

FEMALE ATTITUDE HINDERS RECRUITS

Reported Action at Ottawa Will Abolish Wives' Consent.

ALL SUFFER FOR FEW

Bounden Duty of All is to Make Sacrifices for Empire.

Disciplinary laws are often the result of the abuse of privilege. According to a report from Ottawa, a promulgation is about to be issued by which women will no longer have the privilege of refusal in the case of a husband who wishes to go to the front.

It seems a pity that such a reflection upon the women of Canada should have been necessary, as it undoubtedly seems to have been to those who have the making of the laws in this connection, and the further pity is that all our women must come under the stigma because of the few.

In the conditions created by the war, as in other periods and events, it is always the selfish and narrow class of the community who keep away when anything of a general character is to be undertaken for the common good. The task of doing things devolves upon those who move in the larger and more generous atmosphere. It may, for instance, be taken for granted that not a single woman who from the beginning has been engaged in any of the patriotic work upon which our Canadian women have been and are now engaged, would refuse her consent to husband or son going to the front if called upon.

We can appreciate the desire to save from even a chance of danger the ones without whom the world would seem to be a blank. We can understand, too, the less noble sentiment which desires to keep the head and financial support of the house safe and untouched by bullets within the harbor of one's own verandah. All these, however, are sentiments that belong to the earlier periods of well-secured conditions. With the example of the sacrifice of thousands of Canada's bravest and best, and the more selfish recollection that defeat would mean so many things to which in some cases death itself would be preferable, it seems hard to pierce the fatuity of those who would give a refusal.

A Bounden Duty. The life of any one man is of the same value to him as that of any other man to himself. The duty of any one man is no greater than that of any other man, provided conditions are equal. Why, then, should some women feel justified in keeping back their men and screening themselves under the protection that will be bought by the sacrifices made by other women of the community?

All, of course, cannot be spared. Business must go on at home as nearly as possible as it did before the war. Provision must be made for our sick and wounded when they return to us. All this demands that many must still remain. In cases, however, where nothing but sentiment bars the way, the woman who does not make the sacrifice which is being made so heroically by her sister women, cannot but bring reproach upon herself both now and for the future.

HEAVY RAINSTORMS DROWN OUT CROPS

Brockville Section Visited by Worst Weather of Year.

GREAT DAMAGE DONE In Some Places Grain and Roots Swept Away by Floods.

Special to The Toronto World. BROCKVILLE, Aug. 9.—Two terrific electrical storms swept this section yesterday and today, and the damage previously inflicted by the crops by the excessive rains was still further increased in some places, practically wiping out the crops on entire farms. The storm of this afternoon was the most violent of the summer, both in electrical display and volume of rainfall, the latter being a veritable cloudburst. The water ran from Brockville's streets like miniature rivers, choking surface drains and flooding cellars everywhere within the rural district. Whole areas of land are reported to be inundated with the crop literally drowned or washed away. Great havoc was wrought to corn and potatoes. The storms caught the farmers almost at the beginning of the harvest operations; much grain was cut, and this will have to be a considerable time before the farmers can get on their lands again. By then much of it will be past saving. Lightning struck several places here, including the First Presbyterian Church spire and roof, both of which were damaged. The building caught fire, but the rain quickly quenched the flames. From reports being received it would appear that the loss to the farmers will aggregate several thousands of dollars. In some sections hail fell in large quantities, and, aided the rain and wind in making the destruction complete.

Your Garden May Be Made Nature's Own Beauty Shop

By LUCREZIA BORI
Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

COME into the garden, Maud!—Alice, Jana, Peggy or Flo—if you are seeking the path of beauty, for you will find it among the homely vegetables and herbs which nature grows there. Thousands of dollars are spent annually upon cosmetics—some excellent and some not so fine—when it is possible for every woman to make her own beauty creams and lotions. You need only to walk into your garden and pick a vegetable here and there or a few leaves from some pungent herb, and extract from them their beautifying qualities for your garden—if it is a well chosen garden—grows sage. You all know that sage tea is one of the best hair tonics known, and that it will do much toward restoring faded hair to its original color. I would not advise blonds to use it, however, unless they desire their tresses to take on a darker hue. An sage plucked directly from the garden is much stronger than that sold in packages at the drugists.

Rosemary and Cucumbers.
To make the sage hair tonic use the following proportions:
Alcohol..... 2 ounces
Green tea..... 2 ounces
Sage..... 2 ounces
Take one ounce of tea to four ounces of water; one ounce of tea to four ounces of water. Allow the tea to stand for several hours and then strain and take two ounces of each and mix them with the alcohol. Keep this mixture tightly corked. Apply to the hair as you would any other hair tonic.

In the same head of herbs grows "Rosemary, that's for remembrance," and its soothing fragrance is used for so many an excellent toilet remedy. It is used in hair tonics, cold creams and sachets. Powdered rosemary and rose mixed with dried English lavender, rosemary and rose leaves is a delicate sachet which deserves to be in general use.

Leaving the herb garden, walk to the beds where the vegetables are growing. Consider the cucumber for it possesses many virtues. This vegetable has long been noted as a beautifier. My grand-mother first told me of its magic qualities, and her mother before her trusted in its unerring power.

How a Voile Misfit Was Transformed into a Charming Frock.

MARION has just left, supremely happy over the possession of a very stunning frock. It started out to be a rank failure, but our combined efforts finally made it fit to wear. Yesterday, while we were at breakfast, the "bunch" rang, and when I answered it Marion, in a tearful voice, told me that she had attempted to make a frock, and that it was such a misfit that she didn't know what to do with it. She said that because Cicely and I had

I told her to run over with the frock and I would see if anything could be done with it.

In less than 15 minutes Marion arrived with her "first attempt," and I must say that it did look discouraging when she tried it on.

In the first place she had stitched all the seams without sewing through a strip of paper, and as a result they had puckered unmercifully.

I had her rip the skirt apart while I started to work on the bodice. It is made with a bolero jacket of it too large I had to take in reefs of the material.

Then I made a chemise of cream-colored net to relieve the line about the crocheted buttons.

The lower part of the bodice needed some little trimming, so I used bands of plain blue taffeta to hold the bodice in position, and tied the ends in flat bows. I did not like the sleeves, and as there was plenty of material I cut others of the bishop type. Tightly fitted cuffs of the checker-board silk, finished with little of the voile, confine the fullness about the wrists.

We soon had the seams of the skirt stitched together in the proper manner, and I gathered the top of the bodice with a cording of the voile.

Midway between the waist and hem there is a wide band of the checker-board silk, and to this I added a scant flounce of the voile, bordered with a narrow band of taffeta.

Marion had stitched these bands on crooked, so I had to readjust them. When they were on straight it was a simple matter to turn up the hem and the skirt hung perfectly.

There is a great satisfaction in taking a frock which is apparently a failure and being able to transform it into one that will meet all the demands of good style.

Afternoon Frock of Dark Blue Voile with Blue and White Checker-board Taffeta.

made such good-looking things she thought that she would try her hand at dressmaking.

Not knowing that voile is a very hard material to work with—particularly for the first time—she bought enough in a dark shade of blue to make a dress, and several yards of blue and white checker-board taffeta to trim it with.

She said that the bodice didn't look so impossible, but that the skirt just wouldn't hang right, and that the seams were all pulled crooked.

CHANCE REMARKS

"There's one thing that was never seen coming through the rye," remarked old Gayboy, "and that is the wry look a Frenchman gives a German nowadays."

After a man and woman are made one comes the question "which one," which sometimes takes years to settle.

The only case in which it is impossible to be slow but sure is the case of a watch.

The time to possess your soul in patience is when your hat blows off your eyes are too full of dust to see which way the wind carried it.

An Accidental Meeting.

"In the midst of the devoted spasm of Mary's I met Ralph Jutes one night.

"Where's your wife?" I asked.

"She comes down nearly every night to walk home with you, doesn't she?"

"Yes, she's away. Your wife usually comes, too, doesn't she?"

"Yes, but we've"

Woman's "Saccharine Side."

"And I've a sentimental preference for finding my wife at home when I get home. I like to see her on the porch with her skirts blowing about, or at the window watching for me. Do you have in the roar and hum of machinery she seems fearfully out of place, like a poem in an ash can."

"My wife," I said with a glint of humor, "started haunting my office because your wife started haunting yours."

"I don't know why my wife started," he began thoughtfully. "I've never been able to find out. I've a suspicion that she read something somewhere that set her thinking, and this is a result."

"Honestly, Hunt, my business suffers as a direct result of it. I get nervous and out of sorts, and I'm so fond of her I don't want to hurt her feelings. Then I often have to be curt with business men who come in while she's waiting. I don't really mean to be, but I am, and I'm afraid to make a luncheon engagement any time. I've told her repeatedly that I'd like best to keep my office life and my home life separate, but she only opens her eyes very wide and looks so hurt that I simply don't dare keep on. You don't think I'm disloyal, speaking this way, do you?"

How Jutes Felt.

"Frankly," I said, "I do not. It nearly drives me wild."

He held out his hand.

"Agreed!" he said cordially. "I'm as fond of my little wife as I can be," he added warmly, "but it does not go to my nerves to have her chase down to the factory every night and wait for me. I come home always when I can get away, and her coming doesn't help

"Absolutely not," I said heartily.

"I feel exactly the same, and I don't know how on earth to correct it. The first time my wife came down we had a fearful row. I had to say that I did like her to come to make her feel better, and ever since that there hasn't been an end to it."

"Women don't seem to have any sense of proportion about husbands," he said. "My wife says she wants to be with me every minute she can, whether I'm busy or not. She just likes to sit there and feel that I'm in the room. I—honestly, I don't understand that."

"Nor I. Darned little satisfaction in watching a busy, irritable man."

"It's the difference in the sexes, I guess," he said. "It's the saccharine side of women we don't understand."

What does all this prove? Only that a skilful philosopher is not necessarily a mathematician, and a good surgeon may not be a good thinker. It means most of all that training—experience and learning is memory, nothing else in anything, no matter how perfect, will not help you in anything else.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of 17 and work in an office with a young man with whom I am very much in love. He is always so nice as he can be at work, and seemed at first to think lots of me, but has never been out to see me but once, and that was when I asked him to a party. How could I show him I care for him and get him to pay me more attention, as I feel I love him and cannot give him up?

JENNIE.

I'm very unwise, my dear Jennie, to mix business and pleasure. It is much better to have your friends and your business associates separate, then you will be glad to see them both, and you will not have the opportunity to grow tired of them from too constant association. Of course, it is not your place in any way to try to attract any man. Just be as nice as you can be to every one you know, then the particular one will want you to like him best. Do you understand?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have been going with a young man almost two years. We are engaged, and he insists on an early marriage, but I hesitate because he has planned for us to live with his parents. He is an only child, and his mother and father seem to like me very much. Do you think I am foolish to put him off?

BROWN EYES.

Of course, my dear Brown Eyes,

it is better for two young people just married to have their own little home alone, but there are many happily married couples who live with their parents. Do you love him with all your heart? Do both you and he possess the same calm temperament that makes for happiness with others? Don't spoil your chance of happiness just because you cannot start out in life together in your own home. All that will come to you together with the years and success.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

"Getting Used to a Thing" Is the Secret of Memory

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B. M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University)

DOCTOR," asks one of a hundred thousand patients, "why is it that every time I tax my memory I have a bitter taste in my mouth?" This was a query, not from an average person who had gone no further than the fifth or sixth grade in school, but came from a woman with a college education.

Another patient, a young man this time, complains that he always feels as if he has previously seen or experienced the things he goes through. Others describe their own absent-mindedness and other oddities, which convince them that they "have no memory" or have "lost their memories," and are "in fear that they will suffer a loss of mind."

How cruelly sweet are the echoes that start from memory, that plays old tunes on the heart, even a child knows. Happily, when the memory looks back the farthest and images the most, it pauses least of all. To live is to remember; the ebb and flow of being and becoming is a motion picture of fond and other recollections. Even the lunatic and the psychotic and the lover are in memory all compact. It is merely that their memories are defective, slighted and distorted.

Memory's Many Sides.
Memory is the warder of the intellectual life. It is the custodian of much that makes man a rational animal rather than a brute. Without memory there can be no happiness. Man is always happier for having been happy, so that if you make a man happy even once you make him happy 20 years after by the memory of it.

Must when soft voices die,
Vibrates in the memory.
O'er, when sweet voices die,
Love itself shall linger there,
Live within the sense they quicken.

Rose leaves, when the rose is dead,
Are leaved for the beloved's bed,
And so thy thoughts, when thou art gone,
Love itself shall still remember.

Memory is not the elementary, simple thing that children and doctors would have you believe. Even when you appreciate that it includes recollection, recall and retention, when you understand that to have even a workable A B C memory demands that you be ready to retain what you touch, see, feel, hear, smell, taste, and taste, as well as recall it as it will upon demand, it without your will, you still have failed to analyze memory. Memory has many more sides than these.

The labyrinthine intricacy of memory is in a manner brought into your understanding when you realize that to remember to tell your friend something is entirely different from the recollection of a funny story. You may remember to mail a letter, and yet forget to go to the bank. You may, like actors, have an excellent memory for lines and parts, and yet never remember the words of a poem, or be capable of reciting poetry or sing songs time out of mind, but to recognize the false note in that song, or to be accurate at mathematics is a horse of another color.

Some Memory Hints.
Ancient psychologists still tell you that the memory is one of your faculties. That nonsense is no longer held. The memory for words is no way helps you to remember sentences. You may be able to memorize Beethoven's fifth symphony, and unable to carry so simple a melody as "Yankee Doodle" in your head.

What does all this prove? Only that a skilful philosopher is not necessarily a mathematician, and a good surgeon may not be a good thinker. It means most of all that training—experience and learning is memory, nothing else in anything, no matter how perfect, will not help you in anything else.

There are as many different kinds of memory as there are diseases. Memory as feeble-minded exploits as would be the memorizing of all the names in a street directory. It can be done as a freak stunt, but it is wasted energy and a useless tax upon the brain.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a young lady, 15 years old, and I have been keeping company with a young man of 21 for 10 months. He has been coming to see me twice and sometimes more often every week during the 10 months. Before Christmas he told me that he loved me better than any girl in the world. At Christmas he gave me a very expensive present, and he is a boy who works for an ordinary salary.

Do you think that it is wrong for me to allow him to kiss me when he comes and then kiss me good night when he leaves, even if he hasn't asked me to be his? I love him more than any boy I ever knew. Please tell me if I am doing wrong in allowing him to kiss me. He is in my heart in his ways for one young.

JUANITA.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: Kisses are hard problems even at 15, aren't they? Don't you think it would be very much better for you to wait until he asks you to marry him before you permit him the privilege of a fiancé? No girl should ever kiss a boy to whom she is not engaged to be married.
