CHAPTER XV.

Clarence Cliford, lying on the floor, with his head leaning upon his arm against the bed, was conscious of this, but for some time the guests of voices came upon his ears unmeaningly.

Presently, however, as his grief became deadened and numbed by its very intensity, the words grew into shape and signification, and he found himself listening in a stupefied, half-conscious way, as if he were dead and the still living were talking over his grave.

How benumbed his faculties were can be understood; the conversation did not draw a groan from him.

A rough voice was speaking with a broken, thoughtful tone, and a pause every now and then filled up with sighs.

"Ah, and so the squire be gone, and the mistress, too, Jim! It's a bad day for Rivershall—this. He was short and testy sometimes—which of us beant?—but a good one at heart. There's none of us here wanted for anything while the Squire Ralph owned the Hall."

"Ay, ay," was the sad response; "he was good at heart, and Miss Lily was an angel."

"Angel!" repeated the man, who had spoken first; "that beant the word for her. It be used too often to please me, Jim; find summot more uncommon like. Bless her sweet heart and send her peace, say I."

"Amen!" came heartily and tearfully.

"These be sad days altogether for all of us, Mike," said another. "The undertaken have had it all his own way in t' village for a good bit now. The churchyard a-nigh full, a-nigh full. The angel o' death have been among us."

"Ay," said some of the voices again, but there were many remained silent, Mike among them.

"Mike," said the man called Jim, speaking with a slightly lowered voice, "you bore a hand at t' hearse, didn't ee?"

"I did," replied Mike.

"Did—did you go to notice anything, now?" continued Jim, and stopped.

Mike puffed at his pipe.

"Notice what?" he asked.

"Anything peculiar and out of the way?"

"I noticed nothin' out of the way, did you?" replied Mike, but with a certain reservation.

There was a pause in which the stupefied listener up above knew that the man was looking round at his companions with cautious timidity before he committed himself to speech.

"Well," he said, at last, slowly, and in a still lower voice, "if I do speak the truth, I did. Now, Bill Somers, you lent a hand, was one of them as lifted the coffins. Didn't you go to notice nothing rum like?"

"N-o," said a thin, quavering voice; "what should I 'a' noticed at such a time? I was all for carryin' on for the poor squire."

"Ay, ay," came the response again.

"About the coffins?" said Mike, taking up the subject suddenly. "Well, Jim, now you reminds me, I did. I did notice summot, but I'd forgot it."

"Ah!" said Jim; "I'm glad on't. Some of ye 'u'd 'a' said it were my fancy, but it warn't. Them coffins were as heavy as lead."

"They was lead, perhaps," suggested a voice.

"No, they weren't," said Mike, instantly; "there weren't no time to make them. Don't I know, for I lended a hand to carry 'em to the lodge. More by token they was made by the new doctor's orders, and most particular he were. They weren't lead, Bill, but they was as heavy as lead, none the more for that, when the squire and the young mistress were inside."

"Ay, and there's summot else as is most peculiar, Mike," said Jim, encouraged by the general look of interest and awe. "Beant it strange for a slim young lass like Miss Lily to weigh more nor a big-boned man like Sir Ralph?"

"It's impossible that, man," commented Mike, curtly.

"But it beant," retorted Jim, with grim triumph. "Ask Bill and Jack if Miss Lillian's coffin didn't weight nigh again as much more than the squire's."

"Ay, that be the straight truth," said two voices, assenting, "and so it did, Jim."

"Ah," said Jim, triumphantly, "you don't think as I can be five pound out in my reckoning, Mike Sullivan? Weren't I at the mill at Cheriton, a liftin' bags and weights all day, and couldn't I tell a bale within a couple of pounds?"

"Ay, you did ought to, that's certain," said several.

"I should think so," said Jim; "nor I haven't been and gone and carried so many of 'em to the churchyard for nothing, mates. I knows the weight they generally run—man, and gal, and woman—and I says that there were never such a lumpin' weight as the squire nor the dear lass."

There was a dead silence, broken only by the puffing of the smoker and the occasional setting down of a pewter pot upon the plain deal table.

Presently the sound of a horse's feet and wheels came one of them to look up with a:

"What be that?"

"That's the strange doctor's cart," replied Jim, who seemed to be the best informed of the company.

"What's he doing?" asked the same questioner.

"Goin' to London with the poor squire's things."

"What, the Hall things, the furniture?"

"No," retorted Jim, scornfully; "d'you think as one cart 'u'd take 'em, soft? No, the linen and furniture out of the squire and Miss Lillian's rooms, what's been hinfected as they calls it."

"Ah," said the man, "gett' to London. Everything goes to London, even them deadly things."

"Whose cart's the doctor got?" asked Mike.

"I dunno," said Jim. "Bill Yardley offered his, but t' doctor says no, as he wouldn't go t' risk spoiling 'em, as he wouldn't go t' risk spoiling 'em with the infection, and as he should get a cart from London as was kept o' purpose like. And that be it a-goin' along."

"Who drives it?" asked Mike.

"Dunno; one o' doctor's chaps, same as came w' it."

"Anyone know 'em?" asked Mike.

"Not as I'm aware on," replied Jim, as ready to answer as the other to question. "Yardley seed one of 'em and said as he was the ugliest chap as he'd ever set eyes on. For all t' world like a furriner."

"Ah!" said Mike. "T' doctor's summot of a foreigner himself. Them for eigners stick together, I've heard. And whose a-comin' t' the Hall, Jim?"

"Lady Melville," replied Jim, "the old Squire William's young widow. She's to come when the house is done up and set t' rights. Ah! who'd 'a' thought we should ever see t' old stock die out!"

There was a groan and a sigh of sympathy.

Then Clarence heard his own name mentioned, but footsteps ascending the stairs prevented him from discovering in what connection.

The landlord, who had only just returned from the church, where he held some office, entered and offered his assistance in undressing the poor, gentleman, but the poor, young gentleman was now a stern, broken-hearted man and refused every offer.

He wanted to rest, undisturbed, for another half hour. A horse was then to be saddled and brought to the door for him. He intended returning to London.

To the perplexed and sympathetic landlord's question, if he would not stay the night, or at least take some refreshment before starting, he gave no answer; indeed, seemed not to have heard it.

In a half hour the best horse in the stable was brought to the door and Clarence Clifford rose and walked heavily downstairs.

There was a small knot of men at the door, as usual on such occasions, and they turned aside with a shake of the head, and a smothered exclamation of pity.

When most of them had seen this man last he was in the glory of his youth and vigor; now this heavily galled, bentback, listless figure and drawn face were worse than age.

"Poor Master Clifford!"

At the word he started as if in sleep and roused, with his hand upon the bridle. But he did not speak, and handing the landlord a sovereign with shaking fingers, started Londonwards.

"Ah!" said one of the spectators. "There goes a broken heart if ever I seed one."

"Ye can't break your heart, man," said one, sadly, but with a view to argument. "T' new doctor says so."

"I know he do," retorted the first speaker. "Nor t' neck, neither. But, mark me, if the poor, young gentleman don't contradict that both ways. He's broken his heart and 'ull break his neck, I warrant, afore he gets to London. Did he look as if he could sit in t' saddle?"

Bent in body and broken at heart, the horseman rode on indifferent to the road or the pace.

The horse was a good one, and, with a generosity that must have sprung from something higher than instinct, did not stray from the London road nor break his rider's neck, as it most assuredly might have done; but it chose its pace, a slow one, and trotted on with leisurely contentment. In this way the pair reached London.

GAFFER GRAY.

"You are looking sick and seedy, Gaffer Gray; you are looking poor and needy," so I say; "yet your eye still smiles a n d twinkles, though your face is full of wrinkles, and your m o u t h forever sprinkles sayings gay. Now your years are almost eighty, if-not quite, and your troubles must be weighty, poor old wight; yet I always see you grinning as you did in the beginning, shedding smiles serene and winning, bland and bright. I am richer I am younger, dear old dad; yet I feel no urge or hunger to be glad; every day I view with sorrow, looking for worse luck to-morrow; if there's any grief to borrow, 'twill be had." "Everything becomes a habit," he replied; "when I see a hope I grab it by the hide; I have always looked and squinted for the good things rosy tinted and behind me griefs have sprinted till they died. I have always lamped the blessing, not the woe, and the gods are me crossing as I go; I have always said to trouble, 'You're a table, you're a bubble, and if you would bend me double you're no show.' If you're bound to live serenely you'll be gay, though the world may treat you meanly every day; every jolt is sent us merely to impress the truth more clearly; oh, believe me, yours sincerely, Gaffer Gray."

THE VITAL POWER OF THE HUMAN BODY. IT CAN BE RESTORED.

The force that runs the human machine is stored in the nerves. This nervous energy, as it is called, is only another name for electricity.

If any organ of your body is weak and inactive, it means that the nerves which control it lack power. This must be restored before the affected part can perform its proper functions. It does no good to take drugs for such a condition as this. You can only effect a cure by replacing the energy that has been lost. Drugs are poisons—electricity is life.

Saturate your nerves with a glowing current from the "Ajax" Body Battery for an hour each day. The weak organs will respond to its influence in the same way that an electric motor starts whirling as soon as the power is turned on. The "Ajax" is a self-charged body battery which generates a steady, unbroken stream of galvanic electricity and infuses it into the nerves in just the right volume. It builds up vitality and strength, and cures all ailments resulting from a debilitated state of the nerves and vital organs.

Men who suffer from falling vitality, debility, or any of the usual weaknesses, will find that the "Ajax" Body Battery, together with electric suspensory attachment, will quickly put them into good condition.

It is a natural remedy, and those who have used it will tell you that it does all we claim for it.

THIS IS FREE.

We'll send you our free Book, closely sealed, which tells you all about the Battery—how it cures and what it does—together with full information concerning the treatment. This Book is illustrated, and explains many things you should know about the cause and cure of human ailments. If you want to be the man Watson intended you to be, write for the book at once. There are special booklets for Ladies and Gentlemen. Please specify which is required when writing.

In order to save time correspondents should, when writing for the Free Booklet, state their age, sex and full details of their case, for then precise advice can be sent by return mail. All letters are treated in strictest confidence.

Trade Union Executives Approve Plans for Consolidation Alliance

Viscount Burnham Discusses British Problems.—Australia Raises Huge Loans in London and New York.—Premier Rhodes Takes Up His Duties.

VISCOUNT BURNHAM ON BRITISH PROBLEMS.

QUEBEC, July 17. "England has no intention of being hasty towards France," declared Viscount Burnham, President of the Imperial Press Conference, who arrived here to-night en route to Australia for the Empire Press Conference. "The United States is actually pressing more than Britain," he added. "We only ask that the Republic of France be as liberal in its treatment of Britain as it is to the Republic of the United States." Discussing other public questions Lord Burnham expressed the opinion that the question of coal and electric power had always been the weak link in the chain of British industry. The problem would be solved, he said, if Britain had as large mineral resources and hydro power as Canada. The objects sought by this year's press conference, he said, were the improvement of news and the facilitation of news distribution throughout the Empire. He stated that the reduction of a penny a word in press cable rates between Britain and Australia had been made possible through the establishment of an entente between the Australian Government and the Pacific Cable Board.

APPROVES BRITISH TRADE ALLIANCE.

LONDON, July 17. A conference of trades union executives meeting here to-day approved a plan for a great consolidation alliance embracing millions of British workers, including miners, railway men, engineers, shipbuilders and transport laborers.

LONDON AND NEW YORK LOANS FOR AUSTRALIA.

NEW YORK, July 17. The flotation of a $75,000,000 loan for the Commonwealth of Australia was announced to-day by J. P. Morgan & Co. A public offering of 30 per cent five per cent gold bonds will be made in the New York market next Monday at a price of 99½. A simultaneous offering of five million pounds of similar bonds will be made in London.

IN HARMONY ON CHINESE SITUATION.

LONDON, July 17. Referring to last night's cabinet conference on the Chinese situation the Daily Telegraph says the views of Great Britain, the United States and Japan now are virtually in complete harmony. All concur in the belief that the conference regarding the Chinese customs tariff provided for in the Washington Treaty should be held at an early date to be followed by the appointment of a Commission on extra territorial problems as soon as the step is warranted by improved conditions in China. This Commission would be purely of an advisory character and recommendations regarding abrogation of extra treaty rights being subject to final decision by the treaty powers.

NEW PREMIER BEGINS WORK.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 17. Definite arrangements to personally reopen the conference between the miners and operators with a view to ending the Nova Scotia coal strike, the recalling from Cape Breton and demobilization of the Provincial police, suspension of all non-essential work being done on the Nova Scotia highways, and abolition of the office of Provincial Purchasing Agent and dismissal of its incumbent, H. C. V. Lavette, a former member of the Legislative Council, were the main features of the second day's activity of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Premier of Nova Scotia, and his cabinet who assumed office yesterday. All the members chosen for cabinet honors will go back to their constituencies for re-election and writs were issued to-day calling for their elections on August 8th, in Cape Breton, East Cape Breton, Centre Cumberland and Halifax. It is generally assumed that there will be no opposition and the members will be returned by acclamation on Nomination Day, August 1st.

RHODES KEEPING HIS PROMISE.

HALIFAX, July 17. Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Premier of Nova Scotia, announced this afternoon that he would go to Cape Breton on Monday morning, accompanied by Hon. G. S. Harrington, Minister of Works and Mines, where he would arrange a conference between the heads of the British Empire Steel Corporation, Mr. Wolvin and Mr. McLurg, and the heads of the United Mine Workers of America, with a view to bringing about an early settlement of the strike that has been in existence in the Nova

Workmanship on City Utilities

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—Your recent editorial in reference to the slipshod methods characteristic of most of our Municipal activities was assuredly timely, but it is to be feared it will not have the effect it should have. As a people we are lamentably apathetic, eternally grumbling but never taking any practical steps to remedy the evils we complain of.

The rain storm of Monday night washed large quantities of loose street repair material into the side drains whence it was carried to the gullies. These, owing to the culpably stupid way in which they are constructed, became choked, with the result that the streets in the neighbourhood thereof were badly scoured out.

For years this has been periodically happening and no one has taken the trouble to trace the effect to its cause, though it should be apparent to everyone chancing to pass whither the freshet is in action. Very many of the street gullies, and nearly all of those which choke and overflow, will be found to have stones or concrete coverings three or more inches in height around three of their sides. With the first coming of the water the chips and light debris collected in the side drains are carried down until checked by the coverings and deposited on the grating of the gully. As the force of the water increases sand and silt is brought down and deposited on the chips, with the result that water cannot get through and must therefore flow over and beyond the gullies with destruction to the streets as the result.

Nothing could possibly be more faulty than the manner in which the side drains of our streets are set. This is flagrantly in evidence on the South side of New Gower Street between Waldegrave and Queen Streets. A curbing was set there a few years since, which is everywhere from six to twelve inches below what should be its correct level, with the result that the sidewalk slopes to the curb at an angle of about 18 degrees, and the street slopes to the drain at an angle of about 30 degrees, making fully six feet of the latter useless for traffic. East of Queen Street the same conditions are repeated, and in a score of other streets like disregard for utility and appearance is in evidence.

Of late years concrete has been substituted for "cobble" in many side drains. This would be a great improvement if the cross-section of the concrete forms were altered so that the curb side thereof would be carried up about six inches. Then, if properly set a creditable sidewalk could be uniformly graded, and an application of Tarvis thereto would effect a reformation in our streets that would make them a credit to both Council and officials, which they are not at present.

That no care whatever is given the setting of side drains is shown by the disgraceful way in which the concrete forms lately placed in Barnes Road were set. The work was begun at Belvedere Street and was started ten inches too low with the result that what might have been an effective drain and decent sidewalk has resulted merely in an eyesore.

On yesterday somewhere on New Gower Street the writer noticed the bungled work of Barnes Road being repeated. The men who actually set these drains are not to be blamed. They cannot establish the correct levels therefore, and those who are capable, or should be so, fail to do it with the result that material, time and money are simply thrown away.

Yours truly,
EFFICIENCY.

Annual Mass at Mount Carmel

The annual mass at Mount Carmel Cemetery takes place to-morrow morning, beginning at 10.30. Rev. Fr. Pippy, P.P., of St. Joseph's, will be the celebrant and will also preach the sermon. This year new arrangements have been made. The Mass will be celebrated as usual in the Church, but the sermon will be preached after Mass, Father Pippy preaching from the large cross on the hill just above the Church. After Mass is over a bell will be rung, announcing that the sermon will begin and it is hoped that all in the cemetery will assemble at this point to hear the Rev. preacher. Much progress is being made on the new wall on the Quidi Vidi Road, and the work will be completed with the utmost despatch. The work, which is a very necessary one, will entail expense, and it is the hope of the Committee that the usual collection taken up at the gates, will be a record one. The annual collection is the principal means the Committee has of defraying the yearly expenses, and the erection of the new wall is an extra burden that, they hope, all who have relatives resting in the cemetery, will help to shoulder.

The Romance of Lloyds

Partly through the absence of Government support and partly from other causes, the consideration of the subject was adjourned from time to time without any decision being arrived at, and several years elapsed before any effectual steps were taken in furtherance of the object of the Committee. The gradual decay of the two Registers very greatly strengthened the position of those who advocated the entire re-organization of the existing systems of classification.

The Shipowners' Book had been carried on at an annual loss, and the effect of the competition appears to have told upon the finances of its older rival, as will be seen from a statement published with the Green Book for 1923-1925, which runs as follows:—

Lloyd's Register of Shipping, Castle Court, Birch Lane, January, 1925.

The Committee beg leave to remind the subscribers that when this Society was established, in the year 1760, the Annual subscription was Twelve Guineas.

At the end of Half a Century their funded Property having increased to £12,000 stock, the Price of the Book was reduced one-third, namely from Twelve to Eight Guineas; but the Expenses for the last Twenty Years having exceeded the Income by nearly £500 per annum, and the Stock now remaining amounting to only £2,000, the Committee are under the necessity of raising the price of the Book this year to Ten Guineas.

Nearly Ten Thousand Vessels are surveyed every Year; the expense of Survey by competent Judges, cannot be reduced under the present Salaries, which exceed £1,000 per annum, rated under 2s. 1/4d. each vessel.

The impossibility of reducing the salaries of the surveyors will not be disputed when it is mentioned that the two principal surveyors in London were receiving only £250 per annum between them at this period.

As time went on the circumstances of the rival Registers changed for the worse, and threatened to leave the Shipping community without a book, and in 1854 the long-desired amalgamation of the two Societies was effected, and Lloyd's Register on its present basis was established.

The committee appealed to shipowners and underwriters for contributions to the Society, with a view to expediting the appointment of surveyors, and the arrangements necessary for the issue of the new book. The subscribers to Lloyd's at a general meeting unanimously voted the sum of £1,000 from their funds in aid of the Society, and individual underwriters contributed over £700, while, in addition to the annual subscription of 100 guineas which the London Assurance Corporation and the Alliance Marine Assurance Corporation had agreed upon, they each gave a donation of 50 guineas, and the West India Dock Company one of 30 guineas. The amount received from Lloyd's was repaid to that Institution a few years afterwards, when the funds of the Society permitted.

The new Society was now, in 1854, an accomplished fact, and although perhaps it did not fully realise in all respects the perfect ideal of a National Registry of Shipping, it was unquestionably an immense improvement upon the previously existing registries. Now, for the first time, the classification of the mercantile marine was entrusted to a large committee directly representative, not of one section only, but of the several interests concerned, namely, the merchant, the underwriter and shipowner; and now also, for the first time, was there a serious and systematic attempt made to put into actual practice the principle of assigning the character of a vessel according to her intrinsic merits.

At first the progress of the reformed Register was beset with difficulties. Prior to the publication of the rules for the classification of vessels, the principles of theoretical naval architecture were little known. The country, doubtless, had many very good shipbuilders, who built good and efficient vessels, but they were seldom guided by scientific rules. No scale of scantlings for the principal parts of merchant ships had been in force, nor was the practice of the preceding Register Societies, as regards new ships, based upon reliable data; while, alike as regards the construction of new vessels and the efficient repairing of old ones, there was entirely wanting any well-arranged or uniform system of inspection.

The surveyors under the old arrangements were left practically uncontrolled in their decisions, and assigned characters in the Register Book to the vessels which they themselves surveyed. But now there was introduced by the Society's Rules a uniformity of system based upon the best ascertained practice, which left no room for glaring differences between the practice of one locality and another, and the judgment of different surveyors. The presiding Committee now granted classes to vessels only upon evidence of the requirements of the rules having been complied with. The transition from the old, loose practice to the new systematic course of procedure was naturally attended with no small difficulties. Shipowners and shipbuilders who had hitherto been left to follow their own inclination in many cases, did not take kindly to the altered circumstances, and, as a result, the Society gained a notoriety in some quarters for being arbitrary and too strict in its requirements.

Added to all this, the commercial marine of the country was then passing through a period of severe depression, which was not calculated to awaken shipowners to a lively interest in a Register Society that, constituted as it was, must depend entirely for support upon them and the other interests concerned.

Our Dumb Animals

Report Chief Agent S.P.A., Week Ending, July 17th.

Attended two sales cattle and sheep at the St. John's Abattoir Co.'s, they were all handled as carefully as possible. Humanely put a dog to death which had been hit by a motor car on Waterford Bridge Road. I was asked to put a horse to death for a west end farmer, the horse had met with an accident. I have a complaint from a very prominent citizen about dogs chasing cattle in Rennie's Field. The same thing happened in a field on Mundy Pond Road and one at the head of Pleasant Street. Looked after the horses in the city hauling heavy loads, especially near the dock. All horses in fairly good condition. Three horses were sent in for treatment and rest. Several charges have been made by people about boys ill-treating ponies. I warned a lot of these boys, in future I intend to prosecute. I've done all I can do with kindness but it seems to be of no avail. I visited Bannerman Park to give whatever assistance I could to Mr. Bartoh and his committee that held the pet animal exhibition on Friday afternoon, and I must say that they are to be congratulated. I believe with all my heart that it is a step in the right direction and it was a pleasure to see the large number of children who brought different pets to be exhibited at the Pet Animal Exhibition. The judges, Mr. Geo. Williams, Bro. O. Regan, Mr. Butler, Mr. H. Macpherson and Mr. Ayre are really deserving highest praise for the great interest taken, also Mrs. Walter Monroe and the Mayoress, Mrs. Tasker Cook, and "ICEBOUND" will hold you spell-bound. There's tremendous story-power in this romance of storm-swept, sunshine-seeking souls. And just to know it's a William de Mille production—Mille of "Don't Call It Love"—is to know it's good!

The best judges in the land awarded the Pulitzer prize for the greatest American play to "Icebound." Of hundreds of plays, it ranked first!

several other ladies and gentlemen who did their best to make the exhibition interesting. I am sure that the boys and girls of St. John's and the citizens in general owe Mr. Barton a debt of gratitude, and the Playground Committee is deserving of credit. I think it would be well if we could have another exhibition in the West End park. I also hope that the horse exhibition at the C. of E. Garden Party next week will be a success from every point of view, especially to the funds of the Orphanage. It encourages horse owners to take a greater interest in their animals. I am glad to say there is a marked improvement in this respect to what there used to be in years gone by.

Furell, J. C. Oke and Councillor Dowden. During this summer extensive repairs have been made to the chapel, which has been painted, and other portions of the property as well. Arrangements were made for the annual Flower Service which takes place on the afternoon of Sunday, July 26th, when a special collection will be taken up by the committee to defray expenses. The Cathedral clergy will officiate at the services. Repairs to the entrance walk were ordered to be done, and Dr. Mosdell and Mr. Dowden were appointed to look after the work. Various other matters were discussed. The cemetery now presents an attractive appearance and each evening large numbers can be seen there beautifying their plots.

Herbert Green Case Concludes

DEFENDANTS CONVICTED, AND FINES IMPOSED.

The case arising out of the seizure on the S. S. Herbert Green concluded yesterday afternoon when Mr. McCarthy, J.P., found the accused, John Naults, Thomas Bryne, John Ryan and Guk Shears, guilty of a breach of Section 203 of the Customs Act. The case occupied the attention of the court for the past week. Yesterday at 3 o'clock when Court sat to hear the arguments of the Counsel, Mr. Fox put in an evidence the clearest from the Customs of the Herbert Green. Mr. Fuston in a twenty minutes address reviewed the evidence, and closed by asking for a dismissal.

Mr. Fox for the Crown followed, and in an address which lasted one hour and 30 minutes, dealing with the arguments of the counsel for the defence, he asked for a conviction on the evidence submitted.

Mr. McCarthy, J.P., made a brief summary of the case, and under the evidence there was no doubt that a breach of the Act had been committed, and imposed the following sentences: John Naults, Thomas Bryne and John Ryan, wear each fine $200.00 or in default twelve months imprisonment, and Guk Shears $50.00 or three months.

"Always be the good, brave boy Your Mother thinks you are. Don't tie your wagon to a post, Hitch it to a star. Play the game for all it's worth. But always play it fair. You'll find that life is good and sweet if you are on the square."

read Professor Jim Crow from his Wisdom Brook as the little rabbit stood beneath the Tall Pine Tree.
"I do try to be good. I always polish the front doorknob, feed the canary and bring in the kindling wood for Mother every morning before I go out to play," answered the bunny boy.
Just then down the road came the Old Brown Horse. On his head was a tattered straw hat, his ears sticking out through two holes in the frayed brim. "Hello," he whinnied. "Wish I had a netting on my back to keep off the pesky flies. In the good old days my tail was a fine swatter."
But that was in the Long Ago. When I was young and strong and And every day all work was play And life was one sweet song. The little children /ried the chaise When we went to the town. To see the circus in a tent And hear the funny clown. But now those good old happy days Will never come again. I only hear the children sing Their merry, sweet refrain.

Brown Horse walked over to the Old Stone Fence, from the top of which the little bunny nimbly hopped on the old steezy back.

"Be very careful how you go. It's safer to be very slow."

caved the wise old blackbird from his treetop. Then off walked the Old Brown Horse, down the Cow Path to the Bramble Patch, to show Lady Love, the little rabbit's pretty bunny mother, how well her little son could ride horseback.

Cheer up, Mr. Happy Sun is in the sky
"Here comes your little bunny boy," twittered the Canary Bird from her yellow cage on the front stoop.
"Look at the little rabbit jockey," crowed the Old Black Rooster, who had come over to weed the vegetable garden for the little lady rabbit. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that. But it won't be anything unpleasant. I'm sure, for the Old Brown Horse thought too much of the bunny boy to give him a bumpety, bumpety ride.

NFLD. BANKING & TRUST CORP.
 VS. REID-NFLD. CO., ET AL.

When the Court met at 10.30 a.m. on Thursday, July 16th, Mr. W. R. Howley, K.C., counsel for the defence, resumed his address.

Plaintiff's Claim.

MR. HOWLEY—May it please your Lordship. We had been dealing, my Lord, with the question of the right of the Plaintiff to a commission in connection with the Humber transaction at recess yesterday afternoon, and your Lordship had propounded a question to the effect that, supposing negotiations had continued with Blakstad and had resulted in an agreement or had resulted in an effect exactly similar to that which the Armstrong Whitworth agreements resulted in, would the Plaintiffs be entitled in this position to a commission, and I replied that I thought they would, and I repeat that reply, my Lord, generally. I reserve the position that certain things might have occurred which would have affected their right to a commission, but, speaking generally, if that result had been obtained with Blakstad, I think the Plaintiffs would have been entitled to ten per cent. commission, because it was a result achieved with a person to whom the Plaintiffs introduced the Reids as a purchaser, and I think, my Lord, at this stage it is as well that I should state here that our position with regard to this claim in connection with the Humber, that is, this claim for a commission, our line of defence is based upon the principles of law enunciated in the cases of Barnett vs. Isaacson and Tribe and others vs. Taylor to which I referred in my motion to dismiss, and to which I shall refer at great length later on. But to further elucidate the position which I propose to put to your Lordship, it seems to me that it might be worth while to pause for a moment and analyze what obligations were imposed upon Blakstad under the agreement of April 5th, 1921, and what obligations on the part of the Armstrong Whitworth Company were contemplated at the time of the writing of the letter of November 15th, 1921, and what obligations were assumed by the Armstrong Whitworth Company when they finally entered into the agreement in October, 1922. Now, my Lord, if we take the Blakstad agreements of April 5th, 1921, first, I submit that under that agreement Blakstad had first to obtain from the Newfoundland Government a guarantee of the required capital. He had, secondly, to place the bonds or other issue that that guarantee secured upon the market and obtain the necessary money. He had, thirdly, to carry out the contract of development.

KENT J.—Was the obligation to get the guarantee solely Blakstad's, or was it Reids' also?
 MR. HOWLEY—No, my Lord, at the time the agreement was made the obligation was Blakstad's, but there was a clause that the Reids would assist and co-operate with him as far as they could, but the obligation—or not so much an obligation as a condition—that he should get a guarantee was placed upon Blakstad, and the whole contract was conditional upon the getting of that guarantee. He had, first of all, either with or without the assistance of the Reids, to get the guarantee. That was the condition upon which the whole of the other terms of the contract rested. Having got the guarantee, he had to place the issue and get the money.
 KENT J.—I think he told the Reids not to interfere.
 MR. HOWLEY—Yes, there is evidence that when he came here and proceeded to negotiate with the Government he, for some reason or other, requested the Reids to remain out of it and let him handle it himself.
 MR. EMERSON—Of course, that was not put to Blakstad when he was examined.
 MR. HOWLEY—But it is in evidence.
 MR. EMERSON—It is a joint obligation on the part of Reids and Blakstad.
 KENT J.—It is a condition of the contract.
 MR. HOWLEY—And there is no suggestion that the Reids refused or declined in any way to do their part in assisting to get that guarantee. But, my Lord, he had, I say (1) to get the guarantee, and I think in classifying his obligation it would be more exact to say (1) he had to get the guarantee, and then (2-a) he had to float the issue and get the money. (2-b) he had to place the construction contract, and (2-c) he had to pay the Reids the considerations that were provided in the contract as moving to them. Now in November, when the letter of the 15th was written by Mr. Conroy to the Trust, what obligations were being contemplated on the part of the Armstrong Whitworth Company? I submit, my Lord, from the evidence, there was (1) that the Armstrong Whitworth Company were to assist the Reids as far as they could by furnishing the Government with definite information as to the economic possibilities of the scheme and otherwise with a view to satisfying the Government as to the advisability of giving the guarantee; (2) There was the implied obligation, that, having got the guarantee the Armstrongs would assist in getting the Reids in touch with financial people for the purpose of obtaining the money; and (3) there was the obligation of the contract, that is, the construction contract, and the obtaining of the construction contract was the motive that moved the Armstrongs. The motive which lay behind their desire to assist in getting the guarantee and their desire to assist in getting in touch with the people who would finance that guarantee after it was given, and that, and that alone, was what was contemplated on November 15th. Now, my Lord, if your Lordship will permit me to refer to the Statement of the Plaintiff's Claim to refresh our minds as to the exact position that the Plaintiff now takes with respect to this letter of November 15th, 1921. On page 18 of the Pleadings, paragraph 18 as amended, the Plaintiffs state (Reids' first portion of paragraph), and then it goes on with the alternative claim with regard to the authority of the plaintiff company. Now, that is the construction which the Plaintiffs seek to place upon the letter of November 15th, and on that construction they base their claim for a commission, and whether or not the letter of November 15th bears out that construction seems to me really the point upon which turns the decision as to whether or not the Plaintiffs are entitled to receive the commission of ten per cent., or any commission, upon this Humber transaction. Now, my Lord, your Lordship has put to me the position that if the negotiations with Blakstad had been resumed or continued so as ultimately to result in a deal exactly similar to the deal that has been made with the Armstrong people, would the Plaintiffs be entitled to a Commission, and I have stated that in my opinion they would, and the reason that I have given for that is that they would, because the initial introduction to Blakstad by the Plaintiffs was an introduction to a prospective purchaser and whether the deal as contemplated with Blakstad in April, 1921, or some other deal in the nature of a purchase or containing the ingredients of a purchase were put through with Blakstad, it seems to me that, according to the law, the Plaintiffs had that right to a commission, on the ground that they had found the purchaser in the first place, and I think there is ample authority for the correctness of that position.

But, my Lord, let me put another position, a development of the argument that I now propose to put before you. Supposing the letter of November 15th had never been written, would the Plaintiffs then be entitled to any commission, and I say most emphatically, No.

KENT J.—Dealing with the Armstrongs?
 MR. HOWLEY—Yes. Supposing the letter of November 15th had never been written, and the deal that has been accomplished with the Armstrongs had never been accomplished, I say most emphatically that the Plaintiffs would not have been entitled to any commission because on the strength of the series of authorities of which I have quoted two, my Lord, namely, Barnett vs. Isaacson and Tribe vs. Taylor, the Armstrongs had not been introduced to the Reids by the Trust as a prospective purchaser; they had been introduced in a different capacity altogether.

Now, then, my Lord, let me come a step further. How did the letter of the 15th November affect the situation? Did it alter the situation? Did it give to the Plaintiffs a right which they did not already possess? And I say it did not. The letter of the 15th November says, "The commission payable to the Trust under the Minute passed by the Board of the Reid Newfoundland Company when Major MacDonald was in St. John's will not be affected merely by the fact that our negotiations with the Armstrongs are conducted direct instead of through the Trust." Now all that means, my Lord, all that it can mean is, whatever rights to a commission that you (the Trust) have to-day, these rights will not be affected merely by the fact that we are dealing direct with the Armstrongs, and it sends us back, my Lord, to an enquiry as to what rights they had under the Minute of August 14th, 1920, on this date, and particularly what rights they had as regards dealings with the Armstrong Whitworth Company, and I say that under the law they had no rights to a commission in respect to dealings with the Armstrong Whitworth Company, because they did not introduce the Armstrong Whitworth Company as a purchaser, nor had they done anything following the original introduction to convert the Armstrong Whitworth Company into a purchaser or prospective purchaser. Now, my Lord, I think it is important whilst we are at this point in connection with this letter, to settle the purport of the first sentence of Paragraph 2, namely, that "as to the Humber Valley project the position is somewhat similar." If your Lordship will look at the letter, Paragraph 1 deals with a proposed bond issue of the St. John's Light & Power Company, "As to the proposed bond issue of the St. John's Light & Power Company we confirm that should the money be obtained through Messrs. Sir W. G. Armstrong Whitworth Company or other parties introduced by you, commission will be payable to the Trust at a rate to be determined by agreement," etc. "Notwithstanding that the what rights negotiations resulting in the sale of the bonds will be conducted by us directly and not through the Trust."

My Lord, you will probably notice that my learned friend in his amended claim, Paragraph 18, to which I have just referred, has adopted more or less that language, the language of the section referring to the Light and Power Company in describing the nature of his claim with regard to the Humber under this latter, but, my Lord, whilst there is a similarity between the paragraph as regards the Humber and the paragraph as regards the Light & Power Company, there is a very great difference, and the difference, I submit, merely accentuates the ground that I take as to our non-liability for this commission, and accentuates my contention that the paragraph with regard to the Humber does not bear the construction which the Plaintiffs allege in this amended paragraph 18, and that difference is this, my Lord, that insofar as regards the St. John's Light & Power Co. and any negotiations that may have been started are in progress with the Armstrongs regarding this bond issue, it is a proposition that is introduced to the Armstrongs as people who are going to find the money for it. It is a proposition that is introduced to the Armstrongs, not as contractors, but it is introduced to the Armstrongs as the people who are going to find the money, or it is hoped that they will be the people to find the money. The Light & Power proposition is introduced to the Armstrongs in an entirely different capacity in which they were dealing with the Humber on the 15th of November. To that extent there is a difference, and the difference is one, I submit, of supreme importance in deciding this matter, and the only similarity between the St. John's Light & Power Company proposition with Armstrongs in either proposition.

Reid Is Himself Dealing Direct With Armstrongs.
 and further than that, my Lord, the distinction between the position with regard to the St. John's Light & Power arrangements and the Humber arrangements is emphasized by the difference in the language. In one case of the St. John's Light & Power Company, Mr. Conroy—and I think it will be admitted that Mr. Conroy was a man who by virtue of his training and his experience and his ability would certainly express what he intended to say. He is not the sort of man that is going to write a letter that means one thing when he intends to mean another—and Mr. Conroy's letter so far as regards the Light & Power Company is that the commission "will be payable to you notwithstanding that the definite negotiations resulting in the sale of the bonds will have been conducted by us directly and not through the Trust," but when he is dealing with the Humber he says, that the "commission" payable to you under the minute will not be affected merely by this incident, and there is this further distinction, my Lord, the undertaking to pay the commission in the case of the St. John's Light & Power Company is absolute; if the money is obtained through this source the commission will be payable notwithstanding that we are dealing direct, but the clause with regard to the Humber is not alone not absolute, but there is an implication that the commission payable under the Minute of August may be affected by something else. In other words, my Lord, there is not alone the absence of an undertaking to pay that commission, but there is a suggestion that the right of the Plaintiffs to that commission may be questioned on some other ground. Now, my Lord, Mr. Conroy's evidence, both in examination-in-chief and on cross-examination, with regard to this letter and what lead to it is very clear. On Page 37 of the testimony taken on the afternoon of June 30th, the question at the foot of the page (Reids' evidence of June 30th, Page 37, from "The next step after that meeting was the writing of the letter" to "B.C.W. Yes, that is the letter.") And, my Lord, on Page 33 of the afternoon session of July 2nd, we have (Reids' evidence from "Will you take that letter of the 15th November" "The letter is there and there is construction that I put on it.") My Lord, I would like also to make reference to the evidence given by the Armstrong, Whitworth officials to the Commission that sat in London, think, my Lord, that in this evidence we have a very complete story of the whole transaction, so far as it is strong. Whitworth are concerned from the time the matter first came under their notice down to the conclusion of the Government guarantee in the spring of 1923. Three months of the Armstrong, Whitworth were examined, including Mr. Harrison, the Financial Secretary. The first witness examined was Mr. Harrison, and Mr. Harrison told briefly that he did not become acquainted with the Newfoundland proposition until somewhere early in 1922. I think he places the date approximately at somewhere in August, 1922. He tells us that he is the Financial Secretary of the Armstrong Whitworth Company, and that he held that position for almost ten years, and that after the early part of 1921 he had knowledge of the negotiations which his firm had with the Reid Newfoundland Company. His firm is described as engineers and contractors and shipbuilders. He thinks that negotiations affecting the property of the Reid Newfoundland Company first came under his notice in 1920, but he could not say definitely, and as the matter stood when he first became acquainted with it, he says: "A proposal was made that the Trade Facilities Committee should be approached with the object of asking them to guarantee debentures towards the cost of carrying out the 'Corner Brook scheme.' The Corner Brook scheme he defines as the installation of hydro-electric power and the erection of a paper mill. Then he tells us that the Trade Facilities proposed guarantee was not intended to cover the entire cost of the construction, but only a portion of it, and that there was a proposal or suggestion that the Government of Newfoundland should guarantee the balance. Then he was asked what interest the Armstrong Whitworth Company had in the proposals at that stage, that in February, 1922, three months after Mr. Conroy's letter was written, and he says that they were only interested as contractors who were anxious to secure the contract. (Reads evidence of Mr. Harrison from "The construction, yes" to "Up to that stage they were contractors? Absolutely.") Now, my Lord, on that Commission was also examined Mr. Douglas Spencer who is the commercial manager of Armstrong Whitworth's hydro-electric department. (Evidence of Mr. Spencer read. Now, my Lord, the other witness was Mr. Waite, and without wishing to delay the matter say more than is necessary, my Lord, would say, Mr. Waite describes how he came out here in the spring of 1921, with the primary object of examining the Humber scheme on the spot and reporting as to its feasibility to the Armstrong Whitworth Company. He says, "I was instructed to report on the engineering side of the contract" (Evidence read down to reference to his arrival at Port aux Basques.) He arrived at Port aux Basques and proceeded from there to the Humber. He was on the West Coast examining the property for about a fortnight. He thinks it was about the 20th of May when he arrived in St. John's. Now, my Lord, I submit that the evidence of these three gentlemen taken together gives us a complete unbroken chain of the connection of the Armstrong Whitworth Company with this Newfoundland proposition from the time when in July, 1920, it was first brought to their notice as contractors down to the time when in the late spring of 1922 they were forced by the requirements of the Government to acquire an interest in the Reid properties for the purpose of getting the guarantee that made it possible to get the finance to pay them for this contract. But it is evident, and it must be evident, that at no time during 1920 or 1921 and covering the period of the Minute of August, 1920, and the period of the letter of the 15th November, 1921, had there been any thought or idea or suggestion that the Armstrong Whitworth Company were interested in this proposition in any other capacity but as contractors seeking to get a large and profitable contract.

KENT, J.—After the Blakstad collapse and up to the time the Armstrong Whitworth people came in to participate in the scheme, was there any suggestion of Armstrong Whitworth taking up the Blakstad contract? MR. HOWLEY—No, my Lord, I understand that in the evidence of Mr.

Conroy he has stated, if my memory serves me right, after the collapse of the Blakstad scheme and after Blakstad and Greenwood had left the country, and later, towards the end of May, after Waite had come to town and had expressed a favourable opinion as to the engineering possibilities of the scheme, Conroy had in his own mind the idea that possibly the Armstrongs would take up the Blakstad matter. Beyond that there does not appear to have been any idea at all, suggested or thought or discussed with anybody, and it is evident that—

KENT, J.—To try and secure the construction contract and finance. MR. HOWLEY—Yes, my Lord, if I understand it rightly, Mr. Conroy had the idea that they might take up the Blakstad scheme and conclude it, that in addition to the construction contract which it was proposed they would also undertake the things that Blakstad had undertaken, which would include the payment to Reids of the considerations set forth in the April 5th agreement. But, my Lord, I think that there will be no difficulty in the world in deciding that up to November and in November and at the time that Conroy wrote to the Trust on the 15th of November, and, in fact, down to the same date that the earliest was as late as the end of February or the first of March, 1922, there was never a thought or suggestion that Armstrongs should be anything else but contractors, and the evidence—

MR. EMERSON—How could they take Blakstad's place if they were only to be contractors. MR. HOWLEY—The idea of their taking Blakstad's place, Conroy tells us, is an idea which he formed in his own mind as a possibility, when the Blakstad business had collapsed and when he had heard that Waite, Armstrong's engineer, was favourably impressed, but that idea does not appear to have developed in any way, because it is quite apparent from the evidence of all parties who were in a position to give evidence on the matter, and from the minutes of the meetings in London, that all the discussions with Armstrongs at that period were with Armstrongs, the contractors, and I will go this much further and say,

GERALD S. DOYLE, Agent.

So far as regards the negotiations with Armstrong Whitworths, my Lord, irrespective now as to whether they had been conducted by the Trust or by the Reids direct, my submission is this. That the original introduction of Armstrong Whitworths into the matter by the Trust in the capacity of contractors did not entitle the Trust to a commission, but if at any future time the Armstrongs became converted into purchasers instead of contractors, or as well as contractors, whichever alternative we wish to view it in, that if that had been brought about by any action of the Trust, if the Trust had contributed in any way to bring about that change of status that made Armstrongs a purchaser or a prospective purchaser, when I think the Trust would be entitled to a commission.

KENT, J.—They could not do that, do you contend that the negotiations were taken out of their hands, under that letter because the negotiations were taken out of their hands, and that if before the termination of their agency they had brought us into touch with a purchaser as a purchaser and that the purchase did not materialize until after the termination of the agency, that even then they would be entitled to be considered for a commission. Your Lordship will remember that I deferred the question of a right to a commission on the sale of the railway, so far as such right might be based upon its being connected with or arising out of these Humber negotiations, until I had dealt with the Humber. I do not think that there is any necessity to waste very much time over this point. It is evident from the correspondence and the negotiations that took place with the Newfoundland Government after the execution of the agreement with the Armstrong Whitworth Company in October, 1922, and up to the time when the Government guarantees were provided for by the Legislature in, I think it was June, 1923, that the question of the fate of the railway became a matter that was considered side by side with this Government assistance in the financing of the Humber scheme. I think we will find in some of the earlier correspondence—when I say "earlier correspondence" I mean the correspondence prior to 1922—some indication in letters that at some period there had been in the minds of the parties an idea of selling the railway or financing it in some way through financial houses outside this Colony. Strange to say, that has not been referred to specifically at any stage of the case or by any of the witnesses, but I think your Lordship will notice somewhere in some of the correspondence some reference to such a proposition, but it was an entirely different and distinct proposition and was in no way connected, even remotely, with the actual sale of the railway which did take place to the Government of Newfoundland in the spring of 1923, and except insofar as the exigencies of the moment appealed to the Reids or to politicians in power at the time as being a favourable opportunity to bring the various disputes and various difficulties with regard to the railway contracts and the operation of the railway to a head, I submit that there is nothing in the evidence to show that the arrangements for the sale of the railway and the arrangements that we know ordinarily as the Railway Settlement Act were a part of the Humber negotiations or were a part of the Humber transaction which took place between the Armstrong Whitworth Company and the Reids, and the claim of the Plaintiffs for a commission of ten per cent. on the sale of the railway to the Government. If based on any such grounds as its connection with the Humber or the Humber scheme or the Armstrong Whitworth business, is so absolutely remote and disconnected that there is no need for me to waste time in arguing it. I have already dealt with the possible position of the claim for a commission on a sale of the railway being founded upon the oral agreement which the Plaintiffs have set up and sought to prove as entered into in December, 1919, and I think that has already been fully covered, my Lord. Now, my Lord, there are two other points to which I wish to refer in connection with the commission agreement percentage before I proceed to deal with the question of a claim for services rendered and other questions that arise under the Pleadings, and these are (1) the claim with regard to the St. John's Light & Power Company, and (2) the claim with regard to Little Bay Mines. I shall take the St. John's Light & Power Company first.

It is apparent from the correspondence that the Plaintiffs were engaged by the Reid Newfoundland Company to undertake or participate in an effort to raise a bond issue for the purpose of the Light & Power Company, and it is also apparent that at some stage of the proceedings in the year 1921 that the Plaintiffs had brought this matter under the notice of the Armstrong Whitworth people, but there is no specific agreement, no agreement at all in fact, as to the method in which the Plaintiffs are to be remunerated for the services that they might render in this connection until we get down to November, 1921. It was not dealt with in the Minute of August 14, 1920, and during the summer of 1921 a question as to the manner and method of the remuneration comes up for discussion, and is brought up by the Plaintiffs, and is finally settled by Mr. Conroy's letter of November 15, 1921, which provides that a commission at a rate to be determined by agreement, or in default of agreement, by arbitration, shall be paid. Now, my Lord, incidentally, and I think I have mentioned this before, this transaction and this agreement with regard to a commission on the Light & Power Company deal at this time is a further item of evidence against the alleged oral agreement of December, 1919. But, be that as it may, and apart altogether from that, the position is that whatever services the Plaintiffs were asked to undertake with regard to the St. John's Light & Power Company, and whatever services they rendered with regard to the St. John's Light & Power Company, have an agreed compensation or method of compensation provided for in the first paragraph of Conroy's letter of November 15th, and that is by a commission at a rate to be determined by agreement, or in default of agreement, by arbitration. Now it is not contended, and, as a matter of fact, it is not the fact, that the financing of the Light & Power Company was the result of any services performed by the Plaintiffs at all. There is no evidence that the Light & Power Company was ever financed at all. It is not in evidence, but it was financed and it was financed in a different quarter, altogether, remote entirely from the Plaintiffs or from Armstrong Whitworths. My learned friend corrects me when I use the expression "financed." In November, 1921, the idea was to finance it by a bond issue. What actually did take place after was that there was an absolute sale which was conducted, with parties in

MR. HOWLEY—I am merely stating a fact. There is no evidence any way on that, if we have to be exact. There is no evidence, nor has it been suggested that either a financing by a bond issue or sale or any other dealings with the Light & Power assets which resulted in bringing money or other consideration to the Reids has been resulted from the efforts of the Trust, either with the Armstrong Whitworth people or with anyone else, and therefore I submit that insofar as there be any claim for commission under this agreement of November 15, 1921, there is no justification for such a claim. So far as any claim for services rendered is concerned, I shall deal with that when I come to that phase of the situation. Now the only other matter, my Lord—
KENT, J.—Was there any demand for arbitration or any demand for payment under this agreement?
MR. this new agreement replaces any rights that up to that time existed under the Minute of August 14, 1920, and this new agreement is not made with the Reid Newfoundland Company; it is made between Mr. H. without treatment. Gardeners who can make the time for fortnightly sprays need not go without the lovely Snow Queen (called Frau Karl Druschki before the war, and still the finest white rose for garden cultivation). The rose is scented; but the flower leaves are incomparable in their wax-like substance, and the tree is both vigorous and hardy. This and other varieties can thus be kept clean.

The best remedy is liver of sulphur. If you can endure its harmless, though horrible, smell while doing the spraying. The quantity is half-an-ounce to two gallons of water for those plants in the glasshouse, and to the one-and-a-half gallon can for the outdoor plants. Sulphur will take twenty-four hours to dissolve in cold water. The addition of a little soft soap will choke the fly on the trees at the same time destroying the mildew. Often the flies migrate at this season, though, and do not return until September. Paraffin emulsion is good. Mix together equal portions of oil and soap, churning them up with the syringe. It is not too much boiling water. The emulsion must not be made upon the stove for the steam is inflammable. When required for use the strength of the mixture should be a quarter pint of the oil in four or three gallons of water, the weaker fungicide and insecticide being for those roses under glass. Plant washes must only be used after the sun has left the bed for the day. Sunshine upon the treated foliage is likely to stain it.

Land of Surplus Lives

Famines, Floods, and Fevers Make Life in China a Very Precarious Business.

On the walls of the British Legation compound at Peking is a tablet bearing the inscription: "Lest we forget!" This was put up after the Boxer rising of 1900, and recalls the gallant defence made by a mere handful of white men against the infuriated hordes that sought the destruction of the "foreign devils."
The Chinese have never looked very favourably upon those foreigners who have come to their country for purposes of trade, and this anti-foreign feeling sometimes assumes very ugly proportions. When this happens it is all the more dangerous because, among the teeming myriads of China—some four hundred millions of souls—human life is held cheap.

Bargain Basement Humanity. In a sense, China may be regarded as the land of surplus lives. Its vast territories support a dense population, by far the greater part of which is agricultural. These Chinese peasants obtain a subsistence which no European would look at, often from land which no European would dream of trying to cultivate. Their life is one of unending toil. Periodically, too, some great natural catastrophe, such as a flood, may lay waste vast tracts of country, while the recurrent famines take tremendous toll of human life. The famine of 1877-78, for instance, is said to have caused the death of 9,000,000 people. Epidemics, plague, cholera, and small-pox are common.

MAXIMUM motoring safety is found in Paige and Jewett motor cars. Four-wheel brakes of the self-equalizing hydraulic type, optional at slight extra cost, are only one of many safety features. Weigh either a Paige or Jewett and you will find that it is heavier than other motor cars of similar wheel base and price. They have more material in them. Frames, wheels, bodies are heavier and sturdier, insuring greater safety as well as greater comfort to the motorist.

In America where these motor cars are built the insurance underwriters carefully inspect every make of motor car to determine its fire hazard. Paige and Jewett motor cars are among the very few makes that have a class "A" insurance rate. This means that experts feel they are so free from danger of fire that they allow lower fire insurance premiums on them. Paige and Jewett Sixes are built throughout with extra strength and extra power.

Life, then, is held by many millions of Chinamen on so uncertain a tenure that they place no great value upon it. Therefore, when the fame of fanaticism is lit they are formidable antagonists, while their leaders value the lives, both of followers and opponents, on a bargain basement basis. It is estimated that between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000 people perished in the Taiping Rebellion alone.

Crime as a Business. While there was a strong central government in Peking, fanaticism might sometimes be encouraged, but it could be held in check if sufficient pressure was brought to bear on the authorities. When she thought fit the old Empress Dowager was able to crush out the Boxer agitation in Peking. For some years now, however, the military governors, or "tuchuns," have been fighting among themselves. The result has been a great increase in organised lawlessness until to-day brigandage and kidnapping are probably the most highly-organised of Chinese industries.

There are brigands and kidnapers' guilds in practically all the great cities of China. Robbery is common, and abductions frequent. Raids which recall the days of Arab terrorism in Africa occur, and in each of these scores of captives are carried off. Sometimes the captives are held to ransom, and tortured, or even murdered, if the ransom does not come to hand quickly enough. Occasionally, they are tortured before the ransom is even demanded, apparently in the hope that their sufferings will help them to write really appealing letters to their relations.

In the Soup.

These criminals' guilds are generally likely to take a hand in any foreign agitation. The riots in the commercial centres will give them opportunities on a bigger scale than have yet been offered. Apart from their activities are interesting in showing how low is the price set on human life in the Celestial Republic.

Chinese psychology is in every way quite different from ours, and there is no use trying to apply Western standards to the East. Lady Susan Trevelyan tells a story in her "Indiscretions" which illustrates this rather well.

On one occasion she visited the children of her Peking residence, where Liang, the cook, was preparing dinner. Lifting the lid of a sauceron from which came an appetising odour of soup, she found a large rat floating on the top.

"Liang," she cried, "what is the meaning of this?"
"Liang wanchee dinner, too," said, "Missce wanchee soup." Last wanchee rat. Rat belong Chinese chow!"

to be fixed, and he mentioned to Mr. Conroy in some of his letters what these rates are. Beyond that there does not appear to have been anything.

KENT, J.—But was there any demand on the Reids asking to have the commission fixed?

MR. HOWLEY—Not so far as I am instructed, my Lord. I do not think there is any commission claimed for the St. John's Light & Power.

MR. EMERSON—No, we are claiming for a quantum.

MR. HOWLEY—Just a quantum merit for services.

The other ground, my Lord, on which a commission is claimed is in connection with the Little Bay Mines. Now, my Lord, if we hark back once more to that Minute of August 14, 1920, your Lordship will remember that in that Minute, amongst other things, in paragraph 6 it is stated, "It was voted to offer for sale through 'the Trust to an Exploration Company' to be formed by the Messrs. Reids' option on the Little Bay Mine and Tilt Cove Mine in conjunction with all 'Reid Newfoundland Company lands,' and so on. Now it would appear from this Minute, copy of which was given to the Plaintiffs and approved by them, that there was a distinction between the Little Bay Mine and the Tilt Cove Mine and the ungranted mineral rights of the Reid Newfoundland Company's lands, that there was a distinction with regard to the ownership or title or control. So far as this Minute refers to Little Bay and Tilt Cove Mines it refers to Messrs. Reids' options on them, and it will be apparent from the correspondence that followed that when the Trust started negotiations with regard to any of those mineral lands they did not proceed upon the properties as described in this Minute. What I mean is, they did not proceed to deal with the Little Bay and Tilt Cove Mines in conjunction with the ungranted mineral rights on Reid lands. They proceeded to deal with the Little Bay property separately from the others, and they made an arrangement with regard to that Little Bay property under which a number of shares in the re-organized or the new corporation that was formed to deal with it came to the owners or parties who controlled Little Bay on this end, and on these shares the Plaintiffs claim a commission. That claim ten per cent. in shares. But, my Lord, it is evident from the correspondence between Mr. Forbes, who at that time was associated with Messrs. H. D. Reid and R. G. Reid in the ownership of the option on Little Bay, it is evident from the correspondence that passed between Mr. Forbes and the Trust that, first of all, it was thought necessary to make a new agreement as to the commission payable to the Trust on the transaction, or to apply to the isolated transaction of the deal in Little Bay. The rate of commission provided for in the Minute of August 14th with regard to Little Bay and Tilt Cove in conjunction with the ungranted Reid mineral rights, and in that correspondence between Forbes and the Trust is expressly referred to as Mr. Forbes' letter. I think it is referred to as Mr. H. D. Reid's, on Page 55 of the Pleadings, on May 10, 1921. Forbes writes the Newfoundland Banking and Trust Corporation, and he said, (reads the letter down to "At that time the question of the commission to the Trust was discussed"). Well, if the right of the Trust to a commission on the transaction was under the Minute of August 14, 1920 there was no necessity at that time in January of 1921 to discuss the rate of commission; but, be that as it may, it was discussed and settled, and Forbes says here, "At that time the question of commission to the Trust was discussed and the 'Principals' hid down that the 'Trust' should obtain ten per cent. of the amount received by us," and on the 26th of May the Trust writes to Mr. Forbes acknowledging the receipt of his letter of the 10th referring to the commission to be paid to the Trust on this transaction, namely, Newfoundland Coppers, Ltd., Little Bay "Copper Mines." Now, my Lord, the only possible way in which the Plaintiffs can seek to associate the Reid Newfoundland Company with this transaction is by reference to the Minute of the 14th August, 1920, and I submit that that Minute deals with a comprehensive mineral development scheme comprising, so far as the Reid Newfoundland Company is concerned, the ungranted mineral rights on their lands, in conjunction with the personal properties of the personal assets of Messrs. H. D. and R. G. Reid under their options on Little Bay and Tilt Cove. Now, no such large scheme appears to have been employed by the Trust, but in January, 1921, it appears that a scheme was drawn up that involved the Little Bay property, and at that time a discussion took place between Forbes and the Trust with regard to the question of commission to the Trust in connection with this isolated transaction, and I submit, my Lord, that that in itself is a recognition of the fact that this transaction did not come within the transaction that was contemplated, was a different transaction altogether from that contemplated in the Minute of August 14, 1920, but, in any case, here in May, 1921, is a letter from Forbes that reiterates the agreement made in January and places it on record, and the letter from the Trust of May 26th assenting to it, and those two documents in themselves constitute a new agreement with regard to the right of the Trust to remuneration with respect to the Little Bay Copper Mine, and that dered, in so far as these claims have to do with matters that are covered by an express commission agreement, I am going to ask your Lordship to consider that a claim for services rendered is excluded by the express agreement. As a second ground I am going to put to your Lordship that, in so far as any claim for services rendered can be entertained, the Plaintiffs have been fully satisfied by payments, and in this connection, my Lord, I propose to notice the position that the Plaintiffs have not submitted to your Lordship any evidence which would help or guide you in assessing the value of any services which they have rendered. And, thirdly, my Lord, I am going to take the position that, whether with regard to a claim for services rendered, the Plaintiffs have utterly forfeited all right by their conduct towards the defendants. These are the main lines upon which I propose to deal with this version of the claim, my Lord, and it will take quite a little attention to develop them, but I hope to be able to relieve your Lordship from the burden of my sons before the evening session closes. Your Lordship may wish me to continue until one o'clock, but as I cannot possibly finish any one of the different heads before that time it may be a good place to take recess. (Adjournment until 2.30.)

MR. HOWLEY—A declaration that they are entitled to these shares as against the Reid Company? What is the use of the declaration? What is the effect of it? How can it be enforced?

MR. EMERSON—We claim a transfer. A judgment for a transfer by the Reid Company or damages.

MR. HOWLEY—The Reid Company cannot transfer what they have not got. As a matter of fact, my Lord, our position is, I think, very clearly stated that we, the present defendants to this suit, were not parties to this agreement of May, 1921, and we have nothing whatever to do with it. Mr. H. D. Reid personally, Mr. R. G. Reid personally, may have, in conjunction with others or even separately, some responsibility or liability to the Plaintiffs with regard to this transaction, but the Reid Newfoundland Company has no liability, and, as a matter of fact, it has been told my learned friend here that, so far as we can understand the situation, if an application to the parties to whom application should be made for these shares, were made, now or had been made at any time before or since the issue of writ, there would not have been any difficulty in the world in having that application acceded to. That, my Lord, is the position with regard to this claim in connection with the Little Bay Copper Mine.

That finishes, my Lord, what I have to say in so far as it affects the question of a claim for commission, and we come to deal with the alternative question of a claim for services rendered. Briefly I would outline that, with regard to claims for services ren-

Roses and Mildew

Under glass, and in the open, many roses become mildewy as the season advances. It is quite possible by selection, or by spraying, to have a garden of good-conditioned roses with the presence of the mildew fungus around. In appearance the fungus is a whitish colouring upon the foliage and the flower buds, and the leaves will curl later. Mildew runs the chances of strong blooms. The germs of this fungoid disease float in the air. These spores cannot find a resting-place upon varieties the leaves of which have a glossy surface. That rose—one of the most glorious and permanent of all the yellows at a reasonable price—Rayon d'Or, has shiny foliage. The Crimson Rambler has soft, dull leaves, and is a slave to mildew; but Excelsa, a crimson form of the famous Dorothy Perkins, and with similarly shiny leaves, may be substituted. Gardenia is a buff rambler with glossy leaves. General M'Arthur is not the choicest of the crimson bushes, but is free from mildew. A member of the group to which the Rayon d'Or belongs that is mildew-proof is Madame Edouard Herriot, as intense and as beautiful a salmon as one could wish. Apart from those roses which are practically immune, there are trees less susceptible than others. Vids the descriptive catalogue. See also the gardens of your friends. Has Arrived Here

Lon Chaney in Strong Dramas At The Nickel Commencing Monday.

What promises to be one of the most important events of the season here is the Victor Seastrom production of "He Who Gets Slapped," which is to open at the Nickel Theatre on Monday for a run of three days. "He Who Gets Slapped" is the work of Leonid Andreyev, the distinguished Russian writer. As a drama it has been played successfully in New York, London, Paris, Moscow, Berlin and Vienna. Critics have regarded it as one of the most interesting contributions of the modern theatre.

A Notable Cast.

When it was transferred to the screen, the play was regarded as one of the outstanding features of the year. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Co. has gathered a notable cast for this production. Lon Chaney, the hunchback of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," appears in the title role as "He Who Gets Slapped," the same given to the clown of the European circus about whom the story revolves. Norma Shearer, the beautiful young Canadian society girl, who has come to the fore with dazzling brilliancy in recent Metro-Goldwyn pictures, plays the circus rider, Consuela. John Gilbert, who won fame as the "Count of Monte Cristo," and in Elinor Glyn's "His Hour," is cast as Bessano, the handsome circus equestrian. Tully Marshall, the old trader of "The Covered Wagon," plays the epiderm, con-scienceless Count Mancini. The picture is also unique in that it brings Lon Chaney to the screen in one of his "straight" characterizations; one in which he is not called upon to use his wizardry of make-up, or his gruesome talent of assuming some physical deformity. Chaney has one of his strongest parts as "He," the tragic circus clown.

What is Adlay?

Experts are interested in experiments that are being made in the Philippines with a new cereal called adlay.

At one time or another all cereals, such as wheat, rice, and maize were wild grasses, and many years of patient research have been necessary to develop their edible utility. There must be numerous grains of potential value growing throughout the world, but until the discovery of adlay no addition had been made to our existing supplies for centuries.

Adlay has been known in India and Asia for some time. The natives have made use of it in its half-wild state, but no effort was made towards its cultivation and development. There came a day, however, when somebody discovered that the grain contains as much protein as wheat, and at least three times as much fat. Experiments have proved that adlay is more productive, more feeding, and more palatable than the majority of existing cereals.

By itself adlay cannot be used for making bread, but when mixed with a small proportion of wheat flour it makes loaves and biscuits of splendid digestive quality.

As a whole grain it is a serious rival to rice, and when crushed it makes a more tasty and more nutritious breakfast dish than oatmeal. Some time must elapse before we can expect to buy adlay in our shops, as the grain is still rather hard and coarse. A few more years of careful selection and painstaking cultivation will eliminate these disadvantages.

"Icebound"

Another Special Feature Booked At The Majestic Next Week.

Lovers of big picture photoplays are reminded of another big special feature, which will be screened at the Majestic Theatre when on Monday the great story "Icebound," which ran for over a year at the big American Theatres.

Richard Dix plays Ben Jordan, a shipwrecked man on a New England farm. Lois Wilson is the girl. When old Mrs. Jordan dies, leaving her goodly fortune to Jane Crosby, her ward, played by Miss Wilson, her last request is that the girl take Ben in hand and makes a man out of him. There's a flapper cousin (Vera Reynolds) who does her best to win Ben over. She even succeeds for a time until Jane heart-broken, is about to leave and Ben is brought to his senses.

"Icebound" is a human story of everyday people, a typical do Millie production that will stand alone for a long time to come before its equal in heart-interest and appeal is seen on the screen.

It's a great picture no matter how you look at it—acting, direction, photography, all approach as near perfection as it is possible to attain. Edna May Oliver, Ethel Wales and Alice Shaplin are prominent in the strong supporting cast.

Schoolboy Sailors

Despite the fact that nowadays education at the ordinary elementary school consists of many things unheard of thirty years ago, it is certainly novel to learn that seamanship is taught in a London elementary school.

The boys are not only trained to be sailors, but posts are actually found for them, so that they are able to earn their living at sea immediately on leaving school.

The nautical section of the school consists of 120 boys, who are given a three years' course. These lads are prepared for the Board of Trade's Second Mate's Certificate, and given instruction in boat pulling, swimming, and life saving.

They are also taken on visits to vessels in the docks, and places of nautical interest, and every year they are given an opportunity of having a fortnight's course on a training ship.

Before being enrolled the boys must be certified to be sound of mind and limb.

Boys are usually admitted when they are in their 12th year.

Foot Comfort

IN HOT WEATHER. Nothing is more ruinous to the enjoyment of a ramble on a holiday than "something the matter with one's feet."

It's well worth while taking a little trouble to prevent this. First of all, never on any account wear the same pair of stockings two days running in warm weather. This may sound extravagant, but it's really an economy, for your stockings will last twice as long if you change them frequently.

Shoes should be changed twice a day in the summer, if possible; and never, never go about in the house in outdoor shoes—there's nothing more trying. When a few minutes rest in a pair of comfy, cool slippers is a great comfort to tired feet.

If Your Feet Perpire.

In warm weather it is a good plan to get into the habit of sprinkling a little boracic powder on the inside of your stockings feet—especially if your feet are inclined to perpire. And, by the way, if you are troubled with the latter state of affairs, bathe the feet in warm water night and morning, adding about a teaspoonful of Condy's Fluid to every pint of water. Blisters, rub in very gently a little olive oil on the affected part. If you contract a blister out on a ramble—I make a hobby of doing it myself—place a piece of dock or cabbage leaf on the blister. This will cool it and prevent it from getting worse.

Any tendency to swelling in the

We all love enthusiastic people. People who are really enthusiastic, really effervescent with enjoyment and appreciation of life in general and whatever it is they are doing at the moment, in particular.

Indiation Enthusiasm. We all love them but sometimes we get a little tired of them. But how much more quickly we get tired of the people who are not really enthusiastic but merely exclamation.

It is easy to confuse the two classes in first contact. It is equally easy to separate them after you get to know them better.

An enthusiastic guest breaks now and then into spontaneous expressions of pleasure but there is no now and Preserve Us From the Human Exclamation Point.

Do you remember the play in which the young heroine who is not a success with men is given a recipe by which she can make herself instantly popular. She is told to get the men she meets to talk about themselves and to punctuate their conversation not by any return confidence but by saying "Aren't you wonderful!" whenever they pause for breath, at the same time looking up at them with a worshipful gaze. The recipe works. Why shouldn't it when the dramatist pulls the strings? And doubtless the heroine, being more clever than she allows herself to seem, makes a pretty good wife. But how about the man who in real life marries the lady whose tactful exclamation is his chief charm? How is he going to feel after five years of it?

Exclamations of all kinds have their place in life but as the spice and the favouring rather than the foundation. Heaven preserve us from the human exclamation point!

jointly should be painted with iodine, but you must be careful how you use this. Ask your chemist to make it up for you in the right strength, and be careful not to be too lavish with it, or you will make matters worse. Needless to say, only the most comfortable shoes should ever be worn in warm weather. Those who are subject to foot troubles of any sort should avoid wearing patent leather shoes, as they "draw" the feet.

False Economy. Also, woolen-footed stockings are the very best for tramping in, as they absorb the heat and perspiration. Silk and cotton-footed stockings turn hard and uncomfortable, and should never be worn by those who have tender, sensitive feet. Never buy cheap stockings—they are always dear in the long run. Buy fewer and buy them good. The same rule applies to shoes.

In the Courts

When a woman was summoned before the Turriff (Bank) School Management Committee for not sending her daughter to school, she sent a letter stating that she had no time-piece nor clock in the house, and when her daughter was late she would not go to school. The chairman said this was rather peculiar, seeing that the woman's husband was a watchmaker. This is surely a new version of the old saying that it was always the shoemaker's heirs who were the most poorly shod.

When a man was charged at Thames Police Court with being drunk a constable said he found him on his hands and knees outside Whitechapel Parish Church, praying fervently. The Magistrate (solemnly):—We will take the collection. Pay 7s. 6d.

France's Great Prosperity

TOO MANY ORDERS M. CAILLAUX CALLS FOR FOREIGN WORKERS.

The most striking confirmation of the extraordinary commercial and industrial progress of France was contained in the appeal by M. Caillaux, the Finance Minister, to the Chamber to relinquish the proposed tax on foreigners, on the ground that it might interfere with the influx of foreign workers.

"If you wish to know my private opinion," said M. Caillaux, "I will say that in a few months' time you will be compelled to cancel the step which some of you seem disposed to take."

"We badly need foreign labour. We have orders beyond our own power of production. Without this supplementary labour some of our industries would be unable to carry on."

Despite M. Caillaux's appeal, the Chamber decided to re-establish at 200 francs (about £2) the price of the identity card for foreigners, which is valid for two years. In view of the opposition shown by the Government it is thought likely that this clause will be dropped or much modified in the Senate.

In nearly every industry French factories are working overtime and are yet unable to meet all their contracts, not only for the home markets but also for abroad. Big metallurgical and electrical firms have large orders for foreign markets, notably for China and other parts of the Far East.

The textile industries are growing at such a rate in the east of France that this area is once more becoming a serious rival to Manchester.

The Silkworm's Rival

Nature's Commonest Vegetable Substance Has Been Put to Good Use by Science.

There is a good deal of talk about the modernity of silk stockings. In reality, this article of wearing apparel is at least five thousand years old.

The first pair of silk stockings was made fifty centuries ago in China, and was presented to the Empress Kwang Tai. It was made from the purest silk the silkworms produced, and no modern manufacturer could improve upon it for texture.

Nowadays most stockings are made from artificial silk, which is really the commonest vegetable substance found in Nature. It lies the seeds of plants, encases their seeds and is found in a hard form in trees. When in a pure condition it is white in colour, and lacks both flavour and smell. The scientists call this substance cellulose.

Woven From Wood. The artificial silk that is made from vegetable fibre is used for many things besides silk goods. Tulle and lace are manufactured from it, and also leather and wallpaper. Parchment and rice-paper are pure cellulose.

Preparing artificial silk from wood takes a little longer than does the manufacture of silk from vegetable fibre, for the cellulose in wood is hard and stiff. The wood is pulped and reduced to a glutinous jelly with chemicals, after which it is pressed through extraordinarily fine strainers.

The jelly, as it emerges from the holes in the finest of strainers, hardens rapidly, and the thread is wound round spools. These threads are wonderfully fine, and so many as five may require to be spun together before materials are woven from them.

Ex-Crown Prince Dons His Uniform

POTSDAM, Germany, July 11.—The Republic was forgotten and the Hohenzollerns were again kings for a day when the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Non-Commissioned Officers here was celebrated yesterday with military pomp and the unveiling of a monument to the war dead.

Former Crown Prince Frederick William and his eldest son appeared in uniforms of the Guards Regiment and Prince Eitel Frederick in field grey.

Divine services on the parade grounds of the former Guards began at the ceremonies, and the concluding feature was a parade before the representatives of the Hohenzollerns.

The fact that the former Crown Prince wore a uniform in public for the first time since his return to Germany occasioned much comment, as did the absence of the republican flag.

LEAGUE FOOTBALL.

C.E.I. Draw With Guards.
Only a small gathering of spectators turned out at St. George's Field last night to witness the clash between the C.E.I. and Guards teams. The evening was all that could be desired for the serving up of a good brand of football, but this was sadly lacking, and had it not been for the spectacular goal tending of Knight, of the C.E.I., the one and only feature of the game, the fans would have been disappointed. Many were of the opinion that the Guards team would win easily, but according as the game progressed it could be seen that they were away off their usual form, particularly in the forward line. Time and again the Guards had the ball in the goal mouth, but lacked judgment.

In the first half the C.E.I. defended the eastern goal, and were kept on the qui vive throughout the entire 30 minutes, keeping the ball out of danger. During the play the Guards lost numerous chances to score, through faulty shooting, while the shots that did go ahead on were cleverly handled by Knight. On one or two occasions the C.E.I. managed to get the ball west, but failed to get inside of the backs. The half time whistle sounded without any scoring.

Second Half

Upon resumption of play the C.E.I. backed up and tried hard to open the scoring, but the ball was immediately transferred to the western end, where it remained several minutes. Here again the Guards lost numerous chances to score, and when they were awarded a penalty kick a moment later, the ball was kicked high over the bar by Rose, and a splendid opportunity was lost. After this the C.E.I. made several long runs down field, and in particular on one occasion the Guards backs were beaten cold, but the shot by Johnson grazed the upright. Play from then on was confined to the C.E.I. goal area, and saw the Guards making desperate efforts to score. Shots were rained on Knight from all angles, all of which were handled in fine style and nicely cleared. The game ended in a draw, no goals being recorded.

WEEKLY MEETING REGATTA COMMITTEE.

The Regatta Committee held its weekly meeting last night, with President Hiscock in the chair, before a large attendance of members. After the minutes of last meeting had been read and confirmed, Treasurer Janes announced he had received a letter from Mr. Bishop, of the W. I. Bishop Company, extending his personal wishes for a very successful Regatta, and enclosed a cheque for $25.00 as a donation. The Secretary read a communication from Mr. R. H. Tait, associate editor of "The Newfoundland Weekly," wishing the Committee every success, and stated that Messrs. J. McCormack and W. B. Summerville, two Terris Novans, who had been prominently identified with the Newfoundland Beneficial Society at Boston, were coming here for the Regatta. This was met with very enthusiastically by the Committee, and the intending visitors were added to the honorary list of officers. Mr. T. Ryan, Secretary of the T.A. Boat Club, was added to the Committee.

The president announced that Inspector General Hutchings had agreed to co-operate in every way in carrying out the traffic regulations on Regatta Day. The matter of closing the Boulevard to vehicular traffic was also discussed and will be further dealt with. It was decided, if possible, to erect the bandstand for the concert to be given on next Tuesday night by Strong Wills Should Not be Crushed. "Some parents are more naughty than their children," declared Dr. J. A. Hadfield, lecturer on psychology at King's College, London University, commenting on the necessity for adults to behave properly in the presence of children. Dr. Hadfield was lecturing on "The Psychology of the Toddler" to members of the Summer School of Maturity and Child Welfare promoted by the National Baby Week Council. He said: Children between 1 1/2 and 2 1/2 are governed by impulse, and the strong will of a child at that period should be allowed to develop. Strong-willed children have strong characters and strong faces, while weak-willed children have weak mouths, bulky eyelids, and noses like artichokes. The development of a child's early impulses along right lines helps it to direct and master the impulses when it reaches the age of 3 or 4, when its mind is more set on achievement. We should not crush the strong-willed child. If we do, we are liable to make the strong-willed toddler into weak-willed one.

The Naughty Toddler

the C.C.G. Band in aid of the funds.

Treasurer Janes announced that $1,248.50 had already been collected, but in view of the expenses in connection with the grounds, a large sum is still required. The examining committee then returned to the room adjoining and considered the eligibility of intending crews. There was one protest made, that of T. Chalke, stroke of the Feddian Amateurs, and by the evidence submitted it was decided by the committee that he was ineligible to row in this particular race. The crews then entered as follows:

FISK RUBBER CO.

June A Record Month—$7,500,000 Gross And $1,000,000 Net After Charges—Higher First Preferred Dividends Inevitable.

Boston—With sales for the month of $7,500,000 Fisk Rubber Co. in June had the biggest month in its history. The gain over May was $750,000 and compared with the monthly average for the first six months of the fiscal year from November to April, inclusive the increase was over $2,500,000, or better than 50 p.c.

Net profits fully reflect this record-breaking business, totaling over $1,000,000 for the month after interest, depreciation and federal taxes. This is a gain of $200,000 over May. Average monthly net for the first half of the fiscal year was $330,000.

On the 185,515 shares of first preferred stock the June net is equivalent to $5.27 a share after all charges.

This follows a final balance of better than $4 a share in May. It means that with a balance of $9.27 a share for both months Fisk has earned in the past 60 days almost as much per share as for the preceding six months, for which period a balance of $10.47 was returned.

Of course advances in prices of tires and tubes played a part in this favorable showing. However, Fisk is extremely well situated with respect to crude rubber and with a well balanced position on finished goods inventory looks forward to record-breaking earnings throughout the summer. It is entirely likely, with about $20 a share already in hand for the preferred stock, and the balance for the fiscal year will run between $30 and $35 a share.

Under these conditions, and with floating debt melting at such a rapid rate as to ensure a clean balance sheet before fall, directors are apt to establish the first preferred stock on a regular $7 basis at the dividend meeting this month and perhaps make a start on payment of the $26 a share of accumulations. Dividends of $1 a share on this issue which inaugurated in January and have since been maintained after a lapse of payments from May 1, 1921.

Fisk has now begun to develop a very respectable earning power for its common stock. The June balance after allowance for regular dividend requirements on first preferred, ($26 accumulated) second preferred ($28 a share accumulated on this $1,075,000 issue) and management stock was $11.0 a share for the 796,883 common shares. With the May showing of 79 cents a share it has already earned in a third of its second half year $1.89 a share, or more than the $1.59 a share for the first half and the $1.66 a share for the Oct. 31, 1924, fiscal year.

If a child wants to be naughty, teach it how to do it. It is essential to find a job for every impulse.

If your child wants to fight, give it the object to fight; and if it wants to possess something, let it possess it.

After the period of impulse a child will, by a miracle working within it, pass to the period of self-discipline between the ages of 3 and 4.

I have never seen a child improved by parents being irritable with it but firmness is often good for it.

Self-mastery of will comes from within a child—it is inherent.

The desire of achievement comes between the ages of 3 and 4, when healthy minded children have ideals.

They want to be good boys and big boys and strive towards the attainment of such ideas.

Then parents have to be careful with their children, for if they see Daddy do a thing or not do a thing they follow his action.

Here's what the Press had to say about "He Who Gets Slapped"

Mordaunt Hall in "The New York Times":

"At the Capitol this week there is a picture which defies one to write about it without indulging in superlatives. It is a shadow drama so beautifully told, so flawlessly directed that we imagine it will be held up as a model by all producers. It tells the story with all the genius of a Chaplin or a Lubitch and has accomplished more than they have in their respective works, 'A Woman of Paris' and 'The Marriage Circle,' as he had, what they did not have, a stirring dramatic story. This is the finest production we have yet seen."

Quinn Martin in "The World":

"By all means make this one of your early visits. I recommend it wholeheartedly. It is one of the best."

Mildred Spain in "The Daily News":

"The outstanding picture of the year. Every mark of distinction. The cast is perfect and the handling of the story beyond criticism."

"The Sun":

"One of the main achievements of the season. If you wish to keep up with the best accomplishments of the movies on their artistic side, by no means miss this picture."

Dorothea Herzog in "The Daily Mirror":

"Don't miss this picture if you enjoy real drama, realism and romance."

"Evening Post":

"Don't miss it. Tie the baby in his crib, borrow money for tickets from the landlord, stand in line for an hour if necessary—but don't miss it. To call it a perfect picture may be stretching it a bit, but not much, for it certainly is one of the best films ever turned out. Searstrom has given us a movie which has everything in it that makes a movie story interesting—suspense, drama, a tender love story, a laugh and a tear or two—and he has done all this with such intelligence and imagination that the picture is a glorious thing of subtlety, freshness and charm, from start to finish."

George Gerhard in "The Evening World":

"It stands out among its fellows like a Flanders Field poppy in a bed of weeds. Victor Searstrom has done a masterly job and there isn't a doubt that if he doesn't feel rewarded by pride in the work, he will get that reward in tremendous box office receipts. We can't recall any picture we have enjoyed more."

Helen Bishop in "The Bulletin":

"A picture which has few equals and certainly no superior. No one can see Lon Chaney in this without feeling that here is a truly great actor; one who can take your heart and wring it by one glance from his eyes."

Louella O. Parsons in "The N.Y. American":

"In this case we have to borrow superlative language from the dictionary to describe 'He Who Gets Slapped.' Yes, it is that good. By all means visit the Capitol."

I HAVE BEEN DRIVING BUICKS FOR THE LAST 12 YEARS.

Bellingham, Washington.
I have been driving a Buick for the last twelve years. I buy a new car every four years, and I have just bought my fourth Buick, a 1925 seven-passenger Sedan.

I have always felt that the Buick is a most dependable car in every respect, and that I received great value for the money I paid for them, and I am especially well pleased with this latest model.

Buick four-wheel brakes give one such a feeling of safety and security that I shall never drive a two-wheel brake car again. I am very much pleased with the Fisher VV windshield and this particular feature has been the admiration of all who have seen it.
