain that he saw you, and I wish you'd tell her he was asleep if she asks you—"

"I shall never tell a falsehood," interrupted the Lady Almee, proudly.

"Of course not. But you might let her ladyship think so, without saying it in so many words."

"I will not act a falsehood."

The woman frowned, but her young charge looked at her with such a serenely resolute expression that she forced a smile, and said:

"Well, Lady Almee, have you own way. I can stand scoldings, I think. And most likely his lordship thought you a ghost. So no harm has been done. But you must not escape from these rooms again. My lady said that you were seen in the corridor last evening by her nephew, and that there is danger to us all if you venture out again."

"The gentleman that ran into his room and locked the door on seeing me is her nephew, then, and my cousin?" inquired the maiden.

"Yes; he is Lylo Indor. But I've something else to tell. My lord saw the boat-keeper last night, and learned of your mad freak the other evening, when you lighted that colored Chinese lantern, and stood at the window. He was in a dreadful rage with me about it. Lord Ashcroft and the boatman saw you. My lord says it must not occur again. Unless you promise not to venture out of these rooms again, I shall be obliged to lock you into your bedroom."

"So sure as you attempt such a thing, Dorcas," said the little lady, a bright scarlet flush burning suddenly in her clear cheeks, and her voice trembling with indignation, "I will tell mamma that you have got into the habit of taking opium, and are no longer trustworthy."

"Oh, you won't do that, Lady Almee, my pretty pet," cried the governess, in an agony of fear. "Her ladyship would never forgive me. Haven't I been good and tender to you all your life? Haven't I loved you like myself? Have I often been harsh to you?"

The little maiden appeared to reflect.

Toplift had indeed been very good and kind to her all her life, and she was attached to her in return.

She made a reply to that effect.

"Then you won't tell me, I'm sure you won't. Opium is such a comfort to me. The doctor ordered it—he did, indeed, a long while ago."

"Very well, Dorcas, I will make a compromise with you. You shall gratify yourself, and I will gratify myself, if I can."

From this decision the Lady Almee could not be swerved, and her governess finally relinquished the attempt.

"My lady will be up to see you this evening, Lady Almee," she said, after a pause. "If she should scold you for your late imprudence, I know you will not betray me."

"Did you say his name was Lionel?" inquired the maiden, irrelevantly.

"Whose? Oh, Lord Ashcroft's! Yes, his name is Lionel."

"It is a beautiful name," mused Almee, looking into the fire, and pressing her dainty cheek more heavily upon her pillow. "He is very handsome. I think he is a thousand times handsomer than any picture I have. Everybody must love him."

The popularity of the large hat is partly explained by the change it affords.

Flowers and foliage of kid applique are used on a turban of artichoke green felt.

New Sailless Sailing Ship

MAY MEAN SUCCESS OF AGE-OLD EFFORT TO HARNESS WIND-POWER.

By JACKSON V. JACOBS.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Man has speculated for ages on a method of harnessing and employing the force of the winds, just as he has tried to make the tides serve his ends, but so far the accomplishments in either direction have not proceeded beyond a sailing ship. This tremendously vast element has awaited its conqueror. Perhaps that lucky man is Anton Flettner, whose sailless sailing-ship has aroused world wide curiosity.

This sailless-ship is not just a delusion on paper, it is an accomplished fact.

This ship is a 2,000-ton freighter, instead of with masts removed. Instead of masts, two steel cylinders three feet in circumference rise from the keel, through the deck, and stand some sixty-five feet in the air. The cylinders are set in motion by a small electric motor, and the ship moves off, propelled by the utilization of air currents. One man can operate the whole apparatus.

Details Kept a Secret.

How do the cylinders work? Here Flettner has kept that point to himself and to the group of men surrounding him. This group includes the Krupps, who equipped his ship, and Hamburg-American Line officials interested in his patents. No explanation has yet been made of the method of catching enough power from the wind to drive the ship.

Scientific men point out that a sixty-five foot cylinder three feet around would offer little resistance to the wind, and therefore could not generate much power, according to all accepted principles.

But Flettner seems to have a new principle, or a new method based on an old one. He says that his plan is a development of the Magnus law, discovered in the middle of the last century by another German. This law—briefly stated—maintains that a cylinder revolving in a current of air will exert pressure at the right angles to the current.

The Magnus law, however, has nothing to do with electricity. Flettner, it is suggested, may have hit upon a new means to store the energy derived from the wind by some other method than the generation of electrical power. If this is true, the influence of his discovery will extend much further than marine power. It would in all probability open a chapter in scientific work to that which Benjamin Franklin introduced with his kite.

Has Established Reputation.

It is said that plans are already under way to erect a 300-foot cylinder of the Flettner type in Berlin to generate electrical power.

Flettner says that his plan will reduce the cost of operating a ship by 80 per cent. If so, he may be able to solve a problem that has seriously affected the commerce of the world. Ship operating costs never were higher than to-day, save at the peak of the war, and there is no early prospect of a reduction. This applies especially to American shipping, which is controlled by law in regard to American crews, the eight-hour day and such matters.

If a method has been found to reduce crews by something like two-thirds, at the same moment doing away with the cost of coal and the loss of space needed for storage, then ocean communication will indeed have entered upon a new period of its long evolution.

Flettner is not a newcomer in marine invention. He perfected a ruder some years ago that bears his name. He is now Director of Aerodynamic at the Institute of Amsterdam and is familiarly known to scientific men as an experimenter along original lines. His present affiliation with the Krupps and the leading steamship interests of Germany has been accepted as evidence that his discovery is a matter of the first consequence.

Japan Wins Point at Opium Session

Geneva Witnesses Violent Outburst—Conference Considered Failure.

Geneva, Nov. 25.—The Palace of the League of Nations was the scene yesterday of another sensational public meeting on the opium problem, when the Far Eastern opium conference was revived.

After words, accusations, and almost violent in nature, between the Japanese, British and Indian delegates, an agreement was reached in principle on the matter, which was one of the causes for the collapse of the first opium conference.

This matter concerns the freedom of Japan to import opium and recognition of import certificates by British authorities, when Japan transmits her opium at Hong Kong to be sent in various directions.

Despite this accord, however, the first conference is generally regarded as practically a complete failure, because it provides no effective system for putting an end to opium smoking in the Far East.

BON MARCHÉ.

It was that object for which the conference was called. When yesterday's session opened, Mr. Sugimura, of the Japanese delegation, announced that Japan would not sign the convention as drafted, unless Japanese certificates were approved. He continued his offensive so hard that the British delegation finally gave in to the extent of agreeing to recognize the validity of all certificates issued by a Japanese consul. This was considered a victory for Japan.

The Indian delegation contended that all Governments could not be placed on the same level and hence the necessity for selection recognizing opium purchases as legitimate. The delegates themselves admit that the only effective clause in the convention, which probably will be concluded next week, is that the Far Eastern powers agree to meet in five good.

In More than a Million Homes

More than two hundred million cans of Pet Milk—the original unsweetened, evaporated milk—were used last year in more than a million American homes.

For Babies and Children:—Pet Milk furnishes safe, wholesome, normally nourishing food.

For Cooking:—Pet Milk enriches every dish—gives that "cream and butter" flavor—and costs no more than ordinary milk.

In Place of Cream:—On tables everywhere Pet Milk is used in place of cream—at less than half the cost.

Pet Milk is pure, fresh milk, concentrated—more than twice as rich as ordinary milk—sterilized—made scientifically clean.

For nearly forty years it has been "Milk at its Best."

Britain Will Not Permit Any Interference in Egyptian Dispute by League or Powers

Allenby Warns British Ministers of Plots Formed Against Their Lives.—Soiwet Ambassador Warmly Greeted by French Communists --- British Foreign Secretary Leaves to Attend League Council Meeting.

BALDWIN ON EGYPTIAN ISSUE. LONDON, Dec. 5. Premier Baldwin, in the course of a speech at Albert Hall to-night, declared that nothing was further from the truth than to say that the British government sought to take advantage of the murder of Sir Lee Stack, in order to restore the protectorate in Egypt or undermine the rights of the Egyptian Government. Reservations made when independence was granted, said the Premier, remain open to negotiations, to the essential considerations that foreign interests must be protected and communications kept secure, while our obligations and duties to Sudan demand that we should protect the right of the Sudanese no less than those of the Egyptians. But none of these considerations are incompatible with a mutual agreement which we hope and believe will be secured.

BRITISH CABINET MINISTERS MARKED FOR ASSASSINATION. LONDON, Dec. 5. The British cabinet ministers have been placed under special police protection, according to the Daily Mail. The precaution has been taken because of information received from the headquarters of Viscount Allenby, British High Commissioner in Egypt, that a plot has been discovered to assassinate prominent members of the British Government.

BISHOP ON TEMPERANCE. LONDON, Dec. 5. (Canadian Press Cable)—It is a great misfortune that the temperance cause has largely drifted into the hands of total abstinents, declared Bishop Henson, of Durham, to-day. It is a pity, too, that the churches have tied themselves to a policy which is not dictated by their religion. Modern conditions ought to be met by a new type of public house. I am opposed to state control of liquor for political seasons. It might become an intolerable menace to individual liberty.

SEVEN KILLED IN COLLISION. OAKLAND, Calif., Dec. 5. Seven persons are dead, two of them women and thirty injured as a result of a rear end collision between a Sacramento short line car and a street car on the Kay route suburban on the Sacramento mole to-day. The Sacramento train crashed into the electric. One of the dead women was decapitated. C. C. Loughlin is the only identified victim.

ANOTHER BANK ROBBERY. MONTREAL, Dec. 5. Four armed men this morning entered the Sherrington branch of the Bank of Hochelaga, held up the manager with revolvers, seized several hundred dollars and made off in a high powered car. Sherrington is thirty-seven miles from Montreal on the Canadian National line, running to Massena Springs, N.Y.

CANNONADING ON ESTHONIAN-RUSSIAN FRONTIER. Leningrad, Dec. 5. Heavy cannonading and incendiary fires are reported from the town of Narva, near the Esthonian-Russian frontier. The disturbance is believed to be in connection with the recent Communist uprising in Esthonia.

ARCHER GOVERNOR. GENERAL OF SUDAN. CAIRO, Dec. 5. A royal decree was issued to-day nominating Sir Geoffrey Archer as Governor General of the Sudan.

RUSSIA JOINS THE WETS. MOSCOW, Dec. 4. Soviet Russia to-day joined the wet countries of Europe when Council of the people's Commissars issued a decree, permitting the manufacture of and sale of liquors up to the strength of thirty per cent, which is but five per cent less than pre-war alcoholic standard. The decree is intended to increase the Government's revenues and stop the illicit sale of alcohol, which has been widespread.

GREET A BROTHER. PARIS, Dec. 4. A demonstration in which about five thousand Communists took part, greeted Leonid Krassin, the first Soviet Ambassador to France upon his arrival at the Gare Du Nord this morning.

NAME DISCLOSED TO CLEAR OTHERS. LONDON, Dec. 4. The withdrawal of secrecy surrounding the identity of the mysterious Indian Prince referred to as "Mr. A." during the trial of the Robinson blackmailing case, says Daily Express, was due to protests from the ruling Maharajahs of India. These rulers urged the British Government to disclose the name which had been withheld for reasons of State, so as to remove the damaging and cruel suspicions which they declared were directed against themselves.

CHINA'S LARGEST BRIDGE BLOWN UP. HANKOW, China, Dec. 4. Followers of General Wu Pei Fu, formerly military commander of the Peking Government are reported to have blown up the Hankow-Peking Railway bridge, over the Yellow River, said to be the longest bridge in China.

FOREIGN SECRETARY LEAVES FOR LEAGUE MEETING. LONDON, Dec. 4. Accompanied by staff of more than a score of secretaries, stenographers, and experts, Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, left for Paris and the League of Nations Council meeting in Rome next week at 10.45 o'clock this morning.

YEARS OF PROSPERITY FORECASTED. WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. The United States has emerged from the post war transition stage in so prosperous a condition that years of prosperous and healthy conditions are forecasted in the annual report presented to Congress to-day by Andrew Mellon, Secretary of Treasury.

HANDS OFF. GENEVA, Dec. 4. Great Britain has informed the League of Nations that the British Government will not recognize any signature by Egypt of the peace protocol which will give Egypt the right to appeal to the League of Nations on matters connected with the Anglo-Egyptian dispute. The British note to the League says great Britain will not accept any interference whether by the League of Nations or any individual Government on matters touching the Sudan.

$50,000 FIRE IN SYDNEY. SYDNEY, N.S., Dec. 4. Damage estimated at close to $50,000 was caused by a fire which broke out at 10.30 this morning and ruined the home and store of Charles Fataux, a hall and damaged other buildings.

KORETZ SENTENCED. CHICAGO, Dec. 5. Leo Koretz, master swindler, to-day was sentenced to prison from one to ten years on the charge of larceny, the first of four charges to which he pleaded guilty yesterday. Koretz, who took $2,000,000 from relatives, friends and others, whom he entrapped in his Bayano River oil promotion, heard the sentence without show of emotion as it was pronounced by Chief Justice Jacob Hopkins. There were then to follow the sentence on the other charges of confidence game and larceny. Koretz was arrested in Halifax, N.S., Nov. 21st.

The Red-Skin of To-Day

(By AN AMERICAN)

Like the buffalo, or American bison, the American Redskin, after a precarious time, is on the increase. The latest census of Indians in America shows the total Redskin population to be 348,968, or an increase of 2,819 over what it was in 1923. And, as in the case of the buffalo, every acre is being taken by Uncle Sam to see that his wards do not become extinct.

The exact number of Indians on the North American continent when the first white settlers made a foothold there is not known. Various estimates are given by various authorities. But the accepted view is that there were fully 5,000,000. Small-pox, flu (known then by other names), and other diseases acquired after contact with the whites, plus heavy mortality in tribal wars and wars with the white settlers and later with the United States forces, are given as the primary reasons for the shrunken numbers of the picturesque warriors who to-day remain the last link of America with the romantic past.

The greatest number of Indians in America are concentrated in Oklahoma, where there are approximately 60,000, who hold 19,551,890 acres of land valued at $20,500,000 dollars. Many Indians are oil-rich because Oklahoma is one of the most fertile oil regions in America. An Indian in a bowler hat is more the rule than the exception. An Indian on an oil company directorate is no longer cause for amusement. Shades of Tecumseh, Powhatan, and Red Eagle! An Indian now comes to the village post office in a "tin lizzie" to get his mail. Others send their daughters to various State universities. There are Indian wireless "fans" and adepts in the latest dance steps. Except in the remotest Indian villages on State reservations the only romantic Indians are those on the stage. Much of America, like all of Europe, can only see the old-time Redskin to-day in the "pictures." In Maine he makes canoes and trinkets and sends his youngsters to school. Outside Oklahoma he is present in the "greatest numbers in Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Carolina, Montana, Arizona, and California. Over vast stretches of prairie, where he once "held" unchallenged sway and hunted buffalo to his heart's content, America's beef trust to-day has first say in bidding for anything running about on four feet. At any rate Uncle Sam is trying his best to preserve the remaining remnants of the Chicaw, Choctaw, Choctaw, Seminole, Sioux and Cheyenne nations, and the increased birth rate indicates some measure of success, although but a few years since the adventure had become almost desperate. 400 pairs Ladies' High Cut Boots fitted with Rubbers, only $3.75 the pair, at F. SMALLWOOD'S, Ladies' Dept. -nov15.14.

Fads and Fashions

In coat-dresses for daytime wear there is a return to high collars and long sleeves. The velvet beret is a marked favorite. It is apt to be draped from left to right. A small, simply trimmed hat of colored felt is most suitable to wear to the game.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

It may be true, as some have said, that fortune comes, but I'm inclined to think that fortune's far ahead in places only workers find. I hold, despite what others say, she seldom meets a man half way. Who never sends a ship to sea will never see his ship come in. Before the dream can never be. The toll and struggle must be paid. The lazy man in vain may wait. Fortune will ne'er unloose his gate. Look around about you day by day. And see the men who have achieved. Some of them common stuff, you say. But do not lightly be deceived. The brilliant mind that will not wait is just a highly polished shirk. All men should long ago have learned That each is author-of-his fame. That fortune is by effort earned. And luck-is but an empty name. While idle wisdom sits and sighs. The will to conquer takes the prize. MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

The Living Word

(By REV. R. E. FAIRBAIN.)

Paul was a wise man and a courageous man when he made it his deliberate policy to use the common speech of common people in his preaching and teaching. "I, when I came unto you," he said to his Corinthian friends, "came not with excellence of speech. The word translated 'excellence' means loftiness, majesty, as of a range of mountains, or of a palace, or of a cathedral. He refrained from 'staircase of diction' of set purpose. And he had his critics for that very reason. There were always those whose confidence in religion is so feeble that they tremble lest commonplace speech may deplete it. The old lady who preferred the Authorized to the Revised Version exclaimed 'What was good enough for St. Paul is good enough for me.' And there are still some who need to be informed that Paul did not write 17th century English. Truth should be good enough for any of us. For he used the common speech. He was not afraid to take the catch-words of the forum, the camp, and the sports field and make them serve in the cause of Christ. He has himself placed on record the speech of his detractors, that 'his speech was contemptible.' Well, he was a university man, and he could talk scholarship with the scholarly when he wished. But he seemed to think that he was justified in deliberately setting that on one side as a general rule. I wonder whether anyone wrote to the papers about his scandalous irreverence!

But indeed he followed a good example. It was said of the Lord Jesus that he spoke 'not as the Scribes.' How did they speak? They were the literary men, the stylists of religion at that time. They could not tolerate the idea of using common words for holy things. They were even afraid to have and to utter any live thought of their own. Their stock-in-trade was the dead thoughts of dead men shrouded in dead words. When Jesus spoke to the hearts of common people, using commonplace illustrations, in common speech, the common people heard Him gladly. The thing that especially pleased them was that He 'spoke not as the Scribes.' He needed no special terminology for religion. Ordinary things glowed in His hands with the reflection of eternal reality. The more commonplace the illustration the better for His purpose. Some of His illustrations indeed we could not possibly use to-day, because we cultivate squeamishness and call it refinement. Colossus, a second century opponent of Christianity, called Jesus a vulgar person, just because He talked of common things to common people. Glory be to God, so He did! Does anyone dare to suggest that He contaminated religion, even by Matthew 15.17?

We miss something very precious through our persistent use of a translation of the New Testament written in the speech of three centuries ago. Its phraseology carries an accent of quaint remoteness, and it inevitably hangs a ghostly veil between us and the Man Jesus Christ, the magnificent Friend of man, magnificent in nothing more than His divine intimacy with men. Not even the modern versions represent the marvel of His friendliness. They all make Him more or less stiff and stilted in speech, and effeminate in manner. It is imperative that our generation rediscover the real Jesus, and that can only be done by means of a presentation in the very dialect of to-day.

When the friends of the palsied man stopped the sermon by lowering the patient through the courtyard roof, Jesus looked at him and said—well, our usual version makes Him say, "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee". But there is no

"son" in the text at all. What Jesus really said was the equivalent of "Cheer up, my boy; your sins are forgiven". Don't you think there is something there that ought to be generally known?

Again, the Authorized Version makes Jesus address His disciples as "children". Just fancy it! A man speaking to grown men, some of them much older than Himself! What Jesus really said was "Boys"! Yes, and He said it in just the way that one man will speak familiarly to his acquaintances on an informal occasion—"Boys, how hard it is for a rich man to enter the Kingdom!" Do you think such friendly familiarity unbecoming to the Son of God? Well, but do you begin to realise just what the Incarnation means?

There is another instance of the complete inadequacy of the older versions, and indeed of any version, that is nothing short of calamitous. It is in connection with the raising of Jairus' daughter. This is one of the only two occasions when we have preserved for us the actual words Jesus spoke. You remember how He came into the stricken home and met the parents and entered into their grief as no one else could. You see Him sweeping out the professional mourners, and then coming with firm swift steps to the pallet bed and the still form. You have heard the breath as He took the cold hand, and you have listened for the word of divine tenderness and power. Our Authorized Version—great English literary classic; oh yes, I know all that!—it makes Him say "Damsel, I say unto thee, arise!" Oh no! Nothing so stiff and formal. The Aramaean word He used meant first of all a lamb, a little lamb, a pet lamb. And it was also a term of endearment for a loved child. You have heard the wise and patient and affectionate grandmother say to the little one at her knee, "My lamb", "my pet". Well, that is just how Jesus spoke. "Get up, little lamb!" No wonder she was called back out of the Great Shadow! Wasn't it magnificent? Wasn't it entirely worthy of God incarnate? Would not anything more "stately" have been unworthy of the occasion? Don't you think we ought to have a translation that would show just that? Does not the world need to know that God came as near to human life as that?

Well, that is what the originals of our New Testament books did. The other writers, as well as Paul, with a sure instinct, used the common language of the common people for their evangel, and not any classical, scholarly Greek. It is one of our modern discoveries that the New Testament was not written by incompetents who bungled grammatically, but was written in the Greek of the home and the market and the camp of the arena. It was called Koine, meaning the "new", almost the "slang". It was meant for the common people, and speaking their language, it reached them, as we know. It was the vernacular, the vulgar tongue. Be sure the scholars of the day despised it. But it became the vehicle of the Christian revelation of God. And no version or translation can be worthy of a place in the great succession that does not present the everlasting gospel to each generation in the very accent and dialect of that generation. As often as the forms of speech change, so often must the work be done over again, and yet again. For it is imperative that each generation shall be made to feel the reality of it. An antiquated form of language does not indeed prevent men from seeing the vision through it, but it handicaps them. It blurs the sharpness, it puts the great miracle of revelation a little out of focus.

Very early the need for re-translation was felt. First the Greek had to be turned into Latin. Then before long, the Latin became old-fashioned, and a new Latin version was called for. This was called the Vulgate,—to be exact "vulgata editio",—the edition for the "vulgus"—the common crowd! It was not written in "standard" Latin, but in the corrupted Latin of the fourth century. The common people could have made nothing of it in "standard" Latin. There were objectors then, as now. The Scribes we have always with us, and they have been vocal through the ages.

Wicliffe and Tyndale, at the Reformation, did for England what Luther did for Germany. He resurrected the living gospel from its tomb in the dead languages. Of deliberate purpose they avoided the niceties of the learned and made the Bible speak to the heart of the people in the speech of the people. There was a succession of great English translations—Coverdale's, Matthew's, the Great Bible, the Geneva Bible, the Bishop's Bible. Then in 1611 came what we now call the "authorized version", the name meaning no more than that it had the patronage of King James the First. It did for the English language what Luther's German translation of the New Testament did for Germany—standardized the speech of the people. It is now considered as setting a standard of classical English, but when it was made it was with no such intention. It was translated into the common speech of the common people of that time. When it was issued it was just as truly a translation into modern speech as are the "Twentieth Century", Dr. Weymouth's, and Dr. Moffat's translations of recent years.

The Revised Version, issued in 1881, was really made necessary by the accumulation of new discoveries of ancient biblical manuscripts, which cast fresh light on the probable original text. But the revisers made it a deliberate policy to copy the forms of speech of the Authorized Version. From all this it should be clear why we need a version in our own modern speech. And the justification of this proceeding should be equally clear. That is what has been done again and again right down the Christian centuries. The resentment with which every such effort has been met is never due to a religious reverence, but always to a scholastic pedantry. Those who are qualified may object to any particular translation on the ground that it is not correct; but if they object on the ground that it may hurt the sacredness of religious writings to render them in the speech of common contemporary people, they are objecting, as I have shown, to every translation that has ever been made, to the style of the original documents, to the deliberate policy of a master-preacher like Paul, and finally to the judgment and practice of the final authority, the Lord Jesus Christ, the Word of God incarnate.

Llewellyn Club Holds Enjoyable Smoker

The first Llewellyn Club smoker for the season was held in Canon Wood Hall last night and was much enjoyed by the members and guests present. The Rev. J. B. Elliott, President of the Club, presided. The musical programme was a feature of unusual interest and the numbers contributed by the "Ho-Bo" Jazz Band in costume were loudly applauded. The members of this now famous combination were Messrs. Ches. Dwyer, Piano; Murray and MacLeod, Violins; Peters, Cornet; Mott, Jazz-bo and Butt, Drums and Effects. Mr. Joe Dewling's parody on "It ain't going to rain" brought down the house, while Mr. Andrew Carnell, who is always springing surprises, proved himself to be the possessor of a rich baritone voice and, to the accompaniment of the Jazz Band, sang a song of his own composition, in great style.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. W. E. Godfrey, was then introduced, and in a very interesting and witty manner, told of his experiences on the N. W. frontier of India. At times he and Mrs. Godfrey were in great peril from raiding parties, but came through unharmed. The manners and customs of the various tribes were explained and many incidents which happened during the great war and which never became public owing to the strict censorship, were dealt with. Reference was made at length to the famous Mr. Ghandi, and his influence on the people of India. A very able tribute was paid by the speaker to General Dyer, for his services in handling the riots, who said that he was a much abused man by people who did not know the actual happenings in India but that he would go down in history as one of Britain's outstanding Generals. A hearty vote of thanks was eloquently proposed by Mr. L. Colley.

Those present then repaired to the lower room where refreshments were served and a Club feature of the days of Rev. Dr. Jones revived. With Mr. Colley as Chairman, an impromptu concert was held. Messrs. Geo. A. Bartlett, of Burlin, and P. K. MacLeod, of the Royal Stores, who were present, as guests of Messrs. Tucker, Baldwin, Dewling, and Dowden, and Rev. J. B. Elliott contributed to what proved the surprise of the evening.

Mr. S. G. Faour donated a quantity of "Sweet Dream" cigarettes, which were much appreciated and this brand will have a bigger demand in the future.

The next smoker will be held on Thursday, January 8th, when His Excellency the Governor will be the speaker.

Address to Departing Superintendent

To A. G. Hudson, J.P., Supt. of Lower Island Cove Sunday School. Lower Island Cove, Nov. 26th, 1924. Dear Superintendent.—Knowing that you are about to leave us for a while to spend the winter months with your children and friends in Canada, we take this opportunity of wishing you a very pleasant journey and a happy time during your vacation. During the many years you have been superintendent of our Sunday School, you have worked zealously and untriflingly for the uplift of the young people and the advancement of "God's Kingdom." When we have sometimes been discouraged you have often inspired us to go forward in duty's path, although your burden may have been far greater than ours.

We shall greatly miss you during the coming winter months, but we know that although you will not be with us personally you will be with us in spirit, and that you will be praying for the school you love so well. We shall continue to pray for you, and hope that you will come back invigorated in health, and with a very greater inspiration to carry on the good work among us. Please accept this small gift as a very slight token of the love and esteem of THE OFFICERS & TEACHERS, OF Lower Island Cove Sunday School.

THE REPLY. Lower Island Cove, Nov. 26th, 1924. Beloved Fellow-workers.—It is indeed an agreeable surprise and pleasure here in my home to meet the whole working staff of our Sunday School. Twenty of you having come from a distance over a rough road this night might manifest your loving esteem and appreciation of my humble services with you and among your children and grand-children. Your action in doing so impresses me even deeper than your valuable gift and beautiful address because I know that your hearts are with all you have done and said. Your zeal and integrity and the interest you have manifested in our work have encouraged and helped me to persevere in it also.

I think you the most loyal and agreeable staff of teachers I have worked with during upwards of 40 years superintending Sunday Schools most of which I have spent among you. The pleasure you wish me will not come from being away from you and my work for a few months but will be in meeting my children and friends and a brother whom I have not met within 43 years, besides duty calls me to attend one of the board meetings of the General Conference in Toronto in the near future. Our work is appreciated what it has cost us in session and out of session. According to our teaching the result will be taken account of in due time by a Higher Court. I thank you as heartily as you have wished all the good pleasure in your never to be forgotten address. God forbid that I should cease to pray for you and the school. I hope to return to you any my work invigorated by the "rain" brought down the house, while Mr. Andrew Carnell, who is always springing surprises, proved himself to be the possessor of a rich baritone voice and, to the accompaniment of the Jazz Band, sang a song of his own composition, in great style.

Spaniard's Bay Notes

The past week has been rather a busy time with our people. Many of them have come home from Canada and U. S. and will remain with their families and friends during the winter months. Others have come from the Humber and Corner Brook and will be returning to those busy centres at the beginning of the New Year.

Miss Gwendolyn Noseworthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Noseworthy, of this town, left by last Sunday's express en route to Somerville, Mass., to visit her friends.

Miss Mabel Young went to St. John's on Thursday last and returned again the following Tuesday. Rev. E. C. Clench went to Bryan's Cove to conduct services there, and returned again the same evening.

Unexampled Results With Unexampled Economy.

It is true that the Chrysler Six performs in a manner that has centered the attention of America on this car. Yet the wonder of its accomplishments becomes all the more wonderful by reason of the economy with which these results are obtained.

You get better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—in itself an achievement for a car that can travel over 70 miles an hour. But this is not the whole economy story.

The oil-filter automatically cleanses all the oil in the crankcase every 25 miles; the air-cleaner prevents the entry of dust and dirt through the carburetor; the crankshaft revolves in seven bearings instead of three or five, thus preventing destructive engine vibration.

These are some of the contributing factors to motoring results that are revolutionary—not only in themselves, but in the lower costs at which they are obtained.

COPPER IN STRONG POSITION.

Foreigners' Making the Market—Small Stocks Abroad.

Boston—The demand for copper is more insistent and sales of the metal were made this week at 14 cents a pound, although a few orders were placed at 13 1/2.

Advances of about ten points have been made in export copper, prospective buyers bidding 13.95 cents alongside ship in New York.

While the absorption of copper in this country continues in a volume surpassing all records, an increased demand from abroad must be looked to if there is further substantial price advance. In fact, the foreigners have been making the market for copper for some months.

The Coolidge election in this country and the acceptance of the Dawes plan on the other side have produced a stimulating effect upon consumers who have for months been buying for immediate needs only. In fact, so close to the shore have the foreign manufacturers been sailing that the largest of them have ridiculously small working stocks on hand.

Were manufacturers on both sides of the water to resume former policies and buy future necessities at present attractively low prices, it would mean an immediate stampede in the metal market and the price would quickly reflect it.

There is no basis for the occasional rumor that any considerable stock of metal is being held abroad on consignment for account of American producers.

Joseph Clendenin says to the Boston News Bureau with respect to the position of the Guggenheims in copper: "I looked up our position and find we are carrying on the other side 5,000,000 pounds, a ridiculously small stock for us. Our customers are carrying nothing themselves and steam-er room is so scarce just now that we must of course carry some stocks there. Furthermore, there are some ten ports at which copper is usually carried. We are not pressing the metal for sale. In fact I have instructed our foreign agents to withdraw from the market for a time. I am a firm believer in higher prices based upon the sound statistical position of the metal and large consumption in sight."

Woman's Sweetest Attribute.

"As beautiful as a Greek goddess is a term which is familiar to all, but our own women are second to none where skin charm and loveliness are concerned. Their secret is Pond's Cream, which, by thoroughly cleansing the pores of impurities, promotes skin health and revivifies tired complexion and flagging muscles. Sold in jars and tubes. dec1.15

Street Car Service

The slight fall of snow last night disorganized the street car service for a few hours this morning while the belt line was being cleared. There was some angry words on one of the cars this forenoon when passengers who joined the east going train to proceed to Rawlins Cross and vicinity found themselves at the end of the "voyage" when Cavendish Square was reached. At least they could have been informed how far the cars were running before being taken further from their homes than the starting point.

Pourparler On Labrador Question

As a result of an invitation recently received from Premier Taschereau, it is understood that a delegation will shortly proceed to Quebec to take part in a conference on the Labrador Boundary Question. The Newfoundland representatives will be the Prime Minister, the Colonial Secretary and the Minister of Justice.

We are informed that the delegation appointed is not vested with an authority to finalize matters, but will ascertain the views held by the other parties concerned and will lay them before the Government on their return.

It is unnecessary to point out that any suggestion of disposing of this valuable dependency of the Colony without first having fully considered the matter from every point of view is not entertained by the Government, and certainly would be strongly opposed by the public. That any such action is even considered need not for a moment cause any concern, for we are convinced that the Government are aware of the strength of our claims to the Labrador and also of its enormous potential wealth.

Britain's Prompt Pronouncement

Britain has declared in a manner that cannot be misunderstood that interference in Egyptian affairs by the League of Nations or by any individual Government will not be tolerated.

Britons everywhere will read this pronouncement with a thrill of pride. They will recognize in it the tone which has never failed to command respect, and the spirit which has ever enabled the Nation to hold her own, to follow the path that she has blazed, and carry out the responsibility that she has undertaken.

The position taken by the critics of the British Government in connection with the demands made upon the Egyptians, following the assassination of Sir Lee Stack, was that self-government having been conferred upon them, no interference in local affairs was justifiable. In the first place it must be remembered that the Egyptians were not given complete autonomy. The position of the country makes it the gateway to the East in which a considerable portion of the British Empire is situated, and it was therefore necessary that British representatives should remain in Cairo to see that our interests were safeguarded.

In the second place, having been given privileges far exceeding anything that they had ever previously possessed, the Egyptian Government began an agitation for control of the Suez Canal and of the Sudan. These unwarranted demands were promptly refused by the late Labour Government. Since then they have been labouring under a grievance in which they have sought to enlist the sympathy of the various Powers, but it cannot be said that there was any great response.

Anyone possessing even an elementary knowledge of the history of the Egyptian people is aware that for thousands of years they have been subject to alien rule, administered in such a ruthless manner that anything like a national spirit had long ago been suppressed. Under British administration an end was put to tyranny, prosperity was restored, and every effort made to educate the people in the management of their own affairs and to awaken a national conscience. When at last the responsibility of governing themselves was granted, it was necessary for the British Government to continue to exercise a benevolent supervision, in order that they should not be victimized by others or through their own incapacity slip back into the conditions which had formerly existed.

Any opinions expressed by Britishers are of course open to criticism on the grounds of prejudice, and it may therefore be more convincing to hear what a disinterested observer had to say on this very subject. Some months ago, in referring to the engineering operations which were going on in connection with the Gezira Scheme of Irrigation, we quoted the opinion formed by the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in 1910 of the effect of British Administration in Egypt. His words apply so strikingly to the present situation that we quote them again. He said in part:—

"It was with this primary object of establishing order that you went into Egypt 28 years ago, and chief and ample justification for your presence in Egypt was this absolute necessity of order being established from without, coupled with your ability and willingness to establish it. Now either you have the right to be in Egypt or you have not; either it is your duty to establish and keep order. If you feel that you do not have the right to be in Egypt, if you do not wish to establish and keep order there, why then by all means get out of Egypt. If, as I hope, you feel that your duty to civilized mankind and your fealty to your own great traditions alike bid you to stay, then make fact and name agree and show that you are ready to meet, in every deed, the responsibility which is yours. It is the thing, not the form, which is vital; if the present forms of government in Egypt, established by you in the hope that they would help the Egyptians upward, merely serve to provoke and permit disorder, then it is for you to alter the form, for, if you stay in Egypt, it is your first duty to keep order and, above all things, also to punish murder and to bring to justice all who directly or indirectly incite others to commit murder or condone crime when it is committed."

Delegation to Confer on Labrador Boundary

We understand that a delegation consisting of the Prime Minister, Colonial Secretary and Minister of Justice has been appointed to proceed to Quebec to participate in a proposed conference on the Labrador Boundary Question. Some minor details have yet to be determined before the delegation leaves. It is not improbable that they will proceed on their mission next week.

Derailed Engine Raised

The Engine, No. 115, which went over a fifty-foot embankment in a recent derailment at Manuel's Bridge, was successfully raised to the rails yesterday and forwarded to the city last night. The engine was not badly damaged, and is now being thoroughly overhauled at the Machine Shops.

Prospero's New Captain

At yesterday's meeting of the Railway Commission, Captain Wesley Kean, third officer of the Hed Cross Lister Silvia, was appointed master of the northern coastal boat Prospero. After the arrival of the Prospero from the northward he will take command until the Prospero is ready. Capt. Kean has had considerable experience on the northern coast and will no doubt prove an efficient officer.

The New Gulf Steamer

Plans of the new steamer for the Gulf Service are now under consideration of the Railway Commission and Executive Government. The new ship will cost in the vicinity of £100,000. She will be 265 ft. long and 41 ft. beam and 18 ft. deep. Her speed capacity is rated at 14 knots and she will have accommodation for 250 people. The ship will be 10 feet longer and will have 4 ft. more beam than the Lintrose. Capt. Stevenson of S. S. Kyle has approved of the layout of the ship with the exception of some minor details, and it is not improbable that he will be sent by the Railway Commission to superintend construction. If the work of building begins at once the ship will probably be delivered by the end of June.

Typhoid Fever Reported

An outbreak of disease supposed to be Typhoid Fever is reported from North Harbor and Dr. Chisholm of Manuels has been sent to investigate, a couple of deaths have occurred from the disease. The outbreak has been reported from other parts of Placentia District but it is not thought to be serious.

Daisy Due at Port aux Basques

According to a message received from Inspector Dee, the S.S. Daisy, which went ashore yesterday at Port aux Basques to-day, the message states that the ship is making no water.

Express Passengers

The following passengers crossed over to Port aux Basque by S. S. Kyle at 7.30 this morning and joined the incoming express:—Mrs. J. Sherman and 3 children, Miss A. Davis, Miss P. Patten, Miss M. Taylor, Miss H. E. Foster, Miss V. Kenny, L. Goldman, M. Solomon, R. D. Walsh, Mrs. A. Dingwell, Miss M. Clement, Miss J. H. Wilcox, C. Dingwell.

Personal

The many friends of Mr. James Norris, Merchant, Three Arms, N.D.B. will regret to learn of his serious illness. Mr. Norris arrived in the city about a week ago, accompanied by his wife, to receive medical treatment, but since then he has shown no signs of improvement.

Fireman Johnson who received injuries in the recent derailment near Manuels was discharged from the General Hospital on Tuesday last, fully cured, and has gone back to work.

There arrived by S.S. Digby, from Mount Lebrun, Syria, Richard Michael, son of Mr. Albert Michael, New Gower Street. Richard, who for the past sixteen years has not seen his relatives, is certainly deserving of the many congratulations being showered upon him by his many friends and relations.

Mr. A. G. Hudson, J.P. of Lower Island Cove, is leaving by the Rosalind to spend the winter in Toronto with his children, who reside there.

Mr. H. J. James of Clarendville arrived in the city by the Humber Special, on Thursday, and was operated upon in the General Hospital for acute appendicitis.

At Congregational Lecture Hall

An enjoyable evening is promised those who will be at the Congregational Lecture Hall to-night, when the Mayflower Club will present a three-act dialogue, entitled "Broxy Point." The cast is in capable hands. During the evening candy will be sold.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Dec. 4th.—This day comes the most evil news by a letter from Mr. Lane, being that he is not able to send me the 3 cases of lobsters that I did ask him for since they are already bought up. I did write him for these when it came to my ears that there would be a close season on lobsters for the next three years, being that I am very fond of them, and would have a supply to last me awhile. Now, I know not what I shall do, being that lobsters may only be obtained in the future, I fear, at high prices. Comes Mr. Loveridge this day to see me, and shows me an interesting photograph of a craft of some 27 tons burthen that did come all the way from China to Battle Hr., by way of Denmark, Iceland and Greenland, and is lost on the journey from Battle Harbor to Halifax. This craft did precede the Lief Ericson which was to follow a similar route but is thought by all to be lost. Much troubled these few days past by people enquiring of my ankle which is healed these many days, albeit I am grateful for their interest if pestered by their questions. Despatches out of England tell how Lt. George is in high disfavor with divers prominent members of that party and among them Commander Kenworthy, that holds the record for having done the most talking during one session of the House. Yet though the Liberals do make George their Chairman, I scarce think he is the man to bring them to their former greatness. My feet mighty sore still from the dancing I did last night, so am constrained to go to bed, betimes, and to read awhile in a new journal which comes by the mail.

Successful Sale of Work

The annual sale of work conducted in the Methodist College Hall, by the Ladies College Aid Society, and Girls' Guild, concluded last night with a concert under the direction of H. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M. A large number of people were present at the continuation of the sale yesterday afternoon, and the ladies in charge were kept busy until close up time. Practically all of the goods were disposed of, and the balance was sold by auction. As on the previous day the tea tables were a special attraction, and numbers of people availed of the hospitality of the ladies and enjoyed a splendid supper. The sale has been a record one, and already the proceeds amount to $3,200.00, with other returns to come in. To Mrs. Albert Soper and her sisters, every congratulation is due. The concert programme commenced at 8 o'clock, and the various items were heartily enjoyed by a large audience. The programme was as follows:—

Violin Concerto, Piano and Organ accompaniment—Miss M. K. McNeil, Miss Oates, Mr. Christian.

Song—Miss Jean Taylor.
 Dance—Miss Patricia Power.
 Songs—Mrs. Small, Miss Marjorie Johnson.
 Cello Solo—Mr. Mayers.
 A special feature was the dancing of little Miss Patricia Power, who had to dance three times, and the audience would have more.

Obituary

MRS. SARAH L. FREEMAN.

It is with sorrow we record the death, at Mt. Herbert, Lower Island Cove, Bay de Verde, of Mrs. Sarah Louise Freeman, widow of the late Rev. R. W. Freeman, so well and favorably known by Methodism throughout Newfoundland. The deceased respected lady died at the age of seventy-five years, leaving behind her to mourn two brothers, John W. and Herbert E. Louis, and Bessie, the wife of Eli Garland, at Island Cove and Stannah, widow of the late Wm. Bryden, residing in Pa., U.S.A., besides a large circle of friends at home and scattered throughout the many circuits in which her late husband and herself advanced the Kingdom of Heaven among men and in the hearts and lives of their people.

Churches and parsonages are monuments to their efforts and among these are the beautiful Wesley Church at St. John's, where the Rev. R. W. Freeman finished his long life work, and at Lower Island Cove, where Mrs. Freeman finished hers. Those veteran servants of their adopted church gave their best to their work, and no doubt will still live on in the memory and lives of the people of the many circuits on which they labored. They filled in their itinerancy every Methodist circuit on the Bay de Verde district; also on Twillingate, Bonavista, Trinity, Fortune and St. John's, west.

Mrs. Freeman was active for a lady of her years, and enjoyed the use of all her reasoning faculties up to about the end of September, when she suffered from a slight stroke of paralysis. She could still converse and sit up with friends, but early in November another stroke deprived her of the power of speech and action, until Dec. 1st at 11 a.m. she passed peacefully away. Mrs. Freeman was lovingly cared for by her friends until the last, and received special attention from her niece, Miss Alice M. Hudson, and Mrs. Jean Porter, a sister of Mrs. John W. Louis. She was buried at Lower Island Cove in the family plot with all the honor and respect that could be shown her by her church and people.

The casket was beautifully covered with wreaths, presented by the W.M.S., of which she was a life member, and who walked in procession before the hearse, and also from family friends, Marshall Bros., St. John's; the Sunday School, Mrs. M. J. Snelgrove and A. G. Hudson.

Two German Deserters Arrive From Sydney

Two German sailors of the Italian ship Monte Bianco arrived in the city by yesterday's cross country express, having deserted their ship at North Sydney. The above sailors it will be remembered caused a disturbance with other members of the crew while the ship was in this port about two weeks ago, and were later confined to the penitentiary until the ship was ready to sail. After the steamer had sailed from this port it is presumed that a continuation of the same trouble occurred, and after receiving payment in the sum of $35.00 from the captain, at Sydney as a portion of their months wages, they decided to take passage to St. John's, last night the sailors applied for shelter at the Police Station, and were taken in for the night. Upon making their appearance before the Magistrate Court to-day, on a charge of safe-keeping, Judge Morris pointed out that this was no place for them, and they were then ordered to leave the court and look for a foreign going ship, as a means of getting home.

Billiard Tournament Starts To-Night

The opening game in the Masonic B.I.S. Billiard Tournament, takes place to-night at 7.30, at the B.I.S. Club. The players are Habbitts (Masonic), Skinner (B.I.S.) and as both are adepts with the cue a splendid game is anticipated. The B.I.S. have a lead of 100 points or so and the second round ought to produce good billiards. Immediately following the game to-night, a card tournament will be held in the B.I.S. Rooms for suitable prizes and accommodation have been made for a large number of players.

Rosalind in Port

S.S. Rosalind, Capt. James, arrived from New York and Halifax at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, after making a good run to port from Halifax. Coming down the shore the ship sighted the wreckage of the schr. James and Arnold at Chance Cove yesterday morning. The Rosalind also picked up the message broadcasted by the Celtic, in reference to the Concordia, and Captain James reported it to Captain Mitchell, of the Silvia, then about to leave port. The ship brought a large general cargo and the following passengers. From New York:—Elizabeth Norris and seven second class. From Halifax:—Maude Crimp, Theresa Davis, Michael Murphy, Agnes Murphy and 5 second class. The Rosalind sails on the return trip on Tuesday next.

The Claims of Our Young Citizens

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Your editorial of the 3rd must have struck a sympathetic chord in the public mind, and has induced this brief comment. Surely the treatment meted out to these two little helpless boys in revolting. Of course the law must be observed, and those responsible for its enforcement may not fairly be found fault with.

Outside this Colony provision is everywhere made for delinquent youth and serious efforts have been put forth in this city by the Social Service Council in the past, to grapple with similar problems, with unfortunately, little success.

What is needed is not so much a place of detention or punishment, as a refuge where the children may obtain an elemental education, plus employment and opportunity for learning some trade that will fit them for a place in life when they have reached manhood.

Your suggestion as to farming is an excellent one. Not so long ago a similar one was made, and it was urged that a place should be availed of, where, besides farming, certain trades such as shoe making, tailoring, and the like, could be learned. In such an establishment, sufficient farm produce might be obtained for the support of inmates, and much of the required clothing could be made by the boys. The prime idea is not imprisonment, but opportunity to acquire habits which education and industry foster.

It is neither creditable nor fair to expect decent behaviour from boys whose parents are unable to feed, clothe and educate them, and who in order to obtain food are, forced to steal.

Yes, compulsory education is desirable, but that may mean un-educational education, and it would seem that every denomination is pledged to educate its youth, rather than run the risk of "denominational contamination" whatever that may mean. It is all very well to advocate schools for every boy and girl, but there are hundreds of children in this city of schoolable age for whom there is no school room. All the existing buildings are crowded, and the financial grants and denominational differences so split up as to render best results impossible.

It is asserted in some quarters that there is no public money for such a delinquent haven as you have advocated, and none for additional school buildings or facilities. In the same paper as your editorial appeared, is an advertisement for "a Graduate of a recognized Household Science College for the Household Science Department of the Normal School." This will be a high priced official, and the question arises, can we afford such luxuries, in face of the fact that so many children are prevented from an elementary education—left to roam the streets and wharves, where only wrong doing confronts them.

You seem to think some people will be offended at the suggestion that denominationalism enters into this matter. Well, it is time to call things by their right name, and you deserve praise for your courage. It is high time to brush away the denominational cobwebs, and settle down to some practical movement for the betterment of such offenders as are the subject under discussion, as well as the very large number of other children who to-day have no educational opportunities, in a city and colony that claims to be Christian. By all means let everybody stick to the "faith of their fathers" and be creditable adherents, but denominationalism is not necessarily Christianity, and the latter is most needful for the uplifting of such cases as have been outlined.

Yours truly,
PARENT.

THE VANISHED YEARS.

I said to Jinx, "How goes it?" "I'm waxing old," said he. "I've nearly youth, before he knows it," has shipped the trala-las. So one morning when he rises he finds his whiskers gray—the saddest of surprises to meet at break of day.

Some morning when he'd shoulder a mealsack at the store, he finds that he is older, his arms are stiff and sore. This morning in my attic when I sat up in bed, I found my feet rheumatic; they hurt me when I'd tread. I found my eyes were rheumy, my careworn head was bald; discoveries more gloomy I never have recalled. My wintry years are coming. I've nearly reached three score, and wolves will soon be chumming around my cottage door. Full soon the poorhouse keeper will lead me to his gate, and hand me fodder cheaper than ever mortal ate. How ghastly is the morning, how bitter and how cold, when one receives the warning that he is waxing old!

"Indeed that morning's bitter," I said, "unless a guy has been a prudent critter and put the kopecks by. If he has wisely salted the kopecks in a crock, his pleasures are not halted, when age comes up the walk. He may be just as happy as in the bygone time, when he was young and snappy, and thought old age a crime. But age is surely fearful to any wintry jay, who's thinking, sad and fearful of money thrown away."

Business Now and in 1920

(From the London Advertiser.) Businessmen continue to look back to the volume of receipts they had in 1920-21, and compare them with the showing of to-day. They find they are smaller, and conclude that trade is less. If they were selling for the same price in the fall of 1924 that they were in 1920, and then showed a falling off, they could conclude with some degree of accuracy that they were slipping. One London merchant, in analyzing his trade took the trouble to look back over prices of those fat years and compare them with those of to-day. He found that men's clothing, for instance, was selling at 40 per cent. less now than in the peak price period of 1920. Based on this premise, he concluded that, even with a reduced cash income, his store was actually doing 15 per cent. more business than in 1920. The discovery enabled him to see things in their true light.

It is the reasonable and proper way in which to view business conditions. It is perhaps easy to keep looking back to the years of big business, but it does not improve matters to-day. It was necessary, in the interests of the purchaser, whose income had in many cases decreased, that prices should come down within the range of his purse.

The volume of trade to-day compares very favorably with that of other years.

expected that the results will not be disclosed, except such as Secretary of the Navy Wilbur regards as necessary.

The sinking of the uncompleted monster of the seas, which would have been the pride of the navy, came on the sixth day of the tests which were decided upon by the Navy Department as the method for destruction of the ship ordered by the naval limitation treaty.

Cepty Sinking.

An effort was made to stop the sinking of the Washington by William B. Shearer, New York naval expert, who attempted to enjoin Secretary Wilbur in courts here. Both attempts failed. His suit had been rejected in the District Supreme Court, he carried it to the District Court of Appeals, where it again failed.

Nearly $16,000,000 was invested in the Washington. It was to have cost $30,000,000 when completed, and would have been one of the finest vessels afloat. Construction on it was stopped as a result of the armament conference, which doomed it.

HUGE FORTUNE SUNK WHEN DREADNOUGHT WASHINGTON SENT TO BOTTOM—PLUNGING FIRE—NEW DECK ARMOR SUBJECTED TO SEVERE TESTS AT LONG RANGE.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 26.—(United News).—The U.S.S. Washington was sunk Tuesday as the climax of a series of naval tests which have been going on for several days.

The final tests Tuesday were made at long range in order to get the effect of "plunging fire" on the decks of the Washington, it was explained by Commander Halsey Powell, of the Navy Department, commenting on the results.

"Nothing would have been gained by short range fire at the hull of the vessel," he said, "The hull armor of the Washington, as of every other battleship, is tested before-hand at the proving grounds, and the strength of the side is known.

"This test was to determine the strength of the new protection on the decks, which is a postwar development.

"It was never intended in these tests to fire directly at the hull of the ship."

Airship Attack.
The airplane fire on the Washington was for the same purpose, Powell explained, to test the new deck protection armor.

"It was not for the purpose of the tests to sink the Washington by airplane bombardment," he said. "The aim was to see how the new deck armor could stand fire from airplanes."

The hull was tested for submarine and explosive fire by dropping bombs alongside last Friday and Saturday, he said.

Caledonia, Nov. 26.—A splendid black bear skin measuring 9 feet in length from tip to tip, and 4 feet unstretched, in width, was brought to-day from the Rossignol district by I. L. Smart, guide, who with Charles Mott, has been on a two weeks' fur trapping expedition. Smart shot the bear at North East Bay, off the Rossignol Lake, at which place he was in search of rabbit bait for his traps.

While pursuing a path he noticed at one side a hole in the ground and casually looked in. His gaze was met by that of a large bear. Not being in search of such game, he was ill prepared for quick action, but

THOSE PRETTY DUSTPANS.

In the kitchen department of a shop I went into recently hung a row of dustpans. It was such a pretty sight that I stopped to admire them.

How odd that statement would have sounded ten years ago! Could anything suggest less beauty than a row of dustpans then?

Perhaps the idea of beauty in dustpans will still sound queer to some people. But the woman who loves her kitchen has already guessed that the row of dustpans were pink and white and blue and yellow. She knows because she has one in her own kitchen, a pink or white or blue or yellow, whichever looks best in the colour scheme she has chosen.

Yes, Kitchens Have Color Schemes. Kitchens have color schemes to-day. That is they do when they are lucky enough to be in the homes of the modern young woman with her modern realization that there is no need to have her workshop an ugly place. If she were working in a studio she would have beauty around her. And since she has elected that the kitchen shall be her studio and the producing of comfort and beauty in the home her art, is she to work amid ugly surroundings on that account? Assuredly not.

If she has the planning of the house she arranges that her kitchen shall have the best ornament that any room can have, plenty of sunshine. She insists that there shall be a good looking white sink (at the proper height for her individual comfort) and a window over it. She has the walls and ceilings done in some light color that will give her plenty of light and make the whole setting cheerful.

Builders Try to Please Her. And even if she is not in a position to build or buy her own house she still exerts her influence on those who build homes to rent by what she likes best in a kitchen.

Furthermore, whatever the kitchen she has to start with, she accomplishes miracles in the furnishing and arrangement of it.

Lacquered and all cloth in most fascinating colors and patterns are ready to her hand. Kitchen furniture can be had in white or gay colors, or can be made gay with a paint pot. Kitchen curtains (do you remember the time when no one thought of putting draperies in the kitchen, or aren't you old enough) can be white muslin or blue and white check gingham, or some gay color that matches the little flower decoration on the old fashioned chair. Kitchen utensils are carefully chosen and matched, even if one starts with but a few.

A Vase For the Soap. A friend of mine bought a lovely little pottery vase when she was visiting me. The next time I visited her I saw it in her kitchen. It stood over the sink holding the soap flakes. And it did not look in the least out of place. The daintiness expressed by the banishing of that pasteboard box was the key note of the whole kitchen—a blue and white symphony with not one false note.

I wish someone would write a book on the American kitchen, beginning with the time when the great kitchen with its beamed ceilings and its huge fireplace and its copper utensils and corner cupboard was the centre of family life; passing on through the days when the farm kitchen was still homelike and pleasant, but the city kitchen had become merely an ugly place where the hired girl had to drudge; and coming down to our modern kitchens into which we have been driven by lack of help and which we have learned to make beautiful again.

Don't you think it would be interesting?

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Outerbridge, Vincent, Collier Ryan and Dowden were present.

With regard to the application of the Newfoundland Butter Company to erect a factory on the Topsall Road, a petition was read from the residents of that locality protesting against the granting of same, on the grounds that this was one of the best residential sections in the city and the building of a factory would be the means of depreciating the value of their properties. They asked that the Council use its powers under the Act, which allows them to refuse permit for the erection of "any buildings interior in general character to other buildings already erected." A communication was also read from James G. Crawford, Secretary of the Butter Co., setting forth several reasons why he thought the application should be accepted to, and intimating that the Company would be only too glad to co-operate with the Engineering Department and would conform to its requirements in every possible way. Before discussion of the foregoing, Councillor Outerbridge, who has private interests in a like enterprise, withdrew from the meeting.

The matter was then thoroughly gone into, and it was decided that whilst it is the wish of the Council to encourage industries of this kind, still to allow a factory to be placed in a residential centre where owners of property expend large sums in erecting their dwellings and beautifying the surroundings, would not be a forward movement. It was therefore agreed to accede to the wishes of the petitioners and to refuse permit.

Mr. J. Power called attention to the necessity of a light being placed on New Gower Street, junction of Springdale Street. This was referred to the Lighting Committee.

Dr. William Roberts asked that a snow fence be erected on that part of LeMarchant Road east of Pleasant Street. Considerable benefit was derived from those erected last winter, and in the present case it would be of great advantage, particularly in view of the two hospitals in the immediate vicinity. The matter will be given consideration by the Engineer.

The application of the Great War Veterans' Association to erect a sign on Water Street was granted, subject to the approval of the City Engineer.

The application of Inspectors for uniforms was ordered to stand over.

The City Clerk tabled statements of Revenue and Expenditure to end of November, and stated there would likely be a deficit at the end of the present year on Current Account, which would be mainly brought about by the shortage in Coal Duties which, he thought, would be far short of the amount estimated.

One Bottle of Carnol - relieved his weakness

Three bottles of Carnol restored him to perfect health

Don't let yourself get run down. When you do, your system is weakened and you are likely to take anything that is going. If you feel tired, depressed, weak, nervous, watch yourself. These are the warnings to you that something serious may follow. It's at a time like this that you need a tonic—something which will tone up your system, purify your blood, quiet your nerves, give you strength. This is the way Mr. Collins felt before he took Carnol. He says, "I was in a run down condition. For six months, I was very weak and suffered from loss of appetite. I tried all kinds of drugs I thought might possibly bring relief, but without success. Then I met a friend. After stating to him my condition of health I referred to different drugs I had taken without benefit. Then he advised me to try Carnol immediately. He told me not to spend another cent for useless drugs that would not even bring temporary relief. Then I purchased one bottle of Carnol which relieved me of my weakness. After taking three bottles the blessings of health, which I formerly enjoyed, were again restored to me. As a builder and uplifter when weakening conditions exist, there is nothing equal to Carnol. I can boast of my health now. I cannot express or find words to praise Carnol for all the good it has done for me. I have proof of what it can do and advise all suffering under such conditions to give Carnol the first trial. A trial will convince you and if continued will bring permanent relief. It will bring back to you the lost health you once enjoyed."—Mr. R. G. Collins, 130 Richmond Street, Sydney, N.S. 2-24

Historical Records

SAILING PACKETS ON CONCEPTION BAY.

Article XI.

The route to Portugal Cove to St. John's was the way from time immemorial for any person going to and from, in a hurry, but the path, previous to 1800, was waist deep in slush or bog, in what my documentary evidence says, "If you tramp that path once, you wait your chance to get home by a schooner," is what they all said.

I have been informed, from a reliable source, that it was the Board of Trade, or as it was called in those days, the Merchant Society, that first called for Tenders to build this road, which was to be at least fourteen feet wide.

Judge Prowse tells us that it was the first road built in Newfoundland, and was built by order of Governor Cochrane, one of the most enterprising Governors we have ever had.

PACKET BOAT FOR HR. GRACE, CARBONER OR ANY PORTS IN CONCEPTION BAY.

The subscriber respectfully informs the Public that he has provided a "New Skiff" that rows 8 oars for the purpose of conveying passengers, etc., to any of the outports. Persons desiring quick passage thither may be accommodated on the shortest notice by applying to

MICHAEL DOOLEY.

Resident of Portugal Cove. When these Packet Boats were going there were also coaches between Harbor Grace and Carboner. When a foreign mail arrived, horns were blown with much vigor on these coaches when passing through the towns. I can well remember Tobias Lahey and his horn—the same in appearance of the bugle used by our Cadets of the present day. I can also remember his experience with the ghosts which he met along the road. Good gracious! how his yarns frightened me.

But there is one other who stands on a pedestal of his own—the good old William Coughlan. When he commenced to run the mails round Conception Bay, to Placentia, Ferryland and other places, I do not know. It must have been at least 100 years ago, for grand-parents, parents and myself boarded at Coughlan's house, where there was always full and plenty. The descendant of the first Coughlans, are still connected with the Mail Service, and the trusted and capable John Coughlan is at present as hale and hearty as he was when he ran the coach around Conception Bay and Placentia, half a century ago. And it there is any record to-day of the Coughlan family ever even accused of mislaying the value of one cent, I'll never put my hand to paper again. What a glorious record for a Century's Public Service!

The notice of Dooley is the first documentary evidence that I have of any regular Packet being run on Conception Bay, but during the Phrities this six-oared skiff had developed into Packets of thirty and forty tons, some particulars of which I can give.

These Packets had their headquarters at Carboner, Harbor Grace and Brigus, and plied direct from each port to Portugal Cove, and there was great rivalry between them. James Doyle and Maurice Doyle were masters, and quite probably were sons of Michael Doyle already mentioned.

Edward Phelan also ran the Packet, and lost her in a snow-storm squall. Several lives were lost on this occasion. But I have given full particulars of this event in previous issues of the Telegram. Doyle's packet in the same south-east gale got safely into Carboner. The names of these were the "Nara Creina," "St. Patrick" and "Native Lass." Robert Oke (grandfather of our respected citizen of St. John's, Mr. John Oke, wheelwright at the foot of Prescott Street, was manager of the "Express," which left every second day from Harbor Grace for Portugal Cove. The fare was ten shillings for 1st class or cabin passengers, 5 shillings for 2nd class or steerage. Single letters were carried for sixpence, double letters were one shilling, and parcels in proportion. Another Company ran the packet "Zepher." George Voisey, master, and charged the same rates. She left Peter Brown's wharf at Harbor Grace at 9 a.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, weather permitting and returned the following day from Portugal Cove. I remember old George Voisey very well. He was then a rigger, and had a loft just west of Godden's on Water Street. He was the first man ever had Lucifer Matches in Harbor Grace, and charged us youngsters a half-penny to see him strike one. His wife was noted for her famous black-puddings, and Voisey's old house is still to the good at the foot of Stretton's Hill. It is a pity Molly Voisey did not leave her receipt for the puddings to some one—who would soon become a millionaire. It is now a lost art.

July 8th, 1832—The Right Rev. Dr. Fleming of St. John's arrived at Harbor Grace on the packet "Dart" from Portugal Cove, but I do not know particulars of this boat. She was not one of the regular runners.

The first steamer to visit Newfoundland was H.M.S. "Suffire." The second steamer, to which very particular attention was drawn, was the S.S. "John McAdam," which was a paddle-boat sent to St. John's for sale in 1843. She made a notable trip from St. John's to Brigus and Port de Grave, and remained the night at Harbor Grace; the following day proceeded to Carboner and thence to Trinity. She had many distinguished citizens from St. John's as passengers, who had the opportunity of visiting their friends. This steamer also showed her capabilities, going ahead and astern, to many admirers, but the people of Conception Bay stuck to the Packet Boats for another ten or fifteen years, when the "Blue Jacket" was purchased, which arrived on July 4th, 1858.

My old friend, the late Canon Smith, who resided for so many years at Portugal Cove told many amusing stories about her. The engines used to stop at times crossing the Bay without any known cause, and after taking a rest, started again without assistance. This steamer met an untimely end by catching fire, September 17th, 1862, in the middle of the Bay, and drifted ashore on Little Belle Isle. Mrs. Foley of Brigus, grandmother of Superintendent Thomas Foley of the Western Union Telegraph Company, New York, was a passenger on her at the time, and was rescued from the bowsprit by Mr. Gosse of Spaniard's Bay.

Then came the "Ellen Gisborne," eventually succeeded by the "Lizzie," which sunk off the Public wharf in 1876. The last steamer on the route was the S.S. "Lady Glover," and a finer steamer, for her size, was never built. These steamers took the place of the Packet Boats, and left Harbor Grace daily, calling at Carboner, and returning, called at Brigus, and thence to Harbor Grace—and kept a regular service with Capt. Joseph Frym. Capt. Christopher Pike and his sons John and James.

Then came the Railway in 1881, and the Bay steamers were done away with. Mr. George Makinson, so well and favorably known in Harbor Grace, was manager for these steamers for many a year, and gave the greatest satisfaction. During all this long period, almost a century, the Coughlan family was connected with it, and formed the connecting link at Portugal Cove, between St. John's and Conception Bay, and well may John Coughlan to-day proudly hold up his head, when there is not the slightest instance of one cent's worth being missing although his ancestors and himself carried millions of dollars between the Banks of St. John's and the Merchants of Conception Bay, in fact, I have never heard of a parcel, however small, being missing, or an accident having occurred. And yet the Managers of the Banks handed them thousands and thousands of dollars without a receipt. I mention this fact, because I know all about it.

Mr. Robert Oke, after retiring from the Packet Company, was given charge of the Lighthouse on Harbor Grace Island, after it was erected in 1836. Later he was promoted as Superintendent of all the Lighthouses in Newfoundland, and his son, Edward Oke, took charge of Harbor Grace Island. Mr. Edward Oke held this position till his death in 1862, which was a tragic affair. Mr. Oke walked ashore on the ice on Sunday morning, and in returning that evening, he and his companion, named Snow, fell through a crevice and were drowned.

Maurice Doyle was master of the "Native Lass," sailing from Carboner. He was the father of the late James Doyle, who was said to be the finest fish-splitter in Conception Bay, and not many anywhere could handle a knife with young John Doyle. I was well acquainted with both of them.

"If Winter Comes" Best Story in 50 Years

FAMOUS 12 REEL FEATURE AT THE MAJESTIC NEXT WEEK.

"If Winter Comes" is one of the greatest books of the last half century. In dramatic strength, deep pathos, whimsical humor and truth of character delineation, no novelist since Charles Dickens has surpassed it.

The William Fox screen version of this sensational novel marks a new era in protodrama production. Here you will see the well beloved characters of Hutchinson portrayed to the life by one of the most remarkable casts ever assembled.

Mark Sabro as Percy Marmont portrays him will appeal to you with even stronger force than when you wept with him and laughed with him in the book.

The absorbing drama of this great story is retained in its original sequence and is built up on a thrilling climax where Sabro, with murder in his heart when he discovers that Twynning's son is the father of poor Effie Bright's child, goes to avenge himself and her.

This is the picture all the world has been waiting to see—and it has arrived. It will play at the Majestic Theatre for three days, beginning Monday. It is the master photoplay of a decade. It is MIGHTIER THAN THE BOOK!

Rev. E. B. Wylie, Erskine Church, Ottawa, Can. Says: The motion picture of "If Winter Comes" is one of the greatest of the industry has produced. In Mark Sabro the author has created as Christ-like a character as could be conceived in modern life. If Christ was here living to-day he would be regarded as a futile, simple fanatic much the same as modern criticism considered the central character in "If Winter Comes." Men who have been God-touched, like the character of Sabre in the book and on the screen, were the saviours of the world and in them faith in humanity was vindicated.

The story centers about pretty Donna Roma, the belle of an Italian village, who loves David Rost. Just as they are about to be married, the fact, I have never heard of a parcel, however small, being missing, or an accident having occurred. And yet the Managers of the Banks handed them

Rotary Luncheon

DR. HOWLETT SPEAKS ON "ORAL HEALTH."

At yesterday's luncheon of the St. John's Rotary Club, Chairman Rotarian "Jim" Pratt introduced Dr. Chas. J. Howlett who delivered a forceful and timely address on "Oral Health as a Preventive of Systemic or General Disease." Dr. Howlett's address is as follows:—

"You have heard splendid addresses delivered to you by men whose knowledge of the conditions they described to you was not only academic or technical but better than that whose knowledge was a compendium of their life's work here in our midst. They have told you of the disease spreading factors which are rampant in our City and in the Colony at large. That information has contained many gems of medical truth, and these have been selected, examined, and enunciated for you in such a clear, comprehensive and forceful manner as to leave no doubt in your minds of the necessity of some tangible effort on the part of this organization towards the correction and betterment of the Community Health, which brings me to the point I want to make in my short talk, and that is the necessity for prevention of Dental and Oral Disease as a preventive of systemic or general disease. This is not to be a lecture on Dentistry. Rather have I chosen the subject of Oral Health as being more in line with your idea of obtaining information regarding Community Health.

I propose to dwell only very briefly on what constitutes a diseased mouth, but would point out that what Dr. Brehm and Mr. Frank Bradshaw found in the intestines of drains and garbage piles we find in the intestines of the teeth, only that in our case things are worse, because the mouth is the ideal breeding place for germs, for as Dr. Roberts said to you "The necessary conditions for germ propagation are moisture, heat and darkness," and you will admit that these conditions are ever present in the mouth. Add to that an area containing multiple abscesses, ulcers and pus pockets, which if located on any part of the body where you could see them would send you post-haste to your physician asking him for God's sake to cure you. This is not an exaggeration; but a minute description of the diseased mouth is not an after dinner topic, and cannot tend to improve our digestion, hence I shall content myself with only this partial description.

Since such a condition exists, then think what happens, or what cannot happen, when we consider that the food we take into our mouths and expect to nourish and strengthen us even to our finger tips must first of all be crushed and rolled in the unclean, diseased and pus laden mouth to a conglomerate mass in the products of putrefaction and disease producing germs. People who are well, as well as the sick, have nourishing food prescribed for them, containing the right number of calories; the correct proportion of vitamins, A, B, or C. And this in hospitals as well as homes, and you see what happens right at the portal of entry to the body of those specially prepared foods. Think of the utility of it. You require no scientific training whatever to grasp the almost utter insanity which expects good results from such conditions. And I would hold up to ridicule the treatment of diseased conditions which does not first of all demand a thorough cleansing of the oral cavity to rid the patient of that terrible handicap.

The conditions which I have described exist to an appalling extent in the mouths of young children and think what is happening to the developing child whose system is absorbing this oral filth. What organic disease is he or she not laying a firm though faint foundation of? Right here I might mention the problem of the dull child. How is it possible for a child afflicted with this terrible disease to concentrate on his studies? Elsewhere, this problem has received its most beneficial treatment through the medium of school clinics, and I could, if time permitted me, give you abundant statistics which show psychological improvements of as high as 200 per cent and that improvement without any extra scholastic instruction. The boy with the criminal tendency comes under this healing and is cured in a great many cases by the same treatment. Here I would like to congratulate the Chairman of the day, "Jim" Pratt, and "Rouben" Horwood, as being amongst the wise initiators of the school nurse system in operation amongst the Methodist schools of the City. Their reward will come in a short time in the sight of healthier and brighter students.

I must speak now of the phase of a question of Oral Health which is of tremendous importance in the community. It is that work referred to by Miss Anderson of the Child Welfare Association in her splendid address delivered to you a few weeks ago regarding the Oral condition of the expectant mother. How can you expect a healthy child to be brought into the world by the mother whose mouth is the locus of all that tends to lower her resistance at a time when she should be at her best, and who has in a diseased mouth an ever present and ever recurring supply of poison for herself and her unborn child. The next logical point for me to make is the care the nursing mother must have for oral infection. I have seen women whose mouths have been literally running with pus and these unfortunate women have been feeding their children on what? On pus. And why? Because of lack of education. The Child Welfare Association is doing something to mitigate this condition and they deserve our whole-hearted support. Here it seems to me that a great deal of good could be accomplished if the ladies of the nursing association were to receive complete instructions in the matter of Oral Hygiene. I have spoken to many nurses about this matter and they all say that, here, in this matter is only briefly covered to in their lectures, and the subject is not on their curriculum. What a field is here, too, for propaganda by women's clubs. Imagine the immense amount of good which could be accomplished through the medium of properly instructive literature placed in the hands of those interested.

Dr. Draper in his able address to you gave you the information that 35 per cent of the insane cases in the institutions that he represented were cured by correction of dental disease. The figures he gives are not peculiar to his institution, but are found in all such institutions where up to date treatment is practiced. Speaking of Dr. Draper I would point out that his work is all done in the alimentary canal, and I would have you think for a moment that the oral cavity is the only portion of that large area which can be thoroughly and scientifically examined without surgical interference and in the mouth we have the logical point to prevent many of the diseased conditions of which Dr. Draper speaks.

We have learned many lessons from the war and one of the greatest of these from a medical standpoint is the lowered hospital period of patients in these institutions which had the benefit of dental treatment. Those hospitals succeeded in lowering the hospital period of the patient from one to twenty-eight days as compared with patients treated for similar trouble in those hospitals which had no dental surgeons. Think what a benefit from merely a financial standpoint that the introduction of such a system in our hospitals and Insane Asylums here would produce. With the current cost of a patient at one of our institutions here being equal to that of our most selected hotels, the saving per year would run into thousands.

Powerful proof of the value of Oral Health may be deduced from the fact that so many of the big industrial concerns in both England and America have established dental clinics for their employees. This they have done not for philanthropic motives but for pure hard shelled business reasons. In other words in order that they may get the maximum efficiency from their employees, knowing full well that it is impossible for anyone suffering from dental disease to be efficient. In this connection I might mention firms like The Morris Packing Company of Chicago, The Helax Preserving Company, John Wannamaker, Messrs. Lord and Taylor, Fry's Chocolate people, The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and even John McGraw, Manager of the New York Giants, who has a dentist on his staff to look after the dental conditions of his ball players. If these people have found it good business to prevent dental disease amongst their employees, how much more could the State profit by attention to this important method of prevention in the institutions which it is its duty to maintain. I would commend this suggestion to the Committee now enquiring into the Government Institutions.

Someone has said that the best way to treat the child is to begin with the grandparents. Then my solution of this difficulty is to start with the grandparents of the future. That too is Dr. "Tim" Mitchell's solution of Civil Health given you in his splendid address at the opening of this series. There have been suggestions made to you in the course of these recent lectures as to how to correct conditions that exist here, but the cost, the opposition, the contrary difficulties are so many. In fact the undertaking is so gigantic that it is mere phantasy to imagine a degree of success commensurate with the effort. Where you to tackle the question of medical and dental inspection of the schools you would be starting something you may hope to finish. Something which would have the support of every child's parents and something which would be a foundation for future efforts, for if there is anything in the maxim "A sound mind in a sound body," the production of the sound body will build that soundness of mind which will appreciate and demand all these improved conditions which other speakers have shown you to be so necessary for Civic Health.

Dr. Howlett's address was the subject of much favourable comment, and action will, no doubt, be taken to improve conditions of which he speaks. A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded the speaker.

The guests were: Dr. Hogan, Mr. Robert Leith, Mr. F. M. Wells, of Little Bay, and Mr. John Mackenzie.

A Spectacularly Beautiful Photoplay

IS "UNSEEN EYES" WITH LIONEL BARRYMORE.

The Canadian Rockies form the picturesque background of "Unseen Eyes," the new Cosmopolitan picture which received its initial screening in St. John's at the Nickel Theatre last night. The film, an adaptation of an Arthur Stringer story, is chock full of action which reaches its climax in an airplane pursuit. The cast is a splendid one in every respect. Lionel Barrymore, is featured in the leading role. Playing opposite him is Seena Owen, who is charming in the role of Miriam. Others in the cast are Louis Wolheim, a most picturesque and efficient villain; Gustav von Seyffertitz, Walter Miller, Charles Beyer, Helen Lindroth, Jack Johnston, Louis Deer, Frances Red Eagle, Paul Panzer and Dan Red Eagle.

"Unseen Eyes" is produced on a magnificent scale that stirs the spectator. The snow scenes of the Northwest are alone worth going miles to see. The hills, evergreens, the open spaces are all thoroughly impressive in their beauty.

The story of Miriam Helston and Conrad Dean and their airplane flight across Canada to rescue her brother from a band of cutthroats, the subsequent perils which overtakes them in the heavy snows of the northwest, their struggle to reach the brother and the thrilling complications that result make the picture a stirring tale of adventure and romance. "Unseen Eyes" is a production of unusual appeal, both scenically and dramatically.

Miss Eleanor Mews charmed her hearers last night by her beautiful rendition from the opera "Madame Butterfly" and "A Japanese Love Song." Miss Mews' voice contains remarkable beauty and clearly shows training and culture which she brings forth with perfect ease. This same program will be repeated to-night.

Surgeons Are Told of New Operations

Simple Method to Remove Ulcers in the Stomach is Shown at Clinical Congress—New Method of Curing Paralysis.

New York, Oct. 24.—Dr. H. B. Devine, an Australian surgeon, told the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons that instead of high-priced specialists cutting the stomach to remove ulcers the ordinary practitioner could get the same result by an operation so simple that the patient's health would not be seriously endangered. This operation, he said, was to sever the diseased part of the sympathetic nerve, for it was from this that the ulcers developed.

Dr. Devine's address was the result of an invitation extended to him by Dr. Charles Mayo, President of the Congress, when he visited Melbourne some months ago with several American surgeons. Dr. Devine spoke at the Waldorf-Astoria, where the Congress is being held.

In the past in treating ulcers surgeons have been obliged to remove part of the stomach itself, a dangerous operation that but few specialists can successfully perform. Dr. Devine, on the other hand, proceeding along lines somewhat parallel to those of Dr. N. D. Royale, of Sydney, Australia, and Dr. John I. Hunter, also an Australian, by means of a comparatively simple operation frees the stomach from the malignant influence of sympathetic nerves when the latter have become abnormal and diseased.

"Modern civilization," Dr. Devine told the 1,500 delegates to the Congress, "is at the root of most of our gastric complaints. The Eskimos have no such ailments. The sympathetic nervous system is the thing on which we take the daily strain of living. It responds to all our moods and its action is responsible for our personal ties."

With the aid of lantern slides, painted by well-known Australian artists, Dr. Devine proceeded with a technical exposition of his method, which medical experts say is likely to revolutionize stomach surgery.

"It is a more efficient method of handling a very big and almost inoperable area," he continued. "The stomach is pumped dry of air, so that we are able to get access to any part of the abdomen very easily. The endeavour is to make everything as simple as possible, primarily with having future work of this nature done by the ordinary practitioner."

A recently developed surgical procedure for the relief of spastic or rigid paralysis said to have been resulted in great benefit to a majority of the eighty patients upon whom it has been used, was described by Dr. N. Royale, of Sydney, Australia. One patient, Dr. Royale said, had practically regained control of his paralyzed limbs as a result of the operation.

"Not all cases of spastic paralysis are suitable for the operation," the Sydney surgeon told his hearers, "and great care must be exercised in selecting appropriate patients."

The operation consists in removing the sympathetic nerves from the paralyzed limbs; the theory being that one of the functions of these nerves is to maintain postures and that this function becomes abnormal in spastic cases so that it is difficult for a patient to change the position of an affected limb.

"The immediate result of the operation," Dr. Royale said, "is to restore the ability to change positions quickly. This does not involve any loss of power, and the resulting freedom of movement compensates for the loss that occurs by removing the sympathetic nerves."

Dr. Royale, who is considered an authority on spastic paralysis, was assisted in his experimental investigation by Dr. John I. Hunter, of Sydney, who also is attending the Clinical Congress.

Open War on Trotsky in Russia

Members of Inner Council Says He Has Departed From Pure Bolshevism.

ATTACKS PUBLISHED.

His Book a Danger to the Party—Victory For His Adversaries.

MOSCOW, Nov. 27.—The full text of the reports of Leo Kamenef and M. Stalin, attacking War Minister Trotsky, have just been published. These reports heretofore have been confined to the inner council of the Communist party. M. Trotsky's career, prior to the 1917 revolution and during and after the Bolshevik coup d'état, is carefully surveyed in forty columns of printed matter.

Both Kamenef and Stalin, the Soviet leaders, strive to show that Trotsky always has acted as a "men-shivik" and now has departed from pure Bolshevism and party idealism. Kamenef explains that the central committee of the party was compelled to inaugurate a campaign against Trotsky because his recent book, "Lessons of the 1917 Revolution," was being published under the ostensible protection of the Communist party and, coming from a member of the party's political committee, which directs the work of the Communist International, the book is a danger for the party.

It cannot, therefore, Kamenef be allowed to pass unchallenged. No exception is taken to the book, added, it might be acceptable manual for young Communist members of the Communist International.

Accused of Heresy.
While Kamenef's criticism of the general criticism of Trotsky to his self-defence, Stalin, who is a member of the executive committee of the Communist party, dwells upon the war minister's alleged abandonment of his Bolshevik principles. He accuses Trotsky of attempting to slip from his mantle for himself. He urges members of the party to wage a relentless war against the leaders, as otherwise Trotsky may become the concentration for all non-proletarian elements to strive to disintegrate the dictatorship.

Although Trotsky's friends that the present movement is intended to render him politically innocuous, Stalin says he does not repress or harsh treatment of opponents. He declares there is danger in the present controversy splitting the party, adding, "I will struggle against Trotsky to eliminate his menshevik ideas."

War Minister Deserted.
Unlike last year's controversy, ever, when Trotsky found support in many quarters, especially among young Communists and cadets, the war minister this almost deserted. There are reports of his avowedly outspoken who dare take up his defence of the all powerful elements of the Communist party which are against him.

Numerous resolutions are in daily from the provincial branches of the Communist party pleading fullest support to the committee's attitude toward Trotsky. Following his tactics of the war minister maintains a silence. He has not yet uttered a single word, either in speech or the press, and there are reports that he does not even attend the ordinary routing of business by the council is now directed by Trotsky's assistant. Political advisers seem to think that Trotsky's versatility have scored a complete victory over the war chief but believe that the party leaders attempt to dethrone him as a means for such a measure would produce a profound reaction on the rank and file of the army. Perhaps the day deep resentment could be among certain sections of the party which consider the most able member of the government.

There is on record a man who had stopped the bell, will, and restore rather pleasant, but performs often, and "the of all, the probable, he been at his message would his accustomed. CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Monday morning at noon the Spencer College exhibited its annual Christmas collection of gifts which are this year being sent to Rev. F. Jones, of Cow Head, St. John's District and to Rev. J. R. A. of Belleoram for distribution to the children of their respective parishes. These gifts were given with a good heart by the children themselves, and their own playthings, in order to lighten the hearts of many who are so unfortunately situated. The collection consists of well filled Xmas stockings, teddy bears, dolls, cradles, and articles of clothing, including articles of clothing, including articles of clothing. The Rev. Canon of the College Commission addressed the pupils, congratulating them on their generous hearts and their self-sacrifice in parting with their treasures. They have the knowledge that it is a pleasure to give than to receive and that the greatest pleasure in life is that of giving others to be happy. The pupils sang a Christmas Carol and the soloists were Esther Carnell, the Butler, Audrey Stirling, Ernest, Doris Butler, and Joan. Prizes will be distributed on December 18th, and school closes on the 22nd for the Christmas holidays, and again on January 8th. Among those present to see the children's gifts were Mr. and Mrs. Eric Bowring, H. L. Pike and Mrs. Ford.

Raised From the Dead

"Raised from the dead" was the startling heading in a newspaper and many people must have wondered whose heart had ceased to beat, while lying on the operating table, and the restarting of that organ by massage with the surgeon's hands. A physician in an English paper, he continues: It is true that some of the marvelous surgical science reported in the papers are either stale news, or so distorted from actual fact as to make him smile, but this is the case of the wonderful new things of the day is at hand when, perhaps there is no serious organic disease or irreparable injury, it will be possible to raise the newly dead, after syncope or shock, by forcing still heart to take up its work.

There is on record the strange case of a man who had the curious power of stopping the beating of his heart, still, and restoring it again. He was rather pleased with his own cleverness, but performed the trick once again, and "the last time was the end." It is probable, however, that had a man been at hand a little cardiac resuscitator would have set the organ to work again.

The heart is a pump, and will for a while go on for a quite well for a while by hand, while the doctor talks, and it takes a rest. One to remember that, normally, it has a rest from the moment of until death. And what happens in these cases of massage is that the organ rapidly makes his way to the heart, and taking it firmly and gently in his hand, squeezes the organ so many times to the minute, thus keeping the stream of blood circulating; all goes well, the heart gradually overcomes itself, and begins to beat on its own accord.

This it practically amounts to this that a person may actually die and be brought to life again.

There was a time when it would have been thought madness to touch a heart. Yet wonderful things were done in the late war in removing bullets and shrapnel and in repairing heart rents, though even to-day, there are men going about with bits of metal in their heart walls—for sometimes it is better to let sleeping dogs lie than to stir up the dead.

For, though the heart is not so fragile as we once fancied, it has a nervous mechanism. It is not a little touchy, and easily thrown out of gear.

What Flyers Must Learn

The air is such an unstable medium that flying can scarcely be a popular art for many decades, says a pilot of 1914.
 An intending flyer must possess the bird man's physique and temperament, he needs alertness and resourcefulness of mind. A knowledge of aerodynamics of a mechanical aptitude is desirable but not enough in itself. Delicacy of touch which gives the pilot complete mastery of his aeroplane and conveys the "feel" of his machine to his brain, in time to correct a side-slip or a stall is the gift of nature alone. So are eyes that can judge speed and distance with unerring accuracy. But the latter qualifications the novice learns both to "take off" his machine and to make a safe landing.
 Navigation is a science. Before a cross country flight the pilot ascertainment the velocity of the wind. He then calculates its approximate strength at the height which he has chosen for his flight, say 2,000 feet. The velocity at this height is just about double the velocity of the wind on the ground. It also blows in a slightly different direction and the pilot must allow for this "veering angle." He then obtains the mean compass bearing to his objective after adding or deducting the angle which represents the force of the wind.
 Air sickness is the bughbear of the novice. The malady can sometimes be overcome by regular passage flights which accustom the novice to the sensation of flight; it is unwise to hurry.
 The apparent smoothness of an aeroplane when watched from the crowd gives observers no idea of the pitching and tossing or "bumps" that constantly affect these machines.
 Clouds envelop an aeroplane in a steamy fog. They should be dodged when possible, because the pilot cannot trust his sense of balance—the "bumps" upset that. He depends on the indicating instrument alone. Hail or rain is very unpleasant and may damage the propeller. When the sun is low on the frontal horizon the pilot finds it very hard to see.
 Year by year difficulties are surmounted. Perhaps designers will evolve a machine which has the self-righting properties of a lifeboat. Safety at slow speeds must be obtained and the controls must be simplified before the man in the street can expect to fly.
 A motorist may commit many glaring mistakes during his apprenticeship, but the learner in an aeroplane knows that his first slight error may cause his death.

Is Your Child Undernourished?
 Your child may not be sick, but unless he is a noisy, rollicking, romping youngster—full of activity, energy and life—he is probably undernourished.
 Undernourishment does not mean lack of sufficient food. It means in the food—elements in the food—elements that promote energy and growth.
Brick's Tastless
 contain these needed elements in just the right degree and it is rich in vitamins—that mysterious "something" that makes children grow and keeps those of advanced years fit and energetic.
