A few months ago a questionnaire was sent to each member, and I answered all the questions in the affirmative. One question asked was whether we should request that at least three Supreme Court of Ontario judges should reside in the Ottawa district and sit at Ottawa, with an outside judge also holding sittings here at regular intervals. One of the other suggestions was that a request be made that the Court of Appeal sit in Ottawa on a regular basis. I noted my agreement with both of those suggestions, and I hope that for the sake of the administration of justice in this county something will be done along those lines.

I know it is a matter for the attorney-general of each province. There is an old saying to the effect that he who pays the piper calls the tune. We pay the judges' salaries in our province—the salaries of the county court judges as well as those of the Supreme Court judges—and, honourable senators, we cannot sit by and say, "Well, next year we will appoint two more county court judges and three more Supreme Court judges in this province." That is not enough. We shall never meet the situation that exists by doing that.

I am making this suggestion not only to honourable senators but to my good friend, the honourable Leader of the Senate (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West). We went to school together, as all honourable senators know, and we are good friends, but I do not want these remarks of mine to be merely placed on Hansard and then forgotten. I am making an honest and sincere suggestion, and I ask the honourable Leader of the Senate to bring this to the attention of the Minister of Justice, and to ask him to convene a meeting of the attorneys-general of all provinces with the idea of alleviating this problem.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, I thoroughly agree with the honourable senator who has just spoken (Hon. Mr. Choquette) as to the necessity and desirability of prompt decision in litigation, but that is not our function. We appoint the judges, it is true, but the administration of justice is in the hands of the provinces. When I took office as attorney-general of the Province of Ontario in 1934—that is some years ago now—there were, as my honourable friend has explained is the case today, quite a large number of cases that had been heard but in which judgment had been deferred. I appeared as counsel for the plaintiff in a case that had been heard at least two years prior to my taking office, so I knew from personal experience what was going on. I called the Chief Justice of Ontario before me and told him that unless this mess was cleaned up in very short order I would introduce legislation before the provincial Legislature giving the litigants the right of appeal to the court of appeal upon the evidence, without the necessity of having the judge decide the case. The Chief Justice appealed to me, asking that I not do that. I undertook to hold my hand if the situation was cleaned up, and it was. It was cleaned up within a few weeks, with one or two exceptions. The case in which I had appeared, and of which I had personal knowledge, was not concluded because the judge was sick, and he very shortly afterwards died. Judgment in that case was never issued.

The fact is that except by previous consultation, or something of that kind, the Federal Government is powerless in these matters. I agree with the honourable Senator Choquette that the appointment of more and more judges is not the answer. The answer lies in the hands of the provincial attorneys-general. I cleaned the situation up, and there is no reason why the next attorney-general should not be able to do the same thing.

I should like to know where these county court judges are being appointed. In what counties will they sit, or in what counties will they sit as junior judges? I should like to know too who has made the recommendation for these appointments, and upon what grounds. We are going to have to pass this legislation immediately, I suppose, because of the situation presently facing us, but I join hands with the acting Leader of the Opposition (Hon. Mr. Choquette) in taking a firm stand with respect to this matter. We should not appoint more and more judges without some very good reason being explained to us as to why we should do so, and why judgments in some cases are so long delayed.

I am not a solicitor of the Province of Quebec, but I have heard for many years about the backlog of cases in that province and the very slow progress made in the hearing of them. Honourable senators, justice delayed is justice denied. We in this country live by the rule of law. We will not allow the individual to take the law into his own hands. Having so provided, it is our duty to see to it that our courts administer justice impartially, effectively and promptly.

I do not know what we can do about it just at the moment. I commend the acting Leader of the Opposition for the information he has presented to us, and I have no doubt that the honourable Leader of the Government will bring this to the attention of the Minister of Justice. It may be that if the Minister of Justice expresses a vigorous protest, the attorneys-general will do something towards improving the administration of justice in the provinces.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) speaks now, it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly: Honourable senators, I thank honourable Senators Choquette and Roebuck for the contribution they have made to the debate this afternoon. There is no doubt whatever about the truth of the remarks they have made. The problem of dealing with the backlog of cases in the courts has been engaging the attention of attorneys-general for many, many years, as Senator Roebuck has said. I know too that this subject has engaged the attention not only of the Canadian Bar Association but of the provincial bar associations. What honourable senators have said here today points up the problem in another form, and in a very effective way. I shall certainly undertake to bring these remarks to the attention of the Attorney General of Canada in the hope that in a spirit of co-operation there will be adequate and remedial action taken. Regrettably, I cannot give an assurance that it will be taken in time to obviate the necessity of appointing additional judges before a real remedy is provided.

I think that the Province of Ontario has moved quite effectively in this area within the last few years by providing an enlarged jurisdiction for the county courts. The honourable Senators Choquette and Roebuck, both of whom are members of the Ontario Bar and do not purport to speak for the position in Quebec, have indicated that the county court system which prevails in the other provinces does not obtain in Quebec. However, there may be a remedy there, too.

It is for the provincial authorities to apply the remedy that they think best, and perhaps it is not too much to hope that the attorney-general could urge the authorities there, and indeed in other provinces, to see to it that some appropriate remedy be taken.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: One question was asked by Senator Roebuck. Do we know where these county court judges are in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I regret I do not have that information. There may be a list. Some of them may be what are called roving judges who would not be attached to a specific county. I can get that information and give it to Senator Roebuck.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): With leave, I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

COMBINES INVESTIGATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND AN ACT TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-141, to amend an Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. Daniel A. Lang, with leave of the Senate, moved the second reading of the bill.

He said: Honourable senators, this is in fact an act to amend an act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code. I am assured that that title is not a misprint by the Queen's Printer. It is in fact a bill amending the original act of 1959, which in turn amended those two statutes. It is a short bill and I shall attempt to be very brief in outlining its provisions to you this afternoon.

In 1959, upon the complaint of certain citizens of this country, the Director of Investigation of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission initiated an inquiry into the fishing industry of British Columbia. He subsequently submitted, under the provisions of the Combines Investigation Act, his statement of evidence to the commission, wherein it was alleged that certain activities and agreements between the fishermen in British Columbian waters and the fish packing companies were contrary to the anti-combines legislation contained in the Combines Investigation Act and in the Criminal Code. I am advised that it was, and still is, the custom in that industry for fishermen to bargain jointly each year with the fish packing companies jointly, with respect to the prices to be paid for, and the quantity of the next season's catch. Consequent upon those negotiations each year, agreements were reached fixing those prices and quantities.

On the face of it, honourable senators, it would appear that nothing I have said would lead anyone to believe that there may herein have been an infraction of the Criminal Code or the Combines Investigation Act, but that the procedures were more in the nature of the normal process of collective bargaining. However, the fishermen, perhaps—and I use that word advisedly—were not "workmen or employees" within the excepting section of the Combines Investigation Act and its correlative section in the Code, but may very well have been independent, self-employed operators.

Be that as it may, the statement of evidence placed before the commission by the Director of Investigation cast sufficient doubt on the legality of these arrangements and agreements, so that in 1959 the operators of the fish packing companies declined to enter into the usual negotiations with the fishermen with respect to the quantity and prices for the next season's catch.

The fishermen's "union"—and, if I may, I use that word "union" in quotation marks and loosely, without its legal connotations—the fishermen's "union" thereafter threatened a "strike"—and I use that word in quotation marks and without its usual legal meaning.

In any event the action by both parties in 1959 brought about a serious situation which might very well have led to the loss of the season's salmon catch in west coast waters, and possibly the loss of catches of other fish. It was impossible for the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission to complete the other procedures required under the act, before this matter became acute. It was also impossible for the report of that commission to be in the hands of the public before the industry might suffer a serious set back.

Accordingly, in that year the government, to avert this crisis, enacted the original amendments to the Criminal Code and the Combines Investigation Act, which excluded these specific British Columbia activities from the operation of those two statutes. But that exclusion was only for a period of two years, namely, to December 31, 1960, during which time it was anticipated that the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission report would have been forthcoming and in which time thereafter necessary legislative action might have been taken. However, this did not prove to be the case. Following the original enactment, a series of lawsuits were instituted both in British Columbia and here in Ontario, which sought injunctions against the Director of Investigation and the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, for the purpose of restraining him and the commission from carrying out certain procedures.

This litigation, for the information of honourable senators, is described in detail in the reports of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission for the years ending March 31, 1961 and 1962. As a result, moratorium amendments, such as the present one, were enacted, again extending this exemption for further terms to December 31, 1961, and again to December 31, 1962. These further moratoriums were required, of course, to maintain the status quo while the litigation I referred to was pending, and during which time the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission was precluded from proceeding with its investigation and its hearing.

The last of the litigation I referred to was concluded near the end of the year 1962 immediately before the preceding moratorium lapsed.

As a result of the final decision which was handed down by the Supreme Court of Canada, the commission was required to sort all its oral and documentary evidence obtained in its investigation—which I am advised was voluminous in the extreme—into multitudinous groupings, to be made available on a restrictive basis to the various parties concerned in the investigation, and in accordance with the principles of law defined by the court in its decision.

This task in itself presented the commission with a formidable array of work, and it was realized immediately that it was impossible for the commission to complete its task, and thereafter to hear the evidence of the parties themselves in accordance with the terms of the act, and again thereafter to complete and submit its final report all before the end of 1962. Accordingly, Parliament once again approved a further extension of the exemption until December 31, 1964.

Alas, honourable senators, we had another, if I may be excused for using a legal term, novus actus interveniens, in the form of a very serious strike by the fishermen in British Columbia in the year 1963, over the minimum price to be paid for the season's catch.

Arising out of this strike, and because of the acknowledged seriousness and peculiarities of the problem of the B.C. fisheries, an intergovernmental committee was set up, consisting of civil servants of the federal Department of Fisheries and of civil servants of the Department of Lands, Forests, and Water Resources of British Columbia. This committee was instructed to investigate in detail the problems related to the British Columbia salmon industry and the fishing industry generally, and to report and make recommendations, if possible, with regard to what legislative action might be advisable and could be taken by either the Government of Canada or the Government of British Columbia, or by both, within their respective fields of jurisdiction.

I am advised that this committee should make its report shortly. I am also advised that the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission does not wish to bring forth its final report until the intergovernmental committee has made known its recommendations and until any legislative action thereby recommended may be brought into effect.

By the end of this year the moratorium in effect now will have expired. Therefore, honourable senators, there is a degree of urgency to this piece of legislation.

I might say from briefly perusing Senate Hansard relative to debates in this chamber on previous occasions, and on preceding bills correlative to this one, the honourable Senator Roebuck, with his usual scholastic perfection and refined sense of legalistic drafting and principles, has taken exception to this piece of legislation.

I also noted that initially when the first measure was introduced, he referred to it as being unprecedented. I think that is about the only point he raised about the first bill that he could not raise against this present legislation.

Honourable senators, because of the shortness of the bill itself, being limited to the expiry of the exemption, if this bill receives second reading today I would ask that it be given third reading as well.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, my friend Senator Lang has referred to the objections which I took to this legislation when it came before us previously. The assurance that I was given on that occasion was that there was a crisis of some kind in British Columbia, and that during the interval of the exemption of these people from the Criminal Code and the Combines Investigation Act, the matter would be worked out in some way, and we would not be asked to extend the legislation further.

I could not have protested more strongly than I did at that time, within my own ability to protest. I protest still more vigorously now against this kind of legislation. The Criminal Code and the Combines Investigation Act were passed for the purpose of protecting the public against undue restrictions on competition. The game that is going on in British Columbia today in the fishing industry is for the purpose of excluding competition in this particular industry. The very purpose of the bill is to allow them to do something that we will not allow other people to do in any part of Canada.

The Criminal Code, a carefully revised, thought-out statute of many years standing, is for the purpose of protecting the public. The Combines Investigation Act is not nearly so old, but it was designed for the same purpose.

The idea of allowing people in British Columbia to violate the provisions of those two acts because someone suggests a strike, is ridiculous. Let them strike. The fishermen there are not employers; they work on their own and they combine with the packers in order to boost prices. The purpose of this legislation is to allow them to do so. It is outrageous, from my point of view. To bring this measure to us now and expect us to pass it, one, two, three, and go, is equally outrageous. I am not in favour of passing it now. I am not consenting to anything of the kind.

I would like to see this act referred to the Banking and Commerce Committee when we come together again, in order that we may have time to consider it, to actually see the parties who are seeking this exemption from the Criminal Code and to hear what they have to say. In that way, we could at least give ourselves an opportunity to exercise a proper, decent judgment.

The fact that the exemption expires on December 31 only places these people in the same position as all other businessmen, producers, manufacturers and traders, all over the Dominion of Canada. I see no reason for exempting them, or to continue to exempt them year after year. First, it was a crisis. Now it is another crisis. It was a crisis in 1959; it was a crisis again in 1960, in 1961 and 1962; and now, in 1964, it is still another crisis. It is a ridiculous situation, and I oppose it with all the strength that I command. I will take no responsibility in connection with it.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, the only reason I rise to make a few comments on this bill is that I feel a certain degree of sympathy for the sponsor, for it was my lot, either the last time or the previous time this was extended, to have to explain to the Senate why we were asking for passage of such legislation.

As he has very clearly explained, it has been a difficult situation. I notice that we are only asked to extend it for a further 18 months, and I am wondering whether those responsible for this legislation are being a little optimistic or if any solution is in sight.

I listened with interest to the remarks of Senator Roebuck. I do not think it is as clear cut as he makes it seem, or as he sees it to be. I know little about the fisheries of British Columbia, but I am fairly well acquainted with the fisheries of the Atlantic coast and I understand that their situation is the same. I can say that the primary producer, the men who actually went out and caught the fish, were usually the ones who had the most difficult time making a living. They are the ones who received the least return; they were the weak link. Fishermen had to go out and fish in all kinds of weather. Unless those who operated the fish plants would buy the catch, what could the fishermen do with it? Throw it overboard. Their bargaining power has been weak, and perhaps by co-operating together, or combining together, these fishermen would be able to better their lot, not for the purpose of increasing the price to the consumer but to get a larger share of the profit. Actually, I do not believe it should cost the consumer more, but in any event a greater share of the consumer dollar should go to the man who actually has to go out and catch the fish, rather than to those who process, distribute and sell it.

So far as I am concerned, this legislation should be passed to enable them to try to work out a solution to the problem which exists.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Honourable senators, may I just add a word? I did not intend to criticize the gentleman who sponsored the bill. He gave us a fine and frank explanation of it, and I congratulate him.

It is the bill I am criticizing, and if I may add to what I said with regard to the setting aside of competition, the Criminal Code says "unduly limiting competition". This is the defence of the accused when a bona fide case is presented in court. If these people do not propose to "unduly" limit competition, they do not need this legislation. It is only because of the outrageous character of their agreements, of their combines, of their violation of the Code, that they desire to have the Code and the combines legislation set aside.

Hon. Daniel A. Lang: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if the honourable Senator Lang speaks now it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Lang: Honourable senators, arising out of some of the honourable Senator Roebuck's remarks, I thought perhaps I should mention one underlying consideration which I did not refer to originally in connection with this bill.

I am advised that this intergovernmental committee, which is expected to report very shortly, making recommendations, is also very seriously concerned about conservation in these fishing grounds. The amounts and the nature of the catch to be taken each year are very important factors in the operation of the industry, to ensure its long-term preservation. When this committee reports, it is anticipated that many of its recommendations will be involved in this area.

The moratorium now sought to be granted will bring to further public scrutiny these considerations.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Lang: With leave of the Senate, now.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I do not consent to it. I move that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.

Speaking to my motion, there is no hurry to have this legislation passed at this time. These men do not fish in the winter; the fishing is done in the spring, in the usual run of the salmon. So there is no reason for pushing this through by setting aside our rules of procedure and passing this legislation peremptorily, to which I object so strongly. When have we ever set aside provisions of the Criminal Code in the interests of individuals? That is what I said the last time a similar measure came before us. It is unprecedented in that regard. True, it is not unprecedented in this particular case, because we have done this two or three times before, but that does not mean it is not generally unprecedented. Who can remember our ever setting aside the provisions of the Criminal Code for the convenience of any individuals who desire to violate it? I do not see any reason whatsoever for passing it now. We will be back after the Christmas holidays, in the new year. There will be plenty of time to do anything that it is shown to us it is necessary to do prior to the spring run.

I therefore move that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce—if somebody will second it.

The Hon. the Speaker: Has the honourable Senator Roebuck a seconder for his motion?

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: No.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: There is no seconder.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Some Hon. Senators: Now.

The Hon. the Speaker: With leave of the Senate, it is moved by the honourable Senator Lang, seconded by the honourable Senator Baird, that this bill be now read the third time.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I did not give my consent.

The Hon. the Speaker: In that case, there is not unanimous consent. It will have to be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I had hoped the motion for third reading might be put.

I wonder if I might say this to Senator Roebuck and, indeed, to all honourable senators. The expiry date of the measure that is to be dealt with by this extension occurs on December 31, at the end of this month. I have not been able to make an announcement, but I was going to make it very shortly, that the Senate would be adjourned subject to recall, of course,—but recall, as I see it, is unlikely—until Tuesday, March 2.

In that interval there may be developments on the west coast in respect to this matter. I can quite understand the position taken by Senator Roebuck. He has taken it before. I understand from the sponsor of the bill and from information supplied to me that this is an unusual situation. In the circumstances, I would appeal to the house, and in particular to Senator Roebuck, to allow the bill to be read the third time so that it can be given royal assent. I undertake, of course, to place the views of honourable senators who have spoken before the appropriate minister forthwith, and to impress upon him the importance of doing all that can be done to prevent the return of this measure to this house.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: On that undertaking I consent, but let it be clearly understood that I shall do everything in my power to stop that bill ever passing this house again.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

MERCHANT SEAMEN COMPENSATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-131, to amend the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act.

Bill read first time.

Hon. John J. Connolly moved, with leave, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that he had received the following communication:

Government House
Ottawa

18th December 1964.

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Hon. Robert Taschereau, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, acting as Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 18th December, at 5.45 p.m. for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain Bills.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
A. G. Cherrier
Assistant Secretary
to the Governor General.

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move, with leave of the Senate, that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, March 2, 1965, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

I understand that in the other place it is proposed to adjourn to a date approximately two weeks earlier than that. However, they will have legislation to consider. We may have some matters that we could deal with, but it seemed to me to be more appropriate to adjourn a little longer. We have the facilities available to recall the Senate at an earlier date should this be necessary.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 5.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Robert Taschereau, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give royal assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the Judges Act.

An Act to amend an Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, March 2, 1965, at 8 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 1278)

JOINT COMMITTEE ON THE LIBRARY OF PARLIAMENT

1 9 6 4

Your Committee met on December 15, 1964 and begs to submit the following recommendations:

1. In order to bring the rates of pay for the professional employees of the Library of Parliament in line with the recently revised rates approved for librarians of the Public Service by Treasury Board Minute 630611, dated October 22, 1964, we recommend that the following rates of pay be revised as follows, effective September 1st, 1964:

Reference Librarian 1
Cataloguing Librarian 1

From:	4800 and 4980 and 5160		5340	5520
To:		5160	5340	5520	5700

Reference Librarian 2
Cataloguing Librarian 2

From:	5400 and 5640	5880	6180
To:	5640	5880	6180	6480

Reference Librarian 3
Cataloguing Librarian 3
Vertical File Specialist

From:	5880 and 6180	6480	6780
To:	6180	6480	6780	7080

Reference Librarian 4

From:	6600 and 6900	7200	7500
To:	6900	7200	7500	7860

Reference Librarian 5
Assistant Chief Cataloguing Librarian

From:	7620 and 7980	8340	8700
To:	7980	8340	8700	9060

Chief Reference Librarian
Chief Cataloguing Librarian

From:	8640 and 9000	9380	9780
To:	9000	9380	9780	10200

Assistant Librarian

From:	9380 and 9780 and 10200 and 10600		11000	11400
To:		10600	11000	11400	11880

2. It is also recommended that the revised rates of pay be applied to employees as provided for in the above Treasury Board Minute, with the following exceptions:

a) that the Chief Reference Librarian be paid at $9380;

b) that Mrs. Thérèse Foster be paid at $7200, both effective September 1st, 1964.

Respectfully submitted,
Maurice Bourget,
Speaker of the Senate.
Alan Macnaughton,
Speaker of the House of Commons.
Joint Chairmen.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, March 2, 1965

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

THE LATE SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

EXPRESSION OF SYMPATHY TO LADY CHURCHILL

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, during the adjournment of the Senate news came of the death of Sir Winston Churchill. On behalf of the members of this honourable house I expressed the sympathy of this house to Lady Churchill, in a message reading as follows:

Dear Lady Churchill,

I wish to express to you and to the members of your family the deepest sympathy of the members of the Senate of Canada in your bereavement.

Your sorrow is shared by those who cherish freedom in all parts of the world.

Sincerely,

Maurice Bourget.

28th January, 1965.

Lady Churchill was kind enough to reply to that letter of condolence in the following terms:

28 Hyde Park Gate,
London, S.W. 7,
3rd February, 1965.

Dear Mr. President,

I am truly grateful to you for your kind and sympathetic message.

Yours sincerely,

Clementine S. Churchill

Honourable senators, the world has lost a great citizen and an understanding leader. As it has been so well said, Sir Winston has passed on, but the example of his courage, the majesty of his words, the inspiration of his leadership and of his life, these will endure for all time.

THE LATE SENATORS AUSTIN C. TAYLOR AND JOHN A. ROBERTSON

TRIBUTES

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, since the Senate last met this chamber has been deprived of the services of two of its esteemed members. Both of them will be missed here very much.

Senator Austin C. Taylor died on January 17 of this year. He was last in the Senate in June of 1964. Senator Taylor was from New Brunswick, but in a very real sense he was of New Brunswick. He had a long and distinguished public career, having been elected to the legislature of his province first in 1935. He was re-elected six times, which is evidence of the prestige he enjoyed among the people who knew him best, and particularly those in his own county of Westmorland.

Senator Taylor was Minister of Agriculture for New Brunswick for 17 years, during a time of great adjustment and growth in that province. He was the provincial leader of his party in 1954, and was summoned to the Senate in 1957. Here, his colleagues knew and admired and respected him, first for his unfailing politeness; for his sincerity, because he was a sincere and direct man; for his capacity as a parliamentarian, because he was one of the finest speakers to grace this chamber of great speakers; and for his expert knowledge of agriculture, because in this field he was indeed an expert.

For some time Senator Taylor was an officer of the Farmers' and Dairymen's Association, of the Fox Breeders' Association, of the Sheep Breeders' Association and of the Potato Growers' Association. In 1950, he was an adviser to the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in a world conference on agricultural problems, which was held in Sweden. In 1964 he was made a life member of the Agricultural Institute of Canada, in tribute to him for the services he had rendered to the agricultural community in Canada.

In the debates in this chamber and in the Special Committee on Land Use, over the years, he made notable contributions, not only in his special field of agriculture but also in the general work of the Senate.

Honourable senators, Austin Claude Taylor has left a mark upon Parliament; he has left a mark upon the legislature of his native New Brunswick; he has left a mark, too, upon the people of his province as a whole, and particularly upon the people of his own county of Westmorland.

It is not given to many men today to do so much.

He is mourned by the people among whom he lived, but by none more than his wife, his little daughter and his sisters.

Honourable senators, the Senate sustained another loss it can ill afford, very suddenly, on February 19, at Kenora, Ontario, in the death of John Alexander Robertson. He died shortly after a seizure that came upon him while he was performing a community service in Kenora.

Senator Robertson was here for only two years. As men go, he was a young man, being only 51 years of age. He had really just begun to accustom himself to the ways of Parliament and the Senate. He had started to make a valuable contribution when, suddenly, in the inscrutable workings of Divine Providence, he was cut off.

Senator Robertson was affectionately and familiarly knows as "Pete". He had a great capacity for friendship, which all of us understood and benefited from. He was a big man; he was also a man of large heart. He was interested in athletics, which he frequently talked about. This in itself gave him a rapport with many of his colleagues here.

Senator Robertson was born and spent his early life in Western Canada—in Alberta—and latterly he lived in Kenora. Twice he contested a seat there, once federally, once provincially, on behalf of his own political party. He saw service in the army in the late war. He was a member of the Canadian Legion, and, in fact, an honourary life member. His business was railroading. For a long time he was a conductor on the railroads, and was also active in railroad unions.

I say with all sincerity, honourable senators, that there is tragedy and great loss to Parliament in his death.

Senator Robertson came here without a parliamentary background, but as a working railroader he knew much of this country; he knew and had met and had contact with many of its people. He had a practical viewpoint about things, which is valuable in the life of a deliberative assembly like the Senate.

The late senator was a modest man, and a prudent man. His family and his friends have been prematurely deprived of his fine lovable qualities.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, I desire to associate myself with the eloquent and well-deserved tributes to which we have listened from the honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West), which he has paid to our departed colleagues, Senator Taylor and Senator Robertson.

Senator Connolly has given a comprehensive and detailed outline of some of the life activities of these two departed gentlemen. I will confine myself to some general remarks.

I suppose that I knew the late Austin Taylor for a longer time than any other senator in this chamber. Many years ago, as young men, we were associated as officers in the New Brunswick Rangers, a militia unit comprised of officers and men from our adjoining counties in New Brunswick, Kings and Westmorland.

I recognized his excellent and sterling qualities; and in the subsequent years, although, as everyone knows, we were from active and opposite sides of politics in New Brunswick, nothing ever occurred that altered our association; we always remained the very best of friends. In fact, along with most people in New Brunswick, I was proud of his success, particularly in agriculture, which was his main interest and chosen field of activity.

Our late colleague was born and lived on a farm, and never lost his love for the land. As the Leader of the Government has said, he was Minister of Agriculture in New Brunswick for some 17 years, but his activities fortunately were not confined to only his native province. He became and was recognized as one of Canada's leading agricultural experts. As we have just been reminded, in 1950 Senator Taylor acted as an adviser to and accompanied the delegation of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture to Sweden for the meeting of the International Federation of that organization. He toured most countries of Europe at that time, studying the agricultural policies of the different countries, and on his return gave the benefit of his studies and knowledge to the people of Canada.

It has been recalled that just a short time before Senator Taylor passed away the Agricultural Institute of Canada, in appreciation of his great interest in agricultural matters, made him an honorary life member of that organization. We can truthfully say, and we do say in the Maritimes, that he was a true Maritimer in every sense of the word and was always a staunch supporter of any proposition which he felt would benefit those provinces. His speeches in the Legislature of New Brunswick and in this chamber eloquently attest to this fact.

I attended his funeral, as did many of his colleagues, and I am sure we were all impressed by the large number of people present. They came from all parts of his native province and from outside, representing all walks of life. I noted particularly that the men and women of his home parish of Salisbury, New Brunswick, were there in large numbers to pay him their final and sincere respect, which was fitting to the memory of the man they all held so dear and who had been a good neighbour and friend.

Honourable senators, we were again shocked a few days ago to learn of the sudden passing of our colleague Senator John A. Robertson, affectionately known, as the Leader of the Government has said, as "Pete". He was only 51 years of age, one of our newest and, as age goes in the Senate, one of our youngest senators.

I did not know Senator Robertson before he joined us in the Senate a few years ago, but it did not take long to become acquainted with him, for his was a very friendly and genial disposition and he made friends easily. His ready smile and friendly attitude soon endeared him to all his colleagues.

Being a self-made man, he had been engaged in many activities. He had been in business in his home town of Kenora for some years, and had been on active military service. However, his major activity was with the railway, the C.P.R., where he was most successful. He was also at all times greatly interested and active in labour matters, was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen for 23 years, and very active in labour matters and in helping to solve labour problems.

He was appointed to the Senate, as you know, in 1962, his appointment being as a representative of labour and labour unions.

We are told that Senator Robertson learned of his appointment to the Senate while in a caboose at Ignace, a northwestern Ontario turn-around point for C.P.R. train crews. He told us of it this way:

> The despatcher came to the caboose and told me that he had a long distance telephone call. When I arrived I found the Prime Minister, the Right Honourable John Diefenbaker, was on the line and asked: "Do you know a good man I could appoint to the Senate who would represent labour well?" While I stood there trying to think of someone, Mr. Diefenbaker laughed and said: "It was you I had in mind, Pete. Would you do it?"

It is significant, then, that in his maiden speech in October, 1963, Senator Robertson addressed the Senate on Bill C-102, the measure that made provision for the placing of the Maritime Transportation Unions of Canada under the management and control of trustees. In that speech he quoted Clarence Darrow, who stated some 50 years ago:

> With all their faults, trade unions have done more for humanity than any other organization of men that ever existed. They have done more for decency, for honesty, for education, for the betterment of the race, for the development of character in man, than any other association of men.

Those are the things that Senator Robertson believed in. Indeed, they served as guide lines for his life—decency, honesty, education, the betterment of the race, and the development of character in man.

Honourable senators, as we have just been told, the public life of Canada could ill afford to lose the services of these two distinguished gentlemen, the late Senator Taylor and the late Senator Robertson.

I join our leader in extending once again to their families our sincere sympathy.

Hon. G. Percival Burchill: Honourable senators, I want to express my sorrow on the death of my very close friend, Senator Taylor. We had been associated with one another for a great many years. I mourn his passing and shall miss him very much indeed.

I cannot add too much to what has already been said by the leaders on both sides, but I would mention that he had a most distinguished career as Minister of Agriculture in the Province of New Brunswick. He was the friend of every farmer in that province. When he took on the mantle of leadership, following the retirement of the Honourable Mr. McNair, he travelled around and became very well known throughout every section of the province. But he was known not only throughout New Brunswick, but throughout Canada. He was recognized as one of the leading authorities on agriculture and associated matters in this country. He regretted very deeply during his time here in the Senate that he had not been able to do more for the agricultural community. He was devoted to agriculture, and as a very successful farmer he instituted and carried out in New Brunswick practical policies which appealed greatly to the farming population.

By his death this chamber has lost a very distinguished parliamentarian, Canada has lost a great public figure, and the Province of New Brunswick has lost a very, very staunch friend. To his wife and daughter I too want to convey my very deep sympathy.

Senator Robertson's sudden death was a great shock to us all. I did not know him as well as I knew Senator Taylor, but in the short time he was with us I grew to like him and to respect him. I join the leaders on both sides in extending my very deep sympathy to his people.

Hon. J. Campbell Haig: Honourable senators, last Tuesday afternoon in the Town of Kenora, Ontario, on a cold, sunny day, there was held at Knox United Church the funeral service for one of our former colleagues, Senator John Alexander Robertson, who was affectionately known to his many friends and business acquaintances as "Pete".

There is a story behind that appellation. His father was known as Pete, and John Alexander was known as "Piccolo Pete," because at one time in his student days he was in a play in which he portrayed a character who played the piccolo, and consequently he was known thereafter as "Piccolo Pete".

On arrival at Kenora on Tuesday last I was greatly impressed to see that the flags on all businesses and private dwellings were at half-staff. This indicated to all the deep affection in which he was held by the townspeople, and the sorrow they felt at his sudden passing on the previous Friday evening.

At the service in the church there were members of the many organizations to which he belonged, as well as representatives of the Ontario Provincial Police and the Ontario Lands Branch.

As has been mentioned before, Senator Robertson was a railroad man, a fact of which he was very proud. On the many trips he and I made between Winnipeg, Kenora and Ottawa, it was most evident at all times that he was held in the highest esteem by his former fellow workers.

He was one of the most friendly of men. He had the happy faculty of getting to know people quickly and understanding their problems. He was well known to most of the members of this house and to the staff and officers of these buildings. He was genuinely interested in the work of this chamber; he studied the legislation coming forward and spent a great deal of time and effort in understanding it.

At this point I would like to mention a fact that may not be generally known to the members of this house: it is that the Honourable F. W. Gershaw was the physician in charge when the late John Alexander Robertson was born in Medicine Hat in 1913.

I speak with great assurance tonight, honourable senators, in expressing our heartfelt sympathy to his widow, Roberta, and their three young children.

Hon. Rhéal Belisle: Honourable senators, surely if happiness can ever come from honour and success achieved in this world, our distinguished friends, Senator Taylor and Senator Robertson, may well have been happy men. Not the slightest premonition of danger beclouded their sky when they left for home before Christmas. They stood erect, strong, and confident in the years stretching out peacefully and securely before them. They were thrust from this world's interests, from its hopes, its aspirations and its victories into the inevitable presence of death, and they did not quail. Their short agony was silently borne. With unfailing tenderness they took leave of life; with simple resignation they bowed to the divine decree and fell into eternal sleep.

We are here today to pay tribute to the memory of our distinguished friends.

As Senator Robertson was an old friend of mine, may I be permitted to say that his career was an example for all the working and ambitious young men of this country. Born of humble parents in Medicine Hat, Alberta, he rose to prominence and prestige in Northern Ontario. Loved by those who knew him best and respected by many, circumstances decreed that he should experience life as a young man the hard way. He was a grocery store operator in Kenora before joining the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1938. He served in the provost corps in the Canadian army during the Second World War as a corporal and sergeant.

He was twice unsuccessful in seeking a seat in the federal and provincial elections, and yet from each encounter he emerged strengthened in character and richer in experience. Surely, he believed, and certainly he lived, the sentiments expressed by Chapman when he said:

> There is a nick in Fortune's restless panel.
> For each man's good.

Senator Robertson forged ahead. He made friends. He devoted his time and his talents to public life. He bore the acclaim of his admirers with genuine modesty, and strove by all means at his command to reflect their wishes and welfare in all his actions and decisions. In truth, he kept the "common touch."

As these two late senators were comparatively young in years, but old in experience and wisdom, may I be permitted to think and hope that when their vacancies are filled in this honourable assembly the Prime Minister will replace them by men who have greatly contributed to the agricultural and labour groups of our country.

In these trying days, when our noble and distinguished Senate has to keep abreast of the popular demand for some kind of reform, I respectfully suggest that naming men who have practical and every-day experience with labour and agricultural problems will greatly enhance our popularity and usefulness, so that we may continue to deserve the high prestige of this honourable chamber.

In offering my condolences to Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Robertson, and their bereaved families, I conclude by saying that they are parted, but they are not forgotten. The helping hand, the friendly smile, the encouraging word were displayed by both throughout their lifetime, and became woven into a bright and shining pattern whose beauty warms and thrills us even yet. They are not with us now, and yet they are not dead because:

> To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die.

Hon. Muriel McQ. Fergusson: Honourable senators, with Senator Burchill I mourn the passing of Senator Austin Taylor whom I have known for as long as I can remember. I too miss him very much, as I do the talks we used to have about the things that might be done for the benefit of our province of New Brunswick. Such things were of prime concern to Austin Taylor.

Senator Taylor's claim to the high regard and affection of the people of New Brunswick was shown by the tremendous number of citizens of Westmorland County and other counties of the province, and from other provinces in the dominion, who, as the honourable Leader of the Opposition (Hon. Mr. Brooks) has said, sorrowfully attended his funeral in Moncton.

We in New Brunswick had not only high regard and affection for Austin Taylor, we were also very proud of him for his understanding of and work and accomplishments on behalf of farmers who make up such a large part of the population of the province. Senator Taylor rendered his services to the Province of New Brunswick, as Minister of Agriculture, at a time when those services were needed, and great advancement was made in agriculture under his direction.

With the other honourable senators who have spoken, I extend my deepest sympathy to his wife, his beloved little daughter, his sisters and the other members of his family.

I did not know Senator Robertson as well as I knew Senator Taylor. I had not known him at all before he entered the Senate, but I found him a very friendly and delightful colleague, and I enjoyed all the associations I had with him. I extend to Mrs. Robertson and the other members of Senator Robertson's family my deepest sympathy.

Hon. Arthur M. Pearson: Honourable senators, I should like to join in the sentiments expressed by the honourable senators who have spoken of our two departed colleagues, and I should like to add a little more to what has been said about Senator Taylor.

Senator Taylor was an authority on agriculture. This I found out during my experience on the Special Committee of the Senate on Land Use in Canada. He was a member of that committee from 1958 until the spring of 1963, at which time he became co-chairman; he was also a member of the Steering Committee. Had it not been for Senator Taylor I do not think that committee would have accomplished nearly as much as it did. His experience in agriculture and his forthright manner of speaking were most helpful during the period of time when the committee was examining witnesses. In fact, it was because of his intimate knowledge of the men of agriculture in Canada that the committee was able to call before it witnesses who could contribute the most. The Senate will feel a tremendous loss in the death of a member who was one of the great agriculturalists of Canada.

I knew Senator Robertson for only a short time, but during that brief period I found him a most friendly man. He and I went on a fishing trip last summer. We went north of Kenora by car to Red Lake, and I was amazed at the large number of people who apparently knew he was going there and were ready to welcome him. We went by airplane from Red Lake to the northwest corner of Ontario, where we had a very pleasant time fishing. This was all arranged by Senator Pete Robertson.

On our return we visited his home in Kenora, and there I met his charming wife and lovely family, who provided us with a wonderful dinner. I enjoyed myself tremendously.

I shall miss Senator Robertson as I shall miss Senator Taylor. I became very well acquainted with both of them. I express my sincere sorrow to the widows of both.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, I am afraid I cannot add very much to what has already been said with respect to the general careers of our two departed brethren. However, I would like to say a few words on behalf of myself and the members of the Standing Committee on Divorce because both these senators were useful and honoured members of that committee.

When I asked Senator Taylor shortly after his arrival in the Senate to become a member of the Standing Committee on Divorce, his answer was, "I will serve in any capacity in which I can contribute," and he did contribute very materially. He was faithful in attendance, and spent many hours in the rather thankless task of hearing evidence in divorce cases. He was not a lawyer, but his alert mind, his long experience, his knowledge of people, men and women, and of affairs, and his innate fairness, made for keeness of judgment. So far as the Divorce Committee is concerned, he is positively irreplaceable.

Honourable senators, previous speakers have referred to the impressive funeral ceremony which took place, in which participated his sorrowing fellow citizens, relatives and friends. I would like to put on record some of those lovely words expressed on that occasion by Reverend Dr. Abner J. Langley, who was his pastor and who knew him as perhaps none of us know him. Dr. Langley said:

> The sorrow that has descended upon our community, the tributes in the press and over the air, the presence in this church and sanctuary of so many from all walks of life bespeak a more eloquent tribute than any words of mine could ever convey.

And yet, if only for our own sakes, we feel we must give expression to our sense of sorrow and of loss...

Others far better than I can tell of his great contribution to our province as Minister of Agriculture for over seventeen years. But this I do know: for such a position of high responsibility, he was "to the manner born". He loved the good earth. Springtime and harvest were no mere passing seasons to him: they were of the very stuff of life. Eagerly he awaited the yearly miracle of spring, lovingly he prepared the soil, planted the seed, tended the crop, ever rejoicing with a child-like wonder as yet again "the earth yielded her increase."

Honourable senators, so far as I am concerned, I wish to express my deepest sympathy to his wife, who was a most devoted companion, and to his little daughter Dorothy, to whom he was so completely and so sincerely devoted and who was equally devoted to him.

I lose a confrère, a colleague, but more than that I feel I lose a most valuable and loved friend.

Honourable senators, the late Senator Robertson, too, was a member of the Senate Committee on Divorce. I need not go over the various things which have been said about his career, because they have been well said and there is nothing to be gained by repetition. However, I would like to put on record what I read in the newspapers of his home town. Let me quote first, if I may, an item from "Trainmen News in Canada."

Senator Robertson is now a conductor on the Kenora-Ignace run in unassigned Pool Freight Service. He has been a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen since 1939 and is a Past President of Lodge 270 in Kenora.

Pete was asleep in his caboose at Ignace, the objective terminal 146 miles from Kenora, when a call was received at 8:00 a.m. on November 22. Pete's first thought was of trouble at home but the call wasn't from Kenora, it was Prime Minister Diefenbaker calling from Ottawa offering him an appointment as a Senator.

In some respects it was a most remarkable incident.

It is expected that the appointment of Pete Robertson will be a colourful addition to the Senate—a big, burly man (6'1", 240 Lbs.) with a picturesque turn of phrase who might prefer fisticuffs to oratory as a means of settling disputes, political or otherwise.

Brotherhood members are quite proud of the appointment of Pete Robertson to the Senate of Canada and we wish him every success in his high and responsible office.

World Affairs in its issue of January 1963 carried the comments of the then Prime Minister when he announced the appointment in the House of Commons:

Mr. Diefenbaker said John Alexander Robertson is well qualified to speak from the standpoint of labor. He has three brothers and a brother-in-law working on the railroad... his father worked for the C.P.R. . . .

Mr. Robertson now is a conductor on the Kenora-Ignace run in unassigned pool freight service. He has been a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen since 1941 and is a past president of Local 270 of the brotherhood in Kenora.

Honourable senators, here is the local newspaper, just to hand, from Kenora in which they say:

Citizens of Kenora and across Canada were stunned and saddened this morning to learn of the death late Friday evening of Senator John Alexander Robertson... Senator Robertson had earlier assisted in a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the Kenricia Hotel, and went home early where he was stricken. He died at St. Joseph Hospital at 11.25 p.m.

Speaking of his appointment and of the interview between himself and the Prime Minister of that time, the newspaper said:

He accepted the challenge of this new avenue of service, working for the good of this district he represented.

Honourable senators, I and my fellow members of the Divorce Committee know something of the friendly and serious qualities of the late Senator Robertson. He was always willing to carry the load. During the years that have gone by—not very many, two or three since he joined our ranks—he has been a working member of that committee, where his knowledge, his fairness and his insight have ever been available. We of the Senate Committee on Divorce join with those who have already spoken in sincere tributes to both these gentlemen.

To Mrs. Taylor and to her little daughter Dorothy, I would like to express my sincerest sympathy. To Mrs. Robertson and her family I join in sending my condolences. We in this chamber are poorer for the loss of these two great citizens.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I realize that the tributes which have been paid to our colleagues have been very full and that it is unlikely that I can add anything of any great value.

I join sincerely in the tributes which have been paid to them. In view of my long friendship with our late colleague Senator Robertson, I feel I would be remiss in my duty to him and to the family if I did not express my feelings personally at this time.

Like Senator Haig, Senator Yuzyk, and the Honourable Kelso Roberts representing the Government of Ontario, I had the sad duty of paying our respects to our late colleague in public life. It may be enough if I merely add my testimony to that of Senator Haig, about the memorable tribute paid to Senator Robertson by his neighbours and friends of Kenora-Rainy River on Monday of last week.

In death, as so often in his life, Pete Robertson was the central figure, the impelling magnet that attracted a great gathering of his north country neighbours. We saw them sorrowing at the church, at the cemetery, in the bereaved home, and in the homes of his brothers and sisters, where besides being the head of his own family, he was the leader, guide and counsellor of the Clan Robertson.

It seemed to me that every part of that far-flung constituency of Kenora-Rainy River was represented, in spite of the fact that it spreads from the Manitoba border almost to the head of the lakes and from the Minnesota border, 500 miles to the north.

Standing there, one felt the presence of the Great Father of all mankind, particularly in seeing representatives of the Indian bands he knew and loved so well, with heads uncovered and bowed, in 20 degrees below zero weather, as their last tribute to one who was their friend and spokesman.

I knew Senator Robertson for a good many years. I admired him for all the qualities that have been indicated in the tributes paid to him this evening; but above all else, I admired Pete Robertson for his uniquely dedicated concept of public service. I know that his summons here was to him, above all else, a call to further service to his fellow man. I know of no one here, or in the other House of Parliament, who entered so eagerly and energetically into the opportunities which public life offers for public service.

Pete Robertson was of the Protestant faith, but the range of his interests and sympathies were catholic, in every good sense of that good word. If proof of that were needed, it would be the fact that in that Protestant church there was in attendance at the funeral a guard, in full regalia, from the Father Alneau Assembly of the Knights of Columbus of the Fourth Degree. I said to one of them, "I have never before seen such an honour given in a Protestant church." The reply I received might well serve as an epitaph for our lated colleague: "We did it for Pete, because we wanted to. He made no distinction between people on grounds of creed, race or position in life. We were all people to him. He loved people and people loved him."

Knowing his family as I do, I find it difficult to speak of the awful void his passing leaves in the immediate family circle, for his was a young family who loved him dearly —Mrs. Robertson, brave and talented, two boys and a girl, Joyce—the eldest boy, Jimmy, just 14 years of age.

But if courage and loyalty are enduring, the spirit of Pete Robertson lives on. Almost the first words that 12-year old Neil spoke to his mother after the shock of the bereavment were, "Don't worry, Mom, I still have my paper route."

I know our hearts go out tonight to Senator Robertson's kith and kin in this sudden loss of a good husband, father and brother.

On their behalf, honourable senators—because I was speaking to Mrs. Robertson by long distance telephone only an hour or so ago—I take the liberty of passing on this message to you. Great comfort has come to them in this difficult hour from the many letters they have received from his colleagues in the Senate and elsewhere in Ottawa, making clearer to them than they ever knew the high regard in which Senator Pete Robertson was held by all who knew him in the short time he was permitted to be with us here.

Hon. James Gladstone: Honourable senators, this is a moment of extreme grief—first, because Pete Robertson was my close personal friend.

Just about three weeks ago, in the middle of January, he visited the town of Medicine Hat, in the Province of Alberta, where he was born. From there he came and visited me and stayed over night with my family. We had great pleasure in having him in our own home. His time was very limited, for he was on his way to Vancouver, but I took him to the Blood Reserve, which was known to Pete, and he was able to visit some of our farms and ranches on my reservation. He was delighted with what he saw. Before he left for the coast he had arranged that we would meet in Kenora this past weekend so that we might travel together for this meeting of the Senate tonight.

When I learned of his passing it was an awful blow, because Pete and I were so close.

In 1958, when he was a candidate for the House of Commons in his home riding of Kenora-Rainy River, Mrs. Gladstone and I were invited to go to his constituency. On our arrival at the railway station in Kenora, we were delighted and amazed to see that over 150 Indian school children had come to welcome us. While I was busy visiting the chiefs and counsellors, my friend Pete drove Mrs. Gladstone to several of the schools in that area. The other day my wife told me that she would never forget the wonderful time they had driving around to visit Indians and the school children.

In 1962, the then Prime Minister Diefenbaker appointed John Alexander Robertson to the Senate. He was then in his 50th year. I believe he was one of the youngest senators appointed at that time. I cannot believe that two years later he has gone. There is a void to me without his presence here. He lived long enough for me to learn from him, because his counsel was wise. I do not know why he and I came together. We just seemed to be adapted one to the other. Probably it was because I was a hillbilly, and he a railroader. I am very happy he came to our home.

Senator John A. Robertson was a life member of the Royal Canadian Legion, and it was his great desire that legislation should be introduced which would benefit mankind generally and bring about better relations between labour and management. He was on the threshold of achievement. He was not the first one appointed to our chamber representing labour. Reading past records, I find that Senator Gideon Robertson likewise was a labour representative.

The late senator's three teenage children are at an age when they will feel their father's loss very keenly and, speaking as a colleague and friend and on behalf of the Indians whom I represent—and there were about 5,000 or 6,000 around Rainy River who knew him personally—our sympathy goes out to his charming wife and children in this hour of great sorrow.

VILLE LASALLE DISASTER

MESSAGE OF SYMPATHY

Hon. Malcolm Hollett: Honourable senators, I rise on another matter. Some 35 years ago an earthquake occurred out in the Atlantic Ocean off Burin where I lived. A huge wave rolled in and within seconds after it struck the coastline, 28 men, women and children were dead.

As I touched down in Montreal yesterday on the plane I learned of the tragedy which had occurred there in the morning, and my thoughts went back 35 years. I remember the many expressions of sympathy which poured in to our people on that rugged coastline, expressing the sorrow of people all across Canada.

I deem it my duty to rise at this time to move that the Senate send, through the Mayor of LaSalle, an expression of sympathy and sorrow to the people who have been bereaved by this tragedy in this suburb of Montreal.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

CANADA PENSION PLAN

JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERS

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons stating that the names of Messrs. Morison, Enns and Prittie have been substituted for those of Messrs. McCutcheon, Scott and Moreau on the Joint Committee on the Canada Pension Plan.

PENITENTIARY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-145, to amend the Penitentiary Act.

Bill read first time.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West) moved, with leave, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

COAL PRODUCTION ASSISTANCE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-147, to amend the Coal Production Assistance Act.

Bill read first time.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West) moved, with leave, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

CANADA LABOUR (STANDARDS) CODE BILL

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-126, respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. Donald Smith, with leave, moved second reading.

He said: Honourable senators, I feel that I should thank my leader for assigning to me the task of introducing this Labour (Standards) Code bill to the Senate. I take it as a compliment to myself, and I also regard it as a personal pleasure, stemming from the fact that the present Minister of Labour has been for a dozen years or more a very good personal friend of mine, and I, like a great many other Nova Scotians and, indeed, Canadians in general, have watched with interest the successful way he has managed his department of government since he assumed office.

We all recall that he entered the cabinet as Minister of Labour during a very troublesome time, but he was able to overcome those difficulties. I feel I must mention that it was a hectic time. After seeking the approval of Parliament, he was able to bring about a peaceful solution to the strife and violence associated with shipping on the Great Lakes. Under the legislation, we recall, he appointed a Board of Trustees under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice Victor Dryer to administer the affairs of the powerful Seafarers' International Union. The first objective of that legislation and the first objective of the Board of Trustees was realized almost immediately when the seamen voted to return to work. Since that time and, of course, following the dismissal by the Board of Trustees of Hal Banks, there has been no trouble or harassment on the Great Lakes, either in Canada or the United States. Furthermore, I think it important to note that before long democratic elections of new officers had been held and internal changes made in the union.

In terms of our economy alone, this must be regarded as a valuable contribution. I point to this work with which he was associated with some pride, as evidence of the success which followed his efforts to settle the longshoremen's strike on the St. Lawrence ports at a time when it was absolutely necessary for our economic health that the unprecedented cargoes of grain be got out of the St. Lawrence Seaway before the annual freeze-up.

It is that kind of action on the part of the Minister of Labour, imposed on him fairly early in the game, that made me, as one of his old friends, very proud of him. I am also glad that he has been successful in having the Government enact legislation in other labour fields, and I fully expect that Bill C-126, which breaks new ground, will stand many years as another monument to the public service being performed by the minister from Nova Scotia.

Honourable senators who have had an opportunity to read through Bill C-126 will note in the first place that it is a bill comprising 54 clauses spread over 22 pages. It is not one the principle of which I can skip over quickly. There are, perhaps, a few remarks which I should make on the principle of the bill, and also some necessary explanations so that honourable senators on both sides of the chamber will have an understanding of the kind of legislation now before us.

This bill, as the title says, is an act respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses. I believe it to be a logical further step in the regulation of working conditions in those industries which come under federal jurisdiction. I think we should remind ourselves when thinking in terms of this particular legislation that there are a number of other acts in this field which have shown their worth and which I should list at this time. They are: the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, the Canadian Fair Employment Practices Act, the Female Employees Equal Pay Act, and the Annual Vacations Act.

Every province in Canada has already accepted the principle of or the responsibility for establishing minimum conditions under which people will have to work in industries under provincial jurisdiction. My reading of the subject matter indicates that all provinces have minimum wage laws and all have some legislation dealing with hours of work. Most of them have set standards for annual vacations and pay for holidays. This bill will, therefore, fill a gap in this field of labour standards in Canada, since it will apply to all undertakings within the legislative authority of the federal Parliament.

Activities normally under provincial jurisdiction are, of course, excluded under the Constitution. I think I should point out also that since the Yukon and Northwest Territories Act assigns authority normally regarded as being equivalent to provincial powers to the governing council of the territories, they are also excluded from the operation of the bill, as are all the other provinces. Similar exceptions have been made in some recent acts, one of these being the Annual Vacations Act of 1958. I am informed that the council of the territories is giving consideration to the enactment of ordinances which will deal with appropriate labour standards coming under the jurisdiction of that council.

I think it would be helpful if I put on the record at this time the federal undertakings referred to in the title of the bill. They include: navigation and shipping; railways, canals and telegraphs; interprovincial road transport and pipe lines; air transportation and facilities; radio and television broadcasting; banks; and those industries which have been declared by Parliament to be for the general advantage of Canada or of two or more of the provinces.

Other industries which have been declared as such are grain elevators and flour and feed mills; uranium, mining and refining of that ore; and any undertaking which is outside the exclusive legislative authority of the provinces. In addition, there is included all government corporations which are listed in Schedule B to the Financial Administration Act and regarded as federal undertakings.

It might be useful if, instead of reading this list comprising 10 such government corporations, I could have permission to put them on the record. They are important in themselves, but they are not of very great magnitude in regard to the effect this bill will have on them. With your permission, I will have this put on the record at this point.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Schedule B to the Financial Administration Act (1952, chap. 116)

Schedule B

Agricultural Prices Support Board
Atomic Energy Control Board
Canadian Maritime Commission
Director of Soldier Settlement
The Director, The Veterans' Land Act
Dominion Coal Board
Fisheries Prices Support Board
National Gallery of Canada
National Research Council
Unemployment Insurance Commission

1951 (2nd Sess.), c.12, Sch. B.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I also want to point out that other employees in the public service of Canada are not specifically covered in this bill but the national labour standards will be or already have been adopted by government departments and crown corporations.

It is obvious, honourable senators, that most of the workers—and their number has been estimated to be in the order of 550,000—in federal industries have already reached labour standards equal to or higher than those provided under this bill, because of agreements made following collective bargaining procedures. The proposed legislation will, however, ensure for unorganized employees and small groups who are privately employed the benefits of the progress already enjoyed by others as a result of collective bargaining.

It is also important to note that an undertaking has been given by the Minister of Labour to bring forward amendments to the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act by means of which the minimum labour standards provided in this bill will be applicable to certain categories of federal workers. Those of us who have any knowledge of how the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act now applies will know that these standards are presently related to existing local circumstances.

Establishing minimum labour standards in federal industries will perhaps have the greatest immediate impact on the wages and working conditions of those people in non-urban or rural areas of Canada where labour standards are usually lower. Many such areas exist, for example, in the Atlantic provinces, and of course in the rural areas of almost all provinces of Canada. For the first time the working conditions in these areas will be raised up to a national standard, depending only on whether the workers are employed in an industry or on a contract under federal jurisdiction. In other words, the effect of this bill will be to establish the same minimum labour standards for federal employees whether they are in a high wage region such as Ontario and British Columbia, or in the Atlantic provinces.

The standards in the Canada Labour Code have been set after full consultation and discussion at a federal-provincial labour conference which was held last spring in Ottawa. At the conclusion of that conference the provincial ministers—and I read a summary of the conference proceedings in order to determine just what had transpired—expressed general agreement on the need for progressive labour standards, and acknowledged the existence of the gap in the federal field.

We are all aware that going back over quite a number of months, discussions of the general effects of the proposed legislation have also been held with representatives of both the labour and management groups. I have no doubt that these discussions have proven most helpful to the Minister of Labour and his officials in the preparation of this bill. Most of us have from time to time received copies of the briefs that have been presented to the minister in this regard.

I come now to the standards that are proposed in the bill. The bill provides for an eight-hour day and a forty-hour week, with overtime limited to eight hours per week, which has to be paid for at the rate of time and a half. The bill also provides for a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour. It provides for two weeks' annual vacation with pay, and also for eight general holidays with pay.

Part I deals with hours of work. The enactment of the forty-hour week standard recognizes the need to reduce the excessive number of hours worked by a minority in establishments under federal jurisdiction. It has been felt for some time that a high number of hours of work do not in the long run contribute to industrial efficiency, and may, indeed, have an important effect on industrial accidents as well as being injurious to health. The forty-hour standard should, therefore, be of benefit to employees under federal jurisdiction who continue to work long hours. In addition, it should help to spread employment amongst the labour force of Canada.

Overtime of an additional eight hours a week at one-and-a-half times the regular rate is permitted, but provision is also made for averaging. I shall enlarge on that in just a few minutes. Work in excess of eight hours' overtime in a week may be allowed under permit in cases where the minister is satisfied that there are exceptional circumstances which justify the working of additional hours.

Hon. Mr. Farris: Is that at the same rate?

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): The overtime would be at the same rate, or at a different rate if so set by the minister. I propose to explain that more fully in a few minutes.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Would the honourable senator tell me who these people are who under federal jurisdiction are now working these long hours, and who thus require this special legislation in order to protect their interests? Which group of federally-controlled employees are in this situation?

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): If we think in terms of the list of federal undertakings that I have enumerated, the first group to come to my mind are the stevedores; another group is that of the truckers. There may be a large number of employees in the radio and television broadcasting industry who are presently working long hours. In some of the underdeveloped parts of this country, employees are working even substandard hours. I am referring particularly to some areas where they are not in sufficient numbers to enable them to become members of a union. I shall deal with some of these areas as I develop my presentation further.

Honourable senators, the provisions of Part I concerning hours of work will not cause undesirable dislocation in most of the federal industries. Of course, the reason I say this is the same as that which caused Senator McCutcheon to rise and ask his question a minute ago. There are 550,000 employees in this country now working under federal jurisdiction, and it has been estimated by some people that perhaps only 10 per cent of them will benefit directly from the terms of this legislation. The legislation has an effect apart from its direct effect upon those particular employees. I shall in my remarks enlarge on that particular phase of the legislation as well.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: In that connection I wonder if I might ask the honourable senator what percentage is the 550,000 who will be affected of the total labour force of the country?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Did the senator say "affected"? I think he said "the 550,000 who will be covered".

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Yes, the 550,000 who will be covered.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): As I understand it, the labour force is approximately 6 million. Your mathematics are keener than mine, but I think it would be a little under 10 per cent of the labour force.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: So 10 per cent of 550,000 would make it about one per cent of the total labour force.

Hon. Mr. Croll: No; 10 per cent of the total labour force.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I think that as I proceed some questions now in the minds of honourable senators will be answered. I know the point that my honourable friend is making. It is that this will have no effect, so why are we bothering with it?

Hon. Mr. Brooks: No, no.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): One of the effects will be on the conditions of employment of the people I know best down in the Atlantic provinces. I am thinking of junior bank clerks, those working on breakwaters and those working for a little broadcasting station somewhere, who are not now receiving the benefits of union negotiation. I can think of many people who will benefit from this legislation.

As an enlargement of what I was about to say when I was asked a question by Senator McCutcheon, I will mention another effect of this legislation, which is that although it fills a gap and sets a standard which is below that at which most people in this country work—those who are in organized labour, and so on—it will put pressure on those in some provinces who have for many years been resisting progress in this very field. Whether the discussions of this particular legislation in the Province of Nova Scotia were responsible or not, the truth of the matter is that when the Minister of Labour of Nova Scotia and his officials went back home, within six months they came up with a revised minimum wage law for the Province of Nova Scotia, which for the first time covered male employees in the province and raised the women's minimum wage from something like $21 a week to a rate of, I think, 75 or 80 cents an hour. When the federal Government points out these gaps in discussions and says to the provinces, "We are going to do away with them—you people do what you like; it is your jurisdiction," I think only good flows from it. Good flows from good, just as evil flows from evil. I think this is good legislation.

I am not arguing for this legislation. My duty tonight is to present it in the best way I can, so that its terms are understood by all honourable senators. I know that there will be some who will have criticisms to make of it, and very valuable criticisms, and I think that criticism may result in our recommending some changes.

When I have finished these remarks I intend to say that if the bill receives second reading I shall move that it be sent to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce where its terms can be fully explored by honourable senators, and where a complete opportunity will be offered to people to appear before the committee to make any representations they wish.

I was about to say that there are a number of industries under federal jurisdiction which will require various periods of time in order to make the adjustments to the hours of work standards. Indeed, there may be some employment which, from the standpoint of both employees and employers, will require a rather lengthy deferment period. There will likely be a few cases in which it will be necessary to set standards of hours of work, which differ to the extent necessary to remove any undue hardships to labour and management. Under clause 51 of the bill it is therefore provided that the application of Part I may be delayed for a period of 18 months by order of the Minister of Labour, if it is shown that the immediate application of the hours of work provisions would be detrimental to a particular kind of employment.

In a situation where there is reason to believe that a period of longer than 18 months would be required by a particular industry for adjustment, it is also provided that an inquiry under the Inquiries Act may be held in order to investigate the facts fully. At this inquiry an opportunity would be given for both employees and employer to be heard. The commissioner, after full consideration of the facts, would make his recommendation to the minister as to whether the deferment period should be extended. An order in council could then follow, to fix the length of the deferment period.

An order for deferment issued by the minister or an order by the Governor in Council may also prescribe the hours of work standards which are suitable to the particular operation of the industry. These provisions are based on the need for consideration for the interests of employees whose earnings might otherwise be substantially lessened, as well as for employers who would otherwise be confronted with serious problems in the operation of their business.

These provisions are expected to take care of the problems which might face some of those industries who have been good enough to send copies of their briefs to us and with whom the minister and his officials have had long drawn-out discussions. The group would include such industries as trucking, some railway operations, shipping, stevedoring, grain elevator operation, and so on.

In addition to what I have mentioned already, there is the relief from the application of hours of work standards which is given to those industries through the application of clause 5. This is perhaps the most important provision.

Under this clause, necessarily irregular distribution of an employee's hours of work, such as in stevedoring, may be averaged for a period of from two weeks to 52 weeks, in order to calculate his average daily and weekly hours of work.

As an example of this, under the averaging provision, an employee could work 52 weeks times 40 hours, which is 2,080 hours. He could also work 52 weeks times eight hours of overtime, an additional 416 hours, making a total of about 2,500 hours in a year, before the maximum hours limitation would apply.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: You have not taken off two weeks holidays and the eight days statutory holidays.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): That is right. In employment such as stevedoring, there is also the protection given by clause 9. Under this clause, special permits may be given permitting the additional hours during the period of exceptional circumstances with respect to the relatively short work seasons, which confronts stevedores in the ports of Halifax and Saint John. I think it is particularly significant to stevedoring in those ports.

Clause 10 provides that the maximum hours in a week may be exceeded in cases of unforeseen circumstances, accidents or urgent repairs to plant and equipment. Such work, if undertaken, must be reported. I think it would be of special interest to fishermen—and those of us from the Atlantic provinces realize how many fishermen we have—to note that although the fishing industry itself is within the scope of the bill, the bill will have very little application to it. The main reason for this is that the great majority of fishermen, as we all know, are either self-employed or are engaged in fishing on a share basis. Only those engaged in fishing who are paid a salary or wages would come under the proposed legislation. Of course, the employment of even this relatively small number would find adequate relief under the provisions of averaging and the other provisions I have mentioned. I am thinking now in terms of provision for relief for someone who may be on salary, in a large dragger which goes to sea for seven days.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: What about fish packers?

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): We have nothing to do with fish packers. My understanding is that that is purely a provincial responsibility. I know that the Province of Nova Scotia has made regulations regarding the fish packing industry.

Honourable senators, I turn now to Part II of the bill, which concerns minimum wages. As I stated earlier, the bill establishes a minimum rate of wages of $1.25 an hour. This rate applies to both men and women. The standard rate does not apply, however, to persons under 17 years of age, or to those who are engaged in bona fide training programs in industry.

For any hours worked in excess of eight in a day or 40 in a week, an employee is entitled to one and a half times his regular rate of pay. If he or she is employed at the minimum rate, the overtime pay would, therefore, be $1.87½ an hour.

I think it can be considered, taking all the circumstances into consideration, that the proposed rate of $1.25 is a reasonable minimum standard for federal industries. The public service of Canada should set an example in the conditions under which those who work for the Government or in industries associated with federal operations are concerned.

It was of interest to me to note, several months ago, the submission of a special committee set up by the Mayor of Halifax to the Minimum Wage Board of Nova Scotia. The opinion of this committee was that the expenditure for the basic needs of a Halifax family of two adults and two children, as determined by consultation with the city nutritionist, was $222 a month. A wage rate for a 40-hour week to meet this expenditure would have to be $1.43 an hour. The proposal in this bill of $1.25 does not reach that, but it is a progressive step in that direction. As I have already mentioned, the Government of Nova Scotia has recently made significant progress in establishing what they regard as a satisfactory minimum wage.

I might make the comparison, for the record, that an experienced male over 17 years of age, under the new minimum wage order, effective February 20 of this year, must be paid $1.05 an hour. They are getting pretty close to the federal rate, when they have raised the payment up from a rate which, as I mentioned a while ago, was expressed as a weekly wage of $21.60 for females; and there was no minimum wage rate for males, until this time. I think that is good progress.

There is an important provision in the bill which gives the minister power to defer the application of the $1.25 minimum rate, in the case of a local undertaking in which the interests of the employees or the operation of the undertaking would otherwise be adversely affected.

Honourable senators, may I turn to Part III of the bill, which deals with annual vacations. This part, in the first place, repeals the Annual Vacations Act of 1958 and, while incorporating most of the provisions of that act, makes certain improvements.

Under Part III, every employee is entitled to a two-week vacation with pay after a continuous employment period of one year. Employees who do not complete a year's employment will be entitled to four per cent of their wages in lieu of vacation pay, provided they have had continuous employment for at least 30 days. This is similar to provincial legislation, including that of the Province of Nova Scotia.

Turning to Part IV, dealing with general holidays with pay, this part of the bill provides that an employee is entitled to a holiday with pay on each of eight general holidays. These holidays are named in the bill itself, and are as follows: New Year's Day, Good Friday, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, Labour Day, Thanksgiving Day, Remembrance Day and Christmas Day.

Provision is made in the bill for the substitution of another holiday under certain conditions for one of those listed. For instance, if one of the general holidays falls on a Saturday or Sunday that is ordinarily not a working day for an employee, he is entitled to a holiday with pay on either the preceding or following working day.

Provision is also made for the substituted holiday to be granted at some other time convenient to both the employee and employer. This will be a useful provision for those employed in what is regarded as a "continuous operation." There are times when the main industry in my community, the newsprint industry, works seven days a week, and that of course would be regarded as a continuous operation. Incidentally, the definition of "continuous operation" is contained in clause 24 of the bill.

Now, in employment other than a "continuous operation", where normally the establishment would be closed for the general holiday, if an employee is required to work he is to be paid his usual wages for the day's work in addition to being paid at time-and-a-half rates for the time worked.

Finally, Part V deals with administration. It deals with inspection procedures and the furnishing of information by employers necessary to determine whether the standards laid down are being observed, and also provides for penalties for violations of the act.

The general regulation-making power is set out in the bill, as well as the special transitional provision which permits deferment of the operation of Part I dealing with hours of work, as well as the deferment of the provision in Part II establishing the minimum rate of $1.25 an hour.

Under this part, the establishment of consultative or advisory committees to advise the minister is authorized, which would make recommendations on matters relating to the administration of the act.

Provision is made for an annual report to be made to Parliament on the administration of the act, in the usual terms that provide for such reports and legislation of this nature.

Honourable senators, I am sorry I could not make my explanatory remarks a little shorter. Perhaps I can place some of the responsibility for that on some others who were interested enough to ask me questions. However, I think I have now covered the bill in a general fashion. Perhaps after reading what I have said, honourable senators will have a little better understanding of the bill than they had before. In any event, I look forward to an interesting debate in this chamber, and also a full exposing of the whole problem in the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, to which committee, if the bill receives second reading, I intend to refer the bill.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Choquette, debate adjourned.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1963. (English and French texts).

Report on the Operations of the Municipal Improvements Assistance Act for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 11 of the said act, chapter 183, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Capital Budget of the National Harbours Board for the calendar year 1965, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1965-45, dated January 6, 1965, approving same. (English text).

Capital Budget of Trans-Canada Air Lines (now Air Canada) for the year ending December 31, 1965, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1964-2037, dated December 23, 1964, approving same. (English text).

Report of Proceedings under the Trans-Canada Highway Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 9 of the said act, chapter 269, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report of the Department of Forestry for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 12 of the Department of Forestry Act, chapter 41, Statutes of Canada, 1960. (English text).

Report of the National Gallery of Canada, including its Accounts and Financial transactions certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1963, pursuant to section 10 of the National Gallery Act, chapter 186, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report of the National Gallery of Canada, including its Accounts and Financial transactions certified by the Auditor

General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 10 of the National Gallery Act, chapter 186, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Reports of the Department of Veterans Affairs and of the Canadian Pension Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 9 of the Department of Veterans Affairs Act, chapter 80, and section 4(2) of the Pension Act, chapter 207, R.S.C., 1952, including the Report of the War Veterans Allowance Board for the same period. (English text).

Copy of amendments made by the President and Puisne Judges of the Exchequer Court of Canada to the General Rules and Orders of the Exchequer Court of Canada, dated November 4, 1964, together with copy of a subsequent amendment, dated December 3, 1964, pursuant to section 88(2) of the Exchequer Court Act, chapter 98, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Statement prepared in the form of Schedule "Q" to the Bank Act, showing Composite Current Operating Earnings and Expenses of the Chartered Banks of Canada for the financial years ended in 1964, pursuant to section 119(1) of the said act, chapter 48, Statutes of Canada, 1953-54. (English and French texts).

Report of the Commissioner of Penitentiaries for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 30 of the Penitentiary Act, chapter 53, Statutes of Canada, 1960-61. (English text).

Copy of the Canada Gazette, dated Monday, February 8, 1965, containing the Proclamation of the National Flag of Canada. (English and French texts).

Copy of Ordinances, Chapters 1 to 6 inclusive, made by the Commissioner in Council of the Northwest Territories, assented to November 12, 1964, pursuant to section 15 of the Northwest Territories Act, chapter 331, R.S.C., 1952, as amended 1953-54, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1964-1938, dated December 10, 1964, approving same. (English text).

Copy of Ordinances, Chapters 1 to 14 inclusive, made by the Council of the Yukon Territory, assented to December 4, 1964, pursuant to section 20 of the Yukon Act, chapter 53, Statutes of Canada, 1952-53, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1965-49, dated January 6, 1965, approving same. (English text).

Report of the Auditor General to the House of Commons for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Public Accounts of Canada, Volumes I, II and III, and an Abridged Version thereof, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 64(1) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report of Operations under the Export and Import Permits Act for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 26 of the said act, Chapter 27, Statutes of Canada, 1953-54. (English and French texts).

Order in Council P.C. 1965-215, dated February 9, 1965, authorizing under section 21 of the Export Credits Insurance Act, a revised contract of insurance originally approved by Order in Council P.C. 1964-455, dated March 26, 1964, by the Export Credits Insurance Corporation to cover the sale of aircraft parts by The de Havilland Aircraft of Canada, Limited, to Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc., Santa Monica, California, U.S.A., pursuant to section 21B of the said act, chapter 105, R.S.C., 1952, as amended 1960-61. (English text).

Order in Council P.C. 1965-232, dated February 11, 1965, authorizing under section 21A of the Export Credits Insurance Act, long-term financing by the Export Credits Insurance Corporation of engineering and procurement services from Montreal Engineering Company, Limited, Montreal, Quebec, and for the export of power generation and transmission equipment from Canadian exporters for use in connection with the Kota Dam Power Project in the State of Rajasthan, India, pursuant to section 21B of the said act, chapter 105, R.S.C., 1952, as amended 1960-61. (English text).

Capital Budget of The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority for the year ending December 31, 1965, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1965-247, dated February 11, 1965, approving same. (English text).

Capital Budget of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for the year ending December 31, 1965, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Consolidated Index and Table of Statutory Orders and Regulations published in the Canada Gazette, Part II, for the period January 1, 1955 to December 31, 1964. (English and French texts).

Statutory Orders and Regulations published in the Canada Gazette, Part II, of Wednesday, December 23, 1964, January 13 and 27, February 10 and 24, 1965, pursuant to section 7 of the Regulations Act, chapter 235, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report of the Operations under the International River Improvements Act for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 11 of the said act, chapter 47, Statutes of Canada, 1955. (English and French texts).

Copy of Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Inter-American Development Bank to provide for the administration by the bank of funds made available to the bank by the Government of Canada for economic, technical and educational assistance to Latin American Countries, Members of the Bank. Signed at New York, December 4, 1964. (English and French texts).

Final Report of the Royal Commission on Health Services (Chief Justice Emmett M. Hall, Chairman), Volume II, dated December 7, 1964, together with Press Release. (English and French texts).

Copy of Economic Surveys—Canada—by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development—Paris, December, 1964. (English text).

Preliminary Report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism, dated February 1, 1965. (English and French texts).

Copy of White Paper intituled "The Amendment of the Constitution of Canada", dated February, 1965. (English and French texts).

DIVORCE

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, presented the committee's reports Nos. 685 to 736, inclusive, and moved that the said reports be taken into consideration at the next sitting.

He said: Honourable senators, since from behind me I have just been asked as to where we stand in connection with these matters, I think this is the appropriate time for me to make a statement to the house on the general statistics of our work in the committee.

The Commissioner, under the new act, commenced his hearings on January 7, 1964, and between that date and December 17, 1964, which honourable senators will recollect was the date of our adjournment for the Christmas vacation, the Senate Divorce Committee passed 736 of the Commissioner's findings.

On December 17, 1964, the Chairman of the Senate Divorce Committee had considered and approved a further 119 of the Commissioner's reports, making a total in all since January 7, 1964—which you will realize is a period of a year and two months—a total of 855 reports approved by the committee or by its Chairman.

I should explain that during the recess the reports of the Commissioner have come to me personally, and I have read them and marked my approval. They will be submitted to the committee itself on Thursday next for general approval.

Hon. Mr. Farris: Have any been rejected, overruled or turned down?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: That is hardly a fair question, for two reasons. In the first place, there has been the closest co-operation between the Commissioner and the Chairman of the committee, and while I have referred back, on my own responsibility, quite a large number of cases, there has been none of the 855 cases tried in which we, the Chairman and the Commissioner, have not reached a unanimous conclusion.

Hon. Mr. Farris: What is unfair about the question?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Because the word "rejection" seems objectionable. We have done our best not to reject cases. There have been cases—I cannot give you the number—which, when the evidence has been insufficient, we have actually rejected. But it is very seldom, and for two reasons. One is that the rules are very clear with regard to the evidence it is necessary to present, and those rules have been in existence now for a long time. The profession, in the Province of Quebec mostly, has become familiar with what will pass and what will not, and it is seldom now that counsel brings a case before us that is unacceptable. Sometimes the evidence is not sufficient. In quite a number of cases—and I can give you that number in a moment—now pending an adjournment is given for the purpose of presenting further evidence.

Over and above the 855 reports above mentioned, a further 50 petitions have been entertained by the Commissioner and adjourned for adjudication or further evidence. That is the answer to your question, senator. That means that we have tried nearly 1,000 cases since January 7, 1964, bearing in mind there are some that have some details to be cleared up.

Petitions not contested and ready for trial number 300 or thereabouts. Contested cases ready for trial number 48. Of that total of 348 cases, 6 contested and 57 uncontested have been listed for hearing up to date.

It now takes about six months only from the date of filing of the petition for the case to be heard and passed by this chamber. So we are caught right up on the backlog, which answers the question asked by Senator Burchill.

No one has any grounds now for complaint at the long delays that had been so prevalent in the past. I am very pleased indeed at the efficiency, skill, knowledge and wisdom of our Commissioner, and above all, the spirit of co-operation between himself and the committee, chiefly as represented by its chairman. It has been very satisfactory, and I am under the impression that he has achieved a fine reputation in the district from which he comes and from which most of the cases arise.

Motion agreed.

CANADA PENSION PLAN BILL

THIRD REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE TABLED

Hon. Muriel McQ. Fergusson, Joint Chairman of the Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons appointed to consider Bill C-136, to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors, tabled the third report of the committee.

MOTION TO PRINT AS APPENDIX TO MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

Hon. Mrs. Fergusson moved, with leave of the Senate, that the third report of the Joint Committee be printed as an appendix to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

Motion agreed to.

CANADA COUNCIL

NAME, DATE OF APPOINTMENT AND QUALIFICATIONS OF PRESIDENT—INQUIRY ANSWERED

On the Notice of Inquiry of Hon. Mr. Pouliot:

1. What is the name of the Chairman of the Canada Council and on what date was he appointed?

2. Is he a man of letters? If so, what are the titles of his books and where and when have they been published?

3. Is he a painter? If so, in what city and when did his first exhibition take place?

4. Is he a sculptor? If so, to what school does he belong and where were his works exposed?

5. Is he a musician? If so, what instrument does he play?

6. In what cities and on what dates were his concerts given?

7. Does he make any records and if so where can these be bought?

8. Is he a chartered accountant or an auditor? If so, what degrees does he hold and by whom were they granted?

9. What was his occupation, calling or his profession, prior to his appointment?

10. If he is neither a man of letters, a painter, a sculptor, a musician, nor a chartered accountant, why has he been appointed in preference to an artist?

Hon. John J. Connolly: The answer to the honourable senator's inquiry is as follows:

1. Jean Martineau was appointed Chairman of the Canada Council by Order in Council (P.C./732) on May 14th, 1964, for a term of five years expiring May 18th, 1969.

2. No.

3. No.

4. No.

5. No.

6. See answer to 5.

7. No.

8. No.

9. Lawyer, Queen's Counsel, and business man.

10. In accordance with the recommendations of the Royal Commission on National Development in the Arts, Letters and Sciences (The Massey Commission), the Canada Council is as much concerned with the humanities and social sciences as it is with the arts. The Chairman of the Council thus requires great breadth of knowledge and depth of experience, coupled with administrative ability. The Government is satisfied that Mr. Martineau is very well qualified to conduct this wide-ranging enterprise.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—ORDER FOR SECOND READING STANDS

On the Order:

Second reading of Bill S-16, intituled: "An Act to amend the Marriage and Divorce Act". (Honourable Senator Pouliot).

Hon. Jean-François Pouliot: I would like to know what progress has been made by the Government to submit the bill to the Supreme Court of Canada, if you please.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I can only tell the honourable senator and honourable senators here that the matter to which he has referred is still under advisement, and as soon as I have word about the decision I will communicate it to the honourable gentleman and to the Senate.

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: Honourable senators, I wonder how you say it in English—I presume there is a saying to the effect that, "Hope springs eternal."

Hon. Mr. Croll: Under active consideration.

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: Then I will ask to let it stand until April 12.

An Hon. Senator: What year?

Hon. Mr. Choquette: April 1 would be more appropriate!

Order stands.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, March 3, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America terminating the Notes of December 28, 1962 for the establishment and operation of a command and data acquisition station in Canada to serve an operational meteorological satellite system being established in the United States (Nimbus). Ottawa, February 4, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America providing for the continuation in force beyond April 1, 1964, of the Agreement recorded in the Exchange of Notes of July 3 and 13, 1962 in relation to the Welland Canal. Ottawa, March 31, 1964. (English and French texts).

The Indus Basin Development Fund (Supplemental) Agreement, 1964. Washington March 31, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America amending the Agreement of September 27, 1961 relating to the Continental Air Defence System by cancelling the proposed gap filler radar program. Ottawa, May 6, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America constituting an Agreement on International Satellites for Ionospheric Studies (with a Memorandum of Understanding) (ISIS). Ottawa May 6, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of Peru constituting an Agreement permitting amateur radio stations of Canada and Peru to exchange messages or other communications from or to third parties. Lima, May 8, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America concerning the phasing out of certain radar stations of the Continental Radar Defence System within Canada. Washington May 25, 1964. (English and French texts).

Agreement between the Government of the Federal Republic of Nigeria and the Government of Canada regarding the terms and conditions of service of Canadian Armed Forces Personnel on secondment to the Nigerian Armed Forces. Lagos, June 25, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America relating to the Agreement of March 9, 1959 concerning the Tariff of Tolls on the St. Lawrence Seaway. Ottawa, June 30, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of Denmark providing for the continuation of the training program in Canada for Aircrew Personnel of the Royal Danish Air Force. Ottawa, June 30, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of Norway providing for the continuation of the training program in Canada for Aircrew Personnel of the Royal Norwegian Air Force. Ottawa, June 30, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany concerning the exchange of information relating to Defence Science. Bonn, August 21 and 28, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of Japan providing for the entry into Japan of Canadian Citizens and the entry into Canada of Japanese Nationals either without visa for limited periods or with visas for extended periods and for designated purposes. Tokyo, September 5, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United Kingdom concerning the Status of Canadian Forces in Bermuda. London, September 11, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America regarding the construction, operation and maintenance of a Loran-C Station and a Monitor Control Station in Newfoundland (with Annex). Ottawa, September 16, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of Denmark providing for the mutual recognition of certificates of registry or other national documents denoting tonnage of merchant ships. Ottawa, October 15, 1964. (English and French texts).

Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America extending through the 1964-65 winter season the provisions of the Agreement of March 6, 1954 for the winter use and maintenance of portions of the Haines Road in British Columbia and Yukon Territory. Ottawa, November 27, 1964. (English and French texts).

Agreement concerning Automotive Products between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America. Signed at Johnson City, January 16, 1965. (English and French texts).

Report of the Department of Industry for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 16 of the Department of Industry Act, chapter 3, Statutes of Canada, 1963. (English and French texts).

Report of the Department of Fisheries for the year ended December 31, 1963, and the Financial Statements of the Department for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 8 of the Department of Fisheries Act, chapter 69, R.S.C., 1952. (English text).

Copy of a list of certain recommendations of the Royal Commission on Government Organization (Glassco Commission) approved by the Government on February 9, 1965. (English and French texts).

Report of the Board of Trustees of the Maritime Transportation Unions for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 16 of the Maritime Transportation Unions Trustees Act, chapter 17, Statutes of Canada, 1963. (English text).

Copies of correspondence exchanged during the period December 11, 1964 and January 21, 1965, between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premiers of the Provinces with respect to the question of jurisdiction over off-shore mineral rights. (English and French texts).

Order in Council P.C. 1964-1931, dated December 10, 1964, withdrawing from entrustment to the Canadian National Railways and authorizing the grant of Letters Patent covering approximately 8.26 acres of Transcontinental Railway land, pursuant to section 19 of the Canadian National Railways Act, chapter 29, Statutes of Canada, 1955. (English text).

Order in Council P.C. 1964-1936, dated December 10, 1964, withdrawing from entrustment to the Canadian National Railways and authorizing the grant of Letters Patent covering approximately 17,960 sq. ft. of Railway land at Mileage 0.89, Moncton Wharf Branch, Springhill Subdivision, pursuant to section 19 of the Canadian National Railways Act, chapter 29, Statutes of Canada, 1955. (English text).

Order in Council P.C. 1964-1982, dated December 17, 1964, withdrawing from entrustment to the Canadian National Railway Company and authorizing the grant of Letters Patent covering 14.27 acres, more or less, of the abandoned Placentia Subdivision of the Canadian Government Railway, Newfoundland, right-of-way, pursuant to section 19 of the Canadian National Railways Act, chapter 29, Statutes of Canada, 1955. (English text).

Order in Council P.C. 1964-2029, dated December 23, 1964, withdrawing from entrustment to the Canadian National Railways and authorizing the grant of Quit Claim Letters Patent covering 2.39 acres of abandoned Station Grounds property at Chatham, N.B. pursuant to section 19 of the Canadian National Railways Act, chapter 29, Statutes of Canada, 1955. (English text).

Order in Council P.C. 1965-34, dated January 6, 1965, withdrawing from entrustment to the Canadian National Railway Company and authorizing the grant of Quit Claim Letters Patent covering approximately 6.047 acres of abandoned Canadian Government Railways right-of-way land in the City of Moncton, N.B., pursuant to section 19 of the Canadian National Railways Act, chapter 29, Statutes of Canada, 1955. (English text).

CANADA LABOUR (STANDARDS) CODE BILL

SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne) for the second reading of Bill C-126, respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses.

Hon. Lionel Choquette: Honourable senators, I rise to indicate at once my support in principle of Bill C-126, realizing that the details can be safely left for consideration in committee. I congratulate Senator Donald Smith on the clarity and thoroughness of his explanation.

The purposes of the bill, long commended by the International Labour Organization, command the support of all parties and of the people of Canada. It is an omnibus bill, a so-called package deal, bringing within its four corners four major areas of working conditions—hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations, and specific holidays with pay. As the short title states, it is a Canadian labour standards code, and enjoys the blessing of the Canadian Labour Congress and the Confederation of National Trade Unions.

At the same time, we must realize that this measure has a quite limited application and covers only a small percentage of the total labour force in Canada. It applies only in respect of the employees of such national industries as are under federal jurisdiction. It does not apply to any employees under provincial jurisdiction, nor does it apply in terms to the employees of government departments or corporations.

With regard to the latter, I understand that an assurance has been given on behalf of the Government that the minimum standards set out in the bill will, following its enactment, be adopted as a matter of policy with respect to government employees. However, we know that policies as well as governments often change, and that this is doubly true of government policy. It seems to me that the requisite safeguards should be enacted in positive legislation and not left to the shifting sands of policy. I hope, therefore, that we may expect further legislation extending in clear terms the application of the proposed code.

What I have just said applies with equal force to employees in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon. There is no reason of which I am aware why these employees should not enjoy the superior advantages to be afforded by this legislation. It is, of course, not our business to interfere with the several provincial labour codes. However, the proposed national code does represent a distinct advance over existing codes, and we may at least express the hope that it will have an early and exemplary effect on such codes across the country.

I must further point out that the bill should be advertised as entirely new. It combines four measures, two of which are new and two of which have been previously enacted. I say this, not in criticism of the bill, but to emphasize that we must inevitably build upon what has gone before. Most good legislation is at once progressive and conservative. Also we must understand that if we pass this bill we will not be legislating for eternity.

The principle of the bill is that reasonable standards should be maintained for the working force. What these standards are to be can only be determined for the present. This is the kind of bill which will be subject to review and amendment from time to time, in the light not only of theory but of what is possible and practical.

I now propose to discuss very briefly the four principal areas of the proposed code.

First, as to hours of work, the proposed code provides for a basic 40-hour work week, and, where overtime of an additional eight hours is allowed, time and a half of the regular rate is to be paid. Work in excess of 48 hours is to be allowed only under exceptional circumstances by special permit. This is essentially recommendation No. 16 of the 1962 International Labour Conference. I believe that while this may seem an adequate maximum for now, it will not be long before amendments seeking a shorter work week will be introduced, either by the present government or by another government which, I suspect, may shortly succeed it.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Have you a new crystal ball?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: No; he is still using the old one.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Second, as to minimum wages, an hourly rate of $1.25 applicable throughout the country is proposed, and deductions for food, lodgings, equipment, etc. are to be authorized by regulation. The rate is to apply to persons 17 years and over. Here again, I regard this minimum as adequate for the present, but there is even now a clamour for $1.50 an hour from organized labour. Nevertheless, the present proposal is for a higher minimum than that established in any province and, while there may be some short-term difficulties encountered by some industries, I feel satisfied that it will, both from a social or humanitarian and an economic point of view, promote the well-being of many Canadians, and that it will have an exemplary effect in relation to the large percentage of the labour force not covered by this legislation.

I do not quarrel with the provisions requiring two weeks' holidays with pay. This portion of the bill incorporates most of the provisions of the Annual Vacations Act passed in 1958, with the qualification that only one year's continuous employment is required before an employee can qualify. This I would regard as no more than normal attribution.

As to the provision for special holidays with pay, this will, I think, be accepted by most, though there may be a difference of opinion, as there has been as to what specific days should be "included out."

The bill should benefit the working force both in its actual and exemplary effect.

This legislation was not referred to a committee in the other place, where representations could have been made by different organizations whose interests were adversely affected by the bill. Consequently, these organizations, which are quite numerous, were obliged to submit briefs pointing out the hardships that would be imposed on a certain class of employer were this bill to have been passed in its original form.

The trucking firms, operating interprovincially, were violently opposed to the original form because they claimed that this bill as first drawn would make it impossible for them to compete with firms operating intraprovincially, because the latter would not be subject to the conditions imposed by the bill in question.

Honourable senators, I am sure you have all received copies of telegrams addressed to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Labour and others. I would ask you to be patient with me while I read from the briefs or telegrams that were sent to each one of us. When an organization, or an industry or an association forwarded such telegrams and briefs, they did so on behalf of several companies. I have here a submission to the Hon. A. J. MacEachen regarding Bill C-126, submitted by the Motor Transport Industrial Relations Bureau of Ontario on behalf of 15 companies. I also have here a telegram which is almost a call of distress. It was forwarded by the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario Incorporated on November 25, 1964, to the Right Honourable L. B. Pearson, the Honourable A. J. MacEachen, and the Honourable J. W. Pickersgill. It reads as follows:

> Whereas the House of Commons has before it Bill C-126, an Act to establish the Canada Labour (Standards) Code:
>
> And whereas the road transport industry is the only industry affected by the bill which is regulated by both federal and provincial authorities;
>
> And whereas the proposed Code would apply to the entire operations of trucking companies having part of their operations crossing provincial or international borders and not to competitive carriers operating solely within a province;
>
> And whereas this discrimination would create a serious competitive disadvantage for extra-provincial carriers who also compete with carriers to whom the Code does not apply;
>
> And whereas the proposed Code would create a chaotic labour situation and a drastic curtailment in transportation services now being rendered by extra-provincial carriers affecting both the truck owners, their employees and the shipping public;
>
> And whereas service is the only commodity offered by our industry;
>
> Be it resolved that The Automotive Transport Association of Ontario meeting in annual convention this 24th day of November, 1964, requests the federal Government to amend the Canada Labour (Standards) Code by exempting the extra-provincial trucking industry;
>
> And be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Right Honourable L. B. Pearson, the Honourable A. J. MacEachen, the Honourable J. W. Pickersgill, all members of the House of Commons and the Senate.

So that right here, honourable senators, in this telegram is perhaps one of the easiest amendments we could make to this act. It would be easy to say that this act shall not apply to transport or trucking companies who do business interprovincially. However, these people will have an opportunity to make representations, and we will see what, if any, amendments we can make to the bill.

I have here another message from the Shipper-Motor-Carrier Conference, Palliser Hotel, Calgary, Alberta, of Thursday, November 26, 1964. This has been addressed to me for my perusal.

> Resolved by the Joint Shipper-Motor-Carrier Conference held in the Palliser Hotel, Calgary, Alberta, Thursday, November 26, 1964, that the Motor Carrier Industry be excluded from the provisions of Bill C-126 because of the impracticability of the application of the rigid provisions of hours of work contained therein and the increased cost of transportation against the public and national interest. Also, that the Motor Carrier Industry be excluded because of the unfair conditions of competition created by the act in regard to extra-provincial and intra-provincial carriers who are in competition within the confines of one province.

Now, dozens of such briefs, telegrams and messages were sent out, and I am wondering if the bill is as favourable as it appears on the surface.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Are any of the employees objecting, or are they all employers?

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Well, these are associations. They do not purport to speak on behalf of the employees.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: No, I bet they don't.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: They have employees, and some of them will go bankrupt and have to close their doors if this code is applicable to them. Surely, the employers will be the ones who will be suffering a little more than the employees.

I like the attitude of my honourable friend (Hon. Mr. Roebuck) who has always spoken for the underdog. I am the champion of the underdog too, but we must be practical and see that the underdog has a living. This is the most serious part of the bill. These companies are numerous, and they all make the same type of representation.

I will spare honourable senators from having to listen to my reading another letter from a company that says it will go bankrupt. This is Security Storage Company Limited, writing on behalf of itself and its trade association. The letter ends with these words:

> Obviously, therefore, if the interprovincial trucking industry is to be included in the provisions of this bill, and not to be the object of discrimination, efforts towards standardization of Federal and Provincial Labour Codes must come before not after its passage.

That was in answer to the Minister of Labour who had said, "We will deal with the provinces after the passage of this bill."

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): If the honourable senator will excuse my interruption, I think most of the representations he has been reading were in fact made before the amendment was made in the other place to clause 51. I know that that is not a complete answer to the point he is making, but I should like to mention it.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: I am quite prepared to say that. As a matter of fact, I have read the dates on each telegram, letter and brief, and it is obvious that these representations were made before the amendment was passed. I will deal with the amendments shortly, because I think they are so minor they are almost insignificant, and are not at all helpful to these people. We do not know if they will be of benefit to these people who have complained until we hear their representations in committee.

I was reading this concluding passage:

> Obviously, therefore, if the interprovincial trucking industry is to be included in the provisions of this bill, and not to be the object of discrimination, efforts towards standardization of Federal and Provincial Labour Codes must come before and not after its passage. Otherwise one segment of an industry and its employees, because it happens to operate interprovincially, will be singled out and made the object of legislation which can only be described as oppressive, inequitable, and unjust. I appeal to you and your colleagues to consider these factors before pursuing the matter of the passage of this bill any further, particularly keeping in mind that they apply also to many other firms across Canada.

That letter is signed by C. G. Harris, president.

After many such representations had been made to the minister certain amendments were made to the bill, the most important of which, I would say, is the amendment to clause 51, affecting Part I of the bill. But, we have no assurance that this amendment is acceptable to the people who have protested about Part I.

As I understand it, any industry or any group of employees affected by the Labour Code must make two applications or submissions, if these are found necessary. The first submission will have to be made immediately upon the coming into effect of the bill, and that is a submission for a deferment of 18 months. During that period of 18 months, if they find they cannot comply profitably or otherwise with the provisions of Part I, then before the 18 months are up they must apply to the minister under clause 35 to have an inquiry conducted into their particular industry. If the minister finds that a proper case has been made out, he can by Order in Council except the application of this bill, in either whole or part, to the industry concerned.

The only part of the trucking industry affected by this bill would be that which crosses provincial boundary lines in the course of its operations. This measure affects the entire operation of any particular company, even though only 2 per cent of its operations may be interprovincial. Up until 1954 the trucking industry was entirely under federal jurisdiction, when an act was passed giving the provinces the right to license transport trucks.

All honourable senators are in favour of mother and apple pie, and against sin.

Hon. Mr. Croll: Apple pie with cheese.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Well, that is à la mode.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: The kind that mother made.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Yes. I am no exception. Accordingly, as I have said, I will support the motion for the second reading of this bill.

Having said that, I hasten to add that it is not enough that a measure appeals to our sense of idealism. We must also be satisfied, as responsible legislators, that it is as practical as possible; that it will work without causing undue hardship to anyone. It is an historic function of senators to ensure, as far as they can, that each piece of legislation is both fair and practical. I do not agree with the Leader of the Opposition in the United Kingdom, Sir Alex Douglas-Home, who is reported to have remarked on one occasion that "Canadians always study a question from all sides, including some that aren't there." It is a prime function of the Senate, which it has discharged well, to see to it that the rights of third parties are protected and that any legislation proposed is as eminently fair and practical as possible.

This is conservatism—but, I hasten to add, conservatism with a small "c". As honourable senators know, I never talk politics on the floor of the Senate.

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, Oh!

Hon. Mr. Choquette: In this regard I agree with the illustrious Senators Raoul Dandurand and Ross Macdonald, who often stated in this house that while we are territorially arranged along party lines, such lines are not severely drawn in this chamber. While, as political beings, we may at times feel partisan impulses, we manage to keep them under reasonable control and on leash.

I am also constrained to observe—and again I quote Senator Ross Macdonald—that the duty of the Senate in considering legislation originating in the House of Commons stands out in even sharper relief when there is a minority government in power in this country.

In the light of the foregoing, it seems to me that there is a real need for a reference of this bill to a standing committee of the Senate, preferably the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce. This is because no opportunity has been afforded in the other place or in any of its committees, for persons or organizations, who may consider themselves adversely affected by the present legislation, to be heard.

It is true that representations have been made to the Government since the consideration of the bill in committee of the whole in the other place was adjourned on October 19, 1964. As Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne) has said, some of us have received copies of some of these representations, but the question is: Are these people satisfied that they have received fair treatment? I cannot speak for them. They must have an opportunity to speak for themselves. The committees of the Senate, which are our principal tools of trade, provide the best possible forum in such matters. They are concerned only with what is in the best interests of all the people of Canada. I know that some amendments have been made to the bill as drafted as a result of the representations that have been made. Many of these, though minor, have been ameliorating, and I am sure the bill that now reaches us has been improved as a result. I am referring now to the amendments to clauses 7, 14, 21, 27, 28, 31, 33, 52 and 53. I shall not deal with these specific amendments at this time, although I understand some other honourable senators will do so during the course of the debate.

One amendment appears to be of greater importance than the others, and here I am referring to clause 51, which introduces a greater degree of flexibility so far as the application of Part I, hours of work, is concerned. However, with respect to the amended bill as a whole, I cannot speak with authority for those who are affected, nor can any honourable senator so speak, and it cannot be said with confidence that they are either satisfied or should be satisfied.

Honourable senators, I support this motion, on the clear understanding, for the reasons I have given, that the bill will be referred to a standing committee so that the Senate may exercise its traditional function as a responsible and alert Upper Chamber.

In conclusion, honourable senators, may I commend to your attention two statements that I believe are apposite at this time. It was said by Sophocles:

> Without labour, nothing prospers.

And by Ruskin:

> God intends no man to live in this world without working; but it seems to me no less evident that He intends every man to be happy in his work.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, it will take me only a few minutes to express what I have to say in connection with this bill. The very first thought that comes to my mind is to congratulate the honourable sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne) for the really magnificent explanation he gave us of it last evening. It was clear, it was concise, it was orderly, it was logical and it was in every respect an excellent exposition. I congratulate him on it.

My next thought is to congratulate my friend across the floor, for the very moderate approach that he has made to the bill and for the fact that he proposes to support the bill, at least on second reading. This, as he says, is not a political dog fight that we conduct in the Senate—far from it. We have our political leanings and our political principles, but they are toned down by the overshadowing consideration of the public interest.

Honourable senators, I am particularly interested in this bill, because for nearly all my life I have advocated better conditions of labour and have taken part in many labour organizations and affairs. When my friend speaks about the hardships of the bill as applied to the trucking industry, I naturally think about the employee rather than the employer; but it must not be forgotten that the employer in the trucking business is in a competitive business and if all his competitors are affected in the same way by a provision in this bill, competition will make adjustments so that he will stay in business and does not need to be afraid.

However, I would like to point out that the trucking industry is supplied at public expense, as is perhaps no other industry in Canada is supplied, with one of the main factors of its existence, that is, the roads. The chief competitors of the trucking industry are the railroads, who are required to build their own road beds, lay their own rails, and maintain them at immense cost. The truckers are given finished, bonded-surface roads, over which they carry their materials. If it should occur—though I am not admitting that it will —that the limitation of hours of work should cause some slight additional expense, that can be soon adjusted by the natural forces of competition. They need not be afraid.

I am interested in the bill also in that its title is the Canada Labour (Standards) Code. Gentlemen, that carries my mind back some 30 years to the time when the Liberals took office in the Province of Ontario under the Honourable Mitchell Hepburn. I was given the Attorney Generalship and also appointed a Commissioner of Hydro. I added to that, at my own request, the Ministry of Labour. I did so for the purpose of introducing what I had at the back of my mind, an industrial standards bill. I devised that bill. I called many of the employers before me, as well as the employees, and we produced what is now on the statute books of Ontario as the Industrial Standards Act.

Before I took office, I was for many years engaged in the practice of law, and represented parties largely in the needle trades in the City of Toronto. In those days we could gather some employers together and enter into an agreement with their employees, but at great cost. With every revision of the agreement, we had battles in the streets of Toronto. Those were really street battles between the representatives of the employers and the labour unions.

I came to the conclusion that if I ever had any control over such matters in Ontario, I would provide that when a certain percentage of employers agreed with a stated percentage of employees on some industrial standards, I would make those standards apply to all employers and employees in the industry. I did so. The last battle in the streets of Toronto was fought prior to the passing of that act, and we have never had another such battle since then.

It has produced a settled condition, particularly in the needle trades, that has impressed even the succeeding governments. I have been told that Prime Minister Frost once stated that the one asset which he got from the previous administration was the Industrial Standards Act. I asked him if he had made that statement, and he in silence consented to it.

Honourable senators, we have now another industrial standards bill. True, it is slightly different. It states the hours of work, the wages, and so on. I do not intend to go into detail, as these have been covered satisfactorily by Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne). It lays down certain minimum standards, and that is the important thing.

I am interested also in the division of responsibility. Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne) told us that those industries under provincial control by reason of the British North America Act would be subject to legislation along those lines by the provincial legislatures. That interests me because, in 1946 I personally argued the Hours of Labour Act before the Privy Council in England, as to the respective jurisdictions of the dominion and of the province. I have been interested in that point ever since, as it involved a most intensive study and an argument which went on for a considerable time, and a judgment that was most specific in this matter. That case is now the leading case as to the division of responsibility between the federal Government and the provincial governments. For that reason, I am still very much interested in that division.

In yesterday's discussion it was stated that 10 per cent of the entire labour force of Canada would be covered by this bill. Of that 10 per cent, some 10 per cent actually would be beneficially affected. This was an estimate. Somebody on this side of the house threw cold water on the extent of application of the bill. The estimate is one per cent of the labour force. To my mind, were one, not one per cent, protected from excessive hours and excessively low wages, this bill would be worth while.

Honourable senators, starvation wages and long hours are something to be avoided in our civilization. That is particularly so in the trucking industry, where long hours are not in the public interest. I hope these new provisions will not cause inconvenience to the trucking industry, but if they should, I hope the industry will make every effort to comply with this legislation. A truck driver, tired, sleepy and weary from his work, is a menace on our roads. Eight hours is long enough for anyone to drive a motor vehicle. I hope the whole industry will agree with that principle and conform to the provisions of the bill. Generally speaking, long hours and insufficient wages should be avoided.

We in this chamber are mature enough to remember what took place in the great depression of the thirties. At present things are moving very nicely for us in Canada; we are in boom times, although a large number of people are out of work, but nothing like we had in those days. My friends will all remember the squeeze that hard times placed upon the labour force, when men and women worked in factories and other industries long, long hours at wages far below the subsistence level. We are well off now, but nobody knows when that kind of a depression will recur. This bill will be one of the means to combat that kind of attack, because it will be impossible to lower wages beyond a certain industrial standard, and in all probability, under such circumstances this measure will be a God-sent blessing to Canada.

I want to congratulate the Government on this bill. I think it has taken some courage to attack this question of hours and wages, holidays and conditions of work. That has been done boldly. The bill is comprehensive; it has not avoided the issue; it has attacked it squarely, but it has done so moderately, and I think it has done it practically and effectively. I can see in it great public benefit.

I have already congratulated the sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne). I congratulate the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) on having the privilege of introducing this bill, and in due season I will congratulate the Senate on passing it.

Hon. Gunnar S. Thorvaldson: Honourable senators, I do not propose to prolong this debate to any great extent. I merely want to make a few remarks in regard to it.

I wish to add my word of congratulation to all who have spoken on the bill, particularly its sponsor (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne), who last night made an excellent explanation of the bill. I think it is safe to say that very few, if any, members of this house disagree with the principles of the bill in the large sense. After all, we are aware of the fact that all the provinces of Canada within their own jurisdictions have dealt with the questions involved in this bill. In other words, every province has established to its own satisfaction, to fit in with its requirements, climatic, territorial and otherwise, labour codes dealing with the problems dealt with in this bill. Consequently, it would be presumptuous of me or, I think, of anybody, to oppose the principle of this bill. The fact is that there are certain segments of labour which do not come within provincial jurisdiction, but are instead within the jurisdiction of the federal Government.

However, may I say that the first complaint I have of the bill—and it is not in principle but in detail—is that its enactment and the way it has been done, and, as I see it, the way it has been prepared, is an example of unco-operative federalism. My reason for saying that is that, as I have just indicated, all the provinces have legislated in regard to these matters within their own jurisdictions. I believe it would have been most beneficial, if, before embarking upon this proposed legislation, the Minister of Labour had had a conference with the ministers of labour of the provinces, with a view to uniformity in respect of the provisions of this bill with the legislation of the various provinces. I am not saying that there could have been complete uniformity, either in regard to the minimum wage or other matters. I do say, however, that in my belief it would have been most beneficial to the federal Minister of Labour if that had been done. In the result, we have a federal code which in many respects varies greatly from the various provincial labour codes.

That is the first criticism I have of this bill, honourable senators. It is not a serious one. It does not affect any question of principle, but it is a criticism.

My other criticism also relates to details of the bill, some of which have been referred to by my colleague Senator Choquette. It is the manner in which this bill adversely affects, or could affect, some industries in this country. Consequently, I am somewhat concerned about the fact that this bill was not sent to a committee in the other place, as I think it should have been. I am certain that the details, to which I shall refer, and some to which my honourable colleague Senator Choquette has referred, could have been thrashed out, and indeed ironed out and settled satisfactorily in such a committee.

Consequently, I am hoping that there will be no effort in this house to rush the bill through. On the other hand, it is my desire, and I am sure that of all other senators, that the bill be referred to the Senate Banking and Commerce Committee. Various interests across Canada have made representations to the Minister of Labour and to the Cabinet, and I hope those interests will have ample opportunity to appear before a committee of this house.

The Leader of the Government in the Senate (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) referred a moment ago to section 51 of the bill, which was amended presumably for the purpose of satisfying some of the representations made to the Minister of Labour and the Cabinet. I want to say, however, that in my judgment the amendment made to section 51 is wholly inadequate to meet the submissions that have been made by various industries of this country. Indeed, all that section does, as I see it, is to provide a delaying period of 18 months, and simply gives absolute ministerial discretion in certain very important matters which I think should be within the discretion of Parliament and not the minister.

I have made these few remarks in a preliminary way, to urge my point of view that section 51 is not a cure for some of the ills of this bill.

Senator Choquette referred to the trucking industry.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Before the honourable senator moves on to his next point, and not wishing to upset his trend of thought, will he advert to subsection 2 of section 51? I mention this because he refers to the fact that there is an 18-month deferment. However, that deferment can be much longer under the provisions of section 51 (2), can it not?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes, I will agree to that. But the fact remains that it is still a matter of ministerial discretion; in my judgment, the very lives of certain industries might be at stake in this bill. So, I say that there are defects in the bill which I think can and ought to be cured by Parliament—and that is where the Senate should admirably fit into this situation.

Here we have a bill, the general principle of which I think we agree to, but which I suggest requires amendment in some details. I say these are details, but for the industries concerned they may be extraordinarily important.

As I said, my honourable colleague referred to the trucking industry. He read you the telegram sent to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Labour and the Minister of Transport by the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario on November 25.

In similar vein, I would like to refer to a press release dated November 30 last which stated, in part:

> Charles Crossett of Toronto, chairman of a special labour legislation committee of The Automotive Transport Association of Ontario and the Canadian Trucking Associations, said 40 per cent of all trucking companies in Ontario may be forced to curtail operations outside the province.

That might or might not be true, but it is rather a bold statement and, consequently, if Mr. Crossett means what he said in this press release, I think he would want to appear before the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce to make his representations to us.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: It is not true.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Well, it may not be. However, he made some other statements to which I would like to refer briefly. The press release continues:

> He released an ATA telegram sent to Prime Minister Pearson which said the proposed labour code "would create a chaotic labour situation and a drastic curtailment of truck services."
>
> The telegram urged that trucking companies operating across provincial boundaries be exempt from the code which is now before Parliament.
>
> The code would apply to extraprovincial carriers but exempts competitive trucking companies which operate solely within the province.

Honourable senators, that is a serious matter and a situation which we perhaps could deal with by amending the act in some way. He said:

> . . . legislation setting up the code would supersede existing union agreements, and provincial laws governing hours of work.

Naturally, it will supersede provincial laws regarding hours of work in those industries that come under federal jurisdiction.

Then he said:

> The trucking industry is not opposed to the minimum wage requirement of $1.25 an hour in the proposed code because most employees now receive considerably more.

Quoting further from this press release:

> In citing one company which would be affected by the code, he said 150 drivers who now earn from $6,500 to $8,500 a year, would be restricted to an earning power of $6,132.

The press release continues for another page, but I simply cite these excerpts as examples of Mr. Crossett's argument, and I am assuming that he will appear before the committee.

I now read a news item from the Globe and Mail of December 15, 1964, which is headed: "Claim New Labour Bill May Tie Up Halifax." This is a Canadian press despatch from Halifax. I cite this merely to indicate the types of operation that may be adversely affected by present provisions of the code and which, I think, might be cured in the Senate without prejudice to any interests.

I would like to read the first few paragraphs, which are very brief:

> Waterfront officials representing both workers and employers said yesterday the federal labour standards bill now before Parliament threatens Halifax with its biggest shipping tieup.
>
> Dock workers here often work as much as 70 hours a week during the busy winter season to keep cargo moving and ships from being delayed.
>
> The bill, they said, would mean that all port workers under federal jurisdiction would be prohibited from working more than eight hours overtime a week. This would affect most waterfront workers including stevedores and freight handlers.
>
> Harry Mathers, chairman of the Halifax Steamship Committee, said both the committee and the Halifax Longshoremen's Association (CLC) have sent protests to Labour Minister Allan MacEachen.

Then the article continues in similar vein.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That is a case of employees protesting.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes, that is a case of employees protesting; but I do suggest there are reasons why employees should protest against certain sections of this bill, particularly in cases where business is seasonal, where it comes on with a rush and then is quiet for days, weeks and months on end.

I come now to the main problem I would like to present to this house, and it is that of the elevator companies in western Canada. I am not speaking only for the private elevator companies, but I believe I am also speaking for the co-operative elevator companies, such as United Grain Growers, and for the wheat pools.

I understand that all these interests made representations to the Government, first to the Minister of Labour and then either to the Cabinet or to a committee of Cabinet, in regard to the position of the elevator operators of western Canada.

As I am sure every honourable senator knows—and, I might say, if the honourable Senator Crerar were here he would display much greater knowledge of these matters than I have—many years ago the elevator industry of western Canada was declared to be a work for the benefit of Canada under the provisions of our Constitution, and consequently elevator workers and operators come within the scope of this bill.

I say to you, honourable senators, that this industry has real problems, and if I were satisfied that these problems were suitably dealt with under section 51 I would not be making these remarks. However, I do not believe they are. In the second place, I think their situation is so serious and important that it is something that ought not to be dealt with simply by a minister alone, but that it is a condition which ought to and can be dealt with by Parliament.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Or a board?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: No. I mean by Parliament, namely, that an appropriate amendment might be made by the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce of the Senate. I believe we might be able to find a solution to this problem satisfactory both to the elevator companies and their employees, and that consequently we would have stability in that industry and not make their operations subject to the discretion of a minister in respect to this matter.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: May I ask my honourable friend, as a matter of interest, what is the particular problem which faces the elevator companies in connection with this bill?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I am just coming to that, Senator Hugessen. In stating that problem, if I may, I would like to refer somewhat extensively to a brief presented by the elevator companies to the Minister of Labour and, I believe, to members of the Cabinet.

I want to explain first, however, that I do not know whether this brief was presented only by and on behalf of the Northwest Line Elevators Association, representing private elevator companies, or whether this group making representations included the pools. I do know, however, that the pools made representations to the Government along identical lines to those of the private elevator companies.

I would like to read for you the first paragraph of a letter written to me, and which is neither personal nor confidential. It is from one of the great co-operative companies of the west. The part which I wish to quote reads as follows:

> This is in reference to our brief conversation last evening concerning the proposed labour standards as prescribed by Bill C-126.

This refers to a conversation I had with the president of this company in Winnipeg.

Hon. Mr. Leonard: May I ask the name of the company?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes, the name is United Grain Growers Limited.

Part I of the bill limits working time to eight hours in a day and forty hours in a week. This, we feel, cannot effectively be applied to country grain operators because firstly, it is not possible to define clearly when a country operator is working and secondly, there is no way of keeping track of hours spent on elevator operations and other operations on the premises conducted on an agency or commission basis. The suggestion of averaging hours of work over a fifty week period is no solution because of the reasons just mentioned.

The use of a second shift at country elevators would be entirely impracticable as men with the necessary experience are not available. Further, the elevator operator is bonded, having custody of grain stocks in many cases of a value of one-quarter of a million dollars or more; the elevator operator is responsible for the grades and weights thereof and he could not be expected to jeopardize that responsibility by transferring custody of the grain stocks periodically to a temporary second shift.

The bill in its present form is in some conflict with the Canada Grain Act which latter requires a country grain elevator shall be open to receive grain at all reasonable hours. Any regulation which will interfere with the producer's opportunity to deliver grain will impose an unwelcome hardship on a large number of producers and also could seriously affect the flow of grain to commercial positions.

We have recommended amendment to Part I of the bill along the following lines:

> This part does not apply to or in respect of an employee who is in charge of and is responsible for the care, custody and control of any work or undertaking or an integral part thereof declared by the Parliament of Canada to be for the general advantage of Canada.

I know you are fully aware of the implications of the bill in so far as country grain operations are concerned and hope you will give the foregoing suggestions your earnest consideration.

I may add that I spoke to Mr. Driscoll, who is the president of this company a few minutes ago, just before I came into this chamber. I called him for the purpose of asking him if the amendments that had been made to Bill C-126 in the other place dealt with their problem, and he told me that as far as he knew they did not do so.

Now, honourable senators, this letter really gives the gist of the problem faced by the elevator companies. However, I would like to quote from the brief that was presented to either the honourable the Minister of Labour or the Cabinet by the Northwest Line Elevators Association. I do not intend to read the entire brief, but I shall quote some of the pertinent paragraphs so that honourable senators may understand what I am talking about in regard to these matters. I may say that I am very happy that Senator Lambert is in the house this afternoon, because he of all people will have firsthand knowledge of the matters of which I speak through his close association with the grain trade in western Canada in his earlier days. I quote from the very beginning of the brief, dated October 20 last, where it reads:

> Bill C-126 is wholly incompatible with the expeditious handling and movement of the Canadian grain crops into consuming markets for the following reasons:
>
> Under the provisions of the bill, country elevators would be compelled to confine their operations to a 48 hour week.
>
> The operator of a country elevator, while to all intents and purposes a manager, under the provisions of the Canada Grain Act the country elevator agent is specified as an operator of the elevator. The Canada Grain Act states that the owner or lessee of a country elevator may be called a manager of a country elevator.
>
> The elevator operator is bonded and responsible for the grading, receipt into the elevator and custody of the grain in the elevator. The elevator operator must be highly specialized in the grading of some hundreds of different grades of various grains. This is one reason why shifts are impractical without greatly increasing handling costs to the farmer. At times, grain in his sole custody could be worth as much as half a million dollars. The operator is licensed by the Board of Grain Commissioners and the Board holds him responsible for the correct weighing of grain. Should he have what is called excessive overage he is liable to be called before the Board and unless he has a satisfactory explanation his licence can be withdrawn and his livelihood as an elevator operator jeopardized. This can happen if his overage reaches as little as ¼ to ½ of one per cent.
>
> For these reasons in the foregoing paragraph it is impractical to operate the elevator under shifts. To operate in shifts would be the same as operating a bank in shifts without counting the cash between shifts.

> The elevator companies, Pool, Line and U.G.G. do not oppose the minimum wage or holiday provisions of the bill. However they do contend that the hours of employment provisions are completely incompatible with farming operations as they are practised in western Canada today, and in the foreseeable future.

Now, honourable senators, it would appear from this paragraph that this is a joint submission of the private elevators, the pools and the U.G.G.

Honourable senators, I do not intend to quote much more from this submission because it refers to various details—

Hon. Mr. Lambert: May I ask my honourable friend if the Canadian wheat producers and the U.G.G. jointly made representations on the basis indicated?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: That is my understanding.

Hon. Mr. Lambert: Before the committee of the other house?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: No; there was no committee of the other house. I may not be completely correct, but my understanding is that the submissions were first made to the minister and then to a committee of the Cabinet. Certainly submissions were made to a committee of the Cabinet. From this brief it would appear that the submissions were made on behalf of the line elevator companies, the pools and the United Grain Growers. Let me add this, however, whether that statement is correct or not, I know the pools and the U.G.G. have taken exactly the same stand with regard to this bill as the line elevator companies.

Hon. Mr. Lambert: Am I right in assuming that administrative responsibility for the grain elevators, whether Canadian wheat producers or U.G.G., come under the Department of Trade and Commerce and the Minister of Trade and Commerce rather than the Minister of Labour?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes; it comes under that department by virtue of being under the Canada Grain Act, which I understand is now under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

May I just read the following paragraph:

> Section 109 of the Canada Grain Act provides that the country elevator must be kept open at all reasonable hours to receive grain from the farmer. What the farmer would consider reasonable hours would be wholly incompatible with the 48-hour week provided by the bill.
>
> The rush of work at the country elevator does not continue throughout the year. There are long periods when the country elevator operator has little to do. When quotas are full and his elevator is filled with grain with no movement out of the elevator, the operator is left pretty much to his own devices. He may, or may not, be at the elevator. Most towns are small enough that the farmer will have little trouble locating the operator either at home, at the curling rink, at a ball game or elsewhere in the town. Their habits are well known to the farmer. He can be found, but not necessarily at his place of work.

Honourable senators, may I add just this, that any one who has had anything to do with the grain trade of western Canada is aware of the fact that it is a "rush" business at certain seasons of the year, namely, from about the middle of August to, say, the end of December or January. The period between February and the first or middle of August is a very quiet time, during which the elevator operator is required to spend little, if any, time at his elevator. He probably is not at his elevator at all during those months, but is somewhere downtown or in the village. If a farmer desires to make a delivery on a certain day during this period of slackness, he will know where to find the elevator operator.

I have read these excerpts from the U.G.G. letter and this brief for the purpose of indicating some of the real problems that face this industry in this country if the bill is passed. I want to repeat that I do not think it is good enough to leave the solution of these problems to a minister, no matter how farsighted, wise and tolerant he might be. As everyone knows, there is a huge investment involved in carrying on the grain trade of western Canada, and in my opinion the grain trade is entitled to know what its responsibilities are under a bill of this kind. That decision should be made by Parliament, not by a minister.

That is all I have to say, honourable senators. I hope that this bill, when it goes before the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, will go before it at such a time as will give anybody who is interested in appearing before the committee an opportunity of doing so.

Hon. David A. Croll: Honourable senators, I want first to indicate my appreciation to Senator Donald Smith for the clarity of his presentation last evening in moving second reading of this bill. That is what I expected from him.

I share with Senator Choquette his complimentary approach and approval, and I share his understanding of the problems that are involved in the administrative aspects of this bill, but, on the other hand, I associate myself fully with this bill.

In so far as Senator Thorvaldson's presentation is concerned, submissions were made to the minister, to a committee of cabinet, to the Prime Minister, to the Leader of the Opposition and, indeed, to all the opposition leaders, and consideration was given to those representations, particularly as they affected the elevator grain trade and the truckers, and some amendments were made which I think are very useful. I am sure that all these people who made representations will have an opportunity of making them again before the committee of the Senate that will be considering this bill, for in that respect I share the view of Senator Choquette that this bill should go to a committee. Perhaps we can at that time cure what needs curing in this bill, if it is curable—and I hope it is.

My approach to this bill is such that when I read it I was encouraged, and when I see the bill before me now as passed by the House of Commons I get a lift out of it. For that reason I want to take up a few minutes of the time of this chamber in which to talk about it. Some of the matters that are dealt with in the bill at the present time did not appear to be readily achievable in the early days of my political career.

I like the title of this bill. It is a very useful one. The short title is the Canada Labour (Standards) Code. The bill deals with four matters—hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses.

I do not think it has as yet been said that this bill is a notable event in the history and evolution of labour legislation in Canada. It breaks new ground, for this is the first time that the federal Government is being asked to enact standards in important fields hitherto unoccupied, and this bill will fill a conspicuous gap in the field of labour standards in Canada. More particularly, it breaks new ground in establishing standards in the field of wages and hours; moreover, it brings together within one enactment at least four major areas of work standards—hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay. I know of no enactment or law on this continent or elsewhere that is as comprehensive in coverage as is this particular bill.

I gather correctly its further purpose is that in future, when modifications are desired in the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, it might be referred to as the Canada Labour (Relations) Code, and in the field of safety the caption might be the Canada Labour (Safety) Code; thus, it might be possible to bring together in a single labour code all the enactments of Parliament affecting the rights and obligations of Canadian labour under federal jurisdiction.

The objective of the bill is the establishment of minimum labour conditions for employees in undertakings within the legislative authority of Parliament. Here I was struck particularly by a phrase used by Senator Thorvaldson and which I copied down, namely, "unco-operative federalism". I think he applied that in asking why the minister did not discuss this bill, or its principles, with the ministers of labour of the various provinces. I have news for Senator Thorvaldson. The minister did, and he has said so on many occasions. I am sure that Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne), if he looks at the notes that were sent over to him, will be able to give the date.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: If he did he was very unco-operative with them. I can assure you of that.

Hon. Mr. Croll: No, that is not so. As a matter of fact, at the meeting with the ministers of labour the proposed legislation was discussed in general terms—it could not be discussed in any other way—and there was general agreement as to the need for progressive labour standards and an acknowledgment of the existing gap in the federal field. The Minister of Labour for the Province of Manitoba was there, as were all the other ministers for the Prairie provinces which would be affected, and also the Minister of Labour of the Province of Nova Scotia. So, if there appeared to be any insurmountable differences they might very well have been brought to their attention and discussed at that time.

It is a fundamental principle of the proposed legislation that it combines provisions dealing with four basic labour conditions, as well as with related matters. This has been done so that employees within our jurisdiction will be assured, as a matter of right, of as high a standard in these four basic labour conditions as is within present reach. The standards proposed for the code are very simple, but they are worth repeating because they are historic—a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour; a standard eight-hour day and a 40-hour week; overtime hours to be paid for at the rate of time and a half and limited to eight hours a week; eight general holidays with pay per year, and two weeks' annual vacation with pay.

The proposed labour code will cover employment on, or in connection with, any work, undertaking or business that is within the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada. That includes mainly transport and communications, banking, uranium mining, grain elevators and certain works carried on by federal corporations. It is good to have these various elements of the labour code wrapped in one package. In due course there will be a companion act, which will be known as the Canada Labour (Relations) Code. Then all the labour legislation will be incorporated into the Canada Labour Code. This bill gives a lead to the provinces, where the minimum wages have ranged from 50 cents to $1.25 an hour in some groups. The only minimum law now applicable for $1.25 an hour is in the highly industrialized area around Toronto, known as the Golden Horseshoe, where, in the light of this legislation, they have already legalized the minimum $1.25. The effect is already felt there; there was need for a strong voice, and the strong voice was heard some time ago, and with good effect.

Though this legislation will apply legally and specifically only to employees who come under federal jurisdiction, employees across the whole country will benefit. This legislation is good for labour across the country and it is good for Canada. The minimum wage of $1.25, which has been set here, will directly affect about half a million workers. If it affects nearly half a million workers, and if you multiply that by 3.9, which is the average family number according to the last census, you readily appreciate that it affects a very great number of people. It cannot be denied that it will have an important influence in raising the substandard wages across the nation. When the Government expands the legislation to cover workers employed by firms which receive contracts from Ottawa, that will considerably increase the number of people under the umbrella of the code.

Moreover, the bill comes at a very appropriate time. The establishment of national standards, the Canada Pension Plan, with a portable pension in the wings, will encourage workers to move between different regions and occupations, when employment conditions call for mobility. This is a good piece of legislation, as has already been said by members on both sides of the house, in that it puts a floor under some of the lowest paid workers in the country and sets an example for the provinces, which legislate for far more workers than does the federal Government.

Until such time as we have acceptable minimum standards which can be enforced for all workers, we should not rest easy.

This bill goes a long way to establish a sound economic basis for all Canadians. Though it does not do anything for the better-off majority who possess union negotiating strength, it does help the minority. It can and should be viewed as an instrument of social policy, in that it aims to create more jobs and raise living standards, and this will in good time bring uniformity across this country.

We have had ample assurances that the implementation will be realistic, taking into account the immediate impact on some groups. The bill has ample provision for permitted deferment and averaging, to lessen hardship where adjustments are necessary, yet the enforcement provisions are both concise and clear.

Honourable senators, from the social point of view the benefits of this legislation are self-evident. Economically, this country will gain both in the short and in the long run. This is an excellent package deal for all Canadians, and I hope that the Senate will take the opportunity to endorse it as quickly as possible.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, coming from an area where a considerable number of people will be affected by this bill, I would like to take this opportunity to say a few words in respect to it. I think it has been covered very well, without any doubt, as the sponsor gave a clear explanation of it, and what criticism has been raised was for the purpose of clarification.

Originally, there were some misgivings about stevedoring and some occupations which will come under this legislation. For example, I mention the Port of Halifax. This port has the good fortune to be open all winter and during that time the stevedores are very busy. The port at North Sydney, for instance, which is a terminus of the Newfoundland ferry, is not open all winter. Consequently, there are times when the backlog of freight will pile up and it will be necessary for stevedores to work long hours.

I should explain that the stevedoring situation is very different in Halifax in that the stevedores there work for private firms, while in the port of North Sydney, for example, they are C.N.R. employees and as such are covered by the union agreement. Part of the agreement was that after eight hours a man, if he wished, could work overtime at regular rates when the work was available—that is, apart from holidays, at time and a half. I think the objection they had to that would be taken care of by the averaging-out provision which has been mentioned. Probably the climatic conditions would take care of the situation, in that a man, when work is available, works longer hours, and there are times when he would not be able to work at all.

I expect that the same thing is true of the agreement between the unions and the C.N.R. ferries. Under that agreement the seamen on those ferries are on duty for two weeks and then they are off for two weeks. In other words, they work for two weeks and are off for two weeks, but they are on duty all the time during those two weeks. I would think the averaging-out principle should take care of any misgivings in regard to less take-home pay.

Personally, I am in favour of the bill. I think everyone is.

On a point of information, I notice in section 12 there is reference to persons under the age of 17 years—that such a person can work only with the permission of the minister, or some words to that effect. I wonder why that age was chosen. I believe they are mostly of high school age, and after 16 you find these people wanting to go on the labour force. Also, although my recollection is not clear as to this, I believe that the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in compiling its figures for employment and unemployment, uses an age limit of under 17. As a matter of interest, I am wondering why that is done.

Now may I be pardoned for wandering for a moment from the bill now before us? It will be recalled that last night when the sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne) explained the bill, he mentioned the fact that a minimum wage law or regulation had recently been put into effect in Nova Scotia. He used the highest figure, which is $1.05. Actually, they felt it necessary to divide the province, as it were, into three parts, with the rates going from $1.05, $1 and 95 cents. This was only done after a board had been set up which, may I say, included people of various shades of political opinion. They held public hearings all over the province. The people of whom the board was composed were anxious to have that minimum wage as high as they felt it to be possible and practical under the circumstances, and those were the figures they finally recommended. There is a differential between the wages paid to men in industry, as distinct from women.

Honourable senators, my point is this: it has been mentioned by previous speakers that a commitment has been made by the Minister of Labour that there also be amendments brought into the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, and that this would be necessary as a consequence of the passing of this bill. If you look at that act, it will be seen that generally speaking the minimum wage is $1.25, but that the working week is 44 hours. The common expression used for the policy set out under that act is the prevailing rate of wages. In other words, "fair wages" are defined as wages which are generally accepted and current for a competent workman in a district in which the work is being performed. That meant, for example, Government contracts covering construction, demolition, remodelling, and things of that type, but did not cover the purchasing of goods. In contracts of that type there would be a clause put in that the wage rate had to be a certain amount.

In the industrial areas of Nova Scotia the wage rate is $1.25 an hour, and this had to be put in those contracts. However, the prevailing rate of wages was the standard. Therefore, if the construction had been done in an area where the prevailing rate was, say, 90 cents an hour, then that would be the rate put in the contract for government work. I would like to see them go one step further. They are to amend the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act to provide that the wages, no matter where, must be at least $1.25 an hour. In some of the industrial areas of Nova Scotia the wage rate, of course, is much higher than $1.25. However, even if the act is so amended, I would like to see a further clause which would provide for a standard rate for all of Canada, and thus do away with the prevailing rate practice. For instance, on a Government contract, if the standard in Ontario is $2.50 an hour, then in Nova Scotia the same rate would prevail.

Hon. Mr. Isnor: May I ask the honourable member whether he is referring to the Nova Scotia act, or the federal bill now before us?

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): Actually, senator, I am through with the Nova Scotia act, and I am not talking about the bill now before us, but rather of the amendment which we assume is going to be brought in to the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act in due course.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: You are not referring to the Nova Scotia act?

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): No. I am referring to the federal act, and I am expressing the hope that the rate will become standard. It will be seen that in that way we could raise the wage rates in our province.

The sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne) mentioned that approximately 5,500 people would perhaps have their wages increased by the passing of this act, and I have a deep suspicion that a goodly number of those people live in the Atlantic provinces. If for federal Government contracts they would do away with this prevailing rate business, so that the wage rate would be the average or normal rate throughout Canada, I think it would have a tendency to increase the general wage rate in the area. As I understand it, the purpose of this bill is not just to say: You must pay $1.25, and you must work no more than 40 hours a week.

From arguments and statements I have read, I think they want the rate to be higher than that; they want to set an example, to encourage the bringing in of other minimum rates up to that point in places where the rates are below.

Therefore, when this new amendment is brought in, if they would do away with the idea that in federal Government contracts the wage rate would only be that prevalent in the area, and set a higher rate which might be the national average, I believe it would also set a very good example and be beneficial in bringing up the rate. Perhaps they could begin with works carried on by the Government of Canada in the national parks. I have not the figures before me, but I understand that the rate paid in some of the national parks for labour is higher than in others. In cases where a person is doing exactly the same type of work as another, I see no justification for one employee being paid higher than another, just because he is working in a different part of Canada.

Honourable senators, I simply throw out these remarks. This is not a new problem. The idea of prevailing rates has been going on for many years. I think the suggestion I have offered would help Nova Scotia and perhaps all the Atlantic provinces.

Honourable senators, thank you for allowing me to digress in this way. I feel sure that this bill will be acceptable and will have beneficial effects. Personally, I support the bill.

Hon. G. Percival Burchill: Honourable senators, before the sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne) concludes the debate, I understood the honourable Senator Macdonald to be proposing the idea that there should be a general wage rate on Government contracts throughout the dominion, regardless of the prevailing rate in each locality. I wonder if the honourable Senator Smith, in his reply, will be good enough to tell me if this bill will have any effect on civil servants working for the Government in different sections of Canada.

I have in mind, for instance, civil servants who are working in ammunition depots across Canada. I understand they are covered by union agreements, but the wage rate is based on the prevailing wage in each section of the country. For instance, I believe the rate in the Maritimes does not compare favourably with that in British Columbia.

Now, I am just speaking from general information and I may not be correct. Will this bill effect that situation? That is what I want clarified.

Hon. Mr. Croll: No, it will not.

Hon. Donald Smith: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if the honourable Senator Smith speaks now it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): Honourable senators, first I must confess that I was rather embarrassed by the praise lavished upon me. It was gratifying to hear it, but, as I said to my colleague close by, I think I have heard enough of this.

Perhaps I should not be saying anything now. Despite the old adage that declares that when you are winning you had better quit, there are a few points to which I would like to refer. May I begin by referring to the latest question raised by Senator Burchill, and tell him that the bill has nothing directly to do with civil servants' salaries or minimum wages in the civil service, nor does it have anything directly to do with rates of pay under contracts entered into between individuals and companies and the federal Government. The Government has made a commitment on this. Some of these minimum standards have been adopted and others will be adopted by the operations of the Civil Service Commission.

With regard to improvements—and I think it is time for improvements, on the basis mentioned by my friend—the Fair Wages Act will be amended as soon as possible in order to establish the same minimum standards for the operations of the contracts which are presently covered under the Fair Wages Act.

While I am on this subject, I may say that I am quite in sympathy with some of the remarks made by my colleague from Nova Scotia, Senator Macdonald (Cape Breton). It does not seem fair that those doing the same work in our national parks should be paid less in one part of the country than another. My feelings towards this particular problem are personally involved at the present time, since it has already been announced that a new national park will be established in the beautiful lake country which lies half way across the province, at a point where I make my home.

Honourable senators, I want also to thank those who participated in the debate. I believe it has been useful, and there are not many questions I have to answer. However, I would like to refer briefly to the reference my friend Senator Choquette made to the inclusion of the Yukon and Northwest Territories in the terms of the act.

My understanding of that situation is that for some years past acts of this nature have never been made to apply in the same way as they do in the case of other federal operations. I understand this is because of the philosophy or thinking by which the Yukon and Northwest Territories are treated as though they were provinces. Therefore, their own government—the Government of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon territory, which is the Territorial Commission —has the power to provide the kind of minimum labour standards which it believes to be suitable in relation to the northern circumstances. Their position in that respect is the same as that of any other province.

As I indicated last night, my own province has recently raised its minimum labour standards considerably, and this has been gratifying. The minimum was raised to a figure which it was felt suited the province's particular circumstances. Of course, this matter may be reopened when the bill is referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce—and I am glad to hear other honourable senators suggest it should go to committee, because that is the opinion I expressed last night.

Senator Macdonald (Cape Breton) also raised a difficult question which, it appeared to me, he put in the form of: When is a boy a boy, and when is he a man? I do not know any more about it than he does. He is used to these big six-foot-six Cape Bretoners who reach that height when they are about 13 years of age. Perhaps the minimum age should be 13 in the part of Nova Scotia from which he comes. But it is a good question, and I would like it referred to those who have chosen this age of 17 years rather than some other.

Senator Macdonald (Cape Breton) also referred to what I had put on the record with regard to the new rates in Nova Scotia. If he looks at the record he will see that I compared eggs with eggs, and not eggs with apples, because I was comparing the women's former rate in urban areas with the present rate, which represents an increase of at least 50 per cent.

I was going to have something to say about the use of the phrase "unco-operative federalism," but Senator Croll has taken care of that and I do not want to bear on that further. However, I think I should clear up the confusion that exists in Senator Thorvaldson's mind with regard to co-operative federalism.

Last night I placed on the record the fact that a meeting of the provincial ministers of labour and the federal Minister of Labour had been held in the spring of 1964—that is the phrase I used last night—and from reports I have received it was a most satisfactory meeting. Also as I said last night, at the conclusion of that meeting general agreement was expressed as to the need for progressive labour standards, and they also acknowledged the existence of the gap in the federal field which was going to be filled.

I have since received further information on the matter. In fact, there were two conferences. One was a three-day conference attended only by provincial ministers of labour and the federal Minister of Labour. Then, following that, I think in November or December of last year, there was a meeting of the provincial deputy ministers of labour with the federal deputy minister and his officials. So, really there has been considerable co-operation and worthwhile discussion on the bill itself.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Will the honourable senator allow me to ask a question on this subject? Is he aware whether or not there was any meeting of minds in regard to the details of the federal bill and the various provincial bills? And, is he aware whether there is in fact any similarity between them in very many respects?

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I am not clear as to what my friend is getting at. Does he mean to say, do I know whether there was a discussion on the exact amount of the hourly wage rate, and that sort of thing?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: No. Can he say whether there was agreement in regard to such things as hours of work, minimum pay per hour, and so on?

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): Honourable senators, my understanding of the matter is that there was complete discussion, and I have no way of finding out really, and I do not think it would be wise to make public the exact conclusion arrived at or the technique adopted to arrive at it.

There was another point—and it may be a good point, but I just do not happen to think it is—brought up by my friend Senator Thorvaldson, when it seemed to me he suggested that there should be a common standard provincially and federally. I believe that is a very difficult goal to attain. It depends on the basis upon which you are going to place that standard.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I do not think I suggested that.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I looked up some records on this a few minutes ago. If the basis of his own province were to be the common standard, it does not come anywhere near the present standard in the province of Nova Scotia, let alone the present federal standard. If he were to take an average of all minimum standards of wages across the country, we would arrive at something much less than $1 an hour, and no minister in his right senses would try to recommend that to his colleagues without thinking of the reception he would get in the House of Commons if he did it on that basis.

I do not wish to take any more time. I am happy to know the points that are of interest to members on both sides of the house. I am sure the operation of the grain trade and the trucking industry can be discussed when the bill goes to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, and we will all be glad to hear their representations. Let us hear all sides of the story, and let us come to what we would all consider to be a fair judgment in the matter.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: When shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): Honourable senators, I move that this bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, I am sure we are all very pleased that this bill is to be referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce. I think a very strong case has been made out that companies wishing to be heard by that committee should be given every opportunity to do so.

I have heard rumours that there might be a meeting of that committee this evening. Whether this meeting would be to discuss the bill or not, I do not know. I have also heard that the committee will sit again tomorrow morning. If that is the case, and if any sections were passed in the meantime, it could mean that those people who would like to present a case before the committee would not have a full opportunity of doing so. I would like an assurance from the Leader of the Government that every opportunity will be given to any organization that wishes to appear before this committee to be heard and present its case.

Hon. Salter A. Hayden: Honourable senators, requests have been received from organizations to be heard, and I know that representatives of at least one such organization are at present in town, because they were notified when the matter was raised some little time ago that when the bill had passed the Commons this would probably be the manner in which it would be dealt with.

It is proposed that there should be a meeting this evening at which the departmental officers will be heard. What I shall suggest there is that we examine the bill section by section, but that we shall not commit ourselves to passing any particular section. Then, tomorrow morning there are at least three groups, and there may be more, who propose to be heard, and of course we shall hear them. After we have heard them and whatever argument they wish to present, we will deal with the bill section by section and consider whether each is to be carried or amended. The proposal, as I have said, is that we should sit at 8.30 this evening to hear the departmental officers.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: In case there are other organizations besides the three to which my honourable friend refers, and I feel sure there will be more, will they also have an opportunity of appearing before the committee?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: My friend is asking me to speculate now. The practice in the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce has been to hear any person who wishes to be heard and makes his wishes known. We do not go out with subpoenas to corral witnesses.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: You are going to follow the procedure you have outlined?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Yes.

Motion agreed to.

DIVORCE

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of reports of the Standing Committee on Divorce Nos. 685 to 736, inclusive, which were presented yesterday.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, reports adopted, on division.

PRIVATE BILL

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA—MOTION FOR ADOPTION OF REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce on Bill S-20, to incorporate the Bank of British Columbia.

Hon. Salter A. Hayden moved the adoption of the report.

He said: Honourable senators, in view of the fact that this report was made to the Senate on December 16 last year, it might be in order if I were to read it to you. It is as follows:

> The Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce to which was referred the Bill S-20, intituled: "An Act to incorporate Bank of British Columbia", has in obedience to the order of reference of June 9, 1964, examined the said bill and now reports that in the opinion of your committee the preamble to the said bill has not been proved for the following reasons:

At the hearings before the committee, the Premier and other Ministers of the Government of the Province of British Columbia appeared in support of the bill and stated that, if the bill were passed, the government of that province would subscribe for up to 10 per cent of the shares to be issued by the bank; so far as your committee is aware, there is no precedent for the ownership by the government of a province of a substantial proportion of the shares of a chartered bank operating under the provisions of the Federal Bank Act; this could involve the effective control of a federal chartered bank by the government of a province, a situation which would raise important questions of public policy and of constitutional law; your committee is of the opinion that these are matters of general policy which should be determined by the Parliament of Canada in the forthcoming revision of the Bank Act, and that pending such determination this bill should not be proceeded with.

May I add that since that report was submitted, the Minister of Finance, on February 16 of this year, made a statement of policy in relation to some aspects of the revision of the Bank Acts which would go forward in the next session of Parliament. This statement of policy bears on the report of this committee which I just read. It was, of course, heard over radio and on television, and was read in the press, and in substance stated two things which it was proposed to incorporate among all the other clauses which one could expect to find in a revision of the two Bank Acts. These two particular provisions stated by the minister to be proposed for incorporation in such revision were as follows:

1. That no shares of a chartered or savings bank may be registered in the name of any government or its agents.

2. If any transfers of shares of a bank are registered after this date and before the coming into force of the revised Bank Acts, which would have been required to be refused under the revised acts, it will be provided that such shares not have voting rights.

Now, whether the committee of the Senate gave leadership in this direction, or whether this was a course of action which the Government considered quite independently, is a problem on which, I suppose, we might, depending on our point of view, speculate with comfort or otherwise. But there we have a statement which would make it impracticable to deal in any other way with Bill S-20 than that in which it has been dealt with in this report.

Hon. Mr. Farris: Honourable senators, I would like to ask my honourable friend if there has been any question of the constitutional aspect of this proposed legislation.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: I realize my friend's question is a serious one, and he does me greater honour than I am entitled to claim. Since this is a matter of Government policy which has been so stated by the Minister of Finance, I would assume that the necessary constitutional consideration was given to it in that place, but certainly it has not been indicated to me. I do recall, however, in the substance of the statement that the minister made, and which was reported in the newspapers on February 16, he, speaking baldly, said that the exclusive jurisdiction over banks and the incorporation of banks is assigned by the British North America Act to the federal Parliament, and that so far as the Government of Canada is concerned it was going to maintain that responsibility, and not permit it to be eroded in any way.

Hon. Mr. Farris: I would like to ask my honourable friend if that statement was followed by any recognition of section 92 of the British North America Act which gives to the provinces exclusive jurisdiction over property and civil rights?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: I can easily answer that question, since it does not involve any opinion on my part. I do not know.

Hon. Mr. Farris: Does anybody?

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, I should like to say a few words in explanation of this situation. Honourable senators will recall that I opposed this report as vigorously as I could in the Banking and Commerce Committee. I opposed it on the ground that we in the committee, when considering the incorporation of companies, should not undertake to legislate or to lay down principles differing from the law as it now stands.

When we discussed this measure a province could, and can now, buy shares in any bank, and for us to say that one province shall not do so and then allow other provinces to do so is, in my opinion, unfair and unjust.

Now, I did not say what it was implied that I said, at least, if not expressly stated, in some of the newspaper reports, that if we turn down this application by British Columbia on those grounds British Columbia would secede from Confederation. I made no such statement. What I did say was that if we in the central provinces throw roadblocks in the way of progress of the outlying provinces, then I know of no better way of breaking up Canada. That was a general statement, and it did not imply the specific statement that some of the newspapers attributed to me.

Let me be perfectly clear and say that I have never said that I was opposed to legislation prohibiting provincial governments from investing in bank stocks. That is a matter of principle. So long as it applies to all provincial governments and not just this one provincial government, then I reserve my opinion as to whether I oppose it or otherwise.

But, now that the Government has clearly stated its policy with respect to the revision of the Bank Act that will be enacted in the next session of Parliament, which is expected to commence immediately following the close of this session, an entirely different situation presents itself. I still think we should incorporate this bank. So soon as the law is changed with respect to investment by provincial governments in bank stock, then that law will apply to this bank as to all other banks.

The only ground upon which we refuse to incorporate this bank is the statement made to us by the Premier of British Columbia, that the Province of British Columbia intended to buy stock in the bank. That is all. It does seem to me that we should even now incorporate this bank, and allow it to be governed by the powers of the federal Government under the British North America Act to regulate banking in the Dominion of Canada.

However, the time limit is probably rather short. I had intended to move the referral back by this chamber of the report to the Banking and Commerce Committee, but under these circumstances and in view of the statement made by the Government in most explicit terms, I shall refrain from doing so. I do not agree entirely with what we are doing, but in view of what has been done by the Banking and Commerce Committee, and in view of this statement of the changes to be made in the Bank Act, I think it would probably be a surplusage were I to make the motion I have in contemplation.

With these reservations, I shall do no more at the moment.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I also opposed this report when it was before the Banking and Commerce Commitee. I was in favour of the Government's stating its policy regarding the subscription to shares of banks by provincial governments. The Minister of Finance has done that. I assume that when the revision of the Bank Act comes before Parliament there will be a provision prohibiting the subscription to bank shares by provincial governments. I think this report, in these circumstances, should not be accepted because at the last sitting of the committee the Attorney General of the Province of British Columbia appeared and stated that the government of that province was prepared not to subcribe to any shares of the proposed bank until the Bank Act was revised, at which time, of course, it would follow the law as it would then be.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Would my friend permit an interruption?

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Yes, indeed.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Was there anything in that letter which gave the latter part of the undertaking that my friend seems to suggest? I thought the letter said only "until the revision of the Bank Act". In other words, the course of the government of the Province of British Columbia would be determined after that revision.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: I will not quarrel with the interpretation that my honourable friend is giving, but I pose this question: Once the Bank Act is revised and subscription to bank shares by provincial governments is prohibited, how can the government of British Columbia then subscribe to shares in this bank?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: In those circumstances we might very well precipitate a constitutional issue.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Then it could do it in respect of the existing banks, after the act is revised. I do not think my friend is serious in this argument.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: I am as serious as you are.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Well, I doubt that, because I am very serious.

I suggest that this report should be referred back to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, and the promoters be called to appear and indicate whether they are still willing to go ahead with this incorporation under the new circumstances as created by the statement of the Minister of Finance. If they say that they are prepared to follow the law as it will then be, then in accordance with the undertaking of the Attorney General and the government of the Province of British Columbia I think we should give this application for incorporation the same treatment that we gave the other two applications for incorporation, namely, approve it. If we do not, I think it would be unfair, and we would have two measures of justice.

Therefore, I will move, if I may—and I do not know whether I am in order—that this report be referred back to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce so that it may invite the promoters to appear and state their wishes in the light of the statement of the Minister of Finance. If I am not in order in making that motion, I shall then move the adjournment of the debate.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Move the adjournment of the debate.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Honourable senators, in order to be sure about the procedure that should be followed, I will move the adjournment of this debate.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Flynn, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, March 4, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENT TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of Proceedings under the Canada Water Conservation Assistance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 8 of the said act, chapter 21, Statutes of Canada, 1952-53. (English and French texts).

DIVORCE

RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, presented the following resolutions:

Resolution 654, for the relief of Antoine Thomas Daigle.

Resolution 655, for the relief of Marie Micheline Alda Denise Coutu Pare.

Resolution 656, for the relief of Martyn (Martijn) Andre Plaat.

Resolution 657, for the relief of Patricia Ann Charlton Nish.

Resolution 658, for the relief of Frances Strickland Legere.

Resolution 659, for the relief of Joseph Irvin Clayton Laviolette.

Resolution 660, for the relief of Sergei A. Babkin.

Resolution 661, for the relief of Rollande Larrivee Seguin.

Resolution 662, for the relief of Ruth Barbara Ann Sevigny Baldwin.

Resolution 663, for the relief of Libuse Fiserova Leibl.

Resolution 664, for the relief of Joseph Vaglia.

Resolution 665, for the relief of Norma Beryl Crete Yetman.

Resolution 666, for the relief of Lena Bernice Gertrude Cody Kruszelnycki.

Resolution 667, for the relief of Claire Tasse Soucie.

Resolution 668, for the relief of Gwyneth Elizabeth MacKenzie Skuhrovsky.

Resolution 669, for the relief of Lorne Courtney Smith.

Resolution 670, for the relief of Judith (Judy) Mary Crocker Berretta.

Resolution 671, for the relief of Francis William Cunningham.

Resolution 672, for the relief of Cecilia Anne Searle Bowden.

Resolution 673, for the relief of Roderick Michael Doney.

Resolution 674, for the relief of Jean Paul Gervais.

Resolution 675, for the relief of Maria Graup Maximow.

Resolution 676, for the relief of Yetta (Yettie) Zilbert Fleischer.

Resolution 677, for the relief of Mary Claire Faubert Demers.

Resolution 678, for the relief of Lillian Edith Patricia Ferguson Matz.

Resolution 679, for the relief of Monique Miller Gascon.

Resolution 680, for the relief of Monique Helfman Klein.

Resolution 681, for the relief of Shirley Margaret Gallop Letchford.

Resolution 682, for the relief of Muriel White Dwoskin.

Resolution 683, for the relief of Judith Carole Carpenter Griffin.

Resolution 684, for the relief of Jeannine (Janine) Lanctot Delage.

Resolution 685, for the relief of Fay Naiman Richt.

Resolution 686, for the relief of Peter Irwin Crites.

Resolution 687, for the relief of Aime Ouellette.

Resolution 688, for the relief of Yvonne Charlebois Ally.

Resolution 689, for the relief of Muriel Constance Floud Nicholls.

Resolution 690, for the relief of Margaret Irene Jones Whatmore.

Resolution 691, for the relief of Jean Maurice Bailly.

Resolution 692, for the relief of Pauline Lalanne Marcil.

Resolution 693, for the relief of Alexander Stewart Macpherson.

Resolution 694, for the relief of Jeanine Dubeau Klotzbuher.

Resolution 695, for the relief of Daphne Cockburn Rousseau.

Resolution 696, for the relief of Jean Pierre Louis Michaud.

Resolution 697, for the relief of Marie Antoinette Mireille Palin Normand.

Resolution 698, for the relief of Joseph Wenceslas Bernard Pare.

Resolution 699, for the relief of Raymond Belanger.

Resolution 700, for the relief of Ann Fuller Hunt Samson.

Resolution 701, for the relief of Philippe Leo Menard.

Resolution 702, for the relief of Jane Margaret Grace Ogilvie Manson.

Resolution 703, for the relief of Bernice Ostroff Jones.

Resolution 704, for the relief of Blanche Marguerite D'aoust Kalpakjian.

Resolution 705, for the relief of Lise Blais Wong.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these resolutions be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Honourable senators, I move that these resolutions be taken into consideration on Monday next.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, it might be of convenience to all honourable senators if I should say that it is planned to sit tomorrow to consider measures that are before us. It is not planned at this time to sit on Monday. It is intended that the Banking and Commerce Committee, which is now considering Bill C-126, the Canada Labour (Standards) Code, will meet on Tuesday morning next. The Chairman has asked me to say that the meeting will be called for 11 o'clock, subject to the disposition of the committee at a later sitting this day. The Senate will adjourn tomorrow until Tuesday evening next. This may not meet the convenience of all honourable senators, but I hope it will be convenient to most of you. I thought it might be helpful to have this information in advance.

Hon. Jean-François Pouliot: Honourable senators, may I point out to the honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) that the changes made in the timetable of the Canadian National Railways are most inconvenient to members who come from the east, because the morning train leaves Montreal for Ottawa at about 8 o'clock, and the Ocean Limited arrives in Montreal at 8.30. Therefore, members from the east travelling to Ottawa are obliged to go by air or stay in Montreal over night in order to get that early morning train. I do not understand the reason for such a change being made by the Canadian National. But all members of the Senate who live east of Montreal know about it, and many have expressed displeasure at the timetable.

I hope the Leader of the Government will make due representations to the C.N.R. to have it changed when the time comes.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I will do so.

PRIVATE BILL

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA—REPORT REFERRED BACK TO COMMITTEE

The Senate resumed from yesterday consideration of the report of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce on Bill S-20, to incorporate the Bank of British Columbia.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, before the adjournment yesterday I stated the reasons why I suggest that the report of the committee on this particular bill should not be accepted.

Suffice it to say in summary that, to my mind, the grounds stated in the report, that the preamble had not been proven, had already lost weight when the motion was put to a vote before the committee, because the Government of British Columbia had already undertaken not to subscribe to shares of this proposed bank until the Bank Act is revised. And that, furthermore, the same grounds have also lost weight since then because of the statement of the Minister of Finance indicating the intention of the Government, in the coming revision of the Bank Act, to prohibit provincial governments from subscribing to bank shares.

Therefore, under these circumstances, the application for the incorporation of the Bank of British Columbia is on the same basis as the other two applications which have passed this house, and I think it would be discriminating to judge the present bank application in any other way than the two previous ones.

Therefore, as I indicated yesterday, I move in amendment, seconded by the honourable Senator Grosart:

> That the report be not now adopted, but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce for further consideration.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by the honourable Senator Vaillancourt, that the report of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce with respect to bill S-20, intituled an Act to incorporate the Bank of British Columbia, be now adopted.

In amendment, it is moved by the honourable Senator Flynn, seconded by the honourable Senator Grosart, that the report be not now adopted, but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce for further consideration.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: No, no.

Hon. Jean-François Pouliot: Honourable senators, naturally opinions differ, but there is one thing we should all remember: it is that at the present time we have a Constitution which is the B.N.A. Act, and according to that act, banking is under the authority of the Government of Canada. My honourable friend who is learned in the law knows that very well.

What has struck me for the last five years is that we have a Constitution which dates back to 1967—

Some Hon. Senators: 1867.

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: 1867—I am a bit before my time. Everybody criticizes that act, and at the same time they pay tribute to those who drafted it, and those whom we call the Fathers of Confederation. If the people are right in condemning the B.N.A. Act, how can they praise those who drafted it? This is beyond me.

The second point I want to make is that the Constitution is in force now, and the subsection concerning banking has not been amended for nearly a century. No attention is paid to the Constitution, and they are acting just the same as if there were no Constitution at all. It seems to me that in the relations between the Government of Canada and the governments of the provinces they meet together just as if they were private individuals, and as if they were not bound by the Constitution to follow standards and to obey certain rules which everybody knows. And it goes on like that. When our eminent statesmen in Ottawa and in the provinces praise the authors of the B.N.A. Act to the skies, there is no word that they will not use to exaggerate their eulogies, but when it comes to the act itself they say it is bad.

Why do they say that? They pay no attention to it. It is just the same as if it had never been drafted and never put into force. It is in virtue of that false principle that the Government of British Columbia has decided to enter the field of banking. Any private individual, Premier Bennett, or Attorney General Bonner, or anyone else in his or her private capacity, could enter the field of banking, but the province cannot. This is forbidden by the Constitution, and I cannot understand how it is that a man of the high standing of my honourable colleague, with his knowledge of the law in every respect, can sponsor an amendment like the one he has just read to the chamber.

There is great danger in not paying attention to the definite rules stipulated in the Constitution. It is very dangerous and it will lead to chaos.

Honourable senators may be surprised to hear me say this, but I do believe that the Columbia River Agreement was not a good thing. Although it brought millions of dollars from the United States to British Columbia, it showed a trend to capitulate to provincial governments.

I think that it was a bad thing for the Province of British Columbia to sell the Columbia River power ahead of time to the United States. That is my conviction. I did not say anything about it because I did not want to pass for a heretic, and I did not want to be unpleasant. But that was my conviction.

Even if President Johnson came here for the occasion, and there was a great pow-wow, it does not make the thing any better. It was wrong. But, as the Government of British Columbia succeeded in getting that considerable sum of money, it decided to compete with the banking institutions. It was a new step forward, as they may call it.

I was well disposed and open-minded with regard to the Government of British Columbia, but when I thought of it and when I read again the Constitution of our country I said to myself: It cannot be done. It is a heresy and a mistake. The ball has been rolling from the time of the sale of the Canadian power to the Americans, and now it will fatten the capital of the bank if the motion sponsored by the honourable gentleman is agreed to by us.

It will be a mistake. That is my humble opinion. I may be wrong, and those who do not share that view may be right, but I am sincere and I give you a warning for the future, that if the Government of British Columbia succeeds in impressing favourably the majority of the members of the Senate, then we will have a provincial bank run not by Mr. Bennett and not by Mr. Bonner and not by their stooges, but by the Province of British Columbia or perhaps by their stooges in the Province of British Columbia.

I do not agree with many provisions of the B.N.A. Act, but the main one tells the legislative bodies to mind their own business. The Fathers of Confederation told the Parliament of Canada: You will do this, and only this. And they told the legislatures of the provinces: You will do that, and only that. They told the Parliament of Canada and the legislatures of the provinces: Do not encroach upon each other's respective powers. It was wisdom. It is the best part of the Constitution, and it has been ignored for at least 24 years, since the federal-provincial conference of 1941 at which time the spirit of the Constitution was completely forgotten and overlooked.

It may be unpleasant for some to hear what I have said, but why should not the Parliament of Canada, by the voice of the Senate, tell the Premier of British Columbia: "Mr. Bennett, you may be a big man; you may be a powerful man, but you must obey the law just the same as the most humble citizen of this country, and you must do so not only in your private capacity as W. A. C. Bennett but you must do it also as Premier of the Province of British Columbia, in order to set a good example to the country and especially to your colleagues, the other premiers of Canada."

It is superfluous to make a longer speech. I presume that everybody has understood what I have in mind and what I have said. For me it is final, and I consider it my duty to vote against the motion that is before this chamber.

Hon. J. W. de B. Farris: Honourable senators, as the one who sponsored this bill in this chamber, I think it is appropriate that I should say something at this time. I am, quite obviously, supporting the motion in amendment of my honourable friend, Senator Flynn.

The general understanding on second reading of a bill in this house is that it deals with the principle of the bill. It is only on very exceptional occasions that a committee of this Senate will overrule the decision expressed in the motion for second reading.

I understand from my friend Senator Hugessen that that was done in the Coyne case. I had forgotten that. In any event, as I recall it, that was rather an exceptional case. I know of nothing exceptional in this case that justifies the sweeping elimination of the principle that was in the bill and voted for on second reading.

There is a claim that the committee is justified by the pronouncement of the Minister of Finance, that there is proposed legislation to come before the next session to exclude provinces from subscribing for bank shares. I am not sure that that is a ground on which to change the views of the Senate.

In the first place, the Minister of Finance may change his opinion. I understand, if my recollections are correct, that there is a precedent for that.

In the second place, he is not going to do that at this session but at the next session. There may not be a next session. It may be that the present Finance Minister will not have the authority when the time comes to introduce such a bill or, if he is there and does introduce it, it may not necessarily be carried, especially in view of the fact that we have a minority government at this time.

There is another matter which I regard as of great importance in connection with this legislation. You will recall that yesterday I asked the chairman of the committee if the constitutional question had been considered in committee, and I think it was quite clear from what he said that it had not been.

I do not think that we should be changing our views from what has already been voted in this chamber, unless there is a good deal clearer understanding of this constitutional problem. Under the British North America Act, section 91, the Dominion has jurisdiction over banks and banking. That does not expressly confer jurisdiction to take away from a province its rights under section 92. Under section 92 of the B.N.A. Act there is express power delegated to the province, exclusive power, on property and civil rights. If you look at the present Bank Act you will find that it even declares that shares in a bank are personal property.

I have studied these cases briefly at this time and over the adjournment. The law has been settled for a long time. I have before me the decision that was given in the Privy Council in the Grand Trunk Railway v. Attorney-General of Canada case. That was a decision by one of the great judges of the Privy Council, Lord Dunedin. He laid down this proposition and said:

> It is not disputed that, in the partition of duties effected by the British North America Act, 1867, between the provincial and the Dominion legislatures, the making of laws for through railways is entrusted to the Dominion.

The issue there was the right of Parliament, in connection with property, to build a railway. He continued:

> The point, therefore, comes to be within a very narrow compass.

I pause to say that I think that narrow compass is even narrower here in the present case. He continued:

> The respondent maintains, and the Supreme Court has upheld his contention, that this is truly railway legislation. The appellants maintain that, under the guise of railway legislation, it is truly legislation as to civil rights, and, as such, under section 92, sub-section 13, of the British North America Act, appropriate to the province.
>
> The construction of the provisions of the British North America Act has been frequently before their Lordships. It does not seem necessary to recapitulate the decisions.

Then His Lordship cites the decisions, and he concludes that if the legislation of the Dominion overlaps that of the province, the Dominion must prevail.

But there is another ground, and the only ground, as I follow it, that they can adopt here, and it is this—and His Lordship further stated:

> Accordingly, the true question in the present case does not seem to turn upon the question whether this law deals with a civil right, which may be conceded, but whether this law is truly ancillary to railway legislation.

Honourable senators, there is no decision contrary to that, that I know of, and the principle is clear that you have on the one hand banking legislation, legislation in regard to banks and their incorporation; you have equally clear the exclusive power of the province in connection with property and civil rights. There is no doubt—every lawyer here will confirm what I am saying—that the purchase of shares in a bank is property. As I said, it is even so stated in the present Bank Act. Therefore, that is exclusively within the jurisdiction of a province.

In my submission, there is no overriding jurisdiction here under the principle of "necessarily ancillary." There is only one ground on which the Dominion can exercise jurisdiction to take away the rights of a province in regard to buying shares in a bank as property, and that is if it is necessarily ancillary to the Dominion legislation. We have got along without it ever since the Bank Act has been in force. We had no hesitation about it when it was in this house before. My honourable friend the chairman of the committee has conceded that it was not even discussed when the committee dealt with this matter.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Would my friend permit me an observation? I know my friend intends to quote accurately the question which he asked yesterday. The question which I was asked yesterday in relation to constitutionality, used the words "in connection with the proposed legislation." I assumed my friend was referring to the proposed legislation in the revision of the Bank Act, when I answered my friend as I did.

Hon. Mr. Farris: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Now you say you are relating it to the business of the committee, when the committee was looking at this bill. My answer had no relation to that at all, and neither, in my view, had your question.

Hon. Mr. Farris: All right. I repeat what I say, in modified form, which perhaps is a little clearer.

I do not think that the Minister of Finance was competent to pass on this question. He is not a lawyer. The problems should have been considered in committee, if they were not to wipe this all out on the ground of what the Minister of Finance has proposed to do. I say that I do not give a prophecy of what the Supreme Court of Canada may do. I have before given opinions to clients. Sometimes I have been right and sometimes I have been wrong. Every lawyer has had that experience. But I do say this, that it is as close to the line, one way or the other, as any constitutional question I am familiar with in the long history of cases that have come before the Supreme Court of Canada and the Privy Council.. In my own opinion—not the opinion as to what the Supreme Court of Canada may decide—I am unable to see how the courts can deny the province the right to buy shares as an investment, and hold that the right to that power is ancillary to the banking powers under section 91. It is not ancillary, and never has been; and my suggestion is that the policy of the Government on that is not a question of jurisdiction at all, but a question of a political problem.

In those circumstances, honourable senators, it is my respectful submission that this motion to refer the matter back to the committee should be supported, and that before this house should go on record as changing its policy on the ground of what the Minister of Finance has said, there ought to be some mighty definite indications that it is truly ancillary and necessary to federal jurisdiction.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I am not a member of the Banking and Commerce Committee, but I have read the reports of the committee and its discussions on this matter.

I want to say at the outset that in seconding Senator Flynn's motion, I intend no reflection on the committee whatsoever. Indeed, it seems to me that the announcement of proposed amendments to the Bank Act by the Minister of Finance on February 16 last gave support to the attitude taken by the majority in the committee. It may well be that the committee in its deliberations, and the attitude of the majority, has prompted the proposed action on the part of the Government that may go a long way to solving the problem.

Perhaps I should say, first of all, that as I read the report of the committee, it recommends no further action on the application at this time because of the important questions of public policy and constitutional law that are raised by the application.

The minister, in announcing that it was the intention of the Government to proceed as soon as possible with proposed amendments, dealt with both of these matters. He stated, in effect, that it would be the public policy of the Government in future not to allow any provincial government to subscribe for shares of a bank. He did not deal directly with the constitutional question, but indirectly he obviously did, because he suggested that the amendments will be made to the Bank Act.

We have heard here today the opinions of eminent constitutional lawyers—Senator Pouliot and Senator Farris. I think it is not too much to say that these two opinions on the constitutionality of any proposed action by the Government are diametrically opposed. As a layman, perhaps I should say nothing more than that, except that if this proposed legislation were contested in the courts and it was held constitutional, then the work of the committee would have been done. If on the other hand, such proposed legislation was found to be unconstitutional, surely the grounds of objection by the committee would also vanish. If the proposed legislation is constitutional, it disposes of the problem of a provincial government having an interest in the bank. However, if it is unconstitutional I suggest, although I am not a lawyer, that the province would have every right to go ahead and subscribe to the shares of the bank and it would be most unwise for the Senate of Canada, in effect, to take from the province a right that it had under the constitution.

I suggest, therefore, in view of the fact that this announcement by the Government has been made subsequent to the printing of the report of the committee, that the committee, which has already taken a sober first look at the matter, now at least discuss the effect of the anouncement by the minister of these proposed amendments, and in doing so take a sober second look at its own decision.

Hon. Donald Cameron: Honourable senators, I am not a member of the Banking and Commerce Committee, but I listened with a great deal of interest to its hearings with respect to Bill C-20, an act to incorporate Bank of British Columbia. Let me say at once that I have the greatest respect for the Banking and Commerce Committee, which I think is the No. 1 Committee of the Senate. At the same time, I must confess to a certain uneasiness at the decision taken by the committee at the hearing, and that uneasiness has not been mitigated with the passage of time.

As honourable senators know, I live in western Canada where there was a good deal of concern at the time this legislation came up, and that concern remains. The concern is over the fact that, on the one hand, the Senate of Canada recommended that charters be granted to two private banks. As the sponsor of one of those chartered bank bills, I was very happy to participate in that activity. I hope that bank charter will be granted. I must say that I do not like the way the matter is being kicked around in the other house, and I do not think it reflects credit on anybody. I would like to see them get on with the job. However, that is another matter.

The reason for the concern which I share is that many people feel that if the Senate, or the Parliament of Canada, is prepared to grant a bank charter with all the rights and privileges that it contains, to any group of citizens who have the money and are prepared to comply with the provisions of the Bank Act, that is fine. But, when another group of citizens come along, who, after all, are responsible to the people of a province, and say, "We would like to have a bank charter for our province, too," and they are told they cannot have it, then I think it is time for us to take another look at the situation.

I recognize all the arguments that can be made, that if a province is given a provincial charter for a bank, this can be used for political purposes. Well, I remember Mr. Bennett's statement when that question was posed to him in committee. He said, "I would hate to give the opposition that kind of a lever with which to beat me over the head, if I were to use the bank for political purposes."

In any case, along with this feeling about the decision to reject the application of the Province of British Columbia for a bank charter, there is a very strong feeling, which is increasing, that we should have more of our own financial institutions in western Canada. The west is growing very rapidly; its economy is buoyant, and if there is some cocksureness it has a very good basis in fact. However, I think that if we had the two bank charters which have already been passed, that might be a good beginning—I would like to see us get them—but there is a strong feeling that we would like to have our own financial institutions in the west, governed by people who are living with and know the people in the west, and know its potentialities.

When the Minister of Finance made his statement in the House of Commons on February 16 last, I was pleased with his statement on one ground, that is, the part which I will quote from the Commons Hansard of that date at page 11363:

> The British North America Act clearly assigns to parliament exclusive jurisdiction over banking and the incorporation of banks. It is the intention of the government that this responsibility of parliament and of the government under the authority of parliament shall be maintained and not be eroded.

I must say that when the Province of British Columbia applied for a charter for a bank I was concerned that, if it was granted other provinces would be asking for the same thing, and that if we had five or six regional provincial banks, or even ten provinces with banks, this might have some effect of eroding the central authority of the Parliament of Canada with respect to monetary and fiscal policy, and this would not be a good thing. But I am assured by banking authorities and the Bank of Canada that they did not view this with concern. They felt even if the provinces did have provincial banks, that that could not affect the central authority of the federal Government. I hope that is right. I would like to know more about it.

However, we come to another aspect of this situation. If you take the Minister of Finance's statement of February 16, in conjunction with the recommendation of the Porter Commission that steps be taken to bring the near banks under the control of the Bank Act, I think you will automatically realize that there is some reason for concern. For instance, in the Province of Alberta the treasury branches established by the provincial government, which are not banks but are performing a banking function, are really an extension of the provincial treasury and they are in a very unusual situation. But the fact remains that they have gone into communities and have provided a service that is of value to residents because there were no chartered banks operating in many of those places. Then again, what about the caisses populaires? One person in six in Canada is a shareholder in a caisse populaire. Is the caisse populaire going to be brought in under the Bank Act? These are the reasons why there is concern today.

If, on the one hand, we reject the application of the Bank of British Columbia and, on the other hand, we take steps to bring under the control of the Bank Act the provincial and other banking institutions, the near banks, where does that lead us? It is because of this uncertainty, because of this uneasiness, that I am very happy to support the motion of Senator Flynn. I believe this is a very important piece of legislation. I yield to no man in the strength of my feelings that Canada needs a strong central banking system, that that must not be eroded by the role of the provinces, but at the same time I think we must not be satisfied with the status quo and that steps must be taken at the earliest opportunity to see if we can find some accommodation between the demands of the people for their own institutions and the situation as it exists today.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I wonder if I could speak on the point that is in issue here, not as Leader of the Government in the Senate but as a senator?

I must say that the point Senator Flynn raised yesterday struck me very forcibly as a private member of the Senate, and I think the point is a very narrow one.

The Banking and Commerce Committee of this house has made a report and, without reading it, I can perhaps paraphrase the basic proposition upon which that report was based, by saying they proposed that the bill should not be proceeded with because they felt that a provincial government should not own shares in a chartered bank.

As I understand his point, what Senator Flynn has said is this: This session we have in this chamber agreed to the passage of two other similar bills for the incorporation of chartered banks in this country and have passed them on to the other place. Now, he says, in view of an announcement made by the Government last month, perhaps the circumstances are different. What he says is that these applicants who have come here for a charter may still want the charter but may be prepared to return and say, "We will take the charter, but restrict it by the terms of the report of the Senate Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce." In other words, they will abandon that part of their project which calls for the participation in the share ownership of the proposed bank by the provincial government.

Senator Flynn says that the applicants for this charter might state, "We would like to have a charter on the same basis as the other two applicants have had their applications approved, and we abandon that part of our project which involves provincial government participation in the share capital."

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Have they said that?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: No, they have not.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The others have not said this. Perhaps I should not have said it quite that way. Let me clarify the point.

The other two applicants, as I understand it, said that their projects were two privately owned banks in the normal sense of the word. Then this third project came along, and its sponsors said, "This bank is going to involve the participation of a provincial government in the share ownership."

Hon. Mr. Farris: By the Province of British Columbia.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes, by the Government of British Columbia.

Hon. Mr. Farris: No, by the Province of British Columbia.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): By the Province of British Columbia.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Which is not contrary to the Bank Act.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I do not want to go into the constitutional question at this stage, for it seems to me that Senator Flynn's point does not bring this into issue before us here, and I say this with great respect to Senator Farris and the other honourable senators who have spoken.

I am addressing myself to the very narrow point as to whether or not they will want a charter eliminating participation by the Government of the Province of British Columbia in the share capital of this bank in the way in which they have put this forward.

My own feeling is that perhaps these applicants would like to have a charter on that basis. If circumstances have changed with them as a result of the report of the Senate committee, and as a result of the statement made by the Minister of Finance, I would be inclined to think that the Senate might agree that the applicants be given an opportunity to say so. I believe the Senate is willing to listen to changed circumstances, to representations from people who come here seeking a charter. Speaking as a private member of the Senate, I think it would be appropriate for the motion to carry.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. G. Percival Burchill: Honourable senators, I want to say a word in view of the statement by Senator Farris that because we had voted for the principle of this bill on second reading, we would be retracting what we had done at that time if we adopted the committee's report now.

Hon. Mr. Farris: No, I never said that.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: Well, I took it that Senator Farris said this bill had been passed on second reading and carried the principle approving the purchase of shares by the province.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: Conditionally only.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: I want to say that I personally voted for the bill on second reading. I am all for banks, western banks, eastern banks, all the banks we need in Canada, and all the competition. However, I am very much opposed, and have been right from the start, to provincial governments promoting and being shareholders in our commercial banks. First, I must confess that because of my deep and profound respect, admiration and friendship for this great man from Vancouver, British Columbia, who has graced the Senate for so many years, I deferred to his masterly exposition of this piece of legislation. Furthermore, I thought we ought to give an opportunity to the Premier of British Columbia, his Attorney General, and those associated with him, to explain what they had in mind. It was on that basis I voted for second reading, and not because I changed my opinion at all on the principle of provincial governments being sponsors, promoters or shareholders in commercial banks.

Today I feel absolutely the same way about it. If as Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) has said in respect to Senator Flynn's motion, there is a possibility—indeed, I hope, more than a possibility—that they wish to proceed with this measure with certain provisions thrown aside, by all means let us reconsider the matter.

Hon. Salter A. Hayden: Honourable senators, as Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, there are a few things I would like to say at this time.

I think I presided impartially as chairman, and the vote supporting the report which was made was carried by a very substantial majority of the members of the committee. There has been no request to the committee, to the clerk of the committee, nor did I hear the sponsor of the bill say when he was speaking today that the sponsors of the bill wish to be heard again on the basis of changing the whole presentation as originally made. That presentation, as honourable senators will recall, particularly those who were before the committee, was made by three of the ministers of the provincial government of British Columbia. I do not need to refresh the memory of honourable senators as to what the Premier said when he was there and it was indicated to him that if the Laurentide Bank got a charter, then there would be a Vancouver-based bank. He said that as a matter of government policy they wanted their own bank. In the presentation made to the committee, the picture which was forcefully and completely presented was on the basis of British Columbia's participation in a controlling or directing position. I am not saying that that was bad, but I am saying that that is what the picture was.

To say that the committee did not consider the constitutional aspects of this is something that I cannot accept, first because my very good friend, the senator who sponsored the bill (Hon. Mr. Farris), was before us on a number of occasions, and if there was any indication of a tendency for the members of the committee to forget about the constitutional aspects, he never let us forget that. All one has to do is to read the transcript of the proceedings.

Today when my friend Senator Flynn made his motion he suggested that the bill go back to committee for further consideration, and it is suggested that further consideration be given on the basis that the sponsors have a different kind of application to make. But the sponsor did not present any different kind of picture today. His picture today is still the same. Taking a constitutional position in this matter, as the committee did in considering that there were constitutional questions involved, and that there should be a statement of policy—and the Government has now given indication of what it proposes to do—the sponsor now says that any person who takes the position that it is not constitutional for a province to buy shares in a bank is taking a view which is not supportable in law. It is still back on the same basis on which it was originally before the committee. What are we going to do when it comes back again? What is that further consideration going to be? Are we going to invite the promoters of the bill to come again? If they do and repeat the presentation they made before, what is the committee going to do? What instructions is the Senate going to give?

Hon. Mr. Flynn: You are a better chairman than that.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: Give them another chance.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: My friend Senator Grosart says to give them another chance. All persons who come before the committee, in my view, get every chance they want. But we cannot be expected to be mind readers. We must also remember that there is still a statute in British Columbia concerning the shares in this bank, and it is still the law there. There is a bill standing in the Legislature of British Columbia at the stage of second reading authorizing the Government on behalf of the province to invest in buying shares in other banks.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: Might I ask a question on this point? Are the applicants in this case under any obligation to make the shares available to the Government?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: I do not know. Maybe my friend knows. I do not know what the relationship is. All I know is that when we were in committee all the promoters were there, and at times they got up and answered questions, and at other times the Premier of the province got up and said "I will answer this question," and he answered it on behalf of the promoters of the bill. It would seem that they were working in very close harmony with the sponsors at that time. I do not know that that situation still persists.

My concept of the function of the committee is simply that we are instructed to examine a bill and to make a report. We have done that. If the Senate is displeased and thinks that we have not discharged our duty properly, or if it is considered that there should be further consideration given, then the Senate is perfectly within its power to refer the matter back for further consideration. But in the present circumstances what are the further considerations that should be given? There were no directions and no requests. I must take some conclusion from what the sponsor still says, that this is perfectly constitutional and that the committee should not have come to the decision it came to in the first place.

Hon. M. Grattan O'Leary: Honourable senators, may I as a very junior member of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce say a few words?

I must say at the outset that I am opposed to the motion of Senator Flynn. I am opposed mainly because of its timing. As was pointed out yesterday so clearly by Senator Roebuck, we can hear now the death rattle in the throat of this session. It is practically over, and good riddance! And for us to summon these applicants from British Columbia at this time just when the session is about to expire does not seem to me to be a sensible procedure.

I was never against a bank for British Columbia, but I was against and I am against a bank for British Columbia in circumstances which in my judgment, and in the judgment of the majority of the committee, would enable the province and the Government of British Columbia to influence and control that bank.

I have not changed my opinion, and what I say now is this. Why can't we, like sensible people, wait and see what Mr. Gordon, the Minister of Finance, proposes with respect to provincial governments retaining shares in banks? Surely there is no great urgency about this matter? The Rocky Mountains are not going to collapse and the skies are not going to fall on British Columbia if the granting of this charter is delayed two or three months.

As I read the reports of the great industrial units of British Columbia, they are doing very well with their existing banking facilities, and the Government of British Columbia is doing so well that it is actually lending money to other provinces. Why the haste? Can we not wait and see what Mr. Gordon has in mind? Like the distinguished senator from Vancouver South (Hon. Mr. Farris) I am not sure about Mr. Gordon, because he may not come forward with what he proposes. This has happened before. But it seems to me that our task is to wait and see what he proposes, and then if the Government of British Columbia or the sponsors of this bank want to come before us again, surely we should hear them in the new circumstances and act accordingly.

As I have said, I am not against a bank for British Columbia—far from it. Like my friend Senator Burchill I believe that banks, like other institutions, should be open to completely fair competition, but I am against a bank in any way controlled or influenced by a government. I know of nothing that has changed the situation since I voted against this in committee, and until I hear from Mr. Gordon I see no sense—and I do not say this offensively—in the motion moved by Senator Flynn.

As I said before, we all want to get rid of this session, and some of us would like to get rid of this Parliament.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, it had not been my intention to speak on this bill. Like the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West), I realize it is a private bill and it has no political aspect about which I would care to speak. However, as to the suggestion he made that we send it back to committee conditionally, with the recommendation that representatives of the Government of British Columbia come and satisfy us that the government is not going to have shares in the bank—

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The sponsors.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Yes, the sponsors of the bank—the greatest objection to that, I think is that it would be discriminatory in relation to this particular bill.

That is what I think those honourable members of the Senate who wish to support Senator Flynn's motion—and I suspect that there are many—feel. We have already passed two bills incorporating banks—the Bank of Western Canada and the Laurentide Bank of Canada—both of which have been sent to the other place for consideration.

While I have listened to constitutional arguments from very outstanding lawyers, I am still not satisfied that there is anything in this bill which contravenes the Bank Act. I recall that I felt we were adopting a rather devious or roundabout way of defeating this bill in committee by trying to find something wrong with its preamble. It was based upon that. As Senator Farris has said, he knew of only one precedent, in all of his long experience, of the use of such a procedure in respect of bills before this house.

Honourable senators, if this bill is sent back to the committee it should not be sent back only on the condition that the Province of British Columbia, the sponsors, come here and guarantee us that they are going to do as we wish, because there is the matter of discrimination that should be reconsidered. There is also the question of whether this bill should be sent to the representatives of the people in the other place. Let them deal with it. I think that that is what should be done.

For that reason, honourable senators, it is my intention to support the amendment moved by honourable Senator Flynn.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Will the honourable senator allow me to ask a question? Does he not think, in view of the fact that the committee has made its findings on the basis it has made them, it would be rather futile to send the bill back to the committee in order to review the same circumstances? Should it not be assumed that the committee will find in the same way as it has found in the report we now have before us, and, therefore, is it not more consistent with what Senator Flynn has in mind that the matter be referred back to the committee on the rather narrow point that he made, namely, that the sponsors might want to continue their application for the charter but avoid the point made in the report?

Hon. Mr. Brooks: In reply I say that I do not know how often bills have been sent back to a committee by this chamber. I would assume that when bills are sent back it is because the majority of the members of this chamber feel that there are certain other matters that should be considered by the committee. I do not think bills are sent back for the consideration of only one particular point. They are sent back because the majority of members feel that they should go back. Therefore, with the strength and force of the knowledge that the members of the Senate want further consideration of the bill behind them, the members of the committee should be very careful in the judgment they make the second time. That is my opinion.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Would my friend not agree that what he is, in effect, saying is that the Senate today should make a decision as to whether it is in favour of or in opposition to the report? Is that not in effect your position?

Hon. Mr. Brooks: My opinion is that it should be treated in the same way as any other bill that comes before this chamber. If the members of the Senate feel it should be sent back for further consideration, then it is their right and privilege to so move.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, I feel that I should make my position clear in connection with the situation as it now stands. In a preliminary way let me say that I agree with the sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Farris) so far as the Constitution of Canada is concerned. It is true that no specific judgment has yet been rendered that would enable us to say that it is unconstitutional for the Dominion of Canada to prevent a legislature from subscribing to bank shares. There is nothing definite upon it. But, honourable senators will remember that I raised this point in the very early part of our discussions. During the very first speeches that were made, I raised the point as to whether the right to interfere with the property and civil rights of the Government of British Columbia and the citizens of British Columbia is within our jurisdiction, and their constitutional right under Section 92 of the British North America Act to buy what shares they saw fit to buy. I questioned whether the jurisdiction of the federal Parliament in respect of banking and the incorporation of banks refers to the management of banks only, and not to the ownership of bank shares.

I made that point a long time ago. I do not know that it is too pertinent at this moment in considering this particular motion, but it is something that should give us pause. We in the Senate have always been careful not to violate in any way the constitutional rights of the provinces, or the people of the provinces. It should give us pause. I do not know that anyone is in a position to make a definite decision on this question at this moment. We all have our opinions, of course, but who can say just what a court would rule if this matter were before it?

But that is not really the problem before us at this moment. The problem is whether, in view of all the disagreements that we find round about us, and the uncertainty to which my honourable friend Senator Burchill has referred, it would not be wise and diplomatic on our part to send this report back to the committee, in the terms of the motion as it stands, on the understanding that the committee, having heard what has been said here today, will reconsider the whole proposition and see if it is not possible to resolve the problem in some way satisfactory to the people of British Columbia and to ourselves.

Why should we divide almost fifty-fifty on a question of this kind? We know that we will offend the people of one of our provinces by one course of action that we may take. I would leave Senator Flynn's motion in the broadest of terms and ask the members of the Banking and Commerce Committee, in view of what has been said here, and with the knowledge that they have of the views of some of us, to see if some diplomatic course can be found which is satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Senator Hayden, of course, is a very forceful and clear-minded speaker, but he seems to have overlooked the fact that the Government of British Columbia, at the very last sitting of the committee, undertook not to subscribe to these shares until the Parliament of Canada determined whether or not provinces may legally subscribe to shares in banks. That, I thought at the time, settled the question of any difficulty in regard to this application for incorporation.

Honourable senators will realize, after hearing what has been said, that all of us are in favour of banks. None of us have any objection to British Columbia's having a bank. We have already passed one bill incorporating a bank in British Columbia, and my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition (Hon. Mr. Brooks), says that for us to approve a charter to one group and refuse it to another group under similar circumstances is discriminatory, and in my opinion it is both unwise and unjust.

Honourable senators, let me make myself clear, because I spoke on this only yesterday —not on this motion, of course, so I am not out of order, but, speaking to the motion to adopt the report in the first instance, I said:

> I still think we should incorporate this bank. So soon as the law is changed with respect to investment by provincial governments in bank stock, then that law will apply to this bank as to all other banks.

My position in this matter is that we are making fish of one and fowl of another. We cannot afford to do that. We are a judicial body. I said it twice. I said:

> It does seem to me that we should even now incorporate this bank, and allow it to be governed by the powers of the federal Government under the British North America Act to regulate banking in the Dominion of Canada.

I still hold that view. While I said that I was not going to move the resolution that had been in my mind, which was similar to that of Senator Flynn, it was because of the statement made by the Government that it would act in the matter. I should not have said that. I thought it was, perhaps, futile.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: I was quite surprised that you did.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I am going to change that position now. I should have gone on with my motion, but I thought that after the long discussion we held in the Banking and Commerce Committee, and in view of the likelihood of a fairly early decision in the matter, I would not trouble the house with such an attack. Well, faint heart never won fair lady, and I am changing that position now. I shall vote for Senator Flynn's motion, and I ask all my fellow senators to do the same, not reject this incorporation now and so leave the question in so unsatisfactory a condition. Let us send it back to the Banking and Commerce Committee, in the hope that it can come forward with some reasonable arrangement not too unsatisfactory to either side in the discussion.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: That would not be any reflection on the chairman of the committee.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Oh, no. We all understand his position. He was, as he said himself, a perfectly fair chairman, and he always is, and he is a very capable chairman at that.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: At the same time, I do not have to agree with all his opinions, although I can disagree with him and still remain friends.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: That works both ways.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: That works both ways. Fortunately, honourable senators, it works both ways all over this chamber. Across the floor, where I have many friends too, we can have our own opinions, disagree with each other and remain good colleagues and good friends.

Hon. Walter M. Aseltine: Honourable senators, I would like to say one word regarding my position here. When the matter was before the committee, Senator Hugessen made a motion and I voted against it. I stated my reasons for doing so. I told the committee that I had been to British Columbia, that I had spoken to many people in the Okanagan Valley, in Vancouver and on the Island, and that everywhere I went they wanted this bank in the worst way. I mentioned the fact that the Government of the Province of British Columbia was probably going to apply for shares of stock in the bank, and while a few of them said they did not like that feature, the majority said they wanted the bank anyway. I came away with the conclusion that I did not want to see this application die. That is one reason why I voted against Senator Hugessen's motion in committee.

I also made some remarks with regard to discrimination and that kind of thing, but I do not think it is necessary for me to mention that at this time. I do not agree with Senator Farris when he says we have voted on the principle of this bill and therefore we are bound by what we have done. It was made quite clear in my mind before we voted on second reading that we were voting merely for the purpose of sending this bill to committee for consideration, and that we were not bound by what is usually considered to be something final, having voted for the principle on second reading.

Senator Hayden has been chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce for many years. I was quite happy and pleased to have him as chairman of that committee while I was Leader of the Government in the Senate. I must say that on no occasion did he ever let me down. If we send this bill back to committee for further consideration along the lines which have been suggested, even if nothing happens, I do not want him to think that we do not appreciate the good work he has been doing over all these years. I certainly would be unhappy if he did not continue in his present position as chairman of that committee.

On account of what I have said on this occasion, and also what I said in committee when the matter was voted on, I think I am bound to vote for the amendment to the motion.

Hon. Donald Cameron: Honourable senators, may I ask a question? Would this get around the difficulty? Senator Hayden has asked if he is to go back to review the old straw. I agree it would be a waste of time unless something is to come of it. Is it possible procedurally that we defer a vote on the report to a date a week or ten days' hence; and that in the meantime, if the Government of British Columbia has taken no action to go further, the Chairman of the Banking and Commerce Committee could present his report and it would be dealt with in the regular way, we have leant over backwards to give the applicants every chance?

Hon. Mr. Flynn: The committee will decide, I suggest.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The adjournment of the debate would have to be agreed to, I suppose, and at this stage I wonder if anything is to be gained. Perhaps the committee could deal with this problem, if the bill is returned to it.

Some Hon. Senators: Question!

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by the honourable Senator Vaillancourt:

> That the report of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce with respect to Bill S-20, intituled an Act to incorporate the Bank of British Columbia, be now adopted.

In amendment, it is moved by honourable Senator Flynn, seconded by honourable Senator Grosart:

> That the report be not now adopted but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce for further consideration.

Is it your pleasure to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those in favour of the motion in amendment will say "Content".

Some Hon. Senators: Content.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those against the motion in amendment will please say "Non-content".

Some Hon. Senators: Non-content.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the Contents have it.

Hon. Mr. Lambert: Let us have a recorded vote.

The Hon. the Speaker: Call in the senators.

Motion in amendment of Hon. Mr. Flynn affirmed on the following division:

CONTENTS

Honourable Senators

Aseltine	Cameron
Basha	Choquette
Beaubien (Provencher)	Connolly (Ottawa West)
Bourque	Denis
Brooks	Farris
Burchill	Fergusson
Flynn	Macdonald (Cape Breton)
Fournier (De Lanaudière)	MacDonald (Queens)
Grosart	McGrand
Haig	McKeen
Hnatyshyn	O'Leary (Antigonish-Guysborough)
Hollett	Pearson
Inman	Power
Isnor	Roebuck
Kinley	Welch—31.
Lefrançois

NON-CONTENTS

Honourable Senators

Blois	Rattenbury
Connolly (Halifax North)	Smith (Queens-Shelburne)
Hugessen	Thorvaldson
Lambert	Veniot
O'Leary (Carleton)	Willis—11.
Pouliot

The Hon. the Speaker: The motion in amendment is carried.

Hon. Mr. Gershaw: Honourable senators, I was paired with the honourable Senator Reid. Had I voted on this motion I would have voted for the amendment of Senator Flynn.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Friday, March 5, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENTS

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons returning Bill S-7, to amend the Canada Shipping Act, and acquainting the Senate that they have passed this bill with the following amendments, to which they desire the concurrence of the Senate:

1. Page 2, after Line 22. Immediately after clause 1, insert the following new clauses:

"2. Section 87 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"87. (1) If a person uses the National Flag of Canada and assumes the Canadian national character on board a ship owned in whole or in part by any persons not qualified to own a Canadian ship, for the purpose of making the ship appear to be a Canadian ship, the ship is subject to forfeiture under this Act, unless the assumption has been made for the purpose of escaping capture by an enemy or by a foreign ship of war in the exercise of some belligerent right. (2) In any proceeding for enforcing any such forfeiture the burden of proving a title to use the National Flag of Canada and assume the Canadian national character shall lie upon the person using and assuming the same."

3. Section 89 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"89. If an unqualified person acquires as owner, otherwise than by such transmission as hereinbefore provided for, any interest either legal or beneficial, in a ship using the National Flag of Canada and assuming the Canadian national character, that interest is subject to forfeiture under this Act."

4. Subsections (1) and (2) of section 91 of the said Act are repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"91. (1) The National Flag of Canada is hereby declared to be the proper national colours for all Canadian ships and all ships and boats that would be registered in Canada if they were required to be registered at all, belonging to any British subject resident in Canada, except in the case of any ship or boat for the time being allowed to wear any other national colours in pursuance of a warrant from Her Majesty or under regulations which may be made by the Governor in Council.

(2) Where a ship or boat described in subsection (1) flies

(a) any distinctive national colours other than the National Flag of Canada; or

(b) the colours or pendant usually carried by Her Majesty's ships or any colours or pendant resembling the colours or pendant of Her Majesty, without a warrant from Her Majesty or pursuant to regulations made by the Governor in Council, the master of that ship or boat, or the owner thereof if he is on board, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to both such fine and imprisonment."

2. Page 2, Line 23. Clauses 2 to 37, inclusive, to be renumbered as clauses 5 to 40 inclusive, respectively.

3. Page 5, Lines 30 to 38. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

"(1b) Subject to sections 480 to 482, every Canadian steamship that is not a ship described in subsection (1) or (1a) shall have its hull, machinery and equipment inspected by a steamship inspector in accordance with the regulations before the ship is first put into service and at least once in each year thereafter or, if classification surveys are made, in such longer period, and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed by the regulations."

4. Page 10, Lines 29 to 43. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

"(d) if the ship is a cargo ship other than a nuclear ship and there has not been produced a certificate mentioned in paragraph (a)

(i) a valid Cargo Ship Safety Construction Certificate and a valid Cargo Ship Safety Equipment Certificate, where the gross tonnage of the ship is five hundred tons or more, and

(ii) a valid Cargo Ship Safety Radiotelegraphy Certificate, where the gross tonnage of the ship is sixteen hundred tons or more, or a valid Cargo Ship Safety Radiotelephony Certificate, where the gross tonnage of the Ship is less than sixteen hundred tons, and any valid Exemption Certificate that has been issued in respect of the ship."

5. Page 19, Lines 37 to 44. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

"40. (1) Section 1, sections 9 to 30 and section 39 of this Act shall come into force with respect to Canadian ships, and with respect to ships registered in any other country on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council.

(2) Section 6 and section 38 of this Act shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council."

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these amendments be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I move that these amendments be placed on the Order Paper for consideration at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

BILL TO AMEND CERTAIN ACTS—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-123, to amend certain acts administered in the Department of Insurance.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I have asked Senator Lang to move second reading of this bill and explain it.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: I understand this bill has been amended in the Commons since it was first printed. Will there be a distribution of copies of the bill as passed by the Commons?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes. Copies are available, and I ask the pages immediately to arrange for their distribution.

Hon. Daniel A. Lang, with leave, moved second reading of the bill.

He said: Honourable senators, this rather formidable-looking bill, copies of which are now being distributed to you is, I have found, not quite as formidable as it might appear at first glance. However, it does cover a very broad range of material. As the title indicates, this is a bill to amend certain acts that come under the jurisdiction of the Department of Insurance. The four specific acts are: the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act, the Foreign Insurance Companies Act, the Trust Companies Act, and the Loan Companies Act.

As I outline some of the highlights to you this afternoon, I think you will agree that it is very sound to incorporate these amendments to these four acts in the one bill before us. The main points contained in each part of the bill itself, and the sections applying to insurance companies, Canadian, British and foreign, and provisions applying to trust companies and loan companies, are in essence exactly the same or very similar.

Honourable senators, first, I would draw your attention to the fact that this bill is divided into four parts. Part I deals with the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act; Part II deals with foreign insurance companies under the Foreign Insurance Companies Act; Part III deals with trust companies, and Part IV deals with loan companies.

Honourable senators, behind this bill are two basic policy objectives. The first basic policy objective is to expand the investment powers of all insurance, loan and trust companies that come under federal jurisdiction. The second basic policy objective is to ensure that those Canadian life insurance, trust and loan companies, coming under federal jurisdiction, which are still Canadian owned, will retain their Canadian ownership and control.

The first objective that I mentioned is primarily directed to the expansion of the equity money market available to Canadians for the establishment and development of our resources and industry, while the second objective recognizes the fact that between 1955 and 1960 nonresidents acquired control of seven of the 25 joint-stock life insurance companies under the jurisdiction of the federal Department of Insurance, leaving only 12 of those 25 companies now under Canadian ownership and control. That such a trend is not in the best interests of our country was heavily underscored, as all honourable senators know, in the recent report of the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance.

In addition to the implementation of those two objectives that I have referred to, the bill amends all of the acts mentioned in various technical and administrative aspects, primarily in order to bring existing legislation into conformity with current practices and requirements. Many of these amendments have come about at the request of, and, indeed, after consultation with, the various financial institutions affected by the legislation.

If I may, I should like to come to some of the specific terms of this bill, and to deal first with the changes in investment powers given by it. In so far as Canadian insurance companies are concerned, these changes are set out in clause 5. This is one of the most important sections, if not the most important section, of the bill. Its highlights are, first, the provisions enabling these companies—that is, Canadian life insurance companies—to invest up to 25 per cent of the book value of their assets in common shares. This is an increase of 10 per cent over the maximum limit heretofore allowed such companies. Secondly, this clause contains a provision which permits these companies to include in their common stock portfolios shares of companies with only a 5-year dividend record of at least 4 per cent per annum, instead of the present limitation of such shares of similar record over a 7-year period.

The relaxation of the restrictions in this field is further carried out in other provisions of clause 5. I would particularly draw the attention of honourable senators to the fact that under this clause the dividend record that constitutes the test as to the eligibility of shares for investment can be a dividend record notwithstanding the fact that dividends were not in fact paid by the company. All that is required is that the company could have, over the required period of time, declared those dividends and in the amounts specified if the directors had chosen to do so. These new tests of eligibility will, it is hoped, encourage foreign parent companies of Canadian subsidiaries to make shares of the Canadian subsidiaries available to Canadians and to enable Canadian life insurance companies to buy them.

In addition, the bill would give these companies additional freedom to invest in assets of their own choice that have no eligibility requirement. I refer to what is commonly known as the basket clause, which heretofore restricted to 5 per cent of the total assets of an insurance company the investment value of any security of the company's own choosing, notwithstanding its characteristics. This basket provision has now been increased from 5 to 7 per cent.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: Which subsection is that?

Hon. Mr. Lang: It is clause 5(8), at page 14, opposite the marginal note "Limitation", (4) (c). It reads:

> (c) the total book value of the investments and loans made under this subsection and held by the company, excluding those that are or at any time since acquisition have been authorized as investments apart from this subsection, shall not exceed seven per cent of the book value of the total assets of the company.

Heretofore that provision was 5 per cent.

In regard to these provisions that I have referred to enlarging the investment powers of life insurance companies, it is expected they will enable those companies to broaden the range of their common share investments, as also does subclause (8), which I mention here as directly relating to investment powers.

Under this clause a new rule is substituted for valuing common shares. Under this rule, in effect, a company can absorb the impact of a drop in market value of its common share investments over a period of three years on its balance sheet, rather than absorbing that fluctuation all in one year as under present legislation. This to an extent ensures a relatively close approximation of balance sheet and market value figures. It relieves to a great extent the over-all restrictive effect imposed on a life insurance company by sharp market fluctuations.

These provisions are all designed to make Canadian ownership of Canadian enterprises as attractive as possible to Canadian life insurance companies, consistent with their own best judgment as to balance and the nature of their investments.

Again, under clause 5, there are further significant amendments, most notably the raising of the mortgage ceiling on real estate. Here it is increased from two-thirds of the lending value of the real estate as the ceiling, to 75 per cent of the market value. This amendment has been sought by the companies concerned themselves, and it is considered to be a responsible one and in conformity with today's borrowing requirements. It is also considered that such an increase is in the best interests of the shareholders and policyholders of the companies themselves. This ceiling has been raised from time to time by amendments to this legislation over the years. It is hoped that this most recent increase will, to some extent at least, discourage borrowing on real estate by way of second mortgage.

Clause 5 likewise broadens the scope for investment in income producing real estate. The details of this provision are quite complicated, but in essence it permits these companies to engage in the financing of income-producing real estate more flexibly in partnership with other companies. It broadens the requirements as to the nature of the lessees of these properties, to include governments and government agencies, along with corporations whose dividend records meet the requirements of the act. The broadening in this regard is by way of inclusion of governments and government agencies as lessees.

This clause also departs from principle by permitting direct investment in income-producing real estate having a stipulated earning record. This is based on the general principle that real estate investments permissible for the companies themselves should be acceptable also as investments for the production of income, the security behind them being the same. In addition, this clause increases the maximum size of any one parcel of land that may become an object of borrowing.

I have here tried only to highlight the enlargement or broadening of investment powers contained in clause 5.

Besides those matters to which I have referred, this portion of the bill contains other provisions directed generally to the same end. These other provisions are of relatively minor importance and I think they can be more properly dealt with by the Senate in committee.

As I mentioned, this bill is divided into four parts. In fact, Part I of the bill is of two parts in itself. The first clauses of the bill up to clause 13 refer to Canadian life insurance companies and the remaining clauses of Part I, namely, clauses 13 to 17, deal with British life insurance companies. The provisions to which I referred dealing with the enlargement of the investment powers of Canadian life insurance companies under clause 5, are repeated exactly with respect to British life insurance companies, under the latter part of Part I, and with respect to foreign life insurance companies under Part II.

The policy underlying the enlargement of the investment powers of life insurance companies is also carried through in this legislation, but to a more limited extent, to trust companies under Part III and loan companies under Part IV.

Clause 32 deals with the investment powers of trust companies. Exactly similar provisions with regard to loan companies are contained in clause 40.

I said that the changes as they affect loan and trust companies are not as broad as those affecting life insurance companies, but they do embrace the two most significant amendments contained in the beginning of Part I of the act.

Under section 32, trust companies are given similar power to lend by way of mortgage on real estate and up to 75 per cent of the mortgage-lending value of the property. In addition, they are permitted to increase their portfolio of common stocks from 15 per cent to 25 per cent of their total investment portfolio.

I would like now to turn briefly to the balance of the amendments contained in Part I, which apply only to Canadian life insurance companies and do not directly concern their investment powers.

Under present legislation, as honourable senators know, life insurance companies may not own more than 30 per cent of the shares of any other corporation, and may not own any shares of another corporation transacting the business of life insurance. Clause 6 of the bill before us departs from that principle and enables these companies to own subsidiary life insurance companies outside Canada It permits them to own subsidiary casualty companies in Canada and subsidiary real estate companies, all subject to such terms as the Treasury Board may prescribe.

As to subsidiary life insurance companies outside of Canada, this change appears to be in line with the business requirements being met by our Canadian companies in foreign countries, and I need not add that these companies do a large volume of their business abroad.

As to subsidiary casualty companies in Canada, this change merely permits this kind of business to be done via a subsidiary rather than directly, as can now be done by any life insurance company with the concurrence of the Treasury Board. Herein, the vehicle of a subsidiary appears to be a more sound and prudent way to carry on such business.

As to the provisions with regard to subsidiary real estate companies, it would appear again to be advantageous for life insurance companies to invest indirectly through a subsidiary rather than to do so directly themselves. This would give greater flexibility in business transactions and at the same time provide a high degree of security for policyholders.

Among the minor amendments contained in this part, I might point out that clause 4 enables the Governor in Council to grant French or English versions of a corporate name, and this avoids the necessity of bringing this matter before Parliament to accomplish that purpose.

Other minor amendments are contained in Part I, particularly providing a reduction in the number of directors qualifying shareholders, under clause 2; splitting par value of shares, under clause 4; purchase of shares of other life insurance companies for merger, under clause 12; and, indeed, others which I feel must be dealt with in detail in committee, since no principles are there involved.

I have now very briefly covered the amendments affecting all life insurance companies as set forth in Parts I and II of this bill, with the exception of those provisions in Part I dealing with the maintenance of Canadian control and ownership. With your permission, I would like to deal with that last, since the provision contained in Part I with respect to Canadian life insurance companies is reproduced in Part III with respect to trust companies and in Part IV with respect to loan companies.

As to Parts III and IV of the bill, I have already mentioned how the investment powers of trust and loan companies are affected by this legislation. Apart from the Canadian control sections contained in Parts III and IV, the only two other significant amendments are those contained in clauses 34 and 42. These two clauses are similar. The first one applies to trust companies, and the second to loan companies.

Under these sections trust and loan companies are enabled to borrow up to a maximum of 15 times the excess of their assets over their liabilities. Heretofore, the ceiling has been 12½ times. The financial strength and stability of these companies now seems to warrant this increase, which comes after a succession of such increases over the last many years.

May I point out, with regard to the 2½ per cent differential between 12½ per cent and 15 per cent, that the exercise of borrowing power within that range is subject to the approval of the Treasury Board upon the recommendation of the Superintendent of Insurance. These clauses also contain a new provision requiring that if a trust company owns more than 10 per cent of the shares of a loan company, or vice versa, the two companies must be considered as one for the purpose of their borrowing. In other words, when we apply the ratio of 15 times we must apply it to a consolidated balance sheet of the two companies and not to their assets and liabilities as set forth in their separate and distinct financial statements.

Parts III and IV of this bill likewise contain some minor housekeeping amendments, as does Part I, and reproduce the provisions regarding French and English names, directors qualifying shareholdings, and matters of that nature.

Finally, honourable senators, I would draw your attention to the other basic section of this act as distinct from clause 5, dealing with investment power enlargement, namely, clause 3, which deals with ownership and control of these companies.

As I mentioned earlier, this section appears in almost identical form in Part I, and again in Parts III and IV where it applies to trust and loan companies respectively. The method of dealing with the problem is basically quite simple, but the machinery of it is somewhat more complicated. Basically, the bill requires that the directors of any of these companies must refuse entry on the books of that company of any transfer of share or shares if that transfer would have the effect of bringing the total shareholdings of nonresidents in excess of 25 per cent of the outstanding capital of the company, or where such nonresident shareholdings, now exceeding 25 per cent, are thereby increased, or, on the other hand, if such a transfer would have the effect of giving to any one nonresident or one nonresident and his associates more than a 10-per cent interest in the issued capital stock of the company.

The section also provides that nonresident shareholdings in those Canadian life insurance, trust and loan companies that do in fact exceed the maximum permissible limits set out in the bill will not, upon this bill becoming law, have to be thereupon reduced to conform, but, of course, such shareholdings are then frozen at their maximum and the directors must not permit the registration of any transfer that would represent an increase.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Unless the present holdings are over 50 per cent.

Hon. Mr. Lang: Yes, that is correct.

These requirements impose upon the directors the duty of ascertaining the residence of anyone requesting shares to be registered in his name. The problem of Canadian resident nominees for nonresident beneficial shareholders immediately arises. Accordingly, this section provides that in such a case no one can vote those shares. When shares are to be voted it will be the responsibility of the directors of these companies to call for a declaration as to the residence and beneficial ownership of the shares being voted. If, notwithstanding these precautions, those shares are so voted, the proceedings affected thereby are not void but are voidable at the insistence of a shareholder of the company.

Further, provision is made to the end that nonresident control may not be held through direct holding of 10 per cent of the beneficial control of a company directly and through associates and nominees holding shares in excess of that percentage. In the event of that situation arising, not only the excess over 10 per cent cannot vote the shares, but the 10 per cent itself loses its voting rights.

Basically speaking, honourable senators, there is nothing in this legislation to affect the status quo of shareholders now outstanding, nor does this section preclude the formation of companies incorporated in the future where majority control is nonresident from the outset.

The bill includes detailed transitional provisions to prevent the rights of existing shareholders being prejudiced; and, basically, the whole design of the section is directed towards control aspects of shareholdings, and is designed to avoid affecting the proprietary rights of shareholdings.

It is expected that the existence of these sections alone will, in all likelihood, provide a very strong deterrent to further loss of Canadian control over our financial institutions.

Honourable senators, I wish to thank you for your indulgence as I tried very briefly to outline what is not a simple piece of legislation. I know this bill deserves minute scrutiny in committee, and if it receives second reading I shall move that it be referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I appreciate the explanation Senator Lang has given. There are two or three questions I would like to put to him, in the hope that when he closes the debate he will answer them.

I would like to know what percentage of the life insurance business in Canada is done by companies registered under or subject to the provisions of the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act which are subject to these new provisions.

I would like the same information as to the percentage of total business done by companies subject to the provisions of the Trust Companies Act and the Loan Companies Act.

I would also like to have a further explanation of what I understand was one of his last statements, that nothing in this bill prevents foreign interests from incorporating companies in the field covered by this legislation.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton), for Hon. Mr. White, debate adjourned.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS FINANCING AND GUARANTEE ACT, 1964

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Acting Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-137, to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways System for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railway Company.

Bill read first time.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West) moved, with leave, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

INCOME TAX CONVENTION ACT

BILL TO IMPLEMENT CONVENTION BETWEEN CANADA AND JAPAN AND TO AMEND AGREEMENTS WITH CERTAIN OTHER COUNTRIES—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Acting Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-146, to implement a convention between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax and to amend the existing agreement and conventions between Canada and Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, with respect to income tax.

Bill read first time.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West) moved, with leave, that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964. (English and French texts).

Report of the Board of Review to the Postmaster General on National States' Rights Party, dated February 11, 1965. (English and French texts).

CANADA LABOUR (STANDARDS) CODE BILL

AUTHORITY TO PRINT COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

Hon. Daniel A. Lang, for Hon. Salter A. Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, presented the following report of the committee on Bill C-126, respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses:

> Your committee recommends that authority be granted for the printing of 800 copies in English and 300 copies in French of its proceedings on the said bill.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Lang: I move, with leave of the Senate, that the report be adopted now.

Report adopted.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move, with leave of the Senate, that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, March 9, 1965, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

PENITENTIARY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. John J. Connolly: I have asked the honourable Senator Roebuck to move second reading of this bill and to explain its provisions.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, with leave, moved second reading of Bill C-145, to amend the Penitentiary Act.

He said: Honourable senators, I approach my task of explaining this bill with some diffidence. I do so because it will not stand comparison with the very complicated measure just presented to the house in a most capable manner by my friend and colleague Senator Lang. At the same time I thank the Leader of the house (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) for the honour he has done me in giving me the opportunity of explaining this bill to you.

It is a very simple bill, honourable senators. To quote a phrase used earlier by Senator Lang in reference to some sections of his bill, it is "just a housekeeping amendment."

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Senator Lang was too modest.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: These amendments are purely technical and do not interfere with the rights of any person in any way. As I have said it is a simple bill, but it is a necessary one. It is essential for the due conduct of the processes of law in this dominion.

As all my colleagues who are lawyers know very well, and as all those who are not lawyers will readily appreciate, a certain time must elapse between the conviction of an individual and his removal to the penitentiary, if he is so sentenced. This is the period during which the person so convicted is allowed to file a notice of appeal. In the case of a summary conviction this period is 30 days, and then there is a further time, a hiatus, shall I call it, between the time he launches an appeal and the time when the appeal is disposed of by the court of appeal.

Now, according to section 17 of the Penitentiary Act, that is the current act, a convicted person is not permitted to be received by the penitentiary until (1) after the time for appeal has elapsed; (2) until the appeal has been disposed of; or, (3) the convict has waived his right of appeal. During this time the convict remains in a provincial institution. In Toronto, for example, the Don Jail would be the appropriate institution. But during this period the province requires statutory authority to detain him. Under the former Penitentiary Act, that is the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, chapter 206, section 49, this authority was provided in the following words:

> A convict shall not be conveyed to the penitentiary pending any appeal against his conviction or sentence, nor until after the expiration of the time limited for such appeal but, subject to the provisions of the Criminal Code for admitting an appellant to bail pending the determination of his appeal, shall be confined in any gaol or other place of confinement wherein he may be lawfully kept after sentence while awaiting removal to the penitentiary.

That section gave the provincial institution the power to hold and detain the individual during that time. Unfortunately—perhaps that is not quite the right word, but nevertheless it is a fact—the former Penitentiary Act was repealed by chapter 53 of the Statutes of Canada, 1960-61, and for some reason that has not been explained to me, nor was it explained in the other place, but it is readily understood, I think, as a clear and obvious error, this provision was not carried forward into the new act. Section 17 of chapter 53 of the Statutes of Canada, 1960-61 reads as follows:

> 17. A person who has been sentenced or committed to penitentiary shall not be received in a penitentiary pending the determination of an appeal nor until after the expiration of the time limited by law for an appeal, but the person may, whether or not he has entered an appeal, give written notice to the court that sentenced or committed him that he elects not to appeal or abandons his appeal, as the case may be, and thereupon the time limited for appeal shall be deemed to have expired.

Honourable senators will note that there is nothing in that particular clause which gives the province the power to hold a man in the meantime, that is, between the time of his conviction and sentence and when he is permitted to be entered into the penitentiary. And I understand, the obligation on the provincial jails to detain the prisoner during that period, in consequence of this omission, has been challenged, and so it is most necessary that we amend the Penitentiary Act, as is proposed by the bill before the house.

You will observe also that the convict, according to the section I have read, may give notice in writing that he elects not to appeal, in which event he becomes admissible forthwith to the penitentiary, and this is done in the vast majority of cases. It is not done in all cases, but in a very large number. In such cases the convict waives his right to appeal, not because the penitentiary is any more comfortable than the jail in which he would otherwise be detained, although that may be so, but simply because—and there has been some confusion in this connection—the time spent in the provincial jail, pending an appeal and its disposal by the court of appeal, does not count as part of the term in the penitentiary imposed by the trial court. That is, of course, unless the court of appeal otherwise orders. To emphasize this I shall read to you the clause from the Criminal Code that covers this particular point. The Criminal Code, section 624, provides:

> Sentence commences to run when imposed—
>
> (2) (b) The time during which a convicted person is confined in a prison or other place of confinement pending the determination of an appeal by that person does not count as part of any term of imprisonment imposed pursuant to his conviction, but paragraph (b) is subject to any directions that the court of appeal may give.

I state the law specifically because in the other place there was confusion in that regard.

The amendment in Bill C-145 applies also to section 18 of the new Penitentiary Act. Section 18 of that act reads as follows:

> Subject to any relevant agreement that may be made under section 19, the officer in charge of a penitentiary is not required to accept a person into custody under a warrant of committal unless there is, in relation to that person, a certificate of a duly qualified medical practitioner which certifies that the person is free from dangerous, contagious or infectious disease.

That may be new to many of us here, but dominion penitentiaries will not accept a person who is suffering from a dangerous, contagious or infectious disease. The result is that the individual in question remains in the provincial institution. As I have already pointed out, it is most necessary that the provincial institution be possessed of the right, power and authority to detain him, which power was lost when section 49 of the previous Penitentiary Act was inadvertently dropped from the new act. The bill that is now before us would cure that omission, as well as that in relation to the previous section which I have mentioned.

Honourable senators will notice the reference to any relevant agreement. That means an agreement between the dominion Government—the Minister of Justice with the approval of the Governor in Council—and any of the governments of the provinces. When there is no agreement in effect, the penitentiary management may refuse to accept any such person.

In addition to persons who have infectious diseases, there is the question of persons of unsound mind. Section 19 of the Penitentiary Act enables the management of our penitentiaries, with the approval of the Governor in Council, to make an agreement with the provinces to take into custody a person of unsound mind, and it gives the management of the penitentiary the authority to refuse any person of that nature, or should a person detained in the penitentiary become of unsound mind the management has the power to return him to the institution from which he has been received.

The interesting feature of that situation is that no such agreement has been entered into so far between the dominion Government and any of the provinces of Canada. What has been happening in our penitentiaries is that we have followed the ancient custom of simply refusing a person of unsound mind who is committed to a penitentiary, so that such person becomes a charge on the provincial government and not upon the dominion Government. In view of the practice of the past, we now have the person confined in a provincial institution and the dominion government pays the charges on a per diem basis.

When a dangerous case occurs—that is, a case of a contagious or infectious disease—amongst the inmates of a provincial penal institution, then section 19 of our Penitentiary Act gives the Government power to make an agreement to provide that that individual shall be sent to one of the penitentiary hospitals for incarceration and treatment. The interesting feature in connection with that potential understanding is that there are no such hospitals; we have never erected any hospitals of that nature. That is largely a dead issue, but the other is not. Frequently people are found to be of unsound mind, and are so certified by the penitentiary physician or psychiatrist, and such a person is then sent to a provincial institution with the dominion Government paying the cost. But, it is quite obvious, is it not, that the provincial institution must have authority to detain the person and to maintain him, otherwise the provincial institution is put in a very undesirable position?

This bill provides the necessary powers in respect to all those matters. I think I should read the subsections:

> (1) A person who by reason of section 17 is not received in a penitentiary or who by reason of section 18 is not accepted into custody shall be confined in any prison, common gaol or other place ...

And that may be an insane asylum.

> ...not being a penitentiary, in which persons who are charged with or convicted of offences are usually kept in custody.

That means the provincial institutions.

> (2) The keeper of any prison, common gaol or other place referred to in subsection (1) to whom a person mentioned in that subsection is delivered shall, upon sufficient authority, receive, safely keep and detain that person under custody in the prison, common gaol or other place until he is transferred to a penitentiary or discharged from custody in accordance with law.

Subsection (3) is not as important, but it reads:

> The original of the warrant or other instrument by which a person referred to in subsection (1) is committed to or is to be imprisoned in a penitentiary, or a copy thereof duly certified by any judge or magistrate or by the clerk of the court in which that person was convicted, is sufficient authority for his detention in accordance with subsection (2).

As I have already said, honourable senators, this is purely housekeeping. It interferes with no one's rights in any way. It is simply the correction of an error. However, it is a necessary piece of legislation, and I commend it to my fellow senators for passage.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, it is quite obvious, I think, to all of us that there is not very much that can be said with reference to this bill, especially after hearing the explanation from the honourable sponsor. It is rather surprising that this was left out of the 1961 bill, and it is also surprising that we have no knowledge of why it was left out. Evidently there was an error, as Senator Roebuck has stated.

The situation arising under Section 17, of course, is quite easy to understand. A prisoner, while he is awaiting an appeal from his conviction should not be in a penitentiary. There is no question about that. Section 18 does seem to be a little more difficult to follow. I did have a question to ask about it, but I think it has been answered pretty well by Senator Roebuck. I was under the impression that our penitentiaries did have hospitals.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Yes, they do.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: But not for mental cases.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: This is a hospital to care for a person with an infectious disease who is detained in a provincial institution. He may be, if the proper agreement is made between the parties, transferred to a penitentiary hospital, but it has to be a hospital of the right kind.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Yes, I understand that, but what surprises me is that the penitentiaries have not hospitals which can handle these cases. After all, there may be a drug addict, for instance, and why should the provinces have to take on the responsibility of looking after such a person if he is convicted criminally? Why is it that he cannot be sent to the hospital in a penitentiary, and his sentence start from the time he is admitted?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: No. A drug addict is not a dangerous man in the sense that a person with an infectious disease is.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: But he is a sick man, and the warden of the penitentiary has the authority to refuse his admittance. That is as I understand it. That is a point that was not clear in my mind, and I was wondering if the honourable sponsor of the bill could clear that up. A person may have tuberculosis, for instance, and the warden may say, "No, we will not admit this man at all." Why should that man be the responsibility of some institution in the province, and not be looked after in one of our penitentiaries? After all, he becomes the responsibility of the federal Government once he is convicted. That is the only question that I had with respect to this bill.

I might say that I noticed in the Votes and Proceedings of the other place of November 23 a proposed resolution:

> That a special committee, consisting of fifteen members to be designated by the house at a later date, be appointed to consider the state of penitentiaries under the control of the Government of Canada and the plans of the Government in relation thereto with powers to: report from time to time its observations and opinions thereon.

It occurred to me that a matter of this kind could very well have been left until this committee had reported.

There are many points about our penitentiaries and jails of which I am sure we are becoming more conversant and which need some checking. I can remember, years ago when I was at school, there was a poem by Richard Lovelace in which these lines occurred:

> Stone walls do not a prison make,
> Nor iron bars a cage.

That is becoming obvious to the people of Canada today.

My suggestion is that people could very well have faced some of these problems, and I am not satisfied that the warden of a penitentiary should have the authority to refuse admittance of prisoners who are suffering from disease. The penitentiaries should be so constituted that they will look after these matters themselves.

Honourable senators, with that slight criticism, I feel this is a very necessary amendment to our act and I am in complete agreement with it.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Would the sponsor of the bill describe what is meant by the words in the second subsection: "receive, safely keep and detain"? Would he tell us exactly what that means? Are there any rules or regulations whereby that is ensured, and what happens if the person is not safely kept and detained?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: We might ask Mr. Rivard about that.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: We cannot find Mr. Rivard to answer.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I do not know whether there is any definition in this or in the Code as to what "safely keep" would mean; but the words are probably as plain as any explanation could be.

I want to make this a little more clear. Section 19 refers to two things: (1) people of unsound mind, and (2) people in provincial institutions suffering from contagious diseases. That section says:

> (2) Where no agreement has been made pursuant to subsection (1)—

And, as I have said, no agreements have been made in any of the provinces.

> —between the Minister and the government of any province from which a mentally ill or mentally defective person is sentenced or committed to penitentiary, the officer in charge of the penitentiary may, on the advice of the penitentiary physician or psychiatrist, refuse to accept custody of that person under the sentence or committal or, if custody of that person has been accepted, may, under the authority of a written direction by the Commissioner, return that person to the prison or other place of confinement from which he was received.

That applies only to people of unsound mind. That is all.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: One would not understand that from reading the section here.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Section 18 goes a little further, but it does not go so far as to take in an addict.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Pardon me, it says "certifies that the person is free from dangerous, contagious or infectious disease."

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Yes, but that is as far as it goes.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: That is quite a long way.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: It is a most necessary way. With regard to the committee in the other house, if that committee finds this bill has gone too far or not far enough, it may bring in its report and then no doubt we will amend the Penitentiary Act accordingly. In the meantime it is most important that the provinces be given power to detain the individual whom we send to them either by arrangement or return to them forcibly. That seems clear, and that is really all this bill does.

Hon. M. Gratton O'Leary: May I put a question to the sponsor, please?

Under our Penitentiary Act, do we have any power whatsoever to influence or control the conditions which exist in provincial penitentiaries? I am thinking of what I read the other day, regarding Bordeaux Penitentiary, which has been in the headlines recently. It was stated that this penitentiary was built to contain 700 persons and that now there are 1,200 persons there. Is there nothing in this act, or even under co-operative federalism, by which we could insist that these provincial penitentiaries at least be conducted in a humane way?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I wish it were so, that we did have that authority. Bordeaux prison is not a pentientiary. Bordeaux prison is a provincial institution over which we have no authority in this chamber or in the other place—no authority whatsoever. Were we to interfere in the affairs of the Province of Quebec, I am sure we would have a protest of a very violent character.

However, there is certainly something to be done, and I hope it will be done. They are building a new institution to take the place of the Bordeaux prison, but it cannot be done in a day. I am hoping that the evil conditions to which my friend has referred will be cured as quickly as possible by the provinces.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker (Hon. Mr. Gershaw): Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: At the next sitting.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: There is no intention to send this bill to committee?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Not unless someone desires it to be sent to committee. I would think it unnecessary, but I am in the hands of the house.

Hon. Mr. O'Leary (Carleton): There are some expert witnesses available, if you could catch them.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I do not think we need send it to committee.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Roebuck, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

COAL PRODUCTION ASSISTANCE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. Harold Connolly moved the second reading of Bill C-147, to amend the Coal Production Assistance Act.

He said: Honourable senators, it seems to me that this is a delightful bit of legislation to come before this house on this glorious Friday afternoon. I say that because of its happy background. It was introduced originally by the Government of 1949 and was subsequently improved and expanded by the succeeding Government. Incidentally, it secured the favour and won the approval of all parliamentary parties in the other place.

It is an innocuous looking bill. Longitudinally, if I may use the word, it is just about my size, because it is just about two sentences tall. All it does is extend for a period of five years the time in which loans can be made to the producers of coal in this country.

Honourable senators, it is not my desire to make a Hollywood production of this very simple bill. Perhaps we should not follow the example of the other place, because, on consulting Hansard of the other place, I find that the bill was dealt with very swiftly.

The record in Hansard for February 19 of this year indicates that the Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys moved that the house go into committee to consider the following resolution:

> That it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Coal Production Assistance Act to extend until the 31st day of October, 1969, the period during which agreements may be made under section 3 of the said Act.

The motion was agreed to and the house went into committee. The minister made a very brief one-sentence statement, in which he said that no change in principle was involved in the legislation. The resolution was reported and concurred in.

The minister then asked for permission to introduce the bill. The permission was granted. The bill was read the first and second times, reported at the next sitting and was passed, and now we have it here before us.

I should perhaps say a brief word about the origin of this bill. As I look across the chamber at my friend and colleague, Senator Macdonald (Cape Breton), I am reminded that he, like his father, has had a long, abiding interest in the coal mining industry, and has made great humanitarian contributions, which redound immensely to his credit, not only within the industry but outside.

I think my earliest contact with the coal mining industry was in the early twenties, when as a young reporter I was in the coal fields during a disastrous strike of that period. I developed then a sympathy for the men who spend their lives largely underground digging coal. That sympathy has not abated in all the succeeding years, because those were the days of the company union, of company stores; those were the days when coal miners, after six days of work of 60 hours a week, took home almost infinitesimally small wages. I have seen men take home, after deductions, as little as $2.94 and $3.23. When it is considered that in most cases there were families to care for, you can imagine the plight of the miner in those days.

Happily, the situation has improved. It improved immediately the company union was disposed of and the men who spent their lives in the mines were given the opportunity to work out their own destiny. It has also improved because company management has developed a consciousness of need on the part of its individual workers, which had not existed before.

The situation has also improved because governments, both provincial and federal which, up to that point had hardly recognized the industry except for what royalties they could attract from it, also developed a humanitarian aspect which has contributed greatly to the industry and to those who are engaged in it.

My sympathy has always been for the miner, and I do not detract one iota from that statement. Mark you, it does not necessarily follow that my sympathy is anti-company. However, a problem concerns me, as well as others in my province, particularly where coal is concerned. At the moment, marketing conditions are reasonably good, but we have passed through one crisis after another, which has affected not only the people employed in the mine, particularly the youth of Cape Breton, but others who have been led to believe, despite obvious facts to the contrary, that there is a great future in coal, and that some day "King Coal" will again sit on the throne. I do not pretend to be an expert, and if I have any expertise whatever, it is because of close observation.

I venture to say that it is grossly unfair and unchristian to suggest, in the light of all that has happened respecting coal, that one day the coal mining industry of Nova Scotia will be just as prosperous as it was in the days when between 12,000 and 13,000 miners were on the payroll. I do not believe that day will ever come.

Honourable senators, that brings me to the point I started to make, that the corporation Dosco, which operates most of the mines, certainly the major mines in Nova Scotia, should—because it receives benefits from a government, whether it be provincial or federal—lay down a proper and as accurate a forecast as possible of the real potential of coal mining in that province. If it is going to resolve itself into a self-contained industry of from 3,500 to 4,000 men, the people of Nova Scotia, and particularly of Cape Breton, ought to be made aware of that fact. Upon the company's intentions should largely depend the amount of assistance that is to be forthcoming from governments in one form or another.

It may be that a completely accurate forecast is not possible. I concede that point. However, I deplore the fact that young men in grammer and high schools should be led to believe that one day they will once again know the prosperity in coal that their grandfathers knew, and believe it so firmly as to resist or not take advantages of opportunities for education which would enable them to migrate into other forms of employment, professional or otherwise. I submit that we all do a great injustice to those young people when we do not pinpoint the future more clearly than has thus far been done.

Honourable senators, a brief history of the bill is as follows. In 1949 the Government of the day introduced what was known as the Maritimes Coal Production Assistance Act, and established a fund of $10 million to be loaned for certain periods for mechanization purposes in order to improve coal production, and to bear a rate of interest to be approved by the Minister of Labour, an accepted sort of yardstick, which would be comparable to that of the yield of Canadian bonds.

That went along for quite some time, indeed, until 1959, when the then Government made what I regard as substantial improvements. To begin with, they changed the name of the Maritimes Coal Production Assistance Act to make it applicable to all Canada, which, of course, was a justice that cannot be denied. They added $10 million to the fund, raising it to $20 million, and also extended the authority to enter into loan agreements until October 31, 1964.

The situation at the moment is that the loan agreements as such expired on October 31, 1964. The statute remains, but the ability to establish or make loans lapsed because of the existing legislation. That is why we have the present bill before us, which extends until October 31, 1969 the ability to make the loans to the coal producers of this country, as has been done since 1949.

Honourable senators will recall that a report on these operations has been made each year to Parliament. The report for 1964 was tabled in the House of Commons on June 5 of that year, and every bit of information that one could possibly desire is contained in that report.

Let me summarize that report by saying that at the moment there are approximately $7½ million left for loan purposes, and that it is the opinion of the Dominion Coal Board, which doubtless is the most competent authority on the subject, that the $7½ million now in the fund will be sufficient to look after every request that will be made between now and the expiry date, October 31, 1969.

Honourable senators, the bill is as simple as that, and I commend it to your charity and your tolerance. I question whether this bill even needs to go to a committee, although I would not argue against that possibility. They do things in the other place that perhaps we do not do here; however, we might consider giving this measure first and second readings today, and after discussion has been completed by those who desire to participate, the bill could receive third reading at the next sitting on Tuesday. In any case, I commend the bill to your favourable attention.

Hon. John M. Macdonald (Cape Breton): Honourable senators, first of all, I must thank the sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Halifax North) for his very kind reference to me.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Well deserved, too!

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): Thank you.

I did not agree with everything the sponsor said, but I must agree with his statement that in the coal industry we seem to live from one crisis to another crisis. In fact, I have reached the conclusion that, for some reason or other, the more you study the coal industry in Nova Scotia, the less you know about it.

As the honourable gentleman mentioned, we passed through a severe crisis some years ago. At that time it was a question of selling coal. The Dominion Coal Company, which is the big producer of coal in Nova Scotia, closed three of its mines. It was felt at that time that the production from the remaining mines would fulfil their marketing requirements, and that if this could be done the industry would be stabilized for a long period of time.

Adjustments had to be made. A considerable number of people were thrown out of employment. A production figure of four million tons was used. We thought that if we could sell an annual production of four million tons by the Dominion Coal Company's mines this would stabilize the industry. It is interesting to note that this target has been exceeded.

The following figures are subject to some revision, in that they are taken from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' preliminary report on coal production. In 1963 Nova Scotia produced 4,554,944 tons of coal, and practically all that would be by the Dominion Coal Company, although there are a few small, independent mines. Last year, 1964, production went down somewhat, to 4,292,955 tons.

Perhaps I should say at this time that is practically full production, because those mines are worked at capacity, and occasionally of necessity operations have to be suspended for a few days. There may be an accident in the mine; some machinery may break; there may be a bad storm through which men cannot get out to work; there may be a power failure, or something like that—so you cannot depend on a mine working every day. In other words, we had production of over four million tons of coal, and all that coal was sold. In fact, I heard last year it was difficult for the company to fulfil all its orders.

Of course, we are fortunate in this way, that back in 1963 a contract was entered into with the Ontario Hydro for the purchase of, I believe, 2.8 million tons of coal over a five-year period. The annual figure has been increasing. For example, in 1964 they sold Ontario Hydro 450,000 tons of coal. In 1965 it will be 550,000 tons; and in 1966 and 1967 it will be 750,000 tons of coal. Besides that, there is at least some reason to believe that when this contract terminates at the end of 1967 it might be renewed.

Speaking in Toronto recently, Mr. H. J. Sissons, Ontario Hydro's assistant general manager of services, mentioned this—and I quote from a report in the Halifax Chronicle-Herald of March 2 this year:

> This year—

That is, 1965.

> —the Commission will spend $28 million on coal. . . . By 1970 the figure could reach the $70 million mark. And Nova Scotia mines are almost certain to gain a portion of this.

With that prospect before us, even though we know the Ontario Hydro is going into nuclear power, it gives us an assured market for our coal production. Besides that, there is a heavy water plant being built near the mines in the town of Glace Bay, which will provide another assured market for coal.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: How much will they use?

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): I have heard it estimated anywhere from 600 to 800 tons of coal a day, but these estimates sometimes prove to be higher than the actual result.

So our problem does not seem to be a marketing one. The Dominion Coal Company mines produce over four million tons. The prospects for future sales are good. Yet again, we are experiencing a crisis because, according to its financial statement, the Dominion Coal Company lost over $1 million on its coal operations in 1964. So we ask, what is to happen?

I mentioned that we need more production with the same number of men so that the unit cost will be lower. We know that the company invited the chairman of the British National Coal Board, with one of his officials, to come to Nova Scotia. They in fact came and investigated mining methods and the like. I understand they have made a report to the company, but it has not been made public, and I do not know its contents.

As the sponsor (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Halifax North) so ably mentioned, what we would like is information. The people would like to know where they stand; what are the prospects for the future, and just what is the situation today.

Of course, people down there have heard estimates given of what is needed. There has been quite a lot of agitation to open a new coal mine, because one of the mines now in production will reach the end of its operational life before too long.

Hon. Mr. Isnor: They have opened it?

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): They are supposed to open a new mine at Lingan.

How is this going to be done? I read a speech the other day given by Mr. William Marsh, who is president of the local United Mine Workers' Union down there—and I may say that he is a responsible labour leader and is of course anxious about and concerned for the future of the industry. He claims it will take $25 million to open a new mine and to make extensive improvements in existing mines. I do not know where he got his figures, but I notice there have been no comments that his estimate is too high. If to save that industry it needs that kind of money, then it is obvious it cannot come from the $7½ million left in the fund. I think it is obvious too that any company would hesitate to invest that kind of money in an industry which lost over $1 million last year. So I will not say, if the money is to be forthcoming, where it is going to come from, but it certainly would not be available from the balance left in the fund.

The industry employs over 6,000 people, and it is certainly a major factor in the economic life of Nova Scotia.

Hon. Mr. Pearson: Is that 6,000 in Nova Scotia only?

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): Yes, in Nova Scotia. I am not talking about New Brunswick; and, of course, Alberta is a different proposition.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: You will hear about New Brunswick yet.

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): I will let someone else speak about New Brunswick.

I do not agree with the sponsor on one matter he mentioned, that young men should understand that the future of coal mining is not too good, and they should not interrupt their education to go into the mines but should obtain sufficient education to be able to migrate elsewhere. I see a fair future in the coal mining industry—and, mind you, that industry is now a highly technical one. The mining of coal is a highly skilled occupation, and in some of these modern mines it involves a terrific operation. You have to have highly skilled men to run and maintain the machines. Even if it should happen that prospects for young people are not too good in the coal mines, I do not think we should educate them for the purpose of migration. I do think we should give them the best education possible, but if coal mining is not going to be a good industry in the future, we should continue our efforts to bring better industry to Cape Breton so that those people can stay there—live there and work there.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Halifax North): Will the honourable senator permit a question?

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): Yes.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Halifax North): Perhaps I did not make myself clear. I did not suggest migration from Cape Breton. I suggested migration into other forms of industry—as I said, professional or otherwise.

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (Cape Breton): I should not have misunderstood my friend in the first place, knowing that his feelings on this subject are the same as my own.

As I said, this bill is good; it is extending the scope so that loans may be made, if they are going to be helpful. Again I echo what the sponsor said: I believe that the time has come when the coal companies could very frankly tell the people their position, let them know what their situation is, and what the difficulties are with which they are faced and what their future problems are likely to be so that we can all unite, as it were, and perhaps help them to solve their problems so as to maintain the coal industry in Nova Scotia as an industry which will benefit the whole of that province and give employment to its citizens.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Acting Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Halifax North) moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

MERCHANT SEAMEN COMPENSATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—MOTION FOR SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. John J. Connolly: I have asked the honourable Senator Rattenbury to move second reading of this bill and to explain its provisions.

Hon. Nelson Rattenbury, with leave, moved second reading of Bill C-131, to amend the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act.

He said: Honourable senators, this Bill C-131 falls into the category, I believe, of being noncontentious, and is designed to alleviate the financial standing of disabled merchant seamen, their widows and dependent children.

The explanatory notes of the bill illustrate in some detail the proposed amendments, but I feel honourable senators should be given in greater depth some of the reasons for these amendments.

The Merchant Seamen Compensation Act passed in 1946 was designed to provide the benefits of compensation to seamen who were not eligible under the Government Employees Compensation Act or under any provincial legislation covering workmen's compensation. The act, that is the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act, and its provisions, was designed on the basic principle that it would conform to those prevailing in the workmen's compensation laws of the Maritime Provinces. It was consistent, therefore, that its benefits were revised upwards in 1952 and again in 1957, by way of amendments. A further amendment is now required because of changes in provincial law and other developments.

A study of the original act and the two amendments already referred to will indicate that no provision was made to cover any retroactive application for a new level of benefits for widows and children receiving pensions under this act as a result of earlier incidents.

The present situation is such that a number of widows and children are receiving pensions under this act that are considerably less than the current rates provided either in the act or in similar cases in the Atlantic Provinces.

It is proposed that the rates be increased to $75 monthly for widows and $25 monthly for children, these higher rates to be effective from April 1, 1964. Further, in order for the scale of other benefits payable under the act to compare more favourably with the current rates and schedules of workmen's compensation provisions, it is proposed that the following changes become effective January 1, 1964:

(a) That the allowance of $25 per month for a child be extended to age 21 from age 18, if attending school;

(b) That the allowance of $35 per month for an orphan child be extended to age 21 from age 18, if attending school;

(c) That the allowance for funeral expenses be increased from $200 to $300;

(d) That the maximum amount of earnings to be used for the purpose of computing compensation be raised from $4,500 to $5,000 per year;

(e) That the minimum amount of compensation for total temporary disability or for total permanent disability be increased from $15 to $25 per week, except where earnings have been less than this amount;

(f) That the waiting period be reduced from four days to three days. I should explain that all provinces, except New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, have waiting periods of three days or less.

Honourable senators will, I feel sure, be interested in the probable costs of these retroactive changes. I am given to understand they are relatively small; i.e., in the case of the children and orphans who will attend school to age 21 it will be approximately $3,000 per year, which of course will have to be provided annually in the appropriations of the department. The total cost, including the $3,000 referred to above for the children, plus the widows' allowances being increased to $75, will be approximately $8,500, which of course will gradually be reduced as the children reach the maximum age.

Honourable senators might be interested to know that at the present time there are 16 widows in receipt of pensions of approximately $50 per month established under old awards. This bill will correct that situation. There are also 20 dependents and five orphans, and a similar correction will take place in these cases as well.

Not too much can be said about a bill of this kind; it is straightforward. It proposes simply, as I explained earlier, to amend an act already in existence and to ease the lot of those unfortunate persons who have lost a parent or husband at sea. However, if there are any questions I shall be very happy to answer them if it is within my power to do so.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: Honourable senators, I think the honourable gentleman made an excellent presentation. I congratulate him on it.

However, I would like to ask him, if the allowance to widows is to be increased to $75, what is the present allowance?

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: Fifty dollars.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Hollett, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, March 9, 1965, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, March 9, 1965

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Copy of Special Report by the International Commission for Supervision and Control in Vietnam, dated February 13, 1965, together with a Minority Statement of the Canadian Delegation to the foregoing. (English and French texts).

Copy of Special Report of the International Commission for Supervision and Control in Vietnam, dated June 2, 1962. (English and French texts).

NEW BRUNSWICK INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. Muriel McQ. Fergusson: Before the orders of the day are called, I should like to draw the attention of honourable senators to an announcement recently made by the Honourable L. J. Robichaud, Premier of New Brunswick, that a New Brunswick Industrial Council of 12 men has been created.

As you know from the economic history of New Brunswick, industry is the greatest need in that province. This council includes eminent and successful New Brunswick businessmen such as Mr. K. C. Irving, who has done so much to provide employment in our province and whose name is so well known. It also includes people from outside the province who are willing to give their assistance. One such person, is Sir Max Aitken who, in keeping with the tradition established by his father, Lord Beaverbrook, has shown a keen interest in New Brunswick affairs. The names of the others would be well known to many of you, were I to mention them. I refer to this announcement tonight because among the members of the council is the name of a man well-known in New Brunswick and throughout Canada as an outstanding businessman, and one of our own colleagues, the Honourable Senator Burchill.

PENITENTIARY ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck moved the third reading of Bill C-145, to amend the Penitentiary Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

COAL PRODUCTION ASSISTANCE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Hon. Harold Connolly moved the third reading of Bill C-147, to amend the Coal Production Assistance Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

DIVORCE

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of Resolutions, numbered 654 to 705, inclusive, which were presented on Thursday, March 4.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, moved the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolution 654, for the relief of Antoine Thomas Daigle.

Resolution 655, for the relief of Marie Micheline Alda Denise Coutu Pare.

Resolution 656, for the relief of Martyn (Martijn) Andre Plaat.

Resolution 657, for the relief of Patricia Ann Charlton Nish.

Resolution 658, for the relief of Frances Strickland Legere.

Resolution 659, for the relief of Joseph Irvin Clayton Laviolette.

Resolution 660, for the relief of Sergei A. Babkin.

Resolution 661, for the relief of Rollande Larrivee Seguin.

Resolution 662, for the relief of Ruth Barbara Ann Sevigny Baldwin.

Resolution 663, for the relief of Libuse Fiserova Leibl.

Resolution 664, for the relief of Joseph Vaglia.

Resolution 665, for the relief of Norma Beryl Crete Yetman.

Resolution 666, for the relief of Lena Bernice Gertrude Cody Kruszelnycki.

Resolution 667, for the relief of Claire Tasse Soucie.

Resolution 668, for the relief of Gwyneth Elizabeth MacKenzie Skuhrovsky.

Resolution 669, for the relief of Lorne Courtney Smith.

Resolution 670, for the relief of Judith (Judy) Mary Crocker Berretta.

Resolution 671, for the relief of Francis William Cunningham.

Resolution 672, for the relief of Cecilia Anne Searle Bowden.

Resolution 673, for the relief of Roderick Michael Doney.

Resolution 674, for the relief of Jean Paul Gervais.

Resolution 675, for the relief of Maria Graup Maximow.

Resolution 676, for the relief of Yetta (Yettie) Zilbert Fleischer.

Resolution 677, for the relief of Mary Claire Faubert Demers.

Resolution 678, for the relief of Lillian Edith Patricia Ferguson Matz.

Resolution 679, for the relief of Monique Miller Gascon.

Resolution 680, for the relief of Monique Helfman Klein.

Resolution 681, for the relief of Shirley Margaret Gallop Letchford.

Resolution 682, for the relief of Muriel White Dwoskin.

Resolution 683, for the relief of Judith Carole Carpenter Griffin.

Resolution 684, for the relief of Jeannine (Janine) Lanctot Delage.

Resolution 685, for the relief of Fay Naiman Richt.

Resolution 686, for the relief of Peter Irwin Crites.

Resolution 687, for the relief of Aime Ouellette.

Resolution 688, for the relief of Yvonne Charlebois Ally.

Resolution 689, for the relief of Muriel Constance Floud Nicholls.

Resolution 690, for the relief of Margaret Irene Jones Whatmore.

Resolution 691, for the relief of Jean Maurice Bailly.

Resolution 692, for the relief of Pauline Lalanne Marcil.

Resolution 693, for the relief of Alexander Stewart Macpherson.

Resolution 694, for the relief of Jeanine Dubeau Klotzbuher.

Resolution 695, for the relief of Daphne Cockburn Rousseau.

Resolution 696, for the relief of Jean Pierre Louis Michaud.

Resolution 697, for the relief of Marie Antoinette Mireille Palin Normand.

Resolution 698, for the relief of Joseph Wenceslas Bernard Pare.

Resolution 699, for the relief of Raymond Belanger.

Resolution 700, for the relief of Ann Fuller Hunt Samson.

Resolution 701, for the relief of Philippe Leo Menard.

Resolution 702, for the relief of Jane Margaret Grace Ogilvie Manson.

Resolution 703, for the relief of Bernice Ostroff Jones.

Resolution 704, for the relief of Blanche Marguerite D'aoust Kalpakjian.

Resolution 705, for the relief of Lise Blais Wong.

Resolutions adopted, on division.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENTS CONCURRED IN

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-7, to amend the Canada Shipping Act.

Hon. Paul H. Bouffard moved that the amendments be concurred in.

He said: Honourable senators, I am sure you recall the amendments which we made to the Canada Shipping Act last spring. The bill came back from the House of Commons only a few days ago with some amendments made there, arising out of circumstances which did not exist earlier. They are simple amendments that have been carried by the Commons, and I wish to give some explanation regarding them.

Section 87 of the act is being amended by substituting the "National Flag of Canada" for the British flag mentioned in that article. When we passed Bill S-7 there was no National Flag of Canada.

Section 89 of the act is similarly being amended, to replace the Red Ensign by the National Flag of Canada, which will be used in navigation, on Canadian ships and in such places. The section provides that a penalty shall be imposed on anyone who misuses the British flag or the Red Ensign. Under section 91 there is to be a penalty on anyone misusing the National Flag of Canada, for example, by trying to make people believe that some foreign ship belongs to Canada or is under Canadian nationality. Heretofore, the fine was $2,500; by amendment it is being reduced to $500.

As a consequence of these amendments some sections of the act have had to be re-numbered.

Clause 37 of Bill S-7 dealt with the coming into force of certain portions of the bill. The amendments in this respect are as follows:

> 40. (1) Section 1, sections 9 to 30 and section 39 of this Act shall come into force with respect to Canadian ships, and with respect to ships registered in any other country on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council.

(2) Section 6 and section 38 of this Act shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council.

Section 391 of the Act, which appeared as clause 7 of the bill, is renumbered clause 10, The only amendment made is in the first two paragraphs of this section, where there is a reference to the Canadian Safety Convention. The new amendment, section 1(b), refers to subsections (1) and (1a), where the Canadian Safety Convention is mentioned. The reason for the amendment is that there is now a new definition of the Canadian Safety Convention.

Another amendment was made to clause 16, renumbered as clause 19, concerning what is called a valid cargo ship, and the provisions relating to Safety Convention cargo ships will now apply to cargo ships of 500 tons and over instead of 300 tons.

All the amendments were made according to recommendations by the Department of Transport, and were accepted by the House of Commons. They really change nothing except concerning the substitution of the National Flag of Canada for the Red Ensign, which was in use at that time; and also that the Canadian Safety Convention shall apply to ships being of 500 tons instead of 300 tons.

Since the amendments make no major change in the bill, and the clarifications were recommended by the department, I would suggest that it is not necessary to send the bill back to committee. However, if the Senate wishes to consider these amendments in committee, I have no objection whatsoever.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, I think it is quite obvious to all of us that certain further changes were necessary in this bill, which was before the Senate in June of last year and was passed by the Senate on, I believe, June 17. At that time, as we all know, the Red Ensign was Canada's flag. Since then we have a new flag, and the sections which have been mentioned by the honourable Senator Bouffard necessarily had to be amended. Those sections are sections 87, 89 and 91, which have to do with the flying of a flag over our merchant marine.

Like the sponsor of the bill, I do not see any necessity for this particular bill going back to committee, since the changes are quite obvious.

One thing which occurs to me is that after so many years it is perhaps going to be a little difficult for people in other parts of the world, where our ships have been sailing for nearly a hundred years, to recognize the change from the old to the new flag. Indeed, that might take some time. However, the sad point is that we have not much of a Canadian merchant marine to carry the Canadian flag to foreign ports at the present time. At one time, as the people of the Maritimes well know, we had many ships carrying the Canadian flag in all parts of the world. Now I think you could number the ships of the Canadian merchant deep sea marine on the fingers of your two hands.

I have read the sections of the bill that were mentioned by the honourable sponsor. I am not particularly good at drafting legislation, but I think these amendments have been very well drafted. As a matter of fact, they repeat for the most part the old sections of the bill, substituting the National Flag of Canada, for the Red Ensign.

I also agree with the sponsor of the bill regarding the other amendments he mentioned. And I read from Mr. MacGillivray's evidence before the House of Commons Standing Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines of Thursday, February 18 last. When speaking of these other amendments he had this to say:

> It is just that in the drafting of these sections, which are highly technical, two errors have been made and were not caught by the technical people until after the bill was passed through the Senate. Since it is going to have to go back to the Senate anyway, we would like to correct these two errors. One appears in clause 7, section 391—

As mentioned by the honourable sponsor.

> —and the other is in clause 16, section 402. In each case it is just a minor error which we made. The very words that Mr. Cameron mentioned appear in line 31 on page 5 which refer to "not a Safety Convention ship". What we ought to have said is a ship that is not a ship described in subsections 1 or 1(a). I have prepared and have ready for circulation changes in those two clauses that would make them read properly in accordance with the convention.

So far as the changes in the other sections are concerned, they are necessitated by the change in the flag; and as far as this section is concerned, it corrects an error. Therefore, I am in perfect agreement with the suggestion that there is no necessity for sending this bill back to the committee.

Hon. A. K. Hugessen: I think, honourable senators, I might be allowed to say a word in support of what Senator Bouffard and the leader on the other side (Hon. Mr. Brooks) have said.

Honourable senators will remember that in the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications we considered this bill in the greatest of detail, over quite a number of sittings during the months of May and June last year. Now, as a result of circumstances over which we have no control, the House of Commons has not been able to deal with this bill until very recently.

We did make a number of important amendments to the bill in the form in which it originally came to us, and they were incorporated in the bill as it went to the House of Commons.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: And they were not changed.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: No, they were not changed.

I was going to say that I support what the leader on the other side has said and what Senator Bouffard has just said. These additional changes are really matters of detail and form. Honourable senators can be assured that they in no way change the principles on which we agreed when we put the bill through last June.

I think, under those circumstances, there is hardly any necessity for the bill to go back to the standing committee.

Amendments concurred in.

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

BILL TO AMEND CERTAIN ACTS—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from March 5 the adjourned debate on the motion of Honourable Mr. Lang for second reading of Bill C-123, to amend certain acts administered in the Department of Insurance.

Hon. George S. White: Honourable senators, may I first offer my congratulations to Senator Lang for the very capable manner in which he introduced this most complicated piece of legislation. The honourable senator used the word "formidable", and then he said the bill was "not quite as formidable as it might appear at first glance."

Honourable senators, I think it is formidable. The detailed provisions of the bill are very complicated, and the amendments are many and, in some cases, at least in my opinion, very technical.

This bill is of great importance, and I fully agree with the honourable senator that it should go to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, where I am sure many honourable senators will require much detailed information as to the amendments and changes which will be made in the four acts being amended by the bill.

The honourable senator who introduced the bill stated at page 1348 of Hansard that behind this bill there are two basic policy objectives. He said:

> The first basic policy objective is to expand the investment powers of all insurance, loan and trust companies that come under federal jurisdiction. The second basic policy objective is to ensure that those Canadian life insurance, trust and loan companies, coming under federal jurisdiction, which are still Canadian owned, will retain their Canadian ownership and control.

The first item is the increase from 15 to 25 per cent of the book value of the total assets of the company in common stocks. I understand that at the present time less than 4 per cent of the total assets of insurance companies are invested in common stocks, and of that amount one-fifth is invested in non-Canadian companies. Of course, some companies may have invested up to the full 15 per cent allowed under the present act, while other companies have only invested 1, 2 or 3 per cent. Provision is also made for investment in companies with only a five-year record of dividends of at least 4 per cent. The present record is over a seven-year period. There is further provision that investment can be made in a company whether or not the dividend has been paid.

This is a most important amendment, and one that can only be dealt with in committee, but it does appear that with less than 4 per cent of the total assets now invested in common stocks the present opportunity for such investment is not being used to full advantage.

Why then, you may readily ask, is it necessary to increase it by 10 per cent, bringing the amount allowed up to 25 per cent? It will probably mean that the companies which now have 15 per cent investment, or nearly that, will be encouraged to buy more common stocks, while the more cautious and prudent companies will only moderately increase their holdings in common stocks. It will be most interesting in committee to find out what companies have requested this amendment and their reasons for doing so.

The honourable senator who introduced the bill stated, at page 1348 of Hansard, as follows:

> Many of these amendments have come about at the request of, and, indeed, after consultation with, the various financial institutions affected by the legislation.

The idea is that Canadians' savings in insurance companies and other companies are to be channelled into sound Canadian companies to add to the country's general prosperity and to Canadianize its economy. I am sure no one is going to quarrel with that intent but, as pointed out before, less than 4 per cent of the assets of federally registered life insurance companies in Canada are invested in common stocks, and about one-fifth of these common stocks are those of non-Canadian companies. You may then well ask what purpose will be served by increasing the limit from 15 to 25 per cent.

The Montreal Gazette of September 28, 1964 had a very pertinent comment on this very point. The relevant part of the editorial reads as follows:

> The funds of life insurance companies, and other financial institutions, are already fully invested. No such company leaves its funds lying about in idleness. The new measures will encourage life insurance companies to invest up to 25 per cent of their funds in common stocks. Though the limit for such investment has previously been raised to 15 per cent, life insurance companies have so far placed only about 4 per cent in common stocks.
>
> Even supposing that full advantage were to be taken of the new 25 per cent investment ceiling in common stocks, this could be accomplished only by relatively diminishing the money placed in other securities, such as bonds, debentures or mortgages. Would the money needed for the economic growth of Canada, or for a greater degree of Canadian ownership of Canadian industries, be enlarged if this shift in investment patterns took place?

I would suggest a reduction in the present heavy corporation tax so that common stocks would pay higher dividends to owners, and these stocks would become more attractive investments for these companies and also to Canadians who want to invest directly or indirectly in their country's future.

I would also suggest that an increase of rate from the present 20 per cent reduction in income tax on dividends from Canadian tax-paying corporations would be an added inducement to Canadians to invest in Canadian corporations. I think everyone will agree that tax cuts, together with revision of the tax structure, will do more to stimulate Canadian investment to ensure Canadian control than any other device or amendment.

The increase of the mortgage loan percentage to 75 per cent is an amendment that must cause concern to many honourable senators. Those who have practised law over the years can well remember when the percentage was much lower, even below 50 per cent. I can well remember when 50 per cent was the top limit for a mortgage loan by many mortgage companies still doing business in Ontario today. This figure was gradually increased to 66⅔ per cent, and now under this bill we are asked to increase the value of the loans to 75 per cent of the appraised value. I am of the opinion that 75 per cent is too high, and I hope the committee will give serious consideration to this amendment. After all, real estate values today are inflated, and I do not think a mortgage for 75 per cent on real estate is a safe investment for trust funds or for other people's money. If you want to make a good test of this, ask yourself if you are willing to invest your own money or your wife's money in such an investment.

Hon. Mr. Farris: What is the reason for proposing this increase?

Hon. Mr. White: I hope that is something that we will be told about in committee. The present rate is 66⅔ per cent, and it is now proposed to increase it to 75 per cent, but what the reason is, I cannot tell you. However, I have noticed in the press that one of the suggested reasons is that people would not have to pay the exorbitant rate required for getting second mortgages. I have also noticed in the press that some institutions lend up to 82 and 83 per cent on first mortgages. Perhaps the persons or companies who are interested in this amendment will be able to give the members of the committee the reason why they feel that they should be allowed to lend money up to 75 per cent of the appraised value.

In clause 3 of the bill, section 16B deals with definitions, two of which I want to comment on briefly. The first is the definition of a nonresident. A "nonresident" is "an individual who is not ordinarily resident in Canada." A "resident" means "an individual, corporation or trust that is not a nonresident."

Now, as honourable senators know, these two definitions have much to do with the Canadian control of the corporation. Therefore, would it not be much better to say, "Canadian citizens ordinarily resident in Canada."? As these definitions of a resident and a nonresident of Canada now read, I think they will only lead to complete confusion. Furthermore, I am unable to find anything in the bill as to who is to make the decision as to whether a shareholder is a resident or a nonresident. I presume it will be the duty of the Board of Directors to make this decision, and they will have to decide whether or not the shareholder or their prospective purchaser is a resident or nonresident. The bill provides no rules or regulations for the guidance of the directors. This could easily lead to the situation where one board of directors would decide that John Doe was a resident of Canada and, as such, entitled to the transfer of the shares, while the board of directors of another company could very easily decide that the same John Doe was not a resident of Canada and therefore not entitled to the transfer of the shares to his name.

There are certain penalties on nonresidents and for the clarification of all boards of directors of companies covered by this legislation, there should have been some yardstick established such as that in the Income Tax Act.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: May I ask my friend a question? There is a very long definition of "nonresident" in section 3 of the bill.

Hon. Mr. White: Is that on page 2?

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: Yes, page 2.

Hon. Mr. White: That is the one I read. Paragraph (c) defines "nonresident", and paragraph (d) defines "resident". But as far as the bill is concerned, apart from those two definitions, I am unable to find anything else that would assist in defining who is a resident and who is a non-resident.

The bill speaks of a nonresident as being an individual who is not ordinarily resident in Canada. Just what is meant by a person "ordinarily resident in Canada"? Does this mean a period of six months in each year, or a period of 180 days, or just what does it mean? This is another important point which I feel can be dealt with more fully in committee.

The same section 16B, subparagraph (iv) raises a question as to who is to determine the degree of residence, and who is to determine whether or not there has been direct control by a trust. Is it to be the Superintendent of Insurance who can determine whether there is such interest control under the trust? I think it is important for honourable senators to be told in committee who the person or persons are who are to be the judge of matters of this kind, and whether there is any appeal from whatever decision they make. For instance, what recourse would a corporation have with regard to an adverse decision as to the residence of one of the shareholders, and whether there was a breach of the rules through indirect trust?

It appears to me there is a considerable administrative problem placed on the transfer agents who keep day-to-day records of the ownership of shares of any of the companies which are covered by this bill. Perhaps there are only two or three hundred companies involved, but after all the bill provides for investment in subsidiaries, the creation of subsidiaries, controlling interest by life insurance companies, trust companies, loan companies, etc., as well as the participation by other life insurance companies in the acquisition of certain assets. All this represents more shareholders, and therefore the transfer agents must keep careful watch on who owns what number of shares and see that they do not go over the indicated percentage.

In the same editorial in the Montreal Gazette there is a paragraph on this very matter, which reads as follows:

> These measures may prove difficult to administer. Only certain percentages of capital stock, shares in these companies may in future be held by nonresidents. But as these shares are often actively traded on a number of markets, what is to happen when the sales are drawing close to the line that has been set as the limit? It may be hard to know, from day to day, whether more than the permissible stock has been sold to foreign buyers, or which buyer bought stock, just before the line was reached.

There are a number of other amendments, complicated and technical, which can be much better dealt with in committee. For example, there is the right of trust and loan companies to borrow up to the maximum of 15 times the excess of their assets over liabilities; the extension of investments in leases and leaseholds; the right under the act of trust and loan companies and life insurance companies to invest in real estate companies; the complicated problems involved in the duty cast on directors to refuse the transfer of stock when such transfer would bring the total shareholdings of nonresidents to over 25 percent of the outstanding capital of the company, or the transfer to a nonresident of more than 10 per cent in the capital stock of the company.

These and many other items of the bill will, no doubt, be carefully and fully considered in the Banking and Commerce Committee.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Hayden, debate adjourned.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS FINANCING AND GUARANTEE BILL, 1964

SECOND READING

Hon. Eric Cook moved the second reading of Bill C-137, to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways System for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railway Company.

He said: Honourable senators, may I begin by thanking the honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly) for his confidence in entrusting the explanation of this bill to me. I have studied the bill carefully, and have had the advantages of reading the speech of the sponsor of this measure in the other place, and also the very clear and informative speech that the honourable Leader of the Government made in this house when he introduced the Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee Bill, 1962-63. This, therefore, is a bill similar in nature to those that have come before, and which have been passed by Parliament in every year with the exception of two since 1952. Its provisions, therefore, will be familiar to most honourable senators.

In seeking some words or expressions which would convey the main purpose of the bill in the shortest possible way, there came to my mind remarks that certain honourable senators made during last Friday's sitting. When introducing the bill relating to life insurance and other companies Senator Lang used the expression "housekeeping amendments". Later, when explaining the bill to amend the Penitentiary Act, Senator Roebuck gave his approval to the use of that expression. May I now concur with those two eminent members of the legal profession, and also use this expression in pointing out that the main object or purpose of this bill now under discussion is to provide for some necessary housekeeping expenses of the Canadian National Railways and of T.C.A., which is, of course, now Air Canada.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: It is pretty expensive housekeeping.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It is a pretty big house.

Hon. Mr. Cook: Indeed, the measure has a striking resemblance to the ordinary every day matter of housekeeping expenses. We are now in the year 1965, and it is to be noted that the bill deals with expenses incurred in 1964. This will not strike any honourable senator who is lucky enough to enjoy the married status as unusual or out of the way. Indeed, as is well known to all those who occupy the position which in the good old days was described as "head of the household", housekeeping expenses are generally applied for long after the money has been well and truly spent.

However, I hasten to explain that the situation is not what it seems to be. A study of this bill will show that its provisions do not require Parliament to grant any money. The true position is that by section 37 of the Canadian National Railways Act, the C.N.R. is instructed each year to prepare its capital budget, and if this capital budget is recommended by both the Minister of Transport and the Minister of Finance it may be approved by order of the Governor in Council, whereupon the C.N.R. may proceed according to the provisions of the approved budget.

For the year 1964, which is the year with which we are dealing, this has been done. It must be pointed out at the outset that most of the funds authorized to be spent by this capital budget are funds arising from the C.N.R.'s own operations.

The capital budget, of course, relates to only capital amounts. In so far as the bill relates to operational figures for 1964, I should point out that it was introduced in the other place on November 10, 1964 and except for the unusual pressure of business at that time would, in due course, have reached us in the calendar year 1964.

With these few preliminary remarks may I now do my best to explain the bill, clause by clause?

Clauses 1 and 2, which contain the short title and definitions, do not, I think, require any comment.

Clause 3, under the heading "Capital Expense", in subclause (1) merely sets out the capital budget of the C.N.R. for 1964, which budget, as I have already explained, has been duly approved. It provides that the C.N.R. may make capital expenditures of $155 million during the calendar year 1964. This amount of $155 million is spread over the railway operations as follows:

Road property	$77,821,000.
Branch lines	500,000.
Equipment	55,200,000.
Telecommunications	16,884,000.
Hotels	3,595,000.
Investment in affiliated companies	1,000,000.

It should be noted that the C.N.R. is authorized to make these capital expenditures. As I have said, this does not mean that Parliament has to provide this amount. The only amount which Parliament may have to provide is, firstly, the amount necessary to purchase the C.N.R. preferred shares referred to in section 12 of the bill, and, secondly, whatever may be the sum total of the annual deficit of the C.N.R. Authority to provide the deficit for 1964 will be found in section 9, to which we will come in due course.

As a matter of fact the C.N.R. generated from its own operations over $130 million of the total capital expenditure of $155 million. This $130 million came from depreciation accruals, salvage and amortization. The balance of the $155 million will come from the sale of preferred shares of the C.N.R. which I will deal with when explaining clause 12.

The remaining subparagraphs of clause 3 (1), namely, (b) and (c), give power to the railway to make accrued capital expenditures for the first six months of 1965, up to $72 million and to enter into contracts not exceeding $36 million. These authorities are necessary only because sums due for work ordered in 1964 may not become payable until the first part of 1965.

Subclauses 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 of clause 3 are merely ancillary provisions empowering the C.N.R. to borrow, with the approval of the Governor in Council, from the Minister of Finance for the purposes of paragraph (b) of subclause 1, and to borrow by the sale of securities for the purposes of clause 6 of the bill. These clauses contain provisions making it necessary for the C.N.R. to prepare statements of amounts borrowed, to prepare estimates of amounts required, and to include amounts payable under contracts authorized by paragraph (c) of subclause 1 in its annual budget. These clauses are all of a technical nature.

Clause 4 of the bill permits the C.N.R., with the approval of the Governor in Council, to issue up to a limit of $5 million of securities to provide amounts required by T.C.A., now Air Canada.

Clause 5 gives power to the Government to guarantee the $5 million referred to in clause 4.

Clause 6 authorizes the Minister of Finance, with the approval of the Governor in Council, to make a loan to the C.N.R. of the amount of $5 million required by T.C.A.

Clauses 4, 5 and 6 together, therefore, make it possible for the estimated amount of $5 million required by T.C.A. as interim financing for the first six months of 1965 to be provided by the C.N.R. issuing government guaranteed securities, or by the Government itself making the money available.

Clause 7 permits the C.N.R. to aid and assist financially any of its subsidiary companies by making advances to the subsidiary, and clause 8 provides that the proceeds of any loans guaranteed by the Government are first to be paid to, and are under the control of, the Minister of Finance, who will then pay the moneys to the C.N.R.

Clause 9 permits the Minister of Finance to make available amounts to the C.N.R. if its own revenues are not sufficient, which amounts are subsequently to be repaid out of C.N.R. revenues or, if such revenues are lacking, it provides that they "shall be provided for by subsequent deficit appropriations by Parliament." Honourable senators will be interested to hear that the probable liability of the Government under this clause is of the order of $38,700,000, which is the amount of the deficit of the C.N.R. for the year 1964. However, this bill authorizes the Minister of Finance to advance only this amount.

Clause 10 permits the minister to make available funds to pay any deficits of Air Canada.

Clause 11 extends the period within which the $100 million loaned by the Government to the C.N.R. under the provisions of Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act shall continue to be interest free until the 1st day of January, 1966. Honourable senators are aware, under the provisions of that Act, authority was given to the Minister of Finance to purchase 4 per cent preferred stock of the C.N.R. up to a limit each year of 3 per cent of the gross revenue of the railway. This authority expired December 31, 1964, and the object of clause 12 is to extend this authority to December 31, 1965.

The purpose of clause 13 is to increase to $680 million the limitation, in the Canadian National Railway Refunding Act, 1955, placed on the authority to refund maturing or matured securities of the railway company. The limit at present is $480 million, and it is desirable to increase this limit in order to give the railway company the authority to refund bonds maturing in the years 1966 to 1968.

Finally, clause 14 appoints the well-known firm of chartered accountants of Touche, Ross, Bailey and Smart as independent auditors to make a continuous audit of the C.N.R. accounts for the year 1965.

Honourable senators, if this bill receives second reading I will move that it be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications.

Hon. Walter M. Aseltine: Honourable senators, it was my responsibility in years gone by to introduce several of these financing and capital expenditure bills in connection with the operations of the Canadian National Railway. In order to refresh my memory, I looked up the bill which I introduced in 1959. That bill I found contained much more detailed explanatory notes than the present Bill C-137 now before us. To understand this bill properly, one would need to refer back to the budget of the Canadian National Railway for the details. I suggest that in future, when bills of this kind are introduced, more detailed explanatory notes should be printed on the right hand pages.

The bill I introduced in June 1959 provided for the financing and capital expenditures for the year 1959 and for the first six months of 1960. The bill now before us is a little different in that respect. After the 1959 bill received second reading, I moved that it be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications. That committee met later, it reported the bill, the report was adopted and the bill was given third reading.

Bill C-137 now provides for the same things as were provided for by the bill which I introduced in June 1959. The present bill provides for the financing and capital expenditures of the national railway for the year 1964—which has gone by—and for the first six months of 1965. It is quite late in reaching us. At the resolution stage on November 10 last, it was debated briefly in the other place, only four members taking part. Then a long period elapsed before it was presented for second reading on March 4, 1965. Why was there such a delay? In the meantime, most of the money would be spent and we could do little but pass the bill.

On the second reading in the other place there was no debate whatsoever. The bill was given second and third readings in a matter of a moment or two.

I am pleased that the sponsor of the bill suggests that, if we wish, he will move that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications. I remember when the 1959 bill was referred to the standing committee, the railway officials appeared and we obtained much more detailed information than we would ordinarily obtain on second reading. I would like to obtain full details of the capital spending program. I would also like to find out if any of the borrowed money is ever paid back, or how it is dealt with as the years go by.

There is a further question which I should like to ask in the committee and also of the sponsor of the bill here this evening. What plans are in the offing, if any, for refinancing the whole Canadian National Railway debt structure? This debt now amounts to a very large sum, $680 million, as I gather from reading this bill.

Honourable senators may have forgotten that in the early 1950's a royal commission reported on the refinancing of the whole Canadian National Railway debt structure. Certain refinancing took place then. Mr. Gordon was of the opinion that the refinancing at that time would put the company in a surplus position. For two or three years he proved to be right but, taking it over the years from that time up to now, he has been quite wrong. For a brief period the refinancing helped quite a lot. In 1955 there was a surplus of $10 million; in 1956 there was a surplus of $26 million; but in 1957 there was a deficit of approximately $29 million; in 1958 there was a deficit of almost $52 million; and in 1959 there was a deficit of $43.5 million; in 1960 there was a deficit of $67.5 million; and so on. We should be furnished with all of the figures for 1961, 1962, 1963 and 1964.

Honourable senators, these deficits are taken care of usually by means of supplementary estimates. I remember that in 1961 I introduced certain supplementary estimates and a bill based on those estimates; and the Government wrote off, forgave, and cancelled the deficit for the previous year. Therefore, I presume that supplementary estimates will be introduced in connection with these railway operations and the deficit for 1964, if any, at some time before Parliament is prorogued. If not, it will come at a later time, probably between now and the expiration of the six months' period at the end of June next.

The sponsor of the bill referred briefly to clauses 9 and 10 and said that advances made from time to time by the Minister of Finance are reimbursed out of the revenues of the railway company and that any insufficiency shall be provided for by a subsequent deficit appropriation by Parliament. Clause 9 (2) reads:

> All amounts placed at the disposal of the National Company pursuant to subsection (1) shall be reimbursed to the Minister of Finance from the annual revenues of the National System in so far as such revenues are sufficient, and any insufficiency shall be provided for by subsequent deficit appropriation by Parliament.

Subsection (2) of section 10 does the same thing with regard to advances to Trans-Canada Air Lines. In other words, these deficits are cancelled and absorbed by Parliament.

Honourable senators, that is the gist of my remarks at this time. As I said before, I am pleased that the matter will go to committee, and I hope that officers of Canadian National Railways, and perhaps officers of Trans-Canada Air Lines, now known as Air Canada, will be present to answer questions.

Hon. A. K. Hugessen: Honourable senators, this is a bill which comes before us every year. I believe it has come before us every year since I have been a member of this chamber.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: In answer to the last remarks of my honourable friend (Hon. Mr. Aseltine), I think that the Senate will realize that this is the opportunity which is afforded to this house each year to inquire into the affairs of the Canadian National Railways and Air Canada; and I think honourable senators who have been members of the Committee on Transport and Communications will agree with me, that every time such a bill has come before that committee we have been furnished by the officers of those two companies with the very fullest information that we could possibly require.

I am very glad that my honourable friend directed the attention of the chamber this evening to two or three things on which he wanted particular information, because it has been my experience, and I think the experience of all of us in that committee, that the officers of the Canadian National and of Air Canada are very careful to read the debate on the second reading of this bill and then later, when the bill has been referred to committee, to come prepared to answer the questions which honourable senators have raised on second reading.

I think perhaps when my friend asked the sponsor of this bill (Hon. Mr. Cook) what program has been evolved for the revision of the whole capital debt structure of the Canadian National Railways, he had his tongue in his cheek, because that obviously is a matter of Government policy, which neither the sponsor of the bill nor myself, nor any other member, with the possible exception of my honourable friend the Leader (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West), knows anything about.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Include me as well.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: There is one feature of these annual Canadian National financing bills which interests me to some considerable extent. If I understood my honourable friend the sponsor rightly, he said that the very large bulk of the capital expenditures provided for in this bill have been provided by the Canadian National Railways itself out of its earnings that have been set aside for depreciation, and so on, and that there is very little, if any, new money required. Did he give a figure for the new money?

Hon. Mr. Cook: The new money that comes from the C.N.R. is about $130 million, and the balance of $23 million comes from the purchase of the preferred stock.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: So there is no additional capital indebtedness of any kind?

Hon. Mr. Cook: Well, there would be in the preferred stock.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: The interesting feature about the general picture of Canadian National Railways financing, as it has gone on over the last eight or ten years, has been this: Honourable senators will remember that we have been told that there was a very large capital program underway for the refurbishing of the whole railway system, and in particular the construction at great expense of these new freight terminals in the big centres, such as Montreal and Toronto.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Hump yards.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: Hump yards, and so on; and also for a great deal of new equipment. That big capital expenditure now appears to have come to an end, because for the last year or two, as has happened in this year, and as was explained by my honourable friend, for this year the C.N.R. in fact does not require any additional financing by way of additional capital debt, and seems to have reached the position today where it can generate the funds it requires out of its own earnings.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Cook: Honourable senators, I move that this bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, in speaking to the motion, I am quite sure that it would not be possible to have this committee meet tomorrow. It might be possible to arrange for the Canadian National officials and the Air Canada officials, and others who will be called, to be available before the end of this week. It is possible that the committee could meet on Thursday. In any event, notices will be sent out, and we will determine as quickly as possible when the committee can be assembled.

Motion agreed to.

MERCHANT SEAMEN COMPENSATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from March 5, the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Rattenbury for second reading of Bill C-131, to amend the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act.

Hon. Malcolm Hollett: Honourable senators, it is not my intention to detain the members here late tonight. I adjourned the debate last Friday because I felt at the time it was too late to proceed, only to discover later that this item was put at the bottom of the business on the Order Paper.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I think it was the rules which produced that result. It was accidental, not designed.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Honourable senators, I congratulate the honourable Senator Rattenbury on the explanation he gave of this bill, though I may have one or two corrections I may wish to make.

In my opinion, this bill is more important than a good many Canadians, including many of us in this chamber, realize. If Canada is to become a great nation, the merchant seamen will constitute one of the biggest struts upon which we can build. You cannot have a nation without seamen; you cannot have a nation without merchant seamen. I can assure this house that unless we can improve this legislation very soon we shall not have any merchant seamen to man the ships which, according to Senator Brooks' statement a short time ago, are almost non-existent. It is nonsense to build ships if you have not the seamen to man them.

Honourable senators, this act was passed in 1946. It was amended in 1952, again in 1957, and now it is to be amended again. Very slowly the legislation is improving, but not very much. The act of 1946 provided that a seaman would not receive compensation unless he was disabled for a period of at least seven days. Well, in seven days a man could starve, particularly a merchant seaman if he was not getting any more money than he was getting then. The time limit for payment of compensation for disabled seamen was reduced to four days in 1953, and now it is down to three. That particular section is not so objectionable.

I come to the next amendment Section 30(1) of the act of 1946, which provided that where the death of a seaman resulted from an injury, burial expenses not exceeding $125 would be paid. I would like to ask honourable senators what kind of burial you could give a sailor or anybody for $125 in 1946? This limit is now being raised to $300, and I can assure you that the widow will have to pay more than that to bury her deceased husband who dies from injuries. I think we could have been a little more generous than that. Any honourable senator who has had to do with the burial of a friend, neighbour or relative knows that it costs a lot more than that to put a man under the ground, and a merchant seaman's wife, as a rule, does not have sufficient money laid aside for that purpose.

While I am speaking on this point, I made an inquiry today as to how many Canadian seamen were lost at sea during World War II, and I was informed that there were 1,146 such casualties. Of these, 677 were on ships of Canadian registry; 461, mind you, were on ships of other than Canadian registry, and eight were prisoners-of-war who had been repatriated but were lost.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Casualties were heavier in the merchant service than in the regular forces.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Much heavier in proportion; a total of 1,146. By way of illustration, if there were 50 senators here tonight the number of seamen lost in the Second World War would be equal to 23 times that number. That represents a lot of men. They did not go all at once, but one by one, or half a dozen or 20 or so at a time, as their ships were sunk.

It is not only during wartime that merchant seamen have to risk their lives to help build this nation. It is all the time; in every storm that blows they are running risks, and a good many of them are dying. It would pay Canadians to see to it that compensation for injuries, sickness and death is a little more liberal in the future than it is now; otherwise, you will not have Canadians serving on our merchant ships, if in fact you have any merchant ships. You will have people coming from depressed areas in other countries to man these ships. Canadians are not going to serve on them unless they can get fair and proper treatment. I do not have to say any more than that, because you know that what I am saying is correct.

In 1946, under section 30(1)(e)—Senator Rattenbury went into most of these things, and I hope that he will not mind if I repeat some of them—it was provided that:

> where the dependants are a widow or an invalid husband and one or more children, a monthly payment of forty-five dollars with an additional monthly payment of ten dollars to be increased upon the death of the widow or invalid husband to twenty dollars for each child under the age of eighteen years—

would be paid. That was in 1946. That was later raised, and the present section 30(2)(f) provides:

> where the dependants are children only, a monthly payment of thirty-five dollars
>
> (i) to each child under the age of eighteen years, and
>
> (ii) with the approval of the Board, to each child under the age of twenty-one years who is attending school;

In connection with that, I would like to refer to Senate Hansard of Friday last, when the sponsor of the bill, Senator Rattenbury, was asked by the honourable Senator Burchill:

> ...I would like to ask him, if the allowance to widows is to be increased to $75, what is the present allowance?

And the sponsor replied: "Fifty dollars." I may be mistaken, but I do not think it is correct, because if I refer back to the Statutes of 1957 I find that:

> Paragraphs (d), (e) and (f) of subsection (1) of section 30 of the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act are repealed and the following substituted therefor:
>
> "(d) where the widow or invalid husband is the sole dependant, a monthly payment of seventy-five dollars...

is paid. That was in 1957, so it could not have been $50 since then; it had to be $75.

The 1957 amendment states further:

> (e) Where the dependants are a widow or an invalid husband and one or more children, a monthly payment of seventy-five dollars with an additional monthly payment of twenty-five dollars to be increased upon the death of the widow or invalid husband to thirty-five dollars for each child under the age of eighteen years;

So the compensation to a widow was $75 and not $50. I am quite sure that if the sponsor looks at that he will see whether I am right or he is. As I say, at page 1361 of Hansard he says $50.

Going on from there, we see then that in 1946 the widow got $45. From then until 1952 she received $45, and then she received $50, until in 1957 she received $75. Then we come to this bill.

There is one amendment here that does not mean a thing, and that is clause 2(2), which states:

> Paragraphs (e) and (f) of subsection (1) of section 30 of the said Act are repealed and the following substituted therefor:

It quotes paragraph (e), and it quotes it exactly the same, word for word, as it is in the Statutes of 1957, but it still says that is repealed. In that instance I take it that "repealed" is a misnomer. The only change is in subparagraph (ii) of paragraph (e), which states:

> with the approval of the Board, for each child under the age of twenty-one who is attending school;

Paragraph (e) reads:

> Where the dependants are a widow or an invalid husband and one or more children, a monthly payment of seventy-five dollars with an additional monthly payment of twenty-five dollars to be increased upon the death of the widow or invalid husband to thirty-five dollars.

That is exactly the same as in the Statutes of 1957. As I say, the only change is that the child will get $35 up to 21 years of age.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Do I understand the honourable senator to say that in section 30, as it stands now, the provision of the amendment at the bottom of page 1—namely, paragraph (e)(ii)—which has the black line to the left of it, is in the present statute?

If I may perhaps help a little further, it seems to be indicated in the explanatory note, and in the device used on the left-hand page, that the subparagraph marked (ii) is a new one.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Honourable senators, would you look at this particular page, page 1 of the bill, section 2, subsection 2(e), where it says:

> where the dependants are a widow or an invalid husband and one or more children, a monthly payment of seventy-five dollars with an additional monthly payment of twenty-five dollars to be increased upon the death of the widow or invalid husband to thirty-five dollars—

That is exactly the same as we find in the present paragraph (e) of the act of 1957.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: That is not repealed at all; it still remains there. The only change is that in subclause 2(e) (ii) where it says:

> ...for each child under the age of twenty-one years who is attending school.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): That is the amendment provided in this bill.

Hon. Mr. Kinley: Honourable senators, this is a bill to rectify what was considered an injustice, in that certain widows did not qualify for the $75 a month in the 1957 amendment. It is also supposed to correct the fact that that bill was not retroactive.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Do you mean in 1957?

Hon. Mr. Kinley: In 1957 it was $75.

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: Perhaps the honourable senator will allow me to explain this. When I replied to Senator Burchill on Friday I think I was correct in my reply. The bill is not retroactive. The widows at the moment in receipt of a pension are obtaining $50.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: They are obtaining only $50 now? What about the 1957 Act? It says in the Act of 1957 that it should come into force on proclamation by the Governor in Council. I take it, it was proclaimed shortly after that.

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: There were no claims after that.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: I would point out that the honourable Senator Rattenbury stated on page 1361:

It is proposed that the rates be increased to $75 monthly for widows and $25 monthly for children, these higher rates to be effective from April 1, 1964.

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Surely they got that since 1957.

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: That is not my understanding. There have been no claims by widows since 1957.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Simply because there were no casualties, there were no claims. That is a different thing altogether. Were there no merchant seamen lost since 1957? Well, that is something I cannot quite understand.

Now, I do not intend to say much more on this. There is clause 38(1) as amended, whereby the amount paid to the injured seaman can be increased according to the amount which he was earning at the time he was injured. That amount in 1954 was $3,600, in 1957 it was $4,500 and under the present amendment it is to be set at $5,000. So that an injured man may get 75 per cent of his earnings up to the amount of $5,000—that is total disability.

Hon. Mr. Kinley: May I interject? The employer is responsible for these accidents, and he pays the money. But under this bill that is going to be paid from the public funds in order to rectify an injustice that occurred in 1957. Contrary to what usually happens, when the employer pays, this will be paid by the Government.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: It will be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund until such time as the shipping firms can get the insurance arranged for them. Then we have payment of additional compensation.

> In addition to the amounts of compensation payable under the Act to dependants of a seaman as a result of his death from an injury, there shall be paid, commencing with the month of April, 1964,
>
> (a) where the widow of the seaman is the sole dependant, a monthly payment equal to the amount remaining, if any, after subtracting from seventy-five dollars the amount of any monthly payment payable to her pursuant to the Act.

I do not think that is what he is referring to.

But it is a fact, and I would ask the sponsor of the bill about this, that an injured merchant seaman can get, instead of $25 a week as provided by the act, 75 per cent of his earnings up to $5,000? Is that so?

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: That is correct.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: That is what I am trying to explain.

Hon. Mr. Kinley: The honourable senator said a seaman might starve in seven days. If a seaman is injured he goes to hospital when the ship gets to port, and under the Canada Shipping Act he gets free hospitalization paid for by the Government of Canada. The act is administered mostly by the Compensation Board of the provinces. I think Captain Slocum and another official from the Department of Transport are connected with this.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, so that we may have a more orderly debate, I would ask the honourable senator from Burin to complete his remarks, and then if another senator wishes to speak, he may make his contribution to the debate.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is difficult to speak when one is constantly being sniped at. I have been sniped at before,—that was many years ago, but I am still here.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): You are doing very well. There is no sniping.

Hon. Mr. Hollett: There are some contradictions, in my opinion, but the thing that concerns me most is that we shall have to become, if I may so express it, more merchant-seamen conscious. We will have to make it appear that there is at least a decent living available for a merchant seaman, and that there is some protection for him, having regard to the tremendous dangers which he undergoes from day to day.

I was born practically on the ocean, and I have been to sea when I was a boy. I know of the dangers these men encounter in their work, not only the danger of being drowned, but those that exist from all sides on board ship.

I think we will have to amend this act again in a short time to make the sea a more attractive field of operations for our men.

I have nothing further to say at the moment, but I do repeat my congratulations to the honourable senator Rattenbury for his very clear explanation. He did not waste words, like some of us do. He outlined it very clearly and explicitly. I congratulate him on the masterly way in which he did it.

We shall have to think seriously about the situation of the merchant seamen and their widows and children. There is one section there which says that a sailor, if he is injured, can get $25 a week. Honourable senators, if a married sailor, in an injured condition, perhaps either partially or totally disabled, is to live on $25 a week then he has to live much more cheaply than either you or I. Twenty-five dollars a week is certainly not sufficient for a man who has been working from day to day endeavouring to build up this country of ours by making great sacrifices. I think I can safely say that a man who goes to sea today is making a sacrifice. He has only one life to live, and in many instances he gets only a small wage, and there is no protection for his wife and family. If the shipping companies can pay him only $25 a week when he is completely handicapped, then I think something should be done about it.

That is all I have to say at the present time, honourable senators.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, some months ago when I rose to speak on an agricultural bill it was suggested that I did not qualify for a position on the list of speakers because I was not exactly a farm boy. This evening, in speaking to a bill dealing with the merchant service, and particularly pensions to merchant seamen, I must immediately disclaim any right to the title of "an old salt".

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: You are not a mariner?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am neither a mariner nor a maritimer. I am an inlander.

Perhaps it might be helpful if, in respect of the new paragraph (e) of section 30 of the act, I state to the chamber that the amendment is a very simple one. Heretofore, it was provided in the act of 1957 that the payment to be made on behalf of children be at the rate of $35 for each child under the age of 18 years. This amendment provides that with the approval of the Board every child under 21 years of age who is attending school is entitled to the benefit. This is an additional provision.

Having said that, I wonder if I could add just one other point to the very interesting plea that Senator Hollett has made in respect of the merchant service. I am always very glad to hear people, particularly those from the maritime areas of both coasts, talk about matters of this kind. This country owes a great debt to the men of the merchant service, particularly for the duties they performed during the last war. That service was performed not only within the merchant service itself but also in the Canadian Navy and perhaps in other naval services.

In the early days of the war when the short forecastle corvettes were commissioned, the majority of the captains of those little ships, which were certainly not comfortable ships and which were going to do the convoying in the North Atlantic, were men of the merchant service who formed the R.C.N.R.

In addition to that, what merchant ships there were available for convoy work were put into service, and were commanded by the people who remained in the merchant service. These men worked under very trying conditions because the speed of the slowest ship in the convoy determined the speed of the convoy. I can remember, too, a special school that was established under the authority of the Minister of National Defence for Naval Services in those days in St. Margaret's Bay to train young men for the merchant service that was developing during the war years. Ships of 10,000 tons were being built, which raised the problem of training the personnel to man them. This school that was established to train young men to go down to the sea and work in the convoy system trained a great many. Some of the men in the R.C.N.R. branch of the Navy performed great feats of daring during the war.

So, I do endorse everything that Senator Hollett has said about the importance of a merchant service for this country in peace time. It has proved to be an invaluable arm in naval work during wartime and in times of peace. This has been historically so. It has been difficult to maintain a merchant service in Canada for a variety of reasons. Perhaps our standard of living is too high. That is one of the penalties a country pays for having a high standard of living.

Honourable senators, I felt impelled because of a long experience with the Minister of National Defence for Naval Services in those days of war, to say these few words about the contribution that was made at that time by the merchant navy.

Hon. Nelson Rattenbury: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if the honourable Senator Rattenbury speaks now it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Rattenbury: Honourable senators, I should like to thank Senator Hollett for the kind things he has said, and also to say that I agree with much of what he said. I echo the sentiments expressed by the honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) in his remarks about the merchant service.

In my maiden speech in this chamber I mentioned the fact that I had served for many years in the merchant service, and therefore I know whereof I speak. In an explanation of this amending bill I should like to say that the period of three days mentioned by Senator Hollett is an attempt to average out the similar periods of time contained in the various statutes of the provinces across Canada, which range from four days down to one day. As an average, I think this figure is just what it should be.

All honourable senators realize why that period of time exists. It is to get away from such petty cases as those involving a cut finger. As Senator Kinley pointed out, under the Canada Shipping Act there is immediate provision for anybody needing hospitalization.

I should also point out that this act supplements similar statutes that exist in the various provinces of Canada, and not only those of the Maritime provinces. All provinces have their Workmen's Compensation Acts, but in cases of sailors going off-shore or foreign, and wherever there might be confusion, this act will take effect. It will operate in cases where there is some difference of opinion as to the eligibility of a claim under the statutes of the various provinces.

I do not think there is anything else to explain. I am not well enough versed in funerals to know whether $300 is sufficient. On reading the act I notice that there is a provision for the transfer of a body from the place where the demise took place to the place of burial. That applies in cases where the interment is not made at sea. The amount specified there is, I think, $125 and, again, I do not know how adequate that is.

I regret that in my reply the other day to Senator Burchill I may have caused some confusion, but I say now that these claims took place prior to 1957.

Honourable senators, I do feel that this is legislation that is needed, and the amendments that are proposed will bring the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act up to date and in line with the Workmen's Compensation Acts of the provinces.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Hon. Mr. Rattenbury, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, March 10, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENT TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of the Board of Trustees of the Maritime Transportation Unions for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 16 of the Maritime Transportation Unions Trustees Act, chapter 17, Statutes of Canada, 1963. (French text).

CANADA LABOUR (STANDARDS) CODE BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Hon. Mr. Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, reported that the Committee had considered Bill C-126, respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

Report adopted.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. John J. Connolly (Ottawa West) moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

CANADA-HUNGARY TRADE AGREEMENT

MOTION FOR APPROVAL

Hon. John J. Connolly moved pursuant to notice:

That it is expedient that the Houses of Parliament do approve the Trade Agreement between Canada and the Hungarian People's Republic, signed at Ottawa, June 11, 1964, and tabled in the Senate on June 16, 1964; and that this House do approve the same.

He said: Honourable senators, this motion, and the other two that follow it on the Order Paper are in respect of trade agreements with countries of Eastern Europe. These countries, which are Bulgaria, Hungary and Russia, are known as state trading countries.

At the outset I should like to ask for the indulgence of the Senate that I might deal with all three motions in this one rather brief explanation. This, I believe, is the more expeditious way. Then, if the Senate agrees to carry the first motion, the other two would be carried also. If necessary, I can add a word of explanation on the other two. If I may, I shall explain generally the first motion and I shall not repeat the explanations with respect to the second and third motions.*

As honourable senators know, all three of these countries have Communist governments. The communist countries with which Canada has trade relations are Czechoslovakia and Poland. It is proposed now to have such relations with Hungary, Russia and Bulgaria. Some of these are extensions of previous trading arrangements. The treaty between Canada and Czechoslovakia was originally signed in 1928, and in October 1963 was renewed for a five-year period. The agreement was that Czechoslovakia would purchase, under that treaty and during that period, a total of 1.2 million metric tons of wheat.

The general trade treaty with Poland, which is not in issue here, was originally signed in 1935, when that country was a free enterprise country. Then in November 1963 a long-term wheat agreement with Poland was signed for a three-year period and provided for the purchase over that period of 1.2 million metric tons of wheat.

With Roumania we have no treaty at the moment, but negotiations are about to commence, if they have not already started, with a view, I would assume, of getting a treaty with that country along lines similar to those we have before us today.

I think it would be of value to honourable senators if I were permitted to place upon Hansard today a record of the trading from 1954 to 1963 between Canada and Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Roumania and the U.S.S.R. The first of two tables indicates that exports in 1954 from Canada to Eastern Europe were valued at $5,800,000-odd. In 1963 the value of our exports had grown to $193,500,000-odd.

The second table shows that Canada's imports from eastern Europe between 1954 and 1963 also grew, but nothing like in proportion to her exports. In 1954 the value of Canadian imports from all eight countries was $3,822,-000, and in 1963 that volume of business had grown to $20,267,000.

The figures for the other years may be of interest to honourable senators, and with the consent of the house I shall put these tables on record. May I say that they have been supplied to me from official sources in the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

See* p. 1381

CANADIAN EXPORTS TO EASTERN EUROPE 1954–1963
(in thousands of dollars)

	1954	1955	1956	1957	1958	1959	1960	1961	1962	1963	Total
Albania	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	5,845	3,053	2	8,900
Bulgaria	8	2	105	119	71	200	491	277	388	28	1,689
Czechoslovakia	295	1,062	24,558	1,422	1,365	4,937	6,767	32,654	3,522	13,289	89,871
East Germany	—	2,261	1,458	25	—	—	994	17,972	148	1,262	24,120
Hungary	35	165	1,913	292	387	1,115	931	564	350	374	6,126
Poland	558	4,005	17,918	16,669	645	15,631	16,665	36,819	37,391	27,200	173,501
Roumania	74	397	124	429	1,172	1,157	1,326	1,037	514	1,275	7,505
U.S.S.R.	4,854	2,680	24,606	10,658	18,868	12,638	8,233	24,276	3,297	150,123	260,233
	5,824	10,572	70,682	29,614	22,508	35,678	35,407	119,444	48,663	193,553	571,945

CANADIAN IMPORTS FROM EASTERN EUROPE 1954–1963
(in thousands of dollars)

	1954	1955	1956	1957	1958	1959	1960	1961	1962	1963	Total
Albania	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Bulgaria	—	3	4	—	4	6	6	24	34	74	155
Czechoslovakia	1,796	2,880	5,675	5,045	4,950	6,440	6,654	8,405	9,033	9,204	60,082
East Germany	721	572	779	707	948	901	877	970	881	1,207	8,563
Hungary	210	124	209	408	810	237	338	393	417	557	3,703
Poland	405	595	2,185	1,110	1,276	1,643	1,871	3,194	4,792	6,788	23,859
Roumania	3	—	3	—	4	35	84	261	61	124	575
U.S.S.R.	687	628	1,007	2,804	1,688	2,278	3,210	2,746	1,777	2,313	19,138
Total	3,822	4,802	9,862	10,074	9,680	11,540	13,040	15,993	16,995	20,267	116,075

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): In addition to the value of the business to the parties on both sides of the arrangement there may be, and undoubtedly is, some value in the fact that between Canada and Iron Curtain countries there can be a development of understanding. This may be a good thing for countries behind the Iron Curtain as well as for Canada, and may generally be a good thing for the countries of the free and the western world.

Most of these countries concerned have been accorded diplomatic recognition by Canada. In Ottawa, the Soviet Union has an embassy, as has the Government of Czechoslovakia, and that of Poland. The advance guard for an embassy for Hungary is now in Ottawa, and Hungary also has a trade office in Montreal. Bulgaria too has a trade office in Montreal. The Government of Czechoslovakia has a consulate in Montreal, and trade offices in Montreal and Toronto. The name of its state trading agency is called, in English "Omnitrade."

The value of the three treaties, in the sense of purchases from Canada over the periods for which they are to run, is some $600 million minimum. The commodity generally sold will be wheat, but it is expected that utlimately there will be a development and an expansion into the field of other agricultural products, industrial raw materials and manufactured goods.

The three treaties that we have before us today, honourable senators, contain the usual clauses for favourable treatment to the other party that are found in all such treaties.

The most-favoured-nation provision is made in all three treaties, but I must say that it is considered by the Canadian authorities that this provision is not very meaningful in Canada's eyes, because these governments plan both exports and imports in their own countries without reference to private decision.

I come now specifically to the first treaty, the one with Hungary. It was entered into on June 11, 1964, and was tabled in the Senate on June 16, 1964. Under the treaty, Hungary has given a purchase commitment to Canada to acquire some $24 million worth of commodities over a three-year period. In the first year she commits herself to purchase $4 million worth of commodities, in the second year $5 million, and the balance in the third year. The items to be purchased include 1¼ million metric tons of wheat. This perhaps may be a relatively small amount, but it should be said that Hungary happens to be a wheat producer and a wheat exporter. The Hungarians would be entitled to take 50 per cent of this wheat commitment in feed barley if they so desire. About $4 million of the amount of $24 million agreed to be spent in Canada is to be allocated for the purchase of other Canadian goods. Sulphur has been mentioned as one commodity being more likely to be required by Hungarian importers.

In November the Hungarian State Trading Agency, known as Agrimpex, contracted for 100,000 tons of wheat which is nearly half the original commitment. The treaty with Hungary is a mixed one, and in this sense it is rather unique. Perhaps it provides a new pattern, because it is not restricted only to the acquisition of wheat and grains, but can be extended to other commercial commodities.

There is another feature in the negotiations with Hungary—and this may interest many honourable senators—which involves the settlement of claims as between Canada and Hungary. After the revolution a large number of refugees came to this country, some of whom have claims to advance for property in Hungary. The negotiations on the diplomatic level in respect of the trade treaties have extended into this area, and I understand that arrangements are being made so that these claims can be processed in an orderly, regular way, and I would hope that they will be settled satisfactorily.

That is all I think I need say, honourable senators, in connection with the Hungarian treaty.

If I have the consent of the Senate, I would continue and speak now on the second motion, which deals with the renewal treaty with the Soviet Union.

The original post-war agreement with Russia was made in 1956, and it provided for the purchase by that country of 1½ million metric tons of wheat over a three-year period. This was renewed in the year 1960 for a period of three years. The Soviets, by the 1960 renewal, agreed to buy twice as much from Canada as Canada bought from Russia. Russia agreed to purchase under that renewal a maximum of $25 million, half of which purchases in Canada were to be wheat.

In September 1963 the Russian treaty was renewed, and the parties reverted to the previous pattern of the purchase commitment concept. Under the renewal which is now before us, Russia has agreed to make minimum purchases in Canada over the period of the treaty of 5.3 million tons of wheat and 575,000 tons of flour, and this was to have been shipped before July 31, 1964. Russia also agreed to purchase an additional half million tons of wheat or flour equivalent. I should say that these shipments have been largely met.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: May I ask the honourable leader a question? Does he know how much of this wheat and flour is shipped direct to Russia, or if any of it is being transshipped to Cuba? I have no objection to it being transshipped to Cuba, but I did hear that a considerable amount of the wheat and flour was being sent there and it did not get to Russia at all.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I may say that some time ago I read reports in the paper of this having happened, particularly at a time when the matter of trading relations with Cuba was a somewhat critical issue. The officials to whom I have talked about this matter have not raised it, and I would assume that it might not be a significant factor at the moment. I think the requirements of these countries, particularly for these grains, are so great that they need them all for themselves. I shall make inquiries, however, and let the honourable leader opposite know.

The shipments have been made at an accelerated rate. I am told that in the first eight months of 1963 the value of shipments of wheat to the Soviet Union was $1.4 million, and in the first eight months of 1964 the value was $312 million. It seems to be clear, to my mind at any rate, that the necessity for the grain in the Soviet Union is of paramount importance.

I now come to the Bulgarian Treaty. This was tabled in the Senate on October 22, 1963, having been entered into on October 8, 1963, for a period of three years. The minimum purchase under this treaty was 100,000 tons each year, but the Bulgarians had an option to acquire a further 150,000 tons before July 31, 1964. All of the terms of the treaty have been complied with and the option has been taken up.

I should also say that the volume of shipments has increased very appreciably between 1963 and 1964. In the first eight months of 1963 the value of shipments to Bulgaria was $28,000, and in the first eight months of 1964, that is the last period for which we have these figures, the value of shipments was $15.6 million. Honourable senators will see that the requirement has been very great, mainly due, I understand, to crop failures in those regions.

Furthermore, the treaty and the diplomatic negotiations with Bulgaria have extended beyond the trading arrangements. Consular arrangements are being made, and matters outstanding between the two countries are also being negotiated.

I think, honourable senators, that that is all I can usefully say about these treaties at this time.

Hon. Arthur M. Pearson: Honourable senators, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate. He has explained these treaties in his usual precise and pointed manner. I certainly agree with him in approving of these treaties. However, that is merely from a moral point of view, since these three treaties as between Canada and the U.S.S.R., Canada and the Hungarian People's Republic, and Canada and the People's Republic of Bulgaria, have previously been approved and tabled both in the other place and in the Senate, the first two in 1963, and the last one, with Bulgaria, in 1964. So at this stage Parliament is acting as representative of the people in expressing the approval of the citizens of Canada.

Nevertheless, it is rather surprising that this matter should once again be brought up in the Senate at this late date for approval. Perhaps it is a case of better late than never. I am inclined to wonder, however, if there is any connection between bringing these agreements up to date and the event which some people are forecasting will take place in Canada this Spring—in June, perhaps. If that is the case, I do not blame the Government for bringing it forward at this time; they need to take advantage of every item in the books; they will need to grasp every straw they can to help them in recovering from the shocking image that has grown of them in the other place.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Halifax North): Do the Bulgarians vote in Canada?

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Those who are citizens here do.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Are they Bulgarians in that situation?

Hon. Mr. Pearson: However, my purpose in speaking on this matter today is to criticize the Government for its apparent inactivity in bringing forward new trade treaties, indicating additional sales in countries other than those we are dealing with at the present time. A good salesman does not sit back and reflect on what has taken place last year or the year before; he is out breaking new ground all the time. This is my point of criticism.

I have spent most of my life in the selling end of business, and my experience has shown that only by constant and continuous efforts are new sales produced. Renewals are largely based on satisfaction given in previous sales. I remember working in one firm in which there were a number of excellent salesmen, and the sales that each man produced clearly indicated the characteristics of the man. Those who were satisfied with a large sale and did not continue to press for the smaller sales eventually fell by the wayside as salesmen.

For that reason I say to the Government today that big sales to the U.S.S.R., or to any other country, should not make for any great degree of satisfaction on the part of the Government. They should also strive for numerous small sales which would indicate a wide distribution of our goods, whether it be wheat or manufactured products. This would also indicate that our men are on their toes and are fighting to gain every ounce of trade available to them. A broad base gives far greater security. Only by constant pressure and contact with possible purchasers can we thoroughly establish Canada as the country that produces the best wheat in the world and is out to prove it.

I remember on one occasion in western Canada meeting a traveller who was interested in farming and who had taken a trip to South America. He told me that in the various cities he had visited he had discovered in discussion with the brewing interests that apparently there was in that country a good market for Canadian malting barley, but that the people concerned apparently had no idea that Canada produced malting barley. On my way through Winnipeg I stopped at the grain commission office and asked the chief salesman if we ever sold any malting barley to South America. He informed me that they had had no inquiries from that region for malting barley. I told him what the traveller had said, and he replied, "This is most interesting and surprising, because we have agencies throughout South America and if there had been any demand for malting barley, there is no doubt we would have been advised by them."

I have no doubt whatever that if an active sales agency were to go to South America we could open up a market for the sale of many thousands of bushels of malting barley in that region.

A further point I wish to make is that in the long run of 22 years of Liberal Government in this country there was a gradual build-up of grain in western Canada until we were almost choked with grain, and thousands of bushels were being lost every year. The grain had to lie out of doors since there was no room for it either in the farmers' storage or in the country elevators. With the change of government, the wheat began to disappear very rapidly until almost all the granaries in western Canada were empty. This was accomplished thanks to the efforts of the minister for agriculture in the last government. As a result of those rapid sales of grain, large sums of money reached the hands of the farmers who, in turn, were able to go to the market and purchase millions of dollars worth of Canadian manufactured goods. Consequently, the whole economy of Canada began to boom and has not slowed down since.

Therefore, I say to this government, with all due respect and taking into consideration the signing of these three trade agreements, that the farmers will not be satisfied until they hear of many more of these agreements, even though they may be very small in relation to the total number of bushels being sold. Such an increase in the number of agreements will indicate that there is a very agressive minister in charge.

Motion agreed to.

CANADA-U.S.S.R. TRADE AGREEMENT

MOTION FOR APPROVAL OF PROTOCOL

Hon. John J. Connolly moved, pursuant to notice:

> That it is expedient that the Houses of Parliament do approve the Protocol renewing the Trade Agreement between Canada and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, signed on February 29, 1956, and renewed on April 18, 1960, signed at Ottawa, September 16, 1963, and tabled in the Senate on October 10, 1963; and that this House do approve the same.

Motion agreed to. *

CANADA-BULGARIA TRADE AGREEMENT

MOTION FOR APPROVAL

Hon. John J. Connolly moved, pursuant to notice:

> That it is expedient that the Houses of Parliament do approve the Trade Agreement between Canada and the People's Republic of Bulgaria, signed at Ottawa, October 8, 1963, and tabled in the Senate on October 22, 1963; and that this House do approve the same. *

Motion agreed to.

MERCHANT SEAMEN COMPENSATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Hon. Nelson Rattenbury moved the third reading of Bill C-131, to amend the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

BILL TO AMEND CERTAIN ACTS—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr.

*See pp. 1377-81

Lang for second reading of Bill C-123, to amend certain acts administered in the Department of Insurance.

Hon. Salter A. Hayden: Honourable senators, I have one general observation to make, and after I have made it I propose to address myself to one particular aspect only of this bill.

My general observation arises out of the remarks that were made last night by Senator White. I too am a little concerned, and would like to know a little more about why the percentage that may be invested in first mortgages in relation to the value of the property is increased from 66⅔ per cent to 75 per cent of the value. Was it in view of representations that were made? If so, what was the source of those representations, and what is the supporting material to indicate that the character of mortgage lending and the character of purchases in the acquisition of properties has changed so that the whole method of dealing in transactions of that kind has been so modernized that 75 per cent is now a safe and secure ratio in relation to value? I point out that it has moved up a long way over the years from the time when it was less than 50 per cent. I think this is an aspect that we could with some profit probe in committee.

The main point which gives rise to my speaking today has to do with a provision in the bill which proposes, among a number of amendments, an amendment to the Loan Companies Act. Honourable senators will find this in section 42 of the bill, which repeals the present section 68 of the Loan Companies Act, and provides for a new section 68, which starts at page 55 of the bill and goes over to page 56. My remarks are going to be addressed particularly to subsection 3 of the new section 68 as contained in section 42 of the bill.

Before I embark on that I should indicate to honourable senators, in case they have forgotten, that earlier this year there was a certain private bill before this house that went before the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce. By reason of my association with those who did some work on the bill I did not preside as chairman of the committee when it considered that bill. That bill, which is now at the stage of second reading in the other place, is one that would be materially affected by a change in the general law of the nature of the change here proposed.

It is my thought that you should know my background of interest. It is an interest only in the sense that associates of mine have worked on the drafting of the bill; it is not interest in any remunerative sense, because I have none in that regard. I mention this so that you may put on your finest spectacles and alert your very analytical minds even more so, and make a careful examination of any criticism or suggestion that I may make in relation to this particular proposal, and thus be sure that it rests on reason and not on any identification or association with the bill which I mentioned is presently at the stage of second reading in the House of Commons.

I should tell honourable senators that subsection 3 provides that where a loan company owns more than 10 per cent of the issued shares of a trust company incorporated under the Trust Companies Act of Canada —I am omitting the other phase of it for the moment—then special borrowing limitations are imposed which affect what would otherwise be the borrowing limitations of a loan company in relation to its paid-up capital and reserves. The formula which is prescribed in those circumstances is this: if a loan company owns more than 10 per cent of the shares of a trust company, you must take the sum total of the assets of the loan company, less—and this is a very important factor—the cost of acquisition of those shares of the trust company, plus the assets of the trust company, and from that deduct the liabilities of both the trust company and the loan company, and what is left would be your borrowing base. You calculate the amount you may borrow as of right under the law as it presently stands by multiplying your paid-up capital and reserves by four. But under the bill this becomes four times the excess of assets over the liabilities. That is your borrowing limitation as of right.

Under the act as it presently stands you could, by following certain procedures and securing an order of the Governor in Council made on the recommendation of the Superintendent of Insurance, apply for a further borrowing in the range of from four times to 12½ times that base. That has been changed in this bill so as to provide that your borrowing limit, with the approval of the Treasury Board on the recommendation of the Superintendent of Insurance, may be increased anywhere from four to 15 times the excess of assets over liabilities.

The net result of this change, and this particular formula for limiting the borrowing power of a loan company that may possess more than 10 per cent of the shares of a trust company, is that in the case of a new company, such as the one I referred to a little while ago—having regard to the disclosure in that bill as to the shares of the particular trust company that were going to be acquired—would be that on a four-times-basis there would be no borrowing ability in the new loan company. Therefore, immediately the new loan company would have to go to the Superintendent of Insurance, and secure his recommendation for a much higher percentage or a higher number of times the excess of assets over liabilities.

The unusual feature of this, as I see it, is when we come to the explanations that are given as to why it is necessary to provide this limitation, we find that the Superintendent of Insurance has said that it is in order to prevent pyramiding of assets; that it is in order to prevent the same assets being used twice for borrowing purposes. Now let me explain that.

The assets of the trust company are the assets behind the outstanding shares of the trust company. The trust company has its own authority to borrow, and in its borrowing the base, of course, would be the paid-up capital and reserves of the trust company or, under this bill, it would be the excess of their assets over their liabilities. If a loan company acquires shares of that trust company, then it is suggested that the assets of the trust company are also behind the shares of the loan company. That to a limited extent may be so. To the extent of the book value of the assets of the trust company which stand behind the shares of the trust company that the loan company owns, that may be so. But, let me illustrate.

For instance, in a statement appearing in the Financial Post on March 1 of this year, they show a whole list of what are called blue chip companies, and they show the book value as against the market value. In the case of National Trust they show a book value of $9.10 and a market value of $23.25. I propose to give you the rest of the list a little later, but let me illustrate my point in this way.

What is said is that if a loan company owns more than 10 per cent of the issued shares, voting shares, of a trust company, then the assets of the loan company, for the purposes of its borrowing base, must immediately be reduced by the cost in the market place at which it purchased those shares, not a deduction from the assets of the loan company only of the book value lying behind those shares represented by the assets of the trust company. It can be said reasonably and rationally that only to this extent if there is a double use of assets as a base for borrowing, that double use is limited to the book value of the trust company assets that are behind the trust company shares, and to the extent that they are behind the trust company shares by reason of the loan company owning in excess of 10 per cent of those shares. If you apply this formula to the illustration of the National Trust shares, reference to the book value on which borrowing might be based twice, it would be $9.10 as a borrowing base by the trust company and the loan company, but that is not what the formula says. The formula says you deduct the market value, that is, what you paid for the shares.

I mention the National Trust only as an illustration and, in order to correct any impression that I might be thinking in terms of the National Trust, I shall mention the particular trust company referred to in the bill.

The trust company mentioned in the bill that was before us earlier this year was the Eastern and Chartered Trust. In that case you have a book value of the shares of about $26, with a market value today of about $51. That would mean that, in the application of this general act and this particular provision to this new loan company, as and when it is incorporated, if it held more than 10 per cent of the shares of the trust company the deduction from the assets of the loan company would be the cost thereof; that is, the market value today, $51 a share, not a deduction of the book value behind those shares; and to the extent of the increment over book value there has been no double borrowing. The value in the market place, as every person knows, is a value that is put on shares of successful companies—and sometimes of unsuccessful companies—by the investing public. What they do is capitalize the earning power of those companies, the history of earnings, and they put a capital value on that which is over and above and outside the book value of the assets themselves.

As a matter of fact, if you look in the advertisements in the financial papers and on the financial pages of various newspapers, the one thing they do not give you is the book value of the shares. They will give you the market price and the amount of dividends paid; they will relate by percentages that amount of dividend to the market price, and they will also tell you the price times earnings at which the shares are selling. Therefore, as far as the public mind is concerned, you have an area where the public takes over and puts a value. It may be intangible, but it is a value you can realize in the market place if you want to go out at any time and sell those particular shares. If I have shares of the Eastern Chartered Trust Company in this new loan company, for borrowing purposes this bill when it becomes law would say I must deduct that market value of those shares from my assets, and that cost has no borrowing value to me at all, even though there is an element in there which has never been borrowed on anywhere. That is the difference between book value and market value.

In anything I say, I do not want to lead you to the conclusion that I am complaining about the provision against pyramiding, against the double use of the same assets in different situations for borrowing. We have had no situations of that kind in the past. For many years we have had two loan companies owning trust companies in Canada. Their operations over all the years have been on such a basis, and their borrowing has been on such a basis, that they have not encroached, so I understand, on the capital value or cost of acquisition of trust shares in order to support the borrowing that they want to do. Therefore, this legislation now is in anticipation that something might happen in the future and therefore that we should provide something in the general law to take care of it. For purposes of the general law, it may be advisable to have a general provision against what I call pyramiding or the double heading or double use of the same assets for borrowing; but to have an absolute rule which permits of no exceptions, I say is going too far.

I say that there should be a discretion, whether it is in the Treasury Board on the recommendation of the Superintendent of Insurance, or whether it is in the Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Superintendent of Insurance, somewhere there should be a discretion where in the public interest it may be advisable to have some exemptions, some exceptions, or some departure from that absolute rule. In any event, I say that this provision in subsection 3 of the new section 68 cannot be supported on the basis of pyramiding; it cannot be supported on the basis that you are double heading in the use of the same assets twice for borrowing, because there is a substantial element in the cost of trust company shares to the loan company that has never been borrowed on, and that is the difference between the book value and the market value.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Book value is a meaningless term, in modern conditions.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: For the investor it is a meaningless term. It has been suggested that the market value is not a safe or a secure value on which to lend or borrow, in the interest of the creditors or loan company.

What I have to say in this regard is simple, I hope. First of all, there is a place where I can go and sell the shares; there is a market there, and they have a real value.

Secondly, when a loan company borrows money from the general public, it invests that money in mortgages. It may invest it in common shares. Ratios are stipulated in the Loan Companies Act, and to the extent that that money is invested in mortgages this bill says that an investment of up to 75 per cent of, not the book value, but the market value of the property on which you are going to loan, is a safe and secure investment to make. Yet if I get $100 from a lender on the security, among other things, of the trust company shares which I hold, without any limitation, I invest $75 and immediately the lender to the loan company has a cushion of 25 per cent, before even the principal amount is affected.

So I say there is ample security to the loan company and its creditors without the necessity of this unusual and what I call abnormal provision which says that market value is not a safe value upon which borrowing in a loan company should proceed. Now, market value as I know it, is used in almost every conceivable kind of borrowing and the security at some percentage point basis is recognized as being a proper security base for borrowing.

May I take a moment to show you the margin of differences between book value and market value, from a statement that was published in the Financial Post on March 1:

Company	Book Value	Market Value
National Trust	$ 9.10	$23.25
Hiram Walker—Gooderham & Worts	15.25	38.00
Southam Press	6.70	35.00
Dominion Stores	7.05	26.00
Simpsons Ltd.	12.65	27.125
Aluminium Ltd.	15.61	31.875
International Nickel	22.98	87.875

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: We had better sell all our securities.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Yes, if any insecurity can be drawn from the suggestions that have been made in justifying the elimination of market value as being a factor in establishing a borrowing base. The table continues:

Company	Book Value	Market Value
Noranda Mines	$21.84	$55.875
Moore Corporation	14.88	62.875
British American Oil	23.48	34.25
Imperial Oil	27.50	57.625
Bell Telephone	36.71	62.50
MacMillan Bloedel and Powell River	13.31	35.00
Dominion Foundries and Steel	8.94	26.25
Algoma Steel	33.58	77.625
Steel Company of Canada	13.12	28.625
Alberta Gas Trunk	7.25	38.625
Interprovincial Pipe Line	16.66	93.875

Company	Book Value	Market Value
The Bank of Nova Scotia	46.74	81.625
The Royal Bank of Canada	47.75	82.125
Canadian Pacific Railway	61.23	67.875
Dominion Tar and Chemical	13.55	23.00

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: A very modest market value.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It would be a good thing to buy, would it, Senator?

Hon. Mr. Farris: How is the book value arrived at?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: It is the net worth of the company, that is, the excess of assets over liabilities.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: And nobody knows how the assets have been written down. It is the most meaningless term in the world.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: It is a completely meaningless term, because if a company has operated for some time, and written off depreciation, you have a written-down value which does not represent the operating worth of the assets.

Hon. Mr. Bouffard: It is not the representative value at all.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: No. So I say that if it is desired to have a rule on the point that where a loan company owns in excess of 10 per cent of the shares of a trust company, there should be some exclusion, and the maximum exclusion, or reduction in respect of these trust company shares for purposes of a borrowing base should be a net book value of the assets of the trust company pro rated on the number of those shares which the loan company has.

Hon. Mr. Isnor: May I inquire whether any one of the companies whose names you have read make loans on real estate?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: National Trust Company does.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Yes, National Trust Company does; and I would say the banks certainly did for awhile—and I referred to them. As to some of the other companies, I am not privileged to look at their portfolio of investments, so I do not know, but I would be surprised if some percentage does not—

Hon. Mr. Isnor: Only one of those names you have read is a loan or trust company.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: No, no. What I say is that the rule may be a good rule. I am not debating the goodness or otherwise of the rule. I am saying that it should not be drawn in such terms to exclude the exercise of proper discretion with regard to the increment in value above the net book value of the shares; and that should not be excluded from the borrowing base. It is an asset, and should be an asset for borrowing purposes.

Furthermore, the expression has been used in justifying this rule that in the situation of a loan company vis-a-vis a trust company, a consolidation of the two companies is the proper basis on which to look at the value of the shares, and therefore in determining the excess of assets over liabilities. However, if a loan company has acquired 11 per cent of the shares of a trust company, then when you are arriving at the formula you take the assets of the loan company, deduct the cost of the shares of the trust company, and then add to that the sum total of the assets of the trust company, although the loan company may only have 11 per cent of it. Then you deduct, not a percentage of the liabilities of the trust company that might be related to an 11 per cent ownership of shares, but you deduct the sum total of the liabilities of the trust company, including any guaranteed loans they have made, before you get to a base. I say this is going too far for the purpose to be served.

Let us turn to the other side of the picture. There is ample protection in this bill and in the present Loan Companies Act so that this provision is entirely unnecessary. For instance, in section 41, on page 55 of the bill there is a provision which governs the basis for the purchase of trust company shares by a loan company. The general law is that a loan company can invest in common shares of any Canadian company up to 30 per cent of the common shares or 30 per cent of the total shares outstanding. Then there is a limitation on the amount of money of the loan company that may be so invested in common shares. There is that general limitation. But section 41, which adds section 61A, says that when a loan company is buying shares of a trust company those general rules do not at all apply. It writes a special ticket. Section 61A (1) says:

> Notwithstanding anything in section 60 but subject to subsection (2) of this section and to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Treasury Board upon the report of the Superintendent, a loan company may invest its funds in the fully paid shares of a trust company to which the Trust Companies Act applies.

Subsection 2 limits the amount of investment which a loan company can make, to the extent that it cannot be in excess of its paid-up capital and reserves. In other words, it cannot borrow money in order to buy trust company shares. Before a loan company can buy any shares of a trust company it must go to the Superintendent of Insurance, must get a favourable report from him, he already having thoroughly examined the situation, in which report there will be suggested terms and conditions to be prescribed by the Treasury Board as a basis of purchase. Otherwise, the loan company cannot make the purchase. Thus, in the first place, there must be a complete check. Here is a case where the Treasury Board, on the report of a superintendent, may say, "We will not approve this investment," and the purchase is not made.

Now, when it comes to borrowing you have another check. Let us assume that the loan company has acquired the shares of a trust company, but it wants to increase its borrowing beyond four times the amount of its assets over liabilities. It must follow the procedures of passing by-laws, having company meetings, and all that, after which it must satisfy the Superintendent of Insurance that the proposed increase is justified, because he has to make a recommendation to the Treasury Board, and then the Treasury Board has to approve of any increase in your times borrowing over four times. So in those two directions, first, before you acquire the shares you have to satisfy the Superintendent of Insurance and the Treasury Board on terms and conditions which they may lay down, and if there is any suggestion of inflation, they can look at it and the transaction may not be approved. If the transaction goes on, and then the loan company wants to borrow an amount more than four times the excess of assets over liabilities, it must go to the Superintendent of Insurance and get the approval of the Treasury Board, otherwise it cannot increase its times borrowing.

Notwithstanding all that, the suggestion has been made that there is the danger of inflation in the value of the trust shares, and I say in the present circumstances these curbs and controls would effectively prevent that.

Then there was the suggstion made that by a series of companies you might defeat the limitations in the present act and overborrow. I can only conclude what was meant was that you would have a loan company which would buy some trust company shares, and this loan company would have another subsidiary loan company which would buy some more trust company shares, and so the limitation in the act would be overcome to the detriment of the public. Well, I have some news for you. There is a prohibition in the Loan Companies Act which says that a loan company cannot invest in the shares of another loan company. So this kind of vehicle and this kind of machinery for accomplishing pyramiding and making borrowings two, three and four times on the same asset, is not possible because the law does not now permit it.

The only place where market value is a bad thing in this bill is in relation to this one provision, under section 42 of the bill. That is the only place.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: There are two sections, are there not?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: I am coming to that in a moment.

When it comes to the investment powers, the borrowing powers and the loaning powers of a loan company and the limitations and the inclusion of those investments in the balance sheet of the loan company, the Loan Companies Act requires they must be stated at not more than their book value, and the measure for the acquisition of investments and the loaning on securities is on the basis of market value. I am referring now to section 70.

By the way, it is section 63 which says a loan company cannot invest in or lend money upon the security of the stock of any other loan company.

Then in section 70A, subsection (3) of the present Loan Companies Act it says:

> The securities owned by a company—

That is, a loan company.

> —shall be taken into account in every annual statement at values that, in total, do not exceed the aggregate of
>
> (a) the amortized values of redeemable securities not in default, issued or guaranteed by the Government of Canada or by the government of any province of Canada, and
>
> (b) the market values of all securities other than those described in paragraph (a).

So, market value is a good base for accounting and an annual statement, which annual statement must be furnished to and examined and approved by the Superintendent of Insurance, or you may not get a licence to operate in the next year. Market value is the basis for making loans on real estate. Market value is the basis for the acquisition of investments and money loaned on investments. But market value, if you dare to purchase any percentage of trust company shares over 10 per cent, is not a good basis of value for borrowing. Nor is the element that the market adds to the book value of the shares that you buy permitted as part of the base for calculation of amount of borrowing.

So, somewhere along the line a block has developed in the thinking which has brought the conclusion that there is not any value or any security represented by the difference between book value and market price, when it comes to just this one category, the relationship of a loan company and a trust company. And yet this bill goes further than the law heretofore has provided on common share acquisitions.

Up to the present time a loan company could only acquire up to 30 per cent in numbers and 30 per cent in value of any common shares, and this would include trust company shares. Here, under the section which I have referred you to in the bill, section 41, a loan company is made the one exception to this limitation provision of 30 per cent limitation on purchases of common shares, and a loan company may acquire any quantity of trust company shares, up to 100 per cent, if it satisfies the Superintendent of Insurance and the Treasury Board, and if it has paid-up capital and reserves of a sufficient amount to provide the money to do that. And yet, when you have that great expansion in that right, you then have the limitation which, on the borrowing side, reduces very substantially the borrowing power of a loan company that acquires the shares of a trust company.

The only other thing I have to say—and then I am through, or I think I should be—is on the other side of the picture in relation to a trust company, which you will find on page 44—

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Clause 34, page 44.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Yes. What this bill says too, is that if a loan company owns more than 10 per cent of the shares of a trust company, then there is a limitation on the borrowing that a trust company can make; because, historically, and under the statute, the trust company could borrow under the amendments up to 12½ times the excess of assets over liabilities, and it is only on the difference between that and the 15 times now provided in the bill that the trust company has to get the consent of Treasury Board on the recommendation of the superintendent of Insurance.

Now I ask you this, when the trust company issues and sells its shares, how is the security of any borrowing by the trust company affected to the slightest degree, whether it is Joe Doakes who owns the shares of the trust company or it happens to be a loan company that owns the shares of the trust company?

As far as the trust company is concerned, when it has sold the shares it has no control over those shareholders, and the position of those shareholders, who they are, their identity, does not affect in any way the security of any borrowing of the trust company, and yet, if those circumstances exist, you must borrow on the formula I have outlined, which has the effect in some cases of restricting the borrowing limits of a trust company; but if it happens to be the relationship of an older trust company and a new loan company, why, the trust company, with its assets, liabilities, outstanding loans and amount of borrowing that is already done, eats up any borrowing capacity of the new loan company, certainly on anything it can borrow as of right.

Frankly, I have difficulty in trying to rationalize this at all, for any of the reasons that have been given. There was a lengthy inquiry in the Banking and Commerce Committee in the House of Commons in relation to all the parts of this bill, and there were some submissions and there was some consideration given in relation to these parts; yet the only explanation that is given is that you must prevent the possibility of pyramiding, of using the same assets twice and, secondly, you must prevent the possibility that some person who has trust company shares to sell might inflate their market price before he makes a deal with the loan company to sell those shares to the loan company. But I say that this section to which I have referred you in the bill, section 41, puts the whole question, "To buy or not to buy?" in the hands of the Superintendent of Insurance and Treasury Board, and they dictate the terms and conditions. Surely, we can assume that a man of the experience of the Superintendent of Insurance is not going to be fooled by any inflationary process that might precede an attempt to sell shares of a trust company to a loan company?

Hon. Mr. Isnor: Did I understand the honourable senator to say that the present Superintendent of Insurance had reported against this bill?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: No. What I said was that in the committee in the other place, in explaining this section, he supported the provision as being necessary to prevent pyramiding and having the same assets do double duty for borrowing purposes.

Hon. Mr. Isnor: The present Superintendent of Insurance?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: The present Superintendent of Insurance, yes.

Now we come down to the practical problem—and may I take a minute to deal with it? The practical problem is that there are certain features in this bill, and I mentioned one in the beginning about increasing the loans on real estate from 66⅔ to 75 per cent. I understand that life companies, possibly some trust companies, and maybe some loan companies, have had such pressure exerted upon them from the construction industry that loans have been approved on the basis of 75 per cent, with the obligation on the loan companies only to advance 66⅔ per cent until this bill becomes law. I understand, too, that pressure has been very great.

If at this stage we were to attempt any prolonged examination of this, who knows what might happen? Parliament might prorogue and the bill would be suspended in mid-air. We are faced again—and I am looking at it practically—with the situation where there is something that requires correction. Yet there appear to be meritorious aspects of the bill. They would permit an expansion of investment in common shares which is in line with government policy to support the larger holding by Canadians in Canadian business and industry.

Considering all these features, the question is, how can you deal with this if it would appear that in the short run there is an immovable object? It may be that the best I can do at this time is exactly what I have done, that is, to point out the inequity and the unreasonableness, and to point out that if there is any risk there are two screens that you would have to get through before a situation could be created where you would have a creditor position in a loan company, and you might then suggest that that creditor position is in peril. Having regard to the limitation in the Loan Companies Act, and the cushion that is provided, there would have to be a financial catastrophe or its equivalent before security could be imperilled.

I realize that, after explaining the situation as I see it in this bill, the question arises as to the practical way of dealing with it. Unless the government is prepared at this moment to agree to some change I am not in a position where I can say, "Well, not only do I think they should, but I think we should insist that they do so." I would rather allow the full force of my objections to be felt here today, and since I understand they may be dealt with by witnesses in committee, I would rather have them put on the wall objectively where they can be looked at and where I would expect that sweet reasonableness might develop shortly thereafter.

Hon. David J. Walker: Honourable senators, the very able and lucid explanation of the bill, and the pointing out of some of its anomalies convinces me beyond question that the sooner we get this bill into the sanctum sanctorum of the Senate Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, the better. There are too many questions to be decided other than at the Banking and Commerce Committee level. Although I have the greatest respect for the superintendent of insurance and his office, and I am sure these clauses have been worked out carefully, nevertheless, there are still many clauses I would like to question.

My honourable colleague, Senator Hayden, has questioned the raising of the percentage of the lending value on loans. I think it is fairly obvious that it should be raised to 75 per cent. The National Housing Act as amended by Bill C-102 was approved by this house in January last. There the values were raised up to 95 per cent on the first $13,000 of the lending value, and 75 per cent on the balance. If we are to avoid the inequities and hardships inherent in second mortgages, we should keep up with the times and have the percentage raised from 66⅔ per cent to 75 per cent. I think this is an excellent suggestion.

Another question that should be raised before the Banking and Commerce Committee is this: If a trust company owns more than 10 per cent of the shares of a loan company, or vice versa, why must the two companies be considered as one for the purpose of borrowing? How is that figure of 10 per cent fixed? It seems to me to be difficult to decide the basis for this complicated formula. How are the deductions arrived at? In my view this whole matter needs clarification.

Nevertheless, it is a good bill and is needed at the present time, subject to the clarification I have mentioned.

Senator Lang in a very learned exposition made the bill simple or, at any rate, much simpler to understand than it would otherwise have been. I want to congratulate him, and also Senator White who raised three very important questions to be determined in the Banking and Commerce Committee, particularly with regard to the definition of "resident" and "nonresident."

I do not wish to take up too much of the time of the Senate. Therefore, I am going to vote for second reading of the bill, and I am sure all these problems will find a ready explanation or amendment in the very able committee presided over by the last speaker (Hon. Mr. Hayden).

Hon. Mr. Bouffard: May I ask a question? There are trust companies that come under federal jurisdiction, and there are trust companies that come completely under provincial jurisdiction and to whom the federal law does not apply. How then would this affect the situation as between the two types of company? Would it be possible for the Federal Loan Company or Federal Trust Company to compete with a provincial company to whom these limitations do not apply?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: First of all a situation of the kind covered by the bill would have to develop. In all the years that there have been trust company and mortgage company operations only two such situations developed, and they developed before there was any law on the subject. Except in these two situations which antedated the introduction of a law to deal with these matters, no such situations have arisen. Therefore the occasions on which such situations may arise may be few. I cannot tell you how soon this will happen.

In answer to the question as to whether, if it does happen, it would affect the position of a trust company incorporated under the Federal Trust Companies Act as opposed to a provincial company which would not be subject to this formula, I do not know what the situation would be. That will involve an examination of all the restrictions and curbs imposed on provincial companies. It may well be that the Superintendent of Insurance can give us this information in committee.

On motion of Hon. Mr. McCutcheon, debate adjourned.

INCOME TAX CONVENTION ACT

BILL TO IMPLEMENT CONVENTION BETWEEN CANADA AND JAPAN AND TO AMEND AGREEMENTS WITH CERTAIN OTHER COUNTRIES—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. John J. Connolly: I have asked the honourable Senator Hayden to move second reading of this bill and to explain its provisions.

Hon. Salter A. Hayden, with leave, moved second reading of Bill C-146, to implement a convention between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax and to amend the existing agreement and conventions between Canada and Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, with respect to income tax.

He said: Honourable senators, I shall try to make this explanation as brief as possible. I do not want you to get tired of listening to me.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Go right ahead—make this Salter Hayden day.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: It is an easier Salter Hayden day than the last couple of days have been.

This bill, C-146, is somewhat unusual in that it implements a tax convention negotiated between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income taxes. You will find the convention set out as schedule 1 to the bill.

Part 2 of the bill implements provisions negotiated to amend existing conventions between Canada and Denmark, Canada and Finland, and Canada and the Netherlands, and the amending provisions in relation to the latter three countries are set out in schedules 2, 3 and 4 to the bill.

May I deal first, and very briefly, with the tax convention with Japan. This convention is in a form very similar to that used in previous conventions between Canada and other states.

In general, the industrial and commercial profits derived by an enterprise of one of the contracting states carried on in the other contracting state are taxable in the latter state only to the extent that they are attributable to a permanent establishment situated in that state. In addition, this convention provides that income from other sources—that is, dividends, interest, royalties, etc.—are subject to withholding tax in the state in which those sources are situated when paid to a resident in the other state, and a withholding rate of 15 per cent is applicable generally to this type of income.

I should say that this rate of 15 per cent represents a concession, because I understand that the going rate of withholding tax in Japan is 20 per cent.

In addition I should direct the attention of honourable senators to Article VI, paragraph 2 of Schedule I, which provides that where a corporation in one of the contracting states has profits or income which it derives in that state from within the other state no form of tax will be imposed on dividends paid by that corporation unless such dividends are paid to a resident of that other state.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: That is a general principle, is it not, with all states?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: Yes, that is the general principle in the bill. In addition, this excludes a form of tax that might be said to be a tax in the nature of an undistributed profits tax.

One thing that may be a little puzzling is the fact that the beneficiary of this exemption and of the lower rate of withholding tax is described as a resident of one or other of the contracting states. When I looked up the definition of "resident" I found that it means an individual, and in relation to partnerships and trusts it is not clear as to what their position might be. It may be that in order to reap the benefit they would have to qualify as an enterprise of one of the contracting states in order to get under the umbrella.

It would be very interesting, and I think you would find it so—but I do not propose to do it here today—to consider the definition of "permanent establishment", as contained in Article II(1)(k). The definition is considerably more comprehensive and detailed than any similar definition in any of the earlier conventions. You will find set out, for instance, a number of establishments that are deemed to be permanent establishments, such as a place of management, a branch, an office, a factory, etc. But, when the convention is compared, for instance, with the United States convention, it is noted that no specific reference is made to farms, timber lands, plantations, and warehouses. I am wondering whether this definition, in the language that has been used, is broad enough to include all those other things or whether there is something by way of a purposeful omission because I understand that the Japanese have recently been acquiring interests in pulp and paper operations on the west coast. I would think that there should be something specific there in the language used in order that a determination could be made as to whether these timber limits would be of the character of a permanent establishment.

However, that is just a comment I make. I should say that there is nothing we can do except to pass the bill, or refuse to pass it, because the agreement has been signed by both governments.

Then, certain exemptions are provided in respect of things that are not regarded as establishing permanent establishments. For instance, the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise, or the maintenance of a place of business solely for the purpose of display or advertising and the supply of information, is deemed not to be of itself a permanent establishment. This permits a broader activity by an enterprise of one of the states in the other state than is the case under the other conventions, and would, in particular, seem to favour the expansion of Japanese sales in Canada without our Government deriving any revenue from the Japanese activity here, provided that activity were arranged so as to avoid the "permanent establishment" status.

In most other respects the definition of "permanent establishment" is similar to that contained in other conventions, but in subparagraph (vii) (bb) of Article II (1) a specific reference is made to a business which consists in whole or in part of providing the services of public entertainers. So far as I am aware this is a new provision concerning our international conventions.

In Article V you have the usual reciprocal exemption which is made in respect of profits of an enterprise of one of the contracting states in the operation of ships or aircraft in the other contracting state, but an exception is made where any such ship or aircraft is operated wholly or mainly between places within the latter state. If the ship or aircraft is operated wholly or mainly between places within a state, then the reciprocal provision does not apply.

There is also a provision in Article X to the effect that services performed aboard a ship or aircraft operated by one contracting state in the other contracting state, provided they do not come within the exception, are regarded as services performed in the contracting state that is operating the aircraft or ship.

The withholding tax in respect of dividends, interest and royalties is set at 15 per cent. It is significant that interest is defined to include any amount in excess of the amount loaned; that is, it will include, presumably, premiums and realized discounts.

In Article VIII (3) it is provided that a royalty shall be deemed to arise in the contracting state in which the property referred to in paragraph 2 of that article is to be used. Paragraph 4 of that article is also worth noting, since it permits the imposition of a tax on the income arising from the sale of any copyright of literary, artistic or scientific work, including motion picture films and T.V. films, or video tapes, or industrial property, but the rate of such a tax is limited to 15 per cent of the gross amount paid for the property unless such income is attributable to a permanent establishment situated in the state where the sale occurs.

Article X of the convention deals with remuneration for personal services, and in general it is in the usual form, but reference is made in paragraph 3 to remuneration received by public entertainers for the purpose of excluding such remuneration from the operation of that article, since it is to be taxed under the "permanent establishment" and "industrial and commercial profits" provisions, and therefore taxable at the going rates in that country.

There is then provision for the exchange of information. I know that in other times Senator Roebuck has had things to say about the very generous basis provided with respect to exchange of information between the income tax authorities of the two countries that are parties to the agreement. Here we have it again, and there seems to be nothing that we can do about it, although it does seem to go much further administratively than one would like to contemplate.

I should also mention that professors, teachers, students and apprentices are dealt with in a special way so that they are taxable only in one jurisdiction.

Honourable senators, those are the general aspects of this treaty with Japan. It is for a period of three years, and when the convention is ratified by the passage of this bill it will become effective as and from January 1 of this year.

There is a general provision to the effect that if any person feels he is hurt by what amounts to double taxation in any of his relationships as between Japan and Canada he can complain to the government sources in the territory of which he is a resident, and this is supposed to start the machinery going to provide some relief. Whether it will, I am not in a position to say, and I do not know how long the procedure will take. However, for what it is worth, the provision is there.

There are revisions of three existing treaties, the first of which is the Canada-Denmark Convention which will be found in Schedule II. The provisions of this treaty are modified by Schedule II so as to strike out the provision of Article VI (2) of the convention. That provision provided for the reduction of the withholding rate on dividends from 15 per cent to 5 per cent where more than 50 per cent of the fully voting stock of the payor company resident in one of the states was owned by the payee corporation resident in the other state. This modification implements the Government policy first announced by Mr. Fleming in his baby budget of December 20, 1960, to provide a standard 15 per cent withholding rate in respect of all income to non-residents taxed under Part III of the Income Tax Act.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Do you have to go back to 1960 to justify this iniquitous thing?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: No. In the answer "no" that I gave I do not want to be construed as being in agreement with my honourable friend that there is anything iniquitous about it.

Although no effective action was taken in this regard by the Government of that day to implement this change in taxation by revising the convention, the policy was subsequently adopted by the succeeding government, and this present modification represents the implementation of that policy.

In the convention between Canada and Finland, which you will find in Schedule III of the bill, there is a provision implementing a modification of this treaty similar to that made in respect of the Canada-Denmark Convention.

Then, in the Canada-Netherlands Convention you have a little more, because Schedule IV to the bill contains provisions which modify this convention and which are also designed to implement, subject to an exception, the Government's policy as to a standard rate of 15 per cent withholding. In addition, however, to amending the provisions regarding the withholding tax rate on dividends, the amendment to the Netherlands treaty—paragraph 4 of Article I of Schedule IV—would permit the Netherlands to raise the 15 per cent withholding rate in respect of dividends if and when it adopts a new law, which is currently in process in the Netherlands, under which distributed profits of a Netherlands company will be taxed at a lower rate than undistributed profits.

As to the possibilities that are involved, particularly by virtue of the Canada-Netherlands Convention, I do not propose to deal with them in any way. I am sure that practising lawyers will study the situation and each one for himself will ascertain whether there is elbow room for satisfactory movement in one or another direction in relation to this treaty. That is something which is not part of my job to explain on second reading.

Honourable senators, those are the highlights of the conventions that are dealt with in this bill.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: I wish to move the adjournment of the debate.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Might I ask the honourable senator does this bill become part of the law of Canada, as have previous bills of a similar nature?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: It certainly is part of the law of Canada, that is point No. 1. On point No. 2, if there is any inconsistency between this bill, when it is enacted into law, and the provisions of any other law of Canada, the provisions of this particular bill shall govern. You find that in Part I of the bill, section 2, and also in Part II.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: It is that to which I have objected over and over again as these conventions come before us. The whole convention is made a part of the tax law of this country.

Hon. Mr. Hayden: It is put above the tax law.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: It is imposed upon the tax law; it becomes part of the tax law. That is done by reason of section 2, I understand, in this particular bill. It is done in some section of all these bills.

My point is that while the executive may make an agreement with a foreign country, that binds the executive only. The executive must take the chance of submitting it to Parliament before it becomes a part of the law of the country which the executive may represent. That is an ancient and fundamental rule and practice in law. It goes back three or four hundred years.

My objection to taking a bill of this kind at a gulp and making it part of the law is that it becomes so complicated to those who are expected to observe the law of Canada, that it becomes almost ineffective except to those who are engaged in the particular trade referred to. That is one objection.

What should be done is this—I have said this often and I shall keep on saying it—the drafters of our laws should make such amendments to our law as are required in order to supplement the agreement, so that it is clearly understood when one looks at the income tax law, or some other excise tax law. They should make it perfectly clear what the change in our law has been as a result of this convention or agreement with a foreign country, and not leave each individual to read all these things to find out what the law of Canada may be.

If there is any change in our fundamental law of taxation as a result of this convention, it should be made in our own law, not by adopting a thing like this in bulk and leaving it to the citizen to try to find out what the law is.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: May I say—

The Hon. the Speaker: There is a motion for adjournment of the debate moved by Senator Brooks. If there is unanimous consent, we could hear Senator Hugessen. Is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. A. K. Hugessen: I was about to say one thing in reply to my honourable friend. I think I have said it before on previous occasions when he raised the same point. If you were to incorporate, for instance, in our income tax law all the income tax conventions that this country has with 30, 40 or 50 other countries, you would have a most extraordinary and impossible income tax law.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Oh, no.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Not much more extraordinary or impossible than it is now, Senator—just a little more.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: It would be much more impossible. Normally speaking, when you look at an income tax act, modified, up to date, you see there are references made to the fact that this country has income tax conventions with such and such other countries. In those rather rare cases where you have a client who may be affected by one of these particular conventions, all you have to do is to look up a convention and see whether it overrides the Income Tax Act. That seems to me to be the most simple way of dealing with the matter. I would be appalled if we had to deal with it in the way my honourable friend suggests.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: May I have indulgence to say just this? These conventions run along similar lines. They may change to some extent from one country to the other, but for the most part they are couched in the same language and mean very largely the same thing with regard to one country after the other. Some division of the Income Tax Act could easily be devised in which general principles would be laid down which would be stated to refer to this, that or the other country involved. In that way, instead of being a vast affair it would be a rather concise matter that would be comprehensive rather than broad, as it is here.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Brooks, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, March 11, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS FINANCING AND GUARANTEE BILL, 1964

AUTHORITY TO PRINT COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

Hon. A. K. Hugessen, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, presented the following report of the committee on Bill C-137, to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways System for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railway Company:

> Your committee recommends that authority be granted for the printing of 800 copies in English and 300 copies in French of its proceedings on the said bill.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: I move, with leave of the Senate, that the report be adopted now.

Report adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Hon. Mr. Hugessen, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-137, to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways System for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railway Company, and now reports the same with the following amendment:

> Strike out "Trans-Canada Air Lines" in clauses 3, 4, 6 and 10 and substitute therefor "Air Canada".

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

On motion of Hon. Mr. Hugessen, report placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by the honourable Senator Hugessen, that when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, March 16, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

In speaking to this motion, I should say that at this late date in the session there is, of course, some risk in moving an adjournment as long as this. However, I think we have made good progress with our legislation already this week.

I understand that one item will be referred to committee today. There is another item that will stand over, I understand, for discussion at the next sitting; however, there is to be some discussion this afternoon.

I am sure honourable senators will understand when I say that if developments occur in the other place which provide a fairly heavy program for the Senate, the Senate can always be recalled. I would have to advise His Honour the Speaker, depending upon the circumstances that develop. However, as I see it, the efficient conduct of the business of the Senate can be maintained, notwithstanding the proposed adjournment.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: The honourable leader has spoken of the business in prospect. I wonder if he could give us a detailed idea of the various bills which he expects might be before us next week?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I will do what I can. Certainly the Canada Pension Plan will be one. The measure commonly referred to as the "Contracting out bill" is, I understand, to follow in the other place. What else may come to us will depend a great deal on the circumstances that develop in Parliament. For instance, there are amendments to the Companies Act which have already passed this house and have been considered in a committee of the other place. I understand that they are not troublesome amendments.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: They are minor amendments?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Minor amendments.

I do not think I can go beyond what I have said today. Indeed, I may not be able to go beyond that at any time. However, there are many other pieces of legislation on the order paper, and there is a possibility that when the Senate is considering legislation that has been dealt with in the other place, there will be further business to come to us in the event that the session draws to an early conclusion. I am afraid I cannot go further than that.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: The only definite piece of legislation, as I understand it, is the pensions bill.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): And the "contracting out bill".

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Consideration of the second one has not begun yet.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: You cannot assure us that that bill will be coming before us next week?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I would not like to give an assurance to the Senate that either bill will be before us next week.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: We are just asking.

Motion agreed to.

UNITED NATIONS

NINETEENTH SESSION OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Hon. Rheal Belisle rose pursuant to notice:

> That he will call the attention of the Senate to the Nineteenth Session of the General Assembly of the United Nations, held in New York City, and in particular to the discussions and proceedings of the Assembly and the participation therein of the delegation of Canada.

He said: Honourable senators, having read the Annual Report of the Eighteenth General Assembly, where it said that the United Nations had only begun to explore its full potentialities as an instrument for multilateral diplomacy, especially the most fruitful combination of public discussion, on the one hand, and private negotiation and mediation, on the other, I am now convinced that the opportunities during the now defunct Nineteenth General Assembly have been tested.

This is a fascinating field where the experience of classical diplomacy, the successes and the errors of the League of Nations and the United Nations, and the knowledge of the technique and psychology of a public debate utilizing to the full the modern media, all have to be taken into account by the political scientist as well as by those who are put in positions where they have to explore possibilities by action. Looking at the United Nations in the capacity of a parliamentary observer, I cannot find any part of that task more challenging than the one which consists in trying to develop all the potentialities of this unique organization deeply engaged in the common effort to save the peace and to safeguard a world of peace.

Having had the honour of attending what has already been called by reporters the slow funeral march on the graveyard of the United Nations, I am more than ever indebted to my leaders, the Right Honourable John G. Diefenbaker and the honourable Senator Brooks, for giving me such an opportunity.

May I be permitted to say that the pleasure of being in such distinguished and learned company as Senator Eric Cook of Newfoundland, the Honourable Paul Martin, Minister of External Affairs, and others of great experience and who have shown tremendous interest in the United Nations, was not only a good start but gave the assurance that knowledge and wisdom were to guide our actions and decisions.

I would like to add that I was extremely proud to be a member of the Canadian delegation when the Honourable Paul Martin made an eloquent plea for peace and cooperation between nations, so that the United Nations may survive.

Canada, I was happy to note, has an excellent reputation at the United Nations. This was brought about, in the main, by the conduct of our ambassador, His Excellency Paul Tremblay, who, I am pleased to learn, was last week unanimously elected Chairman of the United Nations Committee for International Co-Operation Year. I met many delegates and permanent ambassadors who had only the highest praise for him and the Canadian personnel who are carrying out Canada's commitments to the United Nations at the present time.

Honourable senators, you may feel that I am trying to be political when I say that I was extremely proud to hear many delegates state that they well recall the outstanding contribution to peace and justice made by the Right Honourable John G. Diefenbaker when he addressed the United Nations Assembly.

Of course, I heard also the name of our present Prime Minister mentioned, but that I leave to my honourable colleague, Senator Cook, who will undoubtedly be very liberal with his words and in his approach.

Most of you will recall last year when I spoke on NATO and its intricacies with the United Nations, I said this:

> Peace-keeping activities occupy a central position in the wide sphere of United Nations activity. For Canada the maintenance of peace and security was the principal reason for establishing the new world organization in 1945. The basic Canadian approach to the United > Nations is reflected in the fact that Canada has participated in almost every one of the dozen peace-keeping operations conducted under the United Nations flag, from Korea to Cyprus.

I say with candour that on many of my suggestions I was not far wrong.

Honourable senators, in the light of what has taken place at the United Nations I would like to give you my humble views of what will be the downfall of the United Nations if the constitution is not properly rewritten.

I know that from the observations that I am about to make, most of you will say, "Everyone must decide for himself what is the right answer". But fairness requires that it be based on knowledge. A man of firm convictions does not ask and does not receive understanding from those with whom he comes into conflict. In the synthesis which should be the task of posterity, it is necessary to disengage oneself from earlier conflicts, to examine what he really stood for, and judge the power of survival of these things without projecting the conflicts of our day into the past.

Probably to make such an examination is beyond my competence.

Everyone should realize that no problem, be it political or spiritual, could any longer be resolved on the basis of Carlyle's approach. Our world of today, in his view, requires a universal vision; indeed, our anguished hearts demand it. Mankind as an ideal is not too weak a guide for our conduct. It is necessary, more necessary than ever, to seek in it an inspiration for all our actions.

For vast multitudes and nations this is an era when, for the first time, they have fully sensed the rights and responsibilities of free peoples and sovereign states. It is also the era when freedom and sovereignty for the first time have actually come within their reach. Parallel with great social and economic revolutions within many countries, we witness now a world revolution from which peoples, long dependent on others, begin to emerge as dynamic national states.

In the pride of self-realization natural to these new states, we should welcome the constructive element: self-assertion like that of a young man coming of age, conscious of his powers, eager to find his own way, to make his voice heard and to render his contribution to progress.

We should meet this new enthusiasm with understanding, in full appreciation of the rich gifts it can bring to a world of many nations and people in friendly competition. In world affairs such an attitude, which is in line with the great traditions of our country, may be regarded as an expression of true democracy in international life.

I have spoken about the positive aspect of the nationalism of a young state. Let us not forget that these positive elements can be turned into a destructive force if repressed or unguided. Constructive nationalism is a sign of true statesmanship, both in the new countries and in older nations.

National policies should be directed to avoid collisions developing out of unwise reactions to the new forces. History places a burden on our shoulders. The creative urges of the emergent African and Asian nations, some of whom I think were not really mature enough for full nationhood, are tinged with strong emotions from the past. It is for all of us, denying neither the good nor the bad of the past, to look ahead and not to permit old conflicts to envenom the spirit of the creative work before us.

We have to face also another kind of new nationalism, an idealism of a new philosophy, which is a strong force in every state. It is common knowledge that recent technological changes have created a new kind of interdependence among nations and has brought all peoples much closer to each other. For reasons which lie outside the political sphere, practically all of mankind today must be regarded as a unit in important economic, technical, social and political respects. Economic changes tend to sweep over all the world. Because it is more difficult to limit wars to a single area, all wars are of concern to all nations. Not only construction but also destruction may today be global.

It is natural that this new situation should provoke a resistance, inspired by the fear that our own country and our own private world might find itself submerged in some global development, and so we see people trying to find ways to isolate themselves from general trends and to build up closed protected units. We can understand or even sympathize with such a reaction, but we must recognize that if it represents a resistance to change, it is doomed to failure. Such self-sought isolation may persevere for some time. It will not endure forever, and the longer change is resisted and adjustment shirked, the more violent will be the final reaction when the walls collapse.

We undoubtedly need world organization, but we are far from ripe for world government, as I said in my humble remarks last year. Indeed, even modest attempts at regional integration have met with considerable difficulties, not because of any superstitious respect for national sovereignty, but because the people want to know in whose hands they put their fate if they are to surrender part of their self-determination as nations.

Furthermore, how often have we not seen those who most eagerly plead for integration among other countries, themselves shrink back from even the slightest discipline of their own sovereign rights?

Discussion about international co-operation, world organization and world government throws much light on the problem of the nation versus the world. I would not regard the widespread and often vocal resistance to anything which might be construed as tending to limit national sovereignty as a new upsurge of nationalism. It should rather be regarded as a symptom of how heavily faith in national self-determination weighs in the scales in every effort to reconcile the nation and the world. Such expression of national feelings is both an asset and a liability. It is an asset to the extent that it reflects the determintaion to shape one's own fate and to take the responsibility for it. It is an asset as a brake on immature experiments in international co-operation. But it is a liability when it blinds our eyes to the necessity of that degree of international organization which has become necessary to national life.

So far we have considered the question of the nation and the world in what I may call pragmatic and practical terms. The problem has also an ideological aspect, as I mentioned earlier.

Every nation has its heroes, its martyrs and its saints. The world also has its heroes and saints. One who long ago spoke to a small, oppressed people for the brotherhood of all men was sacrificed as a danger to the safety of his own nation. Western civilization has aspired for nearly two thousand years to follow the life and teachings of the greatest apostle of peace. But all through those two thousand years nationalism in the narrow and dangerous sense of the word has remained a major force. In the light of history, one might well ascribe to mankind the words of Milton's Lucifer:

> For only in destroying I find ease to my relentless thoughts.

The cynic may well ask: Where in the political and national histories of this period do we see a reflection of the creed professed by sovereigns and peoples alike? The cynic may also say that as the past has been, so will the future be. It is my belief that he is wrong on both scores. Whatever doubts history may cast, I believe that the hope for world peace and order, inspired by respect for man, has never ceased to agitate the minds of men. I believe that it accounts for the great and noble human spirit behind the ravaged exterior of a history whose self-inflicted wounds have become more and more atrocious. And I believe that at the point we have now reached in our technical development, our creed may gain new possibilities to shape history. A faith like that which has inspired the spiritual life of the west, could seem only a dream to the leader of the people of a powerful nation which can dominate others or consider itself untouched by their actions. A new situation arises the day you have to recognize that you cannot dictate to other nations. It is more difficult to see your brother in a slave or a master. It is easier to see him in somebody with whom you have to live without giving or taking orders. Looking back into the past we see how peoples have been oppressed and how peoples have accepted oppression—in the name of God. May we now be approaching a time when in His name they will be giving and accepting freedom instead!

As I said earlier, we may be assisting the slow funeral march of our United Nations. I think it is an occasion now for fresh thinking about the problems and the challenge of our world. The United Nations is an expression of our will to find a synthesis between the nation and the world.

In my humble way, I will try to assess where the faults lie in the present confusion and the complexity of its ineptitudes to function properly.

I once read a book in which it was stated that the science of psychology was to be able to observe and instantly assess the intellectuality of the dialogue given to you. If I were permitted to define for you the complexity of the language of the world diplomats arrayed at the United Nations, I would say that the psychology is such that you must not only be able to assess the intellectuality of the dialogue, but also understand in the diplomat's phraseology the message he wanted to leave with you in what he did not say.

After days of this intriguing language and life you go to your room in the evening, remove your formal wear, and there within the tranquility of your four walls you try to assess or, better still, meditate on what is the future of this unique organization.

You try to analyze what this is all about. East and west, and west and east—the winds of conflict appear to be blowing too persistently in these two directions only. You recall that in your elementary knowledge of geography you were told, and in fact you learned, that there were four cardinal points —north, south, east and west. Why is the United Nations at its present stage of development not involved more appropriately with other important conflicts arising from other cardinal points of our planet?

The first thought is that this is the twentieth century Tower of Babel. You then look in the drawer of history, take the Bible and read for a while how the Tower of Babel became a reality. Then another thought comes to your mind: The Yalta Conference where Stalin was given undue recognition and where the Communist world expanded its might and power over many countries of Europe. Your thoughts are that there the democracies began digging their own grave in sealing the graves of several European democratic nations, thus surrendering part of their principles.

And then your mind suddenly leaps to San Francisco. Yes, was it not there that our leaders bowed to Stalin's request that no word of God, no word relating to the Divine Providence, no word mentioning Christianity, was to be included or form part of the United Nations Constitution?

Our Christian leaders who then were strong and mighty conceded to Stalin and his atheistic philosophy that the world was to be run only by moral and materialistic means. Is it that all their memories blanked the gratitude that the world owed Him for ending the war?

I cannot believe that they were so filled with glory and vanity that their foresight was made without using hindsight, without at least thinking that during the last twenty centuries history is filled with men who became so drunk with power and might that they thought themselves so indispensable that only material means and ends counted.

By the command of Stalin, twenty centuries of Christianity was left out of the United Nations Constitution and also out of the UN buildings. Their memories were short. They did not need Him; and so, honourable senators, Communism and atheism took His place. They have succeeded so well that today the West does not run the show any more. This is why there was no confrontation.

At the United Nations the human race is brought together with all its virtues and faults, its wisdom and follies, its good will and ill will. This is not a world government. This is a world meeting to talk over the pressing dangers of our times and to hunt for the way to prosperity and to give world peace according to the Eastern formula. The East have taken every opportunity to further their own propoganda. The UN cannot rule the world by making and enforcing a world law with planes and atom bombs when nearly one-third of the world population has not been admitted.

The recommendations of the General Assembly of the UN may be all the more ineffective because they do not demand obedience or discipline but only ask a decent respect for the opinions of mankind.

But your thoughts revert to what you heard during the day in a conversation with an African delegate. When you asked him why the West was losing so much ground, so much influence and support, the answer was that it was a battle of ideologies, and Communism and atheism do not surrender on principles; but the so-called Western democracies will do anything for the Almighty Dollar!

Then you ask him another question: Are there any good feelings regarding the millions and billions given by the West to assist underdeveloped nations? And his answer is that if you are thinking of the word "gratitude," you are in for a surprise, because "He who says that he is in the light and hates his brother, is in the darkness still." They believe that our so-called generosity is given only because "Charity covers a multitude of sins."

You cannot help but think that if human knowledge and technology has made it possible for you to understand, by instant translation, nearly every language spoken, our materialistic world is not too much further ahead in its understanding than that of the confusion which existed during the construction of the Tower of Babel.

Honourable senators, there can be little doubt that we have reached one of those watersheds in human affairs. It is not the first, of course, and surely I hope not the last. However, this is clearly a critical point in the long, wearisome, erratic, quarrelsome but relentless journey towards the better and brighter community which is the central thread of the human story.

All through the years, we have been taught again and again that most men value some things more than life itself. No one has reminded us more eloquently and resolutely that it is better to die on your feet than to live on your knees without freedom, than the noble spirit that left us the other day in London—Sir Winston Churchill.

This, it seems to me, makes the present juncture in our affairs historic and critical. This, it seems to me, is why the General Assembly should be able to perform its proper functions in the event of an emergency, and why this issue before us must be resolved.

What then is the issue before us? It is, in essence, whether or not we intend to preserve the effective capacity of that organization to keep peace and freedom. It is whether to continue the difficult but practical and hopeful concept of Christian philosophy, so well expounded in the Sermon on the Mount. So, therefore, we must rewrite the UN Charter and give the Almighty Creator his place.

Is it not inconsistent that powerful nations such as the United States of America and Great Britain, having God-centred and even Christian-based constitutions, would suddenly and so naïvely yield to the demand that God be ignored in this assembly which represents the focus of His rational creatures?

After all, this would only be asking for a practice that is prevalent in all our legislatures, the House of Commons and in our own Senate. This is what gives me more faith in our democratic institutions, for we are a God-fearing nation. This is what would give me more faith in the work of the United Nations.

For as long as He will be kept outside, unwanted and unsolicited, modern and advanced material technology will only increase present confusion and may unleash another world war.

I have no prophetic vision to bring to the answer of this question—for this would be a step in the dark, down an unknown path. I can only say with certainty, that the UN cannot and should not continue under this obsolete constitution chosen at San Francisco.

Who can say whether we shall have another chance to draw our lesson from another global conflict and start again? This, however, we know full well, we the human race, are fellow travellers on a tiny spaceship spinning through infinite space. We can wreck our ship. We can blow the human experiment into nothingness, and by every analogy of practical life, a quarrelsome ship's company and only material hands on the steering gear is a good recipe for disaster.

The UN organization was born out of the cataclysms of the Second World War. It should justify the sacrifices of all fighters for freedom and justice in that war. I remember the bitter lines of a great Anglo-American poet who writes in an Epitaph on an Unknown Soldier:

> To save your world, you asked this man to die,
> Would this man, could he see you now, ask why?

It is our duty to the past and it is our duty to the future so to serve both our nation and the world as to be able to give a reply to that anguished question.

DIVORCE

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, presented the committee's reports Nos. 737 to 840, inclusive.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these reports be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Honourable senators, in view of the situation—which I need not describe—it might be wise if we pass these reports forthwith.

If it is agreed, I would move the immediate consideration and adoption of the reports.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: These are all petitions initiated in this particular year? There are none held over from previous years?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I am not positively certain that they may not include a petition presented to us prior to January.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: I mean this session.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: This session, I am sure. However, I can assure you that all the cases have been tried since the Christmas recess, that I have read every one of them and all have been approved by myself, as chairman, as well as by the committee.

Hon. Mr. Reid: Over what period of time?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: The trials commenced shortly after the Christmas recess. Honourable senators will observe that they are all here on the table, and they present a formidable appearance. They were all tried after the conclusion of the recess. I shall have more cases to bring forward—perhaps tomorrow, but certainly by Tuesday next.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: They do not go through a machine that rapidly, do they?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Indeed, they do not; they go through the human machine.

Reports adopted.

CANADA LABOUR (STANDARDS) CODE BILL

THIRD READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. John J. Connolly moved the third reading of Bill C-126, respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, on second reading of this bill nobody quarrelled with the principle, and I think if we were faced with a statement of government policy that it is desirable that the standards of employment embodied in this bill should be followed in normal circumstances, everybody would agree, and possibly there would be left only the argument made by the honourable Senator Choquette on second reading, that the minimum salary of $1.25, again in normal circumstances, could well be raised to $1.50. However, we are faced with a bill, not with a statement of policy, and I suggest that the meetings of the Committee on Banking and Commerce have shown that the Government was not ready to embody these standards in a bill, which it pompously called the Canada Labour (Standards) Code.

The Canadian Congress of Labour has indicated that so far as it is concerned it accepts this bill as establishing a floor for a basis on which it can negotiate. I think it is agreed by the labour leaders that this bill in practice will not do much more than make or sanction the statement of policy I have already mentioned. The bill as drafted admits in its own terms its fundamental vices, indeed, the consequent difficulties which its application will bring.

We have tried on this side of the house, those of us who are members of the Committee on Banking and Commerce, to improve this bill, especially in three domains, where its vices and faults are more apparent. First, there is the delimitation of its area of application. It is not clear at all where it starts or where it ends. I suggest, furthermore, that it is not because the draftsmen of this bill have adopted most of the definitions contained in the Industrial Disputes Act that they have done a good job. I suggest that the area of application unduly brings the federal Parliament into fields which belong to the provinces.

It may not be extremely important, but I will draw the attention of the house to the fact that it is certainly not necessary for banking legislation to operate in the domain of salaries, conditions of work, or standards of work of bank employees; and I suggest that in this respect we might very well expect that if the case were to go to the Supreme Court it would be declared ultra vires.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: It is empire building.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Yes. Well, it is an old trend, as you know.

The second area, of course, is the obscure consequences which this bill will have on collective agreements presently in force.

I do not know why this bill should intervene in areas which are at present governed by agreements negotiated by strong bargaining units. I would suggest that these bargaining units know much more about the conditions which should prevail than does the Department of Labour.

The third domain is, of course, the fact that this bill will delegate to the minister and to the Governor in Council exorbitant powers to abrogate or to amend substantially this law. Here I refer to sections 51 and 52 of the bill. It is extraordinary to think that one would find such powers of abrogation or of amendment given to the minister or to the Governor in Council.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Such as the powers given in the famous "class or kind" bill, which was killed because of that provision.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Indeed. This goes much further than the powers which were given to the Minister of National Revenue in the now famous bill relating to class or kind of goods. The only explanation, of course, is that again the Government was not ready to embody in a bill standards of labour, or employment, applying to federal works and businesses.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: May I ask the honourable senator a question?

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Certainly.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Did you, or one of your associates in the Banking and Commerce Committee, not move to increase the powers and discretion of the minister?

Hon. Mr. Flynn: I remember that very well. However, if the minister is to have powers like that, and if they are going to remain there, he might as well have more powers in order to be able to give a reasonable application or a reasonable exemption. That is the argument which was made by Senator McCutcheon, and I think nobody can refute the logic of it. However, if we are caught with these discretionary powers to the minister and the Governor in Council, you might as well give them more latitude, in order that they may do the best job they can under circumstances, which I am not prepared to accept; however, if we are faced with them, that is another problem.

The intention of the bill is to establish standards of employment when we are faced with the regular or normal week of work; that is, one which starts on Monday and ends Friday evening, with 8 hours per day, from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, with one hour for lunch.

That is all right, but one knows that the largest area of jurisdiction of the federal Government is in the domain of transportation by sea, land and air—by ship, by rail and highway transport, and by air transport. In this domain of transportation I do not think you will find that the regular week is as I stated it. Therefore, this bill cannot really be applied to this principal area of federal jurisdiction.

The only explanation I can offer for rushing this bill through without proper preparation, without proper solutions, is to have it adopted so that it can be used for election purposes. There is no other explanation for rushing this bill, which is ill-prepared, ill-thought out, and which will not come into force unless the minister defers its application in many instances or gives exemptions in other very important areas, especially those relating to transportation.

Before the committee, and also in the briefs that have been received by the honourable members of this house, proof has been given that this bill in its present form cannot be made to apply in the domain of transportation by sea, land and air. In this respect the minister, as I said before, will have to use the extraordinary powers provided in sections 51 and 52.

I ask honourable senators why in this very important area of transportation you should give discretion to the minister or to the Governor in Council to decide whether this bill shall apply at all or what part of it shall not apply or be deferred? It seems to me that the employees in the domain of transportation who are governed by collective agreements negotiated by recognized bargaining units, should know what should be their conditions and standards of employment, and I do not think that the minister or the Governor in Council can say any better than can these people. In fact, I challenge anybody in this chamber to prove that the standards contained in this bill, when applied to employees in the transportation field who are governed by collective agreements, will benefit them in any practical manner.

Therefore, what is the conclusion, if we want to be logical? It seems to me that we should not leave any discretion to the minister in this respect. Where we are satisfied that the standards of employment are satisfactory, we should not create uncertainty by, first of all, applying this bill in principle and, secondly, by leaving it to the discretion of the minister to apply it or defer it or amend it. It seems to me this is not a logical decision for this house to make.

There was another domain which was touched upon by the honourable Senator Thorvaldson on second reading and in committee, the domain relating to grain elevator operators. He will discuss that himself, but I suggest that, as far as the group of employees to which I have alluded before is concerned, we should accept our responsibility in the Senate in view of the uncontradicted evidence which was brought before the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, and amend this bill in order to remove the uncertainty and to take away from the minister a discretion which he is not able to use better than the recognized bargaining units who act for these employees.

It is for this reason that I shall move an amendment to clause 3 of this bill. As you know, clause 3 is entitled "Application." Clause 3(3) reads as follows:

> This Act does not apply to or in respect of employees who are
>
> (a) managers...
>
> (b) members of such professions...

My amendment will have the effect of removing from the application of this act the operators of country grain elevators as defined in the Canada Grain Act; and, secondly, members of the running trades, including sleeping and dining car crews of any railway, the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport, seamen as defined in the Canada Shipping Act, stevedores and longshoremen, flight crews of any civil aircraft:—and here is the important point—provided that the employment of such employees is governed by the terms of a collective agreement negotiated by a duly certified bargaining unit.

So you will see that the only thing this amendment will effect will be to remove the discretion of the minister and the Governor in Council—which is already too wide in principle—from a field already well provided for by collective agreements which have set reasonable standards of employment and working conditions, and to remove, at the same time, the uncertainty which would prevail if we were to adopt the bill as it is presently, leaving always the sword of Damocles hanging over the heads of the firms engaged in transportation by sea, land and air.

Therefore, honourable senators, seconded by honourable Senator McCutcheon, in amendment, I move:

> That the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:
>
> Strike out subclause (3) of clause 3 and substitute therefor the following:

Perhaps I may be permitted to dispense with reading clause 3(3)(a) and (b), because the wording is a repetition of what is already contained in clause 3(3); and I will repeat what I quoted before:

> ...(c) operators of country grain elevators as defined in the Canada Grain Act, or
>
> (d) members of the running trades including sleeping and dining car crews of any railway, the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport, seamen as defined in the Canada Shipping Act, stevedores and longshoremen, flight crews of any civil aircraft: provided that the employment of such employees is governed by the terms of a collective agreement negotiated by a duly certified bargaining unit.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the honourable Senator Hugessen, that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the honourable Senator Flynn, seconded by the honourable Senator McCutcheon:

That the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

Strike out subclause (3) of clause 3 and substitute therefor the following:

(3) This Act does not apply to or in respect of employees who are

(a) managers or superintendents or who exercise management functions,

(b) members of such professions as may be designated by the regulations as professions to which this Act does not apply,

(c) operators of country grain elevators as defined in the Canada Grain Act, or

(d) members of the running trades including sleeping and dining car crews of any railway, the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport, seamen as defined in the Canada Shipping Act, stevedores and longshoremen, flight crews of any civil aircraft: Provided that the employment of such employees is governed by the terms of a collective agreement negotiated by a duly certified bargaining unit.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Hon. Gunnar S. Thorvaldson: Honourable senators, I have much pleasure in supporting the amendment which has been moved by my colleague, Senator Flynn. I do so with all the sincerity and conviction at my command.

At the outset I would refer to the fact that when I spoke on this bill on second reading a few days ago, I said that I was in favour of the principle of the bill. Indeed, I have not heard anyone in this house speak against the general principle of the bill. I think it is a salutary thing to have on the federal statute books a standard labour code governing works within the federal jurisdiction, in the same way as this subject has been legislated upon by every province in Canada so far as the jurisdiction of each has been concerned.

I say, then, that I agree with the principle of this bill. The only things that I do not agree with are the matters dealt with in the amendment, which have indeed been fully discussed in the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce of the Senate.

As is known to everyone here, when this bill was in the other place it did not go before any committee. It is also well known that various representations were made to the honourable the Minister of Labour in regard to the bill during a period of many months when the bill was under discussion. I believe these discussions commenced even before the bill was presented in the other house. Furthermore, most of the organizations represented before the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce had previously prepared briefs which were presented to the cabinet or to committees of the cabinet as well as to the Minister of Labour.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: There was no recognition.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Needless to say no recognition whatever was given by the Government to the representations made.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): That is unfair.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I do not think the honourable gentleman means that.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I will rather say that no effective steps were taken to solve the problems presented to us although it is true that some amendments were made, including amendments to section 51 to which I shall refer later.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I wonder if my honourable friend would permit me a question. If a minister as a result of discussions with industry in general brings forward 10 amendments in the house, would my friend not consider that that was getting some results from the representations?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: If my honourable friend is willing to wait a little while I shall make very clear the reason why I am supporting the amendment.

As is well known, representations were made to our own Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce by various interests, including the Canadian Trucking Associations, the Dominion Marine Association, the Shipping Federation of British Columbia, the Upper Lakes Shipping Company, the Air Transport Association of Canada, and the Railway Association of Canada. May I add that the brief of the Railway Association of Canada was supported by the presence of several vice-presidents of the two major railways of this country. I refer to that simply to indicate the importance attached to the submissions of the railway companies.

There was also a submission by the Canadian National Railways in regard to their hotel system, and a brief was presented by the Canadian Warehousing Association. Furthermore, representations were made by all the interests operating grain elevators in western Canada, including the privately-owned companies, represented by the North-West Line Elevators Association, Manitoba Pool Elevators Limited, the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, the Alberta Wheat Pool, and United Grain Growers Ltd.

All these interests were ably represented here and made submissions to the committee. Furthermore, a submission was made by the Shipping Federation of Canada, whose representatives did not appear personally but sent their brief to the chairman. I have a copy of that brief here, and I have no doubt it will appear in the proceedings of the committee.

Now, honourable senators, there was one common denominator emphasized in all of these submissions. What was it? It was that in their respective industries the problem they had to face was not a temporary one, but a permanent one. It was not a transitional problem or one that could be cured by rulings of the minister or by regulations. I think each one of these companies proved conclusively to any fair-minded person that their real problem was not one that could be cured in 12, 18 or 36 months, or even in five, 10 or 20 years. The fact of the matter is that the problems of all of those industries are rooted in the very nature and kind of business in which they are engaged. Let us take as an example the elevator industry of western Canada. This operation is carried out basically by an elevator agent or by agents who man 5,000 elevators in western Canada. Their work today is identical with that of 20 years ago and, indeed, 50 years ago, and unless there are some new inventions which would completely revolutionize the grain handling processes in western Canada, their work will be the same 10 years hence, or even 40 years hence. So, as I say, their problems arise from circumstances that are basic to these industries and unchangeable. Consequently, honourable senators, what we ask for and, indeed, what we plead for is that these facts should be recognized and faced up to by this house. I submit that conclusive proof in regard to the permanency of these problems was given by the distinguised Canadian citizens who appeared and made representations to our Banking and Commerce Committee.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: May I ask my honourable friend a question? As I remember the discussion in committee, did not my honourable friend himself, or one of his associates, suggest that we change the permanency of the bill as it stood and require that a new application be made every year? He is now complaining about the permanency of conditions that the bill meets. Did my honourable friend not move in committee that deferment be limited to one year?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: If my honourable friend will tell me who made such a motion I shall be very glad to try to recollect it, but I must say that at this moment I have no recollection of anyone doing that. If it was done by anybody then I would say it was a most irresponsible thing to do, and it certainly does not represent the views I am trying to put forward and, indeed, it does not represent any views that I heard being presented to the committee.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I should have said that it was suggested, not actually moved.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: If that was done I do not think it affects my attitude with respect to the permanency of the problems these people have, and which they urged upon the committee.

Honourable senators, let me just say that ever since I came here it has been my understanding that one of the prime functions of our committees has been to hear submissions; to listen to them sincerely—which I know we all do—and to make amendments in detail when it is so conclusively proved that those amendments are necessary for the carrying on of the businesses that are involved. Let me say also that, as is well known, only the Senate allowed witnesses to appear before its committee in respect of this bill. Indeed, I think it is well known to all honourable senators that strong representations were made to the minister to have this bill go to the Banking and Commerce Committee of the other place, and that those requests were refused—at least, it is accurate to say that no committee of that house was allowed to hear representations with respect to this bill.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: May I answer the question that my friend asked me a few moments ago? My honourable friend asked me who it was who moved something of the kind I suggested. I have the minute before me, and it reads:

> Motion by Senator Flynn that a new Section 52A be added as follows:
>
> "An Order in Council passed under the authority of paragraph (2) of section 51 shall lapse after one year of its adoption, if it has not been approved by Parliament in the meantime".
>
> Motion lost on the following division: Yeas 7; Nays 12.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That, of course, was a kind of motion in despair, all of the proper motions that should have been adopted having not been adopted. I am sure that the honourable senator, whom I have known for many years, is not going to maintain that consistency is a virtue in politics.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: No, consistency is the bane of small mindedness. My friends have very big minds, and they are not at all consistent.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: All I say to my honourable friend is that I did not make the motion, and the fact that Senator Flynn made it does not mean I have to agree with it. I am certainly suggesting that the method we propose now to deal with these problems, namely, amending the bill, is the only correct and proper way of handling this situation.

In reply to my honourable friend Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne), who introduced this bill, I say, as I have already, that it is true there were certain amendments made to this bill. One of them was an amendment to section 51. I am not objecting to section 51 in the slightest. It is a perfectly good and useful section. It has its place in the bill, but I want to say now that in my belief section 51 is intended only to deal with temporary and transitional conditions. This appears in the bill under the heading "Special and Transitional Provisions." Consequently, it is intended only that these provisions of the bill, including the matter of the hearing of representations by a board of inquiry, and so on, are transitional. Nevertheless, the fact of the matter is that that section is useful in dealing with, as it says, special and transitional matters, but it is quite useless in dealing with the problems that were presented to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce by the companies and individuals I mentioned a few moments ago.

The next part of my case is this. As I have said, these are permanent problems. I referred to the elevator operators. I submit that nothing can be done for them under section 51.

Let me then come to the shipping industry. Is there any doubt that ships will continue to ply their trade day after day, 24 hours a day, week after week, and month after month; that they will ply their trade continuously in exactly the same way as they did 10 or 20 years ago, or as they did 400 years ago? Is there any question that the duties of the crew on a ship from the point of view of the number of hours that are required to be worked are not going to be similar to what they have been? Is there any question that the principles of seamanship and the operation of vessels is not going to be exactly the same 10 or 20 years from now as they have been in years past?

That is why I say there is a serious problem, honourable senators, and I sincerely believe it is our duty here and now to cure it in this chamber, and not to make the whole shipping industry of this country dependent, in these matters, upon the whims of the Minister of Labour, no matter who he is and no matter of what government he is a member.

One of the questions I asked the Minister of Labour in committee was whether he would be the official arbiter in these affairs, and he said yes. But he also added something like, "I only make a decision upon the recommendation of my officials".

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: And for only 18 months.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Exactly, he could make them for only 18 months. It is true that there are some additional provisions by which a board of inquiry might extend the time, but this problem, as was conclusively proved by the shipping people, is a permanent one. On that point let me read from page 2 of the submission of the Dominion Marine Association:

> While acknowledging that the bill contains averaging provisions (which, as we shall show later, are not applicable to the shipping industry), deferment periods, provisions for eight hours overtime and provides for permits authorizing an excess of overtime in exceptional circumstances—still the basic intent and purpose of the bill is to establish the 40-hour week as the standard industrial hours of work and the minimum wage at $1.25 per hour. Whether it be now, a year from now or three or five years from now, eventual compliance with the standard provisions of the bill will be insisted upon by the Department of Labour. The delayed application of the bill, we are told, is to prevent sudden dislocation and provide a period of gradual but inevitable adjustment. It is our intention at this stage of the submission therefore to ignore for the moment the averaging and deferment provisions of the bill. These provisions are palliative only and to rely thereon is to rely on regulatory decree and ministerial discretion.

Then a little later on at page 3 they say:

> One cannot tell now, even if the averaging provisions were applicable to shipping, what the regulations will say concerning the averaging of the hours of work under Section 5(2) of the bill; one cannot tell now what the minister will consider to be exceptional circumstances so as to justify a permit authorizing additional hours of work; or what a commission under section 35 will consider a proper period of deferment under section 51. A shipping company cannot plan its operations on the assumed content of ministerial decree. It can only analyse now what it knows to be those provisions of the bill which are immutable—that the hours of work in the standard work week shall be 40 (with the possibility of eight or less authorized additional hours of overtime) and that the minimum wage shall be $1.25 per hour.

This submission, I suggest, supports what I have been saying. What these people are afraid of, and rightly so, is that it will be impossible for them to live under this bill, for the palliatives that are offered are merely transitory and can only deal with temporary problems and not with the permanent problems of the trade.

I say that that was the common denominator of every submission made to the committee. Honourable senators, I suggest we should think these things over very carefully before we deny the relief that these people have requested.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Did any of the employees make such representations?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I am just coming to that, senator. As a matter of fact, I shall deal with that right now. I mentioned that there had been representations from the Canadian Trucking Associations. There were representations also from the Household Goods Division of the Canadian Warehousing Association. Those are people involved in transporting household goods from one place in a province to another, or from one place in Canada to another.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Those are employers.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes. That was an employer's brief. I am coming in a moment to the point to which you referred. These people tell us that their problem is no different today from what it was years ago or what it will be 20 years from now. The fact of the matter is that, as indicated in their brief, the real rush period is during the months of July and August of each year. The bulk of their business is done in May, June, July, August and perhaps September. That is when most household moving is done by Canadians. I quote from the brief:

> We are particularly concerned with the section of the bill which relates to maximum hours which may be worked in any one day or week.
>
> At the time this bill was given its second reading in the House of Commons, our Association directed a protest to Hon. A. J. MacEachen, Minister of Labour, in which we detailed some of the serious difficulties which would be experienced by interprovincial carriers of household goods, if the hours of work regulation was applied in the proposed form.
>
> Some of the areas which particularly troubled us were:
>
> (a) The household goods moving industry is highly seasonal in character, with optimum pressure being exerted during the summer months, followed by a substantial reduction in volume of business in the late fall, winter and early spring. It is an established fact that the volume of household moves during the months of June to September exceeds by far the number of moves during the balance of the year. This situation is generated mainly by the desire of most families to avoid dislocation of their children's schooling. As a result, our industry is required to meet this excessive demand for service by extending what might be regarded as normal hours of work.

Honourable senators, I should also like to quote from page 4:

> (e) In addition to our concern with the detrimental effect of the hours of work limtation on the general public and the companies operating moving and storage businesses, we would be remiss if we did not indicate the strong possibility of lower take-home pay for the appropriate employees. This concern is shared by many employees who have channelled petition forms through our Association to the Minister of Labour, pointing to the areas in which they would be specifically affected. A copy of the petition form is attached hereto. This will be self-explanatory.

Honourable senators, there is a form of petition which, we are informed, was signed by a number of employees and submitted to the minister.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: May I ask whether that petition was signed by highway transport drivers, the men who drive trucks?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I am presuming so. It just refers to "employees" and I could not state what categories they were.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: They are employees, in the main, who drive trucks and move furniture, are they not?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes, of course.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: So these men are complaining of not being able to drive trucks for more than eight hours a day. They are a menace to the road. That is the crowd, is it not?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: They are complaining that their earnings are going to be restricted.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: By long hours.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I do not accept that at all. I think the whole idea of this petition —and I am sure every fair-minded senator will agree with me—is that the employees are asking that they should not be restricted in the amount of money they can earn per annum.

It is obvious that this is a practical problem in any business. Certainly in my own business over the years I have tried to have ample man power and to work harder during seasons when business was good than I would at other times. I quote paragraphs 4 and 5 of this formal petition:

> (4) Since we are basically paid on an hourly rate, the limiting of the work day or week during the period when our earnings are substantially above the average for the year would seriously affect our income.
>
> (5) The proposal to permit a maximum of 48 hours of work in any one week, with subsequent "averaging out," would be highly impractical for our industry. We would, therefore, ask that the household goods moving and storage business be exempted from the proposed work day and week limitation.

Much the same facts were presented by the other trucking organization that I referred to, namely, the Canadian Trucking Associations.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Would the honourable gentleman say whether in his amendment he has included the people for whom he was speaking a moment ago?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I think they are covered, namely, in 3(d) of the proposed amendment, where it refers to "members of the running trades including sleeping and dining car crews of any railway, the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport, . . ." and so on. I think that would cover it.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): That is it.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: This has nothing to do with people engaged solely in transport within a province. The exemption would affect only those engaged in interprovincial transport.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: That is everybody to whom the bill refers.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: The people we are trying to exempt are the people for whom we are trying to legislate.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Certainly. That seems logical. It is clear.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I shall not refer further to the shipping people, but to some of the other industries concerned. However, I repeat that it is a matter of common knowledge among experienced people here that, in regard to the trucking industry, a trucker may leave Montreal, his destination being Vancouver. How in the world is he to operate within this bill? I wonder if any honourable senator could explain that to me. One may say "Look at section 51," but I reply that that is a transitional section, that it is a temporary remedy and cannot possibly deal with the permanent situation involved in regard to these truckers.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It may be that he needs this legislation.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I was wondering if it could be any worse than the present situation.

Hon. Mr. Reid: These transports generally carry two men on the road, and one sleeps while the other drives.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Honourable senators, representatives of the railway companies appeared before us, but I will leave that problem to Senator McCutcheon. For instance, they have a problem in regard to railway hotels. The Air Transport Association people have problems—

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: They do not work by the hour.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I will leave that problem for my colleague. Honourable senators, I shall now ask you to hear me for a few moments in regard to the problem of the elevator operators of western Canada. If the honourable Senator Beaubien (Provencher) were here—

Some Hon. Senators: He is.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I would have something to say to him. Having met him in an elevator of the building this morning—

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: A grain elevator?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson:—I expressed surprise that he had not supported the decision we took on this matter in the Banking and Commerce Committee. He replied, "I do not think you know much about country elevators. You may know something about law, but certainly not about country elevators."

Hon. Mr. Beaubien (Provencher): Is the honourable senator referring to me? If so, will he kindly express his own opinion. I will look after mine.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I will try to express my own opinion. I just want to say to the honourable senator that he must know that a very large proportion of those of us who went through college in western Canada during the twenties made our way by working on farms. I did my share of that—stooking in the fall, pitching sheaves of grain, and dealing with elevator operators. I had quite a few years of experience with elevator operators, so I know something about how they have to operate.

The problem of the elevator operators was presented to the committee in the brief of the North-West Line Elevator Association, and by Mr. W. J. Parker, representing the wheat pools, and by Mr. A. M. Runciman, representing the United Grain Growers Limited. I want to make short references to the presentations made by the grain people.

You will recall that the grain elevator companies were represented by all owners of grain elevators in western Canada. They were represented by the private companies, which own over 2,000 elevators, and by Mr. Runciman, the president of United Grain Growers Limited, which is one of the great co-operative companies of Canada. I think he said that they operated about 760 elevators in western Canada. The remainder of the elevators, about 2,500 or more, are operated by the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta wheat pools. They unanimously requested that the managers, the operators of their elevator business, should be exempt from the provisions of this act. I am sure that all those who are members of the Banking and Commerce Committee and who listened to the evidence of these people, will agree that they had very cogent reasons indeed to ask for that exemption.

I now want to put on record the fact that Senator Hugessen suggested they were exempt from the act, anyway, by virtue of section 3, subsection (3)(a), which reads as follows:

> (3) This act does not apply to or in respect of employees who are
>
> (a) managers or superintendents or who exercise management functions,....

Honourable senators will recall that in committee I attempted to amend that section, by adding to it these words:

> including managers and/or operators of country grain elevators as specified in the Canada Grain Act.

That amendment was declared lost in committee.

Honourable senators will recall that Senator Hugessen suggested that our Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel might consider this problem, because he, Senator Hugessen, was of the view that we did not require an amendment, that these people were covered anyway by the Canada Grain Act.

Naturally, we would be very happy if Senator Hugessen was correct in that contention. I will not speak for him, but I am quite sure that he and most members of the committee would be happy if this interpretation were a correct one, namely, that the elevator operators would be exempt from the act as it now stands.

I feel that it is of importance that I should put on record the opinion presented by our Law Clerk in regard to this matter, and therefore I shall read it:

> In my opinion, country elevator operators, on the basis of the able and comprehensive description given as to the nature of their work, are excluded from the operation of the Bill by reason of the words in subclause (3) of clause 3, "or who exercise management functions". I believe that these words in themselves would operate to exclude such operators and that any restricting definitions given in the Canada Grain Act, for the purposes of that Act, would not govern in the interpretation of the words quoted. In my opinion, it is a clear case for the application of the literal canon of construction, namely, that statutory words are construed in their ordinary, grammatical sense.
>
> Moreover, as pointed out by Senator Hugessen, the introductory words of subclause (1) of clause 4 recite, inter alia, that "This Act applies notwithstanding any other law".

Honourable senators, naturally I would be very pleased if we could rely on this as being the law.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Except that the Minister of Labour and his officials do not agree with it.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I want to come to that. However, I wish to point that out to you, and indeed I am quite sure that Senator Hugessen would also be pleased if this was the law, because then these operators would be exempt.

Honourable senators, here is our problem in this regard, and the reason why we ask for the amendment. After all, the elevator companies have eminent counsel in western Canada. Lawyers in the west may not be equal in quality to lawyers in the east. Nevertheless, in the west these people were advised —otherwise they would not have come here —that there was no certainty that the provision I quoted would exempt them from the operation of the act.

Secondly, their testimony to the committee was that they had discussed this subsection with the officials of the Department of Labour, some of whom I see up in the gallery now, and they had been told very distinctly that it was the opinion of those officials that they were not exempt; in other words, that their operators were not classified as "managers".

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: They did not give us that impression.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: They stated that very specifically, senator.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Oh, no.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: That statement was made to us by the elevator people, that the first thing they had done in this matter was to go to the officials of the department for a ruling on this question. May I say also that the Department of Labour itself has a legal branch. I looked up the records and found that there are two solicitors in that department. So presumably those men must have advised the senior officials in regard to the law.

Lastly, in this regard, the minister appeared before the committee and this question was discussed with him. I am sure those who were present will recall what he said. I am sorry to have to paraphrase. I would prefer to quote what he said from the transcript of the evidence, but unfortunately the printed proceedings are not yet available. The minister said something to this effect, "We agree that some of these elevator operators might come within the exemption section." However, he reiterated later that only some—

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: That is, those who exercise the managerial function would come within the section, and those who do not would not come within the section.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Now, does not your resolution cover those who do not exercise managerial functions? It covers all of them, whether managerial or not.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: They are all managers.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: If they are all managers and exercise managerial functions, the minister assured us that they would come within the act and be exempt.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Oh, no. I disagree wholeheartedly with my honourable friend's conclusion if he suggests that that is the whole case. The point is, of course, that we hope they are all managers. However, the minister made it very clear that he and his officials were of the opinion that only some of them came within the exemption. Might I add further that apparently the yardstick or the criterion the minister uses in regard to the question of whether a person who is an operator is a manager or not is whether he is the sole operator or has some people working under him. Apparently his interpretation is that if an operator of an elevator has someone working under him, then he is a manager; and if he is alone he is simply an operator and is not engaged in a managerial capacity.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I do not think that correctly quotes the minister.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That is what the minister says.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I am going to suggest to my honourable friend Senator Roebuck, if he believes that is not correct, that when we meet here next Tuesday evening we will have the transcript and will be able to read it.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Agreed.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: And if I am wrong in the general purport of what I have to say in this regard, I will certainly apologize to him.

May I just add that, as I understand it, there are some United States decisions on the point which have held that the question of whether or not a person is a manager depends on whether or not he has some employees under him.

Honourable senators, so much for that, but let me also quote to you two sections of the Canada Grain Act which may have a strong bearing on this matter if it ever comes into the courts. Indeed, that is the reason we are asking for this amendment, because we want to avoid this problem and so keep out of the courts. I believe I said in committee that if the bill goes unamended we may indeed be faced with some 5,000 lawsuits in regard to this problem, if each case has to be determined on its facts.

I quote from section 2(17) of the Canada Grain Act:

> "manager", when used with respect to an elevator, means the person in possession of the premises constituting such elevator, either as owner or lessee thereof or as being entitled under a contract with the owner or lessee to operate such elevator for his own benefit and advantage, but does not include a person in charge of an elevator who is remunerated for his services by commission;

Those are the facts. Most of these men are remunerated by salary plus commission.

Then subsection (20) of the same section reads:

> "operator", when used with respect to an elevator, means any person appointed or authorized by the manager of such elevator to take charge of the operation thereof, or to represent him in connection with its operation;

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: Would that be a superintendent?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Well, I do not know. Now we have another word suggested, and I think we had better stick to the two words "manager" and "operator", otherwise we will further complicate the matter.

Let me say most sincerely to you that it is not difficult to amend the act in this regard. I am quite sure that the House of Commons would be most happy to accept such an amendment were we to make it. But at least, by this very simple amendment which is proposed, we would be clarifying this matter in accordance, I am sure, with the wishes of all honourable senators who have any detailed knowledge of the operation of the grain trade in western Canada.

Honourable senators, I want to leave something for my colleague Senator McCutcheon and, perhaps, others to say on this bill. Consequently, I am going to conclude by saying this: As we all know, this is a legislative body, the purpose of which is to give sober second thought to the provisions of bills that are transmitted from the other place for our consideration. This need not be a partisan problem; there is nothing in it which makes it such. Surely, those on this side of the house, in the party to which I belong, cannot look at this matter any differently from the manner in which those on the other side do. Perhaps many members in the other house would be relieved if this question were resolved by the simple amendment we seek, particularly in regard to these elevator operators.

Honourable senators, in this matter I most sincerely plead with you to exercise the functions of the Senate as they are intended to be exercised, namely, with sober second thought and mature judgment, and let us cure the defects in this legislation which should be obvious to us all.

On motion of Hon. Mr. McCutcheon, debate adjourned.

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

BILL TO AMEND CERTAIN ACTS—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Lang for second reading of Bill C-123, to amend certain acts administered in the Department of Insurance.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I will delay you for a very few moments.

I think I should say at the outset that with most of the provisions of this bill I am in complete agreement. I should also add, for the benefit of some of my friends in the chamber, that I am in complete agreement with the views expressed by Senator Hayden with respect to several sections of this bill, and to which he spoke with some eloquence yesterday.

Now, it will not, of course, surprise any of my friends in this chamber if I once again echo my displeasure at the tenacity of the Minister of Finance. I have great admiration for him. He and I are old friends, but he is pursuing this will-o'-the-wisp of Canadian control to an extent that almost becomes laughable—and, of course, he has pursued that course in this bill respecting insurance companies, trust companies and loan companies which are subject to federal jurisdiction. It is like taking a sledge hammer to hit a fly.

There are only four substantial life insurance companies in this country affected by the share ownership provisions of this bill. I am not going to name them; other honourable senators may if they wish. However, I will name them in committee. I am not a director or officer of any of them.

I asked my friend Senator Lang some questions the other night, I have satisfied myself as to the answers, and any more details required we will get in committee.

As to trust companies, I would say that at least 60 per cent of the business of trust companies in Canada is done by two companies who are not subject to this act at all, who are not subject to this vicious takeover, this "dreadful" business of having foreigners buy shares, and so on.

I think if I analyzed the loan company business—with which I am not so familiar—I would come to the same conclusion, that that part of the bill is a facade, it is meaningless.

The largest writer of life insurance in this country is the Metropolitan Life. I do not know who controls the Sun Life, but I suggest that since it has become mutualized it is controlled outside of this country. There is nothing in this bill about that.

I cannot understand why we indulge in these pinpricks and put these very onerous obligations on company directors, when the Minister of Finance controls the operations of these companies absolutely. If he wants to direct the investment affairs of life insurance companies in Canada—that is, the great majority of them—all he need do is pass an act. He can direct that these companies may only invest their assets in 20-year Government Bonds at 3¾ per cent, which would be a great saving to the Treasury but rather hard on the purchasers of life insurance. Or he could say they must invest 25 per cent of their assets in equities. He can say the same thing about subsidiary control, loan companies and mortgage companies. Parliament has absolute control. So why should we just annoy our friends in other places a little bit more? They do not say that we cannot buy their life insurance companies or their loan companies; they do not say we cannot buy their mortgage companies. I say this more in sorrow than in anger, and I have no doubt I shall have to repeat it on other occasions.

Now, having said that, and having already said that I am in complete agreement with the views expressed by Senator Hayden, I hope to have something more to say about it in committee. I shall support him in committee. There is one clause of this bill which I shall want to discuss in committee, but which I should also like to mention at this point. I am in complete accord with the extension of the investment provisions or the investment regulations governing authorized investments by the group of companies affected by the bill. I think in fairness to the life insurance companies I should say this—we heard Senator Lang, and I am satisfied that what he said was said in all good faith, because that is the only basis on which the figures are published, that the life insurance companies in this country were authorized to invest 15 per cent of their assets in common stocks at 5 per cent. That is all right, but as Senator Hayden said yesterday he is not talking about book value. There is no company in this country which has more than 15 per cent of its assets by market value invested in common stock. I would say the life insurance industry has 8 or 9 per cent of its assets invested in common stocks.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Somebody said 4 per cent.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Four per cent book value. That is a meaningless term. Market value is what counts. Now, I am not saying that life insurance companies might not do better, but I am going to suggest a method which would encourage them to do much better than the mere authorization that they can invest 25 per cent of their assets in common stocks. It will take most of them a long, long time to reach the stage to which I refer. I draw your attention to subclause 4 at the top of page 14 of the bill, which is the so-called basket clause. When the basket clause was introduced some years ago I think the public impression was "All right, we have got to put reasonable restrictions on life companies and other companies as to the type of securities in which they invest or the type of investments they make, but we are going to allow them complete freedom as to 5 per cent of their assets." Well, of course, that was not true. Now we are going to be allowed complete freedom as to 7 per cent of our assets, but again that is not true because within the basket we still have quantitative limitations. Those quantitative limitations are contained in the bill, but I think I can describe them without referring to the details. You cannot make a 90 per cent mortgage or a 100 per cent mortgage, although this is a basket. You can only invest a certain percentage of your assets in a particular piece of income-producing real estate, even though it is a basket, and has an over-all 7 per cent limitation on it, and you cannot invest in more than 30 per cent of any class of shares of any company.

I suggest that if the Minister of Finance—and I believe he is completely sincere in this—wants to see life insurance companies put money into the risk capital business, then the basket should be made a basket. There should be no restrictions, and it should say "You can invest 7 per cent of your assets in anything you want." And I would suggest, having had some experience in the life insurance business, that no company will go broke under those circumstances; no policyholder will lose any money and all claims will be paid, because if you are putting money, real money, into the risk capital market, 30 per cent of a company is not enough. You are investing in a very speculative situation, and you are letting other people control you.

The life insurance companies and some of the other financial institutions have tried to get around this by creating a company called "Canadian Enterprise Developments Limited," and I should confess right now that I am a director of that company which is designed to do exactly this. But that company, in some cases, may take 20 per cent of the equity in some cases, 70 per cent in others, or even 30 per cent with an option on another 50 per cent. If you are putting up that kind of money, you have to be in a position to move in. I am not suggesting, of course, that we put the life insurance companies into the speculation field beyond a reasonable limit. What I am suggesting is that the 7 per cent is a real basket.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): But you are relating it to the 15 per cent.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Not at all. The 25 per cent is limited by stringent regulation as to earnings over a period of years, and so on.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): You believe that?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Yes. For the 7 per cent all I want is complete freedom.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Will the honourable senator permit me a question? Is it not true that the effect of that proposal would be to increase in certain cases the right of a life insurance company to invest in common stocks up to 32 per cent?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That is quite right. I think that would be a most exceptional case, but I agree it is theoretically right. But I put it in another way: the trust company can buy 51 per cent of the shares of a life insurance company. I suggest that with the two types of business so interrelated today, providing you can do it within the basket, it ought to be legitimate for the life insurance company. Of course I am going on the assumption that companies are in business to make money. It ought to be within the power of a life insurance company within the basket to buy 21 per cent or 31 or even 71 per cent of the shares in trust.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I must say too that I should not be asking the question in the terms in which I put it because the 7 per cent is on one basis, and the 25 per cent is on a really different basis.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am sorry if I interrupted the honourable senator.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: No, you did not. I have said that I support Senator Hayden in his views on those sections, and I need add nothing more. I think that is all I have to say at the moment.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

On motion of Hon. Mr. Lang, bill referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, March 16, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, March 16, 1965

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 31 of the Railway Act, chapter 234, R.S.C., 1952. (English text).

Capital and Operating Budgets of the Canadian National Railways for the year ending December 31, 1965, pursuant to section 37 of the Canadian National Railways Act, chapter 29, Statutes of Canada, 1955, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1965-375, dated March 4, 1965, approving same. (English text).

Report of the Governor of the Bank of Canada, and Statement of Accounts certified by the Auditors, for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 27(3) of the Bank of Canada Act, chapter 13, R.S.C., 1952, as amended 1953-54. (English and French texts).

Report of Air Canada for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 29 of the Trans-Canada Air Lines Act, chapter 268, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report to Parliament of the Auditors on the Accounts of Air Canada for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 29 of the Trans-Canada Air Lines Act, chapter 268, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Statutory Orders and Regulations published in the Canada Gazette, Part II, of Wednesday, March 10, 1965, pursuant to section 7 of the Regulations Act, chapter 235, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report, dated February 18, 1965, of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, under the Combines Investigation Act, in connection with the Production, Distribution and Sale of Propane in British Columbia. (English and French texts).

DIVORCE

RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, presented the following resolutions:

Resolution 706, for the relief of Angela Claire Hartridge Matz.

Resolution 707, for the relief of Jean-Guy O'Brien.

Resolution 708, for the relief of Harold Clarke Sweet.

Resolution 709, for the relief of Maurice Paquette.

Resolution 710, for the relief of Florence Christina McWilliams Hughes.

Resolution 711, for the relief of Agnes Dunski Kuehne.

Resolution 712, for the relief of Gaetan Lefebvre.

Resolution 713, for the relief of Nancy Joan Thomas Le Tual.

Resolution 714, for the relief of Evelyn Deziel Griffith.

Resolution 715, for the relief of Rolanda Kursner Wyllie.

Resolution 716, for the relief of Marie Jeanne Marcelle des Rivieres Houde.

Resolution 717, for the relief of Dorothy Barbara Marchant McLagan.

Resolution 718, for the relief of Edith Mary Seymour-Higgins Thom.

Resolution 719, for the relief of Joseph Alphonse Lagace.

Resolution 720, for the relief of Lloyd Elliot Imhoff.

Resolution 721, for the relief of Noreen Linda Alguire Shirley.

Resolution 722, for the relief of Dorothy Ann Dixon MacArthur.

Resolution 723, for the relief of Ruth Aurelia Kleinerman Miller.

Resolution 724, for the relief of Margaret Ann Parker MacDonald.

Resolution 725, for the relief of Clarissa Grun Damant.

Resolution 726, for the relief of Mary Elizabeth Lindsey Sakellariou.

Resolution 727, for the relief of George Edward McNamee.

Resolution 728, for the relief of Abraham Leo Bronstein.

Resolution 729, for the relief of June Rosemary Brook Doty.

Resolution 730, for the relief of James Patrick Cannon.

Resolution 731, for the relief of Pauline Elkin Fruitman.

Resolution 732, for the relief of Rolland Belanger, otherwise known as Rolland Bergeron.

Resolution 733, for the relief of Micheline Drouin Martineau.

Resolution 734, for the relief of Audrey May Landers Groom.

Resolution 735, for the relief of Ingrid Erna Adele Boehm Bork.

Resolution 736, for the relief of Dorothy Elizabeth Chan Frigault.

Resolution 737, for the relief of Evaristo Cruz Iglesias.

Resolution 738, for the relief of Edith Mary Ann Thyer White.

Resolution 739, for the relief of Robert Pronce.

Resolution 740, for the relief of Nicholas Kotar.

Resolution 741, for the relief of Francoise Cholette Perusse.

Resolution 742, for the relief of Muriel Edna Stevens Pinsoneault.

Resolution 743, for the relief of Secundina (Secondina) Michetti Warren.

Resolution 744, for the relief of Clifford Robert Winter.

Resolution 745, for the relief of Brenda Ann Lawrence Zetchus.

Resolution 746, for the relief of Merrily Rose Weisbord Kachanoff.

Resolution 747, for the relief of Gerard Viau.

Resolution 748, for the relief of Gerard Oscar Lanthier.

Resolution 749, for the relief of Lucia Tweedie Kowaluk.

Resolution 750, for the relief of Joseph David Roma Beriault.

Resolution 751, for the relief of Diana Fellen Harris.

Resolution 752, for the relief of Guy Massicotte.

Resolution 753, for the relief of Roma Tetreault.

Resolution 754, for the relief of Micheline Guernon Leveillee.

Resolution 755, for the relief of Joseph Roger Lucas.

Resolution 756, for the relief of Francine Geoffrion Bilodeau.

Resolution 757, for the relief of Marie Cecile Reina Fleurette Constantin Bissonnette.

Resolution 758, for the relief of Marcelle Yvonne Rigaud Schembre.

Resolution 759, for the relief of Armande Harel Paquette.

Resolution 760, for the relief of Joseph Germain Jacques Francois Barcelo.

Resolution 761, for the relief of Gladys Beatrice Wooland Bernard.

Resolution 762, for the relief of Ingrid Lucy Kliem Raymond.

Resolution 763, for the relief of Ann Viola Woodward Anderson.

Resolution 764, for the relief of Teresa Di Nardo Beliveau.

Resolution 765, for the relief of Dorothy Silverstein Segal.

Resolution 766, for the relief of Marion Marguerite Duncan Hesler.

Resolution 767, for the relief of Joseph Mabo.

Resolution 768, for the relief of Marga Pfrommer Blattner.

Resolution 769, for the relief of Christiane Herregods Le Maire.

Resolution 770, for the relief of Donald William Morrow.

Resolution 771, for the relief of Mortimer Joseph Garelick.

Resolution 772, for the relief of Ruth Cohen Richer.

Resolution 773, for the relief of Karol Frank Bisok.

Resolution 774, for the relief of Johanna Geertruida Maria Emons Blom.

Resolution 775, for the relief of Charlotte Picard Ratcliffe.

Resolution 776, for the relief of Charles Wall.

Resolution 777, for the relief of Oakland John George Rennie.

Resolution 778, for the relief of Maria Teresa Bonaccorsi Prioreschi.

Resolution 779, for the relief of Gertrude Elizabeth Manning Saunderson.

Resolution 780, for the relief of Mirjam Sole Batasonsky.

Resolution 781, for the relief of Gilles McNicoll.

Resolution 782, for the relief of Sidney Cutler.

Resolution 783, for the relief of George Johann Kreuzer.

Resolution 784, for the relief of Susan Furth Muller.

Resolution 785, for the relief of Colette Verreault Vaillancourt.

Resolution 786, for the relief of Dorothy (Dorothee) Begin Desjardins.

Resolution 787, for the relief of Marcel Braitstein.

Resolution 788, for the relief of Doris Fern Long Chapman, otherwise known as Doris Fern Long Kenny.

Resolution 789, for the relief of Marie Ruth Ernestine DesRosiers Frye.

Resolution 790, for the relief of Sabina Zakrzewska Oboruns.

Resolution 791, for the relief of Oscar Ernest Mauskopf.

Resolution 792, for the relief of Veronica Dunski Gorman.

Resolution 793, for the relief of Louis Georges Grenier.

Resolution 794, for the relief of Gladys Mary Watmore Corey.

Resolution 795, for the relief of Virginia Isabel Baker Douglas.

Resolution 796, for the relief of Alice Drover Gray.

Resolution 797, for the relief of Roland Joseph Fernand Paquette.

Resolution 798, for the relief of Beverly Ann Widgington O'Connor.

Resolution 799, for the relief of Juliana Zichy Penney.

Resolution 800, for the relief of Marie Germaine (Ruth) Nicole Morency Yarosky.

Resolution 801, for the relief of Bernard Charles Thillaye.

Resolution 802, for the relief of Douglas Norman Seaban.

Resolution 803, for the relief of Michael Zajdel.

Resolution 804, for the relief of Bernice Ann Meikle Walters.

Resolution 805, for the relief of Gwendoline Vining Blott Paxton.

Resolution 806, for the relief of Madeline Edith L'Ecuyer Burdon.

Resolution 807, for the relief of Robert David Elder.

Resolution 808, for the relief of Gisela Elizabeth Eichmann Bragard.

Resolution 809, for the relief of Kathleen Linda Maslin Dutton.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these resolutions be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move that these resolutions be taken into consideration at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS FINANCING AND GUARANTEE BILL, 1964

REFERRED BACK TO COMMITTEE

On the Order:

Consideration of the Report of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications with respect to Bill C-137, intituled: "An Act to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways system for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railway Company".—(Honourable Senator Hugessen).

Hon. A. K. Hugessen: Honourable senators, I am going to ask the house to take a rather unusual step in connection with this report. I move that the report be not now adopted, but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications for further consideration.

Perhaps I should explain that the committee made a minor amendment to the original bill in the form in which it came to us. The amendment simply substituted the words "Air Canada" for the words "Trans-Canada Air Lines" where they appeared in the bill as it came from the House of Commons.

It is quite evident, I think, from the legislation passed in that connection at this session, that whether we use the term "Air Canada" in the bill or the term "Trans-Canada Air Lines" makes no difference whatsoever.

To be perfectly frank with honourable senators, it has occurred to me that if we send the bill back to the House of Commons with a proposed amendment towards the very end of the session, and in the state of feeling which appears to exist in that house at the present time, even a simple amendment like this might give rise to hours of acrimonious debate. I am going to suggest to the Senate, therefore, that we refer this bill back to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, and that if the house agrees to that referral, that we consider simply passing the bill as it has come to us from the House of Commons, so as to avoid the step of sending it back to that house.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Was it an unnecessary amendment to start with?

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: It was not a necessary amendment. It was really a cleaning-up amendment related to the bill that was passed by Parliament in December, which makes it quite clear that wherever the words "Trans-Canada Air Lines" are used in any statute they are to be taken as meaning "Air Canada". So it was really an unnecessary amendment in itself; it was just a cleaning-up amendment.

Hon. Jean-François Pouliot: Honourable senators, before this report is adopted, it seems to me that in order to have a clear understanding of the C.N.R. picture and the C.P.R. picture, we should know what are the duties of each one of the vice-presidents. There are quite a number of officials of the railways.

I remember one day, before the Commons railway committee, Mr. Chevrier, the then Minister of Transport, asked the committee to decide whether the amount of the salary of the president and chairman of the board should be made public, and the answer of the committee was "No". The committee did not want to have the salary of the chairman made public. But, on the other hand, I feel this question is so important that we must know who are the vice-presidents and what they have to do. In order to know who are the directors of the railway we can look at Who's Who—their biographies appear there. But this is not enough for the numerous vice-presidents of the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway. We must know what are the duties of each one of those gentlemen.

This is something I have had in mind for a long time. If you look at the figures given in the reports prepared by the chartered accountants, even though they may be well considered and studied, you still know nothing about the business of the Canadian National Railways, and you still are not in a position to realize whether those people are carrying out the tasks that have been assigned to them. I hope I have made myself clear. My reason for saying that is because there are liars among the officers of the C.N.R.

Some Hon. Senators: Order, order!

The Hon. the Speaker: The honourable senator knows the rule against the use of such expressions. They are unparliamentary. The people to whom they apply are not here to defend themselves; therefore, I would ask the honourable senator to make his point without using expressions of that kind.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Did the honourable senator say lawyers or liars?

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: With respect to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I do, of course, accept it, but I will say that some officers of the C.N.R. have not been truthful in their reports to the Government and to the management in Montreal. No one knows that better than the Leader of the Senate and the Minister of Transport. Why are we deceived by those gentlemen? There was no reason for it. I know what I speak of and I can prove what I say. It has appeared in the press. I do not wish to abuse anyone, but I want all the officers of the C.N.R. to be fair and to respect Parliament. I regret to say that some have no respect for Parliament. I do not speak of the officers of the C.P.R., but of the C.N.R.—there are a few exceptions that I could name with honourable mention. It is time to scrutinize what has been done by the C.N.R. We must consider those who are worthy of their salaries and of the confidence of the public.

Your Honour knows that nobody has more respect for the Chair than I have. But there are some circumstances when parliamentarians should raise their voices to bring the attention of the public to certain important matters that have to be decided right away. It is not a question of partisan politics; it is not a question of Liberal or Conservative policies; it is the fact that those who belong to crown companies should be responsible to Parliament for every cent that is spent by that crown company. Naturally, there is the socialist policy to the effect that we should leave them alone to perform their tasks. But is it fair to the Canadian taxpayer to propound such policies? Our duty is to check every cent of expenditure of the Canadian National Railways, and we can ask the same information about the Canadian Pacific Railway when their officials come seeking joint legislation.

I remember the first C.P.R.-C.N.R. bill, which was sponsored by Dr. Manion, then Minister of Railways and Canals. It was quite a shock for many people at that time, and it was then that pool trains were being established. It was a new policy for the railways. Now that there is so much competition between both railways, I must say that we have a job to perform and we, the Senate, can do it. The Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications is one of the outstanding members of this chamber, and the members of the committee are equal to the job. They can do much if they want to. If they do it, it will be done in the public interest. I shall not insist further but, Mr. Speaker, I will give you privately, if you wish, more particulars that will justify the language I have used.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I have great regard for Senator Pouliot, but I have never disagreed with any statement in this house as much as I do with the statements he has just made about the devoted officials who are operating the Canadian National Railways. I do not approve of these broad assertions. After all, a large majority of the directors of the C.N.R. are appointees of the Government which the honourable senator supports. If there is any problem, let them discuss it. If the honourable senator wants to bring the officials before the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, that is fine, but let us not have these broad assertions which are nothing but smears made about people who, by and large, to my personal knowledge could go into private industry and earn far more money than they are earning now. They are serving in their present capacities because they have a sense of public duty.

Speaking as a former civil servant, I resent everything that the honourable gentleman has said.

Motion agreed to.

CANADA LABOUR (STANDARDS) CODE BILL

THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT NEGATIVED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, March 11, the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West), for third reading of Bill C-126, respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses, and on the amendment thereto by Hon. Mr. Flynn, seconded by Hon. Mr. McCutcheon, that the bill be not now read a third time but that it be amended in certain respects.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I am rising to support the amendment to Bill C-126, moved by my honourable colleague Senator Flynn. Before dealing with it in detail I should like to draw the attention of the Senate to today's issue of the Ottawa Citizen, on the front page of which there is a little capsule headed:

> No prorogation until two bills passed—Pearson

And the text reads:

> Prime Minister Pearson Monday assured the Commons that Parliament will not be prorogued at least until the national labour code and the Canada Pension Plan bills are approved by both the Commons and Senate.

I might interject that from what one hears in the corridors it might be quite a while before the Canada Pension Plan bill comes to us.

> Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) sought the assurance because of the 'delay' in the Senate on the labour code bill. The pension bill is still in the Commons.

Honourable senators, I regard that as a reflection upon this body. I know of no delay, in inverted commas, that has occurred in our consideration of the so-called labour code bill. In fact, its progress through this house has been a little faster than that of many other bills. Second reading was accorded it after first reading with no delay. It went to committee—and I point out that the Minister of Labour was not prepared to let it go before a committee of the other place. I will leave it to honourable senators to decide why the Minister of Labour did not want it to go to a committee. I suggest to honourable senators that, having sent it to a committee in this place, as is our normal practice, we have learned a great deal more about this bill than did many people who discussed it in another place. I regard the statement of Mr. Knowles, if he is quoted correctly, and I assume he is, as a reflection on every member of this house.

We have accepted this bill in principle—there is nobody on this side of the house for whom I speak who does not accept this bill in principle. But it is one thing to accept a bill in principle and it is another thing to do what this chamber is supposed to do, take a sober second thought and improve the legislation.

Nobody on this side of the house is opposed to standards as to wages, hours of work, holidays. There are some of us, however, who feel that it is an unnecessary intrusion to have government interject itself into those areas where it is obviously not needed, to become the third party at the bargaining table where the parties have already demonstrated that they are both strong and both capable of looking after themselves.

The idea is abroad in this country—an idea which one sees in the pension bill and in a variety of other legislation—that in order to look after a relatively small group of people one must legislate for many. Those who sat through the hearings in the Banking and Commerce Committee on this bill and those who have read this bill know that those who need protection, if indeed they do, —that is, those whose standards of employment are not up to the minimum standards of employment in the bill—are very few. Nevertheless, the theory seems to be that you do not legislate for the few: you must legislate for the many, you must intervene in everybody's affairs in order to accomplish that which most of us agree should be accomplished for a limited group in society.

I refer again to the newspaper clipping. The suggestion is that by our having two days in committee on this bill and a two- or three-day debate, we are delaying the bill. Honourable senators, we are doing exactly what we are here to do: We are taking this sober second thought.

Honourable senators, I suggest—and I believe that I can conclusively prove—that a case has been made out for the amendment which my colleague Senator Flynn moved. The evidence we heard in the Banking and Commerce Committee remains uncontradicted. We had the minister before us and he did not contradict that evidence. His officials were before us and they did not contradict any of it. Therefore, I suggest that on that evidence a conclusive case has been made out for the amendment which is now before this house.

Honourable senators, it is the duty of each member of the Senate to act according to his conscience. As I see it, there is no partisan attitude to be taken on this bill. If I may paraphrase the British North America Act, this is a matter "for the general good of Canada." It is our duty to look at it on that basis and to vote on the amendment according to our conscience.

Honourable senators, let me turn for a moment to the amendment. It provides that among those groups which the amendment proposes should be absolutely exempted from the provisions of the bill are:

> (c) operators of country grain elevators as defined in the Canada Grain Act, or (d) members of the running trades including sleeping and dining car crews of any railway, the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport, seamen as defined in the Canada Shipping Act, stevedores and longshoremen, flight crews of any civil aircraft: Provided—

This is the same type of provision to be found already in the bill in another clause, namely, clause 28, in Part IV, providing for the substitution of one holiday for another, instead of using the eight holidays named in the bill, where—and I quote from the bill:

> (a) where a class of the employees of an employer is represented by a trade union and the parties to a collective agreement entered into with regard to the terms or conditions of employment of the employees notify the Minister in writing—

The absolute exemption that this amendment proposes is subject to this proviso:

> Provided that the employment of such employees is governed by the terms of a collective agreement negotiated by a duly certified bargaining unit.

As I go along, I hope I will be able to carry honourable senators with me in concluding that the groups of employees who will be exempted under this are represented by not weak, ineffective bargaining units but by the strongest bargaining units in this country.

My colleague, Senator Thorvaldson, in speaking on this amendment at the sitting of the Senate on Thursday last, dealt with the operators of country grain elevators. I propose to deal specifically with other groups of employees. However, I thought honourable senators would be interested in an editorial which appeared in today's Winnipeg Free Press, headed "Elevator Agents".

Honourable senators, the Winnipeg Free Press is not a periodical which generally supports the position taken by myself and my friends. However, I think this editorial is worth putting on the record. It reads:

> The exemptions which the western grain trade is seeking from the hours of Work Provision of the new National Labour Code has been widely interpreted as signifying the grain companies total opposition to the bill itself. This is quite unfair. The bill, which has been approved by the Commons and is now before the Senate, provides for a $1.25 an hour minimum wage in industry under federal jurisdiction, a two-week annual vacation, 8 statutory holidays, and a maximum 40 hour week. These standards are already in effect in most industries and, with some minor exceptions, will impose no great burden on others...

I interject here that I agree with that statement and suggest that there is a great deal of facade in this bill—using a sledge hammer to hit a fly. I will not pursue that observation for the moment. I continue with the editorial:

> Apart from the hours of work provision, no objection to these reasonable reforms have been expressed by the grain trade.

And, I interject, obviously not because they are more than complying with them.

> Its standards are already well above the benefits called for in the legislation: most grain companies' employees enjoy two or more weeks vacation annually, work less than a 40-hour week and have eight paid statutory holidays.
>
> There is a special problem, however, in attempting to enforce an average 40-hour week (plus a maximum of 8 hours overtime) for country elevator operators, who work long hours during short periods of the year and at other times are almost completely free of duties. The government has recognized this difficulty by providing in the legislation for averaging of hours over a period of time and also by permitting an 18-month exemption for industries which require a period of adjustment. This will not, however, solve the problems of the country elevator operators.

This is the Winnipeg Free Press speaking:

> The elevator agent is a man responsible for a plant worth $60,000 to $100,000, plus stocks of grain which may be worth $500,000. His signature on a grain ticket is his company's bond, as good as cash in some communities. At some periods of the year he may work, or at least be available to his customers, for 12 or more hours a day, at other periods he has little to do and often fills his time with part-time side-line work, selling oil, insurance, fertilizers and other commodities, on a commission basis.
>
> It is unlikely—

And that, I think, is a complete understatement.

> —that this sort of endeavour needs the kind of protection proffered by the new Labour Code and he has not asked for it. He does not punch a time clock and would find it extremely difficult to account for his exact hours of work most of the year, yet at the peak season his presence at the elevator may be essential for more than the 48-hour maximum required by the bill.
>
> The private grain companies and the farmer-owned United Grain Growers have not objected to the spirit of the new code; they already observe it. Their objection is to the simple impracticality of enforcing the maximum hours clause under special conditions. If they are not exempted from this provision now it is virtually a certainty that the government will be forced to amend the bill anyway in a year or so on grounds that it is unenforceable at country elevators.

I ask honourable senators to observe the last sentence.

> The simplest and most logical thing is for the Senate to grant the exemption now.

That is what Senator Flynn's amendment is directed to.

Now, before dealing with specific situations which my colleagues have not dealt with, I would like to touch on one or two matters that have been referred to earlier in debate. The sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Smith, Queens-Shelburne) referred to, I think, the ten amendments that were made in the other place, as evidence that we did not need to be too concerned about it. However, the fact is, and of course the evidence has disclosed, that none of those ten amendments touch on the special situations of the group of employees to which this amendment refers.

Section 51, of which we have heard a great deal, is headed, "Special and Transitional Provisions." Special and transitional provisions means that you are dealing with a situation which you can resolve, if you have time; over a period of 18 months to two years you can work the situation out. What I am suggesting to honourable senators is that the situations with which this amendment deals are not temporary situations, but are permanent situations due to the nature of the work.

I want to put on the record some of the evidence that we have had, and which no person has appeared to deny. The Canadian Labour Council appeared and delivered a brief, and dealt in broad general terms with the fact that they were in favour of purity, motherhood and other things, but did not really touch on the provisions of the bill at all. The Teamsters Union appeared and did not even discuss their own members. They discussed owner-operators, who of course do not come under the federal jurisdiction, and their remarks were completely irrelevant. I make the assertion confidently that no one has denied the statements which I am going to read and put on the record now in these various situations.

First, I would like to turn to the marine shipping industry. The amendment, of course, covers seamen as defined in the Canada Shipping Act. I shall read now from the brief of the Dominion Marine Association, which is on the record. At page 5, the brief says:

> The length of time of each voyage will vary of course depending on the type and speed of vessel employed and the delays encountered while locking through the canals and the Seaway but the above figures are representative. After loading or unloading the vessel will immediately depart for another destination and is thus constantly on the move.

This amendment refers only to special groups of employees who, by the nature of their employment, cannot be subject to the rules and regulations that are applicable to a factory employee who has a fixed place of employment, who goes there in the morning, has his coffee break, has his lunch break, goes home at night, and reports again, and occasionally works overtime. These employees are tied into the vehicle of their employment.

To continue with the brief:

> The main point to be observed is that an employee in the shipping industry is a prisoner of his employment.

I suggest, and I shall be dealing with this later, that that is also true of the running trades, of the crews which give service on the dining and sleeping cars on the railroads; it is true of the flight crews on aircraft; it is also true of stevedores and longshoremen, because their employment depends on when the ships come in and when they want to turn them around. There is no eight-hour day for the docking and moving out of ships—and many honourable senators on the other side know more about the shipping industry than I do.

The brief continues:

> He cannot, as in the case of an ordinary industrial employee, enjoy the weekend at home with his family.
>
> At the risk of labouring the obvious, members of the crew of a vessel, upon the conclusion of a 40-hour week, cannot be returned to their homes but must, of necessity, remain on board their vessel.

> Crews of lake vessels look forward to earning in from eight to ten months sufficient wages to support their families for twelve months—but in order to do so they must be able to work for a weekly period in excess of 40 hours. Restricted, of necessity, to the vessel in any event but unable to work because of the bill beyond the 40 hours, it can be anticipated that the members of the crew would not be overly enthusiastic with the hours of boredom and, as will be shown later, the possible loss of wages attendant on their being unable to obtain their additional 16 hours work each week of their employment.

I do not recall any representations from the Seamen's International Union contradicting those statements. I do not recall that they came in and said, "We support this bill."

I do not want to delay honourable senators unnecessarily, but I think we must place some of this evidence on the record. Let me turn next to page 35 of the brief, where the reference is to competition from other countries:

> It also should be noted that Hong Kong Chinese are British subjects and thus, under law, may man British flag vessels which vessels can presently trade in Canadian waters.
>
> The hours of work provisions of the bill which have been discussed previously will be, of course, as applicable to the ocean-going vessels as to Great Lakes operations. It is unnecessary to repeat what has been said before in this regard except to point out that the hours of work provisions will result in additional wage and other costs over and above the increases therein caused by the minimum wages provisions and will have the same dislocating effects on the size of the crews.
>
> If the interested observer remains unconvinced with the above figures and arguments, let him look to the U.S. maritime situation. American shipowners in increasing numbers have been registering their vessels under foreign flags to escape the high wages and other operating costs under the U.S. flag. More than 450 vessels, many built within the last six years and aggregating more than 11,000,000 tons, accounting for more than 70 per cent of U.S. total tonnage in dry bulk cargo carriers and above one-half of the U.S. total tonnage in tankers whose ultimate control rests in U.S. corporations, are presently registered in Panama, Honduras and Liberia. As a result, employment on American flag vessels has dropped sharply from 158,860 positions in 1945 to 45,000 in 1964. It costs $800,000 more annually to operate a 47,000 ton bulk carrier under the U.S. flag than under virtually any other flag (other than the Canadian flag) in the world. . . . Bill C-126 will quickly place the new Canadian flag theoretically side-by-side with the U.S. flag in this regard both as to cost and as a flag to be avoided.

And we had some evidence from shipowners that it might be necessary to transfer some ships to other flags and to lay up others.

> Bill C-126 will ensure that the Canadian flag will never become established on the high seas for even this dubious benefit. The bill will certainly result in the annual operating costs of a vessel the size of the Cape Breton Miner being upwards of $500,000. This figure compared with the annual operating costs of a 20,000-30,000 ton Norwegian vessel of approximately $297,050 shows the competitive impossibility of operating an ocean-going Canadian flag vessel. Presently, although the competitive position vis-a-vis foreign flags is extremely uncomfortable, a Canadian flag vessel can still operate on a slim margin in special trades but under the bill even this will now be denied.

I refer to page 38 of the brief—and this also has not been contradicted:

> No other maritime nation limits the maximum hours of work with respect to its shipping industry. The provisions of Part I of the bill impose severe operational restrictions on any shipping company's ability to trade on the ocean and on the Great Lakes. Indeed such provisions impose a prohibitive dislocation on the operations of all Canadian shipping both financially and physically.

I could go on, but in that connection I just want to re-enforce that contention, and then I am through with the shipping industry.

I now read a telegram which was addressed to the Leader of the Government in the Senate (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West), and which was read into the record of the Banking and Commerce committee meeting of March 9, report No. 2, at pages 132 and 133. It is from a quite different class of operators, being signed "Leopold Langlois, Q.C., St. Lawrence Shipowners Association Inc., L'Association des Propriétaires de navires du St-Laurent Inc."

The telegram reads:

> Our Association wishes to respectfully voice its strong opposition to Bill C-126 Canada Labour Standards Code as passed by House of Commons on February 22 last and presently under consideration by > your committee. Our Association represents owners of over 100 vessels plying exclusively in Canada coastal trade on the Great Lakes and the East Coast of Canada and mostly between ports of the St. Lawrence River. These vessels are of the coaster type and consequently of much smaller dimensions than lakes or canalers. Although these vessels generally operate on a seasonal basis approximately 25 per cent of them do operate on a year round basis and for these latter there is an absolute impossibility of averaging hours of work over a period longer than the regular navigation season.

Honourable senators will recall that it was suggested by a departmental official that there was no problem of averaging because on the Great Lakes these ships operated only eight or nine months; then, all you had to do was keep your men on the payroll for 12 months and average. Of course, the answer to that is so simple: the men are not going to stay on the payroll but are going to get other jobs or, in this day of the welfare state, are going to collect unemployment insurance. They are not going to stay on the payroll for the satisfaction of letting the Canadian steamship companies average their wages out over 52 weeks.

> ...The crews live on board these vessels and are recruited mostly within the Province of Quebec. There is actually a very acute shortage of certificated deck and engine room personnel and owners have to financially support the training of such personnel with consequent result absolutely impossible to obtain qualified personnel if crews have to be increased to meet requirements of new legislation. Modern equipment and machinery require qualified and trained personnel. Owing to limited carriage capacity of vessels and consequent relatively small earnings derived from their operation it is anticipated that the increased cost resulting from application of contemplated legislation will almost double present cost of operation. Our vessels are competing with vessels of foreign registry permitted to operate in our coastal trade and with other means of transportation falling under provincial legislative authority such as provincial trucking, provincial railroad, provincial ferries in receipt of subsidies from governments, etc. ...which means of transportation will not be affected by the passing of Bill C-126 with the result that our industry will be put to a very obvious disadvantage. Irrespective of prohibitive high cost of operation actual dimensions of vessels make it absolutely impossible to accommodate larger crews on board same.

And I interject here that honourable senators heard Mr. J. D. Leitch, President of Upper Lakes Shipping Company, say that even if it were economically feasible it would be physically impossible for him to provide the extra space required for crews on his smaller ships, if his company were to become subject to this legislation.

> ...Since vessels must operate seven days of the week it is absolutely impossible to contemplate restricting hours of work which restrictions would adversely affect not only owners but employees as well. For all the above reasons and many others which need not be enumerated here and which have been placed before your committee by other representatives of shipping industry our association submits that the new legislation should not be made applicable to the shipping industry which legislation will surely cause the nucleus of merchant marine existing in Canada to disappear.

Honourable senators, that telegram is inviting the amendment which is before you this evening, and I shall refer no further, except perhaps incidentally, to the shipping industry.

I would like now to turn to the question of air crews. We had a brief from the Air Transport Association of Canada. They deal with very strong unions. We had no one from the Pilots' Union say, "We are in favour of this bill, and we disagree completely with the brief that our employers have presented"—and until someone says that or there is some evidence to contradict this brief, I am accepting the representations that were made to us as factual.

Again, I am going to put some of them on the record. They start out by saying that by and large all their employees are working at standards higher and better than the minimum standards provided in the bill, and with that I agree. They continue:

> However, there are two areas in which the bill would create severe problems for the airline industry.
>
> The first of these problem areas has to do with our flight crews, which have historically enjoyed working conditions based upon an entirely different concept of work that is normally accepted by industry.

Honourable senators, that is the nub of the problem; that is the nub of the amendment which deals with, in numbers, a comparatively small group of people; in income, a very high income group; as far as their bargaining position is concerned, they are represented by the strongest bargaining units in this country; and their working conditions are based upon entirely different concepts of work from those normally accepted by industry. That, as I say, is the nub of the problem.

> The 40-hour work week concept is entirely inapplicable to this group. Flight crew working conditions are based on 85 hours per month. This is 255 flying hours per quarter year and only 1,020 flying hours per calendar year—approximately one half of the working hours associated with the standard 40-hour a week personnel (2,080 hours per year).
>
> This flight time limitation concept is established in Canada by federal regulation under the Aeronautics Act, and I wish to file as an exhibit for the committee DOT circular 0/19/61, which sets forth the regulations governing the Canadian airline industry. ...These regulations have been established to avoid air crew fatigue and to assure air safety and certainly already meet one of the broad intents of the bill, which is to establish minimum labour conditions. The actual flying hours achieved by any flight crew member, however, is significantly below 1,020 hours per year and more normally approximates 75 hours per month.

So we are going to legislate for this poor fellow who works 75 hours a month.

> This is due to the fact that several provisions exist to reduce the availability of flight crews, as well as vacation and sick leave time, which reduces flight time availability by 2 hours and 48 minutes each day the flight crew member is on vacation or sick leave. Flight time is further reduced by what have been called "duty rigs." These duty rigs provide items such as the following:
>
> 1. Flight time credited on the basis of the scheduled flight time or the actual flight time, whichever is greater.
>
> 2. Minimum flight time credited on the basis of a minimum payment for each duty period. This normally approximates one hour's pay for each two hours on duty.
>
> 3. Minimum flight time credit of one hour for each four hours away from home base.
>
> 4. Flight time credits while in class room training.
>
> 5. Flight time credits when removed from a flight, even when that flight is operated by a fellow flight crew member who requires a training flight.
>
> 6. Minimum guarantees of 60 hours per month on domestic operations and 65 or 70 hours per month on overseas operations. This means a flight crew member receives 70% to 82% of his possible earnings during a month regardless of the fact that he may not operate one trip during that month. In the case of regional carriers the minimum guarantee for any month whether worked or not may be equal to 100% of salary.

I could read more from the brief, honourable senators, but I think I have read sufficient to indicate that we are dealing with a situation which is not that of a manufacturing industry where people go in in the morning, punch a clock, come out at night, punch the clock, and occasionally do overtime.

Now I would like to turn for a moment to another group of people, the running crews, including the dining and sleeping car crews on railways. I have here the brief of the Railway Association of Canada, a brief which, incidentally, I am led to believe the minister had seen some weeks before but of which no cognizance was taken when these amendments which were supposed to be made for the benefit of industry were introduced. Despite the fear of repetition, I would like to say that none of the amendments made in the House of Commons affected the special situations with which we are dealing tonight and with which Senator Flynn's motion in amendment deals.

The Railway Association had this to say:

> ...the bill seeks to apply uniformly to all types of employment situations a set of standards which have been basically devised to apply to only one, albeit a more common, type of employment situation.
>
> The eight-hour day and forty-hour week with penalty overtime as well as the eight general holidays with pay are at least capable of accommodation in manufacturing establishments where regular hours can be scheduled during a normal five-day week, where periodic cessations of work at nights, week-ends and general holidays are not in conflict with the nature of operations, or where regular eight-hour shifts can be established and the work is done at a constant pace in a fixed plant and under direct management supervision.
>
> These characteristics do not exist in many railway operations and, despite the efforts made in the bill to facilitate application of the provisions in certain unusual employment situations, the bill in its present form would impose heavy burdens on the railways and on their employees engaged in operations the nature of which require provision of round-the-clock, year-round services to the public with peak periods at nights, week-ends and general holidays.

Then there are some paragraphs dealing with the running trades. Then it goes on:

> These same employees have in the process of collective bargaining sought and agreed upon wages and working conditions which take these differences in requirements fully into consideration and which, at the same time, have put them in the forefront of all workers in Canada. They have been able to maintain this position notwithstanding the minimal growth in railway business during the last decade. There can be no question of the effectiveness and bargaining power of the unions which represent these employees, but throughout the North American continent they have chosen to negotiate benefits more desirable to them and compatible with and appropriate to the nature and requirements of their work than limitation of hours.
>
> Imposition of the provisions of the bill would also cut deeply into the area and scope of collective bargaining. Some employee groups which have already obtained through collective bargaining earnings among the highest in Canada would, by legislation, be put in a still more favourable position. This is bad in principle, because if a union obtains such benefits through legislation, it is encouraged to seek further gains through this medium. This bypasses true collective bargaining and deprives the employer of the right to bargain for adjustments desirable in his operations as an offset to the union demands.
>
> Collective bargaining has long been acknowledged to be the best method of arriving at a level of wages and working conditions in industries where employees are sufficiently organized to be able to protect their own interests. The whole of federal industrial relations law has been designed to encourage private collective bargaining and to provide safeguards for the interested parties and the general public.
>
> True collective bargaining recognizes the economic realities which face a company and its industry.

I could put on the record some remarks as to the dual system of pay, but they can be read in the record of the proceedings. But to allay any suspicion that we are talking about downtrodden persons, I want to refer to the earnings of fulltime running trade employees of Canadian Pacific Railway who performed some work in each month of 1963. Eighty per cent of them earned over $6,000, only 2 per cent earned less than $5,000 and there were employees who earned over $10,000.

On the question of general holidays, and I may have to refer to this again later this evening, I would simply quote from the brief, and again I would mention that nobody, neither the minister nor the officials, has questioned these facts because obviously general holidays are completely inappropriate to groups like seamen and to the running trades of the railroads and to flight crews.

After all, the running trades are allowed by their union agreements to run only so many miles per month. The maximum monthly mileage on freight trains is 3,800 in western Canada and 4,300 in eastern Canada. I am speaking for the engineers and firemen on freight trains. The maximum such persons are allowed to run is limited by the union agreement. The railway cannot permit them to run any more. Passenger train engineers and firemen are allowed to go up to 4,800 miles a month. Of course their guarantees are very close to their minimums.

I could put on the record the average number of actual days worked. The fact is that they have far more holidays than senators have. General holidays are not included in the working of road service employees, nor are general holiday provisions in effect for any road service running trades employee on the North American continent who enjoys the advantages of the dual basis of pay.

Honourable senators, is the Government of Canada going to sit at the bargaining table and introduce a new system of collective bargaining in Canada and deal with the great international unions that have brought the running trades of the railways up to their being the aristocrats of the labour force? I suggest that that would be quite improper.

Another group that is mentioned in the amendment are the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport. Any honourable senator can refer to the evidence, but the situation with respect to those men is analogous to that of the road crews on the railways.

We come then to the stevedores and the longshoremen. They are tied in with the ships. They work when the ship comes in, and many of them move out of the St. Lawrence after the summer season down to the Atlantic provinces. The number of hours they work in a year is large, but they will not be controlled by this bill because they are working for several employers, and they work because they want to work. The fact that a person wants to work is becoming a kind of archaic thought in this country, but there are still some people who like to work, and to work long hours and to make money. We have not heard from the longshoremen or the stevedores saying that they think this bill is wonderful, and that they want to work only 40 or 48 hours a week. I have figures as to the hours they work, and honourable senators have the same information. Some of these people work 3,000 hours a year.

When that matter came up in the Banking and Commerce Committee I said I thought that Senator Leonard had also worked 3,000 hours in some years, but the reporter—and I hope he will not make the same mistake tonight—had me say that I thought Senator Leonard made $3,000 a year. I would never downgrade him to that position.

Hon. Mr. Leonard: Latterly, he may be right.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Honourable senators, the point is that the special and transitional provisions of this bill are not adequate to cover the special situations referred to in the amendment, because these are not special or transitional situations. They are permanent situations so far as anybody can see today, and looking into the future, by reason of the special nature of the employment of these individuals.

There is a further fact that I may have to refer to later this evening, and that is that the special and transitional provisions, in any event, do not permit the minister or anyone else to grant any exemption from the provisions of Part IV of the bill which deals with the so-called regular holidays, and which would provide regular holidays for air crews. I wonder what you would pay an air crew for a regular holiday. I think, if I were management, I would say: "Well, boy, this was the day you were supposed to run a Beechcraft from Montreal to Toronto or from Montreal to Ottawa and we pay you only $75 for that." I would not want to pay him what I had to pay a jet pilot flying overnight to Europe, and then pay him time and a half.

I could give other examples, but in the present bill there is no provision for anybody to exempt people from Part IV, such as will be accomplished by this amendment. It is designed to provide for complete exemption, and I think it is the clear duty of the Senate to pass it.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I think it will be generally agreed that the Senate has had a very thorough and informed debate on this bill. It will be generally agreed too that the work done in committee was careful, painstaking and thorough. I heartily agree with the honourable senator who has just spoken (Hon. Mr. McCutcheon), and I reject also, as I am sure all honourable senators do, the proposition that this bill is being held up by this honourable chamber. This house is a part of Parliament. It is its duty to consider measures that come before Parliament. I will say that the Senate has done no more than its duty, as it is bound to do, and it has done no less, in the kind of consideration it has given this bill.

I do not pretend that the viewpoint of the honourable senator coincides with my own on this bill. There is a great deal of room for honourable senators to disagree with the provisions of this bill. I think that in this chamber we can agree to disagree, and I would expect that this evening we may carry that disagreement to the point of voting.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: But not where the truth is obvious.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I hope the honourable senator will let me make the argument I propose to make, as he was certainly given every opportunity of making his.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Senator Roebuck did not exactly give me a full opportunity to make my speech. His interruptions, I think, numbered about twenty-five.

The Hon. the Speaker: Order. I hope the honourable Senator Thorvaldson will allow the honourable Senator Connolly to make his remarks.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Without in any sense wanting to be critical of the honourable senator, I certainly do not want him to make my remarks for me, because I do not think we agree on this general subject.

This bill, excluding federally-employed civil servants, is intended to apply to some 360,000 workers in Canada who are in private employment and in Crown corporations. The amendment proposed by the honourable Senator Flynn would affect the operators of country elevators who are said to number about 5,500; the employees in the running trades of the railways who, I am advised, number some 17,000; sleeping and dining car crews numbering 3,500; the road crews of motor vehicle interprovincial and international trucking enterprises which number 14,000; seamen numbering some 21,000; stevedores and longshoremen numbering some 12,000 and the flight crews on civil aircraft which number some 5,000.

The thing that we must keep clearly in mind is that this bill is intended to provide minimum standards. These minimum standards are $1.25 a day on the pay side—

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: $1.25 an hour, I hope.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes—and an eight-hour day, and a 40-hour week, in undertakings that are subject to federal jurisdiction. The honourable senator who has just spoken said all parties support this bill in principle. I think it is agreed also by all parties that only the federal Parliament can legislate with respect to conditions of work for those 360,000 people in Canada.

No one has said—and, indeed, what Senator McCutcheon has said makes it very clear—that the 360,000 people work under conditions below the standard proposed. In fact, very many of them, perhaps the vast majority of them, because of their collective agreements and because of the conditions of the industries in which they work, work under conditions vastly superior to the proposed minimum conditions which are suggested in this legislation. However, the fact of the matter is that some employees work under conditions which are not as good as these minima. The purpose of the legislation is, as indeed is the purpose of Parliament, to try to raise the standards of those people.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I wonder if the Leader would let me ask one question. I do not want to interrupt his argument. I agree with everything he said. I merely ask him which of the groups affected by this amendment does he feel are working below the standards. I am very happy to bring the comparatively few people—because I think they are few—covered by this legislation, up to the standard. This amendment deals with people who are far above the standards.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I realize that. I do not think there is any single group mentioned in the amendment that, as a group and for everyone in the group, is below those standards. But there are people below the standard probably in every one of the groups. The plain fact is that in the field of labour legislation in this country, in respect of those 360,000 people, there is a vacuum to be filled.

The federal-provincial meeting of Ministers of Labour, which took place in March 1964, agreed to the desirability of closing this gap. The Deputy Ministers from the provinces met with the Deputy Minister of Labour of Canada in December 1964 and agreed also. They also agreed that the provinces could not legislate in respect of these particular employees. As honourable senators know, in the provinces, legislation is constantly being revised for the purpose of improving working conditions and labour standards.

This country has a long record of adherence to the principle of improving conditions of labour. Since 1919 Canada has been a member of the International Labour Organization. In fact, Canada was one of the first members.

In 1935 an attempt was made by the leader of the party opposite to provide legislation based on recommendations of I.L.O. In 1962, when an I.L.O. resolution proposing reduction of hours of work was introduced, the then Minister of Labour agreed that this would be given very careful study.

As honourable Senator McCutcheon has said, perhaps it is not too difficult to provide rules for minima of the type proposed in this bill—for factory workers, for office employees such as those in the offices of the railway service. But it is more difficult in other industries. As he said, perhaps there are industries in which an entirely different concept of work time has to be considered, and carefully considered, in the application of these minimal standards.

The main objection made to this legislation is in reference to Part I, "Hours of Work", particularly in industries where the work is distributed irregularly, by day, by week, by season, where there are times of peak activity followed by a slackening of activity, where, as the evidence in the committee indicated, the employee is tied into his vehicle. Examples of these unusual situations are given in the amendment: the air crews, the running trades in the railways, the country grain elevators, the feed mills, the stevedores and others.

The first proposal in the bill to deal with these situations is the averaging proposal contained in clause 5(2), which I should like to read into the record now.

> Where the nature of the work in an industrial establishment necessitates irregular distribution of an employee's hours of work, the hours of work in a day and the hours of work in a week may be calculated, in such manner and in such circumstances as may be prescribed by the regulations, as an average for a period of two or more weeks.

That is interpreted to mean that working hours could be averaged over the 52 weeks of the year. The bill proposes that no more than 40 hours of work in a week, or 2,080 hours in a year, should be worked on a regular basis.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Would the honourable senator tell me whether he believes that the suggestion of the deputy minister, that you average the seaman who works eight months every 12 months by keeping him on your pay roll, thereby depriving him of the opportunity of taking another job, or drawing unemployment insurance, is a practical suggestion?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): That is a very good question. Perhaps if the honourable senator would allow me, I will come to it later. I want to make my argument now in a way which I think will deal with that situation. It does present a difficulty.

I said that the normal number of hours of work, as proposed by this bill, is 2,080. For example, in the stevedoring industry, I should think that most stevedores in our ports approach this maximum. In the Maritime ports in the winter they have a peak period; they have to deal with all the shipping on the east coast, and I think many times their hours exceed eight in the day and 40 in the week. This is also because they have to meet the shipping deadlines. However, I think the averaging provisions I have quoted, applied to these people, would remove many of the difficulties which some of the operators may be anticipating.

It is only after the averaging provisions are used, that the overtime provisions in the bill come into force. From clause 6 it is clear that eight hours per week can be worked overtime without a permit. There is provision in clause 10 for emergency overtime work. Clause 9 provides for cases where overtime permits can and will be granted by the minister.

Honourable senators, I am informed by the officials that since 1938 a system of issuing permits for overtime work, under the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, has in fact been in very general use, and some 200 to 300 of such permits are issued under that act every year.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: As applied to the industries covered by the amendment?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am talking now about the general practice of issuing overtime permits under the other act, and through the Department of Labour, and perhaps to some of the industries referred to in the amendment. Perhaps some of these permits are—

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: The honourable senator says "perhaps." He is not asserting that permits have been issued?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): In these industries?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): No. As a matter of fact, I do not know if they have been issued in any of these particular industries, but I think they may very well have been. As a matter of fact, I believe that in the stevedoring industry this has been the practice.

The idea of the concept of averaging, of course, is not new. It is provided for in many of the collective agreements, particularly of the running trades and the railways.

Honourable senators, if the averaging provisions fail to provide the remedy, then section 51 of the bill may be invoked. It may be useful to read part of that section:

> (1) Where upon the submission of any person it is shown to the satisfaction of the Minister that the introduction of the standard hours of work or the maximum hours of work under Part I in any federal work, undertaking or business
>
> (a) would be or is unduly prejudicial to the interests of the employees therein or to any class of employees therein, or
>
> (b) would be or is seriously detrimental to the operation of the federal work, undertaking or business,
>
> the Minister may by order defer or suspend the operation of Part I in respect of that federal work, undertaking or business or that class of employees therein for such period as may be fixed in the order; but a period of deferment or suspension under this subsection shall not exceed a period of eighteen months from the date of the coming into force of Part I, or the date of the order, whichever is the later date.

The honourable senator has made a good deal about the fact that these are described as special and transitional provisions. In a sense, I suppose they are special provisions, and in a sense they are transitional provisions.

There have been a good many representations made to the minister, and he has had a good deal of discussion with various people concerned with the application of this act. There has been a good deal of discussion by people who have appeared before the Senate committee. Here, perhaps, I should say that I do not think the honourable senator who has just spoken can necessarily conclude that because a point made in any given brief by an industry was not answered by an employee group, that point is necessarily valid.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Would the honourable senator tell me what point was invalid?

Hon. Mr. Croll: All their points were invalid.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Coming from that source, I can understand.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I think that perhaps with the proper understanding of section 51, coupled with section 35, a good many of the points that were made and unanswered will find an adequate explanation. The minister has said that he expects to make deferral orders immediately for any industry for which a prime facie case can be made. So long as the application is not a frivolous application, then the 18 months deferral will be given. He has said also in the other place that so far as transportation by sea is concerned, it is almost certain that the application will be made, and equally certain that deferral will be given. He has also said that so far as the trucking industry is concerned, in interprovincial and international trucking, they will need time to comply with the minimum standards set up in the bill. This implies, of course, that the deferral would be granted.

Forthwith, however, upon the deferral, the application of section 35 comes into play. If I may, honourable senators, I will read section 35:

> (1) The Minister may, for any of the purposes of this Act, cause an inquiry to be made into and concerning employment in any industrial establishment and may appoint one or more persons to hold the inquiry.
>
> (2) A person appointed pursuant to subsection (1) has and may exercise all the powers of a person appointed as a commissioner under Part I of the Inquiries Act.

Honourable senators are familiar with the terms of the Inquiries Act (which contemplates an objective, thorough, fact-finding exercise into the subject matter before the commissioner appointed under the act. These boards, or inquiries, are not to be undertaken for the purpose of disrupting an industry or of disaffecting workers. Boards will sit with the objective of trying to realize the minimum standards provided by this bill without disrupting any of the industries making representations before them. For the first time, section 35 allows the federal authorities to get the full facts about the working conditions in these industries subject to federal jurisdiction.

The matter of ministerial discretion does not come into play in respect of the work of inquiries undertaken through the Inquiries Act under section 35.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I challenge that statement.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The minister expects, for example, in the matter of marine shipping, that if averaging fails, an application will be made under section 51 and forthwith a board will be constituted under section 35. If the industry cannot conform to the precise conditions here proposed, the recommendations of the board can provide for rules whereby adequate standards can be observed in this industry.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: I wonder if the honourable senator would allow a question, just for the record. Is it not correct that under the act when a board of inquiry reports, it is a question of whether the minister accepts that report or does not accept it, and consequently the decision must be that of the minister and not of the board? In other words, is it not a fact that the board merely recommends?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I think a recommendation coming from the board, an objective order made by the board, an objective order made under the Inquiries Act, would be the kind of report that a minister would have very great difficulty rejecting. I have full confidence in the kind of work that these boards can do. I have full confidence also that a minister of the Crown in any government would look at the recommendation and deal with it in the way governments deal with recommendations of this character.

Looking now at the grain elevator operators, about which so much has been said, I think it can be assumed that under section 3, subsection (3) of the bill, many of these country grain elevator operators in western Canada are in the managerial class and will be excluded by the operation of section 3, subsection (3). The chairman of the committee thought so, and I think the counsel to the committee thought so.

Some of them may be employees, some may not.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: They are all employees.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Well, they may be.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: The question is whether they are managers.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Well, all right; the managerial test is perhaps the appropriate one. In any event, some may not fall within that category, and I submit to honourable senators that the averaging, which is permitted under section 5(2), might very well solve the problems of a great many of the others. But if averaging does not succeed in solving the problems—and I should point out here, as has been pointed out to me, the fact that the permit system which is now in operation in western Canada may cut down a good deal the hours worked by grain elevator operators there. But, as I say, if the averaging system does not work, then the provisions of section 51 are applicable, and also the provisions of section 35.

Honourable senators are very concerned, and I think with reason, about conditions in the trucking industry. Many of the drivers spend long hours on the road; fatigue is a fact of life with them. Fatigue means danger not only to the drivers themselves but to the public at large.

I am informed that in 1962 the driver control branch of the Department of Transport of Ontario listed 758 accidents as due to extreme fatigue. These were accidents with cars and trucks. And in 1964 there were 13 accidents among tractor-trailer drivers alone due to extreme fatigue.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: How many?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Thirteen.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I trust the honourable senator will not mind my interjecting at this point. We did have a representative of the Teamsters Union appear before us. He made no representations about the working conditions of the members of his own union, because he apparently was perfectly satisfied. His whole representation was directed to what he called the owner-driver, the broker-driver, who is not controlled by this bill or by various provincial acts at all.

I am not denying that fatigue will cause accidents and so on, but I do suggest to my honourable friend it is a little unfair to say that the provisions of this bill are going to correct that situation, because they do not touch what the head of the Teamsters Union referred to.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Perhaps the provisions of the bill will not touch every individual case, but they will touch a great many cases. The fact they touch so many cases might be the reason for what opposition there is to the provisions of this bill. And if this opposition did not exist, probably the condition would not have to be remedied.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Would the honourable leader allow a question at this time? I am wondering if he was present at the meeting of the Banking and Commerce committee when testimony was given, that the number of accidents per unit-mile by these truck drivers was less by, I think, about a third than the accidents caused by the general public. I think that is in the evidence.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): That may well be, and I take second place to no one in my admiration for the skill of the drivers of these tractor-trailers. But I do say that if this bill is going to improve conditions in that industry to the advantage of the general public as well as to that of the trucking drivers, then I am all for the bill.

The provinces are concerned about this problem, and only Parliament can deal with this question of excessive hours in inter-provincial and international trucking. I come back again to what I said earlier, that the truckers and the trucking industry need time. The minister has indicated that there will be time given to study the operation, to see how quickly and how thoroughly the trucking industry can conform to the proposed minimum standards.

I should refer to another point as well. The amendment proposes to exempt road crews and flight crews, among other groups in the industries mentioned in the amendment. But it should be remembered that in the case of the trucking industry the work of the warehouseman and the repairman is subsidiary to and complementary to the work of the road crew. Very often these groups are in the same collective agreement. Most of them are organized. The same applies to the flight crew, because the airline mechanic and serviceman performs services that are subsidiary to and complementary to the work of the flight crew.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: I would be quite willing to enlarge the amendment, to include these other workers.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The amendment is before us. I do not think that is a useful interjection.

The point is this, that the amendment would extend the benefits of this legislation to certain segments of this industry, and would deny it to others—

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Nonsense!

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): —and I do not think it is the intention of honourable senators to discriminate as between groups within an industry and say that one group shall have the benefits of these minimum standards while another group shall not.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: The minister will be able to do that under his ministerial discretion.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): After the inquiry is held to investigate the conditions in an industry, the inquirer will be able to do a good deal to reach equitable results. But I think that an arbitrary exclusion, as is proposed here, might very well produce results that are not equitable.

Honourable senators, this legislation is new. I do not deny that there are difficulties facing the administration in trying to establish it in all of the different industries subject to parliamentary jurisdiction. But I do suggest that there has been introduced into this legislation an element of elasticity. Rigidity has been eliminated largely by the provisions of section 51 and section 35, as well as through the averaging provisions. The purpose of the bill is not to apply a rigid uniformity across the board in all industries subject to federal jurisdiction. The purpose of the legislation is to achieve reasonable minimum standards. The purpose also is to anticipate problems arising out of the expected rapid expansion of the labour force. The report of the Economic Council of Canada said that by 1970 1½ million new jobs have to be found in this country. There is provision in this legislation for special cases and for the enactment of rules for those special cases. I am told also that before the regulations are drawn there will be close consultation between representatives both of employers and employees.

I would therefore ask honourable senators to reject the amendment and to give the bill third reading.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the honourable Senator Beaubien (Provencher), that Bill C-126, intituled: "An Act respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses", be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the honourable Senator Flynn, seconded by the honourable Senator McCutcheon:

> That the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:
>
> Strike out subclause (3) of clause 3 and substitute therefor the following:
>
> (3) This Act does not apply to or in respect of employees who are
>
> (a) managers or superintendents or who exercise management functions,
>
> (b) members of such professions as may be designated by the regulations as professions to which this Act does not apply,
>
> (c) operators of country grain elevators as defined in the Canada Grain Act, or
>
> (d) members of the running trades including sleeping and dining car crews of any railway, the road crews of any firm engaged in interprovincial motor vehicle transport, seamen as defined in the Canada Shipping Act, stevedores and longshoremen, flight crews of any civil aircraft: Provided that the employment of such employees is governed by the terms of a collective agreement negotiated by a duly certified bargaining unit.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Those in favour of the motion in amendment will please say "Content".

Some Hon. Senators: Content.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are against the motion in amendment will please say "Non-content".

Some Hon. Members: Non-content.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the Non-contents have it.

Some Hon. Senators: Let us have a recorded vote.

The Hon. the Speaker: Call in the senators.

Motion in amendment of Hon. Mr. Flynn negatived on the following division:

CONTENTS

Honourable Senators

Aseltine	McCutcheon
Belisle	Méthot
Blois	O'Leary (Antigonish-Gusyborough)
Brooks	Pearson
Buchanan	Phillips
Choquette	Sullivan
Flynn	Thorvaldson
Fournier (Madawaska-Restigouche)	Welch
Grosart	White
Haig	Willis
Hollett	Yuzyk—23.
Macdonald (Cape Breton)

NON-CONTENTS

Honourable Senators

Basha	Hugessen
Beaubien (Provencher)	Inman
Boucher	Isnor
Bourque	Jodoin
Burchill	Kinley
Cameron	Lang
Connolly (Halifax North)	Lefrançois
Connolly (Ottawa West)	Leonard
Cook	McGrand
Croll	McKeen
Davies	McLean
Dessureault	Pouliot
Fergusson	Power
Fournier (De Lanaudière)	Reid
Gélinas	Roebuck
Gershaw	Savoie
Gouin	Smith (Queens-Shelburne)
Haig	Taylor (Norfolk)
	Veniot
	Woodrow—38.

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the amendment lost.

It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the honourable Senator Hugessen, that this bill be now read the third time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

FURTHER MOTION IN AMENDMENT—NEGATIVED

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I move in amendment, seconded by the honourable Senator Flynn:

That the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

1. Immediately after section 53 insert the following as section 54:

"54. Where it is made to appear to the Minister that in the case of any federal work, undertaking or business referred to in paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of subsection (1) of section 3 or of any class of employees therein that the application of Part IV would disturb any employment custom peculiar to such federal work, undertaking or business or any operation therein, the Minister may by order suspend the operation of Part IV in respect of that federal work, undertaking or business or of any class of employees therein."

2. Renumber present section 54 as section 55.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly, seconded by the honourable Senator Beaubien (Provencher), that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the honourable Senator McCutcheon, seconded by the honourable Senator Flynn:

That the Bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

1. Immediately after section 53 insert the following as section 54—

Some Hon. Senators: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Honourable senators—

Hon. Mr. Fournier (De Lanaudière): Honourable senators, I rise on a point of order. This is a complex motion that we are called to vote upon, and as it presents two different propositions it is, in my opinion, completely out of order. I should like to have your ruling on that, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Perhaps if the honourable senator had a copy of the amendment he would change his mind.

Hon. Mr. Fournier (De Lanaudière): My having a copy of the amendment will not cause me to change my mind. I listened very carefully when His Honour the Speaker read the motions—and I mean "motions," plural.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I am quite prepared to accommodate myself to the honourable senator, and adjourn the debate.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the honourable Senator McCutcheon, seconded by the honourable Senator Flynn, that this debate be adjourned until the next sitting of the Senate. Is it your pleasure to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: No.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I do not think we want to divide on a motion for the adjournment of the debate. It would be desirable, I think, to draw this debate to a conclusion tonight. Perhaps the honourable Senator Fournier (De Lanaudière) will agree not to press his point of order, so as to enable the sponsor of the amendment to explain it. Perhaps that can be done briefly. If it can, then I suggest that we continue to a conclusion tonight.

The Hon. the Speaker: I have a motion to adjourn the debate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am asking the honourable senator if he really wishes to press his point of order.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: I am quite willing to withdraw the motion, honourable senators. I was merely trying to accommodate my honourable friend, Senator Fournier (De Lanaudière). If he accepts the suggestion of the honourable Leader of the Government, then I am prepared to proceed.

Hon. Mr. Fournier (De Lanaudière): Are you asking if I accept the withdrawing of the motion?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): No. Do you withdraw your point of order?

Hon. Mr. Fournier (De Lanaudière): If my understanding is correct I heard honourable Senator McCutcheon say: " I am prepared to withdraw my motion."

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: No; I am prepared to withdraw the motion to adjourn the debate.

Hon. Mr. Fournier (De Lanaudière): Well, honourable senators, I think a reasonable man must always keep a doubt in his mind about his own thinking. If honourable Senator McCutcheon would kindly explain his motions perhaps we shall find that they can be put in the form of one motion. If that is the case, then I have no objection to proceeding tonight.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, there is, of course, only one motion before us at the moment, and the purpose of it is to assist the Government and the minister in the administration of this bill.

I noted down the words of the honourable Leader of the Government when he was speaking to close the debate at a previous stage earlier this session, and he referred to the element of elasticity that had been introduced into this bill by sections 51 and 35. It would be quite improper for me to traverse the ground that we were discussing at that time, but I should like to say that none of the principals who appeared before us, and who are included within the classes of employers to whom the previous amendment applied, felt that a type of elasticity which left a guillotine over their heads forever was really a type of elasticity under which they wished to operate. Having said that I am sure, with some mental reservations, I speak for more than the "Contents" in the voting on the last amendment. It would be quite improper to pursue that argument at the moment.

Honourable senators, I want to introduce a complete element of elasticity into this matter. If we are to have the Minister of Labour cutting through the heart of agreements negotiated between strong unions and strong employers, if we are to have him sitting like Banquo's ghost at every bargaining table, then I think it only proper that we should go the whole way.

I should like first to draw the attention of honourable senators to the classes of business covered by this amendment. These are set out in clause 3(1)(a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) as follows:

> (a) any work, undertaking or business operated or carried on for or in connection with navigation and shipping, whether inland or maritime, including the operation of ships and transportation by ship anywhere in Canada,
>
> (b) any railway, canal, telegraph or other work or undertaking connecting a province with any other or others of the provinces, or extending beyond the limits of a province,
>
> (c) any line of steam or other ships connecting a province with any other or others of the provinces, or extending beyond the limits of a province.
>
> (d) any ferry between any province and any other province or between any province and any country other than Canada,
>
> (e) any aerodrome, aircraft or line of air transportation,

Therefore, the industries covered by this amendment are the same industries certain of whose employees were covered by the amendment which was disposed of earlier in this sitting.

While the Leader of the Government referred to this element of elasticity—which he said had been introduced into the bill by clauses 51 and 35, an element of elasticity as to the effectiveness of which I and others have some doubts—he did not, and in the circumstances there was probably no necessity for it, draw your attention to the fact that that element of elasticity does not extend to Part IV of the bill, which is headed "General Holidays" and which purports to give every person covered by the bill eight general holidays a year.

Honourable senators, there is a clause in the bill—and I want to anticipate the argument which may be made—which provides that employees do not necessarily have to accept the general holidays specified in the bill, but that any designated holidays may be substituted for them. But in what circumstances? I am referring to clause 28(1)(a):

> where a class of the employees of an employer is represented by a trade union and the parties to a collective agreement entered into with regard to the terms or conditions of employment of the employees notify the Minister in writing that a specified day has been designated in the collective agreement as a holiday with pay in lieu of a general holiday under this Part, such designated day shall, for those employees mentioned in the collective agreement, be a general holiday for the purposes of this Act;

This is the next provision:

> (b) where no employees of an employer are represented by a trade union—

The people in whom I am interested are all represented by strong trade unions, so I shall not read that paragraph (b). But, suppose you have a collective agreement which provides for no general holidays.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Are there any?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Yes. Not a single running trade in the railways of North America has any provision for general holidays in its collective agreement—and this involves one of the strongest labour unions in North America. Senator Roebuck acted for them on many occasions. There are no provisions for general holidays in the collective agreements of the air lines. There are no provisions for statutory or regular holidays in the collective agreements of the flight crews in the air lines. There are no provisions for regular holidays in contracts with seamen, and so on.

Therefore, how can the employer and the employee notify the minister that they are going to substitute another day for a general holiday that, under their collective agreement, does not exist?

There is evidence which has not been denied. I do not accept the position of the Leader of the Government when he says that because it has not been denied it necessarily is correct. My own suspicion is that the unions affected, the unions representing the running trades, the flight crews, the seamen, the S.I.U.—I would think that even this Government might have some evidence that the S.I.U. was a strong union—if they were concerned, would have appeared before us.

I am going to accept the statement of the Railway Association of Canada, and I shall have to read again. I am reading from page 17 of their brief, which is on the record of the Banking and Commerce Committee:

> General holidays are not included in the working conditions of road service employees to which group reference was made earlier. Nor are general holiday provisions in effect for any road service running trades employees on the North American Continent who enjoy the advantages of the dual basis of pay.

We had a vice-president of the Canadian National Railways—of course, Senator Pouliot does not regard them too highly. We also had a vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway before us. They heard this brief read, and by their presence and by their subsequent examination they indicated that this was a factual statement. I believe no person in this chamber can challenge the statement, and no other person came before the committee to challenge it. I quote from the brief again:

> It is worth repeating that the working conditions of such employees already recognize the requirements of their service in accordance with the necessity of the railways discharging their obligations as common carriers seven days a week and 365 days per year.
>
> When the majority of employees can be released for the holiday the fundamental principle of penalty payment is effective; where the majority of employees cannot be released for the holiday, as in the case of road service employees, the principle of the penalty payment is defeated. To apply a penalty where it cannot be effective in eliminating or controlling work performed would be contrary to the generally accepted principle governing penalty payments.
>
> The railways have never quarrelled with the position that the basic system of pay applicable to road service employees as well as their level of pay should, as it does, reflect the unusual requirements of the service, including work performed on general holidays without extra remuneration. Under the dual method of pay the increased average speeds have resulted in these employees earning their pay in fewer and fewer hours.

I refrain from quoting the examples which are in this brief and are on the record. The brief continues:

> To add to these advantages, as would be done if Bill C-126 were enacted in its present form, is without justification.
>
> On sixteen different occasions since 1950, the three major Brotherhoods representing running trades employees have submitted demands pertaining to general holidays with pay on both major railways. In ten cases such demands were withdrawn by the Brotherhoods in the collective bargaining process; in the remaining six cases, Conciliation Boards were appointed to consider these demands and after thorough investigation, rejected them.

The principle of dual pay, the peculiar circumstances of employment, are the same for the employment of a flight crew; the principle of dual pay applies equally there. The principle of dual pay does not apply to seamen. The peculiarity of employment, the tie to your place of employment, the inability to move away from it, and so on, does apply. The purpose of this amendment is to put the minister in a position where upon application he can—it does not require him to do so—suspend the operation of Part IV in respect of a particular federal work, undertaking or business, or any class of employees therein, only in these circumstances where it is made to appear to the minister that the application of Part IV would disturb any employment custom peculiar to such federal work, undertaking or business or operation therein.

That completes the element of elasticity which the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) is so proud to have in this bill. It is taking nothing away from anybody. It is enabling the minister to exercise his discretion in a limited number of circumstances. He may or he may not do it, but at least he cannot take shelter behind the act and say, "Well, of course, I cannot help you. It is too bad. You never had these things. No railway in North America has them, and I do not know how you are going to solve these things, or determine what is time and a half for a pilot who only works a maximum of 85 hours a month anyway." The minister now, has an opportunity to demonstrate that there is an element of elasticity in this bill; and as a minister, of course, he must be subject to criticism, depending upon what his decisions are in particular cases.

I say that the adoption of this amendment is the sort of action which the Senate should take in order to improve a piece of legislation without in any way depriving any person, subject to the ambit of the legislation, of any of the benefits that may accrue to him under the legislation, without due representations being made, doubtful and all as some of us may be as to some of the benefits which may accrue.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, in his usual cogent way, the honourable senator has made his point, and I think very clearly. I may not be as clear. In the first place, I disagree.

His reference to the statement I made earlier in the debate this evening, that there is an element of elasticity introduced into the operation of the act by sections 51 and 35 is, I submit, in a context quite different from the one posed by the honourable senator.

I say in all deference to the honourable senators opposite, that it is pretty hard for them to have it both ways. The argument of the senator, and the argument of his deskmate earlier, was that there was too much ministerial discretion in this bill. What the honourable senator is proposing now is to give the minister a great deal more ministerial discretion than the bill had contemplated. If this had been done in the first instance, I am sure that the honourable senator would perhaps have been one of the first to rise and say this minister is taking a great deal too much unto himself in the way of discretions.

We are talking primarily about general holidays. Perhaps I should read from section 2(f), which defines general holidays:

> "general holiday" means New Year's Day, Good Friday, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, Labour Day, Thanksgiving Day, Remembrance Day and Christmas Day and includes any day substituted for any such holiday pursuant to section 28.

The idea behind this bill is that workers in Canada, subject to federal jurisdiction, should have these holidays. I think, with that proposition, most of us are in agreement.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Not if we want to travel on Christmas Day, or New Year's Day or Remembrance Day.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): No. It does not by any means exclude the use of transportation or other facilities on those days. But there are other ways of dealing with that. There are eight such general holidays, and consistent with the idea of establishing minimum standards for Canadians in these industries, it was felt that these holidays should be made general holidays for the purposes of this legislation.

The honourable senator proposes by his amendment that in any cases where the application of Part IV would disturb "an employment custom peculiar to such federal work," the minister may suspend the operation of the section of the act in respect of that act. Well, if the employment custom in a given industry is such that these holidays, which everybody recognizes as holidays, are to be denied people, then I take my stand on the side which argues that they are entitled to these holidays and should have them.

What we are talking about under this legislation is a minimum standard. May I now read section 33:

> No employee is entitled to be paid for a general holiday on which he does not work when he is not entitled to wages for at least fifteen days during the thirty calendar days immediately preceding the general holiday; and no employee who is employed in a continuous operation is entitled to be paid for a general holiday on which he did not report for work after having been called to work on that day.

In other words, the man who works for fifteen days prior to the holiday is entitled to the holiday. If he does not, he is not so entitled. I think that on the basis of this section, this objection having been raised in committee, the minister said he felt that this was a factor which must be taken into consideration in dealing with the proposal which the honourable senator has just put to the Senate.

I think also that the general representations made to the minister, to the department and to the committee, did not make the major point about this section, to which the honourable senator has referred. I would therefore ask the Senate to reject the amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly—

Hon. Gunnar S. Thorvaldson: Honourable senators, considering the time that has been devoted to this bill by this body, we are all agreed that the problems posed by it are important ones. We who supported the first amendment that was made and debated this evening are of the view that that amendment was important, and that it should have been passed by this house. Considering the importance of the present amendment, and indeed we do consider it important, and also considering the fact that this body is one which is intended to give sober second thought to important problems of state, I think some further consideration should be given to this matter than has been given tonight.

Consequently, I have much pleasure in moving the adjournment of the debate.

The Hon. the Speaker: It has been moved by the honourable Senator Thorvaldson, seconded by the honourable Senator Macdonald (Cape Breton), that this debate be adjourned until the next sitting of the Senate. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): No.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): Let us finish.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are in favour of the motion, please say "Content."

Some Hon. Senators: Content.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those against the motion, will please say "Non-content."

Some Hon. Senators: Non-content.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the Non-contents have it.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Steamroller, steamroller!

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Oh, no!

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: We can finish this in half an hour tomorrow.

The Hon. the Speaker: It has been moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) and seconded by the hourable Senator Beaubien (Provencher) that this bill be now read the third time. In amendment, it is moved by the honourable Senator McCutcheon—

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Is the motion for amendment defeated?

The Hon. the Speaker: I was putting the question. I think I gave sufficient time for senators to get up, and not seeing two senators rise, that is the reason I was reading the amendment. I think it is too late to call for a vote.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, may I with respect suggest there have been many occasions in this chamber when the pause, which you have suggested is required, was much greater and when you gave considerable latitude. You have given latitude, I suggest respectfully, in many cases since I have been in this house, that you are now reluctant to give. I suggest the latitude that has been given in many other cases should now be given to those senators who have risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators will recall that when I put the question, "Those in favour of the motion, will please say 'Content'" I heard some say "Content"; and when I called for the "Non-contents" I also heard some honourable senators say, "Non-content." After that, I again paused. I did not see any senators getting up, and I even heard one senator—and I must say it was the honourable Senator Thorvaldson—make some remarks without rising. So not seeing any senators getting up, the only thing that was left for me to do according to the procedure, was to read the amendment before the Senate.

For those reasons, I think I have given sufficient time. I must say to the honourable Senator Grosart that I have never been reluctant to give sufficient time to any honourable senator to ask questions or to make any remarks. Of course, I did not check the time by my watch, but I think, in the circumstances I have already stated, I have given sufficient time.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Honourable senators, on a point of order, I want to say that I am absolutely amazed at the ruling that is being made—

Some Hon. Senators: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Hayden: What is the point of order?

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: The point of order is that we believe we have the right to vote on the motion which I made to adjourn this debate until tomorrow.

The Hon. the Speaker: This question was put and, nobody getting up, I could not ask for a vote. That is the reason I say it was too late.

It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West)—

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Mr. Speaker, you have made your ruling, and I, for one, accept it, but I think the next thing is to revert to the point where we were. The honourable Senator Thorvaldson was discussing the amendment before the Senate, and I think that he should be given the opportunity to do so.

The Hon. the Speaker: If I remember the discussion well, there was a motion to adjourn the debate.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Yes.

The Hon. the Speaker: The motion for the adjournment of the debate was defeated.

Hon. Mr. Flynn: Yes; so the debate continues.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: Sentaor Thorvaldson has the right to go on with his speech.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: If he is ready to go ahead, he should continue.

The Hon. the Speaker: If he wants to go ahead, that is all right.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Not on a point of order. I know this motion is not debatable, but this is the first time since I have been in the Senate that we have had proposed a division on the motion to adjourn. It is now well after the time that we usually sit and, as the honourable Senator Thorvaldson has told us, this is a very important matter.

Frankly, I will not accuse anyone of being discourteous, because I know the honourable gentlemen opposite too well, but speaking in general I think it is a bit discourteous to ask us to go on at this time on an amendment which has just been introduced. I ask honourable senators if this might not be adjourned until tomorrow.

As far as I personally am concerned, I have been doing nothing here in Ottawa from last Thursday until today, and a good many other senators have been in the same position. Why half an hour or an hour is going to make all this difference is very difficult for me to understand; I really do not understand the attitude.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, it is always very hard to resist the blandishments of the Leader of the Opposition (Hon. Mr. Brooks). Really the only point I had in mind in connection with this matter was that, unfortunately, I cannot be here tomorrow. That is a personal reason, but I was rather anxious to see this matter concluded this evening, if at all possible.

If the honourable senator who spoke and proposed the adjournment of the debate feels that he has something that he just wants to add to this discussion tomorrow, then I think, in the circumstances, we would agree to its adjournment. But if, on the other hand, he considers the matter might be concluded quickly here this evening, he might so indicate.

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: Honourable senators, I thank the honourable Leader (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West), for the remarks that he has just made. It is very generous of him to suggest that the debate might be adjourned until tomorrow, and I appreciate that suggestion.

However, I would like to say this, particularly to the honourable leader, that my purpose in adjourning this debate was nothing in the nature of a trick or anything of the kind unduly to delay the debate. I ask honourable senators to believe me when I say that. I had intended to speak on this amendment tomorrow for perhaps 10, 15 or 20 minutes, but I did want to prepare the remarks I would make.

As I understand it, I do not know of anyone else on this side who wants to speak in this debate—that is, on the second amendment made by the honourable Senator McCutcheon. There may be somebody on the other side who would like to speak on it, but considering the generosity of the Leader of the Government in this regard, which I appreciate very greatly, I will say to him now that anything I might say tomorrow might not be of such significance as to change the views and opinions of anybody here.

Consequently, I will say, if the Leader really desires to close the debate—

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Even with a vote!

Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson: —to close the debate, it is not my intention to hold up the business of the Senate. I ask you to believe me when I say now it was not my intention to hold up the business of the house for more than perhaps 15 or 20 minutes or half an hour tomorrow.

May I conclude by saying that, to my knowledge, it has never been the purpose of anybody in this house deliberately to adjourn a debate for the purpose of embarrassing the other side or for the purpose of unduly delaying the progress of this house. Again I say to you, it was not my purpose. Consequently, if the honourable Leader of the Government maintains that he would like to have the debate concluded tonight, then I am quite satisfied not to adjourn the debate.

The Hon. the Speaker: I would like to know what the opinion of the honourable Leader of the Government is.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I take it from what the honourable senator has just said that he would just as soon have the motion put tonight.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the honourable Senator Beaubien (Provencher), that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the honourable Senator McCutcheon, seconded by the honourable Senator Flynn:

> That the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:
>
> 1. Immediately after section 53 insert the following as section 54:
>
> "54. Where it is made to appear to the Minister that in the case of any federal work, undertaking or business referred to in paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of subsection (1) of section 3 or of any class of employees therein that the application of Part IV would disturb any employment custom peculiar to such federal work, undertaking or business or any operation therein, the Minister may by order suspend the operation of Part IV in respect of that federal work, undertaking or business or of any class of employees therein."

2. Renumber present section 54 as section 55.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment? Those in favour of the motion in amendment will please say "Content".

Some Hon. Senators: Content.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those against the motion in amendment will please say "Non-content".

Some Hon. Senators: Non-content.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the Non-contents have it.

And more than two senators having stood.

The Hon. the Speaker: Call in the senators.

Motion in amendment of Hon. Mr. McCutcheon negatived on the following division:

CONTENTS

Honourable Senators

Aseltine	McCutcheon
Belisle	Méthot
Blois	O'Leary (Antigonish-Guysborough)
Brooks	Pearson
Buchanan	Phillips
Choquette	Sullivan
Flynn	Thorvaldson
Fournier (Madawaska-Restigouche)	Welch
Grosart	White
Haig	Willis
Hollett	Yuzyk—23.
Macdonald (Cape Breton)

NON-CONTENTS

Honourable Senators

Basha	Boucher
Beaubien (Provencher)	Bourque
Burchill	Cameron
Connolly (Halifax North)	Connolly (Ottawa West)
Cook	Croll
Davies	Dessureault
Fergusson	Fournier (De Lanaudiere)
Gelinas	Gershaw
Gouin	Hayden
Hugessen	Inman
Isnor	Jodoin
Kinley	Lang
Lefrançois	Leonard
McGrand	McKeen
McLean	Pouliot
Power	Reid
Roebuck	Savoie
Smith (Queens Shelburne)	Taylor (Norfolk)
Veniot	Woodrow—38.

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the amendment lost.

On division.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly, P.C., seconded by the honourable Senator Beaubien (Provencher) that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: On division.

Motion agreed to, and bill read third time, and passed, on division.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Before we adjourn I should like to say that I hope everybody will have a good St. Patrick's Day.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, March 17, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

TRIBUTES TO ST. PATRICK AND THE IRISH PEOPLE

Hon. Joseph A. Sullivan: Honourable senators, I beg the indulgence of the house, as I bring to your attention that this is a most momentous day. This is the 17th of March, St. Patrick's Day.

On a previous occasion I prefaced my brief comments by stating that this was the greatest day in the history of civilization. Having made that remark, and giving the contents of such a statement the most serious of consideration and research, I can only repeat that this is the greatest day in the history of civilization.

There is an old saying that "boloney is flattery so thick it cannot be true, and blarney is flattery so thin, we like it." I propose to give you a little blarney this afternoon; or, in other words, "The oil can is mightier than the sword."

There is a story told that Pat, when he went to confession, mentioned to the priest that he had recently killed a couple of Englishmen. "Never mind politics," the priest said, "tell me about your sins."

From one of the great ballads and lyrics of seventeenth century Ireland, there is a beautiful song. Unfortunately, unlike my deceased friend and colleague, the late Senator Felix Quinn, I am unable to sing it. However, it goes like this—and I will give you three or four verses:

Oh weep for the day we were forced from our cot,
From our praties and milk and our stir-about pot,
When Judy kept every thing piping and hot,
So snug with the cat in the corner.

The pigs and the dogs and childre, agrah!
Lay down on the floor, so dacent in straw,
While the cocks and the hens they were perch'd up ava,
Just over the cat in the corner.

Our window so clane by an unlucky stroke,
Had three of the purtiest panes in it broke:
We fastened up two with the tail of a cloak,
And the smoke went through one in the corner.

Och! Paddy's the boy, with a stick in his fist,
With a spur in his head, and a bone in his wrist,
And a straw round his hat—
Senator Connolly (Halifax North)!
—you must call it gold twist,
Or he'll murdher you all in the corner.

The most precious, the grandest inheritance of any people is that people's history. All that forms the national character of a people, their tone of thought, their devotion, their love, their sympathies, their antipathies, their language—all this is found in their history, as the effect is found in its cause, as the autumn speaks of the spring. And the philosopher who wishes to analyze a people's character and to account for it—to account for the national desires, hopes, aspirations, for the strong sympathies or antipathies that sway a people—must go back to the deep recesses of their history; and there, in ages long gone by, will he find the seeds that produced the fruit that he attempts to account for. And he will find that the nation of today is but the child and offspring of the nation of bygone ages, for it is written truly that, "The child is father of the man."

When, therefore, we come to consider the desires of nations, we find that every people is most strongly desirous to preserve its history, even as every man is anxious to preserve the record of his life for as history is the record of a people's life, hence it is that, in the libraries of the most ancient nations, we find the earliest histories of primeval races of mankind written upon the durable vellum, the imperishable asbestos, or sometimes deeply carved in mystic and forgotten characters on the granite stone or pictured rock, showing the desire of the people to preserve their history, which is to preserve the memory of them, just as the old man dying said, "Lord, keep my memory green."

But, besides these more direct and documentary evidences, the history of every nation is enshrined in the national traditions, in the national music and song; much more, it is written in the public buildings that cover the face of the land. These, silent and in ruins, tell most eloquently their tale. Today "The stone may be crumbled, the wall decayed;" the clustering ivy may, perhaps, uphold the tottering ruin to which it clung in the days of its strength; but,

The sorrows, the joys of which once they were part
Still round them, like visions of yesterday, throng.

They are the voices of the past; they are the voices of ages long gone by. They rear their venerable and beautiful gray heads high over the land they adorn; and they tell us the tale of the glory or of the shame, of the strength or of the weakness, of the prosperity or of the adversity of the nation to which they belong.

What does it tell? It tells us of a race that has never decayed; it tells us of a people that have never lost their faith nor their love; it tells us of a nation as strong in its energy for every highest and holiest purpose today, as it was in the ages that are past and gone forever.

That philosophy is the indelible history, tradition and heritage of a great race of people, whether they be Irish, Scottish, French, English or Welsh. Thus, honourable senators, if any civilization is to progress, man must go back to the past, to the storehouse of his tradition and bring out from that granary all the fine ideas that are hidden there and use them as the basis of constructive thinking for the future. This very philosophy applies at the present day, at the present moment, to you, to me and to all Canadians, whether they be of French, or of English, or of Irish, or of Scottish or any other ethnic group, it belongs to all, to each one of us, to this Canada that we so dearly love. So be it, we are all Canadians.

Science will never be able to reduce the value of a sunset to arithmetic; nor can it reduce friendship or statesmanship to a formula. Laughter and love, the challenge of accomplishment in living, and the depth of insight into beauty and truth—these will always surpass the scientific mastery of nature in this day and age.

So, on this St. Patrick's Day we Irish in this country send our salutations to our far-flung brethren—to Ireland, to the highlands of Scotland, to Wales and Cornwall, to Brittany and northern Spain, and to our Celtic cousins in the United States of America. Let me repeat a portion of the salutation to the Gaels, by D'Arcy McGee:

> Hail to our Celtic brethren, wherever they may be,
> In far woods of Oregon, or o'er the Atlantic sea—
> Whether they guard the banner of St. George in Indian vales,
> Or spread beneath the nightless north experimental sails,
> One in name and in fame
> Are the sea-divided Gaels.
>
> A greeting and a promise, unto them all we send—
> Their character our charter is, their glory is our end—
> Their friend shall be our friend, our foe whoe'er assails
> The past or future honours of the far dispersed Gaels.
>
> One in name, and in fame
> Are the sea-divided Gaels.
>
> Now there's a wish they'll wish today
> In Limerick, Cork, and Kerry,
> 'Tis what they'll say in Galway Bay,
> Kildare, and Londonderry,
> In Dublin and in Donegal
> 'Tis what they'll be repeatin'—
> So you'll not be surprised at all
> To find it in this greetin'!

HAPPY ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Hon. A. K. Hugessen: Honourable senators, I am sure that we are all delighted to hear the eloquent words that have come from our colleague, Senator Sullivan, in celebration of the annual feast day of the Irish race, St. Patrick's Day, which happens to fall today. I must confess, honourable senators, that this of all days is the one on which I should not be substituting for the honourable Leader of the house (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West). The honourable Leader of the house, as everyone knows, is an Irishman himself, and is at the present moment engaged in, shall I say, brandishing his shillelagh in Halifax.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That is quite a euphemism.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: He would be much more able to speak in reply to Senator Sullivan than I, who, as it happens, have no drop of Irish blood in my body.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: You poor fellow.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: This is an annual occasion in the Senate to which we have become accustomed over the years, when our colleagues of Irish blood draw this happy occasion to our notice, and we are very glad to have it happen every year.

There is, however, one matter which slightly puzzles me; it is that only the Irish race seizes upon such an occasion each year. We let St. George's Day go by and not a single one of us who are of English origin says a word. Saint-Jean Baptiste Day passes by, and we hear not a peep out of our French-speaking colleagues. Towards the end of the autumn St. Andrew's Day comes along, and not a Scotsman raises his voice. It is only the Irish on St. Patrick's Day who seize upon the occasion to tell us of their race. I wonder what the reason for that can be.

Hon. Harold Connolly: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of order. Is the honourable senator suggesting that it is only the Irish who have a right and a reason to pontificate on a day of this kind?

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: Oh, no. All I am saying is that the Irish are the only people who do it, and I am trying to determine in my own mind what the reason for it can be. The only reason that I can ascribe to it is that the Irish race really must have a deep-seated inferiority complex.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Shame, shame!

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: They try to work that off every year by this exhibition that we see. An inferiority complex is a painful thing, and I think we should all do our best to try to help our Irish colleagues out of this feeling of inferiority. I think I can say for all the rest of us that we can tell them without hesitation that we do not believe for a moment that any of them are worse than we are.

With those few words, honourable senators, I think we can all join in congratulating Senator Sullivan on his eloquent words and in celebrating the history and feats of the Irish race.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I did not intend to speak, but I am forced to my feet by the last few words of Senator Hugessen, who said he wanted to let his Irish associates know that he did not feel that they were any worse than he was.

An Hon. Senator: He did not put it that way.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: That is the way I heard him.

I am Irish. My grandparents came from the south of Ireland, and my grandmother used to tell me that there was good and bad in all the world, and bad and worse in Ireland—and I am proud of it.

Hon. Josie D. Quart: Honourable senators, after all those wonderful tributes to the feast of St. Patrick, my remarks may be superfluous. But what better time than St. Patrick's Day to toot the Irish horn and blow about the friendly relations which exist between Canadians of Irish extraction and the English, French, Scottish, Welsh and other ethnic groups of Canada? We like everybody —and that is not the "thin blarney" Senator Sullivan mentioned, nor have I kissed the Blarney Stone—but we like everybody, and I hope they like us.

As I am from Quebec, I should like to tell you that St. Patrick's Day in all parts of "La Belle Province" is celebrated with a gaiety and fervor unmatched in any other part of Canada. One old Irishman from the "old sod" observed recently that the feast of St. Patrick is observed in Quebec and Montreal better than in Ireland itself. The heart-warming highlight is the sight of our French Canadian friends wearing shamrocks and green ribbons in honour of the day. Indeed, rare it is that a French family cannot lay claim to an ancestor from the Emerald Isle. The Irish-French "bonne entente" stretches away back to the early days of Christianity, when monks from Ireland went to France to spread the gospel and establish monasteries there.

So much for the past: now for the present. This year another tangible proof of French-Irish Canadian friendship is the St. Lawrence College in Ste. Foy, Quebec, the erection of which was sponsored by our new cardinal, His Eminence Cardinal Maurice Roy.

With only 26 pupils enrolled as a start, St. Lawrence College opened its first class in 1958 at the Grand séminaire, Université Laval; but now, with its beautiful new building, it has over 300 pupils.

Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths are represented in its student body. The dream of St. Lawrence College became a reality through the generosity of the French, English, Scottish, Jewish and other ethnic groups, and will be a lasting monument to the friendly relations existing in Quebec towards the small so-called Irish community. That proves the statement I made at the beginning of my remarks, that everybody loves the Irish. So, as the song goes, "It's a great day for the Irish"—and looking across at Senator Connolly (Halifax North) one would think we were right in Killarney.

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

BILL TO AMEND CERTAIN ACTS—AUTHORITY TO PRINT COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

Hon. Paul H. Bouffard, Acting Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce presented the following report on Bill C-123 to amend certain acts administered in the Department of Insurance.

> Your committee recommends that authority be granted for the printing of 800 copies in English and 300 copies in French of its proceedings on the said bill.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Bouffard: With leave of the Senate, I move that the report be adopted now.

Report adopted.

COMMONWEALTH PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION

CONFERENCE AT KINGSTON, JAMAICA—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck rose pursuant to notice:

> That he will call the attention of the Senate to the 1964 General Conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary

Association held at Kingston, Jamaica, 16th to 22nd November, 1964, and in particular to the discussions and proceedings of the Conference and the participation therein of the delegation from Canada.

He said: Honourable senators, I am fortunate that the duty I am performing at the moment falls on St. Patrick's day. Everyone is in a rather gay and festive mood and kindness is shining from every face.

The duty to report is one that we owe to the people of Jamaica and to our own organization, the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

My first thought in speaking to what is called an inquiry in the Order Paper, is to express my warm appreciation for the generous hospitality extended to the Canadian and all other delegations by the Government and people of Jamaica.

Jamaica, as many honourable senators who have been there are well aware, is a lovely land, an ideal tourist resort. Its beauties and points of interest were displayed to us with great pains and no little skill, and with considerable expense, I can assure you.

The current chairman of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association was Mr. Donald Sangster, who is also the Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance of Jamaica.

His organization of the lavish entertainment of the delegates and arrangement of the details of the conference were simply magnificent. The generosity with which the government of Jamaica and the businessmen and the people of the island joined in all-out hospitality will never be forgotten by all who were the fortunate recipients.

Jamaica is an ideal vacationland for those who wish to leave for a time the invigorating chill of the Canadian winter for the summer warmth and brilliant sunshine of the Caribbean.

Canada is fortunate in this, that Jamaica is so easily reached. We have a direct flight from Toronto to Jamaica, in those marvellous new jet planes that seat 135 passengers, cost $6 million each to produce, travel at 500 miles per hour, and make the flight of some 2,000 miles from Canada to Jamaica in about five hours.

Jamaica is, indeed, a holiday land, and it entertains one and a quarter million tourists annually, who spend an estimated average of $40 million there each year. Tourism in Jamaica is a major industry.

In speaking of tourists, it is of importance to Canadian visitors to know of the Canadian High Commissioner, Mr. McInnes, who, with his brilliant wife and efficient staff, simply delights in assisting travellers from their native land of Canada. I knew Mr. McInnes many years ago when he was a reporter on the Toronto Globe. I found him to be most helpful and entertaining, and kind to myself and all the delegates from Canada.

For five days prior to the conference, the delegates were driven around the island to see the picturesque sights. We travelled in buses that shook the very life out of us, but we had a lovely time. There were two cavalcades of three or four buses each, and each group was preceded by police outrunners on motorcycles, with other motorcycles and a police car following. They cleared the roads ahead of us so that we had no traffic problems.

With each bus was an experienced liaison officer, and a guide who kept up a continuous oration over a public address system. He told us that the area of Jamaica was 4,400 square miles. In the great Clay Belt of our northern Ontario there are eight million acres of land. Compare that with about two million acres, and you will see that Jamaica is not large. The island is only 148 miles in length, and 24 miles wide at its narrowest point.

Through the centre of Jamaica, runs a range of mountains that divides the island into two sections. Several peaks are over 6,000 feet in height, and these mountains give character to the whole island, and, of course, account for twisting roads, hairpin bends, ups and downs and runabouts that make your head swim. In spite of all the difficulties of terrain, however, the Jamaican people boast of 6,000 miles of hard-surfaced roads in that little island.

The main crops in Jamaica are coconuts, bananas and sugar cane, with a growing industrialization of the cities and towns, and in the mining of bauxite.

The population of Jamaica is approximately 1,600,000, about equal to that of the City of Toronto. In that connection, one notes with some regret that over 10 per cent of the labour is unemployed although, by our standards, wages in Jamaica are extremely low. Of course, one must bear in mind that neither warm clothes nor heated homes are required in that climate. Nevertheless, the unemployment is distressing, with the unemployed gathering in the towns and cities, and in the sugar cane districts, where primitive agricultural conditions still persist. The sugar cane is reaped with the machete, a long knife, and is harvested as with the sickle, very much as in biblical times. Owners are not allowed to purchase or use labour-saving machinery in the harvesting of the sugar cane, because it is feared that automation might increase the already disastrous unemployment, and thus add to the abject poverty.

In the sugar cane country, the housing is as primitive as the agricultural methods. We passed large numbers of one-roomed shacks, which were positively shocking for human habitation. What interested me was not so much the size or the character of these dwellings, as the fact that no matter how lowly the habitation, the children emerged well dressed and clean, and the girls in little one-piece cotton dresses. I observed that there were no sores on the arms and legs of the children, and that their eyes showed no signs of trachoma. Sick children are hospitalized promptly and effectively, just as in Israel, in marked contrast to Asian countries.

The government is aware of the housing problem, and they are building quite a large number of small low-rental houses, but progress is slower than in Canada.

The housing and working conditions of the people showed a decided improvement as we travelled along the north shore, where the famous beaches are found, and where money spent by tourists stimulates the economy. Conditions are still further improved as one reaches the bauxite country.

We in Canada are directly interested in the bauxite industry in Jamaica. In the year 1942 a landowner named D'Costa sent a sample of earth to England for analysis, because he found it did not provide a satisfactory yield of corn. To his pleasant surprise the return showed 45 to 50 per cent bauxite content. At once the Government of Jamaica employed the Aluminum Laboratories of Canada to make an investigation and report. As a result of that discovery and what Canadians did in investigating and reporting, today there are three great companies mining bauxite in Jamaica, with a total investment of many millions of dollars.

Hon. Mr. Hugessen: One is the Aluminum Company of Canada.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Yes; I shall be speaking of that in a moment. These three companies pay to the Government of Jamaica £9 million in taxes and royalties per annum.

I should explain that bauxite is mined in open pits. Due to the volcanic condition of the island, the limestone base forms many small cups, into which nature has collected the aluminum-carrying soil. Then over centuries of seepage, that soil is concentrated into a high bauxite content. When the bauxite is mined from these depressions or cups, the government requires that the topsoil be laid aside and preserved and stored, and when the bauxite has been removed the topsoil is replaced. Thus, in its original state—or a good deal better, because it is fertilized when it is returned—the land is sold in two-acre farms to the local farmers.

Two-acre farms, as honourable senators will realize, are too small for mechanization. I have no doubt that in time these small farms will disappear, in favour of farms of larger areas. But at present that policy of the mining companies is creating an agricultural population well above the breadline and with a reliability that is present only where there is peasant proprietorship.

Other than the small farms that I have mentioned, Jamaica is a land of great estates, where the landless population is subject to the iron law of wages; that is, just enough to support life and maintain reproduction.

Those who have read Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire will remember the phrase, "Great estates ruined Rome." The yeomen disappeared in ancient Rome, and the fields were cultivated by gangs of slaves; but in Rome the great estates were largely exempt from taxation, while in Jamaica the bauxite companies pay, as I said, a gross of £9 million per year to the government of Jamaica. And in addition to that, they must meet the competition for intelligent workers of growing and vigorous industries in the towns. Industrial development is, therefore, the hope of the poverty stricken in Jamaica. It is the hope for an improved standard of living, together, I think, with the taxation of land values which is advocated by the opposition in the legislature.

We visited several new manufacturing plants, including a very modern cigarette factory and a newly-established Worcester porcelain plant where I learned the policy was a 40½-hour week and an eight-hour day. There was a basic wage of 19 cents per hour, a terribly low wage from the Canadian standpoint, but many piece workers—and those on the basic rate soon become piece workers —were making $14 per week which is still a low wage compared to Canadian standards. But bear in mind that underclothing and fur coats are unnecessary in Jamaica, and I did not hear any stories about executives giving mink coats to their secretaries. Also, the houses need neither insulation nor heating.

Then we visited the great bauxite plants. The Aluminum Company of Canada is a subsidiary of Kitimat of British Columbia. Alcan, as it is called for short, has invested in Jamaica in the order of $135 million, and its annual expenditure there is in the order of $21 million. It employs 2,000 Jamaicans and an additional 450 persons in agriculture. Under the managing director, Mr. J. H. Harwood, it is the only one of the three bauxite companies that processes its bauxite into aluminum. One-half of its 770,000-ton capacity it ships through the Panama Canal to the parent company in British Columbia where, as you know, with abundant electrical power, it is converted into aluminum metal for commercial purposes.

The Reynolds Jamaica Mines Limited is the largest of the three bauxite producers. It too ships a portion of its 200-million ton production to Kitimat. Reynolds, in common with the other bauxite companies, claims reserve of bauxite sufficient to maintain production at its present rate for the next 100 years. With the return of the topsoil, Reynolds claims that it is putting more into the ground than it is taking out. It has a huge acreage under cultivation with modern machinery, a herd of 15,000 cattle, and employs 715 persons at wages considerably above the going rate in Jamaica.

I was interested in the company's medical clinic, where they serve the employees and their families with modern scientific standards and equipment. I read with some interest, I can assure you, the schedule of their fees. They will cut off a leg for $2 and fill a tooth for 70 cents. I do wish the dentists of Canada would take note.

The Kaiser Bauxite Company is the largest landowner in Jamaica, having acquired no less than 47,000 acres of Jamaica's land. In the course of its operations it found it necessary to displace many of the local inhabitants, but where the topsoil is replaced the people are re-established on these small farms to which I have referred at almost nominal prices.

In addition, the Kaiser Bauxite Company purchased estate lands in very considerable acreages, subdivided it into these little farms and sold them at almost nominal prices to actual dirt farmers. The result is greatly improved social conditions. The houses, though small, are not mean and miserable, as they are in some other parts of the island, and nearly all of them have vegetable gardens, as is not the case in the sugar plantation areas. The company has a great herd of cattle, and is planting trees for future timber by the hundreds of thousands.

The company contributed generously to the newly-established technical school where several hundred students are acquiring practical secondary education. I was told by a young teacher from Canada, teaching there under our foreign aid plan, that many students in their school were greatly handicapped by a lack of a primary education. Some have to be taught even to read and write.

Education is probably the major problem in Jamaica. Not more than 70 per cent of the children attend school, and the excuse is the shortage of schools and of teachers. That is the excuse given for the lack of any compulsory attendance law.

The Kaiser company has an investment in Jamaica of some $45 million U.S., pays over $4 million in income tax and over $1 million in royalties.

That is, I think, a short but rather comprehensive review of the industry of Jamaica. We Canadians are very much interested in the condition of the Jamaican people. Jamaica was a British colony, as we once were, and has recently acquired its independence. Jamaicans are very proud of their flag, their national anthem and the national spirit of their people.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: Did you go down the Rio Grande on the bamboo rafts?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: No, because when we arrived at that point of the island it was pouring rain.

With regard to the conference itself, it is practically impossible to give a comprehensive report of what took place. There were 170 delegates representing over 70 countries, all within the British Commonwealth of Nations. The conference was opened by the Governor and the Prime Minister, with military splendour and a most impressive ceremony. The whole world was there with the exception only of South Africa, South America and countries behind the Iron Curtain. There were large delegations from the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, India, Pakistan, and Ceylon. The new Africa states were represented and were very aggressive. The United States sent three senators, who spoke to us as associate members. Canada sent seven Members of Parliament. The honourable Senator Allister Grosart and I also attended, I as special guest of the Government of Jamaica, and he as one of the delegates. Seven of us in all represented the federal Government, and all the provinces were also represented.

Fortunately, Canada was represented on this occasion by a very strong delegation, high in debating ability. I say "fortunately" because when people are giving money away, either privately or as a nation, it is never enough. On several occasions I was asked why rich Canada did not help its less fortunate neighbours. Several barbed arrows whizzed by at the conference, and finally a Jamaican cabinet minister made a direct attack upon Canada and what he termed our "lack of generosity." As all honourable senators know, Canada contributes very generously to peacekeeping operations, trade and aid, and much money is spent, but I am sorry to say that this is done without much publicity. It is not well publicized even in our own country, much less abroad.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Did you ascertain how much of our total contribution goes there?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Yes, but I shall leave that to my friend the Honourable Senator

Grosart to deal with because he knows that story well and has made good use of his knowledge.

It is difficult to deal effectively with the problem of foreign aid. A very thorough study is necessary even to have a general idea of its extent, or to discuss it in detail. Fortunately, however, my honourable colleague to whom I have just referred had made a close study of this particular subject, and he seized the platform at the right moment and delivered so masterly an address, and so effective was his answer to the criticisms, that the chairman, a man from New Zealand, forgot about the 10-minute time limit, and Senator Grosart spoke for half an hour and, as far as I am aware, he was the only one allowed to do so during the entire conference.

It was one of the most outstanding contributions in the whole convention. There was only one other speech that compared with it, and that was delivered by my old friend Lord Morrison from England, the news of whose death in the last few weeks saddened all those who knew him. There were many excellent addresses by other Canadians, and I can assure you, honourable senators, that they knew the Canadians were there.

The importance of these Commonwealth Parliamentary Association conferences can hardly be overrated. Our experience in Jamaica, as indeed at other times and places, should teach us to select our strongest and most thoughtful debaters and parliamentarians to represent Canada on all future occasions of this kind.

Now, honourable senators, if you will permit me, I shall close by extending greetings to our little sister Jamaica—they like to be called Canada's little sister—and with good wishes for the future progress and well-being of that little island.

Further, with your permission, honourable senators, may I put on Hansard the names, first, of our own federal delegates, and then of those representing the provinces who were present on that occasion.

> List of Canadian (Federal) Branch Representatives: Mr. Jean T. Richard, M.P., Leader of the Delegation and Canadian Branch Representative on the General Council; Senator A. W. Roebuck, Special Guest of Conference Chairman, Hon. Donald Sangster; Senator Allister Grosart; Mr. James E. Walker, M.P.; Mr. Alfred D. Hales, M.P.; Mr. Herbert (Bert) W. Herridge, M.P.; Mr. Alexander Bell Patterson, M.P.; Mr. Robert Beaulé, M.P., and Mr. T. R. Montgomery, Secretary.
>
> List of Canadian Provincial Delegates: Alberta: Hon. H. E. Strom, M.L.A., Minister of Agriculture, and representative of Provincial Delegates on General Councils; British Columbia: Mr. W. M. Skillings, M.L.A.; Manitoba: Hon. Gurney Evans, M.L.A., Minister of Industry and Commerce; New Brunswick: Mr. Claude Savoie, M.L.A.; Newfoundland: Hon. G. W. Clarke, M.H.A., Speaker of the House of Assembly; Nova Scotia: Hon. S. T. Pyke, M.L.A., Minister of Highways and Minister of Public Works; Ontario: Hon. D. H. Morrow, M.P.P., Speaker of the Legislative Assembly; Prince Edward Island: Mr. A. W. Matheson, Q.C., M.L.A., Leader of the Opposition; Quebec: Mr. F. Boulais, M.P.P.; Saskatchewan: Hon. J. E. Snedker, M.L.A., Speaker-designate of the Legislative Assembly, and Mr. C. B. Koester, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, and Secretary to the Canadian Provincial Delegations.

Hon. J. Campbell Haig: Honourable senators, we have listened with considerable interest to Senator Roebuck's dissertation on the Jamaican Conference. I think it worthwhile at this time to advise the house of what is going to happen in the next three or four years in connection with the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

In 1963, at Kuala Lumpur in Malaysia, it was announced where the next four conferences were to be held, by agreement of the General Council. At that time it was decided that the 1964 conference would be held in Jamaica, and that the Jamaica branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association would be the host on that occasion. In 1965 the host country would be New Zealand, and in 1966 Northern Ireland. In 1967 the conference was to be held in Canada.

However, since that time, certain complications have developed, and it was indicated to the General Council, which sits in London, that a readjustment of these dates would be necessary. So with the consent of the Northern Ireland and Ottawa branches of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, the 1965 conference will be held in New Zealand, and the 1966 conference will be held in Canada. Therefore, we will not have the association conference in Canada in our centennial year.

This was decided upon a week or so ago when Mr. Vanderfelt, the secretary-general of the association, was here in Ottawa, and Mr. Richard, one of the members of Parliament for Ottawa, is now in London, England, talking with the officials of the General Council and discussing the agenda for the 1966 meeting. Mr. Montgomery, the former Clerk Assistant of the House of Commons, is going over to arrange certain details of the program of the conference when it is held in Canada. A committee of the Ottawa branch has been set up to make plans for the special sessions and other sessions of which we have heard so much today, because time is short and it takes from six to nine months to get such a conference set up. There are many, many details to be arranged, not only the business conferences, but also the social events and where the visitors will go.

Having listened to this excellent report on the Jamaica conference, and knowing how we wish to hear from Senator Grosart, I considered that at this time I should intimate that Canada was to be the host country for 1966.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I wonder if I could ask a question with regard to what my friend has just said. Do I understand Northern Ireland will be the host for 1967 instead of Canada?

Hon. Mr. Haig: I did not indicate that, and I would prefer not to answer that question where it will appear in Hansard. As I indicated earlier, certain complications developed, and that is why Canada has taken over the duties as host country for 1966.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, in a moment, with the previous concurrence of the Leader of the Government, I intend to ask you to accept a motion to adjourn the debate. Before doing so, however, I wish to make two or three brief comments.

First of all, I congratulate Senator Roebuck on his excellent speech on the subject of the motion. He has displayed once again to us all his keen powers of observation, and his abiding life-long interest in the social problems of all peoples.

I must say too that his references to myself were extravagant and certainly over-generous. The fact of the matter is, honourable senators, that the outstanding figure at this conference was Senator Roebuck—and I am not saying that merely to reciprocate his kind words about myself.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: He was there in a very special role as the guest of the Government of Jamaica and of the conference, in honour of the great work he has done over the years to develop the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association into the great and effective body for world peace it is today. He was chairman of the first meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Ottawa when it was reconstituted on its present basis.

Everywhere we went about the island and the conference halls we heard references not only to his work in the initial stages of the association, but of his continuing and effective guidance of its affairs over the years.

Apart from that, his contribution to this particular conference was a very great one. He was the chairman of several of the meetings, and on one occasion that I well remember he achieved what very few people I know could have achieved. He brought to a satisfactory conclusion a very acrimonious dispute between India and Pakistan. Everywhere there were comments and high praise for his very skilful handling of one of the two very delicate situations that arose during the conference.

As Senator Roebuck's notice is before the Senate on this particular day, it also gives me an opportunity to correct an error of omission that I made a year ago today in this chamber. At that time I referred to the Irish blood in the veins of some of my distinguished colleagues, but somehow or other I forgot to mention Senator Roebuck in that connection. Privately, and very properly, he was quick to correct me. I can only say I was well aware of the distinction of the English blood that flows in his veins—blood which is renowned in the social, intellectual and political history of Great Britain—but I am glad on this occasion and this day to acknowledge that Senator Roebuck comes by his charm, his silver tongue and his secret of eternal youth, as honestly as any man can come by those qualities, that is, by allowing us to attribute them to the Irish blood in his veins.

Honourable senators, my second comment will be brief. Today is St. Patrick's Day, and I believe I have the honour of being the only member of the Parliament of Canada who has the good fortune of being born in Ireland. I am a Canadian by choice, and an Irishman by birth. I feel it is my duty to convey to you, as I did to some of our colleagues at a luncheon an hour or so ago, the compliments of all good Irishmen on this day, and their condolences that so few had the good fortune of being born in the Emerald Isle, and congratulations that you have all made the marvellous success of life that you have in spite of that unfortunate accident of birth.

Perhaps I can add a bit of Irish consolation to any of my colleagues who may be disturbed and dismayed by the conflicts and frictions that seem to be about us today in Canada. This is the true story of an American who was dining in a Cork hotel during the great troubles in Ireland after 1922 and 1923. While he was dining he heard shots and bombs bursting around him, and he said to the waiter: "This is a terrible war you are having here." The waiter replied: "Yes, sir, as you say, it is a terrible war, but it is better than no war at all."

I wish you all the compliments of the day, and I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Grosart, debate adjourned.

DIVORCE

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of Resolutions numbered 706 to 809, inclusive, which were presented yesterday.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, moved the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolution 706, for the relief of Angela Claire Hartridge Matz.

Resolution 707, for the relief of Jean-Guy O'Brien.

Resolution 708, for the relief of Harold Clarke Sweet.

Resolution 709, for the relief of Maurice Paquette.

Resolution 710, for the relief of Florence Christina McWilliams Hughes.

Resolution 711, for the relief of Agnes Dunski Kuehne.

Resolution 712, for the relief of Gaetan Lefebvre.

Resolution 713, for the relief of Nancy Joan Thomas Le Tual.

Resolution 714, for the relief of Evelyn Deziel Griffith.

Resolution 715, for the relief of Rolanda Kursner Wyllie.

Resolution 716, for the relief of Marie Jeanne Marcelle des Rivieres Houde.

Resolution 717, for the relief of Dorothy Barbara Marchant McLagan.

Resolution 718, for the relief of Edith Mary Seymour-Higgins Thom.

Resolution 719, for the relief of Joseph Alphonse Lagace.

Resolution 720, for the relief of Lloyd Elliot Imhoff.

Resolution 721, for the relief of Noreen Linda Alguire Shirley.

Resolution 722, for the relief of Dorothy Ann Dixon MacArthur.

Resolution 723, for the relief of Ruth Aurelia Kleinerman Miller.

Resolution 724, for the relief of Margaret Ann Parker MacDonald.

Resolution 725, for the relief of Clarissa Grun Damant.

Resolution 726, for the relief of Mary Elizabeth Lindsey Sakellariou.

Resolution 727, for the relief of George Edward McNamee.

Resolution 728, for the relief of Abraham Leo Bronstein.

Resolution 729, for the relief of June Rosemary Brook Doty.

Resolution 730, for the relief of James Patrick Cannon.

Resolution 731, for the relief of Pauline Elkin Fruitman.

Resolution 732, for the relief of Rolland Belanger, otherwise known as Rolland Bergeron.

Resolution 733, for the relief of Micheline Drouin Martineau.

Resolution 734, for the relief of Audrey May Landers Groom.

Resolution 735, for the relief of Ingrid Erna Adele Boehm Bork.

Resolution 736, for the relief of Dorothy Elizabeth Chan Frigault.

Resolution 737, for the relief of Evaristo Cruz Iglesias.

Resolution 738, for the relief of Edith Mary Ann Thyer White.

Resolution 739, for the relief of Robert Pronce.

Resolution 740, for the relief of Nicholas Kotar.

Resolution 741, for the relief of Francoise Cholette Perusse.

Resolution 742, for the relief of Muriel Edna Stevens Pinsoneault.

Resolution 743, for the relief of Secundina (Secondina) Michetti Warren.

Resolution 744, for the relief of Clifford Robert Winter.

Resolution 745, for the relief of Brenda Ann Lawrence Zetchus.

Resolution 746, for the relief of Merrily Rose Weisbord Kachanoff.

Resolution 747, for the relief of Gerard Viau.

Resolution 748, for the relief of Gerard Oscar Lanthier.

Resolution 749, for the relief of Lucia Tweedie Kowaluk.

Resolution 750, for the relief of Joseph David Roma Beriault.

Resolution 751, for the relief of Diana Fellen Harris.

Resolution 752, for the relief of Guy Massicotte.

Resolution 753, for the relief of Roma Tetreault.

Resolution 754, for the relief of Micheline Guernon Leveillee.

Resolution 755, for the relief of Joseph Roger Lucas.

Resolution 756, for the relief of Francine Geoffrion Bilodeau.

Resolution 757, for the relief of Marie Cecile Reina Fleurette Constantin Bissonnette.

Resolution 758, for the relief of Marcelle Yvonne Rigaud Schembre.

Resolution 759, for the relief of Armande Harel Paquette.

Resolution 760, for the relief of Joseph Germain Jacques Francois Barcelo.

Resolution 761, for the relief of Gladys Beatrice Wooland Bernard.

Resolution 762, for the relief of Ingrid Lucy Kliem Raymond.

Resolution 763, for the relief of Ann Viola Woodward Anderson.

Resolution 764, for the relief of Teresa Di Nardo Beliveau.

Resolution 765, for the relief of Dorothy Silverstein Segal.

Resolution 766, for the relief of Marion Marguerite Duncan Hesler.

Resolution 767, for the relief of Joseph Mabo.

Resolution 768, for the relief of Marga Pfrommer Blattner.

Resolution 769, for the relief of Christiane Herregods Le Marie.

Resolution 770, for the relief of Donald William Morrow.

Resolution 771, for the relief of Mortimer Joseph Garelick.

Resolution 772, for the relief of Ruth Cohen Richer.

Resolution 773, for the relief of Karol Frank Bisok.

Resolution 774, for the relief of Johanna Geertruida Maria Emons Blom.

Resolution 775, for the relief of Charlotte Picard Ratcliffe.

Resolution 776, for the relief of Charles Wall.

Resolution 777, for the relief of Oakland John George Rennie.

Resolution 778, for the relief of Maria Teresa Bonaccorsi Prioreschi.

Resolution 779, for the relief of Gertrude Elizabeth Manning Saunderson.

Resolution 780, for the relief of Mirjam Sole Batasonsky.

Resolution 781, for the relief of Gilles McNicoll.

Resolution 782, for the relief of Sidney Cutler.

Resolution 783, for the relief of George Johann Kreuzer.

Resolution 784, for the relief of Susan Furth Muller.

Resolution 785, for the relief of Colette Verreault Vaillancourt.

Resolution 786, for the relief of Dorothy (Dorothee) Begin Desjardins.

Resolution 787, for the relief of Marcel Braitstein.

Resolution 788, for the relief of Doris Fern Long Chapman, otherwise known as Doris Fern Long Kenny.

Resolution 789, for the relief of Marie Ruth Ernestine DesRosiers Frye.

Resolution 790, for the relief of Sabina Zakrzewska Oboruns.

Resolution 791, for the relief of Oscar Ernest Mauskopf.

Resolution 792, for the relief of Veronica Dunski Gorman.

Resolution 793, for the relief of Louis Georges Grenier.

Resolution 794, for the relief of Gladys Mary Watmore Corey.

Resolution 795, for the relief of Virginia Isabel Baker Douglas.

Resolution 796, for the relief of Alice Drover Gray.

Resolution 797, for the relief of Roland Joseph Fernand Paquette.

Resolution 798, for the relief of Beverly Ann Widgington O'Connor.

Resolution 799, for the relief of Juliana Zichy Penney.

Resolution 800, for the relief of Marie Germaine (Ruth) Nicole Morency Yarosky.

Resolution 801, for the relief of Bernard Charles Thillaye.

Resolution 802, for the relief of Douglas Norman Seaban.

Resolution 803, for the relief of Michael Zajdel.

Resolution 804, for the relief of Bernice Ann Meikle Walters.

Resolution 805, for the relief of Gwendoline Vining Blott Paxton.

Resolution 806, for the relief of Madeline Edith L'Ecuyer Burdon.

Resolution 807, for the relief of Robert David Elder.

Resolution 808, for the relief of Gisela Elizabeth Eichmann Bragard.

Resolution 809, for the relief for Kathleen Linda Maslin Dutton.

Resolutions adopted, on division.

INCOME TAX CONVENTION ACT

BILL TO IMPLEMENT A CONVENTION BETWEEN CANADA AND JAPAN AND TO AMEND AGREEMENTS WITH CERTAIN OTHER COUNTRIES—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, March 10, the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Hayden for second reading of Bill C-146, to implement a convention between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax and to amend the existing agreement and conventions between Canada and Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, with respect to income tax.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, I am sure you all realize in what a difficult position I am, in having to speak on this day and at this time on such a commonplace subject as that of income tax, which is really what this bill is concerned with. Before doing so I hope I may be pardoned if I make a few remarks on the subjects that have been discussed this afternoon.

The honourable acting Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Hugessen) mentioned the fact that he had not a drop of Irish blood in his veins and, of course, everyone commiserated with him. I am proud to say that I have many drops of Irish blood in my veins. My mother's people were Irish, and my grandfather was Patrick Kelly from Cork—nobody could be more Irish than that. Because of these facts I would like to add my own comments on this great day. I can assure you than anyone who has an Irish mother has great reason for being proud and for loving the old sod, Ireland.

This afternoon I listened to my good friend, Senator Sullivan, who is always so very eloquent and easy to listen to, no matter on what subject he is speaking, but and particularly when his subject is St. Patrick's Day and Ireland. I was telling him not so long ago that a friend of mine once asked me, "What is Senator Sullivan's nationality?" I replied, "What do you suppose is the nationality of a man with a name like 'Sullivan', with the map of Ireland written all over his face, and with the wit and eloquence he displays in public debate? What else can he be but an Irishman?"

It also occurred to me that if we had not so abruptly ended the debate on the Labour Code (Standards) Bill last evening, it would have been a good idea to have moved another amendment to the effect that St. Patrick's Day be one of the great national holidays of Canada, and that anybody who had to work on such a glorious day would be paid three or four times the regular wage. I did not have that opportunity, but I am very proud indeed to make these few remarks as half an Irishman.

This afternoon I have listened also to Senator Roebuck and Senator Grosart giving their reports on their trip to the West Indies. I do not think either one of them need apologize. I heard, not from them but from other sources, of the splendid work that was done by our delegation. It was, I was told, the best delegation present, and that its outstanding members were Senator Roebuck and Senator Grosart. I can believe this very well, and I am sure that Canada has every reason for being proud of its delegation.

Honourable senators, I am going to take but a few minutes this afternoon to discuss what is an important bill, although it did not receive very much attention in the other place. As a matter of fact, I think it was given three readings in the short space of five or ten minutes. It is an important bill. I listened closely to the sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Hayden) the other day. As usual, we all enjoyed his remarks. I am sure that, by the time he had concluded, we had a thorough knowledge of the contents of the bill.

As the title of the bill indicates, its purpose is "to implement a convention between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax and to amend the existing agreement and conventions between Canada and Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, with respect to income tax." We learn that the purpose of the bill is to implement one new income tax convention, that is, with Japan, and to amend the existing income tax conventions with Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands.

In substance, this bill is similar to more than a dozen bills dealing with tax agreements between Canada and other countries, which have been approved by Parliament since 1942. We are all familiar with those bills.

There are some changes in form, to which attention has been drawn by the sponsor of the bill, so I will say nothing in that regard.

Honourable senators will recall that, when this debate was adjourned on Wednesday last, a discussion had arisen between two of our distinguished senators, two very distinguished legal men, one the former Attorney General of Ontario, Senator Roebuck, the other an outstanding constitutional lawyer from Montreal, the acting Leader of the Senate today (Hon. Mr. Hugessen). That discussion related to whether this bill should become part of the tax law of Canada, as have previous bills of a similar nature. I will not undertake to carry on the arguments advanced by those senators. We can see strong arguments on both sides. The reasons they advanced have been advanced on many occasions when similar bills were before the Senate.

However, we accept the opinion of the sponsor of the bill that, if there is any inconsistency between this bill and the provisions of any other law of Canada, the provisions of this particular bill shall govern. I believe that principle has been well understood for many years. It is a principle which has been accepted and followed generally in practice ever since 1942. The sponsor of the bill, as usual, gave a clear and full explanation of its general principles, as well as of particular sections such as reservations regarding the definition of "resident" and of "permanent estate".

As in the case of similar bills passed previously, we cannot make changes; we must either pass the bill in toto or refuse to pass it. This was emphasized by the sponsor.

The terms of the bill have already been agreed on before the bill came to us and those terms were signed by the governments concerned. No doubt they were carefully studied at that time.

I would like here to make one criticism, which has been made on several occasions. Many bills come to us without explanatory remarks. In this bill there are blank pages on the right, from beginning to end. There should be explanations to assist honourable senators, and particularly laymen, to understand the bill. Some departments pay particular attention to explaining bills, but other departments seem to give this no attention at all.

There are two parts to this bill. Part I concerns the new convention between Canada and Japan regarding taxation. The convention, which is set out in Schedule 1, follows the general pattern of income tax conventions which Canada had entered into with 12 other countries, making due allowance for changes to suit varying circumstances and conditions.

The main purpose of the convention is to prevent double taxation, or to reduce taxation so as to enhance business and cultural relations between the two countries. I would like to emphasize that its purpose is to enhance business and cultural relations. This is not stated in the bill but, in explaining it in the other place the minister emphasized that point.

The convention contains articles similar to the 1963 draft double taxation convention on income and capital recommended by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, of which both Canada and Japan are members.

The provisions of outstanding interest are those which restrict the rate of withholding tax on dividends, interest or royalties paid by a resident of one country to a resident of the other, to a maximum of 15 per cent. This is a reduction from the 20 per cent rate normally imposed by Japan and, as stated by the sponsor, it is a concession. In return, Canada has bound itself, for the term of the convention, to the rate of 15 per cent imposed by our Income Tax Act.

Honourable senators, without going into details, I should like to comment on the idea of "reducing taxation so as to enhance business and promote cultural relations" between the two countries. That this is being done I have not the slightest doubt. That more should be done has been obvious for some time. Japan, after her tremendous setback following the Second World War, is now well on the road to recovery. To her great credit, let it be said she has become again one of the great trading nations of the world, and certainly one to be reckoned with.

I should like to call your attention to our trading relations with Japan in recent years, to show the enormous improvement there has been and to give some idea of the amount of trade we have with that country now, and which can be increased in the future.

In 1956 our exports to Japan amounted to $127 million; our imports from Japan were $60 million. We exported to Japan over twice as much as we imported from Japan; and we had a favourable balance of $67 million. In 1961, our exports to Japan were $232,-420,000 and our imports were $116 million, again showing a ratio of two to one, and giving us a favourable balance that year of $115,813,000. The figures were somewhat similar in other years, and I shall not worry honourable senators by giving the list. It is sufficient to say that the ratio of two to one continued.

The largest exports from Canada to Japan of course were wheat, flax seed, lumber, soft woods, scrap iron, raw materials, non-manufactured goods. The chief imports were apparel and accessories, electrical apparatus, radio receivers, transistor radios and other items.

To show how energetic these people are, I bought this little shamrock, with a little pipe on it, which you see in my coat lapel. The shamrock is certainly Irish, but written on the little pipe is, "Made in Japan." Thousands and thousands of flags are coming to us from Japan at the present time. I commend these people for their energy. They are prepared to manufacture anything they can possibly sell to other nations. In fact, it is necessary for them to do so.

In this connection, I do not think it would be out of place to mention the fact that Japan, like Great Britain, has a large deficit trade balance with Canada. In fact, Great Britain's deficit for 1964 was $632 million. Together, Japan and Great Britain have a deficit of nearly $800 million. Compared with the United States, for instance, we find that in 1964 the U.S. surplus of nearly $900,000,000 exceeded the combined deficits of Japan and Great Britain. In other words, Japan and Great Britain are, so to speak, paying the deficit that we have with the United States. Those figures refer to merchandise transactions. If we include non-merchandise transactions, Canada had a deficit with the United States of $1,659,000,000 in 1964.

Honourable senators, I do not know how it appears to you, but it seems to me that it is not fair that Japan and Great Britain—and I could also mention other countries—should have such tremendous deficits in trade with Canada, and that the United States should have such a large surplus.

I am not, of course, opposed to trade with the United States. I am strongly in favour of it. She is our great neighbour, and it is only natural that our trade with her should be greater than with other countries. However, I feel that we could buy many things from other countries to wipe out their large deficits, and I do not see any reason why we should, as it were, put all our eggs in one basket, as we seem to be doing as far as the United States is concerned. I do not believe that that is good for trade or for the general economy of this country.

It is good to hear that Japan has had a splendid increase in her trade since World War II. Her trade with Canada is increasing from day to day. I noticed in the newspaper the other day that on the west coast, for instance, Japan is buying vast areas of timber, that she is going into the pulp and paper business, and also that she is investing heavily in other business enterprises in this country.

I am sure that honourable senators from Nova Scotia—and particularly Senator Macdonald from Cape Breton—will be pleased to know that Japanese automobiles are soon to be built in Nova Scotia. That will mean a great deal to the economy of that part of Canada. I understand also that the initial employment will be in the neighbourhood of 500 men, which may be increased to one or two thousand.

Honourable senators, my main purpose in speaking to this bill was to point out the fact that our trade with Japan is increasing, but that I feel it should be increased to a larger extent.

I do not know how much revenue there might be from Canadian investments in Japan, but I would imagine it would be small. Perhaps the honourable sponsor of the bill (Hon. Mr. Hayden) would know. However, I do not think we have extensive investments in Japan. On the other hand, that country is increasing her investments in Canada, and I can see the need of a bill of this kind.

Hon. Mr. Reid: What stand would we take if Japan should want to export labour to this country?

Hon. Mr. Brooks: She is not sending labour here.

Hon. Mr. Reid: But she might. She did so to British Columbia before the war.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: I understand that in the factory in Nova Scotia all Canadian labour will be employed, and also that 50 per cent of the material used in manufacturing the cars, parts and so on, are to be produced in Canada. That is what I understand from the report I read.

Hon. Mr. Isnor: We are very happy about it.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: I have nothing further to say on that.

Part II of the bill, which has been explained, deals with the three supplementary conventions. The main change in all these conventions is the replacement of the provision that restricts the right of withholding tax on dividends paid to nonresidents by wholly-owned subsidiaries to a maximum of 5 per cent, or 2½ per cent in the case of the Canada-Netherlands Convention, by a provision that restricts the rate to a maximum of 15 per cent. This change was requested by Canada, as I understand it, and carries out the proposal first made in the so-called "baby budget" of December 20, 1960, and reiterated in the budgets of 1963 and 1964. In the case of the Canada-Netherlands Convention, there are two exceptions to this general rule.

The act provides that all of these supplementary conventions will come into force on the date of ratification and will take effect from the first day of January 1965.

In this bill a new procedure was adopted by giving approval to four conventions in one bill. Previously, there was a single bill, as was mentioned by the sponsor of the bill a few days ago.

Another change is that the act comes into force by royal assent. That is a new procedure, giving force of law for the periods called for by their terms. The proclamation will be published in the Canada Gazette giving notice of the day the convention comes into force.

Honourable senators, I have not undertaken to analyze or discuss this bill in detail. It is, in fact, a part of our tax legislation, and I am sure that the taxing officers of the Department of National Revenue and the businesses affected, or their legal representatives, will have no difficulty in understanding it. That was the opinion expressed by the sponsor the other day, and I fully concur in it.

I am pleased that Japan is now one of the countries with which it has become necessary to have such legislation. It was to emphasize this that I made these few brief remarks.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Hayden moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, March 18, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that he had received the following communication:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
Ottawa

18th March 1965

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Hon. Robert Taschereau, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, acting as Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 18th March, at 5.45 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain Bills.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
A. G. Cherrier
Assistant Secretary
to the Governor General.

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of the Department of Public Works for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 34 of the Public Works Act, chapter 228, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report of the Department of External Affairs for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 6 of the Department of External Affairs Act, chapter 68, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Exchange of correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premiers of the Provinces, with respect to contracting-out arrangements for conditional grant and shared-cost program, during the period August 15 to September 9, 1964. (English and French texts).

Report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, intituled: "Private and Public Investment in Canada—Outlook 1965—and Regional Estimates." (English and French texts).

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

BILL TO AMEND CERTAIN ACTS—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Hon. Paul H. Bouffard, Acting Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-123, to amend certain acts administered in the Department of Insurance, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

Report adopted.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Daniel A. Lang: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS FINANCING AND GUARANTEE BILL, 1964

FURTHER REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Hon. A. K. Hugessen, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, reported that the committee had further considered Bill C-137, to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways System for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railway Company, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

Report adopted.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Eric Cook: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move, with leave of the Senate, that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, March 23, 1965, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

INCOME TAX CONVENTION ACT

BILL TO IMPLEMENT A CONVENTION BETWEEN CANADA AND JAPAN AND TO AMEND AGREEMENTS WITH CERTAIN OTHER COUNTRIES—THIRD READING

Hon. Salter A. Hayden moved the third reading of Bill C-146, to implement a convention between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax and to amend the existing agreement and conventions between Canada and Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, with respect to income tax.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

COMMONWEALTH PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION

CONFERENCE AT KINGSTON, JAMAICA—DEBATE CONCLUDED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the adjourned debate on the notice of the honourable Senator Roebuck that he will call the attention of the Senate to the 1964 General Conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association held at Kingston, Jamaica, 16th to 22nd November, 1964, and in particular to the discussions and proceedings of the conference and the participation therein of the delegation from Canada.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I appreciate this opportunity offered by Senator Roebuck's notice to bring you a report on the discharge of my responsibilities as one of the delegates of this chamber to the last annual meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, held in Jamaica.

Senator Roebuck has told you the Canadian delegation was composed of seven representatives of the federal Parliament and one representative each from the provincial legislatures. This is because the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association is not an association of nations as such, but an association of the parliaments of the Commonwealth.

I would agree with the honourable senator that it appeared to be a strong delegation. So we were told, on many occasions. There are several reasons for that. The first is that we were thoroughly briefed. I know from experience that this has not been the custom on every occasion on which we have sent delegates abroad. On this occasion, we had an excellent briefing. We met with officials of the External Aid Office, of the Department of Trade and Commerce, and of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration. We were warned of the problems which might be brought before us and we were given the answers.

Secondly, saving myself, I would say that the calibre of the Canadian representatives was more than adequate for the responsibilities with which they were charged.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Eliminate the "saving".

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Saving grace.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: It is a saving grace for which I have not always been noted.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am sure you had the grace—never mind the saving.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: In the third place, we worked as a team. Despite the fact that the provincial representatives were quartered in another hotel, we met together and we planned our participation in the program, with the full co-operation of the leader of the delegation, Mr. Jean Richard, M.P., and with Mr. James Walker, M.P., the chief Liberal Whip in the other place.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: And Mr. Montgomery.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: Yes, thank you, Senator Roebuck. I had intended to mention that. Mr. Montgomery, then Clerk Assistant in the other place was, and still is, the Secretary of the Canadian delegations to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. He is an old hand and a real professional. Without him we certainly would have been less effective than we were. I am told this was the first time a delegation of that size from Canada ran up this record, that every single one of the delegates spoke on a subject which had been assigned to him by the leader of the delegation, and from material brought from Canada and supplied as liberally as we wanted.

An indication of the kind of team work might be obtained from the fact that, when one or two other delegations showed their internal partisanship rather blatantly, the late Lord Morrison came across to where we were sitting and said, "The trouble with you Canadian chaps is that none of us can tell what party you belong to." Perhaps it is some kind of phenomenon when experienced politicians from beyond our borders are unable to tell a Canadian Conservative from a Canadian Créditiste.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: You were beyond our borders.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Would you like to say a little more about that?

Hon. Mr. Grosart: The honourable Leader of the Opposition (Hon. Mr. Brooks) says that was because we were beyond our own borders. That is quite right. We all felt that our standard of behaviour away from home should be much better than it would otherwise be.

One special feature of our activities was a pre-conference tour, lasting for about a week, to that very interesting ring of islands on the east of the Caribbean, actually between the Caribbean Sea itself and the Atlantic. These visits were arranged, I am told, for the purpose of acquainting some of us with the problems of that group of islands which, in the not-too-distant future may become the third independent sovereign Commonwealth nation in the Caribbean. I say "which may," because at the present moment the group, known sometimes as the "Little Seven" or the "Little Eight," are trying to get together. They have had a number of conferences. Their problems are great for many reasons.

Naturally, the United Kingdom, in keeping with its broad policy of promoting freedom and independence among nations, is doing everything it can to assist. Without going into details, I happen to know that Canadian officials there and here are giving all the help they can.

I wholeheartedly agree with Senator Roebuck's enthusiasm for the arrangements that were made for this conference. I would say they were superb. Our hosts in Jamaica outdid themselves. I think we were all impressed with the calibre of the bright young men who were assigned to us, and with the fact that these new nations, not only the Caribbean, but elsewhere, are able to draw upon a cadre of young men who have passed through the universities of this continent and also the English universities, who have trained themselves in administrative schools, who have experience of practical government, and who have the enthusiasm that is so noticeable among those who are starting to build a new nation.

As to the welcome we received there, I can only say this, honourable senators, that no man or woman anywhere in the world can have a better open sesame to the hearts of the people of the British Caribbean islands—and I say "British" in the best sense of that word—than a Canadian passport. A great deal of the credit for this goes to the Canadian businessmen who, over the years, have gone to that area. Everywhere you go you find Canadian commercial institutions, Canadian banks. From the contacts I had—and they were many—I would say that our Canadian businessmen have also been first-class diplomats and first-class ambassadors of good will for Canada.

It speaks well, too, for our own officials. Often they are given scant credit for what they are doing for Canada. I refer particularly to the officials of the Department of External Affairs, the External Aid Office, the Department of Trade and Commerce—not excepting our immigration officials there and here, for I believe they are dealing wisely and well with problems that are not always appreciated by those who are uninformed about the real facts.

We were asked questions about our immigration policy, and some of them were critical questions. However, we were supplied with answers which to me were adequate, even if not always completely satisfactory to those who asked the questions.

The most interesting sidelight I can give you on that problem is that one of the major problems the islands have among themselves, including the two independent nations, is the determination of the immigration policy of each vis-à-vis their own colleagues near at hand in islands that they know and people with whom they have long associations.

May I now divide the remainder of my remarks roughly into comments on the Commonwealth itself, the association, the new nation which appears to be emerging and, finally, on trade and aid which was the major item on the agenda of the week of actual conference sessions.

The basis of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association is, of course, the Commonwealth itself, and I know of no better description of the Commonwealth than that which was given by the Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson, when he was reporting to Parliament on the last Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference. He described it as "a link between races, cultures and continents, as an agency to promote co-operation and understanding between men and nations." And from my short but certainly pleasant experience at the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference I can bear witness that the Commonwealth is achieving those high objectives in a very remarkable way.

Our Commonwealth now consists of 22 nations. It is amazing how it grows. I was not sure whether the figure was right, so I called some senior officials in the Department of External Affairs, and everyone of them had to look it up. I am not being at all critical in saying that because only within the last month Gambia came in. It is indeed hard to keep count, not only of those joining, but also because situations have developed wherein Zanzibar joined Tanganyika and, over the course of years, we have lost other members—the Irish Free State, Burma, South Africa.

But today, as I say, there are 22 independent nations in the Commonwealth and, just as important, some 30 colonies, dependencies and territories under trusteeship.

The contrast between the old Imperialism, so often criticized, of the old British Empire, and some of the kinds of colonialism from which the criticism is coming is no better indicated, to my mind, than in the population figures of our developing Commonwealth. It consists today of somewhere between 700 million and 750 million people, about one-quarter of the population of the globe, of whom only five million are not citizens of sovereign, independent nations. Of those five million, three million are in Hong Kong, in a very special situation. So it should surely be clear to anyone who cares to read that the greatest experiment in all history in the freedom of nations is almost at the point of 100 per cent achievement.

When the Pitcairn Islands, with their population of 90, will become independent, I would not care to guess. But I spent one of the most interesting days of our tour with the representative of the Parliament of Western Samoa. Western Samoa is a sovereign, independent nation in the Commonwealth. Its area is just over 1,000 square miles; it has a population of slightly more than 100,000. The delegate with whom I spent this day in the bus learning what I could about the Western Pacific wore, I am glad to say, what I would call a kilt—he had another name for it, which I shall not attempt to pronounce. It was a saffron kilt, almost identical in colour to that of old Ireland—so we had something in common.

Of course we all know that a number of members of the Commonwealth are almost ready to break away from the Motherland and go on their own, and one of these will probably be a new Caribbean nation of the Little Seven or Little Eight. I say "Little Seven or Little Eight" because one of the islands may or may not join a new federation, if there is such a federation. It may join Trinidad and Tobago. Indeed, it is possible that all eight might join with Trinidad and Tobago. I hasten to say, in case my remarks carry beyond this place, that I am neither advocating that nor criticizing it. It happens to be a fairly important political issue down there at the moment.

At the present time the Commonwealth has no secretariat. This is one of its most remarkable features, that it has carried on its very high degree of inter-communication and co-operation without a secretariat. However, the feeling now is that there should be one. This was approved in principle at the last Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference and referred to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference which we attended, and it was there approved. I would imagine, therefore, the Commonwealth will have its own secretariat before too long, and I think I might be permitted to hope that its locale will be Canada. There are some good reasons why we are eminently suited for that role.

I need hardly say here that the Commonwealth is an association which makes no distinctions regarding race, colour or creed. Its 22 independent nations circle the globe: There is the United Kingdom in Europe; there are four in Asia; one in the Pacific; five in East Africa, four in West Africa; two in the Mediterranean; two in the Caribbean; two in Australasia; and ourselves in North America.

I come now to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, which was the sponsor of this conference. The association is over 50 years old. It was formed when representatives of the Commonwealth countries met at the coronation of King George V in 1911, and the idea that had its genesis there finally developed into an association. Canada was host to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in 1928 and 1952, on which occasion, as I mentioned yesterday, Senator Roebuck was the chairman of the conference. And, as Senator Haig told us yesterday, the 1966 conference will be held in Canada.

I think it is no exaggeration to state that the annual meetings of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association are becoming increasingly important. They are regarded by the Commonwealth Prime Ministers, as we have been told officially, as a significant forum for the airing of views and the discussion of problems common to the Commonwealth countries; and it seems to me it is becoming increasingly a forum for the assessment and, often, the solution of those most difficult problems arising out of differences of many kinds between the developed nations and those which are still developing.

I said I would make a few remarks on the new nation whose islands we had the privilege of visiting. Honourable senators will be aware that a few years ago the British Government, as part of its National independence policy which I have spoken of already, brought together all the British Caribbean islands into one great self-governing federation. Unfortunately, it did not last long. By a referendum in Jamaica the majority of the people decided they would like to break away. Jamaica did so, and became an independent nation. Shortly afterwards Trinidad and Tobago broke away, and left the Little Eight islands or island groups once again on their own. They reverted to colonial status and came once again directly under the Colonial Office, after a very brief taste of freedom; and I need hardly say that they are impatient to return to that same status of complete independence.

The population of the eight island groups is about 600,000. They are faced with three choices, one of which would be to remain dependencies of Great Britain; the second would be to join with Trinidad and Tobago—and there are difficulties there on both sides; and the third would be to form a new nation.

One heard quite frequently criticisms that Canada might be doing more to help. I shall speak of our aid program in a few moments, but there are very grave difficulties in the way of Canada doing anything overt at this time in the political sphere. One, of course, is that these island groups are dependencies of Great Britain, and one does not need to have a great deal of imagination to realize that there might be as much criticism of our interfering in that situation at the moment as there would be if the United Kingdom Government decided to finance a federation of Eskimo tribes in our Arctic. However, I do know that our officials are watching the situation very carefully, and they have made Canada's interest clear. We are already engaged in quite a substantial program of direct aid.

Finally, I come to the broad question of our trade and aid policy. I shall not speak of the trade policy in great detail because it has been discussed at length here, and most honourable senators know more about it than I do. However, so far as the undeveloped nations of the Caribbean area are concerned, we are in much the same position as we are with all underdeveloped nations where we buy more than we sell. This is appreciated. We hear constantly about requests for aid.

There is no doubt that any of the undeveloped nations of the Caribbean would vastly prefer to raise themselves to the standards of living they wish to achieve through trade rather than through the receipt of aid. For example, Canada's contribution of trade with Jamaica is very greatly appreciated. Jamaica is the largest island and the largest individual nation in the group, with a population approaching two million. Their three major trading partners are the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada. On their international trade with the other two partners, broadly speaking, they break even. Canada buys from Jamaica seven to eight million pounds worth more than they take from us, and we are, in effect, the staple of their international trade position. It is appreciated, of course, that we are on the side of the developing nations in our national policy of doing everything we can to lower international trade barriers.

The developing nations made a very strong case at the United Nations Geneva Conference for a system of preferences, and this was again discussed at the conference we attended. There seemed to be some misunderstanding as to why Canada would not immediately support a system of preferential treatment for the exports of the underdeveloped nations, especially those of the Commonwealth. The official answer from Canada was and is that we are looking at this with caution, but we see some difficulties. It was explained to me by officials of the department that the problem is: At a time when we are throwing all our weight into the breaking down of trade barriers, most of which are the result of some kind of preferential deals in the past, do we now support a new system of preferential trade barriers which sooner or later will lead to the same problems as now exists? In this regard Canada has not said no—we have merely said maybe.

On the import side, Canada has an excellent record. This was very well expressed by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Mitchell Sharp, not long ago when he said:

> Our import regime, in so far as it applies to the major tropical exports of the less-developed countries, is among the most liberal in the world. Our tariffs on such items are either negligible or have been removed altogether. Ours is a free market for tropical products with no quantitative limitations on imports and our internal tax structure does not inhibit consumption of these important earners of foreign exchange for the less-developed world.

I come now to our aid program. It is one of the most encouraging signs in the world today that the developed countries have accepted, to the extent that they have, so much responsibility for raising the standards of living in the undeveloped countries. It is said by some that we are not making much progress towards the achievement of a better world; but one should remember that this is the first time in history that something of this nature has ever been attempted on anything like this scale. Canada is more than carrying its weight in the aid programs of developed countries. By the end of this year our total expenditure in aid, that is bilateral aid, direct aid, will be about $700 million. For the current year the figure will be $190 million or $200 million, which is an increase of 50 per cent over last year. For the Caribbean area it will be $10 million this year compared to an average of $2 million over the last five years.

Our aid program breaks down generally into bilateral and multilateral arrangements. The latter, of course, include our general contributions to the United Nations and its agencies and to some of the international fiscal bodies which we support, and which in turn give grants, loans and financial aid of various kinds to other countries. The figures I have quoted do not include those. It is difficult to assess just how much the total would amount to—perhaps $50 million in multilateral aid, not including our direct contribution to the United Nations organization itself.

The broad policy of our aid programs has been well stated, again by the honourable Mitchell Sharp in these words:

> The less developed countries are demanding a better life for their peoples; and opportunity to develop and sustain a level of well-being more commensurate with that enjoyed in the developed countries. These countries together account for the largest part of humanity. They have been unable to provide many of the needs of their inhabitants—needs which we would consider basic. These countries require our assistance if they are to develop and provide increasing opportunities for their peoples and to assume their rightful place in the international community. Increasing the standards of living of these countries is one of the greatest challenges confronting us in the 1960's. The urgency of the task is that they cannot accomplish it by themselves.
>
> It is internationally recognized that the economic development of the less developed countries is hampered by the slow rate of growth of their exports, fluctuations in the prices of their primary products and the trade barriers confronting the products of export interest to them. There has been a continuing decline in their share of world trade and they have experienced persistent balance of payments difficulties. On either humanitarian, political, or economic grounds there are sound reasons for seeking to correct these unfavourable developments.

If I may briefly describe our aid program I would say it is selective, responsive, diversified, shared and tied.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): And what?

Hon. Mr. Grosart: Tied. I will explain that in a moment. It is a very bad word, but nobody seems to have been able to come up with a better one.

In saying that our aid program is selective, I mean it is aimed primarily at the underdeveloped countries of the Commonwealth itself. This is where Canadian policy has seen its major responsibility. As a result, of course, in the early days of the Colombo Plan, India and Pakistan had a very large share. The plan has been gradually expanded. When the West Indies became a sovereign nation the Colombo Plan was extended to them, and this was the first extension. The reason for the delay, as I mentioned earlier, is that previously the West Indies were dependencies of the United Kingdom. The plan was then extended to the former French African colonies which are now nations, and the reason for that is that ours is a bilingual culture, and we have the background and the people and, we hope, the experience to be of especial assistance to them.

Secondly, our aid program is responsive. This is a very important feature. By "responsive" I mean that we respond to particular calls or particular needs. We do not go around the world surveying countries saying, "We know what you need. We will give it to you." Our External Aid program officials say, in effect, "We have so much money to spend this year in such an area. Let us know your requirements." We do not say, "Ask and ye shall receive," but we do say, "Ask, and we will do everything we can," because at the moment I need hardly say that the responses are much greater than the resources available.

Thirdly, it is diversified. It will be of special interest to honourable senators to know that we are not putting all our eggs into one basket. I have here a breakdown of the allocation of bilateral grant aid funds from 1950 to March 31, 1964. It is of interest because it indicates the type of projects into which our aid is going. This table reflects the following breakdown:

Type of Assistance	Per cent of Total
Construction
Power Plant, Transmission Lines	27.46
Industrial and Research Plants	5.11
Roads, Bridges, Harbours	1.12
Equipment
Locomotives	6.48
Aircraft, Ships	1.61
Agriculture, Forestry	.27
Fisheries, Ports	1.63
Telecommunications	.25
Surveys
Ground, Aerial	2.44
Institutions
Schools, Workshops	1.02
Housing	.41
Hospitals, Laboratories	.28
Pending Projects	1.56
Commodities
Wheat, Flour	17.26
Metals, Asbestos	20.10
Fertilizers, Pesticides	3.70
Pulp, Paper, Railway Ties	3.61
Miscellaneous	.02
Technical Assistance	5.67
Total	100.00

Honourable senators will note that it is a well diversified program. At the present moment about 750 Canadian firms are participating, and 50 engineering firms. In the material-commodity areas all contracts are let on tender.

Fourthly, there is the principle that it is a shared program. In general, when we grant aid in materials and commodities they are delivered at the Canadian seaboard. Transportation is up to the recipient country, and when the materials arrive there all local costs in respect of labour and local materials are borne by the recipient country.

Finally, these are tied programs. We heard some criticism of this at Kingston. Several suggested that this aid should be given with no strings attached; and this, of course, sounds very attractive when you first look at it. It always carries the assumption that the strings attached are political; that the donor country is attempting somehow to interfere in the internal affairs of the recipient country, because the program is tied. This is not so, so far as Canada and most of our friends are concerned.

By "tied" I mean that we say that we will decide what firms in Canada will provide the materials. We decide what engineers and other professionals undertake the projects. We do not just give these countries the money and say: Go anywhere you like in the world and spend it. We say that our aid grants are to be spent, as far as our portion of them is concerned, in Canada and with Canadian firms.

Naturally, this raises some criticism, but our position is defended, and defended well, on certain grounds. First of all, we point out something that every honourable senator will immediately understand, namely, this characteristic of our program makes it possible to obtain from the public purse far more than could be obtained for this purpose under other circumstances.

Secondly, and just as important, this type of qualification requires the recipient country to fit this into its own national plan. We do not say: We give you the money; do what you like with it. We do say: Let us see your plan. Let us make sure this is a real contribution to the development of your economy. We must make sure that the money is not being spent on luxuries or non-essentials. We think that in providing the money, as we do, for a specific purpose to help you expand we should be able to consult with you on the nature of the projects in which you ask us to assist.

Also, our officers point out that it assists the foreign exchange position of these countries. The feeling is that because of the problem of foreign exchange in a country which has a balance of payments problem—and we all do—these funds should be spent in any country only on the real necessities of international life, and by tying our programs we feel we are helping each of these nations to conserve its own exchange resources.

Some have said: "This course means you force us to come to Canada on your terms." This is not so, because there are many donor countries, and it is Canadian policy, I understand, to encourage these nations to shop around. We say to them: If you can get a better deal in another country, then by all means do so. If you can buy any of these commodities or any of these services for less money elsewhere then we are quite happy. We hope you will only come to us when we can give you a better product at a better price and with better service.

This, by and large, is the picture of our grant-in-aid program. It has, of course, other aspects. There are direct loans of money—hard loans and soft loans. It may interest honourable senators, if they are not already aware of it, that the soft loan program this year will amount to about $50 million. This is the kind of loan that I am sure we would all like to get for our own purposes. They are of 50 years' duration with no interest, with 10 years of grace, and a service charge of a quarter of one per cent. As I have said, we will extend about $50 million of those loans this year.

In the Caribbean itself the results of our aid program are to be seen in port facilities—particularly wharves—schools, deep water wells, and also in the presence of Canadian teachers and technical experts. It is to be seen in the ships plying the waters between these countries, and there are many other visible manifestations.

As usual, Canada is not blowing its own horn, as I think it should. I remember approaching one school which we had built. I saw a big sign, and I thought, well, here we are, Canada is at last saying that we provided the money. But when I went close to it, it had the familiar crest of the United States and a declaration that the road into the school had been paved by United States aid fund. Nowhere was there mention of Canada's contribution. Perhaps we are wise; perhaps we are better to do it quietly; but it has not been my training in life, in business, to urge people to hide their light under a bushel.

With that, honourable senators, I conclude my report. Obviously there are many other things I could have said and there may be omissions. If honourable senators have any questions, I shall endeavour to answer them.

Hon. Walter M. Aseltine: Honourable senators, my chief reason for rising at this time is to say how proud we are of our two colleagues who attended this Commonwealth Parliamentary Association meeting in Jamaica in 1964. We are deeply grateful to them for the wonderful manner in which they carried out their duties. I was particularly pleased to note that all of the members of our delegation from Canada made speeches at the conference.

I remember being a delegate to one such meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in India in 1957. I prepared three of what I thought were quite wonderful speeches. But when we got to India, we spent a week in Pakistan, then a week in Ceylon, and then returned to India for the final meetings. Somewhere along the line I was unfortunate enough to be bitten by a female mosquito who had fed on a malaria patient, which resulted in those speeches of mine never having been delivered.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The female of the species is the more deadly.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: Instead of delivering speeches, I spent three weeks in hospital in Madras. From there they sent cables home to my dear relatives, wondering whether they should cremate me or embalm me. However, I fooled them, and I am still going strong.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon Mr. Aseltine: As I said, we are very proud of our delegates, and we are sure that they put Canada to the fore at every opportunity.

I was particularly interested in the speech made by Senator Roebuck, for several reasons. One reason is that in February 1964 my wife and I spent a two-week holiday in Jamaica. We saw many of the things which Senator Roebuck so clearly described. We were at the bauxite mines; we saw them carrying the bauxite on the overhead cables to the sea for shipment to Kitimat. We did not like to drive on the left hand side of the road instead of on the right, so we hired a car with driver. He took us everywhere in Jamaica, and showed us all of the interesting spots. We even went down the Rio Grande on the bamboo rafts. We found that an interesting experience, although the water is not quite as swift as some of the rapids in Canada which we shoot with the canoe. Generally, it was a very fine trip.

On one of our side trips we passed by the place where Christopher Columbus landed when he discovered Jamaica. We were told that none of the descendants of the aborigines found by Columbus in the 1490's were living at the present time. They had completely disappeared. We were told also that the present population is made up almost entirely of descendants of people who came to Jamaica in the early days, or were brought there to run the sugar plantations. Also, I was delighted to find that there were no mosquitoes in Jamaica, and no malaria.

Honourable senators, another reason why I rise today is to mention that after we spent a week or so on the north shore of Jamaica—where we visited all of the beaches, and even did some deep-sea fishing—we went over to Kingston, the capital. On arriving there, we found that the Jamaica parliament was in session. This reference is probably my main reason for speaking today.

I telephoned Mr. McInnes, the Canadian High Commissioner in Jamaica. He was kind enough to arrange for us to meet the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. Parliament was to sit that afternoon, and when we went to visit the Speaker, the Honourable Mr. Golding, he arranged for my wife and I to have seats on the ffoor of the assembly during the afternoon sitting. We remained during the whole sitting and found it most interesting.

Before I say anything further about what took place in the parliament, I should say that on August 6, 1962, Jamaica attained independence. The membership of the House of Representatives is 45, but the constitution provides that this number may be increased to 60. Before Jamaica attained independence there was a Legislative Council, and this was then renamed the Senate. The membership of the Senate of Jamaica is 21, 13 of whom are recommended by the Prime Minister and appointed by the Governor General; the other eight are recommended by the Leader of the Opposition and appointed by the Governor General. In addition, they have a written constitution, they have a Governor General, they have a Prime Minister and they have a Leader in the House of Representatives, almost exactly as we have in Canada.

The Governor General is Sir Clifford Campbell, G.C.M.G. The Prime Minister is the Right Honourable Sir Alexander Bustamante, P.C.

Yesterday, Senator Roebuck told us that the Deputy Prime Minister and house leader was the Honourable Donald Sangster. When my wife and I took our seats on the floor of the chamber beside the Speaker, Mr. Sangster was conducting the business of the day. We were much interested in the way he handled matters. You would have thought you were in the House of Commons here, except that there was not quite as much repartee as takes place in that chamber.

The bill under discussion, which took most of the afternoon, might be of interest to honourable senators. It provided for the photographing and fingerprinting of all the voters in Jamaica. The debate lasted for several hours, and the bill was finally passed and sent to the Senate.

The committee on estimates also reported. Apparently in Jamaica they do not deal with estimates as we do in Canada. When the estimates are tabled a committee composed of members of all the parties is appointed, and the estimates are turned over to them. The committee examines the estimates carefully until the last day or two of the session; then it brings in its report, and the house adopts the report. That is about all there is to it. In that way they save a great deal of time. I am not sure that we could follow that method of dealing with estimates in Canada because our budget is many times larger than theirs. However, it seems to me that we could vary our Canadian system so that something of the way they do things in Jamaica might be followed in Canada.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: How are the salaries of the senators there?

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: I did not ask about that.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: I thought they got no salary.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: I found out what the salaries were of the members of the House of Representatives and of the senators, but I do not believe I have the information with me today.

Hon. Mr. Lambert: Do they have a new way of handling supplementary estimates?

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: I will deal with that. This happened to be the last day the House of Representatives sat, and they were ready to prorogue. The honourable Mr. Sangster, after this bill with regard to photographing and fingerprinting was passed and sent to the Senate for consideration, rose and announced the fact that the business of the session was completed as far as the House of Representatives was concerned, that they had sent quite a number of bills to the Senate for consideration, and that he was going to move to the effect that the House of Representatives would adjourn until such time as the Senate had been able to consider the bills which had been referred to it, and then the members would be called into session again by the Speaker of the house. There were no supplementary estimates.

Next day the Senate met, considered five of the bills, and adjourned for a week.

I could not help thinking how much we would like to have bills referred to us in that way, and be given more time to consider them just before prorogation. It is true that in all the sessions I have been here, it always happens that several important bills reach us an hour or two before prorogation, and we are expected to deal with them and pass them and have them assented to before prorogation takes place.

In Jamaica, the Senate was given plenty of time to deal with the bills. Mr. Sangster announced that when the Senate reported and the bills were assented to, they would prorogue and immediately call a new session. So there was no pressure put on the senators to deal with these measures in a hurry.

May I say something further with regard to the parliamentary setup? Two of the senators are members of the cabinet, one without portfolio, and one with a portfolio. They also have parliamentary secretaries, as we have. One senator, Mrs. Grant, is the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Education.

The language employed is English. I heard no other language spoken while we were in Jamaica. Generally speaking, the people have English names. For example, I have before me the names of the persons in the Senate, namely: Jackson, Henry, Taylor, McPherson, McNeill.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): We have one in this Senate.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: Thompson, Grant, Fletcher, Cooke, Burke, Blake, Allen. You would almost think you were in the Canadian Senate, by these common English names such as we are accustomed to in Canada.

The money one uses down there is pounds, shillings and pence, or American dollars, whichever you prefer.

Jamaica has a constitution, just as we have. Their way of doing business is similar, and I think they are doing exceptionally well.

We met many people from all walks of life. The man who drove us around bore the name of Rose. Another interesting and prominent man was a lawyer by the name of Jones. We found the people to be well educated and most hospitable. I am sure our delegates who were in Jamaica found things as interesting as we did.

Again, honourable senators, I want to say how pleased we were with the manner in which our delegates conducted themselves, and also for the way they put forward the best interests of Canada.

I think Senator Grosart deserves a vote of thanks for his full explanation of all these money matters.

Honourable senators, that concludes my remarks at the present time.

Hon. Josie D. Quart: Honourable senators, when the name of Mr. McNeill was mentioned, it rang a bell. Evidently the Canadian delegation in Jamaica had a wonderful sales effect for Canada. I met Mr. McNeill, from Jamaica, who was so impressed that he wanted to see more of Canada, and of course I told him to come to the very best place of all—Quebec. He wanted to see our snow, the skiing, and particularly the ski jumping; so he visited the ski country in Quebec. It was a terribly cold day. I am sure he did no skiing; in fact, I understand he was afraid to go out.

Afterwards, a reception was given for him in the hotel, and I am sure that neither he nor anybody else present suffered from the cold then, because it was indeed a very warm reception. I think he regarded me as "Exhibit A," being a senator. He told me that the Canadian delegation at Jamaica was the most popular delegation there. And he added, "you know, you had an old gentleman there, Senator Roebuck—he was perfectly wonderful. He was boasting about his age, but I don't believe he is that old." I said, "Don't believe it. He likes to boast!" He remarked, "He was a pretty wonderful man; he followed everybody," to which I replied, "Don't be surprised at that; he is on the divorce committee and it must keep him young." He said, "The most outstanding contribution to our conference was made by your two colleagues."

Honourable senators, thank you for allowing me the time, but I really felt I should tell you this. Mr. McNeill, I may say, was accompanied by a very nice young lady, Gloria, and she seemed to remember these gentlemen. However, I shall not relate any other tales.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I do not propose to detain the house for more than a few minutes, but may I say how indebted we are to all the honourable senators who have been good enough to participate in this discussion. May I hasten to add that we are also indebted to Senator Belisle for his contribution a few days ago on the work of the United Nations, which he attended last fall.

I believe this practice of reporting our experiences at conferences to the Senate fulfils a very useful parliamentary purpose; the debate we have had over the past two days demonstrates that very clearly. We owe a vote of thanks to Senators Roebuck, Haig, Grosart, Aseltine and Quart—the honourable lady having let us in on a secret she learned.

It is highly important for parliamentarians who attend these Commonwealth meetings to come back and relate their impressions and what they feel the opportunities may be in these associations for effective work after the meetings. I would like to emphasize that in making these reports it is not a matter of giving the Senate a travelogue; rather, I am sure that every honourable senator who has been a member of one of these delegations to a foreign country has come back feeling there are problems which Canadians can help solve, and if a forum is not provided in which to explain these problems, the delegate from Parliament feels very frustrated. I feel there is a great deal to be done in the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

I am glad that Senator Haig has brought to our attention the fact that the conference will be held here in 1966. For a long time I thought it would be held here in our centennial year, but I understand why that is not to be. I hope that honourable senators, through the Parliamentary Association in Canada, will do whatever they feel should be done to prepare for a good conference.

Certainly I was not anywhere near the heart of Parliament at the time, but I can remember the Parliamentary Association Conference held in Ottawa in 1928. I was a student at the time and was tremendously interested in political economy, and the things that were said and done at that time by the delegates from all over the Commonwealth certainly stimulated in me a great interest in this field. I am sure the same can be done for a new generation of young Canadians and perhaps for the present generation of parliamentarians. I believe that honourable senators can make a great contribution to the preparatory work for that conference.

I have been to Jamaica a number of times on business. I have never gone there specifically for a holiday, but I would like to. Perhaps Senator Roebuck mentioned this in his speech, but one of the most delightful experiences I can remember was listening to their calypso music. I remember hearing it long before it became popular this far away. To me it is a delightful experience.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: They have Calypso cigars too.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: And don't forget the rum!

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): There is great music in the way these people speak also; their voices have a musical quality.

Hon. Mr. Grosart: We did not visit the nightclubs!

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am rather suspicious of these reports when they only deal with the serious side. Senator Quart has indicated there was perhaps more to the story than appears on the surface!

I remember spending a most interesting evening there once. It was during our summer, and it was certainly not cool there. Sir Hugh Foot, as he then was, was Governor, and his discussions about conditions in Jamaica were most interesting. He was more than a Governor merely performing formal duties; he was out among the people working actively. Earlier this winter I was reading his recently published book, the title of which escapes me for the moment. In it he recounts his experiences in Jamaica. It would make interesting reading for Senators Grosart, Roebuck, Quart and, indeed, Senator Aseltine.

We are particularly indebted to Senator Grosart on another point, that is, his having raised the question generally of Canada providing aid to developing countries. This is a new phase, a new interest, on the part of the public of Canada in this very important problem. I remember very shortly after the war when the question of sending locomotives to India was first raised, one of the earliest examples of aid, I believe. A great many people asked, what was the good of Canada doing that kind of thing; India was so far away. Honourable senators, today the question of famine in South-East Asia is a problem of everyday life but, believe me, it is also a political problem in Canada—I do not mean in the sense of partisan politics. It is a problem for the public of Canada to think that perhaps within their hands they have the means of alleviating a situation, true, on the other side of the world, but one that vitally affects them as human beings.

At some future time it might be appropriate to explore more fully the problems of the underdeveloped countries. It could be raised, as was the conference in Jamaica, by means of notice of motion of inquiry in the Senate. Then it could be referred to one of our standing committees to obtain advice, assistance and information from the officials. This is the kind of function that this chamber can perform exceptionally well, and in doing this it informs public opinion, which is really what the public needs. It is part of the general democratic process of education for the public, and it would be a useful step for the Senate to take.

I said I would not speak more than a few minutes. Again, I do want to thank all honourable senators who have taken part in this very interesting and useful discussion. I hope we shall have more of them.

Honourable senators, I would suggest that the Senate do now take recess to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately 5.35.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 5.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Robert Taschereau, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give royal assent to the following bills:

An Act respecting the Revised Statutes of Canada.

An Act to amend the Canada Shipping Act.

An Act to amend the Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) Act.

An Act respecting the Geneva Conventions, 1949.

An Act respecting The Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

An Act to amend the Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act.

An Act to incorporate Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd.

An Act respecting Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company.

An Act to incorporate The Royal College of Dentists of Canada.

An Act to incorporate Canadian Institute of Actuaries.

An Act to incorporate Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation.

An Act respecting The Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company.

An Act respecting The Economical Mutual Insurance Company.

An Act to amend the Merchant Seamen Compensation Act.

An Act to amend the Penitentiary Act.

An Act to amend the Coal Production Assistance Act.

An Act respecting hours of work, minimum wages, annual vacations and holidays with pay in federal works, undertakings and businesses.

An Act to implement a Convention between Canada and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax and to amend the existing Agreement and Conventions between Canada and Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, with respect to income tax.

An Act to amend certain Acts administered in the Department of Insurance.

An Act to authorize the provision of moneys to meet certain capital expenditures of the Canadian National Railways System for the period from the 1st day of January, 1964 to the 30th day of June, 1965, and to authorize the guarantee by Her Majesty of certain securities to be issued by the Canadian National Railways Company.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, March 23, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, March 23, 1965

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Statement of work performed and expenditures made as of December 31, 1964, together with estimated expenditures for 1965, respecting the construction by the Canadian National Railway Company of certain railway terminal facilities at and in the vicinity of the City of Toronto, pursuant to section 10 of the Canadian National Toronto Terminals Act, chapter 26, Statutes of Canada, 1960. (English and French texts).

Statement of work performed and expenditures made as of December 31, 1964, together with estimated expenditures for 1965, under authority of chapter 7, Statutes of Canada, 1960-61, respecting the construction by the Canadian National Railway Company of a railway line from mile 72.6 Kiask Falls Subdivision, to Mattagami Lake Mines, Township of Galinee, in the Province of Quebec, pursuant to section 8 of the said act. (English and French texts).

Report of work performed and expenditures made as of December 31, 1964, together with estimated expenditures for 1965, under authority of chapter 56, Statutes of Canada, 1960-61, respecting the construction by the Canadian National Railway Company of a line of railway from a point near Grimshaw, in the Province of Alberta, in a northerly direction to Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories, pursuant to section 9 of the said act. (English and French texts).

Report of work performed and expenditures made as of December 31, 1964, together with estimated expenditures for 1965, under authority of chapter 13, Statutes of Canada, 1957-58, as amended, respecting the construction of a line of railway by the Canadian National Railway Company from Optic Lake to Chisel Lake, and from Chisel Lake to Stall Lake, and the purchase by the Canadian National Railway Company from the International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, of a line of railway from Sipiwesk to a point on Burntwood River near Mystery Lake, all in the Province of Manitoba, pursuant to section 11 of the said act. (English and French texts).

Report of work performed and expenditures made as of December 31, 1964, together with estimated expenditures for 1965, under authority of chapter 11, Statutes of Canada, 1962-63, respecting the construction by the Canadian National Railway Company of a line of railway from a point from Nepisiguit Junction in a southerly and westerly direction to a point approximately in the middle of the western half of the Parish of Bathurst in the Province of New Brunswick to the property of Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corporation Limited, pursuant to section 8 of the said act. (English and French texts).

Report of Expenditures and Administration in connection with the Unemployment Assistance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 9 of the said Act, chapter 26, Statutes of Canada, 1956. (English and French texts).

Supplementary Estimates (D) for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1965. (English and French texts).

Estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1966. (English and French texts).

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I wonder if I may anticipate the Order Paper and point out that there is no legislation upon it for the Senate to deal with this evening. In view of this circumstance, over which we have no control, I should like to place before the Senate a number of considerations.

First, I should say that I propose later this evening, with leave, to move that when the Senate adjourns tonight it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, March 30, at 8 p.m. Honourable senators will understand, of course, that this will be subject to the rule with respect to recall; if legislation is available before that date all honourable senators, I am sure, will respond to the direction issued by His Honour the Speaker. In order to avoid a repetition of the situation that developed last Easter I think it desirable to take this step. In doing so it will be appreciated that we are not having an adjournment, but are ensuring in a practical way the attendance of the Senate at the earliest practicable date.

I should also point out that there is before the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce a private member's public bill to amend the Criminal Code with respect to habeas corpus. I understand the committee would be able to deal with that bill, perhaps to a conclusion, this evening. Senator Lang is the sponsor of the bill.

If honourable senators agree, I would suggest when we conclude the business before the Senate this evening, we take recess and immediately meet in the Banking and Commerce Committee for a short period to deal with the bill which is before that committee. Perhaps it might suit the convenience of the Senate to reassemble at the call of the bell to receive the report of the committee and to proceed with that measure.

I hope that this will be convenient and will meet with the general concurrence of all honourable senators.

Hon. Lionel Choquette: Honourable senators, this proposal is agreed to. I would hate to be put in the position that I was put in last year, when I represented my leader on this side and when we had to meet every day for a period of seven or eight days, not knowing what would be before us from day to day. As a result, some honourable senators were considered absent for a period of eight to 12 days.

I think the proposal on the part of the Leader of the Government is a wise one and I fully concur in his suggestion.

Hon. Mr. Reid: May I ask the honourable Leader where the advantage lies in meeting tonight on this bill, if we are going to adjourn until next Tuesday?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): As honourable senators know, this bill originated in the House of Commons. It is not a long bill; I think it is an alleviating bill; and I understand that it is to be amended. With a view to getting it back to the House of Commons, and also to allow the Senate to deal with it at this time when there is an opportunity to do so, I would ask that this proposal be agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I would move, with leave, that when the Senate adjourns this evening it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, March 30, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

PUBLIC BILLS

SUSPENSION OF RULES

Hon. John J. Connolly moved:

> That, for the balance of the present Session, Rules 23, 24 and 63 be suspended in so far as they relate to Public Bills.

He said: Honourable senators, this is a motion that is customarily presented to this house towards the conclusion of a session. Its passage means that we suspend the rule requiring two days' notice for second reading and one day's notice for third reading of public bills. I am sure that honourable senators are familiar with this practice. I think it speeds up the work to be done by the Senate in the way that we like to see it done towards the end of the session.

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: To what bill does this motion refer?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Whatever public bills come before the Senate before the end of the session would fall within the ambit of the motion.

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: What bills are expected to come before the end of the session?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): First of all, the Canada Pension Plan measure is expected, as is the bill with respect to fiscal arrangements between the federal Government and the provincial governments. There may be other measures as well.

Motion agreed to.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE BILL

REFERENCE TO SUPREME COURT OF CANADA—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Hon. Jean-François Pouliot: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege. There is only one bill on the Order Paper, Bill S-16, and it is for consideration on April 12, because the bill should be referred in the meantime to the Supreme Court of Canada by the Minister of Justice. It has been there for eight months, and nothing has been done.

The Minister of Justice has expressed the view that he does not share the opinion of this bill. Well, opinions are free, but because the Minister of Justice believes differently, that does not mean that he has not a duty to refer that bill to the Supreme Court of Canada in accordance with the law. His opinion does not count, and his opinion does not carry the weight of a judgment of a justice of the peace, because in virtue of the law, justices of the peace have the right to decide certain matters and their judgments carry weight.

There is no excuse for the Minister of Justice holding in his desk drawer or his filing cabinet, or anywhere else, a motion which has been passed by the Senate to refer a certain bill to the Supreme Court of Canada.

We do not need at all the opinion of the Minister of Justice, which may be supreme within his department but does not bind anyone outside the department. The Minister of Justice for Canada should know the difference between the opinion of one man and the judgment of a court.

There is only one who can hold or keep in suspense the working of the law, and it is no one else than the Governor General when he delays the sanction of a bill. Besides that, I do not know of any man in public life who can prevent a bill from becoming law or following the process of law.

Moreover, honourable senators, this is not a matter that could be decided within the office of the Minister of Justice. It is not there that it should be decided. It should be decided in the Supreme Court of Canada, and for a very good reason: if we have social security in this country, we have no legal security for married women concerning the disposal of their immovable property, at least in the Province of Quebec. This is why I beg the attention of the Government again to this matter, and it will not be for the last time. When the Senate reconvenes I intend to raise it again on a question of privilege, because there is no satisfactory reason for the Minister of Justice holding it and preventing the Supreme Court of Canada giving a decision on the matter.

That is all I want to say tonight, but I will have some more to say at the next possible opportunity. It is a scandal.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Honourable senators, is this not the bill that this chamber decided to refer to the Supreme Court of Canada some time ago?

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: The motion was to refer the bill to the Supreme Court of Canada. That motion has been conveyed to whom it may concern by the Leader of the Government in this chamber, and I am surprised that nothing has yet been done. That is my point: there is no reason not to refer the bill to the Supreme Court of Canada for a decision.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce will meet forthwith in room 256-S. I hope that all members of the committee will be kind enough to give their attendance there. I cannot say how long the meeting will last, but I understand it will not likely be lengthy. It is proposed that the Senate resume its sitting immediately after the committee concludes its deliberations.

Therefore, I suggest that the Senate do now adjourn, to reassemble at the call of the bell, after the sitting of the committee.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 10.15 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

CRIMINAL CODE (HABEAS CORPUS)

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Hon. Salter A. Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-35, to amend the Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus), and had directed that the bill be reported with the following amendment:

> Strike out clause 1 and substitute therefor the following:
>
> "1. Subsection (2) of section 691 of the Criminal Code is repealed and the following subsections substituted therefor:
>
> '(2) Except as hereinafter in this section provided, the provisions of Part XVIII apply, mutatis mutandis, to appeals under this section.
>
> (3) Where an application for a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is refused by a judge of a court having jurisdiction therein, no application may again be made on the same grounds whether to the same or to another court or judge, unless fresh evidence is adduced, but an appeal from such refusal shall lie to the Court of Appeal, and where on such appeal the application is refused a further appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court of Canada.
>
> (4) Where a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is granted by any judge no appeal therefrom shall lie at the instance of any party including the Attorney General of the province concerned or the Attorney General of Canada.
>
> (5) Where a judgment is issued on the return of a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, an appeal therefrom lies to the Court of Appeal, and from a judgment of the Court of Appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, with the leave of that court, at the instance of the applicant or the Attorney General of the province concerned or the Attorney General of Canada, but not at the instance of any other party.
>
> (6) An appeal in habeas corpus matters shall be heard by the court to which the appeal is directed at an early date, whether in or out of the prescribed sessions of the court.' "

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Hayden: With leave of the Senate, I move that this report be adopted now.

Honourable senators, the amendment proposed to this bill is designed to state clearly the rights of the Crown, whether it is the Attorney General of the province or the Attorney General of Canada, and the person who is under detention where proceedings by way of habeas corpus are sought for his release from such detention. For that reason these particular subsections proposed in the amendment made by the committee spell out very carefully the various steps that are available. For instance, where a person under detention applies for a writ of habeas corpus, which means a writ which would direct the delivery of his body before a judge, who will then inquire into the merits of his detention, the practice for a considerable time was that you made the rounds of the judges, and if you failed in your application the first time, you did not stop trying until the last judge had said no.

Some doubts were cast upon the correctness of that earlier procedure of shopping around, by a judgment of Chief Justice McRuer some years ago. The procedure now proposed is that if an application is made for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person who is in detention, and the judge in the first instance refuses the order—in other words, refuses to issue the writ—two things may be done on behalf of the person in detention. An appeal may be made on his behalf to the court of appeal of the province in which he is being detained, and if that appeal fails a further appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Alternatively, if there is fresh evidence on which an application may be made, then there is provision in this amendment for the making of another application but not, of course, on the same grounds. In those circumstances the application can be made to a judge again for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus. At that stage of the proceedings, where the question is whether a writ of habeas corpus will or will not issue, the only person enjoying the right of appeal is the person who is under detention. It is a right of appeal to the person under detention.

Where the writ is granted, and there is then a hearing on the merits and the judge makes a decision in favour of or against the prisoner, there is then a right of appeal granted to the prisoner and also to the Crown. I use the word "Crown" but the language used in the amendment is "the Attorney General of the province concerned or the Attorney General of Canada." There is a right of appeal first to the court of appeal of the province, and a further right of appeal to either of the parties to the Supreme Court of Canada from the decision of the court of appeal, but only with leave of the Supreme Court of Canada.

We have also provided that an appeal in a matter of habeas corpus must be proceeded with promptly. The language of the amendment is "at an early date, whether in or out of the prescribed sessions of the court." The courts may be in a period of long vacation, which covers July and August, or a period of short vacation which might be during the Christmas season, and appeals of this character must be proceeded with promptly.

I think it is important that these procedures should be spelled out, because the right to habeas corpus is a very important right. The committee felt that the steps that are available, and the rights that are enjoyed respectively by a person under detention and by the Crown, should be defined very clearly and beyond all doubt.

Honourable senators, before I resume my seat I want to commend very sincerely and wholeheartedly the effort, industry and application Senator Roebuck gave to the provisions of this bill, and to thank him for the valuable contribution he made to the language in which you now find this amendment expressed.

Hon. James Gladstone: Honourable senators, may I take this opportunity of asking that the provisions of this legislation apply equally to the Indians, who were the original occupants of this country. I would point out that we are not even called an ethnic group. But we are a stable people, we are here, and I do not know how you can get rid of us.

In speaking to this legislation I would like it to be known that the Indian people want to be a part of Canada in every way. We have treaties, and I would like to emphasize the fact that our treaties were made between statesmen of the Indian tribes and statesmen of those who governed Canada at that time. There were no lawyers present.

Therefore, I am asking the great legal minds of Canada, both within this chamber and without, to consider the rights of Indians in interpreting fundamental questions. I am trying to represent the Indians of this land, and I know the way the wind is whirling around the world the Indians want to be a part of Canada. I have found this out in my travels. So, inasmuch as we are the chamber of second thought, let us at least give the Indian an opportunity to take his rightful place in all legal matters. He does not want something for nothing; he sincerely wants to be a part of Canada.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck: Honourable senators, may I take this occasion to thank the chairman of the committee for his kind remarks regarding myself. However, common modesty makes me rise to say that the sponsor of this bill was Senator Lang, who has cooperated with me in the analysis and production of the document now before us.

Furthermore, I should like to call attention of the house to the fact that Senator J. M. Macdonald was the first to raise some question as to the act as it came before us.

Finally, we in this chamber should give credit where credit is due. The measure which came before the House of Commons was a Private Members' bill, on a matter of great public importance, introduced by Mr. John Matheson. I think that the purpose of his bill was exactly the same as that in the bill before us as it now stands, but with some amendments in the matter of procedure. I wish to give to Mr. Matheson the credit that is his due, and much credit is due to him.

I should also mention our own Law Counsel, who has co-operated with me in every possible way within his power.

Common modesty impelled me to make this statement that I am not the only person, by any means, who spent time and effort in connection with this fundamental and most important matter.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by honourable Senator Hugessen, that this report be now adopted. Is it your pleasure to adopt the motion?

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: On division—against the amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: The report is adopted, on division.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read a third time?

Hon. Mr. Lang: Honourable senators, I move that this bill, as amended, be now read the third time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is it your pleasure to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to and bill read a third time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, a bill C-35, intituled an Act to amend the Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus), has been read a third time, and is now ready to pass. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to pass this bill?

Hon. Mr. Gladstone: On division.

The Hon. the Speaker: The motion is carried, on division.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, March 30, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, March 30, 1965

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

RESTAURANT OF PARLIAMENT

REPORT OF AUDITOR GENERAL

The Hon. the Speaker tabled:

Report of the Auditor General of Canada to the Joint Chairmen and Members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee on the Parliamentary Restaurant on the examination of the accounts and financial transactions for the year ended October 31, 1964.

PRIVATE BILL

ASSOCIATION OF UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES OF CANADA—COMMONS AMENDMENT CONCURRED IN

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons returning Bill S-36, to incorporate Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and acquainting the Senate that they have passed this bill with the following amendment, to which they desire the concurrence of the Senate:

Page 1, Line 17. Delete the word "des" at the end of line 17.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this amendment be taken into consideration?

Hon. Donald Cameron: Honourable senators, I move, with leave, that this amendment be considered now.

This is a minor amendment to section 1 in the bill as passed by the Senate. Section 1 reads:

> The members of the Conference named in the Schedule to this Act, together with such other corporations, organizations or bodies as may become members of the corporation as hereinafter provided, are incorporated under the name of Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and, in French, Association des Universités et des Collèges du Canada, hereinafter called "the Association".

In this amendment the second "des", at the end of line 17, is taken out.

Amendment concurred in.

COMPANIES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENTS—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons returning Bill S-22, to amend the Companies Act and acquainting the Senate that they have passed this bill with certain amendments to which they desire the concurrence of the Senate.

For text of amendments see appendix, p. 1481.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these amendments be taken into consideration?

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, instead of moving concurrence in these amendments which were made in the other place and having them read, as is customarily done, it might be better if I stated their purport.

In the first place, section 12a of the act gave a definition of mutual fund shares and of the relations between the mutual fund companies and their shareholders. This definition has been reworded, and I believe it has been clarified. It points out very clearly that not only do these mutual fund shares involve a participating interest in a fund but, as well, that they are a shareholding.

The clarification is the result of representations which were made to the officials of the department by some of the mutual fund companies, and perhaps more particularly by the association to which they belong.

May I say in respect of that amendment, as well as of the other amendments which have been made, that I talked with the Chairman of the Senate Banking and Commerce Committee, and he considers the amendments to be helpful and of the kind that the Senate would desire to see made.

The next amendment simply corrects a typographical error. In one section a reference to section 12, subsection (1) is amended to read section 12, subsection (1a). This is a great deal more precise than the original draft.

The third amendment deals with the situation when preferred shares are redeemed out of capital, under section 49, subsection (3). It is now made crystal clear that the decrease in the capital which results from the redemption of these shares is an automatic decrease, and no supplementary letters patent are required in order to confirm it.

The next two amendments also deal with the redemption of preferred shares, but redemptions that take place not out of capital but out of profits or out of money provided by a new issue. It is made clear in the rewording that such redemptions do not involve a reduction of capital.

The next amendment provides for a clarification of the balance sheet in cases where shares are redeemed out of capital, as opposed to the case where the redemption is made out of profits or out of new money.

Perhaps I should refer specifically to each amendment. I hope I have not misled anyone as I have gone along.

The seventh amendment deals with section 120(3)(j), where originally it was provided in connection with the report that the total remuneration received as a director, officer or employee of a holding company should include salaries, bonuses, fees, contributions to pension funds, and other emoluments. The Senate committee deleted the words, "contributions to pension funds" in every other case, but for some reason the wording was overlooked in this instance. It is deleted now as a result of that other action.

The next two amendments are of a class that deal with disclosure in respect of public and private companies. It was originally provided in section 121F that in the case of a public company there should be provision for disclosure on the direction of the Secretary of State as a result of a recommendation made by a judge of the Superior Court of the province. Likewise, in section 125A there were provisions with reference to disclosure in respect of private companies. The net effect of the changes made in the other place are to remove these provisions in respect of disclosure specifically, and to provide that there would be no disclosure hereafter except under circumstances that prevail up to the present time.

The tenth amendment provides for the renumbering of clauses as a result of the deletion of certain of these sections. And, finally, it is provided anew that the act shall come into force on the 1st day of July 1965. It is thought this is adequate time to allow the public as well as the department to adjust to the new legislation.

Honourable senators, there may be members of the Senate who would prefer to see these amendments in print, and if that is so, I have no objection whatever to delaying the putting of the motion until the next sitting of the Senate. On the other hand, if it is desired to dispose of this matter now I would be quite content to have that done.

Hon. David J. Walker: Honourable senators, as to the latter suggestion of the Leader of the Government—

The Hon. the Speaker: Before honourable Senator Walker speaks, I suggest to honourable Senator Connolly that he move concurrence now or consideration at the next sitting, otherwise there is nothing before the Senate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): So that the record will be in order, let me move concurrence now and, if it is desired, I would be happy to have the debate adjourned.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the honourable Senator Vaillancourt, that these amendments be now concurred in. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Mr. Walker: Honourable senators, with great respect, I would like to have an opportunity of reading the amendments in print. They sound reasonable, but there are two or three on which my thinking is not quite clear. I should like to have an opportunity of clarifying them.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Perhaps the honourable gentleman would adjourn the debate, and we can deal with these matters at a later stage.

Hon. Mr. Walker: I would so move.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Walker, debate adjourned.

CANADA PENSION PLAN BILL

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-136, to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. John J. Connolly moved the second reading of the bill.

He said: Honourable senators, I cannot claim that I am responsible for this bill having arrived here in time for our sitting this evening, but I can express the gratification of all of us when I say that we are glad to see it here at last.

The Canada Pension Plan deals with an important aspect of social security in Canada. It is a version of a program which all political parties support in principle. Its objectives are sought also by the vast majority of our people, and this has been demonstrated by samplings of public opinion on the point over a long period of time.

The provisions of this bill are not new to the Senate. Its subject matter has been the object of public discussion and debate both in and out of Parliament for a very long time, and has been constantly in the news.

Earlier this session the Senate approved an application to the Parliament of the United Kingdom to amend the British North America

Act. The amendment, since passed, enables Parliament to provide for survivor benefits, which the plan now contains. In 1951, the British North America Act had been amended by inserting section 94A, a provision giving Parliament authority to enact legislation in relation to old age pensions. As honourable senators know, a joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons, composed of 12 senators and 24 members from the other place, examined the legislation in detail. On this point I shall have more to say later.

The legislation before us contains proposals found in similar legislation in many other countries of the Western world. It represents an attempt to reach objectives which have been sought by individuals through their savings, through insurance, through private investment and through public and private retirement savings plans.

No one would claim that this legislation is intended to be a complete answer to the major problem of the maintenance of income after retirement and through the period described as old age. Rather, it purports to provide a minimum upon which individuals can build privately, if they are able and willing to do so. It provides a basis which can be supplemented.

The difficulties attendant upon aging, the position and perhaps the plight of senior citizens, make up a very complex problem which has been the object of study by a Special Committee of the Senate on Aging for the past several sessions. Senator Croll has shown commendable initiative in this field, and he has been encouraged and assisted by the many members of the Senate who are on that committee. They have provided a national forum for the discussion of this issue, and in doing so have performed a service for Parliament and for Canada. They have focused attention upon an aspect of national life which requires attention and action. Public opinion should be aware of this service that the Senate committee is performing. I am sure the public appreciates it.

In the printed proceedings of that committee dated December 10, 1964, a comprehensive survey of the field of social welfare respecting the senior citizen is provided. The witness on that date was Doctor Joseph Willard, Deputy Minister of Welfare. He submitted a brief and made a statement upon which he was questioned at length. He provided the graphs, charts and all of the material that is on record, and that has helped to clarify the general problem area.

As we approach consideration of this bill we must recognize it to be a far-reaching measure in an area where there is both federal and provincial jurisdiction. It is to be expected that in so complex a field there should be both proposals and counter-proposals. Most of them are worthy of careful consideration. There are welfare problems in this field, and adequately to care for them is a monumental task. The material submitted to the Senate's Special Committee on Aging by Dr. Willard contains helpful comment in this respect.

Parliament has given evidence of its awareness of the situation in many ways and over a long period of time. Upon the federal statute books are to be found such enactments as the Old Age Pension Act, which was introduced in 1927. This was the precursor of the Old Age Security Act. There are also the Old Age Assistance Act and the Blind Persons Act. All of these are helpful in the same field. So, too, is the Unemployment Insurance Act and the Unemployment Assistance Act. Many of these programs are conducted in co-operation with the provinces, and the provinces in their turn have their special legislation.

There are as well economic problems. The amounts of money involved, both from contributions and for the payment of benefits under this plan, are very great. The accumulation of these funds and their investment is a major factor in the national economy.

There are complicated administrative aspects. The funds assembled are to be held in trust. They are to be paid out to pensioners under a formula provided in the bill. The pensioner must know what he or she is to get, and it is important that each pensioner receive his or her full entitlement.

As I said earlier, opportunities to provide income security in later years through co-operation have been sought by Canadians for generations. The rapid strides we have made in the industrialization of our country have hastened the pace of the demand for income security in later years. Industrialization and urbanization have provided opportunities for this. In colonial and later times a scheme of the type proposed in this bill would not have been possible. As the economy developed in sophistication it is true that new social problems emerged, but it is also true that the means to attack those problems have developed.

Towards the end of the late war, through the Income Tax Act, recognition was given to this concept. Parliament provided that deductions from taxable income could be made of contributions to qualified pension plans, and both employers and employees were allowed to take advantage of this measure. The theory was that as these trust funds thus accumulated were disbursed to pensioners, and in accordance with the rules of the pension plan, those amounts were taxable in the hands of the retired recipient. Usually the rate of taxation on such income is lower than would have been the case if the deductions had not been allowed. Subsequent recognition of the needs of the self-employed has been made by the sections of the Income Tax Act known as the retirement savings provisions. This too has been beneficial.

But the gap between those who could take advantage of these opportunities and those who could not was very great. It is estimated that two million Canadians are members of private pension plans, and this number is said to be some 30 per cent of the working force. In addition, some 76,260 Canadians in 1963 took advantage of the retirement savings provisions of the Income Tax law.

Based on 1964 figures, the provisions of the legislation we are now considering would affect an estimated 6,373,000 Canadians. This total represents 92 per cent of the labour force, and includes, of course, the Province of Quebec.

It is true that there are areas of our population which this plan does not benefit. That is true of almost every piece of social legislation. It was true of Family Allowances. But, as time goes on, even these inequities will disappear. What must be remembered is that this is a new far-reaching opportunity for many more Canadians to participate in a national pension plan. Regardless of what might be said of its shortcomings, it is a giant step in the desired direction.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I should say in the first place that the Canada Pension Plan is integrated with the Old Age Security legislation. Old Age Security, in an amount of $40 per month for Canadians 70 years of age and over, and without a means test, was enacted in 1952. Since that time various amendments have raised the monthly rate by stages until it is now $75 per month. The last increase of $10 was made by Parliament in October 1963. Under the Canada Pension Plan it is provided that the payment of $75 per month will be available at age 65. This will be accomplished progressively over a five-year period. The present bill also provides that while the Old Age Security payment of $75 will not be decreased, it may escalate with the cost of living.

As all honourable senators know, Old Age Security payments are financed on a pay-as-you-go basis from revenues derived from 3 per cent of sales taxes, 3 per cent of corporation income taxes and, subject to a limit of $120 per year, 4 per cent of personal income taxes. In the present fiscal year the Old Age Security fund will disburse some $885.5 million, and there is no foreseeable increase in the 3-3-4 formula to which I have referred. By 1970, 1,622,000 people will be receiving $75 per month in the age group of 65 years and over. This compares with the figure of one million people getting Old Age Security in 1965.

Honourable senators, the basic provision of the Canada Pension Plan is the payment of a pension related to earnings in addition to the Old Age Security payment of $75 a month. Generally speaking, this pension will be one-quarter of the adjusted average earnings on which the pensioner has made contributions. Thus, a man who has earned $240 per month for the prescribed period will get a pension of $60 a month. If the adjusted average earnings were $5,000 a year or more, the pension payment will be slightly in excess of $104 a month. When a person retires after the 10-year maturation period of the plan, the pension will be 25 per cent of his average earnings in the period of contribution. The pension will be proportionately less for shorter periods of membership.

The first question which arises is, who is to be covered. I should say, in the first place, that provincial government employees are excepted; members of the armed forces are also excepted; but there are studies now being made, particularly as to members of the armed forces and people in that related category of federal employment. Certain classes of migratory workers in agriculture, fishing and forestry under certain conditions are also excepted.

In general, however, the rule is that all employees earning over $50 per month, or $600 per year, are included. All self-employed who earn $800 a year, or over, are included. The upper limit of income upon which contributions are made is $5,000. Contributions will be paid into the fund from ages 18 to 70. There are provisions which permit a person to retire at 65 without further contributions, and these I shall discuss later. The bill contains a formula to revalue earnings made in earlier years. When changes have taken place in the general level of present earnings, benefits also will be adjusted in line with the rise and fall in the cost of living.

The level of contributions is the question which logically arises at this point. Employees will be required to contribute 1.8 per cent of their earned income between $600 and $5,000 in a year. The maximum which an employee can contribute per annum is therefore $79.20. This rate of contribution is matched by employers. For the self-employed the rate is 3.6 per cent of earnings from self-employment between $800 and $5,000 a year. Contributions, of course, do not form part of taxable income in the year in which they are made.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Subject to the normal tax limits.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes.

May I say something now about pension payments. Pensions may be taken upon retirement at age 65. If this option is chosen by a pensioner, minor earnings of up to $75 per month will not reduce the pension. Also, investment income will not reduce the pension.

From age 70 the right to a pension is an absolute right, regardless of what the pensioner's earnings might be; and contributions also end at age 70.

A full pension will be earned by making contributions for 85 per cent of the time from the start of the plan. For young people from age 18 through to age 65 this rule would apply. The 15 per cent of time is allowed to save people from being penalized in their pensions if they have been sick or unemployed.

Under this rule, a woman who works, say, for 30 per cent of the time, would get one-third of the full pension. This would apply if she contributed during a period of employment in her early life. If upon marriage she discontinued work until her children had grown, she could then return to the labour force and begin to contribute once more.

A man who works and who contributes between the ages of 65 and 70 will get the benefit of his earnings during those years. The unfavourable effect upon his pension which thus resulted from a lower level of earnings in earlier years, or from periods of unemployment, would thus be improved.

The full effect of the rights to a retirement pension will be established when the plan has been in operation for 10 years. This will be in January 1976.

After one year, a man or woman who has contributed in 1966, and whose age is 68, may receive a pension of one-tenth of the full level. After two years the pension will be available to retired people at age 67 and will be two-tenths of the full level. By 1970, after four years of contribution, the pension will be available from age 65 and the benefit level will be four-tenths of the full pension. Pensions, of course, are fully portable in Canada. The bill contains certain provisions in case of disability, and in case of the death of contributors. There are provisions for widows and for orphans, but these special aspects will be discussed by other members of this chamber.

As the funds collected accumulate, they will be allocated for investment in provincial securities in proportion to the contributions made from each province. This will be an important source of money for provinces to meet their evergrowing financial requirements.

The integration of this public plan with private plans is a matter to be worked out by the administrators of private plans. There is a special provision for the integration of this plan with the Public Service Superannuation Plan.

Honourable senators know that pensions are in a field of jurisdiction which is shared by the federal and provincial authorities. The bill provides that it will not be operative in a province in which a comparable plan is established under provincial law. This can be done in the beginning, and Quebec proposes to do it. It can be done later, and if a province should establish a comparable plan under its own provincial legislation, the bill arranges for the transfer to the province of the assets and liabilities relating to that province's contributors.

The bill provides for co-ordinating its administration with that of any provincial plan. These arrangements have already been established in detail with Quebec.

Honourable senators, however inadequately I may do so, I should like to pay a special tribute to the work of the members of the special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons which studied this legislation. The work done by these parliamentarians will be discussed later in the debate by one of the members of the committee.

On behalf of the Government, I thank them all for their assistance. Most of the sittings were held during the recess of Parliament. They carried on, I am sure, at great inconvenience to themselves during much of January and February. In doing this, they deprived themselves of a holiday from their parliamentary duties which the recess afforded. For all of this, the rest of us are deeply in their debt.

More especially, I should like to report the very high praise I have heard from many quarters for the work of the senators on that committee. They were constant in their attendance. They were both informed and assiduous. They enhanced the status of the committee and, incidentally, of the Senate. Many of them have developed an expert knowledge of the legislation—much more expert, I may say, than my own.

I am sure that as a result of the debate in this chamber we shall be much more informed about the status of this proposed legislation than we are now. I am sure also that the debate will be of a high order, comprehensive, and beneficial. I commend it to the favourable consideration of this honourable chamber.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: May I ask the Leader of the Government if it is his intention to send this bill to committee?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I am of course in the hands of the Senate. I think perhaps this is a matter which depends a great deal on the way in which honourable senators propose to deal with the legislation. Moreover, we are very conscious of the fact that a joint committee sat to discuss this bill and heard a great deal of evidence over a considerable period of time. However, if honourable senators feel that better explanations can be given in committee than by speeches in this house, I see no reason in the world why the bill should not go to a committee as other bills of this kind do.

I know from events that have happened in the other place, some will say this is unnecessary and there is delay involved. My personal opinion is that one of the standing committees of the Senate will provide a better opportunity for explanation of the terms of the bill and in general do a better job than if the bill did not go to committee. If, therefore, the disposition is that the bill should be referred, say, to the Banking and Commerce Committee, I certainly think it would be a good course to follow.

I simply add one word of caution. It would not be my intention that we should repeat the work that was done by the joint committee which heard the evidence of many witnesses from the public. However, for the purpose of getting explanations, I think it would probably be helpful to all honourable senators if the bill were referred to a committee.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, first let me say with reference to the work of the committee, that if there is any member of the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons who has developed the expert knowledge of this bill to which the leader referred, it is the charming, devoted and efficient co-chairman of the committee, Senator Muriel Fergusson. I was a member of the committee, and I do not claim to have developed that expert knowledge.

This is as complicated a piece of legislation as has ever come before this house. There were sections to the amendments of the Income Tax Act which, after the most exhaustive explanations, I said I was unable to understand. I think there are sections of this bill which are even less capable of being understood by the ordinary mind. I was therefore delighted to hear the leader of the Senate (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) say that if it was the disposition of the house the bill would go to the Banking and Commerce Committee. I would think that would be for the purpose of enabling the committee to hear the minister and her officials, so that all honourable senators would have an opportunity to benefit from those explanations. I would agree with the leader of the Senate that it should not be necessary for us to call witnesses from the general public.

Having said that, I want to make my own position clear from the outset. My reputation, from the work that I have done in the field of welfare, I think will speak for itself. This is a welfare measure. One of the important questions I want to discuss is as to whether that measure actually accomplishes what it purports to accomplish, whether it does it in the best way, and whether, having regard to the other claims upon the purse of this country, it is too niggardly, or perchance too generous.

The bill was before a special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons. That it is a complicated bill is evidenced by the fact that there are 11 volumes of evidence, dealing with the 11 daily reports, sometimes one session, sometimes two and three, totalling 638 pages, dealing merely with the explanations of the minister and her officials. So that this is not a simple piece of legislation with which we are dealing tonight.

The leader referred to the prior legislation in this field. He referred to the Old Age Pension Act of 1927, the Old Age Assistance Act of 1952, and the joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons which sat in 1950 prior to the enactment of that first Old Age Security legislation.

In considering this bill and in relating it to the fact that there was a special joint committee of Senate and the House of Commons, I do not think we should be led astray or put ourselves in the position of saying: Well, there was a special committee of the Senate and House of Commons in 1950, and in 1952 its recommendations were implemented with practically no change, and therefore we have been through the same procedure today and can go safely ahead and enact this legislation.

The terms of reference of the committee in 1952 were as follows:

> That the Senate do unite with the House of Commons in the appointment of a Joint Committee of both Houses of Parliament to examine and study the operation and effects of existing legislation of the Parliament of Canada and of the several provincial legislatures with respect to old age security; similar legislation in other countries; possible alternative measures of old age security for > Canada, with or without a means test for beneficiaries, including plans based on contributory insurance principles; the probable cost thereof and possible methods of providing therefor; the constitutional and financial adjustments, if any, required for the effective operations of such plans and other related matters.

Of course that committee sat for some months. What that committee did was to look at the entire field.

The terms of reference of the committee of which Senator Fergusson was co-chairman were much narrower. The order from this house was:

> That the following senators be appointed to act on behalf of the Senate on the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons appointed to consider Bill C-136, intituled: "An Act to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors";...

That is a very much narrower term of reference. There was one piece of legislation placed before us. We were asked to examine and report on it, and the amendments that were accepted were of a minor nature. The majority of the amendments that came out of the committee were purely drafting amendments. The major one was not made until the bill reached the floor of the other place. The attention of the committee was directed to a very narrow matter. As we were reminded from time to time, it was directed to this bill. We did not have the broad terms of reference that the committee of 1950 had.

Honourable senators, in a moment or two I am going to refer to some of the evidence that was given before the 1950 committee. In the meantime, I think we should also look at the history of this particular piece of legislation. I consider this the fifth edition.

The first version was introduced in the other place on June 21, 1963, and was being discussed in committee on July 18, 1963. Of course, it has a different rate of contribution from the rate that is included in this bill. It provided that out of the Canada pension funds would be paid the additional $10 a month to persons who were drawing Old Age Security; subsequently the Government decided to pay it independently of this bill, and passed a measure in October, 1963, increasing by 1 per cent the rate of personal income tax up to a limit of $3,000 to cover that.

It contained a number of other differences. Most importantly—and I read from the statement that Miss LaMarsh circulated at that time:

> The Canada Pension Plan will not build up a huge investment fund in the hands of the federal Government. Instead it will be financed on a pay-as-you-go basis. The money received in contributions will in most years approximately match the money paid out to pensioners. While the program will operate with a contingency reserve...

Everyone would agree with that.

> ...in order to avoid short run fluctuations in contribution rates, this reserve will normally be small by comparison with the size of the annual payments.

The minister goes on:

> While full funding may be provided under private pension plans, it is not the practice in government old age insurance programs. Indeed, full funding on the scale of a nation wide plan would be a quite excessive form of saving enforced by the state.

However, as I say, that version of the plan died, and a new version appeared in March 1964. Then there was a third version announced, and then we had the fourth version and the White Paper of August 1964.

Now we find a completely new set of circumstances. We find that we are to have a lower rate of pension, a higher rate of contribution and a very substantial degree of funding.

> The revenues of the plan, over and above those needed for current operations, will be available for the use of the provinces; they will be divided in proportion to the amounts paid into the plan by contributors in each province. Provincial governments will thus have the right to use of the funds, provided they undertake to pay interest to the pension fund at a rate not less than the rate for long-term federal borrowing. Any funds which a province does not wish to take up would be invested in federal government securities, but the principal assets of the fund will be obligations of provincial governments. It is estimated that the reserves in the federal fund will be more than $4 billion by the end of the first ten years.

Miss LaMarsh at that time probably had not seen her own actuarial report—I will come to that in a moment—because the reserves are very much greater than that at the end of the first ten years.

Now I will refer to the fifth version, and this version does not differ in its funding aspects from the third and fourth versions. I will come to that in due course.

There appeared before the Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Old Age Security in 1950 certain gentlemen who now sit on the treasury benches in the other place.

Honourable senators will appreciate that this scheme is to be financed by what is, in effect, a payroll tax—a tax on employees and a payroll tax on employers. It is interesting—when this joint committee in 1950 had a free hand to look at all the methods of financing, to look at all the possibilities—to hear, for example, what Mr. Mitchell Sharp, then of the economic policy division of the Department of Finance and now the Minister of Trade and Commerce, had to say:

> The fundamental characteristics of a pay-as-you-go system—

And this is, of course, what was adopted.

> —is that those who are working pay the cost of providing pensions for those who have retired. The financing of a pay-as-you-go system is a matter of distributing the current cost of pensions over the population in what is considered to be a proper way. In other words, it is essentially a revenue problem, even though the scheme may be contributory in the sense that it is paid for in whole or in part by a special levy or contribution.

It is only because the Government decided to finance the original Old Age Security by a special levy or contribution that it was necessary to obtain an amendment to the British North America Act, to which the Leader of the Government referred. Had it been prepared to finance in—what shall I say?—the orthodox way, without earmarking the funds, it would not have needed an amendment to the British North America Act. It needed no amendment to the British North America Act to provide the Blind Persons Allowances to which the Leader of the Government referred, but because it decided to finance it in this so-called extra-budgetary fashion it did need that amendment, and it got it.

Mr. Sharp went on—and remember this is the type of plan we are looking at:

> I think it is pretty clear that a tax on wages and salaries would have a very direct effect on cost of production. I would think if there were a payroll tax, paid by the employer, the tendency would be for it to be passed on in prices immediately. There would be certain deterring factors and this is one of the difficulties of payroll taxes; if they do not apply on imports, you put the local producer at some handicap compared with his competitors abroad.

He goes on:

> However, I would think in general a payroll tax would tend to be passed on to the consumer and in that way it would have a direct effect on prices. It would not, of course, apply to everything purchased, it would apply only to goods and services that were taxed. It would not apply to rents except in so far as they reflect the higher cost of construction in houses...
>
> Since the payroll tax is placed on all exports, it enters into the cost of producing goods for export. The sales tax is rebated. Now, a sales tax may have some effect on increasing the cost of living internally, thus affecting the wage rate, but it does not have the same direct effect a payroll tax has.

Then there was another witness who appeared before that committee, Professor Maurice Lamontagne, then on the staff of Laval University and now Secretary of State. I read from a very poor photostat. He said:

> In the long run the consumers' goods industries will find it just as difficult as do capital goods industries to pass the tax on to the buyer of their products. When consumers' goods industries allow the tax on payrolls to be paid by consumers, while the capital goods industries are unable to add the tax to the price of their products, the margin of profit in the consumers' goods industries becomes greater than that in basic industries.

Then he proceeds to refer to the possibility of the switching of capital investment from one group of industries to another. Here are his conclusions—because he feels that these taxes are going to be passed on in one form or another, and I have underlined these:

> In short, the whole burden of the tax supposed to be paid by the employer will fall on the employee. It is useless to assert that such results are in flagrant contradiction to the program of public works intended to avoid unemployment.
>
> The second way in which the tax is brought to bear on labour is by the substitution of labour-saving devices for manpower... In either case the demand for labour falls, and the above mentioned conditions arise: labour must accept lower wages or unemployment will follow.
>
> One cannot foresee the future in this matter. Inventions are unpredictable, and their ultimate effects impossible to define. But industry always has in reserve new processes (and the war had undoubtedly stimulated these) which can be used when new conditions, such as a marked increase in wages, warrant their adoption.

The conclusion seems inescapable. The tax on payrolls will fall back on the workers in the form of unemployment or a reduction in wages. At the same time, employees must also pay the direct tax on their wages which is ticketed as their share of the cost of social security; and they must contribute to the government's share which is drawn from general taxation.

The committee at that stage was considering three collections, one from the employer, one from the employee, and a payment out of the general revenue.

We therefore conclude that the workers will bear nearly the whole cost of social security.

It is interesting to note that all those who have studied the incidence of such taxes reach the same conclusions.

And then he quotes a number of learned gentlemen. Then he concludes:

I would say a payroll tax tends to reduce both consumption and employment which are precisely the two variables of the economic system we want to maximize. Consequently the tax would be a decided advantage to those employers who use less labour in proportion to their capital.

I have here an article from the Canadian Tax Journal, November-December 1964, by the then Professor W. C. Hood, Professor of Political Economy at the University of Toronto, and now adviser to the Governors of the Bank of Canada. He refers to several facets of the Canada Pension Plan. I should say in fairness that he was only referring to the second edition, I think—it may have been the third—but it was an edition that had the funding features to which I am referring now. It was not the first edition. This paper was delivered in June 1964:

Moreover I would expect that persons will seek to pass on their share of the costs of government pensions to their employers, customers or clients and that employers, in their turn, will take what steps they may to pass on through price increases, direct and indirect increases in their burden of pension costs. On the other hand, of course, the pension program will add weight to the existing pressures to economize on the use of labour by adopting labour-saving techniques including automation of processes. For us to institute a more liberal old age security program than the American program with its consequent increase in tax burden at the time when our major competitor, the United States, is completing a series of major cuts in personal and corporate tax rates will surely prejudice our competitive position.

It is rather interesting to notice that fundamentally the views of Mr. Sharp and Mr. Lamontagne, as expressed 15 years ago, coincide with the views expressed by Professor Hood in the last few months.

The Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) referred to the large fund that was going to be accumulated, and I think we should have that on the record. I refer to what Miss LaMarsh said in the White Paper, but of course we can obtain somewhat more accurate figures than those if we refer to the actuarial report prepared by the government actuary dated November 6, 1964. He has several estimates as to the accumulation of the fund. The first estimate is based on a 3 per cent annual rate of increase in earnings, because under the bill the so-called pensionable earnings will increase from time to time in accordance with a pension index which is really a 10-year moving average, I believe, of wages. Assuming a 3 per cent annual rate of increase, the fund of the Canada Pension Plan, not including the plan to be administered by the Province of Quebec at the end of 1975, which is only 10 years from now, at 5 per cent interest will amount to over $4.9 billion. I have added 30 per cent to take account of the Province of Quebec, so that we can see the order of magnitude of this for the whole of Canada and reach a figure of $6.401 billion. If you take a 4 per cent annual increase in wages, the figure to fund the Canada Pension Plan, again excluding the Quebec plan, would be still greater, almost $5 billion, and for the two plans it comes to over $6½ billion.

Now those are very large amounts of money to be put in the hands of government without the sanction of the market place attached to them. There is no sanction of the market place to be applied to these funds for many years, as the figures presented to the committee show, and to which I shall return later.

But there are other people who are concerned about this because of the reversal of principle. They are concerned about the stout defence by the Minister of National Health and Welfare of a pay-as-you-go plan on June 18, 1963, and the equally stout defence by the three ministers—the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Minister of National Revenue and the Minister of Finance—not of a fully funded but of a partially funded plan which builds up in 10 years to the magnitude I have mentioned.

I have here an extract from what Premier Roblin had to say at the meeting of Ministers of Finance on December 1, 1964.

> . . . this plan started as a pay-as-you-go system with lower rates of contribution —and this was strongly defended by federal ministers on grounds of economic policy. This aspect of the plan has been changed to more nearly approximate a funded plan and this has now been equally strongly defended on economic terms by the federal administration. There seems to be some unresolved questions to be ventilated in this connection.

I agree with Premier Roblin completely. That is one of the reasons why I think this bill should go to committee, so that we can see if these unresolved questions can be ventilated, and to find out how economic policy changed so quickly during a comparatively short period of months.

There are other people who have referred to the dangers of funding. One of the witnesses before the committee was Mr. Robert J. Myers, Chief Actuary, Social Security Administration of the United States. He is a man who probably knows more about social security and the funding and financing of plans than anyone else in North America. Referring to the American plan, at page 899 of the evidence he said this:

> . . . in the past decade, O.A.S.D.I. has operated on more or less of a pay-as-you-go basis, with income closely approximating outgo. Under present law, however, a substantial fund would be built up starting next year and particularly after 1967, when the scheduled increases in the contribution rates would occur. Under this basis, about 15 per cent of the cost of the program would be met by interest earnings, with the remainder, of course, coming from contributions of workers and employers. As you know, no direct government contribution to the system is provided.
>
> At the moment, it appears quite likely, however, that the financing basis contemplated in present law will be modified. There has recently been considerable concern on the part of many economic planners that the contemplated growth of the O.A.S.D.I. trust funds resulting from the scheduled contribution rate increases, which will produce significant excesses of contribution income over benefit outgo, is economically undesirable at this time because of withdrawing consumer-purchasing power. For example, during consideration of legislation last year the secretary of health, education and welfare stated to the Senate finance committee that, under a proposed revised tax schedule "the contribution rates would increase more slowly and gradually than under present law, so that excessive accumulations of funds in the next several years, with possible depressing effects on the economy, would be avoided".

They have an advisory council on social security and, of course, there is an advisory council contemplated under this bill. Mr. Myers continued:

> This council recommended that the presently scheduled contribution rates should be adjusted "to avoid the rapid increase in trust fund assets that will otherwise begin with the rate increases scheduled for 1966 and 1968". . . .Instead, the fund should be sufficient in size so that it can "meet temporary excesses of outgo over income due to relatively high benefit costs or low social security tax revenue in a particular period." The council believed that an adequate fund would be in the neighbourhood of one year's benefit payments; this would mean that, over the long range, interest earnings would supply only about 4 to 5 per cent of benefit costs.

Well, of course, that is what the Minister of National Health and Welfare believed in June 1963.

Another great danger—and there are many —to a funded system is that the public tends to look at the fund, and to believe that that fund is something that is there. It is a large fund, and the pressures are applied for more and more benefits without increases in premiums. There are a good many examples of that, which honourable senators can bring to their own minds. There is the pressure on the provinces to spend. The sanction of the market place does not take effect for many years. It is between 1985 and 1990 that at present contribution rates the fund will start to decrease.

I am sorry, honourable senators, but I am unable to put my hand on the exact figure, but my recollection is that it is between 15 and 20 years, 15 years at least, before the payments out from the fund plus the administrative charges equal the input into the fund, so that during that period all that a province borrowing these huge sums of money needs to do to pay the interest is to put in another I.O.U. and use the national accounts basis. It is going to be no drain on their cash funds.

The drain, of course, will come later. This will catch up with them, and the taxpayer eventually may find that instead of a semi-funded plan he has a "two pay" plan—a plan where you pay as you go in, and another one where you pay as you go out.

I am not going to discuss at length the possibility of distortion of capital markets, and the effect on private savings funds that this may have, but that there will be a diversion from the private sector to the public sector goes without question. The Economic Council has suggested that that diversion might be slightly more than 5 per cent of total gross private saving, or somewhat more than one per cent of the gross national product. It has stated that even if this entire sum were diverted the effect on the rate of total saving would be limited—the phrase "the effect on the rate of total saving would be limited" is a quote. I know that it will be limited, but whether a reduction in the total rate of saving of one per cent of the gross national product is something that can be ignored, I am not certain.

With that, I turn again to Professor Hood, who said:

> The withdrawal of funds from the private sector to the government sector will impair the growth of large aggregations of capital in the private sector. I am not oblivious to the fact that important contributions to productivity may spring from a collection of many small investments. I also believe however, that there are important projects which require large-scale financing and which have to tap large aggregations of capital funds. I am concerned that the reduction in the growth of saving in the private sector by adversely affecting the accumulation of large blocks of capital may impair the ability of the private sector to undertake large scale capital projects essential to productivity growth.
>
> I am not propounding the doctrinaire view that what is done by the private sector advances economic growth while anything that is done in the public sector retards it. What I am trying to stress is that the investment by the provincial governments of the very large amounts of capital to be amassed under the Canada Pension Plan must contribute to productivity growth or retired persons along with the rest of the residents of this country will not enjoy as high real standards of living as the magnitude of their savings programs would warrant. I do not think provincial governments are yet geared to make the capital investment decisions they are soon going to be faced with under the Canada Pension Plan and under other policies serving to enlarge the role of government in capital formation.

I do not think any of us are under any real illusion as to why we have a semi-funded plan today, and as to why the economic facts of life have changed to make an acceptable plan out of what was scorned in June of 1963. The fact is that the Province of Quebec—and I admire the Province of Quebec in this and other respects—quite frankly said, "We are going to have a funded pension plan because our pension plan is going to serve two purposes." As I recall it, they did not say which purpose had priority. I think they put them on the same basis. One was a welfare purpose, and the other was the accumulation of a capital fund at the disposal of the Government. Anybody who has read the publications of the actuarial studies prepared by the Province of Quebec will find what I have just said clearly stated in the first or second page.

I say that those are perfectly proper objectives for the Province of Quebec. That is a decision of the Province of Quebec, and it would not be for me to criticize it, even though I did not agree with it. But I do say that that is no reason for imposing the same scheme on the rest of Canada.

The reason this attempt to do so is being made is, I suggest, because of a complete misunderstanding of the meanings of certain words. One reason given is that we want portability. It is said that we must have a completely portable pension plan from St. John's to Victoria. Honourable senators, "portability" and "equality" or "comparability" mean entirely different things. One does not need comparability to have portability. If the only pension plan that were to be introduced in Canada were the Quebec Pension Plan, then it would have complete portability. Portability means that when I leave the milieu with respect to which I obtain my pension—whether it is when I leave the employment of a particular employer, when I go to live outside in another country, or when I leave, in this case, the Province of Quebec—I do not thereby lose any rights that I have up to that point. That is true; but that is all that portability means. It does not mean that I necessarily move into another milieu where I am entitled to the same type of pension.

There are many private pension plans which are substantially portable; and there is draft legislation in the hands of a number of provinces now to make them more portable. When I leave the XYZ company, when I resign, I do not lose any benefits for which I paid, or any benefits towards which my employer has contributed. Therefore, at the higher age I can go to my new employer and he knows that I have something left back here, so he does not have to make any special provisions.

I move in for a short period and I get some more benefits from him. That is the situation under the Canada Pension Plan in this respect. If I come over from Detroit and work for five years in Windsor, or for two or three years, and if I have pensionable earnings and pay on them, as I must under this bill if I am employed in Canada, and if I later return to the United States, the result is that if I think about it when I am 65 I can draw a pension. That is portability, so that the excuse that it is necessary—

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): That is a vested interest. I think the point the honourable senator is proceeding to make is that the person who moves acquires a vested interest in what he has acquired up to the time of the move, and another vested interest in what he may acquire as a result of the move to the other place.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: He may acquire any other vested interest in the new place, but he has acquired a vested interest in the place which he has left. This statement that portability is at the basis of this plan, cannot be established and is invalid, as is evidenced by another fact.

As the Leader of the Government pointed out, the bill provides for provinces contracting out of the legislation, provided they establish a substantially comparable plan with substantially comparable benefits and conditions. Provision is made for contracting out immediately, which is what the Province of Quebec is going to do. There is provision made for a subsequent contracting out, if a province chooses to do so on two years' notice. Provisions are made for the province assuming the responsibilities with respect to contributions which have been made to that date, and for the province receiving the funds which have resulted from those contributions, so that it can take care of that obligation. But, and I think honourable senators should note this, having contracted out, then the province is free to change a plan in any way it wishes. That is the opinion of the Department of Justice, and that is the opinion which Mr. Thorson gave to the committee. Anyone can read the evidence.

That does not mean that portability is to be destroyed. I would think that no province would ever establish a plan of this nature which would say, in effect: If you leave the province, you are through. That is not what Quebec says; it is not what this bill says about persons from other countries coming here and working for a period, and leaving.

When I leave XYZ employer, I carry with me the benefits I had vested there, and when I go to ABC employer I may make a different contribution and the level of benefits may be different, but portability continues. The point I am trying to make is that the arrangement for semi-funding or partial funding—I do not know what the percentage of funding is in this plan—was unnecessary for the purposes for which it has been described as being necessary. Furthermore, that is recognized in the bill because the bill makes no provision for contracting in, once a province has contracted out. There is no provision for the Province of Quebec, once the time has passed, for contracting in. There is no reason to believe that these rates, these contributions and these benefits, will continue forever to be uniform.

It would be probably unfair to say that the price we pay for that uniformity to date will be in 1966 about $140 million, by reason of tax abatements made by the federal Government to the provincial governments. I referred to that previously, and I just mention it now in passing and will say no more.

There is one beauty of this semi-funded plan, and that is that for a period of time it conceals the true cost of the plan from the taxpayer. It is true that honourable senators know that the time will come, and it will come in about 20 years, when something will have to be done about the contributions under this plan, and historically they only go up. I do not think the people of Canada know that. But they do know this: they know that when the categorical old age security benefit was increased by $10 a month in October 1963, they thereupon started to pay up to $30 a year more in taxes. It is one of the best sanctions I know, when you are asking for something more, if at the same time you have to pay something more and you can correlate the two. That is not what will happen here. What will happen is that many years from now the contributors will suddenly have to pay more. Of course it will be the younger contributors, as the whole scheme of this plan is that my grandchildren will pay for me and then, if they go on long enough, their grandchildren hopefully may pay for them. Nobody pays for himself.

I am looking at the actuarial report. The actuary prepared tables on a number of estimates. He has what he calls a high cost estimate, a low cost estimate and an intermediate cost estimate. Probably the fair thing is to take the intermediate cost estimate. If the increase in average earnings is only 3 per cent per annum, then in 1980 the 3.6 per cent will not quite cover the cost. In other words, shortly after that the fund will start to go down. If it is 4 per cent, you have to wait until some date between 1980 and 1985.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Would the honourable senator give me the first date, please?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: 1980. It is table 11 of the report of the chief actuary, given at page 503 of the proceedings of the Joint Committee. In 1980 you will start drawing from your equity in the fund in order to provide the benefits on the basis of these estimates. At the 4 per cent rate of increase in average earnings, it will be some time between 1980 and 1985. Of course, as you go along—remember we are talking about a 3.6 per cent payment on contributory earnings—in 35 years, on the 3 per cent basis, the actual cost will be nearly 5½ per cent. On the 4 per cent increase in earnings it will be 4.88 per cent, and so on.

A few moments ago, I said I could not put my hand on the figures to show when the fund would start to decrease. I now have those figures. Using a 3 per cent per annum average increase in earnings, the fund will start to decrease sometime between 1985 and 1990, that is, just over 20 years from now. There are many senators who are here tonight who will still be here then.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: On the 4 per cent earnings, it again starts to decrease during the same 5-year period, using the so-called intermediate cost figures. And, of course, if something is not done, in 35 years from now you will have a deficit of billions of dollars.

The danger of the fund is, first, that it builds up a fund which people do not understand and, secondly, it leads to a rude shock and a rude awakening.

Mr. Lamontagne had something to say about this 15 years ago, and I think what he said is borne out by some of the figures I have been discussing in the past few minutes. He said:

> Furthermore, the reserve fund accumulated by the government creates problems of its own. If the government tries to invest that money in private economy then it competes with private savings. Such a move would also be undesirable for other reasons that you can easily appreciate.

And of course that is not contemplated under this bill.

> On the other hand, what the government is most likely to do is to invest the fund in government securities and so use it to meet its current expenditures.
>
> The obligations of the government deposited in exchange do not represent actual assets but merely future commitments that will have to be met by future taxes.

That is important, and that is what I meant by a two-pay program—pay as you go in, and pay when the bonds have to be redeemed.

> Under those circumstances the fund is merely a fiction.

I am quoting Mr. Lamontagne, who knows much more about these things than I do.

> When the system of old age pensions starts to operate on a full scale, the government has to revert to the pay-as-you-go approach, anyway.

That is the same evidence as Mr. Myers gave, and I have great respect for both of those witnesses.

The fact is that between our payments under O.A.S. and our contributions under this fund, the bill in 1966 will be something of the order of $1½ billion. I am including the Quebec pension fund. However, that is something that is hidden from the individual taxpayer to a considerable extent at the present time.

Once you reach the pay-as-you-go situation, of course, it becomes very obvious. The United States has reached the stage now where its rate, which started out quite low, was raised on January 1, 1960 from 5 per cent to 6 per cent. This is the combined rate. By and large, the employer and the employee pay half. On January 1, 1962 it went from 6 per cent to 6½ per cent. In 1963 it went from 6¼ per cent to 7 per cent. In 1966 it is to go from 7¼ per cent to 8¼ per cent.

In 1967 or 1968 the rate was proposed to go to 9¼ per cent, but it has been estimated that that may build up the fund, as Mr. Myers' evidence showed, a little too rapidly, and that probably will be adjusted. However, those are the kinds of rates you reach on a pay-as-you-go plan, and eventually this plan will be a pay-as-you-go plan. My suggestion is that it should start out on that basis so that people will know from the outset exactly what is happening.

Now I want to touch on the comparison of our proposed old age security disability and survivor benefits with those paid in the United States.

In her statement of July 18, 1963, Miss LaMarsh made a comparison, including flat rate benefits, if the earning levels in Canada remain unchanged and the United States program is unchanged. At every level of earnings the United States benefits are less than the Canadian benefits at corresponding ages, except that at that time the proposal was—this of course was plan 1—that our covered earnings would stop at $4,000 a year, whereas the United States earnings went up to $4,800 a year, and at that figure at age 65 our benefit was slightly less than the United States benefit; at age 70 it was substantially greater.

Mr. Myers was asked about the situation in the United States. He said:

> We have a provision which says that the minimum benefit for a retired person at age 65 is $40.

Of course, when we have this measure the minimum provision five years from now for a person aged 65 will be $75.

Then Mr. Myers was asked about the average payments that were made under O.A.S., and he said:

> The average payment now for a retired worker is about $75 for those on the roll—

That is, for those who have retired.

> —while for those currently coming on the roll it is about $80.
>
> This includes all types of cases from the person coming on with a minimum benefit of $40, because he had a very sporadic wage history, to the full time worker who has been in the system every year since it began at relatively good wages—a person who perhaps is getting $100 or $105 a month.

Under our system, of course, we call $5,000 a year "good wages." Instead of getting $100 or $105 a month we will be paying $75 plus $104, or $179 a month, and we will be paying $75 of that, without any retirement test, starting at age 65 in spite of the fact that the recipient may still be in the labour force. Under the United States system there is a retirement test which applies up to age 72. Our retirement test, where it is applicable, applies only up to age 70.

Now all I would like to suggest at this moment is that we may be placing ourselves under a very serious competitive handicap in establishing a level of welfare benefits that is substantially higher than that of the United States, with whom we are in constant competition in our domestic market, in their domestic market and in foreign markets.

I have sat in meetings with young people who, I think, sometimes take a saner view than some of the rest of us do about these things, and I have been asked how it is we can afford bigger pensions in Canada than they can in the United States. I try to reason with them and explain to them that we are a wealthy country, that our per capita G.N.P. is much greater, that our personal net disposable income is much greater and that, therefore, we are entitled to these things; but I have not been able to make any converts.

Honourable senators, there are a number of other matters I would like to deal with and, with your indulgence, I would adjourn the debate.

On motion of Hon. Mr. McCutcheon, debate adjourned.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of Polymer Corporation Limited, including its Accounts and Financial Statement certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to sections 85(3) and 87(3) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Report of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, together with a Statement of its Accounts certified by the Auditors, for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 33 of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act, chapter 46, and sections 85(3) and 87(3) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America concerning the establishment of an International Arbitral Tribunal to dispose of United States claims relating to Gut Dam. (English and French texts).

Report of the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 11 of the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources Act, chapter 4, Statutes of Canada, 1953-54. (English and French texts).

Copy of Ordinances, chapters 1 to 4 inclusive, made by the Commissioner in Council of the Northwest Territories, assented to February 17, 1965, pursuant to section 15 of the Northwest Territories Act, chapter 331, R.S.C., 1952, as amended 1953-54, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1965-509, dated March 19, 1965, approving same. (English text).

Capital Budgets of Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, Northern Transportation Company Limited, and Eldorado Aviation Company Limited, for the year ending December 31, 1965, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952, together with a copy of Order in Council P.C. 1965-471, dated March 18, 1965, approving same. (English and French texts).

Report of the Tariff Board, relative to the Inquiry Ordered by the Minister of Finance respecting Radio, Television and Related Products—Reference No. 123, (English and French texts), together with a copy of the evidence presented at public hearings, (English text), pursuant to section 6 of the Tariff Board Act, chapter 261, R.S.C., 1952.

Report of the Custodian of Enemy Property for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 3 of The Trading with the Enemy (Transitional Powers) Act, chapter 24, Statutes of Canada, 1947. (English and French texts).

Statutory Orders and Regulations published in the Canada Gazette, part II, of Wednesday, March 24, 1965, pursuant to section 7 of the Regulations Act, chapter 235, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

DIVORCE

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, presented the committee's reports Nos. 841 to 896, inclusive.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these reports be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: I move, with leave, that they be considered now.

Motion agreed to and reports adopted, on division.

RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED

Leave having been given to revert to Presentation of Petitions:

Hon. Mr. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, presented the following resolutions:

Resolution 810, for the relief of Joseph Lorenzo Lucien Matte.

Resolution 811, for the relief of Joel Rozenblat.

Resolution 812, for the relief of Roger Simonneau.

Resolution 813, for the relief of Myra Belle Feingold Ryerson.

Resolution 814, for the relief of Jean Gerin-Lajoie.

Resolution 815, for the relief of Denis Sproule Flack.

Resolution 816, for the relief of Jacqueline de Muinck Comijs, otherwise known as Jacqueline de Muinck Comys.

Resolution 817, for the relief of William Thomas Lucas Butcher.

Resolution 818, for the relief of Joseph Wenceslas Adrien Gagnon.

Resolution 819, for the relief of Jean Lionel Saumur.

Resolution 820, for the relief of Lucile Gouin Bureau.

Resolution 821, for the relief of Marie Jacqueline Madeleine Pominville Lepine.

Resolution 822, for the relief of Neonila (Nila) Latysh Perederyj.

Resolution 823, for the relief of Doris Leclair Picard.

Resolution 824, for the relief of Henri Paul Gaudreault.

Resolution 825, for the relief of Claire (Mary Clara Ida) Lacoste White.

Resolution 826, for the relief of Patricia Louise Rodriguez Pichnej.

Resolution 827, for the relief of Irene Janet Charlotte Haverland Parkinson.

Resolution 828, for the relief of Marie Marguerite Suzanne Desormeaux Barbeau.

Resolution 829, for the relief of Vilma Kirby Morris.

Resolution 830, for the relief of Margaret McGlinchy Ehrensperger.

Resolution 831, for the relief of Enevio Noce.

Resolution 832, for the relief of Agnes Zmroczek Stanczykowski.

Resolution 833, for the relief of Therese Marie Pauline Weber Watson.

Resolution 834, for the relief of Armand (Armando) Ronco.

Resolution 835, for the relief of Cecile Hammond Sara.

Resolution 836, for the relief of Ralph Bryan Thomson.

Resolution 837, for the relief of Dorothy Jean Abbott Ferrabee.

Resolution 838, for the relief of Clara Elizabeth Duncan Garrow.

Resolution 839, for the relief of Leslie Leonard Dunn.

Resolution 840, for the relief of Dorothy Grace Arnold Penczak.

Resolution 841, for the relief of Mariette Labelle Gauthier dit Marechal.

Resolution 842, for the relief of Peter Doukas.

Resolution 843, for the relief of John Maloney.

Resolution 844, for the relief of Esther Titleman Caplan.

Resolution 845, for the relief of Lucille Amiko Furuya Hartnell.

Resolution 846, for the relief of Ann Campbell Elder Grimsdale.

Resolution 847, for the relief of Matteo Della Malva.

Resolution 848, for the relief of Alan Armour.

Resolution 849, for the relief of Micheline Cecile Pepe McLeod.

Resolution 850, for the relief of Jocelyn Mary Diana Bampfylde Daniell McCay.

Resolution 851, for the relief of Jean H. Deslauriers.

Resolution 852, for the relief of Carole Grace Kathleen Campbell Vassilieff, otherwise known as Carole Grace Kathleen Campbell Vance.

Resolution 853, for the relief of Fannie Hartman Shulman.

Resolution 854, for the relief of Doris Marie Sanford Seymour.

Resolution 855, for the relief of Rose Mary Sudds Burnstun.

Resolution 856, for the relief of Olga Stefik Auger.

Resolution 857, for the relief of Gilbert Antaya.

Resolution 858, for the relief of Muriel Douglas McLaren Barr.

Resolution 859, for the relief of Robert Toupin.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these resolutions be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Honourable senators, I move that these resolutions be considered on Thursday next.

Motion agreed to.

NATURAL RESOURCES COMMITTEE

CHANGE IN MEMBERSHIP

Hon. Arthur L. Beaubien, with leave of the Senate, moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Aird be added to the list of Senators serving on the Standing Committee on Natural Resources.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS COMMITTEE

CHANGE IN MEMBERSHIP

Hon. Mr. Beaubien (Provencher), with leave of the Senate, moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Aird be added to the list of Senators serving on the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications.

Motion agreed to.

MISCELLANEOUS PRIVATE BILLS COMMITTEE

CHANGE IN MEMBERSHIP

Hon. Mr. Beaubien (Provencher), with leave of the Senate, moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Aird be added to the list of Senators serving on the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 1465.)

COMPANIES ACT

COMMONS AMENDMENTS

AMENDMENTS made by the House of Commons to Senate Bill S-22 intituled: "An Act to amend the Companies Act."

1. Page 9, Lines 14 to 39. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

12A. (1) In this section the expression "mutual fund shares" means any class of shares having conditions attached thereto that include conditions requiring the company issuing the shares to accept, at the demand of the holder thereof and at prices determined and payable in accordance with the conditions, the surrender of the shares, or fractions or parts thereof, that are fully paid.

(2) Where the only undertaking of a company is the business of investing the funds of the company, its letters patent or supplementary letters patent may provide for the issuing of one or more classes of mutual fund shares, in which case the letters patent or supplementary letters patent shall set out the conditions governing

(a) the surrender of fully paid mutual fund shares or any fractions or parts thereof that are fully paid; and

(b) the determination of the price to be paid therefor and the manner and time of payment thereof.

(3) Any mutual fund shares or fractions or parts thereof surrendered to the company pursuant to the conditions attached to such shares shall be deemed to be no longer outstanding and shall not be reissued by the company.

(4) There may be included in the conditions attached to mutual fund shares

(a) a condition providing for a participating interest in any fund administered by the company; and

(b) a condition that, upon the surrender of any fully paid mutual fund shares, or any fractions or parts thereof that are fully paid, the price to be paid therefor may be paid out of capital.

(5) Where in any letters patent or supplementary letters patent the expression "redemption or purchase for cancellation", or an expression of like import, is used in relation to any shares of a company, the expression shall, in relation to mutual fund shares of the company, be deemed to be a reference to acceptance by the company of the surrender of those shares.

2. Page 16, Line 4. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

section, where pursuant to subsection (1a) of section 12;

3. Page 16, Line 11. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

of the company shall be thereby decreased; and subsections (1) and (2) of this section and sections 51 to 58 do not apply.

4. Page 17, Line 9. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

cancellation, otherwise than out of capital, if such purchase or redemption is made;

5. Page 17, Line 36. Immediately after Line 35 add the following subsection:

(5) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to a redemption or purchase for cancellation of shares that are redeemed or purchased for cancellation pursuant to subsection (3) of section 49.

6. Page 27, Line 44. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

redemption price thereof, and indicating separately any class of shares that is redeemable out of capital;

7. Page 29, Lines 37 and 38. Delete and substitute the following therefor:

bonuses, fees and other emoluments;

8. Page 34, Lines 26 to 33. Delete.

9. Page 39, Lines 1 to 16. Delete.

10. Pages 39 to 45. Renumber Clauses 42 to 52 as Clauses 41 to 51 inclusive.

11. Page 45. Immediately after the renumbered Clause 51, insert a new Clause 52, as follows:

52. This Act shall come into force on the 1st day of July, 1965.

Léon-J. Raymond,
Clerk of the House of Commons.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, March 31, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

ESTABLISHED PROGRAMS (INTERIM ARRANGEMENTS) BILL

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL ARRANGEMENTS RE SHARED PROGRAMS—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-142, respecting the operation of certain established Federal-Provincial programs.

Bill read first time.

Hon. John J. Connolly moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENT TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Revised Capital Budget of the National Capital Commission for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1965, pursuant to section 80(2) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952, as approved by Order in Council P.C. 1965-422, dated March 9, 1965. (English and French texts).

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE BILL

REFERENCE TO SUPREME COURT OF CANADA—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. Jean-François Pouliot: Honourable senators, despite the rumours about prorogation of this session and the opening of a new session during the weekend, there remains on the Orders of the Day, Bill S-16, intituled an Act to amend the Marriage and Divorce Act. The order is for April 12, and that would be in the next session. I have been very patient until now but, on a question of privilege, I wonder if that bill could be submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada before the end of this session—that is, before the end of this week; otherwise, I will have to start again next session in order to make the Minister of Justice move. I have never seen such an inert mass in my lifetime.

Now, I do not want to tell you that I am right; I do not know that I am right, but I presume I am because I am sincere; and I do not know if the other fellows are right. I am perplexed about the matter. However, I want the Court to decide which one is right, and then the question will be settled to the satisfaction of all.

I do not contend that I am infallible; I am not. If I said so, you would laugh at me; but as I do not say so you laugh with me, which makes a great difference.

It is nevertheless, a sad matter, and I hope that the Leader of the Government in this chamber (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) will again bring it to the attention of whom it may concern and awake whom it may concern, because it is high time. The sleep has been long enough, longer than Rip Van Winkle's. Eight months is a long sleep. I hope something will be done one way or another. Perhaps a small pin will do the job, if it is used effectively.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, as part of the "inert mass", perhaps I should rise and say a word or two.

Of course, we all agree that the honourable senator is a very modest man, but the fact is that this matter is not without its difficulties, as he has pointed out very clearly in the speeches he has made on the subject.

Frankly, I think more than a pinprick is necessary. I can assure him—as I have already done privately—that I have done my best in this matter. However, I must confess my best was not very good, at least in his opinion and perhaps even in my own. All I can say now is that I will continue to pursue the matter—indeed, only this morning I tried again to get a decision on the point. As I say, it is not without its difficulties, but I do not give up.

Hon. Mr. Pouliot: I thank the leader for his encouraging words.

COMPANIES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENTS CONCURRED IN

The Senate resumed from yesterday the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West) for concurrence in the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-22, to amend the Companies Act.

Hon. David Walker: Honourable senators, last night I examined the amendments made by the House of Commons to the Senate Bill S-22, being intituled an act to amend the Companies Act. Having watched the Banking and Commerce Committee of this place work indefatigably on this bill over a period of months, I did not think it could be improved upon; but, having perused these amendments, I must say that there appears to be a professional over in the other place because the improvements are very real ones, particularly those dealing with mutual fund shares.

Therefore, I simply wish to say that I am certainly in favour of the bill as amended.

Amendments concurred in.

CANADA PENSION PLAN BILL

SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the adjourned debate on the motion of Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West) for the second reading of Bill C-136, to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, for a few minutes this afternoon I want to deal with some particular provisions of the bill in contrast to the general principles with which I was dealing last evening. First I want to touch on the question of escalation.

The bill provides that the pension benefits shall be escalated both under this bill and under the Old Age Security Act by a maximum of 2 per cent in any one year, depending on the increase in the consumer's price index during that year. So, the pension benefits are tied to the consumer's price index. There is another index which is used with respect to the calculation of pensionable earnings after the end of 10 years. During the first 10 years the consumer's price index is used. The second index is called a pension index which, as I mentioned last evening, is an index based upon a 10-year moving average of wage rates.

Now, I think there are serious objections to the use of such indices in a measure of this nature. I would like to quote from a statement issued by the Joint Committee of the Institute of Actuaries and the Faculty of Actuaries—those are the Scottish and English bodies—which was made in 1958. They were not thinking at that time of this legislation. They said:

> Inflation—which it is the business of government to prevent or minimize—

And I think all honourable senators would agree with that.

> —causes hardships to many and to attempt to exempt any one section of the community from its consequences is to overlook the just claims of others. An automatic adjustment in relation to a rising price level, if accorded by the state to one group, would doubtless then be claimed by other groups; but even if it could be limited to a proportion only of the population, it must . . . itself have an inflationary effect. It would tend to perpetuate or even aggravate the malady it sought to alleviate.

I suggest we have already had that experience in this country during World War II when we attempted to tie wage rates into what was then called the cost-of-living index.

Now, there is another objection to indexing these benefits. That was brought out very clearly by Mr. Myers when he was asked about this question. I now quote from Volume 14 of the evidence before the joint committee. He said:

> . . . I did examine the pros and cons of automatic adjustment, and the conclusion to which I came was a purely personal opinion that in balance it was better not to have an automatic adjustment of benefits.

I should interject here that there is no such automatic adjustment in pensions under the O.A.S.D.I. in the United States.

Then he goes on:

> . . . I believe that in an automatic adjustment system the whole benefit structure would become frozen and would have to move up automatically with changes in wage levels, whereas under such circumstances it might be desirable to change the system in some other way rather than just to increase everything uniformly.

He gives several examples. I shall give just one:

> To give you an example of this, suppose that it were decided to place more emphasis on dependants' benefits than on primary benefits. In a system that was not automatically adjusted, when the additional financial resources became available it would be possible to make the changes so as to give more money to the dependants and the survivors than to the primary beneficiaries, while, on the other hand, if a system were automatically adjusted everything would have to move up together.

In any event, I suggest—and I am sure some honourable senators will agree with me—that if we are going to have indexing for the Old Age Security payments, we should at least use the proper index. The consumer price index is not the proper index. Surely, all of us in this chamber hope that productivity will increase and that workers will share in the increased productivity through increased wages. On the other hand, we all hope that the consumer price index will remain stable. Recipients of Old Age Security will not, with the present indexing, receive any share of the increased productivity. At best, they will stand still and will not lag behind. If we are to have indexing, let us have the proper indexing.

True, the minister said that the mere fact that all these estimates which we have were based on a steadily rising consumer price index—and they are—did not mean that the Government was anticipating that that would take place. I suggest that the mere fact that the government would base its forward estimates on a price index rising from 1½ per cent to 2 per cent in a year, a rate which in 30 years would cut the value of money in half, is very dangerous. It might easily lead those who read quickly to believe that this is what is anticipated, and persuade them to make their plans accordingly, resulting in the occurrence of the very thing which was not desired.

I want to turn to the question of integration for a moment. The honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) referred to this last night. The minister spoke about it in the White Paper, at page 22, where she said:

> The adjustment of private pension plans cannot be prescribed through the Canada Pension Plan.

She and her officials on a number of occasions have said: Of course, we cannot prescribe how this integration is going to take place. That matter is outside the jurisdiction of the federal Government.

Later on the same page she said this:

> The adjustment of private pension plans to a public program with graduated benefits does not appear to have been a deterrent to the growth of private plans in other countries.

She then went on to refer to the United States. I would like now to make some comments on that.

The minister at various times referred to the integration of the Public Service Superannuation Plan; the honourable Leader of the Government referred to it; and I think we had about half a day's evidence before the committee on the Government's proposal to integrate that plan with the Canada Pension Plan. It was suggested that that might serve as an example for private industry.

In the Public Service Superannuation Plan you are dealing with one of the most generous pension plans in Canada. If there were not integration in the sense that you were going to meld the contributions and the benefits, then civil servants with incomes of about $6,000 a year, and who had served the full 35 years, would retire with a benefit larger than the salary they were receiving immediately before retirement. It is obvious therefore that something must be done in that connection. But, it is one thing for the Government to say how it is going to integrate these benefits, because it always has the sanction of Parliament behind it. Parliament can pass an act saying this is what is going to be done. As a matter of fact, I have no doubt that at the next session such amendments to the various superannuation acts will be brought in. I suggest to honourable senators that it is much more difficult to do that at the bargaining table, where you have not the sanction of an act of Parliament. If the minister would read the public statements of persons like Mr. Burt, Mr. Hamilton and other prominent trade union leaders she would realize that while she is talking about integration they are talking about addition, which is a completely different matter.

It is significant in this connection to note that originally—and this is still the case—the R.C.M.P. and the Armed Forces were exempted from the Canadian Pension Plan. It was explained to us that many members of these forces retired early, and a number of other reasons were put forward as to why it would be difficult not to exempt them. Of course, no account is taken of the difficulties which will be met in private industry. Many private industries have plans for early retirement, as well as the armed forces and the R.C.M.P. There are no escalations in the United States, and that is one reason you can integrate a little more easily. But if you take these two simple things—eliminate the escalation, make the transition period 20 years instead of 10—there is abundant evidence before the committee that that would greatly facilitate the integration of private pension plans.

Both the Province of Ontario and the Province of Quebec wanted a 20-year transition period; possibly for quite different reasons, but the fact is that that is what they proposed. That was the original proposal of the Province of Quebec, and that proposal was only changed after some conferences, about which we know very little, which took place in April 1964.

Nevertheless, when we made these suggestions, we were told in committee that this was impossible, that it would require further negotiation with the provinces, and that we could not wait. Now, I know of no evidence that anybody attempted further negotiation. I would have thought the Province of Quebec would have welcomed it, because it would have built a bigger fund for it, and that is one of its primary purposes.

The Province of Ontario submitted a brief to the special joint committee, and in the introductory remarks, paragraph 2, it said this:

> Although the Government of Canada has indicated on several occasions that the basic principles of the Canada Pension Plan are unchangeable, the Government of Ontario is not prepared to accept this policy as the last word and hopes that the Government of Canada will be persuaded to give favourable consideration to the constructive suggestions offered by Ontario.

One of the suggestions was the change in the transitional period. Of course, Prime Minister Robarts was much too optimistic when he made that statement. The treatment which his recommendations received from the committee was ample evidence that the majority of the members of the committee were not prepared to consider basic changes.

In that connection, I refer honourable senators to the opening statement I made yesterday, that the committee was faced with very narrow terms of reference and with a deadline. It is a long time since committees here sat through a recess and sat three times a day: morning, afternoon and evening—but there was a deadline.

Honourable senators, I turn now to something that I think is not generally understood, that is, what the plan does or does not do. In the interests of brevity, I am going to adopt a statement which appeared in the brief of the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association and which is printed at page 715 of the proceedings of the joint committee. I adopt these as my own words, and it is for the purpose of brevity that I read them:

> The salient characteristics of the proposed Canada Pension Plan are:
>
> —no benefits to to-day's aged.

I interject here that they do get the benefit of the consumer price index escalation—which I think we all hope will produce no additional benefit, because we are not looking for inflation in this country. The statement continues:

> —no benefits to those now disabled, widowed or orphaned who are unable to enter the Plan;
>
> —the biggest benefits for the minority who earn $5,000 a year or more;
>
> —the smallest benefits for workers with low or spasmodic income;
>
> —no benefit credits for persons earning less than $600 (or $800) a year or for their dependents;
>
> —the biggest benefits for workers ten years or more from retirement when the Plan commences;
>
> —smaller benefits for workers less than ten years from retirement when the Plan commences.

That is all I need to touch on there.

If honourable senators wish to look at it, there was a chart produced by the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association, which is reproduced at page 717 of the proceedings of the joint committee. That chart shows the percentage of 1,880,000 Canadians age 65 and over who at the end of 1976 will be retired. It shows who will be receiving the benefits and who will not. It is assuming what the Government actuary assumes, that the consumers price index will rise by 2 per cent per annum. In order that we can have the over-all picture, it includes the Province of Quebec. It shows that 11 years from now 1.5 per cent of those people will be receiving the maximum pension; 32 per cent will be receiving an average benefit of $45 a month; and the balance, some 66½ per cent, will be receiving no benefit.

Of course, considerable exception was taken to that chart by the protagonists of the bill in committee, and the Department of Insurance was asked to produce some estimates. This is what the department produced:

> Estimated numbers and proportions of age group population in receipt of age retirement pensions under Canada Pension Plan and average amounts of pension.

This excludes the Province of Quebec. I think the inclusion or exclusion of it makes very little difference. The Department of Insurance say that of the male population in 1975, there will be 39 per cent between 65 and 69 receiving benefits with an average pension of $52. They say that of those at age 70 and over, 43 per cent will receive an average pension of $37. As regards females, the respective figures in percentages are 18 per cent and 12 per cent, and the respective pensions are $29 and $21. The estimates go right down to 1990. In 1990, there will still be only 51 per cent of the males between age 65 and 69 drawing pension, but there will be 91 per cent over age 70 drawing pensions.

I suggest that if you work with those figures you will find they come out to within one or two percentage points of the figures on the chart prepared by the Life Insurance Officers' Association. If you look at the position 11 years ahead, you will note that for the 1,880,000 people who will come under the Canada Pension Plan—and this is the wage-related part of this bill—66.5 per cent will be receiving no benefit whatever.

As regards the pension figure which is tossed around, $104, which is the maximum monthly amount, only 1.5 per cent will be receiving that.

Honourable senators, I should like to refer again to the White Paper, which contains some interesting tables. Tables 6 and 7 give examples of pensions for widows at age 65, with and without dependent children, according to their husbands' earning status at time of death. A widow whose husband had covered earnings of $100 a month will receive $34.38. The widow next door, whose husband had covered earnings of $5,000 will receive approximately double that.

I suggest that in any welfare measure the important thing is to provide the money where the need is. I suggest that the widow of the husband whose covered earnings were $100 a month on the average, probably needs a larger pension than the widow of the husband whose covered earnings were $5,000 a year. Who has the better opportunity to make provision for his widow? I think the answer is obvious.

Honourable senators, other persons have commented on this. Reference was made by the Leader of the Government yesterday evening to the Special Committee on Aging. I wish to pay tribute to all members of that committee. It has already produced some excellent material, which will be useful to students and workers in this field. I have no doubt that in due course it will produce a report of which both the committee and the Senate can be proud.

I have in my hands an extract from the brief of the Government of Nova Scotia to that committee, presented on October 15, 1964. This is what Premier Stanfield says:

> The Canada Pension Plan may seem to offer a solution for these problems.

He is talking about the aged in Nova Scotia.

> Unfortunately, the advantages of the plan have been exaggerated and many of the disadvantages overlooked.

You would almost think I made that statement myself.

> Compulsory coverage has been broadened to include almost all employees and self-employed people—

He is quoting from the White Paper of August 1964, so I do not need to finish that part. He goes on to say:

> We have no conclusive statistics regarding the number of persons resident in Nova Scotia earning less than $600.00 per year, but it is our impression from all of the information at hand that their numbers are very considerable. We must anticipate, therefore, that large numbers of our aged population will not qualify for inclusion in the Canada Pension Plan.

Hon. Mrs. Fergusson: May I ask the honourable senator what he is quoting from? Is he quoting Mr. Stanfield?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: This is from the brief of the Province of Nova Scotia which was presented to our committee on aging, and recorded in the proceedings of October 15, 1964.

Hon. Mrs. Fergusson: But I thought you said you were quoting what Mr. Stanfield said.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: I said Mr. Stanfield. I am sorry. This is from the brief of the Province of Nova Scotia.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): I think I can straighten that out for the record. This was a statement made by the Minister of Public Welfare of the Government of Nova Scotia, in addition to the brief presented by that government.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: Thank you very much. It is a statement of a member of the Government of Nova Scotia.

To continue:

> We have a very considerable number of fishermen, farmers, loggers and marginally employed persons whose actual monetary income is below $600 per year. None of these will qualify under the Canada Pension Plan.
>
> It is pointless to tell these people that because the Canada Pension Plan is based on the insurance principle—

Of course, I take exception to that because it is not based on the insurance principle.

> —and is a contributory plan, these exclusions are just and equitable. This large number of ineligible persons will expect from government and the community the same kind of treatment and retirement income as their more fortunate neighbours who have been included in the Canada Pension Plan.

I will not pursue the quotation any further, except the last part, which says:

> The Government of Canada has obviously not given due consideration to regional differences as they affect Nova Scotia.

Now, I could deal with the administrative problems. I merely say that the government officials estimate they will make one million refunds a year to contributors—not less than one million—and that of course does not apply to the refunds which will be made in the Province of Quebec.

Surely a system could be devised that would save some paper and postage, and the time of a lot of people who will be required to take care of that.

Premier Roblin has pointed out—I intended to quote him but I will not—that there has been no attention paid to priorities in this matter. He has suggested—and I shall come to this in a few minutes—that amendments to the categorical flat rate pension could be made which would take care of a lot of the objections I have been referring to and which would leave some money over for some of the other priorities, like health and education. There are alternatives, some of which were placed before the committee, but with the deadline we had they did not receive great consideration, because they went to the principle of the bill and all we were permitted to look at was the bill.

I will refer now to page 722 of the proceedings. This was printed before Part IV had been amended—I shall come to that in a moment. There are some alternatives suggested by the Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association, and many other people. These suggestions involve an expansion of the payment of categorical benefits without means tests, the only test being residence and age under the provisions of the Old Age Security Act.

They suggest other adjustments, which are not exclusive to the Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association. They suggested, for example—and members of the committee heard a considerable amount of evidence or received briefs from at least one witness in this matter—that a proper principle is to pay a higher pension as a person's age increases. As the life officers put it, you might pay $75 at age 70, $80 at age 75, $85 at 80, and so on—the reason being that on the average as people get older they have exhausted their resources, are further removed from what we hope is the continual rise in productivity, have relatively lower incomes, and are less able to look after themselves. They require more assistance, and that assistance can be provided for a very small additional amount of money.

The life officers suggested, for example, that we start with $75 a month at age 65 to all single persons, provide for a joint payment to a husband of 65 and wife who is less than 65 by a certain limited number of years, of $125, and so on. They suggested categorical old age benefits starting at 65, which are more generous than the original suggestions of the Government, because at that time the Government was going to pay only an actuarially reduced pension at 65. The life officers said:

> These changes in Old Age Security benefits would cost, the Association estimates, an additional $300 million a year for Canada as a whole. This could be met by an adjustment in the present 4-3-3 tax formula or by a payroll levy. And I am not advocating that that be done.
>
> If financed by such a levy the rate would be considerably less than the 3.6 per cent rate in Bill C-136; it would probably be under 2 per cent.

I want to refer to Part IV of the bill, which has no relation to the Canada Pension Plan at all. Part IV of the bill has been tacked on to the Canada Pension Plan. As honourable senators will see, it is an amendment to the Old Age Security Act and provides essentially that, starting in 1966, the categorical old age pension of $75 a month would be paid to people of 69, and over a period of five years the old age pension of $75 a month would be available to every person aged 65 and over.

The Government can take no credit for the fact that the Old Age Security is now $75. It planned to pay that extra $10 out of the Canada Pension Fund, and it was merely the opposition in Parliament that forced it to change its mind, in October 1963, and add it to the Old Age Security. Also, the Government cannot take much credit for Part IV, which over this transitional period of five years will result in the eligible age for full Old Age Security becoming 65. That is an entirely new provision put into the bill after the committee made its report.

Now, I want to make my position plain, honourable senators. What has happened by the inclusion of Part IV as it is now, were Part IV to be before us as a separate bill, has, in my opinion, removed all objection to delaying the passage of Bill C-136 until proper consideration could be given to that bill and to the principles involved, by a committee with wide terms of reference, including the responsibility for recommendations as to priorities and as to the best method of implementing this massive welfare scheme.

The reason I say that, honourable senators, is that with Part IV as it is before us now, no one would be hurt by postponing the consideration of the Canada Pension Plan. Table 1, at page 9 of the White Paper, sets out the payments that would have been made under the original Canada Pension Plan—that is, this bill before Part IV was amended—over the transitional period. The maximum pension that would be paid in 1968 under the Canada Pension Plan, to a man having covered earnings of $5,000 a year, is $20.83 per month. He is now going to receive $25 a month. So, even if he has to forego the $20.83, he will be better off.

Honourable senators can check the table through and see that except for the higher wage and salary earners, with the adjustments that have been made to Part IV, the other provisions of the bill would not need to take effect until 1971 before anyone was hurt. Of course, again I am talking only about the pensioners and not of the widowed, disabled and orphans' benefits. But, after all, they are delayed anyway until several years later than the other benefits under the act. So I say there is plenty of opportunity to give this matter thorough consideration without hurting anyone at all. It will not affect the Province of Quebec, because that province will go ahead with its own plan, as it has always intended and is entitled to do.

If the motion that was made in the other place to separate this bill and have a Canada Pension Plan bill and a bill to amend the Old Age Security Act had been acted upon and bills were brought before us in that form, then I would have voted for the amendment to the Old Age Security Act—that is, for Part IV of this bill—and I would have voted against the Canada Pension Plan. Even as it is, I am not faced with any dilemma in the matter because I point out to you that if this bill is defeated it will be no problem for the Government during the next session to introduce a bill to amend the Old Age Security Act in accordance with the terms of Part IV of the present bill, and there would be no problem in sending out the first cheques in 1966 to those who will be 69 in that year. There is no complicated machinery involved.

As I am unable to have the bill divided and to vote for one part and against the other, I shall vote against this bill, with the full knowledge that if the Government wishes—I hope it will, and if it does I will vote for it—it can bring in a separate bill incorporating the provisions of Part IV of Bill C-136, and there will be no problem in passing it and having it made effective at the time originally contemplated.

Hon. Muriel McQ. Fergusson: Honourable senators, first I would like to thank the honourable Senator McCutcheon for his very kind references to me as co-chairman of the Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons which studied the Canada Pension Plan Bill C-136. Although I was present at all the meetings of the committee except two—when I went to New Brunswick to attend the funeral of our late colleague Senator Austin Taylor—I do not feel I am really an expert at all on the bill. However, I am sure it is not the fault of the advisers to the committee who gave painstaking explanations of all the clauses.

I sincerely appreciate having had the honour of serving as co-chairman of this important and interesting committee of the two houses, which studied and made recommendations to the Government regarding Bill C-136, intituled, an act to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors.

In my opinion, this is one of the finest bills that has ever come before the Canadian Parliament, and it gives me great pleasure to feel that I shall have played a small part in helping to make the Canada Pension Plan a part of our Canadian laws, as I hope it will soon be.

Doubtless some of my intense interest in this bill stems from my having had the privilege, prior to my appointment to the Senate, of setting up and administering, with the assistance of an excellent staff, the Old Age Security Act in my own Province of New Brunswick. That experience made me realize what a great difference it makes to people who have reached the latter part of their lives and have enough money to enable them to live in dignity and security, and not to be a burden on their children or other relatives or be dependent on charity or public assistance.

It pleased me that many of the witnesses who appeared before the committee spoke very highly of the results that have accrued and which are still accruing to older people through the Old Age Security.

Honourable senators have no doubt read in Hansard of the House of Commons and in the press that Bill C-136 was introduced by resolution of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Honourable Judy LaMarsh, into the House of Commons on November 9, 1964. After first reading and some debate on second reading, the honourable the Minister of National Health and Welfare moved, on November 16, that a Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons be set up to study this bill. The motion was adopted unanimously by the House of Commons, and a message was sent to the Senate, which was received and read in the Senate on November 18 last, requesting the Senate to unite with the House of Commons for the study of Bill C-136 and to select some of its members to sit on the proposed joint committee.

Following the reading of the message in the Senate, it was moved by the honourable Senator Connolly, Leader of the Government in the Senate, and seconded by the honourable Senator Hugessen, and carried unanimously, that the Senate do unite with the House of Commons in the appointment of a joint committee for the purpose of studying Bill C-136, and that 12 members of the Senate be designated by the Senate to be members of that committee. Later on the same day, Bill C-136 passed second reading in the House of Commons on a unanimous standing vote.

Subsequent to the bill receiving second reading in the House of Commons, 24 members of that house were appointed to the joint committee; and on November 19 the following 12 members of the Senate were appointed by the Senate to sit on the committee: The honourable Senators Blois, Boucher, Croll, Denis, Fergusson, Flynn, Lang, Lefrançois, McCutcheon, Smith (Queens-Shelburne), Stambaugh and Thorvaldson. On December 17, after 19 sittings of the committee had taken place, the honourable Senator Smith (Kamloops) replaced the honourable Senator Lang on the committee.

Honourable senators will be interested to know that the honourable Senators Croll and Smith (Queens-Shelburne), who were Senate members of this committee, were, in 1950, when they were members of the House of Commons, members of the King-Lesage joint committee on pensions which recommended the Old Age Security legislation to the Government. The background of knowledge of these two senators was very helpful to the committee.

In November 1964, the secretary of the committee, on behalf of the committee, sent letters to all national organizations which had appeared before the King-Lesage committee, inviting them to submit briefs to the joint committee if they so wished. An invitation was also extended to the public to make their views on the Pension Plan known to the committee. Many national organizations and individuals did submit briefs; and organizations, through their accredited representatives, as well as a number of individuals on their own behalf, appeared before the committee in support of their briefs and were questioned quite thoroughly by the committee.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) has told you that the committee met 51 times, but some of you may not know that although 19 of these meetings were held prior to the Christmas adjournment, 32 were held between January 12 and February 8. Of course this meant that the members of the committee had to be in Ottawa almost continuously during the recess of Parliament. Having had some experience in the past with indifferent attendance at previous joint committees of which I have been a member, I thought it was very wise that prior to the Christmas recess and after the decision had been made by the committee to sit during the recess, authority was requested and received from both the Senate and the House of Commons to reduce the quorum of the committee from 12 to 10, provided both houses were represented. The purpose of this was to prevent embarrassment if, during the recess, witnesses were called to appear before the committee when there were not sufficient committee members present to make a quorum, as was considered quite possible in the case of a committee meeting during a recess. Despite the frequent sittings of the committee during the recess, there never was the slightest danger of lack of the original quorum, and the members of both houses showed very great interest in studying this bill.

The faithful attendance of committee members of the Senate and their contributions to the discussions were really outstanding. I for one would not have missed the experience, even though on many days the committee had three long sittings. While we were sitting we were also receiving briefs prepared by witnesses who were to appear before us on ensuing days. In order to discuss the briefs intelligently with these witnesses, we found it was necessary to read the briefs before the witnesses actually appeared. As you will have observed, if you have read the evidence and the proceedings of the committee, the members did their homework diligently and were well aware of what was in the briefs.

A number of the members of the committee to whom I talked were of the opinion that these almost continuous meetings, while studying the briefs at the same time, resulted in an intense concentration on the bill over a period of time, and gave the committee members a much better grasp of the contents of the bill than we would have had if the meetings had been held when Parliament was sitting and the members had been carrying out this study on a sporadic basis while attending to other matters.

The proceedings of the joint committee were reported in both English and French in 24 volumes which covered more than 2,100 pages. These reports include in their appendices the briefs received by the committee, also many replies to questions and much other information produced to the committee by the technical adviser and other departments of government. They also include many letters and other documents received while the committee was in session, which were ordered by the committee to be printed in the record. This has given all senators, whether they were on the committee or not, the opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with the deliberations of the committee and with the careful, knowledgeable and painstaking explanations of the various clauses of the bill given by the officials from the various departments of government who had been working on this matter for more than two years.

Probably due to my years as a civil servant I feel strongly that civil servants should not be referred to by name either for praise or blame in either of the Houses of Parliament. My main reason for this feeling is that if blamed, they are not in a position to defend themselves. However, in this case I think there was rather a special circumstance and I consider it only fair to pay a small tribute to the public officials who worked with the committee constantly. The Deputy Minister of Welfare, Dr. Joseph Willard, is an old friend of mine from the days when he and I were employees of the Department of National Health and Welfare, although we have since assumed more responsible positions than we held at that time. In the committee I found Dr. Willard to be the same careful, scholarly and well-informed person whose knowledge and integrity I had admired so greatly when he was Director of Research in that department. Mr. J. A. Blais, now Director of Family Allowances and Old Age Security, and Mr. R. B. Curran, Legal Adviser of the Department of National Health and Welfare, were also friends of former days, who when called upon gave what I thought were very clear and precise explanations to questions directed to them. They were most helpful.

I should mention also Mr. C. D. Allen of the same department, who has given the committee invaluable help. There were other officials who contributed so much to the committee that I feel the attention of honourable senators should be drawn to them. I would mention first Mr. J. E. Osborne, Director of Research for the Department of National Health and Welfare, who was technical adviser to the committee. He was present at all meetings and gave clear and satisfactory answers to the many inquiries directed to him. Mr. Tom Kent, policy secretary to the Prime Minister, was helpful in regard to Government policy. Mr. D. S. Thorson, Assistant Deputy Minister of Justice; Mr. D. H. Sheppard, Assistant Deputy Minister of National Revenue; Mr. E. E. Clarke, Chief Actuary, and Mr. Hart D. Clark, Director of Pensions in the Department of Finance, were available at all times. These people were all thoroughly conversant with the bill and its relationship to the departments in which they were employed, and they came to be looked upon by the committee members as well as by the joint chairmen as knowledgeable and reliable sources of information.

Immediately after the organization of the committee, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Honourable Judy LaMarsh, and the Deputy Minister of Welfare, spoke to the committee at length and explained what it was hoped the bill would accomplish.

A clause by clause study of the bill followed, during which many questions were raised by committee members and explained either by Mr. Osborne or other officials assisting the committee. Following that clause-by-clause study, which included an outline of the proposed administration of the act, the actuarial report was considered, and the Chief Actuary explained in what I considered to be a very competent manner the report which had been prepared by him and other members of his staff. The economic report on the bill was amplified and explained by the Deputy Minister of Finance, who told the committee about the effect of the bill on the Canadian economy, and also how the Government proposes to integrate the Civil Service Superannuation Plan with the Canada Pension Plan. This gave the committee information as to how private plans can be integrated with the Canada Pension Plan.

During the 51 sittings of the committee, representatives of 22 organizations appeared before us, as well as 10 individuals who presented their own views on the subject. Toward the end of the hearings, although remarks of some members of the committee led other members to believe that there was a possibility that the Province of Ontario would set up its own plan rather than join the Canada Pension Plan, it was very interesting to learn that the Premier of Ontario had stated in the provincial legislature that it would be in the best interests of the people of Ontario to become a part of the Canada Pension Plan, and that Ontario would participate in that plan.

Shortly after this announcement was made, a brief from the Province of Ontario was submitted to the joint committee. It was presented by Mr. Coward, the Chairman of the Pensions Commission of Ontario, and Mr. D. W. Stevenson, Director of the Economics Branch of the Ontario Department of Economics and Development. The Province of Ontario put forward a number of suggestions which it considered would improve the bill, among which was a suggestion that contributions made by employees and employers under the provisions of the bill might be used to pay benefits to people who had never been contributors to the fund. Although all the suggestions were carefully studied by the committee, it did not agree that moneys collected under the Canada Pension Plan should be paid out to beneficiaries who had not helped to build up the fund.

Altogether, outside of the persons from the various Government departments who helped us, the committee heard 116 witnesses. The terms of reference of the committee did not limit or restrict it in its consideration of the bill, and certainly everyone who had questions to ask or representations to make in relation to the Canada Pension Plan had an opportunity to be heard and, as I have told you, many availed themselves of that opportunity.

It appeared after a time that a number of the presentations were becoming repetitious and did not break any new ground, probably because every possible angle had been explored. But the members listened to all presentations with the same close attention they had given to presentations which contained arguments not previously brought before them.

Besides hearing the representations of organizations and a number of individuals who had requested an opportunity to be heard, the committee invited four persons recognized as experts in the field covered by Bill C-136 to appear and give the committee the benefit of their extensive experience and wide knowledge regarding these matters. These persons were Mr. Robert Myers, Chief Actuary, Social Security Administration of the United States; Mr. W. M. Anderson, Chairman of the Board of the North American Life Assurance Company; Dr. Robert M. Clark, an economist, who in 1959 prepared and submitted to the government of the day a survey on "Economic Security for the Aged in the United States and Canada"; and Mr. J. E. Kilgour, President of the Great-West Life Assurance Company. Their evidence was listened to with the greatest interest by the members of the committee.

Early in the hearing of briefs it became obvious that those who were critical of the Canada Pension Plan relied mostly on two specific grounds, namely, (1) that under the bill those now on retirement and those soon to retire would not benefit through the plan, and (2) that those who earned less than $600 annually would not benefit. These two criticisms seemed specious to me, for the bill which is based on a contributory wages-related principle would be completely changed in character if payments were to be made under it to people who had not or could not make contributions. However, no objections were made to the presentation of arguments based on these grounds, which I really thought were irrelevant.

The Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association, which represents over 100 life insurance companies, the Life Underwriters Association, and many of the actuaries who appeared before the committee in their individual capacity, although most of them are employees or consultants of insurance companies, all relied particularly on the first ground. They contended that there was no need in Canada for a contributory wages-related pension plan, and they recommended that instead of such a plan the benefits under the Old Age Security Act should be increased to $100, and extended. As honourable senators will see on reading the reports, the critics of the bill were allowed considerable leeway in the presentation of their arguments, even though they sometimes seemed to stray from the principles of the bill.

All committee members, I am sure, agreed that raising the Old Age Security to $100 a month is a laudable objective, but many felt this would be more properly accomplished by other legislation, and the committee could not agree that the payment of such an increase should be made out of Canada Pension Plan funds.

The witnesses for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which represents many employers of labour, the Canadian Labour Congress which represents many employees, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture amongst whose members are many who are self-employed, the Canadian Welfare Council which is made up largely of voluntary welfare workers, and the Canadian Association of Social Workers whose members are professional welfare workers, all supported the principle of Bill C-136 and made some constructive suggestions. The Canadian Welfare Council recommended that a body similar to a royal commission be set up in Canada to study all social security aspects of Canadian life in which the federal Government has any responsibility. They specified six special areas to which such a body might direct its study, and concerning which it should make recommendations to the Government. To define existing social problems, and to co-ordinate work being done on these various problems by federal, provincial, municipal and voluntary agencies is something greatly needed in Canada, and I trust the Government will act on this excellent suggestion in the near future.

The principle of this bill, as honourable senators know, is to establish in Canada a contributory earnings-related pension plan under which contributors and their dependents will benefit in line with the contributions they have made. There are still many small businesses that cannot afford the setting-up of such pension plans for their employees. There are also many self-employed people who are not now able to secure the protection and security for themselves and their dependents that the Canada Pension Plan will provide.

Evidence was given to the committee that 70 per cent of the labour force in Canada is not covered by any pension plan, and I think that that fact indicates there is a need for such a plan in Canada.

Senator McCutcheon spoke of the many who will be excluded from this plan and who will receive nothing under it, but I draw to your attention the fact that a large number of these people will have already retired before the plan comes into effect. It was never intended to apply to those already retired, but is a plan to help those now working when they come to the age of retirement.

Another large group of people mentioned by Senator McCutcheon as not being covered are those earning under $600 a year. The whole purpose of the Pension Plan is to make it possible for people, when they retire, to have some income which, together with the Old Age Security payments, will enable them to maintain themselves in a reasonable standard of living comparable to that which they were enjoying before their retirement. It seems to me that people who have earned only $600 or less per year during all their lives are going to be treated very well when they come to age 70—indeed within a few years a person at the age of 65 will receive $900 per annum under Old Age Assistance. This is half as much again as he earned before he retired.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): And added to that will be the wife's Old Age Security payments.

Hon. Mrs. Fergusson: Yes; I omitted that. They will probably be in a much better position than they had ever been in the past.

At its final meeting on February 8, 1965, the joint committee made a number of recommendations. All of these recommendations were studied by the Government and have been accepted, with one exception which is in regard to a recommendation that a 20 per cent dropout be used when calculating the number of years to be used in making up the amount of pension due a beneficiary. The Government has agreed to only a 15 per cent drop-out allowance. The original amount in the Canada Pension Plan was 10 per cent, so it has compromised on half of what the committee recommended. On the other hand, the Government has made provision that the age, when full benefits under the Old Age Security Act will be payable to pensioners, shall be reduced progressively one year at a time from 70 years until in 1970 the full amount of the Old Age Security will be payable at age 65. Payment of Old Age Security at 65 has been requested by many people for some years, and the Government has now made a positive step to implement this request.

No one claims that Bill C-136 is perfect in all details, but the principle is one accepted by many countries and by most Canadian people. It will be necessary to put the proposed act into effect to find out what amendments are necessary to bring it nearer perfection. Amendments will then be introduced, as has been the history of all similar legislation in other countries. It has always been found that some amendments become necessary after the administration has been set up.

The Canadian Welfare Council, although supporting the principle of the bill, would like to see changes in some clauses, but they said they were not prepared to see the bill, which they consider progressive legislation, held up for that reason.

Honourable senators, as joint chairman, I did not consider it was my place to recommend, or even actively to support in committee, the deletion of one clause of the bill which I hope will be among the amendments which will be made to this measure in the future. I refer to the section which lists those excepted from coverage under the act. Section 62(d) excepts employment of a person by his spouse. I realize that this conforms to a similar provision in the Income Tax Act which various women's organizations, with whom I am in complete sympathy, have asked different governments to change, as they feel it lays a heavy burden on many small family businesses. I am sure the organizations to which I refer will feel the same about this clause in the Canada Pension Plan. However, as I said, I did not feel that I, as joint chairman, was in a position to argue this point. Even if I had not held that position, I would not have made my opposition to this clause the basis of objecting to the passing of this bill, which I consider is the most progressive and beneficial legislation that Canadians have had an opportunity to vote for in a very long time.

On December 5 of last year, the Globe and Mail carried an editorial headed "A Civilized Society Puts Its Helpless First." The editorial went on to say:

> One of the yardsticks for measuring the civilization of a society is the care which it gives to its weakest and most helpless members.

In this bill, honourable senators, we are making provision not only for pensions which will give adequate protection to older people when they retire and are less able to look after themselves, but that will provide for themselves and their children if they become disabled, and will also make provision in case of death for their widows and orphans who are recognized as being the weakest and most vulnerable and helpless members of society.

Honourable senators, the measure of Canada's civilization has advanced very much within my own memory. I do not remember a time when old people who were no longer useful to society were left to die in a cave or in the snow, as was the custom in some countries where another mouth to feed might cause starvation to all the family. However, I can remember the time when those entrusted with the responsibility of looking after the poor of a parish, and who were known as "Poor Masters," were only considered as successful in administering their jobs if they could keep expenditures as low as possible, even though this might mean that only the barest minimum to preserve life was supplied to those under their care. I can remember, too, in towns, counties and parishes where there was no "poor house" in which such people could be lodged, and once a year a meeting was held—it was a sort of auction, sometimes on the steps of a public building—where poor people who had no homes and who were dependent on whatever authority had the responsibility of looking after them, were assigned to live with those who would take and support them for the smallest amount of money. Actually, bidding in reverse took place on some of those occasions. This is something that I do remember. Of course, those who could work, buck-sawing wood or scrubbing floors, would be taken at a lower rate than those who could not work and required attention.

Honourable senators, in my lifetime the civilization of our country has made great strides. I think that the bill we are considering is one of the most advanced we have yet had an opportunity to pass. I believe wholeheartedly in this social insurance legislation for the benefit of those earning wages over $600, or earning over $800 if self-employed, which includes provisions for pensions on retirement and supplementary benefits for dependents. I trust that Bill C-136 will receive the favourable consideration and approval of the Senate.

Hon. William A. Boucher: Honourable senators, the Canada Pension Plan will be comprehensive and portable, and is designed to provide for nation-wide retirement, widows, disabled widowers, orphans and disability pensions. Contributions to the fund will commence on January 1, 1966. First pensions will be payable one year later, on January 1, 1967.

All income earners under 65 years of age who earn $800 or more will pay into the plan. The pension provisions will apply to both men and women. A married woman, for example, irrespective of whether or not her husband is in receipt of a pension, will be eligible on retirement to a pension based on her own period of contributions and level of earnings.

Contributions will be 3.6 per cent of income. The full 3.6 per cent will be paid by self-employed persons such as farmers, businessmen, etc. Employers and employees will each pay 1.8 per cent.

No contributions will be made on the first $600 of income and none will be paid on income in excess of $5,000. This means that low-income earners will pay a somewhat lower percentage of total income.

The annual pension will be based on 25 per cent of the pensioners' average annual income, that is, up to a maximum of $1,250 per year or $104.17 per month.

The plan will be fully operative after 10 years of operation. Any person aged 55 at the commencement of the plan who pays in for 10 years will be eligible for maximum benefits at age 65 years.

The plan also contains a proposal which will make available by stages the Old Age Security payment of $75 per month to all at age 65. The procedure envisaged is to reduce, beginning in 1966, the qualifying age for Old Age Security by one year for five successive years, so that on January 1, 1970, all Canadians aged 65 and over will be entitled to Old Age Security payments. This benefit, taken in conjunction with payments from the Canada Pension Plan, means that the maximum retirement income of a person aged 65 will be $179 per month. If, in this example, the pensioner's wife was also 65 years old, she too would receive an Old Age Security pension of $75 per month, making a total retirement income of $254.

A person retiring at age 65 any time within the first 10 years of operation of the plan will receive a benefit in relation to the number of years for which he made contributions. For example, if a person contributed for one year, he would receive one-tenth of the retirement pension to which his earnings entitled him. If he contributed for two years, he would receive two-tenths, and so on.

Anyone from age 65 to 69 years who is in receipt of a retirement pension may have earnings up to $75 per month without any reduction in his retirement pension. At age 70, the retirement pension will be paid, irrespective of the amount of earnings, and he will no longer have to contribute.

The pension will be fully portable between occupations and between provinces. An income earner will pay into the plan, no matter what his job, whether self-employed or an employee, and his pension on retirement will be in no way affected by how often he has changed jobs. It will be based solely on his earnings under the plan over the years.

The plan will also provide pensions for widows, orphans, and disabled persons, as well as a death benefit.

A pension will be paid to all widows caring for their dependent children. A widow under 35 years of age without dependent children will receive no pension.

A widow of 45 years of age or over will receive a pension based on a flat rate of $25 per month, plus 37.5 per cent of the pension her husband would have received at 65 years of age, based on his level of earnings to the date of his death. This works out to a maximum pension of $64 per month.

A widow under 45 will receive a pension reduced by 1/120 for each month by which she is younger than age 45 at the time she is widowed.

A widow with dependent children will receive a flat pension of $25 per month, plus 37.5 per cent of the pension her husband would have received—at 65 years of age based on his level of earnings to the date of his death—plus $25 per month for the first four children, and $12.50 per month for each additional child.

A disability pension will be paid to anyone disabled, based on a minimum flat rate pension of $25 per month, plus 75 per cent of the retirement pension the person would have received, based on his earnings; that is, the disability can go up to a maximum of $103 per month. A disabled contributor receives benefits in respect of his children at the same rate as does a widow with children.

The pension will be adjusted upward for any increase in the cost of living. This adjustment will be equal to the increase in the cost of living in any year, if such increase is from 1 to 2 per cent. If the increase in the cost of living is less than 1 per cent in any year, there is no adjustment, and if the increased cost of living exceeds 2 per cent, the increase in the pension will nonetheless be limited to 2 per cent.

The original ceiling for the earnings taxed under the plan has been set at $5,000. During the transitional period, this can be adjusted upward for changes in the cost of living. After the first 10 years of operation, it will be adjusted upward by using a long-term moving average of salaries and wages.

By these adjustments in the pension ceiling, it is quite likely that the pension contributions and benefits will triple over a working lifetime of 40 years. The pension level for young people now going into the labour force will probably rise to about $300 a month upon their retirement.

I wish to thank the Prime Minister and the Government Leader in the Senate (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) for giving me the opportunity of serving on the Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons.

Honourable senators, this bill is one of the most important ever to come before the Senate. This measure will, I am sure, be of great benefit to the Canadian people.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Acting Speaker (Hon. Mr. Gershaw): Honourable senators, may I remind honourable senators that if the leader (Honourable Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) speaks now, it will have the effect of concluding the debate.

Hon. Jean François Pouliot: Honourable senators, I have just a few words to say. I have listened to everybody who has spoken on the matter, and I congratulate my colleagues, especially the honourable Senator Fergusson, for their very useful contributions.

There is only one question in my mind, and I will make it very short. How will the Parliament of Canada and the Government of Canada be able to look after that scheme and make it a success after all the taxation powers have been given away to the provinces? To me, it is necessary that some taxation powers should be retained by Ottawa in order to operate a scheme of this magnitude.

I was really concerned when I read in one of the official publications of this chamber last year of the increasing proportion of long-term subsidies that are given away to the provinces.

I am all in favour of the autonomy of the provinces, and I said so in Charlottetown in 1949. I have here a clipping that I will send to the Prime Minister of Canada and to each of the premiers of the provinces. The idea is that the provinces, which have exclusive rights, and the Parliament of Canada, which has exclusive rights which are different, should enact legislation within their own respective jurisdictions, and one should not encroach on the jurisdiction of the other. I spoke in Charlottetown at a social club near, not the cradle of Confederation but the shrine of Confederation. Confederation was not born at Charlottetown, as you all know. It is a fiction to say that, and a fiction which has been very costly. However, without reading to you what I said, it could be summarized in this way.

The premier in each province is as independent as the Prime Minister of Canada himself, inasmuch as he remains within the jurisdiction stipulated and defined by the B.N.A. Act, but when there are encroachments on one side or the other, they lose their standing of equal status.

For me, the best legislation is that which is enacted strictly under the provisions of the Constitution itself, and when there is bargaining the spirit of the Constitution is lost and it creates a danger for the future.

That being said, I will send the other copy of the clipping to the Leader of the Opposition and I shall send copies to the Prime Minister of Canada and the premiers of the provinces, with my visiting card.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: Before the honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) speaks, might I ask

Senator McCutcheon a question? I understood him to say that he was going to vote against this bill, that he is opposed to it. Is he opposed to the principle of a contributory pension scheme for Canada, or is he opposed to the plan devised under this bill?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: I am sorry, but I did not get the last part of the honourable senator's question.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: I asked if the honourable senator was opposed to the principle of contributory pension insurance, or opposed to the plan devised under this bill.

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: I think if the honourable senator will read my remarks tomorrow he will see I made my position quite clear.

Hon. Malcolm Hollett: Honourable senators, it was not my intention to say anything at this stage, which is probably the last stage as far as I am concerned, but there are so many problems which have been presented by critics of this bill that I am concerned, although I am so ill versed in matters of high finance which have to do with this measure, that I hesitate to say very much.

I have listened to the speeches made in this chamber by the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West), by Senators McCutcheon, Fergusson, Boucher and others, and I have been impressed by them. I have read a good many quotes from people in, shall I say, high places of finance who have criticized parts of this bill, and I am bound to say that we ought to take some cognizance of what these people have said. For instance, I have before me a statement made by the President of the Canada Trust Company, parts of which I think I ought to read. I take it that a man who has become President of the Canada Trust Company knows something of what he is talking about. I refer to the report of the president made at the annual general meeting of that company on February 10, 1965. In speaking about the Canada Pension Plan, he said:

> First, let me say that I feel strongly that the principle of an earnings-related government pension scheme, as proposed under the Canada Pension Plan, is all wrong. I share a widely-held view that the acknowledged responsibility of government to see to it that reasonable security is provided for all citizens past working age, lies in the present pay-as-you-go, flat-rate Old Age Security program, adjusted and amended from time to time as conditions dictate.

He went on to state:

> However, if we are obliged to accept an earnings-related government plan, then of course such a plan must be funded to avoid saddling future generations with undue burdens. It is the control and disposition of this fund that should concern all of us, and very deeply.
>
> In the early stages of operation of the proposed pension plan, contributions will greatly exceed benefit pay-outs. It has been estimated the fund that could accumulate over the next ten years might amount to as much as eight billion dollars...
>
> Under the Canada Pension Plan, it is proposed to siphon off from the savings of the Canadian people—your savings and mine—this colossal sum of up to eight thousand million dollars. That would be by far the largest single investment pool in the nation.

This is by the President of Canada Trust. And he adds:

> The proposition alarms me.

I say, honourable senators, that if it alarms a man in his position it is something that we ought to give very careful consideration to before we pass this measure.

> The proposition alarms me. With all the deference in the world to our elected representatives and able civil servants, I cannot but dread the thought of leaving these billions of dollars for use and investment under conditions in which political and regional considerations might wield the primary influence, with economic considerations a poor second. Governments would be less than human over the years if, with a ready source of funds of this magnitude at their disposal, they did not spend more freely and less wisely than they otherwise would or should.

That is one point which I think should be considered by everyone who is going to be a party to passing this bill. We all want to do everything we can to make it possible for every citizen to have the opportunity to live comfortably in his later years, but it appears to me that certain people do not give a hang what happens to those who are now earning less than $600 a year. They do not give a hang about the thousands of people who are presently on relief. The province from which I come has 5,000 families on relief at the present time—that is approximately 20,000 people. A good many of them will never earn over $600 a year again. Some of them are now almost 70 years of age, some are over 70 years of age and some are younger; but a good many of them will never earn enough to contribute to this fund.

Therefore, these poor people all across Canada—and you have them in every province—will have no opportunity whatsoever to contribute to this pension plan which would make living for them in their later years more comfortable and pleasant. Apparently the Government is not worrying about them, otherwise some provision would have been made in this act which would have taken care of them to some extent. I think this is a place where we ought all to consider very seriously the effect of this legislation all across Canada.

Now I come back to the figure of $8 billion. Senator McCutcheon brought it up to $6½ billion, if I remember correctly, but this man puts at $8 billion the amount that is going to be loaned or funded, or in some way given out to the various governments across the Dominion, and they will guarantee to pay it back, or at least to pay back the interest on it, because I do not expect they will ever pay the principal sum. Unfortunately, however, some of the provinces—and I shall not name any one at the moment—would have to borrow money to pay the interest on this sum. I know of one province which 15 years ago had a public debt of only $3½ million, and today it is over $100 million. It is a very small province, and I shall not mention it by name.

I remember when the possibility of our going into Confederation was talked about, financial experts were sent down from the mainland to tell us what the total cost of running the Newfoundland Government under Confederation would be. The estimate at that time was $24 million. That was 15 years ago; and the other day the Government budgeted for $178 million, and they will have to borrow $20 million to make up that sum. This, I think, bears out what the president of the Canada Trust Company states, that if governments have huge sums at their disposal for investment in schemes of all kinds, some of them pretty cockeyed—and in this I know whereof I speak—I do not know where we as a nation are going to end up.

I am all in favour of a Canada Pension Plan, but I do think it deserves serious consideration by every senator in this house. We are always saying we have to give sober second thought to proposed legislation. Well, for heaven's sake, let us give this a sober second thought. It is all very well to talk about the man earning $5,000 a year, who will get $104 per month when he comes to retirement age. He probably has enough to look after himself anyway. It is the poor people across this country, in the 60, 70, 80, 90 or 100 years they may live, who cannot accumulate enough to give themselves a decent living —these are the ones we should be looking after.

There is another aspect to which consideration should be given. Civil servants will have to contribute to this plan. Has anybody yet calculated how much money the federal Government and the provincial governments and the various municipal governments will have to contribute? Where will the money for their contributions come from? They will have to borrow it, and the citizens will have to pay the interest on that money. We are building up such a colossal financial mess that some day it is going to topple. It will be undermined and will collapse because of its own weight.

I know very little about things financial, but I do listen to men like Senator McCutcheon and the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West). But here we see two opposed opinions. Surely we must give some consideration to the impact of this Canada Pension Plan, and you and I as senators must give that thought to it now. If we have to vote we must not do so as Liberals or as Conservatives, but we must vote as men who have given a sober second thought to this scheme.

Honourable senators, that is all I have to say on the matter.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if the honourable Senator Connolly speaks now it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, this bill will be going to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, and a motion to that effect will be made very shortly. I mention that at the outset because consideration given by the Senate to these measures is not restricted to the work done on the floor of this chamber; work is also done at the committee stage. I say that mainly for the public record because we have not had a long debate. For that reason I would point out that the debate is not yet finished. In the committee the ministers and the officials involved will be available for questioning by honourable senators.

At this stage I wish to take only a few minutes of your time because we are really only at the intermediate stage in these proceedings.

First, I should like to thank all honourable senators who have participated in this debate. We were very glad indeed to hear from Senator Fergusson, who was joint chairman of the committee, and from Senator Boucher. Other members of the committee on both sides of the house have not spoken, but this,

I think, is because of the desire to speed up the next stage of the proceedings, and with this aim we are all in agreement. I know we would have had very helpful and illuminating contributions from the other members of the committee and other senators, had they spoken, but some of those contributions will be made in committee.

I am sure, however, you would expect me to say something about the very powerful and massive argument made by Senator McCutcheon both last evening and today. I speak very sincerely when I say that a performance like that indicates the importance of providing in Parliament a forum like the Senate where such discussion can take place. There was a considerable amount of basic economic theory discussed; there was a good deal too of practical fiscal policy outlined. To me, it does not matter whether one agrees or disagrees with everything the honourable senator said. In having said what he did, and in having given not only his great industry but also his great intelligence to these problems, he has made a very valuable contribution to the consideration of this measure and to the work of Parliament.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Now I feel that some of the youthful opinions by the present minister fall into the same general category as the youthful opinions of honourable senators too.

I remember when I first came to the Senate, Senator Lambert made a speech in which he twitted Senator Farris about conflicts in opinions expressed by Senator Farris over a period of two or three years, and I remember Senator Farris saying, "Which one do you like? Take your choice." I am not sure which one Senator Lambert chose. Senator McCutcheon has referred to the fact that the plan had many variations. I do not think there can be any question about that, but I think there is one point worth remembering. It is that this field into which the Government and Parliament are embarking with this plan is also a field in which the provinces have primary jurisdiction. Because there was a primary jurisdiction, some amendments to the Constitution had to be sought in order to give the lead, and the changes in the plan have caused some considerable discussions and consideration in the federal-provincial meetings. I do not say this in any critical or carping way. In this country it is important to be able to have such discussions, particularly if they lead to better and more useful national results.

As to the matters of portability, escalation, integration, funding or pay-as-you-go, I think all of the issues raised by Senator McCutcheon are valid, but they are issues on which one can take a stand for or against. But the area of for or against is not always black against white; there are gray areas too. There is much room for compromise in respect to many of these issues in order that the problems raised by provincial authorities may be met, and that the requirements that the federal authorities feel they must establish are satisfied.

Honourable senators, having said that I add the comment that we have had a good, illuminating and objective debate. I commend the bill to the Senate.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by honourable Senator Connolly, P.C., seconded by honourable Senator Vaillancourt, that this bill be now read the second time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Mr. McCutcheon: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move that this bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.

In connection with this motion may I say that it has been discussed generally that the committee might meet tonight at 8 o'clock to commence its consideration of this bill. Notices will be sent out forthwith, but I mention this so that honourable senators may know what the intention is.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, April 1, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report on the Administration of the Public Service Superannuation Act, Parts I and II, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1964, pursuant to section 34, chapter 47, Statutes of Canada, 1952-53, and section 49, chapter 64, Statutes of Canada, 1953-54. (English and French texts).

Order in Council P.C. 1965-553, dated March 25, 1965, authorizing under section 21A of the Export Credits Insurance Act, request by the Export Credits Insurance Corporation for payment by Industrias Forestales, S.A., of Santiago, of a portion of the indebtedness due April 1, 1965, pursuant to section 21B of the said act, chapter 105, R.S.C., 1952, as amended 1960-61. (English text).

CANADA PENSION PLAN BILL

AUTHORITY TO PRINT COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

Hon. T. D'Arcy Leonard, Acting Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, presented the following report of the committee on Bill C-136, to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors:

Your committee recommend that authority be granted for the printing of 800 copies in English and 300 copies in French of its proceedings on the said bill.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Leonard: I move that the report be adopted now.

Report adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

Hon. T. D'Arcy Leonard, Acting Chairman of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-136, to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

Report adopted.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

DIVORCE

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of Resolutions numbered 810 to 859, inclusive, which were presented on Tuesday, March 30.

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Divorce, moved the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolution 810, for the relief of Joseph Lorenzo Lucien Matte.

Resolution 811, for the relief of Joel Rozenblat.

Resolution 812, for the relief of Roger Simonneau.

Resolution 813, for the relief of Myra Belle Feingold Ryerson.

Resolution 814, for the relief of Jean Gerin-Lajoie.

Resolution 815, for the relief of Denis Sproule Flack.

Resolution 816, for the relief of Jacqueline de Muinck Comijs, otherwise known as Jacqueline de Muinck Comys.

Resolution 817, for the relief of William Thomas Lucas Butcher.

Resolution 818, for the relief of Joseph Wenceslas Adrien Gagnon.

Resolution 819, for the relief of Jean Lionel Saumur.

Resolution 820, for the relief of Lucile Gouin Bureau.

Resolution 821, for the relief of Marie Jacqueline Madeleine Pominville Lepine.

Resolution 822, for the relief of Neonila (Nila) Latysh Perederyj.

Resolution 823, for the relief of Doris Leclair Picard.

Resolution 824, for the relief of Henri Paul Gaudreault.

Resolution 825, for the relief of Claire (Mary Clara Ida) Lacoste White.

Resolution 826, for the relief of Patricia Louise Rodriguez Pichnej.

Resolution 827, for the relief of Irene Janet Charlotte Haverland Parkinson.

Resolution 828, for the relief of Marie Marguerite Suzanne Desormeaux Barbeau.

Resolution 829, for the relief of Vilma Kirby Morris.

Resolution 830, for the relief of Margaret McGlinchy Ehrensperger.

Resolution 831, for the relief of Enevio Noce.

Resolution 832, for the relief of Agnes Zmroczek Stanczykowski.

Resolution 833, for the relief of Therese Marie Pauline Weber Watson.

Resolution 834, for the relief of Armand (Armando) Ronco.

Resolution 835, for the relief of Cecile Hammond Sara.

Resolution 836, for the relief of Ralph Bryan Thomson.

Resolution 837, for the relief of Dorothy Jean Abbott Ferrabee.

Resolution 838, for the relief of Clara Elizabeth Duncan Garrow.

Resolution 839, for the relief of Leslie Leonard Dunn.

Resolution 840, for the relief of Dorothy Grace Arnold Penczak.

Resolution 841, for the relief of Mariette Labelle Gauthier dit Marechal.

Resolution 842, for the relief of Peter Doukas.

Resolution 843, for the relief of John Maloney.

Resolution 844, for the relief of Esther Titleman Caplan.

Resolution 845, for the relief of Lucille Amiko Furuya Hartnell.

Resolution 846, for the relief of Ann Campbell Elder Grimsdale.

Resolution 847, for the relief of Matteo Della Malva.

Resolution 848, for the relief of Alan Armour.

Resolution 849, for the relief of Micheline Cecile Pepe McLeod.

Resolution 850, for the relief of Jocelyn Mary Diana Bampfylde Daniell McCay.

Resolution 851, for the relief of Jean H. Deslauriers.

Resolution 852, for the relief of Carole Grace Kathleen Campbell Vassilieff, otherwise known as Carole Grace Kathleen Campbell Vance.

Resolution 853, for the relief of Fannie Hartman Shulman.

Resolution 854, for the relief of Doris Marie Sanford Seymour.

Resolution 855, for the relief of Rose Mary Sudds Burnstun.

Resolution 856, for the relief of Olga Stefik Auger.

Resolution 857, for the relief of Gilbert Antaya.

Resolution 858, for the relief of Muriel Douglas McLaren Barr.

Resolution 859, for the relief of Robert Toupin.

Resolutions adopted, on division.

ESTABLISHED PROGRAMS (INTERIM ARRANGEMENTS) BILL

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL ARRANGEMENTS RE SHARED PROGRAMS—SECOND READING

Hon. John J. Connolly moved the second reading of Bill C-142, respecting the operation of certain established Federal-Provincial programs.

He said: Honourable senators, the late Mr. Justice Harry Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada used to advise lawyers by saying, "Never open a case so widely that you cannot get it closed." There is a very great danger of my doing that with this bill. Perhaps before I sit down you may find that I have violated the injunction of that very distinguished member of the judiciary.

I suppose it can be said that underlying and basic to this bill is a whole theory of government. It does involve an understanding of the concept of the unitary state as you have it in the United Kingdom and in many other European countries, as opposed to the concept of the federal state, as you have it in the country to our south, and as we have it with differences, of course, in this country. In a federal state the relationships between the provincial jurisdictions and the federal jurisdiction is something of serious consequence when it comes to dealing with problems of national importance. This is particularly true where we have, as we do in this country, such wide diversity of economic, political, social, linguistic and other conditions.

There is also a practical and an historic background to this bill. We know that in times of national emergency and crisis, like the war and the great depression which this country went through in the thirties, there is a demand for stronger central or unitary control and authority. There is, perhaps at all times, a requirement to set national standards through national policies for various public programs. There is in the Constitution the authority to use the broad federal taxing powers in respect of both direct and indirect taxation to accomplish this purpose. There are other instruments to deal with this far-reaching problem. In wartime the War Measures Act is available, and it helps to do many things which otherwise could not be done except by agreement. But in peacetime, whether there is an emergency or not, the vehicle generally used is that of contract between the provinces on the one hand, and the federal authority on the other. This has been used in certain cases to vest in the federal authority special powers with respect to taxation and the collection of taxes —and the tax rental agreements, with which every honourable senator is familiar, are good examples.

Canadians have come to grips with these issues in a number of ways. Royal commissions, such as the Rowell-Sirois Commission, have reported from time to time. There have been federal-provincial conferences almost without number. There is conflict. But I suppose it is fair to say that high patriotic purpose on the part of both parties has always been foremost in the minds of public men who have had to deal with these matters. But they too have had to be modified by the stern necessities for fiscal power and fiscal authority. The pendulum has swung back and forth between greater federal authority at one time and more provincial autonomy at another.

This has been one of the great debates on the fundamentals of our national life. The purpose, of course, is to promote national unity, national prosperity, national progress and, more especially in respect of the type of measure we have before us today, national standards. Canadians generally, while anxious to see national standards established, realize that these do not necessarily mean national uniformity. The British North America Act itself recognizes regional, racial and social differences. Although this bill is much narrower than one might be led to believe by my remarks, it proposes an adaptation of an approach to regional economic and social problems which face Canada in the sixties.

Within our own immediate lifetime, particularly since the Second World War, we have seen important changes in this country —a rise in the population and an increased urbanization and industrialization of our economy. We have seen also a change in the character of the labour force both in respect of age and of sex. These changes have been pointed up clearly by such agencies as the Special Committe of the Senate on Manpower and Employment and by the recent First Report of the Economic Council of Canada.

Honourable senators, the national problems are heavy, but the local problems are also heavy because of the local responsibility. The provinces are faced with serious issues in respect of the cost of education, roads, welfare, and urban development. The fact of the matter is that the provincial and municipal expenditures have reached the point where they are greater than the federal expenditures.

It might be of value to honourable senators if I were to table a statement showing the totals of federal expenditures for the years 1960, 1961, 1962 and 1963, and an estimate for the year 1964. This shows the figures for provincial and municipal governments for the same years. Before doing so, may I might say, according to this report, which is based upon D.B.S. data, the federal expenditures in 1963 were $7,432,000,000, and the provincial and municipal government expenditures, taken together, for the same year, were $7,365 million. But in 1964 the estimate for federal expenditures is $7,760 million and the estimate for provincial and municipal government expenditures taken together, for 1964, is $7,920 million. This table might be of value.

Hon. Mr. Smith (Queens-Shelburne): May I ask the leader if he intends to have this incorporated as part of today's Hansard, instead of merely tabling it as a document?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): If I may have permission, it could go into Hansard.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is it agreed that this table form part of today's Hansard?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The table follows:

GOVERNMENT REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE, 1960-1964

Millions of dollars.

	Federal Government					Provincial and Municipal Government
	1960	1961	1962	1963	1964[1]	1960	1961	1962	1963	1964[1]
Tax revenue	5,542	5,738	5,884	6,124	6,846	3,146	3,456	4,224	4,602	5,056
Contributions to social insurance and government pension funds.	487	510	518	533	562	264	277	293	305	314
Investment income	382	409	450	497	576	681	725	790	836	922
Transfers from Federal Government	—	—	—	—	—	994	1,128	1,134	1,165	1,234
Total Revenue	6,411	6,657	6,852	7,154	7,984	5,085	5,586,	6,441	6,908	7,526
Expenditure on goods and services	2,730	2,982	3,024	2,927	3,060	4,039	4,277	4,685	5,149	5,436
Transfer payments to persons and subsidies	2,185	2,227	2,372	2,405	2,476	1,170	1,452	1,590	1,737	1,966
Transfers to other levels of government	994	1,128	1,134	1,165	1,234	—	—	—	—	—
Interest on public debt	753	786	865	935	990	342	388	444	479	518
Total Expenditure	6,662	7,123	7,395	7,432	7,760	5,551	6,117	6,719	7,365	7,920
Deficit	−251	−466	−543	−278	224	−466	−531	−278	−457	−394

[1]First six months, seasonally adjusted annual rates.

Source: National Accounts, Income and Expenditure, DBS.

Source: "Economic Surveys—Canada", Organization For Economic Co-operation and Development, Paris, December 1964.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, the bill before us deals with a certain number of joint programs which have been operated by contract between the federal and provincial authorities. These programs are quite apart from the general arrangements which operate in respect of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements and which are covered by the bill of that approximate name.

Honourable senators might find it useful to look at page 12 of the bill, schedule I. I should like to indicate the programs involved in this bill, as set out in schedules I and II, those being the only programs with which we are concerned this afternoon.

In column I, you see the programs of schedule I. The first is the hospital insurance program under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act. It is estimated that the cost to Ottawa of this program for all of the provinces in the fiscal year 1964-65 will be $419 million.

I will mention at this moment only three of the second group of programs, namely, Old Age Assistance, the Blind Persons Act and the Disabled Persons Act. The cost of those three programs to the federal authority for the same fiscal year is estimated at $73.3 million.

The cost of the fourth item in that group, under the Unemployment Assistance Act, is $114.8 million.

The next group of programs is under Technical and Vocational Training. The cost of that program to the federal authority in 1964-65 is estimated at $18.4 million.

The fourth group, the health grant programs, at the bottom of page 12, would cost the federal Government in the fiscal year 1964-65 an estimated $31 million.

I would ask honourable senators also to look at Schedule II on page 13. The Agricultural Lime Assistance Program would cost the federal Government, in the same fiscal year, $1.6 million. The Forestry programs would cost some $8 million. The Hospital Construction program would cost some $19.7 million. The Camp Grounds and Picnic Areas program is estimated at some $200,000. The Roads to Resources program in the same fiscal period would cost $8.6 million. This bill deals with those joint programs and no others.

I would point out to honourable senators that there is both a federal and a provincial jurisdiction to embark upon those programs. They are programs in which both federal and provincial authorities share the cost. I think it is fair to say that in every program the initiative was given by the federal Government of the day. I think generally it can be said that the purpose was not only to accomplish the program itself but also to set a national standard for national requirements.

The basic proposal of the bill is that in cases where the province has jurisdiction—and it has jurisdiction in respect of each of these programs—for these current joint programs in which the province participates, the federal authority will alter the present federal-provincial agreement and will provide by another agreement for compensation to the province on a basis to be agreed upon within the four corners of this act, but without changing the financial burden on either the federal authority or the provincial authority during an agreed interim period.

There is another proviso, that the provinces must agree to operate the program. The interim period ends, depending upon the requirements of the program, for certain programs in 1965 and in the case of other programs 1967, and in the case of others 1970.

After the provinces make agreements and take over some or all of these programs, there will be an element of more local authority, local responsibility. I think it can reasonably be claimed that there will be greater efficiency, and perhaps also greater economy, because the provincial authorities are closer to these programs and to the area in which they are being conducted.

The compensation which the federal authority proposes to make is to be done either by way of tax abatement or by a cash payment, or by both. This would be set out in the contract.

Honourable senators, I think it might be helpful if I spent a few minutes talking about the meaning of the terms "tax abatement" and "equalization payments", because these concepts are basic to the proposals in the legislation.

The basis of the formula of tax abatement and of equalization payments is to be found in the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act, chapter 58 of the Statutes of 1960-61. The principle of tax abatement can perhaps generally be described in this way: Under the exercise, the federal Government agrees to abate, to give credit, to give a tax deduction to the taxpayer in respect of a certain portion of the personal income tax, or the corporate income tax, or the estate tax, or all three, by a certain number of percentage points of that tax. In this way the provinces are free to impose in lieu of those federal taxes such taxes as they require for their own purposes—in this case, for these programs. In so doing, the provinces can impose these taxes without increasing the over-all rate applicable to an individual taxpayer or a corporate taxpayer in a given province.

This arrangement was established under the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act of 1961.

The abatement rates in 1965 for individual income tax were 21 percentage points; corporation income tax, 9; estate tax, 75. For 1966, the comparable figures are 24, 9 and 75.

I should also state that arrangements were then made with the federal Government for collection of taxes by all of the provinces.

The matter of equalization payments was also a concept embodied in the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill.

I would like, if I have permission, to put on Hansard a table which may help honourable senators to appreciate the statement I am now about to make. There is a wide variation in the per capita tax yield for all three classes of taxes in the various provinces. For example, in Ontario the approximate tax yield on one per cent of individual income is $10 million; Quebec, $5 million; British Columbia, $2 million; Alberta, $1 million; Prince Edward Island, $42,000. That is an example of the differences in tax yields in individual income taxes for the various provinces I have mentioned. The per capita yield is comparable to that. The highest per capita tax yield is Ontario, and the second highest is British Columbia. The figures on this table indicate that for individual income tax the per capita yield in Ontario is $1.63; British Columbia, $1.47; Quebec, $1.03.

I do not think I need to illustrate the same idea in respect of corporate income tax or estate tax. The figures are comparable. However, I think it may be valuable to honourable senators if I could have the permission of the house to put the table on record.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The table follows:

Estimated collections for the year 1964–65 for individual and corporation income and estates tax, by Provinces

	Individual Income		Corporation Income		Estate Tax
	1%	per capita	1%	per capita	1%	per capita
	$(000)	$	$(000)	$	$(000)	$
Nfld	217	.44	512	1.04	5	.01
P.E.I.	42	.39	61	.56	1	.01
N.S.	504	.66	706	.92	54	.07
N.B.	334	.54	584	.94	20	.03
Que.	5,757	1.03	9,684	1.74	335	.06
Ont.	10,657	1.63	16,214	2.47	557	.09
Man.	1,023	1.06	1,498	1.55	51	.05
Sask.	773	.82	1,031	1.10	22	.02
Alta.	1,615	1.12	2,590	1.80	64	.04
B.C.	2,544	1.47	3,864	2.23	157	.09
	23,466		36,744		1,286

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The legislation, again to which I have been referring and not this legislation, provides that the provinces with lowest per capita tax yield in the three fields—individual income tax, corporate income tax and estate tax—receive payments from the federal treasury to bring them up to the average of the two highest provinces, Ontario and British Columbia. These payments that these provinces receive are called equalization payments.

Now, there is an exception to this rule. It arises out of the fact that Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia are said to be free of what is called deadweight debt, because of the high level of revenue they receive from natural resources. I interject that perhaps the word "revenue" is one that they do not accept as valid; perhaps "payment" would be more acceptable. For these three Provinces the equalization payments are reduced by 50 per cent of the amount by which the payments from natural resource sources, averaged over a three-year period, exceed the national average. Perhaps I could simplify it by saying that so far as these three provinces are concerned the equalization payments to them are cut down by a certain percentage of the receipts they have from natural resources.

Having diverted the attention of the Senate from this bill, may I now return to it. I know I have not been as clear as I should be. This is not an easy type of bill to explain.

The tax abatement portion in this bill is to apply only to personal income tax collected in the province concerned. In other words, in this bill we are concerned only with personal income tax abatement and not with corporate income tax or estate tax abatement. As I have indicated, the equalization payments come out of the general revenues of Canada.

The principles both of tax abatement and equalization payments will apply to the programs outlined in Schedule I—that is, the four programs mentioned on page 12. For the programs in schedule II, on page 13, it is proposed by the bill that the federal Government will pay cash compensation. But whether the method adopted is that of tax abatement or cash compensation, the cost to the federal Government will be the same as under the present shared cost programs. For example, in Quebec, under Schedule I, I am informed that the compensation allowed for the programs in Schedule I, on the basis of tax abatement, will be $209 million. In Schedule II, the cash cost to the federal treasury will be $8.5 million. As I have already indicated, the interim periods for certain programs end in 1967, and for others in 1970.

I should add that a more permanent arrangement for these joint programs, and to enable the provinces to take them over and operate them, is under study now by the Tax Structure Committee of the Federal-Provincial Conference. It is expected that early in 1966 a report will be made on that matter.

I should also say that the bill provides that there shall be no contracting out in respect of certain areas:

(i) the capital assistance portion of the vocational and technical training program;
(ii) the cost of training of the unemployed;
(iii) the cost of training in co-operation with industry; and
(iv) research and demonstration portions of the national health program.

If a province contracts out of all the programs itemized, the federal tax will be abated a further 20 points in that province. This abatement, together with the 21 per cent abatement authorized by the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act, to which

I have already referred, means that a total abatement in the taxation year 1965 of 41 per cent can take place. If the province is "prescribed" under the Youth Allowances Act, it could be 44 per cent. In the taxation year following, the tax abatement will amount to 44 per cent or 47 per cent, respectively.

The level of the tax abatement associated with each program has been determined by the relationship between the value of a 1 per cent tax abatement in that province and the cost of the federal share of the program in question in Ontario. It was most convenient to use Ontario as the standard, because the yield of the individual income tax is highest in that province. It was desirable to avoid an abatement whose value would exceed the former federal share of the program out of which the province had contracted. For example, the tax abatement associated with the hospital insurance program has been set in the bill at 14 percentage points.

The question is, how do you get to 14 percentage points? This is the explanation I am given. In the current year the federal share of the hospital insurance program in Ontario is estimated at $150 million. The amount of individual income tax collected in Ontario is estimated at $1,070 million. 1 per cent of this is $10.7 million. This $10.7 million is approximately 14 per cent of the cost of the hospital insurance program in Ontario, and the Ontario figures provide the best basis for calculation, for the reasons I have just given.

I have a useful table which sets out something of the equalization payments associated with a standard rate of 1 per cent on individual income tax. I think it might be useful to honourable senators if again, in this case, I could have permission to put it on the record. I do not presume to read it to the Senate because I think it would be confusing to do so.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The table follows:

Table showing equalization associated with a standard rate of 1% of individual income tax

	Individual Income Tax		Equalization
	standard rate=1%	per capita	Deficiency of per capita yield from level of two highest
	$(000)	$
Nfld.	217	.44	1.15
P.E.I.	42	.39	1.20
N.S.	504	.66	.93
N B.	334	.54	1.05
Que.	5,757	1.03	.56
Ont.	10,657	1.63	—
Man.	1,023	1.06	.53
Sask.	773	.82	.77
Alta.	1,615	1.12	.47
B.C.	2,544	1.47	.12
	23,466

NOTE: The two provinces with the highest per capita yields are Ontario=$1.63 and B.C.=$1.47. The average yield of a 1% individual income tax in these two provinces sets the level to which the yield of the same tax in the other provinces will be equalized=

$$\frac{$10,657,000+2,544,000}{\text{Ont. Pop.}+\text{B.C. pop.}}=\frac{13,201,000}{8,285,000}=$1.59$$

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, so far as the general explanation is concerned, I think I can do no more. I realize that we are talking about a very complicated mathematical formula. Therefore, I think it would be helpful if the bill were sent to a committee where honourable senators could ask questions of the officials. I am afraid I have confused things rather badly for you this afternoon. However, I think what I have said will stand up as a record, and might be useful on other occasions.

It may be helpful if I deal briefly with the sections of the bill. Sections 3 to 5 deal with the standing program set out in schedule I. In section 3, subsection 2, the province undertakes to operate these programs up to the agreed standard, which generally speaking is the existing standard. The deadline for an agreement to be made will be October 31, 1965. Under subsection 4 of section 3 the federal authority is relieved of any responsibility for the programs other than the tax abatement or cash payment after the agreement with the province has been made. As I have said, research and demonstration projects within the health grant programs are by section 4 excluded from the operation of the act.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: By that section you said there would be no opting out of those activities by the provinces. Does not the federal Government claim the sole right of acting under that program? There has been research, for instance, in the medical field, and I think the federal authority gives the sole attention to that and the provinces would not be opting out anyway.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It would appear that the thinking behind the exclusion of certain portions of these programs is, as the leader opposite indicated, not that the province has not authority to do it, but rather that these portions of these programs can better be carried on and directed by the federal authority.

Under section 5, subsection 1 of the bill, the non-welfare portion of unemployment assistance is not included. By section 6, the number of units of tax abatement applicable to each program is set out.

By section 7, in addition to the tax abatement, the federal authority may make an equalization payment to a province in respect of a program. The formula which would control that payment is described in sections 7 and 8. If you think I have done badly in this explanation, you should read those sections!

Section 9(1) provides for adjustment payments, and subsection 2 provides for the recovery of overpayments. Section 10 provides that when an agreement with a province covers only technical training or health grants, the federal Government may pay out cash in each case instead of providing for tax abatements.

The special programs in schedule I on page 13 are covered by section 11 to the end.

Section 11, subsections 1 and 2, provide that by agreement these five programs may be continued or there may be a substitution. The section also authorizes Parliament to appropriate the amounts to cover the cost to the federal treasury. Subsection 4 of that section gives authority for the minister to pay out the appropriate amount to the appropriate province.

By section 12 provision is made for auditing the expenditures made in any of these programs.

Section 18 deals with tax abatement and equates a tax abatement to a payment by Canada. There are consequential amendments in the Income Tax Act provided for in section 19.

Honourable senators, I realize I have taken a great deal of time on this explanation.

Hon. David J. Walker: Honourable senators, I had no idea how the Leader of the Government was going to outline this legislation. I am glad he and not I had this task. It is a very complicated bill, and for anyone to suggest that it can be explained easily would be a gross exaggeration.

There are many distinguished senators on the other side who no doubt recall Sir Wilfrid Laurier. There may be some who have sat at his feet, and others younger, like the Honourable the Speaker, who perhaps sat on his knee. But we had an admiration for him and we still have, because he was very much a Conservative in many ways; and we enjoyed the principles which he often enunciated, particularly those connected with fiscal policy. One of his maxims was: it is a sound principle of finance and a still sounder principle of government that those who have the duty of expending the revenue of a country should also be saddled with the responsibility of levying and providing it. Now, this is a principle that has been followed for a generation, and the tax experts still adhere to it.

In parts of this bill some of these principles have been forgotten. The advice of Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not been followed, and under the statutory provisions of this bill certain programs can be administered solely by the province, that is, by any province. As the Leader of the Senate (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) has pointed out, there is provision for tax abatement with a very intricate formula, together with a tax equalization formula, or, in the alternative, under clause 10, to which he has referred, the province may receive from the Dominion a sum of money equal to the tax abatement. This payment will be paid annually on the rendering of accounts by the province.

In other words, there is provision for tax abatement, or for payment by the dominion because some of the provinces are not as wealthy as others, and thus tax equalization payments, and finally adjustment payments for operating costs under clause 11 will enable the province to administer a program under its control, or to substitute a provincial program, which, in the opinion of the appropriate minister, is analogous to the present ioint program of the dominion and province.

This is a very important consideration. A cash payment would be made to the dominion equal to the amount which the province would pay, had the program continued as a joint program. The cost, of course, would be audited and the accounts submitted in the usual way. In other words, the dominion says to the province, "We will allow you to administer the program directly yourselves and to substitute your own provincial program, and we will pay just the same as if it had remained a joint program."

Now, before the dominion pays out any money it must satisfy itself that the money was spent for the purposes provided for in the act and under the agreement. Coming back to Sir Wilfrid's principle that he who spends shall be the one required to tax, if you are going to spend $1, you had better raise the dollar yourself, otherwise it might not be spent properly.

Therefore, honourable senators, there are weaknesses in this bill. The first one is that once you get these interim programs under way, even though they prove to be unworkable or inefficient, it becomes very difficult to do away with them, because of the pressure of public opinion. As all of you know, since most of you have had great experience before coming to this place, the pressure of public opinion is something to contend with particularly in matters involving money. Let me give you an example.

Suppose a province, in consideration of running its own program, obtained a tax abatement from the federal Government, and then a conflict arose between the province and the federal Government as a result of which both parties, at the end of the interim period—and keep in mind these are very short interim periods—thought that the program should not be renewed. You can imagine the consternation there would be in every province where it happened if the province ceased the tax abatement, and restored the extra taxation to the federal income tax.

Suppose, too, that a province opts out of a contract. The honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) has indicated that a province can opt out under this program by as much as 44 per cent of its income tax. By the way, "opt out" is not a very good expression; it is a slang expression which, as you know, means "contract out". Suppose a province contracts out of so many programs, and is granted a tax abatement in respect of each of them. Will this not result in such a province occupying a very large share of the income tax field, in fact, as much as 44 per cent? The day will come when such a province would feel rather independent of federal control, and would carry on its own program in its own way, or not at all.

This is the way the province would explain it. It would say, "We have a very large taxing power. We have 44 per cent. What are you going to do about it?" Should the dominion then step in to recapture this abatement? If it did, the provincial clamour that would ensue would make it politically unwise—and I am putting this very modestly—for the dominion to attempt to do so. The dominion will have lost too much financial leverage when the plan is then made permanent. The effects that can result from this bill are very subtle and can cause much difficulty.

Thirdly, human nature being what it is, and manifesting itself as it does in government, if the federal Government is going to pay with money collected through taxes from the people of Canada for a program in a province to be administered by the province, and the money is to be spent by the province, is it unlikely that the province which does not collect the taxes will spend on the program generously, carelessly and, if I may say so, recklessly? I am not speaking of your province, of course. After all, they do not collect the money; they get it from the dominion.

I know that there are hard and fast formulae to restrict this, as the honourable Leader of the Government has explained, but if the province does not live financially within the formula, who will stop it from returning to Ottawa to complain—and you are into the realm of politics again—"Look at what this program is costing us? We must have more money. Let us change the formula." And in saying this, the province would mean, "Change it in favour of us." Or, to put it in another way, the province can say, "Give us a deficiency grant."

These are, I respectfully suggest, some of the weaknesses of this bill. I will not attempt in the short time at my disposal to outline them all.

Fourthly, if a province runs the program itself, and not jointly with the federal Government, I predict the result will be an ever-increasing spiralling of costs. How can it be otherwise?

Fifthly, the provinces cannot afford all the programs provided for here. That would be impossible. Why not wait until the priority to be given to the various programs is determined by a federal-provincial conference? The federal Government would then be in a position to draft an act that could be put into effect.

Sixthly, in spite of the formulae, what if a province makes portability of pensions difficult? I know that the provinces say they are not going to do that, but when some of them start running this program themselves, it will be a very easy thing to make it very difficult for a newcomer, be he a newcomer to the west or to the east, to obtain the benefits of portability of pension.

Finally, even with the tax abatement option, as the honourable Leader of the Government has so well pointed out, the federal Government is still paying a great deal with no representation as to how the money is spent. The rules are there, but the rules will be carried out by the province, and not jointly with the dominion.

As an example, the Leader of the Government in this chamber has given us a breakdown of Schedule I showing what all this has cost as shared programs. I calculate the figure to be $651 million. You might say that there is going to be tax abatement, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's principle will then be alive again, because the province that spends is the province that taxes. Under the tax abatement program the province will collect so much tax by way of income tax, but the reason I have so much doubt about this program is that out of the $651 million, all the dominion Government experts hope can be collected by way of tax abatement is $469 million. The remaining $182 million has to be paid on behalf of the dominion. All these programs, which up to the present have been shared programs, will no longer be shared programs. When the province takes them over and runs the show, the dominion Government will be paying on all of those programs a taxation equalization payment of $146 million, and adjustment payments of $36 million which, with the $469 million in tax abatements, amounts to $651 million.

Once they are taken over by the province there is no representation. Up until now it has been a joint program; and, as the Minister of Public Works for several years, I watched a joint program work with great particularity, namely, the Trans-Canada Highway program. That was a joint program, and the problems we had with the provinces were tremendous. Goodness knows how we could ever have worked it out if it had not been a joint program and the provinces had been alone by themselves without any representation by the dominion. The spending of federal money in the province by the province and without representation by the dominion is going to be a great problem. Honourable senators can see what a serious matter this can be.

What is the matter with the joint programs? I know it is a very nice thing to be able to say that Prince Edward Island is an autonomous province and Ontario is an autonomous province, but he who spends should levy the taxes, and if he does not levy the taxes he should be willing to have a joint program in some respects, in any event, particularly to safeguard the federal money that is being spent.

Perhaps you will say that there is no alternative to this. I did not gather that the honourable Leader of the Government said that. Perhaps there is. But why the mad rush on the part of the Government of Canada—not on the part of this Senate, but on the part of the Government of Canada—to get this bill passed? It riddles the principles enunciated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, it riddles the principles used by most tax authorities and, at the very best, it is a hodgepodge of political expediency.

Honourable senators, this opting out legislation should be referred to the Tax Structure Committee, a committee of experts and laymen set up by the Federal-Provincial Conference in October last. Its terms of reference included "the general policy to be followed in respect of shared-cost programs."

This committee has been instructed to report to the resumed conference in early 1966, just a year away or perhaps less than that; and its recommendations will form the basis for discussions to bring the federal-provincial agreements up to date, in keeping with the needs of today.

Therefore, since Bill C-142 simply authorizes agreement on the temporary basis for a transitional or an interim period, and specifies the duration of that interim period, why not hold the bill until we have a report by this excellent committee, which has the confidence not only of the federal authority but of all 10 provincial authorities as well. Let us wait for the committe's report, and let it refer specifically, under its terms of reference to this very problem of contracting out of the shared programs. It is a tremendous problem, as the Leader of the Senate has pointed out, and is difficult to understand. We will be in a veritable jungle of problems if this bill goes through as it is at the present time, without the advice of that great committee.

We have managed to get along so far with the provinces since 1867, and we hope to do so at least until 2067. During the years I spent in the cabinet, I had no idea that there was to be the tremendous outcry that we hear about today. We had none of that. We got along beautifully with the provinces, and I challenge anybody on the other side to find any instances where we had any insuperable problems with the provinces. We got along for nearly 100 years, and we will get along for another 100 years. On this important principle of contracting out of the shared programs, why cannot we wait another year for this report, in order that, when we do pass this bill, it may be passed in an amended form, as a result of that committee's report?

I cannot understand the unseemly haste of the Government to get this bill through. Were they contemplating an election this year, in June, I could understand it. Perhaps that was the original reason for haste. I cannot understand any other reason for it. It would make good window dressing in an election. But, according to the Prime Minister, that day is over now; there will be no election in June; there will be no election until next year. Why not wait, then? The Government of the day will still be able to spread this window dressing with a proper bill, implemented after the result of a proper report.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: I think that is good advice.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Perhaps a bigger window?

Hon. Mr. Walker: Perhaps by that time the Leader of the Senate may have an active portfolio in the Government. I cannot help thinking today, noting the able manner in which he dealt with this bill, that the cabinet would be greatly improved if the honourable leader were given an important portfolio.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Do not be too hard on me now.

Hon. Mr. Walker: I never could be—I think you are too hard on yourself. Now that the election has been postponed indefinitely, let us wait for the tax experts' report and let us be guided, not by the politicians' advice but by the advice of the experts.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Would the honourable gentleman mind if I asked a question at this point? He talks about the provinces spending the federal money and spending money that they do not collect. In respect of the programs in schedule II, which are to be paid for on a cash basis, I follow him and I agree—although they are short programs and they are relatively small amounts. But would he not agree that, on the question of tax abatement, the whole theory is that provinces will impose the tax themselves and spend the money—they can even impose a higher tax, they can even tax for a greater amount, if they wish to expand the program? I just wonder whether that point is clear enough.

Hon. Mr. Walker: I believe Senator Roebuck was talking to the Leader of the Government at the moment when I was making that point.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Not to me.

Hon. Mr. Walker: In any event, my answer is this. I am glad the honourable leader raised this point again, because it gives me a chance to emphasize it. Of the $651 million worth of shared programs, the only tax abatement—that is, the amount of the tax which will be collected by the provinces—will be $469 million; and again the dominion will have to step in and pay $182 million more, being $146 million for equalization payments and $36 million for adjustment payments. That is my point.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): To that extent, that is quite right.

Hon. Mr. Walker: Thank you very much.

Hon. M. Grattan O'Leary: Honourable senators, it is not my intention to prolong this debate unduly. Certainly, I do not intend to try to follow the Government Leader in his heroic attempt to explain what was meant by these various clauses. I think that in all modesty I may claim to have some slight knowledge of the English language, but I must confess that, reading these clauses, they were about as clear to me as the proverbial black cat in a coal bin on a moonless night. As I read the clauses, I wondered what the immortal Churchill would say about jargon of that kind. I do not know who writes clauses like this, but I wonder if the man has been apprehended; and, if he has not been apprehended, I would suggest that, following recent distinguished precedent, we offer a reward for his capture.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): That does not always succeed.

Hon. Mr. O'Leary (Carleton): Nor is it my intention to follow the distinguished Senator Walker in his comprehensive analysis of this bill. Personally, I see three basic objections to the bill and to its implications, especially at this time. I shall make no attempt to explain what the bill does. It is fairly clear, when you finally get through the verbiage, that what we have here is not in fact an opting out bill, as was heralded so long and so loudly by the press. There is nothing in this bill to permit any province to walk out of anything. All that happens with respect to this bill is that in the case of some 17 shared-cost programs, the provinces are given the privilege of supplementary agreements under which the financial and administrative circumstances surrounding the bill, the administration of the bill, may be or could be made more favourable to them.

Honourable senators, it could well happen that these supplementary agreements could result in gain, (a) by providing the same services at lower cost or, (b) by providing better programs at the same cost. But, honourable senators, these are imponderables. These at best are only possibilities, or perhaps only vagrant hopes. In view of the fact that most of these programs expire within a few years, some of them within two years, we have the right to ask the Government, who asked for this bill? What public body in Canada asked for this bill? What public men asked for this bill? Certainly if we turn to the record we get very little answer.

There was a dominion-provincial conference in this country last June, and following that conference, on August 15, seven months ago, the Prime Minister of Canada wrote to the ten provincial premiers asking them, in effect, what they thought of the proposition contained in the bill as we have it today. Well, what happened? Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia replied that the matter would be studied. That was seven months ago, and so far as the record shows there has not been a word from him since.

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan wrote mainly to ask two questions. He wanted to know, (a) what was meant by the phrase "contracting out provinces must continue to carry on programs of this nature"; and, (b) what would be the amount of cash compensations to be paid in respect of type C programs.

There is no record of any reply to those questions by Mr. Thatcher. There is no word of any acceptance from the Premier of Alberta. There is nothing whatever on the record to show the position taken, if any, by the Premier of Ontario. There is no record of a word from the Premier of Prince Edward Island. Nothing has been produced to show a word of acceptance from the Premier of British Columbia. Only from the Premier of Quebec, Mr. Lesage, and from the Premier of New Brunswick, Mr. Robichaud, has there been acceptance of what is meant by this bill. Apart from these two, there is nothing but a curtain of secrecy and silence—and about this I shall have something to say later on.

But there is something more, and this was pointed out by Senator Walker. On Tuesday, in the other place, the Honourable Mr. Gordon said—I am quoting now from Hansard, and my honourable friend made the same point in his speech on second reading:

> The provinces, of course, have copies of this bill, and are fully familiar with it and have been for some time. They have probably decided what they want to do by now, although they have not informed me to that effect.

So even up to the moment, not one of the premiers, except Mr. Lesage and Mr. Robichaud, have indicated they wanted this bill at all.

Honourable senators, in the light of these circumstances, I suggest that this bill presents the possibility of only one province, the Province of Quebec, accepting these proposed new agreements, and accepting them with an attending danger, the danger involved in the further isolation of Quebec from the rest of Canada—a danger pointed out in this house on July 27, when Senator Flynn said:

> I feel that this possibility of option offered for all practical purposes to the Province of Quebec alone encourages the isolation of that province at a time when it is already encouraged by other circumstances, and this at the expense of Canadian unity. I feel that this optional system is a bad thing.

Honourable senators, it is a bad thing. I repeat, there is nothing about opting out, as commonly understood, in this bill; but, honourable senators, it does tend in that direction, and the direction is dangerous.

Professor K. C. Wheare, the noted Oxford authority on federal government, lays it down in his great work "Federal Government"—a revised edition has just come off the press:

> The capacity of states to form and work a federal union depends upon some agreement to differ, but not to differ too much.

I submit, honourable senators, that this business of opting out, or any legislation tending towards opting out, does differ too much for the safety of a federal state.

I wonder how many members of this honourable house realize that opting out is a purely Canadian innovation, a purely Canadian device, something that has never happened before in the whole history of federalism? It is the first time that an attempt was made to keep a federal state together by permitting any of its units to opt out from general legislation.

There is another circumstance which must make us wonder about this bill, as Senator Walker pointed out. A dominion-provincial committee on tax structure has been set up—a committee of experts—to deal with and recommend basic priorities, to try to determine in what fields tax revenue should be raised, and how and where it should be spent to the best general advantage.

The Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) spoke of the vital need for national standards. Honourable senators, that is precisely what this tax structure committee is about. That committee is now working and is expected to report within the next year.

I ask this house, what is the wisdom, what the common sense, of a bill of this kind at this time? Why at this time of danger? Why at this time of anxiety and heartsearching? Why these crash programs? Why this sick haste? Surely the past two years should have taught us that this business of rash advances over unreconnoitered ground, followed so often by humiliating retreat, is the wrong way to govern.

There is a third area which makes me feel that this is a bad bill in its implications and in its principles. It is my final and great objection that a bill of this kind is arrived at largely by secret arrangements and discussions between the dominion Government and the provinces. We are setting up in this nation a new area of government—government not by Parliament, not through public debate and discussion, but by dominion-provincial conferences, held mostly behind closed doors.

Honourable senators, we heard Mr. Gordon, the Minister of Finance, say to the House of Commons this week:

> The provinces, of course, have copies of this bill, and are fully familiar with it and have been for some time.

What does that mean? It means that the premiers of the provinces were told about this bill before Parliament was told about it. Parliament was presented with a fait accompli and told, in effect, "You accept what we have agreed to with the provinces, and if you don't, you defeat this Government and you face a general election."

Honourable senators, for more than half a century I have watched the work of government in Canada, and I must say that in recent years, under all governments, I have been dismayed by the constant and accelerated erosion of the place, the powers, and the prestige of Parliament.

We have today a powerful bureaucracy. We have boards, committees and commissions, all with vast powers. We have a sprawling empire of Crown corporations over whose operations, often affecting the lives of all of us, Parliament exercises but little superintendence. We have the ever-growing power of the executive; and now, superimposed upon all of this, we have a new area of government through dominion-provincial conferences, with their decisions often reached behind closed doors.

Honourable senators, I submit to you with all the seriousness I can command, that this means peril, peril not only for our federal system but peril as well for our whole democratic and parliamentary way; and I say to you, that this Senate, in pursuing its historic role of prudence, of care for national unity, should condemn and reject this bill.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if the honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) speaks now, it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, neither of the honourable senators who have spoken on this bill has indicated his wishes in respect of a committee. I am certainly quite agreeable that the bill should go to committee, if that is the desire of the house. That committee could meet tomorrow morning. It could meet this afternoon, but I understand there are other meetings which might conflict with it. I would not suggest that it meet tonight, because tonight there is a national event many people think should be witnessed by senators. If there is any desire for a committee it could be indicated to me, as I have only a few remarks to make.

Frankly, I think the contributions made by both Senator Walker and Senator O'Leary (Carleton) have been very valid. I do not agree with all they say—they would not expect me to. I do not think the position that Senator Walker describes in respect of the fact that the spending power will not be the taxing power is quite precisely as he suggests it is. I think that the purpose of this bill meets the ideals which he attributes to Laurier, namely, that the power that spends is the power that should tax.

We should remind ourselves that these programs lie within provincial jurisdiction. What is sought to be done under this measure is to say to the provinces concerned: You have been contributing and we have been administering these joint programs in every province. Now, having achieved certain standards, this is a program which you could run yourselves. We will not tax for it hereafter. You do the taxing. You take over the program, and you run it on that basis.

With regard to the terms "opting out" and "contracting out," Senator Walker says that one of them, at least, is a slang expression. Perhaps they are inappropriate terms. But the fact of the matter is that what is proposed by the legislation is that in certain given programs outlined in the bill, where the provinces have jurisdiction, it is now proposed that with the experience gained in the programs thus far, they should run them until the expiry of the interim period. Since the provinces have been developing their public services, they have the know-how to do these things. Perhaps in the beginning of the program they did not always have these capacities.

Senator O'Leary (Carleton) makes quite a point—and I think this is one that everyone must think about—as to the continuing, indeed the increasing importance, of the federal-provincial conferences. I believe none of us takes second place to him in our desire to see the prestige of Parliament maintained. Perhaps this does not lie in my mouth, though it always did before I became a member of the Government, but we deplore the increasing power of the executive, and as a member of the Senate I can say that to my colleagues. I think the trend is something which in the democratic state we have to watch. The second chamber has a special purpose in watching that trend.

We deplore too the extent and increase of bureaucratic control. But I do say this, honourable senators, that in modern Canada, the importance of the jurisdiction and of the responsibility of the provinces is something that has been growing. The importance of the federal-provincial conference is going to continue to grow apace. This is a fact of life. All of us in Parliament must be prepared to live and work with it.

There were years when the result of federal-provincial conferences was more deadlock than anything else. We must all work on both sides of both houses for a better understanding of the responsibilities of the provinces. The provinces too must participate in the promotion of the national welfare.

I have attended only two of these conferences, and some of my friends on the benches opposite have attended many. I have talked to the premiers—not premiers who profess my political faith. I think they are very conscious, and they say so, of the desirability of not weakening the federal authority to the point where the unity of the country is threatened. I think they would agree that there was a period, since the beginning of the war, when the provinces sought more and more fiscal autonomy and authority, and they were a bit careless of what harm, when pushed too far, this could do, not only to the federal authority but to the country and, indeed, to their own position.

I believe that to point up these things, as this debate has pointed them up, is a good thing for Parliament and the Senate. It has been the kind of debate you would only get in the Senate. I do appreciate the contributions that have been made by the gentlemen opposite. I think we are going to have these problems before us for many years to come. The more we know about them and the more we understand them, the better it will be for the country.

Senator O'Leary (Carleton) asked, who is asking for this kind of legislation? He indicates that the Province of Quebec is very interested, that the Province of New Brunswick is also interested, but that the other provinces are not.

Well, I do say that there are very special reasons why the Province of Quebec should be interested in running these programs over which it has jurisdiction in the way proposed by this measure. Whether we like it or not here—and I do not think we dislike it—the Province of Quebec is a very special part of this country. It has a different social, economic and political—in the good sense of the word—problem constantly to contend with. To recognize this is to do little more than to recognize the principle of Confederation upon which this country was founded.

Perhaps Quebec will be the only province which contracts out of all these programs. Other provinces may contract out of some. Programs about to be spent might well be taken over by the provinces and run to their conclusion. I believe the opportunity to do this should be made available in a certain restricted number of programs, as is proposed in this legislation. Certainly the tax structure committee will be looking at this whole area in the interests of the permanent federal-provincial fiscal arrangements.

I commend the bill to the Senate.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Some Hon. Senators: Now.

Hon. Mr. Walker: You know the old saying, if it is going to happen, it might as well happen now.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I reject the comparison but I like the idea.

I move that the bill be now read a third time.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. John J. Connolly: It would appear that there is very little prospect of the interim supply bill being available from the other place this afternoon. In the circumstances, I think it appropriate that the Senate adjourn now until tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Has the honourable leader any idea when the supplementary estimates are likely to come over?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I wish I could tell you. However, I think all would agree that we should be here tomorrow afternoon in the hope that whatever other legislation is to come will be available at that time. As all honourable senators know, I can give no guarantee on such matters.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.

THE SENATE

*Friday, April 2, 1965

The Senate met at 3 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

THE LATE GENERAL H. D. G. CRERAR

TRIBUTES

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, yesterday Parliament, and indeed the entire nation, was saddened to learn of the death of General H. D. G. Crerar, one of the most gallant, distinguished and successful members of the Canadian army, a man who had a career of great distinction in the public service of this country.

I understand it is the intention of certain honourable senators to speak about General Crerar today. I draw the attention of the Senate to his untimely death.

Hon. C. G. Power: Honourable senators, because I had some relationship with General Harry Crerar for a number of years both as Acting Minister of National Defence and as Associate Minister of National Defence during the war, and had occasion to learn something of his character and mentality, I feel I should tell the members of the Senate a little of the impression which he made upon me. He was not what is so often called a brass hat inasmuch as his thinking was not altogether along the lines of the department or of the service with which he was concerned. He had a very real understanding, somewhat uncommon among people of his class, of the difficulties which a minister might have with Treasury Board in matters related to military expenditures; also with Ministers of Finance, and above all with the House of Commons. This was particularly so prior to the war when that house was composed to a large extent of pacific-minded individuals who freely criticized any expenditure relating to military affairs. He understood fully the situation which a minister, endeavouring to pilot army estimates through the House of Commons, would encounter.

I had occasion to see him overseas several times. What impressed me most was his deep concern for the morale and welfare of the troops under his command. This may be only a small thing, but I remember his speaking to me at length of the bad effect letters from home were having on the troops when those letters were filled with distressing details of the hardship being suffered because the quantity of sugar allowed under the wartime regulations was not sufficient. Such letters brought great howls of derision from the soldiers in the field, who sometimes did not know where their next meal was coming from.

He felt also that there was a tendency on the part of relatives, friends and others to write of the social difficulties which arose at home when soldiers' wives permitted themselves certain exercises of indiscretion. He felt very strongly that something should be done to impress upon people at home that his men in the field and at the front had troubles of their own, and it was quite unnecessary for them to be told of what they considered much lesser evils from those they suffered.

He was in every respect a very human man. He became a great leader. He did credit to his country. He was above all a good Canadian. I offer my condolences to the members of his family.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, it has been most interesting to listen to the honourable senator from Gulf (Hon. Mr. Power) tell us of his old friend, the late General Crerar. I did not have the opportunity of knowing General Crerar as well as Senator Power, but I did meet him on a number of occasions during the two wars. He was a great soldier and one whose name, I am sure, will go down in the history of this country.

As we all know, the history of Canada has not been so much of war as it has been of the exploits of our people in taming the wilderness and the vast expanses of this country; the building of towns and cities, and the development of our great natural resources. I am sure all honourable senators will agree with me that we have every reason to be proud of our success and accomplishments in this regard.

Honourable senators, Canada took part in two of the greatest wars of history, not for the purpose of conquest but, as we thought, for the preservation of peace and freedom. As to what success was attained in those two wars, it is not my intention to comment on this afternoon. In the First World War, as honourable senators know, Canada raised a civilian army of over half a million men. The Canadian Corps became the finest fighting force in all the allied troops. That is no idle boast; it is something which was recognized by our allies in the war. General Crerar played an important part in that war and, as you will recall, our troops were led by another great Canadian, Sir Arthur Currie.

In the Second World War history repeated itself. Canada again raised nearly half a million men. Those men were trained by civilian officers, for the most part, and of course they were civilians themselves in uniform until they became again a great force in the allied army.

*See p. 1520.

I met General Crerar during World War II. He had made a reputation for himself as a young officer in the First World War, and he had remarkable success in command of our troops in the Second World War. As Senator Power has told us, he had the qualities of a great leader. He had courage and good judgment, and he was well trained, much better trained than most officers who took part in that war, because he had trained himself as a soldier from his youth.

Probably best of all, General Crerar earned the respect and confidence of his men. He also had the respect and confidence of the generals and officers with whom he was associated from the allied armies.

I notice that many have paid tribute to his memory, including Field Marshal Earl Alexander who was a former Governor General of Canada and who is considered by many as the greatest general of World War II. General Alexander knew General Crerar well and his tribute is a most sincere one.

Honourable senators, there is another matter which I would like to mention. General Crerar did not write a book, as far as I know, nor did he write many articles; he did not criticize or try to belittle any of those with whom he was associated—a practice, I may say, which has become too common, in my opinion, with certain other generals.

I am satisfied that Canada will give General Crerar a very high place in its history, one which he has well earned and well deserved. I desire to join with my good friend Senator Power in paying this short tribute, and also in expressing my words of sympathy to Mrs. Crerar and other members of General Crerar's family.

PRIVATE BILL

WORLD MORTGAGE CORPORATION—COMMONS AMENDMENTS CONCURRED IN

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons returning Bill S-32, to incorporate World Mortgage Corporation, and acquainting the Senate that they have passed this bill with the following amendments, to which they desire the concurrence of the Senate:

1. Page 2, Lines 1 to 30. Delete.
2. Page 2, Line 31. Renumber clause 9 as clause 7.
3. Page 2, Lines 32 and 33. Delete the words "except as otherwise provided herein".

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these amendments be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I move, for honourable Senator Leonard, that these amendments be taken into consideration now.

Honourable senators, this is a private bill and I really have no business participating in the debate. However, since it was dealt with in the other place last evening, and since the sponsor in the Senate, (Hon. Mr. Leonard) was not to be here today, I was in touch with him this morning to ascertain his wishes.

I am informed that he has spoken to his principals, and that his principals are quite satisfied to delete clauses 7 and 8 as they were originally in the draft bill, on the ground that the amendments to the Insurance Trust and Loans Companies Act now change the position, in so far as these sections are concerned. Senator Leonard tells me that the bill as it is now amended, while perhaps not entirely satisfactory to his principals, is nonetheless one that they would like to see passed in this truncated form.

Amendments concurred in.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 1, 1965

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-150, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending 31st March, 1966.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move that the bill be now read the second time.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: May I ask if copies of the bill have been distributed?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes. I made special inquiries this morning and was informed that copies would be placed on file in the desks of honourable senators.

Honourable senators, this is the first interim supply bill for the fiscal year, which began yesterday, April 1, 1965. The bill provides the Government with supply for two months for all items of the estimates. In other words, if this bill is passed, the Government will have supply for the months of April and May. The main estimates were tabled in this house on March 23 of this year.

Since the present session of Parliament is about to close, as soon as possible in the next session of Parliament, which will begin almost immediately, a motion will be made to refer the estimates tabled on March 23 to the Standing Committee on Finance, with a view to having that committee peruse the estimates, as has been the custom in this house for many years past.

May I begin the few remarks I have to make by saying that in no instance is the total amount of any item of estimates being released by this bill. May I also say that the bill comes to us in the usual form for interim supply bills.

Honourable senators, I give the assurance, which is customarily given when bills of this kind are dealt with in the Senate, that the passing of this bill will not prejudice the rights of any member to criticize any item in the estimates when such estimates come up for consideration, either in this house or in the Standing Committee on Finance. The usual undertaking is hereby given that such rights and privileges will be respected and will not be curtailed or restricted in any way as a result of the passing of this measure.

I think it would be convenient for all honourable senators if we looked first at the schedules of the bill rather than the bill itself. I have already indicated that the general purpose of the bill is to grant the Government two months' supply; in other words, to grant two-twelfths of the total of the main estimates. However, there are certain items in certain departments where more than this one-sixth is required, and these extra amounts are indicated in the schedules.

May I first direct the attention of honourable senators to Schedule A, which deals with an additional amount of $8,344,666.67, being eight-twelfths of a certain item, namely, item No. 15 in the Department of External Affairs. This item deals with Canada's contribution to the United Nations Special Fund, the United Nations Expanded Program for Technical Assistance to Underdeveloped Countries, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the near East, the Refugee Program of the Inter-Governmental Committee for European Migration, the World Food Program, and Defence Support Assistance for non-NATO countries.

An additional proportion of eight-twelfths of this item in the Department of External Affairs is asked for to meet the request of the United Nations that as much as possible of our contribution to the special fund and the technical assistance programs be paid, and also because $2.4 million of the $2.9 million included for the Defence Support Assistance Program, covering delivery to Malaysia of four Caribou aircraft, is due under the contract before the end of May. That is all that I have to say about Schedule A.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Is there anything in connection with the Congo?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Unless it should fall under the general description which I have given, I should not think so.

Schedule B requests an additional five-twelfths of item 20 in the Department of External Affairs in the amount of $456,458.34. This item provides for contribution to the program of the NATO Science Committee; payment to the International Civil Aviation Organization; grants to the International Committee of the Red Cross; contribution to the United Nations Training and Research Institute, and our assessments for the Laos International Commission and the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East. Perhaps this is the item to which the honourable Senator Brooks referred. The additional proportion is requested to enable Canada to relieve the financial problem of the United Nations by paying a large proportion of the Emergency Force assessment immediately.

Schedule C provides for an additional four-twelfths of item 5 in the vote of Atomic Energy, in the amount of $533,333.34. This vote provides for assistance to universities in the field of atomic energy research. Present arrangements call for the payment of 50 per cent of the grants to be made early in the fiscal year. It is necessary that this additional amount be released if this commitment is to be lived up to. I think this is a customary request at this time.

Schedule D asks for an additional three-twelfths of item 10 of the National Research Council items, in the amount of $7,675,000. Item 10 provides for the payment of scholarships and grants in aid of research in Canadian universities. A large proportion of these grants and scholarships is paid early in the fiscal year, and for that reason the extra amount is required at this time.

Schedule E proposes that an additional two-twelfths of certain items listed be granted, and the amount would be $7,314,783.34. This proposal would apply to the following items. Under Legislation is item 20 for the general administration expenses of the House of Commons. As honourable senators know, the House of Commons has been very busy. It is in session and will continue to be in session for some time, so additional amounts are required to meet the current costs being incurred. Under the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys is Vote 25 dealing with geological research. Additional money is required at this time of the year because the geological investigations in the field and in the laboratory are being prepared. The preparatory work is being done now, so early in the fiscal year these additional amounts are needed to get the field work, particularly, under way.

Item 30 under the Department of the Secretary of State is also included in this list. An additional amount is required just now to clear a carryover of accounts incurred in connection with the Memorial Building at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and also because there has been an acceleration in the pace of work in central Ottawa in connection with the construction of the Performing Arts Centre being developed here.

In the Department of Transport there is an additional amount required in item 95. This item deals with capital subsidies for the construction of commercial and fishing vessels in accordance with regulations of the Governor in Council. The vote provides for payments not exceeding 35 per cent of the cost of work performed under a contract in accordance with laid-down regulations. An additional proportion is requested to meet payments on 34 ships under construction. These payments are expected to amount to $8.4 million in April and May.

Schedule F proposes that an additional one-twelfth of the main estimates, under certain items, be granted in the amount of $7,784,533.34. One of the items to which this would apply would be item 5 in the Department of External Affairs. This vote provides for the salaries and other expenses of personnel serving abroad. I am informed that it is customary to ask for additional amounts at this time so that expenses in various parts of the world can be met and processed in an orderly way.

In the Department of Justice the proposal would apply to item 1, and particularly for pre-financing the costs incurred in the administration of justice in the Northwest Territories. I may say that these items are refundable from the funds to become available to the Northwest Territories Commission.

The proposal of this schedule would apply also in respect of the running costs connected with the sittings of the Senate. The Senate has been and, of course, will continue to be in session in the early part of the fiscal year.

In the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys there are five items—Nos. 10, 15, 45, 50 and 60—all of which generally concern survey activities which are to be carried out in the spring and summer months. The expenditures for this work are heaviest in the earlier part of the fiscal year, and for that reason this additional amount is required.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: May I ask the honourable Leader of the Government why it is only one-twelfth in Schedule F and two-twelfths or more in all other schedules? I am thinking particularly of the general administration of the Senate and these others. It seems to me that if they need two-twelfths in the other place, we would certainly need two-twelfths here.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The thought occurred to me, to ask for the additional amount. I believe the custom is that the administrators of the department—in this case, of the Houses of Parliament concerned—indicate to the treasury officers what their requirements will be. I understand that so far as the Senate is concerned, we can get along very well with, first of all, the general two-twelfths plus the additional one-twelfth until the end of May.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: I just want to make sure we have money enough, that is all.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I think they are quite satisfied that it is adequate. This is only one-twelfth additional. The Senate is also being voted, as is every department, two-twelfths, so in fact one-quarter of the requirements for the year is being allocated by this bill.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: That is just by way of comparison.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I must say to the Leader of the Opposition that I really do not know why they need the additional one-twelfth on the other side, but they may have problems we do not know too much about.

If I may continue with respect to Schedule F, item 5 in the Department of National Revenue falls within this category, and I have a note here to the effect that in the first quarter of the fiscal year that department finds itself in a peak period of operation in all district offices, particularly those of the Income Tax Branch. We can all understand this, because our tax returns must be filed before the end of this month and they will be very busy during that period.

Likewise in the Department of Trade and Commerce, the same observation would apply to item 15 which deals with the Canadian Government Travel Bureau. Additional moneys are required to meet the expenses of the spring and summer advertising campaigns, accounts for which are received by the Travel Bureau in April and May.

In addition to this there is a certain borrowing authority which is sought by this bill. As honourable senators know, the Financial Administration Act requires that no money shall be borrowed or security issued by or on behalf of Her Majesty without the authority of Parliament.

The authority to borrow for the purposes of refunding maturing issues is found in section 43 of the Financial Administration Act. The authority for the Government to raise new money through the issue of securities must, however, be obtained annually. At the beginning of each fiscal year a bill of this kind provides for the cancellation of any unused borrowing authority under the provisions of previous appropriation acts. In addition, this bill seeks new authority for the Minister of Finance to raise money in the ordinary way by issue of securities. The types of securities usually issued are treasury bills, marketable bonds, and Canada Savings Bonds.

I should add that by Appropriation Act No. 1, 1964, and Appropriation Act No. 9, 1964, borrowing authority was provided up to an amount of $1,750 million. To date this authority has been utilized but only to the extent of $1,204 million, so that the unused portion, which is $546 million, will no longer be available. It will be cancelled by this bill.

If honourable senators are interested I shall recapitulate the total borrowing authority in previous financial years:

Fiscal Year	Total Borrowing Authority
1959-60	$1½ billion
1960-61	1½ billion
1961-62	2 billion
1962-63	2½ billion
1963-64	2 billion
1964-65	1¾ billion

As I have said, the present bill is in the usual form. Section 2 provides for not only the two-twelfths of the general estimates but by subsection (a) it also provides for the additional two-twelfths of which details are set out in schedule A. Subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f) and (g) cover the authority in respect of the various schedules of which I have already spoken.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: May I interrupt my friend to have one point clarified? Did I understand the honourable leader to say that section 2 authorizes two-twelfths and that the schedules authorize an additional two-twelfths?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes.

Hon. Mr. Burchill: I ask that because the section reads "being the aggregate of...."

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): The authority would be for a total of $762,547,-249.03. That is the total already authorized. To repeat what I have said, this is made up of two-twelfths of all items to be voted in the main estimates in an amount of $730,-438,474. Then there are the following amounts provided for in Schedules A to F. Would the honourable senator like me to list them in detail?

Hon. Mr. Burchill: No, it is not necessary.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I have already put the figures on Hansard. I hope I have answered the question adequately and that the point is clear.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: It is all set out on page 2.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes, in the lettered subsections of section 2.

Section 3 of the bill provides that the amount to be paid in respect of any of the items may be paid or applied only for the purposes of and subject to the terms and conditions of the specified items.

Section 4 deals with commitments. Where authority is given to enter into a commitment, it may only be entered into in accordance with the terms of such item and to the extent of the amount specified, if the Comptroller of the Treasury so certifies.

Section 5 deals with the loan provisions, and the authority granted for loans is $1 billion. I have no doubt that a future appropriation bill will seek further borrowing authority, but at the moment the extent of the borrowing authority which Parliament is asked to grant is $1 billion.

Subsection 2 of section 5 provides for the lapse of prior borrowing powers. I have already referred to this and I have indicated the amount which will lapse as a result of this bill.

Section 6 of the bill provides that the amounts paid or applied under the authority of this act shall be accounted for in the public accounts in accordance with the Financial Administration Act.

If honourable senators have questions to ask that I can answer, I shall be happy to do so.

Hon. Walter M. Aseltine: Honourable senators, I am not a financial expert by any means, and I do not suppose that the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West) is either, despite the fact that he has given us an excellent explanation of this interim supply bill. It is his responsibility to introduce such bills, just as it was my responsibility when I occupied a similar position on the other side of the house.

I well remember the first interim supply bill that I sponsored and explained in 1958. I dealt with it in a manner similar to that in which the honourable Leader of the Government has dealt with this bill this afternoon.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): All I know I learned from you.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: I thought I had done a pretty good job.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: So you had.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: And when the Honourable W. Ross Macdonald got up to speak after I had finished he congratulated me quite sincerely and then, to my surprise, started to take me all apart. What he said is to be found on page 17 of the Debates of the Senate for 1958, and it reads as follows:

> Honourable senators, yesterday afternoon the Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Aseltine) tabled in the house the estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1959. We have just had a chance to glance at these estimates since they were tabled, and I am sure we were all astounded to learn the total amount the Government proposes to spend during the fiscal year upon which we have now entered. On page 3 of the estimates it will be observed that the total estimated expenditures for this year are $5,179,343,555, and this amount does not include old age pension payments of $555 million. When that figure is added to the estimates which have been tabled in this house, the total proposed expenditure is $5,734,343,555. That is an increase of $318 million over the total expenditures of last year.

The honourable senator also said on that occasion as reported on the next page:

> So during the current financial year we shall spend probably $6 billion, the largest annual federal expenditure ever made in Canada.
>
> The present Government, which has been in power for less than a year, has become the most fabulous spender of public funds of any government that has ever administered the affairs of our country; and if the bill before us is a simple bill, its simplicity consists only in its enormousness.

He made some further remarks to the effect that during my explanation of the bill I had smiled once or twice, and he expressed the thought that this was a terrible thing to be smiling about.

Honourable senators, that is just a preamble to what I intend to say. We have had tabled in this house the estimates for the fiscal year 1965-66 which total $7,399,700,000. That amount does not include any supplementary estimates that may be brought before us during the year. If another $500 million is added for supplementary estimates the total is increased to nearly $8 billion. Not included in the 1965-66 totals are the outlays for Old Age Security payments amounting to $905 million, and loans, investments and advances totaling $202,144,800. Therefore, when everything is added together, it seems that the federal Government will probably spend more than $9 billion in the current fiscal year, and that is about $3 billion more than what was spent in the fiscal year 1958-59.

That is not all. The public debt has been going up by leaps and bounds, and the public debt charges at the present time amount to $1,101,056,400 annually. When I think of that sum I am reminded of what President Hoover of the United States is reported to have said on one occasion:

> Blessed are our children because they will inherit the national debt.

I do not intend to go into all of the items that have been so fully dealt with by the honourable Leader of the Government (Hon. Mr. Connolly, Ottawa West). We shall have plenty of opportunity in the future to examine the estimates in detail. This bill is the one usually presented at this time of the year, and the amounts it authorizes are just portions of the total amounts.

The Leader of the Government has stated that the estimates will be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance. That, I agree, is a good thing to do. I hope that that committee will be set up and get to work as soon as possible after the new session commences. Last year it investigated and dealt with the Glassco Report, with the result that honourable senators received a great deal of valuable information. I hope that in the coming session we shall be able to deal with other financial matters, even though we do not actually deal with the individual estimates of any department.

I regret the fact that Senator Crerar is not here today. I was sorry to learn a short time ago that he had suffered a heart attack, and would not be with us until sometime in May. He always took delight in telling us what he thought of the spending of our governments, federal, provincial and municipal. He was not bashful either in telling us what he thought about financial matters. We can look forward, I hope, to his being back with us soon and giving us one of his enlightening speeches.

That is all I wish to say today. My purpose in rising was to point out the huge amount of money we are going to spend in this fiscal year. As I have said, it amounts to some $9 billion. Perhaps it is necessary, but it is a great deal of money. I hope it will be well spent.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Before the honourable senator resumes his seat perhaps he would give us some further figures. Would he tell us the amount of revenue that was derived at the time he was Leader of the Government in this chamber, and the anticipated amount of revenue in this current year? I would like to know the growth in revenue as well as the growth in expenditure so that I may be able to grasp the whole situation completely.

Hon. Mr. Aseltine: That will be something for the Standing Committee on Finance to go into.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform honourable senators that if honourable Senator Connolly speaks now it will have the effect of closing the debate.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I should like, first of all, to thank Senator Aseltine for having taken part in this debate. He has referred to the speeches made when he was on this side of the house and we were over there. I think if one were to go back over the years one would find a pattern of that kind of discussion, particularly with respect to interim supply bills. These, of course, provide for interim advances to the Government to allow it to meet the public expense as it falls due.

Personally, I am always delighted to hear Senator Aseltine take part in our debates. When he was Leader of the Government he made it very easy for all of us to engage in debates on financial and other matters.

He has referred to the increase in the public debt and to the increase in public expenditures. Senator Roebuck's point is a valid one. The nation and the economy is growing. In the normal course of events the G.N.P. continues to grow and, of course, public and private expenditures continue to mount. This year the increase in capital investment alone is going to be 17 per cent over what it was last year. Last year it was 7 per cent over what it was the year before. Even in the private sector of the economy these increases are taking place year after year. We should carefully consider whether or not we are reaching the limit of our capacity to look after such expenditures. None the less, this kind of growth is salutary and all those interested in the development of this young and in so many respects wealthy nation should be pleased about the trend, particularly in the field of investment.

I am glad that Senator Aseltine referred to the work of the Finance Committee. I feel personally that it is not necessary for us to wait until the House of Commons has dealt with the estimates for our Finance Committee to begin its work. The work of the committee, in many sessions, even in the short time during which I have been in the Senate, has been of a high order, epsecially in the studies which the committee undertook last year and in previous years.

I remember in particular that when Senator Crerar was chairman some highly valuable reports were produced by that committee. Some of those reports were so valuable that they were favourably commented upon even by the Ottawa Journal. I am sure that high standard of performance will continue to characterize the work of the Finance Committee of the Senate.

Although it is not my business to make this reference, we are all pleased to hear Senator Aseltine's reference to our colleague Senator Crerar. I was talking to him the other day and am happy to report that he is coming along very well. He said he was having some difficulty with his left hand. I told him that a young fellow like himself had better get busy and get the left hand in shape, because it is the hand that guides the golf club. With this he agreed very readily.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

DOCUMENT TABLED

Hon. John J. Connolly tabled:

Report of the National Harbours Board, including its Accounts and Financial Statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1964, pursuant to section 32 of the National Harbours Board Act, chapter 187, and sections 85(3) and 87(3) of the Financial Administration Act, chapter 116, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French texts).

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, word has just come to me that the other place is still engaged in discussing certain public business and has not yet finished consideration of a bill which deals with supplementary estimates for the last fiscal year. In such circumstances, I think the Senate might take recess now to reassemble at the call of the bell. I am not able to suggest a time, and honourable senators understand why. It might be satisfactory to all if we reassemble when the bell rings.

Hon. Mr. Roebuck: Not later than 6 o'clock.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It would not be later than 6 o'clock.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 6.15 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I understand that the House of Commons has decided to sit beyond today's closing hour of 6 o'clock. They have adjourned until 7.30. There seems to be a disposition to try and conclude their consideration of the supplementary estimates today. I do not know what time we could expect the bill to arrive here, but perhaps it might suit the convenience of all of us if we adjourned now to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately 8.30 p.m. Would that be satisfactory?

Hon. Mr. Brooks: As far as I can see, Mr. Leader, that would be satisfactory. Your guess is as good as mine, and my guess is as good as yours.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It is only a guess, and not even an educated guess.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

Saturday, April 3, 1965

At 1.45 a.m. the sitting was resumed.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 2, 1965

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-151, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending 31st March, 1965.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I move that the bill be now read the second time.

I am sure that all honourable senators will be glad to know that these are the last supplementary estimates for the fiscal year 1964-65. I have prepared and had distributed to all honourable senators a memorandum. I must apologize, because there is a change in the figures. Perhaps I could come to that in a moment, and in the meantime I could go through the memorandum because it indicates precisely what stage we are at in connection with the appropriation bills for the past fiscal year.

The first appropriation act granted two months' supply in the amount of $684,120,-260.18. The second one, which was Act No. 5, granted interim supply for the month of June in the amount of $338,136,717.59. The next, Appropriation Act No. 6, granted interim supply for July, based on both the main and supplementary estimates in this case, in the amount of $469,308,421.26. Appropriation Act No. 7 granted the balance, four months, of two special items in the Supplementary Estimates (A), in the amount of $183,433,000.67. Honourable senators may remember that this was the special bill which came to us and dealt with the Columbia River and with certain superannuation arrangements for personnel of National Defence as a result of the amalgamation of the forces. Appropriation Act No. 8 was interim supply for August, September and October and was based on the main and supplementary estimates to that date, in the amount of $1,037,030,109.84.

Appropriation Act No. 9 granted interim supply for November and December. It too was based on the main and supplementary estimates, and was in the amount of $740,-710,974.77. Appropriation Act No. 10 granted the balance of the main and supplementary estimates A, B and C, in the amount of $1,053,832,908.69.

The total granted by Parliament up to that time was $4,506,572,393.00.

As I have said, this bill is the final supplementary estimates bill and is known as Supplementary Estimates D. It purports to grant—and here there is a change in the figure of the estimate—$345,781,048. Honourable senators will notice that there is a difference in the figures of $6. I shall explain this difference in a moment. Therefore the grand total is $4,852,353,441.

The bill is in the usual form, and Supplementary Estimates D upon which this bill was based were tabled in the Senate on March 23 of this year when details of the items were given.

Now I would like to refer to certain deletions that have been made in the other place this day. These were all dollar items. Before doing so I wish to refer to an item on page 5 which is not a deletion. Under the Department of External Affairs item 33d for external aid has been amended, and I wonder whether honourable senators opposite would wish me to read the second as amended?

Some Hon. Senators: No, no.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): It is a very long section but I would be happy to read it if anybody desires it.

Hon. Mr. Choquette: Nobody desires it.

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Agreed. Then I come to page 6 in which item 18d and item 21d have been deleted. On page 7 item 23d, which is connected with the Department of Finance, has been deleted. On page 10 item 3d connected with the Department of National Revenue has been deleted. On page 14 item 75d with respect to the Air Transport Board has been deleted, and on page 16 under Loans, Investments and Advances, under the Department of Trade and Commerce, item L38d with respect to Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation has been deleted.

Honourable senators will notice that the bill contains six sections. Section 1 is the title section. Section 2 provides for the grant of the amount of money, namely $345,781,048. Section 3 indicates that the amount authorized by the act to be paid or applied in respect of an item may be paid or applied only for the purpose of the item. Subsection (2) provides—and this is a customary section in a final appropriation bill—that the provisions in each of the items are deemed to be enacted by Parliament on the 1st day of April 1964, in other words at the beginning of the calendar year to which these estimates apply.

Section 4 of the bill, which again is a customary item, provides that where authority to enter into commitments is given, the commitment may be entered into in accordance with the terms of the items provided the Comptroller of the Treasury certifies as to the appropriateness of the commitment pursuant to the item.

Section 5 provides that the amounts appropriated by the act may be paid at any time on or before April 30, 1965. Such payment shall be deemed to have been made in and shall be charged to the fiscal year ending March 31, 1965. In other words, the officials will have approximately one month to disburse the moneys granted by this legislation.

Section 6 provides for an accounting of all moneys paid out pursuant to this bill in the public accounts in accordance with the appropriate provisions of the Financial Administration Act.

Honourable senators, that is a general explanation. There are, of course, a great many items in these 13 pages. If there are any questions I shall do my best to answer them based upon the information I have, although I am sure that honourable senators are quite familiar with the items in the schedules.

Hon. A. J. Brooks: Honourable senators, at this stage of the session, and at this time of night—

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): Morning.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: Yes—at this time of the morning, it would not be appropriate for me to make any extended remarks. I must say, however, that it is very unfortunate the Senate is not in a position to discuss this bill in an appropriate manner. I am not at all blaming the honourable Leader of the Government in the Senate, but it does seem to me that this session could have been allowed to run a day or two longer so that this bill could have been considered in the other place in a respectable manner, and we would have had an opportunity to debate it as we should. It is impossible for us to do that, because we cannot go into this bill in any detail at this late hour.

The honourable Leader of the Government has given us a good explanation and, as he has said, we have a fairly good understanding of this bill. However, there are very important items about which honourable senators might have wished to ask some questions. I had noted about a dozen myself, but I shall not go into them at this time. Under the Department of Agriculture there is an amount of $61 million, which is almost half the total in the general estimates. However, like other honourable members of this chamber, I can look in Hansard of the other place for the answers to most of our questions, even though it was never intended that we should get our information in that way.

This is the last bill to come before us and we are, I believe, at the end of the session. I can be excused for saying that in my opinion this has been the most frustrating, futile and inept session of the Parliament of Canada, and I hope that it will be a long time before we see another one like it.

In passing these estimates we are dealing with money that has already been spent, so in discussing them at length we would be flogging a dead horse. For that reason, possibly, we do not need to take the interest in them that we should. The points raised and the corrections made in the other place tonight were very necessary. Some items, as the honourable Leader of the Government has told us, have been stricken out. Those items should not have been there. I know that Senator McCutcheon intended to deal with them if the other place had not done what it did.

Honourable senators, I shall say nothing more. The best thing we can do is to bring this long and difficult session to an end. I would not want to keep it alive any longer. It was my hope that the next session would not commence immediately; that we would be afforded enough time to get the bad taste of this session out of our mouths, and that the next session would start after the Easter recess. In my opinion that would have been more appropriate.

With these few words, honourable senators, I shall say that my colleagues and myself on this side of the house do not oppose second reading of this bill.

Hon. M. Wallace McCutcheon: Honourable senators, I do not intend to delay the passage of this bill but I should say that had it not been for the reduction of the estimates from $345,781,054 to $345,781,048 I might have spoken for some considerable time this evening.

As the estimates were presented to us, they included something which was unique in the presentation of estimates to Parliament. I am referring, first of all, to vote 18d, which is a $1 vote, to amend the Public Service Superannuation Act, the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Act, and it goes on:

> Subsection (2) of section 32 of the Public Service Superannuation Act is repealed and the following is substituted therefor:

It goes on to introduce a new subsection, and new subsections to the other two acts that are mentioned. The item, of course, is a $1 item. As a matter of fact, the $6 that the House of Commons has saved tonight for the public of Canada has been saved because the Government of Canada was trying to legislate through the estimates.

There never was a more flagrant attempt, at the last minute, to put legislation through under the guise of estimates. People may say that this bill was delayed in the House of Commons, that it was a quarter to two in the morning before it came here, and people may say it was delayed here. However, never has a situation arisen where you amend statutes, you repeal a subsection, you enact another subsection in each of three statutes, you appoint two new members to a board—notwithstanding the provisions of the act. One would almost think that the present Government was living in those happy days of 1956 when they could do whatever they liked and nobody worried about it. They have learned nothing, and they have forgotten nothing.

Honourable senators, that is all I have to say. Fortunately, in the other place tonight, under some considerable pressure, we saved $6 of the taxpayers' money, as it is prescribed in the estimates; but the important thing is we saved the authority of Parliament.

Hon. Mr. Brooks: We prevented the establishment of a precedent.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Hon. Mr. Connolly (Ottawa West): I move third reading now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that he had received the following communication:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

April 3, 1965

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that The Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber at 2.15 a.m. today, the 3rd April, 1965 for the purpose of proroguing the Second Session of the Twenty-Sixth Parliament of Canada.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
A. G. Cherrier
Assistant Secretary to the
Governor General

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Robert Taschereau, Chief Justice of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of the Governor General was pleased to give the royal assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the Criminal Code. (Habeas Corpus).

An Act to incorporate Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada.

An Act to establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors.

An Act to amend the Companies Act.

An Act respecting the operation of certain established Federal - Provincial programs.

An Act to incorporate World Mortgage Corporation.

The Honourable Alan A. Macnaughton, Speaker of the House of Commons, then addressed the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General as follows:

May it please Your Honour:

The Commons of Canada have voted certain supplies required to enable the Government to defray the expenses of the public service.

In the name of the Commons, I present to Your Honour the following bills:

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1966.

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1965.

To which bills I humbly request Your Honour's assent.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the royal assent to the said bills.

PROROGATION SPEECH

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to close the Second Session of the Twenty-sixth Parliament with the following speech:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

The second session of the Twenty-Sixth Parliament opened on February 18, 1964, and you have been in session for a longer time than any other Parliament in our history. You have enacted much important legislation and approved many government actions of great significance for Canadians.

Canada was honoured by the presence of Her Majesty The Queen, and of His Royal Highness The Duke of Edinburgh last October, when we commemorated the conferences held a century before which paved the way to Confederation.

In the past year there was a very substantial increase in the number of people employed in Canada. Unemployment was reduced to the lowest level for many years. Economic growth has accelerated. The 1964 expansion in the Gross National Product was the largest percentage increase to be achieved since 1956. The incomes of Canadians have risen to new high levels. Exports have greatly improved, including particularly exports of manufactured products. Interest rates have been held at relatively low levels and monetary conditions have assisted business expansion. The Government's budget deficit has been sharply reduced.

The first report of the Economic Council of Canada, analysing the great potentialities for the expansion of the Canadian economy between now and 1970, has been laid before you. My ministers are assessing the policies required to meet the challenge of these potentialities.

My Government has agreed with the governments of all the provinces to recommend a measure whereby all amendments to the Constitution of Canada will in future be enacted in Canada.

You have made an important reform by providing that independent commissions shall undertake the redistribution of electoral districts for the House of Commons, on a basis that will rectify many disparities in the representation of the people.

Following the recommendation of a special committee representative of all parties in the House of Commons, you have expressed your approval of a distinctive Canadian Flag. By Royal Proclamation this flag, in the Canadian colours of red and white and bearing the Canadian emblem of the maple leaf, was inaugurated on February 15, 1965. My ministers are convinced that, through the years, the flag will constitute an important contribution to Canadian unity and Canadian identity.

With Her Majesty's consent, and in accordance with your recommendation, the Royal Union Flag will be flown on appropriate occasions to symbolize Canada's membership in the Commonwealth and our devotion to the Crown.

You have enacted legislation authorizing the integration of Canada's three armed services and have approved a White Paper on the reshaping of Canada's defence policy to improve the effectiveness of our contribution to peace-keeping and international security.

The preliminary report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism has been laid before you. My ministers have been gratified to observe the improving understanding of problems arising from the reality and importance of the dual character of our country.

In the spirit of co-operative federalism, my Government has held important conferences with the governments of the provinces, and close consultation has greatly improved the co-ordination of federal and provincial policies.

You have enacted legislation whereby the abatement of federal tax on personal incomes, in favour of the provinces, will be increased during the next two fiscal years. You have also enacted legislation whereby my Government may make, with provinces which so wish, alternative financial arrangements respecting certain established programs the cost of which is shared by my Government.

The federal-provincial conference has established a tax structure committee which is reviewing the fiscal needs and relationships of federal and provincial governments.

You have approved an address to the Queen as a result of which the British North America Act was amended to provide that Parliament may legislate concerning benefits, for disabled persons and for survivors, supplementary to old age pensions.

Following this constitutional amendment, you have enacted legislation to establish the Canada Pension Plan, for the comprehensive provision of retirement pensions which will be fully portable and which will be kept in line with changes in earnings and in the cost of living. In the same legislation you have provided a measure of income maintenance for contributors who become disabled and for the widows and children of contributors who die.

In the same legislation also, you have provided that the old age security pension will in future be paid from age 65 and that the basic amount of the pension will be increased if the cost of living rises.

You have enacted legislation whereby allowances of $10 a month are paid in respect of children aged 16 and 17 who are not working, either because they are unable to do so or because they are receiving full-time education.

You have adopted a measure whereby my Government may guarantee bank loans to university students and pay the interest on these loans during the years of study; this program is being administered in co-operation with the provinces.

You have enacted a measure to establish a labour code for industries under federal jurisdiction. The code provides for a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour and for standards respecting hours of work and holidays.

The cash income of Canadian farmers rose in 1964 to a record level. Exports of wheat were the largest ever. Revisions in dairy policy were reflected in increased production, especially of cheese, better sales and prices, and the elimination of the butter surplus.

You have enacted a measure establishing a new type of farm credit, so that partnerships of farmers may borrow for the purchase of machinery to be used co-operatively.

You have enacted legislation to double the size of loans which may be made by the Farm Credit Corporation and of loans by chartered banks guaranteed under the Farm Improvement Loans Act.

You have adopted a measure whereby my Government may provide re-insurance of the major portion of the disaster risk to any province establishing a crop insurance program.

You have approved increased assistance to farmers in eastern Canada and British Columbia purchasing feed grains.

My Government is expanding the work of ARDA and has made with the provinces a new agreement respecting programs for the five years beginning 1 April, 1965.

You have approved an increase in Canada's contribution to the World Food Program.

In 1964 Canada's fisheries established records both in the quantities landed and the value of the catch to fishermen. A federal-provincial conference on fisheries development gave impetus to a widespread program of industrial development in the fisheries.

You have adopted a measure establishing a twelve-mile fishing zone.

You have approved increases in veterans' pensions and allowances, enabling their recipients to maintain their standards of living and to share in the benefits of a more buoyant economy.

By amending the National Housing Act you have broadened the range of financial assistance available for urban renewal and low-rental housing.

My Government has concluded an agreement with the United States respecting free trade in automobiles and their components. The agreement makes possible for the industry programs designed to achieve substantial improvements in efficiency, production and employment.

You have approved the payment of subvention assistance on the movement of Canadian coal for a period of five years from 1 April 1965, and have authorized loans for coal production assistance for a further period of four years.

You have enacted legislation whereby divorce bills can be dealt with more expeditiously.

My Government has initiated inquiries directed to the re-assessment of immigration policy and procedures.

My ministers have made further progress in the study and implementation of many of the recommendations and suggestions of the Royal Commission on Government Organization.

We must note with regret that in the past year there has been little progress in reducing international tensions. In recent weeks, some tensions have been heightened. My Government has continued to make constructive efforts towards peace and good neighbourliness.

You have approved the participation of Canadian troops in the United Nations Force in Cyprus. Though no long-term solution to this problem is yet in sight, the United Nations Force has been successful in controlling armed conflict.

You have approved the Columbia River Treaty and its protocol which my Government subsequently ratified. These arrangements are of mutual benefit to Canada and the United States, providing this country with large supplies of low-cost power and increasing opportunities for employment.

My Prime Minister attended the Conference in London of Commonwealth Prime Ministers to discuss matters of common concern, including the establishment of a Commonwealth Secretariat.

My Government convened a conference of experts to exchange experience on the practical and technical problems of peacekeeping. The Commonwealth Education Conference was held in Ottawa.

In the search for international understanding and co-operation, my Prime Minister and his colleagues have visited and received a number of leaders of other countries, including the Presidents of Ireland and the United States, the Prime Ministers of Britain, Japan, Malaysia and Trinidad and Tobago; the Chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany; the Foreign Ministers of Australia, Belgium, Britain, France, Germany and Norway; and the Secretaries-General of the United Nations and of NATO.

Canadians recently joined with the people of Britain, the Commonwealth and the world in paying final tribute to Sir Winston Churchill, to whom so much was owed by all free men.

Members of the House of Commons

I thank you for the provision you have made for the public services in the current fiscal year.

Honourable Members of the Senate,
Members of the House of Commons,

May Divine Providence continue to bless our country.

INDEX

Abbreviations

1r, 2r, 3r	=first, second, third reading
amdts	=amendments
com	=committee
div	=division
m	=motion
neg	=negatived
ref	=referred
rep	=report
r.a.	=royal assent

Acadians, 61-63
Société Nationale des Acadiens, 62-63
Acts passed during the Session

PUBLIC ACTS

ASSENTED TO MARCH 30, 1964

CHAP. Bill No.
1. Appropriation Act No. 1, 1964 ... C-84
2. Trans-Canada Air Lines Act C-2

ASSENTED TO APRIL 3, 1964

3. Appropriation Act No. 3 1964 .. C-87

ASSENTED TO APRIL 6, 1964

4. Appropriation Act No. 2, 1964 .... C-86

ASSENTED TO APRIL 13, 1964

5. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1964 ... C-89

ASSENTED TO MAY 21, 1964

6. Blue Water Bridge Authority Act . S-4
7. Customs Tariff, An Act to amend the C-92
8. Estate Tax Act, An Act to amend the C-94

ASSENTED TO MAY 28, 1964

9. Appropriation Act No. 5, 1964 .... C-99

ASSENTED TO JUNE 18, 1964

10. Bank Act and the Quebec Savings Banks Act, An Act to amend the C-98

PUBLIC ACTS—Continued

ASSENTED TO JUNE 18, 1964—Continued

CHAP. Bill No.
11. Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) Act C-95
12. Farm Credit Act, An Act to amend the C-100
13. Income Tax Act, An Act to amend the C-91
14. Judges Act and Exchequer Court Act, An Act to amend the C-96
15. National Housing Act, 1954, An Act to amend the C-102
16. Ste-Foy-St-Nicolas Bridge Act ... S-21

ASSENTED TO JUNE 30, 1964

17. Appropriation Act No. 6, 1964 .. C-105
18. Export Credits Insurance Act, An Act to amend the C-101
19. Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission Act S-26

ASSENTED TO JULY 16, 1964

20. Appropriation Act No. 7, 1964 .... C-109
21. National Defence Act, An Act to amend the C-90
22. Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones Act S-17
23. Youth Allowances Act C-108

ASSENTED TO JULY 28, 1964

24. Canada Students Loans Act C-110

PUBLIC ACTS—Continued

ASSENTED TO AUGUST 7, 1964

CHAP.		Bill No.
25.	Appropriation Act No. 8, 1964 ...	C-116

ASSENTED TO AUGUST 13, 1964

26.	Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision Act, 1964	C-111

ASSENTED TO SEPTEMBER 16, 1964

27.	Farm Improvement Loans Act, An Act to amend the	C-119

ASSENTED TO OCTOBER 15, 1964

28.	Crop Insurance Act, An Act to amend the	C-129
29.	Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit Act	C-121

ASSENTED TO NOVEMBER 5, 1964

30.	Appropriation Act No. 9, 1964	C-135

ASSENTED TO NOVEMBER 20, 1964

31.	Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act	C-72
32.	Harbour Commissions Act	S-10
33.	Newfoundland Acts respecting Harbours and Pilotage	S-40

ASSENTED TO DECEMBER 2, 1964

34.	Main Supply Bill—Appropriation Act No. 10, 1964	C-140

ASSENTED TO DECEMBER 18, 1964

35.	Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code, An Act to amend the	C-141
36.	Judges Act, An Act to amend the .	C-112

ASSENTED TO MARCH 18, 1965

37.	Canada-Japan Income Tax Convention Act, 1965	C-146
38.	Canada Labour (Standards) Code .	C-126
39.	Canada Shipping Act, An Act to amend the	S-7
40.	Insurance, Department of, An Act to amend certain Acts Administered in the	C-123
41.	Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee Act, 1964	C-137
42.	Coal Production Assistance Act, An Act to amend the	C-147
43.	Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act, An Act to amend the	S-35
44.	Geneva Conventions Act, 1949, An Act respecting the	S-25
45.	Merchant Seamen Compensation Act, An Act to amend the	C-131
46.	Penitentiary Act, An Act to amend the	C-145

PUBLIC ACTS—Concluded

ASSENTED TO MARCH 18, 1965—Concluded

CHAP.		Bill No.
47.	Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) Act, An Act to amend the	S-24
48.	Revised Statutes of Canada, An Act respecting the	S-2

ASSENTED TO APRIL 3, 1965

49.	Appropriation Act No. 1 (Interim), 1965	C-150
50.	Appropriation Act No. 2, (Supplementary), 1965	C-151
51.	Canada Pension Plan	C-136
52.	Companies Act, An Act to amend the	S-22
53.	Criminal Code. (Habeas Corpus), An Act to amend the	C-35
54.	Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) Act	C-142

LOCAL AND PRIVATE ACTS

ASSENTED TO MAY 21, JUNE 18, JUNE 30, JULY 28, SEPTEMBER 16, 1964; MARCH 18, APRIL 3, 1965

Bridge and Tunnel Companies

CHAP.		Bill No.
55.	Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company, An Act respecting The .	S-47

Insurance Companies

56.	Allstate Insurance Company of Canada, An Act respecting	S-12
57.	Casualty Company of Canada, An Act respecting The	S-31
58.	Dominion Life Assurance Company, An Act respecting The ...	S-14
59.	Dominion of Canada General Insurance Company, An Act respecting The	S-30
60.	Economical Mutual Insurance Company An Act respecting The	S-48
61.	General Accident Assurance Company of Canada, An Act respecting The	S-8
62.	Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation, An Act respecting	S-9

Pipe Lines

63.	Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company, An Act respecting	S-43
64.	Meota Pipe Lines Ltd., An Act to incorporate	S-39
65.	Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd., An Act to incorporate	S-41

Religious Organizations

66.	Canadian Conference of the Brethren in Christ Church, An Act to incorporate	S-11

LOCAL AND PRIVATE ACTS—Concluded

Religious Organizations—Concluded

CHAP. Bill No.

67. Congregation of the Marist Sisters, An Act to incorporate S-38
68. Seicho-No-Ie, An Act to incorporate S-23

Telephone and Telegraph Companies

69. Bell Telephone Company of Canada, An Act respecting The S-27

Trust and Loans Companies

70. Evangeline Savings and Mortgage Company, An Act to incorporate . S-15
71. Guarantee Company of North America, An Act respecting The . S-37
72. Nova Scotia Savings & Loan Company, An Act to incorporate S-34
73. Setters Savings and Mortgage Corporation, An Act to incorporate .. S-46
74. World Mortgage Corporation, An Act to incorporate S-32

Miscellaneous

75. Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, An Act to incorporate S-36
76. Canadian Institute of Actuaries, An Act to incorporate S-45
77. General Council of the Canadian Branch of the St. John Ambulance Association, An Act respecting The S-5
78. Montreal Board of Trade, An Act respecting The S-18
79. Quebec Board of Trade, An Act respecting The S-28
80. Royal College of Dentists of Canada, An Act to incorporate The .. S-44

Actuaries, Canadian Institute, bill S-45, Hon. Mr. McCutcheon. 1r, 1037; 2r, 1044-9; ref to com, 1049; rep of com without amdt- authority to print com proceedings-3r, 1107-8; r.a., 1459

Addresses

To Her Majesty the Queen
Re birth of a Prince, 123-5, 316
Re B.N.A. Act, 768-75
Re visit to Canada, 1033-6
To the Governor General re messages to Queen
Re birth of a Prince, 125
Re B.N.A. Act amdt, 755-6
Re visit to Canada, 1035-6

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne at opening of session

Motion for, Hon. Eric Cook, 16-18; seconded, Hon. Azellus Denis, 18-20
Adopted, 233
Ordered that Address be presented to Governor General, 233

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne at opening of session—Concluded

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Bourque, Romuald, 203-5
Brooks, A. J., 22-29
Connolly, John J., 29-35
Cook, Eric, 16-18
Davies, W. Rupert, 71-73
Denis, Azellus, 18-20
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 218-22
Fournier, Edgar E., 58-63
Fournier, Sarto, 243-7
Gershaw, F. W., 40-42
Inman, F. Elsie, 168-73
Lang, Daniel A., 230-3
Paterson, Norman McL., 63-64
Quart, Josie D., 173-9
Rattenbury, Nelson, 183-5
Roebuck, Arthur W., 64-65
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 73-80
White, George S., 198-203
Willis, Harry A., 37-39
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 95-99
Yuzyk, Paul, 50-58

Adjournments, 142, 351, 1065-6, 1160
Authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 141-3, 947

Aging

Economic Security for the Aged in the U.S. and Canada, 77
Old age pensions, 512
Senior citizens, British Columbia, 737-8

Aging, Special Senate Committee, motion for, 12-13; agreed to, 13
Members, 12; quorum, 16
Reports
Authority to print com proceedings, 16
Interim report, 1232-3

Agreements

See Conventions, treaties and agreements

Agriculture

ARDA, 1148-9
Crop insurance, 1020-3, 1026-18
Manitoba, 1021
One per cent refund, 1027-8
Saskatchewan, 1023, 1027
Departmental expenses, 245
Farm credit, 733, 753-61, 764, 766
Farm improvement loans, 985-93, 996, 1002
Farm machinery syndicates credit, 1003-6, 1008-20, 1026, 1031
Federal-provincial projects in conjunction with farmers' co-operatives, 1149
Loans for implements, 985-6, 989
Maritime farming operations, 990
Prairie farm assistance, 1020, 1022-3
Provincial purchases of farm land, 1149
Research estimates, 778
Rural development, 59-60
Western farmers, 987-8, 990

Air Canada
Interim financing, 1369
Trans-Canada Air Lines, 69, 117-21, 125, 126, 143,249, 1413-14

Aird, Hon. John Black
Introduction to the Senate, 1067

Aitken, Sir William Maxwell
See Beaverbrook, Lord

Alberta
Banking legislation, federal government intervention in, 488, 616, 632
Oil developments, 601
Treasury Branch, 619

Allied Invasion of Normandy, Twentieth Anniversary
Tribute to Le Régiment de la Chaudière and other regiments, 668-70

Allstate Insurance Company of Canada bill S-12, Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson. 1r, 217; 2r-ref to com, 320; rep of com without amdt, 395; 3r, 423; r.a., 766

Annulment and divorce
See Divorce

Appendixes
Commonwealth Prime Ministers' meeting, final communiqué, 862-6
Companies bill S-22
Commons amdts, 1465-6, 1482-3
Reports of Banking and Commerce Committee, 1091-7, 1124-9
Fournier, Hon. Sarto, address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 243-7
Interparliamentary Group, Canada-United States, seventh meeting, 325-34
Library of Parliament, salary revisions, 538, 1032, 1294
Shipping bill S-7, report of committee with amdts, 694
Standing Committees, members, 43-44

Appropriation bills
No. 1, 1964 C-84. 1r, 238; 2r, 238-41, see also 285; 3r, 241; r.a., 249-50
No. 2, 1964 C-86. 1r, 268; 2r, 268-80, see also 285; m for 3r opposed 280; 3r, 289-92; r.a., 293
No. 3, 1964 C-87. 1r, 280; 2r, 280-2; 3r, 282; r.a., 282-3
No. 4, 1964 C-89. 1r, 298; 2r, 298-313; 3r, 313; r.a., 314-15
No. 5, 1964 C-99. 1r, 537; 2r, 569-80; 3r, 588; r.a., 622
No. 6, 1964 C-105. 1r, 777-84; 2r, 784; 3r, 803-7; r.a., 807-8
No. 7, 1964 C-109. 1r, 820; 2r, 820-3; 3r, 834; r.a., 847

Appropriation bills—Concluded
No. 8, 1964 C-116. 1r, 936; 2r, 936-45; 3r, 945-6; r.a., 947
No. 9, 1964 C-135. 1r, 1053; 2r, 1053-5; 1057-64; 3r, 1064; r.a., 1066
No. 10, 1964 C-140. 1r, 1137; 2r, 1137-43, 1146-58; 3r, 1158-9; r.a., 1164
No. 1, 1965 C-150. 1r, 1514; 2r, 1514-19; 3r, 1519; r.a., 1523
No. 2, 1965 C-151. 1r, 1520; 2r, 1520-2; 3r, 1522; r.a., 1523

Archambault report on penal reform
Recommendations, 88-92; answer to inquiry, 787-94
See Penal reform

ARDA, 1148-9
See Agriculture

Armed Forces
Expenditures for special operations since World War II, 573-5
Cyprus, 574-5
Gaza Strip, 573-4
India and Pakistan, 574
Inquiries as to payment for, 574-5
International Supervisory Commissions, 574
Pensions and allowances, 575
Geneva Conventions bill S-25, 457, 546-8, 554-7, 623, 637
Judicial safeguards for prisoners of war and internees, 547
Service discipline, 546-7
See also National Defence bill C-90

Aseltine, Hon. Walter M., P.C.
Appropriation bill No. 1, 1965 C-150, 1517-18
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1345
Press report, 734
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 921
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-137, 1367-9
Deficit, 1370
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, 1456-7
Jamaican Parliament, 1456-7
Crop Insurance bill C-129, 1026-8
One per cent refund, 1027-8
Saskatchewan hail insurance, 1027
Divorce, 208-10
Divorce and Matrimonial Causes bill, 209
Exchequer Court (Divorce Jurisdiction) bill, 208-10
Rules, 450, 451
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1087-8
Saskatchewan, 1087, 1088
Estimates, m for ref to Finance Committee, 496-8
Discussions of 1956 committee, 497

Aseltine, Hon Walter M., P.C.—Concluded
Estimates—Concluded
Recommendations of previous committees, 497
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1015
Flag, Canadian, 1262-4
Government spending and public debt, 1518
Horner, Hon. R.B., the late, 1168-9
National Defence bill C-90, 819
Prairie farm assistance, 1027
Drought relief, 1027
One per cent for coverage, 1027
Shipping bill S-7, 151, 152
Tourist traffic, 442-5
Canadian Travel Bureau, London, 442-3
Saskatchewan, 443
Fishing facilities, 443-4
Roadways, 444
Wheat ranches, 443

Atlantic provinces
Atlantic Development Board, federal grant to, 850
Coasting trade, 136-40, 148-50, 153-4
Farming operations, 986, 989, 990
Fisheries, 18, 27-28
Foreign vessels in Canadian waters, 27, 349, 368-9, 370, 373-4, 387
Industrial developments, 603
Lumber mills, 183
Newsprint mills, 154
Pollution of the sea by oil, 132, 135, 144-5, 148-9
St. Lawrence Seaway, effect of year-round navigation, 184, 1060
Transportation problems, 171-3
See also names of individual provinces

Baird, Hon. A. B.
Farm Credit bill C-100, 756-7
Newfoundland borrowings and repayments, 756-7
Flag, Canadian, 1245
Geneva Conventions bill S-25, 546-8
Amelioration of the Condition of Wounded, Sick and Shipwrecked members of Forces at Sea, 547
Amelioration of the Condition of Wounded and Sick in Armed Forces in the Field, 547
Certificate of Secretary of State, 547
Judicial safeguards for prisoners of war and internees, 547
Prisoner of war, definition, 547
Protection of civilian persons in time of war, 547
Red Cross International Committee, 547
Service discipline, prisoners of war subject to Code, 546-7
Treatment of prisoners of war, 547
Newfoundland, 340, 375, 756-7
Farm credit, 756-7

Baird, Hon. A. B.—Concluded
Newfoundland—Concluded
Fish, drying of, 375
Tourist potential, 340
Tourist traffic, 340

Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98. 1r., 539; 2r, 624-6; ref to com, 626; rep of com without amdt, 695; 3r, 718; r.a., 766

Banking and Commerce Committee
Members, 43
Reports
Allstate Insurance Company of Canada bill S-12. Rep of com without amdt, 395
Authority to sit during adjournments, 1008, 1028
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98. Rep of com without amdt, 695
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20. Authority to print com proceedings, 880; rep of com recommending that bill be not proceeded with, 1195, 1330-3; ref back to com, 1335-46
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6. Authority to print com proceedings, 182; rep of com without amdt, 913
Bell Telephone Company bill S-27. Rep of com without amdt, 655
Casualty Company of Canada bill S-31. Rep of com without amdt, 695
Companies bill S-22. Authority to print com proceedings, 588; rep of com with amdts, 1078, 1091-7; ref back to com, 1104-5; further rep of com, 1109-14, 1124-9
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 752
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35. Authority to print com proceedings, 1008
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) bill C-95. Rep of com without amdt, 695
Customs Tariff bill C-92. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 508
Dentists of Canada bill S-44. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts, 1107 Dominion Life Assurance Company bill S-14. Rep of com with amdts, 335
Dominion of Canada Insurance Company bill S-30. Rep of com with amdts, 695
Economical Mutual Insurance Company bill S-48. Rep of com with amdt, 1175

Banking and Commerce Committee—Continued

Reports—Continued

Estate Tax bill C-94. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 531

Farm Credit bill C-100. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 764

Farm Machinery bill C-119. Rep of com without amdt, 996

General Accident Assurance Company of Canada bill S-8. Rep of com with amdt, 181-2, 215

Guarantee Company of North America bill S-37. Rep of com without amdt, 833

Income Tax bill C-91. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 637

Insurance Department bill C-123. Authority to print com proceedings, 1437; rep of com without amdt, 1449

Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126. Authority to print com proceedings, 1352; rep of com without amdt, 1377

Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13. Authority to print com proceedings, 587-8; rep of com with amdts, 923

National Defence bill C-90. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 834

National Housing Act 1954 bill C-102. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 752

New Scotland (Evangeline) Savings and Mortgage Company bill S-15. Rep of com with amdts, 395-6

Nova Scotia Savings & Loan Company bill S-34. Authority to print com proceedings, 752; rep of com without amdt, 753

Pension Plan bill C-136. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 1498

Quebec Board of Trade bill S-28. Rep of com with amdts-authority to print com proceedings, 696

St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5. Rep of com without amdt, 106

Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation bill S-9. Rep of com without amdt, 182

Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation bill S-46. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdt, 1108

Student Loans bill C-110. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 925

Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17. Authority to print com proceedings, 413; rep of com without amdt, 452

Banking and Commerce Committee—Concluded

Reports—Concluded

Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdt, 1043

World Mortgage Corporation bill S-28. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts, 696

Banking and Finance, Porter Commission, 109, 131, 320, 323-4, 464, 468, 469, 470

Bank of British Columbia

Communication from Premier, 486-7

Grand Trunk Railway v Attorney General of Canada, 1337-8

Jurisdiction in money matters, 486-8, 615-17, 632-3, 692, 1337-8

Political control, 609-10, 612, 618, 691

Bank of Canada, political aspect, 690

Board of Trade objection, 484-6, 610

Vancouver Sun, article re, 484

Provincial jurisdiction, 488-90, 614, 630, 632-5, 611, 614-15, 633-5, 690-2

Alberta legislation, rejection by federal Government, 488, 616, 631-2

Bank of Toronto vs Lamb, 488

Bergethaler vs Waisenamt, 488

Clement's Canadian Constitution, 488, 489

Property and civil rights, 488

Revenue Act Amendment Act, 473

Shares of provincial government, 470-1, 472, 484, 485, 632-3, 690-2

Surplus of financial institutions, 608, 616, 618

Taxes, nonpayment of, 614

See Banks and banking

Speakers: Honourable Senators

Aseltine, Walter M., 1345

Beaubien, L. P., 629-30

Brooks, A. J., 631, 640-1, 1343

Burchill, G. Percival, 1341

Cameron, Donald, 634, 640, 1339-40, 1345

Connolly, John J., 1340-1, 1343

Cook, Eric, 614-15

Crerar, T. A., 633

Croll, David A., 632, 635, 640

Farris, J. W. de B., 395, 470-4, 483-91, 690-2, 1337-8

Flynn, Jacques, 1332-3, 1335

Grosart, Allister, 1338-9, 1342

Hayden, Salter A., 1330-1, 1332, 1341-2

Hollett, Malcolm, 639

Horner, R. B., 618-19, 635

Hugessen, A. K., 630-1, 634

Lambert, Norman P., 612-14

O'Leary, M. Grattan, 1342-3

Pouliot, Jean-François, 615-18, 619

Reid, Thomas, 634-5

Roebuck, Arthur W., 632-4, 639-40, 641

Smith, Sydney J., 638

Bank of British Columbia—Concluded
Speakers: Honourable Senators—Concluded
Stambaugh, J. Wesley, 619
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 638-9
White, George S., 607-12

Bank of British Columbia bill S-20. Hon. Mr. Farris. 1r, 395; 2r 470-4, 483-91, 607-19, 629-35, 638-41, 690-2; ref to com, 692; authority to print com proceedings, 880, rep of com recommending that bill be not proceeded with, 1195, 1330-3; ref back to com, 1335-46

Bank of Western Canada
Bank Act requirements, 80-81, 82
Capital stock, 81, 917, 922
Charter, date of granting, 131
Investors in bank, 82
Policy questions, differences of opinion between governments, 108
Provisional directors, 81
Shareholding by provincial governments, 108
Shares, alleged sale, question of privilege, Hon. Mr. Brooks, 163-5
Voting interest, 914-23
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 921
Blois, Fred M., 126-30
Burchill, G. Percival, 109
Crerar, T. A., 112-13
Croll, David A., 109-12
Haig, J. Campbell, 82-83
Hayden, Salter A., 917-18
Horner, R. B., 83, 111
Hugessen, A. K., 919, 920
Leonard, T. D'Arcy, 80-82, 130-1, 918-19, 920-1
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 108-9, 913-17, 918, 920, 922, 926
Pouliot, Jean-François, 114
Reid, Thomas, 82
Roebuck, Arthur W., 113-14, 921
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 917, 919
Vien, Thomas, 83-84, 107-8

Bank of Western Canada bill S-6. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 36; 2r, 80-84, 106-14, 126-32; ref to com, 132; authority to print com proceedings, 182; rep of com without amdt, 913; m for 3r, 913; amdt to ref back to com, 913-23, see also 931; amdt neg, 923; 3r, 926-7

Banks and banking
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 539, 624-6, 695, 718, 766
Banking and Finance, Royal Commission, 320, 323-4, 464, 468, 469, 470
Bank of British Columbia bill S-6, 395, 470-4, 483-91, 607-19, 629-35, 638-41, 690-2, 880

Banks and banking—Concluded
Bank of Canada, 107, 108
Political aspect of, 690
Responsibility in economy of nation, 108
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 36, 80-84, 106-14, 126-32, 182, 913-23, 926-7
Banks and credit unions, increase in business, 463, 465
British International Finance (Canada) Limited, 128-9
Chartered banks, 463-4
Assets, 464
Depletion of, 630
Shares, 630
Charters, delay in granting, press report, 609
Colonial inhibitions in western Canada, 612-13
Dollar deposits as compared to credit unions, 127
Employment in, 129
Failures, 465-7
Interest on deposits, 129
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 217, 320-4, 408-9, 462-70, 587-8
Merchandising in retail banking, 127
Monopoly in banking, 109
Press report on legislation before Senate, 734
Quebec Savings Banks, duration of authority to carry on business, 624-6
Royal Bank, Western Canada, 130
Salaries, 467
Statistics, provincial, 127
Treasury Branch, Alberta, 619

Bates, Dr. Stewart, President of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the late, 714, 719, 734

Beaubien, Hon. Arthur L., Chief Government Whip in the Senate
Acting Speaker, 100, 141
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, tribute to, 1071-2
Budget Speech, accommodation for Senators in Commons gallery, 141
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1026
Meota Pipe Lines Ltd., petition, 799
Pension Plan, joint committee, 1277
Private bills, extension of time for filing of petitions, 798
Royal Family, birth of a Prince, 143
Standing Committees, 36
Members, 43-44
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 413

Beaubien, Hon. L. P.
Allstate Insurance Company of Canada bill S-12, 217

Beaubien, Hon. L. P.—Concluded
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 629-30
B.C. banks per capita, 630
Provincial control, 629-30
Share values, chartered banks, 630
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 111, 112

Beaverbrook, Lord, the late, 674-5

Bélisle, Hon. Rhéal
External relations, 434-7
North Atlantic Treaty Organization, 434-6
Peace-keeping activities, 435
Canadian participation, 434-7
Financing of, 435-6
International Court of Justice, 435
Portugal, 436
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1298
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1298
United Nations, 1394-8
Constitution, 1397-8
New nations, rights, responsibilities and fears, 1395-6
Nineteenth Session of General Assembly, 1394-8
World government, 1395-6

Bell Telephone Company of Canada bill S-27.
Hon. Mr. Bouffard. 1r, 586; 2r, 620-1; ref to com, 621; rep of com without amdt, 655; 3r, 670; r.a., 1459

Bennett, Hon. W. A. C., Premier of British Columbia, visitor to Senate, 880

Bilingualism and biculturalism, 52-56, 61-63, 203-5
Ethnic groups (1961 census), 52
Expenses of Royal Commission, 302, 312
Multiculturalism, 56
Ukrainian Canadians, 52-55
Culture, 53, 54, 55

Bill of Rights, 57-58
Fundamental freedoms and human rights, 264

Bills, numerically
Commons
See also individual titles
C-2 Trans-Canada Air Lines
C-35 Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus)
C-60 Combines Investigation (Captive Sales Financing)
C-72 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment
C-84 Appropriation No. 1, 1964
C-86 Appropriation No. 2, 1964
C-87 Appropriation No. 3, 1964
C-89 Appropriation No. 4, 1964
C-90 National Defence
C-91 Income Tax
C-92 Customs Tariff
C-94 Estate Tax

Bills, numerically—Continued
Commons—Concluded
C-95 Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees)
C-96 Judges (Officer of the Senate)
C-98 Bank and Quebec Savings Banks
C-99 Appropriation No. 5, 1964
C-100 Farm Credit
C-101 Export Credits Insurance
C-102 National Housing
C-105 Appropriation No. 6, 1964
C-108 Youth Allowances
C-109 Appropriation No. 7, 1964
C-110 Student Loans
C-111 Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision
C-112 Judges (Salaries for additional judges)
C-116 Appropriation No. 8, 1964
C-119 Farm Improvement Loans
C-121 Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit
C-123 Insurance
C-126 Labour (Standards) Code
C-129 Crop Insurance
C-131 Merchant Seamen Compensation
C-135 Appropriation No. 9, 1964
C-136 Pension Plan
C-137 Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee
C-140 Appropriation No. 10, 1964
C-141 Combines Investigation
C-142 Established Programs (Interim Arrangements)
C-145 Penitentiary
C-146 Income Tax Convention
C-147 Coal Production Assistance
C-150 Appropriation No. 1, 1965
C-151 Appropriation No. 2, 1965

Senate
See also individual titles
S-1 Railways (pro forma)
S-2 Revised Statutes of Canada
S-3 Finance Charges (Disclosure)
S-4 Blue Water Bridge Authority
S-5 St. John Ambulance Association
S-6 Bank of Western Canada
S-7 Shipping
S-8 General Accident Assurance Company of Canada
S-9 Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation
S-10 Harbour Commissions
S-11 Brethren in Christ Church
S-12 Allstate Insurance Company of Canada
S-13 Laurentide Bank of Canada
S-14 Dominion Life Assurance Company
S-15 Evangeline (New Scotland) Savings and Mortgage Company
S-16 Marriage and Divorce Act
S-17 Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones
S-18 Montreal Board of Trade

Bills, numerically—Concluded
Senate—Concluded
S-19 Les Scouts Catholiques du Canada
S-20 Bank of British Columbia
S-21 Ste-Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge
S-22 Companies
S-23 Seicho-No-Ie
S-24 Privileges and Immunities (United Nations)
S-25 Geneva Conventions
S-26 Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission
S-27 The Bell Telephone Company of Canada
S-28 The Quebec Board of Trade
S-29 Dissolution and Annulment of Marriages Act
S-30 Dominion of Canada General Insurance Company
S-31 Casualty Company of Canada
S-32 World Mortgage Corporation
S-33 Ottawa Terminal Railway Company
S-34 Nova Scotia Savings and Loan Company
S-35 Corporations and Labour Unions Returns
S-36 Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada
S-37 The Guarantee Company of North America
S-38 Congregation of the Marist Sisters
S-39 Meota Pipe Lines Limited
S-40 Harbours and Pilotage
S-41 Mountain Pacific Pipe Line Ltd.
S-42 Interprovincial Pipe Line Company
S-43 Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company
S-44 Royal College of Dentists of Canada
S-45 Actuaries, Canadian Institute of
S-46 Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation
S-47 Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company
S-48 Economical Mutual Insurance Company

Bills, private
See also individual titles
Actuaries, Canadian Institute S-45
Allstate Insurance Company of Canada S-12
Bank of British Columbia S-20
Bank of Western Canada S-6
Bell Telephone Company of Canada S-27
Brethren in Christ Church S-11
Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company S-47
Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company S-43
Casualty Company of Canada S-31
Congregation of the Marist Sisters S-38
Dentists of Canada, Royal College, S-44
Dominion Life Assurance Company S-14
Dominion of Canada General Insurance Company S-30

Bills, private—Concluded
Economical Mutual Insurance S-48
Evangeline (New Scotland) Savings and Mortgage Company S-15
General Accident Assurance Company of Canada S-8
Guarantee Company of North America S-37
Interprovincial Pipe Line Company S-42
Laurentide Bank of Canada S-13
Les Scouts Catholiques du Canada S-19
Meota Pipe Lines Limited S-39
Montreal Board of Trade S-18
Mountain Pacific Pipe Line Ltd. S-41
New Scotland (Evangeline) Savings and Mortgage Company S-15
Nova Scotia Savings and Loan Company S-34
Quebec Board of Trade S-28
Royal College of Dentists of Canada S-44
St. John Ambulance Association S-5
Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation S-9
Seicho-No-Ie S-23
Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation S-46
Universities and Colleges of Canada S-36
World Mortgage Corporation S-32

Bills, private, fees
Brada Pipe Lines Limited, refund, 1038
Divorce, 14, 94-95, 100
St. John Ambulance Association, refund, 624

Bills, private, rules
Divorce, m for amdt, 94-95, 100, 380-1, 449-51
No. 61, right of Senator to introduce bill, 317-18, 479
Rules and Orders, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141

Bills, public
See also individual titles
Appropriation
No. 1, 1964 C-84
No. 2, 1964 C-86
No. 3, 1964 C-87
No. 4, 1964 C-89
No. 5, 1964 C-99
No. 6, 1964 C-105
No. 7, 1964 C-109
No. 8, 1964 C-116
No. 9, 1964 C-135
No. 10, 1964 C-140
No. 1, 1965 C-150
No. 2, 1965 C-151
Bank and Quebec Savings Banks C-98
Blue Water Bridge Authority S-4
Canada Corporations (Companies) S-22
Canada Shipping S-7
Canada Student Loans C-110
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee C-137

Bills, public—Concluded
Coal Production Assistance C-147
Combines Investigation (Captive Sales Financing) C-60
Companies (Canada Corporations) S-22
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns S-35
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) C-35
Crop Insurance C-129
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) C-95
Customs Tariff C-92
Dissolution and Annulment of Marriages S-29
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment C-72
Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) C-142
Estate Tax C-94
Exchequer Court (Judges) C-96
Export Credits Insurance C-101
Farm Credit C-100
Farm Improvement Loans C-119
Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit C-121
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision 1964 C-111
Finance Charges (Disclosure) S-3
Geneva Conventions S-25
Harbour Commissions S-10
Harbours and Pilotage S-40
Income Tax C-91
Income Tax Convention C-146
Insurance C-123
Judges C-96 (Officer of the Senate)
Judges C-112 (Salaries for additional judges)
Labour (Standards) Code C-126
Marriage and Divorce S-16
Merchant Seamen Compensation C-131
National Defence C-90
National Housing C-102
Ottawa Terminal Railway S-33
Penitentiary C-145
Pension Plan C-136
Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) S-24
Railways (Pro forma) S-1
Revised Statutes of Canada S-2
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission S-26
Shipping S-7
Ste-Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge S-21
Student Loans C-110
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones S-17
Trans-Canada Air Lines C-2
Youth Allowances C-108

Bills, public, rules
Suspension of Rules 23, 24, and 63, 1461

Blais, Hon. Aristide
(Deceased—November 10, 1964)
Tributes, 1070-2

Blois, Hon. Fred M.
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 126-30
British International Finance (Canada) Limited, 128-9
Chartered banks, 127-9
Dollar deposits as compared to credit unions, 127
Employment in, 129
Interest on deposits, 129
Merchandising in retail banking, 128
Statistics, provincial, 127
Regional operation, 128-9
Royal Bank, western Canada, 130
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 324, 408-9, 462-5
Chartered banks, 463-4
Assets, 464
Subsidiary to Power Corporation, 463
Porter Commission on Banking and Finance, 464

Blue Water Bridge
Authority, 223-6
Establishment of, 224-5
Members, lack of remuneration, 225-6
Bonds and interest, 224-5, 226
Costs, 223
International structures, control of, 224
Reciprocal legislation with U.S., 224, 225
Title to property in U.S., 226
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Macdonald, W. Ross, 223-5
White, George S., 225-6

Blue Water Bridge Authority bill S-4. 1r, 22; 2r, 223-6; ref to com, 226; authority to print com proceedings, 235; rep of com with amdts, 235-6; 3r, 236: r.a., 537

Board of Trade
See Montreal Board of Trade bill S-18, Quebec Board of Trade bill S-28.

Bogota, 218-22, 868-9
Canadian ambassador and staff, 218, 221
Canadian missions, 221, 222, 868-9
"Parque el Canada", 221-2
CARE gifts, 221-2
United Nations seminar on the Status of Women in Family Law, 218-22
Agenda, 219-20
Civil capacity of women, 220-1
Delegates, 219
Marriageable age for girls and boys, 220

Borden, Sir Robert, the late, 437, 438

Boucher, Hon. William A.
Horner, Hon. R. B., tribute, 1167-8
Pension Plan bill C-136, 1493-4

Bouffard, Hon. Paul H.
Actuaries bill S-45, 1047
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 474
Bell Telephone Company of Canada bill S-27, 586, 620-1
Directors, increase in, 620
Shareholders, 620-1
Statistics on company growth, 620
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35, 752
Farm Credit bill C-100, 764
Insurance Department bill C-123, 1388-9
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 478
National Housing bill C-102, 752
Nova Scotia Savings and Loan Company bill S-34, 752-3
Quebec Board of Trade bill S-28, 586, 621-2, 648
Name, translation of, 621
Objects of corporation, 621
Shipping bill S-7, 132-40, 1363-4
British Commonwealth Merchant Shipping Agreement, 132, 136-40
Certificated personnel, 140
Coasting trade, 136-40
Flag, national, use on Canadian ships, 1363
Iron ore shipments to U.S., 138
Liability of owners of seagoing ships, 132
Limitation of liability, 136, 138
Priorities in distribution of limitation fund, 135-6
Pollution of the sea by oil, 132, 135
Discharging of oil 100 miles from shore, 135
Power boats and small craft, Criminal Code provisions re, 139-40
Safety convention, cargo ships, 1364
Safety of life at sea, 132, 133
Classification of certificates, 133, 134
Classification of ships, 133
Inspections, 133
Nuclear ships, 133
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 118-19
World Mortgage Corporation bill S-28, 696

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, Speaker of the Senate
British North America Act
Address to Her Majesty the Queen requesting amdt re survivors' and disability benefits, 767-8, 775, 776
Budget Speech, accommodation for Senators in Commons gallery, 141
Churchill, Sir Winston, the late, 1295
Consumer Credit, Joint Committee, 100
Commons bills ref to com, 257, 539
Commons members, 234
Debate procedure, 213
Dissolution and annulment of marriages, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron as officer of the Senate, 931
Flag, Canadian, 100-1, 1269, 1270

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, Speaker of the Senate —Concluded
Interparliamentary Group, report on meeting at Washington and Cape Kennedy, 325-6
Library of Parliament, reports on salary revisions, 521, 538, 1026, 1032, 1036, 1278, 1284, 1294
Queen Elizabeth II
Address of loyalty and affection following visit, 1033, 1035, 1037
Acknowledgment, 1067
Address to the Royal family on the birth of a Prince, 123, 125, 143
Rules of the Senate re notice of motion, 1171-2
Ruling on out of order remark, 1185
Senate business, 265
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, correction of division list on vote, 413

Bourque, Hon. Romuald
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 203-5
Bilingualism and biculturalism, 203-5
Separatism, 204-5
Industrial development, effect on, 205

Boy Scouts
Les Scouts Catholiques du Canada bill S-19, 380, 451; withdrawn, 499

Brada Pipe Lines Limited, refund of fees, 1038

Brethren in Christ Church bill S-11. Hon. Mr. Lambert. 1r, 163; 2r, 214-15; ref to com, 215; rep of com without amdt, 335; 3r, 352; Commons amdts, 668, 692; r.a., 766

British Columbia
Arrow Head Lakes, federal action on proposed dam, 631
Bank of British Columbia bill S-2, 395, 470-4, 483-91, 607-19, 629-35, 638-41, 690-2
B.C. Electric Company, provincial government takeover, 634, 691, 705
Columbia River, diversion from Fraser River, project report (1956), 21-22
Columbia River Treaty, 623-4, 676-89, 697, 698-711
Industrial developments, 602
International River Improvements Act, 631
Kaiser Aluminum Company, 634
Senior citizen population, 737-8
Tourist industry, 440-2
Budget and revenue, 442
Provincial and municipal agencies, 441-2
See Columbia River Treaty

British Commonwealth Merchant Shipping Agreement, 132, 136-40, 150

British North America Act
Amdt to provide for survivors' and disability pension benefits, 767-76
M for amdt, 768; agreed to, 775
Address to Her Majesty the Queen, 767-8
Address to the Governor General, 775
Messages to and from House of Commons, 767-8, 776, 777
British North America Acts and Selected Statutes (1867-1962), 115-16
Divorce courts, provincial, 14
Jurisdiction of federal government in money matters, 486, 487-8, 615-17, 631, 632
Banking, incorporation of banks and the issue of paper money, 616-17
Bills of exchange and promissory notes, 617
Currency and coinage, 616
Exclusive powers of Parliament, 486, 487-8, 615-17
Powers and privileges of Senate and of Commons, 302
Property and civil rights, 488, 632-3, 692
Provincial legislatures, powers of, 768

British subjects
British nationality, degrees or differences, 253, 260
Citizenship rights in Canada, 260
Political status in Canada, 253, 260
Public rights in Canada, 253
Voting privileges, High Commissioners to Canada, 253, 260, 277

Broadcasting, 1079, 1149-56, 1158, 1172-3, 1195
Violence depicted on TV, 1154
See Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Brooks, Hon. A. J., P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 22-29
Allied invasion of Normandy, 20th anniversary, tribute to Régiment de la Chaudière and other regiments, 669-70
Appropriation bills
No. 5, 1964 C-99, 570-3
No. 8, 1964 C-116, 938-41
No. 9, 1964 C-135, 1057-8
No. 2, 1965 C-151, 1521-2
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 631, 640-1, 1343
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 625, 626
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 111, 163-4
Question of privilege re alleged sale of shares, 163-4
Bennett, Hon. W. A. C., guest in Speaker's gallery, 880
Bills, public, explanatory notes, 1446
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, 1070-1
British North America Act, amdt re survivors' and disability pension benefits, 770-1, 773

Brooks, Hon. A. J., P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate—Continued
Cabinet appointments, 24-25
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 5-6
Canada-Hungary Trade Agreement, 1380
Canada-U.S.S.R. Trade Agreement, 1380
Centennial, 29
Coal subventions, 1059
Columbia River Treaty, 25-26, 698-702, 710
Benefits to Canada, 700-1
Costs of construction, 700
Diversion of waters, 700-2
Kootenay River, 700
Saskatchewan government negotiations, 701-2
Downstream benefits and revenue, 700
Employment, 701
Flood control, 701
House of Commons committee on, 699, 701, 702
Hydroelectric power potential, 700
Libby reservoir, 700-1
National development, 699, 700
Summary provisions, 702
Crerar, General H.D.G., the late, 1513-14
Crerar, Hon. T. A., 88th birthday, 751
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) bill C-95, 532-3
Provincial taxes, exemption from, 532-3
Customs Tariff bill C-92, 455
Aircraft, 455
Cyprus, peace-keeping force, 28, 148, 158, 160-1
Dissolution and annulment of marriages, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron as officer of the Senate, 931
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1082-4
Estimates, 1057-8, 1059-60, 1061
Borrowing powers, 1059-60
Farm Credit bill C-100, 754, 758
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 990-1
Farm credit, 991
Maritime farming operations, 990
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1013-14
British syndicates, 1013
Overproduction and lack of markets, 1014
Ferry service, estimates for, 938
Fisheries
Development policy, 27-28
Foreign vessels in Canadian waters, 27
Flag, Canadian, 1255-62
Flag, Commonwealth, Canadian, 1281-2
Government departmental expenditures, 572, 940-1
Privy Council, 572
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40, 850-1
Health services, Royal Commission recommendations, 940
Horner, Hon. R.B., the late, 1165-6
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 227-8

Brooks, Hon. A. J., P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate—Continued
Ice control, St. Lawrence River, 1059
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1445-8
Japanese trade, 1446-8
Labour Department, estimates, 1059
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1305
Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, honorary Doctor of Laws, 606
National debt, 571-2
National Defence bill C-90, 814-18, 819
Chief of Defence Staff, 816
Equipment expenditures, 816, 817
Esher report, 816, 817
White Paper on Defence, 815-16
Nehru, Jawaharlal, Prime Minister of India, the late, 587
New Brunswick
Campobello Island, 25
Passamoquoddy Bay, power potential, 25
Tin mine, 25
Newspaper headlining of subversive activities, 23
Parliamentary secretary's statement, placing on Senate record, 46
Penitentiary bill C-145, 1355-6
Penitentiary hospitals, 1355
Pension plan, 28, 1102
Joint committee, 1102
Provincial reaction, 28
Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François, 40th anniversary in Parliament, 1135
Power, Hon. C.G., 47th anniversary in Parliament, 1231
Public debt, interest on, 1058
Queen Elizabeth II, 28-29
Address of loyalty and affection following visit, 1034-5
Birth of a Prince, 100, 124
Railways, service of, 573
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1296-7
Roebuck, Hon. Arthur W., birthday felicitations, 36
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26, 589-90
Campobello Island, 25, 589-90
Commission members and powers, 589
Shipping bill S-7, 154, 749, 1364
Certification of masters and mates, 749
Flag, national, use on Canadian ships, 1364
Safety Convention, 1364
Smith, Hon. Sydney J., golden wedding anniversary, 1108
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1296-7
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 350, 363-6, 406
Enforcement fleet, press report of statement by Minister of Fisheries, 364-5
Frozen fish industry, Great Lakes and Pacific coast, 365
Geographical co-ordinates, 366

Brooks, Hon. A. J., P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate—Concluded
Historic and treaty rights, 365
Law of the Sea, 365
Lobby in New England for imposition of tariffs, 365
Six-plus-six formula, 365
Tourist traffic, 338-40
Canadian Travel Bureau, 338
Dolan, D. Leo, first chairman, 338
Dollar devaluation, advantages of, 339
Press comment, 339
Winter tourist trade, 339
Trade, 26, 572, 1380, 1446-8
Agreements, 1380
Deficit, 1446-7
Japan, 1446
U.S., 1446-7
Japan, 1446-8
Automobiles to be made in Nova Scotia, 1447
Market improvements, 26
Press comment, 26
Sales promotion, 572
Statistics on exports, 26
Wheat, 26
Trade and Commerce Department, 572
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 120
Transport Commissioners' expenditures, inquiry, 572-3, see 580
Transportation, MacPherson report, 27
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 5-6
Unemployment, 26-27
Unemployment insurance fund, 27
Gill report, 27
Welfare expenditures, 572

Budget
Budget Speech, accommodation for Senators in Commons gallery, 141
Deficit, 76, 511-13, 578-9, 727
See Estimates

Burchill, Hon. G. Percival
Appropriation bills
No. 4, 1964 C-89, 309
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1154
Automobiles, tariff on, 964
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1341
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 109
Banking and Finance, Royal Commission, 109
Banking system of Canada, 109
Beaverbrook, Lord, the late, 674
Birthday felicitations, 1042
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1088
Eskimos, transfer of administrative control to Quebec, 309
Estimates, 309, 1162-3
Overlapping of expenditures, 1162-3
Reference to Finance Committee, 309

Burchill, Hon. G. Percival—Concluded
Farm Credit bill C-100, 760-1
Interest rate, 761
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill 1964 C-111, 964-5
Atlantic provinces, 964
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1328
Ammunition depots, 1328
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1297
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26, 557-8
Commission members, 558
Roosevelt, Franklin D., 557-8
Taxes, exemption from, 558
St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5, 68
Separatism, 965
Shipping bill S-7, 139
Student Loans bill C-110, 903-4
Beaverbrook scholarships, 903
New Brunswick provisions for students, 903
Overcrowding of universities, 903
Teaching staff, 903
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1297
Veterans of Hong Kong, 1154

Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company bill S-47. 1r, 1037; 2r, 1050-1; ref to com, 1051; rep of com without amdt-3r, 1098; r.a., 1459

Caisses populaires
Co-operative principle, 97-98
Promotion of home improvement and building, 738-9

Cameron, Hon. Charles A., appointment as Officer of the Senate, 930-1

Cameron, Hon. Donald
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1964 C-89, 304-6
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 626
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 634, 1339-40, 1345
Provincial rights, 634, 640, 1339-40
Banking and Finance, Royal Commission, 320, 323-4
Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company bill S-43, 1008, 1038-9
Gas exports to U.S., 1039
Directors, 1039
Consumer Credit, Joint Committee, counsel fees, 805-6
Consumer price index, 990
Dentists bill S-44, 1042
Divorce procedure, 211
Farm Improvement Loans bill, 989-90
Western farmers, 989-90
Flag, Canadian, 1186-8
Immigrants, contributions to Canadian culture, 322

Cameron, Hon. Donald—Concluded
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 217, 320-4, 409, 468-70
Assets of company, 321
Authorized capital, 321, 323
Directors, 321, 322-3
Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., 321, 468
Canadian ownership, 321-2
Subsidiary of, 468
Porter Commission on Banking and Finance, 468, 469, 470
Power Corporation of Canada 322, 468
Money bills, three readings in one day, 304-5
Officer of the Senate, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron, 930-1
Senate
Newspaper reports re, 306
Procedures and responsibilities, 305
Tourist traffic, 357-62
Accommodation, lack of, 361
Banff facilities, 358, 359
Ministry of tourism and recreation, 357
National Parks Act, 358-9
National parks development, 359-60, 361-2
Building designs, competition for, 362
Press comment
Albertan, 358
Calgary Herald, 359
Publicity, 359
Recreational services for tourists, 357
Revenue, 359, 360-1
Trans-Canada Highway traffic, 360
Winter Olympics, 358
Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36, 752, 854-61, 1465
Administration, 857, 858, 861
Awards Division, 857
Financing, 857, 860-1
International Programs Division, 857
NCCUC and CUF, 856
Official languages, 858-9
Operating expenditures of universities, 855-6
Research and information service, 857
Dr. E. F. Sheffield, tribute to, 857
Toronto Globe and Mail article by J. Bascom St. John, 855-6
Young Presidents Association, 322
Yukon Territory
Dawson City Festival, expenditures, 305, 312-13
"Foxy", production of, 305

Campbell, Hon. G. Peter
(Deceased—January 16, 1964)
Tributes, 4-11

Campobello Island, New Brunswick
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26, 508, 557-60, 589-90, 606, 607, 807

Canada-Bulgaria Trade Agreement, 1381 (See also 1377-81)

Canada Corporations
See Companies bill S-22

Canada Council
President, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079-80, 1311

Canada-Hungary Trade Agreement, 1377-81

Canada Labour (Standards) Code
See Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126

Canada Pension Plan
See Pension Plan bill C-136

Canada shipping
See Shipping bill S-7

Canada-United States Interparliamentary Group, 325-34
See Interparliamentary Group

Canada-U.S.S.R. Trade Agreement, 1381 (See also 1377-81)

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
Advertising programs, costs and losses re, 1151, 1152
Annual report, 1151-2
BBC and ITA, regulations 1149-50, 1151
Britain—An Official Handbook, excerpt from, 1149-50
Extravagances cited, 1149-53, 1155-6
Lack of control by government, 1149
News correspondents, 1151
Offices and furnishings, 1152
Programs of educational and constructive value, 1153
Pronunciation of "Noel" by French announcers, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079, 1158, 1172-3, 1195

Canadian Commonwealth flag, 1277, 1278-83

Canadian Conference on Family, 539

Canadian flag, 439-40, 452-3, 588, 999-1000, 1036
See Flag, Canadian

Canadian Institute of Actuaries
See Actuaries bill S-45

Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company bill S-43. Hon. Mr. Cameron. 1r, 1008; 2r, 1038-9; ref to com, 1039; rep of com without amdt-3r, 1098; r.a., 1459

Canadian National Railways
Borrowing authority, 1369
Capital expense, 1368
Deficit, 1370
Loan for requirements of Air Canada, 1369

Canadian National Railways—Concluded
Salaries and duties of officials, 1413-14
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 1369-70
Cook, Eric, 1367-9
Hugessen, A. K., 1370-1, 1393, 1413
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 1414
Pouliot, Jean-François, 1413-14
See also Railways

Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-137. 1r, 1352; 2r, 1367-71; ref to com, 1371; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts, 1393, 1413-14; ref back to com, 1414; rep of com without amdt-3r, 1449; r.a., 1459

Canadian Trade Relations Committee
Members, 44

Canadian Travel Bureau, 337-8, 343, 345, 442-3, 535, 541
Costs of maintenance in other countries, 345, 541
Dolan, D. Leo, first chairman, 337, 338, 343
London, England, 442-3
Staff and budget, 338
See Tourist traffic

Capital punishment, commutation of death sentences, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1080, 1173

Captive sales financing, Combines Investigation, 539

CARE
Broadview School gifts to Bogota, 222

Caribbean
See Jamaica

Casualty Company of Canada bill S-31. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 623; 2r-ref to com, 665; rep of com without amdt, 695; 3r, 718; r.a., 807

Centenary Council, 174-6
Conferences and meetings, 175-6, 177
Exchange visits of young people, 177-8
Performing Arts, comment, 178
Royal Bank of Canada monthly letter, comment, 179
Suggestions for centennial, 177-8
Volunteer work, 174-5
Youth Parliament, 178

Centennial, 29, 97, 174-6
Provincial participation, 541-2

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 714-16, 718-22, 734-40
Bates, Dr. Stewart, the late, 714, 719, 734
See National Housing bill C-102

Charlottetown, Memorial Building, 168-70, 445-6, 778, 1516

Chile Republic, 1073-7
External aid for missions, 1076
Inauguration of President, 1073-4
Inter-American Conference of Business Executives, 1075
Organization of American States, 1076
Pampa de Comas mission, 1076
Trade with, 1076

China People's Republic
Admission to UN membership, question of, 416

Choquette, Hon. Lionel
Appropriation bills
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 270-1, 279
No. 4, 1964 C-89, 301-2
No. 6, 1964 C-105, 779-80
Bilingualism and Biculturalism, Royal Commission, estimates for expenses, 302, 312
Companies bill S-22, 1113-14
Consumer Credit, joint committee, counsel fees, 780
Divorce, 209, 210, 560-3
Applications refused, inquiry, 209
Recommendations of Commissioner, 87
Rules, 95, 450, 491, 493
Plaintiff guilty of offence, disclosure of facts, 450
External Affairs Department, gift for UN building in Santiago, 270, 279
Flag, Canadian, 1170, 1171
Judges bill C-96 (Officer of the Senate), 530, 560-3, 661
Civil Code of Quebec, 562
Judicial jurisdiction in Newfoundland and Quebec divorce cases, 560-3
Perjury of detectives, 562-3
Judges bill C-112 (Salaries for additional judges), 1284-7
Backlog of cases, 1284-7
Justice Department, supplementary estimates for, 780
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1315-18
Employees under provincial or federal jurisdiction, non-coverage, 1315
Hours of work, 1315, 1318
Minimum wage, 1315
Northwest Territories and Yukon, 1315
Submissions from organizations and industries, 1316-17
Trucking firms, 1316-17
Vacations and other holidays, 1315-16
National Defence bill C-90, 819
Revised Statutes of Canada bill S-2, 115-16
British North America Acts and Selected Statutes (1867-1962), 115-16
Revision of statutes, Glassco Commission recommendations, 115
Taxation statutes, 116

Choquette, Hon. Lionel—Concluded
Rule 23 re two days' notice of motion, 1170, 1171
Student Loans bill C-110, 895
Translation Bureau, location of, 301-2, 312

Churchill, Sir Winston, the late, 1295

Citizenship, 52-56, 253, 260, 437-40
Bilingualism and biculturalism, 54, 56
Bill of Rights, 57-58
British nationality, degrees or differences, 253, 260
British subjects, 253, 260, 276-7
Born in Commonwealth but outside Canada, public rights, 277
Canadian citizens in the United Kingdom, public rights, 253
Citizenship rights in Canada, 260
High Commissioners to Canada, voting privileges, 141, 253, 260, 277
Political status in Canada, 253-260
Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 55
Citizenship Act, revision of, 438, 439
Deprivation of, 440
Ethnic groups (1961 census), 52
Contributions of, 55
Lord Thomson, 440
Multiculturalism, 56
Population statistics according to nationalities, 52
Ukrainian Canadians, 52-55
Culture, 53, 54, 55

Civil rights
Citizenship, 52-56, 253, 260, 276-7, 437-40
Married women, 318, 478, 480
Property and civil rights, 488, 632-3, 692
Provincial jurisdiction, 836-41
Women, status of, 218-22, 649-54

Civil Service Administration Committee
Members, 44

Coal production
Dominion Coal Company, 1359
Dosco Corporation, Nova Scotia, 1358
Marketing, 1358
Nova Scotia, 1357-60
Ontario Hydro purchases, 1359
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, Harold, 1357-8, 1360
Macdonald, John M., 1358-60

Coal Production Assistance bill C-147. 1r, 1302; 2r, 1357-60; 3r, 1362; r.a., 1459

Colombia
Bogota, United Nations seminar on the Status of Women in Family Law, 218-22

Columbia River Treaty
Arrow Lakes, 678, 708-9
Barnhart dam, comparison, 697
Benefits to exchange fund, employment, construction, etc., 685, 686, 700-1
Boundary Waters Treaty, 677, 686
Changes in treaty since previous government, 706, 709-10
Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., 679-80
Dams, construction costs, 683, 684, 700, 705
Diversion to Fraser River, 21-22, 686, 706
Alternative supply from Athabasca and Peace Rivers, 711
Consumptive purposes, 710-11
Costs, 21
Crippen-Wright report, 687
Energy to private companies, 22
Kootenay River, 700
Provisions re, 686
Salmon industry, effect on, 687, 703
Saskatchewan government negotiations, 687-8, 701-2
Development in northern Pacific States, 680
Documents relating to, 689
Downstream benefits and revenue, 684, 700
Electricity costs, comparison, 705
Employment, 701
Engineering Board of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, 685-6
Flooding and control, 681-4, 701, 704
Agricultural land in Arrow Lakes area, 708, 711
Great Lakes, threat of diversion to Mississippi and Gulf of Mexico, 703
High Arrow development, effect on agriculture, 708-9
House of Commons committee, 699, 701, 702
Hydroelectric power potential, 700
International Joint Commission, 677, 684, 709
Negotiations for treaty, 677
Projects recommended, 709
Kootenay River, 678-9, 683
Libby dam, 683-4, 700-1, 704
Loan-investment, 821-3
Mica dam, 682, 683, 685, 697
National development, 683, 699, 700
Peace River development, 681, 705
Physical characteristics of river and tributaries, 680
Placing of treaty before UN, 706, 709
Preamble, 689
Primary power, 680
Protocol and exchange of notes, 677, 684, 685
Provincial rights, 677-8
Requirements of British Columbia and U.S. 681
Rights surrendered, 688
Salmon fisheries, effect of dams on, 687, 703
Saskatchewan government negotiations re diversion of waters, 687-8, 701-2

Columbia River Treaty—Concluded
Secondary power, 680
Summary of provisions, 702
U.S. benefits, 705
Water management, Montreal Port Council seminar, 707-8
West Kootenay Power Co., 679, 683
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 698-702, 710
Hugessen, A. K., 676-89, 697, 709-11
Pearson, Arthur M., 706-8
Reid, Thomas, 702-6, 707
Taylor, Austin C., 708-9

Columbia River Treaty, m for approval of ratification of treaty, 623-4, 676-89, 697, 698-711; agreed to, 711

Combines investigation, agreement between fishermen and fish-packing companies, 1288-9, 1290-1
Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, inquiry, 1288-9
Strike of fishermen, 1289-90
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 1292
Lang, Daniel A., 1288-90, 1291
Macdonald, John M., 1290-1
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1290, 1291, 1292

Combines Investigation bill C-141 (Agreement of B.C. fishermen with fish-packing companies). 1r, 1288; 2r, 1288-91; 3r, 1291-2; r.a., 1293

Combines Investigation (Captive Sales Financing) bill C-60, ref to joint com on Consumer Credit, 539

Commissions
Banking and Finance, Porter Commission, 81, 109, 320, 323-4, 464, 468, 469, 470
Bilingualism and Biculturalism, Laurendeau-Dunton Commission, 61
Coasting Trade, Spence Commission, 186-90
Government Organization, Glassco Commission, 1115-18
Health Services, Hall Commission, 969
Law Reform, McRuer Commission, 878
Publications, O'Leary Commission, 27
Transportation, MacPherson Commission, 27
Unemployment Insurance Fund, Gill Commission, 27

Committee of Selection
See Selection Committee

Committees
See also individual titles
Joint Special
Consumer Credit
Pension Plan

Committees—Concluded
Joint Standing
Library of Parliament
Printing of Parliament
Restaurant of Parliament
Special
Aging
Standing
Banking and Commerce
Canadian Trade Relations
Civil Service Administration
Debates and Reporting
Divorce
External Relations
Finance
Immigration and Labour
Internal Economy and Contingent Accounts
Miscellaneous Private Bills
Natural Resources
Orders and Customs
Public Buildings and Grounds
Public Health and Welfare
Standing Orders
Tourist Traffic
Transport and Communications

Commons
Amdts to Senate bills
Brethren in Christ Church S-11, 668, 692
Companies S-22, 1465-6, 1481
Quebec Board of Trade S-28, 848
Seicho-No-Ie S-23, 777
Universities and Colleges of Canada S-36, 1465, 1482-3
World Mortgage Corporation S-32, 1514
Messages re addresses to the Queen
Amdt to B.N.A. Act, 767-8, 775-6
Birth of a Prince, 123, 125
Visit to Ottawa, 1033-6

Commonwealth, 549
Administrative training in, 865
Canada's relationship with, 74-75
Canadian Comonwealth flag, 1277, 1278-83
Changes in, 417-18
Commonwealth foundation, 866
Development projects, 865
Education, 865
Medical conference, 865
Members, 418
Parliamentary Association, 418, 848, 862-6
Prime Ministers' meeting, final communiqué, 862-6
Satellite communications, 866
Secretariat, 866

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association
Conference at Kingston, Jamaica, 1437-42, 1450-5
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Grosart, Allister, 1142, 1450-5
Haig, J. Campbell, 1441-2
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1437-41
See Jamaica

Communism, 548-53
Countries absorbed by, 549-50, 552
See U.S.S.R.

Companies
Amalgamation of companies, 483, 1104, 1109, 1112
Amendments to bill, 481-2
Canada Corporation Act, 516
Charters, surrender of, 516
Closed-end investment corporations, 482
Corporations, Royal Commission on, 517-18
Creditors, 1112
Director, requirements of, 1113
Disclosure of information to shareholders, 518, 1110-11
Financial statements, 483, 517
Letters patent, 482, 516
Mutual funds, 482, 516, 1111-12
Power of Secretary of State, 516, 518-19
Preferred shares
Printing of restrictions re, 1112
Redemption, purchase or cancellation, 1111
Prospectus, 1109-10
Proxies, 1112
Seal of company, 1112
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 519, 1114, 1465-6
Choquette, Lionel, 1113-14
Hayden, Salter A., 1104, 1109-13
Hugessen, A. K., 518-19
Leonard, T. D'Arcy, 1079, 1091-7
Pouliot, Jean-François, 1104-5
Vien, Thomas, 480-3
Walker, David, 515-18, 1482-3

Companies (Canada Corporations) bill S-22. 1r, 413; 2r, 480-3, 515-19; ref to com, 520; authority to print com proceedings, 588; rep of com with amdts, 1078, 1091-7; ref back to com, 1104-5; further rep of com, 1109-14, 1124-9; 3r, 1114; Commons amdts, 1465-6, 1481, 1482-3; r.a., 1523

Confederation
Centennial, 29, 97, 174-7
Prince Edward Island
Admission as province of Dominion, 168-70
Confederation Memorial Building, 446, 1516
Conference, Charlottetown, 445-6, 977-8, 1494

Conferences
Business Executives, Inter-American Conferences, Lima, Peru, 1075
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Kingston, Jamaica, 1437-42, 1450-5
Family, Canadian Conference, Ottawa, 539
Family Law, Status of Women in, UN seminar at Bogota, 218-22

Conferences—Concluded
Interparliamentary Group, Canada and U.S., Washington, 325-34
Report tabled, 316
United Nations General Assembly, 459-62, 1394-8

Congo
Victims of atrocities, expression of sympathy to relatives, 1119

Congregation of the Marist Sisters bill S-38. Hon. Edgar E. Fournier. 1r, 764; 2r-ref to com, 785; rep of com without amdt, 923; 3r, 927; r.a., 1002

Connolly, Hon. Harold
Appropriation bill No. 9, 1964 C-135, 1060-1
Coal Production Assistance bill C-147, 1357-8
Coal marketing, 1358
Dosco Corporation, Nova Scotia, 1358
Extension of agreement with producers, 1357
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees), bill C-95, 531-2, 533
Areas of taxation, 531-2
Exceptions, 532
Halifax, 532
Revenue involved, 532
Tourist traffic, 540-2
Canadian Travel Bureau, 541
Offices in foreign countries, 541
Nova Scotia, 540-2
Acadians, 540
Progress in tourist industry, 541
Tourist Advisory Council, 540
Travel Bureau, 540
Provincial participation in plans for Centennial and Fair, 541-2
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 125-6

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate
Acts, publication of, 995, 996
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 29-35
Agricultural Commodities Stabilization Account, 276
Agriculture Department estimates, 938
South Saskatchewan dam, 938
Agriculture research in universities, 778
Appropriation bills
No. 1, 1964 C-84, 238-40, 241
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 268-71, 273, 274, 275, 276, 278-80
No. 3, 1964 C-87, 280-1, 282
No. 4, 1964 C-89, 298-301, 303, 311-13
No. 5, 1964 C-99, 569-70, 580
No. 6, 1964 C-105, 777-9, 781, 783-4
No. 7, 1964 C-109, 820-3
No. 8, 1964 C-116, 936-46, 944-5
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1137-8, 1154-8, 1159
No. 1, 1965 C-150, 1514-17, 1518
No. 2, 1965 C-151, 1520-1

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate—Continued
ARDA, 1156
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 625
Banking and Commerce Committee, authority to sit during Senate adjournments, 1028
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1340-1
Bates, Dr. Stewart, the late, 714
Bennett, Hon. W. A. C., guest in Speaker's gallery, 880
Bilingualism and Biculturalism, Royal Commission expenses, 312
Bills, public
Rules 23, 24 and 163, suspension of, 1461
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, 1070
Brethren in Christ Church bill S-11, 214-15
British North America Act
Address to Her Majesty the Queen requesting amdt, motion for agreement to, 768-70, 775
Provincial legislatures, power of, 768-9
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 4
Canada-Bulgaria Trade Agreement, 1381, see also 1377-81
Canada Council president, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1311
Canada-Hungary Trade Agreement, 1377-81
Agrimpex, 1379
Exports to Eastern Europe, 1378
Imports from Eastern Europe, 1378
Most-favoured-nation provision, 1379
Canada-U.S.S.R. Trade Agreement, 1381, see also 1377-81
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, expenditures 1155-6, 1195
Canadian Commonwealth flag, 1277
Canadian National Railways
Riviere du Loup, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1172
Scotian, advertising and publicity, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1172
Capital punishment, commutation of sentences, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1173
Charlottetown memorial building, expenses for, 778, 1516
Chile Republic, 1073-7
External aid for missions, 1076
Inauguration of President, 1073-4
Inter-American Conference of Business Executives, 1075
Organization of American States, 1076
Pampa de Comas mission, 1076
Trade with, 1076
Columbia River
Diversion to Fraser River, project report, 21-22
Costs, 21
Loan-investment, 821-2, 823
Treaty, ratification of, motion for approval of, 623-4

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate—Continued
Combines Investigation bill C-141 (Agreements with B.C. fishermen), 1292
Committees, Standing
Appointment, 84
Selection Committee, report adopted, 84
Commonwealth Flag, 1227, 1278-83
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, 1457-8
Commonwealth Prime Ministers' meeting, final communiqué, 848, 862-6
Companies bill S-22, 519, 1114, 1465-6
Consumer Credit, joint committee
Counsel fees and authority for, 803-4
Motion for appointment, 114-15
Senate members, 182
Crerar, General H.D.G., the late, 1513
Crerar, Hon. T.A., 88th birthday, 751
Customs tariff, rates of duty, 424
Cyprus, peace-keeping force, 147-8, 158-60, 161, 162
Message to Commons, 158
Dissolution and annulment of marriages, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron as Officer of the Senate, 930-1
Documents tabled
See relevant index pages
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1086
Emergency sittings, 141-3, 947
Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) bill C-142, 1499-1505, 1508, 1510-11
Equalization payments and individual income tax, 1503, 1504
Government revenue and expenditures, 1501
Individual and corporation income and estate tax, by provinces, 1503
Tax abatement, 1502-5
Estimates
Accounts outstanding, 311-12
Atomic energy research, 1515
Borrowing authority, 239, 1517
Charlottetown Memorial building, 778, 1516
Comparisons, 47, 48-49
Departmental administration, 939
Dollar items, deletions, 1520-1
External Affairs Department, 1515, 1516
Houses of Parliament, 1515, 1516
Loans, investments and advances, 779
Motion that committee examine and report on estimates, 434, 476, 494-8
Recommendations of previous committees, 495-6
Senate powers and responsibilities in examination of, 495, 496
National Research Council, scholarships and grants, 1515
Privy Council, 778

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate—Continued
Estimates—Concluded
Procedure on, 299-300, 313
Railway subsidies, 580
Secretary of State, 1516
Undertaking that passage will not preclude further discussion, 239-40, 569, 778, 1138, 1515
United Nations programs, 1515
Export and Import Permits Act, report of operations, 22
Export Credits Insurance bill C-101, 803
Berne Convention, 803
External Relations Committee, study of report of External Affairs Department, 654
Family, Canadian Conference on, 539
Farm Credit bill C-100, 753-5, 756, 758
Capital, increase in, 753
Financial statement and annual report, 754
Interest rate, 754, 755, 756
Limit to individual farmer, 753
Loan to assist family member, 755
Operating losses, 754, 755
Letter from Auditor General re, 754
Projects requiring loans in 1962-63, 756
Repayment terms, 753
Statistics to date, 755
Supervision of use of loans, 753
Tax sale, 755
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 985-7, 992-3
Farm population, decline in, 993
Lending operations (1945-63), 985-6, 992, 993
Loan provisions, 986-7
Porter Commission recommendations, 986
Quebec loans, 992,-3
Small holdings, 992
Terms and interest, 985
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1003-6, 1018, 1019
Borrowings in 1963, 1004
Equipment definitions, 1005
Great Britain syndicates, 1005
Interest and administrative costs, 1005, 1019
Partnership risk, 1018, 1019
Permissible borrowings, 1004-5
Security for loans, 1004
Federal-Provincial conference, communiqué by Prime Minister, 267, 284
Ferry service deficits, 944
Finance Charges (Disclosure) bill S-3, m to refer subject matter to Joint Committee on Consumer Credit, 179
Fisheries
Estimates for, 239, 281
Lamprey control, 938

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate—Continued
Flag, Canadian
Motion for designation of national emblem, 1169-72, 1176-9, 1273-6; adopted 1276; recorded vote, 1276-7; motion adopted, 1277
Flag, Commonwealth, Canadian
Motion for designation of, 1227, 1278-83; motion adopted, 1283
Food and Agriculture Organization, 269
Forestry units, Newfoundland, 1156-7
Government expenditures per capita, 1156
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 192, 195-6
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40, 852
Horner, Hon. R. B., the late, 1165
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 227
India, loan to, 779
Interparliamentary Group, Canada and United States
Seventh meeting held at Washington and Cape Kennedy, 316, 325-34
Judges bill C-96 (Officer of the Senate), 588, 646-7
Judges bill C-112 (Salaries of additional judges) 1284, 1288
Backlog of cases, 1288
Provincial appointments, 1284
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1422-7, 1433
Deferral, 1424-5
Grain elevator operators, 1425
Holidays, 1431
Hours of work, 1423-4
Inquiry, 1425
Overtime, 1424
Truckers, 1424-6
Library of Parliament
Salaries, clerical classes, 1026, 1032, 1036
Salaries, professional classes, 521, 538, 1278, 1284, 1294
Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C.
Chancellor of Waterloo Lutheran University, 1120
Honorary Doctor of Laws, 606
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 1482
Medical research, 1156
Merchant Seamen Compensation bill C-131, 1373, 1375
Mines and Technical Surveys, 238-9
Money bills, procedure on, 299-300, 313
National Defence bill C-90, 809, 810-14, 815, 818-19, 820
Chief of Defence Staff, 809, 810, 812
Defence Council, 810, 813
Defence policy, 811-12, 813
Esher report, 812
NATO, 812, 814
NORAD, 811, 814
Rehabilitation, 819
Veterans' preference in jobs, 819
National Defence pensions and other benefits, 821

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate—Continued
National Housing bill C-102, 714-16
CMHC funds, increase in, 716
Default in payments, 716
Loan ratios for insured loans, 715-16
Loans to holders of mortgages taken in respect of insured loans, 716
Public housing, loans to provinces and municipalities, 715
Sewage treatment projects, 716
University housing, 715
Family units, 715
Urban renewal, 714-15
Insured loans in respect of, 715
NATO, defence policy of Canada, 33-34
Nehru, Jawaharlal, Prime Minister of India, the late, 587
Newfoundland, tribute to residents for assistance to Canadian Navy during war, 852
Paterson, Hon. Norman McL., chancellor of Lakehead University, 1120
Peace-keeping operations, Canadian participation, 1155
Pension plan
Joint Special Committee, 1102-3
Senate members, 1067-8, 1069
Survivors' and disability benefits, 768-70, 775
Pension Plan bill C-136, 1466-70, 1476, 1496-7
Earnings while in receipt of pension, 1469
Federal-provincial arrangements, 1469
Investment of accumulated funds, 1469
Old age pensions, 1468
Survivor benefits, 1467
Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François
40th anniversary in Parliament, 1135
50th anniversary of admission to Bar of Quebec, 353
Power, Hon. C. G., 47th anniversary in Parliament, 1231
Prairie Farm Assistance Act, emergency fund, 278
Privy Council, expenses re Charlottetown memorial building, 778
Protective Service, summer uniforms, 926
Queen Elizabeth II
Address of loyalty and affection following visit, 1033-4, 1035, 1036
Address on the birth of a Prince, 100, 123-5; acknowledgment, 316
Address re amdt to B.N.A. Act, 768-70, 775
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1295-6
Roebuck, Hon. Arthur W., 86th birthday, 36
Rules and Orders, Parliamentary
Inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 230
Notice of motion, Rule No. 24, 1171
St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5, 67-68

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate—Concluded
St. Patrick's Day, 167-8
Senate
Adjournments, 351
Cabinet members, 33
Committees, 32
Constitution and functions of, 31-32
Emergency sittings, 141-3
International affairs, participation in, 32
Senators, retirement of, 33
Sitting on Good Friday, 241, 242, 248
Shipping bill S-7, 134, 144, 145, 163, 749
Ports having facilities for oil discharged from ships, 163
Smith, Hon. Sydney J., golden wedding anniversary, 1108
Student Loans bill C-110, 895, 907-10
Armed services, 908
Borrower under 21 years of age, 895
Drop-outs and failures, repayment of loans, 908-9
Federal Government educational grants, 907-8
Provincial agreement, 908
Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A., honorary fellowship in Royal Society of Medicine, 554
Tariff Board, investigation re machinery and equipment of mining, oil and gas industries, 15, 16
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1295
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 346-7, 403-4, 406-7
Press comment, 346-7
Tourist traffic, 544-6
Canadian poetry proclaiming beauty of Canada, 545-6
Federal-provincial tourist conference, 545
National Capital Plan, 545
Ottawa, 544-5
Travel literature, 545
Trade
Aid to developing nations, 1459
British exports to Canada, 45
Canada-U.K. conferences, 45
Trade barriers, 45
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 120
Translation Bureau, location of, 312
Transport Department, estimates, 938
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 4-5
Unemployment Insurance Commission, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Grosart, 335-6
Unemployment Insurance Fund, 269, 275, 279
United Nations building in Santiago, 279
United Nations Secretary General U Thant, notice of address to both Houses of Parliament, 539
Uranium concentrates, stockpiling costs, 779
Veterans' pensions, 1157-8
Benefit of doubt, 1158
Yukon Territory, Dawson City Festival expenditures, 312-13

Constitution, amending of, 75, 767-76
See British North America Act

Construction
Profits, 756-7
Statistics, 58, 735
See Housing

Consumer Credit, Joint Special Committee
Appointment, 100, 114-15
Members
Commons, 234, 718, 867, 929, 1102
Senate, 182
Bills ref to com
Commons, 257, 539
Bankruptcy (Wage Earners' Assignments) C-3
Bills of Exchange and Interest (off-store instalment sales) C-44
Bills of Exchange (Instalment Purchases) C-51
Combines Investigation (Captive Sales Financing) C-60
Control of Consumer Credit C-23
Control of use of collateral bills and notes in consumer credit transactions C-63
Interest (Application of small loans) C-53
Interest, C-52
Small Loans, C-20
Small Loans (Advertising) C-13
Senate, 179
Finance Charges (Disclosure) S-3
Fees for legal counsel, 780, 781-2, 804-7
Reports
Authority to engage counsel and personnel, 351
Quorum, 351

Conventions, treaties and agreements
Amelioration of condition of wounded and sick in Armed Forces in the field, 547
Amelioration of condition of wounded, sick and shipwrecked in Armed Forces at sea, 547
British Commonwealth Merchant Shipping Agreement, 132, 136-40
Canada-Bulgaria Trade Agreement, 1381 (See also 1377-81)
Canada-Hungary Trade Agreement, 1377-81
Canada-U.S.S.R. Trade Agreement, 1379-80 (See also 1377-81)
Columbia River Treaty, 623-4, 676-89, 697, 698-711
Consent to marriage, minimum age of marriage and registration of marriage, 220
Discrimination in employment and occupation, 656-60, 670-2, 740-3
Geneva Conventions, 475, 546-8, 554-7, 623, 637

Conventions, treaties and agreements—Concluded
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459
Liability of owners of seagoing ships, 132, 135-6, 138
Oregon Boundary (1846), 702-3
Pollution of sea by oil, 132, 135, 144-5, 148-9
Protection of civilian persons in time of war, 548
Safety of life at sea, 132-4
Treatment of prisoners of war, 547

Cook, Hon. Eric
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, motion for, 16-18
Atlantic Development Board, federal grant to, 850
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 614-15
Bank Act, revision of, 614-15
Federal control of financial policies, 615
Political control, 615
Provincial rights, 614, 615
Taxes, nonpayment of, 614
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 931
Division list, correction, 931
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-137, 1367-9
Borrowing authority, 1369
Capital expense, 1368
Loan for requirements of Air Canada, 1369
Crop Insurance bill C-129, 1020-1
Prairie farmers, assistance since 1939, 1020
Provincial insurance programs, 1021
Provincial liability, 1021
Reinsurance provision, 1021
Special account, 1021
Fisheries policy, 18
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40, 848-52
Management and control of harbours, 849
Outport pilots and pilotage, 848, 851
Port and harbour of Port aux Basques Act, 850
Port and harbour of St. John's Act, 850
Terms of Union of Newfoundland and Canada, 848-9, 851
Introduction to Senate, 15
Newfoundland, 17-18
Fisheries, 18
Government by Commission, 17
Natural resources, 17-18
Prairie farm assistance, payments since 1939, 1020
Ten Hours Act (1847), 18
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 347-50, 404-6
Amdts required to other relevant acts, 350

Cook, Hon. Eric—Concluded
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17—Concluded
Foreign ships in Canadian waters, 349
Geographical co-ordinates, 350
Law and Custom of the Sea, 347-8
Law of the Sea, Geneva conferences, 349
Rights claimed by various countries, 348, 349

Corporations and labour unions
Annual statistical report, publication by DBS, 731
Duplication of returns, 730
Foreign investments in Canada, 731, 732
Information as to shareholders, 730
Privileged information, 730, 731, 732
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Lang, Daniel A., 729-31, 732
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 732
Roebuck, Arthur W., 731
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 731

Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35. 1r, 668; 2r, 729-32; ref to com, 732; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 752; 3r, 764-5; r.a., 1459

Crerar, General H. D. G., the late, 1513-14

Crerar Hon. T. A., P.C.
Appropriation bills
No. 5, 1964 C-99, 575-7
No. 6, 1964 C-105, 782-3
No. 9, 1964 C-135, 1061-2
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 624-5, 626
Duration of authority to carry on business, 624-5
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 633, 634
Provincial control, 633
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 112-13
Birthday, 88th, 751-2
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, 1072
Consumer Credit, Joint Committee, counsel fees, 806-7
Cost of living, 512, 727, 1062
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 659, 660
Violation of terms, 659, 660
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1086-7
Representation in Senate and Commons, 1087
Estate Tax bill C-94, 511-13
Provincial responsibility in taxation, 511-13
Farm Credit bill C-100, 758-60
Beekeepers, 759-60
Interest rate, 759
Supervision of use of loans, 760
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1019

Crerar, Hon. T. A., P.C.—Concluded
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill 1964 C-111, 952, 970-3
Federal-provincial-municipal debt, 971-2
Money, erosion of value of, 972
Provincial responsibilities, takeover by federal government, 971
Flag, national, 1183-5
Geneva Conventions bill S-25, 556-7
Japan omitted from signatories, 556
Government extravagance and public debt, 511-13, 575-7, 727, 782-3, 952, 970-3
Cyclical budgeting, 782
Deficit financing, 512, 782
Inflation percentage, 782
Underestimating of projects, 727
Horner, Hon. R. B., the late, 1168-9
Immigrants, participation in public life and enterprise, 112
Income Tax bill C-91, 600-3
Canadian ownership in U.S.-controlled corporations, 600-1
Industrial developments, western provinces, 601, 602, 603
Provincial responsibility in taxation, 601-3
Inflation, 1061-2
Mining, Manitoba, lack of Canadian investments, 601
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 726-7, 729
Costs, 726-7
Construction and acquisition of lands and buildings, 726
Estimates, inadequacy of, 727
Station relocation from centre of city, 727
Public debt and interest on, 1061
Social welfare, 576-7, 511-12, 601
Student Loans bill C-110, 900-1, 909
Authority for loans, 901
Liability of federal Government, 900-1
Repayment terms, 900-1
Scholarships, 900-1
Taxation, provincial responsibility in, 511-13, 601-3
Tourist traffic, 341
Economic factor, 341
Great Bear Lake, 341
Roadways, 341
Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36, 859-60

Criminal Code
Power boats and small craft, provisions re, 139-40

Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus)
Accused persons detained for protracted periods, 762-3
Appeal by Crown, 746, 761
Appeal by prisoner, 746, 761
Application of terms to other statutes, suggestion, 762-3

Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus)—Concluded
Common law right of appeal, 744, 745, 761
Federal responsibility of habeas corpus in criminal matters, 744-5
Habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, 842, 843, 854
Habeas corpus, variations of, 842, 843-4
Ontario Habeas Corpus Act, 842-3
Powers of the court, 844
Provincial Court appeals, 845
Shane case, 745, 844-5
Storgoff case, 744
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Croll, David A., 761-3
Lang, Daniel A., 744-6
Macdonald, John M., 746-7
Roebuck, Arthur W., 841-6
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 853-4

Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35. 1r, 554; 2r, 744-7, 761-3, 841-6, (amdt proposed, Hon. Mr. Roebuck, 845-6), 853-4; ref to com, 854; authority to print com proceedings, 1008; rep of com with amdt, 1462-4; 3r, 1464; r.a., 1522

Croll, Hon. David A.
Actuaries bill S-45, 1047, 1048-9, 1108
Aging, Special Senate Committee, 16
Interim report, 1232-3
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1964 C-89, 307-8
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 632, 635, 640
Provincial shares, 632
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 109-12
Banking monopoly, 109
Ethnic groups, participation in enterprise, 110-12
Executive appointments, 110
Bates, Dr. Stewart, the late, 734
Consumer Credit, Joint Committee, counsel fees, 804-5, 806, 807
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 761-3
Accused persons detained for protracted periods, 762-3
Application of terms to other statutes, suggestion, 762-3
Common law right of appeal, 761
Right of appeal by court and by prisoner, 761
Discrimination in employment and occupation, Convention on, 656-60
Anti-discrimination, relevant statutes, 656-7
Bill of Rights, 657
International Labour Organization, 656, 657
Ontario, 657-8
Fair Employment Practices Act, 657-8
Human Rights Commission, 658
Provincial approval, 659

Croll, Hon. David A.—Concluded
Discrimination in employment and occupation, Convention on—Concluded
Eskimos
Administrative control, 307-8
Ookpik royalties, 308
Rights of, 307, 308
Finance Charges (Disclosure) bill S-3, 16, 179
M for 2r, 179
Flag, Canadian, 1198-1201
Guarantee Company of North America bill S-37, 763
Income Tax bill C-91, 600, 605
Designated areas, 600
Equalization payments, 605
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1324-6
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 468, 632
National Housing bill C-102, 734-7
Construction, 735-7
Profits, 736-7
Statistics, 735
Public housing, 734-5, 736
Loans on land, 735
Substandard housing, problem of, 734-5
Toronto developments, 736
University housing projects, 735-6
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 724
Penal reform, inquiry re implementation of Archambault Commission and of Fauteux Committee recommendations, 88-94, 314, 697, 787-97
Archambault recommendations, 88-92
Fauteux recommendations, 92-94
Seicho-No-Ie bill S-23, 452, 520
Youth Allowances bill C-108, 829
Quebec, 829

Crop insurance
Manitoba legislation, 1021
Prairie farm assistance, 1020, 1022-3, 1027-8
One per cent deduction for coverage, 1027
Provincial insurance programs, 1021, 1023
Provincial liability, 1021
Reinsurance provision, 1021, 1022
Saskatchewan hail insurance, 1023, 1027
Special account, 1021
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 1026-8
Cook, Eric, 1020
Hnatyshyn, John, 1021-3
Pearson, Arthur M., 1023

Crop Insurance bill C-129. 1r, 1006; 2r, 1020-3, 1026-8; 3r, 1028; r.a., 1031

Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees)
Areas of taxation, 531-2
Canadian Wheat Board, 533

Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees)—Concluded
Exceptions, 532
Halifax, 532
Revenue involved, 532
Sales tax, 533
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 532-3
Connolly, Harold, 531-2, 533
Hollett, Malcolm, 533-4
Lambert, Norman P., 533

Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) bill C-95. 1r, 475; 2r, 531-4; ref to com, 534; rep of com without amdt, 695; 3r, 718; r.a., 766

Customs tariff
Aircraft, 455, 456
Bread exports, 453-4
Concessions to U.S., 453-4
GATT negotiations, 453
Liquor, 454-5
Ministerial powers, 456
Montan wax, 454
Oilfield equipment, 457-8
Rates of duties, printed in Minutes and Proceedings of Senate, 424
Yarns, thread, cord, 455
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Hayden, Salter A., 453-6, 508
Macdonald, John M., 456-8
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 456

Customs Tariff bill C-92. 1r, 413; 2r, 453-8; ref to com, 458; rep of com without amdt-authority to print com proceedings, 508; 3r, 523; r.a., 537

Cyprus
International peace-keeping force, 28, 147-8, 157-62, 374-5, 573-5
Expenditures, 374-5
Message from Commons re, 158
Near East immigrants in Canada, participation of, 162
Pensions and allowances, 575

Davies, Hon. W. Rupert
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 71-73
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 7-8
Employment, 72-73
Interprovincial Pipe Line Company bill S-42, 1123
Roosevelt Campobello International Park,
St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5, 68
Senate
Criticisms in periodicals and newspapers, 73
Reform, 73
Taxation, burden of, 71-72
Federal corporation tax, 71-72
Small companies, 72
Technical and vocational training, 72-73
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 7-8

Debates and Reporting Committee
Members, 44

Defence
Defence and foreign policy, 327-8
Expenditures, 573-5
International peace-keeping force, 28, 147-8, 157-62, 374-5, 573-5
NATO, policy in relation to, 33-34
North American Defence and NATO alliance, 328-9
See Armed forces,
National Defence bill C-90

Denis, Hon. Azellus
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne 18-20
Biculturalism, 19
Employment, 19
Federal labour code, 20
Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, 19
Introduction to the Senate, 1
Old age pensions and assistance, 19-20
Separatists and other groups, 20
Subversive activities, newspaper headlining of, 20

Denmark
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459

Dentists of Canada bill S-44. Hon. Donald Smith, 1r, 1036; 2r, 1040-2, 1051-2; ref to com, 1053; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts-3r, 1107; r.a., 1459

Dessureault, Hon. J.-M.
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 468
Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge bill S-21, 447-8, 449

Diefenbaker, Right Hon. John G., P.C., M.P., former Prime Minister of Canada, 51
Speech at United Nations re Russian colonialism, 549-50

Disabled persons, federal-provincial contributions, 511

Discrimination in employment and occupation
Anti-discrimination, statutes relevant to, 656-8, 671, 672, 743
Bill of Rights, 657
Discrimination in Canada, 670, 743
International agreements, obligations under, 741-2
International Labour Organization, 656, 657, 742
Ontario legislation, 657-8, 672
Fair Employment Practices Act, 657-8
Human Rights Commission, 658
Quebec Hotel Act, 671
Saskatchewan legislation, 671
Violation of terms of convention, 659, 660

Discrimination in employment and occupation —Concluded
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Crerar, T. A., 659, 660
Croll, David A., 656-60
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 742-3
Grosart, Allister, 658, 659, 660, 740-2
Hnatyshyn, John, 670-1
Horner, R. B., 743
Lambert, Norman P., 659
Robertson, John A., 671-2

Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, motion for approval of, Hon. Mr. Croll, 656-60, 670-2, 740-3; agreed to, 743

Dissolution and annulment of marriages
Commissioner for, 86-88, 207-8, 523-31, 560-9, 661
Appointment as judge of Exchequer Court, 523-31, 560-9, 661
Salary and pension, 525-6, 529, 565
Senate staff on loan to Commissioner, 208
Status of, 13-14, 206-8, 209, 213, 799, 800
Officer of the Senate, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron, 930-1
See Judges bill C-96

Dissolution and Annulment of Marriages bill S-29. Hon. Mr. Pouliot. 1r, 587; 2r, stands, 785, 881; withdrawn, 1001-2

Divorce
Civil Code of Quebec, 562, 564
Commissioner for dissolution and annulment of marriage, 86-88, 207-8, 523-31, 560-9, 661
Costs of, 14
Court of appeal, 212
Divorce and Matrimonial Causes bill (1938), 209
Exchequer Court (Divorce Jurisdiction) bill, 208-10
Exchequer Court jurisdiction, 208, 212
Investigators convicted of perjury, 14, 562-3, 648-9
Judicial jurisdiction in Newfoundland and Quebec, 560-3
Law of Divorce in Canada, 492
Plaintiff guilty of offence, disclosure of facts, 450, 451, 491-3
Provincial rights, 212-13
Religious aspects of divorce procedure, 207, 208, 213
Reports, protest re, 206-8, 799, 800
Separation as to property, 567-8
See Judges bill C-96,
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16

Divorce Committee
Appointment, 13-14; subcommittees, 22, 37
Leave to sit during adjournments, 22, 37
Members, 13

Divorce Committee—Concluded
Reports
Nos. 2-24: 86-88, 101
Nos. 25-61: 106, 179
Nos. 62-111: 163, 206-14
Nos. 112-161: 218, 237
Nos. 162-219: 235, 319
Nos. 220-263: 317, 352
Nos. 264-292: 452, 507
Nos. 293-331: 539, 619
Nos. 332-370: 623, 664
Nos. 371-411: 799-800, 831
Nos. 412-444: 831, 834
Nos. 445-505: 924, 931
Nos. 506-532: 930
Nos. 533-578: 1037-8, 1043
Nos. 579-608: 1078, 1099
Nos. 609-644: 1098, 1105
Nos. 645-684: 1143, 1173
Nos. 685-736: 1310-11, 1330
Nos. 737-840: 1398
Nos. 841-896: 1479

Resolutions
Nos. 1 to 23: 106, 179-80
Nos. 24-60: 181, 222-3
Nos. 61-110: 216-17, 236-7
Nos. 111-160: 251-2, 260-1
Nos. 161-218: 319-20, 353-4
Nos. 219-251: 352-3, 379
Nos. 252-280: 494, 531
Nos. 281-319: 619-20, 635-6
Nos. 320-351: 664, 672-3
Nos. 352-390: 831-2, 835-6
Nos. 391-422: 834-5, 852-3
Nos. 423-509: 932-3
Nos. 510-555: 1043-4, 1056-7
Nos. 556-579: 1099, 1106
Nos. 580-615: 1105-6, 1120-1
Nos. 616-653: 1173-4, 1195-6
Nos. 654-705: 1334-5, 1362-3
Nos. 706-809: 1411-3, 1443-4
Nos. 810-859: 1479-80, 1498-9

See Journals of the Senate, Part II, for details

Divorce, Rules and Orders of the Senate
M for amdt, Hon. Mr. Roebuck, 94-95, 100, 380-1, 449-51, 491-3; amdt, 380-1, 449-51, 491-3; m as amended agreed to, 493
Plaintiff guilty of offence, disclosure of facts, 450, 451, 491-3
Resolution
Adoption of, 94, 100
Costs, 94-95, 100
Printing of resolution in Journals of the Senate, 95, 100
Statement re previous proceedings and agreements between spouses, 381, 449-50

Documents tabled
Agricultural Products Board, 830
Agricultural Products Co-operative Marketing, 994
Agricultural Stabilization Board, 833
Agriculture Department, 1056
Air Canada, 1308, 1411
Aircraft operating near common boundary of Canada and U.S., 217
Air traffic control over southern Greenland, 217
Armed forces on secondment to Nigeria, 1313
Army Benevolent Fund, 830
Atlantic Development Board, 798, 880
Atomic Energy Control Board, 830
Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., 833
Auditor General's report, 12
Automotive products, 1314
Bank Act, 1309
Banking and Finance, Royal Commission, 317
Banks
Bank of Canada, 163, 1411
Loans and deposit liabilities, 1073
Operating earnings and expenses, 11-12
Unclaimed balances, chartered banks of Canada and Quebec savings banks, 50
Bilingualism and Biculturalism, 1310
Blind persons, 317
Bretton Woods Agreements, 424
Broadcast Governors, 783
Budget papers:
Part I—Economic Review of 1963, 125
Part II—A preliminary review of Government accounts for fiscal year, 125
Bureau of Statistics, 1006
Canada Council, 833
Canada-Japan Ministerial Committee, 995
Canada shipping
Ports having facilities for receipt of oil, 163
Sick mariners, 925
Canada Water Conservation Assistance Act, 1334
Canadian Arsenals Ltd., 833
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 831
Canadian citizens entering Japan, 1313
Canadian Commercial Corporation, 830
Canadian forces in Bermuda, 1313
Canadian Forces Superannuation, 783
Canadian National Railways
See Railways
Canadian National (West Indies) Steamships 267
Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corp., 833
Canadian Patents and Development Ltd., 1169
Canadian Pension Commission, 11
Canadian Wheat Board, 494
Centennial Commission, 833

Documents tabled—Continued
Central Mortgage and Housing capital budget, 36; revised, 1107
Report and statement of accounts, 217
Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1309-10, 1478
Cereals arrangements, Canada-U.K., 395
Civil Service Commission, report on positions excluded in whole or in part, 217
Civil Service Insurance, 783
Coal Production Assistance, 718
Columbia River
Diversion to Fraser River, project report, 21-22
Treaty
Canadian Entitlement Purchase Agreement, 996
Confirmation of entry into force of protocol, 996
Treaty, protocol and related documents, 50
Combines investigation
Pencils, manufacture, distribution and sale in Canada, 1037
Report of Director of Investigation and Research, 1006
Commonwealth Economic Consultative Council at Kuala Lumpur, 984
Constitution of Canada, White Paper, 1310
Continental Air Defence system, 1313
Continental Radar Defence system, 1313
Contracting-out arrangements for conditional grant and shared-cost agreements between provinces and federal government, 1449
Corner Brook, Newfoundland, policing of, 1037
Cornwall International Bridge Co. Ltd., 452
Crop insurance, 668
Crown Assets Disposal Corp., 880
Crown debts
Apportionments and adjustments of seed grain, fodder for animals and other relief indebtedness, 15
Currency, Mint and Exchange Fund, 623
Customs Excise Revenue Excise and Income of Canada, 925
Danish Air force, aircrew personnel training, 1313
Deep sea fisheries, fishing bounty, 623
Defence
Construction, report, accounts and financial statements, 830
Production, 316
White paper on Defence, 251
Defence science, 1313
Disabled persons
Administration of allowances, 317
Vocational rehabilitation, 733
Dominion Coal Board, 798
Eastern Canada Farm Survey, 830

Documents tabled—Continued
Eastern Rockies Forest Conservation Board, 1006
Economic Council of Canada, 833
Economic surveys, 1310
Eldorado Mining & Refining Ltd., Northern Transportation Co. Ltd., and Eldorado Aviation Ltd., 316, 434, 1478
Emergency Gold Mining Assistance, 1175
Employment of Women, answers to inquiry by Hon. Mrs. Fergusson, 1169
Enemy property, 100, 1479
Energy Board, 316
Estimates
Fiscal year ending Mar. 31, 1965, 50
Fiscal year ending Mar. 31, 1966, 1460
Supplementary (A) fiscal year ending Mar. 31, 1965, 695
Supplementary (B), 1037
Supplementary (C), 1102
Supplementary (D), 1460
Supplementary (E), fiscal year ending Mar. 31, 1964, 100
Exchequer Court rules and orders, 1309
Export and Import Permits Act, 11, 1309
Export Credits Insurance
Bulgaria, tobacco, 11
Bulgaria, wheat, 993, 1006-7, 1232
Chile, capital equipment and engineering services, 1006
Czechoslovak, wheat, 929, 994
Douglas Aircraft Co., California, aircraft parts, 1309
India, capital equipment and engineering services, 929
India, capital equipment and procurement services, 16
Industrias Forestales, S.A., of Santiago, 1498
Kota Dam Power Project, power generation and transmission equipment, 1309
Mexico, capital equipment and engineering and erection services, 314, 335
Mexico, steel rails and tract accessories, 984
Operations under Part II of Act, 346
Philippines, capital equipment, 929
Polish People's Republic, wheat, 929
West Bengal, services and capital equipment, 994
West Bengal, design, erection, services and capital equipment, 994
External affairs, 15, 1449
Family Allowances, 1169
Farm Credit Corporation
Capital budget, 452
Report, account and financial statements, 830
Farmers Creditors Arrangement, 675
Farm Improvement Loans, 995
Federal-provincial agreements re contracting-out arrangements, 1449

Documents tabled—Continued
Federal-provincial conference
Communiqué by Prime Minister, 267
Correspondence between Prime Minister and Premiers of provinces, 249
Federal-provincial cost-sharing programs
Letter from Prime Minister to premier of Quebec, 996
Letter from Prime Minister to premiers, 996
Federal-provincial relations, letters between Prime Minister and premier of Quebec, 539
Financial Administration Act, 1309
Fisheries department, 1314
Fisheries Improvement Loans, 1006
Fisheries Prices Support Board, 798
Fisheries Research Board, 1352
Fitness and amateur sport, 229, 1037
Flag, proclamation, 1309
Food and Agriculture Organization, 751
Forestry Department, 15, 1308
Fraser River, flood control and hydroelectric power, report, 106; appendices, 317
GATT trade negotiations committee, 434
Global Commercial Communications Satellite system, 995
Government Organization, recommendations of Royal Commission, 1314
Grain Commissioners, 1037
Group of Ten countries participating in general arrangements to borrow, statement of ministers and governors, 948
Haines Road, B.C., and Yukon Territory, 1314
Health and Welfare, 316-17
Health services
Letter from Prime Minister to provincial premiers, 830, 925
Replies from premiers, 833, 925
Report of Royal Commission, 767, 1310
Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services, 831, 947
House of Commons, 1309
Hungary, letters re diplomatic and consular matters, 718
Immigration
Loans, 655
Permits, 100
Indus Basin Development Fund (Supplemental) agreement, 1313
Industrial Development Bank, 1169
Industrial relations and disputes, 733
Industry department, 1314
Insurance
Report of Superintendent of Insurance, 668, 994, 1036
Inter-American Development Bank, 1310
Interdependence: The basis for U.S.-Canada relations, 395
International Arbitral Tribunal re U.S. claims at Gut Dam, 1478

Documents tabled—Continued
International Commission for supervision and control in Vietnam, 1362
International Joint Commission
Final report, 316
Letters to Mr. D. G. Chance, 1007
Report to Government of Canada and Government of United States, 316
International Labour Conference, 783
International Monetary Fund, 948
International River Improvements, 11, 1310
International satellites for Ionospheric studies, 1313
Interparliamentary Group, Canada and U.S., 316
Italy, agreement re waste material and scrap, 217
Japan, letter to Minister of Finance re controls on exports, 994
Japanese nationals entering Canada, 1313
Labour Management co-operation in Canada and the implications for Canadian economy, 1169
Library of Parliament, report of Librarian, 11
Loran-C station and Monitor Control station in Newfoundland, 1314
Maritime Commission, 783
Maritime Marshland Rehabilitation, 433
Maritime Transportation Unions, 163, 1314, 1377
Medical Research Council, 1169
Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances, 783
Merchant ships, tonnage, notes between Denmark and Canada, 1314
Meteorological satellite system, Canada and U.S., 1313
Mineral rights offshore, 1314
Mines and Technical Surveys, 1169
Municipal Development and Loan Board, 830
Municipal Improvements Assistance Act, 16, 1308
National Battlefields Commission
Capital budget, 1006
Report of Auditor General, 1006
National Capital Commission
Capital budget, 363, 1482
Report, 831, 948
National Defence, monies received and disbursed (replacement of materiel), 733
National Film Board, report, accounts and financial statement, 948
National Gallery of Canada, 1308-9
National Harbours Board
Capital budget, 15, 1308
Report, accounts and financial statements, 251
National Librarian, 830
National Productivity Council, 316

Documents tabled—Continued
National Research Council, 1169
National States' Rights Party, 1352
Nelson River
Interim report from Programming Board, 69
Investigations, report to Programming Board, 69
Nigerian armed forces, 1313
Norris Commission, 1169
North Atlantic Treaty, agreement re atomic information, 798
Northern Affairs and National Resources, 314, 1478
Northern Canada Power Commission
Estimates of expenditures and capital budget, 11, 833
Report, account and financial statements, 833
Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation, 316
Northern Transportation Company and Eldorado Aviation Co., 1006
North Pacific Fur Seals, 217
Northwest Territories, 925, 1309
Norwegian Air Force, aircrew personnel training, 1313
Old Age Assistance, 994
Old Age Security, 1043, 1169
Organization of Government Scientific Activities, 395
Overseas Telecommunication Corporation
Capital budget, 783
Report, accounts and financial statements, 833
Peace-keeping force, Cyprus
Aide-mémoire from Secretary General of U.N., 316
Communiqué issued following Ottawa meeting, 1073
Report by Secretary General to Security Council, 363, 395
Penitentiaries
Annual report, 15
Commissioner's report, 1309
Pension plan
Actuarial report, 1073, 1143
Appendices, 1143
Booklet, 948
Letter from Prime Minister to premiers of provinces, 718
Pilotage services in Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River, notes between Canada and U.S., 217
Polymer Corporation
Capital budget, 15
Report, accounts and financial statement, 217, 1478
Postmaster General's report, 984
Prairie Farm Assistance, 1078
Commission of Inquiry, report 947

Documents tabled—Continued
Prairie Farm Rehabilitation, 833
Public Accounts of Canada:
Abridged report, 12, 1309
Vol. I—Summary report and financial statements, 12, 1309
Vol. II—Details of expenditures and revenues, 12, 1309
Vol. III—Financial statements of Crown Corporations and auditors' reports, 12, 1309
Public Printing and Stationery, 1143
Public Service Death Benefit Account, 1073
Public Service Rearrangement and Transfer of duties Act, 335
Public Service Superannuation, 50, 1498
Public Works, 783, 1449
Queen Elizabeth II Canadian Fund to aid in research on diseases of children, 830
Radiation Protection Program, 229, 508, 994
Radio stations, amateur, Canada-Peru, 1313
Railways—Canadian National
Auditor's report, 294
Capital and operating budgets, 249, 1411
Grimshaw to Great Slave Lake, 69, 1460
Kiask Falls to Mattagami Lake, 69, 1460 re, 1169
Labour-management, address by President re, 1169
Matane to Ste. Anne des Monts, 69
Nepisiguit Junction to Brunswick Mining and Smelting, 70, 1460
Optic Lake to Chisel Lake and to Stall Lake, and purchase from Int. Nickel Co. of line from Sipiwesk to Burntwood River, 69-70, 1460
Order in Council withdrawing from entrustment to CNR and authorizing grant of letters patent, Moncton Wharf Branch, 1314; Placentia Subdivision, Newfoundland, 1314; Chatham, N.B., 1314; Right of Way, Moncton, 1314
Securities Trust, 294
Toronto, terminal facilities, 69, 1460
Whitecourt to Pan American Petroleum Corp., 69
Refunds (Natural Resources), 11
Regular Forces Death Benefit Account, 1073
Restaurant of Parliament, report of Auditor General, 1465
Restrictive Trade Practices
Milk, sale and distribution in Ottawa, 1006
Newspapers, Sudbury-Copper Cliff area, 217
Plumbing supplies, Alberta, 880
Plumbing supplies, Montreal and elsewhere in Canada, 163
Propane in B.C., 1411
Road surfacing materials, Ontario, 948
Tenders, alleged combine in Duvernay, 15-16

Documents tabled—Continued
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 100, 947, 1308
St. Lawrence Seaway Authority
Capital budget, 15, 1098, 1309
Loan from Consolidated Revenue Fund, 11
Report, accounts and financial statement, 316
Tariff of tolls, 1313
Seaway International Bridge Corporation
Capital budget, 15, 1146
Report, 452
Secretary of State, 994
Small Businesses Loans, 1037
Statutory Orders and Regulations published in Canada Gazette
Consolidated index and table of, 50, 413, 929, 1037, 1073, 1143, 1175, 1310
Part II, 50, 141, 235, 314, 335, 521, 623, 783, 929, 1310, 1411, 1479
Superannuation account, 1073
Supreme Court of Canada, general order of the Judges, amending rules, 11
Tariff Board
Inquiry re radio, television and related products, 1479
Machinery and equipment, 16
Oil seeds, vegetable oils and related products, 994
Tax-sharing arrangements, pensions, family allowances and loans to university students, 316
Technical and vocational training, 833
Tolls, Welland Canal, 217
Trade and Commerce Department
Public and private investment in Canada, 106, 947
Report, 733, 1449
Trade agreement between Canada and Hungary, 733
Trade and development, U.N. conference, 764
Trade and economic affairs, communiqué by U.S.-Canadian Committee, 395
Trans-Canada Air Lines
Auditor's report, 100
Capital budget, 50, 1308
Report, 100
Trans-Canada Highway, 783, 1308
Transport Commissioners, 106, 1411
Tranylcypromine and other amine-oxidase inhibitors, 948
Unemployment assistance, 229, 1460
Unemployment Insurance Advisory Committee, 948
Unemployment Insurance Commission, 994
Unemployment insurance fund, 948
United Nations
Food and Agriculture Organization, 751
Peace-keeping force, Cyprus, 316
Secretary-General's report to Security Council, 363, 395
Trade and Development conference, 764

Documents tabled—Concluded
United States
Interdependence, speech by Under-Secretary of State, 395
Trade and Economic Affairs, U.S.-Canadian Committee, 395
Veterans affairs, 11, 1309
Veterans business and professional loans, 1006
Vietnam, special reports by International Commission for supervision and control in, 1362
War Veterans Allowance Board, 11
Welland Canal, 1313
Wheat Board
Report for crop year, 69
World Exhibition, report of Canadian Corporation, 316
Yukon Territory, 695, 1309

Dominion Life Assurance Company bill S-14. Hon. Mr. Lang. 1r, 217; 2r-ref to com, 237; rep of com with amdt, 335; 3r, 352; r.a., 766

Dominion of Canada General Insurance Company bill S-30. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 623; 2r, 664-5; ref to com, 665; rep of com with amdts, 695; 3r, 718; r.a., 807

Droit Fabricien, by Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 837

Dupuis, Hon. Vincent
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 836

Economical Mutual Insurance Company bill S-48. Hon. W. Ross Macdonald. 1r, 1143; 2r-ref to com, 1160; rep of com with amdt-3r, 1175; r.a., 1459

Economic conditions
Consumer price index, 990
Discussions by Interparliamentary Group, 329-32
Free World Trade, 329-30
Interest Equalization Tax, 331
Labour problems on the Great Lakes, 331
Law of the sea, 330
Passamaquoddy Power Project, 331
Roads to Alaska, 332
Trade with communist countries, 330

Education
Commonwealth countries, 865
Grants to provinces, use and accounting of, 978, 979
History, teaching of, 246-7
Quebec facilities and accommodation, 245
Scholarships, 60
Separatism in universities, 979
Student loans, 888-913, 925, 928
Youth allowances, 824-30, 834, 847
See Universities

Electoral boundaries
Appointment of commissions, 1081, 1082
Commission hearings, 1081-2
Discrepancies in urban constituencies, 1081
Dual constituencies, 1082
Quebec commission appointments, 1085-6, 1088
Representation in Senate and Commons, 1087

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 1087-8
Brooks, A. J., 1082-4
Burchill, G. Percival, 1088
Connolly, John J., 1086
Crerar, T. A., 1086-7
Flynn, Jacques, 1082, 1085, 1086
Power, C. G., 1085-6, 1087, 1088-90

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72. 1r, 1069-70; 2r, 1080-90; 3r, 1098-9; r.a., 1101

Electricity
See Hydroelectric power

Emergency sittings
Authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 141-3, 947

Employment
Discrimination in, 656-60, 670-2, 740-3
Inquiry, Hon. Mrs. Fergusson, 1169, 1172
Statistics, 19
Technical and vocational training, 72-73

Eskimos
Administrative control, 307-8, 309
Ookpik, royalties on, 308
Rights of, 307, 308

Established programs (interim arrangements)
Cost of shared programs, 1507
Equalization payments and individual income tax, 1502-7
Government revenue and expenditures, 1501
Individual and corporation income and estate tax, by provinces, 1503

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 1499-1505, 1508, 1510-11
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 1508-10
Walker, David J., 1505-8

Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) bill C-142. 1r, 1482; 2r, 1499-1511; 3r, 1511; r.a., 1523

Estate tax
Abatement provision, 504-5
Bank deposits and insurance policies, 506
Businesses, family-owned, 200-1

Estate tax—Concluded
Community property, 504
Degree of relationship, 200
Executors' and legal fees, 201
Furniture assessment, 200
Gifts made within 3 years of death, 199
Gifts to charitable organization or other donee, 504
Gifts to wife, 200
Penalty provisions, 505
Pensions and annuities to widows, 200, 506, 509-10
Press comment, 199
Property
Inclusion in aggregate net value, 503-4
Passing to foreign domiciliary, 505
Transfer without consent of minister, 505
Provincial responsibility, 509-11
Revenue and costs of administration of act, 506, 510
Suggestions for review by Senate committee, 201, 507

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Crerar, T. A., 511-13
Hayden, Salter A., 511
Lang, Daniel A., 503-5
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 509-11
Roebuck, Arthur W., 511
White, George S., 198-201, 505-7

Estate Tax bill C-94. 1r, 452; 2r, 503-7, 509-13; ref to com, 513; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt-3r, 521; r.a., 537

Estimates
Accounts outstanding, 311-12
Agricultural research, 778
Atomic energy research, 1515
Bilingualism and Biculturalism, Royal Commission, 302, 312
Blue Book, expense of publication, 1161-2
Borrowing authority, 239, 1054-5, 1517
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, loan and investment, 240
Charlottetown Memorial Building, 778, 1516
Coal subventions, 1059, 1063
Comparison, 513-14
Counsel and accountant fees, Consumer Credit Joint Committee, 780, 781-2
Dawson City Festival, 305
"Foxy", production of, 305
Departmental administration, 939
Dollar items, deletions, 1520-1
Dominion Coal Board, 1054, 1063
External Affairs Department, 578-9, 1515, 1516
Finance Committee report, 1007, 1023-5, 1114-19, 1130-4, 1144-5, 1060-3
Committee witnesses, 1024
Fisheries, 239, 281, 1054
Food and Agriculture Organization, 269

Estimates—Continued
Gift program for UN building in Santiago, 279
Glassco Commission recommendations, 1024, 1116-17, 1162
Common services, 1117-18
Decentralization of financial responsibility, 1117
Departmental estimates on basis of programs and activities, 1117
Long-term plans, 1117
Reduction of votes, 1116
Relation of revenue and costs, 1118
Review of expenditures, 1117
Houses of Parliament, 1054, 1062-3, 1515, 1516
Ice control, St. Lawrence River, 1059, 1060, 1063
India, loan to, 779
Justice Department, 780
Labour Department, 514, 1059, 1063-4
Loans, investments, advances, 779
Macdonald-Cartier Bridge, 1054
Main estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31, 1965, tabled, 45-49
Budgetary estimates of statutory expenditures, comparison 1964-65 with 1963-64, 47
Main estimates, comparison 1964-65 with 1963-64, 48-49
Total budgetary estimates, 47
McKay pier, 1054
Methods of estimation of net expenditures, 1161
Mines and Technical Surveys, 238-9, 1063
National Research Council, 1515
Overlapping of federal and provincial expenditures, 1062-3
Postage, 513
Post Office, 1054
Press comment, 514
Privy Council, 572, 778
Procedure, form and preparation of estimates, 1115-16
Public debt, interest on, 1058, 1061, 1063, 1064
Public Works, 1054
Railway subsidies, 572-3, 580
Recommendations of previous Finance Committees, 495-6, 497
Items under discussion by 1956 committee, 497
Recording of small items, 1161
Secretary of State, 1516
Senate powers and responsibility in examination of, 299-300, 302-7, 311, 313, 495, 496, 498-9
Social welfare, 572, 576-7
Special appropriations, 1053-4
Surpluses, disposal of, 1161
Telephone communications, 513-14
Three readings of supply bills in one day, opposition to, Hon. M. Grattan O'Leary, 275, 280

Estimates—Concluded
Translation Bureau, 301-2, 312
Travelling and removal, 513
Underestimating of projects, 727
Undertaking that passage of estimates will not preclude further discussion, 239-40, 936, 1053, 1138
Unemployment Insurance Fund, 269, 270-1, 272, 279, 281
United Nations programs, 1515
Uranium concentrates, stockpiling costs, 779

Estimates, m that Finance Committee examine and report on, Hon. John J. Connolly, 434, 476, 494-9, 513-15; agreed to, 515; authority to print com proceedings, 521-2
Report, 1151-19, 1130-4, 1144-5, 1160-3
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 496-8
Burchill, G. Percival, 1162-3
Connolly, John J., 494-6
Haig, J. Campbell, 1118-19, 1144-5
Leonard, T. D'Arcy, 1023-5, 1114-18, 1130-4, 1163
Molson, Hartland de M., 1160-2
Pearson, Arthur M., 513-15
Roebuck, Arthur W., 498-9

Ethnic groups in Canada
Census (1961), 52
Culture, 53-55
Multiculturalism, 56
Participation in public life, 110-12
Ukrainian Canadians, 52-54

Evangeline (New Scotland) Savings and Mortgage Company bill S-15. Hon. Mr. Isnor. 1r, 317; 2r-ref to com, 352; rep of com with amdts, 395-6; 3r, 423; r.a., 807

Exchequer Court
Divorce Commissioner, jurisdiction re, 207, 208
Divorce jurisdiction, 208, 209
Exchequer Court (Divorce Jurisdiction) bill, 208-10
See Judges bill C-96

Export Credits Insurance
Berne Convention, 803
Contracts with foreign organizations, 801-2
Credit terms, extension of, 803
Financial statistics of corporation, 801, 802
Income tax exemption, 801
Liability, increase in amount of, 802
Long term financing, heavy capital equipment, 802
Premium reductions, 801
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 803
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 802-3
Smith, Sydney J., 801-2

Export Credits Insurance bill C-101. 1r, 798; 2r, 801-3; 3r, 803; r.a., 807

External Affairs Department, 381, 414-22, 424-6, 434-40, 458-62, 548-53, 649-54, 1515, 1516
Estimates for, 420
See External relations

External relations
Canadian External Policies since 1945, article by John W. Holmes, 415
Canadian foreign policy at UN, 548-53
Press comment, 552
Citizenship, 437-40
Deprivation of, 440
Lord Thomson, 440
Committee, origin of establishment, 419-20
Commonwealth, changes in, 417-18
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, 418
European Economic Community, reconciliation of USSR to, 416
External Affairs Department estimates, 420
GATT, 420-1
International relationships, expansion in, 414-15
Nationalism and internationalism, 425
Nuclear test-ban agreement, 416, 460
Organization of American States, 417, 420
Status of Women, UN Commission, 649-54
Technical assistance programs, Canada's contribution, 462
Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
Canadian policy re, 548-53
Countries absorbed into USSR, 549-50, 552
Imperialist practices, condemnation in speeches by:
Diefenbaker, Right Hon. John G., 549-50
Kennedy, John F., the late, 549, 550
Stevenson, Adlai, 550-1
Ukraine Republic, 552
United Nations, 416-17, 548-53, 649-54
Canada's involvement with, 420
Eighteenth session, 459-62
United States, Canada's relationship with, 418
Upper Chamber of governments, role of, 425-6
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Belisle, Rheal, 434-7
Grosart, Allister, 424-6
Irvine, Olive L., 458-62
Lambert, Norman P., 418-21
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 421-2
Pouliot, Jean-François, 437-40
Quart, Josie D., 649-54
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 414-18
Yuzyk, Paul, 548-53

External Relations Committee
Members, 43-44
M that com study report of External Affairs Department, Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson, 381, 414-22, 424-6, 434-40, 458-62, 548-53, 649-54; agreed to, 654
Reports
Geneva Conventions bill S-25. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 623
Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) bill S-24. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 675
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 606

Family
Allowances, 511
Canadian Conference on, 539
Family Law, UN seminar on the status of women in, 218-22

Farm credit
Agreements of sale, 758
Beekeepers, 756, 759-60
Canada Year Book statistics on farming, 757
Corporation, 753-7
Capital, increase in, 753, 757
Financial statement and annual report, 754
Operating losses, 754, 755
Auditor General's letter re, 754
Interest rates, 754, 755, 756, 758-9, 761
Limit to individual farmer, 753
Loan to assist family member, 755
Newfoundland borrowings and repayments, 756-7
Price of farm land, 757
Projects requiring loans in 1962-63, 756
Repayment terms, 753
Statistics on loans, 555, 757
Supervision of loans, 753, 760
Tax sale, 755
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Baird, A. B., 756-7
Brooks, A. J., 754, 758
Burchill, G. Percival, 760-1
Connolly, John J., 753-5, 756, 758
Crerar, T. A., 758-60
Haig, J. Campbell, 755, 756
Horner, R. B., 755, 756
Pearson, Arthur M., 757-9
Reid, Thomas, 760
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 759, 760

Farm Credit bill C-100. 1r, 733; 2r, 753-61; ref to com, 761; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com-3r, 764; r.a., 766

Farm improvement loans
Farm Credit Act, 991
Farm population, decline in, 991, 993
Lending operations (1945-63), 985-6, 992, 993
Loan provisions, 986-9
Machinery, 985-6, 988-9
Canadian-made, 992
Provincial loans for, 986, 989
Maritime farming operations, 990
Permissible amount of loan, inadequacy of, 988-9
Porter Commission recommendations, 986
Quebec farm loan system, 992-3
Security, 987
Small holdings, 987, 992

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 990-1
Cameron, Donald, 989-90
Connolly, John J., 985-6, 992-3
Horner, R. B., 987-8
Molson, H. de M., 987, 991-2
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 987
Pearson, Arthur M., 988-9
Stambaugh, J. Wesley, 988
Walker, David J., 991
Willis, Harry A., 987

Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119. 1r, 985; 2r, 985-93; ref to com, 993; rep of com without amdt-3r, 996; r.a., 1002

Farm machinery syndicates credit
Borrowings of farmers in 1963, 1004
Cost-price squeeze, 1010
Death or financial loss of partner, 1010
Equipment definition, 1005
Great Britain, 1005, 1013
Interest and administrative costs, 1005, 1019
Over-production and lack of markets, 1014
Partnership risk, 1018, 1019
Security for loans, 1004
Small farm problems, 1012
Statistics on farming, 1012

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 1015
Brooks, A. J., 1013-14
Connolly, John J., 1003-6, 1018, 1019
Horner, R. B., 1016-17, 1018-19
Inman, F. Elsie, 1010-11, 1014-15
Pearson, Arthur M., 1008-10
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1017-18
Stambaugh, Wesley J., 1016
Welch, Frank C., 1011-13
Willis, Harry A., 1014

Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit bill C-121. 1r, 1003; 2r, 1003-6, 1008-20; ref to com, 1020; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt-3r, 1026; r.a., 1031

Farris, Hon. J. W. de B.
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 395, 470-4, 483-91, 690-2, 1337-8
Bank of Canada, political aspect, 690
Communication from B.C. premier, 486-7
Discretion in granting of charter, 691
Jurisdiction in banking and money matters, 486, 487-8, 690, 691, 692, 1337-8
Alberta legislation, 488
Bank of Toronto vs Lamb, 488, 691
Bergethaler vs Waisenamt, 488
Clement's Canadian Constitution, 488, 489
Grand Trunk Railway vs Attorney-General of Canada, 1337-8
Political control, 691
Board of Trade objection, 484-5, 486
Vancouver Sun, article re, 484
Property and civil rights, 488, 692
Revenue Act Amendment Act, 473
B.C. Electric Company, provincial government takeover, 691
Divorce, 211-12, 527, 530
Court of appeal, 212
Exchequer Court jurisdiction, 212
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1019
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 228
Judges bill C-96, 527, 530
Authority to create commissioner as judge, 527, 530
Jurisdiction in divorce procedure, 530

Fauteux report on penal reform, 92-94, 794-7

Federal-provincial arrangements re shared programs
See Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) bill C-142

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements
Abatement, 950-3, 956-7, 966-7, 968
Atlantic provinces, 959-60, 964, 973-4, 980-1
Conditional and unconditional grants, 969, 981
Conference to establish revenues and needs of provinces, suggestion, 971, 972, 975, 977, 980
Co-operative federalism, 958, 975
Educational grants, use and accounting of, 978, 979
Equalization formula, 953-4, 955, 963, 967
Estate tax, 951-2, 954, 958-9
Federal-provincial-municipal debt and responsibilities, 969-70
Jurisdiction of provinces, 968-9, 976-7

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements—Concluded
Natural resources revenue, 953-4
Newfoundland, 959-60, 973-4, 980-1
Annual grant, 959-60, 973-4
Royal Commission recommendation, 973
Provincial consent, 976
Quebec, 962, 968, 978-80
Quebec conference, communiqué by Prime Minister, 267
Rates of taxation, determination of, 962-3
Road-building in Quebec, 976
Taxation rights of federal and provincial governments, 979, 961-2
Youth allowances, 951, 954, 969
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Burchill, G. Percival, 964-5
Crerar, T. A., 952, 970-3
Flynn, Jacques, 960-4
Grosart, Allister, 956, 974-7
Hayden, Salter A., 950-60, 980-2
Hollett, Malcolm, 959, 960, 973-4
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 953, 954, 966-70
Pouliot, Jean-François, 977-80

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill 1964 C-111. 1r, 950; 2r, 950-65, 966-82; 3r, 982; r.a., 982

Fees
Legal counsel for Consumer Credit Joint Committee, 780, 781-2, 804-7
Private bills
Brada Pipe Lines Limited, refund, 1038
Divorce, 14, 94-95, 100
St. John Ambulance Association, refund, 624

Felicitations
Burchill, Hon. G. Percival, 75th birthday, 1042
Crerar, Hon. T.A., 88th birthday, 751-2
Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross
Chancellor of Waterloo Lutheran University, 1066
Doctor of Laws, honorary degree, 606
Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François, 40th anniversary in Parliament, 1135-6
Power, Hon. C. G., 47th anniversary in Parliament, 1231-2
Roebuck, Hon. Arthur W., 86th birthday, 36
Smith, Hon. Sydney J., golden wedding anniversary, 1108, 1143-4
Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A., honorary fellowship in Royal Society of Medicine, 554

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQ.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 218-22
Bogota, 218-22, 868-9
Canadian Ambassador and staff, 218, 221
Canadian missions, 221, 222, 868-9
"Parque el Canada", 221-2

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQ.—Concluded
Bogota—Concluded
CARE gifts, 221-2
Broadview school, 222
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 742-3
Delay in approval by Canada, 743
International Labour Organization, 742, 743
New Brunswick legislation, 743
Discrimination in employment of women, inquiry, 1172
Answers tabled, 1169
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 868-9
Constitutional validity of, 869
Mother of the Year, Mrs. M. M. Gottfriedsen, 342
New Brunswick Industrial Council, 1362
Pension Plan bill C-136, 1488-93
Earnings under $600 a year, 1492
Joint Committee, Senate members, 1489
Witnesses in committee hearings, 1490-1
Pension Plan, Joint Committee reports, 1102, 1232, 1311
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1299
Roosevelt Campobello International Park, 218
Student Loans bill C-110, 888-91, 894, 895, 905, 913
Borrowers under 21 years of age, 894
Canadian award winners, 888
Constitutional aspects, 894
Eligibility, 890, 891
Yukon and Northwest Territories, 891
I.O.D.E. scholarship and bursary committee, 888, 889
Lending institutions for student loans, 890
Maximum loan, 890-1
Nonpayment of debt in case of death, 891
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1298-9
Tourist traffic, 342-5
Canadian Travel Bureau in other countries, maintenance costs, 345
Dolan, D. Leo, first chairman, 343
Dollar devaluation, 344
Interprovincial tourism, 343
New Brunswick, 343-5
Advertising program, 343
Transportation problems, 344
Statistics on tourism, 343-4
United Nations
Seminar on the Status of Women in Family Law, 218-22
Agenda, 219-20
Civil capacity of women, 220-1
Consent to marriage, minimum age of marriage and registration of marriage, 220
Delegates, 219
Marriageable age for girls and boys, 220
Youth Allowances bill C-108, 829-30

Ferry Service
Newfoundland, 355-6
East coast ferry, 356
William Carson, 355-6
Transport Department, estimates, 938

Finance Charges (Disclosure) bill S-3. Hon. Mr. Croll. 1r, 16; m for 2r, 179; subject matter ref to joint committee on Consumer Credit, 179

Finance Committee
Members, 44
Motion that com examine and report on Estimates, Hon. John J. Connolly, 434, 476, 494-9, 513-15; agreed to, 515
Report
Authority to print com proceedings, 521-2
Estimates, 1007, 1023-5, 1114-19, 1130-4, 1144-5, 1160-3

Finland
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459

Fisheries
Aeration of water, 431-2
Agreement between B.C. fishermen and fish-packing companies, 1288-92
Combines investigation, 1288-92
Development policy, 18, 27-28
Estimates, 239, 281, 1054
Foreign ships in Canadian waters, 27, 349
Lamprey control, 938
Law of the sea, 330, 349
Living Resources of the Sea, Rome Conference on the Conservation of, 367
Newfoundland, 355
Pollution of the sea by oil, 132, 144-5, 148-9
Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, inquiry, 1288-9
Strike of fishermen, 1289-90
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 346-50, 363-79, 381-94, 396-408, 413, 452, 491, 847

Flag, Canadian, 439-40, 1169-72, 1176-93, 1196-1230, 1233-76
Designation of national emblem, motion for, 1169-72, 1176-93, 1196-1230, 1233-76; carried, 1276-7
Amdt that Government suspend action, 1183-93, 1196-1230, 1233-70; neg, 1270
Vote on
Amdt, 1270
Motion for designation, 1276-7
Notice of motion, 1171-2
Designs, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1036
Senate consideration of, inquiries, Hon. John Hnatyshyn, 588, Hon. M. Grattan O'Leary, 452-3
Statement of Prime Minister, 999-1000
Use of national Flag of Canada on ships, 1347, 1363, 1364

Flag, Canadian, 439-40, 1169-72, 1176-93, 1196-1230, 1233-76—Concluded
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 1262-4
Baird, A. B., 1245
Brooks, A. J., 1218, 1255-62
Cameron, Donald, 1186-9
Connolly, John J., 1176-9, 1216, 1252 1273-6
Crerar, T. A., 1183-5
Croll, David A., 1198-1201
Flynn, Jacques, 1228, 1272-3
Fournier, Sarto, 1239-43, 1270
Gladstone, James, 1243-5
Gouin, L. M., 1205-8
Grosart, Allister, 1264-8
Hollett, Malcolm, 1225-6, 1273
Hnatyshyn, John, 1210-11
Hugessen, A. K., 1266-9
Irvine, Olive L., 1196-8
Kinley, John J., 1211-14
Lambert, Norman P., 1217-19
Leonard, T. D'Arcy, 1247
Macdonald, John M., 1270-2
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 1206-10
Méthot, Léon, 1253-5
O'Leary, Clement A., 1193, 1219-22
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 1179-83, 1268-9 1270
Pearson, Arthur M., 1189-90
Phillips, Orville H., 1245-9
Pouliot, Jean-François, 1190-3, 1237
Rattenbury, Nelson, 1249-51
Robertson, John A., 1223-5
Smith, Sydney J., 1222-3
Sullivan, Joseph A., 1201-3, 1270
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 1214-17
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 1229-30, 1246
Walker, David J., 1185-6
Welch, Frank C., 1237-9
White, George S., 1233-7
Willis, Harry A., 1204-5
Yuzyk, Paul, 1251-3

Flag, Commonwealth, Canadian
Designation of, motion for, 1277, 1278-83; adopted, 1283
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 1281-2
Connolly, John J., 1277, 1278-81, 1283
Hollett, Malcolm, 1282
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 1282-3

Fluoridation, 1041

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C.
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1964 C-89, 306-7
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1332-3, 1335
Motion that rep of com be ref back to com, 1335; carried, 1346
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1082, 1085, 1086
Quebec commission appointments, 1085, 1086

Flynn Hon. Jacques, P.C.—Concluded
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill C-111, 960-4
Equalization formula, 963
Rates of taxation, determination of, 962-3
Taxation rights of federal and provincial governments, 961-2
Flag, Canadian, 1272-3
Income Tax bill C-91, 603-5
Quebec, 604
Rental agreements, 603-4, 605
Responsibility for taxing and spending, 603
Judges bill C-96, 647-8
Legislative and judicial powers, division of, 648
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1398-1401
Amdt to motion for 3r, 1400
Exemption of certain employees, 1400
Grain elevator operators, 1400
Ministerial powers, 1399-1401
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 477, 503, 626-9
Jurisdiction in marriage, 626-9
Marriage and Divorce Act, 628
Property and civil rights, 627, 628, 629
Quebec, 626, 627, 628, 629
Money bills, three readings in one day, 306-7
Montreal Board of Trade bill S-18, 412
National Housing bill C-102, 739-40
Press report re 'injustice of Ottawa toward Quebec', 739-40
Revised Statutes of Canada bill S-2, 116
Senate business, 294-5, 306-7
Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge bill S-21, 448-9
Student Loans bill C-110, 891, 897-900, 908
Borrowers under 21 years of age, 898
Constitutionality of bill, 897-900
Quebec, 899
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 119
Welfare legislation, 605

Forestry
Japanese pulp and paper interests on west coast, 1390
New Brunswick mills, 185

Fournier, Hon. Edgar E.
Acadians, 61-63
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 58-63
Bilingualism and biculturalism, 61-63
Congregation of the Marist Sisters bill S-38, 764, 785
Construction statistics, 58
Mactaquac hydroelectric power dam, 60-61
New Brunswick, 60-63
Passamaquoddy tidal power development, 59
Railway facilities, Quebec, 59
Roosevelt Campobello International Park, 59

Fournier, Hon. Edgar E.—Concluded
Rural development, 59-60
Scholarships, 60
Senate reform, retirement age, 60
Separatism in New Brunswick, 61-63
Laurendeau-Dunton Commission, 61
Publication of newspaper, 62
Société Nationale des Acadiens, 62-63
Tourist traffic, 427-9
Edmundston tourist bureau, 428-9
Maritimes, 427-9
Indian reserves, 427-8
Salesmanship and advertising, 427, 428
Unemployment, 58, 60
World's Fair, 59
Youth Allowances bill C-108, 826-7
Quebec problems, 827
Student statistics, 826

Fournier, Hon. Sarto
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 243-7
B.N.A. Act, weaknesses of, 244
Canadian culture, 243-7
History, teaching of, 246-7
Misunderstandings, 243-4
Departments of government, expenses and duplication of services, 245
Agriculture, 245
Flag, Canadian, 1170, 1239-43, 1277
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 243
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 478
Quebec
Educational facilities and accommodation, 245
Federal government interference in provincial fields, 245
Loyalty of French Canadians, 244
Rights of, 244-5
Separatism, 245
Queen Elizabeth II, 247
Rule 23 re two days' notice of motion, 1170

Fraser River
Diversion from Columbia River, 21-22, 686, 706, 710-11
Project report, 21-22
See Columbia River Treaty

Gas markets, 867-8, 1028-31, 1039
See Oil and gas industry

Gaza Strip, expenditures for Canadian military operations, 573-5

Gélinas, Hon. Louis P.
Guarantee Company of North America bill S-37, 786

General Accident Assurance Company of Canada bill S-8. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 70; 2r, 100-1; ref to com, 101; rep of com with amdt, 181-2, 215; 3r, 215; r.a., 766

Geneva Conventions
Amelioration of the condition of wounded and sick in armed forces in the field, 547
Amelioration of the condition of wounded, sick and shipwrecked members of armed forces at sea, 547
Breaches of conventions, 547, 555-6
Certificate of Secretary of State, 547
Japan, omitted from signatories, 556
Judicial safeguards for prisoners of war and internees, 547
Legal proceedings in respect of protected persons, 556
Prisoner of war, definition, 547
Protection of civilian persons in time of war, 547
Ratification by Parliament, 556
Red Cross, International Committee, 547, 554-5
Service discipline, prisoners of war subject to Code, 546-7
Treatment of prisoners of war, 547
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Baird, A. B., 546-8
Crerar, T. A., 556-7
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 554-6

Geneva Conventions bill S-25. 1r, 475; 2r, 546-8, 554-7; ref to com, 557; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 623; 3r, 637; r.a., 1459

Gershaw, Hon. F. W.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 37-39
Appropriation bill No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1148
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, 1071
Consumer Credit, Joint Committee, 351
Divorce jurisdiction, 230
Divorce reports and resolutions, 1043-4, 1056-7, 1078, 1098, 1099, 1105-6, 1120-1
Greber Plan, 725
Judges bill C-96, 530
Medical research, 40-41, 1148
Mental diseases, 41
Crime and, 41
M'Naghten rules, 41
National Capital Commission, estimates, 726
Ottawa, 725-6
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 724-6
Student Loans bill C-110, 896-7
Tourist traffic, 432-3
History of names, 432
Manitoba, 432-3
National museum, 432

Gladstone, Hon. James
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 1463
Flag, Canadian, 1234-5
Horner, Hon. R. B., the late, 1168
Indian Blood Tribe, visit of delegation to Ottawa, 22

Gladstone, Hon. James—Concluded
Indians, 912-13
B.C. Indian Rights, 912
Indian Act, recommendations re, 913
Liquor laws, 912
International peace-keeping force, 162
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1301
Student Loans bill C-100, 911-13
Indian students, 911-12

Glassco Commission
Government accommodation, report on, 578
Recommendations re government expenditures, 1115-18, 1162
Common services, 1117-18
Decentralization of financial responsibility, 1117
Departmental estimates on basis of programs and activities, 1117
Long-term plans, 1117
Reduction of votes, 1116
Relation of revenue and costs, 1118
Review of expenditures, 1117

Gottfriedsen, Mrs. Mildred Manuel, Mother of the Year, 342

Gouin, Hon. L. M.
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1964 C-89, 309-10
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill, 625
Estimates, consideration by Finance Committee, 309-10
Flag, national, 1206-8
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 229
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 837-9
Civil Code of Quebec, 837, 838, 839
Conger vs Kennedy, 839
Droit Fabricien, by Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 837
Married women's rights, 837, 838-9
Property and civil rights, provincial jurisdiction, 837-9
Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) bill S-24, 641-4
Bureau of Exhibitions, 643
Economic and Social Council, 642
Economic co-operation and development, 643
Experts on missions for the UN, 643
Food and Agricultural Organization, 643-4
International Labour Organization, 643-4
Specialized agencies, 642-3
UNESCO, 644
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 121
"Air Canada", press comment, 121

Government
Federal government action in provincial matters, 488, 616, 631-2
Alberta banking legislation, 488, 616, 632
Arrow Head Lakes, proposed dam, 631

Government—Concluded
Federal government action in provincial matters—Concluded
International River Improvements Act, 631
National unity, threat by sectional interests, 233
Senate role, 232-3

Government expenditures
Accommodation, expansion of, 578-80
Armed forces, special operations, 573-5
Atlantic provinces, 850
Blue Book, 1161-2
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 1149-53
Cyclical budgeting, 782
Deficit financing, 782
External Affairs Department, 578
Extravagances, 511-13, 573-80, 727
Glassco Commission recommendations, 1115-18, 1162
Inflation, 782
Methods of estimation, 1161
National debt, interest on, 579, 1058, 1063, 1064
Overlapping of federal and provincial expenditures, 1162-3
Per capita expenditures, 1142, 1156
Press comment, 276
Privy Council, 572
Provincial demands, 578
Railway subsidies, 572-3, 580
Social welfare, 572, 576-7
Underestimating of projects, 727
See Estimates

Government Organization
See Glassco Commission

Government Printing Bureau, 252-3, 508-9, 522

Governor General
Addresses re messages to Queen Elizabeth II
Re amdt to B.N.A. Act, 775-6
Re birth of a Prince, 125
Re visit to Canada, 1035-6
Deputies
Hall, Hon. Emmett M., 928
Judson, Hon. Wilfred, 947, 982
Martland, Hon. Ronald, 807-8
Ritchie, Hon. Roland A., 766, 847
Spence, Hon. Wishart F., 249-50, 314-15
Taschereau, Hon. Robert, P.C., 282-3, 537, 622, 1002, 1031, 1066, 1101, 1164, 1293, 1459, 1522-3
Opening of Parliament, 1-3
Speech from the Throne, 1-3
Prorogation of Parliament, 1522-5
Speech from the Throne, 1523-5

Grain
Agreements and sales, 416, 1377
Elevator companies, 1322-4
Exports to Europe and China, 26
Northwest Line Elevators Assoc., brief re Labour (Standards) Code, 1323-4
Trucking, 1321-2

Greber Plan, 712, 725, 728
Ottawa Terminal Railway, 711-14, 722-9

Grey Cup train, damage by football fans, 1144

Grosart, Hon. Allister
Appropriation bills
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 273-5
No. 3, 1964 C-87, 281
No. 6, 1964 C-105, 783-4
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 625
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1338-9, 1342
Jurisdiction, 1338-9
British North America Act amdt, 770, 774-5
Jurisdiction in amending of Constitution, 774-5
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, 1442, 1450-5
Conference at Kingston, Jamaica, 1442, 1450-5 (See Jamaica)
Functions of Commonwealth, 1451-2
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 658, 659, 660, 740-2
Delay in approval by Canada, 740-1
International agreements, 741-2
International Labour Organization, 742
Provincial letters of approval, 659, 660
Provincial obligations, 741-2
Divorce, 87
Jurisdiction, 212, 528-9
Provincial rights, 212
Religious aspect, 213
External relations, 424-6
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revisions bill 1964 C-111, 956, 974-7
Co-operative federalism, 975
Provincial consent, 976
Provincial jurisdiction, 976-7
Road-building in Quebec, 975
Flag, Canadian, 1264-8
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 191, 192, 195, 196, 197, 410
Oshawa, 191, 192, 195-6
Access to documents, 196
Notification of amdts, 191, 192, 195
Income Tax bill C-91, 605
Provincial responsibility in taxation, 605
Jamaica, 1450-5
Aid program, 1453-4
Imports by Canada, 1453
Money loans, 1455
Trade policy, 1452
Undeveloped nations, 1453

Grosart, Hon. Allister—Concluded
Judges bill C-96, 528, 529-30
Divorce jurisdiction, 528-9
Provincial consultation on procedure, 528, 529-30
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 478
Nationalism and internationalism, 425
North Atlantic Treaty Organization, 15th anniversary, 287-8
Petitions, extension of time for filing, 351
Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) bill S-24, 644-6
Abuse of privileges, 646
Bureau of Exhibitions, 644-5
Immunities from law, 644-5
Control of, 645
Robertson, Hon. J. A., the late, 1301
St. Patrick's Day, 166-7
Senate
Comment of Member of Parliament, 783
Criticism re consideration of legislation, 827-8, 885-6
Student Loans bill C-110, 901-3
Grade XII students, 902
Liability of federal Government, 902
Provincial discretion, 902
Quebec option, 901
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 396-400, 408
Tourist traffic, 534-7
Expenditures, 534-6
Guide books, 536
Tourist Bureau, 534, 535
Tourist expenditures per capita, 536
Unemployment Insurance Commission, inquiry, 335-6
Upper Chamber of governments, role of, 425-6
Youth Allowances bill C-198, 827-9
Age gap, 828-9
Federal-provincial arrangements, 828
Quebec, 828, 829

Guarantee Company of North America bill S.-37. Hon. Mr. Croll. 1r, 763; 2r-ref to com, 786; rep of com without amdt, 833; 3r, 834; r.a., 1002

Habeas Corpus
See Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 82-83
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, 1441-2
Farm Credit bill C-100, 755, 756
Government expenditures, decentralization of financial responsibility, 1144-5
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 192
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1297-8

Hall, Hon. Emmett M., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
Royal assent, 928

Harbour Commissions
Amdts to act, notification of, 191-2, 195-6
By-law to change status of commission, 192, 193
Cobourg, agreement re dredging of harbour, 194
Documents, access to, 196
Harbours affected or excluded by bill S-10, 191-2
Investments by municipalities, 193-4, 195
New Westminster, 191, 195
Investments made by City of Westminster, 195
Name, suggested change, 195
Oshawa, 191, 192, 195-6
Profits, division of, 191, 194
Property rights, 192-3
Toronto, 191, 193
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 192, 195-7
Grosart, Allister, 191, 192, 195, 196, 197, 410
Haig, J. Campbell, 192
Hugessen, A. K., 192-3, 380, 409-10
Leonard, T. D'Arcy, 190-1, 192, 193, 197
Reid, Thomas, 191, 192, 194-5
Roebuck, Arthur W., 191, 192, 193-4, 195, 196, 410-11
See also Harbours and pilotage

Harbour Commissions bill S-10. 1r, 86; 2r, 190-7; ref to com, 197; authority to print com proceedings, 350; rep of com with amdts, 380, 409-11; 3r, 423; r.a., 1101

Harbours and pilotage
Newfoundland, 831, 848-52, 867
Management and control of harbours, 849
Outport pilots and pilotage, 849
Port and Harbour of Port aux Basques Act, 850
Port and Harbour of St. John's Act, 850
St. John's development, 850
Terms of Union of Newfoundland and Canada, 848-9
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 850-1
Connolly, John J., 852
Cook, Eric, 848-50, 851
Roebuck, Arthur W., 851
See also Harbour Commissions

Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40. 1r, 831; 2r, 848-52; ref to com, 852; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 867; 3r, 880; r.a., 1101

Hayden, Hon. Salter A.
Actuaries bill S-45, 1107
Allstate Insurance Company of Canada bill S-12, 395
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 695
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1330-1, 1332, 1341-2
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 182, 913, 917-18
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 6
Casualty Company of Canada bill S-30, 695
Coasting trade, 186-90
Federal sales tax, 187
Freight rates, effect on, 189
International trade, not subject to restrictions, 189
Royal Commission on, 186-8
Companies bill S-22, 1078, 1091-7, 1109-14, 1124-9, motion to ref com report back to com, 1104
Reports, 1078, 1091-7, 1109-14, 1124-9
Amalgamation of companies
Creditors, 1112
Director, requirements of, 113
Disclosure of uniformation to shareholders, 1110-11
Mutual fund shares, 1111-12
Preferred shares, printing of restrictions re, 1112
Preferred shares, redemption, purchase or cancellation, 1111
Prospectus, filing of, 1109-10
Proxies, 1112
Seal of company, 1112
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 1462-3
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) bill C-95, 695
Customs Tariff bill C-92, 453-6, 508
Aircraft, 455
Bread exports, 453-4
Concessions to U.S., 453-4
Gatt negotiations, 453
Liquor, 454-5
Montan wax, 454
Yarns, thread, cord, 455
Dentists of Canada bill S-44, 1107
Dominion Life Assurance Company bill S-14, 335
Dominion of Canada General Insurance Company bill S-30, 695
Estate Tax bill C-94, 511
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill C-111, 950-60, 980-2
General Accident Assurance Company of Canada bill S-8, 181-2
Guarantee Company of North America bill S-37, 833
Income Tax bill C-91, 581-6, 590-7, 604, 637
Appeal covering several years, 582
Brother or sister, deduction for, 550
Designated areas, 584-6
Dividends, 584, 595

Hayden, Hon. Salter A.—Concluded
Income Tax bill C-91—Concluded
Expenses re appeals, 582
Manufacturing or processing business, 585
Ministerial discretion, 585-6
Nonresident shareholders, 583, 584, 593-7
Partnership interest, 581
Pension plan contributions, 590-1
Provincial tax, 592-3
Scientific research expenditures, 52-53
Superannuation or pension benefit, 581-2
Eastern Abattoir case, 581
Tuition fees, 591
Unpaid accounts, 591-2
Withholding tax, 583-4
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1389-91
Canada-Denmark Convention, 1391
Canada-Finland Convention, 1391
Exchange of information, 1390
Permanent establishment, 1390
Personal services, 1390
Withholding tax, 1389, 1390, 1391
Insurance bill C-123, 1382-8, 1389
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 587-8, 923
Montreal Board of Trade bill S-18, 508
National Defence bill C-90, 834
New Scotland (Evangeline) Savings and Mortgage Company bill S-15, 395
Quebec Board of Trade bill S-28, 696
St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5, 106
Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation bill S-9, 182
Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation bill S-46, 1108
Shipping bill S-7, 186-90
Coasting trade, 186-90
Federal sales tax, 187
Freight rates, 189
International trade, not subject to restrictions, 189
Royal Commission on, 186-8
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 117
Trade mark, 117
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 6-7
Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36, 1043
World Mortgage Corporation bill S-28, 696

Health and Welfare
Fluoridation of water, 1041
Health services, report of Royal Commission, 767
Medical conference, Commonwealth, 865
Medical research, 40-41
Mental diseases, 41
Crime and, 41
M'Naghten rules, 41

High Commissioners to Canada, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 253, 260, 277, 318-19

H.M.C.S. Bonaventure, 575

H.M.C.S. Magnificent, 573

Hnatyshyn, Hon. John
Crop Insurance bill C-129, 1021-3
Manitoba legislation, 1021
Prairie farm assistance, 1022-3
Reinsurance provision, 1022
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 670-1
Discrimination in Canada, 670
Quebec Hotel Act, 671
Saskatchewan legislation, 671
Flag, Canadian, 1210-11
Horner, Hon. R. B., the late, 1168

Hollett, Hon. Malcolm
Agricultural Commodities Stabilization account, 275
Appropriation bills
No. 1, 1964 C-84, 239
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 275
No. 3, 1964 C-87, 281, 282
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1142-3, 1159
Brethren in Christ Church bill S-11, 214
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) bill C-95, 533-4
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill 1964 C-111, 959, 960, 970-3
Newfoundland, 973-4
Annual grant, 973-4
Royal Commission recommendation, 973
Fisheries estimates, 239, 281
Flag, Canadian, 1225-6, 1273
Flag, Commonwealth, Canadian, 1282
Forestry Unit, Newfoundland, 1142-3
Merchant Seamen Compensation bill C-131, 1371-5
Funeral expenses, 1372
Pensions, 1361, 1372-5
Disability, 1361, 1374-5
Earnings, 1361, 1374
Widows and children, 1361, 1372-4
Seamen lost at sea, 1372
Pension Plan bill C-136, 1495-6
Incomes less than $600 a year, 1496-7
Newfoundland debt, 1496
Shipping bill S-7, 133, 134, 143-7, 148-9, 152
Certificated personnel, 145-7, 152
Coasting trade, 148
Long-service fishermen, 147-8
Newfoundland and Labrador fishing industry, depletion of, 148-9
Oil-loading terminals, 145, 163
One hundred mile restriction on Atlantic seaboard, 144
Pollution of the sea by oil, 144-5, 148, 163
Conference in London (1962), 144
Sea birds destroyed by oil, 144

Hollett, Hon. Malcolm—Concluded
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 377, 381-6
Baselines, 382
Newfoundland, 382
Coastal fisheries, special situations re, Geographical co-ordinates, 382
High seas, Article 2 of Convention re, 382-3
International agreement, External Affairs pamphlet, 383
International Law, American Journal, 384
Law of the Sea, Geneva conferences, 381, 382, 383, 384
Living resources of the sea, 383
United Maritime Fishermen, address by Assistant Deputy Minister of Fisheries, 383-4
United Nations jurisdiction, 384-5
Tourist traffic, 354-7
Newfoundland and Labrador, 355
Fisheries, 355
Historic sites, 355
Revenue from tourists, 356
Transportation, 355
East coast ferry, 356
Port aux Basques to St. John's, 356
William Carson, 355-6
Unemployment insurance for fishermen, 275
Ville LaSalle disaster, message of sympathy, 1302

Horner, Hon. R. B.
(Deceased-December 14, 1964)
Appropriation bill No. 9, 1964 C-135, 1060
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 618-19, 635
Weyburn Security Bank, 618-19
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 83, 111
Banks and financial institutions, surplus of, 83, 111, 618
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, 1071
Congo atrocities, expression of sympathy to relatives of victims, 1119
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 743
Discrimination in Western Canada, 743
Divorce reports, 800
Farm Credit bill C-100, 755, 756
Beekeepers, 756
Interest rate, 756
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 987-8
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1016-17, 1018-19
Credit status, 1016
Flag, Canadian, 1000
Grey Cup train, damage by football fans, 1144
Interprovincial Pipe Line Company bill S-42, 1123

Horner, Hon. R. B.—Concluded
Judges bill C-96, 663, 664
Student Loans bill C-110, 896
Tourist traffic, 340-1
Dollar devaluation, 340
Western provinces, 340-1
Tributes, 1165-9

Housing
Caisses populaires, promotion of home improvement and building, 738-9
CMHC funds, increase in, 716
Construction
Profits, 736-7
Statistics, 735
Default in payments, 716
Improvements on homes, loans for, 738
Limited dividend housing corporations, 721
Loan ratios for insured loans, 715-16
Loans to holders of mortgages taken in respect of insured loans, 716
Press report on Commons debate alleging 'injustice of Ottawa toward Quebec', 739-40
Private lending agencies, 719
Public housing, 715, 721, 734-5, 736
Loans on land, 735
Rosedale, 721
Servicing, 738
Sewage treatment projects, 716, 720
Substandard housing, 734-5
Taxation increase after home improvements, 737
Toronto developments, 721, 736
University housing, 715, 720, 735-6
Family units, 715
Urban renewal, 714-15, 720-1, 737-8
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 714-16
Croll, David A., 734-7
Flynn, Jacques, 739-40
Reid, Thomas, 715
Smith, Sydney J., 737-8
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 738-9
Walker, David J., 718-21
See also National Housing bill C-102

Howard, Hon. Charles B.
(Deceased-March 25, 1964)
Tributes, 227-9, 243

Howe, Right Honourable C. D., intervention in plan for dam at Arrow Lakes, 703-4

Hugessen, Hon. A. K.
Alberta, disallowance by federal government in banking legislation, 532
Appropriation bill No. 7, 1964 C-109, 823
Arrow Head Lakes, proposed dam, federal action to prevent, 631

Hugessen, Hon. A. K.—Continued
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 630-2
Chartered banks, depletion of, 630
Headquarters of banks, concentration of, 631
Jurisdiction in money matters, 631
Provincial control, 631-2
Bell Telephone Company bill S-27, 655
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-137, 1370-1, 1393, 1413-14
Rep of com, 1393; motion to ref back to com, 1413
Columbia River Treaty, 676-89, 697, 709-11
Arrow Lakes, 678
Barnhart dam, comparison, 697
Benefits to exchange fund, employment, construction, etc., 685, 686
Changes in treaty since previous government, 709-10
Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., 679-80
Costs, U.S. and Canada, 683, 684
Diversion of Columbia River, 687-8
Consumptive purposes, alternative supply for, 710-11
Crippen-Wright report, 687
Fraser River, costs to divert to, 686
Provisions re, 686
Salmon industry, effect on, 687
Saskatchewan negotiations, 687-8
Documents relating to, 689
Downstream benefits, 684
Engineering Board of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, 685-6
Flooding
Agricultural land in Arrow Lakes area, 711
Control of, 680, 681, 683, 684
International Joint Commission, 677, 684
Kootenay River, 678-9, 683
Libby dam, U.S. option for, 683-4
Loan-investment, 823
Mica dam, 682, 683, 685, 697
Costs, 682, 685
Peace River development, 681
Physical characteristics of river and tributaries, 680
Preamble to treaty, 689
Primary power, 680
Protocol and exchange of notes, 677, 684, 685
Registering of treaty with UN, 709
Requirements of B.C. and U.S., 681
Rights surrendered, 688
Secondary power, 680
U.S. development in northern Pacific states, 680
West Kootenay Power Co., 679, 683
Companies bill S-22, 518-19
Information to shareholders, 518
Power of Secretary of State, 518-19

Hugessen, Hon. A. K.—Concluded
Flag, Canadian, 1226-9
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 192-3, 380, 409-10
Property rights, 192-3
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40, 867
Horner, Hon. R. B., the late, 1167
International River Improvements Act, 631
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 764, 867
Pension Plan, Joint Committee, 1098
Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge bill S-21, 475-6
St. Lawrence Seaway, Barnhart dam, 682, 697
St. Patrick's Day, 1436-7
Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation bill S-45, 1050
Shipping bill S-7, 380, 675, 747-50, 1364-5
Certificated personnel, 747, 748
Passenger transportation, 748, 749-50
Restriction on goods transported by water or by land and water, 748-9
Tugboat operations on Pacific coast, 748
Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36, 861

Hungary
Canada-Hungary Trade Agreement, 1377-81

Hydroelectric power
Bay D'Espoir, 850
B.C. Electric Company, takeover by provincial government, 634, 691, 705
Columbia River Treaty, 623-4, 676-89, 697, 698-711
Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., 678-80
Developments in Canada, 699
Mactaquac hydroelectric projects, 60-61, 185
Maritime Power Grid, 699
Passamaquoddy tidal power development, 25, 59
West Kootenay Power Co., 679, 683

Immigrants
Contribution to Canadian culture, 322
Participation in public life and enterprise, 110-12

Immigration and Labour Committee
Members, 44

Income tax
Appeal of assessment, expenses re, 582, 597-98
Appeals covering several years, 582
Brother or sister, deduction for, 590
Canadian ownership of shares of U.S. controlled corporations, 593-7, 600-1
Designated areas, 584-6, 599, 600
Dividends, 584, 595
Equalization payments, 605
Gifts, 591
Letter of intent, 599

Income tax—Concluded
Manufacturing or processing business, 585
Ministerial discretion, 585-6
Nonresident shareholders, 583, 584, 593-7
Partnership interest, 581
Pension plan contributions, 590-1
Provincial responsibility in taxation, 601-3, 605
Research expenditures, 582-3
Superannuation or pension benefit, 581-2
Eastern Abbatoir case, 581
Tuition fees, 591
Unpaid accounts, 591-2
Withholding tax, 583-4
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Crerar, T. A., 600-3
Croll, David A., 600, 605
Flynn, Jacques, 603-5
Grosart, Allister, 605
Hayden, Salter A., 581-6, 590-7, 604, 637
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 597-600

Income Tax bill C-91. 1r, 520; 2r, 581-6; 590-605; ref to com, 605; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt-3r, 637; r.a., 766

Income tax conventions
Canada-Denmark Convention, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459
Canada Finland Convention, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459
Canada Japan Convention, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459
Canada-Netherlands Convention, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459
Exchange of information, 1390
Permanent establishment, 1390
Personal services, remuneration for, 1390
Withholding tax, 1389, 1390, 1391
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 1445-8
Hayden, Salter A., 581-6, 590-7, 604, 637
Hugessen, A. K., 1392
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1391-2

Income Tax Convention bill C-146. 1r, 1352; 2r, 1389-92, 1445-8; 3r, 1450; r.a., 1459

India
Estimates for loan to, 779
Nehru, Jawaharlal, Prime Minister, the late, 587

Indians, 912-13
Blood Tribe, visit of delegation to Ottawa, 22
Liquor laws, 912
Mother of the Year, Mrs. M. M. Gottfriedsen, 342

Industry
Alberta, oil, 601
Atlantic provinces, 154, 183, 603
British Columbia, natural resources, 602

Industry—Concluded
Japanese automobile industry in Nova Scotia, 1447
Manitoba, nickel, 603
New Brunswick, forestry, 185
New Brunswick Industrial Council, 1362
Prairies, 603
Saskatchewan, potash, 603

Inflation, 1061-2

Inman, Hon. F. Elsie
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 168-73
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1010, 1014-15
Horner, Hon. R. B., the late, 1168
Prince Edward Island, 169-73, 445-7
Causeway and tunnel, 173
Centennial, 445-6
Confederation and, 168-70, 445-7
Confederation Memorial Building, opening of, 446
Celebration, 446-7
Deep sea fishing, 447
Tourist Association, 445
Transportation problems, 171-3
Tourist traffic, 170-1, 445-7

Inquiries
Armed forces, expenditures for special operations since World War II, Hon. Mr. White, 573-5
Canada Council president, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079-80
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, pronunciation of "Noel" by French announcers, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079, 1172-3
Capital punishment, commutation of death sentence, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1080, 1173
Employment of women, Hon. Mrs. Fergusson, 1172, answers tabled, 1169
Flag, national
Hon. Mr. Hnatyshyn, 588
Hon. M. Grattan O'Leary, 452-3
Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1036
High Commissioners to Canada, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 253, 260
Monuments on Parliament Hill, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1073
Parliamentary rules and orders, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 230
Penal reform, Archambault and Fauteux reports, Hon. Mr. Croll, 88-94, 314, 697, 787-97
Printing Bureau, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 252-3, 508-9, 522
Riviere du Loup, passenger service, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1078-9, 1103-4, 1172
Scotian, advertising and publicity, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1078, 1172
Translators and interpreters, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 253, 413-14, 522-3, 676

Insurance
Basket clause, 1349, 1409
Borrowing ceiling of trust and loan companies, 1351, 1367
Canadian ownership and control, 1348, 1351, 1365-7, 1408-9
Investment powers, 1348, 1349, 1365, 1409-10
Mortgage loans, 1366
Real estate, 1349-50, 1366
Subsidiary companies, 1350, 1367
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Bouffard, Paul H., 1388-9
Hayden, Salter A., 1382-8, 1389
Lang, Daniel A., 1348-52
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 1352, 1408-10
Walker, David J., 1388
White, George S., 1365-7

Insurance Department bill C-123. 1r, 1348; 2r, 1348-52, 1365-7, 1381-9, 1408-10; ref to com, 1410; authority to print com proceedings, 1437; rep of com 3r, 1449; r.a., 1459

Interest
Banks, 129
Consumer credit, 100, 114-15, 182, 234, 257, 351, 539, 718
Farm loans, 754, 755, 756, 758-9, 761
Farm Machinery loans, 1005, 1009, 1019

Internal Economy and Contingent Accounts Committee
Members, 43
Report
Moving and travelling expenses of Senators, 229-30, 237-8

International Labour Organization, 643-4, 656, 657, 742
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 656-60, 670-2, 740-3

International organizations, privileges and immunities, 475, 641-6, 675, 697

International peace-keeping force
Cyprus, 28, 147-8, 157-62, 374-5, 573-5, 1155
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 160-1
Connolly, John J., 147, 157-60, 161, 162
Gladstone, James, 162
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 161-2
Pouliot, Jean-François, 161

Interparliamentary Group, Canada and United States
Seventh meeting held at Washington and Cape Kennedy, 317, 325-34
Canada and the Organization of American States, 328
Canadian delegation, 325, 327

Interparliamentary Group, Canada and United States—Concluded
Seventh meeting held at Washington and Cape Kennedy—Concluded
Committee reports, 327-32
Defence and foreign policy, 327-9
Economic matters, 329-32
Extract from Congressional Record re visit to Senate by Members of Canadian Parliament, 332-4
Free World Trade, 329-30
Interest Equalization Tax, 331
Labour problems on the Great Lakes, 331
Law of the sea, 330
Panama, 327-8
Passamaquoddy Power Project, 331
Roads to Alaska, 332
Sharing of North American Defence and NATO Alliance, 328-9
Trade with communist countries, 330

Interprovincial Pipe Line Company bill S-42.
Hon. Mr. Molson. 1r, 1008; 2r, 1121-3; ref to com, 1123; rep of com without amdt-3r, 1169

Irvine, Hon. Olive L.
External relations, 459-62
Flag, Canadian, 1196-8
Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, chancellor of Waterloo Lutheran University, 1119-20
Paterson, Hon. Norman McL., chancellor of Lakehead University, 1119-20
United Nations, 459-62
Charter, 459, 461
Church centre, 462
Committees, 459
New nations, 461
Nuclear testing, treaty on banning of, 461
Pledging conference, 461-2
President, 461
Purposes and principles of, 459
Technical assistance programs, Canada's contribution, 462
Youth Allowance bill C-108, 825-6
Students of 18 years and over, 826

Isnor, Hon. Gordon B.
Appropriation bills
No. 8, 1964 C-116, 943-5
No. 9, 1964 C-135, 1060
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1159
Columbia to Fraser River diversion, energy to private companies, 22
New Scotland (Evangeline) Savings and Mortgage Company bill S-15, 317, 352
Nova Scotia Savings and Loan Company bill S-34, 655, 716-17
Directors, 717

Isnor, Hon. Gordon B.—Concluded
St. Lawrence Seaway
Estimates for expenditures, 1060, 1159
Winter navigation, 1060
Shipping bill S-7, 137, 145
Toll charges, 1060
Tourist traffic, motion that committee inquire into activities of various agencies concerned with promotion of tourist travel, 182-3, 230, 336-8, 546
Canadian Travel Bureau, 337
Dolan, D. Leo, first chairman, 337
Staff and budget, 338
Development in tourist facilities, 338
Revenue from, 337, 338

Jamaica, 1437-42, 1450-9
Alcan investments, 1439-40
Bauxite industry, 1439-40
Canada's contribution to, 1440-1, 1453-5
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association conference at Kingston, 1437-42, 1453-9
Canadian delegation, 1441, 1450
Educational problems, 1440
Harvesting methods, 1438
Housing, 1439
Parliament, 1456-7, 1458
Unemployment, 1438-9
Wages, 1439

Japan
Automobiles to be made in Nova Scotia, 1447
Fishing vessels in Canadian waters, 349, 368-9, 370, 373-4, 387
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459
Markets for gas, 1030
Pulp and paper interests on west coast, 1390
Trade with Canada, 1446-8
Deficit, 1446

Jodoin, Hon. Mariana B.
Birthday felicitations, 1135, 1136
Tourist traffic, 393-4
Quebec historic centres, 393-4
Montreal, 393-4

Joint Committees, Special
See Consumer Credit, Pension Plan

Joint Committees, Standing
See Library of Parliament, Printing of Parliament, Restaurant of Parliament

Judges
(Officer of the Senate)
Divorce commissioner, 523-31, 560-9, 588, 646-9, 660-4
Appointment as judge of Exchequer Court, 523-31, 560-9, 661
Jurisdiction in divorce proceedings, 524, 526-31, 560-3, 564-5, 646, 661-2
Leave of absence to perform duties of officer of Senate, 524-5, 566, 661
Precedents in appointments of judges, 526, 527, 662
Provincial consultation, 528-30
Quebec attitude, 661
Salary and pension, 525-6, 529, 565
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Choquette, Lionel, 526, 527, 530, 560-3, 649, 661
Connolly, John J., 646-7
Farris, J. W. de B., 527, 530
Flynn, Jacques, 647-8
Gershaw, F. W., 530
Grosart, Allister, 528, 529-30
Horner, R. B., 663, 664
Méthot, Léon, 566-9
Pouliot, Jean-François, 563-6
Power, C. G., 527, 529, 530-1
Roebuck, Arthur W., 523-7, 528, 563, 648-9, 660-4
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 648-9
Walker, David J., 525, 527-8

Judges
(Salaries for additional judges)
Backlog of cases, 1285-8
Provincial appointments, 1284
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Choquette, Lionel, 1284-7
Connolly, John J., 1284, 1288
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1287-8

Judges bill C-96 (Officer of the Senate). 1r, 475; 2r, 523-31, 560-9, 588, 646-9, 660-4; 3r, 670; r.a., 766

Judges bill C-112 (Salaries for additional judges). 1r, 1284; 2r, 1284-8; 3r, 1288; r.a., 1293

Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court
Royal assent, 947, 982

Justice Department, Deputy Minister, 317, 318, 479

Juvenile delinquency
Archambault report, recommendations re juveniles, 91
Television programs of violence, 99

Kennedy, John F., President of the United States, the late
Condemnation of U.S.S.R. imperialistic practices, 549, 550

Kinley, Hon. John J.
Flag, Canadian, 1211-14
Merchant Seamen Compensation bill C-131, 1373, 1374
St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5, 22, 65-67, 624
Personnel of General Council, 66
Philanthropy of Order, 65
Preamble and clauses of bill, 65-66
Refund of fees, 624
Shipping bill S-7, 149-53
British Commonwealth Merchant Shipping Agreement, 150
British ships registering in Canada, 150
Certificated personnel, 149, 151-2
Engineers, 152
Long-service seamen, 149, 151-2
Coasting trade, 149-50, 153
Newfoundland excluded from provisions, 150
Limited liability, 153
Newfoundland College for seamen, 152
Pollution of the sea by oil, 149
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 373-9
Conventions and treaties:
Fishing and conservation of living resources of the high seas, 377
Reciprocity Treaty (1911), 376
Territorial Sea and Contiguous Zones, 376
Washington Treaty (1871), 376
Historic rights, 374-6
France, 375
United States, 375
Japanese fishing on Pacific coast, 373-4
Shore fishermen, 374
Time magazine, article on "Fishing", re action of U.S., 377-8

Labour
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35, 668, 729-32, 752, 764-5, 766
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 656-60, 670-2, 740-3
Employment of women, discrimination in, inquiry, Hon. Mrs. Ferguson, 1169, 1172
Employment statistics, 19
Federal labour code, 20
International Labour Organization, 643-4, 656, 657, 742
Problems on the Great Lakes, 331
Ten Hours Act (1847), 18

Labour (Standards) Code
Administration of provisions, 1308
Air crews, 1419-20
Ammunition depots, 1328
Atlantic provinces, 1304
Canadian Labour Congress brief, 1417-18
CNR employees, 1326

Labour (Standards) Code—Concluded
Deferment clause, 1307, 1321
Employees under provincial or federal jurisdiction, non-coverage, 1315
Employees under 17 years of age, 1327, 1329
Exemptions, 1400, 1416
Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, 1304, 1327, 1328
Federal-provincial conferences, 1320, 1329
Federal undertakings, 1304, 1305
Fishermen, 1307
Grain elevator operators, 1322-4, 1400, 1406-8, 1425
Hours of Labour Act, 1319
Hours of work, 1305, 1306-7, 1315, 1318, 1423-4
Industrial Standards Act of Ontario, 1319
Inquiries Act, 1306, 1425
Minimum wage, 1305, 1307, 1315
National parks, 1326, 1328
Northwest Territories and Yukon, 1315, 1328-9
Nova Scotia wage revision, 1306, 1307, 1327
Overtime, 1305, 1307, 1424
Railway Association brief, 1420-1
St. Lawrence Shipowners Association telegram, 1418-19
Shipping industry, 1403
Stevedores, 1305, 1307, 1326, 1421-2
Trucking, 1316-17, 1319-20, 1321-2, 1405, 1424-6
United Grain Growers, Ltd., 1322-3
Vacations and other holidays, 1307-8, 1315-16
Winnipeg Free Press comment, 1416-17
Witnesses appearing in committee, 1401

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Burchill, G. Percival, 1328
Choquette, Lionel, 1315-18
Connolly, John J., 1422-7, 1433
Croll, David A., 1324-6
Flynn, Jacques, 1398-1401
Macdonald, John, 1326-8
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 1415-22, 1423, 1426, 1428-31
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1318-20, 1402-3, 1404
Smith, Donald, 1303-8, 1328-30
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 1320-4, 1329, 1401-8, 1426, 1431-2, 1433

Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126. 1r, 1303; 2r, 1303-8, 1314-30; ref to com, 1330; authority to print com proceedings, 1352; rep of com with amdt, 1377; m for 3r, 1398; m in amdt, 1398-1408, 1415-27, neg, 1427; 3r, 1434; r.a., 1459

Labrador, 355-6
Fisheries, 355
Iron Ore Company of Canada, 356
Tourist traffic, 355-6

Lakehead University
Chancellor, Hon. Norman McL. Paterson, 1119-20

Lambert, Hon. Norman P.
Appropriation bill No. 9, 1964 C-135, 1060
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 612-14
Colonial inhibitions in western Canada, 612-13
Provincial rights, 614
Brethren in Christ Church bill S-11, 163, 214-15, 692
Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) bill C-95, 533
Canadian Wheat Board, 533
Discrimination in Employment and Occupation, Convention on, 659
Provincial legislation to signify approval of, 659
External Affairs Department, estimates, 420
External relations, 418-21
External Relations Committee, 419-20
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1020
Flag, Canadian, 1217-19
GATT, 420-1
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 350
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1324
Organization of American States, 420
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 711-14, 727-9
Capital area development, 712
Directors of company, 713
Greber Plan, 712, 728
Memorandum of Understanding, 712-13
Shares of capital stock, 713
Station relocation, 713, 727
Costs, 728
Seicho-No-Ie bill S-23, 637
Shipping bill S-7, 137, 138, 139
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 407
Tourist traffic, 535
United Nations, Canada's involvement with, 420

Lang, Hon. Daniel A.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 230-3
Combines Investigation bill C-141, 1288-90, 1291
Agreement between fishermen and fish-packing companies, 1288-9
Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, inquiry, 1288-9
Strike of fishermen, 1289-90
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35, 729-31, 732
Annual statistical report, publication by DBS, 731
Duplication of returns, 730
Information as to shareholders, 730
Privileged information, 730, 732

Lang, Hon. Daniel A.—Concluded
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 744-6
Common law right of appeal, 744, 745
Federal responsibility of habeas corpus in criminal matters, 744-5
Shane case, 745
Storgoff case, 744
Dominion Life Assurance Company bill S-14, 217-18, 237
Estate Tax bill C-94, 503-5
Abatement provision, 504-5
Community property, disposition of, 504
Gift to charitable organization or other donee, 504
Insurance and annuities, 504
Penalty provisions, 505
Property
Inclusion in aggregate net value, 503-4
Passing to foreign domiciliary, 505
Transfer without consent of minister, 505
Insurance Department bill C-123, 1348-52
Basket clause, 1349
Borrowing ceiling of trust and loan companies, 1351
Canadian ownership and control, 1348, 1351
Investment powers, 1348, 1349
Real estate, 1349-50
Subsidiary companies, 1350
Introduction to Senate, 1
National unity, threat by sectional interests, 233
Senate, 232-3
Constitutional history, 232-3
Role in modern government, 232
Senators, public image of, 232
Toronto, 231
Immigrants and their culture, 231

Laurentide Bank of Canada
Assets, 321
Authorized capital, 321, 323
Directors, 321, 322-3
Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., 321
Canadian ownership, 321-2
Porter Commission on Banking and Finance, 464, 468, 469, 470
Subsidiary to Power Corporation, 322, 463
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Blois, Fred M., 324, 408-9, 462-5
Cameron, Donald, 217, 320-4, 409, 468-9
Croll, David A., 468
Dessureault, J. M., 468
McLean, A. Neil, 465-8, 470
Molson, Hartland de M., 469-70
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 465

Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13. Hon. Mr. Cameron. 1r, 217; 2r, 320-4, 408-9, 462-70; ref to com, 470; authority to print com proceedings, 587-8; rep of com, 923; 3r, 927

Law of the sea, 330, 349, 365, 367, 386-7, 381, 382, 383, 384, 390-2

Law Reform Commission, 858

Law students
Constitutional and civil law, teaching of, 479, 871-2, 874-5
Remarks of Batonnier John O'Brien, 876-7
Reply of law professors, 877
Laval University, article by Jean-Marie Tremblay, 881-3

Leader of the Government in the Senate
See Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C.

Leader of the Opposition in the Senate
See Brooks, Hon. A. J., P.C.

Leonard, Hon. T. D'Arcy
Appropriation bill No. 9, 1964, C-135, 1053-5, 1058, 1062-4
Special appropriations, 1053-4
Undertaking that passage of bill will not preclude further discussion, 1053
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1195
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 36, 80-82, 130-1, 164, 918-19, 920-1
Bank Act, requirements of, 80-81, 82
Capital stock, 81
Charter, date of granting, 131
Investors, 82
Provisional directors, 81
Shares, alleged sale before incorporation of bank, 164
Voting Interest, 919-21
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 8-9
Casualty Company of Canada bill S-31, 623, 665
Companies bill S-22, 1078, 1091-7
Dominion of Canada General Insurance Company bill S-30, 623, 664-5
Economical Mutual Insurance Company bill S-48, 1175
Estimates
Borrowing authority, 1054-5
Coal subsidies, 1063
Dominion Coal Board, 1054, 1063
Finance Committee reports, 521-2, 1007, 1023-5, 1116-18, 1130-4, 1163
Authority to print, 521-2
Witnesses, 1024
Fisheries, 1054
Glassco Commission recommendations, 1024, 1116-17
Common services, 1117-18

Leonard, Hon. T. D'Arcy—Concluded
Estimates—Concluded
Glassco Commission recommendations—Concluded
Decentralization of financial responsibility, 1117
Departmental estimates on basis of programs and activities, 1117
Long-term plans, 1117
Reduction of votes, 1116
Revenues and costs, relationship of, 1118
Review of expenditures, 1117
Ice control, St. Lawrence River, 1054, 1063
Labour Department, 1063-4
Legislation, the Senate, 1054, 1062-3
Macdonald-Cartier Bridge, 1054
McKay pier, 1054
Mines and Technical Surveys, 1063
Post Office, 1054
Procedure, form and preparation of estimates, 1115-16
Public debt, interest on, 1058, 1063, 1064
Public Works, 1054
General Accident Assurance Company of Canada bill S-8, 70, 100-1, 182
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 190-1, 192, 193, 197
Amdts, notification of, 191, 197
By-law to change status of commission, 192, 193
Harbours excluded or affected by bill, 191, 192
Operational profits, 191
Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd. bill S-41, 948, 1028-31
Capital stock, 1030
Construction costs, 1030
Gas markets in Japan, 1031
Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation bill S-9, 70, 101
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 8-9
Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36, 859
World Mortgage Corporation bill S-32, 637, 665-7

Les Scouts Catholiques du Canada bill S-19. Hon. Mr. Pouliot. 1r, 380; stands, 451; withdrawn, 499

Liability of owners of seagoing ships, international convention, 132
Limitation of liability, 136, 138, 153
Priorities in distribution of limitation fund, 135-6

Library of Parliament, Joint Committee
Librarian's report, tabled, 11
Members
Commons, 298
Senate, 43; message to Commons, 84

Library of Parliament, Joint Committee—Concluded
Reports
Salary rates of clerical classes, 1026, 1032, 1036
Salary rates of professional classes, 521, 538, 546, 1278, 1284, 1294

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate
Coal Production Assistance bill C-147, 1358-60
Coal production, statistics, 1359
Dominion Coal Company, 1359
Ontario Hydro purchases, 1359
Combines Investigation bill C-141 (Agreement with B.C. fishermen), 1290-1
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 746-7
Appeal by Crown, 746
Appeal by prisoner, 746
Customs Tariff bill C-92, 456-8
Oilfield equipment, 457-8
Flag, Canadian, 1270-2, 1277
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1326-8
CNR employees, 1326
Employees under 17 years of age, 1327
Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, 1327
National parks, 1328
Nova Scotia, 1327
Stevedores, 1326
National Defence bill C-90, 819

Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C.
Blue Water Bridge Authority bill S-4, 223-5
Authority, establishment of, 224
Bonds, issue of, 224-5
Control of international structures, 224
Costs of bridge, 223
Reciprocal legislation with United States, 224, 225
Tolls, 224, 225
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 9-10
Chancellor of Waterloo Lutheran University, 1066
Doctor of Laws, Waterloo Lutheran University, 606
Economical Mutual Insurance Company bill S-48, 1160
Expression of thanks for references made to tenure as Leader of Government in Senate, 70-71
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 228
Interprovincial Pipe Line Company bill S-42, 1123
Jodoin, Hon. Mariana B., birthday felicitations, 1135
Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François, 40th anniversary in Parliament, 1135
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 9-10

Manitoba
Crop insurance, 1021
History of names, 432
International Nickel investments, 603
Mining, lack of Canadian investments, 601
National museum, 432
Tourist industry, 432-3

Maritimes
See Atlantic provinces and names of individual provinces

Marriage and divorce
Bar of Province of Quebec, correspondence with Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 873-5
Civil Code of Quebec, 837, 838, 839, 870, 871-2
Conger vs Kennedy, 839, 870
Constitutional validity of bill S-16, 869-78
Contract of marriage, and contract made after marriage, 838-40, 841
Droit Fabricien, by Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 837
Jurisdiction in marriage, 626-9, 836-41, 870-2
B.N.A. Act, 626-7, 628
Property and civil rights, 627, 628, 629, 836-41, 873, 874-5
Quebec, 626, 627, 628, 629, 870, 871, 874-5
Married women's rights, 318, 478, 480, 837, 838-9, 874-5
Northwest Territories, 318, 871
Privy Council judgment, 870-1
Rinfret, Right Hon. Chief Justice, opinion re Civil Code of Quebec, 872
Rural Bar Association of Quebec, letter to Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 873
See also Divorce

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Bouffard, Paul H., 478
Dupuis, Vincent, 837-9
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 868-9
Flynn, Jacques, 477, 503, 626-9, 637, 641
Fournier, Sarto, 478
Gouin, L. M., 837-9
Grosart, Allister, 478
Monette, Gustave, 839-41
Pouliot, Jean-François, 417-18, 476-7, 478-80, 499-503, 641, 868-79

Marriage and Divorce bill S-16. Hon. Mr. Pouliot. 1r, 317-18; 2r, stands, 353, 409, 654, 786, 881-3, 924, 1038, 1311-12
Motion to refer bill to Supreme Court of Canada, 476-80, 499-503, 626-9, 637, 868-78; recorded vote 878-9; motion carried, 879
Question of privilege, 1038, 1461-2, 1482

Married women, rights of, 318, 478, 480, 837-9
Northwest Territories, 318

Martland, Hon. Ronald, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
Royal assent, 807-8

McCutcheon, Hon. M. Wallace, P.C.
Actuaries bill S-45, 1037, 1044-9
Definition and qualifications of an actuary, 1045, 1046-7
Terms of bill, 1048
U.S. societies, 1045
Vice-president, Mr. K. R. MacGregor, 1046
Appropriation bills
No. 1, 1964 C-84, 239, 240-1
No. 4, 1964 C-89, 308-9
No. 6, 1964 C-105, 781-2
No. 7, 1964 C-109, 822, 823
No. 8, 1964 C-116, 941-4
No. 2, 1965 C-151, 1522
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 691
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 108-9, 913-17, 918, 920, 922, 926
Banking and Finance, Royal Commission, 109
Capital structure, 917, 922
Shares, alleged sale before incorporation of bank, 164-5
Voting interest, 914-17, 922
Budget deficit, 942-3
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, capital expenditures, 240, 943
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-137, 1414
Columbia River Treaty, loan investment, 822-3
Consumer Credit, joint committee, counsel fees, 781-2, 805
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35, 732
Foreign investments in Canada, 732
Privileged information, 732
Estate Tax bill C-94, 509-11
Provincial responsibility, 509-10, 511
Revenue and costs of administration of act, 510
Widows, pensions and annuities to, 509-10
Estimates, 240-1, 308-9, 942-3
C.B.C., loan and investment, 240
Estimates, dollar items, 1522
Export Credits Insurance bill C-101, 802-3
Berne Convention, 803
Extension of credit terms, 803
Financial statistics of corporation, 802
Federal-provincial conferences, 598
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill 1964 C-111, 953, 954, 966-70
Abatement provisions, 966-7, 968
Conditional grants, 969
Equalization formula, 967
Federal-provincial-municipal debt and responsibilities, 969-70
Jurisdiction of provinces, 968-9
Youth allowances, 969
Flag, Canadian, 1170, 1208-10
Government spending, 941-4
Income Tax bill C-91, 597-600
Appeal of assessment, expenses re, 597-8

McCutcheon, Hon. M. Wallace, P.C.—Concluded
Income Tax bill C-91—Concluded
Designated areas, 599
Letter of intent, 599
Shares owned or controlled in Canada, 600
Insurance Department bill C-123, 1352, 1408-10
Basket clause, 1409
Canadian ownership and control, 1408-9
Investment provisions, 1409-10
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1415-22, 1423, 1426, 1428-31
Air crews, 1419-20
Canadian Labour Congress brief, 1417-18
CNR brief, 1430
Dominion Marine Assoc., 1403-4
Exemption of certain employees, 1415-22, 1423, 1426, 1428-31
Railway Association brief, 1420-1
St. Lawrence Shipowners Assoc. telegram, 1418-19
Stevedores, 1421-2
Winnipeg Free Press comment, 1416-17
National Defence, pension and other benefits, 822
Pension Plan bill C-136, 598-9, 1470-8, 1483-8
Actuarial report estimates, 1476-7
Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association suggestions, 1487
Canadian Tax Journal, article by Prof. W. C. Hood, 1473, 1475
Escalation, 1483-4
Financing of plan, 1472-4
Funding features, 1473-6
Integration of other plans, 1484
Investment of accumulated funds, 1471, 1473
Nova Scotia Government brief, 1486
Old Age Security amendment, 1487
Portability, 1475-6
Quebec, 598-9
R.C.M.P. and Armed Forces, 1484
Statistics on benefits, 1485-6
U.S. social security, 1474, 1477-8, 1483
Pension Plan, Joint Committee, 1068-9
Rule No. 23 re two days' notice of motion, 1170
St. Patrick's Day, 1437
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 346, 347, 401-3, 407
Press comment, 346

McGrand, Hon. Fred A.
Youth Allowances bill C-108, 824-5
Child-caring agencies, 825
Mental and physical disability, 824
Quebec, 824-5
Student allowances, 824

McLean, Hon. A. Neil
Beaverbrook, Lord, the late, 675
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 465-8, 470
Bank failures, 465
Salaries of employees, 467
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26, 558-60
Roosevelt, Franklin D., the late, 558-60

Medical research, 40-41
Mental diseases, 41
Crime and, 41
M'Naghten rules, 41

Medicine, Royal Society of
Cawthorne, Terence, President, visitor to Senate, 698
Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A., Honorary Fellowship, 554

Meota Pipe Lines Ltd., bill S-39. Hon. John A. Robertson, 1r, 831; 2r, 867-8; ref to com, 868; rep of com without amdt-3r, 930; r.a., 1002

Merchant seamen
Eligibility of claims, 1376
Funeral expenses, 1372, 1376
Pensions
Disability, 1361
Widows and children, 1361
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Connolly, John J., 1373, 1375
Hollett, Malcolm, 1371-5
Kinley, John J., 1373, 1374
Rattenbury, Nelson, 1360-1, 1373, 1375-6

Merchant Seamen Compensation bill C-131. 1r, 1282; 2r, 1360-1, 1371-6; 3r, 1381; r.a., 1459

Méthot, Hon. Léon
Flag, Canadian, 1253-5
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40, 851
Judges bill C-96, 566-9
Civil Code of Quebec, 564
Marriage and Divorce, excerpt from B.N.A. Act on, 568
Separation as to property, 567-8

Minerals
Alberta oil, 601
Coal
Coal Production Assistance bill C-147, 1302, 1357-60
Dominion Coal Board, 1054, 1063
Dominion Coal Company, 1359
Dosco Corporation, Nova Scotia, 1358
Marketing, 1358
Ontario Hydro purchases, 1359
Production statistics, 1359
Subventions, 1059, 1063

Minerals—Concluded
Labrador, Iron Ore Company of Canada, 356
New Brunswick, 25, 184, 185
Oil refinery, 184
Base metal deposits, 25, 185
Nickel, Manitoba, 603
Potash, Saskatchewan, 603

Ministers, Parliamentary Secretaries, iii-iv

Miscellaneous Private Bills Committee
Members, 43, 1480
Reports
Congregation of the Marist Sisters bill S-38. Rep of com without amdt, 823
Seicho-No-Ie bill S-23. Rep of com without amdt, 637

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M.
Brada Pipe Lines Limited, refund of fees, 1038
Estimates, 1160-2
Blue Book, expenditure of publication, 1161-2
Glassco Commission recommendations, 1162
Methods of estimation of net expenditures, 1161
Recording of small items, 1161
Surplus, disposal of, 1161
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 991-2
Farm population, decline in, 991
Machinery, Canadian-made, 992
Quebec farm loan system, 992
Interprovincial Pipe Line Company bill S-42, 1008, 1121-3
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 469, 470
Montreal Board of Trade bill S-18, 350, 411-12
National Defence bill C-90, 819-20

Monette, Hon. Gustave
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 839-41
Contract of marriage, and contracts made after marriage, 838-40, 841
Marriage, federal jurisdiction, 839-40
Property and civil rights, provincial jurisdiction, 839-41

Montreal Board of Trade bill S-18. Hon. Mr. Molson. 1r, 350; 2r, 411-12; ref to com, 412; rep of com without amdt-3r, 508; r.a., 807

Monuments on Parliament Hill, 1073
Unveiling of, 1001

Mother of the Year, Mrs. Mildred Manuel Gottfriedsen, 342

Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd. bill S-41. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 948; 2r, 1028-31; ref to com, 1031; rep of com without amdts-3r, 1056; r.a., 1459

National Capital Commission, 712-13
Greber Plan, 712, 725, 728
Ottawa Terminal Railway, 711-14, 722-9
Memorandum of Understanding, 712-13

National Centennial, 29, 97, 174-6, 541-2
Centenary Council, 174-6

National Defence
Chief of Defence Staff, 809, 810, 812, 816
Defence Council, 810, 813
Defence policy, 811-12, 814
Esher report, Great Britain, 812, 816, 817
Expenditures, 809, 816, 817, 818
NATO, 812, 814
NORAD, 811, 814
Pension and other benefits, 821-2
Rehabilitation, 819
Veterans' preference in jobs, 819
White Paper on Defence, 810-11, 815-16
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 819
Brooks, A. J., 814-18, 819
Choquette, Lionel, 819
Connolly, John J., 809, 810-14, 815, 818-19, 820, 821
Macdonald, John M., 819
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 822
Molson, Hartland de M., 819-20

National Defence bill C-90. 1r, 809; 2r, 809-20; ref to com, 820; rep of com without amdt-authority to print com proceedings-3r, 834; r.a., 847

National Housing bill C-102. 1r, 693; 2r, 714-16, 718-22, 734-40; ref to com, 740; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 752; 3r, 764; r.a., 766
See also Housing

NATO
See North Atlantic Treaty Organization

Natural Resources Committee
Members, 44, 1480

Nehru, Jewaharlal, Prime Minister of India, the late, 587

Netherlands
Income Tax Convention bill C-146, 1352, 1389-92, 1445-8, 1450, 1459

New Brunswick
Base metal deposits, 25, 185
Beaverbrook scholarships, 903
Discrimination in employment and occupation, legislation on, 743
Industrial Council, 1362
Mactaquac hydroelectric power dam, 60-61, 185
Oil refinery, Saint John, 184
Passamaquoddy Bay, power potential, 25, 59

New Brunswick—Concluded
Roosevelt Campobello International Park, 25, 508, 557-60, 589-90, 606-7
Separatists, 61-63
Shipbuilding, 184-5
Tourist industry, 185, 343-5, 427-9
Advertising program, 343
Hospitality, 344-5
Magnetic Hill, 343
Tidal Bore of Petitcodiac River, 343
Transportation problems, 344
Reversing Falls, 343
See Atlantic provinces

Newfoundland
Assistance to Canadian Navy during war, 852
Bay D'Espoir, hydroelectric project, 850
Farm credit, borrowing and repayments, 756-7
Fisheries, 18, 355
Certificated personnel, 145-7, 152
College for seaman, 152
Depletion of industry, 148-9
Forestry Unit veterans, 1142-3, 1156-7
Government by Commission, 17
Grant from federal government, 959-60, 973-4
Historic sites, 355
Labrador, 355, 356
Iron Ore Company of Canada, 356
Natural resources, 17-18
Public debt, 1496
Royal Commission recommendation, 973
Tourist industry, 340, 354-7
Transportation problems, 355-6
East coast ferry, 356
Port aux Basques to St. John's, 356
William Carson, 355-6
See Atlantic provinces, Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40

New Scotland (Evangeline) Savings and Mortgage Company bill S-15. Hon. Mr. Isnor. 1r, 317; 2r-ref to com, 352; rep of com with amdts, 395-6; 3r, 423; r.a., 807

Newspapers
Criticisms of Senate, 73, 306
Headlining of subversive activities, 22, 23
Inadequacies in reporting, 263
See Press and periodcals

Normandy, Allied invasion, twentieth anniversary
Tribute to Le Régiment de la Chaudière and other regiments, 668-70

North Atlantic Treaty Organization
Defence policy of Canada, 33-34
Fifteenth anniversary, 287-9

North Atlantic Treaty Organization—Concluded
Peace-keeping activities, 434-7
Canadian participation, 434-5, 436-7
Financing of, 435-6
International Court of Justice, 435
Portugal, 436
Reform of, Globe and Mail article, 417
Sharing of North American Defence and NATO Alliance, 328-9

Northwest Territories
Student loans, 891
Women's rights, 318

Nova Scotia
Acadians, 540
Coal mining, 1357-60
Dosco Corporation, 1358
Marketing, 1358
Japanese automobile industry, 1447
New Scotland (Evangeline) Savings and Mortgage Company, 317, 352, 395-6, 423, 807
Tourist traffic, 540-2
Progress in tourist industry, 541
Tourist Advisory Council, 540
Travel Bureau, 540
See Atlantic provinces

Nova Scotia Savings and Loan Company bill S-34. Hon. Mr. Isnor. 1r, 655; 2r, 716-17; ref to com, 717; authority to print com proceedings, 752; rep of com without amdt, 753; 3r, 765; r.a., 928

Nuclear weapons, 28
Treaty on banning of nuclear testing, 416, 460

Officer of the Senate, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron, 930-1

Officers and Chiefs of branches of the Senate, xix

Oil and gas industry
Canadian-Montana Pipe Line, 1008, 1038-9
Exports to U.S., 1039
Interprovincial Pipe Line, 1008
Japanese markets, 1031
Meota Pipe Lines, 831, 867-8, 930, 1002
Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd., 948, 1028-31

Old age pensions and assistance, 19-20, 511, 576-7

O'Leary, Hon. Clement A.
Flag, Canadian, 1219-22

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan
Appropriation bills
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 275, 280, 289-92
No. 4, 1964 C-89, 303-4
No. 5, 1964 C-99, 577-80
No. 8, 1964 C-116, 945-6
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1149-53

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan—Continued
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1342-3
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 926-7
Bordeaux jail, 1356
Budget deficit, 578-9
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 1149-53
Advertising programs, costs and losses, 1151, 1152
Annual report, 1151-2
BBC and ITA regulations, 1149-50, 1151
Britain—An Official Handbook, excerpt from, 1149-50
Extravagances cited, 1149-53
Lack of government control, 1149
News correspondents, 1151
Offices and furnishings, 1152
Colonialism, 421
Cyprus, international peace-keeping force, Canadian participation, 161-2, 422, 578-9
Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) bill C-142, 1508-10
Estimates
Three readings of appropriation bills in one day, 275, 280, 289-92, 303-4, 945-6
External relations, 421-2
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 987
Small holdings, 987
Flag, Canadian, 1179-83, 1268-9, 1270, 1277
Motion that Government suspend action, 1269-70; neg, 1270
Senate consideration of, 452-3
Statement of Prime Minister, 999-1000
Flag, Commonwealth, Canadian, 1282-3
Foreign affairs, Canada's interest in, 578-9
Government spending, 578-80
External Affairs Department, 578
Government accommodation, 578
National pride, false conception of, 578-80
Provincial demands, 578
Public debt, interest on, 579
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 714, 722-4
Interprovincial Bridge, 722-3
Removal costs, 723
Station, relocation from centre of city, 722
Costs, 722, 723
Plans, construction, etc., payment and responsibility for, 723
Use of area by private enterprise, 722
Penitentiary bill C-145, 1356
Senate
Business, 265, 999-1000
Rules, adherence to, 254, 275, 280, 289-91, 945-6
Sittings on Good Friday, 241
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 407-8
Tourist traffic, 535
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 119-20

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan—Concluded
Unemployment Insurance Fund, 289-92
Bankruptcy of fund, 290
Fraudulent claims, 290
Gill report, 289-90
United Nations, 161-2, 422, 578-9
Obligations of member countries, 578-9

Opening of Parliament, 1-3
Senators, new, introduction, 1
Speech from the Throne, 1-3
See Address in reply

Orders and Customs Committee
Appointment, 12

Orders in Council, documents, reports, etc.
See Documents tabled

Organization of American States, 417, 420

Ottawa Terminal Railway
Capital area development, 712
Construction and acquisition of lands and buildings, 726-7
Costs, 722, 723, 726-7, 728
Directors of company, 713
Greber Plan, 712, 725, 728
Interprovincial Bridge, 722-3
Removal costs, 723
Memorandum of Understanding, 712-13
Ottawa background, 712, 724
Shares of capital stock, 713
Station relocation, 713, 722, 727-8
Costs, 722, 723, 728
Use of area by private enterprise, 722
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Crerar, T. A., 726-7, 729
Croll, David A., 724
Gershaw, F. W., 724-6
Lambert, Norman P., 711-14, 727-9
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 722-4
Reid, Thomas, 729

Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33. 1r, 655; 2r, 711-14, 722-9; ref to com, 729; authority to print com proceedings, 764; rep of com with amdt, 867; 3r, 880

Paintings in Senate Chamber
Origin of, letter from Curator of War Collections, 63-65
Historic and war memorial value, 201-3

Parliament
Opening of, 1-3
Prorogation of, 1522, 1523-5

Parliamentary Library
See Library of Parliament

Parliamentary Restaurant
See Restaurant of Parliament

Parliamentary rules and orders, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 230

Parliamentary Secretaries, iv

Paterson, Hon. Norman McL.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 63-64
Chancellor of Lakehead University, 1119-20
Senate Chamber, paintings, 63-64

Peace-keeping force
See International peace-keeping force

Pearson, Hon. Arthur M.
Agriculture, 1148-9
ARDA, 1148-9
Federal-provincial projects and farmers' co-operatives, 1149
Appropriation bill No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1148-9
Canada-Hungary Trade Agreement, 1380-1
Columbia River Treaty, 706-8
Montreal Port Council, seminar on water management, 707-8
Saskatchewan water needs, 707
Water supply and consumption, 706-8
U.S. bill S-1275 on water rights and priority, 706
Crop Insurance bill C-129, 1023
Hail insurance, Saskatchewan, 1023
Provincial insurance programs, 1023
Estimates, m for ref to Finance Committee, 513-14
Comparison 1958-60, 513-14
Labour Department, 514
Postage, 513
Press comment, 514
Telephone communications, 513-14
Travelling and removal, 513
Farm Credit bill C-100, 757-9
Agreements of sale, 758
Canada Year Book statistics on farming, 757
Capital of corporation, 757
Interest rates, 758-9
Loans to date, 757
Price of farm land, 757
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 988-9
Inadequate loans, 988-9
Machinery, 988-9
Provincial loans, 989
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1008-10
Cost-price squeeze, 1010
Death or financial loss of partner, 1010
Potential of co-operatives, 1009
Flag, national, 1189-90
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1299
Shipping bill S-7, 137-8
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1299

Penal reform
Archambault and Fauteux reports, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Croll, 88-94, 314, 697, 787-97

Penitentiaries
Bordeaux jail, 1356
Custody pending appeal, 1353-6
Authority for, 1355
Persons of unsound mind, 1354-5, 1356
Persons suffering from dangerous, contagious or infectious disease, 1354
Hospitals, 1355
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 1355-6
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 1356
Roebuck, Arthur W., 1353-5, 1356

Penitentiary bill C-145. 1r, 1302; 2r, 1353-7; 3r, 1362; r.a., 1459

Pension plan, 28, 76-80, 276, 588-9, 767-76, 1466-78, 1483-97, 1498, 1522
Actuarial report estimates, 1476-7
Canadian Tax Journal, article by Prof. W. C. Hood, 1473, 1475
Committee witnesses, 1490-1
Costs, 79, 598
Earnings, 1469, 1492, 1496-7
Escalation, 1483-4
Federal-provincial arrangements, 1469
Financing of plan, 1472-4
Funding features, 1473-6
Integration of other plans, 1484
Investment of accumulated funds, 1469, 1471, 1473
Newfoundland, 1496
Nova Scotia Government brief, 1486
Old Age Security, 1468, 1487
Portability, 1475-6
Press comment, 79, 276
Provincial powers, 768
Quebec, 79, 598-9
Premier's letter, 598-9
Survivor and disability benefits, 767-76, 1467
U.S. social security, 1474, 1477-8, 1483
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Boucher, William A., 1493-4
Connolly, John J., 1466-70, 1476, 1496-7
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 1488-93
Hollett, Malcolm, 1495-6
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 1470-8, 1483-8
Pouliot, Jean-François, 1494

Pension Plan bill C-136. 1r, 1466; 2r, 1466-78, 1483-97; ref to com, 1497; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt-3r, 1498; r.a., 1522

Pension Plan, Joint Special Committee
Commons' message proposing appointment, 1067
Members
Commons, 1078, 1135, 1169, 1302
Senate, 1067-9, 1098, 1277
Reports, 1102-3, 1232, 1311

20224—101½

Pensions, veterans, 1139-43, 1156-8
Benefit of doubt, 1141-2, 1158
Forestry Unit, Newfoundland, 1142-3, 1156-7
Hong Kong veterans, 1154
See also Veterans

Petitions
Divorce, 14, 94-95, 100
Extension of time for filing, 351, 798, 1008
Fees, refund of, 624, 1038
Meota Pipe Lines Ltd., 799

Phillips, Hon. Orville H.
Dentists bill S-44, 1052
Certification in specialized fields, 1052
Licences, 1052
Flag, Canadian, 1245-9
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 370-3
Baselines, Atlantic and Pacific coasts, 371, 372
Fisheries Council of Canada, recommendations of, 371
Frozen fish industry, lobby in New England for imposition of tariffs, 373
Historic rights, 371-2
Phasing out of fishing limits, 372
Treaty of London (1818), 372
Treaty of Utrecht (1713), 372
Uniformity of zones, 372
United Nations negotiations, 372
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 117-18, 121
Bilingual name, 118
Costs of changing name, 118
Motion for six months' hoist, 117-18
Withdrawn, 121

Pilotage
See Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40

Pollution of the sea by oil, international convention on the prevention of, 132, 144-5, 148-9
Conference in London (1962), 144
Discharging of oil 100 miles from shore, 135, 144
Oil loading terminals, facilities for, 145
Sea birds destroyed by oil, 144

Population statistics, 52, 1085

Porter Commission on Banking and Finance, 320, 323-4, 464, 468, 469, 470, 624, 625

Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François
Acts, publication of, 105, 995, 997
Appropriation bills
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 276-8
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1158-9
Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98, 625

Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François—Continued
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 615-18, 619, 1336-7
Alberta precedent in provincial banking, 616-17
Banking, incorporation of banks and the issue of paper money, 616-17
Bills of exchange and promissory notes, 617
B.N.A. Act, jurisdiction in money matters, 616-17
Currency and coinage, 616
Exclusive powers of Parliament, 616-17
Interest, 617
Political influence, 618
Savings banks, 617
Surplus of financial institutions, 616
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 114
Bar of Quebec, 50th anniversary of admission to, 353
Bills, public and private, senators' right to introduce, 317-18, 479, 883
Blais, Hon. Aristide, the late, 1072
Borden, Sir Robert, 437, 438
Canada Council president, inquiry, 1079-80, 1311
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
French announcers, pronunciation of "Noel", inquiry, 1079, 1158, 1172-3, 1195
Canadian National Railways
Montreal-Ottawa timetable, 1335
Riviere du Loup, passenger service, inquiry, 1078-9, 1103-4, 1158-9, 1172, 1175-6
Scotian, publicity and advertising, inquiry, 1078, 1172
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-137, 1413-14
Salaries and duties of officials, 1413-14
Capital punishment, commutation of death sentences, 1080, 1173
Citizenship, 253, 260, 276-8, 437-40
British nationality, degrees or differences, 253, 260
British subjects, 253, 260, 276-7
Born in Commonwealth but outside Canada, public rights, 277
Political status in Canada, 253, 260
Public rights in Canada, 260
Canadian citizens in the United Kingdom, public rights, 253
Citizenship Act, revision, 438, 439
Deprivation of, 440
High Commissioners to Canada, voting privileges, 141, 253, 260, 277, 318-19
Companies bill S-22 1104-5
Confederation Building, Charlottetown, 977-8, 1494
Dentists bill S-44, 1041, 1042
Dissolution and Annulment of Marriages bill S-29, 587, 785, 881

Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François—Continued
Divorce, 206-8, 209, 211, 213
Commissioner, status of, 13-14, 207-8, 209, 213, 799, 800
Costs, 14
Duplication of work by Commissioner and committee, 207
Exchequer Court jurisdiction, 208, 209
Investigators convicted of perjury, 14
Religious aspect, 207, 208
Reports, protests re, 206-8, 799, 800
Senate staff on loan to Commissioner, 208
Droit Fabricien, by Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 837
External relations, 437-40
Federal-Provincial Fiscal Revision bill 1964 C-111, 977-80
Conference to establish revenues and needs of provinces, 971, 972, 975, 977, 980
Educational grants, use and accounting of, 978, 979
Provincial taxing to meet provincial spending, 979
Quebec, 962, 968, 978, 979-80
Flag, Canadian, 439-40, 1001, 1190-3
Design, inquiry, 1036
Fortieth anniversary in Parliament, 1135-6
High Commissioners to Canada, inquiry, 141, 253, 260, 277, 318-19
House of Commons pre-Easter sittings, press comment, 276
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 299
International peace-keeping force, Canadian participation, 161
Judges bill C-96, 563-6, 588
Civil Code of Quebec, 564
Jurisdiction of Parliament in divorce matters, 564-5
Leave of absence to perform duties of officer of Senate, 566
Question re discussion on 3r, 588
Salary, 565
Justice Department, Deputy Minister
Comment on bill S-32 (1963), 317, 479, 883
Salary, 318
Laval University, law faculty, article by Jean-Marie Tremblay, 881-3
Law, constitutional and civil, teaching of, 479, 871-2, 874-5, 876-7
Remarks of Batonnier John O'Brien, 876-7
Reply of law professors, 877
Law Reform Commission, 878
Les Scouts Catholiques du Canada bill S-19, 380; withdrawn, 499
Marriage and divorce, 317-18, 868-79
Bar of the Province of Quebec, correspondence with, 873-5
Conger vs Kennedy, 870
Constitutional validity of bill S-16, 869-78
Jurisdiction in marriage, 870-2

Pouliot, Hon. Jean-François—Concluded
Marriage and divorce—Concluded
Married women, rights of, 318, 478, 480
Northwest Territories, 318, 870
Privy Council judgment, 870-1
Property and civil rights, 836-41, 873, 874-5
Rinfret, Right Hon. Chief Justice, opinion re Civil Code of Quebec, 872
Rural Bar Association of Quebec, letter from, 873
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 317-18, 2r stands, 353, 409, 641, 654, 786, 881-3, 924, 1038, 1311-12
Motion to refer bill to Supreme Court of Canada, 476-7, 478-80, 499-503, 868-79; recorded vote, 878-9; motion carried, 879
Question of privilege, 1038, 1461-2, 1482
Monuments on Parliament Hill, 1073
Unveiling by Queen, 1001
Newspaper reporting, inadequacies of, 263
O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, speech by, protest, 263-5
Pension Plan bill C-136, 1494
Printing Bureau, inquiry, 252-3, 508-9, 522
Property and civil rights, provincial jurisdiction, 836-41, 873, 874-5
Quebec Board of Trade bill S-28, 621, 622
Revised Statutes of Canada bill S-2, 101-5, 117, 126
Consolidated Statutes of Canada (1859), 102
Revised Statutes (1886), 103-4
Revision Commission, 105
Riviere du Loup, C.N.R. service, inquiry, 1078-9, 1103-4, 1158-9, 1172, 1175-6
Rules and Orders, inquiry, 141, 230
Scotian, publicity and advertising, inquiry, 1078, 1172
Secretary of State, deputy, Marcel Cadieux, 437
Senate
Business, 263-5
Rule re right of Senator to introduce bill, 317-18, 479, 883
Separatists in universities, 979
Statutes of Quebec, publication in Official Gazette, 880
Student Loans bill C-110, 910-11
Agnosticism among students, 910, 911
Overcrowding of universities, 910-11
Reform of fundamentals of education, 911
Use of loans, lack of information on, 911
Translation Bureau, terminological bulletins, motion for tabling in Senate, 267, 508-9; agreed to 676
Translators and interpreters, inquiry, 253, 522-3, 676
World government, propaganda for, 437-8

Power, Hon. C. G., P.C.
Actuaries bill S-45, 1047
Crerar, General H.D.G., the late, 1513
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-72, 1080-2, 1085-6, 1087, 1088-90
Appointment of Commissions, 1081, 1082, 1085-6
Commission hearings, 1081-2
Discrepancies in urban constituencies, 1081
Dual constituencies, 1082
Quebec commissions, 1085-6, 1088
Forty-seventh anniversary in Parliament, 1231-2
Judges bill C-96, 527, 529, 530-1
Jurisdiction in divorce procedure, 530-1
Precedents in similar appointments, 526, 527
Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation bill S-45, 1050

Prairie farm assistance, 276, 278, 1020, 1022-3, 1027-8

Press and periodicals
Albertan
National parks, 358
Britain—An Official Handbook, excerpt re regulations governing BBC and ITA, 1149-50
British North America Acts and Selected Statutes (1867-1962), Dr. P. M. Ollivier, 115-16
Calgary Herald
National parks, 359
Chronicle Herald
House of Commons pre-Easter sittings, 276
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill, 346-7
Droit Fabricien, by Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 837
Economic Security for the Aged in U.S. and Canada, by Prof. Robert M. Clark, 77
Edmonton Journal
Tourist traffic and revenue, 360
Family Herald
Farm machinery co-operatives, 1009
Financial Post
"Air Canada", 121
Globe and Mail
Banking legislation, 734
Bank of British Columbia, 611-12
Bank of Western Canada, alleged sale of shares, 163-5
Estate tax, 199
Students, postgraduate and undergraduate, 892
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zone bill, 346-7
Le Devoir
Law students, 877

Press and periodicals—Concluded
Le Droit
Commons debate on National Housing bill, alleging 'injustice of Ottawa toward Quebec', 739-40
Montreal Gazette
Bank charters, delay in granting of, 609
Law students, 876-7
Ottawa Citizen
Canadian delegation at UN, voting record, 552
Ottawa Journal
Trade deficit, 26
Performing Arts, comment on Centenary, 178
Royal Bank of Canada Monthly, comment on Centenary, 179
Smith, Herbert Arthur, Law and Custom of the Sea, 347-8
United States News and World Report
Tourism in Canada, 339
Vancouver Sun
Bank of British Columbia, political control, 484, 609
Winnipeg Free Press
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1416-17
Winnipeg Tribune
Pension Plan, 79

Prime Ministers' Commonwealth meeting, final communiqué, 862-6

Prince Edward Island
Causeway and tunnel possibilities, 173
Charlottetown Memorial Building, expenses for, 778
Confederation and, 168-70, 445-6
Confederation Memorial Building, opening of, 446
Deep sea fishing, 447
Tourist traffic, 170-1, 445-7
Transportation problems, 171-3
See Atlantic provinces

Printing Bureau, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 252-3, 508-9, 522

Printing of Parliament, Joint Committee
Members
Commons, 298, 363
Senate, 43; message to Commons, 84

Prisoners of war
Geneva Conventions, 457, 546-8, 554-7, 623, 637

Private bills, petitions
Extension of time for filing, 351, 798, 1008
Fees, refund of, 624, 1038
Meota Pipe Lines Ltd., 799
See Bills, private,
also individual titles of bills

Privileges and immunities
Abuse of privileges, 646
Bureau of Exhibitions, 643, 644-5
Economic co-operation and development, 643
Economic and Social Council, 642
Experts on missions for the U.N., 643
Food and Agricultural Organizations, 643-4
Immunities from law, dangers of, 644-5
International Labour Organization, 643-4
Specialized agencies, 642-3
UNESCO, 644
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Gouin, L. M., 641-4
Grosart, Allister, 644-6

Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) bill S-24. 1r, 475; 2r, 641-6; ref to com, 646; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 675; 3r, 697; r.a., 1459

Privilege, question of Bank of Western Canada, alleged sale of shares, Hon. Mr. Brooks, 163-4
Marriage and Divorce bill, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1038, 1461-2, 1482

Privy Council, iv

Pro forma bill
Railways bill S-1. 1r, 3

Property and civil rights, 488, 632-3, 692, 836-41, 873, 874-5
Citizenship 52-56, 253, 260, 437-40
Status of women, 649-54
Women's rights, 318, 478, 480

Property qualification of Senators, 1, 1067

Prorogation of Parliament, 1522-5
Speech from the Throne, 1523-5

Provincial affairs
See Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements

Publications
Acts, publication of, 105, 880, 995, 996-7
Printing Bureau, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 252-3, 508-9, 522
See Press and Periodicals

Public bills
See Bills, public

Public Buildings and Grounds Committee
Members, 44

Public Health and Welfare Committee
Members, 44

Quart, Hon. Josie D.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 173-9

Quart, Hon. Josie D.—Concluded
Canadian Centenary Council, 174-6
Conferences and meetings, 175-6, 177
Exchange visits of young people among provinces, 177-8
Performing Arts, comment, 178
Royal Bank of Canada monthly letter, 179
Suggestions for centennial, 177-8
Volunteer work, 174-5
Youth Parliament, 178
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, 1457-8
Confederation, 177
External relations, 649-54
Jamaican visitor to Canada, 1457-8
St. Patrick's Day, 1437
Status of Women, United Nations Commission on, 649-54
Agenda, 651
Discrimination against women in member countries, 650
Dissolution of marriage, 652
Human Rights Commission, 650
Marriage laws in Canada, excerpt from statement made at Buenos Aires conference, 652-3
Minimum age of marriage and consent to marriage, 651, 652
Nationality of married women, 653
Political rights, 653
Private law, 651-2
Women in family law, 653
Tourist traffic, 542-4
Quebec Winter Carnival, 542-4
"Bonhomme Carnaval", 542, 543, 544
Canadian Geographical Journal comment, 542

Quebec
Divorce court, 210
Educational facilities and accommodation, 245
Farm loans, 992
Federal government interference in provincial fields, 245, 962, 968, 979-80
Historic centres, 393-4
Montreal, 393-4
Loyalty of French Canadians, 244
Pension plan, reaction to, 28, 598-9
Premier's letter, 598-9
Quebec Winter Carnival, 542-4
Rights of, 244-5
Road-building, 975
Separatists, 20, 245; in universities, 979
Student loans, 899, 901, 906-7

Quebec Board of Trade bill S-28. Hon. Mr. Bouffard. 1r, 586; 2r, 621-2; ref to com, 622; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts, 696; 3r, 718; Commons amdts concurred in, 848; r.a., 928

Quebec savings banks
See Bank bill and Quebec Savings Banks bill C-98

Quebec Statutes, publishing of in Official Gazette, 880

Queen Elizabeth II
Addresses re
Amdt to B.N.A. Act, 767-8
Birth of a Prince, 123-5
Acknowledgment, 316
Visit to Canada, 1033-6
Acknowledgment, 1067

Question of privilege
See Privilege, question of Questions

See Inquiries

Railways
Grey Cup train, damage by football fans, 1144
Ottawa Terminal Railway, 655, 711-13, 722-9, 764
Prince Edward Island facilities, 171-3
Quebec facilities, 59
Riviere du Loup, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079, 1103-4, 1158-9, 1172, 1175-6
Scotian, publicity re, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079, 1172
Service and expenditures, 573
Subsidies, 572-3, 580
See also Canadian National Railways

Railways bill (pro forma) S-1. 1r, 3

Rattenbury, Hon. Nelson
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 183-5
Flag, Canadian, 1249-51
Introduction to Senate, 1
Merchant Seamen Compensation bill C-131, 1360-1, 1373, 1375-6
Eligibility of claims, 1376
Funeral expenses, 1376
New Brunswick, 183-5
Base metal deposits, 185
Lumbering mills, 184, 185
Mactaquac hydroelectric project, 185
Mining, 185
Saint John, 183-4
Oil refinery, 184
Rothesay Paper Company, 184
St. Lawrence Seaway, year-round navigation, 184
Shipbuilding, 184-5
Deep water vessels, inadequacy of, 184-5
Mortgage insurance, 184
Subsidy, 185
Tourist industry, 185

Red Cross, international committee, 547, 554-5

Reform of the Senate, 33, 60, 73

Reid, Hon. Thomas
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 634-5
Provincial control, 634-5
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 82
B.C. Electric Company, provincial government takeover, 634,705
Columbia River Treaty, 702-6, 707
Arrow Lakes, 634, 703-4
Changes from original treaty, inquiry, 706
Costs, 705
Diversion to Fraser River, inquiry, 706
Electricity costs, comparison, 705
Flood control, 704
Great Lakes, threat re diversion to Mississippi and Gulf of Mexico, 703
Libby dam, 704
Peace River project, 705
Placing of treaty before UN, inquiry, 706
Salmon fisheries, effect of dams on, 703
Treaty re Oregon Boundary (1846), 702-3
U.S. benefits, 705
Farm Credit bill C-100, 760
Beekeepers, 760
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 191, 192, 194-5
New Westminster, 191, 195
Investments by City of Westminster, 195
Name, suggested change, 195
Howe, Right Hon. C. D., intervention in plan for dam at Arrow Lakes, 703-4
Kaiser Aluminum Company, 634, 703-4
Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd. bill S-41, 1031
Shares held by Japanese, inquiry, 1031
National Housing bill C-102, 715
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33, 729
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 366-70, 390
Fishery disputes in North Pacific, 368
Historic and treaty rights, 370
Japanese and Russian threats to fishing industry, 368-9, 370
Law of the Sea, 367
Navigable waters, definition, 366-7
Queen Charlotte Sound and Hecate Strait, 370
Tripartite Treaty, 369
Abstention, 369

Reports, etc.
See Documents tabled

Research
Atomic energy, 1515
Income tax deduction for, 582-3
National Research Council, 1515

Restaurant of Parliament, Joint Committee
Members
Senate, 43; message to Commons, 85

Revised Statutes, 101-5, 115-17
Clerk of the Parliaments, suggestion for appointment to Revision Commission, 105
Glassco Commission recommendations, 115
Revised Statutes (1886), 103-4
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Choquette, Lionel, 115-16
Flynn, Jacques, 116
Pouliot, Jean-François, 101-5, 117, 126
Roebuck, Arthur W., 103, 105
See also Statutes

Revised Statutes of Canada bill S-2. 1r, 12; 2r, 101-5, 115-17; 3r, 126; r.a., 1459

Rights and Freedoms
Citizenship, 52-56, 253, 260, 437-40
Married women, 318, 478, 480
Property and civil rights, 488, 632-3, 692
Women, status of, 649-54

Ritchie, Hon. Roland A., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
Royal assent, 766, 847

Riviere du Loup, train service, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1078-9, 1103, 1158-9, 1172, 1175-6

Robertson, Hon. John A.
(Deceased-February 19, 1965)
Discrimination in employment and occupation, convention on, 671-2
International Labour Organization, 672
Ontario legislation, 672
Flag, Canadian, 1223-5
Meota Pipe Lines Limited bill S-39, 831, 867-8
Tributes, 1295-1302

Roebuck, Hon. Arthur W.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 64-65
Appropriation bills
No. 6, 1964 C-105, 781
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1142
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 615, 632-3, 639-40, 641, 1331-2, 1343-5
Civil and property rights, 632-3, 641, 1344
Jurisdiction in money matters, 632-3
Shares held by province, 633, 1331-2
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 113-14, 921
Blue Water Bridge Authority bill S-4, 225
British North America Act, amdt re, 770, 772-3, 774
Jurisdiction in amending Constitution, 772-3
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 7
Combines Investigation bill C-141 (Agreement with B.C. fishermen), 1290, 1291, 1292
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, conference at Kingston, Jamaica, 1437-41

Roebuck, Hon. Arthur W.—Continued
Consumer Credit, Joint Committee, counsel fees, 781
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35, 731
Privileged information, 731
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 841-6, 1463-4
Amdt proposed, 845
Habeas Corpus, variations, 842, 843-4
Ontario Habeas Corpus Act, 842-3
Powers of the court, 844
Provincial Court appeals, 845
Dissolution and annulment of marriages, appointment of Hon. Charles A. Cameron as officer of the Senate, 931
Divorce, 212-14, 1310-11
Applications refused, answer to inquiry, 209
Commissioner, 86-87, 88, 799-800
Fabrication of evidence, 649
Petitions, statistics, 930, 1310-11
Progress report, 1310-11
Quebec, question of divorce court, 210
Rules and Orders of the Senate, m for amdt, 94-95, 100, 380-1, 449-51, 491-3
Certified copy of resolution, 94-95
Plaintiff guilty of offence, disclosure of facts, 450, 451, 491-3
Previous proceedings re marriage or children thereof, 422-3
Printing of resolutions in Journals, 95
Estate Tax bill C-94, 511
Estimates, Senate powers and responsibility in examination of, 498-9
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1017-18
Felicitations on 86th birthday, 36
General Accident Assurance Company of Canada bill S-8, 182
Government expenditures per capita, 1142
Harbour Commissions bill S-10, 191, 192, 193-4, 195, 196, 410-11
Agreement made by Cobourg re dredging of harbour, 194
Investments by municipalities, 193-4
Profits, division of, 194
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40, 851
Jamaica, 1437-42
Alcan investments, 1439-40
Bauxite industry, 1439-40
Canada's contribution to, 1440-1
Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, conference at Kingston, 1437-42
Canadian delegation, 1441
Educational problems, 1440
Harvesting methods, 1438
Housing, 1439
Unemployment, 1438-9
Wages, 1439
Judges bill C-96 (Officer of the Senate), 523-7, 528, 563, 648-9, 660-4
Jurisdiction in divorce proceedings, 524, 526-7, 661-2

Roebuck, Hon. Arthur W.—Concluded
Judges bill C-96 (Officer of the Senate)—Concluded
Leave of absence to perform duties of officer of Senate, 524-5, 661
Precedents in appointments of judges, 526, 527, 662
Quebec attitude, 661
Salary and pension, 525-6
Senate responsibility, 662-3
Judges bill C-112 (Salaries for additional judges), 1287-8
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1318-20
Hours of Labour Act, 1319
Industrial Standards Act of Ontario, 1319
Trucking industry, 1319-20
Penitentiary bill C-145, 1353-5, 1356
Custody pending appeal, 1353-6
Authority for, 1355
Persons of unsound mind, 1354-5, 1356
Persons suffering from dangerous, contagious or infectious disease, 1354
Protective service, Summer uniforms, 926
Revised Statutes of Canada bill S-2, 103, 105
Revision Commission, suggestion for appointment of Clerk of Parliaments, 105
Robertson, Hon. John A., the late, 1300
Senate chamber
Paintings, letter from Curator of War Collections, 64-65
Smith, Hon. Sydney J., golden wedding anniversary, 1108
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., the late, 1299-1300
Tourist traffic, 429-32
Accommodation and costs, 430
Fishing, 431-2
Aeration of water, suggestion for, 431-2
Ontario, 429
Planned entertainment, 430-1
World's Fair, 431
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 7
Universities and Colleges of Canada bill S-36, 858, 859

Roosevelt Campobello International Park, 72, 218
Campobello Island, 589-90
Commission members, 558, 589
Powers, 589
Roosevelt, Franklin D., the late, 557-60
Taxes, exemption from, 558

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 589-90
Burchill, G. Percival, 557-8
McLean, A. Neil, 558-60

Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26. 1r, 508; 2r, 557-60, 589-90; ref to com, 590; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt, 606; 3r, 607; r.a., 807

Roosevelt, Franklin D., the late, 558-60, 590

Royal assent to bills, 249-50, 282-3, 293, 314-15, 537, 622, 766, 807-8, 847, 928, 947, 982, 1002, 1031, 1066, 1101, 1164, 1293, 1459, 1522-3
Hall, Hon. Emmett M., 928
Judson, Hon. Wilfred, 947, 982
Martland, Hon. Ronald, 807-8
Ritchie, Hon. Roland A., 766, 847
Spence, Hon. Wishart F., 249-50, 314-15
Taschereau, Hon. Robert, P.C., 282-3, 293, 537, 662, 1002, 1031, 1066, 1101, 1164, 1293, 1459, 1522-3

Royal College of Dentists
See Dentists of Canada bill S-44

Royal Commisions
See Commissions

Royal family
See Queen Elizabeth II

Royal Society of Medicine
Cawthorne, Mr. Terence, President, guest in Senate gallery, 698
Sullivan Hon. Joseph A., honorary fellowship, 554

Rules and Orders
Inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 230

Rules of the Senate
Divorce, m for amdt, Hon. Mr. Roebuck, 94-95, 100, 380-1, 449-51, 491-3; amdt, 380-1, 449-51, 491-3; m as amended agreed to, 493
Notice of motion, 1169-72
Right of senator to bring in bill, 317-18, 479
Rules 23, 24 and 63, suspension of, 1461

Russia
See U.S.S.R.

Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge bill S-21. 1r, 413; 2r, 447-9; ref to com, 449; authority to print com proceedings, 475; rep of com without amdt, 475-6; 3r, 476; r.a., 766

St. John Ambulance Association bill S-5. Hon. Mr. Kinley. 1r, 22; 2r, 65-68; ref to com, 68; rep of com without amdt, 106; 3r, 126; r.a., 537. Refund of fees, 624

St. Lawrence Seaway
Barnhart dam, 682, 697
Coasting trade, 186-90
Estimates for expenditures, 1054, 1060, 1159
Winter navigation, 1060

St. Patrick's Day, 165-8, 1435-7

Safety of Life at Sea, International Convention, 132, 133
Classification of certificates, 133, 134
Definitions, 133
Inspection of ships, 133
Nuclear ships, 133

Saskatchewan
Fishing, 433-4
Hail insurance, 1023
Potash, 603
Roadways, 444
Tourist traffic, 443-4
Water supply, negotiations re diversion of Columbia River, 701-2
Weyburn Security Bank, 618-19
Wheat ranches, 443

Scotian, The, publicity re, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 1079, 1172

Scottish Canadian Assurance Corporation bill S-9. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 70; 2r-ref to com, 101; rep of com-3r, 182; r.a., 766

Seicho-No-Ie bill S-23. Hon. David Croll. 1r, 452; 2r-ref to com, 520; rep of com without amdt, 637; 3r, 660; Commons amdts, 777; r.a., 807

Selection Committee
Appointment, 12
Members, 12
Reports
Standing Committees, 43-44, 84

Senate
Adjournments, 142, 352
Cabinet members, 33
Chamber, paintings
Historic and war memorial value, 201-3
Origin of, 63-65
Comments of Members of Parliament, 783, 827-8
Committees, 32
Constitution, suggestion for study of, 771
Counsel fees, special committees, 780, 781-2, 804-7
Constitution and functions of, 31-32
Criticisms in periodicals and newspapers, 73
Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 141-3, 947
Estimates, "Legislation, The Senate", 1052, 1062-3
Good Friday sitting, 241-2, 248
International affairs, participation in, 32
Powers and privileges in money bills, 299-300, 302-7, 311, 313
Protective Service, summer uniforms, 926
Reform, 33, 60, 73
Role in modern government, 232

Senate—Concluded
Rules
Adherence to, 275, 280
Divorce, m for amdt, 94-95, 100, 380-1, 449-51, 491-3
Notice of motion, 1169-72
Right of Senator to introduce bill, 317, 479
Rules 23, 24 and 63, suspension of, 1461

Senators
According to seniority, v-viii
Alphabetically, ix-xi
By provinces, xii-xvii

Senators
Moving and travelling expenses, 229-30 237-8
Public image of, 232
Retirement age, 33, 60

Senators, deceased, tributes
Blais, Hon. Aristide, 1070-2 (November 10, 1964)
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, 4-11 (January 16, 1964)
Horner, Hon. R. B., 1165-9 (December 14, 1964)
Howard, Hon. Charles B., 227-9, 243 (March 25, 1964)
Robertson, Hon. John A., 1295-1302 (February 19, 1965)
Taylor, Hon. Austin C., 1295-1302 (February 19, 1965)
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, 4-11 (February 14, 1964)

Senators, new
Aird, Hon. John Black, 1067
Cook, Hon. Eric, 15
Denis, Hon. Azellus, 1
Lang, Hon. Daniel Aiken, 1
Rattenbury, Hon. Nelson, 1

Separatism, 20, 61-63, 204-5, 245
Effect on industrial development, 205
New Brunswick, 61-63
Laurendeau-Dunton Commission, 61
Newspaper publication, 62
Société Nationale des Acadiens, 62-63
Quebec, 204-5, 245
Universities, 979

Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation bill S-46. Hon. Mr. Thorvaldson. 1r, 1037; 2r, 1049-50; ref to com, 1050; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdt-3r, 1108; r.a., 1459

Seven Islands, ore shipments to U.S., 138, 150

Shipping
British Commonwealth Merchant Shipping Agreement, 132, 136-40

Shipping—Concluded
Canada Shipping bill S-7, 50, 132-40, 143-7, 148-56, 185-90, 380, 675, 694, 747-50, 753, 1347-8, 1363-5
Certificated personnel, 140, 145-7, 149, 151-2, 154-6, 747-8
Educational standards for future personnel, 156
Engineers, 748
Long service fishermen, 147-8, 149, 151-2
Coasting trade restrictions, 136-40, 148, 153-4, 186-90
Freight rates, effect on, 189
International trade, exemption from, 186-90
Newfoundland, 150
Royal Commission, 186-90
St. Lawrence Seaway, 136-7
Cobourg and Oshawa, 194
Flag, national, use on ships, 1347, 1363, 1364
Inspection of hull, machinery and equipment, 1347
Iron ore shipments to United States, 138, 150
Liability of owners of seagoing ships, 132
Limitation of liability, 136, 138
Priorities in distribution of limitation fund, 135-6
Newfoundland college for seamen, 152
Newsprint, 154
Passengers, 749-50
Pollution of the sea by oil, 132, 135, 144-5, 148-9, 163
Power boats and small craft, Criminal Code provisions re, 139-40
Restriction re goods transported by water or by land and water, 748-9
Safety convention, cargo ships, 1364
Safety of life at sea, 132-4
Shipbuilding, New Brunswick, 134-5
Tugboat operations on Pacific coast, 748

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 151, 152
Bouffard, Paul H., 132-40, 1363-4
Brooks, A. J., 154, 1364
Burchill, G. Percival, 139
Connolly, John J., 134, 137, 152
Hollett, Malcolm, 133, 134, 143-7, 148-9, 152
Hugessen, A. K., 1364-5
Isnor, Gordon S., 137
Kinley, John J., 149-53
Lambert, Norman P., 137, 138, 139
Pearson, Arthur M., 137-8
Smith, Donald, 152, 153-6
White, George S., 138

Shipping bill S-7. 1r, 50; 2r, 132-40, 143-7, 148-56, 185-90; ref to com, 190; authority to print com proceedings, 380; rep of com with amdts, 675, 693-4, 747-50; 3r, 753; Commons amdts, 1347-8, 1363-5; r.a., 1459

Smith, Hon. Donald
Dentists of Canada bill S-44, 1036, 1040-2
Appointment as Fellow, suggestion for Dr. William W. Woodbury, 1041
Definition of Fellow, 1042
Fluoridation, 1041
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1303-8, 1328-30
Administration of provisions, 1308
Atlantic provinces, 1304
Deferment of provisions, 1307
Employees under 17 years of age, 1329
Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, 1304, 1328
Federal-provincial conferences, 1329
Federal undertakings, 1304, 1305
Fishermen, 1307
Hours of work, 1305, 1306-7
Investigation under Inquiries Act, 1306
National parks, 1328
Non-urban or rural areas, 1304
Northwest Territories and Yukon, 1328-9
Nova Scotia wage revision, 1306, 1307
Overtime, 1305, 1307
Stevedores, 1305, 1307
Vacations and other holidays, 1307-8
Newsprint business, Newfoundland, 154
Shipping bill S-7, 152, 153-6, 185-6
Certificated masters and mates, 154-6
Coasting trade, 153-4
Date of Proclamation, 156, 185-6
Educational standards for future personnel, 156
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 386-9
Fisheries Council of Canada, 388
Foreign vessels on Atlantic coastline, 387
International agreement to closed seasons, 388
Law of the sea, 386-7
Limits of other countries, 386
Markets in U.S., 388-9
Scientific research, 387-8
West coast fisheries, international agreement, 387

Smith, Hon. Sydney J.
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 638
Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company bill S-47, 1037, 1050-1
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 9
Export Credits Insurance bill C-101, 801-2
Contracts with foreign organizations, 801-2
Financial statistics of corporation, 801
Income tax exemption, 801
Increase in amount of liability, 802
Long-term financing for heavy capital equipment, 802
Premium reductions, 801
Flag, Canadian, 1222-3
Golden wedding anniversary, 1108, 1143-4

Smith, Hon. Sydney J.—Concluded
Internal Economy, moving and travelling expenses of Senators, 229-30, 237-8
National Housing bill C-102, 737-8
Improvements on homes, loans for, 738
Services on land, 738
Urban renewal, 737-8
Protective Service, summer uniforms, 926
Senior citizens in B.C., 737-8
Tourist traffic, 440-2
British Columbia, 440-2
Budget and revenue, 442
Kamloops tourist promotion program, 441-2
Survey booklet of B.C. Government Travel Bureau, 441
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 9

Social Security, 75-76, 77
Economic Security for the aged in the U.S. and Canada, 77
Government expenditures, 76, 511-13, 572, 576-7, 601, 695
Pensions and supplementary benefits, amdt to B.N.A. Act, 767-76
Provincial responsibility, 511-13
Welfare state, extension of, 828
Youth allowances, 824-30
See Pension Plan

Speaker of the Senate
See Bourget, Hon. Maurice

Speaker of the Senate, Acting
Beaubien, Hon. Arthur L., 100, 141
Vien, Hon. Thomas, 777

Special committees, counsel fees, 780, 781-2, 804-7

Special committees, joint
See Consumer Credit,
Pension plan.

Special committees, Senate
See Aging

Speech from the Throne
At opening of Parliament, 1-3
Motion for consideration, 3
See Address in reply
At prorogation of Parliament, 1523-5

Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
Royal assent, 249-50, 314-15

Stambaugh, Hon. J. Wesley
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 619
Treasury Branch, Alberta, 619
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 988
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1016
Syndicate co-operation, 1016

Standing committees, members, 43-44

Standing Orders Committee
Members, 43
Reports
Meota Pipe Lines Ltd., requirements of rule 107 complied with, 799
Petitions for private bills, extension of time for filing, 351, 798, 1008

Statistics
Construction, 735
Employment, 19
Exports, 26
Farming
Loans, 755, 757
Machinery, 1012
Newfoundland, 756-7
Operating losses, 754, 755
Population, according to nationalities, 52
Senior citizens in B.C., 737-8
Students, 826

Status of Women, 218-22, 649-54
Civil capacity of women, 220-1
Discrimination, 650
Dissolution of marriage, 652
Family law, 218-22, 653
Human Rights Commission, 650
Marriage laws in Canada, 652-3
Minimum age of marriage, 220, 651, 652
Nationality of married women, 653
Political rights, 653
Private law, 651-2

Statutes
Acts, publication of, 105, 880, 995, 996-7
British North America Acts and Selected Statutes (1867-1962), 115-16
Consolidated Statutes of Canada, 102
Quebec, 880
Revised Statutes, 101-5, 115-17
Revision Commission, 105, 115, 116-17
Supplement to Canada Gazette, suggestion, 105
Taxation statutes, 116
See also Revised Statutes

Stevenson, Adlai, American Ambassador to UN
Condemnation of U.S.S.R., 550-1

Student loans
Armed services, 908
Beaverbrook scholarships, 903
Borrowers under 21 years of age, 891, 895, 898
Constitutional aspects, 894, 897-900, 904-5
Drop-outs and failures, repayment of loans, 908-9
Eligibility, 890, 891
Yukon and Northwest Territories, 891

Student loans—Concluded
Emigration of graduates to U.S., 893-4
Grade XII students, 902
Indian students, 911-12
Lending institutions for student loans, 890
Liability of federal Government, 901, 902, 908
Maximum loan, 890-1
New Brunswick provisions, 903
Nonpayment of debt in case of death, 891
Overcrowding of universities, 903, 910-11
Postgraduate and undergraduate students, press report, 892
Provincial agreement, 908
Quebec, 899, 901, 906-7
Laval University, loan from CMHC, 906
Repayment, 900-1, 904, 913
Scholarships, incentive to students, 901
Student census, 892
Use of loans, lack of information on, 911
Veterans' educational assistance, 893
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Burchill, G. Percival, 903-4
Choquette, Lionel, 895
Connolly, John J., 895, 907-10
Crerar, T. A., 900-1, 909
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 888-91, 894, 895, 905, 913
Flynn, Jacques, 891, 897-900, 908
Gershaw, F. W., 896-7
Gladstone, James, 911-13
Grosart, Allister, 901-3
Horner, R. B., 896
Pouliot, Jean-François, 910-11
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 904-5
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 905-7
Yuzyk, Paul, 891-4
See Education, Universities

Student Loans bill C-110, 1r, 888; 2r, 888-913; ref to com, 913; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdt-3r, 925; r.a., 928

Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A.
Dentists of Canada bill S-44, 1052
Flag, Canadian, 1201-3, 1277
Royal Society of Medicine
Honorary fellowship, 554
President, Mr. Terence Cawthorne, visitor to Senate, 698
St. Patrick's Day, 165-6, 1435-6

Taschereau, Hon. Robert, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada
Royal Assent, 282-3, 293, 537, 622, 1002, 1031, 1066, 1101, 1164, 1293, 1459, 1522-3
Speech from the Throne at Prorogation of Parliament, 1523-5

Taxation
Equalization formula, 953-4, 955, 963, 967
Estate tax, 198-201, 452, 503-7, 509-13, 521, 537, 951-2, 954, 958-9
Federal corporation tax, 71-72
Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, 950-65, 966-82
Income tax, 520, 581-6, 590-605, 637, 766
Provincial requirements, 76
Newfoundland, 959-60, 973-4, 980-1
Provincial responsibility, 511-13, 601-3, 961-2, 969-70, 976-7
Rates, determination of, 962-3
Small companies, 72
Statutes, revision of, 116
See Income Tax bill C-91, Income Tax Convention bill C-146

Taylor, Hon. Austin C.
(Deceased-January 17, 1965)
Agriculture
Agricultural Commodities Stabilization account, 275-6, 285-6
Flooding of land, 708-9
Neglect of land, 708
Pasture and grain needs, 709
Columbia River Treaty, 708-9
Arrow Lakes valley, 708
Destruction of agricultural land, 708-9
High Arrow development, 708-9
International Joint Commission, projects recommended, 709
Divorce resolutions, 352-3, 379
Prairie Farm Emergency Fund, inquiry, 276, 278
Tributes, 1295-1301

Taylor, Hon. William H.
Economical Mutual Insurance Company bill S-48, 1143
Estate Tax bill C-94, 521

Technical and vocational training, 72-73
Skilled labour, advertisements for, 73

Ten Hours Act (1847), 18

Terminological bulletins, Translation Bureau, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 267
Motion for tabling in Senate, 267, 508-9; agreed to, 676

Territorial sea and fishing zones
Baselines of Atlantic and Pacific coasts, 371, 372, 382
Newfoundland, 382
Coastal fisheries, 384-5
Conservation, 376, 377, 383, 387-8
Closed seasons, 388
Scientific research on, 387-8
Disputes in North Pacific, 368
Enforcement fleet, press report on statement by Minister of Fisheries, 364-5
Fisheries Council, recommendations, 371, 388

Territorial sea and fishing zones—Concluded
Geographic co-ordinates, 350, 366, 382
High seas, 382-3
Historic and treaty rights, 365, 370, 371-2, 374-6
External Affairs pamphlet re, 383
France, 375
United States, 375
International aspects
International agreement to closed seasons, 388
International Court of Justice, 391, 392
Anglo-Norway case (1951), 391-2
International law, American Journal of, 384
Jurisdiction and negotiations, 372, 384-5, 389-92
Legal sanction, 391
United Nations Sixth Committee, 390
Japanese and Russian threat to fishing industry, 349, 368-9, 370, 373-4, 387
Law and Custom of the Sea, 347-8
Law of the Sea, Geneva conferences, 349, 365, 367, 381, 382, 383, 384, 386-7, 390-2
Limits claimed by other countries, 348, 349, 386
Markets in U.S., 388-9
Navigable waters, 366-7
Phasing out of fishing limits, 372, 391
Press comment, Chronicle Herald, 346-7
Queen Charlotte Sound and Hecate Strait, 370
Time magazine, article on "Fishing" re action of U.S., 377-8
Treaties and conventions:
Fishing and Conservation of Living Resources of the Sea, 377, 383
Reciprocity Treaty (1911), 376
Territorial Sea and Contiguous Zone, 376
Treaty of London, (1818), 372
Treaty of Utrecht (1713), 372
Tripartite Treaty, 369
Washington Treaty (1871), 376
United Maritime Fishermen, address by Assistant Deputy Minister of Fisheries, 383-4

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Brooks, A. J., 363-6, 406
Connolly, John J., 346-7, 373, 403-4, 406-7,
Cook, Eric, 347-50, 404-6
Grosart, Allister, 396-400, 408
Hollett, Malcolm, 377, 381-6
Kinley, John J., 373-9
Lambert, Norman P., 407
McCutcheon, M. Wallace, 346, 347, 401-3, 407
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 407-8
Phillips, Orville H., 370-3
Reid, Thomas, 366-70, 390
Smith, Donald, 386-9
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 386-92
Welch, Frank C., 400-1

Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17. 1r, 346; 2r, 346-50, 363-79, 381-94, 396-40; m for ref to Banking and Commerce Committee, 406-7; amdt that bill be ref to External Affairs Committee, 407-8; amdt neg, 408; see also 413; ref to com, 408; authority to print com proceedings, 413; rep of com without amdt, 452; 3r, 491; r.a., 847

Thomson, Lord, deprivation of Canadian citizenship, 440

Thorvaldson, Hon. Gunnar S.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 73-80
Allstate Insurance Company of Canada bill S-12, 217, 320
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 638-9
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 917, 919
Voting interest, 917
Budgetary deficit, 76
Canadian External Policies since 1945, article by John W. Holmes, 415
Commonwealth, 417-18
Canada's relationship with, 74-75
Parliamentary Association, 418
Quebec Act 1774, 74
Corporations and Labour Unions Returns bill S-35, 731
Foreign investments in Canada, 731
Privileged information, 731
Criminal Code (Habeas Corpus) bill C-35, 853-4
Habeas Corpus ad subjiciendum, 854
Customs Tariff bill C-92, 456
Ministerial powers, 456
European Economic Community, U.S.S.R. reconciliation to, 416
External relations, motion that committee study report of External Affairs Dept., 381, 414-18
Flag, Canadian, 1214-17
Geneva Conventions bill S-25, 554-6, 623
Breaches of conventions, 555-6
Legal proceedings re protected persons, 556
Ratification by Parliament, 556
Red Cross International Committee, 554-5
Journal of International Law, article on Red Cross, 554-5
Gross national product, 418
International relationships, 414-15
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1320-4, 1329, 1408, 1426, 1431-2, 1433
Deferment clause, 1321
Dominion Marine Association, 1403-4
Elevator companies, 1322-4, 1406-8
Federal-provincial conferences, 1320, 1329
Northwest Line Elevators Assoc., brief, 1323-4
Shipping industry, 1403

Thorvaldson, Hon. Gunnar S.—Concluded
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126—Concluded
Trucking industry, 1321-2, 1402-3, 1405
Press comments, 1321-2
United Grain Growers Ltd., 1322-3
Witnesses in committee, 1401
Nuclear test ban agreement, 416
Organization of American States, 417
Penal reform, 697
Pension plan, 76-80
B.N.A. Act amdt, 77-78, 79
Costs, 79
Ontario reaction, 79
Press comment, 79
Quebec withdrawal, 79
Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) bill S-24, 675
Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission bill S-26, 606
Settlers Savings and Mortgage Corporation bill S-45, 1037, 1049-50
Incorporators, 1049-50
Powers, privileges and immunities, 1049
Social security, 75-76, 77
Costs, 76
Economic Security for the Aged in the U.S. and Canada, 77
Student Loans bill C-110, 904-5
Constitutional aspects, 904-5
Repayment, 904
Taxation, 76
Provincial requirements, 76
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 389-92
International Court of Justice, 391, 392
Anglo-Norway case (1951), 391-2
International negotiations, 389-92
United Kingdom and Iceland, 391
Law of the Sea, Geneva conferences, 390-2
Legal sanction, 391
Phasing-out period, 391
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2, 120-1
United Nations, 416-17
China People's Republic, admission of, 416
Disarmament Committee, 416
Financing of, 416
NATO, 416
Globe and Mail article on reform of, 417
Peace-keeping operations, 417
Secretary-General U Thant, 554
U.S.S.R. noncontribution to, 416
Voting system, 416-17
United States, Canada's relationship with, 417
Welland Canal, 1060
Wheat agreements and sales, 416

Tourist traffic
Accommodation and costs, 430
Banff, 358, 359
Press comment, 358, 359
British Columbia, 440-2
Budget and revenue, 442
Kamloops agency, tourist promotion program, 441-2
Survey booklet by B.C. Government Travel Bureau, 441
Canadian Travel Bureau, 337, 338, 442-3, 534, 535
Costs of maintenance in other countries, 345, 541
Dolan, D. Leo, first chairman, 337, 338, 343
London, 442-3
Staff and budget, 338
Centennial, provincial participation, 541-2
Dollar devaluation, 339, 340, 344
Expenditures, 534-5, 536
Great Bear Lake, 341
Manitoba, 432-3
History of names, 432
National museum, 432
Maritimes, 427-9
Edmundston tourist bureau, 428-9
Indian reserves, 427-8
Ministry of tourism and recreation, 357
National Parks Act, 358-9
New Brunswick, 185, 343-5
Advertising program, 343
Transportation problems, 344
Newfoundland and Labrador, 340, 355-6
East coast ferry, 356
Fisheries, 355
Historic sites, 355
Port aux Basques and St. John's, 356
Revenue, 356
Transportation problems, 355-6
William Carson, 355-6
Nova Scotia, 540-2
Acadians, 540
Tourist Advisory Council, 540
Travel Bureau, 540
Ottawa, 544-5
National Capital Plan, 545
Parks development, 359-60, 361-2
Building designs, competition for, 362
Press comment, 339, 358, 359, 360
Prince Edward Island, 170-1, 445-7
Confederation memorial building, 446-7
Deep sea fishing, 447
Publicity, 343, 357, 428, 537, 545-6
Quebec
Historic centres, 393-4
Montreal, 393-4
Quebec Winter Carnival, 542-4
"Bonhomme Carnaval", 542, 543, 544
Canadian Geographical Journal comment, 542
Recreational services, 357, 430-1

Tourist traffic—Concluded
Revenue, 337, 338, 357, 360-1
Saskatchewan, 443-5
Fishing, 443-4
Roadways, 444
Wheat ranches, 443
Statistics, 343-4
Tourist conference, federal-provincial, 545
Trans-Canada Highway, 341, 360, 444
Newfoundland, 356
Transportation problems, 344, 355
Winter Olympics, 358
Winter tourist trade, 339
World's Fair, 431, 541-2

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Aseltine, Walter M., 442-5
Baird, A. B., 340
Brooks, A. J., 338-40
Cameron, Donald, 357-62
Connolly, Harold, 540-2
Connolly, John J., 554-6
Crerar, T. A., 341
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 342-5
Fournier, Edgar E., 427-9
Gershaw, F. W., 432-3
Grosart, Allister, 534-7
Hollett, Malcolm, 354-8
Horner, R. B., 340-1
Inman, F. Elsie, 445-7
Isnor, Gordon B., 336-8, 546
Jodoin, Mariana B., 393-4
Lambert, Norman P., 535
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 535
Quart, Josie D., 542-4
Roebuck, Arthur W., 429-32
Smith, Sydney J., 440-2
Vaillancourt, Cyrille, 733

Tourist Traffic Committee
Members, 44
Motion that com inquire into activities of agencies concerned with tourist travel, Hon. Mr. Isnor, 182-3, 230, 336-41, 342-5, 354-62, 392-4, 427-33, 440-7, 534-7, 539-46, (agreed to, 546), 733
Report
Authority to print com proceedings, 733

Trade
Aid to developing countries, 1453-5, 1459
Barriers on Canadian goods entering British market, 45
British exports to Canada, 45
Bulgaria trade agreement, 1377-81
Canada-U.K. conferences, 45
Chile Republic, 1076
Coasting trade, 136-40, 148-50, 153-4, 186-90
Freight rates, effect on, 189
International trade not subject to restrictions, 189
Newfoundland, 150
Royal Commission on, 186-90
St. Lawrence Seaway, 136-7

Trade—Concluded
Communist countries, 330
Deficit, 26, 1446-7
Japan, 1446
United States, 1446-7
Exports, 1377, 1378
Free world trade, 329-30
GATT, 420-1
Hungary trade agreement, 1377-81
Imports, 26, 1377, 1378
Jamaica, 1453-5, 1459
Japanese automobiles to be made in Nova Scotia, 1447
Market improvements, 26
Organization of American States, 1076
Press comment, 26
Sales promotion program, 572
State trading countries, 1377
Statistics on imports, 26
Trade agreements, Bulgaria, Hungary, U.S.S.R., 1377-81
Trade and Commerce Department, 572
UN conference on trade and development, statement tabled, 764
U.S.S.R. trade agreement, 1379-80
Wheat sales and agreements, 26, 1377

Trade Relations Committee
Members, 44

Trans-Canada Air Lines
"Air Canada", press comment, 121
Costs of changing name, 118, 120
Trade mark, 117

Speakers: Honourable Senators
Bouffard, Paul H., 118-19
Brooks, A. J., 120
Connolly, John J., 120
Flynn, Jacques, 119
Gouin, L. M., 121
Hayden, Salter A., 117
O'Leary, M. Grattan, 119-20
Phillips, Orville H., 117-18, 121
Thorvaldson, Gunnar S., 120-1

Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2. 1r, 69; 2r, 117, m in amdt, 117-21, withdrawn, 121, m for 2r agreed to, 121; ref to com, 121; rep of com with amdts, 125; authority to print com proceedings, 126; rep of com adopted-3r, 143; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 197; r.a., 249

Trans-Canada Highway
Newfoundland, 356
Rogers Pass, 360

Translation Bureau
Location of, 301-2, 312
Terminological bulletins, tabling in Senate, motion for, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 267, 508-9, 676

Translators and Interpreters
Inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 253, 522-3, 676

Transport and Communications Committee
Members, 43, 1480
Reports
Authority to sit during adjournments of the Senate, 1160
Blue Water Bridge Authority bill S-4. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts, 235-6
Burrard Inlet Tunnel and Bridge Company bill S-47. Rep of com without amdt, 1098
Canadian-Montana Pipe Line Company bill S-43. Rep of com without amdt, 1098
Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee bill C-147. Authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdt, 1393, 1413-14; ref back to com, 1414; rep of com without amdt, 1449
Harbour Commissions bill S-10. Authority to print com proceedings, 350; rep of com with amdts, 380, 409-11
Harbours and Pilotage bill S-40. Authority to print com proceedings, 350; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com without amdts, 867
Interprovincial Pipe Line Company bill S-42. Rep of com without amdt, 1169
Meota Pipe Lines bill S-39. Rep of com without amdt, 930
Ottawa Terminal Railway bill S-33. Authority to print com proceedings, 764
Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge bill S-21. Authority to print com proceedings, 475; rep of com without amdt, 475-6
Shipping bill S-7. Authority to print com proceedings, 380; rep of com with amdts, 675, 694, 747-50
Trans-Canada Air Lines bill C-2. Rep of com with amdts, 125, 143; authority to print com proceedings, 126

Transportation
Alaska highway system, 332
Blue Water Bridge, 22, 223-6, 235-6, 537
MacPherson Commission, 27
New Brunswick, 344
Shipping bill, 50, 132-40, 143-7, 148-56, 185-90, 380, 674, 694, 747-50, 753

Treaties
See Conventions, treaties and agreements

Tributes
Bates, Dr. Stewart, President of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 714, 719

Tributes—Concluded
Beaverbrook, Lord, 674-5
Churchill, Sir Winston, 1295
Crerar, Hon. H. D. G., 1513-14
Nehru, Jawaharlal, Prime Minister of India, 587
See also Senators, deceased

Turgeon, Hon. Gray
(Deceased-February 17, 1964)
Tributes, 4-11

Ukrainian Canadians, 52-54
Culture, 53, 54, 55

Unemployment, 27, 58, 60
Provincial statistics, 27

Unemployment insurance, 511
Estimates for, 269, 270-1, 272, 275, 279, 281, 289-92
Fraudulent claims, 290
Gill Commission, 27
Inquiry, Hon. Mr. Grosart, 286-7, 335-6

United Kingdom
BBC and ITA regulations, 1149-50, 1151
High Commissioners, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 253, 260, 277, 318-19
Trade conferences, Canada and U.K., 45

United Nations
Canadian armed forces, expenditures for special operations since World War II, 573-5
Canadian policy at UN, 420,548-53
Press comment, 552
Charter, 459, 461
China People's Republic, admission to membership, 416
Church centre, 462
Committees, 459
Consent to marriage, minimum age of marriage and registration of marriage, convention on, 220
Constitution, lack of Christian element, 1397-8
Contribution from Canada, 1515
Disarmament committee, 416
Food and Agriculture Organization, estimates for, 269
General Assembly
Eighteenth session, 459-62
Nineteenth session, 1394-8
Gift program for UN building in Santiago, 279
International peace-keeping force, 147-8, 158-62, 374-5, 417, 434-7
Canadian participation, 147-8, 158-62, 434-5, 436-7
Financing of, 435-6

United Nations—Concluded
International peace-keeping force—Concluded
International Court of Justice, 435
Portugal, 436
New nations, rights, responsibilities and fears of, 1395-6
Pledging conference, 461-2
President, 460
Privileges and Immunities (United Nations) bill S-24, 475, 641-6, 675, 697
Purposes and principles, 459
Secretary General U Thant, address to both Houses of Parliament, notice 539, 554
Status of Women, Commission on, 649-54
Agenda, 651
Discrimination, 650
Dissolution of marriage, 652
Human Rights Commission, 650
Marriage laws in Canada, excerpt from statement made at Buenos Aires conference, 652-3
Minimum age of marriage and consent to marriage, 651, 652
Nationality of married women, 653
Political rights, 653
Private law, 651-2
Women in family law, 653
Status of Women in family law, seminar held at Bogota, 218-22
Technical assistance program, Canada's contribution, 462
Voting system, 416-17
World government, 437-8, 1395-6
See External relations

United States
Interest equalization tax, 331
Interparliamentary Group, 7th meeting at Washington and Cape Kennedy, 325-34
Trade deficit, 1446-7
U.S.S.R. imperialistic practices, condemnation by President Kennedy and Adlai Stevenson, 549-51
Visit to U.S. Senate by Members of Canadian Parliament, 332-4

Universities
Agnosticism among students, 910, 911
Arms and ammunition, withdrawal of, 38
Beaverbrook scholarships, 903
Canadian award winners, 888
Housing for students, 714-15, 720-1, 735-6, 881-3
Family units, 715
I.O.D.E. scholarships and bursaries, 888, 889
Lakehead, Chancellor, Hon. Norman McL. Paterson, 1119-20
Law students, teaching of, 479, 871-2, 874-7
Remarks of Batonnier John O'Brien, 876-7
Reply of law professors, 877

Universities—Concluded
Laval University, law faculty, article by Jean-Marie Tremblay, 881-3
New Brunswick provisions for students, 903
Overcrowding, 903, 910-11
Reform of fundamentals of education, 911
Separatism, 979
Tuition fees, income tax reduction, 591
Waterloo Lutheran, Chancellor, Hon. W. Ross Macdonald, 1119-20

Universities and Colleges of Canada, Association of Administration of, 857, 858, 861
Awards Division, 857
Financing of, 857, 860-1
International Programs Division, 857
NCCUC and CUF, 856, 860
Official languages, 858-9
Research and Information service, 857
Sheffield, Dr. E. F., tribute, 857
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Cameron, Donald, 752, 854-61
Crerar, T. A., 859-60
Hugessen, A. K., 861
Leonard, T. D'Arcy, 859
Roebuck, Arthur W., 858, 859

Universities and Colleges of Canada, Association of, bill S-36. Hon. Mr. Cameron, 1r, 752; 2r, 854-61; ref to com, 861; rep of com with amdt-authority to print com proceedings, 1043; 3r, 1056; Commons amdt, 1465; r.a., 1522

Urie, J. J., counsel for Joint Committee on Consumer Credit, 780, 781-2, 804-7

U.S.S.R.
Canadian policy re, 548-53
Countries absorbed into, 549-50, 552
Imperialistic practices, condemnation in speeches by:
Diefenbaker, Right Hon. John G., 549-50
Kennedy, John F., 549, 550
Stevenson, Adlai, 550-1
Ukraine National Republic, 552

U Thant, U.N. Secretary General, address to both Houses of Parliament, notice of, 539, 554

Vaillancourt, Hon. Cyrille
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 95-99
Allied invasion of Normandy, tribute to Regiment de la Chaudiere, 668-9
Appropriation bill No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1153-4
Caisses populaires, 97-98, 738-9
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 10-11
Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 1153-4
Educational and constructive programs, 1153
Violence depicted on TV, 1154

Vaillancourt, Hon. Cyrille—Concluded
Centennial, 97
Divorce Commissioner, status of, 14
Farm Credit bill C-100, 759, 760
Beekeepers, 760
Flag, Canadian, 1229-30
Howard, Hon. Charles B., the late, 228-9
International relationships, 97
Judges bill C-96, 648-9
Laurentide Bank of Canada bill S-13, 465
Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, Chancellor of Waterloo Lutheran University, 1066
National Housing bill C-102, 738-9, 740
Queen Elizabeth II, visit to Canada, 95-96
Separatism, 97
Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge bill S-21, 449
Speech from the Throne, motion for consideration of, 3
Student Loans bill C-110, 905-7
Laval University, loan from CMHC, 906
Quebec, 906-7
Television programs of violence, 99
Tourist traffic, 733
Turgeon, Hon. Gray, the late, 10-11

Veterans' pensions, 1139-42, 1157-8
Benefit of doubt re origin of disability, 1141-2, 1158
Bills re, consideration by Committee on Veterans Affairs, 1139
Forestry units, Newfoundland, 1142-3, 1156-7
Hong Kong veterans, 1154
Legion brief to Government, 1139
Pension on basis of rank, 1139-40
Ten per cent increase, 1139

Vien, Hon. Thomas, P.C.
Acting Speaker, 777
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1964, C-89, 300, 302-3
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 83-84, 107-8
Bank of Canada, 107-8
Policy questions, differences of opinion between governments, 108
Shareholding by provincial governments, 108
British North America Act
Amdt re pension benefits, 771-2, 773-4
Powers and privileges of Senate and House of Commons, 302
Provincial rights, 773-4
Burchill, Hon. G. Percival, birthday felicitations, 1042
Companies bill S-22, 480-3
Amalgamation of companies, 483
Amendments, 481-2
Closed-end investment corporation, 482
Financial statements, 483
Letters patent, 482
Minority shareholders, 482
Mutual fund operations, 482

Vien, Hon. Thomas, P.C.—Concluded
Companies bill S-22—Concluded
Prospectus requirements, 483
Subjects under review by interdepartmental committee, 481
Winding-up order, 483
Dentists of Canada bill S-44, 1042, 1051-2
Petitions for private bills, extension of time for filing, 1008

Ville LaSalle disaster, message of sympathy, 1302

Visitors
Bennett, Hon. W. A. C., Premier of British Columbia, 880
Cawthorne, Mr. Terence, President of Royal Society of Medicine, 698
Gottfriedsen, Mrs. Mildred Manuel, Mother of the Year, 342
U Thant, United Nations Secretary General, 539

Vote, recorded
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 1346
Bank of Western Canada bill S-6, 923
Flag, Canadian, 1171-2, 1269-70, 1276-7
Labour (Standards) Code bill C-126, 1427, 1434
Marriage and Divorce bill S-16, 878
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 408, 413

Voting privileges
High Commissioners and other British subjects, inquiry, Hon. Mr. Pouliot, 141, 253, 260, 277, 318-19

Walker, Hon. David J., P.C.
Bates, Dr. Stewart, the late, 719
Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, minister for, 719
Companies bill S-22, 515-18
Change of name, 516
Dominion prospectus, 516
Financial statements, 517
Letters patent, 516
Mutual fund shares, 516
Power of Secretary of State to dissolve company, 516
Surrender of charter, 516
Corporations, Royal Commission on, 517-18
Established Programs (Interim Arrangements) bill C-142, 1505-8
Cost of shared programs, 1507
Tax abatement and equalization payments, 1505-7
Farm Improvement Loans bill C-119, 991
Flag, national, 1185-6, 1233
Insurance bill C-123, 1388
Judges bill C-96, 525, 527-8
Senate duties re divorce, transfer to Exchequer Court, 526-7

Walker, Hon. David J., P.C.—Concluded
National Housing bill C-102, 718-21
Limited dividend housing corporations, 721
Private lending agencies, need for, 719
Public housing, 721
Rosedale, 721
Sewage treatment projects, 720
Time limit for completion of, 720
University housing, 720
Urban renewal, 720-1
Penal reform, 697

Walsh, Allison Arthur Mariotti, Q.C., Divorce Commissioner
Appointment as Judge of Exchequer Court, 475, 523-31, 560-9, 588, 646-9, 660-4, 670, 766

Waterloo Lutheran University
Chancellor, Hon. W. Ross Macdonald, 1119-20

Water supplies, flouridation of, 1041

Waterways
Blue Water Bridge, 22, 223-6, 235-6, 537
Federal jurisdiction, 631
International River Improvements Act, 631
Navigable Waters Protection Act, 447-8
Ste. Foy-St. Nicolas Bridge, 413, 447-9, 475-6, 499, 766

Welch, Hon. Frank C.
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1011-13
Small farm problems, 1012
Statistics on farming, 1012
Flag, Canadian, 1237-9
Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones bill S-17, 400-1

Welfare
See Social security, Pension plan.

Whips
Chief Government Whip in the Senate
Beaubien, Hon. Arthur L.
Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate
Macdonald, Hon. John M.

White, Hon. George S.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 198-203
Appropriation bills
No. 2, 1964 C-86, 271-3
No. 3, 1964 C-87, 281-2
No. 4, 1964 C-89, 310-11
No. 5, 1964 C-99, 573-5
No. 10, 1964 C-140, 1138-42, 1146-8
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20, 607-12, 691
Bank Act, revision of, 608

White, Hon. George S.—Continued
Bank of British Columbia bill S-20—Concluded
Board of Trade brief, 610
Charters, granting of, press comment on delay, 609
Political control, 609-10, 612, 691
Provincial banks, effect on federal financial system, 609
Provincial rights, 611
B.C. Electric Company, provincial government takeover, 691
Blue Water Bridge Authority bill S-4, 225-6
Authority members, lack of remuneration, 225-6
Bonds and interest, 226
Property in U.S., title to, 226
Canadian armed forces, expenditures for special operations since World War II, 573-5
Cyprus, 574-5
Gaza Strip, 573-4
India and Pakistan, 574
Inquiries re payment for, 574-5
Pensions and allowances, 575
Truce supervisory group, 574
Estate tax, 198-201, 505-7
Businesses, family-owned, 200-1
Degree of relationship, 200
Executors and legal fees, 201
Furniture assessment, 200
Gifts made within 3 years of death, 199
Gifts to wife, 200
Pensions and annuities to widows, 200
Press comment, 199
Review of act by Senate committee, suggestions, 201, 507
Estate Tax bill C-94, 505-7
Abatement provision, 505
Bank deposits and insurance policies, 506
Cost of administration of act, 506
Pensions and annuities to widows, 506
Flag, Canadian, 1233-7
Insurance Department bill C-123, 1365-7
Borrowing limits, 1367
Canadian ownership and control, 1365-7
Investment powers, 1365
Mortgage loans, 1366
Subsidiary companies, 1367
Money bills, procedure on, 310-11
Senate
Business, 265
Chamber, paintings of historic and war memorial value, 201-3
Shipping bill S-7, 138
Unemployment insurance fund, 310
Veterans affairs, estimates for, 281
Veterans' pensions, 1139-42
Benefit of doubt re origin of disability, 1141-2
Consideration by Veterans Affairs Committee, 1139

White, Hon. George S.—Concluded
Veterans' pensions—Concluded
Legion brief to Government, 1139
Pensions on basis of rank, 1139-40
Ten per cent increase, 1139

William Carson, ferry, Newfoundland, 355-6

Willis, Hon. Harry A.
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 37-39
Campbell, Hon. G. Peter, the late, 8
Farm Machinery bill C-121, 1014, 1015
Syndicate relationships, 1014, 1015
Flag, Canadian, 1204-5
Senate appointments, 38
Weapons in colleges, withdrawal of, 39

Women
Employment, discrimination in, inquiry, Hon. Mrs. Fergusson, 1169, 1172
Married women, rights of, 318, 478, 480, 837-9, 871
Mother of the Year, Mrs. Mildred Manuel Gottfriedsen, 342
Status of Women, United Nations Commission on, 649-54
Discrimination against women in member countries, declaration on, 650
Dissolution of marriage, 652
Human Rights Commission, 650
Marriage laws in Canada, excerpts from statement made at Buenos Aires conference, 652-3
Minimum age of marriage and consent to marriage, 651, 652
Nationality of married women, 653
Political rights, 653
Private law, 651-2
Women in family law, 653

World Government, propaganda for, 437-8

World Mortgage Corporation bill S-32. Hon. Mr. Leonard. 1r, 637; 2r, 665-7; ref to com, 667; authority to print com proceedings-rep of com with amdts, 696; 3r, 753; Commons amdts, 1514; r.a., 1523

Young Presidents' Association, 322

Youth allowances
Abatement under provincial plans, 951, 954, 969
Age gap, 826, 828-9
Child-caring agencies, payments to, 825
Federal-provincial arrangements, 828, 829
Mental and physical disability, 824
Quebec, 824-5, 827, 828, 829
Student statistics, 826

Youth allowances—Concluded
Speakers: Honourable Senators
Croll, David A., 829
Fergusson, Muriel McQ., 829-30
Fournier, Edgar E., 826-7
Grosart, Allister, 827-9
Irvine, Olive L., 825-6
McGrand, Fred A., 824-5

Youth Allowances bill C-108. 1r, 824; 2r, 824-30; 3r, 834; r.a., 847

Youth Parliament, 178

Yukon Territory
Dawson City Festival, expenditures of, 305, 312-13
"Foxy", production of, 305
Student loans, 891

Yuzyk, Hon. Paul
Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 50-58
Canadian foreign policy at UN, 548-53
Colonialism, 549-53
Press comment, 552
Citizenship
Bilingualism and biculturalism, 54, 56
Bill of Rights, 57-58
Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 55
Discrimination re mover and seconder of address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 56-57
Ethnic groups (1961 census), 52
Contributions of, 53, 54, 55
Multiculturalism, 56
Population statistics according to nationalities, 52
Ukrainian Canadians, 52-54
Culture, 53, 54, 55
Diefenbaker, Right Honourable John G., 51, 549-50
External relations, 548-53
Flag, Canadian, 1251-3
Student Loans bill C-110, 891-4
Emigration of graduates to U.S., 893-4
Postgraduate and undergraduate students, press comment, 892
Student census, 892
Veterans' assistance, 893
U.S.S.R.
Canadian policy re, 548-53
Countries absorbed into, 549-50, 552
Imperialistic practices, condemnation in speeches by:
Diefenbaker, Right Hon. John G., 549-50
Kennedy, John F., 549, 550
Stevenson, Adlai, 550-1
Ukraine National Republic, 552