PROBS—FAIR

PRICE TWO CENTS

BRITISH LINE PUSHED FORWARD BETWEEN HILL 70 AND HULLUCH, NETTING GAINS OF 500 TO 1000 YARDS

BELGRADE FALLS INTO GERMAN HANDS, BUT AT GREAT COST TO INVADERS

Sir John French Reports More Ground Gained North of Loos—Brilliant Assault by French in Champagne, near Tahure, Wins Another Trench for French—Fierce Artillery Duel Raging Along Entire Front in Artois—Former Serbian Capital and Heights Around City in Possession of Germans, Who Have Begun Advance Eastward.

London, Oct. 9.—The British Press Bureau gives out the following communication from Sir John French, who reports under date of 7.20 this evening:

"Since my communication of October 4 the enemy has constantly shelled our new trenches south of La Basse Canal, and has made repeated bombing attacks on the southern portion of the Hohenzollern redoubt, which is held by us. These attacks were all repulsed.

"In spite of the enemy's artillery fire we have pushed our trenches steadily forward northeast of Loos, between Hill No. 70 and Hulluch, and gained ground varying from 500 to 1,000 yards in depth.

"Yesterday afternoon the enemy heavily bombarded the whole area we had recently won from him, and followed this by an attack in successive waves of infantry on the whole front from south of Loos to the Hohenzollern redoubt. This attack was repulsed everywhere, with heavy loss to the enemy. We gained possession, by a counter-attack, of a German trench 500 yards west of St. Elie. Great numbers of the enemy's dead are lying in front of our lines. Our losses were comparatively slight."

FRENCH WIN TRENCH IN BRILLIANT ASSAULT.

Paris, Oct. 10.—Further progress to the northeast of Tahure, in the Champagne district, and the capture of a German trench to the southeast, is recorded in the official statement issued by the war office tonight. The text follows:

"There have been artillery actions by both sides in Belgium in the environs of Lombaertzyde and on the whole Artois front. The struggle with trench guns has been very spirited in the region of Lihoens and to the north of the Aves.

"In Champagne we are still making progress to the northeast of Tahure; a brilliant assault made us masters of a new German trench to the southeast of the village of Fuvencelle, to the east of the Aves.

"An intense bombardment on all sides has occurred in the Artois, in the sector of Courtes Chaussees and Ladille Morte and between the Meuse and the Moselle, to the north of Filly.

"In the Vosges, at Hartmanns Wellenkopf, there has been a very violent struggle with bombs and torpedoes. A German aeroplane struck down by one of our machines fell within our lines in the forest of Fuvencelle, to the south of Pont-A-Mousson. The two aviators aboard were killed.

"One of our air squadrons this afternoon dropped about a hundred large shells on the stations at the rear of the Champagne front, and on enemy troops who were concentrating."

Paris, Oct. 10.—Heavy artillery fighting on the hills near Souchez was reported today by the war office. German attacks in the Givanchy woods were repulsed. Engagements at close quarters occurred in the Lipons sector and in Lorraine.

Belgrade Falls

Berlin, Oct. 10.—(Wireless to Sayville)—"Belgrade and the surrounding heights to the southwest and southeast are in our hands. The Serbians also were thrown back further east wherever they resisted. Our troops are advancing."

German Report Confirmed
Paris, Oct. 10.—The announcement made yesterday by the German war office of the capture of Belgrade was confirmed in an official communication from Nish, issued here today at the Serbian legation. The Austro-German attack on the Lower Drina, on the northwestern frontier, is said to have been repulsed, with enormous losses to the Teutons.

Bulgars Not Yet Within Serbian Territory.

London, Oct. 10.—The Austro-Germans are now in full possession of Belgrade and the heights surrounding the city, and have begun an advance eastward towards the mountains which the Serbians last year so stubbornly defended against the Austrians.

ANTI-TREATING LAW GOES INTO EFFECT TODAY

Pay for Your Own Drink, in London or Become Liable to a Fine of $500.

London, Oct. 11.—The new anti-treating regulation in connection with the use and sale of alcoholic drinks goes into effect in London and the surrounding district today.

It is the most radical and far-reaching effort for the curtailment of drinking yet tried, for it effects nearly one million persons, and violations of the regulation are punishable by a fine of $500 and six months in prison. The authorities have given notice that these penalties will be inflicted without mercy on offenders. The law will curtail the distribution of alcoholic liquors by fifty per cent, and unless it is effective will be followed by an order curtailing the hours of sale.

The report of a few days ago drafted for a curtailment of hours was "pre-mature," according to officials, and there will be no such curtailment until the board of control has had time to observe the effects of anti-treating.

All cafes, hotels, clubs and liquor dealers are compelled to exhibit prominently in their places a copy of the anti-treating ordinance which says plainly that "each person must give his order and pay for his own drink."

The only exception to the rule is that drinks ordered with a full meal may be paid for by a host.

ST. STEPHEN HOUSE WRECKED BY FIRE AND EXPLOSIONS

Special to The Standard.
St. Stephen, Oct. 10.—A fire broke out in a wooden building on Water street about 12.45 this morning and completely destroyed it. The building was owned by N. A. Olsen, of Calais, and was occupied on the ground floor by Riddle & Webber, fruit and confectionery dealers, and Herman McKinnney, as a dwelling on the upper floor. Explosions of a mysterious origin did much damage, lifting the roof off, and blowing the back of the upper part of the house. The house was insured but the furniture was not, and the loss on the furniture is about $500. The stock of Riddle & Webber was insured. The cause of the fire is unknown.

South of the Pripet river and in Galicia the tide of battle flows and ebbs. First the Russians, then the Austro-Germans, attack and counter-attack and where, during the summer, miles of country would change hands in a day, now it is a case of defending some isolated village. The heaviness of the roads doubtless is largely responsible for this.

ALEXANDER ZAIMIS, New Greek Premier. German and Austrian troops have successfully crossed the Drina, the Sava and the Danube at many points, according to Berlin despatches, and are now established on Serbian soil along the northern and northwestern frontiers. French troops have crossed the strip of Greece along the Aegean Sea and are advancing north through Serbia to meet the Teuton invaders. Russia has bombarded the Bulgarian port of Varna, on the Black Sea. The illustration also shows two members of the new Greek Cabinet.

BULGARIA HAS NO QUARREL WITH ENGLAND, MINISTER TO GREAT BRITAIN SAYS

Makes No Move to Leave for Home—Optimists see Hopes for Another Turn of Balkan Wheel—Greek Government Considering Secret Agreement Made in July Between Sofia and Berlin—Venizelos Bask in Power Within Month or Blockade of Greek Ports by Allies.

London, Oct. 9.—Up to noon today P. Hadji Mischief, the Bulgarian minister to Great Britain, has taken no step towards leaving London. M. Mischief takes the ground that Bulgaria has no quarrel with Great Britain and that any initiative in the severance of Northern Greece, near the Albanian border, and of all Albania. The representatives of the Entente Powers assert they have proof that the agreement was made.

Italy Urges Beating German Diplomats At Their Own Game
Milan, Italy, Oct. 10, via Paris.—The Corriere Della Serra asserts it is a matter of urgent necessity that the Quadruple Entente adopt new methods of diplomacy and a more energetic policy in dealing with the Balkan States, before it is too late.

"The Allies are too proud to adopt German methods," it says, "and consequently the Teutonic influence is spreading unopposed in these countries, leading to dire results."

This newspaper says that there should be constituted in the capital of one of the Entente nations an executive committee representing the Allied nations, for the purpose of increasing the rapidity and efficacy of the diplomatic action and co-ordinating military efforts.

Furnish Proof of Secret Treaty Between Sofia and Berlin
Athens, Greece, Oct. 10, via Paris.—The representatives of the Entente Powers, while exercising no pressure on the Greek government, are urging it to reply to the question put last Thursday in regard to its future course respecting the Serbo-Grecian alliance. The cabinet deliberated this question at great length yesterday and today, but has not succeeded in reaching any agreement.

A neutral diplomat in Athens reported to his government his opinion that within less than a month former Premier Venizelos will be returned to power or else the ports of Greece will be blockaded by the Entente Powers.

It is learned from an authoritative diplomatic source that the representatives of the Quadruple Entente have advised Greece that Bulgaria's present attitude results from a written agreement signed by Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg on July 17, then acting

GERMANS TRY NEW SHELL ON CANADIANS

Larger Than Old Type—Enemy's Aim Poor and New Shell Proved Harmless.

NO CHANGE ALONG THE CANADIAN FRONT

German Artillery Turns Attention to Trenches of Canadians but Fails to Effect Much Damage.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The minister of militia has received the following communication from the Canadian general representative at the front with the Canadian troops:

Canadian general headquarters in France, Oct. 10.—There has been no material change in the situation along the front of the Canadian corps during the period October 1 to 7. The German artillery has been slightly more aggressive than usual, but effected little damage. A six inch shell struck one of the dugouts of our first brigade but only one casualty resulted.

The enemy displayed considerable activity with machine guns and trench mortars. A new type of trench mortar shell was used against the right of our second division. It was larger than the average of this class of missile, but the aim for the most part was inaccurate. An unexploded shell of this type has been recovered by our fourth brigade from in front of our parapets.

Every effort has been made to identify the enemy on our front. Our patrolling has been particularly active, but the enemy has remained closely to his trenches. All reports indicate that he is sending out few scouting parties, but that his trenches are as strongly held as ever.

Much useful information has been gained by our patrols regarding the enemy's wire entanglements and the general topography of the ground between the lines. Two samples of German iron screw posts for wire entanglements and sample of wire were brought in.

Our second division brigade mining sections have been organized, and are now in working order. Our working parties have been busily employed improving the draining of our trenches and completing communicating trenches, gun emplacements and field works.

An unknown type of enemy aeroplane flew over our lines on October 5. It appeared to have two engines and to be exceptionally fast. An enemy mine was exploded in front of our lines on the morning of October 8 while generals were inspecting the trenches. No damage was done.

had been formed to meet a small order of 200,000 shells which he had been instructed to place in the United States, but he felt that Canadian industrial establishments then out of work were competent to do the work. He was assured this would be all required to complete the war. Incidentally, the United States was given orders for millions upon millions of shells at the same time. Eventually further orders came and, with regard to other munitions, he was assured that they could not be made in Canada. "But we have made them," snapped Sir Sam.

"If the war is to last," General Hughes concluded, "Canada, if given a chance will continue to lead the world in doing her share in the premises, but uncertainty of the continuation of the war, has naturally caused spasmodic action on the part of those giving us orders. For example, it is upwards of three months since Mr. Thomas crossed the ocean and he has not concluded a contract yet for one single dollar's worth of orders in Canada."

SIR SAM HUGHES DEFENDS CANADA

Minister of Militia Corrects Statements Made by D. A. Thomas and Shows that, Given the Chance, Canada Can Rival United States or Great Britain in Turning Out War Munitions.

Special to The Standard.
Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 10.—General Sir Sam Hughes, minister of militia, caused a sensation here today by a spirited reply to D. A. Thomas, M. P., representative of Lloyd George, the British minister of munitions, who in Montreal on Friday stated that Canadian prices for munitions were higher than in the United States and deliveries slower. Mr. Thomas said also that the Canadian shell committee was to be reorganized.

General Hughes declared that Mr. Thomas' statement were erroneous. "No shells whatever were produced in England by commercial organizations," he said, "until months after Canada had made delivery. Not one shell was produced in any commercial institution in the United States until long after Canada had been producing enormous quantities. Canada's shell committee has led the world in this line. The regular manufacturers of war material in the United States and Great Britain were also far behind the Canadian commercial industries relatively in their deliveries also. However, the Canadian shell committee does not shrink from a comparison of their output with the output of the regulation arsenals of the United States and Great Britain, while they court comparison with the commercial industrial concerns of both these countries."

Given Chance Canada Can Rival U. S. or Great Britain.
General Hughes stated that if the orders had not been given piecemeal to Canada and if they had been free to enlarge their sphere of action they would have been able to rival the entire output of the United States and Great Britain in quantities. Each order Canada received was supposed to be the last. The minister denied absolutely the statement of Mr. Thomas, and declared that Canadian manufacturers had not only completely outdistanced all commercial industries in Great Britain and the United States in making of shells but also in price, in some classes being $2 less than the American price.

FLOODED MARSHES HALT GERMAN ADVANCE

WEEK-END FATALITIES IN MONTREAL

Young Greek Struck on Head with Chair During Row in Restaurant, Apparently Not Badly Injured, Died Sunday Morning.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Mrs. Patrick Hogan, who was eighty-two years of age last Friday, was found dead in her room at 160 West LaSalle street Saturday night, kneeling beside her bed, with a broom stick, which she had used to aid her in getting about the house, stuck through a shawl that was wound around her neck. There was a lighted lamp in her room indicating her death occurred Friday night, accidentally, it is believed.

Emile Fabas, a Greek, twenty-six years of age, was struck on the head with a chair in a row in a restaurant and shoe-shine parlor at 345 Centre street, Saturday night. Shortly after, he was taken from a pool room, in a highly excited state, to a police station, where, after he had cooled down, about eleven o'clock, he was taken to his home. He did not appear to be injured, yet he was found dead in bed this morning at 8.30. Nicholas Managousis, the proprietor of the place where the row had occurred, and a young Greek assistant, could not be located when the police went to arrest them today.

Four-year-old Charles Therwege, whose parents reside at 8 Richmond street, Point St. Charles, died in the western hospital Saturday afternoon from a fractured skull and internal injuries half an hour after he had been taken to the hospital. Sticks of wood falling from a carters' wagon at a gateway in Magellan street caused the child's death.

Jean Delair, thirty years of age, 920 Delanauere street, was discovered dead in a lane in rear of his abode this morning. His death has been due to natural causes the authorities say.

PROBE INTO SALE OF HORSES CONCLUDED AT VANCOUVER

Vancouver, Oct. 10.—Sir Charles Davidson completed his horse deal investigation in Vancouver Saturday night. W. A. Macintosh gave testimony regarding what he knew of alleged payment of a commission of $25 to Dr. Henderson by Dixon Brothers, at whose place remounts were examined and passed by Henderson. The latter denied the Dixon statement of the passing of the bribe money.

Macintosh, who had been alleged by the Dixons to have been in the stable at the time, said that he had not seen any check given, but had accompanied the party to the Ritz cafe, where the Dixons had alleged that the check for Henderson had been cashed. Some time ago the witness said the Dixons had complained to him that they had been forced to pay Henderson $25.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated give "California Syrup of Figs"

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleanser" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 4-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

HOW ITALIAN ALPINE SCALE FRONTIER HEIGHTS

As the Italian campaign progresses one begins to appreciate what means the Italian Alpine approach and attack the enemy. The mountain crests of Tyrol—many of them 10,000 feet high and covered all the year round with snow—have to be scaled and occupied with the object of preventing the Austrian attacks on vital points. These Italian Jack-the-Giant Killers are specially trained for their perilous work, and they have, up to the present, met with conspicuous success. The above picture, drawn especially for this newspaper, the New York Herald and the London Sphere, shows how the mountain face is climbed with the help of rope and ice axe.

HARTLEY FRENCH OF "26TH" WOUNDED

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 10.—Two officers in the second Canadian division are reported as slightly wounded. They are Major D. A. McRae of the 25th Battalion from Nova Scotia and Lieut. V. A. Dulon of Montreal of the 24th Battalion.

The Militia Department announced tonight the following as among the casualties in the 25th and 26th Battalions.

GREAT BRITAIN FACES SHORTAGE OF SILVER

Due chiefly to quantity being used in paying the Soldiers.

London, Oct. 10.—(Montreal Gazette Cable)—The country is faced with a serious shortage of silver, although the coinage minted since the war began is valued at about $30,000,000. The shortage is ascribed chiefly to the quantity of silver used in paying the soldiers. The mint is being urged to increase the coinage, especially as 36 pounds worth of silver bullion has a circulation of 100 pounds, when coined.

A Clubroom Decoration
You can make a fine decoration for your clubroom with the Scout Law (poster size from Headquarters) and a Badge Plate from Headquarters. First of all paste the poster on a large sheet of white cardboard, leaving a border on each side. On the top of the law, print the name of the troop. The next thing to do, is to cut out the badges on the badge plate, and paste them round the Scout Law to form a decorative border. If you like, you can write the name of each badge underneath it.

SEVERAL CRACK GERMAN REGIMENTS ENMESHED IN RUSSIAN MARSHES

Torrential Rains Flood Pinsk Marshes and Men and Guns Unable to Move.

Paris, Oct. 10.—Important German detachments are enmeshed in the marshes of Pinsk, in the Russian province of Minsk, where the rivers have overflowed owing to daily torrential rains, says a despatch from Petrograd to the Havas News Agency. The Pinsk marshes cover an area of more than 1,000 square miles in the basins of the Pripiet, Strumen, Styr and Goryn rivers, which flow through them.

Hundreds of Germans are reported to have been lost in the bogs with their artillery, automobiles and convoys. Many deserters are said to be roving about the country in bands. A landed proprietor named Saboune-Vicq has organized a powerful detachment of partisans, among them many Czecho-Slovaks, who are hunting down the German bands. Saboune-Vicq's men, mounted on small horses, are said to be operating with extraordinary rashness. Sweeping down upon a village where the general staff of a German division was quartered, the despatch adds, the officers were dispersed panic-stricken. These "marsh wolves," as the Germans call them, have thus far evaded the two squadrons of hussars which have been assigned to capture them.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active. Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful after-dinner drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

PATRIOTIC AUCTION AFTER SUCCESS

Expected that total receipts Large crowd in attendance good prices realized.

St. Andrew's Rink was again crowded on Saturday, the concluding day of the Patriotic Auction, a large quantity of goods of various kinds being sold. The feature of the day was the drawing for the Cadillac automobile which had been auctioned earlier in the week, and it is expected that about $1,900 will be paid in as a result of the sale of tickets. These were sold at $1 each, except as to the last ticket, which was sold by auction by W. A. Stewart, one of the many commercial travellers present, for $7. The purchaser of this last ticket was T. H. Stabrooks. L. V. Price of Renforth, was the lucky winner of the car. Other features of interest were the sale of tickets and passes for some of the local theatres. A fine diamond ring, handed to Miss Lois Grimmer as a contribution for the fund by a commercial traveller, was sold for a good figure. At one time it had been thought that there would be some difficulty in disposing of the very large quantity of goods and property within the week, but as a result of the untiring efforts of the auctioneers and others, only a small number of articles remained unsold. A good sum was realized by the sale of pumpkin pies during the afternoon and evening. Seeds from the celebrated patriotic pumpkin can still be had, reposing in a neat little box, but the auction proper, is, as already stated, at an end. Other articles sold on Saturday included vegetables, groceries, billiard and bagatelle tables, dogs, clothing, fancy goods, stationery, etc., good prices being obtained in many cases. Much of the success of the day was due to the work of the commercial travellers who acted as auctioneers in several of the departments. The admission fee of ten cents, charged as a means of further adding to the Patriotic Fund, did not keep the people away, and the money obtained in this manner amounted to a handsome sum. The Patriotic Fund will be considerably augmented through the proceeds from the auction. The sum aimed at was $50,000. If there were among the promoters of the auction any optimists who expected this grand aggregate, they were remarkably few, as for as a matter of fact this sum was

"We are fighting for a worthy purpose, and we shall not lay down our arms until that purpose has been fully achieved"—H. M. The King.
TO THE PEOPLE OF THE EMPIRE—Every fighting unit we send to the front means one step nearer peace.

WHY MEN ARE NEEDED QUICKLY

The war news from the battle fronts is not altogether reassuring. The British and French advance of two weeks ago succeeded in gaining much ground and, at that time, there was good reason for hope that at last the great drive had started which would carry the forces of the Allies to the Rhine or beyond. What has happened since then? The despatches indicate that our troops have been engaged in defending their positions from vigorous counter attacks by the Germans. They have done this nobly and well but at great cost, while the resources of the enemy in men and guns do not appear to be near exhaustion. Before Britain and France can score decisive triumphs their lines must be reinforced many times, and it is to secure these reinforcements that recruiting campaigns are being conducted.

It must be remembered that before recruits can be of service they must be thoroughly trained. Canada, unlike Germany or countries where a conscriptive system is in force in time of peace, is unable in war time to turn out finished soldiers for the asking. The very liberty which gives to a British subject the privilege of remaining at home while his brothers and chums are doing Empire duty hampers the speedy production of trained soldiers when they are required. Consequently, it is necessary that recruits should be trained before they are sent forward and that training requires time.

Men enlisting now will probably be called upon to spend the winter in training, either in this country or in England. They cannot be available for the battle fields much before next spring. It is a certainty that after every advance the Allied forces will be called upon to meet and repel counter attacks of the enemy and this proceeding will be continued until one side or the other shall become exhausted and is unable to fight longer. Which side will it be?

If the British lines are to be kept strong enough to meet repeated attacks and still possess ability to make occasional gains, it is necessary that the training camps should feed to them constant streams of men, fit and qualified to take the places of those who fall. These men must be supplied from the offices, the workshops, the factories, the mines and the farms of Canada, and if they are to be ready when needed, no time is to be lost in securing them.

Today the mobilization of men for the 85th will commence and orders have also been received to commence recruiting for a battery of siege artillery. Thus, opportunity is afforded to young men to enlist in one of two branches of the service, each with its appointed work to do, each offering equal chances for valuable duty. Young men of New Brunswick, knowing of such opportunities, should no longer ignore the call.

THE LIBERALS AND THE NAVY.

Confronted with Laurier's ignoble failure, while in power, to do anything for the cause of Imperial defence, and the disloyal action of the Liberal members of the Senate of Canada in refusing to assent to Sir Robert Borden's proposal to donate three Dreadnoughts to the British navy, the Telegraph executes a change of front and, by one of those rapid movements comparable only to some of its previous "flips" from one side to the other of the political fence, now contends that Sir Robert Borden should have submitted his policy to the country.

It must be remembered that the Borden proposal was not intended to be a permanent policy, but to meet an emergency which had arisen and on which Sir Robert had the expert advice of the foremost naval authorities in the Empire. The Liberals knew the naval question would not be definitely settled by the Borden proposal, but that the Premier's contention was in effect that Britain required naval aid and required it more quickly than it could be furnished by Canada, if the ships were to be built in Canadian yards; to meet that requirement it was proposed that Canada should vote $25,000,000 for three ships, and that the question of a permanent policy should not be settled until after it had been submitted to the people at the polls.

This is absolutely in accordance with Sir Robert Borden's manifesto when in opposition. In London, Ontario, on August 15th, 1911, the present premier said:

"The Government naturally seek to withdraw their naval policy from public attention in this contest. They propose at great expense to construct a so-called navy which will be absolutely useless as a fighting force. Upon the testimony of leading members of the British cabinet expressed in their public utterances we believed that the Empire was confronted with a grave emergency, and we URGED IMMEDIATE AND EFFECTIVE ACTION. The question of Canada's permanent co-operation in Imperial naval defence involves far-reaching consideration. The Government's proposals were clearly a political makeshift and not a serious attempt to deal with a difficult question. RESPONSIBILITY FOR EMPIRE DEFENCE CLEARLY INVOLVES SOME CANADA'S PERMANENT AND EFFECTIVE CO-OPERATION IN NAVAL DEFENCE CAN ONLY BE ACCOMPLISHED BY PROPOSALS WHICH TAKE ACCOUNT OF THIS CONSIDERATION, AND ANY SUCH PROPOSALS SHOULD BE SUBMITTED TO THE PEOPLE FOR THEIR APPROVAL."

"The Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) proposes to solve all difficulties by spending enormous sums on a useless navy with all the wasteful incidents of political patronage, and BY RESERVING THE RIGHT TO DECLARE CANADA'S COMPLETE NEUTRALITY IN TIME OF WAR. This is a remarkable conception of our allegiance. IF CANADA REMAINS NEUTRAL WHEN BRITAIN IS ATTACKED, WHY SHOULD BRITAIN NOT REMAIN NEUTRAL WHEN CANADA IS ATTACKED. THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY MEANS THE DISMEMBERMENT OF THE EMPIRE. IF IT MEANS ANYTHING AND ALREADY IT HAS BEEN GREETED WITH ENTHUSIASM AND ACCLAIMED IN QUARTERS WHERE THAT DISMEMBERMENT WOULD BE HALLED WITH REJOICING." (Montreal Gazette, August 16th, 1911.)

Thus it will be seen that even in the heat of a bitter political contest Sir Robert Borden drew attention to his two-fold policy of immediate and effective aid as a temporary measure and the submitting of a permanent policy to the electors.

The Borden temporary policy was designed to meet just such a case as has arisen, and that the Liberals knew full well what he had in mind were gathered from the remarks of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, who, at that time, was a member of the Laurier cabinet. At a Liberal convention held in Waterloo, Ont., on August 22, 1911, Mr. Mackenzie King said:

"Are the people of this country going to place at the head of affairs a man who will be precipitated into such a position as this, who will take from the treasury of this country, and who would have taken money enough to build two Dreadnoughts and send that money to England so that they could spend it as they pleased? AND AGAINST WHAT COUNTRY? HE WAS READY TO SEND MONEY TO BUILD WARSHIPS TO FIGHT GERMANY?"

After that plain statement from one of Laurier's ministers is there any further chance to say that the Liberals did not understand perfectly well the purpose for which the money was to be voted? The Liberals can provide their own defence in the form in which it suits them.

The Borden temporary policy was introduced in Parliament and the Liberals fought against it on the ground that there should be an appeal to the people. Yet the Liberals themselves, when in power, refused to submit their permanent policy to the people. What they did not do with a permanent policy they desired to force the Conservative Government to do with a mere question of a gift. Where is the justice in that contention? What reason to say that Sir Robert Borden should have gone to the country to ask whether Canada was willing to assist the Motherland in time of need? The argument of the Liberals is too ridiculous to merit serious consideration and, by making it they simply seek to divert attention from their own miserable failure. But the people will not be deceived. All the twistings and turnings and evasions of the Liberal newspapers cannot hide the fact that THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT ASKED CANADA FOR A GIFT OF DREADNOUGHTS. SIR ROBERT BORDEN INTRODUCED A MEASURE TO MAKE SUCH A GIFT POSSIBLE. LAURIER AND HIS SENATORIAL PUPPETS STOOD IN THE WAY AND CLEARLY AND SOLELY DUE TO THEM IS THE DISGRACEFUL FACT THAT CANADA IS NOT REPRESENTED IN THE BRITISH NAVY TODAY BY "THREE OF THE LARGEST AND FINEST SHIPS OF WAR WHICH SCIENCE CAN BUILD OR MONEY CAN BUY."

Disraeli and Canada

According to a statement emanating from the office of the High Commissioner of Canada, the great Dominion is this year able to send to England almost enough wheat to provide every inhabitant of the British Isles with bread sufficient for twelve months' consumption. In other words, some two hundred million bushels are expected to be available for export. This is a striking confirmation of Disraeli's forecast made just upon seventy years since.

In his speech on the third reading of the bill for the repeal of the corn laws on May 15, 1846, when the bill was passed by a majority of 98, Disraeli touched upon the Colonial argument in the following words:
"I am not one of those who think it the inevitable lot of the people of Canada to become annexed to the United States. Canada has all the elements of a great and independent country, and is destined, I sometimes believe, to become the Russia of the New World."
The remarkable prophecy of the wheat-growing capacity of Canada thus achieves notable fulfillment at the present time.

Leaving for the Front.
On Friday evening the office men of the Atlantic Sugar Refineries Company gathered in the office of the company, and presented two of their fellow employees, who are enlisting for overseas service, with handsome wrist watches. The recipients, A. J. Newlands and Gerald Lawrence, made fitting replies to the address read by J. E. McCarthy, who presided.

This is the third member of the office staff who has enlisted within the past month. The following is the address which accompanied the presentation:
"The management and staff with whom you have been connected for some months past having learned that it is your intention of severing your connection with us with the idea of serving your King and country, take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of your worth and the kindly feeling we all have for you and to extend our hope that you will bring honor to your country and that you will have a safe and honorable return to us."
"As you have been informed by the management, your position, as well as all others existing, will be held for you on your return, which we trust will be in the not distant future, and we would ask you to accept the accompanying small token as a mark of the respect we all hold for you."

OPERA HOUSE

Partello Stock Company Opens Today in Good Play.

"The Man on the Box," the play presented at the Opera House for matinee and night today by the Partello Stock Company, has been styled, "America's best comedy." It has always been a prime favorite with theatre-goers since first produced by Henry E. Dixey. The play amuses by mirth interest upon the disentanglement of its situation, as a well made play should. Withal that it is called a comedy, it is replete with touches of melo-drama and has a good love story are drawn with a human touch. If you have ever read the book you will certainly enjoy the play as the dramatist has followed the lines of the novel very closely.

The Partello Stock Company is a carefully selected organization coming direct here from Lewiston, Maine, where they have been playing a long and successful stock engagement. Press comment from Lewiston and Portland papers speak in high terms of the personnel of the company and the dramatic ability of the players.

The Driver pinned under it asked what time it was when the others first came to help him. One of the men pulled out his watch and said: "It's eleven-forty." "Good," said the injured man, "my accident policy expires at noon today."

The insurance investigator seeking proof of the time, asked the owner of the watch what kind it was. "It's a Howard," was the reply. "That fixed the time of the accident beyond further question."

CAPTAIN HARRISON MAKES SINGING APPEAL FOR MORE MEN

Imperial Theatre Crowded Last Night and One Man Signed on for Foreign Service—Judge Forbes was Chairman and a Choir Led the Singing.

Yesterday.
Keith W. Johnston, St. John.

There was a splendid patriotic meeting at the Imperial Theatre last evening. The house was filled to capacity and those present were amply repaid by the message they heard. Rev. (Capt.) Harrison, who was with the relief column at Khartoum about thirty years ago, and is at present the chaplain of the 64th Battalion, was the speaker of the evening. He was in great form and the audience followed his remarks with a breathless silence that was a tribute to his ability. Hon. J. G. Forbes presided. The choir of St. David's church was in attendance, and their leader, Miss Blenda Thompson, rendered a patriotic selection which was greatly appreciated. Judge Forbes in introducing the speaker made a few remarks. He said: "The people of Canada are beginning to realize more than ever the importance of the struggle that is being waged in Europe. We, who enjoy the liberty and freedom of British citizens should be ready to stand up for the oppressed and down-trodden. The people of Great Britain and Canada cannot lay down their arms until the German host is crushed. We need men, and more men until the fight is over and Great Britain and her allies are victorious."

Captain Harrison captured his audience from the start, the references he made to the status of the country were heartily applauded by those present and he was accorded a reception which he will long remember. He showed himself to be a fighter for the Empire on the recruiting platform. He has already demonstrated his ability in the field, and it is those who are physically fit, and who heard the chaplain last night, do not enlist, then it will take more than a recruiting speech to awaken them to the gravity of the situation. His appeal was directed to the young men, who have the idea that this is England's war and not ours. He told them that the fate of Canada would not be settled in the Bay of Fundy, but would have to be decided in the fields of Europe. He said in part:

"I scarcely know how to put my appeal tonight so that it might reach the absolute souls of our young men. I am quite sure that no person in this assembly has regarded the war with a greater horror than I have. If it was not for the stern fact of that far flung battle line on the plains of Europe, I should have said that such a state of things could never be and yet the reality is there, are you in the reality here. Will the truth never reach the hearts of our people that Canada is at war, a war the most fierce, the most relentless that ever took place in this old world's history, and to stand the tide of this barbarous and uncalled for and unrighteous call to arms, I want to ring out the old and old repeated call tonight, 'Young men, your country needs you.' This is the call of the Empire, the call of blood, the call of kin, and strange and paradoxical as it may seem, the call of human brotherhood, who would like to have the stigma of dishonor cast upon his home, and yet our home, the glorious homes of this world-wide Empire, could not have avoided entering the arena of conflict without national dishonor. Ah! Say some of you, how many crimes have been committed on the stage of history under the sacred name of honor.

"I agree with you. I agree with you, the ravished and outraged women of Belgium, the maimed and mutilated children, the innocent peasantry of that unfortunate country, are all suffering and going through a veritable Hell-fire of suffering, distress and death because of a perverted sense of honor as conceived by a war infatuated fiery Hun. All the same, I want to say tonight that national honor is a reality, and we betide the nation that ignores its uplifting call, and because of the refusal to hear the call, I see in vision bright the doom of the Prussian Empire, through all the material sordidness by which they are surrounded today, and amid all their successes, there is the hand-writing on the wall: 'The Kaiser's grave is made.' Why Are We Involved.

"Righteousness and honor are the real kingly robes of rulers. Why is our honor as an Empire involved in this war? Because we were bound by honorable obligations to protect and defend the independence, the liberty, of a very small nation, whose greatest crime was that she wanted to live in peace with all men. We entered into a most solemn treaty with others to defend that small nation and maintain her integrity. We could not stand idly by and watch this fevered warlord of Europe treat that obligation as a 'scrap of paper.' Well, sir, we at least will be human in our treatment of him. We will nurse him back to health and sanity by repeated doses of shot and shell and cold steel and then we will inoculate him so that he will not catch the war-fever any more."

UNFURLING THE ORIFLAMME OR RUSSIA AND THE WAR

A Timely Address by Rev. Dr. Morison in Carleton Presbyterian Church Last Evening—A New Russia Will Rise from Ashes of This War.

In the Carleton Presbyterian church last evening, Rev. Dr. Morison preached on the subject of Russia and the War or Unfurling the Oriflamme. In opening, Dr. Morison said: "One of the effects of this war, which has compelled the whole world to pause in its habitual life and thought is this, that everywhere people are beginning to take an interest in men and things, which heretofore found no place in their mental horizon. Before this war broke out, how many people were there in Canada who ever gave Russia and its people as much as a thought? 'Indeed, so far as that land was concerned, it might be said that even such thought as was bestowed by our Canadian people upon it and its people was chiefly centered around its penal system, under which for years past thousands of people were exiled to Siberia as political prisoners, and in this connection I suppose mostly all of our people felt that time and time waves of indignation welling up within their breasts as they read of the sufferings of these wretched exiles as portrayed by various correspondents and other writers. Secretly even, however, did these writers take the trouble to make it plain that if these poor afflicted people of Russia were cruelly treated by the government, the responsibility for the greater part of these unpeppable horrors of misrule was due not to Russian barbarism or to Russian cruelty, but rather to that evil spirit of German influence, which for years past has plotted the complete and permanent political enslavement and enfeeblement of these millions of the 'Little White Father.'"

Two Parties in Russia

"All students of Russian history know full well that from the time of Peter the Great (1682-1725) there have been two parties in Russia. One a pro-German party and the other pro-Russian. Peter the Great, to be sure, himself belonged to the pro-German party and he attempted to transform the semi-Oriental society of Russia, and to make Russia a European power. All this, mark you, was done without consulting the national character or the natural conditions of the country and resulted in that sharp conflict of opposing interests which have never since been absent from Russian political councils and life.

Would Not Merge

"All down through the past centuries it has ever been impossible for those statesmen in Russia, who had the best interests of that sorrowful land at heart, to merge these two opposing parties—the pro-German and the pro-Russian. Never would they mix, never would they mingle, and down to the end of time all the sorrows and all the woes that for ages have resulted from this foreign influence in Russia must have continued had not some such bandit attempt as the present upon the part of Germany fanned the flames of Russian patriotism to white heat until, as the whole world now knows, that entire country, a land three times as large as the United States, exclusive of Alaska—a land that includes more than one half of all Europe and the whole of Northern Asia has become united as never before in all its long history and has determined that henceforth Russia must be for the Russians and the Germans must be packed out of the country, bag and baggage.

The Serial Beautiful. EARLE WILLIAMS as Tommy Barclay ANITA STEWART as The Goddess. WRITTEN BY GOUVERNEUR MORRIS. Presented by this Newspaper in collaboration with the VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA

Synopsis of Previous Chapter. After the tragic death of John Amesbury, the prostrated wife, one of America's greatest beauties, had died. Prof. Stilliter, an agent of the interests, kidnaps the beautiful three-year-old boy and takes her to a paradise where she sees no man, but child who taught by agents who instruct her for her mission to reform the world. At the age of sixteen she is suddenly thrust into the world where agents of the interests are ready to protect to find her. She finds the little Amesbury girl, after she had been spirited away by Tommy Barclay. Fifteen years later, while in the Adlon-Paris, Tommy is the first to meet Celestia as she comes from her paradise. Neither recognizes each other. Tommy has a difficulty in recognizing Celestia from Prof. Stilliter. They both hide in the mountains. Pursued by Stilliter they escape to an island. In the morning Tommy goes for a swim. During his absence Stilliter is assisted to steal Celestia, who runs to Tommy for help, followed by Stilliter. The latter at once realizes Tommy's predicament. He takes advantage of it by taking out Celestia and Tommy's clothes. Stilliter reaches Four Corners with Celestia just in time to catch an express for New York, where he places Celestia in Bellevue Hospital. Here her anxiety is relieved by the conversation. When Stilliter returns to the hospital for Celestia he finds her in the hands of a man in a tuxedo. Unable to persuade any hotel to take her, he makes a double bowline which is almost as easy to sit in as a chair. He escapes with her to a factory where she speaks to the workers. As she fastens a fire escape she was not as easy, for every moment the fire raged upon him, and he was unconsciously scorched, while making the upper end of his life fast. A moment after he reached the sidewalk the line burned through and fell. Tommy was so dazed that when a reporter asked him what his name was, he told him, and all his friends had the pleasure of reading about the rescue in the afternoon papers. Barclay and Stilliter were very much disturbed and angry when they read the paper with jealousy that she succeeded in making Fitch, who was with her when she read the paper furious and jealous too. But he kept this to himself. Mary was not only angry with Tommy and Celestia, but she was angry with herself. "It was in my power," she thought, "to tell that mixer's class. Tommy brought her here, and I refused to take her in. I was a fool. It's natural enough that in a surrounding of common laboring girls she should shine out like a superior being. But put her among the kind of people she's used to and see how she'll hold her own. When I saw her trying to eat oysters with a spoon for instance, and mistaking Father's butler for the President of the United States, I was almost ready to burst. The more she thought along these lines the less she thought that it was too late to do anything. Celestia's address, owing to the notoriety of the Octagon fire, was now common knowledge, and without any exact plan Mary determined to visit her—as a preliminary to disillusioning Tommy. She confided this idea to no one. Six months of persistent love making could not have advanced Tommy's cause as far as had one lighted cigarette but thrown into a pile of greasy rags. She, the messenger from Heaven, had been saved from a hideous death, not by any direct intervention of Heaven, but by the rescue of an old and strong hands of a young man who did not believe in her, or her cause, but merely loved her. The Octagon fire did not really shake Celestia's faith in herself, her origin or her destiny, but it set her to asking questions. What line must she draw between herself as a human being and herself as a Celestia? Already certain points of this earth and certain pleasures had been thrust upon her. She had not been able to prevent the fire, or to escape its terrors. No more could she keep her heart from beating a little quicker whenever she thought of Tommy. Already Tommy had helped her with her work, if only by the fact of making her life so that she could work. If he could be always near her, wouldn't he be always helping? And she couldn't answer any of these questions satisfactorily. There were two voices in her mind. One kept saying "Let yourself go—love him—it's all right," while the other kept saying "Of course you are human for the moment, but you have no right to be as other humans are. You mustn't let one man displace from your heart that love of the whole world which it contains." A man, erroneously, assumes certain rights or claims upon a certain woman. If she won't be his, at least she ought to be, because he has loved her first, or he was first to love her, or he intervened in her behalf and saved her from something or other—in the case of Celestia, Tommy had saved her from death. Also he had been the first to see her, and the first to love her. "Celestia," said Tommy, "I don't believe in your hands still in bandages from superficial burns" "You ought to marry me."

Copyright, 1915, by The Star Co. All Foreign Rights Reserved. Celestia," he said, hopefully. "There's no answer to questions like that. Those are the things that a man just has to say to the girl he loves. "That marriage," she said more gravely, "is a whole life's work in itself. And already I've a whole life's work cut out for me." "Celestia," said Tommy, "You are so wonderful. I believe you could do two whole life's works at once. I do. And I—well maybe I could manage one on my own account; but it wouldn't be work. It would be doing things I just couldn't help doing—loving you and trying to make you happy." "Tommy," said Celestia, "if now, when we are not even engaged—" "I am." "—not even engaged to be married, you exert yourself in every way to keep me from going about among the people and telling them how the world may be made a better state, try in fact to keep me all to yourself, how would it be if we were married? I've got to go to the way I have been sent; and all the traditions of a man's rights in marriage would try to prevent me—" "What if I promised not to?" "You have to promise that." "I want you so," exclaimed Tommy, "that I'll promise anything. Will you marry me?" "I don't know, Tommy dear," she said. He drew a long breath, rose and walked to the window. "I think not," said Celestia, and then noting the really tragic expression upon the young man's face, she added, "But sometimes I think I'd like to." Freddie interrupted them to say that some one wanted to speak with Mr. Barclay. Tommy returned from the telephone looking still more dejected. "I expected to stay all afternoon," he said, "and help you with your mail; but it seems that my father wants to see me very urgently and I suppose I've got to go." "Of course you have," said Celestia cheerfully. Tommy made one last appeal to Celestia, going now close to her and speaking swiftly in a low voice. "She heard him out gravely, and at the end of his impassioned pleading shook her head still more gravely. "When I know what is right for me to do, I'll tell you. And what I tell you will be final. There are some debts that which I owe to you, in such a debt, I don't know. But I know this, that if you don't go on seeing me, you mustn't make love to me any more. It makes it so much harder for me to think clearly. Some morning I shall wake up knowing what I ought to do, and if I wake up knowing that I ought not to marry you, then of course, I won't." "Even though it broke my heart. Now go." "May I come back when I've seen my father?" "If you'll be good, Tommy." So Tommy promised, very elaborately and at length, to be good, and in the act of promising broke his promise several times and hurried to see his father. In spite of their recent differences of opinion, Barclay and Stilliter's long series of disappointments, they met with perfect friendliness, and as if there had never been any trouble between them. Barclay opened the conversation by a laughing reference to the Octagon fire. "I used to look for your name on the sporting page of my newspaper," he said, "but now I have to turn to the accounts of socialist meetings and of fires. Was it as close a shave as the paper made out?" "It certainly was," said Tommy, "I wasn't there, but I know that if you don't mind, I didn't think my beard would ever grow again." "How did the famous Celestia behave?" "Like a brick, except when she fainted after getting all the other girls out." "I am very interested to see her," said Barclay, "and to hear her speak. A friend of mine heard her address to the Shirtmakers' Union, after the fire, and came away talking like a lunatic. How does she impress you?" "As a speaker?" Barclay smiled and nodded. Tommy blushed and did not smile. "She has a beautiful voice," he said, "she seems to speak to one person at a time until everyone has been spoken to. The most interesting part is her power of convincing people. Men whom I have known to have had opposite theories seem to come right around to her way of thinking." "No," said Tommy, "she doesn't seem to alter my beliefs at all." "She claims to have been sent direct from Heaven. Do people believe that?" "The mass of the people who have heard her don't even question it." "It will stake my soul, sir," he said, "that she believes it." "But you don't, and you don't believe in her crusade. What is her idea—the usual thing? To destroy all existing conditions, lump the money, divide up, and begin all over again?" "No," said Tommy, laughing, "That's what you think my idea is. Celestia isn't for destroying large fortunes (indeed some of them might become even more swollen if her doctrines became law). She believes that there is enough wealth in the country to make all the inhabitants clean and comfortable if we could do away with the waste of money; if in other words the United States were run to make money instead of to spend it. Plausible isn't it? And absurd." "Why absurd? I have no quarrel with her theory." "Of course not. You'd be one who would have to profit by it willy nilly." "The absurd part is to think that the great American people can be made to execute so drastic a change in their laws—with the politicians of all parties crying calamity. You see, Tommy—thinkers can only work as long as they can think, but politicians can and do work all the time. But there is more to this young woman than I had imagined. You say she has a following?" "That grows by leaps and bounds." "Where do you come in?" "Tears gathered in her eyes, and she added, "Even though it broke my heart. Now go." "Perhaps I should put it more strongly." "You mean that you are paying her serious attention?" "In so far as she will receive them." "I'm very sorry," said Barclay, "but we've all likely to be a friend of yours, too. All my friends in this world, so far, are either poor people or laborers." "All but Mr. Barclay?" "Celestia nodded. "She comes to speak to you about him. He has as you know a great future before him. He is the idol of his father's heart, and one of the best-looking young men in New York. His friends very naturally—please don't misunderstand me—it's nothing against you—but we've all heard of the melodramatic Octagon fire rescue, and we all know how respectable he is to romance and beauty—and you are beautiful. Do you mind if I say that you are perfectly beautiful?" "But I belong to a different station in life than this mutual friend of ours who is so susceptible to romance and beauty, and you have come to beg off for him with arguments about blasted prospects and ruined careers and social ostracism?" "Though Celestia spoke with great earnestness Miss Blackstone was for a moment gleeful and said: "You are not only beautiful but clever." "Why couldn't I make him a good wife?" "You are too sensible to ask questions like that. You couldn't expect his friends to—" "Receive me?" Perhaps not. And yet I speak a number of languages; I have your word for it that I have good looks. At table my chief weapon is a fork. I am young and healthy, and I haven't been long enough in this world to have a past. "If I am to let him off you must give me a better line of reasoning than maybe and perhaps. What if my whole happiness was bound up in him; in his life? If I told you that we were already married—" "Good God," exclaimed Mary. "Don't worry," said Celestia, "we are not on the grounds that I am not his social equal." "Your motives will always be under suspicion. Don't you know that you are a penniless girl, and that he will be worth millions?" "If he does marry you," said Miss Blackstone, suddenly losing control of her temper at the look on Celestia's face, "people will say it was because he had to. Two want camp in the North Woods without a chap, grows and escape malicious talk." "It would seem so," said Celestia slowly. And she started to turn very pink and ended by turning white. And there began to burn suddenly in her breast a feeling of which until that moment she had known nothing. Sweet she was, gracious, and good. She thought she had been sent by Heaven to help everybody in the world. Nevertheless those sharp burning pangs which she was enduring were jealousy. "You love him yourself," she said quickly, "and so I think I will marry him after all." "One can't argue except with an equal," said Miss Blackstone, and turned upon her heel. As she left the house, Tommy Barclay was on the point of entering it. She was so angry that she cut him dead. He smiled, but not altogether with amusement, for nobody really likes to be cut by anybody, and went in to Celestia. He expected to find her as usual, friendly, cool, well poised and aloof. She was none of these things. There were just going to overflow her eyes and run down her face, and as for being aloof, she no sooner saw Tommy than she ran to him, as a child runs to its nurse, and flung her arms about his neck, and told him that she loved him and would marry him. "Right away," she said. "Poor Tommy!" He held her close and caressed her, and there was a big lump in his throat, and never a word that he could say until at last the meaning of his silence was clear to Celestia and she tore herself loose from him. "Now it's you," she cried, who won't marry me?" "Oh, Celestia," cried Tommy, "How can I? I haven't a penny in the world!" "A dozen of the most important men in the United States were gathered in Barclay's office upon his urgent invitation. Celestia was already making such a stir in the city among the poor, that Barclay and Stilliter had concluded that the time was ripe to try her effect on the rich and efficient. Only men whom they could trust were present. The last to arrive was Kehr, the coal baron. His word was as good as his bond, and except that he spent oceans of money on Chinese antiques, he was said to be the stingiest man in Pennsylvania. Professor Stilliter had been telling of some recent experiments in hypnotism of which he had just received the account from an Arabian correspondent. As Kehr entered he caught the word "hypnotism" and snorted. "All rubbish," he exclaimed. "Might as well believe in ghosts or Democrats. I'd like to see anyone hypnotize me!" After this he shook hands with Barclay and the others, last of all with Stilliter. "You don't believe in hypnotism," said Stilliter, "because you don't know anything about it. I've got something here, though, that you do know about, none better." So saying he took from his case that famous crystal of which mention has been made. "I am not rich," said Stilliter, quietly, "but I will give you a thousand dollars if you can find a flaw or an imperfection of any sort in that crystal." He reached around Kehr from behind and quickly took the crystal away from them. Then he turned to his audience. "Did I hear someone say 'put up job? I am not rich. It wouldn't have been worth while. Why, he was easier to hypnotize than a chicken. Tell the gentleman how easily you were hypnotized. Turn and face them first, make a little bow. That's the fellow. Now then!" Kehr spoke in a dull monotonous voice: "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I was easier to hypnotize than a chicken." "Spoken like a man!" exclaimed Stilliter. He turned to Kehr and in a voice of command said: "Sit down at that desk in the first position of writing." Kehr obeyed. "Take a sheet of paper. Ink your pen. Prepare to write. Write as I dictate: Dear Professor, I O U ten million dollars." Kehr finished and there was a craning of necks to see what he had written. The I O U was passed from hand to hand. Suddenly Sturtevant broke the silence. "This," he said, "is only a scrap of paper. It hasn't cost him a cent—yet." "True," said Stilliter, "well then," he turned to Kehr. "Have you any money with you?" "Yes." "Say, yes sir." Kehr did this, and then produced from an inner pocket a thick roll of yellow-backs surrounded by a broad rubber band. "I think it would be pleasant if you distributed them among the gentlemen present." He began to do so. When, suddenly Stilliter waked him. Kehr looked at that remained of his great roll and his jaw dropped. He stammered. Then his brows knitted and the sweat came. Stilliter handed him the I O U. "There is no hurry about this," he said sweetly; "still if you could let me have a couple of million on account." "It's my writing," said Kehr, "but I don't remember writing it." He was in agony. "And still you don't believe in hypnotism?" "That crystal—!" He gained astonished face from one to another. "You may tear up that I O U," said Stilliter grandly. "But we shall keep the actual cash you have distributed as a souvenir of the occasion." Just then a door opened quietly, and Barclay's private secretary ushered Celestia into the room. The capitalists rose as one man. It was their homage to dignity and beauty. Barclay stepped quickly forward. "Thank you for coming," he said. "We are busy men, and it is difficult for us to get to hear you. But from what I have gathered it seemed to me that we ought to hear you. Of course you've made mistakes," he went on sweetly, "but that wasn't malice, was it? It was ignorance. For you can't want the poor to remain poor, and the wretched, wretched. I have been sent to show you how this great house, which we call the world, may be clean and fit for human beings to live in. You shall ask me questions if you don't understand." And then she spoke for a long time, gently and persuasively, looking slowly from face to face, using simple words that children might have understood. In a far corner of the room, Stilliter stood. His eyes never left her, and he looked like a man laboring under a great strain. The effect of Celestia upon the capitalists was curious. At first they looked cynical and amused, but physically attracted to her. Then they looked interested, and then astonished. Only Kehr retained his expression of scornful conservatism. Now and then he asked a terse question, and did not seem convinced by her answers. But to the others, after a while her answers seemed unanswerable. "And so," she finished, "I don't ask you to give anything. You shall even have more if you must. I only ask you to help me with the others—to see that the billions which are wasted shall be wasted—so that through cleanliness we shall do away with disease, and that through the general well-being, every man, woman and child shall have a right to be happy." "How about the Constitution?" snapped Kehr. "Some of you," said Celestia, "will sit in the convention which is to write the new constitution." He gave a hoarse, harsh laugh. "How about the solid South?" "Celestia shook her head at him as at a pugacious and pig-headed child. "We shall have to huffy it," she said. Then, her voice, once more grave, and her great eyes sweeping the circle. "Who is going to help me?" she asked. "We shall need millions—millions in money—millions in brains—" Barclay stepped swiftly to her side, and with that same smile of gentle, old-fashioned gallantry. "My dear," he said, "don't worry about that." And he turned to the others: "You have heard a new gospel in the world," he said. "If it's a pipe dream I'm crazy. Gentlemen—what she wishes can be done. And if you are with us, it shall be done." One by one they came forward, like men in a trance, and shook hands with Celestia. All but Kehr. "Anything to stand in with old friends," he said, "especially when that's the side your bread's buttered on; but if it's a question of believing that what we've listened to is any thing but nonsense, you can count me out." "Well run you," said Barclay, "as Senator from Pennsylvania. And you'll do as you're told." Celestia laughed merrily. (To be continued)

BOSTON EVENS UP IN THE SECOND GAME OF SERIES

FOSTER WINS HIS OWN GAME; MORAN'S TEAM RETURNS WITH ONE VICTORY TUCKED AWAY

Second Game of Series as Brilliant as Opener Was Lacking in Real Baseball — Foster and Pres. Wilson Divide Honors of the Day — Boston Boxman at His Best and Hammers in Deciding Tally in Ninth

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—The breaks of the game, those fields favors of fortune that sway the pendulum of fate, smiled upon Boston today, and to-night the red-hosed champions of the American League and the Philadelphia pennant-bearers of the National circuit, were on their way to Boston with the honors of the 1915 world series all at even.

President Wilson and his fiance, Mrs. Norman Galt, shared the honors of the second contest with a stoutly built young Boston pitcher known to baseball fame as George Foster. Foster may never go down in history as an Alexander, a Walter Johnson or a Christy Mathewson, but when the story of the second battle of the current series is filed away in the archives of the National pastime it will be found that all he did today was to hold the fighting Phillies to three hits, to strike out eight of their best wielders of the willow, to make as many hits himself as he allowed the entire opposition, including a sizzling smash in the ninth, that sent Gardner across the plate with the winning Boston run. In addition to these few meagre activities in the box, young Foster sped to first base a couple of times and took throws from his fellow fielders that turned two seeming errors into sensational ones.

Foster and President Wilson Divide Honors of the Day

Mr. Foster on the field and Mr. Wilson in the stand were indeed the heroes of the day. Foster won by 2 to 1. The President had a wider margin, for the more than 20,000 baseball enthusiasts crowded in the friendly little Philly park were on their feet for and with Mr. Wilson time and time again. They greeted him with cheers when he came, and forgot the sting of defeat to send him on his way to Washington with shouts that echoed for blocks around. Mrs. Galt was greatly cheered by the episodes of the game, and was smilingly happy over the attention showered upon her.

The President, rooted loyally for the home team. When the signal for "all up" came in the supposedly mystic seventh inning, Mr. Wilson was among the first on his feet. But when the tumult and the shouting died the Philly cause had not been bettered, for Foster in this frame turned back the first three men to face him. In the last half of the ninth, when the Phillies' plight was desperate, a band in the grandstand began to play the Star-Spangled Banner. Mr. Wilson caught the first strains of the national anthem and again was on his feet, followed by the entire crowd. The bleachers in the far field stands heard the music too, and joined the standing throngs with hats in hand. The scene was one of genuine dramatic tension. But it was not written in the book of baseball that the Phillies should win today, so neither the patriotic presence of the President nor the appealing influence of the latest White House romance could help them to a victory.

Real Baseball From Start to Finish

It was real baseball today from the moment that Hooper, the first man up, was passed on four balls, until Tris Speaker, one of the greatest outer gardeners the game has ever known, ended the contest by reaching into the center field bleachers to snatch a bullet-like drive from Paskert's bat and turn a potential home-run into a meteoric out, thereby saving for Mr. Foster his well-earned ball game.

The play was sharp and brilliant through all the innings, as different from the somewhat saffron-hued contest of Friday as world series games should differ from battles on the sand lots. The field was fast and the players of both teams seemed to have found themselves. The nervousness of yesterday had disappeared, and there was not a semblance of the lack of thought that gave an ivory finish to some of the episodes of the first of the series. There was little to choose today between the teams in the field. The only error was charged to Catcher Burns of the Phillies, who dropped a difficult throw from second and thereby allowed Hooper to score in the first.

Manager Moran of the Phillies placed his faith today in Erskine Mayer, the elongated underhand singer from Atlanta, Georgia, and Mayer pitched a far better game than the detailed score will show. Although he allowed more than three times the number of hits registered of Foster, he was seldom in real difficulty and kept the fence wreckers of the Red Sox crowd batting pop flies most of the way. Speaker was able to make but one hit—his first of the series, and his batting average for the two games stands tonight at .167. Although young Mr. Foster's occupation is supposed to be that of keeping the other fellows from hitting, he promises now to be the batting hero of the series, getting away today with an average of .750 in four times up. When he first faced the puzzling underhand delivery of Mayer the Boston pitcher ignominiously whiffed.

This must have been a decoy, however, for the next time he danced to the plate he landed on a fast one and slammed it high up against the right field fence for the first extra base hit of the series. In the seventh Foster shot a single to centre. Each time he was left, however, Foster evidently got tired of depending on his teammates to help him home, so in the ninth, with Gardner on second and the score a tie, he decided to break up a perfectly pleasant game of ball that seriously threatened to go to extra innings. He slammed a long single to right centre and cantered to second when Paskert made a futile effort to cut off the winning run at the plate. Foster was almost as busy on the paths as he was in the box, and his red-sweated figure grew intensely familiar about second base, while the white clad Phillies were at defensive work in the field. It was a hard hitting game on both sides, but the Red Sox got the breaks and their drives went safe. The Philly batters hit ball after ball with a smashing force that ordinarily would land them in the base-hit column of the box score. But today the drives went within reach of the fast Boston outfield, and the local players were turned back to their benches.

In the two games to date the Boston players have made eighteen hits for a total of three runs, while the Phillies have accumulated four runs on eight hits. In individual batting the Red Sox lead; Lewis, Gardner and Foster all being tied with three hits apiece. Hooper, Hobby and Barry come next with two each. The best hitting among the Phillies has been done by Bancroft and Luderus, each of whom has two to his credit; one of Luderus being the double which scored Cravath with the only run of the day for the National Leaguers.

The official figures for today's receipts and attendance: Total attendance 20,306; total receipts $52,229; national commission's share $5,202.90; players' share $28,995.66.

At a meeting of the Athletic Association of Mount Allison University held last Thursday, the matter of the college team's participation in intercollegiate football came up for discussion. The members of the Association decided that in view of the present war, and its crying need for more men, Mount Allison would refrain from entering the intercollegiate series for this season. This decision will be forwarded to the University of New Brunswick and Acadia College.

AVERAGED 102.6 MILES AN HOUR

New York, Oct. 10.—A new world record in automobile speeding was attained yesterday when Gil Anderson, at the new Sheepshead Bay speedway driving at the average rate of 102.6 miles an hour, won the 350 mile automobile race for the Astor Cup and $50,000 in prizes. His time was 3 hours, 24 minutes and 42 seconds, making a world's record by ten minutes, 42 minutes, 38-100 seconds.

Terrific speed characterized the race throughout, but although the cheering throngs banked around the speedway amphitheatre saw driver after driver forced out of the race because of engine trouble, there was not one outward incident to mar the contest. Twenty of the speediest automobiles in the world had entered, but before the race was finished more than half the drivers, including many favorites, had been forced out.

The weather was ideal, the crisp October air giving zest both to drivers and spectators. With the cup, Anderson's share in the cash prizes was $20,000. Both Anderson and Tom Rooney, who finished second, beat the former world's record. Rooney's prize was $10,000. After Anderson the finishers were: Tom Rooney, second, 3:25:28, beat the former world's record of 3:35:25.38, average speed of 102.19 miles an hour.

Ed O'Donnell, third, 3:39:55, fifteen minutes and thirteen seconds behind Anderson; average speed 95.45 miles an hour.

O'Donnell's push to the front furnished one of the most exciting features of the last fifty miles of the race. As far behind as fifth and seventh place in the first 300 miles he moved into third place during the last ten miles.

Bob Burnham was third at 346 miles or four miles from the finish, when engine trouble forced him to stop.

 About two o'clock yesterday morning two young men called at police headquarters and asked for protection by the night which was given them. They gave their names to Desk Officer Gibbs as John Silver, aged twenty of Germany, and Louis Tersky, aged twenty-two of Russia. When the time came yesterday morning to turn over the two men were arrested by Detectives Barrett and Briggs and charged with entering Canada illegally and thus avoiding Act 7 of the immigration laws. One of the young men who gave the name of Silver and claiming Germany as his home, changed his name and informed the officers that he was Morris Finkeltstein and he said that he was from New York.

Thanksgiving at Trinity.
 Special Thanksgiving services were held in Trinity church yesterday. Rev. Ralph Sherman preached at the morning service and Rev. W. R. Hibbard, M. A., head master of Robesay Collegiate school, gave a fine address in the evening. Both sermons were on thanksgiving and the services were well attended. In addition to appropriate hymns special music was sung which included Te Deum (Barrett); Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis (Kimmis); with the anthem, "Lord of the Harvest," (Barby), and "O God, Who is Like Unto Thee," (Poster). James S. Ford was organist and chor-master. The chancel of the church was tastefully decorated with sheaves of wheat and the pulpit was hung with grapes and rowan berries.

Boys Were Dismissed.
 Under the Speedy Trials Act, Saturday morning, the case of the King vs. Kinsella, Tower, Lavigne and Garnett, charged with breaking and entering Dean's store and stealing fruit, were taken up, and the crown case closed. No evidence was offered for the defense, and the cases were dismissed. His Honor holding that the evidence was insufficient to support a conviction. In the Kinsella case an attempt was made to introduce evidence of a confession, but this was excluded, on motion of G. Earle Logan, counsel for Kinsella, on the ground that some inducement had been made to the defendant to confess. K. J. Macrae appeared for Tower, and E. S. Ritchie for Lavigne and Garnett. C. H. Ferguson prosecuted.

SIERGE BATTERY TO MOBILIZE IN ST. JOHN

Colonel Armstrong instructed to take on 218 men for this service.

Colonel Beverly R. Armstrong, officer commanding the artillery force on Partridge Island, has received instructions from the militia department to begin recruiting men for a siege battery here. The strength of this company will be 218 men and as there are already quite a few applications in those who have been waiting for a chance to enlist with an artillery unit, will have to get busy at once, if they want to get into this regiment. The force will be mobilized here and will specialize in the operation of heavy howitzers. This is somewhat of an innovation in Canada; and as there is much mechanism about these guns it is a most interesting branch of the service. Up to this time the only artillery supplied by Canada has been of the heavy and field variety and this will be the first siege battery mobilized here.

It is intimated that the officers will be appointed from the 3rd Regiment. A special course of instruction will be given. The unit will be one of the finest in this country and extra care will be exercised in the selection of the men. Applications will be received at the recruiting office, corner of Mill and Dock street, for this battery, and it will be necessary for those wishing to join to get their names in at once, as it is positive that this company will be filled in a few days.

BROTHERHOOD WILL ASSIST

Members of Germain Street Society will aid Patriotic endeavors.

At the annual meeting of the Brotherhood of Germain Street Baptist church held yesterday afternoon officers for the ensuing season were elected and plans discussed respecting the work to be accomplished. The following were elected as officers: President, H. G. Marr; first vice president, E. Clinton Brown; second vice president, W. K. Haley; secretary-treasurer, F. T. Lewis.

Mr. Haley expressed the view that the predominant feature of the season's activities should be in the direction of helping in every possible way any good cause connected with the war.

Rev. F. S. Porter said that the assistance of the Brotherhood in connection with the Patriotic Rally to be held about the second week in November would be much appreciated. He explained that it was intended to hold the rally on a Sunday and that the ceremony of unveiling the roll of honor, which already contains the names of no less than thirty-eight church members would form part of the day's programme.

On motion of W. C. Cross it was agreed that the executive of the Federated Brotherhoods should be invited to attend at Germain Street Baptist church on October 26 with the object of discussing a proposed banquet of the different Brotherhoods to inaugurate the opening of the fall and winter season. A committee was appointed to make nominations for membership on the different committees of the Brotherhood, and the meeting was adjourned until the 26th inst.

COL. FOWLER'S REGIMENT TO MOBILIZE NOW

Men will be received today at Sussex for 88th Battalion.

The mobilization for the 88th Battalion will be started today at Sussex, where officers and physicians will be on hand to receive men wishing to serve in Col. Fowler's regiment. Dr. Burnett will be examining officer. Lieutenant-Colonel Gunning has been recommended for the position of second in command of the regiment, and Major Boggs of the Artillery at Halifax will go as third in command.

It has not yet been announced whether men now at Sussex under Colonel Campbell will be handed over to Colonel Fowler or not, but it is expected that some definite announcement will be made soon.

The commercial travellers were to have had a meeting Saturday night, but on account of the Patriotic Auction the assembly was postponed until next Saturday. J. V. Kierstead said last night that fifteen travellers were now ready to sign on and hoped within a week to have fifty-five men for a platoon for the 88th. When that was formed another would likely be raised. He said a great deal of interest was being shown in the matter and no difficulty was expected in filling at least one platoon.

CITY WORKMEN REMOVE PART OF CONCRETE

Street railway obstruction will come up at once—Start made Saturday night.

Workmen from the city public works department started Saturday night to remove the concrete from between the rails in Main street. The operations were continued until about midnight and about ten feet of the material was removed. A steam drill was used to assist in loosening the concrete.

The action followed the decision of the court earlier in the week. On account of the absence of the city solicitor the work was not started until his return Saturday. A meeting of the commissioners was held and the announcement was made afterward that it had been decided to immediately start removing the obstruction to the street railway.

The work Saturday night was witnessed by a large crowd, who seemed to enjoy the efforts of the workmen.
