Glories of Ascot to be Revived by King George Tomorrow-Princess Alexandra Creates a Little Sensation at Buckingham Palace

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company.)

King George tomorrow will inaugurate his first Ascot; for last year, owing to the recent death of Edward VII., and of the consequent deep court mourning, the reigning family failed to put in an appearance at this famous race track, which is the only one on land belonging to the crown, being situated within the borders of Windsor's great park. Last year it was very sombre Ascot week, all the women present being in black and no royal procession, and the royal box suggesting death with its blinds drawn.

But tomorrow the former glories of Ascot will be revived, and King George and Queen Mary, with the other English and foreign royal personages staying with them at Windsor Castle, will drive from thence to the course, with a considerable amount of pomp and picturesque magnificence.

Royal Procession

It is the royal procession from the castle which constitutes, especially to foreigners, the most imposing feature of the Ascot straces. Until the royal buckhounds were abolished, a few years ago, it was always headed by the master of the pack, one of the great officers of the court, in his uniform of green and gold, adorned with silver couples. Now his place is taken by the master of the horse. In his wake comes a gorgeous array of huntsmen, grooms, outriders, etc., all in their state liveries, and superbly mounted. Then follows a series of carriages and four, driven by postilions, and containing, first, the dignitaries of the households, then the English and foreign visitors, and lastly, the king and queen, and any monarch who happens to be their guest. Mounted equerhes and mounted grooms, close the cortege, which, sweeping up the better part of the racecourse, between dense crowds of cheering people on either side, halts at the royal enclosure.

The latter is a feature of Ascot. Strict-

Buckingham Palace. But during the closing years of the reign of Queen Victoria, all sorts of abuses became rampant, and not only were the tickets distributed in numbers altogether out of proportion to the accommodation of the enclosure, but they were likewise allowed to get into the hands of persons barred from court, whose presence was objectionable to the royal family, and in certain inscances a positive cause for scandal.

To have in your family persons whom you would never have spoken to twice if they had not been your relatives, persons even whose every act irritates you and rubs you the wrong way, is one of greatest misfortunes that can befall one. Family loyalty then becomes difficult, but by no means impossible.

You need not associate with these uncongenial relatives any more than absorption to the proportion to the wrong way, is one of greatest misfortunes that can befall one. Family loyalty then becomes difficult, but by no means impossible.

with this importance, namely, that of Ascot.

The Ascot races are very old, indeed. King Charles II was wont to attend the races there, and it is an historic fact that Frederick Prince of Wales, father of George III. disgraced himself by flinging a bottle at the winner, as it was on the homeward stretch, prompted thereto by the fact that he had placed his money on another horse. Fortunately the bottle fell short. His brother, William, Duke of Cumberland, popularly known as "the butcher," 'owing to the savagery he displayed at the battle of Culloden, took the Ascot races under his especial patronage, got them into regular shape, and started the race-course in its present form.

Another step was made when George III. gave a cup in 1785, to be run for at Ascot, and from that time forth royalty has been in the habit of going regularly to Ascot for the races.

George IV. never missed a meeting, either as prince regent or as king, and Queen Victoria during the first twenty-five years of her reign, was in the habit of princes of her reign, was in the habit of princes of her reign, was in the habit of foreign and English royalty at Windsor Castle, for the Ascot races, driving every day from the castle to the course in state. Among her most notable visitors on these occasions having been Napoleon III. and Nicholas I. of Russia, both of whom gave annual Ascot cups for many years.

That is, the blow which is intended for another is practically certain to come back upon oneself.

But how many people apparently fail to realize this!

I am thinking especially of a young girl—otherwise a very likeable young person—who goes about frankly saying that she dislikes her younger sister and considers her the most disagreeable and bad tempered person she has ever known.

I know that people will respect her for this frankness and sympathize with her for her misfortune in having such a sister.

As a matter of fact, the result is almost always a feeling of repugnance towards her for having violated the code of family loyalty and an instinctive mental championship of the sister who is thus attacked.

One naturally wonders what the sister would have to say for herself if she choose to air the family disagreements instead of maintaining, as she does, a most discreet silence on the subject.

stead of maintaining, as she does, a most discreet silence on the subject.

One recalls that Lucy when aroused is not a particularly sweet tempered per on herself and very much suspects that the "scrapping" is not at all one sided.

The two girls may be equally to blame for the uncongeniality or the younger sister may really be the unendurable person she is made out to be, but it is she who gets most of the sympathy because she knows enough to hold her ongue on the subject of family failings to outsiders.

And that result is inevitable.

Family loyalty is a tradition which the world respects and insists shall be respected.

The latter is a feature of Ascot. Strictly speaking, the cards of admission theresto are supposed to be limited to people who have not merely been presented at court, but who were on the special list of invitations to the annual state balls at Ruckingham Palace. But during the clos-but not sufficiently. The list of people to whom tickets have been issued for the royal enclosure this week, however, is smaller than ever before, having been subjected to a very severe pruning by King George and Queen Mary. Thanks to this, the labors of Lord Churchil, the dignitary of the royal household through whom the tickets are issued, and who is generally half badgered to death with applications for cards, have been considerably lightened.

Dates Back to George IV

It was George IV who inaugurated the custom of attending the races at Ascot in state, and in this connection it may be mentioned that nowhere in the world, save with the glamor and pomp of an official pageant, and it is only in England that duty as well as taste compel the sovereign to attend any races in state. True, it is only one meeting that is thus invested with this importance, namely, that of Ascot.

The Ascot races are very old, indeed.

New York, June 12—Five dead, five missing and a property loss of nearly $1,-000,000 is the result of a two days storm which has raged intermittently in New York. The storm may continue today. The downpour has been a boon to the dreaded water famine, ten days supply having been accumulated in the Croton water shed.

The lightning at Clason Point on the Sound struck, a revolving Ferris wheel which carried several passengers. It was thrown from its axis and stuck fast. The lightning blinded the passengers and there was a panic. Several women attempted to leap from the wheel, but were restrained. The passengers were taken down on ladders rigged together.

Things Worth the Seeing
Pending the sights of the coronation procession Canadians are spending amid glorious sunshine the delights of the coronation exhibition at Shepherd's Bush, and of the festival of empire at the Crystal palace, or of the navy and army tournament at Olympia. Instead of wheat sheaves and reaping and milling machinery there are in the coronation exhibition attractive tableaux which show to all the world to prographical features of the Canadian country, from Montreal and Quebec to Winnipeg and Vancouver.

In this respect there is the most interesting and instructive exhibition of Canada ever seen in England. The colonial visitors are especially gratified by the very comprehensive and educative tables of the British Isles.

The naval and military tournament has been no less a fascinating attraction daily, till its close at Olympia today and Canadians have here been receiving thrilling impressions of the might and power and skill of the navy and army of the old country. The performances of men and especially of the cavalry horses is a wonder even to the sensible folk of the new countries who think less of the childish.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley's Reply to Hon. Mr. Flemming's First Letter-Absurdity of Acting Premier's Proposition Made

The Times on Saturday published Hon. Dr. Pugsley's second letter to Acting Premier Flemming, in which he agrees to the proposal for a conference on the question of a railway from St. John to Grand Falls operated by the Intercolonial and connecting with the Grand Trunk Pacific. That letter tells the situation as it is at present. But Dr. Pugsley replied to Mr. Flemming's first letter. In fact his reply was written on the same day Mr. Flemming's second letter was written, and the two crossed in the mails. This is Dr. Pugsley's first letter:

Ottawa, June 5, 1911. To Hon. J. K. Flemming,, acting premier Frederictor:

Dear Sir,—"I am in receipt of your favor of the 25th ultimo, enclosing a draft—of contract which you state your government proposes to enter into with the St. John & Quebec Railway Company, also copy of proposed specifications, and beg to assure you that the same will have my earnest consideration.

"Still believing, as I do, that in the interest of the province the plan of operation of the line by the government of Canada as part of the Intercolonial system, proposed by the delegation of the people of the St. John Valley, at the suggestion of your government, and the payment to the company of forty per cent of the gross earnings for the purpose of meeting the interest upon its guaranteed bonds, and which has been approved of by parliament, is essential for the protection of the province against the possibility of being called upon to bear a very heavy financial burden, and at the same time secure satisfactory and reasonable and competitive rates, I have given earnest thought to the question of the possibility of having a lease given to the government of the

HON. MR. PUGSLEY ARRIVED FROM OTTAWA TODAY

Flemming reValley Railway--Construction Work in Courtenay Bay Soon

Hon, William Pugsley, minister of pubwill remain for about two (weeks. In conversation with a Times reporter, Hon. Mr. Pugsley said that the construction work in Courtenay Bay, for which a large work in Courtenay Bay, for which a large grant was made in the house a couple of weeks ago, would be commenced soon. Tenders will be called for within a day or two and just as soon as the contracts work is a great one, added the minister, but it will be started and finished before the people of St. John realize it." Speaking of the Valley railway matter, Hon. Mr. Pugsley said that he had informed the leaders of the local government party that he was coming to the city and would be pleased to have a conference with them on the matter. "I am willing to make any reasonable concessions but there is one thing that we will insist on and that it the road must be run under Intercolonial operation. In all probability I will have a conference with Mr. Flemming in the city either tomorrow or Wednesday and it is likely that the matter will be definitely settled then."

In regard to the new site for the new post office, Mr. Pugsley said that as yet no choice had been made, but that during his stay in the city he would consult with some of the leading citizens and business men with the idea of securing their views on sites that had been talked of.

Hon. J. K. Flemming arrived in town this morning for the conference with Hon. William Pugsley on the Valley Railwäy I question. Hon. John Morrissey will arrive on the 5.20 train tonight and will also be present. party that he was coming to the city and

WANT WATERING CART.
Residents of the lower streets of Indiantown have a complaint against the street department as regards the visits of the watering cart to Bridge street, and the lower parts of Main and Victoria streets. A dealer coaplained to the Times this morning that the "water-wagons" came a certain distance in Main and Victoria streets and then stopped, no matter how dusty or hot the day was. The result was that the people who lived on the section watered, could raise their windows without fear of dust blowing into their rooms, and those who were not so for tunate, would have to be content with closed windows or a plenteous supply of road-dust.

Don't Gamble

It's always more or less of a blind speculatin to buy your Clothes from a retailer that does not make the Suits he sells. In ordering his Suits he may specify preshrunk fabric, for instance, but how does he know that he will get it? In many other particulars, too, he can be deceived.

Besides, he must place his orders so far in advance that he cannot possibly get the very latest styles, such as you find at Oak Hall, where Clothes are finished one week and sold to Oak Hall Clothes are not second-handed. They do not pass through a dealer's hands, with his added profit, before you Can't you understand all that this means to you? Don't
