SUMPTUOUS ATTIRE FOR EVENING WEAR

The Dinner Dress Entirely of Lace Has Given Place to a Frock in Which Lace is Charmingly Set Off by Application of Thin Cloth or Silk in Palest Colorings.

Smart Gowns for Wear at Theater and Cafe Show a Slightly Decollete Neck and Elbow Sleeves and Are Topped by Chic Hats Rich in Coloring and Splendid with Ostrich Plumes.

Evening Wraps Are Built on Empire Lines or Extremely Loose with Capes and Voluminous Sleeves --- The Newest Cloths for These Coats Show a Suggestion of Wooliness and Are in Rich Hues.

BY MARY DEAN.

The growing habit of dining, as the French call it, in public restaurants, hotels, etc., makes the smart, high-necked dinner dress quite a modern necessity. And since the theatre generally follows a gay dinner away from home, the costumes made for this purpose have much of the light tending and gay, essence of playhouse wear.

New modes call still for the palest evening tones of the black and white white, and is to be employed in vast quantities, it will to a great extent be blended with other textures. There are all lace skirts and all lace coats or bodices, but the gown entirely of lace seems to achieve, somewhat, only a look of chambray. Two sorts or more, with the addition sometimes of several species of net, are likewise sometimes employed to give the lace a look of grace and lightness. Especially is this done with bodices, whose veils and underbones need to be very airy; but the lace skirt may only add additional little ruffles of net or tulle, or applications of silk cloth or velvet.

Applications of thin cloth upon a rich background make a novel and effective treatment which will be employed in the toilettes of a specially dressy nature. The skirt of such a gown may be made of lace, and the entire jacket of the cloth, or else in a most vivid shade.

One gown in the last combination, for dinner and theatre wear, and of remarkable beauty, had a lace skirt in deep cream, and a jacket and skirt applied of chiffon tulle in a superb blue.

The newest shades in blue are of great brilliancy, those bordering on the green, and a jacket and skirt applied of chiffon tulle in a superb blue.

Returning to lace gowns in their entirety, a novelty in the field is domestic hand-crochet, which, in cream white and cream cottons, shapes entire gowns. The old-fashioned "tidy" look of these seems odd in these days of over-sophistication for the great stiff old roses and split shells and buttonhole rings of the tidy are seen, as well as the commonplace and plainest crochet stitches. Nevertheless, this modest medium evolves models of remarkable pretension to the skirts, some of which are made with flounces, following the elaborate cuts of the day, and the humble needle doing wonders in shaping short and longish jackets.

To obtain lightness, the best of these are lined with thin lawn, and if the crochets pattern is a very open, chiffon over the lawn. But at its best the hand-crochet of the country can never have an extended vogue, for the lace part of such garments has none of the delicacy of the Irish thing. Notwithstanding, smart makers are giving gowns in this place in their show rooms.

Two dinner and theatre gowns illustrated show in one an elaborate use of lace, and in both smart coat cuts. The first has a skirt of mauve chiffon and tulle heavily embroidered and appliqued with lace in same color. The coddy-shaped jacket is of mauve panne, lined with silk in the same tone and with a heavy silk fringe finishing the ends at the hips and back. White chiffon tulle forms the waistcoat, with pure white lace for the chemise and sleeve frills. The hat is of pale mauve felt with white cross-stitching and deep purple velvet loops. Long gloves of mauve suede are worn with this gown.

The second costume is of embroidered and plain tulle in the new blue. Chiffon velvet forms a very decorative garment over the lawn. But at its best the hand-crochet of the country can never have an extended vogue, for the lace part of such garments has none of the delicacy of the Irish thing. Notwithstanding, smart makers are giving gowns in this place in their show rooms.

which is accompanied by a hat will also be worn, and if the growing shortness of sleeves is any indication of future prospect, one may expect at no very distant period some degree of décolletage for all evening gowns. Even the majority of the high ones are only so in name, for guimpes are almost entirely transparent, the film of chiffon which backs the beautiful lace never affording much solidity.

The ensemble of all of these outdoor evening gowns is one of extreme coquetry. The short fuzzy sleeves and dainty finish of the neck and fronts of bodices give all the smart frocks quite a party air, while the present limp fall of skirts adds a touch every time to grace.

Evening hats will be rich in coloring and splendid with ostrich feathers, while thin silks and velvets will be employed to produce many novel effects. Several bewildering hats seen depended, in fact, entirely upon the manner in which party materials were shirred and tucked with their dashing air. One hat of marked character was a wide black ostrich feather holding the two, and the plume itself dancing in the air.

More than grotesqueness of trimming to this subtle hand manipulation of stuffs employed with fine headgear, so that a hat overcrowded with usual millinery gewgaws is at a discount beside such scope. Upon white felt many shades of pale pink and rose velvet are employed with beautiful effect, and if several shades are used upon one hat, the feathers may likewise be omitted.

The summer trick of a lace or chiffon drop at the back is also carried over in some scattered instances, these fluttering tails providing a very seductive quality, to shape which might otherwise seem too small and angular. But for the matter of that, the heavy underlining of all hats continues to be the point invariably noted in evidence.

In direct contrast to the elaborate quality of outdoor evening wear, some of the little dinner and dance frocks are of a surprising simplicity. Many very modern textures are also used for these, quantities of the little patterned silks and flowered muslins employed being of quite an impressive sort, and ribbon and silk veils adding trimmings in many pretty forms.

point with quite the lowest gowns is that the sleeves are very neatly if not entirely elbow length, and this cut, with the long gloves worn, has a special girliness.

In fact, the look the modern woman aspirates to is essentially youthful, the restrained quality of the best made gowns to small and angular. But for the matter madame must acquire to appear well dressed. Three pretty little evening gowns display the prevailing simplicities, in mood, late autumn and winter materials.

A very girlish dress of point embroidered mousseline is effectively decked with plain pink tulle ribbon, put on the skirt in long pieces finished with bows.

The second gown is of white chiffon blue velvet, and the third costume is a box robe frock of spangled and embroidered tulle. The enormous length of the bodice will show, for a number of the opera and ball gowns will barely be held upon the shoulders with the narrowest waists of trimming.

Gloves in suede to match the color of the gown will continue a point for winter evening dress. The enormous length of some of the new gloves also indicates the excessive décolletage which some of the bodices will show, for a number of the opera and ball gowns will barely be held upon the shoulders with the narrowest waists of trimming.

Spangles and gilt embroideries will be employed upon the more elaborate evening confections, whose traceries will take many novel forms. One marvellously beautiful gown seen, however, was of great simplicity, pale-white tulle run with a gilt thread being the material used. The skirt, which trailed slightly below the waist, was made with an enormously deep inner, above which went fifteen rows of the delicate gilt threading. A little ruche laced with the gilt trimmed the neck of the tiny little baby body, which was held over each shoulder by three hands of gilt braids; the deep skeleton girdle was also gilt braided, and gilt slippers and a wreath of gilt wheat ears were matchless accessories.

The opera and theatre evening wraps the smart world is considering are of unassumed looseness and fancy capes, with novel sleeves in the folds, are much more to the fore than coats. The coat models likewise strive for as much width as possible, the Empire model showing very wide skirts, which may be decked almost as elaborately as dress skirts. With lace, satin and velvet and cloth in white and pale tones, ermine and white generally in the form of a collar or stole and in cuff bands.

Plain cloth in rich pinks, grays, greens, blues and all the shades of white is a popular texture, the newer dotes showing a little suggestion of wooliness.

The satin smooth ones, however, are still in great demand, and one very inexpensive revival for this is the old-fashioned pinking for new edges.

"The new pinking, however," writes a French correspondent, "is all points--ray's teeth," as the sewing folk themselves put the sort used.

Of our views we can frame a vision if we will but tread beneath our feet each seed of autumn. Longfellow.

BRILLIANT COMBS WILL DECK FALL COIFFURES

Side and Back Combs of Shell Are Buried in the Hair to Display a Circle or Crescent of Gold Bands or Imitation Gems at the Back of the Head.

Plain Shell Combs are Larger Than Ever and the Huge Old-Fashioned Comb Is Again in Vogue--Cut Steel and Jet Ornaments are Extremely Smart.

Unquestionably the girl of the present day arranges her own hair more artistically and becomingly than any of her sisters of past decades. She has mastered the art of picturesque hair dressing and she has attained this coveted end not by the aid of a hair dresser. The once significant and despised side comb is the medium of her success.

It accomplishes for the up-to-date girl what only an expert coiffeur has been able to effect previously. With it, no matter how unwidely her hair, she shapes the locks into a fairy frame of jet, and a meaningless mass of hair becomes a cap of crowning glory.

But the side comb is no longer by any means insignificant. It has taken upon itself various forms, and its glittering embellishments rank it as a member of the jewel box family. The season's miniature hats bring it into particular prominence this fall and Miami must look well to the crescent or circle of shell or brilliant stones which adorn the back of her coiffure.

When simple side combs of shell are worn they must match as closely as possible the color of the hair. For the blonde there are many shades of amber with a shell of palest lace for flaxen or grey locks. Rich brown tortoise coloring is for dark hair, and jet side combs and ornaments stand out like polished gems among auburn tresses.

In shape the newest importations are larger than ever before and side combs are unusually long. All, however, are straight, the curved comb having proved thoroughly impractical. For the back of the coiffure the deep, old-fashioned comb will be very much in evidence this winter.

It is, however, the fancy comb both for the sides and back of the hair which has won the affections of the up-to-date girl. Cut steel is to be quite the smart thing and wide bands of this shiny grey metal rest in a semi-circle at the back of the head, giving no evidence of the shell combs that hold them in place. In fact this is a feature of all the newest jeweled combs. They form merely an invisible support for brilliant stones of gold and silver filigree, which have the appearance of being pinned lightly in the hair or of affecting a Grecian bandage.

Nothing Adds More to the Tastiness of the Meat Course Than Vegetables or Fruit Concealed in Batter and Fried a Crisp Brown.

The secret of making a meat course the most appetizing portion of a dinner is to serve something sweet in connection with it. The German custom is to eat very rich composites of fruits with roasts, etc., but these are quite too sweet for the American palate. In fritters the American housewife will find a more than satisfactory substitute. The sweetness of the sauce or filling blends with the batter and loses entirely any sickening taste. The following recipes for fritters lend themselves temporarily to Winter balls of fare.

Apple Fritters--Core, pare and cut some firm apples crosswise into slices a third of an inch thick. With a biscuit cutter stamp them into cakes of uniform size. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and a little lemon juice. Cover with a napkin and when they have stood for half an hour, drain. In the meantime make a batter by mixing and sifting together a cupful of flour, a pinch of salt and a tablespoonful of sugar. Beat well the yolks of two eggs, add half a cupful of milk and stir gradually into the flour. Beat thoroughly before all the liquid is added, as it is difficult to whip a thin batter smooth. Add one table-spoonful of melted butter or olive oil, beat well and stand aside for an hour. When ready to use fold in the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. If the batter is not sufficiently thick to coat completely the slices of apple, mix in a little more flour. Dip the pieces of apple in the mixture and fry to a golden brown in very hot fat. Lift out with a skimmer and dry on paper in an open oven until all are fried. Sprinkle with powdered sugar or serve with a melted sugar sauce.

Celery Fritters--Put half a pint of cold water into a saucepan with a ounce of butter and as soon as it comes to a boil stir in by degrees four ounces of flour. Continue to stir until a thick paste is formed. Allow this to cook five minutes while still stirring. Remove from the fire and when the mixture has cooled a little add three eggs, beating one into it before adding another. Season with salt, white pepper and nutmeg and stir in two ounces grated American cheese. Have ready some pieces of cooked celery an inch long which have been sprinkled with grated cheese. Make small balls of the cheese paste and place a piece of celery in the center of each. Dip the balls into beaten eggs, cover with very fine bread-crumbs mixed with an equal portion of grated cheese, and fry in boiling fat. Serve with a wine or melted sugar sauce.

Apricot Fritters--After soaking the required number of apricots, stew them in sweetened water and when cooked drain off the syrup. Put them in a soup plate and sprinkle with powdered sugar and lemon juice, or if desired, a wineglassful of brandy. These should stand for about two hours. Put the yolks of two eggs into a basin and mix them well with two table-spoonfuls of salad oil and a pinch of salt. Stir in by degrees four ounces of flour which has been thoroughly sifted. When a perfectly smooth paste is formed pour in slowly, stirring all the time with a wooden spoon, half a cup of lukewarm water. Beat the batter for ten or fifteen minutes, cover the basin with a cloth and allow it to stand for two hours. Just before using the batter pour in the wine in which the apricots are soaked or a little spoonful of vanilla and the stiffly beaten whites of the two eggs. Fry the fritters on a cloth and dip in the-batter. Fry in boiling fat and serve with a sauce flavoured with wine or a stiff froth. If the batter is not sufficiently thick to coat completely the slices of apple, mix in a little more flour. Dip the pieces of apple in the mixture and fry to a golden brown in very hot fat. Lift out with a skimmer and dry on paper in an open oven until all are fried. Sprinkle with powdered sugar or serve with a melted sugar sauce.

Banana Fritters--Remove the skin from four bananas, scrape them and slice into thin round pieces. Sprinkle with a little powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice, and stand aside while making the batter. Mix and sift together a cupful of flour, a pinch of salt, one table-spoonful of sugar and a rounding teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the yolks of two eggs with half a cupful of milk, stir gradually into the dry ingredients and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the two eggs. Dry the fritters on a cloth and fry in deep fat. These are especially delicious when served with currant jelly syrup.

Dumpling Fritters--Make a batter of two eggs beaten very thick with a thick syrup. Add one-third of a glass of beaten currant jelly and boil up well. Take from the fire, add the juice of a lemon, strain through a fine sieve and serve.

Orange Fritters--Peel two oranges and slice in thin pieces. Dip in a batter made from a cupful of flour, a rounding teaspoonful of butter, a rounding teaspoonful of sugar, a pinch of salt, the yolks of two eggs and half a cupful of milk. Fry in hot fat and serve with powdered sugar or the following sauce: Beat the yolks of two eggs with half a cupful of sugar. Add the grated rind and juice of half a lemon, two table-spoonfuls of cherry or two table-spoonfuls of vanilla, and cook over hot water. Stir vigorously until it thickens and cover with the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Serve at once of corn, strain off the juice and press the kernels through a colander. To this meat add one-half pint of milk, one level teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of pepper. Add the yolks of three eggs and one pint of pastry flour sifted with a rounding teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix thoroughly and fold in the beaten whites of the eggs. Drop by spoonfuls into extremely hot fat and when sufficiently drained, serve with maple syrup.

Selected Reading for Sunday's Quiet Hours

WAS METHODIST CHURCH; IS NOW A SYNAGOGUE

Dr. Goldwin Smith and Leading Toronto Citizens Attend the Jewish Opening Service—Several Thousand People Were Present—A Big Collection.

The unique spectacle of a Christian church edifice being consecrated afresh to the worship of God according to the tenets of the Jewish religion was witnessed in Toronto last Sunday when the formal dedication of the old McCull street Methodist church as a synagogue took place in the presence of several thousand people. The building was filled long before the time set for the ceremony, and many hundreds of ticket-holders were unable to gain admission. The Gentiles probably made up the majority of the audience, but there was a very large turn-out of followers of the Jewish faith, and the solemn pomp of the worshipers deepened the impression of the occasion. Rabbi Jacobs, of the Holy Blossom Synagogue, delivered a splendid sermon on the brotherhood of man, and his point was that the house would still continue to be a house of prayer, notwithstanding the change in ownership, and with strong commendation from his hearers.

Impressive Ceremony

"Beh, Hamedesh Hagadol Cherra T'helem," which, being interpreted, means "The House of Study and Society for Prayers," was the title given the new temple. Few changes were noticed in the building, excepting the removal of the organ and the erection of a canopy which served as a screen for the ark, where a male choir chanted the responses of the service with beautiful effect. The ceremony began promptly at 4 o'clock, when Rabbi Jacobs, wearing a tall black hat and a large key at the end of a chain, and declaring in Hebrew and English, "Open to me the gates of righteousness that I may enter them and praise the Lord." He was followed by 10 scrolls of Hebrew, bearing the records of the Jewish law, which were highly ornamented and made a deep impression. The choir responded, "Hear ye His gates with thanksgiving and His corners with praise." Chants and responses were then sung at the ark and the procession moved around the synagogue seven times, the whole audience standing. Psalms were sung at intervals, and Mr. Sebastian Burnett, rendered from the gallery two notes in a fine baritone voice. After a special consecration prayer, prepared by

Rabbi Jacobs, the scrolls were placed in the ark, while the choir chanted the words of Moses when the scroll was first placed in the ark, "Return, O Lord, unto thy resting place."

Rabbi Jacobs' Sermon
The sermon then followed, the preacher taking as his text the words: "They shall make Me a sanctuary and I shall dwell in their midst." Rabbi Jacobs dwelt on the generosity of the congregation in raising the funds necessary to purchase the building. There had been several questions to consider in the matter. The first was that of finances, for the congregation was largely made up of workmen, who had to work hard for a living. However, he hoped that each would contribute as he had been blessed with the means. Then there was the religious aspect of the former congregation to part with their church to turn it over to the purposes of the Jewish religion. This, however, only natural, but to the unbiased mind, it would be clear that it was wise for many reasons. While the Jews might see eye to eye on reason mind to mind with their Christian friends, yet they were all children of God, and the house would continue to be a house of prayer. He had seen the other day a place of worship down town being leveled to the ground, and it had inspired him with the thought that it was much better that this building was to be continued in the service of God. He said that the object of all public worship was to bring God down into the sanctuary, and the house should not only be a link between God and man, but serve to bind man and man with the cords of love.

Among the prominent citizens present were noticed: Dr. Goldwin Smith, Controller Shaw and Hubbard, A. Claude Macdonald, M.P., Edmund Bristol, M.P., Dr. Beattie Nesbit, M.P., Ald. McBride and Jones, ex-Ald. Ramsden, Mr. C. A. B. Brown, chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. H. E. Smallpiece. A collection was taken up after the sermon, which amounted to between $100 and $200, and the total offerings during the day were over $1,000. In the evening supper was served, to which the entire congregation and many friends sat down.

AN AMERICAN HINDOO TEMPLE
San Francisco is to enjoy the distinction of having a temple erected within its city for the worship of the creed of the Vedas—the only temple of the creed outside of India, its home. The corner stone for the new temple was laid recently with appropriate ceremony by the Swami Trigunaitia. The corner stone contained the picture of the Master Sri Rama Krishna, a group of pictures of the Swamis of the Belur Math, India, and of the sect of Radhakrishna; a brief history of the Vedanta Society of San Francisco and a translation in the original Sanskrit, the oldest literature of the Aryas race. Swami Trigunaitia said that it is the only corner stone containing the Sanskrit in either America or Europe, and the temple will be the only one erected in the western world. The temple will be of the Oriental type of architecture, built upon a lot 98 by 100 feet, and will contain, besides the house of worship, class rooms, an abode for the Swami, who collected the funds for the temple within one year, and for the president of the society. The structure will be finished within three months.

MOVEMENT TOWARD CHURCH UNION

(Boston Transcript.)

Foreign missions would pay, if they did nothing but teach the church at home lessons in cooperation and unity. The pace of the union movement is much swifter abroad and we are getting every few weeks gratifying indications of its progress. Practical considerations often count for much in the movement, but the missionaries are always short of funds, and they cannot afford to duplicate institutions. Hundreds of thousands worth of property were wiped out by the Boxer uprising of 1900 in China, and the rebuilding of the last five years has been marked by several gratifying combinations between Presbyterians and Congregationalists, representing both English and American societies. A union medical college and hospital, costing over $5,000,000, will soon be finished in Peking, and educational interests will also be benefited. From Korea comes the news of the projected combination due to the initiation of the broad-minded Methodist bishop Dr. Harris, which, if carried out, will unite all Protestant Christians in one church of Christ. In India federation of several branches of the Presbyterian church has already taken place, as well as of four important Congregational missions, and the most discerning workers are now quietly, but vigorously, moving toward a federation that shall embrace all Protestant missionaries. It is not the economic considerations only which prompt these endeavors, but they grow out of a realization of the folly of trying to perpetuate in the Orient the minute and perplexing divisions of the Christianity of the Occident. As Bishop Harris said at the recent enthusiastic meeting in Korea, which initiated the union movement: "Let us give them that name that is above every name, and let us not obscure its meaning by the introduction of other names which, however precious to us, have to these people no meaning and no saving power."

Unity Versus Federation

Where unity is too high an ideal at which to strive, federation comes to the fore as a practical substitute, and many who would despair of any large amalgamation of Protestant forces in this country in the near future, are working with all their might to produce a working harmony among churches of a given locality. There is still so much variance in theological emphasis and in methods of worship that merging of all denominations into one may be a matter of another century; but meanwhile the best sentiment favors the reduction of competition to a minimum, the avoidance of waste and extravagance through undue multiplication of churches, and closer sympathy between all religious bodies. This is why an Inter-Church Federation Congress is to be held in New York in November, at which leading denominations will be represented by their most prominent leaders, clerical and lay.

The Unity Movement

Though the pace is slower in Christian lands where vested ecclesiastical interests are so strongly entrenched, real progress nevertheless is being made. Where a denomination like the Presbyterians or Methodists has numerous branches, they have to be brought together as the first step toward the larger inclusiveness. For example, five distinct divisions of Methodism in Great Britain are now perfecting an organic union. In Canada and Australia the leading denominations are consulting with reference to elimination of sectarian barriers, and though discussion brings to light some practical difficulties, the agitation of the subject will doubtless continue until some new alignment can be brought about. In this country the most promising union movement at the moment is that which looks toward the inclusion of 60,000 Congregationalists, 175,000 Methodist Protestants, and 200,000 United Brethren in one General Council, which shall oversee the missionary and educational work of the three bodies. Representatives of each will meet at Dayton, (Ohio) in February, to work out the scheme in detail. It has already, so far as developed, received the cordial sanction of the national organizations of the church concerned.

Responsibility of Mission Boards
It is coming to be seen that the spirit of administration in executive boards determines to a large degree the fate of Christian unity in local communities, for many over-church communities are kept in their present unfortunate condition through grants from official boards. Now if these boards are made to understand that the Christian sentiment of the country will not tolerate denominational propaganda in fields already overstocked with churches and will tolerate the maintenance of churches which have outlived their usefulness, then reform will come. And it is not on the frontier alone that the need exists for a realignment of Christian forces. There is more than one town within an hour's ride of Boston with a half-dozen meagre, dwindling congregations, where there ought not to be more than one or two. But there is not power enough on the ground to bring about a merger, and so long as the deacons or elders can go to official headquarters with a touching story of "the faithful few who are bravely maintaining the services," it takes a hard-hearted missionary secretary and committee to say them "No;" but some officials are courageous enough to say it, and some denominations more Catholic than others are looking less to the perpetuation of denominational privilege than to the wider interests of the kingdom.

PROBLEMS OF LIFE THAT FACE THE STUDENT

Rev. Hugh Pedley, B. A., pastor of Emmanuel Congregational church, Montreal, preached a special sermon to students last Sunday evening. Mr. Pedley took for his text: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, that ye should bear much fruit." The call to privilege is a call to service, and that there is an opportunity for service who can doubt? The nineteenth century has created a new civilization, and it will be the function of the twentieth century to deal with the conditions that arise from this new order. There are three conditions involving serious problems.

"The first of these is the immense increase in wealth. With larger areas of raw material, with expanded skill and experience in transforming the raw into the manufactured, and with enlarged facilities for distribution there is bound to be an enormous addition to the wealth of the world. The worship of money is what we have to fear, and against this worship who can better set their faces than men who have lived in the atmosphere of a university, who have held converse with the loftiest souls, who have breathed the serene air of the heights of Olympus and have drunk deep of the Empyrean spring?"

"A second condition is one that always follows on the track of commercial development, and that is the sense of world-fellowship, the complicate consciousness. The term provincial is dying out. The condition of things that gave to each shrine or county, to any nothing of each nation, its own peculiar stamp, its own dialect, its own view of things, is going, if it be not already gone. That order of things which those of us who have seen, as upon a new, and we may well ask what effect it is going to have upon all institutions. What is going to be the effect on racial types, of this blending of world arena, of a vast variety of people into a new humanity? Is there to be a better humanity? How profound, how serious the issues at stake, and who shall deal with them if not the men and women of our universities?"

"A third condition is that of religious unrest. What characterizes our age is not so much the fact of questioning as its widespread distribution. That which was once the sign of the scholar is now the mood of the multitude. Men are not so ready to take things on trust as they used to be. If there be no rebellion against authority, there is a challenging of it. Men are asking the reason of things. In the Roman Catholic church there are on every side the outcroppings of restlessness under the authority of the pope, and men are beginning to ask how much more is this authority than that of God. And where shall that manhood of the Protestant churches, where so much stress has been laid on the authority of the Scriptures, there are a thousand questions being raised as to the nature of that

AN AUTUMN PRAYER

When the dead leaves gutter eastward in the days of the year. Come the time of love and dreaming, when the days of days appear. Purpling distance, mellowing sunset, trees adorned with red and gold. Air brimful of life's elixir—scent an Oryza of was as water in its weakness when compared with this life for life. And I with life's chain were endless with sweet days like this for life. Musto greets my every footstep in the dead leaves rustling here. When the ripe leaves gutter eastward in the twilight of the year. Then this life's potential awakens seems a thousand times more dear; Yet the minutes gorgeous death scenes that embrown every wood. To return to earth that gave them in the spring so tearfully. Breathe a prayer like an incense through the very heart of me: My time for stumbling eastward in the gloaming of the year. S. V. Gillies in Baltimore America.

PARADISE ROW CAR SERVICE

Residents Prefer Cars Should Run on Pond Street Rather Than Double Track Paradise Row.

The question of double tracking Paradise Row by the street railway company is agitating the people of that section of the city, and petitions, both for and against the scheme, are being freely circulated. The Times interviewed a number of merchants and residents of Paradise Row yesterday, especially those living in the vicinity of Mill street, where it is said Paradise Row is about two feet narrower than at the other end. The majority of those who were seen expressed themselves as opposed to having another track laid on Paradise Row, but favored the Pond street idea as petitioned for by the citizens of Mount Pleasant and vicinity at the recent meeting held in Jones & Schofield's office. It is claimed by the Paradise Row people that if another line of rails was laid, it would be a great inconvenience. Paradise Row is, and has been for some time, a favorite drive for tourists, and it is also greatly used for general driving purposes, and if the proposed scheme was carried out it would seriously affect this street as a pleasure drive. It is also claimed that delivery teams would not have room to stand in front of a house if another track was put down. The argument used in favor of Pond street is that it would answer the same purpose as double tracking Paradise Row without encroaching either street with more rails than are absolutely necessary. It is also claimed that the Pond street route would relieve, to a certain extent, the congestion of traffic which occurs on Mill street, between Pond and Paradise Row, by taking two of the cars (which would otherwise have to go that way) off that portion of the street, as the two cars going along Pond street would go up Mill street, and so on around to Pond street again. Nearly all the people who were interviewed were in favor of the loop system, provided the cars run both ways, and only in two cases was there a desire to return to the old system of the cars stopping at Mill and King streets, and even then they thought that if the cars were running both ways on the loop it would be an improvement.

WEDDINGS

Sis-Porteous. Miss Phyllis Emily Frances, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porteous, of Montreal, was married on Wednesday last to Paul Frederick Sis, also of Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Wood, assisted by Rev. Arthur Francis, and took place in the chapel of St. Mary's, St. Petronille de Beaulieu, Island of Orleans (Que.). The bride's mother is the daughter of the late W. Chapman Drury, of St. John. The bride's father was at one time in the Bank of Montreal here, but is now connected with the interests of James Ross, Montreal.

Hall-MacBain

Rev. Herbert Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, Boston, on Thursday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howe, 306 Warren street, Roxbury, married Miss Ida MacBain of Nova Scotia, but a resident of Boston for many years, to William Hatfield Hall of Lunenburg, Eng. Only the near relatives of the pair were present, and a collation was served after the ceremony.

THE L. C. R. AT HALIFAX (Chronicle).

The government is gradually acquiring properties on the water side of Upper Water street, between north and Gerrard streets, and it will likely not be long before work will be begun tearing down buildings and grading the land for railway purposes. A month or two ago all the properties on the land west of Upper Water street required for railway purposes were appraised and several of the owners have accepted the values fixed and deeded the properties to the government.

THE FISH ARE GONE

Fertilizer Manufacturers and Sea Gulls Rid the Courtney Bay Shore of Sardine Herrings.

The many hundreds of sardine herrings, which were driven ashore and left by the tide in Courtney Bay, a few days ago, by the dog-fish, are nearly all gone now, as men with teams have been engaged in hauling them away for the manufacture of fertilizer.

The gulls are also doing away with the fish, and the shores are white with their birds.

AN EMPIRE SOCIAL

Novel Entertainment to be Held in Portland Street Church Next Week.

What promises to be the most unique affair that has taken place in St. John for some time, is the Empire Social to be given in Portland Street Methodist Sunday school on October 4 and 5.

Some of the leading British colonies will be represented by booths at which light refreshments will be sold; the attendants being attired in appropriate costumes. The entertainments will be given in the hall, South Africa, British West Indies and the East Indies. These will be arranged around the hall, and the floor will be white in the centre. Great Britain, Ireland and Scotland will be represented by neatly arranged booths.

A feature of the entertainment will be the Canadian lumber camp, to which the gymnasium will be devoted. Here hungry workers can regale themselves with baked beans, brown bread, and other simple fare in the lumberman's style. Music will be furnished by the St. John's Glee Club, who have earned an enviable reputation as a pianist.

A FINE SHOW

Charlottetown Exhibition Vaudeville Artists at the York Theatre.

At the York Theatre last night a large audience was present to see the vaudeville troupe recently engaged at the Prince Edward Island exhibition, held at Charlottetown, go through their performance. From the first act on the horizontal bar by the Spaulding brothers to the final aerial ladder act, all was excellent. Zella with her trained dog, Doc, was a masterpiece of equisense, the dog sitting up in his master's hand while he was doing his act. Such was never seen here before and it made a hit with the people. The whole performance was excellent and it will repay anyone who has not seen this show to go this afternoon.

AN ART EXHIBIT

The local Women's Art Association intend holding a fine art exhibit in the Union street, on October 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7.

The exhibit which will be used as the first act on the horizontal bar by the Spaulding brothers to the final aerial ladder act, all was excellent. Zella with her trained dog, Doc, was a masterpiece of equisense, the dog sitting up in his master's hand while he was doing his act. Such was never seen here before and it made a hit with the people. The whole performance was excellent and it will repay anyone who has not seen this show to go this afternoon.

FIVE GREAT ATTRACTIONS

This number of splendid entertainments is being offered in the Spencer Star course during the week ending September 23rd. The price of the course ticket is not more than might be fairly asked for any one of the individual attractions. For this reason the sale of course tickets is already very large indeed. It is the idea of F. G. Spencer who is promoting this idea in the city, that the exhibitors should be given the opportunity to present their own specialties, thus supplying a winter's entertainment for many people at a low price. Probably the exhibitors are arousing more interest just now than any of the other course offerings and doubtless a great audience will greet these celebrated singers. Miss Bertha Barnes and Miss Nellie Thompson are at present canvassing the south and east ends of the city.

ST. JOHN MAN MAKING GOOD

Harry A. Woodworth, One Time Editor of Progress, and His Success in Toronto.

(Printer and Publisher).

It is with pleasure that the publishers of this paper announce that they have secured the services of Harry A. Woodworth to conduct a department of criticism of advertising and job printing from month to month. Mr. Woodworth is a Canadian by birth, having learned the rudiments of the printing art in his father's country newspaper office in Nova Scotia when a boy. At the age of sixteen he was a contributor to leading advertising and printing journals. Editor of work attracted him and for some time he acted as editor of the Progress, St. John, N. B., and later of the Charlottetown Standard. Then he came to Toronto, to the United States, becoming advertising designer, writer and expert with some of the largest advertising agencies and printing shops in the country and editing well-known papers at night. For two years he was editor of the Retailer and Advertiser (Braine). Leaving this position and several others he held at the time, he came to Toronto a year and a half ago to be advertising manager of the T. Eaton Co. He is now engaged in writing and designing advertisements, booklets, etc. for some of the leading advertisers of America. "Mr. Woodworth," says the advertising world, "will make good at anything he undertakes." With the cooperation of the readers of the Printer and Publisher he should have no difficulty in doing so in connection with his new department.

TRADE WITH THE MEXICANS

Canada's Chance to Sell Railway Ties and Get Raw Material.

There promises to spring up between Canada and Mexico a trade in railway ties, as a result of the recent contract between the Elgin, Deseronto & St. Catharines Co. for a service between the two countries. Sir William Mulock has informed the steaming company that the Elgin, Deseronto & St. Catharines Co. has a large market for ties—probably a million a year for renewal alone. The ties are 60 cent rails, which are made in Canada. There would also be a demand for ties for new railways. As a result of this information the Canadian Government is endeavoring to open business between the two countries in this kind of lumber, which is very plentiful in eastern Canada.

IT WAS A FAKE

Ada Williams' Now Says the Assault Story Had No Foundation.

Ada Williams, the young woman who claimed to have been assaulted in an Ottawa street yard on the night of Sept. 23, confessed that her story was concocted out of whole cloth. She even states that she was not dragged into the yard on the corner of Carleton and Orange streets about four weeks previous and assaulted. Her story now, in effect, is that the portion of some brandy on the night of the 23rd inst., owing to an ailment with which she was afflicted, and became unconscious. She found a man, who she states she also placed the ropes about her in order to carry out her imagined story.

The young woman has been dismissed from Mrs. J. E. Rogers' employ, and will leave for her home in Utica (N.Y.) today.
