CHAPTER XXIV.

"And it is now half-past ten," he said, looking hard at her vacant eyes. "Half-past ten," she repeated. "In half an hour you will force me to this! Can it be possible? How can such villainy be consummated undetected, unrestrained?" He smiled. "The very audacity, as you call it—I call it courage—of the thing is its safeguard. Come, Leonora, one time you would have leaped with delight at the thought of such a fate. Am I grown so distasteful?" She shuddered and walked to the door. "At eleven," he said, with emphasis, as he held it open for her, "and while you are dressing I will tell the servants.

He rang the bell. "Your mistress desires me to request your attendance, all of you, here in this room, at eleven o'clock," he said to the man. The man bowed and hurried down to the servants' hall, whence there immediately arose a buzz of expectation, for by this time the rumor had reached the hall and the visitor and his order confirmed it.

For half an hour the arch plotter paced the room, the special license in his hand, the darkening frown of a determined, evil purpose on his face. As the clock struck eleven the servants filed into the room and stood silent and embarrassed, looking at each other and the tall, dark figure standing on the hearth.

He looked at his watch, and as the rattle of carriage wheels broke the silence and caused the footman to hurry out to the hall, said: "You all know why you are here? Your mistress is going to be married, and wishes you all to witness the ceremony. That is the clergyman—and who is this?" he asked, as the bent form of Jack Druitt tramped slowly into the room close behind the curate of Cheriton.

"That is Jack Druitt, the lodge-keeper," said the house-keeper. Melchior nodded, and old Jack tramped across the room and took up his position beside the French window.

The curate, a young man, overcome with bashfulness in the magnificence of the Hall, and the sudden honor that had fallen upon him, shook hands with Melchior, and wiped the nervous perspiration from his face as the former explained in glib sentences the singularly short notice he had given.

"Lady Melville is too unwell to undergo a public ceremony and I have matters of immense importance awaiting my attention in the East. I am compelled to start to-day, hence the short notice, which I hope has not inconvenienced you."

"Oh, no," stammered the young cleric, overwhelmed by the graciousness of this magnificent bridegroom. "Not at all—only too happy to do anything—that is to—er—be of any service to Lady Melville."

"Thank you, thank you," said Melchior, with another smile. "Ah, here is her ladyship," and as the curate bowed, blundered and trembled he went forward and took the thin, white hand and led her to the table.

"Have you the license?" said the curate, slipping on his surplice. "Yes, yes," said Melchior. "It is here," and while the weak eyes of the curate scanned it, his own gray, impatient ones glittered as if they could kill him.

"Quite correct," said the poor young fellow. "Stand this side, Lady Melville. Dear me, how ill—or—you look! Don't you think, sir, her ladyship had better wait a little—"

Ill indeed! Ill unto death, one would have said judging by the livid lips, strained, vacant eyes and pallid face.

But pushing aside the servants who drew near at this question, Melchior replied, with suppressed passion: "You will kill her ladyship, indeed, sir, if you linger," and the alarmed curate opened his book in a flutter of consternation.

A dead silence fell as he commenced, but before a sentence was completed, a sudden noise, like the flinging open of the lodge gates, made all start, and the next moment the bursting open of the room door brought the curate up short.

The woman, wound up to this pitch of excitement, screamed as the door gave way with a crash, for, unseen by all, Melchior had managed to lock it, and Melchior himself dropped Lady Melville's hand and turned quickly.

With the rapidity of a flash of lightning his alert mind took in the situation, and quick as an arrow from the bow with a fearful oath he sprang like a leopard to the French window.

The group fell aside as if a thunderbolt was clearing its way through them, but a figure that had been quietly watching at the back stepped in the way and clatching Melchior by the throat literally flung him back into the center of the room.

He fell with a dull thud, but in a moment sprang to his feet again, when a dozen hands seized his arms and there he stood brought to bay at last.

CHAPTER XXV.

As the door gave way three persons entered—Sir Ralph, Lillian and Claude Ainsley.

The women folk shrieked, the men uttered ejaculations, Jack Druitt, who had seized Melchior, loosened his grasp to stare in amazement, and in the intense surprise and shock of the moment all forgot the unhappy woman for whom but a moment ago they had all eyes and ears, and let her sink into a chair and hide herself in the confused group, disregarded.

For a moment or so Melchior's head dropped upon his breast and his brows knitted into great cords with the effort his acute brain was making to take in all the points of the situation. At the expiration of those few moments he raised his head and turned his great, black eyes with a piercing glance all round the room.

The faces and forms he saw might well have made the strongest and most daring villain quail.

They seemed only to inspire him with fresh audacity and scorn, and as with a sudden movement of the steely muscles he disengaged himself from the hands of the servants he folded his arms across his chest and in a low, contemptuous, mocking voice, said to Sir Ralph, who, with Lillian on his arm, stood the foremost of the group: "So, Sir Ralph Melville, you intend honoring our quiet nuptials with your stately presence. Ghost, or no ghost, living or dead, you are welcome. You, too, my pretty young lady, I wish you joy of your restored animation and renewed health. Mr. Ainsley, too, if my eyes do not deceive me—uninvited guests all, but no doubt welcome, eh, Lady Melville?"

All eyes followed his finger as he pointed it with suppressed, passionate hate and derision at the shrinking figure and vacant, horrified eyes of his victim.

With an unmeaning cry, she seemed about to fall from the chair, but Claude Ainsley pointed to the helpless and alarmed curate to support her, which he did, staring round with astonished face at the whole group.

All this had taken not a moment in passing, and amid the confused buzzing that now arose of "Is it really Sir Ralph? What does it all mean?" Melchior spoke again:

"Come," he said, nodding at Claude Ainsley with a smile of malicious daring. "The plot is thickening. And you, I suppose, Mr. Ainsley, are the spokesman as well as the tool of the party? For I doubt not there is to be an oratorical display in the accusation, and that this highly dramatic scene has been properly rehearsed—"

"Silence!" said Claude Ainsley's stern voice. "Silence! Outside that door are two detectives. One such other sentence and I hand you over to them without a word."

Melchior glanced at the door with a scornful smile.

BRACE UP.

It's a rocky road you're treading. If improvement there's no sign, and you often feel like shedding quantities of scalding brine. You are torn by thorn and bramble and your shins are full of stones, and you gambol for the aching of your bones. You are stone-hearted, you are graveled, and you've lost your grip on hope; but a million men have traveled the long and weary slope. Yes, a million men have started up the high-road to success, and the weak and timid-hearted slumped beneath the first distress. They invoked the name of Peter and sat down to sigh and weep, while they watched the brave ones taster up the long and craggy slope, both from foreign and domestic shores. The story is the same from all parts of the world—no new mines in sight and production going on at top speed. More than that, there does not seem to be any reasonable possibility of the discovery of new districts of potentiality in the future. Meanwhile consumption is moving ahead with leaps and bounds. Three Western States—Missouri, Idaho and Utah, in the order named—produce 73 per cent. of all domestic output, Missouri's total being 32.4 per cent., Idaho's 21 per cent. and Utah's 20 per cent. "In Arizona, the copper Queen has been a steady producer of lead for many years, its Southwest Division having held a record of 1,000,000 lb. a month over a considerable period of time. The Shattuck production of lead ore now far exceeds its copper, and the flotation mill at Lowell is working very satisfactorily. The Hilltop mine in the Paradise section, is making regular shipments to Roddo on the El Paso and Southwestern Railroad; and the Contention Mill, near Fairbanks, operating on the old Grand Central tailings dump, is putting through approximately 150 tons a day. "Inasmuch as the consumption of lead in batteries alone reached 170,000 tons last year—twice as much as the entire production of the United States in 1880—and as the consumption in several other lines has increased with the same rapidity, it would appear that the world faces an imminent shortage of lead."—Engineering and Mining Journal.

World's Lead Shortage Imminent

Possibility of a world shortage of lead is given in recent statistics published by the Southwestern Mining News Service. According to these figures the world production in 1915 was 1,467,861 tons as compared with 1,817,893 tons in 1923. "The announcement reads in part: "Reliable figures of consumption for 1924 in the United States are not yet

The Traffic in Arms

The implications of "the traffic in arms" should be brought home to the public in this country by the case of Cheng Sai Chai, the Chinese cook of the British steamer, who at Westport was fined $478.44, (six months' imprisonment in default) "for knowingly harbouring and concealing" revolvers, Mauser pistols, and ammunition to that value on his ship—not to mention smuggling opium, for which he got another six months without opium. Ching had stowed these precious articles in a tank for conveyance to his island, where a ready and active market doubtless awaited them. A noteworthy feature in the case was that the quantities of war were put on board the ship at Hamburg. Hitherto the only known exporters of munitions to China have been French and American. Now the Germans are competing in the nefarious trade, and before eyes in China are the results that come of it. When shall we know the outcome of all the talk recently devoted to this subject at Geneva?—Truth.

Meigle Returns From Labrador
S.S. Meigle, Capt. Burgess, returned from Northern Labrador at 10 o'clock last night, after a round trip passage of 14 days. The ship met with a heavy weather on the return, all port call being made. Much fog prevailed on the return trip, delay being caused at Gros Islands, and since Tuesday the weather was so thick that the captain was obliged to cut down the ship's speed. Capt. Burgess reports that all the floaters have done well, and never before in the season were so well fish. The stationers have not done so well, although good fishing was reported between Occasional Harbor and Fishing Ships' Harbor the past week. From Tinker Island to Hopedale very little has been done. At Musford Picket, Ironbound Island, Savage Islands and Kidlapke fish is plentiful while Grady is also very good. The Bonaville fleet operating in the Straits and Labrador have secured good catches. Baxter Barry at Splitting Knife reports 1700 quintals, while his son has 100 quintals. The Meigle brought a small freight, consisting principally of oil in casks, and the following passengers:—Capt. W. C. Winsor, J. S. Allan, wife and 2 children; W. Seymour, Rev. Dr. Powell and wife; Rev. H. J. Fogle and wife, J. Moore, Miss L. M. Starkey, W. Kennedy, V. Keen, A. W. Elmer, A. E. Bailey, W. F. Campbell, A. W. Fitzgerald, J. Long, R. Osh, E. Clarke, W. Long, J. John, R. Shea, Miss G. Costello, R. Bowering, Miss E. J. Howarth, Miss B. Urch, J. Murphy, Miss Rideout, J. Brazil, Miss Mary Brazil.

QUESTION OF INTERPRETATION.
Mama—"Where have you been, Johnny?"
Small Boy—"Playing ball."
Mama (severely).—"But I told you to beat the rug, didn't I?"
Small Boy—"No, mama, you told me to hang the rug on the line and then beat it."

The Tragedy of the Emigrant Ship

The Record of Disasters at Sea Contains No More Terrible Story Than That of the Eagle Speed. The Strange Events Which Led Up To This Dreadful Shipwreck in the Shark-infested Waters of the Ganges' Mouth Are Recalled in This Gripping Article.

One of the strangest and most inexplicable of all dramas of the sea was that of the sailing ship Eagle Speed, which left Port Canning, India, with 478 emigrants, mostly State coolies, one Sunday morning.

The Eagle Speed, a pine-hull vessel, had been believed to be up to the average standard of safety. All the formalities necessary in shipping emigrants had been attended to by the Protector of Emigrants and the agent for the colony to which the coolies were going, but the crew were not mustered by the pilot, as is usual in such sailings.

Warned by Accident.

Had this muster taken place, it would have been found that only six seamen were in a condition to work. Just when the Eagle Speed was about to sail, the Captain, chief officer, and coolie doctor were suddenly taken ill. The two former had to be confined to their cabins, whilst the latter could not sail at all, his place being filled at the last moment by the port doctor. All these circumstances were brought to mind later.

The Eagle Speed, not being able to get out of port without assistance, owing to the dearth of wind, was towed out by the steamer Lady Elgin. Captain Hoskins, the port master, took temporary charge of the Eagle Speed in the enforced absence from duty of her own skipper.

All went tolerably well till the following day, when the Eagle Speed encountered roughish weather. The rope connecting her with the Lady Elgin suddenly snapped, and she lay at the mercy of the waves, which, although not yet very big, seemed to quite stagger her. Yet the ship was still in the estuary of the Ganges. Afraid of what might happen in the open sea, the emigrants begged Captain Hoskins to put into the nearest port. He said he would signal to Captain Heath, the skipper of the steamer.

All Hands To The Pumps.

Whether he did so or not is uncertain, but in any case, no notice was taken of the emigrants' request, and after two hours had been spent in passing and bring a new rope between the two ships, the Eagle speed was towed still farther towards the open sea.

The two ships had not proceeded far, however, before they drifted in some mysterious fashion on to the Rocky Mullia Sands, and there the Eagle Speed sprung a bad leak. Again the emigrants petitioned that the vessel should be towed back to harbor, and again no notice was taken of their request. On the contrary, as soon as the ships were free of the sands, the Eagle Speed was towed still farther down the estuary.

Then came another catastrophe. At ten o'clock that night the Lady Elgin broke down. The two vessels cast anchor and lay side by side. Meanwhile, the unfortunate Eagle Speed was shipping much water, and all hands that could be spared had to be kept at the pumps.

When Panic Broke Out.

At last she signalled to the steamer that she was sinking, and begged for instant help. The S.O.S. was ignored. The captain of the Lady Elgin not only did not pass any lifelines to the emigrant ship, but did not launch any boats to her assistance. In fact, he did nothing. And all the while the sea rose higher and higher.

Up to this time the emigrants had behaved with the most laudable composure, but now, when it seemed that they were going to be left to their fate they gave way to despair. While some shrieked and clung to the gangways, others in a frenzy threw themselves overboard.

Captain Hoskins now ordered the launching of the boats. Unfortunately, however, the panic was not confined to the emigrants. The first boat out was monopolized by the pilot and the crew, who, deaf to the piteous entreaties of the coolies, at once made for the Lady Elgin and refused to return. The second boat launched was seized in the same way. She sank, however.

The third, captained by Hoskins himself, did take off a few emigrants. She succeeded in reaching the steamer, and Hoskins came back in her, and took off still more. He had to offer money out of his own pocket before he could induce any of the first boat's crew of the Eagle Speed to help him. They told him they did not care how many of the coolies perished, or what became of their own sick captain and first officer.

While all this was happening, things went from bad to worse on board the Eagle Speed. The few of the crew still aboard got hold of the brandy chests, and, having broached them, became utterly mad with drink.

The climax came when, shortly after midnight, the Lady Elgin suddenly moved away and retraced her way homewards. At first the 300 people still left on the ship could scarcely believe their eyes. When the terrible truth came to them they gave way to the wildest grief and rage, tossing up their arms to Heaven and uttering the most terrible anathemas on those who had so basely deserted them.

Horror Of The Jungle.

All this time the ship sank still lower into the water, until she finally went down. Only the top of her mizenmast was left above the waves, and to this several native boys clung desperately.

Now began the most horrible part of all. The waters were infested with sharks, which made at once for the scene of the shipwreck. The sea was reddened with the blood of the coolies. Many of those who succeeded in avoiding this fate met with another almost if not quite, as terrible. Managing to get to shore, either on bits of wreckage or by swimming, they found themselves on the confines of a jungle, and on endeavoring to penetrate, fell victims to various beasts of prey.

In one instance two boys, the greatest of friends, who had stuck to each other with the utmost devotion and loyalty, were threading their way between high grasses and shrubs, when there was a low growl. They found themselves confronted by a tiger, whose size and ferocious appearance were considerably magnified by the moonlight and shadows.

In The Crocodile Pool.

Losing their presence of mind at the sight, they turned tail and fled, only to fall into a pool of black, slimy water. Before they could extricate themselves, a hideous head showed itself above the surface, and one of the lads was dragged under. A huge crocodile had got him.

The other boy, realizing that nothing could save his friend, reached the side of the pool in safety, and eventually succeeded in reaching human habitation.

In all, 265 out of the 497 emigrants, who originally sailed in the Eagle Speed, were lost. When the disaster was reported a most painful sensation was caused throughout India and the Far East, and scathing comments were made.

Two questions especially were asked: Why wasn't the Eagle Speed taken back to port at once, as the emigrants wished, when the leak was discovered? And why did the steamer leave the Eagle Speed to her fate, when, if she had stood by, every one on board the emigrant ship could have been saved?

These questions have never satisfactorily been answered. And as sixty years have passed since these events, it is unlikely that any explanation will now be forthcoming.

Treasures of the Incas

THE LAND WHERE FABULOUS WEALTH AWAITS RECOVERY. When, towards the middle of the sixteenth century, the Spaniards conquered Peru, the greatest treasure in gold and silver that was ever collected was lost to the world.

Some of it, it is true, has been recovered from time to time, but the bulk remains where it was hidden by the Inca nobles. Mr. C. H. Rodgers, in his "Adventures in Peru," tells the story of the descendant of one of these nobles, who kept sheep near Cuzco, the ancient capital of the Inca Empire. The man's wife was not satisfied with the style in which her husband maintained his household, and was constantly heaping reproaches on his head. "You call yourself Inca—a lord—but you are only a poor Indian," she told him. The man put up with this as long as he could, but eventually decided to stop her wrumbings. So he blindfolded her and conducted her a little distance from his house to a vault beneath the city. Then he removed the bandage from her eyes.

The woman stared about her in amazement, for she found herself in a veritable Aladdin's cave. Immense quantities of gold ingots and ornaments littered the floor, while ranged round the room were statues of all the Inca kings, fashioned of pure gold.

Treasure-hunting in Peru has its disadvantages. At one place the author met two Italians who, while working in the tunnel of an old mine that had been lost to sight for many years, came across a big slab.

This, when lifted up, disclosed an iron box which contained an old document. After describing an ancient ruin situated near where the Italians were working, it continued:

"If you dig at the place indicated you will find, about five feet down, the stone roof of a big cellar. Raise the slabs in the left-hand corner; you will then see a stone stairway. At the bottom there is rich treasure in gold and silver and precious stones."

The Italians followed the instructions, and had reached the stairway, when one of the ten Indians they had engaged to assist them raised the alarm. A squadron of cavalry could be seen topping the horizon!

Hastily covering their excavations, the treasure-seekers prepared to make themselves scarce, but were intercepted by the Prefect of the district, who demanded to see the authority under which they pursued their inquiries.

Of course none was forthcoming, so they were ordered to leave the place.

Six months later, though, they went back, intending to make a fresh start. But they were again out of luck. They found that the Prefect had been busy and had unearthed a vast amount of treasure. Eventually, after a great deal of argument, the Italians succeeded in getting £3,000.

Another case mentioned by the author concerns an American named Chase, who got hold of a document that purported to give the exact location of a certain long-lost silver mine of great richness.

The American was much impressed with what was set down, so started work at the spot indicated.

He found that it was covered by a landslide due to a great earthquake, but he nevertheless worked away for fourteen years, until he had exhausted all his money.

After several fruitless appeals to friends and relatives he eventually approached a storekeeper named Harris, who agreed to finance him on shares.

Another two years of hard work passed, and then one day, as he was preparing dinner, one of his helpers came rushing up to announce that the entrance had at last been found.

Chase left the dinner to cook itself, and followed the messenger hot-foot to the mine. There he feasted his eyes on a great accumulation of silver ingots.

Out of this hoard he banked £700,000 within the next six months, and he died recently, leaving a fortune of over four millions.

A Wax Finish Denotes Refinement

YOU can give every room in your home that delightful air of immaculate cleanliness by using Johnson's Polishing Wax occasionally on your furniture, woodwork, floors and linoleum. It imparts a beautiful, hard, dry, glass-like polish which will not show heel and finger prints or collect dust and lint. Johnson's Wax cleans, polishes, preserves and protects—all in one operation. It is easy to apply and polish.

JOHNSON'S Paste - Liquid - Powdered POLISHING WAX

WAX all of your floors and linoleum. It will make them beautiful—easy to care for—they won't be slippery—and will not heel print. And WAX is, by far, the most economical polish for floors and linoleum. With waxed floors expensive refinishing is never necessary for, walked-on places can be easily rewaxed as they appear without going over the entire floor.

A Perfect Furniture Polish

Johnson's Liquid Wax is the ideal furniture polish. It covers up surface mars and prevents checking—Forms a thin, protecting finish coat—Takes all the drudgery from dusting. Johnson's Wax adds years to the life and beauty of varnish.

Johnson's Polishing Wax is conveniently put up in three forms. Use the Paste Wax for all floors—wood, linoleum, tile, etc. We recommend the Liquid Wax for polishing furniture, phonographs, woodwork, linoleum, leather and motor cars. Johnson's Powdered Wax will immediately put any floor in perfect condition for dancing.

The Evening Telegram

THE EVENING TELEGRAM, LIMITED, PROPRIETORS.

St. John's, Newfoundland, August 14, 1925.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR

It was reported a few days ago that the British Chancellor of the Exchequer had determined to direct his efforts in the direction of reducing expenditure, a question which, more than any other to-day, calls for action not only in the Mother Country but throughout the Dominions.

The outcry which the war demanded on the part of all the countries that took part in it did not permit of any consideration for economy. At all cost we had to win, and we trusted to the wisdom of those who came after to discover ways and means, not so much of refilling the empty coffers, but of introducing some rigid system whereby the drain on the funds would be lessened.

The politician took a somewhat different view. His main idea was to find new sources of revenue which would maintain the public service, many times increased during the years of war, and his last thought seemed to be to restore it to its normal strength; as for restricting it to narrower limits he considered that quite out of the question. The people in consequence were called upon to make the sacrifices, but sacrifices, not of comforts and conveniences that they would readily have forgone, but such as taxed their pockets and made the burden already excessive more than they could bear.

As will have been seen from an article published recently, almost every department of the British public service is considerably larger than it was previous to the war. In Newfoundland the same is true, even though the complaint had been made time and again before 1914 that we could well afford to reduce it. This country is making a wonderful effort to recover from the great sacrifices made and depression which followed the declaration of peace, but that recovery would be quicker if the taxation were not so heavy. It is true that the Government has already made considerable reductions by placing several essential articles of food on the free list, but the whole tariff requires revision, and a wiser one than that of the late tariff commissioners—a revision the main idea of which must be to reduce the amount paid in taxes by the ordinary citizen.

The loss of revenue which would result must be offset by reducing the cost of the public service and by exercising the greatest care in administering the public funds. We feel confident that no man who has held the office of Minister of Finance is better qualified to carry out a policy of retrenchment than the present owner of that office. It would require on his part great courage, independence and a disregard for appeals which were not absolutely in the interest of the country. It would require on the part of the Government which undertook the responsibility the assurance that the support of the country was behind it, and the mandate that was given in 1923 to the present administration is the best testimony that they have that support. It was in fact for that purpose for which they were elected, and now that they know the exact position of the country, they are for the first time since their election in a position to put such a policy into effect.

We believe that the need of the hour is a relief of the pressing burden. We are confident that the country could be effectively administered by a considerably reduced number of officials, and we are thoroughly convinced that the general public would heartily endorse the policy which aimed at these ends.

MR. WOLVIN'S VISIT

Newfoundland is soon to have a visit from Mr. Roy Wolvin, the much abused President of the British Empire Steel Corporation. Other directors of Besco will accompany Mr. Wolvin, and we are told that the purpose of their visit is to confer with the Government on matters concerning the Bell Island mines.

That the result of this conference will ensure increased activity on the island and the employment of a great many more men is to be earnestly desired. The limited operations on Bell Island have deprived hundreds of Conception Bay men of the means of earning their livelihood, and if work can be found for them in the mines, the business stagnation from which Conception Bay is now suffering will be greatly relieved.

We learn that during the past three weeks ore has been shipped from Bell Island at the rate of approximately 120,000 tons a week, and if this be so, it is idle for Besco to complain that market conditions do not warrant a great increase in the number of men employed there. In fact there seems to be no apparent reason why the export tax on ore should not be enforced again.

The outcome of the conference will be awaited with interest, and it is to be hoped that one of the results will be the permanent settlement of the difficulties which have caused those accustomed to look to the Bell Island mines for their living, to dwell in constant uncertainty of the duration of their employment.

Besco's Ore Mines

AT PEAK OF ACTIVITY.

British Empire Steel Corporation's iron mines at Bell Island are now operating on the largest scale since the conclusion of the World War, employing 2,500 men, with an output of 1,250,000 tons, of which nearly 1,000,000 tons are being exported to Germany, the remainder being for the use of the company's own steel plant at Sydney, N.S.

Export shipments average a shipload daily, and all departments of the mine are fully staffed, except the "boilerers," the men who load small ore in the underground areas. The company recently gave these men a 10 per cent. advance in wages, finding it increasingly difficult to obtain men willing to undertake this strenuous form of labor. The company hopes to overcome this difficulty by installing additional machinery to perform many of the tasks

Prominent Visitors Coming by Sachem

According to advice received from Head Office by the local agents of the Furness Withy Company, Sir Howard D'Elville and Sir George Framp-ton, are passengers by S.S. Sachem, leaving Liverpool to-day. Sir Howard D'Elville is a member of the Parliamentary Delegation and Sir George Framp-ton is an eminent sculptor who is visiting Newfoundland in connection with statutory for Bowring Park.

Allegations Not True

We have on our files a typewritten letter, unintelligible sign, in which a number of allegations are made regarding the Circus. The writer charges that the Circus is paying no Amusement Tax and complains because the law will not allow a wheel on the race course for charitable purposes, whilst allowing the circus to have many. Had the writer taken the trouble to enquire it would be found that the Municipal Council is collecting the Amusement Tax, and that it is being paid regularly at the rate of 3-1-2 per cent. on the gross proceeds. In regard to wheels of fortune it is the Regatta Committee's ruling and not the law that prohibits their use on the race course.

Largely Attended Funeral

The funeral of the late Charles Miller took place from his late residence, Mullock Street, yesterday afternoon, and was attended by a large concourse of citizens, including representatives from the Masonic and Sons of England Societies. The cortege wended its way to the Church of England Cemetery where interment took place. The service at the chapel and graveside was conducted by Rev. Mr. Godfrey.

Patient Arrives for Hospital

A fisherman named Richards, of the Lunenburg schr. W. E. Knox, arrived from Cape Broyle last night by the cruiser Arras, to enter the hospital for treatment. Shortly after arrival the port doctor went on board and found that the man was suffering from rheumatic fever. Arrangements were then made for his immediate removal to hospital. The Arras reports all the Canadian bankers have done well. The W. E. Knox is bound home on her second trip with 2800 quintals.

A Second False Alarm

About three o'clock this morning the firemen received a call from Box 17, situated at the corner of Bond and Colonial Street. Arriving there they found no sign of fire nor was any one present to give directions. Yesterday morning, at about the same hour, the firemen responded to an alarm from a box near Allan's Square, and there was no sign of fire in the neighborhood. Every effort should be made to bring the guilty party to justice.

Personal

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

August 13th.—Up betimes and talking with my wife concerning the new mayday that she has taken into the house, and is says my wife, a most admirable slut and pleases her mightily, doing more service than any 2 we did ever have before, and deserves better wages. Anon over the road to the city and do remark what a pleasure it now is to drive over the high roads where once 'twas an ordeal to be dreaded nor may it now be said that Newfoundlanders cannot build good roads. This day did have much pleasant discourse with Mr. Smith that is Actuary with the Confederation Life Company, and do speak highly of what he has seen in this country. Indeed, Mr. Pepps, says he, "You have here a land of promise" nor have I ever seen more beautiful scenery in all my many travels. He did, moreover, state his belief in the industrial possibilities of the country and thought how much could be done with agriculture on the West Coast. Indeed, a most pleasant man, and well spoken. Do learn how Mr. Wolvin comes to Newfoundland, and with him, divers directors of Besco, but the purpose of their journey is, I learn, unknown to the Cabal, albeit it generally believed they will confer with the Government on divers matters affecting Bell Island. Do learn how the Newfoundland delegation to the International Parliamentary Conference at Washington will be Mr. Monroe, Mr. Higgins, Mr. Hickman, Mr. Morine and Sir P. McGrath, and many of them like to take their good ladies with them, being that it is permitted to each delegate that he take a member of his family with him.

A taxi driver convicted of parking his car on the street without a light between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m. was fined $5 or in default 10 days' imprisonment.

Eleven persons were killed and sixteen injured in last night's railway disaster when a crowded Paris-Calais express train of twenty coaches piled up and burst into flames just as it swept into Amiens Station. The train is said to have been going on at a rate of sixty miles an hour. Instead of slowing up outside the station as the rules require, the injured passengers were mostly third class. The engineer is also said to have alarmed the passengers by running as fast as 80 miles an hour. Only nine bodies have been found. The engineer escaped unscathed and his mental condition is being examined. TROUBLE OVER IRISH FREE STATE TARIFF. LONDON, Aug. 14. The Dublin correspondent of the Westminster Gazette says that the Tariff experiment started by the Irish Free State two years ago has failed so signally that it is likely most of the duties will be dropped. The idea was, of course, to protect and foster Irish manufacturers, but the correspondent writes: "Foreign goods have been excluded, while prices naturally have risen and the consumers pay the penalty."

Rotary Meeting

Rotary Club, Chatham, N.S., August 14th, 1925. The meeting of the Rotary Club, Chatham, N.S., held on the evening of August 13th, was very successful. The meeting was held at the home of Mr. J. H. Hatcher, Secretary of the Club. The speaker of the evening was Mr. J. H. Hatcher, who delivered a very interesting and practical address on the subject of "The Needs of Public Schools." Mr. Hatcher's address is an excellent one, and it is a pleasure to report that it was well received by the members of the Club. The meeting was held within a few minutes of eight o'clock, and the attendance was very good. The meeting was a most successful one, and it is a pleasure to report that it was well received by the members of the Club.

Public Meeting
Rotary Club

Members of the St. John's Rotary Club, Chairman Mr. J. H. Cornall, introduced Mr. J. H. Cornall, Superintendent of Public Schools in Sherbrooke, who delivered a very interesting and practical address on "The Needs of Public Schools." Mr. Cornall's address is as follows:

Chairman and Rotarians: I am glad to say that you have been very kind to invite me to be a guest among your members. This is the first time that I have been invited to address you on education that you have heard within a very short period of time three doses of the same subject. However, the dose is not the same as I do not think it will do you any harm, and I know it will do you good. Perhaps, if I were to be invited to the doctor, who has been with his patient, gives him a dose of medicine that does him neither good nor harm, it depends on the physician's remarks that I have been invited here at various times as a representative of Education of Quebec. This is not so. My position is that of a Provincial one; it is Superintendent of the city schools of Sherbrooke, Que., and is not a very important one. I am supposed to be an agent of the Executive Board, and in a position am obliged to know the business side of Educational Organization—financing, budgeting, salaries of teachers, selection of schools, etc., in addition to the practical application of educational methods and the most difficult thing we have to do is to carry public opinion with us. I think there is no better way of doing educational matters before the public, than through the Rotary Club. That is one of the reasons why I became a Rotarian. The Rotary Club being deeply interested in the welfare of its community, request as far as possible proved methods that give quick and substantial results that are a direct benefit to the city.

When I started to make a few notes on the present subject I found it difficult to determine at which point I should commence, because I do not know very much about the Public Schools of this Island. If I had to prepare an address on educational matters of fifteen or twenty years ago, perhaps I would have been more familiar with them, but such an address would not be acceptable to you, as since that time there has been some progress made in regard to education in the public schools. The addresses which you have already heard, have been given from different viewpoints and angles.

At the same time at my disposal I have had some very interesting subjects which will pardon me therefore, to give a little and merely take a few salient points, and offer a few suggestions gathered from my experience in Canada, and which, possibly may be found useful here. I think that one of the principal themes of the Whiteley's address was that the aim of education is social efficiency, and I think everybody will agree with him. The principle of the aristocratic point of view—teaching of the few without regard to the masses—is not generally favourable.

The slogan of "equal opportunity for all" is most accepted by modern educationalists. With regard to theories of systems of education, it is easy to talk on these subjects, but they must be applied; they must be practical, and here is where difficulties arise. There is, of course, a sort of general policy or "Golden Rule" which can at all times be applied with a fair amount of success, but there is no standard that is completely successful. There are just three points which I would like to deal with, but only in a casual manner, and which, I think should be carefully investigated before any educational policy should be decided upon:

First—The needs of the society which is to be served. Before adopting any programme, the needs of the people to be served should, naturally, be first considered. What is the use of erecting buildings and equipping teachers unless we know what the pupils are going to undertake in life?

Second—You cannot forget the character of the pupil to be educated. That is, we have to consider his mental equipment; his tendencies; so as to avoid placing square pegs in round holes. Each individual must be considered separately. Pupils cannot be dealt with in bulk.

Third—Our knowledge of educational theories and practices. It is essential that teachers be trained properly and correct methods applied. I shall now endeavor to comment briefly on the curriculum, pupil, and methods employed. I do not know what the curriculum is here, and I shall have to draw on my imagination. The Royal Stores, Ltd.

centage of pupils passing from High School to the University, is only approximately ten per cent. In some places the University controls the curriculum of the High Schools. This happens in the Province of Quebec. Universities make up the majority of educational committees, and as most of them are unfamiliar with the needs of High Schools, the curriculum is naturally narrow and unsuited to the people. In Sherbrooke, we have made a survey of the needs of the needs of the pupils, and as a result have made some substantial changes, in some cases eliminating subjects like Latin, Geometry, etc., for more practical things. We thought Household Science a necessity and on this being brought before the Committee, the Principal of a University objected on the grounds that it was not hard enough. I was much tempted to suggest that Sanskrit or Egyptian Hieroglyphics be substituted. We suffer from University domination. The same Principal also remarked that Household Science was not cultural. I was fortunate in hearing an address delivered by Mr. Paton who for 25 years was Principal of the Manchester Grammar School, and who from his experience and ability has a thorough grasp of the needs of High Schools. In his address, he stated: "A course in business can be made just as cultural as a course in Latin." I have no intention of underestimating the value of Latin or similar subjects but my point is that such subjects should be left for pupils who have the aptitude, and to whom they will be helpful in life's work; they should not be taught to the exclusion of the more practical subjects; the pupils future avocation should be borne in mind.

Pupils may be roughly divided into three classes; the class who find the work easy of assimilation; the average class who jog along; and the class that are backward. Pupils should be subject to an intelligence test, and classified accordingly. Some schools exploit the bright pupil at the expense of those less brilliant, whilst this class of pupils should be given the opportunity to set all they can. The average and low should be given special attention, and any complexion of inferiority carefully avoided. The Junior High Schools of the United States require the pupil to pass a certain set standard before entering the Senior, and also make it their business to find out just what the individual pupil is best suited for. Some teachers now keep careful records not only of the pupil's characteristics and equipment, but also of the family history, and are thus in a fairly good position to give intelligent educational advice, and help in preventing pupils from taking courses which are not suited to them.

The most valuable asset in any educational system is a Normal School where teachers can be trained properly in the best known methods. It would be of considerable benefit also if Educational Inspectors, after spending some time at the normal School would in the course of their inspection work see that the instructions given teachers were being put into practice. The value of imparting knowledge that can be supplied, should also be stressed, and the necessity for a complete equipment to teach various subjects is most essential.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Rotarian Hatcher for his practical and interesting address.

Committees were appointed to take care of arrangements in connection with the Luncheon to be held on September 24, in honour of the visiting British Parliamentarians.

Included in the guests were: Captain F. W. Micklerwright, of Halifax, Mr. C. D. Devlin of Toronto, and Mr. V. R. Smith of Toronto.

"The Navigator"
Comedy Classic
at the Nickel

OCEANS OF FUN, SHIPLOADS OF LAUGHTER, TIDAL WAVES OF JOY.

Buster Keaton is in a class by himself, and in "The Navigator," his latest Metro-Goldwyn release, which opened at the Nickel Theatre last night, he has contributed one of the best comedies ever made for sheer entertainment and real physical laughs. There isn't a dull moment in "The Navigator." It's for the whole family; every one will be pleased, and there isn't an objectionable scene or thought in it.

The star appears as the sap of an old and wealthy family tree, who is not capable even of winding his own watch. He is refused by the girl of his dreams, and goes to take the honeymoon himself. He gets on the wrong liner, and by a chance, the girl also comes aboard.

They are out adrift by some foreign revolutionists, and thus the two innocents are left without any crew to run an enormous liner. The fun that Keaton extracts from this situation is endless. He gets into all the trouble possible, and there seems to be plenty of such opportunities on board a ship.

Buster makes coffee out of salt water, tries to open a deck chair, decides upon one of the ship's boilers as a suitable stateroom, descends to the bottom of the sea in a diver's suit, fights swordfish with their own weapons, gets caught by an octopus, and when they drift to an island, he manages to keep away the cannibals by a combined attack of Roman candles and coconuts. Just when everything seems to be over for them a submarine appears and they are saved.

HIGGINS—CASEY.

The Cathedral at Harbor Grace was the scene of a pretty wedding at 10.30 yesterday morning, when Miss Alice, daughter of Mr. J. Casey J.P., of Harbor Grace, and John Gilbert Higgins, Barrister, of St. John's, were united in the Holy bonds of matrimony by His Lordship Bishop March. Only the relatives and immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a travelling costume with hat to match. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaids were Miss Frances Casey, sister of the bride and Miss May Higgins, sister of the groom, who were attired in blue costumes with picture hats to match. The groom was assisted by his cousin, Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., Minister of Justice. Following the ceremony luncheon was served at the residence of the bride's father and the customary toasts honored, after which the party motored to Avondale where the happy couple joined the train en route to West Coast points, where the honeymoon will be spent. The presents received were many and useful. The Telegram joins with the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, in extending congratulations.

When I started to make a few notes on the present subject I found it difficult to determine at which point I should commence, because I do not know very much about the Public Schools of this Island. If I had to prepare an address on educational matters of fifteen or twenty years ago, perhaps I would have been more familiar with them, but such an address would not be acceptable to you, as since that time there has been some progress made in regard to education in the public schools. The addresses which you have already heard, have been given from different viewpoints and angles.

Seeking for Relatives

Forty Years in Navy
THRILLING MEMORIES OF THE OLD REGIME.
Thrilling memories of the old "wooden walls" of England are recalled by Mr. James Mills, a retired commissioned officer of Plymouth, who spent 40 years in the British Navy. Despite his great age—he is now over 90—he is still wonderfully active and alert. He joined the Navy in October, 1847, his first ship being the San Joseph, 120 guns, which Nelson captured from the Spaniards. Transferred to the California, he was at the blockade of Athens, and two years later was bound for the South Pacific in H. M. S. Virago, a paddle steamer, which, when passing through the Straits of Magellan, found an English schooner stranded on the rocks. She had been boarded by Chilean pirates, who murdered the captain and several of the crew, looted her and made off. Mr. Mills took part in the pursuit and capture of the robbers, and was present when five of the ringleaders were shot on the beach at Valparaiso. After a commission of 50,000 miles Mr. Mills looked forward to a period of leave, but the Crimean War broke out, and he volunteered going to the Black Sea in the St. George under Admiral Sir Charles Napier. Another ship in which he sailed was the frigate Liffey, 51 guns, then the smartest vessel in the Navy. With others of the fleet, she went to the Holy Land to co-operate with the French in preventing the murder of Christians. On first joining the Navy he was "basin rich" on 6d. a day, and his fare was either salt beef or salt pork with biscuit. When war broke out Mr. Mills asked the Admiralty to allow him to do his bit.

Vice Versa
At a recent and well attended convocation of anthropologists all the passions of modern monkeydom were loosed. The meeting, held under the auspices of the "Anti-Evolutionary League," was called primarily to discuss and enter a protest against "Darwinism," and support the findings of the learned Judge and jurymen of Dayton, Tennessee.
The motion put before the house was: "That the theories and findings of the late Prof. Chas. Darwin are not in accordance with the ideas of this assembly." The chairman in rising to address the gathering commented on the splendid attendance. "It was," he said, "proof enough of the enthusiasm which prevailed." All the species were well represented, including the Mandrills, the Lemurs, the Chimpanzee tribe and many others.
Continuing his speech, the chairman gradually led up to the reasons which the committee thought vital enough to call this meeting. He described concisely Darwin's main theory and touched illustratively on Huxley's researches which, he said, were responsible for the false attitude that mankind had to the monkey at the present time.
"Gentlemen," he said, "Imagine the injustice caused by a handful of Reactionaries to our people: I heard of a case only recently, in which a baby on being taken to a Zoo, pointed to a stork in political New York, he was incarcerated for months on Ellis Isle for being without visible means of support, and naturally his embitterment against human beings was, and still is, intense.
Holding his audience spellbound as he related his escapades, he reached a high point of oratory when he said: "Mr. Chairman, Sir, in my opinion we are logically the descendants of man."
"Comrades," cried a powerful Gorilla, "are we to take the flies and pinpricks of these puny creatures meekly, are we going to admit by our silence that we are content to be rated merely as the forerunners of men, no a thousand times no; let us tell the human race with actions not words, that we deny any relationship with them; I audace, encore l'audace toujours l'audace."
The last speaker, a professor of human science, pulled the Evolution theory to pieces. "Compare a man with one of ourselves," said the professor. "Is he as strong as a Gorilla, as active as a Spider-monkey, or as cunning as a Baboon? No, he is not! He is helpless at birth, and remains so for years; he eats carrion, while rots his body, and his instincts having left him or fallen into disuse he substitutes for them his brain, which developing leads him to improve himself by creating new forces and conveniences, which almost makes it unnecessary for him to use his muscles and renders his body soft, weak and unsuitable for Nature's demands. I therefore contend that inasmuch that we are superior to them in the afore-said ways, we are therefore not the stage before man, but the stage after man, his successor in the years to come. Man is not the descendant of monkey. Monkey is the descendant of Man."
After the applause had ceased, the meeting unanimously passed a resolution demanding the "Monkeys Federation" in the "Zoo Workers' Union" to come out on strike at the end of the month.

Lodge Northcliffe Installation
The installation of the Right Worshipful Master elect and other bearers of Lodge Northcliffe, No. 1086, S.C., took place at Grand Falls on Tuesday evening, Aug. 11th, at 8:30 p.m. A deputation of District Grand Lodge officers headed by R.W. Bro. Hon. T.K. Cook, D.G.M., journeyed to Grand Falls to perform the ceremony. Leaving St. John's on the Humber express Monday at 5 o'clock, they arrived in Grand Falls Tuesday morning at 9:30, and were met at the station by Brethren of Lodge Northcliffe, who motored the city visitors to the Cabot and Erin Hotels. After a splendid dinner they were taken through the inland city and shown all through the splendid paper mills and magnificent new suites of offices of the Company as well as all the other beautiful residential houses of this flourishing town. At 8 o'clock p.m. Lodge Northcliffe was duly convened and received the following District Grand Lodge officers:—
R.W. Bro. Hon. T. K. Cook—D.G.M.
Bro. H. E. Cowan—D.G.M.D.
Bro. H. C. Hanson—D.G.S.W.

Also Wor. Bro. W. J. Starlike, of St. Bride's Lodge, 2317, London, England. The ceremony of installation was immediately proceeded with, when the following office bearers were duly installed for the ensuing year:—

Bro. J. B. Simpson—L.P.M.
Bro. H. C. Hanson, P.M.—D.M.
Bro. A. J. Martin, P.M.—S.M.
Bro. R. Postlewaite—W.S.W.
Bro. H. Baird—W.J.W.

Bro. W. Short—Treasurer.
Bro. A. J. Hay, P.M.—D. of O.
Bro. E. S. Windeler—S.D.

Bro. E. Sheppard—E.R.
Bro. Rev. T. E. Loder—Chaplain.
Bro. W. B. Simpson—L.G.
Bro. W. Macpherson, S.S.
Bro. M. Sheppard—Tyler.
There was also present a deputation from Botwood numbering 20. At the close of the ceremony a collection in aid of the Lodge Benevolent fund realized a handsome amount. A splendid banquet had been prepared by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lodge, to which all those present were given a hearty welcome by the newly installed R.W.M. Needless to say his request was acceded to and a most enjoyable repast was partaken of most heartily by all those who were privileged to be present on this auspicious occasion. After the inner man had been appeased the following Toast List was duly honored:—
"THE KING AND THE CRAFT"—Prop. by R.W. Bro. H. S. Windeler, R.W.M.; resp. God Save the King.
"THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND"—Prop. Wor. Bro. G. E. White; resp. R.W. Bro. T. K. Cook, D.G.M.
"THE DISTRICT GRAND LODGE"—Prop. Wor. Bro. H. E. Hanson, P.M.; resp. Wor. Bro. H. E. Cowan, P.G.D., D.G.M.D.
"THE GISTERS LODGES"—Prop. H. E. Windeler, R.W.M.; resp. Rev. Bro. Dr. L. Currie, Dis. G. Chaplain; W. J. Starlike, London, Eng.; G. E. Brown, Woonsocket, R.I., U.S.A.
"THE CHAIRMAN"—Prop. Wor. Bro. H. E. Cowan, D.G.M.D.; resp. H. S. Windeler, R.W.M.
"TYLER TOAST"—Prop. Bro. F. E. Ireland.
During the evening solos were rendered by Simpson, Fowler, Bugden and Rabbits, also a Community Chorus singing from the Lodge song sheet. At 1:30 a.m. this most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. The entire proceeding was voted by all those who were fortunate enough to be present as one of the most enjoyable occasions that has ever been spent in Grand Falls. The ladies of the community are certainly to be congratulated as on this occasion they surely outdone themselves.
Wednesday being a whole holiday in Grand Falls, the St. John's visitors were taken by motor cars to Botwood. There they were shown over the Company's magnificent new steamer, the Geraldine Mary and were entertained to lunch by Capt. Webster, returning to Grand Falls in time to take the express to St. John's arriving in town yesterday at 1:30.

Our Montreal Letter

(From Our Own Correspondent)

MONTREAL TO ESTABLISH A NEW RECORD IN SHIPPING CIRCLES.

Montreal had a bumper year in 1924 in shipping business, but if it keeps up for the rest of the season as it has done to the present, last year's figures will go by the board. Up to the present there have been 69 more ocean-going ships here this year as compared with the corresponding period last year. The grain traffic has jumped by over 9,000,000 bushels.

Montreal has shipped more wheat out and it has shipped more British coal in. By the end of the season Montreal merchants estimate that the increase will be more than half a million tons. Freighters arrive weekly from the Welsh and Scottish coal-fields bringing cargoes ranging from 1,800 to 10,000 tons, all of which will reassure the average Montrealer that whatever strikes happen we shall not be entirely at the mercy of the United States miners or operators.

These increased coal imports have another benefit. Ships coming here for grain often come empty and coal provides a very useful cargo for them, thus decreasing the cost of the voyage and therefore the price of the cargoes they carry.

Another thing that has helped the port toward registering a record year is the increase in the number of cattle exported, a trade in which Quebec shows an increase as well as Montreal. The latest figures for this trade show that a 20 per cent increase has been recorded, the figures for this year being 12,832 head of cattle, and last year 10,844 head of cattle.

On the debit side of the balance sheet is the fact that the export of flour from Montreal has fallen off. This is due to several causes one of which is that it is cheaper to transport wheat than flour and mill it at its destination. General cargo traffic is said to be quiet just about the present time, not only into but out of Montreal, but an increase is confidently expected in the near future.

One feature of passenger traffic this season—and with 3,000 to 5,000 passengers entering and leaving the country by the St. Lawrence route each week, Montreal becomes one of the biggest passenger ports in the continent—is the way in which the sudden slump in eastbound bookings that usually makes itself felt at this time of the year has apparently been put off. Shipping companies report that advance eastward bookings compare favorably with those of previous years about this period. Immigrant arrivals, however, show a slight falling off.

SUNDAYS BRING A LIST OF ACCIDENTS AND DEATHS.

As usual, Sunday is a time of danger for many, and accidents and deaths are the results in consequence. "Joy riding," and "let her go at a merry clip" on the country roads, tell the tale of many a life snapped off by foolishness, and the want of exercising better judgment and little common sense. The latest fatalities here are a policeman and a taxicab driver were killed, the former by being run over by an auto, and the latter by having his car upset, and three were injured. The constable was alighting from a street car when an automobile hit him. He was carried into a drug store and died shortly afterwards. The driver went to a private hospital for treatment owing to a nervous shock, and was afterwards arrested and charged with manslaughter. The dead policeman was 33 years in the force and was to have retired on pension shortly. The taxi driver was racing a train when his machine tumbled over three times and rolled into a ditch. One of the party is so seriously injured that he is not expected to live, as his spine is fractured. Several motorcycle accidents were also recorded.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE QUEBEC LIQUOR COMMISSION.

La Patrie, a French daily, says:—During the first three years of the operations of the Quebec Liquor Commission, not less a sum than $18,144,348 were paid by that Commission to the Federal authorities, whilst during the same period the Government of the Province of Quebec received from the same source twelve million dollars. Those people of Ontario who profess to be scandalized that the Government of Quebec should profit from the distribution of liquors would render this province good service if they pushed their scruples to the extent of persuading the Federal Government to renounce their share of the benefits. During the first three years of the Quebec Liquor Commission's operations, the sums paid to the Federal authorities represent seventy-six per cent. of the cost of liquors and the cost of exploitation. Nothing more is required to show that the Federal taxes are exorbitant. They are likewise unjust, because they constitute an unequal imposition, since the province of Ontario is wholly exempt from a like contribution to the public charge.

CAME LOOKING FOR DADDY BUT WAS SENT BACK.

A young lad of 14 years was found on a freight steamer that arrived here lately as a stowaway. The steamer was four days' out from England when the boy, in a starving condition, cold, frightened and exhausted from sleeping on a damp bunk, was discovered. He said he was going to Canada to see his daddy, who was supposed to be somewhere in Alberta. Brought to the Juvenile Court, he was handed to the Immigration authorities to be sent back to England, even without seeing his daddy.

WATCH YOUR GRIP EVEN AT THE STATION GATE.

Keep your eye on your travelling bag, even when you are not near the station gate. A man was showing his ticket to the station agent and left his grip on the ground. He had barely left the grip down when a chap came along and lost no time in making away with it. After a chase through the station, the culprit was caught, and claimed it was his own bag. The guilty one was arrested and punished in the court. Moral, "Keep your eye on your grips."

DON'T FORGET TO SHOW A LITTLE KINDNESS DAILY.

Dear Readers.—Time is given to everyone to carry out kindly deeds. Let no day pass that you have not exercised a little kindness to some one by giving a pleasant smile or saying a pleasant good word, even to the youngsters playing around their homes, or on the streets. Kind words are the music of the soul, and bring a ray of sunshine to those with whom you come in contact. The man of kindly deeds will never be forgotten. When we perceive the good in everything, we extract the good from everything.

"When a bit of kindness hits ye,
After passing of a cloud,
When a bit of laughter gits ye
An' yer spine is feelin' proud,
Don't forget to up and fling it
At a soul that's feelin' blue,
For the moment that you sling it
It's a boomarang to you."

MAKING A MAN.

Oh, it takes more to make a man
Than time and growth of beard
For soul is reckoned in the plan
By which a man is reared.
And he must love the truth so well
As never to gain a lie to tell.

'Tis not in muscle that we find
The traits which men admire,
The gentle and the brave and kind
May very quickly tire.
And 'he is not a man, though strong
Who does a weaker brother wrong.

And he is not a man who sneers
At any woman's fame,
Or scatters round for careless ears
The story of her shame.
For manhood oft rich lustre reaps
From the brave silence it keeps.

Clean speech, clean hands and dealings
Fair,
Proclaim the man far more
Than any garb which he may wear
Or any glittering store.
We are so fashioned by God's plan Things of the spirit mark the man.

ure of Our Staple

Dear Sir—I have been interested in your efforts to assist in the cure of our fish but have refrained from comment because of the absence of specifications in your remarks were made. I am glad to hear that you meant the latter because of your success to both Iceland and the fishery of our Labrador. I am glad to hear that you have indirectly concerned "there" quality was "factory."

Now whether unwillingly or not you have chosen to be a factor (it may have been your articles) because of quality which gives you an edge to superior cure, but short road to a fast and a life time to learn to predict it who will, I am sure it is a very difficult match weather conditions out of perfect quality fish, Labrador can be a success. The method is stated so well known that you of further instruction by both an insult to the fish and a foolish waste of money buyers will but get for quality of Labrador fish getting it, the dealer some ready—but not.

Coming to shore fish, convinced that no amount of encouragements or pressure will bring us to one party where we can ship and catch as absolutely perfect as in every conceivable stages present themselves quite a number of fish are not at all slow a discussion along fisher's comparisons with other countries, but just studied into different conditions relative to it at all like that of who for instance will be three atmosphere alone and south westerly particularly with process of curing? or who will guarantee baited in for August as the proverbial "forty-fog"? Next season on account of last year's may mean a very heavy sunburnt fish to heat. I have, however, used the experience of the fish and a selection of course is true, but that the making of a change harmonious experience, guess work, uncertain elements.

Armies and Navies of the World

Interest in American naval affairs during June centred upon the need for improvement of the facilities of the Hawaiian Islands as a sea base for the United States Navy. Substantial developments along this line were projected; those being based upon the results of the April manoeuvres in the Pacific. Representative Thomas W. Butler of Pennsylvania, Chairman of the House Naval Committee, announced at Washington on May 3 that legislation providing for the building up of the Hawaiian defenses would be introduced at the December session of Congress. Representative Butler further stated that members of the House Naval Committee would visit Honolulu during the summer, to study the situation at first hand and to gather data that would be of use in drafting the proposed legislation. Newspaper discussion of the Hawaiian defense question continued. Discussion was focused upon the vulnerability of Honolulu and the Pearl Harbor base as demonstrated in the "invasion" of the island by American troops during the April tests. Charges were made that the troops stationed on the island were insufficient to protect the city, and also that the Pearl Harbor base facilities were inadequate. Answering the latter allegation, naval authorities on May 8 announced that Congress had already authorized improvements in the Pearl Harbor Channel which, it was said, would cost about $5,000,000. Officials added that the first appropriation would be granted in the winter of 1925-26 and that dredging would begin in the summer of 1926.

President Coolidge indicated on May 15 that he was opposed to using the United States Navy to enforce the Prohibition law; the President's stand on this question was revealed when he rejected a suggestion of Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League. Mr. Wheeler had proposed that battleships be used in combating the rum fleet off the Middle Atlantic coast. It was explained that President Coolidge, though anxious to see the Volstead law upheld, felt that the navy existed for defense and not for police duty.

Naval authorities on May 27 announced that the production of helium gas for the two giant dirigibles Shenandoah and Los Angeles had fallen below expectations, and that therefore enough gas for only one of the ships would be available during the summer. It was added that, because of the shortage, plans were being made for a modification of the airship's schedules. Japan. The Japanese Government continued its policy of army retrenchment and naval expansion. It was announced on May 1 that 489 officers, including 38 Generals, had been retired, and that 5,000 enlisted men had been discharged from service. The new submarine, "No. 53," which is the largest in the Japanese fleet, was completed on May 27; it was stated that the vessel would be attached to the Yokosuka naval port. "No. 53," which is of ultra modern type, displaces 1,700 tons, and is capable of trans-Pacific cruise and return. The vessel is the first of a fleet of twenty submarines, including three mine-laying craft, which are to be built under a programme announced several years ago; the entire fleet is scheduled to be completed in 1927.

The British Admiralty during April made public the following table of the current naval construction programmes of the five Great Powers:

	Destroyers	Sub-Cruisers	Leaders	Marines
Great Britain	8	3	4
United States	8	12	15
Japan	11	23	28
France	9	27	59
Italy	2	26	29

The table was widely commented upon in the British press, particular attention being directed to the impressive showing made by Japan.

France

The Government announced on May 17 that no effort would be made to pass the Army Reorganization Bill, enactment of which had been one of the chief aims of the late Herriot Administration. The announcement was taken to signify complete abandonment by the Painleve Cabinet of the preceding Government's plan to cut the term of military service in France. The Army Reorganization Bill contained provisions paving the way for the reduction of military service to twelve months, and also called for a general decrease of French military effectiveness. The measure had been strenuously opposed by Marshal Foch.

The Parliamentary Commission for Naval Affairs announced on May 18 that it would ask Parliament to increase France's naval air force to fifty fully equipped squadrons. Of the fifty squadrons planned thirty-five would be equipped on a war footing in peace time, the commission stated, and the whole programme would be completed by 1938. France at present possesses only ten naval air squadrons, of which but three are fully equipped.

Germany

The controversy between Communists and militarists over the new German army budget aggregating 560,000,000 gold marks (about $140,000,000) produced a sensation on May 27, when the Welt am Abend, Communist organ, published an article supporting in substance the charges of Marshal Foch that the present small German Army was in reality the skeleton of a force equal in size to the Imperial Army of pre-war days. Dr. Otto Gessler, Minister of Defence, in a speech from the Reichstag on May 28 insisted that Germany had completely disarmed and denied charges made by the Communists that the nation was secretly preparing for war.

The Inter-Allied Commission, which controls navigation on the Rhine, announced the seizure on April 30 of seventeen tons of military cartridges and incendiary bombs which had been found in the possession of Germans on a vessel coming from Holland.

Italy

The Army Reform Bill authorizing a reorganization of the national defence forces was passed by the Senate on May 13. The Bill, which was sponsored by Premier Mussolini, provided for a union of the military and naval departments under command of the Army General Staff. Admiral di Revel, former Minister of Naval Defence, had opposed this measure as giving the army too much power at the cost of naval prestige.

From Our Own Point of View

THE FLIGHT OF INDUSTRY.
The Federation of British Industries has been conducting an exhaustive examination of the present position of British trade, particularly in relation to world trade, and has arrived at some disquieting conclusions. The Federation is of the opinion that the present trade position gives every appearance of becoming permanent. There are many important factors beyond our control, such as unstable exchange rates, lack of balance in the world's markets, and political instability in many countries. These factors may, however, prove temporary; but taxation at home is, in the view of the Federation of British Industries, placing an intolerable burden on industry. No radical cuts can be made in the expenditure of social services, for with the progress of civilization these demands increase. But we, in common with other countries, spend too much on destructive purposes such as armaments, and this burden can and should be decreased. There is no escaping the fact that trade is very depressed; and this adds to the gravity of the wage discussions of the miners and railway workers. The Government has at last intervened in the coal dispute, for it was obvious a deadlock had been reached. We do not know what proposals the Government will make to end the deadlock; but it is significant that the Secretary for the Dominions, after a long interview with the Premier, predicted at Warwick an amicable settlement of the mining dispute. Certainly a general stoppage is unthinkable, for this would merely make conditions in the mining industry much worse than they are at present. The railwaymen are in a less difficult position, for though there is naturally no enthusiasm for but it is significant that the Secretary for the Dominions, after a long interview with the Premier, predicted at Warwick an amicable settlement of the mining dispute. Certainly a general stoppage is unthinkable, for this would merely make conditions in the mining industry much worse than they are at present. The railwaymen are in a less difficult position, for though there is naturally no enthusiasm for the five per cent. cut, it is realized that receipts have fallen considerably, and some reduction is inevitable. The annual conference of the N.U.R. was, in fact, uneventful, and Mr. J. H. Britain's Coal, Iron and Steel Industries

The production of pig iron in the United Kingdom in the month of June was 510.3 thousand tons of 2,346 pounds, comparing with 607.5 thousand tons in the corresponding month of 1924 and a monthly average of 598.9 thousand tons for the year 1924. The iron furnaces ceased production during the month so that on June 30 the number of furnaces in blast were only 148 compared with 185 at the same time last year. The output of steel in June was 585.4 thousand tons as against 651.5 thousand tons in June of last year and a monthly average of 685.1 thousand tons for the year 1924. Imports of iron and steel into Great Britain in the month of June amounted to 201.7 thousand tons, comparing with 176.5 thousand tons in June, 1924, and a monthly average of 202,409 tons for the year 1924. Exports of iron and steel for June amounted to 278.5 thousand tons, comparing with 324.4 thousand tons in June, 1924, and a monthly average of 321.1 thousand tons in the year 1924. These figures have just been received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York through its British Information Service. This report also shows that the production of coal in the United Kingdom in June was 7,780,000 tons, comparing with 18,728,000 tons in June, 1924, and 21,576,000 tons as the monthly average for the year 1924.

Prices of iron and steel products in the month of June were un satisfactory. The Board of Trade average index number declined to 16.0 in June against 128.3 in May and 144.0 in June a year ago. The number of operatives employed in 143 identical firms declined in June to 88,788 compared with 92,595 in May and 100,751 in June, 1924. Developments on the Continent disturbed business, but did not much displace the equilibrium to the further disadvantage of Great Britain. British authorities in this line of business believe that the gradual improvement of the French finances and the prospect that the franc may be stabilized will tend to reduce the intense competition because of the exchange advantages which France and Belgium have enjoyed recently, due to the fact that the internal value of their franc has been higher than the external value and manufacturers therefore were able to pay fairly large real wages, whilst they incurred far smaller monetary costs in terms of sterling. This readjustment of the internal and external prices, British steel authorities point out, increased whenever the exchange depreciated further, placing the staple currency countries in a position of almost insuperable difficulty.

The effect of this dullness in the iron and steel business is reflected in quotations for their capital stocks. The market value of seven coal and pig-iron companies' shares on June 30, according to the advices received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York, was $28,039,708 as against $20,021,000 on March 31, 1924. The market value of nineteen coal, iron and steel companies on June 30 of this year was $18,385,000 as against $28,225,000 on March 31, 1924, while the market value of eight iron, steel and engineering companies on June 30 was $29,321,000 as against $34,477,000 on March 31, 1924; or, expressed in another way, the ratio of market value to par value of the stocks of these various companies on June 30 last was 61.9 per cent, as against 88 per cent. on March 31, 1924. These figures compare with the maximum of 166.4 per cent. on March 31, 1920, and a minimum in the following period of depression on March 31, 1922 of 85 per cent. The next maximum was 108.4 per cent. on March 29, 1923, since which time the prices have declined steadily to the 61.9 per cent. for June 30 quoted above.

The Imperial Press Conference

Great expectations—due doubtless to the success of the last Conference in Canada—have been formed of the third Imperial Press Conference which will meet in New Zealand and Australia in August and September. Interest in it has been quickened by the story of Lord Apsley's advance-guard adventures. Lord Apsley, who will represent the Morning Post, is a member of the Empire Press Union and of Mr. Michael Terry's exploring party in the Northern Territory. He disguised his identity, went to Australia in the steerage of an immigrant ship, and secured jobs on the land, so that he might learn for himself exactly what are the conditions the new settler has to face. Mr. Amery suggests that similar jobs should be arranged for Lord Burnham, the popular President of the Union, and other members of the Conference, in order to counteract the effects of the hospitality with which they will certainly be received. No doubt they will be quite satisfied to take Lord Apsley's report, and risk the effects of the hospitality. It will be a great gathering, and many who have been unable to avail themselves of an invitation which means six months' absence will follow the proceedings with a sympathy not wholly divorced from envy, United Empire.

King Coal Again

The coal agreement has reached its last stages and a shattered industry is seeing how fresh commitments are to be made. Millions have seen last on mines which never now can be opened, and the transport returns of the railways indicate equivalent fallings-off. The trouble is declared by one side to be due to the decrease of the working day from eight to seven hours, and by the other side it is attributed to the mismanagement and rapacity of owners. But beyond these causes looms that of the wreckage of a war-wasted world and the utter evaporation of trade. Coal cannot flourish unless iron and steel and cotton prosper, and our markets for these primal products have vanished away. Yet, even when revised, coal can never resume its paramount position. Inferior mines must be scrapped and management everywhere improved for the industry to hold even its present precarious livelihood. In fact, so dark is the outlook that, insensibly, electric power and oil must take the place of coal wherever possible, and the age we shall shortly enter may become one no longer of grit and toils, but calm and cleanliness. Necessity, too, being the mother of invention, harassed minds will discover other forms of fuel and power. For the time being it would be calamitous if sectional selfishness drove any interested party to rash action at the expense of the State. Goodwill and sympathy will count for most in the present crisis.—Empire Review.

Channel Notes

Wednesday and Thursday of last week were days of bustle and stir with the people of Channel, for on those days the members of the Church of England held their Annual Garden Party, and everybody who possibly could, took a hand in making the event the success that it was. The affair took place on the field near the Parish Hall, and on Monday and Tuesday willing hands—many of them—made all the preparations for the great event. Wednesday was a general holiday, and the members of the different parish associations, as well as non-members came and took charge, and under their capable management everything went off as pleasantly as wedding bells. The weather which had all along been most unsettled favoured us with a change and the sun's rays softened by a cooling breeze, made the outdoor events really enjoyable to all beholders. The different boat races started from Mr. Colley's pier, and after going through the S. W. Passage the boats returned around by Channel Head. The victors in these contests were Messrs. Sheaves, Battisto and Bennett. There was great excitement during the races and much comment was made on the capabilities of the various boats. The parson's boat on account of her speed was not permitted to enter the competition. A greasy pole was placed over the water, and some young fellows, made fun for the onlookers, as they strove to gain the prize at the end of the pole. The swimming contest was good, and Will Tavernors high dive from the ship's boom was well done. After the aquatic sports were over all hands wended their way to the field where they found tables literally groaning under loads of good things, and presided over by smiling dames whose happy faces indicated that business was going well. Justice having been done to the sumptuous repast, the diners then went to the different stalls, or took part in various competitions, and as a result the proceeds at each table or stall were greatly augmented. Members of the famous Grasshopper Club took charge of the drinks and ice cream, and did a brisk trade. It would be invidious to mention any names of the members, but it will suffice to say that the energy displayed by the Club has seldom been surpassed. Through their efforts many pockets were emptied of the last farthing. At dusk dancing was indulged in by the younger folk until twelve o'clock, when the good night signal was given. The proceeds came to the magnificent sum of $1225, a sum which exceeded all expectations and which shows that the object aimed at, namely, the building of a new church, had stirred the people to respond liberally, and to rally around their energetic rector, Rev. H. J. Read, in order to support him in this laudable undertaking. There is no doubt, but that if the enthusiasm displayed by the people on Wednesday and Thursday indicates their attitude towards a united effort, in a short time a church exceedingly magnificent will be erected to the glory of God. The rector has been here for twenty-seven years, and it speaks well for him and his flock, when such expression of loyalty, as were shown on this occasion, were outpoured to the mutual satisfaction of a splendid leader and his devoted followers.

A gloom was cast over the community by the drowning of little Eric Knott, a bright little chap of seven years of age. The little fellow did not turn up at dark, and search was made for him, but it was not until the next morning that his body was seen near Mackay's wharf. He must have overbalanced, and no help being near he sank to rise no more.

Amongst the visitors here lately at the Rectory have been Mrs. J. Le Seclieur from Jersey; Mrs. Furneaux and Miss Alice Moulton from Sydney; and Mr. C. Read, wife and young son from Montreal. Miss Edgar and Blackmore are also guests at the Rectory, and as they taught here some years ago they have been warmly welcomed by their old scholars and their friends. Both ladies gave a helping hand at the Garden Party and so lightened the burden of others.

Mr. Williams, wife and son are the guests of Mrs. M. Currie, whilst Mr. James Currie, his wife and children are visiting Mrs. C. Currie. Miss Le Moine has spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Pretty.

Everybody was pleased to see Dr. and Mrs. Grant who are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Smart at Port aux Basques. The doctor is at Wolfville, but occasionally he returns to Channel where he is sure of a warm reception from the many friends who will always remember him with feelings of deepest affection.

The school at Mouse Island is opened this summer and is under the capable management of Miss Lucy Evans. Mr. L. Colley paid a visit to the school and addressed the children, expressing himself as being well pleased with the general tone of the school. During his stay here Mr. Colley gave him illustrated lecture "A Trip to New York." There was a good audience to listen to the descriptions of the wonders of the great commercial capital of the United States. Mr. Read tendered a vote of thanks to the lecturer and it was carried by acclamation.

Mr. Ross, a student of Queen's College, is spending his vacation here, and has been assisting in church work at Codroy and Isle aux Morts.

The arrival of Mr. Baggs to take charge of the Methodist church here made glad the hearts of his flock, and it is hoped that he and his wife will spend many happy days in hospitable Channel.

Business seems to be flourishing, and all stores are doing well. Some fishermen have done well. Dry fish has been bought by Mr. Manuel Pike, and green by Mr. A. Colley. The former is loading a vessel for market, and the latter will shortly ship salt bulk for the Gorton Pew Company.

De La Ferre Delights Audience at Crescent.

Last night's audience at the Crescent Theatre was moved to a high point of enthusiasm by the excellent programme of magic and fun as provided by Mr. De La Ferre, the noted International Magician and Illusionist. The Disappearing Lamp trick held the fixed attention of the audience. Mr. De La Ferre performed several other tricks, which received an enthusiastic applause. He is without doubt an entertainer par excellence and those who missed his program last night certainly missed a rare treat. To-morrow afternoon and night are positively the farewell performances of De La Ferre and company.

The film "Wandering Husbands" is a picture you do not see every day. It is a drama of married life; of a wandering husband, a clever wife, and a "lily of the field." Household Notes.

Cut a rubber stair-tread to fit your sink, and place it in the sink when dishes are washed, to prevent breakage.

With your first aid supplies, or in your medicine cabinet, keep a small flashlight for looking down an invalid's throat.

Bedsprings often make stains on mattresses. Let a thick paste of salt and lemon juice dry on them, and then brush well.

If each dress is wrapped separately in tissue paper before it is packed in your suit case, it will not wrinkle so badly.

THOSE INDEFINITE INVITATIONS.

How often misunderstandings arise through indefinite invitations. "I think it would be jolly," says one wife to another, "if you and Ted came over to dinner the night we are going to the parent and we all went on together. Why don't you?"

"Well, that would be fun," says the other. "Have you decided which night you are going? Of course it's not for six weeks yet, is it? Well we haven't, either. We must get together when we decide. I think Monday would be nice, but Ted thinks the first night won't be so good as the later ones."

A Delicate Situation.
And there the subject drops for the time being. Of course the invitee doesn't like to bring it up again. If she calls up and says "We are going to the parent Tuesday," that means that she is reminding her hostess of her dinner invitation. On the other hand the hostess forgets the matter until the week beforehand. She then calls up and finds that her guests can't go because they have other engagements on the only day that she can go, and she feels vaguely aggrieved that they have allowed other engagements to interfere with her prior invitation.

Very often invitations are extended in such a vague, indefinite way that the people invited don't feel absolutely sure whether the invitation requires further confirmation or not.

And Now They Hardly Speak.
Some friends of ours had received an invitation of this sort. It was worded (according to the invitee) something like this: "I think it would be nice if some Sunday, we drove you down to see the Jacksons. Could you go three weeks from to-day? No, some to think of it, that's the day we are having the Ladds to dinner. Four weeks from to-day would do. Unless John has some business engagement, I hope he doesn't. We'll plan what time we'd better start later."

They never heard another word from their hostess and finally decided that John must have had some business.

Strange as it may sound, one very wise person never takes a long motor trip without chewing-gum on hand. When all else was of no avail, it served to mend a leaky radiator until help could be had.

Little Jack Rabbit
by David Cory

Now let me ponder, let me think just a winky, blinky wink.

"Did we leave dear Uncle Lucky all alone in the Shady Forest? Of course we did, and it was dark, very dark, for Mr. Merry Sun had long since gone to bed behind the Western hills. Again Old Hooty Tooty Owl commenced to screech:

"I'm very fond of little mice. They make a meal that's very nice. I'll visit Uncle Lucky's house and catch his pretty little mouse."

"Dear, Oh dear," shivered the poor old gentleman rabbit, "what shall I do. Here I am, far from home. I must warn my tiny housekeeper," and hopping up on his hind legs, anxious Uncle Lucky peered through the darkness.

"Oh, won't some kindly freddy With shining lantern please come by," he whispered almost to himself, but, thank goodness! somebody heard him.

Hooty Tooty Owl is about ready to start out for my little red-shingled house," and the plucky old gentleman rabbit quickened his footsteps. Above in the treetops Hilly Breeze was singing a tune and Mrs. Moon was doing her best to brighten the dark forest. But the leafy foliage was so thick that her faint light scarcely filtered through, and had it not been for the freddy's tiny lantern I'm sure that dear Uncle Lucky would have stumbled many a time, and perhaps of.

"The very somebody he was thinking of. The next minute a tiny freddy dashed her lantern. "Did I hear some one in distress calling?" she asked, waving her tiny light to and fro to light the tall trees in a row.

"So glad you heard me, and more glad that you came at once," cried the anxious old gentleman rabbit. "Please fly ahead and light the road so I may find my dear abode." (Abode means a place to live in, little reader, —Uncle Lucky's house, in this story.)

"Be careful not to stub your toe, Beny, meeny, miny, mo. Hop with care for fear you slip Or against a long root trip."

"Then, all of a sudden, again screeched Hooty Tooty Owl: "Pretty soon on feathers feet I shall be at Carrot Street."

"Fly faster," begged Uncle Lucky in a whisper to the tiny freddy. "Old he hopped out on Lettuce Avenue.

"Thank you, little freddy. Now to you I'll say 'goodby. I must reach my comfy house in time to warn my little mouse."

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that, which I hope will not be disagreeable news to make you shiver in your shoes.

Better Wives and Mothers

The emancipation of women as evidenced by the evolution in dress from steel stays that made a twenty-inch waist and the long street-sweeping skirts to the sports clothes of the present day has certainly had its effect upon the health of women. With proper attention to diet and exercise a race of better wives and mothers is assured by it. If, however, ailments develop as evidenced by irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness and irritability, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be depended upon to overcome them. Thousands of women testify to its success.

Add a little rosewater to orange and lemon punch, sweetened with honey, and garnish with floating rose-leaves. With very little expenditure you can equip a "picnic basket" and have it on hand ready for an outdoor excursion.

Those Oxford Trousers

(The Ingoldby Legend of 1925.)
 Those of Oxford, they say, just a week yesterday, Mr. Claude O'Mah was carried pened this way.

 Mr. Claude O'Mah, with 'graduate may suppose, he gave lots of time and attention to those.

 work, he'd declare, with a very grand air in its way, but a bit of a fellow might swot, and you know, all that rot, for Mr. Claude O'Mah that effort was 'ACT'.
 He achieved a distinction, although wearing the fashion which girls had a mesh on.
 While his socks and his tie would arouse their young passion.
 One when, with a smile, he put on his his latest attire (and I'm really 'lar')

 trousers much wider than sailors would hire,
 each leg was, all round, just a yard
 at the ground,
 trousers above, near the waist, so I've found.
 It's certainly true they were larger than blue,
 their texture as fine as their delicate hue.
 And, alas, it's so sad, but that gallant young lad was caught by an eddy of wind, and,
 too bad,
 he tumbled up those "trousers," took him
 over the houses, and dropped him down where neither yours is nor ours is.
 Since then he has been missing, a week,
 maybe more!
 Although 'tis reported from a far distant shore
 young Claude has been sighted wrapped up in a cloud,
 I don't think the truth of that can be allowed.

The moral is simple to students and such.
 For though clothes are useful, it always is much more sense to wear light ones, when wind's in the East,
 it saves you the trouble, at least,
 to save you from flying without a machine.
 Which, besides being risky, is draughty, I mean.

Double Work Engine
 RUN TRAINS AT 120 MILES AN HOUR.

A new locomotive engine of greatly increased tractive power, designed to run passenger trains at a speed of 120 miles an hour, has been invented by Mr. William C. Werry, a London engineer, whose steam engines have already been tested with success in marine trials.
 After many years of experiment he has brought to a successful issue the steam engine driven by cylinders fitted with two pistons working in opposite directions. The pistons begin their stroke together in the middle of the cylinder and are forced outwards in opposite directions by the steam, each piston rod driving its own crank.

The locomotive has two cylinders fitted in the centre of the engine, each cylinder coupled with driving wheels fore and aft, the two cylinders thus being equal in work to four ordinary cylinders.
 Equal forces being exerted in opposite directions, they are perfectly balanced, and all oscillation of the engine when running at a very high speed is obviated, thus preventing all tendency to jump the rails. There are no couplings, as the driving wheel has its own motive power, and a great saving in weight and wearing parts is thus effected.
