A checkmark is placed above the segment between  $26x$  and  $28x$ .

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Stauffer Library
Queen's University

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche sheet contains the symbol ➡ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Stauffer Library
Queen's University

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas. le symbole ➡ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

PAST M. P. SOV. GRAND COMMANDER SUPREME COUNCIL OF ANCIENT ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE OF FREEMASONRY
 FOR THE NORTHERN MASONIC JURISDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

BROTHER HENRY L. PALMER, 33°

On Friday, May 7, 1909, there passed from earth one of the foremost Masons in our country, and one of the best known in the world, our esteemed Brother Henry L. Palmer, who for sixty-eight years was an active member and officer, and for thirty years held the exalted position of Sovereign Grand Commander, of the largest jurisdiction of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, numerically, in the world.

He was born near Mount Pleasant, Wayne County, Pa., Oct. 18, 1819, and at the time of his death had eclipsed the allotted time by nearly a full score of years, and he retained his brilliant intellect and marvelous executive ability until within a few weeks of his death; in fact, the great work of his life was performed after he had attained the age of 60.

Brother Palmer, in the summer of 1849, owing to a throat difficulty, moved to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, which became his permanent home. His health was precarious for some years, but in the end he became quite vigorous, obtained a law practice of wide reputation and responsibility. In 1858 he became connected with the organization of the North-western Mutual Insurance Company as counsel, and in 1874 he resigned a judgeship to which he had been elected that he might become President of the company.

He early became attracted to the principles of our Institution, and was made a Master Mason in Evening Star Lodge, No. 75, Watervliet, New York, March 10, 1841, of which he became Master in the years 1845-48. He also appeared in the Grand Lodge of New York as a member "entitled to vote" in the annual meetings in June, 1846-49. On moving to Wisconsin he became at once active in the Craft affiliated with Tracy Lodge, No. 13, August 18, 1849, and was elected Master, Dec., 12, 1850, also filled the office in the years 1851-58, 1865-67. In the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin he was elected its Grand Master, 1852-53 and 1871-72.

The Capitular degrees were conferred upon him in Apollo Chapter, No. 48, R. A. M., of Troy, New York, in 1846. In Wisconsin he became a charter member of Wisconsin Chapter, No. 7, at Milwaukee, he was its High Priest in 1854-58. In the Grand Chapter of Wisconsin he was elected Gd. High Priest in 1858. In the Cryptic he was Thrice Illustrious Master for years. He was Most Illustrious Master of the Gd. Coun. of R. and S. Masters of Wisconsin for 1863-64.

The Chivalric degrees were conferred on him in Apollo Commandery, No. 15, Troy, New York, May 6, 1848, he withdrew in 1850 and became a member of Wisconsin Commandery, No. 1, at Milwaukee, June 5, 1850. He was E. Com. 1853-61, nine consecutive years. He was Gd. Com. of the Grand Commandery, Wisconsin, 1859-65, seven consecutive years. In the Grand Encampment of the United States, at the triennial session held at Columbus, Ohio, 1865, he was elected M. E. Grand Master. At the time of his death he was the oldest living Past Grand Master of Knights Templar.

In the A. A. S. Rite, which he loved so well, and which he adorned for thirty years as its illustrious head, he made the Northern Jurisdiction synonymous with all that is inspiring and successful in Scottish Rite Masonry throughout the world. August 6, 1863, he was elevated to the thirty-third degree, and October 20, 1864, he became an Active member of the Supreme Council. In the Union Council formed in May, 1867, he became an earnest working member. At Philadelphia, September 17, 1879, he was elected Sovereign Grand Commander, and was unanimously re-elected at the expiration of every triennial period until his decease.

In this eminent station so grandly and honorably filled, who shall attempt by the employment of words to definitely express what is so indelibly impressed in all our hearts? His character was an open book. His record was one of integrity. His life is a history of achievement. To his untiring industry more than to any other man is due the respected position of our Rite, and it will ever stand linked with his other work as a monument to his life, his character, his industry and his principles.

THE HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES OF FREEMASONRY.

CHAPTER XXVI.

FREEMASONRY IN NORTHERN EUROPE.

SWEDEN, NORWAY, DENMARK, HOLLAND, LUXEMBURG, BELGIUM, RUSSIA, POLAND.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

THE history of Freemasonry in Sweden possesses an interest peculiar to itself. The Swedes appear to have fallen away from the simple teachings of the Craft as easily and early as the other nationalities of Europe, but with this difference, that instead of fitting from one Rite to another, constantly seeking variety, they have remained steadfast to their first heresy, and still work the same ceremonies that originally riveted their attention about 1760. These ceremonies are in great part their own invention, although based—not improbably—upon the degrees of the Clermont Chapter; and as they have only been adopted by one Grand Body in Prussia, and by Denmark, Sweden has ever since been practically outside the circle of Freemasonry—a distant connection only of the great Masonic family. This want of intimate Masonic intercourse, combined with a marked absence of indigenous Masonic literature, is the reason that any history of Swedish Freemasonry can be no more than a sketch. The two best attempts at a history with which I am acquainted are merely reproductions, as regard early facts, of Thory's "Acta Latomorum," and agree so closely with respect to later occurrences, as to warrant the conviction that they are either based on the same original, or copied one from the other. My own account will therefore present little or no novelty. Considering the peculiar position of the Craft in Scandinavia, this paucity of material is somewhat vexatious.

Among the many Swedes who were admitted to the Fraternity in England and France may be mentioned Count Axel Eric Wrde Sparre, who was initiated at Paris May 4, 1731, and on his return to Sweden, is asserted to have founded a Lodge at Stockholm. Of this Lodge nothing further is known, and it is presumed that it disappeared in consequence of a royal edict of October 21, 1738, forbidding Freemasonry in Sweden on pain of death.

The Handbuch informs us that in 1736 Count Carl Fr. Scheffer was appointed Provincial Grand Master for Sweden, but of this worthy we know literally nothing, and can only infer that the decree of 1738 may possibly have put a stop to his activity. The edict, however, was withdrawn in the same year, and in 1740-45 we become aware of further traces of Freemasonry. In 1746 a Lodge existed at Stockholm, called "St. John Auxiliary," in which year, on the birth of Gustavus III., and again in 1753, on that of the Princess Sophia, it struck commemorative medals. From that date we may look upon the Craft as firmly established in the country, although the Lodge in question—generally considered the Mother-Lodge of Sweden—was not regularly constituted until January 2, 1752, under Count Knutson Porsee. Even at this early period the Fraternity was strong enough to found an orphanage (1753), which has since grown to a most prosperous institution, the just pride of the Swedish Craft. In 1753 also, H.M. Adolf Frederik himself founded and presided over a second Lodge in Stockholm, and Lodges arose at Gothenburg (1754), Stockholm and Helsingfors (1756), and at Stockholm again in 1757. The Swedish metropolis was next invaded by a Scots Lodge—1758—and in the following year there was a further addition to its roll—the Lodge "Union"—which conducted its proceedings in the French language. So that at this important date (1759) there were at least eight Lodges at work in the country.

According to Lawrie,<sup>1</sup> "the first Lodge in Sweden was erected at Stockholm in 1754, under a patent from Scotland." Here, however, he apparently only follows Smith,<sup>2</sup> from whose pages he copied very freely. Smith, it may be observed, goes a step further, and states that the Lodge of 1754 was, in 1783, the Grand Lodge of Sweden. But as in the same work he observes, with regard to some Lodges at Prague, in Bohemia, that "they are all under the Constitution of Scotland, or at least, they call themselves Scotch Masons,"<sup>3</sup> the light thus shed upon his method of research will justify our believing, that in the Scots Lodge of 1758 we have the fons et origo of the alleged Scottish Lodge of 1754. To this it may be added, that the first foreign Lodge on the roll of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, was the "St. Andrew's," chartered at Boston (U.S.A.) in 1756.<sup>4</sup>

In 1759 a Grand Lodge of Sweden was formed, of which Count Eckleff—who had travelled far and wide—appears to have been the chief instigator and first G.M. It was formally inaugurated on December 25. As regards the presidency of Count Eckleff, the facts are somewhat in dispute, it being variously maintained that he only gave way in 1773 to the Duke of Sudermania; that he merely exercised the office for a few years; and even that he was never G.M. of the Craft at all, but simply "Head Master" of the Scots Lodge. I much regret my inability to reconcile, or decide between, these discrepant statements, which, as we shall presently see,<sup>5</sup> are of great importance in relation to Zinnendorff's proceedings in Germany. It is further asserted, and with much probability, that Eckleff was a member of the Chapter of Clermont; that he modified the degrees of that body; and that he gradually introduced them into Sweden—thus forming the Swedish Rite. At that date, however, there is no indication of high degrees beyond one Scots Lodge, and the High Chapter was not erected until subsequently. Meanwhile we find traces of a very few Lodges in Norway, erected by the English Prov. Grand Lodge of Denmark. At the formal union of the two kingdoms, such of these as survived, came under the rule of the Swedish Grand Lodge.

In 1760, the first signs of the Clermont degrees making a distinct advance are to be observed.

It does not appear, however, that the new Rite made any immediate progress, as in 1763 official documents still only speak of Freemasons and make no mention of Knights.

In 1762—December 7—King Adolf Fredrik wrote to Baron Saltza, the G.M., announcing that he assumed the title of Protector, and that he was ready to bear a part in the expense of organizing the Order. The King was W.M. of the second Stockholm Lodge.

It is curious to record, that in spite of the existence of this Grand Lodge, the G.L. of England, under Lord Blaney—April 10, 1765—issued a warrant to Charles Fullman<sup>1</sup> as Prov. G.M. of Sweden—but at all times English Masons have troubled themselves very little with what was going on abroad. It is of course possible, that the patent was granted at the request of brethren who were dissatisfied with the new Rite. Our records, however, are silent on this point. The result of the appointment was not very great. In the Lodge List of 1770<sup>2</sup> there appear under the Nos. 385-387, Lodges 1, 2 and 3 in Sweden, constituted in 1769. These were carried forward—still without names—as Nos. 250, 251, 252 (in 1792), until the Union of 1813, and then disappear. On comparing the Swedish lists, I am unable to find any Lodges constituted between 1762 and 1774, so that in these three English Lodges we are presented with a pretty little nut for future historians to crack. About this time also (1765), Schubart came to Sweden to introduce the system of the Strict Observance, in which he was unsuccessful. The Swedish Rite rather aimed at a spiritual revival of the Order of the Temple, and the German at its material restoration.

It has been asserted that the influence of Swedenborg's writings was very powerful in moulding the doctrines of the Swedish Rite, which was remodelled and rearranged in 1766 in the following manner:—

It consisted of 9 degrees: 1°, 2°, and 3°, the true Craft grades; 4°, Scots Apprentices and Fellows; 5°, Scots Masters; 6°, Knights of the East and Jerusalem; 7°, Knights of the West, Templars; 8°, Knights of the South, Master of the Temple; 9°, Vicarius Salomonis. It is, however, doubtful whether the 9th degree existed before 1780. In the 8° the Templar legend is communicated: "Shortly before his death Molay discovered to his nephew Beaufen all the rituals, treasures, etc., of the Order of the Temple. With the assistance of nine Templars Beaufen disinterred the corpse of the G.M., and being disguised as Masons they removed the remains in their aprons. Subsequently they adopted the apron as a distinguishing badge of their new organization, and sought refuge amongst the fraternity of stone-masons."

It is of course quite possible to consider this crystallization of the Clermont ideas as the result of Schubart's mission, although it scarcely took the form intended by him.

Under these circumstances, i.e., possessing a special rite of its own, only lately established, it is somewhat surprising that, in 1770, the Grand Lodge of Sweden applied to that of England for formal recognition, acknowledging the illegality of its French charters, and that it was recognized as a Grand Lodge with power to constitute Lodges in Sweden only. Possibly, this step was the result of Fullman's exertions as English Provincial Grand Master, and the three Swedish Lodges which obtained English numbers in 1770, may have been three of the already existing Lodges at Stockholm? It is certain, however, that the incident produced no retarding effect upon the propagation of the Swedish Rite.

In 1771 Adolf Fredrik died, and was succeeded by Gustavus III., whose brother Karl, Duke of Sndermania, became Grand Master in 1773. In 1775 the King entered Grand Lodge as a member. His exact position is not easily defined, inasmuch as he was superior in dignity to the C. M., although the term Vicarius Salomonis was not yet in use. It is probable that under the name of Protector he exercised the highest control; and that this title, towards 1780, was merged in that of Vicar. Gustavus III. is charged with having made use of Freemasonry for political purposes, employing it—as a counterpoise to the influence and power of the nobility—to bring into prominence and power, talented men of humbler birth who were devoted to their Grand Master. However this may be, it is not to be disputed that in no other country has the Craft been so intimately controlled and directed by the Royal Family, and that it soon acquired the aspect of a State institution, a character which it now possesses in the highest degree. The events of 1776-81, during which, for a time, the Duke of Sndermania occupied the post left vacant in Germany by the death of Von Hnnd, have already been narrated. The fears of the Landgrave Karl, that political motives lay at the bottom of the movement, were probably not unfounded.

In 1777 the Grand Chapter was formed, and Gustavus became Vicarius Salomonis, thus putting the cap-stone on the edifice of the Swedish Rite. In the same year Zinnendorf's acts in Germany were repudiated, of which more hereafter.

On March 22, 1778, the first Provincial Grand Lodge was erected—for the provinces of Schonen, Halland, and Blekinge; and on July 16, 1779, a second for Gothenburg. The third body of the kind under the Grand Lodge of Sweden was instituted at Linköping in 1813.

The Lodge of St. Magnus, No. 199, Gothenburg, was chartered by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, November 6, 1780.

In 1780 the Rite was rearranged, and divided into three classes. I.—St. John's Lodges, comprising the Craft. II.—St. Andrew's Lodges, the Scots degrees; 4°, Elects or Scots Apprentices and Fellows; 5°, Scots Master or Grand Scots Elect; 6°, Stuart brothers or Knights of the East and Princes of Jerusalem. III.—Chapter, 7°, Confidants of Solomon, formerly Knights of the West; 8°, Confidants of St. John; 9°, Confidants of St. Andrew. Beyond this is a sort of 10°, composed of three steps of honor, Knights, followed by Commanders, of the Red Cross, and Vicar of Solomon. The ruling body of the Order is this 10th degree, and its officers are called the Grand Wardens of the Crown, Lamp, Sword, Square, Temple, the Standard, the Grand Chancellor, Treasurer, and Architects, and at the head of all is the Vicar of Solomon. Owing to the Christian color of Freemasonry in Sweden, Solomon throughout is but a type of Christ, and his Vicar consequently becomes Christ's Vicar, a species of Protestant Pope. That the office is now always held by the King of the country is therefore only natural. The Rite having been remodelled, the King and upwards of 400 brethren met on the Stockholm Exchange, and with great pomp and solemnity invested the Duke of Sudermania with the attributes of Vicar and Grand Master conjoined, and the King himself, after promising the Craft his protection, clothed the G. M. with a splendid ermine mantle as his robe of office.

In 1781 Karl resigned the Provincial Grand Mastership of Germany, and in 1792 Gustavus III. was assassinated, his son, a minor, Gustavus IV., next ascending the throne.

His Majesty King Oscar II, of Sweden

WAS INITIATED INTO FREEMASONRY DECEMBER 7, 1848

Appointed Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Sweden in 1859; made a Past Grand Master of England in 188- He initiated the then Prince of Wales, now King Edward VII, into Freemasonry at Stockholm in 1868.

Being only twelve years old, his uncle Karl, the Vicar and Grand Master, was regent of the kingdom until 1796. Gustavus was initiated by him in 1793, but even after commencing to reign independently he made no effort to assume the direction of Masonic affairs. Indeed he never took any prominent part in Freemasonry, possibly owing to his aversion to his uncle, beyond in 1796 decreeing that in future all Swedish Princes were by birthright Freemasons.

On January 24, 1796, the Duke of Sudermania wrote a long letter to the Grand Lodge of England praying for a regular intercourse and mutual representation. This was presented in Quarterly Communication by the Baron Silverhjem, April 10, 1799—and replied to by the G.M. of England, George, Prince of Wales, on May 8, 1799.<sup>1</sup> In spite of the great difference in ritual, the two Grand Lodges have ever since been in fraternal communion.

On March 26, 1803, the King issued a strict prohibition against the existence of all secret societies, from which, however, Masons were specially excepted. On March 13, 1809, he was dethroned, retired in exile to St. Gall, and died in 1837. He was succeeded by his uncle, Charles XIII. (Duke of Sudermania), Grand Master and Vicarius Salomonis. Charles completed the Masonic political edifice by instituting—May 27, 1811—the Civil Order of Charles XIII., to be conferred on thirty members only, besides princes, of the 10th degree of the Swedish Rite, whereof 27 must be laymen and 3 in holy orders. The King himself to be always the Master of the Order. The insignia are a red enamelled cross, bound in gold, surmounted by a royal crown, worn on a red ribbon as a collar round the neck, and a smaller but similar cross, minus the crown, on the left breast. He then resigned the Grand Mastership in favor of his adopted son and heir, Bernadotte (Karl XIV.), retaining, however, the office of Vicarius. About this time, many complaints were made against Swedish Masons, for refusing to recognize brethren of German jurisdiction, except those of Zinnendorff's Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge, Royal York of Berlin, formally but unavailingly, protested in 1814; and it was not until 1863, that this intolerance was put an end to, by the action of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes. In 1818 Karl died, and was succeeded by Karl XIV. (Jean Bernadotte), who assumed the title of Vicar, and appointed his son Oscar to the Grand Mastership, which he had himself previously held from 1811. In the same year the Grand National Lodge of Berlin (Zinnendorff's) was supplied with the complete ritual, which it had never hitherto possessed, and mutual representatives were appointed. From that time their work and organization became identical.

Little remains to be narrated. In 1844 Karl XIV. was succeeded by his son, Oscar I., who, already G.M., assumed the office of Vicar, and combined both dignities until his death in 1859. His son, Karl XV., then became Vicar, and appointed his brother, Oscar Fredrik, the heir-apparent, Grand Master. In 1868 our present English Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, was initiated by the latter, who, mounting the throne as Oscar II., in 1872 became Vicar of Solomon. His admission into the Fraternity took place in 1848. The Grand Masters under the present king have been Count Sten Lewenhaupt, who was succeeded by Magnus Huss, and the latter by the Crown Prince Oscar Gustaf Adolf—initiated January 13, 1877—the present G.M. of the Swedish Craft.<sup>2</sup> Its Lodge roll at the present date comprises 5 Provincial Grand Lodges, 11 St. Andrew, and 25 other Lodges.<sup>3</sup>

DENMARK.

There are before me four accounts of the progress of the Craft in Denmark, which all agree most remarkably; but in truth there is very little to narrate.

The first Lodge in Copenhagen was erected by Baron von Münnich, November 11. 1743, which, January 13, 1745, took the name of St. Martin. Münnich was a member of the "Three Globes" at Berlin, but does not seem to have possessed any authority for his acts. The Lodge applied for, and was granted a warrant by the Grand Lodge of England, October 9, 1749, as No. 204, and first appears in the Engraved List for 1750. In 1756 it is shown as St. Martin's Lodge, No. 139, but was not brought forward at the next change of numbers in 1770.

Hardly was it established when three members resigned and erected a second Lodge. Zerubbabel, on May 26, 1744. They forthwith applied to England for a warrant, but, impatient of delay, betook themselves to Lüttmann in Hamburg, the English Prov. G.M. for Lower Saxony. As he also was too dilatory for them, they once more applied to England. Soon afterwards Lüttmann forwarded a dispensation, and on October 23, 1745, Lord Cranstoun signed their warrant. This was the "New Lodge, Copenhagen," No. 197, in the Engraved List for 1750, No. 130 in 1756, and which also drops out in 1770.

On October 2, 1747, a Danish brother, Von Dall, received a patent from the Scots Lodge, founded on the "Three Globes," to open a Scots Lodge in Copenhagen. This is probably the Lodge "Le petit nombre," which in 1753 applied to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for a charter as a Grand Lodge, with the privilege of electing their own G.M. A Provincial commission was granted, the holder of which, and all Lodges erected by him, were required to acknowledge the G.L. of Scotland as their paramount superior. The Lodge then acted as a G.L. for some time, but died out. In 1749 Lord Byron granted a patent to Count Danneskiold Lanrvig as Provincial Grand Master of Denmark and Norway, and a P.G.L. was erected, the depnty G.M. being the Russian Ambassador, Baron Korff. One or two other Lodges were probably instituted throughout the country, and we hear of a new one in Copenhagen in 1753, "the Three Ardent Hearts," constituted by the Three Globes of Berlin. That the degrees of the Clermont Chapter made some little way in the following years, is to be gathered from the fact that at Johnston's first Strict Observance Convent at Altenberg in 1764, Von Prangen appeared as a deputy from a Kiel Lodge. In 1765 the Strict Observance missionary, Schubart, appeared in Copenhagen, and managed to obtain Danish signatures to the act of Unquestioning Obedience, and the Provincial Lodge of Denmark at Copenhagen then took the rank and title of Prefectory Binin, under the immediate jurisdiction of Duke Ferdinand, and the special protection of the Landgrave Karl of Hesse. From that date the History of Freemasonry in Denmark is practically that of the Strict Observance; but some few details may be cited. In * Unless, indeed, the following passage from the Laws and Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, 1836, introduction, pp. iv., v., refers to this Lodge. "The Lodge was raised to the dignity of G. Lodge of Denmark, having been erected in 1743 under the auspices of the G. L. of Scotland." But if Münnich's Lodge was warranted by Scotland, why did it apply to England in 1749? The supposition—an echo of Lawrie, who probably derived it from Smith (The Use and Abuse of Freemasonry, p. 199)—would also conflict with the former's statement respecting "le petit nombre." See the next paragraph but one above, and ante, p. 2.

1767 the first two Lodges, St. Martin and Zerubbabel, united to form one—"Zerubbabel of the North Star"—working alternately in Danish and German; but on November 18, 1778, a purely Danish Lodge was opened, "Frederick of the Crowned Hope," and Zerubbabel confined itself to the German language. In 1785 the modified S.O., or the Rite of the Beneficent Knights of the Holy City, was introduced in accordance with the resolutions of the Wilhelmsbad Convent; the first three degrees becoming once more almost purely English. The highest degrees, those of the Scots Directory, were not, however, established until 1819, and created so much opposition that the Altona Lodge erected a private Directory of its own. The Lodges at this time appear to have been practically independent of any real governing body.

In 1792 Duke Ferdinand died, and the Landgrave Karl became the sole head of the Danish Lodges. This event was succeeded on November 2, 1792, by a Cabinet decree of King Christian VII., officially recognizing Freemasonry in his dominions on the sole condition that every Lodge should acknowledge Prince Karl as the Grand Master of the Craft.

Curiously enough, in the following year—February 6, 1793—a patent was signed by the Prince of Wales, appointing the same personage "Provincial G.M. of Denmark and Norway; his Danish Majesty's German Dominions; and also of such Lodges as had been under the immediate direction of Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick."

On Karl's death in 1836 the Crown Prince, subsequently Christian VIII., assumed the Protectorate, and under his rule the Craft prospered exceedingly. In 1841 the Crown Prince, afterwards Frederick VII., was initiated in the Odensee Lodge, Mary of the Three Hearts, and on his father's death in 1848, became Grand Master of the Danish Craft.

In 1853 the brethren at Helsingör and Altona introduced the Swedish Rite into their Lodges, and in 1855—January 6—a decree of the Royal G.M. made this Rite incumbent on all Danish Lodges. In the same year the two Copenhagen Lodges were fused into one, called "Zerubbabel and Frederick of the Crowned Hope." In 1857 the second grade, or the St. Andrew Lodge, was instituted, first at Helsingör, and then at Copenhagen; and in 1859 the organization was crowned by the constitution of the High Chapter at the castle of Frederiksborg, conferring only the seventh and two following degrees. This completed the formation of the Grand Lodge of the VIIIth Province of the Temple, i.e., Denmark.

In 1866, by the surrender of the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein to Prussia, Denmark lost the Lodge at Altona; in like manner it had in 1814 lost the Norwegian Lodges; but it has since warranted three new Lodges, 1 at Aarhus and 2 in Copenhagen.

At the head of the Craft is H.M. King Christian IX. as Protector; the Crown Prince Christian Frederick Wilhelm Karl is G.M., Vicarius Salomonis, and a Commander of the Swedish Order of Charles XIII. The Deputy Grand Master is J. P. Trap. The roll of Lodges in 1879 comprised 2 St. Andrew, and 7 other Lodges; and the Fraternity was estimated at 2800 members, thus giving an average of 300 per Lodge, a very large number, indeed, according to our English ideas. Abroad the Grand Lodge of Denmark has no daughters; the Lodges in the Danish colonies of St. Thomas and St. Croix being under the English, French, and Scottish jurisdictions.

HOLLAND.

The first appearance of the Craft in Holland was of a momentous nature, being no less than the admission into the Fraternity of Francois, Duke of Lorraine, subsequently Grand Duke of Tuscany, co-Emperor of Austria and Emperor of Germany. Lord Lovell, G.M. of England, deputed, in 1731, Dr. Desaguliers as Master, John Stanhope and John Holtzendorff, Esqs., as Wardens; the Earl of Chesterfield, Ambassador at the Hague; and three other brethren to hold a special Lodge at the Hague, in order to confer the first two degrees on the Royal candidate.<sup>1</sup> It is noteworthy that among these there is only one Dutch Mason, which will tend to disprove certain random statements, that several French and English Lodges already existed at that date in Holland.<sup>2</sup>

The first authentic record of a Dutch Lodge is the meeting on September 30, 1734, of the "Loge du Grand Maître des Provinces réunies et du ressort de la généralité," with Count Vincent de la Chapelle as Master, at the Hague. This title, Lodge of the Grand Master, is remarkable, for it is difficult to understand whence any G.M. of that date derived his authority. The mystery is increased by the next notice, a paragraph in the Amsterdam Saturdagsche Courant of November 3, 1735, announcing that a second Lodge had been held at the Hague on October 24, 1735, in the Hotel Nieuwen Doelen, in the presence of the Grand Master Rademacher, and of the Dep. G.M. Kuenen. It was apparently called "Le Véritable Zèle." I can only suppose that these titles of G.M. and Deputy were self-assumed. Rademacher—Treasurer to the Prince of Orange—was cited before the courts on December 9-12 following, and constrained to promise never more to frequent Masonic assemblies. Kuenen translated Anderson's Constitutions into French<sup>3</sup> and German.<sup>4</sup> The Handbuch asserts that these two were Provincial and Deputy Provincial Grand Masters of the English Lodges in Holland. If so, both the Constitutions and Preston fail to notice the appointments, and it would be difficult to name many English Lodges as existing in Holland at that time, as the only one on our roll, previous to 1749, appears in the list of 1736, as constituted in 1735 under the No. 131. This may be the latter of the two cited above, and perhaps its warrant was granted to Rademacher. The two Lodges, however, soon closed, and did not reopen till 1744. On October 16, 1735, a Lodge, composed chiefly of Englishmen, held at Amsterdam, was pillaged by a mob, which occasioned a riot. This Lodge is also absent from the English Lodge lists, but the occurrence, together with the newspaper paragraph above referred to, caused the Government to issue a commission to inquire into the whole matter of Freemasonry. Their study of the Book of Constitutions appears to have been most minute, but their report, published November 30, 1735, was unfavorable, and a magisterial order was promulgated December 2, 1735, forbidding assemblies of the Craft. In spite of this order a Lodge meeting was held at Rotterdam on the 10th, and the members were promptly brought to book. Lawrie gives us a very touching account of the noble refusal of the brethren to unveil their secrets, and of their counter-proposal to initiate one of the magistrates, which being effected, the whole bench joined the Fraternity and became zealous members.<sup>5</sup> The facts apparently are, that out of respect for one of the chief members, himself a magistrate, and from the well-known integrity of the other members, together with the weighty consideration that the Emperor was himself a Freemason, the matter was quietly hushed up. However this may be, the prohibition of the Craft was soon withdrawn, for in 1740 the magistrates took its part against the intolerance of the clergy.

In 1744 the Hague Lodges reopened, and in 1749 the Loge du Grand Maître changed its title to the Union Mother-Lodge. In the same year (1749) we find from the Engraved List for 1750—those for 1746-49 are unfortunately missing—that a Lodge was warranted at Rotterdam, the Lodge of Orange, No. 202. The next Lodges of English origin were constituted at the Hague (probably the Royal), No. 223, in 1752; at Amsterdam, No. 234, November 30, 1753;<sup>1</sup> and at the same place the Lodge of Charity, No. 265, June 24, 1755; and the Lodge of Peace, No. 215, September 23, 1756. In Amsterdam there also existed a fourth Lodge, founded by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, "Concordia Vincit Animos," July 13, 1753, the only Lodge of Scottish origin ever warranted in Holland. This accounts for at most 8 Lodges—3 at the Hague, 1 at Rotterdam, and 4 in Amsterdam.

On November 8, 1756, the Deputy Grand Master, Dugran, of the Union Mother-Lodge at the Hague, issued invitations to thirteen other Lodges to constitute a Grand Lodge of Holland. We are therefore forced to conclude that the Union had warranted at least five Lodges, and that its designation of Mother was no empty title.

The 14 Lodges met December 25, 1756, and on the 27th constituted the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands, electing Baron Aerssen-Beyeren as Grand Master, and Baron von Boetzelaar as D.G.M.

In 1757 the former Mother-Lodge and the Royal Lodge at the Hague amalgamated under the title "Royal Union," which is still the foremost Lodge in Holland.

The same year witnessed an unsuccessful attempt to erect a Scots Lodge at the Hague, and the constitution by England of the Lodge of Regularity, No. 228, at Amsterdam on November 21.

In 1758—August 6—Count von Bentinck was elected the second G.M., and under his rule the English Constitutions were reprinted. He was succeeded—June 24, 1759—by the third Grand Master, Baron von Boetzelaar,<sup>2</sup> who held the office for 39 years. Up to this date the regulations of the Grand Lodge were probably our own book of Constitutions; but on July 27, 1760, new Statutes were approved, and published in 1762.

Resuming our examination of the English Lists, we find that in 1762 the following Lodges were warranted<sup>3</sup>—Royal Frederick, No. 271, Rotterdam January 25; United Brothers, No. 284, Amsterdam, June 16; Virtutis et Artis Amic., Amsterdam, No. 288, September 16. Also in 1765, Perseverance, No. 359, Amsterdam; 1767, British Union, No. 400, Rotterdam, August 1; Three Pillars, No. 402, Rotterdam, August 21; 1768, Victory, No. 419, Rotterdam, March 17; and in 1769, the "Sun Lodge," No. 436, Flushing, February 3. From the date last given no English Lodge has been constituted in Holland.<sup>4</sup> A lengthy inquiry on the spot would probably be necessary to determine whether these Lodges were constituted in the first instance by the Grand Lodge of Holland, and merely joined, i.e., were absorbed and legitimated by that of England; or whether they were totally independent of Baron Boetzelar. Being in seaports only, I incline towards the latter alternative, and am strengthened in this conclusion by a letter from which I shall next quote.

On April 25, 1770, "the Provincial Master for foreign Lodges acquainted the Grand Lodge of England, that he had lately received a letter from Charles Baron de Boetzelar, Grand Master of the National Grand Lodge of the United Provinces of Holland, requesting to be acknowledged as such by the Grand Lodge of England, whose superiority he acknowledged; and promising, that on condition the Grand Lodge of England did not in future constitute any new Lodge within his jurisdiction, the Grand Lodge of Holland should observe the same restriction with respect to all parts of the world where Lodges were established under the patronage of England:"<sup>1</sup> and concluding by requesting a firm alliance and annual correspondence. The request was acceded to. This certainly looks as if the numerous Lodges so lately warranted by England had somewhat alarmed our Dutch brethren, and will account for the sudden cessation of England's activity in the Low Countries. Many of these English Lodges were not renumbered in the 1770 list, and we may presume that they immediately joined the Grand Lodge at the Hague; but on the other hand five Lodges in Holland were retained on our roll until 1812, from which we may conclude that they preferred working under their English charters, and that at this early date England initiated the policy in these matters—ever since maintained by her—which is now the cause of querulous complaint on the part of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. The Lodges referred to were the Royal Frederick, British Union, Three Pillars, Victory, and Sun, all meeting at Rotterdam.<sup>2</sup>

German authorities maintain, that the compact with England was ratified May 16, 1770, by the English Prov. G.M. I cannot help believing that this is incorrect, as we do not know of any such individual, unless, indeed, Rademacher had really been appointed to the office in 1735, and was still living. I prefer to think that the ratification emanated from the Provincial Grand Master for foreign Lodges, a functionary under the Grand Lodge of England, first appointed about this time.<sup>3</sup>

In 1778, Prince George Karl of Hesse-Darmstadt pointed out to Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick the advisability of gaining over Holland to the Strict Observance. That country was still remarkably free from all perversions of Freemasonry, although, of course, individual members had been admitted to the various Rites during their foreign travels. Many were also members of the Knightly degrees of the Strict Observance. The result of negotiations which were now entered into was that in 1779 a pact of unity was concluded between the Directory in Brunswick and one formed at the Hague, and that on March 18, 1780, a National Chapter of Holland was constituted, with Prince Frederick of Hesse-Cassel and G.M. von Boetzelar as Protector and Superior respectively.

The Dutch Craft was not, however, overridden as in other countries; the Grand Lodge at the Hague still retained its full power; the Chapter was merely an accessory. What the consequences might have been it is difficult to say; but the S.O. was already on the wane. It will be remembered that on September 19, 1780, Ferdinand had issued a circular seriously questioning the very grounds of the whole movement. As a result, although Schwara represented this Chapter at the Wilhelmsbad Convent, the system never made much progress in the Netherlands, and soon died out. Pure English Freemasonry thus once more assumed an undisputed supremacy.

On November 15, 1784, Grand Master von Boetzelaar celebrated the twenty-fifth year of his Grand Mastership, and in 1798—May 28—his rearrangement of the statutes was approved and accepted. He died a few weeks afterwards, and in the same year—June 24—was succeeded by Baron Teylingen as fourth G.M., who in turn was followed by Bijleveld, the fifth holder of that office, May 29, 1805.

At last, in 1807, the high degrees obtained a firm footing in Holland, and a code of laws was issued for their governance. The rite chosen was the French or modern rite of 4 extra degrees, of the Grand Orient of France. This is not to be wondered at, when we consider that Holland had submitted to France in 1795, when the Batavian Republic was established, and that in 1806 the bonds were drawn still closer by the appointment of Louis Buonaparte to the throne of Holland. Rather should we marvel that an oasis of good sense had so long resisted the Saharan sands of the fanciful high degrees, which had so encroached on the Craft elsewhere in Europe. The French aberration—ladies' lodges—had also found an entrance in 1801, but was peremptorily prohibited on June 10, 1810.

In the year last-named—June 24—Bonquet was elected sixth Grand Master. Louis abdicated the throne, and Holland became an integral portion of the French empire. This led to complications. The Grand Orient of France always maintained that only one supreme Masonic body could exist in each state, and some lodges established by it in Amsterdam conceived themselves justified in refusing to acknowledge the Dutch lodges until they were rectified by the G.O. Meanwhile—June 24, 1812—W. P. Barnaart was elected seventh Grand Master, and the dispute was brought to a climax by a circular of the G.O.—February 17, 1813—ordering the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands to submit and dissolve. This being met by a flat refusal—March 21, 1813—the Grand Orient immediately retaliated by warranting a number of lodges in various cities of Holland, the membership of which consisted chiefly of French officials. The strain was, however, suddenly eased by the French reverses of 1814: Holland reacquired independence, the French lodges were weakened by the withdrawal of the French officials, and May 29, 1814, the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands called upon these lodges to come in and accept Dutch warrants. Some complied, the others died out. The same year is marked by the commencement of troubles of which the high degrees were the cause. The Chapter was independent of the Grand Lodge, though composed chiefly of the same members, and had a G.M. of its own. It occupied much the same position as our Royal Arch Grand Chapter does towards our Grand Lodge, and its meetings were always held on the days succeeding Grand Lodge communications. In 1814, Bijleveld, who had presided over the Grand Lodge, 1805-10, was Master of the Grand Chapter. On May 30, violent disputes arose over some contemplated changes in these degrees, into the details of which I shall not enter.

On March 30, 1815, the Austrian (French) Netherlands, or Belgium, became an integral portion of the kingdom of Holland; and—May 30—Reepmacher was elected eighth Grand Master. In the previous March the king had expressed a wish that the lodges in both divisions of his territory should be gathered under one Grand Lodge, and this question was discussed at the meeting of May 30, but delayed and postponed for many months.

Prince Frederik Wilhelm Karl, of the Netherlands, Duke of Ursel, second son of William I., was initiated at Berlin in 1816, by a deputation from the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes, with Gujonnean, G.M., at its head. A lodge, "Union Frédéric," was then formed at the Hague, with the prince as a member, which applied to the Grand Lodge—June 2, 1816—for a warrant of constitution. This was not only granted, but the prince was unanimously elected ninth Grand Master. He accepted the office, was proclaimed on June 4, and installed October 13, 1816. There is, however, much confusion in these dates.<sup>1</sup> O'Etzel, the historian of the Three Globes (Berlin), says he was "made" in June, 1817, and passed and raised there in the course of the next few months, which would of course render the above occurrences impossible.<sup>2</sup> The main facts, I apprehend, are correct, but the dates require investigation. The "Cosmopolitan Calendar" for 1871 states he was installed October 18 (?), 1817. If this be correct (and I am inclined to think it is), then we may arrive at a conclusion which is quite possible, viz., that the prince was elected in 1816 (being at that time a non-Mason), procured initiation at Berlin in 1817, passed through all the degrees there during the same summer, and was finally installed at the Hague in the ensuing autumn, viz., October, 1817. In the same year he was elected G. M. of the Chapter; but events close at hand show how little of profit he was able to perceive in the high degrees.

Scarcely was the G.M. installed before he received the mysterious packet containing the so-called Cologne Charter. As this subject has already been fully treated,<sup>3</sup> any further reference to it here will be unnecessary. Attempts were also made in this year to incorporate the Belgian lodges with those of Holland, but the former were desirous of obtaining a separate Grand Lodge; and after the Prince of Orange, Frederick's elder brother, had been initiated in 1817 in the Hope Lodge, Brussels, they proposed to him to become their G. M., an offer which he declined on May 7. Two days before—May 5—the Grand Master, seeing the difficulty of a complete fusion, proposed in a circular the formation of two administrative (Grand) bodies—one for the northern, the other for the southern provinces, with a single legislative (Grand) body—composed of an equal number from each side—for both. A newly-formed Grand Lodge of Belgium met for the first time—June 24, 1817—and elected Prince Frederick as their G. M. On August 30 a commission was appointed, at the prince's request, to arrange a modus vivendi between the two Grand Lodges, of each of which he was G. M.

It executed its mandate after four sittings, and reported September 20. The project was approved almost unanimously in Belgium, but only passed by 77 to 20 votes in Holland. The arrangements were finally concluded on December 11. Considering the extreme importance and difficulties of the matter, this promptitude speaks well for the business-like habits of our Dutch brethren. The common supreme body was by these statutes entitled "Grand Orient," and was composed of the officers of each Grand Lodge, which were to assume the titles of Grand Administrative Lodges, and of 28 Lodge Masters, 14 from the northern, 14 from the southern, provinces. It was to be summoned when necessary by the G. M., and to meet alternately at Brussels and the Hague—but as a matter of fact, it never met at all. The Belgian Grand Administration was formally inaugurated in the Lodge of Hope, Brussels, April 11, 1818, and that of Holland, at the Hague, May 10 following.

In 1819 the prince's action—however well intentioned—gave rise to an acrimonious strife in the Craft, which disturbed its peace for several years. Thoroughly imbued with the uselessness of the high degrees, he proposed—April 25—to abrogate them entirely, and to substitute two steps or courses of instruction beyond the degree of Master Mason. These were not to be degrees, they were to entail no distinction beyond a small silver medal, and were to be denominated Select Master and Super-Select Master (wilverkoren and opper-wilverkoren). The proposition was received with avidity by the Grand Lodge, but rejected indignantly by the Grand Chapter. At the meeting of the latter—May 31—Frederick provisionally resigned his office, and declared his intention of abstaining in future from any participation in the high degrees. He then asked for a commission to examine his project, and when it reported unfavorably upon his proposed "Divisions of the Master's degree," but favorably as to the high degrees, sent in his final resignation. The Chapter—May 22, 1820—placed the Mastership in commission ad interim, and at the next meeting the commission proposed a revision of the degrees. A committee appointed for this purpose handed in a report on July 11, 1821, counselling great modifications, in order to bring the Chapter more into conformity with the principles of the Lodge. But the passions of the "high degree" members were by this time so aroused, that the report was not acted upon until eight years afterwards. The Grand Mastership was offered by the Chapter—May 19, 1823—to the Prince of Orange, and on his refusal, Nabout van der Veen was elected, and filled the office from July 1, 1824, to 1834, during which long period a ceaseless strife and bitterness of spirit reigned in the Fraternity.

The Grand Lodge meanwhile sanctioned the proposed additional steps to the Master's degree, and added a governing body to administer them. The object of their foundation was the instruction of Master Masons in the history and arcana of the superior degrees of every rite, so as to place them on a footing of equality with ALL Masons, without, however, according to such degrees either approbation or support. The two steps were called Divisions (or Sections) of the Master's degree—although the third degree remained intact—and a better title would have been additions or supplements.

In 1830 Belgium obtained its independence, but the Grand Lodge of Holland did not at once resume its former position, and still continued to style itself the Grand Administration for the Northern Provinces. In 1833 signals of peace were held out by Frederick, who proposed in Grand Lodge to appoint a committee to deliberate upon the means of reuniting the brotherhood. The committee reported in 1834, and a fresh committee was appointed conjointly by Grand Lodge, the Chapter, and the divisions of the Master's degree. This mixed commission reported in 1835. The report was accepted by Grand Lodge on May 10, and by the two other bodies shortly afterwards. According to the treaty the Prince once more became G.M. of all three bodies, who were to work side by side in amity. No Rite was to be admitted into Holland except the Symbolic degrees, working under their Statutes of 1798; the Modern Rite or high degrees (Statutes of 1807), and the Divisions of the Master's degree as settled in 1819. The G.M. was to appoint a deputy in each body, but as he did not himself attend high degree meetings, he was to appoint one of two candidates proposed by the Chapter.

In 1837 a certain feeling of soreness existing between Belgium and Holland was allayed, and as a sign that Holland disclaimed any further supremacy over the Belgian Lodges, the Grand Administration for the Northern Provinces resumed its title of Grand Lodge of the Netherlands. Since that time Freemasonry in Holland has enjoyed quiet and prosperity; no changes of organization have been introduced, and few facts of first moment remain to be recorded.

On June 6, 1841, Grand Lodge celebrated the completion of the G.M.'s 25th year of office. Prince Frederick on this occasion paid into the hands of the Grand Treasurer 9000 florins for charitable purposes.

In 1847 several Amsterdam brothers petitioned for a warrant to constitute a Lodge called "Post Nubila Lux." They declared their adhesion to ten fundamental axioms, of which only a few have come to my knowledge. In these I am unable to perceive anything dangerous or unmasonic, but the Grand Lodge thought otherwise, and refused the warrant. I am not aware of their reasons—the sixth axiom, "futility of all high degrees," could hardly have influenced them, because no Lodge is bound to work these; but the petitioners having waited patiently for three years, at last established the Lodge—May 26, 1850—"by virtue of their inherent power." It is still working, and even flourishing, but never having been recognized by the Grand Lodge, is of course outside the pale of the Craft, and irregular.

The year 1851 witnessed the birth of Alexander, Prince of the Netherlands, the second son of King William III., and grandson of that Prince of Orange to whom I have already referred, who had meanwhile reigned as William II. from 1840 to 1849. He was initiated—July 26, 1876—in the Lodge "Royal Union," at the Hague, and became Prince of Orange on the death of his elder brother in 1879.<sup>1</sup>

On May 19, 1856, the Grand Lodge celebrated its centenary of constitution, and in 1866 the jubilee of Frederick's Grand Mastership. On this occasion the munificent Prince presented, for the use of the brethren, the superb Masonic library of the late Dr. Kloss, which—at a cost of £3000—he had purchased entire. This was a truly royal gift! The brethren marked their sense of the event by founding an orphanage—their Blind Asylum at Amsterdam, established in 1806, would be of itself creditable to the Craft in any country—for Freemasons' children. It was opened in 1869, and the Prince presented them for the purpose with a house and appurtenances of his own at the Hague. In 1876 his 60th year of office was celebrated, and he died in 1881 at the age of 84. He was succeeded as G.M. by his grandnephew Alexander, Prince of Orange—June, 1882—who unfortunately died in June, 1884,<sup>2</sup> at the early age of 33. No successor has yet been appointed.

The most striking feature in the history of Dutch Freemasonry is thus its stability and simplicity. Until 1807 it was altogether free from (so-called) high degrees; in that year it accepted the simplest and least pretentious of all supplementary rites, and even this is largely replaced by the still simpler additions to the Master's degree (1819). But these innovations have never been allowed to assert or exercise any superiority over, or in the Craft: English Masonry has ever been considered the essence of the organization. We find no rival Grand Lodges springing up, no conflicts of jurisdiction, very few Lodges dying out, but a gradual and steady increase of numbers, and in 130 years only 10 Grand Masters.

The present (1885) status of the Craft is as follows:—A Grand Master (office vacant), a Dep. G.M. for the Craft in general, and one each for the Chapter, the Master's degree (additions), the East Indies (Batavia), Surinam, Curaçoa, and South Africa. It comprises 80 Lodges, of which 22 are in South Africa (even in British colonies), 8 in East India, and 3 in America, the remaining 47 being in Holland. The greatest number in any one city is 5 (Amsterdam). The membership is estimated at 4000, or an average of 50 per Lodge.

LUXEMBURG.

The early Masonic history of this Grand Duchy is identical with that of Belgium till 1814, and with that of Holland till 1830. It may therefore be passed over with the exception of a single phenomenon, for which Thory is the sole authority, all other writers having copied from him. I give the passage in extenso:

"1774. Foundation of many lodges in France by the Grand Orient of Bouillon. This body, which no longer exists [1812], was resident in Bouillon.' The Duke of that name was its Grand Master under the title of Protector. It comprised amongst its members many distinguished men. The legend round its seal was Godfredus, dei grati, dux Bullo-nensis, Protector." This is absolutely all that is known of this Grand Lodge.

In 1830, however, Luxemburg reacquired its independence. At that date there existed one lodge, Enfans de la Concorde (May 9, 1803), and one Chapter of the French rite (1815), both constituted by the Grand Orient of France. On May 3, 1844, the Lodge declared itself a Loge centrale, and in 1847 warranted a daughter Lodge at Echternach. At the same time the Chapter assumed the title of Metropolitan Chapter. But as the French Constitutions forbade one Lodge to exercise authority over another, it became necessary to erect a central authority. A Supreme Council (not A. and A.S.R. 33°) was established December 7, 1849, consisting of the Masters and Wardens of all these bodies, and of the deputies of each of the Lodges, together with the representatives of absent members and of other Grand Lodges—in all, twenty members. The Master of the Chapter is ex officio G.M. This miniature G.L. is in communication with all the other Continental Grand bodies, and duly recognized, but is scarcely known in England.' In 1865 its Chapter numbered 33 members; and of its two Lodges, the elder 68 and the younger 32. Exactly 100 Masons, ruled over by a Grand Lodge of their own! No new Lodges had been formed in 1879, and I have no later information.*

BELGIUM.

The history of Freemasonry in that part of Europe now known as the kingdom of Belgium may be divided into four well-defined periods, every political change of status producing a transfer of Masonic jurisdiction. From the Peace of Utrecht (1714) to the French Revolution we have to deal with the Austrian Netherlands; from thence to 1814, with a French Province under the Masonic control of the Grand Orient; from 1814 to 1830 Belgium was merged in the kingdom of Holland, the effects of which union have already been depicted; and from 1830 Belgium must be treated as a separate and independent kingdom, under its own Grand Orient. The annals of the Belgian Craft are consequently far from exhibiting the stability so noticeable in those of the United Provinces of Holland, and its earliest history is very obscure. It is true, that the accounts presented by Fiindel and

* This town is now in Belgium, in that part of the former Duchy forming the present Belgian province of Luxemburg.

* Thory, Acta Latomorum, vol. i., p. 113.

* The Freemason's and the Cosmopolitan Calendars do not even mention it.

* I believe no previous history of Freemasonry has deigned to notice this Grand Lodge at all. The above facts are extracted from the invaluable Handbuch.

the "Handbuch" are delightfully simple and concise, and at a first glance appear to present no difficulty of any kind. But this effect is produced by treating all statements as well-known facts, by dwelling on no questions, and by avoiding any hint at a crux. A critical study of the subject, however, brings us face to face with many and grave difficulties. Yet how dexterously Findel's opening sentence evades them—"Although oppressed and much harassed, Freemasonry in the Austrian Netherlands had, with varied fortune, preserved its existence, so that in 1785 sixteen daughter lodges—one at Antwerp, four at Brussels, and three at Ghent [and apparently eight others elsewhere]—were working under the United Provincial Lodge, which refused to join the Grand Lodge at Vienna." Our author never even suggests that it might be difficult to show where, when, how, and by whose authority this Provincial Lodge took its existence. He prefers to assume that we know all about it—which I for one do not. Neither does he inform us who constituted these 16 Lodges, nor what became of them. I intend to be more candid with my readers, and plainly point out all difficulties; neither shall I attempt to hide my own ignorance. It is possible that a prolonged search in Belgium itself might clear up many matters, though it is hardly creditable to our own Masonic rulers that the means of doing so are not nearer at hand. England undoubtedly had much to do with Freemasonry in the Low Countries; and had our Grand Lodge paid less absorbing attention to its festivals and processions, and a little more to its records and archives—had it been less lavish in creating Provincial Grand Masters, and more diligent in insisting upon their responsibility to the home authorities, we should probably find all the information we require in the official documents at Freemasons' Hall. But, alas, the archives of the oldest (and richest) Grand Lodge in the world, the virtual parent of every Freemason in existence, the most stable Grand Body of the Craft, which has never been disturbed by internal convulsions, political revolutions, or military invasions, afford us scarcely a scintilla of evidence with regard to the proceedings of its offshoots beyond the seas.

All historians inform us, on the authority of a document printed in the Annales Maçonniques de la Pays-Bas, that a Lodge was warranted at Mons on June 21, 1721, by G. M. Lord Montague. Being unable to obtain that work, I accept the statement under reserve, and merely remark that our English Constitutions and early writers ignore the occurrence. Rebold goes even further, and assures us that the Lodge in question developed into an English Provincial Lodge for the Austrian Netherlands.<sup>1</sup> It may be so; I can only point out that our early writers know nothing of a Prov. G. M. before 1769.

Another Lodge is stated to have existed at Ghent in 1730, and it is asserted that the Craft increased and multiplied so exceedingly in Belgium, that in 1736 the clergy induced the Emperor, Charles VI., to issue an edict of suppression throughout the Netherlands. As a consequence, the Fraternity were unable to meet openly. Even when Francis of Lorraine—the Imperial consort of Maria Theresa—began to rule in 1740, his influence was only sufficient to secure a bare toleration of Freemasonry; and indeed, in 1764, a year before his death, an edict was issued suppressing the Craft throughout his entire dominions. But, although the only other Lodge to which I find any reference at this epoch, is one at Brussels, the Unity, 1757-94, I am inclined to attribute this want of evidence to the enforced reserve of the Fraternity, and to believe that there was a considerable increase of Lodges; not only because everybody says so—of itself a very poor reason—but because the war of the Spanish Succession, 1742-48, and the Seven Years' War, 1755-62, filled the lowlands with British troops; and it is at least a reasonable conjecture that the Masons among them<sup>1</sup> may have held meetings, initiated the inhabitants, and left permanent Lodges behind them. The Duke of Cumberland, who commanded at Fontenoy in 1745, is stated by "Multa Paucis" to have been initiated in 1743. But at last, in 1765, we gain solid ground. From the Engraved Lists, we find that an English Lodge, No. 341, was constituted at Alost in Flanders, June 5, 1765; another, No. 427, at Ghent, July, 1768; and a third, No. 394, at Mous, January 20, 1770. In 1769, the Duke of Beaufort, G.M. of England, appointed the most noble Francis Bonaventure Joa. Dumont, Marquis de Gages, Provincial Grand Master for the Austrian Netherlands.<sup>2</sup> In 1780 Joseph II. commenced to reign as Emperor of Austria and Germany. He was the son of Francis of Lorraine, and though not himself a Freemason, granted the Fraternity at first, full, and afterwards, restricted liberty. Subsequent to the appointment of the Prov. G.M., and previous to Joseph's accession, we find many Lodges erected; for instance, at Tournay, 1770, still existing; two at Liège, 1775 and 1776; two at Spa, 1778; and at Namur—De la Parfaite Union—by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, February 9, 1770.<sup>3</sup> The charter of the last named was confirmed by the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Austrian Netherlands, August 28, 1777. I think we shall not go far astray, if we assume that the Provincial Grand Lodge cited by Findel was none other than the English body—bearing the same name—constituted by the Duke of Beaufort in 1769, and that consequently Belgian Freemasonry from its birth to the French Revolution was purely and solely British. We may further assume, that favored by the new Emperor's appreciation of the Craft, the Lodges increased after the year 1780 in a yet greater ratio; and had the Prov. G.M. of that era been mindful of his duty, we should now find traces of them in our Lodge lists.

In 1784 there existed in each province of Austria a Provincial Grand Lodge, viz., Bohemia, Galicia, Lombardy, Austria proper, Siebenburgen, Hungary, and the Netherlands. The first six of these formed a Grand National Lodge of Austria; the seventh did not join the association. But if it is borne in mind, that the Lodges under the former were almost entirely devoted to the Zinnendorff or Swedish Rite (Grand National Lodge of Berlin), of which we meet with no trace in Belgium, it will be understood why the Low Countries did not join in the movement, and our conviction will be strengthened that the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Netherlands was an English offshoot. According to Findel its jurisdiction at this time extended over 16 Lodges.<sup>4</sup> But their membership had greatly altered. All the leaders of the national party were of the Fraternity, and so far from the clergy being averse to the Craft, at Liège the Bishop himself was a member in 1770, and the officers all belonged to the upper priesthood. The Lodge L'heureuse Rencontre of Brussels in 1786 consisted of 42 members, among whom were the Marquis de Chasteler, Van der Noot, the Dukes of Ursel and Arenberg, and the Princes de Ligne and Gavre. The feeling in Masonry at this time was distinctly national and anti-Austrian.

On January 9, 1786,<sup>5</sup> the Emperor issued an edict restricting the Craft to three Lodges in each provincial capital of his empire, and wholly forbidding it in cities where no provincial government existed. In consequence of this, 11 Lodges in Belgium had to close, although it is asserted that one Lodge each in Maastricht, Liège, Tournay, and Spa continued to meet secretly. The edict was in no way intended to be oppressive;<sup>1</sup> but in May, 1786, the Emperor became alarmed at the national sentiments of the Craft in Belgium, and closed all the Lodges—except three in Brussels. In 1787,<sup>2</sup> anticipating the outbreak of the Revolution in France, he resolved to close even these last Lodges, which brings us to the end of the first period of Belgian Masonry.

<sup>5</sup> Findel and the "Handbuch" agree in this date, but under the heading "Austria" the former gives the date as December 1, 1785, and the latter as December 11. I can only suppose that the edict took some few weeks to travel to Brussels, hence the later date.

Of the 16 former Lodges, only 5, one each at Namur, Tournay, Liège, Brussels, and Ostende, lived through 1793. With 1795 and French supremacy, the Belgian Fraternity came under the jurisdiction of the Grand Orient of France. These five Lodges were still existing in 1814. But between 1799 and 1813 the Grand Orient warranted no less than 28, of which 22 were active in 1814. It is noteworthy that in 1811, the Provincial Grand Lodge of Heredom in France (Royal Order of Scotland) constituted a Chapter at Brussels, and that many of the French high degrees were introduced. The French or modern rite became so firmly established as to be still extensively worked. In all respects the Masonry of this period may be considered identical with that of France, and need not therefore occupy any further share of our attention.

At the opening of the third period—January 1, 1814—we thus find 27 regular Lodges at work. Relieved of the supremacy of the G.O. of France, these Lodges felt the expediency of constituting a Grand Lodge of some kind, but apart from the inherent difficulty of reconciling so many rites, there was also to be considered the future status of the country, which had not then been determined by the Congress of Vienna. Of course the Scots Lodges essayed to obtain the upper hand. A Council of the 25°—Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret—in the Lodge Amis Philanthropiques of Brussels announced itself—December 10, 1811—as the Supreme Authority, but its pretensions were put on one side. Then, in November, 1815, three Brussels Lodges of the “Rectified” Strict Observance, and two Scots Lodges of the same city, met—appointed a committee of 15 to prepare a scheme, and in 1816 four projects in all were reported upon. That of the Amis Philanthropiques was selected, and all Belgian Lodges were summoned to consider it. These met on February 1, and March 13, 1817, in Brussels, but failed to agree. The Scots Masons alone knew their own minds, and consequently in 1817 the Lodges of the Strict Observance—rectified Rite—erected a central body; and on March 1 of the same year a Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33° was formed. On May 5, 1817, the circular (already mentioned) of Prince Frederick of the Netherlands was issued, and this was followed by the institution of a temporary Grand Lodge, June 24, the appointment of a joint Belgian and Dutch committee, August 30, the report of this committee, September 20, and its adoption on December 11. In 1818, April 11, the Grand Lodge of Administration for the Southern Provinces (Belgium) was duly inaugurated. From this date again I may content myself with the observation that what has been already written regarding Dutch Masonry applies to Belgium, and need only further add that from 27 the Lodges had increased after April 11, 1818, to 30, and on June 19, 1820, to 33. Many, however, of the high degree rites obtained a footing which was denied to them in Holland.

In 1830 Belgium acquired its independence, and on December 16, 1832, the former Grand Lodge of Administration called upon the Belgian Lodges to rally round it as a

Grand Lodge. The meeting took place February 25, 1833, but many Lodges must have meanwhile died out during the political disturbances, because of the 33 Lodges of 1820, only 15 are accounted for. Of these only 4 appeared in answer to the call, and constituted the Grand Orient of Belgium on May 23. It not being considered expedient to elect a G.M. at the moment, J. de Freune was appointed to rule as Grand Warden. A carefully worded circular—April 1, 1833—secured the adhesion to the G.O. of all the Lodges except nine, which were accordingly declared irregular, January 4, 1836. Some died out, four joined the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands, but returned to their previous allegiance, with the exception of one (at Ghent), which still remains apart, and under Dutch jurisdiction. The Grand Orient was then placed under the protection of King Leopold I., who had been initiated in the Lodge of Hope, Berne, in September, 1833, and though never present in Grand Lodge, took a warm interest in the Belgian Craft. On December 13, 1833, the Belgian Lodges were permitted to enunciate any or all rites—that is to say, whilst remaining true to the Grand Orient, as far as related to the Craft, they were at liberty to apply to any or all of the other Grand bodies for charters of Chapters, Convents, etc., which were then grafted on these Lodges. The result has been enervating. There are, for instance, Lodges in which are wrought not only the ceremonies of the Craft, but also the A. and A.S.R. 33°, the French Rite of seven degrees, the Scots Philosophic Rite, long since extinct in France, its birthplace, and the Rite of Heredom or Royal Order of Scotland. Some, as in Brussels and Antwerp, bring into play more than one of these. The Rites of Memphis and Misraim also obtained a footing for a time, but have died out. The Supreme Council 33°, however (established 1817), has gradually acquired control over the supplementary degrees, and is acknowledged as the head of all those outside the Craft, so that, with many rites, there are only two Grand bodies which exist side by side and work together in perfect harmony, even occupying the same premises.

Baron von Stassart was elected Grand Master March 1, 1835, and installed on May 3, ensuing. In 1838—January 19—the Statutes of the Grand Orient (in 15 articles) were agreed to. They refer solely to the Craft, and ignore all other (so-called) degrees. The organization is very similar to that of the United Grand Lodge of England. On June 10, 1841, the G.M. resigned, and—July 11, 1842—Dofacqz d'Ath was appointed in his stead, with Verhaegen as deputy. In 1854 d'Ath in turn resigned, and was succeeded by Verhaegen.

Unfortunately, ever since Belgium became a kingdom, the Craft has been traduced and persecuted by the Ultramontane clergy of the country—which has resulted in a not unnatural but, nevertheless, wholly indefensible retaliation.

In 1854—June 24—Verhaegen made a speech, in which he attempted to show, that the prohibition of political and religious discussion in Lodge was not a landmark of the Craft, but merely a Grand Lodge ordinance, and, as such, could be repealed; and that as far as Belgium was concerned, should thenceforth cease to be enforced. The motion was carried by acclamation, and the Belgian Craft has since then been marked by a strong anti-clerical, even anti-religious tendency. This led to the rupture of friendly relations with the Grand Lodges of Hamburg, December 16, 1854; Dresden, November 13; Three Globes of Berlin, December 7; the Sun at Bairenth, January 24, 1855; the two other Berlin Grand Lodges, January 7; and the Grand Lodge of Sweden, 1855. Even in Belgium it produced a breach, as many Lodges placed themselves under the sole authority of the Supreme Council, which had protested against the act. In 1860 no less than thirteen Lodges owned allegiance to the A. and A.S.R. 33°.

On December 8, 1862, Verhaegen died, Van Schoor being provisionally appointed, and fully installed, as his successor in 1866. He was followed in 1869 by Van Humbeeck; in 1873 by August Convreur, in 1875 by Henri Berger, and in 1878 by Convreur once more. In 1874 the Grand Orient managed to explain its proceedings regarding religion and politics to the satisfaction of Germany, and representatives were again exchanged. The Lodges must also have returned to their allegiance, because in 1879 the G.O. ruled over 14 Lodges, and the Supreme Council over none. But the latter had grafted Chapters, etc., on six of the Grand Orient Lodges, and constituted one Chapter in Ghent without a Lodge basis. At the present moment Comte Goblet d'Alviella is the G.M., with 17 Lodges under him. The Grand Commander of the Supreme Council is Van Humbeeck, with Chapters in three Lodges, and two Chapters unattached.* As already stated, other rites are also worked, but under the authority, singularly enough, of the Supreme Council 33°.

RUSSIA.

According to Russian tradition, Freemasonry in that country even precedes the era of the Grand Lodge of England (1717), for it is gravely asserted that Peter the Great was initiated by Sir Christopher Wren, and that before the close of the seventeenth century there existed a Lodge at St. Petersburg, with Lefort as Master, and Gordon and Peter himself, as Senior and Junior Wardens respectively. This claim I shall not seriously discuss, though I record it, as being of possible interest to the school of Masonic writers whose canon of belief is expressed by the maxim of Tertullian, upon which I have dilated in an earlier Chapter.† To proceed, therefore, with our historical inquiry. In 1731—January 24—Captain John Phillips was appointed Prov. G.M. of Russia and Germany, etc.;‡ but we need not therefore assume that Lodges already existed in those countries. On the other hand, there appears some reason to believe that in 1732 or 1734 General Lord James Keith, who had entered the Russian service in 1728, was W.M. of a Lodge at St. Petersburg.§ In 1740 Keith was appointed Prov. G.M. of Russia by his brother, John Keith, Earl of Kintore, G.M. of England,¶ so that under Phillips' rule we have very little evidence of progress. Keith appears to have been more successful, for the writer in "Latonia" confirms on fresh documents Nettelblad's previous assertions, that in 1750 a Lodge, "Silence," was at work in St. Petersburg, and a second, "North Star," in Riga.‡ These were followed by others, of which the traces are lost. A subsequent Grand Master, Böber, informs us, however, that all operations were still conducted in the greatest secrecy, which may account for the curious fact that the existence of these Lodges was never transmitted to the Grand Lodge of England. We must also bear in mind that, with very rare exceptions, our English Provincial Grand Masters on the Continent, never kept their superiors fully informed with regard to the state of Freemasonry in the districts under their charge.

In 1762 Catherine II. commenced her long reign, and the necessity for secrecy no longer existing, the position of the Craft improved. It may be presumed that the Society hitherto had been more or less under English influence, but about this time great innovations forced themselves into favor. The earliest of all appears to have been of purely Russian origin. Count Melesino, a Greek by birth, was W.M. of the Lodge "Silence" in St. Petersburg. In that Lodge the Melesino Rite—which spread throughout the empire, and even beyond its borders—was perfected, probably by the talented Master himself. It superimposed four degrees on the Craft, and it is not improbable that in the 7°, "Magnus Sacerdos Templariorum," Starek found the inspiration for his Clerical Rite.<sup>1</sup> In April, 1782, Melesino retired from Masonry and to Moscow, alleging political motives as his reason; whilst, on the other hand, Nettelbladt thinks he acted from prudence, fearing that the Grand Lodge would ultimately overshadow and destroy his rite, and preferring to suppress it himself. In either case, it ceased with his absence from the scene.

In 1765 the Strict Observance made its entry into Russia. The first Lodge under this system was founded by the Lodge at Wismar (Starck's), and soon after a Chapter was erected at St. Petersburg, with Lüder as G.M. Members, whose names will occur hereafter, were Professor Böber, Count Bruce, Prince Dolgorneky, Prince Gargarin, Prince Kurakin, etc. In Courland and Riga there were other Chapters.

In 1768 Starck, accompanied by Von Prangen, came to St. Petersburg for the second time; and on June 23 formed a secular Chapter there, "Phoenix," of the Strict Observance, adding thereto—September 20, 1768—a Clerical Chapter, possibly based on the Melesino Rite, with which Starck may have become acquainted during his former residence in 1763-65. Disputes, however, arose—October 22—and on November 17 Starck was excluded. In the following year—November 16, 1769—the Lax Observance Lodge, "Constancy," went over to the S.O. Rite, uniting with the "Phoenix," and we hear no more of the Clerical Chapter after December 12, 1769. Starck shortly after left Russia, and the Clerics were retransferred to Wismar.<sup>2</sup> But the Strict Observance still remained strongly represented among the Russian Rites.

In 1771 the Zinnendorff system obtained a footing in Russia. Zinnendorff, as we shall see in the next Chapter, had procured—by somewhat irregular means—a part of the Swedish Ritual, and, seceding from the Strict Observance, had established a new rite in Germany. George Reichel and George Rosenberg were the introducers of the rite into St. Petersburg. Reichel came first, and established the Lodges Apollo at St. Petersburg, 1771; Isis at Revel and Harpocrates at St. Petersburg, 1772; and a military Lodge in 1773. Rosenberg, a former Prussian captain of horse, joined him in 1774, bringing, without Zinnendorff's knowledge, the complete rituals, etc.; revived the "Apollo," which had become dormant; founded another, "Horus," and in 1776 "Latona." In these proceedings they were assisted by their brothers, Charles Reichel and William Rosenberg.<sup>3</sup>

Meanwhile the Craft had also been at work under the tutelage of the Grand Lodge of England. Of this period we have fortunately an almost contemporary account.<sup>4</sup> In June, 1771, some English merchants at St. Petersburg erected the Lodge of Perfect Union,<sup>5</sup> which

<sup>5</sup> An official copy of its minute-book from June 13, 1771, to May 30, 1772, made for the perusal of the G.M. of England, is preserved in the archives of our Grand Lodge, and plainly shows that the

was numbered 414, and dated June 1, 1771, in the Engraved Lists.<sup>1</sup> The "Freemasons' Calendar" terms this the first regular Lodge, and speaks of the number of Russian nobles who were at that time Masons. One of them, Senator Yelaguin, had made fruitless efforts to procure a patent of Grand Master in Berlin and Hamburg, and in 1772 sent Louquin to England on a similar mission.<sup>2</sup> The Duke of Beaufort, G.M., granted him a patent as Prov. G.M. for all the Russias,<sup>3</sup> and this resulted in the formation of the following Lodges:—No. 466, Nine Muses; No. 467, Urania; No. 468, Bellona—all at St. Petersburg; Mars, No. 469, Olio, No. 470, at Jassy and Moscow respectively, all in the year 1774. Putting on one side the Strict Observance and Melesino's Lodges, we thus find two distinct Rites in use at the same time—Zinnendorff's and the English. Yelaguin, however, wanted a ritual, and as England has never furnished copies of its ceremonies, he applied to Reichel and Rosenberg. Now, although these Masons hailed from the Grand National Lodge at Berlin, they must have been desirous of closer relations with Sweden, the original fount, for they advised Yelaguin to apply to Stockholm.<sup>4</sup> It is probable that Yelaguin's high position impressed the Grand Lodge of Sweden with the idea, that the only chance for its system to survive was under his protection; at any rate, in 1775, it counselled Reichel and Rosenberg to effect a fusion, and to acknowledge the Senator as Provincial Grand Master. The result was that Yelaguin accepted the Swedish Ritual, and Reichel called upon his Lodges to join with those of the Senator. Harpocrates, Horus, Latona, and Nemesis (1776) agreed, and on September 3, 1776,<sup>5</sup> a National Grand Lodge of Russia, under G.M. Yelaguin, was erected. Melesino took office in this Grand Lodge, which, as well as Yelaguin's original Lodge "Nine Muses," met in the Senator's own house on the island Yelaguin. But differences soon arose. George Rosenberg and his Lodge "Apollo" never joined the Grand Lodge; Reichel, who had quarrelled with Rosenberg, withdrew from Freemasonry altogether; Prince Trubitzkoi, who had previously applied in vain to the Grand National (or Zinnendorff) Lodge for a Grand Master's patent, jealous of Yelaguin's preferment, retired to Moscow with the Lodges Osiris, Isis, and Latona. The notabilities who here gathered round him, may be mentioned as of future interest, the Princes Lodge was at work before receiving its warrant; that although composed largely of English Masons it recognized and granted the following additional degrees: Scots Master, Elu, and Philosopher; and that although a warranted Lodge, it admitted visitors of unchartered Lodges under certain restrictions. It contains also the copy of a letter from G. Sec. Heseltine, February 29, 1773, presented by Louquin, announcing the appointment of Yelaguin as Prov. G.M., and resolutions to honor him as G.M. of all future Lodges, but to refuse him any authority over themselves. In the midst of the quarrel which ensued this interesting book breaks off. But the minutes of the Committee of Charity, October 28, 1772, inform us that the Lodge was directed to submit.

Dolgoruky and Gargarin.<sup>1</sup> We thus see that Yelaguin's governing body had little chance of permanent success; nevertheless, in the following years, two more Russian Lodges were added to the English roll—those of Liebau, Courland, No. 524, 1780; and Astrea at Riga, No. 504, 1787.<sup>2</sup>

This want of consistency gave rise to fresh complications. Sweden at that time was still ambitious of retrieving its place as a great power, which it had lost on the death of Charles XII. In 1777 Gustavus III. of Sweden, himself a Mason, visited St. Petersburg, and a Grand festival was held in Rosenberg's independent Lodge (Apollo) on June 26 and 27, on which occasions the Masonic supremacy of Sweden was announced as desirable.<sup>3</sup> The Russian ambassador at Stockholm, Prince Kurakin, in alliance with George Rosenberg, strove for the same object. William Rosenberg was Secretary to the Russian Embassy, and in communication with his brother and Prince Gargarin. Kurakin was admitted to the highest degrees of the Swedish Rite, and promised by Karl of Sudermania a patent for a national Grand Lodge, Swedish Rite, provided he could induce a sufficiency of Lodges to concur in the project.

In 1777 Kurakin returned, raised Gargarin, Melesino, and others to the highest Swedish degrees, and seduced many of Yelaguin's Lodges towards the end of 1778. Böber also, as a deputy of Rosenberg, founded a new Lodge in Revel. The consent of Karl of Sudermania having been obtained, these steps were followed—May 25, 1779—by the erection of a Swedish Provincial Grand Lodge of Russia, with Prince Gargarin as G.M., and of a Grand Chapter—December 24, 1779. The new Lodge also assumed the same title as Yelaguin's, i.e., National Grand Lodge.<sup>4</sup>

At the head of the Russian Strict Observance at this time was Count Alexander Mussin-Puschkin-Bruce.<sup>5</sup>

The erection of Gargarin's Grand Lodge was followed by a circular from G. Sec. Böber—June 26, 1779—directed to all Lodges except Melesino's, threatening to place them under a ban unless they joined within six weeks. The real object of the circular was the extinction of the former Zinnendorff Lodges. It will be remembered that at this time Sweden had disclaimed all knowledge of Zinnendorff.<sup>6</sup> The result was not as complete as was desired. With the exception of Böber's own Lodge, all the German speaking Lodges of the eastern seaboard remained true to Yelaguin, whilst those of the Strict Observance refrained from joining the new power. It consisted of 11 Lodges—6 in St. Petersburg, 3 in Moscow, 1 in Revel, and 1 (military) in Kinburn. The Grand National Lodge of Gargarin might, however, have ultimately obtained complete success, but for two reasons. Rosenberg and Gargarin quarrelled, and on March 15, 1780, Karl of Sudermania was created Vicarius Salomonis of the IXth. Templar Province,<sup>7</sup> which, according to Swedish pretensions, included Denmark and Russia. This attempt at political supremacy, through the instrumentality of the Craft, which had already alarmed the Lodges of Denmark and Germany, produced the same effect in Russia. The bodies acting under Yelaguin and Gargarin respectively, were alike unanimous in protesting; and the latter, thoroughly discouraged, betook himself to Moscow November 10, 1781. This caused the downfall of the Gargarin Grand Lodge, which then dissolved, and disappears from the scene.<sup>8</sup>

In April, 1782, secret societies were forbidden throughout Russia; the Freemasons were not included, but Melesino, foreseeing the probable victory of Yelaguin's G.L., now left almost supreme, took advantage of the edict to gracefully withdraw from the contest, and retired to Moscow, directing his Lodges to close their doors, in obedience to the law.<sup>1</sup>

From this time to the beginning of the French Revolution Yelaguin reigned practically unchallenged. The last Lodge warranted by him was at Skloff in 1791.<sup>2</sup> In 1794 Catherine allowed her immediate attendants to perceive that she would be glad to see Freemasonry restrained for a time, in view of the political movement throughout Europe. She did not actually forbid it, but the sovereign's desire was at once complied with, and all Lodges were closed throughout the empire by command of the Grand Master. He himself died shortly afterwards, which brings us to the close of the first distinct period in Russian Freemasonry.

As a curiosity I shall give two versions of an occurrence of 1784, extracted, without comment, from Lawrie and Thory.

<sup>1</sup> A petition was received from several Scottish Masons who had been commissioned by the Empress of all the Russias to settle in her capital, requesting a charter of erection for a Lodge at St. Petersburg, under the name of the Imperial Scottish Lodge of St. Petersburg, which was unanimously granted.

'The Empress of all the Russias invites the Grand Lodge of Scotland to send deputies to St. Petersburg in order to establish there a Scotch Lodge under the name of Imperial Lodge. Grand Lodge hastens to defer to the wishes of this sovereign. Constitutions are accorded.

Catherine died in 1796, and was followed by Paul I., said by some writers to have been a Mason; indeed, it is even asserted that Catherine herself witnessed his initiation. The hopes which the Craft had placed in his presumed goodwill to Freemasonry were destined to be overthrown. Reinbeck, who travelled in Russia in 1805, published his "Bemerkungen" in 1806; and gives the following account.<sup>3</sup> Paul called a meeting of well-known brothers to decide whether the Lodges should be reopened or not. The project was opposed by some few influential members and statesmen, and it was decided to wait awhile. Then appeared on the scene the Maltese Knight Count Litter, and persuaded the Emperor to favor the Maltese Order at the expense of the Craft.<sup>4</sup> The result was, that an edict appeared in 1797 forbidding secret meetings, and although Freemasonry was not specifically mentioned, Paul caused all the Masters of Lodges known to him to give their hand and word that they would open no Lodges. These were in return made Knights of Malta, and on December 16, 1798, Paul declared himself Grand Master of that Order.

In 1801 the liberal-minded Alexander ascended the throne, but here again the expectations of the Craft were disappointed, for he renewed the decree against secret societies. I am not disposed to believe Thory's romantic account of his conversion and initiation by Böber in 1803,<sup>5</sup> having made up my mind never to depend upon the former in the absence of corroboration; but it is evident that some time before 1804 Alexander had let it be understood that he would not interfere with the meetings of the Craft; for in that year,

<sup>4</sup> It must be remembered that as the Zinnendorff, Swedish, and Strict Observance Systems each professed to be a continuation of the Order of the Temple, the Maltese Knights were in some degree justified in looking upon the Craft as being in organized rivalry with their own Order.

according to the "Freiburger Taschenbuch"<sup>1</sup> of 1816-1817, the members of the former "Pelican" reconstituted their Lodge under the title of "Alexander of the Crowned Pelican;" and many other Lodges followed their example. The "Pelican" increased to such an extent that in 1809 it was divided into three Lodges, working respectively in Russian, German, and French, according to the Swedish Rite. These three then formed a Grand Directoral Lodge, "Wladimir," and were joined in 1811 and 1812 by two French Lodges in St. Petersburg, and in 1813 by the Lodges in Revel and Cronstadt. This Grand Directory was composed in part of the holders of the superior degrees, and partly of the Lodge representatives. Böber was its G.M. from 1811 to 1814, and was followed in 1815 by Count Basil Mussin-Puschkin-Bruce—not to be confounded with Count Alexander of the same name, the former head of the Russian Strict Observance. From the composition of this Grand Lodge, it might have been foreseen that the simple Masters would soon fall out with the high degree Masons. About this time Fessler, who had already so powerfully contributed to lead back German Freemasonry to its English origin and simplicity, arrived at St. Petersburg, and many Lodges reverted to the ceremonies of the Craft.

In March, 1815, the Directory unanimously resolved to acknowledge all rites which were recognized anywhere by a regular Grand Lodge—a tremendous blow for the partisans of the Swedish rite; but when in June it proceeded with a revision of its statutes, the impossibility of reconciling opposite views of Craft government became apparent. The result was the dissolution of the Directory, and that on August 30, 1815, four Lodges erected the Grand Lodge "Astrea." Its organization was so like our own Grand Lodge as to need no description: it will only be necessary to remark that—confining its attention exclusively to the Craft—it agreed to leave every Lodge free to adopt such degrees beyond the Master's as it might prefer.<sup>2</sup> Count Mussin-Puschkin-Bruce was elected Grand Master. It almost immediately afterwards warranted a new Lodge, and in October was joined by the most important Lodge of all, the Pelican.

From the remains of the Directory, two dissenting Lodges erected in 1815 a Swedish Provincial Grand Lodge of Russia; but in 1819 this body could only count 6 subordinate Lodges, whereas at the same date the Grand Lodge "Astrea" ruled over 24. Of these 24, however, 7 worked according to Schroeder's Ritual (the Hamburg modification of the English ceremonial), 2 according to Yelaguin's (Zimmendorff), 6 by the rectified S.O., 8 by the Swedish Ritual, and 1 according to Fessler's modified English rite. In 1818 a Grand Chapter was established, to control the working of the entire set of degrees of all these rites, beyond that of Master Mason.

In 1820 Kuschelery was elected G.M., to whose subsequent course of action the ingratitude of the viper in the fable—towards the countryman who had nurtured it in his bosom—presents the fittest and only parallel. He was a bigot of the most pronounced type, and suddenly addressed a paper to the Emperor, showing the danger to the State of the Craft as then constituted, and maintaining the necessity either of its suppression or of such modifications as would have entirely deprived it of its chief characteristics.<sup>3</sup> The Czar chose the former alternative, and issued a Ukase—August 1, 1822—closing all Lodges, and forbidding them at any future time to reopen. The Fraternity obeyed without a murmur. The decree is still in force, and thus perished Freemasonry in the dominions of the Czar of all the Russias.

POLAND.

The clearest, fullest, and best history of Freemasonry in Poland, was contributed as long ago as 1818, by an anonymous Polish brother to the first edition of Leuning's "Cyclopædia." The Handbuch (1868) has not been able to add anything thereto, Findel avowedly has only condensed it, and an extended course of reading has not enabled me to do more than find an occasional corroboration in other works. It may be safely affirmed that such a thoroughly exhaustive encyclopædic article is seldom to be met with.

It would appear that previous to 1739 some nobles at the Court of King Frederick Augustus II. had assembled as Masons, in Lodges at Warsaw, probably without regular constitutions, and that these Lodges were all closed in that year in consequence of the Bull of Clement XII.<sup>1</sup>

A few years afterwards the Craft began to move once more. Lodges were established (still without known charters):—1742, at Volhynien; 1744, the "Three Brothers," at Warsaw; 1747, at Lemberg; 1749, the "Good Shepherd," at Warsaw—of which the Master, Thoux de Salverte, was commissioned by it to travel and open Lodges elsewhere. In 1755 General Le Fort held a Lodge at Dulko.<sup>2</sup> Many of these Lodges erected others. In 1762 the "Three Brothers" was very powerful, but fell into decay. In 1764 Stanislaus Augustus ascended the throne after a stormy interregnum, and efforts were made to revive the Craft, which has suffered more from political disturbances in Poland than in any other country. The "Three Brothers," Warsaw, was resuscitated in August, 1766, by Count Augustus Moszynski, and closed in October, by his successor, Count Frederick Aloys Brühl—in order to introduce new laws—but reopened on January 12, 1767, with the addition of a Chapter of High Degrees. Brühl returned to Dresden in 1768, and Moszynski resumed the lead. The Lodge was then—June 24, 1769—declared to be a Grand Lodge, with Moszynski as Grand Master. One of its first acts was to warrant a Lodge in Hungary. Its own members constituted themselves into two Lodges for Moscow, the "Three Brothers" and the "Unity," working respectively in German and French. I may observe, however, that so far all was highly irregular, each movement being merely the arbitrary act of an unauthorized individual. Nevertheless the Grand Lodge did its best to improve matters by communicating the results to foreign Lodges, and in 1770 received a letter from De Vignolles at the Hagne, the Prov. G.M. for foreign Lodges under the Grand Lodge of England, acknowledging Moszynski as Prov. G.M. of Poland. As a Provincial Grand Lodge of England, the legality of its former proceedings was assured, and as such it was proclaimed June 24, 1770. In the same year this Provincial Grand Lodge constituted four new Lodges.

Meanwhile, in 1770, Brühl<sup>3</sup> had joined the Strict Observance, and been made Prior of Poland and Lithuania, which district was declared to form a diocese of the Order of the Temple. Any strife between the two systems was, however, prevented by the unhappy political events immediately succeeding, for in 1772 took place the first partition of Poland, and not only did all Lodges there become dormant for the time, but the Provincial Grand

<sup>3</sup> Handbuch, s. v. Brühl. It was at this nobleman's seat in Kolilo that the Strict Observance Convent of 1773 was held; Chap. XXIV., p. 359.

Lodge closed never to reopen. This may be considered the end of the first epoch of Polish Freemasonry.

In 1773 the Craft again revived, but a wonderful multiplicity of rites and systems ensued and continued for some years.

The first on the scene was Count Brühl, who, returning to Warsaw in 1773, introduced the Strict Observance in the former Warsaw Lodges, "Three Brothers" and "Unity," and constituted a third in the same city, January 29, 1774, which last threw out an offshoot—or fourth Lodge—in Krakaw in 1778. All these acknowledged the rule of Ferdinand of Brunswick, with Brühl as their intermediate superior.

On April 30, 1773, several Masons, among whom may be named Baron Heyking, Count Hülsen, and Thoux de Salvete, erected a quasi-Masonic body with mystical tendencies, which ultimately survived as the Lodge of the Good Shepherd, and, February 6, 1780, was reconstituted as Catherine of the Pole Star, by the Mother Lodge, Royal York of Berlin, at that time a private Lodge under the English Constitution, but which had by almost imperceptible degrees taken up the position, and occasionally assumed the style, of a Grand Lodge. Hülsen was its W.M., and its members formed themselves into a Scots Lodge, and as such applied to the Grand Lodge of England, through the Royal York Lodge, for a Provincial Grand Lodge Chapter. Baron Heyking had been appointed deputy for Poland by the "Royal York" on November 24, 1779, and ordered to constitute Lodges wherever advisable and possible.<sup>1</sup> The result of his efforts was 3 Lodges in Warsaw, 1 in Posen, 3 in Wilna, 1 in Dubno—all in 1780. The Rite in use at that time was practically the English one.<sup>2</sup>

The third Masonic power on the scene was the Grand Orient of France, which—November 15, 1778—warranted a Warsaw Lodge, erected there by a French merchant in 1776.

An offshoot of "Catherine," under the title of the "Pole Star" and the leadership of Prince Poninski, deserted to the Strict Observance in 1779. There were consequently at this period three systems at work—all struggling for the mastery.

Hülsen was succeeded in the chair of "Catherine of the Pole Star"—December 27, 1779—by Count Potocki, who set himself to work to reduce this chaos into order. He circulated an invitation of the "Royal York," acting in England's name, calling upon the Lodges to form a Grand Provincial Lodge of Poland, and in 1780 obtained the suffrages of the majority of Lodges. Heyking was sent to the Grand Lodges of Germany, and Le Doules to that of Russia to facilitate matters. The other systems represented in the country did their best to frustrate his efforts. Brühl especially raised the Warsaw Strict Observance Lodge "Three Helmets" to a Mother-Lodge, and constituted three new ones; and in 1781 the French Lodge announced itself as a Grand Lodge in virtue of a patent from the Grand Orient of France, dated May 14. This induced the Lodge, Catherine of the Pole Star, to divide its members into three Lodges for Craft purposes, but claiming to act as a Grand Lodge in its entirety under the guise of a Scots Lodge.

At length in August, 1781, Lodge Catherine received a London patent as a Provincial Grand Lodge, which had been signed by the Duke of Manchester, G.M., August 4, 1780.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>4</sup> According to a MS. note in the Engraved List for 1778 (Grand Lodge Library), the commission was dated April 4, and not August 4, 1780.

As Count Hülsen was therein named as G.M., Potocki gave way for the time; but on December 27, 1781, Ignaz Potocki was unanimously elected Grand Master.

This event was duly announced throughout the country and abroad, and conducted almost immediately to the extinction of the Strict Observance Lodges. New statutes were submitted for approval—January 7, 1783; and conformed in all points with Anderson's Constitutions. Potocki's departure abroad delayed their ratification, but his deputy—Wilkorski—and the representatives of 13 Lodge worked steadily at the completion of the Masonic edifice. Meanwhile Heyking's efforts and procured directions from the Grand Orient of France—November 17, 1781—to its Lodges in Poland to join the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the result was that—February 26, 1784—the Provincial Grand Lodge was converted into an independent Grand Orient of Poland, and inaugurated as such on March 4 following.

It is rather curious that on February 8, 1784, the Provincial Grand Lodge and its 12 daughter Lodges affiliated with the "Electic Union" of Frankfort-on-the-Maine.<sup>1</sup> This is, however, an indirect proof that the system of working was at that time essentially English.

The first Grand Master of the National Grand Orient was Andrew Mocranowski, installed March 18, 1784; and in the same year were constituted, a Lodge in Constantinople, a Russian military Lodge at Kiow, and various others, some of which were raised to the position of Provincial Grand Lodges. Unfortunately the G.M. expired after a very few months' tenure of office, and in his place was appointed—December 27, 1784—Count Felix Potocki, who was installed February 2, 1785, being thus the second of his family who officiated as G.M. of Poland.

It will be unnecessary to follow in detail the progress of the Grand Orient, or to enumerate the Lodges and Provincial Grand Lodges which it warranted in the course of the next few years; it will suffice to state that they were numerous, and that the Fraternity prospered exceedingly. A few salient data may be cited. A Grand Chapter, to rule the high degrees, was erected February 19, 1785; and on December 17, Potocki was re-elected G.M. During the night April 24-25, 1786, Freemasons' Hall in Warsaw was burnt to the ground, entailing great loss on the brotherhood. January 4, 1787—Potocki was again elected, and Stanislaus Potocki commissioned to place himself in correspondence with foreign Grand Lodges, particularly those of England and France. January 24, 1788—Potocki was continued in the chair, although very negligent of his duties; in the same year he resigned; and—January 11, 1789—Prince Casimir Sapieha was chosen in his stead. But once more political events exerted a baneful influence over the Polish Craft, and produced a state of coma. In 1792 Russia and Prussia effected a second partition of the unfortunate kingdom, and finally in 1794 it was wholly dismembered. This occasioned the closing of the Grand Orient and of all Polish Lodges, and we thus arrive at the end of the second distinct epoch in the history of Polish Freemasonry.

From 1791 to 1811, Poland, a part of which Napoleon had in 1806 formed into the Grand Duchy of Warsaw under the house of Saxony, was a veritable "Tom Tiddler's ground" for the three Prussian Grand Lodges, who constituted or reconstituted the following Lodges:—the Grand National Lodge, 6; the Three Globes, 9; and the Royal York. 1. On October 4, 1804, the Three Globes erected at Plock a Provincial Grand Lodge and a Scots Directory for the Grand Duchy of Warsaw. On October 23, 1807, the Grand Orient of France entered into competition, and—July 18, 1808—warranted a Lodge in Warsaw.

In 1807 the Duchy fell under Saxon rule, and a new state of affairs arose. Former Polish Lodges reopened successively in 1809 and following years, and among others, on March 22, 1810, the former Provincial Grand Lodge, "Catherine of the North Star." Almost immediately afterwards the former Deputy Grand Master, Gutakowski, declared the Grand Orient revived. Foreign Grand Lodges were informed of the fact, and many of the Lodges constituted by them gave in their adhesion to the national authority. January 30, 1811—Gutakowski was elected G.M. of the Grand Orient of Poland, and—November 5—the few Lodges not acknowledging its authority were summoned for the last time to affiliate themselves. Gutakowski died December 1, and was replaced—March 1, 1812—by Count Stanislaus Potocki, the third Polish G.M. of that family. Meanwhile, the one extraneous Grand Chapter (French) had amalgamated with the Polish Grand Chapter, so that on June 24, 1812, the Grand Orient was proclaimed as the sole supreme authority. As a matter of fact, however, there still remained aloof, the Provincial Grand Lodge—under the Three Globes—at Plock, with its daughters.

Once more, in consequence of political events, the Grand Orient and its daughter Lodges were closed—January 30, 1813—after a most prosperous but very brief career. But this time the sleep was not protracted, for in October the Warsaw Lodges were again at work, and the Grand Orient being still dormant, the direction of affairs was undertaken by the Grand Chapter. The interval had witnessed Napoleon's crushing defeat at Leipsic, on which occasion the gallant Prince Poniatowski lost his life in the Elster—October 19. A solemn funeral Lodge was held in his honor, March 12, 1814—the Grand Master resumed the gavel on his return—August 30, 1814—and was re-elected April 22, 1815. May 3, 1815, the former Grand Duchy of Warsaw was finally allotted to Russia. September 20—the Provincial Grand Lodge at Plock (under the Three Globes of Berlin), erected 1804, and its daughter Lodges, joined the Grand Orient; and—November 13, 14, 1815—the exterior of Freemasons' Hall was splendidly illuminated to celebrate the visit of the new ruler of the country, the Czar Alexander of Russia.

Little remains to be narrated. Potocki was re-elected year after year, and the Craft prospered, so that in 1818 the Grand Orient numbered on its roll 1 Sovereign Chapter, with 2 subordinate High, and 8 subordinate Low, Chapters—these constituted the Inner Orient.<sup>1</sup> There were also 17 Lodges directly dependent upon the G.O. and the Provincial Grand Lodges of Lithuania, Plock, and Volhynien, with 7, 3, and again 3 Lodges respectively—which collectively, i.e., the 30 Lodges last enumerated, constituted the Outer Orient.

Unfortunately the Fraternity either lent itself to political intrigues of a revolutionary tendency, or was at least suspected of so doing. In consequence the Czar Alexander issued his rescript of suppression to the Minister of the Interior on August 12, 1821. This was promulgated by the Viceroy, November 6, and the further progress of Polish Freemasonry was thus suddenly arrested. We have already seen that barely a year elapsed before their brothers in Russia suffered a similar fate.

FREEMASONRY IN THE GERMAN EMPIRE.

GRAND LODGES—HAMBURG—ECLECTIC UNION—THREE GLOBES OF BERLIN—NATIONAL OF BERLIN—ROYAL YORK OF BERLIN—SUN OF BAIREUTH—SAXONY—CONCORD OF DARMSTADT—INDEPENDENT LODGES—EXTINCT GRAND LODGES—HANOVER—SILESIA—KÖNIGSBERG—RATISBON—BRUNSWICK—BODE'S—BADEN. GRAND ORIENT AND GRAND NATIONAL UNION—WESTPHALIA—HESSE CASSEL—OTHER MASONIC UNIONS.

THE Fraternity of Freemasons in Germany is at present divided in its allegiance amongst eight Grand Lodges. There are also five perfectly regular and recognized Lodges "who are a law unto themselves." Besides these, many Grand Bodies of the Craft have lived their span and died, and without some allusion to their former existence, a history of German Freemasonry would be but an account of its present state. I therefore propose to do my best, in my fast dwindling space, to describe all these communities, and shall conclude this branch of our inquiry, by referring to various combinations of German Masons, past and present, which do not come under the heading of Grand Lodges. With regard to existing Grand Lodges, I believe the reader will grasp the subject more firmly if I consider these, not simultaneously, but separately, although I shall thereby be obliged to go over the same series of years eight consecutive times. The Chart given with this Chapter will serve, however, to present them in their contemporaneous aspect.

GRAND LODGES.

I. THE GRAND LODGE OF HAMBURG.

Of all the German Grand Lodges this deserves the first mention, and for two reasons.—its earliest beginnings can be carried farthest back along the stream of time, and in the purity and legitimacy of its English origin, it is only equalled by the Grand Lodge of the Eclectic Union, at Frankfort, which, however, falls slightly behind it in point of antiquity.

The earliest date connecting the Craft with Hamburg, is contained in a speech delivered January 30, 1765, by Dr. Jaenisch, then Prov. G.M., who declared that his appointment as such dated from the time of his departure from London between 1718-20.* I can only attempt to explain this assertion by supposing that at this very early period Jaenisch had received some verbal permission to make Masons on the Continent; anything more definite or formal is inconceivable.

* Nettelblatt, Gesch. Freim. Systeme, p. 555.

The next reference to Hamburg occurs under the administration of the Duke of Norfolk, when a Monsieur Thuanus<sup>1</sup> was appointed in 1729 Prov. G.M. for the circle of Lower Saxony. This person, however, is no more heard of; therefore his influence, if ever exercised, must have been of a very fugitive character.

In 1733 the Earl of Strathmore is stated to have granted to eleven German Masons a deputation to open a Lodge at Hamburg.<sup>2</sup>

The minutes (in French) of an anonymous Hamburg Lodge have been preserved, dated December 6, 1737. According to these, the meeting was held under the presidency of Karl Barry, English Provincial Grand Master of Prussia and Brandenburg. This gentleman's name is not mentioned in our English records, but he may have had some reason for assuming the above title nevertheless. The Lodge in question is usually considered to have developed into the Absalom. If so, it performed the unnecessary act of obtaining a fresh charter, because it was almost certainly already warranted in 1733, for in the Engraved List for 1734 we find No. 124 at Hamburg without a date, and in the later List for 1740, as No. 108, constituted in 1733. There can therefore be little doubt that it was the Lodge of the eleven German Masons, as above. On October 23, 1740, Lodge Absalom at Hamburg was warranted as No. 119,<sup>3</sup> the dates and numbers both showing that the Lodges were considered distinct in England. If one Lodge was a continuation of the other, it is somewhat difficult to account for these two warrants, and the consequent loss of seniority. I am inclined to think that when, in 1740, Lüttmann was appointed Prov. G. M. of Hamburg and Lower Saxony, he applied for a warrant for a new Lodge—Absalom—and that the old Lodge gradually died out. The latter had been ruled in turn by Brothers Carpeer, Von Oberg, and Lüttmann himself. The most remarkable incidents of the existence of this old Lodge are, that on March 7, 1738, it drew upon itself the very short-lived prohibition of the magistrates,<sup>4</sup> and in the same year sent a deputation to initiate the future Frederick the Great.<sup>5</sup>

Lodge Absalom was warranted October 23, 1740, and on the 30th Lüttmann received his patent as Prov. G.M.<sup>6</sup> He was also the W.M. of Absalom, but having perfected and opened the Provincial Grand Lodge in 1741—the highest Masonic authority in Germany—he resigned the chair of the Lodge in 1742, and accepted the position of Treasurer.<sup>7</sup> Even Marschall, the Prov. G.M. of Upper Saxony, did not disdain to occupy a Warden's chair in this Lodge whilst residing at Hamburg.

The first act of the Provincial Grand Master, was to legitimate an existing unchartered Lodge in Hamburg, under the name of "St. George," September 24, 1743. This Lodge first appears in our list of 1744 as No. 196. The constitution of a Lodge in Brunswick followed in 1744; at Copenhagen, 1745; Hanover, 1746; Celle, 1748; Oldenberg, 1752; Schwerin, 1754; and at Hildesheim, 1762.<sup>8</sup> The last two received English numbers, but the subsequent history of all was very soon divorced from that of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg. Scarcely was the Provincial Grand Lodge established before Scots Masonry made itself felt. In 1744 Count Schmettan, who had carried the Scots degrees to Berlin, introduced them to Hamburg, and erected the Scots Lodges "Schmettau" and "Judica," of which Von Oberg and Von Rönigk, the Masters of St. George and Absalom, became respectively the Scots Masters.' At the same time many surreptitious Lodges sprang up, and in 1749 there even existed a clandestine Tyler's or Serving Brother's Lodge, in which other serving brethren were initiated.' In 1747 there was at Hamburg an African Lodge,' which, although it passed away and left no trace, has been viewed as a forerunner of Von Koppen's Rite of African Architects, 1768-97.'

Lüttmann (a dyer), who resigned in 1759, and had ceased to exist in 1764,' was followed—November 20, 1759—by Gottfried J. Jaenisch, M.D.—born 1707; initiated in Lodge Abalom, December 18, 1743; and died May 28, 1781.' The latter's patent as Prov. G.M. was signed by Lord Aberdour; but he was scarcely installed before, in 1762, he associated himself with the degrees of the Clermont Chapter introduced by Rosa from Berlin. The way was thus prepared for the Strict Observance.

In the first month of 1763, Schubart arrived in Hamburg, where he consorted with Bode, who had been present at Johnstone's Altenberg Convent. The rule of the Strict Observance, which required noble birth of its candidates, proved no bar to Schubart's success in this notably plebeian city, for Hund was induced to sanction Schubart's proposition whereby enhanced fees not only ensured knighthood, but also ennoblement. A prominent Hamburg Mason at this time was Joh. Gottfr. von Exter, M.D.—born in Bremen 1734—who was made a knight (together with Jaenisch) by Schubart, January 11, 1765. The Templar missionary promised to raise Hamburg to the position of an independent Prefectory. Accordingly, on January 30, Jaenisch appeared in the Provincial Grand Lodge, dissolved all Lodges formerly warranted by its authority, closed the P.G.L., declared the Strict Observance Rite the only true one, reconstituted the Lodges Abalom and St. George, and proclaimed Hamburg as the Prefectory Ivenach.' Bode, who had been made in the Abalom Lodge—February 11, 1761"—became for a time a leading light in the S.O. The Chapter, which had been formed of 12 members, grew in the space of a few weeks to 29.' The generality of the Fraternity proved, however, by no means enthusiastically disposed towards the new Rite; for in 1768 the two Hamburg Lodges were practically dormant and the Grand Lodge closed," a state of things which permitted other systems to force an entrance.

In 1768 Rosenberg—already mentioned in connection with Russia—erected in Hamburg the Lodge of the Three Roses, and Sudthausen 'that of Olympian, both according to the Swedish Rite. But Zinnendorff, who had cast off the Strict Observance in 1767, and founded his own rival Swedish Rite in 1768, came to Hamburg in 1770, and reconstituted these two Lodges under his own system; and in 1771 founded two others, the Pelican, and Red Eagle, in Altona, a suburb of Hamburg." At the head of Olympia, afterwards "the Golden Sphere," was J. Leonhardi—not to be confounded with Leonhardi of Frankfurt—who was for many years Zinnendorff's representative in the Grand Lodge at London." The first two Lodges took part in the formation—June 24, 1770—of Zinnendorff's "Grand National Lodge. Meanwhile, in spite of the efforts of the Prov. G.M. for Foreign Lodges,

De Vignolles, who seems to have been the only English Mason who thoroughly understood the character of Zinnendorff's usurpation, the Grand Lodge of England had recognized the sole authority in Germany of the Grand National Lodge at Berlin—November 30, 1773—so that when Jaenisch at length attempted to resume his duties as English Prov. G. M., he found that his patent had been annulled by Lord Petre, May 31, 1773.<sup>1</sup>

In 1774 fourteen brothers deserted Zinnendorff's Lodges, and were constituted by Jaenisch as a Strict Observance Lodge under the name "Emanuel," thus forming the third Lodge of the system which had once been the Provincial Grand Lodge, and was destined to become so again. This Lodge was of course not immediately registered in England, and first appears in the list for 1792, as No. 508, with the note "have met since 1774." In the same list (1792), Lodges Absalom and St. George, who were "dropped out" at the closing up of numbers in 1770, reappear.

The year 1774—September 8—witnessed the initiation in this Lodge Emanuel of Fried. Ludwig Schroeder, one of the most prominent reformers of German Freemasonry, who was born at Schwerin, March 3, 1744. Space will not allow me to attempt a biography, and I must content myself with a very few facts. Schroeder's public career as an actor and dramatic poet is well known, and in his later function of impresario he was at least equally successful. At a comparatively early age he was enabled to devote his well-earned leisure to the reform of the Craft, and here also success attended him. He was Master of the Emanuel Lodge 1787-99; Deputy Prov. G. M. of Lower Saxony, 1799-1814; and C. M. of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg from 1814 until his death, September 3, 1816.<sup>2</sup> His first acts as a Freemason showed no promise of his future career, for in 1774, being then only an apprentice, he opened a clandestine Lodge in Hamburg, "Eliza of the Warm Heart," which lasted until 1777.<sup>3</sup>

In 1776 the Princes Karl of Hesse and Ferdinand of Brunswick<sup>4</sup> founded the Lodge Ferdinand and Caroline in Hamburg, the fourth Lodge of the Hamburg system.<sup>5</sup> In 1792 this Lodge received the English No. 509, with the date of 1776.

In 1778 Bode was W. M. of Absalom, and Dresser of St. George. This latter not being acceptable to the brethren, who under the S. O. rules were powerless to remove him, the Hamburg Fraternity seized the occasion of Karl's presence in Altona—then a town of Denmark, although apparently a suburb of Hamburg—to offer him the presidency of all four Lodges. This he accepted—March 28, 1778—but disappointed the brethren in his choice of a deputy; so the ruse having failed, the Chapter was induced to influence him to resign the office in 1780, accepting the title of Protector, and allowing the Lodges, pro hac vice, to choose their own Masters. Dresser, as will be easily understood, was not re-elected.<sup>6</sup>

Meanwhile, the Hamburg Fraternity had grown tired of the Strict Observance, which was itself moribund. On May 28, 1781, Jaenisch died, and was succeeded by Dr. von Exter, under whom—by amalgamation—the four Lodges became two, and renounced the Templar Rite. Exter, however, was won over by the New or Gold Rosicrucians, and announced himself as a G.M. under this system, with Drexler as Deputy. Through the latter, Hamburg was nearly induced by the Wetzlar brotherhood to join the newly-formed Eclectic Union as a third Directorial Lodge; but the negotiations were interrupted by his death. At this period Aug. Graefe, a former Prov. G.M. of Canada, arrived in Hamburg as the representative in Germany of the Grand Lodge of England. He was a strong opponent of Zinnendorff, although accredited to his Grand Lodge by a patent dated March 24, 1785,<sup>1</sup> and strongly encouraged a return to first principles, holding out hopes of the Provincial Grand Lodge being revived.<sup>2</sup>

In 1783 Hamburg was invaded by Eckhoffen with a Lodge of Asiatic brothers,<sup>3</sup> and in 1785 Schroeder returned from Vienna,<sup>4</sup> his influence soon making itself felt throughout the Hamburg Craft.

In 1786, the negotiations with England being now complete, and Zinnendorff disowned, the two Hamburg Lodges redivided into the original four, and on August 24 Graefe installed Von Exter as Prov. G.M. of Hamburg and Lower Saxony.<sup>5</sup> Exter's patent was dated July 5, 1786.<sup>6</sup>

In 1787 Schroeder was elected W.M. of Lodge Emannel, and soon after was intrusted with the revision of the Statutes. He completed his work in 1788, and laid the first stone of his reform by establishing the Old Charges of 1723 as the foundation of all Masonry. But whilst bent on cutting down extravagance on the one hand, he was equally energetic in preventing extreme measures on the other; and it must be ascribed to his influence that a proposal made in 1789 to forego rites and ceremonies of all kinds was rejected.<sup>7</sup>

But this return to English Freemasonry was naturally distasteful to Karl of Hesse, Ferdinand's coadjutor, in the direction of the rectified Strict Observance. He therefore in 1787, erected a Lodge, "Ferdinand of the Rock," at Hamburg, which was of course looked upon as clandestine, as were also at this time the Zinnendorff Lodges. The latter, however, have always held their own in Hamburg, which is at the present time the seat of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Mecklenburg, under the Grand National Lodge of Berlin. In September, 1790, Bode, who had migrated to Gotha, issued a circular proposing a General Union of German Lodges—an attempt which will be again referred to. The circular failed to shake the allegiance of a single Hamburg Lodge, but it possibly had the effect of stimulating Schroeder to further measures, for we next find that—at his instigation—the Scots Lodges and degrees were abolished in 1790-91, thus leaving nothing but pure English Freemasonry. This step was followed in 1795 by the adhesion of Lodge Ferdinand of the Rock, which, in the "Freemasons' Calendar" for 1798, appears as No. 562, with the words "have met since 1788" in a parenthesis.

At Exter's death—April 12, 1799—Beckmann became Prov. G.M., and Schroeder Deputy.<sup>8</sup> The latter, who had previously revised the Constitutions, now turned his attention to the Ceremonial, and, having discovered what he imagined to be the earliest dictum, recast it in a form more applicable to the times. The result was a simple yet impressive Ritual, differing little from our own, which was approved and accepted by the Grand Lodge of Hamburg, April 29, 1801.<sup>9</sup> Its daughter Lodges had meanwhile increased from 5 to 9.<sup>10</sup>

In 1802 Schroeder procured the acceptance of what, until quite lately, was the distinguishing feature of the Hamburg system, viz., the Engbund—i.e., Select Bond. It was intended to forestall any hankering after High Degrees by rendering it possible for Master Masons to become historically acquainted with all the High Degrees of the various Rites.

At the same time, to raise its value as a distinction, it was not open to all Master Masons, and possessed its own means of recognition, etc. Certain Grand Officers and all Masters of Lodges were ex officio members, and in each Lodge a certain number of the Master Masons were admitted. The Hamburg Engbund was a sort of Grand Engbund for all the private ones, and a further selection from each Engbund conducted the correspondence with the others. This second division was called the Correspondence Circle. The members as such exercise no influence over their Lodges, and their intention was, by research into all the usages and fallacies of the High Degrees, to demonstrate their uselessness and absence of historical basis.

Under its new guise the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hamburg prospered for some years, until in 1811 the success of the French arms, and Napoleon's Interdict, rendered it impossible to continue the connection with this country. On February 11, 1811, therefore, the Provincial Grand Lodge declared itself independent, under the name of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg.<sup>1</sup> At that time its sway was exerted over 12 Lodges.<sup>2</sup> The remainder of its history is uneventful enough, and may be briefly recorded.

Beckmann died—June 28, 1814—and was succeeded as G.M. by Schroeder; at whose death—September 3, 1816—Beseler was elected, and, at his resignation, Schleiden, July 28, 1825. In 1828 W.H. Götschen<sup>3</sup> was appointed the first representative at the Grand Lodge of England. In 1834 Schleiden resigned, and was succeeded by Moraht. On December 6, 1837, Lodge Absalom held its centenary festival, and in 1838 the Grand Lodge of England appointed H. J. Wenck as its first representative at Hamburg. Hamburg has ever since been most closely allied with England, and its representative has often enjoyed the special honor of being appointed Grand Secretary for German Correspondence. Moraht died February 13, 1838, and was succeeded by Dav. Andr. Corda, under whom the constitutions were revised in 1845. The latter was followed by his former Deputy, Dr. H.W. Buek, in 1847, and under this G.M. the Constitutions were again revised in 1862. The 150 years' jubilee of Freemasonry was held in 1867.

In 1869 it was considered expedient that the historical acquirements of the Engbund should no longer be reserved as the special privilege of a select few. The Grand Engbund was therefore dissolved, and reconstituted as a private Engbund, open to all Master Masons; and the daughter associations followed suit. They have since existed as purely literary Masonic societies; but the want of the previous cohesion and superior direction had so seriously hampered their efforts, that in 1878 the Lodge at Rostock made proposals for re-establishing the former organization.<sup>4</sup> The result is unknown to me. The completion of Dr. Buek's twenty-fifth year as G.M. was celebrated by the Grand Lodge, June 24, 1872. He then resigned, and was followed by Glitza. In 1874 and 1875 the Grand Lodge of Hamburg recognized the colored Lodges of Pruce Hall in Boston and of Ohio, and in 1877-78 the Constitutions underwent a last revision.

In 1878 the Grand Lodge of Hamburg ruled over 32 Lodges, of which 5 were in that city and 19 in other parts of Germany, 8 being abroad. In Hamburg itself there existed 9 other Lodges owing allegiance to other German Grand Lodges. The total number of Masons under the Grand Lodge was 3726, an average of 116 per Lodge.<sup>1</sup> Since then two foreign Lodges have been added, one at Bucharest and another at Vera Cruz.<sup>2</sup> With a solitary exception,<sup>3</sup> Hamburg is the only German Grand Lodge which warrants Lodges outside the Empire; it ignores the American theory of Grand Lodge sovereignty, possessing no less than three Lodges in New York itself. The Pilgrim Lodge in London works in German according to the Hamburg or Schroeder Ritual, but under the rule of the Grand Lodge of England.

The history of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg may be thus briefly summarized:—1730, Du Thom, Prov. G.M.; 1733-40, anonymous Lodge; 1740-65, Provincial Grand Lodge of Hamburg and Lower Saxony under Lüttmann and Jaenisch; 1765-82, a part of the Strict Observance system; 1782-88 under Exter, indoctrinated with the fancies of the New Rosicrucians, though always—it must in fairness be recorded—inclining more and more towards a return to the practice under the Grand Lodge of England; 1786-1811, Provincial Grand Lodge once more; from 1811 to 1885, Grand Lodge of Hamburg.

II. THE MOTHER GRAND LODGE OF THE ECLECTIC UNION, FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAINE.

Reference to the high antiquity of the origin of this system has already been made, but it claims emphatically the first place in an English Mason's regard for two other reasons—the filial persistency with which it adhered under most difficult circumstances to its connection with England, and the strong common sense which, under every allurement, kept it practically free at all times from the blighting influence of High Degrees, Strict Observance, and other "Masonic Aberrations." The Lodge "Union" of Frankfort and its allies have never ceased for one moment to work in the purely English, and only Freemasonry of three degrees. Individual members have taken "accessory" degrees, and have even been commissioned by the Lodge to join other Rites in order to report upon their value, and—have always reported adversely! The history of this body affords no mysteries to be cleared up; its minutes are full and complete from the earliest one to the latest; its records are admirably preserved; every statement—on their authority—rests on documentary evidence, and from 1742, literally no question is open to doubt. The annals of the Eclectic Union have been written by three of its own members, Kloss,<sup>4</sup> Keller,<sup>5</sup> and Karl Paul,<sup>6</sup> and as to facts do not differ in the slightest degree. As our present guide I select—on the score of convenience—the last in date, Paul. His account is compiled in chronological order, and therefore no difficulties of verification can be experienced.

Frankfort, from its position as a free town of the Empire, the seat of Germany's largest banking houses, the coronation city of its Emperors, and the place of meeting of the Imperial Diet, enjoyed obvious advantages for the early propagation of Freemasonry. Evidence, indeed, is not wanting of informal meetings of the Craft at a very early date.<sup>7</sup> But the first indications of a permanent Lodge are the records of fines inflicted, as per cash-book of the Union Lodge under date of March 1, 1742. In the same year—March 29

—by-laws were drawn up and signed by the members, June 27. On the last date the Lodge was formally constituted by General de Beaujeu, Marquis de Gentils, and Baron von Schell, styling themselves G.M. and Grand Wardens pro tempore. I have been unable to ascertain by what right they assumed to represent the Grand Lodge of England in this matter; but even if the offices were self-conferred, we may perceive in this very irregularity itself a striving after the regularity which has since so honorably distinguished this Lodge. That the act (if a usurpation) was soon afterwards condoned, may be gathered from the charter granted by Lord Ward, G.M.—February 8, 1743<sup>1</sup>—which recites that Brother Beaumont, oculist to the Prince of Wales, having assented “us” that the Lodge had been constituted in due form under the name of union, and as a daughter of the Union Lodge in London, we do hereby recognize it, etc., and order that the members of either Lodge be considered equally members of the other. Its first Master was Steinheil, and its first Warden De la Tierce, who in 1742 produced one of the earliest translations of Anderson’s Constitutions (1723) for the use of the Lodge.<sup>2</sup> In the Engraved List, 1744-45, it is depicted as a Union of Angels,<sup>3</sup> and its date of constitution is acknowledged, June 17, 1742, with the number 192. Its proceedings were conducted in French until 1744, when it was resolved to work alternately in German and French.

In 1743 Count Schmettan, whose name has several times been mentioned, established a military Lodge in Frankfort, which amalgamated with the “Union”—January 17, 1744—and in 1745 the “Union” assumed the power of a Mother Lodge by constituting the Lodge of the Three Lions at Marburg, which was not, however, registered in England at the time, and appears first in the Engraved List for 1767 as No. 393.

In 1746—October 24—the Lodge resolved to close its doors, owing to the paucity of attendance, and other reasons, and was reopened August 16, 1752, by Steinheil. In 1758 a constitution was granted to a very short-lived Lodge at Mayence, and the occupation of Frankfort by the French army gave rise to several irregular Lodges in the city. The Lodge strove its best to preserve order, but ineffectually for some time, until it at length singled out for mutual support and assistance a Lodge which had grown up in the Swedish regiment, “Royal Deux Ponts,” quartered at Frankfort. On May 12, 1761, it constituted the Lodge “Joseph of Union” in Nuremberg, and—May 29, 1762—legitimated the Royal Deux Ponts Lodge. The invitation of the Berlin “Three Globes”—March 8, 1765—to join the Strict Observance, was declined, and also a proposal to pay Schnbart’s expenses in order that he might instruct them in the new Rite. The Daughter-Lodge at Nuremberg was, however, at this time won over to the Templars, although it did not formally sever its connection with Frankfort till two years later, 1767. The greatest blot on the history of the Lodge Union, is its refusal from a very early date to recognize the eligibility of Jewish candidates, an error, nevertheless, which it amended much earlier than many other German Lodges. In 1766 it refused a warrant to Cassel, because Jews were among the petitioners. At this period J. P. Gogel, a former W.M. of the Lodge, whose commercial pursuits often called him to England, was commissioned to petition for a Provincial Grand Lodge patent for Frankfort, which was granted by Lord Blaney, G.M. August 20, 1766, to J. P. Gogel,

Prov. G.M. of the Upper and Lower Rhine and of Franconia. Gogel produced his patent in Frankfort—October 28—and the P.G.L. was accordingly constituted on the 31st, with the Lodges Union of Frankfort, Marburg, Deux Ponts, and Nuremberg as daughters. On this occasion Gogel declared that he invested the Lodge "Union" with his personal rights, and that no Prov. G.M. should in future exercise the office for more than two or three years. In this he exceeded his powers, because a Provincial patent is always a personal distinction, a Prov. G.M. not being elected by the Province, but appointed by the Grand Master; and as events proved, the well-meant intentions of Gogel were incapable of realization. The officers of the P.G.L.—D.G.M., S. and J. Wardens—were the Masters of the Union, Marburg, and Nuremberg Lodges respectively; but the members, at first all Master Masons, and afterwards Wardens—present and past—were drawn from the Union only. Out of the latter, each of the other Lodges might select a representative. It will be seen, as we proceed, that the Union, and subsequently the other Lodges in Frankfort, were always exceptionally favored—a feature which, in a modified form, even yet exists. Among the first members of the P.G.L. were Karl Brönnner, Peter F. Passavant, and F. W. Möhler.

In 1767 the Nuremberg Lodge threw off its allegiance, and joined the Strict Observance, whose emissary, Schnbart, had arrived in Frankfort in December, 1766. His propaganda failed to influence the Provincial Grand Lodge or its daughter, "Union," but he succeeded in erecting, in February, 1767, a Lodge of the "Three Thistles" at Frankfort, which for many years proved a thorn in the side of the brethren.

According to his promise Gogel resigned—October 23, 1768—but was re-elected November 10, 1770—Möhler serving as G.M. in the interim. The former, on his return from England in 1772, constituted a Lodge at Strassburg, which almost immediately afterwards seceded to the Strict Observance. In the same year the Deux Ponts Lodge also joined the enemy.

In December, 1772, Prince Ludwig George Karl of Hesse, an enthusiastic convert to Von Hnnd's system, addressed a letter to the Provincial Grand Lodge, expatiating on the advantages of the new Rite, invited the Grand Lodge to join him, and quietly proposed that Gogel should abdicate in his favor! The offer was naturally declined.

On November 30, 1773, Zinnendorff concluded his compact with England, by which all the existing German Lodges were handed over to him; this treaty was not communicated at once to Frankfort, and whatever excuses England might have urged in extenuation, so far as regarded Hamburg, which had strayed from the right road, its action was not only uncalled for, but highly discreditable in the case of Frankfort, the truest daughter our Grand Lodge ever had cause to rejoice over. No excuse whatever can be pleaded, except the profound ignorance of the Grand Lodge of England—or, it may be, of its Secretary, James Heseltine—with regard to the true state of the Craft abroad, an ignorance which, in the opinion of all dispassionate inquirers, will heighten rather than extenuate the grave error I have related.

In 1774 the Marburg Lodge formally threw off its allegiance, leaving the Union as the sole support of the Provincial Grand Lodge. In spite of this isolated position, Gogel accompanied a letter of inquiry respecting the arrangement with Zinnendorff by a contribution of £30 for Freemasons' Hall and £4 for the Charity. At the same time he pointed out that the only truly English Lodge in Germany was the Frankfort Lodge, and that both the Zinnendorff and Strict Observance systems were something totally different. This and further protests on Gogel's part only produced an answer from England in 1775, in which, after praising Frankfort as the best and only support of true Freemasonry, he was nevertheless advised to come to some arrangement with Zinnendorff. It being quite evident that under these circumstances England would not acknowledge a successor to Gogel—in whose name the Provincial patent was made out, on which Frankfort based its claims—it was determined that he should not resign his office as at first intended. Freemasonry in Frankfort, however, languished, and between 1775 and 1777 no sittings of Grand Lodge were held. From 1777-80 negotiations, initiated by the Landgrave Karl of Hesse, were carried on with this Prince, who held out special inducements to Frankfort to join the Strict Observance. Gogel, Brünner, Passavant, and Küstner were advanced to the highest degree of this Rite as a test, and—advised against it! The negotiations then fell through at the last moment. Knigge, with the teachings of the Illuminati, failed even to obtain a hearing from the Lodge in 1780, although here again several brethren—for example, Küstner, Brünner, J.P. von Leonhardi, Pascha, Noël, Du Fay, etc.—gave the Society a trial. The Prov. G.L. refused to yield to, or capitulate with, Zinnendorff, and with its daughter "Union" plodded on its lonely road.

In 1782—March 12—Gogel died; on the 17th, Peter F. Passavant was elected G.M.; on the 18th, Pascha, who was about to leave for London, was commissioned to apply for a new Provincial patent, made out this time in the name of the Lodge, and not in that of the G.M., and to procure a solution to several other questions. In London he failed to obtain the ear of Grand Lodge, except through J. Leonhardi, W.M. of the Pilgrim Lodge, who, as Zinnendorff's representative, was scarcely likely to assist him. The utmost concession offered to Pascha was, that like the Berlin "Royal York," the Frankfort "Union" should content itself with the position of an English constituted Lodge, independent of any German superior. The result is not surprising. The Frankfort Fraternity decided—November 24, 1782—to assert, maintain, and exercise its acquired rights as the Provincial Grand Lodge for the Upper and Lower Rhine and Franconia, omitting the title "English." They contended—and with much force—that the right of assembling as a P.G.L. had been granted to them, quandiu se bene gesserint, and therefore could not be revoked, except by mutual consent, or on cause shown, that the Frankfort body had been guilty of misconduct or neglect.

It will be remembered that it was precisely at this period that Von Hund's Templar system received its coup-de-grace at Wilhelmsbad, and German Freemasonry entered upon a transition state. From the consequent confusion emerged the Eclectic Union. In order to thoroughly understand this movement, we must for the moment turn to the free city of Wetzlar-on-the-Lahn, in Rhenish Prussia. In that city the Frankfort "Three Thistles" warranted in 1767 a Strict Observance Lodge, "Joseph of the Three Helmets." To this was added the Scots Lodge, "Joseph of the Imperial Eagle"—a mother Lodge, which warranted a whole string of S.O. Lodges. The Templar Chapter was in 1777 transferred from the unfruitful soil of Frankfort to Wetzlar, at its head being Von Dittfurth.

On the decay of the Templar system, the Scots Lodge assumed the position of an independent Provincial Grand Lodge. Von Dittfurth then conceived the idea of the Eclectic Union, and communicated with Brönnert of Frankfort, who revised his suggestions—considerably improving them—and at a meeting of the Frankfort Provincial Grand Lodge—February 9, 1783—sketched out the future lines of the proposed body. The result was a joint circular to all German Lodges from the two Provincial Grand Lodges in question, dated March 18 and 21, 1783. The daughter Lodges—one at Wetzlar excepted—to the number of 14, immediately gave in their adhesion to the new organization, viz., at Wetzlar, Munich, Augsburg, Neuwied, Münster, Lautern, Cassel, Rothenburg, Aix-la-Chapelle, Salzburg, Wiesbaden, Brunn, Giessen, and Bentheim-Steinfurth.

On August 24, 1783, after due consideration, the Union Lodge also joined, and in December of the same year, the Strict Observance Lodge of the Three Thistles (at Frankfort) rejected the rectified Templar Rite, and amalgamated with the Union Lodge.

The success of the new organization was such, that by 1789 no less than 53 Lodges had expressed a desire to be enrolled under its banner, including Lodges in Copenhagen, Warsaw, Kien, Naples, etc.; but a great number of these could not be accepted for political and other reasons, and many others had soon after to be closed on similar grounds.

The chief features of the Eclectic Union were as follows:—Perfect equality of all Lodges among themselves, and entire independence of any superior authority—Masonry, by common consent, held to be composed of three degrees only—uniformity of ritual in those three degrees—every Lodge free to superimpose any fancy degrees it chose (hence the term Eclectic), but the degrees so conferred, and the members thereof, were to enjoy no recognition as such in the Lodge—the W.M. to be elected, and himself to appoint the other officers—the bond of union to consist in the regular communication to each Lodge of every other Lodge's proceedings—the Provincial Lodges of Frankfort and Wetzlar to be the two centres, undertaking this work of distribution under the name of Directorial Lodges—the Master Masons of other systems to be admitted as visitors to the Lodges, without any recognition of professedly superior degrees of which they might be in possession—warrants of Constitution to be granted in the name of the Eclectic Union by either of the Directorial Lodges, etc. The permission to add High Degrees soon lapsed by non-user, and was subsequently withdrawn, even before the Statutes were definitely altered; with the result that an attempt, a very few years afterwards, to introduce the Royal Arch into Frankfort was summarily suppressed. The Wetzlar Lodge also from the first took a less leading position than Frankfort, and gradually died out. In 1783 the Ritual was revised, conformably in all essentials with the English Rite, save that it insisted upon the candidate being a Christian—an enactment which was the cause of much trouble.

In 1784, the Harmony and Concord, and, in 1785, the Compasses, Lodges, at Trieste and Gotha respectively, joined the Eclectic Union.

In 1785 Graefe, of whom mention has already been made in connection with Hamburg, offered his services to Frankfort, and negotiations with England were commenced.

On May 21, 1786, Passavant died, and was succeeded as Provincial Grand Master by J. P. von Leonhardt. At this date the roll of the Union showed 25 Lodges, 7 of which, however—probably for political reasons—were unnamed in the published list.

Through Graefe's exertions, a compact was entered into with England—March 1, 1788—reinstating the Provincial Grand Lodge.<sup>1</sup> The clauses of most interest to this sketch are §1, granting the Lodge permission to elect its own G.M. every two or three years; §2, promising on the part of London not to issue warrants in the jurisdiction of Frankfort, except in cases where the Provincial Grand Lodge could not grant them; §6, Frankfort Lodges might obtain English registry on payment of the usual fees.

The last minute of the Wetzlar Lodge which reached Frankfort is dated July 11, 1788, and expresses a wish to conclude a similar treaty with England. But the Lodge was already moribund, and the desire was never realized.

On January 13, 1788, new statutes were passed by 30 Lodges, of which 8 by desire were unnamed. It is noteworthy that the Provincial Grand Lodge was still formed exclusively of members of the Union Lodge, every other Lodge being allowed—as before—to appoint one of these as its representative.

Leonhardi's patent as Prov. G.M. of the upper and Lower Rhine and Franconia, signed by Lord Effingham, Acting Grand Master, is dated February 20, 1789; on its receipt the installation festival was held, October 25, 1789; and Kloss remarks that no less than 29 Lodges sought and obtained English registry.* A careful comparison of our Lodge lists, however, shows at most 10 Lodges. These are, according to the numeration from 1792 to 1813, Nos. 456, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, and 588. On December 5, 1789, Leonhardi was elected Prov. G.M. for a second term.

The peculiar position of the Grand Lodge as a Directorial Lodge of the Union, and at the same time a Provincial Grand Lodge under England, gave rise to some apprehensions respecting the future independence of the private Lodges. Bode cleverly seized this incident to lend color to his circular issued November 24, 1790, by the Eclectic Lodge at Gotha, calling on all Eclectic Lodges to rearrange themselves under a new organization with the title of "German Masonic Union." As a result the Gotha Lodge was very naturally erased from the roll of Eclectic Lodges. In the same year the Lodge at Carlsruhe closed for political reasons, and that at Giessen on account of quarrels among its members. The Lodge at Nuremberg, "Three Arrows," protested against Gotha's exclusion, because it had been effected without the assent of the other Lodges or hearing Gotha's defence; ultimately in 1792 it severed its connection with the Eclectic Union, and joined the Gotha or Bode's Union.

In 1790 a few members of Lodge Union attempted to introduce the Royal Arch. Although they kept the Chapter entirely separate from the Lodge they met with decided opposition from the other brethren, and the degree was soon suffered to lapse. After many years we hear of it again. In 1842 the three surviving members of this still-born Chapter deposited a sealed case in the archives containing the statutes, rituals, and documents, to be opened after their deaths. On August 30, 1791, Von Dittfurth, of Wetzlar, resigned his office of Prov. G.M. and also that of W.M. of his Lodge, from which time Frankfort has reigned supreme without even the shadow of a rival.

Leonhardi resigned his office—October 19, 1792—and was succeeded—February 6, 1793—as Prov. G.M. by Johann Karl Brönnner.† During this year the Lodge at Kanfsbeuren closed for political reasons. These made themselves also felt in Frankfort, so that—June 8, 1793—Brönnner closed the Grand Lodge. On the 9th the French troops entered the city, and although the private Lodges still showed some slight activity throughout the occupation, the G.M. did not reopen Grand Lodge until October 29, 1801. mer Eclectic Lodges only seven survived those eight troublous years—those of Aix-la-Chapelle, Altenburg, Frankfort, Hildesheim, Münster, Rudolstadt, and Krefeld; and of these only the Frankfort "Union" had remained faithful to the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Eclectic Union.

Unfortunately this long slumber had induced the English Lodge "Royal York," at Berlin, which in 1798 had constituted itself a Grand Lodge, to consider the Provincial Grand Lodge of Frankfort as extinct, and in consequence—December 4, 1801—it warranted a Frankfort Lodge, "Socrates of Constancy." Brönnner protested against this infraction of jurisdiction, and in his appeal to England in 1805 complained of being left for three years without any replies to his letters. This letter also was left unanswered, for which perhaps the wars may be responsible; but the consequent strained relations between Frankfort and Berlin prevented the former joining a union which the Royal York, the Grand Lodge of Hanover, and the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hamburg had formed among themselves.<sup>1</sup> This Lodge Socrates remained as a stumbling block for many subsequent years.

Between 1803 and 1805 the Grand Lodge was once more closed, to which act many reasons, political and otherwise, contributed. Meanwhile the Nuremberg Lodge (formerly of the Eclectic Union) had endeavored to induce Frankfort to accept Schroeder's Ritual.<sup>2</sup> The P.G.L. of Frankfort once more, in spite of England's neglect, showed her filial allegiance by declining—February 27, 1805—to accede, being unable to take upon herself the responsibility of eliminating the obligation without superior permission. This subject also formed part of Brönnner's letter already alluded to.

In 1806 Frankfort became a Grand Duchy, with Karl von Dalberg over it as Prince Primate (Fürst Primas). Brönnner petitioned for permission to prosecute Masonic work, and closed the Provincial Grand Lodge until a reply was received. This arrived—verbally transmitted—July 2, 1808, to the effect that as Prince Primate he must ignore their labors, but as Karl von Dalberg he would permit them.

On July 12, 1808, the Grand Orient of France warranted a Lodge in Frankfort, composed chiefly of Jews, under the name of the "Nascent Dawn." This Lodge also was a source of trouble and vexation in later days.

But the Provincial Grand Lodge was strengthened in 1808 by the re-awakening of the Ulm Lodge, in 1809, by the revival of the Lodges at Carlsruhe and Freiburg, and by a new Lodge at Heidelberg. In this same year the above Lodges at Carlsruhe and Freiburg, together with an old Lodge at Heidelberg, joined in erecting a National Grand Lodge, Union of Baden, without, however, seceding from the Eclectic Union; merely ceasing to own allegiance to the Provincial Grand Lodge as such. On May 3, 1811, a compact was made with the Lodge Socrates, in view of its adhesion to the Provincial Grand Lodge, that the latter should in future be composed of members of the Socrates and Union Lodges equally, but that the G.M. should always be elected from the Union. The Lodge Socrates accordingly entered the Eclectic Union—May 12, 1811. June 24, the Lodge Joseph of Nuremberg, which had been constituted by the "Union" in 1761, and had seceded to the Strict Observance in 1767, took advantage of its jubilee to join the Eclectic Union.<sup>3</sup> Per contra the Ulm Lodge was compelled to close by a royal decree.

Brönnner died March 22, 1812, and was succeeded as Grand Master by Jean Noë Du Fay.

April 4, 1813, a new Lodge was warranted at Offenbach; but a Grand Ducal decree of February 16 of the same year, closing all Lodges in Baden, robbed the Eclectic Union of its daughter Lodges in Freiburg, Heidelberg and Carlsruhe.

A decree of the Prince Primate of April 30, 1813, detrimental to the progress of Freemasonry, had little time allowed it in which to take effect; the events of 1814 being still more detrimental to the Prince himself.

1814 witnessed a revival of the Ritual, in which the oath was ordered to be recited but not taken. With the exception of a few exclusively Christian allusions, this Ritual remained in force until 1871.

1816 brought an accession of strength in the Lodges Ernest at Coburg and St. John the Evangelist of Concord at Darmstadt. A new Lodge was constituted at Giessen May 29, 1817, and on the 25th of the same month a Lodge at Worms, warranted by the Grand Orient of France in 1811, was affiliated. In 1817 also, a quarrel arose between the Frankfurt Provincial G.L. and the Grand Lodge of England. The Lodge Nascent Dawn, chiefly Jewish, warranted by the G.O. of France in 1808, sought a new constitution. The Jewish element rendering a resort to the Provincial Grand Lodge futile, the brethren applied to the Landgrave Karl of Hesse, who at once enrolled them among the rectified Templar Lodges, and even forced upon them a Scots Lodge with the peculiarly Christian degrees of that Rite. As a natural consequence, the Lodge split up. The Christians retained Karl's warrant for the Lodge "Karl of the Dawning Light," whilst the Jews applied to the Duke of Sussex, and were constituted as the "Nascent Dawn." Both Lodges were treated by the Provincial Grand Lodge as clandestine, and much bitterness arose. The Grand Lodge of England, however, in this case had clearly acted within the meaning of §2 of the 1788 compact,<sup>1</sup> although perhaps more time for reflection ought to have been granted to the Prov. G.L. The latter body, however, by its notorious prohibition of Jewish members, had put itself quite out of court.

In 1818 a new Lodge at Mayence was warranted, but seceded to the Royal York Grand Lodge in 1821. Du Fay died February 24, 1820, and on August 5 Leonhardi, under whom the compact of 1788 was made with England, was elected G.M. for the second time, and it was fated that under him also the broken bonds which he had himself reknit should be finally severed. It was resolved—August 5, 1821—to make one more effort to obtain redress from England for its alleged encroachment, and this having failed, it was agreed—January 13, 1822—to renounce the English supremacy. Accordingly—March 27, 1823—the Provincial Lodge assumed the title of "The Mother Grand Lodge of the Eclectic Union," and notified this act to the Masonic world by a circular of November 14, 1823. All allusions to a mere directorial Lodge, primus inter pares, were apparently dropped for ever.

The Grand Lodge commenced its new career with a following of 9 Lodges.—In Frankfurt, 2—Union, Socrates; in Nuremberg, 2—Three Arrows, Joseph; and 1 each in Darmstadt, Giessen, Coburg, Offenbach, and Worms.

Leonhardi, who resigned March 3, 1826, and refused a re-election on account of his advanced age, died November 23, 1830. Constantine Fellner succeeded him as G.M.

On May 2 following Dr. George Kloss was first elected a member of the Grand Lodge. This celebrated Mason, skillful physician, diligent Masonic student and historian, was born at Frankfurt July 31, 1787, admitted to the Fraternity at the age of 18 as a Lewis—September 28, 1805—by the Lodge Union, of which he was elected W.M. in 1828. His Masonic works have been so repeatedly quoted in these pages, as to render any further allusion to them unnecessary. As a Masonic critic, he was emphatically facile princeps, and owing to the strength of his convictions acquired by the study of Masonic documents, it is easy to conceive that from the moment of his entering Grand Lodge, that body would have no peace until it renounced its errors, at the head of which Kloss naturally placed the exclusion of Jews—as he doubtless would have done in the case of any members of a particular race or religion—from the benefits of the Craft.

With the altered position of the Grand Lodge there remained no valid reason why the G.M. should be elected from the members of the Union Lodge only. The Socrates Lodge now commenced to agitate for a status in all respects equal to that of the Union, and in 1828 a revision of the constitutions was commenced, but the work lasted many years.

Owing to the religious intolerance of the Grand Lodge, its territory was once more invaded by the Grand Orient of France, which—December 2, 1832—warranted a Lodge, "Frankfort Eagle," largely composed of Jews. In the following years a strong feeling favorable to the Jewish Lodges and to the Landgrave Karl's Lodge, "Karl of the Dawning Light," sprang up in the Fraternity, and was reflected by the younger members of the Grand Lodge. The Grand Officers, who were all old members, finding themselves powerless to stem the current, resigned in a body—November 14, 1834—and on December 23, Johann Freidrich Fiedler was elected G.M., with Kloss as his Deputy. The Landgrave Karl died August 17, 1836, and his Lodge almost immediately afterwards began to negotiate for admission to the Union. On September 24 following, Fiedler died, and—March 3, 1837—Kloss was elected G.M. In 1839 one of Karl's Lodges—in Alzey—joined the Eclectic Union.

1840 witnessed two important steps. On March 9 it was resolved to admit Jewish brothers as visitors. This being the date of Kloss's retirement from office, he could at least congratulate himself that the battle was half won. He was succeeded as G.M. by Gerhard Friedrich, D.D. The second step was the conclusion of the negotiations with the Lodge "Karl of the Dawning Light," and its admission to the Eclectic Union, September 27, 1840.

The centenary festival of the Union Lodge was held June 27, 1842, when, as already stated, the documents of the long-forgotten R.A. Chapter were deposited in the archives, and the proceedings were graced by the presentation of Kloss's "Annals of the Union Lodge"—an invaluable mine of Masonic lore—compiled for the occasion.

Dr. Kloss was re-elected G.M. May 12, 1843, and under his inspiration the Grand Officers made a vigorous effort to render the G.L. ordinances less sectarian in their tenor, but unsuccessfully, as the motion was adjourned sine die—December 4, 1843.

But although most of the Eclectic Lodges were tending towards a more enlightened view on this subject, the newly-joined Lodge, "Karl of the Dawning Light," showed itself strongly conservative. It still insisted on working the Scots Degrees, and allowed itself great license with the Eclectic Ritual. This led to expostulations, recriminations, and strife, and finally to its exclusion, July 2, 1844. The Lodges at Darmstadt and Mayence took the part of Lodge Karl, and seceded in September, 1845; and these three then united in order to found the Grand Lodge of Concord at Darmstadt on a purely and rigidly Christian basis. The gap caused by the absence of these Lodges was only partially filled in the same year by a new warrant for a Lodge "Of Brotherly Truth" at Hamburg, granted to nine dissenting brothers of the "Golden Sphere" (Zinnendorff rite).<sup>1</sup>

A most necessary statute, the "Reorganization Act," was at length passed, December 27, 1845. The arrangements which chiefly interest us were, that the high degrees were absolutely forbidden; the Grand Lodge was composed of two representatives from each Lodge, to be chosen by them from subscribing members of the Frankfort Lodges (at this time only two, Union and Socrates,)—they were, however, permitted in lieu of this to depute two of their own members; the G.M. and the Grand Officers were to be elected for a term of three years from among the representatives.

June 17, 1846, Gerhard Friedrich was again elected G.M.<sup>2</sup> In the following year—October 1—the Grand Lodge was reorganized, as provided by the above Act, and the voting for G.M. resulted in the election of Franz Fresenius, of the Socrates Lodge—the first holder of that office who was not a member of the Union Lodge.

December 15, 1847, twelve more brethren of the "Golden Sphere" Lodge in Hamburg were granted an Eclectic constitution as the "Lodge of the Brother-Chain."

At length, early in 1848, the last relic of intolerance was cast aside, and the ritual purged of its specifically Christian requirements. This resulted in immediate negotiations with the Jewish Lodge "Nascent Dawn," which, however, did not bear fruit for some months. The other Jewish Lodge, "Frankfort Eagle," joined the Grand Lodge of Hamburg in the same year. On July 15, 1848, Past G.M. Fellner died.

The revision of the Statutes—November 13, 1849—is of interest, as by a clause which insisted that country Lodges should choose their representatives, one from each Frankfort Lodge, the whole power was once more thrown into the hands of the metropolitan Fraternity. It was also decided to elect the G.M. alternately from the two Frankfort Lodges.

Meanwhile, the members of the Lodge "Karl" had altered their views since assisting at the birth of the Darmstadt Grand Lodge. A few of them formed a new Darmstadt Lodge in Frankfort, "Karl of Lindenberg;" but the Lodge "Karl" itself, with the majority of the brethren, rejoined the Eclectic Union, June 30, 1850.

In the same year—December 2—Dr. J. W. J. Pfarr was elected G.M., after whom—November 28, 1853—came Fresenius once more, and then Pfarr again, December 1, 1856.<sup>3</sup> The most important event of these six years was the death of Dr. Kloss, February 10, 1854.

In 1858 a constitution was granted to Wiesbaden—May 2—and the Statutes of Grand Lodge were revised in December, so as to place "Karl" on an equality with the other two Frankfort Lodges; the G.M. to be elected from each Lodge alternately every two years.

In 1859—January 13—the Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt ordered all Lodges in his dominions to rally round the Darmstadt Grand Lodge. This entailed the loss of four Lodges to the Eclectic Union.

In the following year—March 23—the Grand Lodge was reconstituted under the new Act, and Dr. George Dancker elected G.M. The roll comprised ten Lodges—Union, Socrates, and Karl, of Frankfort; Joseph and Three Arrows, of Nuremberg; Brotherly Love and Brother-Chain, of Hamburg; Ernest, of Coburg; Libanon, of Erlangen; and Plato, of Wiesbaden. These still exist, and four more have been added.

<sup>3</sup> Pfarr went out of office in 1860, and died January 16, 1864. Fresenius also died in the same year, July 17.

December 6, 1861, Johann Kaspar Haner ' was elected G.M.; December 4, 1863, Julius Fester;" and January 12, 1865, Dr. Dancker ' once more.

In 1866 Frankfort became an integral part of the Kingdom of Prussia, in which, according to an unrepealed law, no Lodges are allowed to exist except those dependent upon one of the three Grand Lodges at Berlin. There was therefore much danger of the Eclectic Union being dissolved by the authorities. This, however, was obviated by the prudent and patriotic course of action pursued by its members. Under closely analogous circumstances—and presumably for reasons which did not apply in both cases—the Grand Lodge of Hanover was extinguished; but the law, although in force, has not been applied as regards Frankfort.

In 1867—December 6—Hermann Hörster (of Lodge Karl) was elected G.M., and December 3, 1869, Heinrich Weismann, under whom—December 8, 1871—the Statutes were once more revised; the Grand Lodge still consisting of Frankfort brethren as members, out country Lodges were to depute two of their own members as representatives, with votes in all cases, and a consultative voice in all. The G.M. was to be elected for three years from the Frankfort Lodges only, dropping the rule of alternation. On January 26, 1872, Grand Lodge was reconstituted under the new Act, and Weismann re-elected.

A new Lodge was warranted at Hanau, April 20, 1872; and January 10, 1873, the English Lodge at Frankfort, "Nascent Dawn," which had been the chief cause of the local declaration of independence, joined the Eclectic Union, entering at once into all the privileges of the other three metropolitan Lodges.

Karl Oppel was elected G.M. December 4, 1874. In 1877 a regular correspondence was resumed with England; and, May 26, 1878, the Darmstadt Lodge, "Karl of Lindenburg," at Frankfort, was affiliated. Revised constitutions were passed on September 21, 1879; G. E. Van der Heyden was elected G.M. January 21, 1881; and in 1882—February 17—the most recent of the Eclectic Lodges was warranted at Strasburg.

The latest event of interest was the Centenary Festival of the Eclectic Union, held March 18, 1883, and which was graced by the distribution of the lucid and detailed annals of that body, from the pen of the Grand Secretary, Karl Paul.

H. Weismann was elected G.M. December 7, 1883; and Alexander Knoblauch, who at present holds that office, December 12, 1884. These subordinate Lodges number 14, of which 5 are in Frankfort, 2 in Hamburg, 2 in Nuremberg, and 1 each in Erlangen, Hanau, Coburg, Strasburg, and Wiesbaden. In 1878 the membership of the then existing 13 Lodges amounted to 1396, or rather exceeding 100 per Lodge.

The "epoch-marking" dates of the Grand Lodge of the Eclectic Union are:—1742 constitution of Lodge "Union;" 1746-52, state of dormancy; 1766, erection of English Prov. G.L.; 1775-77, temporary closing of P.G.L.; 1782, first period of independence; 1783, formation of the Eclectic Union; 1789, reinstatement of the P.G.L. at Frankfort; 1793, Provincial Grand Lodge closed in anticipation of the entry of French troops; 1801, reopened with one daughter only, and territory invaded by the G.L. "Royal York; 1803-5, P.G.L. suspended; and again, 1806-8, whilst awaiting Karl von Dalberg's approbation; 1808, invasion of jurisdiction by G.O. of France; 1809, loss of Lodges by the formation of the G.O. of Baden; 1814, abolition of the oath; 1817, invasion of jurisdiction by the G.L. of England and Prince Karl of Hesse; 1823, declaration of independence and proclamation of the G.L. of the Eclectic Union, with 9 daughter Lodges; 1834, first success of the enlightened party in G.L.; 1840, Kari's Lodge absorbed, and Jewish question partly settled; 1843, loss of Lodges by formation of the G.L. of Darmstadt; 1848, Jewish question solved and Jewish Lodges absorbed; 1859, loss of Lodges by forced union with Darmstadt; 1866, incorporation of Frankfort with Prussia; 1883, Centenary Festival.

III. THE GRAND NATIONAL MOTHER-LODGE OF THE PRUSSIAN STATES, CALLED "OF THE THREE GLOBES."

In pursuing the history of this Grand Body, none can fail to be struck by a feature to which attention has already been directed in the case of the Eclectic Union, viz., the absence of a representative form of government. This, however, is only a natural consequence when a Grand Lodge is established before the birth of any of the private Lodges, which it is destined to control—the daughter Lodges, in all such cases, accepting the inferior and dependent position usually accorded to them, as a necessary adjunct of their constitution. When, on the other hand, several Lodges, with equal rights, join in establishing a ruling body or Grand Lodge, the representative form of government seems to follow as a matter of course. The relations between a Mother-Lodge and her daughters may be likened to those between England and her Crown colonies; whilst those between Grand and private Lodges—which follow the English precedent—are in closer approximation to the system of government of the United States. But in like manner as the power of our own House of Commons, at first restricted, has gradually increased, so do we find that under Grand Lodges—even where the sway is most despotic—something approaching a representative system is in gradual course of introduction.*

Individual Masons doubtless existed in Prussia at an early date, but the introduction of Freemasonry into that State, may without exaggeration be attributed directly to Frederick the Great, as during the lifetime of his father, who had conceived an aversion to the Craft, no open assemblage of Masons could possibly take place. In July, 1738, the King of Prussia and the Crown Prince Frederick, being on a visit to the Prince of Orange at Loo, the conversation at table took a Masonic turn. The King attacked the Order violently, but Count Albert Wolfgang of Lippe-Bückeburg took its part so successfully as to awake in the Crown Prince a desire to join the Craft. Great secrecy was naturally essential in the carrying out of such a project. Count Albert undertook the arrangements, and as the King had announced his intention of visiting Brunswick during the annual fair, it was resolved that the ceremony of initiation should be performed in that city. The duty was confided to Von Oberg, Master of the then anonymous Lodge in Hamburg,<sup>1</sup> who, with the secretary, Bielfeld, and a Baron von Löwen, travelled to Brunswick, and on August 11 met by arrangement the Count of Kielmansegge and F. C. Albedyll from Hanover, and

* The archives and minutes of this Grand Lodge are complete from September 13, 1740, to date, with the exception of a short period in 1765. In 1840 O'Etzel, the G.M., compiled a history of the Grand Lodge based upon these minutes, so that, as far as actual facts extend, its accuracy is unimpeachable. This was revised and continued in 1867, 1869, and 1875; and the Constitutions ordained in 1873 that every initiate should in future be presented with a copy. I have carefully collated "the history" with many accounts by other writers whose works will be quoted whenever used, but otherwise the following sketch is given on O'Etzel's authority, and may easily be verified by the dates affixed. The edition employed is "Geschichte der Grossen National-Mutter-Loge zu den d. Weltkugeln," etc., Berlin, 1875.

also Count Albert. Count Wartensleben joined the Prince as a second candidate. During the night August 14-15, 1738, the Prince and his friend came to the hotel where the Hamburg brethren were staying, and after midnight the two candidates were received in due form, no difference being made as regarded the Prince, in compliance with his own special request. The brethren then separated and returned home as quickly as possible, because, as Bielfeld wrote, "there is here one crowned head too many, who, if he discovered that we had initiated the Prince, his son, might in his ill-humor fail in the respect due to the Most Worshipful Masters."

Von Oberg afterwards erected and presided over a Lodge in the Prince's castle of Rheinsberg, and when he left for Hamburg in 1739, Frederick himself assumed the chair. At his father's death—May 31, 1740—Frederick openly acknowledged himself as a Mason; and—June 20, 1740—presided over a Lodge in the Royal Palace of Charlottenburg, with Bielfeld and Jordan as his Wardens. On that occasion the following candidates were initiated by the King in person:—his two brothers, August Wilhelm and Heinrich Wilhelm; his brother-in-law, Karl, Margrave of Brandenburg-Ansbach; and the Duke of Holstein-Beck. At a subsequent date he initiated the Margrave of Brandenburg-Baireuth. This Lodge was called the "Royal Lodge," but ceased to work about 1744, when the outbreak of war diverted Frederick's attention to other matters.

Immediately after his accession Frederick empowered Jordan, the secretary of his Lodge, to erect a Lodge in Berlin for the convenience of the numerous Masons there resident. Its first meeting was held September 13, 1740, and it took the name of "The Three Globes." This Lodge, which is now the Grand Lodge of the same name, was therefore founded simply on the King's authority, who, from the very first, assumed all the privileges of a Grand Master in his own dominions. Until the day of his death he was always considered as such, although his active participation in the affairs of the Craft terminated in 1744. The names of some of the affiliates and initiates of the Lodge during its first year of existence are of interest in the history of Freemasonry in Germany. For instance, Baron Schmottau, already mentioned in connection with Scots Masonry; Bielfeld, secretary to the Prussian Embassy at London, an honored visitor of our Grand Lodge, March 19, 1741,<sup>1</sup> and who, July 21, 1741, was able to assure the "Three Globes" that England readily looked upon the King as the natural Grand Master in his dominions, which was, of course, equivalent to acknowledging the regularity of the Three Globes' constitution; the Marquis de Gentils, who, June 27, 1742, styled himself English S.G.W. pro tempore, and helped to found the Union Lodge at Frankfurt;<sup>2</sup> and Ch. Barry, who, on December 6, 1737, had presided over the first Hamburg Lodge as Provincial Grand Master for Prussia and Brandenburg,<sup>3</sup> where at that time no Lodge existed. Other notable members were Prince William, the Duke of Holstein-Beck, the Margrave Karl of Brandenburg, Count Waldburg (also a visitor at the Grand Lodge of England, March 19, 1741), and Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick-Bevern,<sup>4</sup> initiated December 21, 1740.

The first code of by-laws was drawn up and accepted November 9, 1740. In October a deputation from the Lodge initiated Karl Frederick, Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, and the "Three Globes" issued its first warrant of constitution to a Lodge, "The Three Compasses," in that prince's chief city.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, KING OF PRUSSIA.

He was born January 24th, 1712, and died on the 17th of August, 1786, at the age of seventy-four years and a few months. He was initiated as a Mason at Brunswick, on the night of August 14th, 1738, not quite two years before he ascended the throne. Biefeld tells us that in a conversation which took place on the 6th of August at Loo, the institution of Freemasonry had been enthusiastically landed by the Count of Lippe Buckeburg. The Crown Prince soon after privately expressed to the Count his wish to join the society. Of course, this wish was to be gratified. The necessary furniture and assistance for conferring the degrees were obtained from the Lodge at Hamburg. Biefeld, one of the founders of The Lodge of The Three Globes at Berlin, says:

"The whole of the 14th (August) was spent in preparations for the Lodge, and at twelve at night the Prince Royal arrived, accompanied by Count Watenalefen, a captain in the king's regiment at Potsdam. The Prince introduced him to us as a candidate whom he very warmly recommended, and begged that he might be admitted immediately after himself. At the same time, he desired that he might be treated like any private individual, and that none of the usual ceremonies might be altered on this account. Accordingly, he was admitted in the customary form, and I could not sufficiently admire his fearlessness, his composure, and his address. After the double reception, a Lodge was held. All was over by four in the morning, and the Prince returned to the ducal palace, apparently as well pleased with us as we were charmed with him."

The zeal of the Prince for the Fraternity induced him to invite the Baron Von Oberg and himself to Reinsberg, where, in 1739, they founded a Lodge, into which Keyserling, Jordan, Moolendorf, Qneis, and Fredersdorf (Frederick's valet) were admitted.

Biefeld also states that on June 20th, 1740, King Frederick—for he had then ascended the throne—held a Lodge at Charlottenburg, and, as Master in the chair, initiated Prince William of Prussia, his brother, the Margrave Charles of Brandenburg, and Frederick William, Duke of Holstein. The Duke of Holstein was seven years afterwards elected Adjutant Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes at Berlin. July 16th, 1774, he granted his protection to the National Grand Lodge of Germany, and officially approved of the treaty with the Grand Lodge of England, by which the National Grand Lodge was established. In the year 1777, the Mother Lodge "Royal York of Friendship," at Berlin, celebrated, by a festival, the King's birthday, on which occasion Frederick wrote the following letter, which, as it is the only printed declaration of his opinion of Freemasonry that is now extant, is well worth printing:

"I cannot but be sensible of the new homage of the Lodge 'Royal York of Friendship' on the occasion of the anniversary of my birth, bearing, as it does, the evidence of its zeal and attachment for my person. Its orator has well expressed the sentiments which animate all its labors: and a society which employs itself only in sowing the seed and bringing forth the fruit of every kind of virtue in my dominions may always be assured of my protection. It is the glorious task of every good sovereign, and I will never cease to fulfill it. And so I pray God to take you and your Lodge under his holy and deserved protection. Potsdam, this 14th of February, 1777.—Frederick."

Frederick the Great, King of Prussia

AN EARNEST AND ENTHUSIASTIC FREEMASON.

Was initiated into Freemasonry at Brunswick, Germany, August 14, 1738

In 1742, Schmettau having made several Scots Masters, these formed themselves into a Scots Lodge, "Union," November 30, 1742. Although the membership of this Lodge was restricted to Masons of the "Three Globes," it never attempted, like the French Scots Master Lodges, to exercise any control over the Craft.

From 1742 to 1744 six warrants of constitution were granted, some of which were for localities beyond the confines of Prussia. It was therefore only natural that—June 24, 1744—the Lodge should assume the title of "Grand Royal Mother-Lodge of the Three Globes." It did not cease, however, on that account to continue working as a private Lodge. Frederick the Great was nominally Grand Master, and in September, 1747, the Duke of Holstein-Beck, Governor of Berlin, was elected Vice or Deputy G.M.—a step designed to strengthen the Lodge, which had meanwhile somewhat deteriorated. These offices, however, were rather ornamental than useful, as the real power in the Lodge was still vested in the Master. The changes in that office I cannot pause to tabulate, but may mention that Von Printzen—initiated March 18, 1748—who was elected Master of the Lodge, May 5, 1749, held the post until June 5, 1752, and became the foremost figure in its early annals.

December 9, 1754, a second Lodge was constituted at Berlin, under the name of La Petite Concorde, but with very limited powers. It soon felt the inconvenience of this arrangement, and took advantage of some irregularities in the election of the officers of the Mother-Lodge—May 28, 1755—to protest and declare itself independent. Lord James Keith, who was then Governor of Berlin, and professed to be Deputy G.M. of all English Lodges in North Germany,<sup>1</sup> interfered to prevent the "Concord" being closed by force, and promised it an English constitution. Although the Mother-Lodge had meanwhile warranted, in 1746, five, and, in 1751, two Lodges, matters were far from satisfactory, and in May, 1757, Von Printzen was once more called to the direction of affairs. His first efforts to restore peace between the Three Globes and the Concord were, however, only partially successful. In 1758 the latter also erected for itself a Scots Lodge, under the name of "Harmony."

In the same year Gabriel de Lernaïs, a French prisoner of war, appears upon the scene. The Three Globes granted him a warrant for a French Lodge, without the right of initiating. This Lodge "Fidelity" died out after the exchange of prisoners. De Lernaïs also induced Von Printzen to give his powerful support to the Clermont Degrees, and, (circa) 1758, these two erected a Chapter—"Knights of Jerusalem"—which—June 19, 1760—assumed the title of "Premier Grand Chapter of Clermont in Germany," with Von Printzen as Chief. This Chapter exercised no supremacy over the Lodges: it was, and remained until the advent of the Strict Observance, outside the real work of the Craft. Rosa, as already related, somewhat modified the ritual, and established subordinate Chapters in many cities.<sup>2</sup>

Besides four other Lodges, the Three Globes warranted—August 10, 1760—the Berlin Lodge of the "Three Doves," now the Grand Lodge Royal York.

In 1761 the Lodge Concord constituted a daughter Lodge at Magdeburg, which was at once denounced as clandestine by the Mother-Lodge of the Three Globes. Von Printzen, however, took measures to obviate any such untoward occurrences in future, and by his efforts the "Masonic Tribunal" was established, of which he became G.M., April 22, 1761. Each of the three Berlin Lodges furnished one officer to this Tribunal, which was designed to decide all matters that might arise between them. The "Concord" returned to its allegiance as first daughter of the Grand Mother-Lodge, with a more liberal warrant conferring extended powers: its daughter was recognized as legitimate, and its Scots Lodge amalgamated with that of the Three Globes. In 1763, however, a member of the Lodge "Friendship" (the new name of the Three Doves) was excluded by the Tribunal for six months for a Masonic offence. This proceeding caused so much friction that the G.M. and officers of the Tribunal resigned; and as no fresh ones were elected, the Tribunal ceased to exist. Von Printzen, however, continued for years to be referred to as G.M., probably out of respect for his character. In 1762 and 1763 eight new Lodges were constituted—the last sign of activity for some years, for the time was now fast approaching when the Three Globes and its daughters were to merge into the system of the Strict Observance.

It will be remembered that in 1763 Schnbart was named Deputy G.M., and superseding Rosa in his missionary efforts, was appointed by Von Hund his Delegate-General in November of that year.<sup>1</sup> In 1764 he returned to Berlin to convert the Fraternity there, and finally so far succeeded that the new Statutes accepted by the Three Globes—November 20, 1764—are decidedly fashioned on the lines of the Strict Observance. His success was all the easier because Rosa's Clermont Chapters had to a certain extent prepared the way. On January 13, 1765, Von Hund granted a warrant to Krüger to open a Strict Observance Lodge in Berlin. In 1765, also, the Lodge Friendship acquired an English patent, and separated from the Three Globes,<sup>2</sup> ultimately developing into the Grand Lodge—Royal York of Friendship.

At this period Zinnendorff appears upon the scene. He was already a member of Von Printzen's Jerusalem Chapter, and in June, 1765, was elected Master of the Three Globes. On August 24, 1764, he signed the Act of Strict Observance at Halle, was knighted by Von Hund on October 3, and made Prefect of Templin (i.e., Berlin) on the 6th, with Krüger as second in command. The two together carried the Berlin Lodges with them, and—January 13, 1766—Von Hund constituted the Three Globes a Scots or Directoral Lodge, with power to warrant Strict Observance Lodges. The daughter Lodges all naturally went over to the new system, with the exception of the Royal York, which had placed itself under the Grand Lodge of England. Zinnendorff, however, made himself enemies, acted in a very arbitrary manner, used the Lodge funds—so it is averred—for his own purposes (see next Section), and was therefore not re-elected at the expiration of his year of office. He was succeeded in June, 1766, by Krüger, who in July procured the acceptance of the Strict Observance Ritual, and the formal renunciation by the Lodge—August 9—of the Clermont Degrees.

On November 16, 1766, Zinnendorff formally notified to Von Hund his renunciation of the Strict Observance, and six months later—May 6, 1767—all things being in readiness for the foundation of his own rite, he resigned membership of the Three Globes. The members of that Lodge were evidently by no means agreed as to their future proceedings, for in the same year (1767) another notable member, Köppen, also seceded, and founded a rite—that of African Architects—which only came to an end at his death in 1797.<sup>3</sup>

In 1769, Kehler became Master of the Three Globes, and Krüger, Head Scots Master (the Scots Lodges of the Strict Observance controlled those of the Craft), and in accordance with the rules of the Templar system both offices were declared permanent.

GRAND NATIONAL MOTHER-LODGE OF "THE THREE GLOBES." 51

In the following year—February 24—the Mother-Lodge constituted the Berlin Lodge of the "Flaming Star," of which O. A. Marschall von Bieberstein was Worshipful Master.<sup>1</sup> This Lodge, with the Three Globes and the Concord, now formed one body, as it were, under the Scots Lodge—so much so, that in 1787 the Berlin Masons did not know to which Lodge they belonged, and steps had to be taken to remedy the confusion.

November 16, 1770, the Crown Prince—afterwards Frederick William II.—wrote to the Lodge of the Strict Observance—i.e., the Three Globes—assuring it of his protection.

In 1772 Krüger and Wöllner attended the Kohlo Convent, at which the S.O. system was reorganised. Each national division of the Order acquired a Grand Lodge to rule the Craft; the National Grand Master and the Head Master of the Scots Lodge acting together formed the Scots Directory, ruling all degrees, including the 4th; the Supreme Grand Master, i.e., Duke Ferdinand, presided over all the separate Directories; the higher or knightly degrees were subject to the Prov. G.M., Von Hund. Prince Frederick Augustus of Brunswick (nephew of Ferdinand) was made National Grand Master of Prussia; and the "Three Globes," in accordance with the new arrangements, took the title of "Grand National Mother-Lodge of the Prussian States," which it has ever since retained.

In 1773 the former G.M., Von Printzen, died; and in the following year the Lodge Frederick of the Three Seraphim was constituted in Berlin. May 2, 1775, Krüger resigned, and the National Grand Master, Prince Frederick Augustus, appointed as Head Scots Master, Wöllner, who was imbued with the alchemical and mystical mania of the day, the effects of which tendency will soon be apparent. In 1775 two new Lodges (one "Silence," in Berlin), and in 1776 two others, were constituted. This brings us to the date of Von Hund's death (November 18, 1776), and to a new period in the history of this Grand Lodge.

Many causes combined to produce dissatisfaction with the rite of the Strict Observance about this time. Wöllner himself had become allied with the New or Gold Rosicrucians,<sup>2</sup> and naturally influenced his entourage; the idea of a Templar restoration had ceased to attract or to retain favor; the object of the Duke of Sudermania in desiring Von Hund was looked upon with suspicion; and the position of the Mother-Lodge was after all only a secondary one. The consequence was, that no deputies were sent from Berlin to the Convent at Wolfenbüttel in 1777, and—July 5, 1779—it was resolved in Grand Lodge to cease working the high degrees, but not formally to disassociate the Lodges of the jurisdiction from the Strict Observance. The G.M., Prince Frederick Augustus, informed the subordinate Lodges of this resolution by a circular—April 7, 1780—which contains very palpable allusions to a hermetic society, and announces the formation of a 5th degree, immediately succeeding the Scots Masters, the very existence of which was to be kept secret from all those not admitted to it. The four "at present" imperfect lower degrees were to be retained till the Unknown Superiors should send them corrected rituals. Theden was to be the only one entitled to confer this 5th degree, but Wöllner, as Head Scots Master, was to direct the whole system, etc. From that moment, although it would be incorrect to describe the Three Globes system as a Rosicrucian one, inasmuch as the hermetic leaders at no time controlled whole Lodges, yet it may safely be averred that the Rosicrucian de-degrees were extensively practised by a very large number of individual Masons selected from these Lodges, and that the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes became the centre of the Rosicrucian Fraternity. From 1777 to 1781 five new Lodges were warranted, one each year. In 1780—June 26—a first step towards a representative system was made by a resolution conferring honorary membership of Grand Lodge on all acting Masters of subordinate Lodges.

The meeting of the Wilhelmsbad Convent—and with it the practical subversion of the Strict Observance—took place in 1782. This furnished an opportunity for the Three Globes to avow its principles. In a circular of November 11, 1783, it declares its independence of all superior authority, but is willing to honor Duke Ferdinand, as before, in the capacity of Grand Master; it refuses, however, to conform to the rectified Templar system, but offers to recognize as legitimate all Masons of every system as far as concerns the first three degrees (always excepting the Illuminati), and counsels all Grand Lodges to follow its example. Not a word, however, does the circular contain of their own special "vanity," the hermetic degrees.

The next few years present little of importance. In 1783 three Lodges were warranted, in 1784 Theden became W.M. of the Three Globes, and in 1785 Bieberstein was elected Scots Head Master. In 1786, however, two important events occurred—Frederick the Great died, and the unknown Rosicrucian Fathers ordered a general Silenum, so that the two prominent disciples of this folly, Wöllner and his pupil, Frederick William II., had to content themselves with prosecuting their researches unaided; and for the next few years the Lodges worked only the original three degrees, with a Scots degree superadded. In 1787 one new Lodge was warranted, and in 1788 the first list was published, showing 16 active subordinate Lodges, with 763 members. 1790 saw the end of the mutual interdiction between the Lodges under the "Three Globes" and the National (or Zinnendorf) G. L., which was succeeded by a pact of tolerance and amity. In 1791, in order to remedy the evil caused by the continual absence from Berlin of the G.M., Prince Frederick Augustus of Brunswick, Wöllner was elected his Deputy. Wöllner, however, was now a Minister of State, and his scanty leisure was devoted to alchemical studies, so that not much advantage accrued from this step. More to the purpose was the appointment of a commission—January 4, 1794—to formulate a Grand Lodge constitution and ordinances, and a resolution to re-elect all officers yearly, thus effacing the last reminiscence of the S.O. system. In 1796 Theden resigned on account of his advanced age, and Zöllner was elected W.M. of the Three Globes.

In the same year—February 9—Frederick William II. granted the Grand Lodge his special protection, together with all the privileges of a corporate body. The greater part of the ensuing year was taken up in devising a scheme for a governing body, and in formulating constitutions for the entire system; but the work was at length concluded, November 22, 1797. It will be necessary to consider these constitutions at some length, as they form the ground-work of all subsequent legislation. The G.M. and Dep. G.M. were deprived of all authority, and became mere figureheads to whom a certain amount of outward honor and deference was shown, but who were not even required to sign warrants, which were to be issued by the Grand National Mother-Lodge. The Grand Lodge became the legislative body, and was composed of 36 active members chosen from the Berlin Lodges. Seven of these formed a species of acting committee, with the style of a Scots Directory, the president taking the name of Head Scots Master. This Directory represented the Lodge before the law, and was entrusted with the administration of affairs; all resolutions of the Grand Lodge required its ratification, and all its acts required the assent of the Grand Lodge. To a certain extent its president even took precedence of the corresponding dignitary of the Grand Lodge. Its members were to be Scots Masons. In matters of dogma it took the name of Inner Orient, and was entrusted with the preservation of the purity of ritual, etc. As regards ritual, only three degrees were acknowledged. Four higher steps were, indeed, instituted—the first being derived from the old Scots Lodge—and in these the history of the Craft, the dogmas of Freemasonry, and the arcana of the "High Degrees" were unfolded. They were not, however, degrees, although membership of each was preceded by a ceremony, and they exercised no influence over the Lodges; they more nearly approached close literary societies, and were attached to individual Lodges provided the consent of the W.M. could be obtained, and each particular Lodge of this class was considered as a branch of the Berlin Lodge. The arrangement in fact was not unlike the Hamburg Engbund. It will be observed that the Provincial Lodges had no share in the government of the Craft.

In 1798—October 20—there appeared a royal edict suppressing all secret societies. The three Grand Lodges in Berlin, however, and Lodges holding under them, were expressly exempted from its provisions; but Lodges erected in Prussia by other Grand Lodges were declared illegitimate. The names of all members were to be handed to the police authorities yearly. The G.M. and the Dep. G.M. were asked whether their names should be also cited, and whether they would accept the accompanying responsibility. They declined and resigned their posts in February, 1799.

During the ten years 1788-98 six Lodges were warranted, and the number of active Lodges had increased to 20, with a total membership of 941.

In 1799—March 7—it was determined not to elect any special National Grand Master, but to consider the W.M. of the Three Globes as such pro tem. Zöllner therefore thenceforth took the title of Grand Master. June 24.—New statutes were agreed to; these must not be confounded with the constitutions. All German Grand Lodges make a distinction between the two, although it is at times somewhat difficult to explain the difference. In 1801—February 10—the special constitutions of the Inner Orient<sup>1</sup> received final approbation; and, November 1, 1804, the constitutions were revised; the Grand Lodge to consist of 11 Grand Officers and 36 active members.

In 1804—September 12—Grand Master Zöllner died, and was succeeded by Guionneau. A pant G.M., Prince Frederick Augustus, Duke of Brunswick, died November 8, 1805.

In October, 1806, the French troops entered Berlin, and the Lodges there under the Three Globes system were ordered to suspend work. The committees of the Grand Lodge continued, however, to meet and transact all necessary business. It was even during this interregnum, that the first steps towards a closer union of the three Berlin Grand Lodges were taken, for on December 12, 1807, a committee was instituted consisting of four deputies of each Grand Lodge, to consider and arrange matters of common interest and profit. This led to the "Masonic Union of the Three Grand Lodges of Berlin"—January 6, 1810—which was dissolved in 1823.<sup>2</sup> Unfortunately one of the first acts of this committee—April 2, 1808—was to confirm the already existing ordinance that a Jew could not be initiated, nor could a Jew already made a Mason elsewhere be affiliated. His right to visit was left undecided. This Jewish question was now beginning to make its importance felt, and I shall have to revert to it on several occasions, as we proceed.

The Berlin Lodges resumed work December 16, 1808. During the preceding ten years 40 Lodges had been added to the roll, but owing to a few dropping out, the total of active Lodges had only risen from 20 to 55, with a membership of 3694, or an average of 67 per Lodge as compared with 47 in 1798. The formation of the Grand Lodge of Saxony, at Dresden, in 1811, withdrew the Lodge at Bantzen from the jurisdiction of Berlin. That Grand Lodge was, however, liberal enough to permit former Lodges to retain their peculiar rituals, and thus it came about that in 1813 a pact was entered into between the "Three Globes" and Dresden, by virtue of which this Lodge remained under Berlin in all matters regarding ritual and work, but otherwise passed under the jurisdiction of Dresden. This peculiar position of a Lodge owing obedience to two Grand Lodges at one and the same time, subsists to this day, but it is, as far as I know, a unique case.

In 1812—November 26—the Constitutions underwent their septennial revision, the chief alterations being that the Provincial Lodges were granted a sham representation, and allowed to appoint a Berlin member of the Grand Lodge as their proxy, which was an unsatisfactory concession to a demand for a seat in that body for every Master of a Lodge; that the number of members of Grand Lodge might be raised in consequence of this demand for representation as high as 7 by 7, i.e., 49; that the membership was never to be less than 5 by 5, or 25; and that 3 by 3, or 9, formed a quorum of the Grand Lodge.<sup>1</sup>

1817 is the year given by O'Etzel for the initiation by a deputation from the "Three Globes" of Prince Frederick, second son of the King of Holland, and subsequent G.M. of the Netherlands. I have already pointed out that there must be a mistake somewhere in the dates connected with this prince.<sup>2</sup>

In the last ten years 39 Lodges had been added to the roll, but a great many must have become extinct, since from 55 active Lodges in 1808, the total had only risen to 74 in 1818, with 6545 members, an average of 88.89 per Lodge.

In 1821 the Czar's edict closing the Polish Lodges, caused a loss of several Lodges to Berlin; and the revision of the Statutes, in 1825, once more enforced the regulation that a Jew could neither be initiated, affiliated, nor received as a visitor. It may also be observed that, in 1831, O'Etzel, the subsequent Grand Master, joined Lodge Concord, and was elected a member of the Grand Lodge in 1822.

From 1818 to 1828 fifteen Lodges had been constituted, and the total number of active Lodges amounted to 87, with a membership of 6842, or an average of 78 per Lodge—somewhat less than before.

In 1829 the National Grand Master, Gunionneau, died, and was succeeded by Rosenstiel, who, also dying—March 18, 1832—was followed by Poselger.

In 1836 an Amsterdam Lodge protested in a most dignified manner, on account of a refusal to admit some of its members as visitors, by reason of their Jewish faith. The Lodge disclaimed any intention of dictating to the Grand Lodge respecting its choice of members, but insisted that a person, once made a Mason, should be treated as a brother, and that the Grand Lodge was incompetent to go behind his certificate and inquire into his religious belief. The protest, however, produced no immediate effect.

In 1838, G.M. Proselger resigned on account of ill-health, and O'Etzel, who had entered the Directory in 1836, was elected in his stead. Proulger died shortly afterwards, February 9, 1838. The periodical revision of the Constitutions produced no change of more than passing interest. In this year the Grand Lodge acquired, for ten Frederichs-d'or, the apron and gavel of Frederick the Great. Since 1828 six new Lodges had been added to the roll. The total number, as against the 87 of 1828, was only 88, with 7225 members, an average of 82 per Lodge. In 1839—December 28—there was formed a Grand Masters' Union of the three Berlin Grand Lodges, and one of its first acts—May 22, 1840—was to initiate Prince William of Prussia, the present Emperor of Germany.<sup>1</sup>

In 1840—September 13—the Grand Lodge held its centenary festival, on which occasion it was presented by the Master of the Lodge "Horus"—on the roll of the Royal York—with the sword used at the initiation of Frederick the Great at Brunswick in 1738; whereupon it was resolved, that the W.M. of Lodge Horus, although under another jurisdiction, be ex officio an honorary member of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes.

The revision of the Constitution in 1843, raised the possible number of members of the Grand Lodge to 7 by 9, or 63; and the revised Statutes of 1841 once more excluded the Jews even from visiting—the Grand Master's Union making this ordinance incumbent on all three of the Prussian Grand Lodges in 1842. As a last resort H.R.H. the Protector was appealed to, and—April 26, 1843—delivered himself to the same effect. In 1848 a Cologne Lodge affiliated a Jewish brother, and appointed him to office: the Lodge was erased.

O'Etzel<sup>2</sup> resigned office in 1848, and was succeeded as G.M. by Messerschmidt. In the preceding ten years, 12 new Lodges had been warranted or revived. The total of active Lodges was 96, with 8589 members—an average of 89.90, showing a steady increase both of Lodges and members.

A revision of the Constitutions being due in 1849, the Lodges were requested to vote with regard to the admission of Jews as visitors. Out of 71 Lodges which replied, 56 voted for and 15 against their admission. After this expression of opinion the Grand Lodge, nevertheless, only approved the resolution by 19 to 16 votes. It called upon the Directory to say whether this was one of those resolutions which required to be passed by two-thirds majority. The Directory answered that it was a dogmatic question, requiring to be submitted to them as the Inner Orient, and sided with the majority. The result was that—July 11, 1849—all Masons subject to a Grand Lodge recognized by the Three Globes were declared admissible as visitors, and thus the first step towards placing Jewish, on a level with Christian, Masons was at last conceded. The quorum of the Grand Lodge was raised from nine to one-third of its active members.

On Christmas Day, 1850, O'Etzel—or rather Von Etzel, died, the latter prefix having been granted to him by Royal decree in 1846.

Since 1848 only four new Lodges had been warranted, and some of the Lodges in Hanover had been forced to join the Grand Lodge of that country at King George's desire. The total number of active Lodges in 1858 was 94, with 9744 members—an average of 104 members per Lodge.

In 1861, E. E. Wendt, English G. Sec. for German Correspondence, succeeded in establishing a correspondence between the Three Globes and our own Grand Lodge, and at length, in 1867, some approach to a representative system was inaugurated. At the Annual Conference in 1866, at which proposed alterations of the Statutes were usually discussed, the Masters of Provincial Lodges were for the first time invited to attend, and did so to the number of 20.

In 1868—February 20—it was resolved to present every initiate with a copy of O'Etzel's "History of the 'Three Globes,'" a most liberal and praiseworthy arrangement.

In May—7th and 8th—the question, whether Jewish Masons were to be admitted, was again raised. Their affiliation or initiation was rejected by 54 votes to 20; but it was resolved to receive them, if actual subscribing members of a regular Lodge, as permanent visitors (a position much resembling honorary membership in England) by 54 votes to 24.

In this year the total number of active Lodges was 106, with a membership of 11,271, or an average of 106 per Lodge, the warrants granted in the previous ten years being 14.

In 1869 representatives were for the first time exchanged with England, and in the May Conference the Jewish question was adjourned as inopportune. In 1873 a Lodge was warranted at Shanghai. This is the only German Lodge in foreign parts which is not under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg.

At the periodical revision of the Constitutions in 1873, the provinces made a great effort to secure a better representation in Grand Lodge. They obtained—not all they wanted—but a great concession. It was resolved—April 19—that no law or statute should be made or amended except at the May Conferences, in which every Worshipful Master was entitled to a vote. As, however, Grand Lodge was allowed to attend in full force, the Masters still found themselves, as a rule, much out-numbered, whilst a majority of two-thirds was requisite to carry a new law or an amendment to an old one. The Jewish question was again fought out, but left in statu quo.

In 1873, on the occasion of completing twenty-five years as Grand Master, Messerschmidt resigned, on account of old age, and was succeeded by Von Etzel, the son of O'Etzel, Messerschmidt's immediate predecessor.

In 1874 the Lodges had voted on the Jewish question as a guide to the Grand Lodge—66 Lodges for their admission, 44 against; but of the individual members actually voting there was a majority of 7 against. At the May Conference there were present 47 Grand Lodge members and 28 Masters, and the voting was 45 to 30—adversely to the Jews. In 1876 the majority was at last in their favor, but the necessary two-thirds majority was not attained. The more enlightened Masons then tried to secure their ends by a reorganization of the legislative body, and—May 25, 1878—it was resolved that thenceforth not all the members of Grand Lodge should take part in the May Conferences, but only 25—that is, 5 from each Berlin Lodge—the provincial Masons thus standing a better chance of procuring a two-thirds majority. But up to the present time the Jewish question still remains unsettled.

Meanwhile, Zachiesche followed Von Etzel (resigned) as G.M. in 1876: the present Grand Master is C. Schaper. My last statistics refer to 1878, when the Grand National Mother-Lodge of the Three Globes exercised authority over 113 Lodges (5 in Berlin), with a membership of 13,095 Masons, or an average of 116 members per Lodge. One Lodge only—Shanghai—is beyond the confines of the empire, but many are outside of Prussia proper.

IV THE NATIONAL GRAND LODGE OF ALL GERMAN FREEMASONS AT BERLIN.<sup>1</sup>

The above title of this Grand Lodge is not now and never was justified. It is a barefaced usurpation. The Lodge never has been national in the way claimed, as embracing all Germany, and even at its birth was not so in the more restricted sense as applying to Prussia, where the National Grand Mother Lodge of the Three Globes already existed. That it assumed until quite recently to be the only legal Grand Lodge in Germany, that it to this day poses as infallible, the only true exponent of Freemasonry with the sole exception of Sweden, is, however, only in perfect keeping with the imperious temper of its founder. From its inception the Lodge has been dictatorial and oppressive towards its own daughters; scornful and even impertinent towards its equals; boastful of its own superior light, yet persistently shrouding itself in darkness, founded by a violation of all masonic legality, yet a stickler for legal forms when they suit its own convenience; revolutionary at its birth, and ever since most rigidly conservative. Nevertheless this Grand Lodge is the second largest in Germany, and has produced Masons of the highest culture, whose very names must always remain an honor to the Fraternity. Zinnendorff and his immediate friends and successors knew their own minds at a time when their German brethren were vacillating between Clermont degrees, Strict Observance Rites, Rosicrucianism, et hoc genus omne, and so knowing, carried out their views astutely, ruthlessly, and persistently—with the success that usually attends all well-directed efforts. No official history of this Grand Lodge has ever been published; its partisans speak with awe of its ancient documents, and hide them from the gaze of the student. Like holy relics they are only accessible to devout believers; nay, even a complete book of Constitutions has never been placed within reach of the public; and Worshipful Masters, in order to govern their Lodges, have been constrained to gather together the decisions pronounced at various times by the Grand Lodge, each thus forming for himself a species of digest of the common law as settled by decided cases. Such a collection has been made in Vol. xxvi. of the "Iatonia," and will be used by me; my other facts I have had to collect from divers sources, but many gaps still remain to be filled up.

The early annals of this Grand Lodge are indissolubly connected with Zinnendorff, one of the most remarkable and perhaps unscrupulous Masons of whom we have any record. Ellenberger was his patronymic, and he was born August 11, 1731, at Halle; but, being adopted by his mother's brother, took his maternal name of Zinnendorff. He followed the medical profession, and rose to be the chief of that department in the Prussian army, retiring in 1779. His initiation took place at Halle, March 13, 1757. When he joined a Berlin Lodge, or even which Lodge it was, are alike unknown; but he was one of the early members of the Berlin Chapter of Jerusalem. We have already seen how Schubart, the Deputy G.M. of the "Three Globes," was in November, 1763, won over by Von Hund. Schubart's first step was to despatch a letter in Von Hund's interest to the "Three Globes," which was to be opened in the presence of 24 brethren, who were specified. On its arrival, Zinnendorff and three others being with Von Printzen, the <sup>1</sup> The literal translation of the German title is "Grand Lodge of the Country." I therefore reject as a barbarism the accepted designation "Grand Countries Lodge"—a phrase which proclaims either a contempt for, or an ignorance of, the structure of both the German and English tongues; it is not English, and it is not German, because Landes is not the plural of Land, which would be Länder but its genitive singular.

G. M., Zinnendorff persuaded them to open the letter then and there, and to extenuate their fault as an excess of zeal. Schubart being asked "for more light," insisted upon the letter being shown to the others, and as a result Zinnendorff and Krüger were selected to visit Von Hund. Probably from selfish motives, the former of these emissaries appeared alone, saying that the latter was ill, but this was afterwards denied by Krüger, who ultimately arrived on the scene. Zinnendorff signed the act of Strict Observance (or Unquestioning Obedience), August 24, 1764, was knighted by Von Hund, October 30, and made Prefect of Templin, i. e., Berlin, on the 6th.

In June, 1765, Zinnendorff was elected G. M. of the Three Globes, possibly because the Lodge was already tending towards the Strict Observance system, of which he was the resident chief in Berlin. Scarcely was he installed before complaints arose of his arbitrary proceedings and haughty independence, not only from his Masonic, but also from his Templar subjects. Almost his first act was to despatch his friend Baumann to Stockholm in order to obtain information there respecting the Swedish rite. The requisite funds were taken from the treasury of the Three Globes, though the Lodge was not consulted either with regard to the mission or the appropriation of its money—and, worst of all, Zinnendorff kept for his own use the information so acquired, at a cost to the Lodge for travelling expenses of 1100 thalers. Baumann obtained from Dr. Eckleff not only the rituals of the Swedish High Degrees, but a warrant of constitution; and Findel states that the latter was 220 ducats in pocket by the transaction.<sup>1</sup> It is a somewhat important point to decide whether Eckleff was at this time G. M. of the Grand Lodge of Sweden, or merely, as the Swedish Grand Lodge subsequently affirmed, the Head-Master of the Scots Chapter at Stockholm. We have already seen that the Grand Lodge of Sweden was formed in 1759, and that on December 7, 1762, the King assumed the Protectorate, so that the probability is that he was virtually its G. M. But even if Eckleff were at the time G. M., it is obvious that if he acted in the matter without the knowledge of Grand Lodge, the step was equally ultra vires. Both these grounds were alleged when, in 1777, Sweden repudiated Zinnendorff; but on the other hand, it should be mentioned that as late as 1776, the Swedish authorities were in close and fraternal correspondence with him, and these intimate relations must be held to have condoned any irregularities in the initial stages.

In 1766 the Berlin Templars complained strongly of the impossibility of obtaining any financial statements from Zinnendorff, but Krüger, who was sent by them on a mission to Von Hund, advised the Prov. G. M. to treat him delicately, because he might become dangerous and create scandal—another testimony to the character of the man.

In June, 1766, Zinnendorff was not re-elected G. M. of the Three Globes, but of course retained his office as Prefect of Templin (which was not elective), and on August 9 the Three Globes formally joined Von Hund's system. The financial dispute between Zinnendorff and the three Globes now assumed a threatening aspect, so Schubart and Bode were deputed to arrange matters in July, 1766. Zinnendorff being called to account, made up a statement on the spur of the moment, showing that, even admitting for argument's sake the debt of 1100 thalers, there still remained 800 thalers owing to him. In the interests of peace and quietness it was at length decided to let the matter drop on both sides. On November 16, 1766, Zinnendorff wrote a formal letter to Von Hund renouncing the Strict Observance; and on May 6, 1767, he resigned the Three Globes. By the "Three Globes," however, as well as by the Provincial Chapter of Von Hnnd, a sentence of expulsion was passed upon him, and from that moment he became the bitter and confirmed enemy of the Strict Observance system.<sup>1</sup>

In 1768, "by virtue of his inherent power," i.e., as a Scots Master, Zinnendorff erected his first Lodge on the Swedish system in Potsdam; on August 10, 1769, his second, the Three Golden Keys, in Berlin—of which he became W.M.,<sup>2</sup> and—November 3, 1769—he instituted the Scots or St. Andrew's Lodge "Indissoluble" in Berlin. His conversion of two clandestine Swedish Lodges at Hamburg in 1770 to his own rite has already been noticed; in fact such was his energy and activity, that before mid-summer, 1770, he had already 12 Lodges at work.

Then began a series of attempts to obtain a patent enabling him to erect a Grand Lodge. He first of all applied to the High Chapter at Stockholm, but his request was refused on the ground that Sweden never constituted Lodges abroad, a statement tending to invalidate Eckleff's proceedings. Undaunted, Zinnendorff called his 12 Lodges together and proclaimed the "National Grand Lodge for all German Freemasons."<sup>3</sup> According to his view none but those of his own rite were entitled to be called Freemasons, and least of all, the brethren under the Strict Observance. I have been unable to glean any particulars of the primary organization of this Grand Lodge, but from subsequent facts I believe it to have been (in theory) representative, and that all Masters (in office) were members. As the election of these Masters, however, was invalid unless approved by the Grand Lodge, the system of representation was defective and a sham, because the Grand Lodge practically became self-elective. Now, although Zinnendorff always professed the greatest contempt for the Grand Lodge of England as being deficient in true knowledge—and possessing the shell only, of which he and the Swedish Masons held the kernel—yet his advances meeting with no encouragement from Sweden, he made application to London—March 29, 1771—requesting recognition as a Grand Lodge, partly on the ground of possessing superior degrees, and partly from the circumstance of his holding a Swedish patent. The petition, however, failed to elicit any response.<sup>4</sup>

Upon this followed the constitution of a second Berlin Lodge, "The Golden Ship," and the election of Martin Kronke as G.M. with Zinnendorff as Dep. G.M.

On October 29, 1771, he renewed his request, and on this occasion to De Vignolles<sup>5</sup> as Prov. G.M. for foreign Lodges. But De Vignolles at least understood the course affairs had taken, and answered that he could not even acknowledge him as a brother until he had proof that he was received in a legitimate Lodge. The only legitimate Lodge in Berlin was the "Royal York;" the three Globes had never been warranted by England, and was now a Strict Observance Lodge, and all such were clandestine. That beyond this it would be most unseemly of England to subordinate such personages as the Duke of Brunswick<sup>6</sup> and other Provincial Grand Masters to unknown men like Zinnendorff and Kronke.<sup>7</sup> Zinnendorff's efforts were therefore turned to procuring a show of regularity—and a prince as G.M.

Accordingly, on January 8, 1772, he applied to the Royal York Lodge for permission to use their rooms for an initiation, and invited that Lodge to be present on the 10th. This was done, a sheet of paper was clandestinely inserted in the minute-book of Royal York, the proceedings taken down, signed by the Royal York members, and the sheet secretly abstracted and forwarded to England, in order to prove that Zinnendorff and his friends were acknowledged as regular Masons by a properly constituted English Lodge.<sup>1</sup>

On August 11 following he further induced the Landgrave Louis of Hesse Darmstadt to accept the office of G.M., and negotiations were resumed with Englard; this time with Grand Secretary Heseltine, and in spite of De Vignolles, who, writing to Du Bois<sup>2</sup> in Holland, states that matters were arranged behind his back, and accuses Heseltine of receiving a £50 bribe.<sup>3</sup> In the same year a third Berlin Lodge—"Pegasus"—was warranted, and the total of subordinate Lodges had risen to 18.

Zinnendorff's great argument of course was, that the Strict Observance had strangled pure Freemasonry in Germany, and that it was necessary to erect a powerful Grand Lodge as a counterpoise. That his own system was as great an innovation as any of the others he naturally concealed, as he did the fact that all he wanted was England's name to conjure with. In its lamentable ignorance the Grand Lodge of England fell into the trap—De Vignolles appears to have been the only one of its officers au courant of passing events—and in consequence acted most unjustly towards its faithful daughter the P.G.L. of Frankfurt.

On November 19, 1773, "the Grand Secretary (Heseltine) informed the G.L. of England of a proposal for establishing a friendly union and correspondence with the G.L. of Germany, held at Berlin, under the patronage of His Serene Highness the Prince of Hesse and Darmstadt, which met with general approbation."<sup>4</sup>

The compact with Zinnendorff<sup>5</sup> was signed (on behalf of the G.L. of England) November 30, 1773. As it was executed in Berlin on October 20, it is evident that the terms had already been settled by Zinnendorff and Heseltine prior to the latter's motion in Grand Lodge. §§ 1 and 2 confirm in their offices Prince Ferdinand at Brunswick and Gogel at Frankfurt for their respective life-times, protect their districts, and leave them free—in the future—to make terms with the Grand Lodge of Germany. § 3 deposes various other Prov. G.M.'s (who had gone over to the Strict Observance), among whom I need only mention Jaenisch of Hamburg. § 4 reserves Hanover as common ground for England and Berlin. By § 5 Berlin is to contribute to the charity according to its increase of power, but never less than £25 per annum. § 6 recognises the German Grand Lodge as the only constituent power in Germany, always excepting Brunswick and Frankfurt, and these only for the term of the then existing personal patents. § 7 forbids the G.L. at <sup>3</sup> Allgemeines Handbuch, loc. cit. The following excerpt from the minutes of the G.L. of England—April 23, 1773—may possibly serve to explain De Vignolles' mistake, and clear the G. Secretary from an odious charge:—"Bro. Charles Hanbury, of Hamburg, Esq., attended the G. Lodge, and on behalf of the G. Lodge of Germany, situated at Berlin, paid in the sum of £50 towards the fund for building a Hall, and received the thanks of the Grand Lodge thereupon."—But although Heseltine personally could not have benefited by this, yet the transaction does bear the appearance of at least a propitiatory gift to the G.L. The donation was made in April, and the contract with Zinnendorff in the following October and November at Berlin and London respectively.

Berlin to exercise its powers outside Germany. In clause 9 both parties bind themselves to combat all innovations in Masonry, especially the Strict Observance.

Zinnendorff had thus, although under false pretences, obtained his point, and was constituted the sole Masonic authority in Germany, by the Mother Grand Lodge of the Craft, and July 16, 1774, his own G.L. obtained the protection of Frederick the Great.<sup>1</sup> Prince Louis having served the end for which he was elected, was evidently treated with scant courtesy, for on September 20, 1774, the Landgrave resigned, alleging as his reason for so doing, that he was ignored in his own Grand Lodge.<sup>2</sup> Zinnendorff was elected G.M., but in the following year—June 30, 1775—made way for Duke Ernest II. of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg.<sup>3</sup> This high-minded prince exerted all his efforts to heal the strife which raged between Zinnendorff's Lodges and the Strict Observance, and though he failed to accomplish a union, at least succeeded—July, 1776—in effecting a pact of mutual recognition and tolerance. This, however, being at once broken by Zinnendorff, the Duke—unable to endure the petty quarrels any longer—resigned, and was succeeded by G. M. Gols<sup>4</sup>—December 21, 1776—and by Dr. T. Mumsen in 1777.<sup>5</sup> Meanwhile the system had increased considerably; in Berlin alone Lodge "Constancy" was erected in 1775, and Lodges "Pilgrim," "Golden Plough," and "Ram" in 1776, making a total of no less than 7 Lodges in that city.

At this period began the negotiations between the S.O. and the Duke of Sudermania, threatening to end in the withdrawal of Sweden's tacit support of the National Grand Lodge. The Strict Observance Masons may at this time be said to have had only one formidable rival, viz., Zinnendorff, whose party enjoyed the great advantage of knowing their own minds, whereas we have seen that Ferdinand and his friends did not. Such an opportunity of humiliating Zinnendorff could not be allowed to pass, but that able tactician, who probably saw the storm brewing, took measures to draw still closer the bonds between England and himself. In April, 1777, he despatched his attached ally, Leonhardi,<sup>6</sup> to London, who in August, 1779, obtained a warrant to establish there the Pilgrim Lodge, No. 516 (now No. 238), under a special dispensation to work in German and use their own ritual. Leonhardi was admitted to Grand Lodge—February 7, 1781—as the representative of the National Grand Lodge, and took rank immediately after the Grand Officers.<sup>7</sup> We have already seen how, in 1782, Leonhardi frustrated the efforts made by the Frankfort brethren through Pascha, subsequently to Gogel's death.<sup>8</sup>

Meanwhile—April 27, 1777—the Swedish G.L., to please the S.O. members, drew up a document signed by Karl of Sudermania and others, declaring that Eckleff's patent to Zinnendorff had been granted without the knowledge or consent of the Chapter, and therefore—being illegal—was thereby cancelled and annulled.<sup>9</sup> In August the Swedish envoys, Oxenstierna and Plomuenfeldt, arrived in Berlin, published this document, and formally repudiated Zinnendorff and all his doings. Zinnendorff's circular to his Lodges announcing the foregoing proceedings is a masterpiece,<sup>10</sup> and however we may disapprove of his conduct, it is quite impossible to withhold our respect for his singular ability. He clearly places the G.L. of Sweden in the wrong, and demonstrates its inconsistency; he also frankly avows, "moreover, we no longer require the help of the Swedish fraternity, and can well spare their recognition." Nor was this an idle boast, for at that time (1778), eight years only after its birth, the National Grand Lodge ruled over 34 Lodges, with Provincial Grand Lodges in Austria, Silesia, Pomerania, and Lower Saxony.<sup>1</sup>

In 1780—June 24—Zinnendorff replaced Minssen as G.M., and two years later—June 6, 1782—this unscrupulous but eminently strong and masterful man was struck down by apoplexy, gavel in hand, at the very moment he was opening his Lodge "of the Three Keys." His death produced no ill effect on his life's work. Able and resolute brethren—trained up in his school—were ready to carry on the system where he left it. His immediate successor as G.M. was Castillon; and that the death of the founder had not destroyed the spirit implanted by him, may be gathered from the fact that, in 1783, the "Three Globes" having made advances by permitting the visits of brethren of the Zinnendorff Rite, the National Grand Lodge replied by enacting—October 30, 1783—that only Lodges on the official list were to be considered legitimate, and no communication was to be held with others.<sup>2</sup>

One more heavy blow awaited the National Grand Lodge. That which De Vignolles had been unable to avert in 1773, Graefe was destined to undo in 1786. Count Graefe, a Brunswicker (to whom reference has already been made), was a captain in the English service in America. He had also been a Deputy P.G.M. of Canada, and returned to Brunswick in 1785, with an appointment as representative of the Grand Lodge of England at the National Grand Lodge, which, under the contract of Nov. 30, 1773, was of course tantamount to representative for all Germany. On August 15, 1785, he wrote from Brunswick to the National Grand Lodge that instead of harmony among the Fraternity in Germany he found only discord and antipathy, and called upon it to assist him in finding a remedy.<sup>3</sup> The National Grand Lodge—October 20—expressed a willingness to receive and aid him, but objected to the term "Supreme Grand Lodge" as applied to that at London, and expected that he would only visit such German Lodges as were recognized by their own body.<sup>4</sup> Graefe's eyes were soon opened to the state of affairs, and in the spring of 1786 he left for England. We find the results of his report in the minutes of the Grand Lodge of England, April 12, 1786, when the Grand Treasurer announced that the intolerant spirit of the Berlin Grand Lodge had evoked quarrels and scandals in Germany, and that many Lodges looked to London for redress. It was resolved that the proceedings of the Berlin Grand Lodge tended to divide the Fraternity, to limit its progress, and were in contravention of the treaty of 1773, and that steps should be taken to abrogate or alter that compact.<sup>5</sup> As we have already seen, this was followed by the re-inauguration of the Hamburg Provincial Grand Lodge under Graefe, by whom—August 17, 1786—a letter was despatched to Berlin inviting the presence of the National Grand Lodge at the ceremony. He added "that Berlin appeared to doubt the power of the Supreme Grand Lodge to make new arrangements, but he prayed them not to force him to take steps which old friendship had hitherto restrained."<sup>6</sup> Castillon replied by excluding all Hamburg Lodges and even Graefe himself, upon which the latter issued a circular inveighing against the intolerance and injustice of the National Grand Lodge, and declaring it to be his duty to pronounce that body and all its daughter Lodges illegitimate.' This action was approved in London, and Leonhardi, finding his presence no longer of any use, left that city—April 9, 1787—and betook himself to St. Petersburg.' In 1788—April 23—the Grand Lodge of England apprised the Berlin Lodge by letter of the abrogation of the treaty, and—November 26—the G.M. communicated to the Grand Lodge that he had acted on the resolution of April 12, 1786, and gave his reasons for so doing.' They are very cogent, and show more knowledge than usual of Continental affairs, but are too long for even partial reproduction; suffice it to say, that the Berlin Lodges, although deprived of all supremacy, continued to be recognized by the Grand Lodge of England as legitimate. But in spite of all difficulties the National Grand Lodge continued to prosper as before.

In 1789—June 24—the National Grand Lodge became wearied of its isolated position in Germany, and passed a decree whereby the legality of all Lodges constituted by any recognized authority was acknowledged, and mutual intercourse permitted, excepting, of course, in the case of brethren of the Hebrew faith.' This Grand Lodge has from the first been so intensely Christian that the Jewish question has never been even mooted, and it is only of late years that, yielding to outside pressure, Jews are allowed to be present in Lodges as occasional visitors.

Castillon resigned June 24, 1790, and was succeeded as G.M. by C.A. von Beulewitz. By the Royal Edict of October 20, 1798, the National Grand Lodge was included as one of the three Grand Lodges of the Prussian States, and in 1799—January 14—Beulewitz died, whereupon Castillon was re-elected G.M. From 1807-9 the Grand Lodge was closed on account of the presence of the French Army of Occupation. In 1814—January 27—the G.M., Castillon, died; and on December 27 ensuing the previous Dep. G.M., Joachim F. Neander von Petersheiden, was elected in his stead, who was followed in turn (1818) by J. H. O. von Schmidt.

Under G.M. Schmidt the quarrel with Sweden was made up, and a contract of mutual amity and support signed, April 6, 1819.* On this occasion the Grand Lodge of Sweden furnished complete copies of its constitutions, ritual, etc.; and Nettelbladt, one of the foremost Masons of Zinnendorff's rite, and an ardent defender of his master's probity, was at once set to work to revise the ritual of the National Grand Lodge.† A backward glance at my account of Freemasonry in Sweden will enable the reader to discern that at the time of the Eckleff transaction the Swedish rite was still incomplete, as the cope-stone of the highest degrees had not been placed on the structure. In consequence the National Lodge had always been deficient of two degrees, and knew nothing of a Vicarius Salomonis. These defects were now remedied, the ceremonies throughout brought into unison, and a Vicarius Salomonis under the title of "Master of the Order," elected. In 1821 we first hear of Palmié under that title, but I have not met with the date of his election, which was probably in 1830. The G.M.—Schmidt—took the title of First Assistant of the Master of the Order in 1821, and retained it so long as he remained G.M. A decree of October, 2 1820,' affirms that Masters of Lodges are elected for life, the triennial re-election being a concession on the Master's part, not a right of the Lodge. The election of the Master, according to a decree of March 2, 1824,' was to take place by casting the names of all those eligible into an urn; the youngest member drew a name, its owner had to leave the Lodge, and his merits were canvassed. A ballot was then taken for him, and required a two-thirds majority in his favor. If unfavorable, a second ticket was drawn, and so on until the necessary majority was obtained. In 1825—December 5'—it was affirmed that the election must be approved by the Grand Lodge; in 1830—December 20—that Lodges which became dormant ceded the property and funds to the Grand Lodge; and in 1837—September 11—that the "Master of the Order shall be eo ipso also Grand Master, but he may appoint his First Assistant to this office for life."

Although Nettelbladt wrote a history of all the other Masonic systems and rites (including the English)—in which the ignorance and credulity of their votaries are pitilessly denounced—unfortunately he has not favored us with one of the National Grand Lodge. He always, however, maintains its infallibility in strong terms, which to the student of to-day are somewhat amusing. Chap. XXV., p. 392.

In 1838 Connt Henckel von Donnersmark was elected G.M. in succession to Schmidt, but in 1841 the "Master of the Order"—Palmié—dying, he was elected in his room, and conformably with the above last quoted law, retained both offices until his death.

In 1843 Constitutions were printed, but I have been unable to procure a complete copy. They were only issued to Masters of Lodges—who are not allowed to show them, or even give extracts, and are kept under three keys held by different Officers of the Lodge.* Keller, however, gives some excerpts,† and the chief points are naturally more or less well known. The Inner Orient is composed of members of the highest degrees only. It comprises, at its head, the M. of the Order, his two assistants, called Senior and Junior Architects, and nine Officers. These twelve represent the twelve Apostles, and to a certain extent, the M. of the O. is the Vicar of Christ. Their functions are to supervise everything, but especially the ritual and dogma. The members have the right to preside and vote in any Lodge, and can even stop the proceedings. The Grand Lodge, with the G.M. at its head, is divided into two bodies, the St. John's and the St. Andrew's Lodges, to rule respectively the degrees of pure Freemasonry and the Scots degrees. Grand Officers must at least be Scots Masters. The ritual is identical with that of Sweden and Denmark.

In 1849—July 24—Henckel von Donnersmark died, and—October 23—K. F. von Selasinsky was elected "Master of the Order."

On November 5, 1853, an event of great importance to the present generation of Masons throughout Germany took place; this was the initiation of Frederick William, Prince, now Crown Prince, of Prussia. The ceremony took place in the palace of his father, the then heir to the throne, who presided in person, in the presence of the Grand Officers of the three Prussian Grand Lodges, and in the name—or as we should say in England, "under the banner"—of the National Grand Lodge, of which he became a member. The Master's gavel used on this occasion was that formerly belonging to Frederick the Great. The eighth and last of the Berlin Lodges under this system was constituted exactly two years afterwards—November 5, 1855—and named in his honor "Frederick William of the Dawn."

In 1860—April 26—Selasinsky died, and Prince Frederick William of Prussia accepted the office of Master of the Order on June 24 following.

Ten years later—June 24, 1870—the Grand Lodge celebrated its centenary, with the Prince in the chair. On this occasion a bombshell fell amongst the brethren. The G.M., in a long and able speech, alluded to the superior knowledge and greater purity of origin to which the National Grand Lodge had always laid claim—also to its persistence in requiring that those statements should be taken as articles of faith, whilst the documents on which they rested were jealously preserved from the vulgar ken. He showed how impossible it was to resist libellous misrepresentation from outside, except by frankly producing proofs to the contrary, and how the assumption of infallibility was not only untenable in the nineteenth century, but injurious to the best interests of the Grand Lodge; and concluded by calling upon all to aid him in ascertaining the historical truth of those supposed documents and traditions, and to freely give up whatever should be found unsupported.<sup>1</sup> The excitement caused throughout the Lodges of the system was intense, and two opposing parties—of light and leading, of mystery and conservatism—were at once formed. In 1873 twenty brethren at Hanover were suspended for advocating reform, whilst in 1871 six Lodges attempted to found an historical and archaeological union—a crime almost amounting to treason under this Grand Lodge. Schiffmann of Stettin received the prince's commission to undertake researches, but was denied access to the archives. Wearied by this persistent opposition, the Crown Prince at length—March 1, 1874—resigned his office.<sup>2</sup> In his place Von Dachroden was elected, with Schiffmann as Senior Architect. The danger then became obvious that Schiffmann might at the next election be appointed 'Master of the Order,' and have the archives at his disposal. The Statutes were therefore arbitrarily altered, and the election placed in the hands of the highest degree only. It was also laid down that the G.M. should live in Berlin. As Schiffmann held an ecclesiastical appointment in Stettin, he was thus rendered ineligible for election, but he nevertheless proceeded with his researches, and made most damaging discoveries. For this the G.L. suspended him—May 1, 1876—but his part was warmly taken by several Lodges, and many, especially of other systems, made him an honorary member. Two months later—July 1—Schiffmann was expelled, and several Lodges who supported him were erased; others transferred their allegiance.<sup>3</sup> Thus for the moment the movement was cursed, but with the increasing enlightenment of our age, I cannot but think that the latent volcano is merely crusted over for a time, and that the smothered fire will sooner or later break out afresh. The position and attitude of the National Grand Lodge of Germany is an anomaly in the nineteenth century, and can only be likened in many respects to the standpoint of the Church of Rome.

In 1872 G. A. von Ziegler had been appointed Grand Master, and succeeded the "Master of the Order"—Dachroden—on his retirement, in both capacities. He in turn was followed by F. R. A. Nenland, the present "Master of the Order" of the National Grand Lodge of all German Masons.

In May, 1885, this Grand Lodge, with 3 Provincial Grand Lodges, ruled over 93 Lodges, with a membership of 10,276, or an average of 110 members per Lodge.<sup>1</sup>

The epoch-marking dates of this Grand Body are:—

1760.—Erection of Zinnen- dorf's first Lodge at Potsdam.	1773—November 30.—Compact with England.	1819—April 6.—Contract of Amity with Sweden, and completion of Rite.
1770—June 24.—Creation of the National Grand Lodge.	1777—April 27.—Repudiation by Sweden.	1838—November 5.—Initiation of the Crown Prince of Prussia.
1773—August 11.—Landgrave of Hesse-Darmstadt, G. M.	1788—April 28.—Repudiation by England.	1870.—June 24.—Centenary fes- tival, and Prince Frede- rick William's speech.

V. THE GRAND LODGE OF PRUSSIA, CALLED ROYAL YORK OF FRIENDSHIP, AT BERLIN.<sup>2</sup>

On May 5, 1760, the Lodge of the Three Globes was informed that several resident French Masons—Frederick the Great had established a large colony of that nationality in Berlin—had petitioned for a warrant to enable them to meet as a Lodge—"Joy and Peace"—to initiate Frenchmen only, offering to pay all their income into the funds of the Mother-Lodge. In fact it was to be merely a distinctly French branch of the Three Globes. The request was granted, and in the same year—August 10—Von Printzen constituted the Lodge under the name of the "Three Doves." No reason is assigned why the title originally chosen was not adhered to. In 1761—March 13—the Mother-Lodge took into consideration a request to enlarge the powers of its daughter, as it was found impossible to recruit the Lodge solely from Frenchmen and to carry it on without funds. The petition was acceded to, and a fresh warrant granted—April 12—whereby the Lodge became an independent sister Lodge of the Three Globes. Its title had at this time been altered to "Friendship of the Three Doves." In the same year it joined with the "Three Globes" and "Concord" in forming the Masonic Tribunal of which Von Printzen was elected Grand Master.<sup>3</sup>

From the character and composition of the Lodge it was inevitable that degrees beyond that of Master Mason would be wrought. These appear as early as 1763 to have included some or all of the following:—"Elect of 9, of 15, and of Perpignan; Red Scots Degree and St. Andrew's Scot; Knight of the East; Knight of the Eagle or Prince Sovereign Rose Croix: the members of this last and 7th degree forming a Sublime Council, which ruled all the others. To vest these degrees, it is possible, with an enhanced authority, the Lodge procured—March 6, 1774—a Scots patent from the Scots Lodge "Pnritas," at Brunswick.

The work was, of course, conducted in French, but not without exceptions. Thus in 1764 we find an instance of a Lodge transacting its business in German, but the minutes record a resolve not to do so again. A most curious minute occurs in 1765, when a member proposed for initiation, "somebody"—having forgotten the candidate's name!

July 27, 1765, was a most important date for this Lodge. On that day it initiated into the Craft H.R.H. Edward Augustus, Duke of York, the brother of George III., and his companion, Colonel Henry St. John. On August 2 the Prince signified his acceptance of the title of patron of the Lodge, and authorized it to assume the name of "Royal York of Friendship." The Lodge then applied to the Grand Lodge of England for a patent, and entrusted the petition to St. John. To this circumstance may be due the fact that the Lodge never joined the Strict Observance system, but on the contrary always strenuously opposed it.

The next few years furnish two events which may be recorded. On September 6, 1765, the Lodge warranted its first daughter, at Rheims; and in 1767—June 6—it initiated a Jew. This is remarkable, because in 1779 it had so far modified its views as to refuse admission to two English Masons because they were of the Hebrew persuasion. The latter position it retained until the revision of the Statutes in 1872; but the Jewish question does not appear to have evoked the same strife in this Lodge as in the Three Globes and in the Eclectic Union.

In 1767—June 24—it received a warrant from England as No. 417, successively altered by the closing up of numbers to 330, 260, and 219 (1770, 1781, 1792)—after 1813 it disappears from our lists.

Its next step was to apply for a patent as a Grand Lodge, but—February 14, 1769—De Vignolles wrote refusing the request as beyond England's power to grant—a Grand Lodge being the result of several Lodges combining for the purpose. He, however, authorized the Lodge to grant a three months' dispensation to brethren to act as a new Lodge, during which time they were expected to apply for a constitution from England.

The "Royal York" formally seceded from the Three Globes in 1768. Zinnendorff's proceedings within its precincts in 1772 have already been narrated. In 1772 it sent a cypher to London in which to conduct its correspondence, and the same year forwarded by this means the statutes and rituals of its Scots degrees for approval. The result is unknown to me. In the same year also it warranted a Lodge at Besançon. Of this and the former Lodge at Rheims no further notices appear. In 1773 the Lodge gradually ceased to work in French, and—August 13—constituted its first legitimate daughter at Cassel. This Lodge was registered in London, November 19, 1773, as No. 459.

Meanwhile the treaty—so often cited—had been contracted between Zinnendorff and the older or legitimate Grand Lodge in London, and by it the Lodge "Royal York" came under the jurisdiction of the National Grand Lodge. The Royal York succeeded in making terms by which it was to preserve its own ritual and in a great measure its former autonomy, and concluded a treaty of union May 19, 1774. Quarrels, however, ensued and appeals to London, and in the end the "Royal York" reasserted its independence in 1776, a course of action which was approved by England, April 11, 1778.

In 1778 the Royal York constituted its second Lodge—at Mannheim—and in 1779 one each at Munich and Potsdam. A proposal for union with the Three Globes fell through in this year, but a treaty of friendship was entered into, which is still in effect.

It had meanwhile been for a few years in close alliance with Zinnendorff's National Grand Lodge, which always has been, and is now, intensely Christian, which may account for the change of views regarding the Jews. <sup>1</sup> Nettelblatt, Geschichte Freim. Systeme, p. 624. <sup>2</sup> Ante, p. 59.

In 1779—November 24—Baron Heyking was commissioned by the Lodge to travel throughout Poland, and where he found Masons in sufficient numbers to erect Lodges. This resulted in the formation (1780) of no less than eight Lodges, and ultimately of an English Provincial Grand Lodge of Poland.<sup>1</sup> From 1782 to 1795 nothing of importance demands record beyond the constitution of seven Lodges, and the occasional use of the names Mother-Lodge and Grand Lodge as applied to the Royal York, but without a specific assertion of either of these titles.

With 1796 there commenced a period of evolution and internal change in this Lodge, not unaccompanied by strife. The central figure of the movement was one of the most prominent Masons of that or any time, noteworthy not only as a Mason, but also as a theologian, politician, and author—Ignatius Aurelius Fessler. I regret that the exigencies of space forbid anything approaching a detailed biography of this remarkable man. The following few data must therefore suffice.

Fessler was born in Lower Hungary in 1756, his father being a retired soldier, and his mother a religious devotee. Educated by the Jesuits, but refused admission to their ranks, he took the Capuchin vows in 1773. In 1779 he was ordained priest, and was at that time of a most serious and earnest disposition, verging on bigotry. But above all things he was plain-spoken, and in 1781 called the Emperor's attention to the disgraceful morals of conventual life. No longer safe in the monasteries from papal vengeance, he was placed in professional chairs at the universities, and led from that time to his death a most eventful and kaleidoscopic life, pursued by the unrelenting hate of the Jesuits. In 1789 he embraced the Lutheran faith, and in 1796 came to Berlin. He entered the Craft at Lemberg in 1783, a period coeval with the fall of the Strict Observance, the founding of the Eclectic Union, and the commencement of the first serious attempts to study and appreciate Freemasonry. Throwing himself with his usual ardor into this new pursuit, he succeeded in a few years in making himself acquainted with the broad facts of Masonic history, and the whole series of fantastic theories and rites to which the original institution had nearly succumbed. Such a man could not fail to attract the attention of his Masonic fellows, and accordingly, we find that having joined the Royal York, May 12, 1796, he was much against his wish forced by the brethren—November 20—to become a member of the Sublime Council. The Three Globes, Frankfort, and Hamburg G.L. had all reformed their rites or were engaged in so doing; the Royal York felt it necessary to follow suit, and in Fessler lay their best hope. One other matter also loomed large on the horizon. In consequence of the French Revolution an edict against secret societies might be expected, and although the Lodges would probably be tolerated, yet it was to be feared that the Royal York would be called upon to submit to the jurisdiction of a Grand Lodge, unless its position as a Grand Lodge in itself could be satisfactorily settled. De Vignolles' letter, already referred to, had indicated the only legal means of attaining this object, and we shall see that Fessler was not the man to neglect such a hint.

Scarcely was Fessler a member of the Sublime Council than he received a commission to draft a constitution, and to revise the ritual and bring the various degrees into accord. He threw himself with almost superhuman energy into the work. His first inclination, as was natural to an enlightened Masonic student, was to abolish all high degrees, and he made this proposal, April 12, 1797.<sup>2</sup> His coadjutors were, however, not yet prepared

Brother John Wolfgang Goethe

THE ILLUSTRIOUS GERMAN POET.

An enthusiastic Freemason, initiated on the eve of the festival of St. John the Baptist, 1780, at Weimar, Germany

for such a drastic remedy, so he contented himself with making each (so-called) high degree a separate course of philosophy, and with remoulding the Sublime Council, which became the Innermost Orient.<sup>1</sup> His new ritual and constitutions were rapturously approved and accepted, August 3, 1797. The constitution was to be subject to revision in three, six, and afterwards every nine years.<sup>2</sup> In 1798—June 11—at Fessler's instance, the Lodge, Royal York of Berlin, was divided into four Lodges—Frederick William of Justice, Victorious Truth, Urania of Immortality (with Fessler as W. M.), and Pythagoras of the Flaming Star. These four Lodges remained in many respects one. Membership is still interchangeable. The officers of one Lodge may be chosen from the members of another. They also possess in common a general and a charity fund. These four Lodges then combined to erect from among themselves the "Grand Lodge of Prussia, called Royal York of Friendship," with 14 daughters, viz., 4 in Berlin, and 10 previously warranted elsewhere. The Grand Lodge was at once recognized by the Three Globes, and by the King; but the National Grand Lodge refused to do so, maintaining that a Grand Lodge could not be formed by a single Lodge divided ad hoc, nor could such a body be established in a kingdom where one already existed—though when Zinnendorff established his Grand Lodge for Germany, the Three Globes and others were already in existence. But even in the Royal York itself the measure met with bitter opposition from shortsighted and undiscerning brethren. Fessler, a strong man, imperious, hasty, though wanting in conciliation, overbore all opposition, but his victory made him enemies.

De La Goanère was first Grand Master, and Fessler Dep. G.M.; but the Grand Master being called to Coruña as Consul, resigned, October 5, 1798, and was succeeded, October 28, by F. W. A. Von Sellentin.

In the same month—October 20—the Royal Edict appeared, wherein the Royal York is named as one of the three authorized Grand Lodges of Prussia.

On December 20, 1798, the Berlin Lodge, "Victorious Truth," initiated and admitted to active membership, H.R.H. Augustus Frederick, Duke of Sussex, sixth son of George III., and nephew to the Duke of York, initiated in 1765.<sup>3</sup> From 1813 to 1843 the Duke of Sussex was Grand Master of England. Some idea of Fessler's rite may be acquired from the following facts. The Duke of Sussex was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, January 19, 1799; raised a Master Mason, February 4; received the degree of Perfect Scots Architect, March 6; of Master of Mount Heredom, March 10; of the Cross and Eagle, March 22; and became an Elect of the New Jerusalem, December 23. In 1839, being then G.M. of England, he renewed his permission to continue his name on the books of the Lodge as an active member. Long previously—April 5, 1799—the Duke had agreed to accept the position of representative of Grand Lodge, Royal York, at the G.L. of England.

In the same year (1799) three new Lodges were warranted, and in 1800 the period arrived for the first revision of the constitutions.

<sup>3</sup> Almost every writer states that the Prince was made in the Royal York Lodge, which of course is incorrect, as the name then only applied to the Grand Lodge or Legislative Body. But the mistake is excusable—at least I hope so, having committed it myself (Chap. XX., p. 235)—as it is easy to confuse the four allied Lodges with the Grand Lodge. Even Mr. G. W. Speth—I am somewhat relieved to find—in his recently issued "Royal Freemasons" has fallen into the same error.

76 GRAND LODGE OF PRUSSIA, ROYAL YORK OF FRIENDSHIP.

Fessler, meanwhile, had entered into very friendly relations with another reformer—F. L. Schroeder—whose influence now began to act through him on the Royal York.

In August, 1800, Fessler once more proposed to abolish high degrees, but the time for this salutary reform had not yet arrived. Something in the nature of an extrinsic degree was still urgently in demand. A compromise was effected. In lieu of the high degrees Fessler elaborated a history of Freemasonry, its origin, revival in 1717, early progress and subsequent obliquities. This was communicated to Master Masons in five "Steps to Knowledge," Erkenntniss-stufen, and to satisfy all parties, each step was preceded by a ceremonial, designed to symbolically illustrate various phases in man's life on earth. The ritual of the three degrees was remodelled on the basis of that of Schroeder, and the constitutions altered in accordance therewith. The complete revision was accepted, December 31, 1800.*

In this year (1800) one new Lodge was warranted, and the Sun Lodge at Bayreuth—now the "Grand Lodge of the Sun"—was affiliated, and remained for a time a Provincial Grand Lodge under the "Royal York."

In 1801—June 5—the G.M. Von Sellentin resigned on account of ill health, and—September 13—Ern. Ferd. Klein was installed as G.M. The same year saw the birth of a Lodge at Charlottenburg, and of the Lodge Socrates at Frankfurt.† The total of private Lodges had now risen to 16.‡ In 1802 one Lodge was warranted, and the closing scenes of Fessler's connection with the Lodge were enacted. For some time angry feelings had been at work on both sides, want of appreciation on the one produced bitterness on the other, and Fessler's own domineering temper added fuel to the flame. At length the G.M. himself went over to Fessler's enemies. According to the constitution the Dep. G.M. was the all-powerful prime minister—the G.M., a very limited monarch. But Klein—a man of character and determination—was little inclined to play the part of Roi Fainéant to that of Fessler's Maire du Palais, and the position became too strained to continue.

On April 30, 1802, Fessler wrote that to facilitate a reconciliation he intended to lay down his offices pro tem., and requested all complaints against him to be at once openly preferred. On May 7 the Grand Lodge agreed to consider this as a formal resignation, and Fessler, indignant, resigned his offices as Dep. G.M. and W.M. of Urania on the 9th. His Lodge was then ordered to exclude him from membership, and Fessler hearing of this order—August 15—wrote—September 6—with haughty scorn, washing his hands once and for all of both Lodge and Grand Lodge.¶ After many troubles in private and public life, Fessler entered the service of the Czar Alexander in 1809, and died December 15, 1839, aged 83, being at the time President of the Russian Lutheran Consistory at Saratow.

In 1803 the Statutes underwent their periodical revision, the Innermost Orient was remodelled, and besides overlooking the dogma and ritual of the Fraternity, became the dispenser of the Steps to Knowledge, and its subordinate Inner Orients were charged with the same duties in the provinces. But these steps were reduced to a single one under the name of Scots Master, and the initiations were abolished, so that practically from henceforth we have a modification of the Hamurg Engbund, and the rite of the Royal York may be looked upon as in all essentials that of Schroeder. The irony of fate willed that Fessler's original plans should be adopted within a few months of his expulsion.

In 1806 the Grand Lodge was closed during the French occupation, but the presence of the enemy served to draw closer the rival German rites, and the National Grand Lodge entered into a pact of amity with the Royal York. In 1808 the G.L. resolved that the officers of private Lodges must be confirmed and approved by itself, thus somewhat, though possibly unintentionally, limiting its own representative character. And at the revision of the Statutes in 1873, the distinctively Christian requirements for initiation were modified, so that Jewish candidates are now accepted.

Little remains to be added except statistics. Lodges warranted:—in 1803, 1; 1812, 3; 1813, 1; 1816, 4; also the Provincial Grand Lodge of Silesia; 1817, 2; 1818, 2; 1820, 1821, 1823, 1824, 1826, 1827, 1828, 1836, 1840, 1843, 1846, 1 each. Later lists I have not been able to procure.

In 1810—March 18—G. M. Klein died, and—April 30—J. H. A. Hey was elected to the office. In 1832 Hey resigned from sickness and old age, and died December 17, 1838. He was succeeded by Prof. H. F. Link as G. M., who died in office—January 1, 1851. On June 2 ensuing, Dr. C. von Kloeden was elected G. M., and also died in office—January 10, 1856. A similar fate befell the next G. M.—Dr. C. W. F. Amelang—who died December 3, 1858; and on the following year—March 26—Prince Louis William Augustus of Baden, a brother of the Grand Duke, was installed as G. M. The G. M.'s tenure of office being terminable with the periodical revisions of the Constitutions, the Prince declined re-election at the revision of 1863, but was appointed Hon. G. M., a position which he still holds. In 1864 Dr. J. F. Schnakenburg was installed Grand Master,<sup>1</sup> and in 1873 Professor Chr. Fr. L. Herrig, who was re-elected in 1882, and still holds the office.

In January, 1885, the Grand Lodge "Royal York of Friendship" ruled over 62 Lodges with 6102 members, or an average of 99 members per Lodge. Of these Lodges 4 are outside the limits of Prussia, 3 in Alsace-Lorraine, and 1 in Bremen. It has 1 Provincial Grand Lodge—that of Silesia—and 8 Inner Orients.

VI. THE GRAND LODGE "SUN" AT BAYREUTH.

On January 21, 1741, the Margrave Frederick of Brandenburg-Kulmbach erected in his own castle at Bayreuth, the capital of his dominions, a Lodge under the name of the "Snn," of which he remained Master till his death in 1763. On December 5, 1741, this Castle "Sun" instituted in Bayreuth a City "Sun" with much pomp, the Margrave himself taking part in the procession. The Castle "Snn" soon granted on itself a Directory of Scots Masters, which in some respects discharged the functions of a non-representative Grand Lodge.

In 1757—October 24—this Directory opened the Lodge "Lebanon of the Three Cedars," in Erlangen; and in 1758—May 17—that of the "Three Stars," in Anspach, the capital of the Onolzbach or cadet line of Brandenburg.

In 1763 the Margrave was succeeded by his uncle, the Margrave Frederick Christian, both in his civil and Masonic capacity.

In 1769, the elder line being extinct, the Margrave Frederick Carl Alexander of Brandenburg-Onolzbach (the younger or Anspach line) united the two Principalities. The Anspach Lodge of 1758 being also possessed of a Scots Directory, the new ruler caused it in 1772 to amalgamate with the (Castle) Sun Directory, and removed the seat of this conjoint Directory to Anspach, granting it jurisdiction over the two Snn Lodges in Bayreuth, the Lebanon Lodge in Erlangen, and the Three Stars Lodge in Anspach. From 1774 therefore the Sun ceased to work as a Mother-Lodge. In 1776 the City Sun went over to the Strict Observance, which the Margrave himself had joined in the same year, being the first reigning Prince who ever signed the act of Implicit (or Unquestioning) Obedience. He himself was the son of the Margrave Carl who had espoused the sister of Frederick the Great, and been initiated by that king in 1740 in Frederick's Royal Lodge. The Margrave Frederick dying childless in 1799, the Brandenburg Principalities reverted to Prussia.

By the Royal Edict of October 20, 1798, all Prussian Lodges were required to hold from one of the three Berlin Grand Lodges. Accordingly, in 1799—November 19—the Anspach and Erlangen Lodges joined the "Three Globes;" whilst the two Suns joined the Royal York in 1800, the Castle Sun being made a Provincial Grand Lodge. It naturally accepted the Fessler Rite, and was granted an Inner Orient, April 1, 1802. The Lodge of Truth and Friendship at Fürth, warranted by the Royal York—March 4, 1803—was placed under its rule, and also the "Morning Star" at Hof, constituted June 9, 1799.

In 1806 Anspach fell to the new kingdom of Bavaria. It had meanwhile been raised to the rank of a Provincial Grand Lodge "Anacharsis," under the Three Globes, with several daughter Lodges, and at the time of these all becoming Bavarian, Freemasonry was under an interdict in that country by virtue of decrees issued March 2 and August 16, 1785;<sup>1</sup> renewed by the Elector—afterwards King of Bavaria—Maximilian Joseph, himself a Freemason, November 4, 1799, and March 5, 1804. In 1807, however—May 8—the King issued an edict of toleration, to which were attached very stringent conditions. A list of all members was to be forwarded to the authorities every three months, all changes of officers or by-laws to be notified, correspondence with Berlin to cease, etc. A further edict was published January 17, 1808, forbidding all State servants to join the Craft. As this deprived the Lodges of all their best members, judges, notaries, professors, military officers, and even schoolmasters and clergymen, the blow was a severe one; but many of the Lodges nevertheless continued to struggle on as independent communities, until in better times they were able to join one of the Grand Lodges of Germany.<sup>2</sup>

In 1810—June 30—Bayreuth also was acquired by the kingdom of Bavaria, and the Lodges had to conform to the same rules, the Sun losing not less than fifty of its best members.

The Provincial Grand Masters meanwhile, under the Royal York Grand Lodge, were Count von Giech, Von Volderndorf, and Schunter.

In 1811—December 13—the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Sun declared itself an independent Grand Lodge, with four daughters, viz., the City Sun under a new name—Eleusis of Silence—the Truth and Friendship at Fürth, the Morning Star and the Golden Balance at Hof—which was warranted February 20, 1804, by the National Grand Lodge of Berlin. By slow degrees and in spite of difficulties, it added to this number. The ritual was naturally the so-called "Fessler," that is, as we have seen, the "Schroeder" slightly modified, and which does not differ materially from our own. The first G.M.—Schunter—followed by Münch, Birmer, and in 1844 by S. Kolb—under whom, in 1847, the constitutions were amended so as to admit Jews to the full benefits of the Fraternity. In 1849—August 25—Chr. K. Künzel was elected G.M., and in 1862, Friedrich Feustel. At this time the Grand Lodge Sun numbered ten daughters. New constitutions were drawn up in 1868, and accepted in 1869. They are among the most liberal in Germany. The Grand Lodge is thoroughly representative on the English system; its seat as an executive body is at Bayreuth, but it holds, in turn, an annual deliberative meeting and festival at the various towns where it possesses a Lodge.

In 1872 Bluntschli became G.M., and in 1878 Feustel once more—the present G.M. being Dr. Löwe. In January, 1885, the Grand Lodge ruled over 24 Lodges—chiefly in Bavaria and Baden, 1 each in Hamburg, Bremen, and Norway, and 2 in Würtemberg—where Masonry was forbidden in 1784, but has been again tolerated since 1835. The membership of these 24 Lodges was 2017, or an average of 84 per Lodge. A second Norwegian Lodge has since been erected.

VII. THE NATIONAL GRAND LODGE OF SAXONY AT DRESDEN.

Many Provincial Grand Masters for the circle of Upper Saxony and for the Electorate of Saxony were appointed by England in the last century. For instance, in 1737, by Lord Darnley, H. W. von Marschall to the Circle of Upper Saxony; in 1762, Major Aloys Peter D'Agdolo to the Electorate; and in 1766, Count von Werthern to Upper Saxony. There were possibly others, with whom we need not concern ourselves, for it cannot be shown that they ever warranted a single Lodge or exercised their office in any way. Of Marschall it is known that he joined and accepted office in the Lodge Absalom at Hamburg and nothing more, whilst at that very time Rntowsky was active in his especial district; and of the two latter, we know that they were expressly relieved of their duties in the 1773 contract with Zinnendorf. Werthern indeed went over to the Strict Observance immediately after his appointment.

Nevertheless a Grand Lodge of Saxony existed at a very early date. Count Ratowsky—initiated at Warsaw in 1735—who had been a brigadier in the French service, entered that of the Elector of Saxony in 1731, and was a Field-Marshal at the battle of Dresden in 1741. He died March 16, 1764. In 1738 he erected a Lodge of the "Eagles" at Dresden. It increased so rapidly that in 1739 a new Lodge of the "Three Golden Swords" was formed also at Dresden, which two years afterwards had over fifty members. In 1741—February 15—a third Lodge—of the "Three Swords"—was founded. These three met together, June 24, 1741, raised the Three Swords to the rank of a Grand

<sup>2</sup> Once more I am constrained to protest against the uncorrect title in common use, Grand Countries Lodge of Saxony (Grosse Landes Loge von Sachsen). Masonic writers, even of high classical attainments, have adopted this barbarism, of whose paternity I am ignorant. Yet, although a knowledge of German in every case is not to be presupposed, I think we are entitled to expect at least an acquaintance with English grammar on the part of English authors. The following sketch is again chiefly based upon the excellent "Allgemeines Handbuch," s.r. Sachsen, Dresden, Leipzig, Altenberg, Rutowsky, Marschall, Deutschland, Warnatz, Wertheim, Agdolo, etc., etc.

Lodge, and chose Rutowsky as G.M. It appears to have been taken for granted by German writers that Rutowsky held an English patent—which may possibly be true, although in the absence of anything like evidence to authenticate the belief, it must of necessity remain an open question.

The Three Swans amalgamated with the Three Swords, July 2, 1741. Earlier in the same year—March 20—a Lodge was formed at Leipsic, which subsequently became "Minerva of the Compasses," and is now the independent Lodge "Minerva of the Three Palms." If not warranted by Rutowsky in the first instance, it certainly owned his sway circa 1747.

In 1742—January 31—this Lodge Minerva inaugurated the Lodge at Altenburg, now "Archimedes of the Three Tracing Boards," one of the five independent Lodges of Germany.* This also joined the union.

Rutowsky further warranted—September 2, 1743—the "Three Roses" at Sachsenfels, which was one of the first to join the Strict Observance; and in 1744 the "Three Squares" in Nossen, which soon afterwards died out. There are also traces of one or two other Lodges. The existence of this flourishing body at so early a date is very remarkable.

In 1755 the first efforts of Von Hnnd's still undeveloped imaginings may be traced in a Lodge—"Of the Three Palms"—warranted by him in Dresden on September 5.

In 1760 the Three Globes also began to constitute a few Lodges in Saxony. But this part of Germany was the very centre of the Strict Observance—Von Hnnd possessed large estates in the neighborhood, at Lausitz and elsewhere—and naturally the first to be over-run by the new rite. In 1762—September 5—the "Three Swords" accepted the Templar ritual and system, and every Lodge in the Electorate followed suit. The history of the Craft in Saxony for the ensuing half century is comprised in that of the Strict Observance, the three Grand Lodges at Berlin, and the Grand Lodge of Hanover, all of which bodies constituted Lodges in the country at various times.

In 1805 some of the Dresden Lodges began to moot the question of establishing a National Grand Lodge. The idea met with general favor, four Lodges only—those at Görlitz and Bautzen and the two at Leipsic—raising objections. But the project came to naught, the stern necessities of war occupying men's minds to the exclusion of other matters.

In 1811, however, the subject was revived, and a National Grand Lodge for Saxony erected. Twelve Lodges combined for the purpose. These had been constituted, in the years within brackets, as follows:—By Rutowsky—1, The Three Swords, Dresden, being the original Grand Lodge of 1742: By the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes—2, Golden Wall, Bautzen (1802); 3, Leopard, in Lübben (1809); 4, Golden Cross, in Merseburg (1805): By the National Grand Lodge of Prussia—5, The Desert Well, at Kottbus (1797); 6, Golden Apple, Dresden (1776); 7, the Three Hills, Freiberg (1798): By Von Hnnd—8, the Crowned Serpent, Görlitz (1751): By the Three Roses of 1743 under the Strict Observance—9, the Three Flames, Plauen (1788): By the Grand Lodge Royal York—10, Harmony, in Hohenstein (1799): By the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hamburg—11, the Three Pillars, in Triebel (1806): By Lodge Archimedes of Altenburg—12, Archimedes of the Saxon Union, Schneeberg (1806). It will be remarked that Nos. 1, 9, and 12 connect this new Grand Lodge historically with the extinct Grand Lodge of Rutowsky. From this date the Grand Lodge, in spite of a few losses, has gradually, but continuously, increased the number of its Lodges. Some, however, of these were lost in 1815, because a part of Saxony then passed under Prussian rule.

The Constitutions were accepted September 28, 1811, and signed by the Lodges of the Union. They are the most liberal in Germany. The Union does not forbid high degrees, but simply ignores them, and deals only with the Craft. It permits any ritual in the three degrees provided a copy is approved by Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge consists of two bodies. A legislative, composed of the Master, Deputy Master, and Wardens of each Lodge, and of a Dresden brother specially appointed to represent each Lodge. These all have a deliberative voice, but each Lodge only has one vote. An executive, composed of the Grand Officers chosen from among the members of the legislative body. The ritual used by the Grand Lodge and recommended to its daughters is that of Schroeder.<sup>1</sup>

Of the earlier Grand Masters of this body I have been unable to procure a list. In 1866 G. H. Warnatz, M.D., was elected to the chair, and, dying in 1872, was succeeded—October 27—by Dr. Eckstein, who gave place to Albert Wengler in 1881. Under Dr. Eckstein the revision of the Statutes, begun in 1874, was completed October 18, 1876. The chief alteration was a declaration that Jews were eligible for initiation—they had already been admitted as visitors in 1837. The executive still remains at Dresden, but it was enacted that the annual meeting of Grand Lodge may be movable.

The number of Lodges on the roll in January, 1885, was 20, with a membership of 3692, or an average of 185 per Lodge. Of these Lodges, two—at Meiningen and Greiz—are not in the kingdom of Saxony. On the other hand, two Lodges at Leipzig do not belong to the Union, but are independent. The ritual is Schroeder's, with the exception of the Bautzen Lodge, which has retained that of the Three Globes, and the Freiberg Lodge, which still adheres to Fessler's. Dr. Bernhard Arthur Erdmann is the present G. M.

VIII. GRAND LODGE "CONCORD" AT DARMSTADT.

When Louis X., Landgrave of Hesse-Darmstadt, commenced his reign in 1790, the only Lodge in his dominions was that at Giessen, of which he was a member, as well as its chief and patron. In 1785 it had joined the Eclectic Union. In 1793 the English F. & A. M. G. L. at Frankfort commenced to warrant a series of Lodges in this principality; which in 1806 was made a Grand Duchy, Louis X. becoming the first Grand Duke Louis I. By the events of 1814 he acquired a considerable extension of territory, and in the new provinces of his state existed other Lodges. He died in 1830, protector of all these Lodges, and his successor, Louis II., who took an active part in Lodge work, also assumed the title and duties of protector. By 1839 all the still existing Hessian Lodges had joined the Eclectic Union.

It will now be necessary to recapitulate some facts already alluded to. In 1808 the Grand Orient of France had constituted the Lodge "Nascent Dawn" in Frankfort, which contained a large Jewish element. After various quarrels this Lodge split into two factions: the Landgrave Karl of Hesse-Cassel reconstituted the Christian members as "Karl of the Dawning Light," according to the rite of the rectified Strict Observance, whilst the Jewish brethren received in 1817 a warrant from London as the Lodge of the "Nascent Dawn" (No. 684).<sup>2</sup> In 1836 Prince Karl died; and in 1840—September 27—"Karl of the Dawning Light" joined the Eclectic Union. The Lodge, however, could not agree on all points with its new Grand Lodge, more especially in relation to the high degrees, and after many quarrels and bickerings, was excludcd on July 2, 1844. Its part was taken up warmly by the "Friends of Concord" at Mayence and "St. John the Evangelist of Concord" at Darmstadt, with the result that in 1845 these two Lodges retired from the Eclectic Union.

The three Lodges, which had thus recovered their independence, petitioned the Grand Duke and Protector, Louis II., to form a new Eclectic Union; their prayer was granted, and nine prominent members—one of whom, Leykam, will be presently referred to—were deputed to frame a constitution. This act of foundation (Grundvertrag) emphasized the purely representative system of G.L. government, forbade all high degrees (Karl of the D.L. voluntarily dissolved its Scots Lodge, which had been the origin of the whole quarrel!), and had but one fault. It refused even the right of visiting to Jews. It was signed by the three Lodges—February 27, 1846; approved by the Grand Duke—March 22—and on the following day the three Lodges met, proclaimed the Grand Lodge "Concord," and elected J. H. Lotheissen, President of the Court of Appeal, as their first G.M.

Curiously enough the Lodge Karlsruhe, whose traditions were so purely Christian, was the first to protest against the intolerance of the new Grand Lodge, and this it did within fifteen months. On December 14, 1847, a majority in the Lodge repealed the by-law which debarred Jewish Masons from entering their doors, and the minority, headed by Leykam, resigned their membership. In 1849—March 15—nine of this majority petitioned the G.L. for a warrant for a new Lodge in Frankfort, to be called Karl of Lindenberg. The old Lodge desired to raise no objection, but as it felt that it could not meet the new one in perfect amity, sought permission—November 18—to leave the Darmstadt G.L. Both petitions were granted, and Karl of the Dawning Light rejoined the Eclectic Union June 30, 1850. Here it will be convenient if I slightly anticipate, though at the same time I also go over ground that we have already traversed,<sup>1</sup> by at once recording the fact that Karl of Lindenberg also seceded to the Eclectic Union in 1878.

The Grand Lodge Concord—consisting of three Lodges in all—elected Betz as G.M. in 1851, and in 1853 Lotheissen once more.

Meanwhile, Louis II., who died in 1848, had been succeeded by Louis III., who was not a Mason, nor did he appear to interest himself at all in Masonic matters. Great therefore was the astonishment produced by a Grand Ducal decree of 1859, expressing a wish to see all Hessian Lodges united under the authority of the Grand Lodge Concord at Darmstadt. This effected four Eclectic Lodges, one each at Alzey, Giessen, Offenbach, and Worms; and a royal wish being equivalent to a command, non-compliance probably meant dissolution. On the other hand, submission was difficult, because the Eclectic Union having admitted Jews to initiation in 1848, whereas the Darmstadt Union would not even allow them to visit, the Lodges ran the risk of losing their Jewish brethren, who had become very dear to them; Giessen especially was largely recruited from members of the Hebrew race. Grand Lodge, however, passed a resolution to allow these four Lodges to violate the constitutions, provided they would consent to certain disabilities, viz., deprivation of the right to vote on matters of ritual, and inability of their members to fill offices in Grand Lodge. The four Lodges then joined, making seven in all.

In 1850—September 11—Lotheissen died, and Matthew Leykam, Doctor of Laws, was elected G.M. As the latter resided in Frankfort, the Grand Lodge was removed for nine years to that city.

A new Lodge (No. 8) was constituted at Friedberg on November 10, 1862, and in the same year the constitutions were revised. Intercourse with their Jewish brethren having removed many prejudices, the right of visiting was conceded to all Masons of that faith.

The ninth and last Lodge was warranted at Bingen, July 7, 1867, and—a further sign of progress—its constitutions permitted it to initiate Jews, but it had to submit to the same restrictions as the other four Lodges.

In 1868 the Christian Lodges, "out of their exceeding love," voluntarily conceded full rights to the five mixed Lodges, merely debarring them from furnishing a G.M. from among their members. Leykam, who died on February 20 in this year, was succeeded as G.M. by the Postmaster-General, Pfaltz.

At the revision of the Statutes in 1872 the Jews were granted full rights; so that in all Germany there are now only two Grand Lodges, the National and Three Globes, both at Berlin, which insist upon a candidate for Freemasonry being a Christian.

In 1877 the Frankfort Lodge joined the Eclectic Union, reducing the number of Lodges to eight, the figure at which they still stand. In January, 1885, they numbered 855 members, or an average of 107 per Lodge. The G.M. is Phillip Brand, and the Protector of the Brotherhood is the present Grand Duke, Louis IV., who succeeded his uncle, Louis III., in 1877, and like the latter, has not been enrolled as a member of the Fraternity.

INDEPENDENT LODGES.

1. MINERVA OF THE THREE PALMS, LEIPSIK.*

In 1736, seven Masons who had been made abroad were in the habit of meeting together in Leipsic, and on March 20, 1741, they formed themselves into a Lodge. This Lodge is usually accounted a member, from the commencement, of Rutowsky's Grand Lodge of Upper Saxony; but it is also possible that it only entered into friendly relations with the "Three Gold Swords." The Lodge had no special name, but it prospered exceedingly, and at the end of the year already numbered 46 members. In 1742 its services were called into requisition to inaugurate the Lodge at Altenburg. In 1745 it split up and divided into a French Lodge "of the Three Compasses," and a German-speaking Lodge, "Minerva." These reunited on June 5, 1747, as Minerva of the Three Compasses, which was confirmed by the G.M. Rutowsky. In 1747—November 20—a Scots Lodge, "Apollo," was grafted on the Lodge.

In 1766 a difference of opinion respecting the expediency of joining the Strict Observance caused a majority of the members to found a new Lodge, "Minerva of the Three Palms," under Von Hund, and in 1772 they finally severed themselves entirely from "Minerva of the Three Compasses," which gradually died out. The Knightly Chapter was erected March 16, 1767.

In 1773 the Lodge constituted "Minerva of the Three Lights" at Querfurt, and in the following year the Scots Lodge "Apollo" changed its name to "Karl of the Three Palms," in honor of Prince Karl of Courland, a member of the Lodge.

The Lodge took an active part in all the affairs of the Strict Observance, but began to ture of the folly about 1776. It therefore sent no deputies to the Wilhelmsbad Convent in 1782, nor did it adopt the rectified system. On the contrary, it ceased in 1776 to create fresh knights, so that the Chapter gradually died out, until at last the Count Hohenthal alone was left—who, to keep the history of the Chapter alive, formed a so-called Inner Union of a few chosen members of the 4th or Scots grade. The exact scope of this institution has, however, eluded my researches.

In 1783 the Lodge for a time showed signs of an inclination to join the newly formed "Eclectic Union," but it ultimately decided to remain isolated, or rather independent.

The last of the Knights, Hohenthal, died in 1819, and the constitutions of the Lodge were remodelled, April 8, 1820. The old Scots Lodge "Karl" was formed into a Directorial Lodge, governing the affairs of the Lodge. It consists of twenty-seven Masters. On the death of a member the Lodge submits the names of three of its Master Masons, from whom the Directorial Lodge chooses one to complete its number. Seven members of this Directorial Lodge combine to form an Inner Union, who also complete their number from time to time in a similar manner. The duty and privilege of the Inner Union is to discuss all matters of importance before they are submitted to the Directorial Lodge, etc.

Mahlmann, W.M., 1813-26, revised the ritual, which had suffered much during the Strict Observance times, and this version was accepted in 1829, three years after his death.

The Statutes underwent revision in 1832 and 1867. On the latter occasion Jews were freed from all disabilities. In 1863 the Lodge had 359 members, which in 1878 had increased to 414, and in 1885 to 447.

II. BALDWIN OF THE LINDEN, LEIPSIK.<sup>1</sup>

In 1776—February 7—several Masons, among them some of the Minerva members, founded a Lodge "Baldwin" under the Zinnendorff rite. The Lodge was constituted on February 23 by Duke Ernest of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg, G.M. of the National Grand Lodge of Berlin. It suspended work July 24, 1781, but resumed on March 13, 1783, under the title of the Linden (lime-tree). In 1807—November 7—this Lodge threw off its allegiance and declared itself independent.

Beckmann, the English Prov. G.M. for Hamburg, granted it a new constitution—January 14, 1809—as an independent Lodge under its present title "Baldwin of the Linden." The Lodge adopted the Schroeder Ritual and new constitutions—which were revised in 1833 and 1854.

The Lodge joined the Grand Lodge of Saxony in 1815, but retired once more in 1824, since which date it has maintained its independence. Its members numbered in 1864, 302; in 1878, 424; and in 1885, 509. The strength of the Leipzig Lodges is remarkable. There are but three in the city: Minerva, independent, with 447 members; Baldwin, independent, with 509; and Apollo—under the Grand Lodge of Saxony—with 384.

III. ARCHIMEDES OF THE THREE TRACING-BOARDS IN ALTENBURG.<sup>2</sup>

In 1741 several Altenburg Masons applied to H.W. von Marschall, Prov. G.M. of Upper Saxony, for permission to erect a Lodge. Marschall granted the prayer, and forwarded a copy of the English Ritual, but advised them to apply elsewhere for a warrant. The brethren turned to the Minerva Lodge at Leipsic, and were constituted by a deputation from that body, January 31, 1742.* From the very first, Lodge Archimedes conducted its proceedings in the vernacular idiom, and was probably the earliest German Lodge that ever did so; in 1743 it published the first German Masonic song book. In 1751 Prince Louis Ernest of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg was W.M. of the Lodge, and he procured from the "Three Globes" a warrant for a Scots Chapter, which, however, died out almost immediately afterwards. The Altenburg Fraternity, which has always adopted innovations with reluctance, worked pure English Masonry until 1775. We have already seen† that on June 30 of that year Duke Ernest II. of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg was elected G.M. of Zinnendorff's Grand Lodge; and "Archimedes" very naturally joined the National Grand Lodge and accepted the Swedish Rite. Although the Duke resigned in disgust the following year, the Lodge did not reassert its independence until 1785, and subsequently to that date continued to use the Ritual, to which it had become accustomed in the preceding ten years, even keeping up the practice after joining the Eclectic Union in 1788.

It seceded from the Eclectic Union, in anticipation of the threatening political troubles, in 1793; and the same reasons induced it to suspend its meetings on January 9, 1795, after having declared its officers "permanent" during the interim. In 1796 it reopened. At the beginning of the century it rejected the Zinnendorff Ritual, and accepted as a temporary measure that of the Eclectic Union. Pierer received orders to compile a new one, and after carefully comparing the rituals of England, Scotland, Ireland, the Royal York, and Hamburg, his version was accepted in 1803. In the same year Schneider published the constitutions of the Lodge, a work even now much sought after for its valuable contributions to Masonic archæology, and which show a wonderful power of just criticism considering the time at which they appeared. From this epoch may be dated the rise of the brilliant Altenburg school of Masonic historians and students, to whose labors we are all so much indebted. No less than three Masonic journals owe their birth to this school—the Journal für Freimaurer, the Zeitschrift für Freimaurerei, and the Ziegeldecker—which in later years became the Bruderblätter. The last-named publication continued to appear until 1854. Fallon, whose work has been so often alluded to in Chapter III. of this History, was a member of the Lodge.

In 1803—December 18—the Lodge opened a branch at Gera, but this was afterwards constituted by it an independent Lodge, October 25, 1804.† The Altenburg Lodge divided into two in 1803, and erected a Directorial Lodge to govern the Lodge at Gera and the two new divisions at Altenburg; but the whole arrangement was abrogated in 1805, and the old position resumed.

In 1809 the Lodge established a branch in Schneeberg, but this joined the Grand Lodge of Saxony in 1812.

In the election of its officers, etc., this Lodge follows the English plan; but it possesses a sort of permanent committee to sift matters before they come before the Lodge, consisting of the Master and Deputy Master, the Wardens, and all Past Masters and Wardens. Its library contains over 700 valuable works. In 1823 it opened a savings' bank, largely used by the surrounding population. In 1861 its members numbered 210; in 1878, over 250; and in 1885, 271.

IV. ARCHIMEDES OF ETERNAL UNION AT GERA.<sup>1</sup>

On January 16, 1803, several resident Masons formed a Masonic club in Gera, and at the close of the same year—December 18—this club was declared a branch establishment or "Deputation Lodge" of Archimedes at Altenburg, under the name "Archimedes of Eternal Union." That is, it could only act under the directions of its parent, and in its name, much as an agent acts for his principal. This state of tutelage proving inconvenient, the Lodge petitioned for independence, and in the result was reconstituted by Lodge Archimedes (of Altenburg), October 25, 1804. The German Grand Lodges, however, refusing to acknowledge the right of one Lodge to constitute another, and declaring the Lodge at Gera to be clandestine, the subject of this sketch at last petitioned Schroeder in Hamburg to grant it an English charter. This was issued April 30, 1806. It then accepted, and has ever since worked, the Schroeder or Hamburg Ritual. Gera was not in the jurisdiction of Hamburg; but G. M. Beckmann granted the warrant by virtue of his right to do so outside his district in states where no Grand Lodge existed.* At Gera and Hamburg the Lodge was considered as directly dependent on London, whilst by the English authorities it seems to have been long regarded as subject to Hamburg. This may account for the fact that it only received an English number (669) in 1815, five years after the Prov. G. L. Hamburg had ceased to exist. Virtually, however, "Archimedes" retained its independence. The princes of Reuss have ever been members and patrons of this Lodge. Speth† gives as such Henry LIV. of Reuss-Lobenstein (1810), Henry LXXII. of Reuss-Ebersdorff and Lobenstein (1827), Henry LXXVI. of Reuss-Lobenstein (1852), and Henry LXVII. of Reuss-Schleiz (1852). In 1862 the membership of this Lodge was 121; in 1885, 187.

V. KARL OF THE WREATH OF RUE, HILDBURGSHAUSEN.

Hildburgshausen is a town in the small duchy of Saxe-Meiningen. According to the Handbuch, a Lodge, "Ernestus," was warranted here by England in 1755, which only lived a few years. No trace of it is to be found in our Lodge lists.

In 1787 a second Lodge‡ was warranted—also from London; this is the Lodge Charles of the Ruewreath,§ but our Lodge lists call it Lodge of St. Charles, No. 495. It has ever since worked independently under the immediate protection of its princes, and the number of its members in 1885 was 54.

In 1883—October 14—the five Independent Lodges (pp. 271-274) entered into a Treaty of Alliance and Bond of Union. Dr. Victor Carus of Leipsic is the President of this League.

<sup>1</sup> Allgemeines Handbuch, s.v. Gera; Verfassungs Urkunde der F. L. Archimedes, 1841; Astrée, Sondershausen, 1853, p. 258 et seq. Gera is the capital of the principality of Reuss, junior line, one of the pigny independent states of Germany. A good tale is told of a German Liberal who was ordered by a prince to leave his dominions. "If," said the former, "your Highness will deign to ascend to the attic of your palace, you shall see me cross the frontier in five minutes!" The story might well have applied to Reuss.

EXTINCT GRAND LODGES.

I. HANOVER.

Of all the extinct Grand Lodges of Germany this is by far the most important, and naturally of most interest to English readers. I shall therefore devote a few pages to describing its career with some amount of detail; its equally defunct sisters will, however, in each case, only be sketched in broader outline.

In 1743—July 26—Prov. G.M. Lüttmann of Hamburg deputed Simon as Prov. G.M. of Hanover, but no sign exists that he ever displayed any activity in that office.

The following year—January 19—Lientenant, afterwards Captain, of Horse Grenadiers, Mehmet von Königstren was initiated in Lodge "Absalom" at Hamburg.<sup>1</sup> In 1746—January 21—he obtained a warrant from Lüttmann, and on the 29th founded the Lodge Frederick in Hanover, so called in honor of Frederick, Prince of Wales. In 1753—June 27—Hinüber was elected W.M., and in 1755, in consequence of a slight difference of opinion with Hamburg, and of discovering that the Lodge had not been registered in England, he made use of his business relations with England to ascertain if there was any chance of obtaining a provincial warrant for Hanover. Being assured that if the Lodge would indicate some special brother, a patent would be forthcoming, the Lodge elected Hinüber as G.M.—June 25—and—November 28—he was appointed G.M. of all His Majesty's German dominions, "with a power [in the Province] to choose his successors." The G. Lodge Frederick in Hanover was registered as No. 208, became No. 122 in 1792, and was "dropped out" at the Union (1813).<sup>2</sup>

On June 24, 1756, the Grand Lodge made a formal visitation to the Lodge Frederick, and the next year—January 31—"Frederick" accepted a warrant of confirmation from the new G.L. of Hanover. In 1760 a Scots Lodge, "Karl of the Purple Mantle," and in 1762—May 24—the Lodge "George" of Hanover, were founded.

In 1764 Hanover was formed by Von Hund into the "Prefectory Callenberg" under the S.O. system, which at first was vigorously opposed by the G.L. and its daughters, but gradually acquired preponderating influence. The last Craft meeting of the Lodge Frederick occurred January 12, 1765.

Schubart arrived in Hanover October 13, 1766, and commenced his propaganda on the 27th. Prince, afterwards Grand Duke, Karl of Mecklenburg-Strelitz joined the S.O. in Celle, and was appointed Protector of the district; on November 25 the Lodges George and Frederick dissolved in order to reconstitute themselves as the Strict Observance Lodge of the "White Horse," and thus the G.L. of Hanover ceased to exist. As a consequence we find that in 1773 Hanover was made a neutral territory, open alike to the G.L. of England and the National Grand Lodge of Prussia at Berlin.<sup>3</sup>

Zinnendorff, who immediately invaded the district, met with remarkable success. In 1774 he established a Lodge of the "Golden Compasses" at Gottingen; in the same year this Lodge warranted the "Black Bear" in Hanover, and the "Crocodile" in Harburg, and in 1775 a Lodge in Lüneburg; whilst in 1777 the National Grand Lodge constituted the "Cedar" in Hanover, and a Lodge in Stade, and in 1778 one in Hameln.

Meanwhile the Fraternity had found themselves disappointed in the Strict Observance, and took no interest in Lodge matters, so much so that the "White Horse" did not meet between 1775 and 1778. The Protector, Grand Duke Karl, to remedy this state of affairs, ceased working the S.O. Rite, gradually altered the ritual of the first three degrees, and without formally renouncing the Templar connection, practically revived the extinct Grand Lodge by converting the Scots Lodge "Karl of the Purple Mantle" into a Directorial Lodge over all Lodges of the Strict Observance in His Majesty's dominions in Brunswick, Lüneburg, and Hanover. After the Wilhelmsbad Convent of 1782 the Fraternity in these lands declined to accept the rectified system, and calmly continued in their own way. Some few of the Zinnendorff Lodges, more especially the "Black Bear," at this time entered into more or less intimate relations with the Lodges under the Grand Duke.<sup>1</sup>

In 1786 this Prince being in England, procured, with Col. Graefe's assistance, the re-instatement of the Prov. G.L. of the Electorate of Hanover and British Dominions in Germany,<sup>2</sup> together with a warrant under the No. 486 for the former Zinnendorff Lodge of the "Black Bear." The Lodge "White Horse" then prefixed its former name, and became "Frederick of the White Horse," and, November 28, this Lodge and the "Black Bear" joined in re-establishing the Provincial Grand Lodge. A Royal Arch Chapter was also added by Graefe, but was very short lived.<sup>3</sup>

The district was, however, invaded in 1786 by the Eclectic Union at Hoya, and in 1792 by the National Grand Lodge of Germany at Osterode.

In 1796 new statutes were enacted in consonance with the new arrangements, of which the chief fault was the non-admission of Jewish candidates.

In 1791 the Provincial Grand Lodge constituted new Lodges in Münden and Einbeck. In 1799 Fessler visited Hanover, and was enthusiastically received, as was Schroeder in 1800. The immediate result of these visits was a closer bond of union between the Grand Lodge Royal York and the Provincial Grand Lodges of Hanover and Hamburg.<sup>4</sup> But of still greater importance was the consequent adoption by Lodge "Frederick"—August 10, 1801—of the Schroeder Ritual, and the example was soon followed by the Provincial Grand Lodge and all its daughters. This opened the door to candidates of the Jewish persuasion.

A troublous time now awaited the Fraternity in Hanover: in 1803 the French troops entered into possession of the country, and in 1806 were replaced by the Prussians. Meanwhile the Lodges only met when absolutely necessary, but it is worthy of note that they yet managed secretly to celebrate the birthday of King George. In 1806 the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes constituted a Lodge at Osnabrück. In 1807 the Lodges summoned courage to resume work; in 1808 new statutes were promulgated; in 1809 the Provincial Grand Lodge warranted a Lodge in Lüneburg, and that of the Three Globes another in Goslar; and in 1810 Hanover became an integral part of the short-lived kingdom of Westphalia. The Grand Lodge of that kingdom<sup>1</sup> was, however, so tolerant that the Lodges were not compelled to give in their adhesion, and although some few Hanoverian Lodges joined it, the Provincial Grand Lodge retained its separate existence, as did most of its daughters.

In 1813—November 30—Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland, fifth son of George III., visited the Lodge "Frederick of the White Horse," and at the ensuing banquet prayed admission as an active member. It is needless to say that the request was joyfully granted. The events of 1814-15 raised the Electorate of Hanover to the rank of a kingdom, besides considerably enlarging its boundaries. In 1815 the Provincial Grand Lodge constituted a Lodge in Nienburg, and affiliated the one warranted in Celle by Hamburg in the previous year. It also received the adhesion of a Lodge in Göttingen which had been erected by the Grand Lodge of Westphalia, and several of its daughters who had joined that body now returned to the national fold.

Karl, Grand Duke of Mecklenburg, died November 6, 1816, and was succeeded as Prov. G.M. by Count L. F. von Kilmansegg, whose appointment is first noticed in the Freemasons' Calendar for 1822. In the same publication, the Lodge, Frederick of the White Horse, reappears as No. 146,* and eleven other German Lodges—Nos. 734, Frankfurt; 735, Nuremberg; 736-44, Hanover—are added to the roll.<sup>2</sup> Gradually, however, a feeling arose that the Grand Lodge should declare its independence. In consequence—November 1, 1828—the Duke of Cumberland proclaimed the autonomy of the Grand Lodge of the Kingdom of Hanover, and was himself elected its first G.M.

The year 1828 saw the accession of the Lodge at Hildesheim, Door to Virtue, No. 312, warranted by England, December 27, 1762; and new Lodges were constituted at Stade 1845, at Kassel 1849, and at Klauenenthal 1851. New statutes had been passed January 22, 1839.

At the death of William IV. in 1837, Hanover became an independent kingdom, and the Duke of Cumberland, G.M., succeeded to the vacant throne. He died in 1851, and was followed by his son, George (V.). In 1852—March 19—although not a Mason, King George V. assumed the patronage of the Craft, and in 1857 caused himself to be initiated in the "Black Bear," as the representative of all the other Lodges in the kingdom, becoming thereby an active member of each one of them.

Von Hattorf had been elected G.M. in 1851, and at his death, July 29, 1854, was succeeded by Count Bentinck, February 1, 1855. In 1857, however, the King expressed his intention of assuming the Grand Mastership upon the condition that the Hanoverian Lodges under foreign jurisdictions should join the Grand Lodge of Hanover, and that the statutes should be so altered as to exclude Jews from initiation. The latter condition was sorrowfully complied with; the former was only opposed by the Zinnendorff Lodge erected at Stade in 1777, which preferred dissolution.

In the following years new Lodges were constituted—1857, at Verden; 1858, Harburg; 1859, Leer; 1860, Ulzen. In 1861 the number of Lodges was 22, with 2187 members. The last Lodge was warranted in 1863 at Hameln.

<sup>2</sup> All under the year 1821. Nos. 662—the Three Mallets, Naumberg; 660—Archimedes, Gera; 671—the Three Arrows, Nuremberg—were placed on our roll in 1815; and 664—the Nascent Dawn, Frankfurt—in 1817.

In the Austro-Prussian conflict of 1866 Hanover unfortunately espoused the losing side, and suffered by annexation to Prussia. Now, inasmuch as the edict of 1798 only acknowledges three Grand Lodges in Prussia, and no other Lodges but those dependent upon these three, extinction stared the Grand Lodge of Hanover in the face. Nevertheless had it at once applied for permission to rank as a fourth Grand Lodge, and had the G.M. himself resigned, there is reason to believe that the prayer might have been granted. Hamburg and Frankfort are now Prussian, but the edict of 1798 was not enforced in their case in 1870. But resignation formed no part of the late King's intentions; there is every cause to conjecture that, on the contrary, the position of G.M. entered into his political calculations. Let us not heedlessly stigmatize the action of Prussia as tyrannical and uncalled for, but rather let us try to imagine how—in our own country—the case would have been dealt with, had the young Pretender been at the head of a British Grand Lodge in 1746?

The Deputy G.M., Krüger, endeavored to get Hanover constituted a fourth Grand Lodge. King George thereupon tried to impeach him in Grand Lodge—by which body resolutions were passed—December 8—approving the step taken by the Deputy, but setting a limit to his future activity. Krüger resigned, as did his successor, Bödeker. The King then appointed Bokelberg. On April 17, 1867, the Grand Lodge resolved to petition the King to retire, upon which his agent, the Deputy G.M. Bokelberg, resigned. The Grand Lodge then took matters into its own hands, and—June 6—17 Lodges elected Krüger G.M. But it was too late. On September 30 the Minister of Justice and of the Interior closed the Grand Lodge of Hanover by virtue of the edict of 1798, and nothing remained for the subordinate Lodges but to choose their new superiors. Velzen, Goslar, and Osnabrück joined the Three Globes; Bückeburg, the Grand Lodge of Hanburg; Walsrode dissolved; "Cedar," in Hanover, joined the National Grand Lodge; the other 17 Lodges affiliated with the Grand Lodge Royal York, and were of material weight in carrying the more liberal constitutions of that Grand Lodge in 1872.<sup>1</sup>

II. MOTHER-LODGE OF SILESIA IN GLOGAU.

This was a Grand Lodge under the Strict Observance. On May 20, 1765, Von Hund constituted a Mother-Lodge at Nistitz, with the name of "Celestial Sphere of Gold." It was removed in 1772 to Gross-Osten, and warranted in 1772 a Lodge at Glogau. In 1779 the Mother-Lodge removed to Glogau as the Grand Lodge of Silesia. It constituted some other Lodges, but both the Grand Lodge and its daughters closed on June 24, 1794, after the downfall of the Strict Observance and the death of Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick.

III. MOTHER-LODGE FOR THE PROVINCES OF EAST AND WEST PRUSSIA AND LITHUANIA AT KÖNIGSBERG.

This also was a Strict Observance Grand Lodge. The oldest Lodge in Königsberg, the "Three Anchors," was constituted September 12, 1746, dissolved in '60, and immediately reconstituted by the "Three Globes," June 10, 1760, as the "Three Crowns." In

IV. GRAND LODGE "OF THE THREE KEYS" AT RATISBON.

This was in its time a most important Grand Lodge, and remarkable for having successfully resisted the blandishments of the Strict Observance. Its influence extended over a very large circle. In 1765 a Prince of Thurn and Taxis founded in Ratisbon a Lodge "St. Charles of Constancy," which he himself dissolved in 1774. But during these nine years it had given birth to a second Lodge, "Crescent of the Three Keys," constituted May 1, 1767. The Master of that Lodge, Schkler, who had been initiated in Amsterdam, obtained—July 1, 1768—from G.M. Von Botzelaar of the Netherlands, a warrant of constitution, and immediately assumed for the Lodge the prerogatives of a Grand Lodge. It worked the degrees of the Craft, with those of a Scots Lodge superadded, in 1770; the latter were, however, suppressed in 1784, so that—considering the times—the Lodge kept itself remarkably pure. In 1771 it warranted its first daughter, "Hope," in Vienna, and during the next twenty years, Lodges in Marktseft on the Main, Munich, Passau, Ulm, Baitech, Neusohl in Hungary, Hermannstadt in Siebenbürgen, (a second) in Vienna, Görlitz, Dresden, and Hanover—in all twelve. Schkler was G.M. from 1771 to 1777, when he resigned; and the second G.M., the Prince of Thurn and Taxis,<sup>1</sup> was elected in 1799. It is probable that this long interregnum was due to the ravages committed in every direction by the Strict Observance. From 1793 to 1799 the Lodge was perfectly dormant, owing to the disturbing effects of the Revolution. But it resumed activity with the new G.M., who, June 6, 1806, obtained a patent from England.<sup>2</sup> In this he is styled "Provincial Grand Master for Bavaria," an excusable error, Ratisbon being one of the recent acquisitions of that State; and it is indeed surprising that the Grand Lodge did not take the place now occupied by the "Sun" of Bayreuth. The Lodge also changed its name to "Karl of the Three Keys," and constituted several Lodges, for instance, Leipzig and Heidelberg. In the first decade of this century the Grand Lodge had lost all her daughters through death or desertion, but was itself strong and much respected throughout the Continent; with Sweden especially it stood on the most intimate terms from 1801 to 1823. It gradually fell into decay, but once more, about 1830, flickered up under Von Stachelhausen. On his departure from Ratisbon the Lodge died out altogether, circa 1840.<sup>3</sup>

V. ENGLISH PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF BRUNSWICK AT BRUNSWICK.

This Grand Lodge can hardly be said to have existed, but its short history exemplifies the unsettled state of the Craft at this period. In 1744—February 12—the Lodge "Jonathan" was founded and opened by the Grand Lodge of Hamburg; and on December 27 its founder, Kissleben, was appointed "Permanent Deputy G.M."<sup>4</sup> In 1762 the Lodge <sup>3</sup> A detailed account of this Lodge will be found in "Iatonia," vol. xxii., 1963, pp. 322-330.

<sup>4</sup> It will be remembered that Lüttmann, Provincial Grand Master for Hamburg, took upon himself to make a similar appointment in Hanover. Cf. ante, p. 80.

superadded the Rosa-Clermont Chapter; and in 1764, the Master, Von Lestwitz, was appointed by England Prov. G.M. of Brunswick.<sup>1</sup> But while the warrant was on the road, Lestwitz and the Lodge had both deserted to the Strict Observance, so that the Provincial Grand Lodge was never erected. A minority of the Lodge, however, continued the old Lodge "Jonathan;" and in the same year, Le Boeuf, in his quality of a Scots Master, established a French Lodge. These three quarrelled, so that the Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick closed them all and founded two new ones, one working in French as a Mother-Lodge, "St. Charles of Concord," and a German Lodge "Jonathan." This he did by virtue of a Provincial patent granted to him by England, July 5, 1768. The Lodges were constituted on October 10 and 11, 1770. But before the end of the year Ferdinand had signed the Act of Strict Observance, and that was the end of the second Provincial Grand Lodge of Brunswick.<sup>2</sup> "St. Charles of Concord" was granted a place in the English registry as No. 400 in 1770, and continued on the roll until 1813 (as No. 259)—one of many proofs that the Grand Lodge of England knew little and cared less concerning foreign affairs.

VI. BODE'S UNION OF GERMAN FREEMASONS.

In 1788—March 1—the Directorial Lodge of the Eclectic Union at Frankfort resumed its former position as a Prov. G.L. under England. This seems to have given umbrage to the "Compass" Lodge in Gotha, who feared, or pretended to fear, that the perfect equality among the Eclectic Lodges would be violated. Their chief adviser was Bode. As he was a convert to the Illuminati, and Frankfort had declared itself adverse to that sect, this circumstance may have also contributed to the ensuing events. Certain it is that the Gotha Lodge issued a circular to all German Lodges—November 24, 1790—signed by nine Masters "acting under the advice of a highly instructed Mason"—Bode—calling upon all Lodges to aid in forming a general Union of German Lodges on the real Eclectic principles. The Gotha Lodge was erased, and that of the "Three Arrows" at Nuremberg<sup>3</sup> took its part so warmly as to provoke a like result. These were the only two Eclectic Lodges that joined Bode's Union, which in all never numbered more than ten Lodges. Bode died in 1793, and with him the projected union and Grand Lodge after a precarious existence of three years. The movement is of interest, as the last effort of a man who was made a Hamburg Mason in 1761, dubbed a Templar Knight in 1764, who in 1782 first took up the idea that the Jesuits were at the bottom of all the high degrees, and finished by joining the Illuminati.

VII. GRAND ORIENT OF BADEN AT MANNHEIM.

In 1778 Mannheim belonged to Bavaria, and the Lodge "Karl of Unity" was constituted in that city—November 28—by the G.L. Royal York. In 1783 it joined the Eclectic Union, and in 1785 was closed together with all other Bavarian Lodges.<sup>4</sup> In 1803 Mannheim was made over to the Grand Duchy of Baden, and in 1805 the Lodge reopened under Karl von Dalberg.<sup>5</sup> In 1806 it received a warrant from the G.O. of France.

accepted the modern French Rite, and changed its name to "Charles of Concord." Its Chapter then declared itself a Grand Orient for the Duchy of Baden, and was acknowledged as such by France on June 25, 1807.

In 1808 it was joined by the Lodge "Karl of Good Hope," Heidelberg, warranted in 1807 by the G.L. of Ratisbon—which it deserted, but rejoined, in the same year. In 1809 it constituted the Lodges "Temple of Patriotic Light" at Bruchsal, and Karl and Stephanie at Mannheim; so that in all the G.O. extended a jurisdiction over three Lodges. Its Grand Master was Karl, Prince of Ysenburg. The Grand Duke, Karl Friedrich, being dead, his successor, Karl Ludwig Friedrich, issued—February 16, 1813, and March 7, 1814—decrees suppressing secret societies, and with them Freemasonry throughout his dominions. All Lodges in Baden then closed, and the Craft was not allowed to reassert itself until 1845; but there is no longer a Grand Lodge for Baden, the Lodges being pretty equally divided between the "Sun" and the "Eclectic Union."

VIII. GRAND NATIONAL UNION OF BADEN LODGES AT CARLSRUHE.

This Union was contemporary with the foregoing. The "Karl of Unity" at Carlsruhe was warranted by the Eclectic Union in 1786, closed during the Revolution from 1791 onwards, and reopened in 1808. The Lodge "Noble Prospect" at Freiburg was warranted by the Prov. G.L. of Austria at Vienna in 1784, joined the Eclectic Union in 1785, and was also dormant from 1793 to 1808. The "Karl of Good Hope" at Heidelberg was warranted by Ratisbon in 1807, joined the G.O. of Baden 1808, and rejoined Ratisbon the same year.

These three Lodges—May 23, 1809—erected the Grand National Union of Lodges, to be governed, not by a Grand, but by a Directorial Lodge, the Lodge exercising this function to change every three years. Lodges of each and every ritual were eligible for the Union, except those working the French Modern Rite—which was ceded to the Grand Orient of Baden. These two Grand Bodies subsisted side by side in perfect amity. The Heidelberg Lodge threw off a shoot in 1809, which was constituted by the Eclectic Union, and joined the Baden Union without apparently deserting Frankfort. In like manner the original Heidelberg Lodge appears to have belonged to the Ratisbon G.L. and the Baden Union. In 1809 the Bruchsal Lodge also joined it without deserting its Grand Orient, and there is a further though somewhat undefined allusion to a Minerva Lodge at Mannheim. Its Grand Masters were successively K. F. Schilling von Canstadt, and Hemeling. The directory remained at Carlsruhe until July 1, 1812, when it was removed to Freiburg, but in 1813-14 the same fate of course overtook this Union, which crushed the Grand Orient of Baden.<sup>1</sup>

IX. GRAND ORIENT OF WESTPHALIA IN CASSEL.

An English Provincial Grand Master, described in the Constitutions<sup>2</sup> as "George Angustus, Baron of Hammerstein," was appointed by Earl Ferrers—1762-64—for Westphalia, but he does not appear to have exerted himself to any purpose, for nothing more is known of him.

In the electorate of Hesse-Cassel the first Lodge was constituted at Marburg in 1743, and others soon followed. The Strict Observance in due course swamped the Craft, and on its subsidence the preponderating influence was that of the G.L. Royal York. In 1794, however, the Elector suppressed all the Lodges in his dominions.

In 1807 the Electorate and the city of Cassel became the centre of Napoleon's kingdom of Westphalia, at the head of which he placed his brother Jérôme.

The first Lodge to revive, Frederick of Friendship, took the name of "Jérôme Napoleon of Fidelity," and in order to avoid falling under a French jurisdiction, erected a Grand Orient of the Kingdom of Westphalia, February 10, 1808. This was done at the instigation of Count Siméon, Jérôme's chief minister, himself an assistant G.M. of the G.O. of France. The king was G.M., and Siméon his deputy; but all the other officers were Germans. The utmost toleration prevailed, as I have already had occasion to remark, and Lodges under other jurisdictions were not compelled to affiliate; any ritual was permitted, and Lodges enjoyed complete freedom from interference in their private affairs. Three new Lodges appear to have been constituted in Cassel (1808-13), and the following joined:—Münden, Alfeld, Hildesheim, Einbeck, Goslar, Osterode, Heiligenstadt, Eschwege, Göttingen, Nordhausen, Celle, Marburg, Hanover (a new French one), Helmstedt, Magdeburg, etc. In 1813 the kingdom of Westphalia disappeared, and with it the Grand Orient.

X. GRAND LODGE OF HESSE-CASSEL IN CASSEL.

The Elector having been restored, the old edict of 1794 suppressing the Craft was revived. Von Bardeleben succeeded in obtaining a repeal of this obnoxious decree, but only on the condition that the Lodges would submit to the G.L. Royal York, under an intermediate Prov. G.L. of the Electorate, with Bardeleben as the Prov. G.M. Accordingly two Lodges at Cassel and one at Eschwege constituted—May 26, 1814—the Prov. G.L. desired by the Elector, and placed themselves under the Royal York of Berlin. In 1817, however, this Prov. G.L. declared its independence under the title of "Mother Grand Lodge of the Electorate of Hesse," and the Elector William II. on his accession promised it his protection. Besides the three already mentioned, the following at Marburg, Rinteln, Hanau, Ziegenhain, Hersfeld, Nordhausen, in all nine Lodges, formed part of this jurisdiction. But on July 19, 1824, the edict of the Elector once more suppressed and interdicted the Lodges, and in spite of all petitions to the contrary, they remained forbidden and closed until the events of 1866 caused the Electorate to be incorporated with Prussia.

OTHER MASONIC UNIONS NOT CLASSED AS GRAND LODGES.

I. GRAND UNION OF FREEMASONS (FESSLER'S).

It will be remembered that in 1799 and 1800 both Fessler and Schroeder visited Hanover, and about the same time these two ardent reformers made each other's acquaintance. Early in 1801 Fessler attempted to strengthen the hands of the leading supporters of pure Freemasonry by drawing closer the bonds of union between the Provincial Grand Lodges of Hamburg and Hanover, and the Grand Lodge Royal York of Berlin. On August 20, 1801, a tripartite treaty was concluded between these bodies, entitled "Magnum Fœdus Latomorum," providing for mutual representation, and communication of all minutes, and for a select circle in each Grand Lodge for the free imparting to one another of all ritualistic and historic knowledge. Resolutions were adopted against the use of any of the old-fashioned high degrees, and provision was made for the admission to the Union of other Grand Lodges.<sup>1</sup> Frankfort was invited to join the Union. But at this time the Prov. G.L. was dormant,<sup>2</sup> and wished to refer the matter to England before deciding. Deceived by this condition of affairs, the "Royal York" warranted a Lodge—"Socrates"—in Frankfort, December 4, 1801, and to the friction to which this gave rise, the absence of a reply from London, and the renewed dormancy of the P.G.L. of Frankfort in 1803-5, must be ascribed the failure on the latter's part to affiliate with the Union. Following this came the French occupation of Berlin and Hanover, and thus the Union gradually lost its hold on the Lodges, and is now confined to a mutual representation in Grand Lodge, which, however, has extended to all the other Grand Lodges of Germany.

II. THE CORRESPONDENCE BUREAU.

In most German Lodges two secretaries divide the work between them, one attending to the minutes and records, and the other conducting the correspondence, both with members and with the Lodges in fraternal alliance. It is usual for the latter to forward, in the summer, to every member and allied Lodge a so-called St. John's letter, detailing the events of the past twelve months, and giving a list of present members. In some cases allied Lodges undertake a regular exchange of their respective minutes. As the parties to these arrangements increased in number, the work became more onerous, and Dr. Lechner of the Baldwin Lodge, Leipsic, formed a plan to facilitate matters, which was communicated to the Lodges by circular in 1831. According to this scheme the Baldwin Lodge was to act as a central point under a special officer charged to receive proceedings from all quarters, and to distribute them to all corresponding members. Forty-two Lodges joined the association at the outset, and at present almost every German Lodge is affiliated, besides many in Switzerland, Denmark, and North America.

III. UNION OF THE THREE GRAND LODGES OF BERLIN.

A Union, composed of the Grand and Deputy Grand Masters of these three Grand Lodges, was founded in 1810 to deliberate on matters of common interest. It had been preceded by a joint monthly committee meeting, established in 1807. Unfortunately in 1823 the G.L. of Hamburg and the National G.L. quarrelled about the Lodge at Rostock. Hamburg brought its case before the Union through the good offices of the G.L. Royal York. This produced very strained relations, and the Union—by common consent—quietly came to an end.

IV. PRUSSIAN GRAND MASTERS' UNION.

About the year 1830 the three Berlin Grand Lodges had, in a great measure, forgotten their quarrels, and lived together in peace and amity. To ensure a continuance of this happy state of affairs, the Union of Prussian Grand Masters was established December 28, 1839. On that day the following officers met together—Von Donnersmark and Selapinsky, the G.M. and Dep. G.M. of the National G.L.; Link and Bever, the G.M. and Deputy of the Royal York; O'Etsel and Schmückert, filling similar offices in the Three Globes; and the three Grand Secretaries. The object of this Union was to take council in common on important Masonic matters, and to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the Grand Lodges. The Union might propose Masonic principles for acceptance, but was powerless to force their adoption on the individual Grand Lodges.

One of the first acts of this Union was an important one. At a meeting held May 18, 1840, at the premises of the Royal York, Von Donnersmark informed the Grand Masters that Prince William of Prussia (now the Emperor of Germany) had obtained his father's permission to join the Craft, provided he could be made in the name of all three Grand Lodges, and belong to them conjointly; further, that in that case he would assume the protectorate of the entire Craft in Prussia. For such a purpose the Union was exactly fitted, and—May 22, 1840—the Prince was initiated. Donnersmark, his old companion in arms, presided at a "Common Prussian G. Lodge," and on the right and left were the other Grand Masters. The Masters of the fifteen Berlin Lodges were also present. The National G.L. lent its premises for the occasion. The Prince swore "truth and silence" to all three Grand Masters, and then in his capacity of Protector received their vows of fealty in return. The Union still exists, and has been of great service to the Fraternity in Prussia, as preparing the way for joint action in many matters.

V. GRAND MASTERS' DIET.

This may be considered as an extension of the Grand Masters' Union, applied to all Germany. In 1868, Warnatz, G.M. of Saxony, invited the other G.M.'s of Germany with their Deputies to meet him in conference. The first meeting was held May 3, 1868, at Berlin. Every G.L., except the Sun of Bayreuth, was represented by its G.M.; and in some instances by the Deputy Grand Masters or their substitutes. An idea of the scope of this association may be gathered from the proceedings of the Third Annual Diet, held June 5, 1870, when it was agreed to accept the Old English Charges as the basis and landmarks of Freemasonry. At the fourth Diet at Frankfurt, in 1871, the formation of a "Union of German G. Lodges" was mooted, and G.M. Warnatz was deputed to draw up a draft code of by-laws for the same. These were duly approved, and as a consequence the fifth and last Diet of 1872 at Berlin became the first meeting of the

VI. GERMAN GRAND LODGES' UNION.

This Union has worked to great advantage for the Craft, and in the absence of an impossible General Grand Lodge, serves to maintain a close bond between every system in the Fatherland, and to preserve or inaugurate a common line of conduct in external affairs.

VII. UNION OF GERMAN FREEMASONS.

This is a purely deliberative and literary society, composed of individual Masons meeting yearly at various cities. It was founded in 1861, and at first met with strenuous opposition from some of the Grand Lodges, so that in 1867 it only numbered 309 members. It has, however, formed a valuable library and museum at Leipzig, and its official organ is the Leipzig "Bauhütte." Its influence has grown yearly, and in 1878 it numbered 1509 active, and 31 corresponding, members. As a Literary Masonic Association, it takes high rank; as a

His Imperial Majesty, William I, Emperor of Germany

HE WAS BORN MARCH 22, 1797; INITIATED INTO FREEMASONRY IN 1840; DIED IN 1888.

He was initiated into Freemasonry in the year 1840, in a special lodge at Berlin, ruled over by the three Great Masters of the three Grand Lodges. Since the reign of Frederick the Great (1740-1786), who firmly established the craft in his dominion, the kingdom of Prussia has been a veritable stronghold of Freemasonry. Berlin alone can boast of three Grand Lodges, all working in amity. They are, the Grand National mother Lodge of the Prussian States, known as the Grand Lodge of "The Three Globes," "The National Grand Lodge of Germany, at Berlin," "The Grand Lodge, Royal York of Friendship, at Berlin."

Deliberative Assembly, there are signs of an unfortunate and regrettable tendency towards a mild form of socialism. Although politics are rigorously forbidden in the Lodge, it would appear that Germans do not include political economy under this head, and the boundary-line is easily overstepped.

Although the exigencies of space forbid more than a passing allusion to many subjects of deep interest to our antiquaries, but lying on the extreme border line of history, there is one upon which—at this stage of our inquiry—some general observations will not be out of place.

Germany (including Austria and Switzerland) excels all other countries, both in the affluence of its Masonic literature, and in the profundity of research which has characterized the labors of so many gifted historians of the Craft. The earliest efforts of German Masonic writers—translations of the English constitutions, orations, and didactic pieces—evinced both diligence and accuracy. Thence, by a gradual transition—the publication of the constitutions of many other Grand (and private) Lodges, and of songs and poems remarkable for beauty of thought and diction—we are brought to a higher sphere of intellectual labor, and find in the literature of the Craft the noblest moral teaching, accompanied by very learned and ingenious reflections on both the origin and objects of our Society.

Lessing—"the father of German criticism"—known to Masonic readers by his "Ernest and Falk," 1778, and "Nathan the Wise," 1779—a noble plea for toleration and a rational religion—was followed by Vogel, "Letters on Freemasonry," 1783-85; Albrecht, "Materials for a Critical History," 1792; Schroeder, "Materials for the Engbund," 1802; Schneider, "Constitutions of Arohimesdes," etc., 1803; Fessler, "Attempts at a Critical History," etc., 1801-7; Krause, "The Three Oldest Masonic Documents," 1810; Mossdorf, "Addresses to Thoughtful Masons," 1818; Heldmann, "The Three Oldest Historical Documents of German Masonry," 1819; Nettelblatt, "History of Masonic Systems," circa 1836; O'Etzel, "History of the Three Globes," 1840; Kloss, "Annals of the Eclectic Union," 1842—"Freemasonry in its True Significance," 1846—"Freemasonry in Great Britain," 1848—and "in France," 1852; Fallou, "The Mysteries of Freemasonry," 1848; Winzer, "The German Brotherhoods," 1859; Keller, "History of the Eclectic Union," 1857—"Of Masonry in Germany," 1859; Findel, "History of Freemasonry," 1861-62; and Paul, "History of the Eclectic Union," 1883. The list might be extended, but I shall merely add that both Herder and Goethe are to be classed among "writers of the Craft."

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTHERN EUROPE.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.<sup>1</sup>

THE history of Freemasonry in Austria—its traces in the Austrian Netherlands have already been referred to in connection with Belgium<sup>2</sup>—may be said to commence with the initiation of the Duke of Lorraine.

Francis Stephen was born 1708, and succeeded his father as Duke of Lorraine in 1729. In 1731 a special Lodge was held at the Hague under Dr. Desaguliers as W.M.; John Stanhorne and John Holzendorff, Wardens, the Earl of Chesterfield, and others, in order to initiate and pass the Duke, who was afterwards made a Master Mason in England in the same year.<sup>3</sup> In 1736 he married Maria Theresa, the heiress to the throne of Austria, and, on the death of Gaston of Medici, in 1737, exchanged the crown of Lorraine for that of the Grand Duchy of Tuscany. To his influence with his father-in-law, the Emperor, may be probably ascribed the fact that Clement's Bull of 1738 was promulgated in the Austrian dominions. In 1740 Maria Theresa succeeded to the imperial diadem of Austria, and appointed her husband Co-Regent. Personally the Empress was averse to the Craft, but her consort was able to procure for it a certain amount of tolerance in the long run, although powerless to prevent occasional outbursts of persecution. In these early days Freemasons existed in the Austrian dominions in considerable numbers, but as yet there was no Lodge.

In 1742—September 17—the first Vienna Lodge, "The Three Firing Glasses," was constituted by the "Three Skulls" of Breslau, under its Master the Prince Bishop of that city; but on March 7, 1743, the Lodge was, without warning, closed by the military at the command of the Empress, and 18 members—chiefly of the nobility—taken prisoners. Tradition has it that Francis himself had considerable difficulty in escaping by the back

According to Lawrie, Freemasonry was introduced into the province of Bohemia (Prague) in 1749.<sup>1</sup> He speaks of the members as "Scotish Masons," and the probability is that they were "Scots degree" Masons. Subsequent writers have, however, stated on the strength of this passage that the Grand Lodge of Scotland warranted a Lodge at Prague, a conclusion which is not supported by any evidence which has come under my notice.<sup>2</sup>

The Bull of Benedict XIV. in 1751 gave fresh courage to the clergy surrounding the Austrian throne, and renewed efforts to suppress Freemasonry were made. The Empress, however, held her hand, and (it is said) visited the Lodge in company with one of her ladies, both disguised as men, in order to assure herself that none of the beau sexe were admitted to the mysteries. Having satisfied herself on this point she retired. As this legend, however, derives no support from "inherent probability," not even can the Italian maxim, "Se non è vero, è ben trovato," be applied to it.

In 1751—May 22—the Lodge Frederick at Hanover warranted a branch Lodge, Frederick, at Vienna; in 1764 the Strict Observance began to constitute Lodges in the Austrian dominions; and in the same year a decree was issued suppressing Freemasonry altogether. But Francis, the Emperor, was himself at that time Master of "The Three Firing Glasses," and we need therefore not be surprised to find that it remained inoperative.

Francis died at Innsbruck, August 18, 1765, and his son, Joseph II., was elected Emperor. The Empress Maria Theresa also made him Co-Regent (with herself) of Austria. Although not a Mason, on more than one occasion he expressed a favorable opinion of the Craft. At this period the Jesuits were straining every nerve to avert their own extinction, and the Fraternity of Masons therefore obtained a little breathing time. Lodges began to multiply. In 1771 the Strict Observance founded one—the Three Eagles—in Vienna; and Zinnendorff followed the lead by erecting two others in the same city, 1771 and 1775. In 1776 Prague already possessed four Lodges, and in 1777 Zinnendorff's National Grand Lodge at Berlin established a Provincial Grand Lodge of Austria at Vienna.

By the death of Maria Theresa—November 19, 1780—the Emperor Joseph II. became Emperor of Austria also, and the Craft continued to prosper. The greater part of the new Lodges were constituted by Zinnendorff or by the Provincial Grand Lodge at Vienna of the same system; and in 1784 there were no less than 45 Lodges in the various provinces of the Austrian Empire (8 being in Vienna alone) under the following Provincial Grand Lodges:—Austria proper (Vienna), 17; Bohemia, 7; Hungary, 12; Siebenburgen, 3; Galicia, 4; and Lombardy, 2.

On April 22, 1784, the Provincial Grand Lodges of Bohemia, Hungary, Siebenburgen, and Austria met and formed a National Grand Lodge of the Austrian States, with Count Dietrichstein as Grand Master. Their intention was to declare themselves independent, but they met with such opposition from Berlin, that Dietrichstein was obliged to content himself with the position of a Prov. G.M. under the National—i.e., Zinnendorff—Grand Lodge. In 1785, however, the Emperor ordered the latent Grand Lodge to assert its independence, and Berlin was naturally obliged to give way. The other Provincial Grand Lodges appear to have joined the Union. Each Lodge had by its delegate one vote in the Provincial Lodges, which met every three months, and each Provincial Grand Lodge had one vote at the half-yearly meeting of the National Grand Lodge (of the Austrian States), thus forming a perfect representative system.

Unfortunately at this time the Emperor interfered in the internal arrangements of the Craft, apparently at the instigation of Dietrichstein, the G.M. The desire to suppress the Asiatic Brothers—at work in Austria since 1780—was not unconnected with these proceedings. An edict appeared on December 1, 1785, restricting the number of Lodges in any city to three, and ordering all those established in towns where there was no imperial court to close altogether. On the strength of this edict Dietrichstein caused the eight Vienna Lodges to reduce their number by amalgamation to two, and to greatly curtail their membership. Each member had to submit to a fresh ballot, and many were thereby prevented from taking any further part in the proceedings of the Craft. Several of the best Masons in Austria retired in disgust, numerous Lodges were closed by virtue of the edict, the spirit and independence of the Craft had flown, and its best days vanished.

Joseph died in 1790, and Leopold II. expressed himself as not unfriendly to the Fraternity; but his successor in 1792, Francis II., tried at the Ratisbon Diet to induce the German Princes to suppress Freemasonry throughout the Empire. In this he failed, but the Vienna Lodges, taking the cue, voluntarily closed in 1794 "until better times;" and in 1795 an imperial edict suppressed the Craft and all secret societies throughout the States of Austria. A further edict of 1801 required all State officials to sign a paper affirming that they did not belong to any such society. Freemasonry thus died out in Austria, and has not since revived. During the French occupation, 1805-9, some ephemeral Lodges arose, and even a short-lived Grand Orient under French jurisdiction; and again in 1848 a former Vienna Lodge reopened October 5, but was closed on the 6th. All subsequent attempts have proved fruitless as far as Austria is concerned, but Hungary rejoices in a better fate.

In 1861 Dr. Lewis made an attempt to revive the Craft in Hungary, and founded a Lodge in Pesth, but it was quickly closed by the police. The political division of 1867, however, by which Austria and Hungary became separate kingdoms under one crown, opened the door to Hungarian Freemasonry, no Hungarian law existing to the contrary. The Government approved in October, 1868, the statutes of Lewis' Lodge "Unity," and in 1869 two others Lodges arose in Temesvar and Oedenburg. The "Unity" threw off shoots in Baja, Pressburg, and Buda-Pesth, and the Temesvar Lodge one in Arad. On January 30, 1870, these seven formed a Grand Lodge of Hungary, and were strengthened in the same year by a new Lodge in Szegedin. These eight increased in 1871 to twelve. In 1872 the members already mustered 800 strong. The G.M. was, and still is, Franz Pulszky. But although prosperous in numbers, the organization, ritual, and spirit of the new body left much to be desired, and the Craft seemed destined to wreck on the lee-shore of its own unworthiness, when a judicious change of personnel in 1875 enabled it to make a good offing. The new Constitutions were approved February 24, 1876, providing a representative system of government, and the new ritual came into force on July 1. The immediate consequence of this was the formation of four new Lodges before the end of the year, since which date the National Grand Lodge of Hungary has proceeded on its way without much of importance to relate.

His Imperial Majesty, Frederick III, Emperor of Germany

From the original painting by J. Bogdanovitch in the Lodge of the True Hearts, Strasbourg

Initiated into Freemasonry in 1855

Returning to 1869 we find that in this year several Masons who had been initiated abroad opened a Lodge (the proceedings being conducted in the Hungarian tongue) according to the A. and A.S.R. 33°, under the auspices of the Grand Orient of France. This was soon followed by a second, working in German. As one of the prime movers in this matter, the celebrated Hungarian patriot Klapka should be mentioned. In 1870, these two Lodges made honorable overtures to the Grand Lodge for a fusion of government combined with freedom of ritual. Unfortunately, as we have seen in the History of French Freemasonry, such a fusion is difficult, and it failed on this as on so many previous occasions. Thrown upon their own resources, the two Lodges constituted—on the part of the Grand Orient of France—further Scots Lodges in Kaschau, Werschetz, Oravieza, Arad, Beregszász, and other towns; and having instituted the necessary High Chapters, these Lodges in 1872 formed a Grand Orient of Hungary for the A. and A.S.R. 33°, under Grand Master George Joannovics. In 1875 this Grand Orient exercised jurisdiction over some 20 Lodges with 1000 members. It has since lost much in importance. The two Grand bodies are on a perfectly friendly footing. The statistics of 1885 are as follows:—Grand Lodge in Buda-Pesth, founded January 30, 1870, 26 Lodges and 1268 members; Grand Orient of Buda-Pesth, founded 1872, 12 Lodges and about 502 members.

In Austria proper there are many Masonic clubs, that is, merely social clubs composed exclusively of Freemasons; as Lodges they are forbidden to meet. But Vienna itself is so near the Hungarian frontier, that many of these clubs are really Lodges which take a short railway trip in order to meet as such. In Pressburg and Oedenburg there are several Lodges whose members are all resident in Vienna. The other large towns of the Empire are, however, not so fortunately situated, and the Fraternity in each of such cities has to content itself with meeting as a social club.

SWITZERLAND.

The early history of the Craft in the Swiss Confederation is so involved, that unless my readers will kindly bear a few historical data in mind, I can hardly expect to make myself clear.

When Freemasonry first appeared in the valleys of Switzerland the Confederacy consisted of fourteen autonomous and confederated Cantons. Beyond these were a few districts, now Cantons with full rights, but then subject to individual Cantons by right of conquest, such as the Pays de Vaud—dependent on Berne. Further we have to deal with certain of the present Cantons which at that time were independent Republics in alliance with the Confederacy, such as St. Gall and Geneva; and lastly, the present Canton of Neuchâtel was at that time Prussian (1707-1806), from 1806-14 French, and since 1815 has been a member of the Confederation, but under Prussian suzerainty. At first we need chiefly concern ourselves with Zurich, Basle, and Berne, belonging to Switzerland proper; with Vaud, the dependency of Berne; with the Allied Republic of Geneva; and with the then Prussian State of Neuchâtel.

The first distinct period may be taken as extending to the reign of terror in 1792-93.

GENEVA. — In 1736 some English gentlemen established a Lodge in the city of Geneva, a resident and naturalized Scotsman, George Hamilton, being the Master. On March 5 of the same year he was forbidden by the Republic to initiate native citizens—a decree which appears to have been systematically violated—and in 1737 he was appointed by the G.L. of England Prov. G.M. for all Lodges in the state.<sup>1</sup> Even in these few months many had been established. To attempt to follow their history would be impossible. Throughout Switzerland Lodges were like mushrooms—they sprang up in a night and disappeared as quickly, leaving, in most cases, nothing but a name behind. In 1744 the Archives of the Town Council make mention of three Lodges only. These—February 13—the Fathers placed under a ban, which, however, did not prevent the Prov. G.L., under Lord Malpas, from holding a public festival on June 24. In 1745—when six Lodges are mentioned—the Council renewed its edict, which, however, was allowed to lapse. This was the last obstacle thrown in the way of the Craft in this territory. For the next fifteen years little is known of Geneva Freemasonry, except that Lodges were formed, existed for a time, and died out. The history of this period is involved in much confusion. In 1768—February 7—the “Union of Hearts” was established. This is the first Lodge which kept minutes, and its so-called “Golden Book” is full of interesting notes on Swiss Masonry. At this time Alexander Gerard returned from England, and set to work to reduce the existing chaos to order. At his instigation ten Geneva Lodges met on June 1, 1769, and on the 24th erected the Independent Grand Lodge of Geneva—working pure English Masonry. In the same year eight other Lodges united with this body, some being in France, and comprised of members averse to the high degrees (so-called). There was also one in Zurich and another in Constantinople. Before 1773 ten more had joined. This Grand Lodge was therefore of some importance, but towards 1782 the political ferment in France had extended to Geneva, and the state was put under military government. For the next four years the Craft was almost extinct.

In 1786 it re-awoke, and many Lodges joined the Grand Orient of France; but on March 22, eight Lodges reconstituted the Grand Lodge under the new title of Grand Orient of Geneva. It had much success—in the same year ten Lodges joined the original eight—and warranted a Lodge at Smyrna in 1787. The G.O. of France also extended its operations, and a Zurich paper of 1787 alludes to there being seventy-two Lodges (!) in Geneva. The Lodges were, however, continually shifting their allegiance from one Grand Orient to the other.

In 1790, February 10, the Lodge “Union of Hearts” initiated H.R.H. the late Duke of Kent, father of H.M. Queen Victoria.<sup>2</sup>

In 1792-93, during the reign of terror, the Grand Orient barely existed, almost all the Lodges dissolved or declared themselves dormant, and very few indeed professed to work on undismayed.

VAUD.—In 1739—February 2—some English noblemen in Lausanne were warranted as the “Perfect Union of Strangers,” No. 187, on the roll of England,<sup>3</sup> and declared themselves a Directing or quasi Grand Lodge under the name National Grand Directory of French Helvetia. Other Lodges were formed, but—March 3, 1745—the authorities at Berne issued most stringent decrees against the Craft,<sup>4</sup> and the Lodges were closed. Although the Swiss Fraternity published a strong protest in Frankfort and Leipsic, Freemasonry became obliterated throughout Switzerland proper (as it then was) for quite fifteen years.

BERNE.—The state Archives mention a Lodge as existing here prior to the year 1745, which, however, must have succumbed to the above edict.

VAUD.—In 1761 the Perfect Union reopened. It had gone over to the Strict Observance, and now called itself the Scots Directory for French Helvetia; it belonged to the Vth Province, Burgundy. Other Lodges also reopened; and in 1772 the Lodges even appeared in a public manner, throwing open their halls to the large influx of foreign Masons attracted to Lausanne by the wedding of the Princess Carignan. When the guests, however, had left, the authorities requested the Scots Directory to close its doors, and were obeyed. In 1775 for some unknown reasons Berne suddenly withdrew all its edicts against Freemasonry, several new Lodges were warranted in 1776-78, and the Directory reconstituted.

ZURICH.—In 1740 a Lodge, Concordia, was warranted by a Swiss regiment in the Dutch service, but was closed by the authorities. Again in 1769 a Lodge, "Discretion," was formed by Geneva residents, and warranted by the Grand Lodge of Geneva, but appears to have died out almost immediately. In 1771—August 13—some officers who had seen foreign service opened a second Lodge, "Discretion," according to the French Rite, but this was won over to the Strict Observance by Diethelm Lavater in 1772. Helvetia was a sub-priory of the Vth Province, and a Chapter was established with Lavater as sub-prior.

BASLE.—In 1744 a Lodge is mentioned, and disappears in 1745. In 1765 the Strict Observance Lodge "Libertas" was opened, and in 1769 a second.

FRIBURG.—Gottreau de Trefaje opened a Lodge in 1761, but in 1763 the Lodge was closed, and Gottreau handed over to justice. In 1764 he was condemned to be burned, a punishment at that time reserved for sorcerers, but escaped with exile owing to the influence of his relatives.

In 1778 therefore we have Strict Observance Lodges in Vaud, Zurich, and Basle, and no others in Switzerland proper. In that year Lausanne and Zurich agreed to divide the country between them accordingly as the cantons spoke German or French. The French Scots Directory at Lausanne, and the German Scots Directory at Zurich, under their respective Grand Masters, to be subordinated to Lavater as Sub-Prior. These two Directories attended the Convent de Ganles at Lyons in 1778, where the S. O. system was modified. Both were then raised to the rank of Sub-Priories, and Helvetia to that of a Priory of the Vth Province, with Lavater as Grand Prior.

VAUD.—In 1782, on account of some students' follies, Berne renewed its decrees, and the Lodges closed. As, however, fourteen Lodges in Piedmont and Savoy were dependent on Lausanne, three directors were appointed to control external affairs. Gradually the state authorities relaxed their severity, and the Lodges resumed work; new ones even were constituted in 1786. In 1787 the number of Vaud Lodges was stated at twenty-four. 1788 witnessed two fresh Lodges, 1789 an alliance with England. Then came the French troubles, and in 1792-93 the Directors resigned their functions, and all the Lodges closed.

ZURICH.—The Lodges closed in 1786, and the Scots Directory in 1792.

BASLE.—A congress of the Vth Province Burgundy was held here in 1779, but the Lodges were closed by superior authority in 1785.

NEUCHÂTEL.—The G. L. of the Three Globes (Berlin) warranted the "Three Flaming Stars" here on June 6, 1743; the Lodge is known to have existed in 1750, and must have died out soon afterwards. Another Lodge was warranted by the G. L. of France at Locle —May 22, 1770—of which nothing more is known.<sup>1</sup> Also, in 1791—December 27—the “Three Globes” constituted the “Frederick William of Good Harmony” at Neufchatel.

This brings us to the close of the first period of Swiss Freemasonry. In Switzerland the Craft was extinct, in Geneva languishing, and in Neufchatel scarcely founded. The second period will carry us to 1814-16.

GENEVA.—In 1795—June 21—the G.O. reopened under G.M. Louis Rivale, and for the next few years both the French and the native Grand Orientes were fully employed in constituting and resuscitating Lodges. In 1798 Geneva was annexed to France, and the Paris G.O. began to obtain the upper hand. English Freemasonry also lost ground, and the French Rites were substituted. In 1801 the G.O. of France revised its statutes, and the G.O. of Geneva lost its independence, being made a Prov. G.L. under Paris. In this capacity it ruled twelve Lodges in 1802, at which time there also existed a Geneva Lodge under the Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33° at Paris. In 1809 the Prov. G.L. was dissolved in conformity with the centralizing policy of the G.O., and the Geneva Lodges came under the immediate rule of Paris.

NEUFCHATEL was annexed to France in 1806, and the Lodge there reconstituted by the Grand Orient of France.

VAUD.—Several Lodges reopened in 1795, but no Grand Lodge; and in 1798 the Grand Orient at Paris commenced to constitute Lodges. In 1803 Napoleon reconstructed the Swiss Confederation, and absolved Vaud from its subjection to Berne, creating it an independent Canton. For the next few years French influence and French ritual were uppermost. In 1810 Maurice Glaire, a former minister of King Stanislaus of Poland, revived the Scots Directory in Lausanne, called seven Lodges together—October 15, 1810—and erected a National Grand Orient of French Helvetia, with Bergier as ad interim G.M. The Scots Directory was superior to this G.O. in matters of Ritual and Dogma only. Existing Lodges might use their own ritual, new ones were to accept Glaire's own version of the rectified system of the Strict Observance. Having thus made several innovations, it ceased to be a part of the Vth Province, and formed a Grand Orient of its own known as the Helvetic Rite. In 1811, March 1, these statutes were approved and Glaire, then 67 years old, elected G.M.; in 1813 he was reappointed for life. The G.O. prospered fairly well, but after the battle of Leipsic, and the entry of the allies into Switzerland, Glaire closed the Lodges pro tem.

BASLE.—In 1807 a Lodge under the G.O. of France was opened here. In 1809 Burkhard reintroduced the former rectified Strict Observance, won over the Lodge, re-erected the Priory, and applied to Cambacères, at that time head of all the various rites in France, for a patent. Having given the assurance that the former Grand Prior, Lavater, had resigned, he was appointed to the office, and the Archives, closed in 1793, were transferred from Zurich to Basle. We have thus once more a Scots Templar Directory of the Vth Province at Basle, but this time for all Switzerland, that at Lausanne having struck out a path of its own.

SOLEURE.—In 1809 this Canton was first opened to the Craft by the constitution of a Lodge under the Grand Orient of France.

ZURICH.—In 1810, March 4, a former Strict Observance Lodge was reopened by the Directory at Basle.

<sup>1</sup> It was revived later on, and will be mentioned again.

AARGAU.—In this newly emancipated Canton the first signs of improvement may be seen. Heldmann,<sup>1</sup> Zechokke,<sup>2</sup> and others opened a Lodge in 1810 at Aarau. They were obliged to apply to Basle for a constitution, as they did not wish to become subservient to a foreign jurisdiction, but they firmly rejected, from the onset, high degrees, Templarism, and Unknown Superiors, together with other innovations of a like character, and worked in the three degrees only according to Schroeder's Ritual.

BERNE.—In 1802—September 14—the Lodge Hope was warranted by the Grand Orient of France, and in 1804 a Rose Croix Chapter was added, of which Tavel was the Master. From its earliest days this Lodge was devoted to the task of forming one sole Masonic authority for Switzerland which should be independent, the Scots Directories being of course only partly so, as they were subordinated to the Prov. G.M. of the Vth Province, i.e., Cambacères. It even received encouragement from the G.O. of France to assume itself this rôle, but refused the offer from a fear lest its intentions might be misconstrued as a usurpation. This Lodge has ever since been one of the first in the Confederation, and in 1813 had the honor of initiating Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, subsequently the first King of the Belgians.

From 1795 to 1813 we thus see Switzerland divided between the G.O. of France and the Scots Directories of the Vth Province. The German Cantons possessed only a few Lodges, which were more numerous in the French provinces and at Geneva. There was much confusion, the most hopeful signs being the existence of the two new Lodges in Aarau and Berne.

With Napoleon's fall and the Congress of Vienna the Confederation was remodelled. Vaud and Aargau were confirmed as independent Cantons, and Neuchâtel and Geneva were added in the same capacity. This was not accomplished without much internal friction, and during the troubled years, 1813-16, Masonry may be looked upon as once more dormant in Switzerland.

With the resumption of Masonic activity in 1816 we may cease to consider the subject under the heading of the different Cantons, but confine our attention to the fortunes of the various systems, that is, the Grand Orients of France, and of the Helvetic Rite in Lausanne, the Directory of the Rectified Strict Observance, and the Lodge of Hope at Berne.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE may be soon dismissed. It gradually lost its Lodges throughout the country, chiefly through its own unworthiness. Those that still remained true to it were practically left to their own devices; of the others, some joined the Directory and others the G.O. of Lausanne. Many died out altogether.

THE DIRECTORY OF THE RECTIFIED RITE (S.O.).—This fell into a state of decay, and in 1817 the G.M., Burkhard, dying, was replaced by Kaspar Ott of Zurich. As a consequence the archives and Directory were transferred from Basle to Zurich. The system was strengthened by the adhesion of some Geneva Lodges in 1816, and by two new Lodges in St. Gall and Chur (Brisons), thus opening up two fresh Cantons to the Craft. In 1820 G.M. Ott died at a time when Freemasonry was undergoing a series of virulent attacks, and it was thought advisable not to attract attention by a new election. A namesake, though not a relative, of the last G.M., one Hans Caspar Ott, was therefore entrusted with the direction of affairs. In 1821 a new Lodge at Winterthur, in the Canton of Zurich, was warranted, and in 1823 the Lodges in Locle and Neuchâtel, under the G.O. of France, joined the Rectified Rite. This made nine Lodges of this system, which had now reached its culminating point, but still persisted in its refusal to aid in forming a National Grand Lodge otherwise than by absorbing all others within itself. It was, however, virtually the National G. Lodge for the German Cantons, but unfortunately its conduct of affairs did not equal its strength in Lodges.

GRAND ORIENT OF THE HELVETIC RITE.—This body reopened on March 9, 1816, with nine Lodges. G.M. Glaire resigned on account of old age (died March 26, 1820), and was replaced by Verdeil. The system was strengthened by some Geneva Lodges and a few new ones, and in 1820 Bergier d'Illens succeeded Verdeil as G.M. Various proposals from Berne to join the "Hope" Lodge, in forming a National Grand Lodge, had been refused by the Committee of Grand Officers; but the idea was taking root gradually among the rank and file of the private Lodges.

BERNE.—In 1817 the Hope, finding itself severed from its mother, the Grand Orient of France, made proposals to Ott, the G.M. of the Directory, but without results. In search of a new parent, and having freely made up its mind to dispense in future with all high degrees, it applied in 1818 to the Grand Lodge of England for a constitution. The Duke of Sussex not only granted this request, but raised the Lodge (No. 706) to the position of a Provincial Grand Lodge, under Tavel, G.M. This unlooked-for favor was hardly welcome, as it scarcely allowed the Lodge to take up its former independent position in proposing a National Grand Lodge. However, the Lodge accepted the patent, based its constitutions on the work of Dr. Anderson (1723), and, unable to obtain a written ritual from London, adopted that of Schroeder. The Provincial Grand Lodge was inaugurated June 24, 1819, and all the nineteen Lodges of Switzerland, without regard to divergence of ritual and procedure, were invited to attend. In 1821 it constituted its first daughter in Neuchâtel, and asked the Lausanne Grand Orient to unite with it in forming a National Grand Lodge—but the time for this had not yet arrived.

LAUSANNE.—Events within this Grand body brought about the desired result. The brothers Bedarride arrived in Switzerland to establish their Rite of Misraim. After much ill success they formed two Lodges at Lausanne, and won over the G.M. Bergier to their cause. It was arranged that the Lodges should submit to the Grand Lodge so far as concerned the first three degrees, but the high degrees were to be wrought under Bedarride. Bergier attempted to carry out this project at a Grand Lodge held in 1821, but was opposed by the majority at the meeting and by his Deputy, Mieville. He finally resigned and left the Lodge. Mieville's party then agreed to effect a fusion with the English Provincial Grand Lodge at Berne. On October 23, 1821, the Sublime Chapter met under Bergier and dissolved the Grand Lodge, which held from them, resolving to resume sole control of affairs. The Chapter, however, did not follow up this step, and became practically dormant. The members of the defunct Grand Orient entrusted their power of attorney to the former College of Grand Officers. The Provincial Grand Lodge of Berne addressed a circular to each of the private Lodges, and not, as formerly, to the Grand Lodge. The Committee of Grand Officers replied on behalf of the Lodges to these overtures, and a meeting was held at Berne—April 29, 1822—between the deputies of the two Berne and of five Vaud Lodges. It was decided to form a Grand Lodge on the English system; to recognize three degrees only, but to tolerate any others as a refuge for the play of fancy; to allow the constituent Lodges to preserve their own rituals, but to require new Lodges to use the Schroeder version. The Lausanne Grand Lodge dissolved, May 18, 1822, and exactly a week later the English Provincial Grand Lodge followed suit. A National Grand Lodge of Switzerland was then constituted by the Masters and Wardens of the seven Lodges. The Hope Lodge resumed its place as a private Lodge under this Grand Lodge; and an eighth Lodge at Geneva immediately proffered its allegiance. The Grand Lodge was inaugurated June 24, when Tavel was elected G.M., and two more Geneva Lodges joined. The Grand Lodge entered upon a prosperous career, receiving adhesions from all parts, and in the course of a few years its daughter Lodges had ceased to work any high degrees, and had all adopted the Schroeder Ritual.

RECTIFIED RITE.—Left face to face with a single rival, this body began to put its house in order. The first step was to fill the vacant Grand Mastership, and Sarasin, of Basle, was elected to that office. All the Lodges of the system were invited to his installation (1823)—nine in all; and various attempts were made to bring the system and rite more into harmony with the spirit of the times. But the close of this, the third period of Swiss Masonry, presents to us two Grand Bodies, one—on the wane—the antiquated Templar system, and the other—older still—an offshoot of the pure English Craft, lusty as a young giant, prepared to run his race, and confident of victory.

The fourth period therefore opens with the National Grand Lodge of Berne and the Grand Directory of the Rectified Rite at Basle only in the field; for the Helvetic Rite, which still pretended to exist, for very many years resembled a general without an army, or a head without a body.

In 1828 the Rectified Grand Lodge was so dull and lifeless that Sarasin resigned, and it was not until 1829 that Von Escher, of Zurich, was elected in his stead. The Lodges themselves were induced to take part in festivals and meetings of the National Grand Lodge, and individually were not averse to a fusion, though unprepared to take active steps from an honorable feeling of loyalty towards their Grand Officers. Only one Lodge, that at Locle, deserted to the National Grand Lodge.

In 1830—June 19—Tavel, G.M. of the National Grand Lodge, died. The new election was delayed in order to make a further attempt at a fusion. The Lodge of Hope more took the matter in hand. But the July revolution in Paris had raised an echo in the Cantons where the still somewhat patrician style of government was in course of being overthrown. Under these circumstances the Grand Directory—Rectified Rite—thought the moment not a propitious one for attracting public attention to the Fraternity, but admitted its inability to cope with the spirit of the times, and declared it would not attempt to prevent its daughters seceding, nor feel hurt at their desertion. As already related, a sentimental feeling prevented this, and as the effort was evidently not destined to succeed, the National Grand Lodge contented itself with quietly making friends in all directions. Shortly afterwards the Duke Charles of Hesse Cassel, G.M. of the Rectified system, died; the Provinces of the Order had all ceased to exist except Burgundy, represented by the Directory in Switzerland, and half a Lodge in Besançon, which professed to be the Provincial Chapter, and thus in 1844 it became possible, with the tacit consent of the almost defunct Directory, to appoint a commission to draw up the constitutions of the proposed Sole Grand Lodge. This constitution was finally approved at Zurich, July 22, 1844, by 14 Lodges present on the occasion. The following day Hottinger was elected Grand Master, the two Grand Lodges previously existing made over to him all their rights and duties and dissolved, new Grand Officers were appointed, and—July 24, 1844—the Grand Lodge "Alpina," of Switzerland, met for the first time. Only six Lodges refused to join; one of these was dormant, the others were in Geneva; one persisted in retaining the Rectified system, and hung on to the shadow of a Chapter at Besançon; three still owned the sway of the Grand Orient of France, and one that of the Supreme Council 33° of the same country. So that the close of the fourth period leaves us with practically a united Craft in Switzerland under the Grand Lodge Alpina. There is no necessity to describe its constitutions at length; they were almost identical with those of England both in spirit and machinery.

The fifth period extends to the present time. The constitution had enacted six years as the term of office for the G.M. Hottinger therefore retired in 1850, and was succeeded by Jung. The last Provincial Grand Chapter of the Rectified Rite at Besançon having died out in 1845, the only remaining Lodge of this system (Geneva) joined the Grand Lodge Alpina in 1851; and the same course was pursued by the Geneva Lodge working under the A. and A.S.R. 33° at Paris. Two of the three Geneva Lodges under the G.O. of France also affiliate in course of time, thus leaving only one foreign Lodge in the Confederation.

But the extinct or rather dormant Supreme Chapter of the old Helvetic Rite at Lausanne made periodical efforts to recover control of the Lodges, though it only so far succeeded as to graft Rose Croix Chapters on some few French Lodges, and to sow dissension in the French Cantons. On the other hand, some old high degree Masons of the Rectified Rite followed a similar plan in the German Cantons, and those knightly degrees were worked until 1862, and possibly later. The system is, I believe, now quite extinct. But into the history of these and other "Masonic Aberrations" space forbids me to enter any further than is absolutely necessary to a due comprehension of the annals of the Craft.

The National Grand Lodge continued to prosper, resuscitating old Lodges and warranting new. The Annual Festival is movable, being held at various towns. At the Grand Lodge of 1853, 18 Lodges were represented; in 1856, 19 and 4 not. The periodical election of G.M. brought Maistre to the head of the Fraternity. In 1862 he was succeeded as G.M. by Dr. Gelpke, the number of Lodges having increased to 25, with 1730 members. In 1866 the Lodges were 28. In 1868 Ruegg was elected G.M.

In 1869 the long extinct or dormant Helvetic Directory at Lausanne transformed itself into a Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33° for Switzerland, and began to pose as a Grand Lodge. The consequence was, that at the Grand Lodge in 1871 its members were excluded. Ruegg resigned, and was followed as G.M. by Humbert. The periodical election in 1874 placed Tschanner at the head of the Craft, who was in turn succeeded by John Cuinoud.

The exclusion of the A. and A.S.R. Masons produced great irritation, and the Supreme Council revenged itself by warranting Craft Lodges to the number of six. After many years of strife an arrangement was come to in 1876, whereby the excluded brethren were reinstated, and the Supreme Council undertook to leave the Lodges alone, confining its attention to the additional degrees. Its fate therefore interests us no more, but it still exists on friendly terms with the Grand Lodge. Five of its six Lodges joined the "Alpina," and the sixth amalgamated with a neighboring Lodge.

The following table may serve to present the chief of the above facts in a concise form:

The latest statistics before me refer to May, 1885. The number of Lodges was 34, with 2451 members, an average of 72 per Lodge. Of these 11 are in Vaud, 6 in Geneva (all in the city itself), 4 in Neuchâtel, 4 in Berne, 2 in Zurich, and 1 each in Freiburg, Basle, Schaffhausen, St. Gall, Grisons, Aargau, and Ticino. 10 of the Cantons possess no Lodge; 7 of these are strictly Roman Catholic; the other 3, although Protestant—Glarus, Appenzell, and Thurgau—contain no town large enough to support a Lodge. As regards dialect, the result is curious. Only one-fifth of the Confederation speak the French tongue, yet here we find 22 Lodges; whereas the German four-fifths only contain 11. In Ticino the language is Italian. The present G.M. is E. C. Jung of Winterthur (Zurich). In Geneva there is still one Lodge under the Grand Orient of France—a "Memphis" Lodge, under the A. and P. Rite, England (Vol. III., p. 389,) established there in 1856, joined the National G.L. "Alpinas" in 1865.<sup>1</sup>

ITALY.

Until 1859-60 Italy was merely a geographical expression, so that to obtain any amount of clearness in a description of the Craft in that district, it becomes essential, as in the case of Switzerland, to treat the various states separately.

THE TWO SICILIES (Naples and Sicily) 1717-1860.—In 1717 the kingdom was a portion of the Austrian Empire; in 1733 it was ceded to Spain; in 1759 under Ferdinand IV. it passed as an independent kingdom to the younger branch of the Royal House of Spain; in 1805 Naples—but not Sicily—was annexed to France; in 1806 Joseph Buonaparte was made King of Naples, and was followed in 1808 by Joachim Murat; in 1815 the two Sicilies were reunited under Ferdinand; and in 1860 Garibaldi incorporated them with the recently formed kingdom of Italy.

It would appear that about 1750 a Greek established a Lodge in Naples, and that on July 10, 1751, Charles III., influenced by the Bull of Benedict IV., prohibited Freemasonry throughout his dominions, but so soon changed his views, that in the following year he entrusted his son's education to a Mason and priest, whom he also appointed his own confessor. In 1754 we hear of another Lodge working under the Mother-Lodge at Marseilles, which in 1760 placed itself under the Grand Lodge of Holland, and in 1762 transferred its allegiance to England. Our Lodge Lists show no evidence of this transaction, but perhaps the appointment of Don Nicholas Manuzzi by Lord Blaney (1764-67), as Prov. G.M. for Italy,<sup>1</sup> may tend to support the assertion.

In 1764—February 27—a National Grand Lodge was erected, with four daughters in Naples itself, and an equal number distributed throughout the other cities of the kingdom. Besides these there existed in Naples in 1775, according to a report signed by the Grand Master of the Lodge, Prince Di Caramanica, a Lodge working under the Grand Orient of France, and two under the G.L. of England, pronounced clandestine by the National G.L. The latter are evidently those which appear in the Engraved List for 1769 as No. 433, "in his Sicilian Majesty's regiment of Foot," and No. 444,<sup>2</sup> "Well Chosen Lodge." Prince Caramanica's leaning to the Strict Observance, and the isolated position of the two English Lodges, probably led to the appointment by Lord Beaufort, G.M., in 1770, of a Prov. G.M. for Naples and Sicily.<sup>3</sup> The Craft at this period made great progress in the two Sicilies.

Meanwhile, in 1767, Ferdinand IV. assumed the government at the close of his minority, and his minister, Tanucci—an unscrupulous and inveterate enemy of the Craft—at last induced him—September 12, 1775—to suppress Freemasonry. The Lodges closed, but Tanucci, by means of agents provocateurs, induced some Masons to meet, who were duly arrested. Again, on the day of St. Januarius, 1776, the saint's blood refused to liquify in the customary manner, which the agents of Tanucci attributed to the machinations of the Masons, and a regular persecution ensued. But Ferdinand's wife, Queen Caroline—daughter of the Emperor Francis of Lorraine—"loved Masons well." Owing to her advocacy the edict was revoked and Tanucci dismissed. In June, 1776, Diego Naselli was elected G.M. in succession to Caramanica, four new Lodges were warranted, and the two English Lodges affiliated with the National G.L.

In 1777 Weiler came to Naples. This emissary of the Strict Observance had succeeded in erecting Italy into the VIIIth Province, with a Provincial Grand Chapter at Turin, and as the National G.L. of Sicily had from its earliest days been on cordial terms with the German Lodges of Prince Ferdinand, he experienced no difficulty in converting it into a Chapter and Sub-Priory of the S.O., with Naselli as Sub-Prior. That this perversion displeased some of the Fraternity, and caused them to apply to England for relief, cannot be positively affirmed; but it is at least certain that the following Lodges were constituted almost immediately afterwards under English Charters—No. 510 at Messina (May 12, 1778), No. 525 at Naples (March 6, 1780), No. 440 at Naples (1781).*

In 1781 Ferdinand IV. once more placed the Craft under an interdict; in 1783 he cancelled all former inhibitions, but subjected the meetings to strict judicial control.† Their independence and privacy being thus endangered the Lodges gradually dwindled and died out, and Masonry ceased to exist in the two kingdoms.

In 1804 the French entered Naples, and the Royal Family took refuge in Sicily under the protection of Nelson and the Fleet. I can discover no trace of the Craft in the island during this period; but in Naples a Grand Orient was established in 1804 by the French army of Italy, with General Lechi as G.M.,‡ which in 1805 amalgamated with the G.O. of Italy at Milan.¶

In 1809—June 11—Murat being King of Naples, a Supreme Council 33° was established in that city, and on June 24 of the same year a Grand Orient* of which Murat allowed himself to be proclaimed G.M. In October, 1812, he was appointed Sovereign Grand Commander of the 33°. But on the fall of Napoleon in 1815 Murat was driven out, and a law of 1816—August 8—prohibited Freemasonry under pain of the galleys. Nevertheless it dragged on a fitful existence, and the G.O. of France, in its list for 1820, still makes mention of three Lodges and one Chapter at Messina. This was followed by a new decree in 1821, upon which the Grand Orient for the two Sicilies declared itself dissolved. In the revolutionary year 1848 a Lodge existed—but for a few months only—in Palermo. This was the last effort of the Craft in the kingdom of the two Sicilies.

STATES OF THE CHURCH.—Freemasonry was early introduced into Rome. On August 16, 1735, a Lodge was opened there under J. Colton. It worked in English, but under the Earl of Wintoun, in 1737, the Inquisition seized its serving brothers, and on August 20, it closed.¶ The Bull of Clement XII. was published in 1738, and confirmed—January 14, 1739—by a further edict forbidding Freemasonry throughout the Papal States under pain of death and confiscation of worldly goods. The burning by the public executioner in the same year—February 25—of the "Relation Apologétique," wrongly attributed to Ramsay, has already been mentioned.¶ Nevertheless there is evidence to show that the foreign Masons then residing at Rome continued to meet from time to time. In 1742 they even issued a medal in honor of Martin Folkes, D.G.M. of England, 1724-25.¶ A Lodge was again established at Rome in 1787, but was surprised by the Inquisition, December 27, 1789; the brethren escaped, though the property and archives were seized. On the same day the Inquisition captured the charlatan Cagliostro, whose evil repute had acted most prejudicially upon Freemasonry. The Lodges in Lombardy issued a manifesto which was brought up by the college of Cardinals—disclaiming all connection with him, and defending the Craft from papal aspersions.

In 1809 the Papal States were incorporated with France, and Rome was declared the second capital of the empire. Under French rule several Lodges were established, but on the return of Pope Pius VII. in 1814 the Craft was once more effectually suppressed.<sup>1</sup> It was not until 1861 that a new Lodge opened, in which year one was formed under the Grand Orient of Turin. We may now leave these states until 1870, when the Franco-Prussian war permitted Victor Emmanuel to unite the ancient capital to his kingdom of Italy.

TUSCANY—FLORENCE.—On the extinction of the Medici family in 1737, Francis of Lorraine<sup>2</sup> received this Grand Duchy in exchange for Lorraine, which had been conquered by Louis XIV. of France and presented to his father-in-law, Stanislaus, ex-King of Poland. When Francis was elected German Emperor in 1745, the Duchy was vested in the junior branch of the Austrian family, but in 1790 reverted to the imperial crown under Leopold when his elder brother Joseph II. died childless. As Francis of Lorraine was Grand Duke from 1737 to 1765, it is somewhat surprising the Craft should have prospered so little in Tuscany during that period; for the only Lodge of which we hear, supposed to have been founded in 1733 by Lord Sackville, and closed under the persecutions of the Inquisition in 1739, probably never existed at all. Its existence has only been inferred on the authority of a medal by Natter dated 1733, which medal is almost certainly a fraud perpetrated at a much later date in the interests of the Strict Observance.<sup>3</sup> From this supposititious Lodge, however, both the Swedish system and the Strict Observance have professed to receive that light denied to England in 1717; but whether this legendary transmission inspired the medal, or whether the medal gave rise to the legend, I am unable to say, nor would it profit us much to inquire. Beyond this apocryphal Lodge we have only general accounts of Freemasonry in Tuscany<sup>4</sup> until June 24, 1763, when a Lodge—No. 117—was established at Leghorn<sup>5</sup> by the Schismatic G.L. of England (Ancients). This was followed by a second—No. 138—in 1765 (under the same sanction), also at Leghorn, where, in 1771, two further Lodges—of "Perfect Union," No. 410; and of "Sincere Brotherly Love," No. 412—were constituted by the older (or legitimate) Grand Lodge of England.

Troops were quartered in the Duchy by the French in 1796-97, and we again hear of <sup>5</sup> E.g., St. James Evening Post, letter from Florence dated May 24, 1738.—"The Freemasons' Lodges which had been interdicted here during the life of the great Duke are now held again with all the liberty and freedom imaginable, and without any dread of the Inquisition, which has no right to attack a society of which the new sovereign [Francis of Lorraine] is a member. The Freemasons of Leghorn have also reopened their Lodges" (Mas. Mag., vol. iv., July, 1877, p. 421).

<sup>6</sup> Under the beneficent sway of the Medici, religious toleration was established at Leghorn, and merchants of all nations flocked there. We learn from Boswell that there was a British factory in that city, to which the Rev. Mr. Burnaby was Chaplain, in 1765 (Account of Corsica, 1768, preface, p. xiv.).

Lodges at Leghorn, which, however, were closed by the Grand Duke in 1800. But he was himself driven out by the French, and his Duchy transformed into an Etruscan Republic, then into a kingdom of Tuscany, and finally annexed to France, with Napoleon's sister, the Duchess of Lucca, as Grand Duchess. Consequently, from 1807 to 1809, we find Lodges erected both at Florence and Leghorn, hailing either from the Grand Orient of France or of Italy [at Milan].<sup>1</sup> But with the return of the (Austrian) Grand Duke Ferdinand in 1814 all Masonry once more died out, and was not revived until, in 1859, Tuscany became a part of the kingdom of Italy.

GENOA.—The old British and Ligurian Lodge, No. 444, was warranted here by the Grand Lodge of England in 1782. As Thory relates<sup>2</sup> that several Masons were imprisoned here in consequence of the Senate's edict of March 26, 1803, it is possible that this Lodge was then still in existence. This was under Napoleon's Ligurian Republic, finally established in 1803 after the Austrians had held the town for two years. In 1805 the State was annexed to France, and two Lodges were established under the Grand Orient of France, 1805-1807; a third but earlier one is also mentioned. In 1814 Genoa was handed over to Sardinia, and Freemasonry there ceased to exist.

LOMBARDY, MILAN.—We have already seen that in 1784, when the National Grand Lodge of Austria was formed, a Provincial Grand Lodge existed in this province of the Austrian dominions, with two daughters, at Cremona and Milan respectively.<sup>3</sup> It is not clear whether these Lodges expired before 1794 of their own want of vitality, or whether they survived long enough to be closed by the imperial edict of 1795. In 1797 this province formed part of Napoleon's Cisalpine Republic, to which I shall again allude.

VENETIA.—The Grand Lodge of England granted warrants on November 27, 1772, to the Union Lodge, No. 438, at Venice; and on the 28th to a Lodge, No. 439, at Verona. Nothing further is known of their history, but they are supposed to have continued in existence till 1785. In Padua, in 1781, there existed a Prefectory and Chapter of the Strict Observance under the Grand Priory of the VIIIth Province, in Turin, which, after 1782, was changed to the IVth; and this Chapter presided over a S.O. in Lodge in Vicenza, of which there were notices in 1784-85. All these Lodges and any others which may have existed were suppressed by a decree of the Venetian Senate in May, 1785.

By the peace of Campo-Formio, in 1797, Venetia was divided, part going to Austria—where Freemasonry was already under a ban—and part to the Cisalpine Republic.

CISALPINE REPUBLIC.—This, formed in 1797 of Milan, Modena, Mantua, Bologna, Ferrara, Romagna, part of Venetia, etc., was called, in 1801, the Italian Republic, with Napoleon as President, and in 1805 became the kingdom of Italy, with Buonaparte as King, and Eugene Beauharnais as Viceroy.

On December 26, 1801, the French Grand Orient erected at Milan the first Lodge in this new State. In 1805—the A. and A.S.R. founded a Supreme Council 33° at Milan, which constituted a Grand Orient for the kingdom of Italy, with Beauharnais as G.M. The recently formed G.O. at Naples amalgamated with it,<sup>4</sup> and in 1808 it was recognized as an independent Grand Orient by the G.O. at Paris. Many Lodges were constituted in the kingdom, two at Milan itself, 1807-10, but the whole system was suppressed, when in 1814 the kingdom was broken up, Parma and Modena becoming separate States, and the greater part of the remainder falling to Austria, forming, with the previously acquired portion of Venetia, the Austrian Lombardo-Venetian kingdom. Freemasonry therefore ceased to exist here until in 1860 Lombardy, and in 1866 Venetia, were incorporated with the present kingdom of Italy.

SARDINIA (PIEDMONT AND SAVOY).—The first notice of the Craft in this kingdom is the appointment by Lord Raymond, G.M., of the Marquis des Marches as Prov. G.M. for Savoy and Piedmont in 1739.<sup>1</sup> Beyond this bare record nothing is known.

The next notice is the existence in Piedmont (Turin), in 1770, of a Grand Lodge called "La Mystérienne," working a rite of its own, consisting of the three degrees and of 4° Elect Grand Master, 5° Perfect Irish Master, 6° Grand Scot, 7° Knight of the East, 8° Holy Kadosch, and 9° Rose Croix. This was transformed by Weiler in 1775 into the Great Priory of Italy (VIIIth Province) or Bailiwick of Lombardy at Turin, with Weiler himself as Grand Prior, and after him Count Bernez.<sup>2</sup> It had three subordinate Prefectories—at Naples, Turin, and Padua—and a score or more of Lodges. In the same year—March 25, 1775—an English Lodge, St. Jean de Nouvelle Espérance, No. 479, was constituted at Turin, of whose subsequent history nothing appears to be known.

Savoy, in 1778, joined the Rectified Scots Rite of the Strict Observance, with a Directory—"La Sincérité"—of the IIInd Province (Anvergne), at Chambéry. The Grand Orient of France had, however, also constituted Lodges there from 1770 onwards, of which one—"The Three Mortars"—claimed to be a Grand Orient of Sardinia—a claim rejected by the G.O. of France in 1790—and even warranted a Lodge as far off as Dresden. In 1782 also, as we have already seen, no less than 14 Lodges existed in Piedmont and Savoy dependent upon the Scots Directory for French Helvetia in Lausanne.<sup>3</sup>

In 1788 the King of Sardinia, Victor Amadens III., ordered the Strict Observance Grand Priory in Turin to dissolve, and transfer its powers to the Scots Directory at Chambéry, which thus became the recognized Grand Lodge of the kingdom.

But on January 11, 1790, this Grand Lodge was also dissolved by the King (though Freemasonry was not otherwise interfered with), and the Lodges transferred then allegiance—as the Craft itself was not placed under an interdict—to the Grand Orients of France and Geneva, or to the Directory at Lausanne.

In 1792 Savoy was ceded to France, and the Craft there revived under the G.O. of the latter country. Two years later—May 20, 1794—Victor Amadeus III. issued an edict totally suppressing Masonry throughout the remainder of his dominions. In 1798, however, his sovereignty was restricted to the Island of Sardinia. The French occupied Piedmont, lost it temporarily in 1799, converted it into a Republic in 1802, and annexed it to France a few months later. Under French rule a Lodge was warranted in Turin, and probably others under the Grand Orient of Italy at Milan,<sup>4</sup> but they were all short-lived, for in 1814 the King of Sardinia re-obtained possession of Piedmont (enlarged) and of Savoy, besides acquiring Genoa, and in 1814—May 20—renewed the edict of 1794 rigidly suppressing Freemasonry. This edict remained in force until shortly before the dawn of Italian freedom in 1859, so that from 1821 (see under The Two Sicilies, ante, p. 105) until 1856, not a Lodge existed in any part of what is now the kingdom of Italy.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>2</sup> In the engraved List for 1773, and subsequently in the "Freemasons' Calendar" until 1804. Count de Bernez appears as English Prov. G. M. for Piedmont in Italy. I am not aware whether he was the G.M. of the "Mystérieuse," but even if so, it would not be the sole example of an English Prov. G.M. presiding over assemblies where degrees were wrought other than those of the Craft.

THE KINGDOM OF ITALY.—In 1859, Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia acquired all northern Italy except Venetia, but lost Savoy, which was ceded to France; in 1860 Naples and Sicily were gained for him by Garibaldi; in 1866 he obtained Venetia by treaty, and in 1870 the city of Rome. The year 1859 forms therefore a perfectly fresh starting-point for us, although the Grand Orient of France had warranted a Lodge at Genoa in 1856.

In 1859 several Masons constituted themselves into a Lodge at Turin working the so-called modern Italian rite of three degrees—in other words, pure English Masonry. Their example was soon followed by the erection of numerous other Lodges in Genoa, Milan, Pisa, Florence, Leghorn, Rome, and other places. These Lodges adopted measures to form a Grand Lodge, and by general correspondence agreed upon a provisional constitution, ritual, etc. The Chevalier Nigra, Ambassador at Paris, was elected G.M. provisionally. To this there was no opposition, but some few Lodges having given a silent vote, Nigra declined the nomination—November 22, 1861—in order to allow the proposed constituent assembly perfect liberty. This assembly met at Turin December 26, 1861, and sat daily until January 1, 1862. Twenty-two Lodges in all were represented. On January 1, 1862, the Grand Orient of Italy at Turin was proclaimed, with Nigra as G.M., and Garibaldi as Hon. Past G.M. The yearly assembly was declared movable from city to city. The Lodges not only restricted themselves to the three degrees, but agreed to refuse fellowship to those working any others. In most respects the organization of the Grand Lodge followed the arrangements of the Grand Lodge of England. This was not accomplished without protest, which to understand, it will be necessary in some degree to retrace our steps.

In 1860 some Masons established a Supreme Council A. and A.S.R. 33° for Naples and Sicily, and professed to consider themselves a revival of the Supreme Council 33° established at Naples in 1809 and suppressed in 1821. Many Lodges sprang up and adhered to this organization.

About the same time other Lodges in Sicily also working the A. and A.S.R. 33° met and established a Grand Orient of that Rite at Palermo, with Garibaldi as G.M.

Also at Turin there existed a Consistory of the 32°, likewise warranting Lodges, and assuming all the rights of a Supreme Council until the time arrived when they might be strong enough to form a Grand Orient of the Scots Rite in the capital of Italy—at that time Turin.

Further, about 1861, it would appear as if a similar Consistory existed at Leghorn for Tuscany.

The chief protests against the Grand Orient of Italy at Turin came from the Supreme Council at Naples. We thus see that not only was Italy divided in its views as to Masonic ceremonial, but also that the old territorial divisions showed a tendency to assert themselves in spite of Italian unity. The Grand Orient was not only opposed by these four Scots Councils, but unfortunately failed to secure any external support beyond that of Belgium and France, because it very openly interfered in the politics of the day, domestic and foreign. Under these circumstances Nigra resigned—March 1, 1863—and Cordova was elected by the small majority of 15 to 13 over Garibaldi. Matters, however, did not improve under the new G.M.; England especially withheld its recognition. The Grand Orient in 1862 unwisely adopted very strong measures with regard to a Turin Lodge addicted to the high degrees, and general discontent prevailed. Nevertheless in July, 1863, the G.O. had no less than 68 Lodges on its roll, including daughters at Alexandria, Cairo, Constantinople, Lima, and elsewhere.

On August 1, 1863, at a general assembly held in Florence, the troubles reached a climax. The Grand Officers, with one exception, resigned; and an interim committee of five was appointed to draw up a new constitution. These were all Scots, i.e., A. and A.S.R. Masons.

This committee having concluded its labors, called a meeting at Florence, May 21-24, 1864. "Latonia" of the same year states that only some thirty Lodges of the Italian (i.e., English) rite and a few of the Scots were represented, whilst the "Handbuch" of 1867 speaks of seventy Lodges and five Grand Lodges being present. This shows the difficulty of advancing anything of a positive character respecting this troubled period of Italian Freemasonry. On May 22 a new Grand Orient of Italy, consisting of forty members, was proclaimed. The chief seat of this body was Turin, but sections were appointed for Florence, Naples, and Palermo. The Lodges were allowed to work in either rite; but it is evident that the A. and A.S.R. 33° had gained a victory. On the 23d Garibaldi was elected G.M., and Luca President of the Grand Council 33°. The Supreme Councils of Naples, Leghorn, and Turin appear to have concurred, for of these we hear nothing more; that of Palermo under Garibaldi stood out from the arrangement; Garibaldi himself speedily resigned; and on September 15, 1864, Luca was elected in his stead. But Garibaldi's S.C. had also to contend with a rival in Palermo itself, a so-called Central Supreme Council under Prince Sant' Elia. I must candidly confess that I have been unable to discover whether this was an offshoot from Garibaldi's Council, or whether it had spontaneously sprung up some few years previously. A further complication arose from the action of eleven Lodges working the Italian Rite of three degrees, who, dissatisfied with the May meeting at Florence and its results, met at Milan July 1-5, 1864, and erected a Grand Lodge, under the name of a Grand Council, to sit at Turin, with Franchi as President or Grand Master. In 1865 the Grand Orient of Italy (mixed rites) was transferred to the new capital, Florence, and the Grand Council (Craft only) from Turin to Milan. From 1864 to 1867 we have thus four Grand Bodies in Italy, whose strength in 1867 was about as follows:—

- I. Grand Orient of Italy at Florence (Composite), about 150 Lodges; Luca, G.M.
- II. Supreme Council at Palermo (A. and A.S.R.), about 39 Lodges; Garibaldi, G.M.
- III. Grand Council at Milan (Craft), 7-8 Lodges; Franchi, G.M., who on July 15, 1867, was succeeded by Guastalla.
- IV. Supreme Central Council at Palermo (A. and A.S.R.), number of Lodges unknown; Sant' Elia, G.M.

Garibaldi himself was the first to take steps to put an end to this disastrous conflict of jurisdictions. He issued invitations to a congress of all Italian Lodges, which resulted in a meeting at Naples of deputies from his own Lodges and those under the Florence

Grand Orient on June 21, 1867. Luca presided. The Supreme Council of Palermo became merged in the Grand Orient, the four sections of the G.O. at Florence, Turin, Naples, and Palermo were abolished, Cordova was elected G.M., Garibaldi Hon. G.M. for life, and Luca Hon. G.M. for a year. Cordova soon resigned on account of bad health, and was succeeded by Frapolli. Garibaldi's Supreme Council did not approve of the fusion, but elected Campanella as Grand Master, and essayed to maintain its position. It became even more careless than before in its choice of candidates, and warranted sixteen Lodges (one at Smyrna) in 1868. But this was an expiring effort. Its Lodges died out or joined the Grand Orient, and towards the end of the year the Supreme Council was practically extinct.

At this time the Grand Lodge at Milan, finding itself unable to make any progress, so far modified its views as to acknowledge that Lodges under the Scots Rite might be legitimate, and thus a fusion was easily arranged on March 4, 1868, at Milan, between the Grand Orient of Italy at Florence and the Grand (Craft) Lodge at Milan. The amalgamation was effected April 1. This left only the Grand Orient of Italy—the title adopted by the parties to the fusion last referred to—and the Central Supreme Council of Palermo, in the field. In the next year or two Grand Master Frapolli succeeded in great measure in banishing religion and politics from Lodge discussions, and at the annual meeting in Florence in 1869 no less than 150 Lodges were represented. But as a general rule there is little stability amongst Italian Lodges, they spring up in a night and die at noontide. In June, 1870, Frapolli retired and Mazzoni was elected, and towards the end of the year the Grand Orient was transferred to the newly acquired capital, Rome.

In 1872—April 25—new constitutions were accepted, and at last in 1873 the Supreme Council at Palermo amalgamated with the Grand Orient, which has ever since been the sole Grand, or Governing Masonic Body in Italy. Under Mazzoni the quality of Italian Masonry has improved, at the expense of its quantity. Unworthy members and disreputable Lodges have been relentlessly weeded out. As we have seen, in 1869 there were over 150 Lodges, but in 1877 there remained only 154, and in 1878 only 109—with a membership of 12,053, or an average of 110 per Lodge—whilst in 1885 the number had once more increased to 146. Besides these there are 57 Lodges scattered throughout Roumania, Egypt—one, at Alexandria, is composed of Germans only—the Levant, and South America. The cities containing the greatest number of Lodges are Naples, with 10; Leghorn and Genoa, 5; Palermo and Rome, 4; Messina, Milan, and Florence, 3; and Venice, 2 each.

The seat of the Grand Orient is at Rome, the G.M. being Adriano Lemmi. It is divided into Three Chambers—for the Scots Rite 33°, a Supreme Council, under Giorgio Tomajo, as Sov. G. Com., with 174 Lodges, of which 54 are abroad—for the Craft, a Symbolic Grand Lodge, under a President, Perro Aporti, with 25 Lodges, of which 3 are abroad—and for the Rite of Memphis, a Supreme Council in Catania, under Gaetano Mondino, as President, with 4 Lodges only. The accompanying table of the Grand Bodies which have existed in Italy may be acceptable as an aide mémoire.<sup>1</sup>

PORTUGAL.

It is a well-known axiom with Freemasons, that their duty requires them to close their Lodges in the presence of a prohibition by the government of the day. We have seen this duty cheerfully submitted to in various countries, but Portugal forms an exception to the ordinary rule. In no country has the Craft been more persecuted, both by the Government and the Church; but it would appear as if the Fraternity had obstinately determined not to yield to any pressure from without. Once it had taken root, neither decrees of state nor tortures of the Inquisition ever succeeded in extirpating Freemasonry in Portugal, and at no time did Lodges cease to exist in more or less secrecy. Whilst as a law-abiding Fraternity, we must needs lament this disobedience of our Portuguese brethren—as admirers of devotion and courage, we may be permitted to appreciate their resolution and endurance.

Clavel<sup>1</sup> asserts that French deputies founded Lodges in Portugal in 1727, but this uncorroborated statement fails to inspire me with the confidence I should wish to attach to it. We touch solid ground, however, in the minutes of the G.L. of England, April 17, 1735.—“A petition from several brethren now residing in or about the City of Lisbon in Portugal, humbly praying that a Depntation may be granted to Mr. George Gordon for constituting them into a regular Lodge, the prayer of which petition was granted;” and in the St. James' Evening Post—letter from Lisbon, June 3, 1736—“by authority of the Right Honorable the Earl of Weymouth, the then G. Master of all Masons' Lodges, Mr. George Gordon, Mathematician, has constituted a Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in that City; and a great many merchants of the Factory and other people of distinction have been received and regularly made Freemasons. Lord George Graham, Lord Forrester, and a great many gentlemen belonging to the English Fleet, being brethren, were present at constituting the Lodge, and it is expected that in a short time it will be one of the greatest abroad.” This early mention of the Fleet is notable, because in after times, during the Craft's darkest hour, foreign vessels in port were extensively used as safe meeting-places for the persecuted Lodges.

Freemasonry, however, from the very first, met with a determined enemy in the Church, and the opposition of the Roman prelacy became more pronounced, after the issue of the famous Bull of Clement XII., April 27, 1738.<sup>2</sup> At last, in 1743, King John V. (1707-50) was persuaded by his entourage that the Freemasons were heretics and rebels, and issued an edict of death against them. An era of persecution and torture at the hands of the Inquisition followed; the best known case being that of Coustos.

Coustos—the son of a Swiss surgeon—was born at Berne, but emigrated, in 1716, with his father to England, where he followed the trade of a gem-cutter, and was admitted into the Fraternity. After spending twenty-two years in London he went to Lisbon with the intention of shipping for Brazil, but failing to obtain a permit from the government, settled down to his trade in the Portuguese capital. There, with two French jewellers—Mouton and Braslé—he founded a Lodge, where they were surprised—March 14, 1743—by the familiars of the Inquisition. In order to wrest from him the secrets of a Freemason, and a renunciation of his religion, Coustos was within the space of three months subjected nine times to the rack, scourged, branded, and otherwise tortured, and—June

He was sentenced to four years at the galleys as a Protestant and Freemason—but his two companions, being Catholics, to five years exile only. Mouton and Brasilé were also tortured, and the latter died in consequence of his sufferings. Coustos was claimed by the British Embassy as an English subject, and with Mouton arrived in London December 14, 1744, where they were well received and cared for by the Fraternity.<sup>1</sup>

John V. was succeeded by his son Joseph II. (1750-77). Under this liberal prince and his celebrated minister, the Marquis de Pombal, the clergy lost much of their influence, and the Jesuits were banished from the kingdom in 1761. Freemasonry recovered, and only once—in 1776—did the Inquisition attempt to suppress the Craft. This tribunal, however, was constrained to release its victims, Major D' Alincoart and Dom Ayres de Orvellas Peraçao, after fourteen months' detention.<sup>2</sup>

Joseph was succeeded by his daughter Maria, married to her uncle Dom Pedro. Pombal was dismissed, and the clergy once more gained the upper hand. The most talented men of the kingdom, being Freemasons, only saved their lives by flight, and the celebrated mathematician, Da Cunha, lay in the dungeons of the Inquisition from 1778 to 1780. In 1792 the Queen was attacked by incurable melancholia, and her son John was made Prince Regent. Matters then became worse, and in the same year the Governor of Madeira was ordered to deliver over all Freemasons to the Inquisition. A few only escaped to America, their vessel on entering New York harbor flying a white flag with the inscription "Asylum Quærimus." Nevertheless the Fraternity was not exterminated. Lodges are known to have existed at Coimbra, 1793-94; at Oporto, 1795; and others were held in 1796-97 on board various ships in port. The frigate "Phoenix" is especially mentioned in this connection, and there soon arose five or six Lodges in Lisbon as well as elsewhere. Three at the capital—Nos. 315, 319, and 330—are shown on the roll of the (Atholl) Grand Lodge of England, under the years 1798, 1799, and 1807-13 respectively. Numerous others doubtless penetrated into the kingdom with the British regiments to which they were attached. Brethren of the Sea and Land services appear to have worked together in great harmony, and the records of the Grand Lodge last referred to, show that many seafaring men became members of Lodge, No. 332, held in the 58th Foot, whilst that regiment was quartered at Lisbon in 1811.

A committee of six was appointed to act as a Grand Lodge, and other Lodges were established. Great secrecy was observed; the places of meeting were continually changed, and often whilst some members worked in the upper story of a house, the remainder, with their wives and daughters, danced on the lower in order to deceive the police.<sup>3</sup> Although this persecution lasted until 1806, it is during this very period that some remarkable Masonic manifestations occurred. The first Grand Lodge for Portugal was erected, and the first G.M., Dom Sebastian José de Sampaio e Mello de Castro e Luziguanô (brother of the Marquis de Pombal), a counsellor of the High Court (or, according to Thory, Egaz-Moniz), was appointed in 1800 (or 1802). This new Grand Lodge, acting through four Lodges, "empowered Dom Hypolite Joseph da Costa to act as their representative at the Grand Lodge of England, and in their name to solicit a regular authority to practise the rites of the Order under the English banner and protection. After mature deliberation it was determined that every encouragement should be given to the brethren in Portugal; and a treaty was immediately entered into and signed by Da Costa and Haseltine—then Treasurer of the Grand Lodge, and approved by the Grand Master, whereby it was agreed that as long as the Portuguese Lodges should conform to the ancient constitutions of the Order they should be empowered to have a representative in the Grand Lodge of England, and that the Grand Lodge of England should have a representative in the Grand Lodge of Portugal, and that the brethren belonging to each Grand Lodge should be equally entitled to the privileges of the other."<sup>1</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Mr. G. W. Speth remembers taking part in Lodge work under exactly similar circumstances and surroundings (Lodge above, ball below) in 1870-71 in Havana, Cuba. In his case, however, although the consequences of detection would have inevitably been serious, at least no Inquisition was to be feared. He pleads as an excuse for infringing the law that he was very young, both as a man and a Mason.

In 1807 war broke out between France and Portugal, because the ports were not closed to the British fleet. On November 29 Prince John, the Regent, left for Brazil, and the next day the French entered Lisbon under General Junot. With the presence of the French troops Freemasonry of course showed itself openly; but in order to counteract the evident desire of the French to bring the National Grand Lodge under the control of the Grand Orient at Paris, the G.M. closed the Grand Lodge pro tem. in 1808. The Junto, or Provisional Government, does not appear to have been inimical to Freemasonry after Junot's forced evacuation, and the presence of the English troops could not fail to have been beneficial. Marshal Soult's invasion in 1809 was of too short duration to produce any effect, but after his departure a deplorable, though ridiculous, incident occurred. The English Masons assembled publicly, and walked in procession with banners and emblems of the Society. This remarkable spectacle the Portuguese troops mistook—not unnaturally—for one of the pageants of the Romish Church, and therefore turned out in order to render the usual military honors; but on discovering their error the soldiers—aided by the populace—maltreated the itinerant Craftsmen, which resulted in a fresh series of persecutions at the hands of the Inquisition. At Massena's arrival in 1810 the Craft was re-established, but his retreat was followed by renewed persecutions, thirty at least of the foremost Freemasons of Lisbon being deported to the Azores in September of that year. But the Fraternity still persevered, and in 1812 there were no less than thirteen Lodges in Lisbon alone. Meanwhile, in 1809, the G.M., Dom Sebastian—whose other names may with convenience be omitted—had been succeeded by Dom Fernando Romão d'Alaide Teive, and the latter was followed in 1816 by General Gomez Freire d'Andrade. This Grand Master's fate was untoward; he lived at enmity with Lord Beresford, and having been accused of inciting a revolt against the English commander, was, with eleven co-conspirators, sentenced to death October 15, 1817. This was followed—March 30, 1818—by an edict of John VI.—whose mother, the Queen Maria, had died March 20, 1816—dated from Rio de Janeiro, threatening the Freemasons once more with death and divers other but minor terrors, which produced no effect whatever except a return to the most inviolable secrecy.

Beresford having left, there are to chronicle, a popular revolt in 1820, a Provisional Regency, the arrival from Brazil of the King, and his acceptance of a constitution abolishing the Inquisition, establishing trial by jury, etc., in 1821. Naturally enough Freemasonry again emerged from concealment, and in 1822 the King's eldest son, Dom Pedro, having accepted the Grand Mastership of Brazil, the Lisbon Lodges, eight in number, elected João da Cunha Souto Major, G.M., for Portugal.

In 1823, however, a counter-revolution of Royalists triumphed, and re-instituted John VI. in all his autocratic privileges. Freemasons were once more persecuted—by an edict of June 20, 1823—and his second son, Dom Miguel, headed a proclamation of April 30, 1824, with these words, "Long live the King! Long live Roman Catholicism! Death and Destruction to the sacrilegious Freemasons!"

A proclamation by the Cardinal Archbishop Souza, published the same evening, so inflamed the minds of the rabble, that many people were murdered on the mere suspicion of being Freemasons.<sup>1</sup>

In 1826 King John died, and his eldest son Pedro disjoined the crowns of Brazil and Portugal—conferring the latter on his daughter Maria da Gloria, a minor, married to her uncle Dom Miguel. With the aid of the ultra Royalists, Miguel proclaimed himself king, so that in 1831 Dom Pedro abdicated Brazil, returned to Portugal, and in 1834 defeated and banished the usurper, his brother and son-in-law. Pedro himself died in September, 1834, and the Cortes declared his daughter of full age. During all this troubled time the Lodges had been under a ban, and the brothers dispersed in all parts of Europe and Brazil. Under these circumstances some had elected Da Silva Carvalho, and others the Marquis Saldanha, as G.M., so that on the return of the exiles in 1834 two Grand Lodges existed in Lisbon. To add to the confusion the brethren in Oporto elected a third G.M., Manuel da Silva Passos. Carvalho left Portugal in 1836, and although his Lodges, with the exception of those in the Azores, lay dormant for a while, yet the Grand Lodge was revived a few years afterwards in the person of Manuel Gonzalves da Miranda as Grand Master (1839-41). An attempt at fusion in 1837 failed, and unfortunately politics were not kept out of sight in Craft matters. For un-masonic conduct of this kind the G.M. Saldanha was deposed in 1837, and his place filled by Baron Vialla Nova da Foz-Côa in 1839; the Oporto G.L. also elected a new G.M., Da Costa Cabal, in 1841. All these three Grand Lodges followed the modern French Rite of seven degrees.<sup>2</sup>

About this time a Rose Croix Chapter was established at Lisbon under the Grand Chapter of Prince Masons of Ireland. This, although not constituted as a Provincial Grand Orient, Chapter, or Lodge, apparently assumed, in some degree, the functions of such a body, since, by the authority last cited, Dom F. G. da Silva Pereira is described as having been its Grand Master.

In 1840, Carvalho—ci-devant G.M.—returned from Brazil with a patent from the Supreme Council 33° in that empire; erected a Lodge and a consistory 32°, which by a Brazilian patent of June 20, 1841, was—December 27—transformed into a Provincial Supreme Council of the 33° dependent on Brazil. This took the name of Grand Orient of Lusitania. It published its statutes in 1843, and in 1845 numbered no less than 17 Lodges.

To add to this multiplicity of jurisdictions we find the G.L. of Ireland warranting Lodges at Lisbon; Nos. 338, in 1839; and 339, 341, and 344,<sup>3</sup> in 1842-44; and ultimately a Provincial Grand Lodge was established (1836-72), making the fifth ruling body in Portugal. In 1848 we hear of a second Grand Orient of Lusitania asking for, but not obtaining recognition at Paris. Omitting this latter as an ephemeral appearance, we have in that year—I. A. Grand Lodge at Lisbon (French Rite), under Carvalho in the first instance, and afterwards Miranda as Grand Masters. II. A Grand Lodge also at Lisbon (French Rite), under Saldanha and Foz-Côa successively. III. A Grand Lodge at Oporto (French Rite), under Passos and Costa Cabal. IV. A Grand Orient of Lusitania (A. and A.S.R. 33°) at Lisbon, under Carvalho, G.M., dependent upon Brazil. V. An Irish Provincial Grand Lodge—de facto, if not as yet de jure—under Frederico Gnilheime da Silva Pereira at Lisbon.

In 1849 all these governing bodies, except that controlled by Pereira, united to form a Grand Orient of Portugal at Lisbon, with D'Oliveira as G.M. His successor, Alves de Mauro Contncho, unfortunately created dissatisfaction by his despotic rule, and the Scots Grand Orient of Lusitania was revived—January 31, 1859—under Connt Paraty, G.M. This Grand Orient proved itself very active, even beyond the borders, many of the Spanish Lodges owning its sway. In 1869, however, the two Grand Orientes amalgamated under Paraty as the G.O. of Lusitania. In 1872 they were joined by the Irish Lodges, leaving thus only one Grand Body in Portugal. In 1873 this G.O. ruled over 48 Lodges (12 in Lisbon and 15 in Spain); in 1885, 70 Lodges, of which 22 were in Portugal, 7 in Portuguese colonies; 32 in Spain, and 9 in Spanish colonies. Of the 22 Portuguese Lodges, 14 were in Lisbon. The present G.M. of the United Grand Lusitanian Orient is Dom Antonio Augusto D'Aguiar, and the brethren number 2800. The President or acting G.M. is Dom João Eusebio D'Oliveira. The Grand Orient comprises four subsections—a Symbolic Grand Lodge, under a President, for Lodges working Masonry only; a Supreme Council of the 33° for the A. and A.S. Rite; a Supreme Rose Croix Chapter for the French Rite, and—mirabile dictu—a Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, the only one except in Spain and Rumania outside of Anglo-Saxon Masonry.<sup>1</sup>

In 1881 occurred a movement of much significance. Five Lodges, possibly tired of the control, direct or indirect, exerted by the high degrees, combined to erect a Grand Lodge of the Craft, totally independent of all other degrees beyond the three of ancient Freemasonry. Connt Paraty, the head of the Grand Orient, was called to preside also over the Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, which was formed on the English model. The movement does not appear to have been of English origin—because in the first list of Grand Office-Bearers only one English name is to be found, and that in a very subordinate position—but to have been purely national. Under Paraty's guidance, this Grand Lodge was brought back into the fold of the Grand Orient, which was subdivided into three Grand Bodies or Chambers, each having sole control over its own rite—a Supreme Council 33° for the Scots, a Supreme Chapter Rose Croix for the French, and a Sublime Chamber or Grand Lodge for the Craft. For matters of general interest these three Chambers were united in one assembly, of which the Presidency was confided to Mig. Bapt. Maciel, who, on Paraty's death, was appointed his successor as head of all though irregularly—under the Rose Croix Chapter, of which Pereira was the "Grand Master". This influential personage, who was Minister of Justice 1859-66, died in 1871. In the following year the Irish Prov. Grand Lodge joined the United Grand Orient, and the Rose Croix Chapter returned its warrant.

three Chambers and G.M. of the Grand Orient ad interim. An official bulletin informs us, that on December 6, 1883, at a convention of thirteen Lodges—all, with two exceptions, meeting at Lisbon—a Grand Lodge, totally distinct from, and independent of the Grand Orient was organized, and the following officers elected:—Dr. Jose Dias Ferreira, G.M.; J. d'A. de Franco Netto, D.G.M.; and Cesar de Castello Bianco, Grand Secretary. There are thus in existence two Grand Lodges, one siding with and forming a Chamber of the Grand Orient, and the other bearing the former title of "G. Lodge of A.F. and A. Masons, founded 1737, re-established 1881." The latter has an apparent following of 24 Lodges. Why claim is laid to the earlier of these dates I am unable to conjecture, but although spoiling the unity which the Craft had so recently attained, it is impossible not to wish this body success. It has struck the right keynote in bidding its high degree friends go their ways in peace, to add as many degrees as their humor may suggest, but to cease from troubling the Craft.

SPAIN.

Spain disputes with Portugal the sad distinction of having most persistently and relentlessly persecuted its own children on account of their attachment to the Craft; and, like Portugal, it is somewhat remarkable for still practising Royal Arch Masonry. But unlike its sister kingdom, it has not yet succeeded in bringing its Lodges under one single jurisdiction, and presents at the present day a picture of confusion in Craft matters unequalled elsewhere. It is much to be deplored that the partisans of these various Grand Lodges should have allowed their predilections to color their historical statements. Indeed, to such a length has this been carried, that the later history of the Craft in Spain is more difficult to unravel than the earlier one; and although no source of information has been overlooked, I am unable to place on record the events of the last twenty years without entertaining some misgivings as to the accuracy of my own narrative. Masonic news from the Peninsula reaches us but rarely—in small and unsatisfactory quantities—and no two accounts are reconcilable with each other. I must therefore beg my readers to regard the description of this period (1868-85) as a conscientious attempt to lay some few facts before them, but by no means to pin their faith upon my narrative. Having confessed my inability to cope with the difficulties before me, I trust any errors that may be discovered will be leniently dealt with.

Before proceeding with our main subject it will be well to advert to two small territories, which, though forming a part of Spain—one geographically, the other politically—yet require separate mention. I allude to Gibraltar and Minorca.

A Loc.—"of St John of Jerusalem," No. 51—was constituted at Gibraltar by the Grand Lodge of England in 1728; and three years later, Captain James Commerford was appointed Prov. G.M. for Andalusia, which, as we learn from the terms of subsequent patents, comprised the Rock or fortress, "and places adjacent." Commerford was succeeded by Colonel J. G. Montrésor, 1752-53, Chief Engineer, one of the founders of No. 51—St. John—but who embarked in 1754 for America. Further Lodges were established under the same sanction, in 1762—Inhabitants; 1786—Hiram's; 1789—Calpean; and in 1791—Friendship. The first Lodge under the Schismatic Grand Lodge of England—No. 58—was formed in 1756, but was short-lived, and after this we meet, in 1773, with the same quarrels between the so-called "Moderns" and "Ancients," as prevailed in the mother country of Freemasonry.<sup>1</sup> The latter, however, were triumphant in the struggle which ensued,<sup>2</sup> and they established at Gibraltar Nos. 148—originally constituted in the Royal Artillery in 1767 (now St. John's); 202 (now Inhabitants), in 1777; and a Prov. Grand Lodge in 1786. The Lodges under the earlier sanction continued to be shown on the lists until 1813, but only one—apparently a union of the Calpean and Friendship—was carried forward at the Union. Prince Edward—afterwards Duke of Kent—was appointed Prov. G.M. in 1790.<sup>3</sup> In 1792 there were no less than eleven<sup>4</sup> Military Lodges at Gibraltar, and the records from which I quote, mention three Lodges of the same character, as having recently left the garrison, besides a warrant, "No. 61 (Irish) held by the Officers of the 32<sup>d</sup> Foot, but for neglect erased." Many Lodges were locally constituted by the Atholl Provincial Grand Lodge, of which no record has been preserved, but in 1804 there were at least nine holding provincial warrants.

Two English Lodges—now both extinct—"Ordnance" and "Calpean," were established in 1819 and 1822; and there are at present in existence three Lodges—St. John's, Inhabitants, and Friendship—under the Grand Lodge of England; two under Scotland—St. Thomas (1876), and "Al Moghreb al Akas" (1882); and one—No. 325 (1826)—under the Grand Lodge of Ireland.

The Masonic annals of Minorca afford an interesting study owing to the vicissitudes of warfare. In 1708 England took the island from Spain, and held it until 1758, when it was taken by the French. We regained possession in 1763, but in 1782 once more lost it—on this occasion to Spain. Again, from 1798 until the peace of Amiens, 1802, the English flag floated over the island. During the first of these three periods Lord Byron—G. M. 1747-51—appointed Lient.-Col. James Adolphus Oughton<sup>5</sup> Prov. G.M. for Minorca,<sup>6</sup> and the following four Lodges were constituted—Nos. 213-215 in 1750, and No. 216 in 1751.<sup>7</sup> These Lodges were carried forward at the renumbering in 1756,<sup>8</sup> but dropping out in 1766, the places of original Nos. 213-215 (then 141-143) were assigned to three American Lodges in 1768.<sup>9</sup> Again during the third British occupation, a "Lodge in the Island of Minorca," No. 586, was established in 1800. Turning to the Atholl Register, we find that Lodges Nos. 141 and 117, were erected on the island in 1766 and 1770, and a Provincial Grand Lodge in 1772. Even in our own times Minorca seems to have been regarded as "unoccupied country," for French Lodges were formed at Mahon by the A. and A.S.R. 33rd in 1860, and 1870.

The first Lodge in Spain was founded by the Duke of Wharton in his own apartments in a French hotel at Madrid, in February 15, 1728. Two months later—April 17—this Lodge, through its Worshipful Master Mr. Ch. Labelle (or Labelye), informed the Grand Lodge of the fact, but applied nevertheless to the same body—March 29, 1729—to be properly constituted, and the request was acceded to.<sup>10</sup> The Lodge received the number 50 on the list of Lodges, and was the first Lodge warranted in foreign lands by the Grand Lodge of England. It was erased in 1768, in company with the first Paris Lodge "Louis d'Argent," and the Duke of Richmond's Lodge at Aubigny' (a notable trio), either for having ceased to meet, or neglected to conform to the laws of the Society.'

The next step introduces the first of the persecutions which, until quite recently, Spanish Freemasons have suffered, and like their Portuguese brethren, doggedly withstood. In 1740 King Philip V. approved the Papal Bull of 1738, and issued a confirmatory edict for his possessions. The Inquisition discovered a Lodge, and eight of its members were condemned to the galleys.'

But the Fraternity persisted in meeting, and we have proofs that at Barcelona a German chaplain visited a Lodge in 1743. Indeed the Lodges increased in spite of all difficulties, and—July 2, 1751—Father Joseph Torrubia, a member of the Inquisition, obtained from Ferdinand VI. a further decree condemning Masons to death without the benefit of a trial of any kind. It is affirmed that Torrubia traitorously caused himself to be initiated in order to betray every member's name to the Inquisitors, and his report mentions at that date 97 (!) Lodges in Spain. Meetings nevertheless continued to be held, even at the house of the British Ambassador (1753) in Madrid, and the "Freemasons' Calendar" of 1776 alludes to an Independent Lodge in Spain. According to Don Rafael Sunyé, Spanish Freemasonry declared itself independent of England in 1767, and elected as Grand Master the Prime Minister of Charles III., Count d'Aranda, who had in the spring of the year procured the banishment of the Jesuits. This would provide a reason for the Madrid Lodge being struck off the roll in 1768 as mentioned above. In 1780 this Grand Lodge became permeated with French ideas, and took the name of Grand Orient. In 1795 Count d'Aranda having lost his liberty, his nominee, the Count de Montijo, was elected G.M. French ideas made further strides, and in 1806 the Royal Order of Scotland at Rouen was enabled to found a Spanish Grand Lodge of the Order at Xeres,' of which little more is known. This appears to have been followed by the erection of a real Scottish (not Scots) Lodge in 1807, the "Desired Re-Union," No. 276, on the roll of the Grand Lodge of Scotland; and in the same year, James Gordon was appointed Prov. G.M. "over all the Lodges under that jurisdiction," "east of Balbos in Andalusia." About this time appeared on the scene the Count de Tilly, brother of De Grasse-Tilly,' a bitter enemy of Buonaparte, who made himself famous in the south of Spain under the name of Gusman. Like his brother, Tilly was a staunch adherent of the A. and A.S.R., and—December 17, 1808— assembled several brothers at Aranjuez, where he constituted a Supreme Council of the 33° for Spain. At this time Freemasonry was openly practised in Spain without fear of persecution, for on the one hand the Craft was protected by the French armies who had invaded the country, whilst on the other hand it enjoyed the goodwill of the British troops who were assisting the legitimate sovereign, Ferdinand VII. On June 6, 1808, Joseph Napoleon was made King of Spain, and Spanish Lodges under the Grand Orient of France increased daily. The first of these was established as early as January 22, 1807, at Cadiz

In October, 1809, a Grand Orient of Spain, dependent upon the G.O. at Paris, was erected in the very dungeons of the Inquisition itself at Madrid, under the auspices of King Joseph, to which was attached a Grand Tribunal of the 31.° The Grand Master was Azuiza, a former Minister of State. Grasse-Tilly founded a Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33° in opposition to that of his brother, and in alliance with the last formed Grand Orient, whose G.M., Azanza, also became Sov. G. Com. of the new rite. At this epoch, therefore, we have four Grand Bodies: 1st, The Grand Lodge of 1767, converted in 1780 into a Grand Orient under Montijo; 2d, the Supreme Council of 1808, under the younger Tilly; 3d, the Grand Orient of 1809; and 4th, the Supreme Council of 1811, both under Azanza—who was succeeded as the head of the last two bodies by the celebrated patriot Arguëlles.

The return to power of Ferdinand VII. inaugurated a fresh persecution of the Craft. In 1814—May 4—he abolished the constitution, re-established the Inquisition, and declared Freemasons guilty of treason. This was followed in September by the arrest and imprisonment of twenty-five members of the Craft in Madrid, amongst whom may be mentioned General Alava, Wellington's Aide-de-Camp.<sup>1</sup> Although the plan followed of handing suspected persons over to the barbarous Inquisition is of course indefensible, the attempted suppression of the Craft was only too well justified in those troublous times on account of its unhappy interference with Spanish politics. To this admixture of politics and Freemasonry I am induced to ascribe the obstinacy with which the Fraternity resisted all attempts to stamp it out. Far from succumbing, it consolidated its position, and at its head were always the liberal leaders of the day. Thus in 1818 Arguëlles, Riego, the brothers San Miguel, and others took part in important deliberations in Madrid, resulting in a fusion between the two Supreme Councils, Riego becoming G.M. This was followed by the popular movement in 1820, headed by Riego, which compelled the king—July 9—to regrant the liberal constitution, abolish the Inquisition, and expel the Jesuits.

For three years masonry flourished;<sup>2</sup> then followed a curious state of affairs. Foreign intervention was sought by Ferdinand, and with the assistance of French troops—formerly such enthusiastic propagators of the Craft—the Brotherhood was suppressed. French bayonets re-established Ferdinand in his old prerogatives, Riego was shot, and—August 1, 1824—the king issued a new edict, by which all Freemasons who failed to deliver up their papers and renounce the Society in thirty days, were to be, on discovery, hanged in the ensuing twenty-four hours—without trial of any kind. In pursuance thereof—September 9, 1825—a Lodge having been surprised at Granada, seven of its members were given a short shrift and gibbeted accordingly, whilst the candidate for admission was let off with eight years of forced labor. In 1828 the French troops evacuated Spain, but without having “stamped out” Freemasonry, for in 1829, fresh signs of its existence having been observed in Barcelona, Lieut.-Col. Galvez was hanged, and two other members of the Craft were condemned to the galleys for life.

In spite of all this, however, the Craft continued to consolidate itself, although compelled to exercise the greatest secrecy in all its proceedings.<sup>3</sup> One of the members of the United Supreme Council at this time was no less a personage than Don Francisco de Bour-

<sup>3</sup> Much which precedes and follows rests on the sole authority of Don Rafael Sunyé, 33°, whose sketch of Spanish Masonry in the Monde Maçonique has been reprinted with more or less exactitude by other journals of the Craft. Either the writer has had access to archives hitherto preserved from public ken, or he has most ingeniously dovetailed his account with the known facts. As I have been unable to find any palpable discrepancies, as these facts—if such they be—were naturally bon. We may also mention General San Miguel, the minister Lopez, Magnan, and others. In 1829, Don Francisco having been elected G.M. of the Grand Orient, and Sov. Com. of the A. and A.S.R. 33°—the earliest Grand Orient (1767) united with the one under his leadership, and thus for a time formed one sole jurisdiction in Spain, working the English, French, and—so-called—Scottish Rites. The accession of Queen Isabella II. in 1833 did not suffice to relieve the Craft from the necessity of secrecy, but we hear nothing more of active persecution. An anonymous Grand Orient of Spain announced its existence to the G.O. of France, and sent in its statutes—signed April 20, 1843<sup>1</sup>—with a list of members all designated by pseudonyms. In 1848 it called itself the Grand Orient of Hesperia. The G.O. of France refused recognition on account of the secrecy in which it had shrouded itself, and even founded a Lodge of its own at Barcelona.<sup>2</sup> At the head of this Grand Lodge was Don Ramon Maria Calatrava.<sup>3</sup>

Meanwhile, in 1848, fresh persecutions had broken out during the administration of Marshal Narvaez. Don Francisco, excommunicated by the Pope, fled the country, delegating his authority to Charles Magnan. Under this administration the Lodges were neither more nor less than secret political associations, until circa 1854, when the Craft once more obtained toleration. This is ascribed to the alleged fact that Don Francisco d'Assisi, the queen's consort, was the W.M. of a Lodge held in the palace itself. Of the succeeding period but little is really known, though there are notices on record of Lodges in various cities, and of one founded by France in Minorca (1860), also of a Lodge composed exclusively of Englishmen in Madrid.<sup>4</sup> But the Grand Orient under Magnan and Calatrava respectively, if not absolutely dormant, exhibited few signs of life. It would almost appear as if toleration were only to be attained at the price of a total absence of self-assertion.

The revolution of September 28, 1868, which expelled Queen Isabella, opened the country to the free exercise of the rites of Masonry, but in removing the necessity for union, has had the effect of dividing the Society into more cliques than can be distinctly described. The statements respecting the rise of these parties, their subsequent history, and their present state, are so contradictory and vague that the student loses all feeling of certainty.<sup>5</sup> One fact alone stands out clearly, that the Grand Orient of Lusitania (Port-kept secret at the time, and as they are well within the memory of the present generation, and therefore susceptible of revelation when secrecy is no longer demanded, I incline to credit them. Moreover, it should not escape our recollection that the position of the writer—33°—would, not improbably, give him access to much valuable evidence, dispersed throughout the documentary walls and strays preserved in the jealously guarded Chancelleries of the (so-called) high degrees. Cf. The Freemason. April 3, May 8, and June 19, 1880; and the Freemason's Chronicle, August 30, and September 6, 1884.

<sup>3</sup> Findel pp. 654-656; Calatrava—an opponent of Napoleon—lived in exile in London until 1836, was chosen G.M. in 1847, and filled the office until his death, February 28, 1876.

<sup>4</sup> Handbuch, s.v. Spanien. A Lodge—No. 1024, "Morality and Philanthropy"—was formed at Cadiz under the Grand Lodge of England in 1857, the warrant of which was returned in 1875.

<sup>5</sup> As late as July 30, 1879, the United Grand Orient of the sister kingdom (Portugal) declared itself incapable of unravelling the tangled web of Spanish Freemasonry, or of discovering the most legitimate Grand Lodge, or the one likely to prove so in the long run (Boletim Oficial, 1880, p. 76).

tugal) commenced to warrant Lodges in Spain, and at this day numbers almost as large as following as any other of the rival Grand Bodies.

The first step of importance appears to have been the revival of Calatrava's National Grand Orient of Spain in 1869. Contemporaneous with this was the revival under Magnan of his Grand Orient and Supreme Council. In 1870 he left for Santander, and his office was therefore transferred to Ruiz Zorilla. For this purpose Zorilla had in four days been passed from the humble position of a candidate for initiation through all the 33 degrees, one step—Knight of the East—having been conferred in the Iberian Grand Orient, a body which had been recently established in Spain by the G.O. of Portugal, a rival of the G.O. of Lusitania. G.M. Zorilla was prime minister during the short reign of Amadeus of Savoy, and during his tenure of office a treaty was entered into between the Grand Orient of Spain and Lusitania, granting a reciprocity of jurisdiction to the two contracting parties, February 12, 1872.<sup>1</sup> On the abdication of Amadeus, Ruiz Zorilla voluntarily resigned, and placed his powers at the disposal of the Craft, January 1, 1874. It was then agreed by some of the "Puissant" and "Illustrious" members of the 33° that Zorilla's reign should be considered as non avensu, null and void, and that Magnan should resume command as though his rule had never suffered interruption. Magnan appointed Carvajal as Lieut. G. Com., and immediately resigned in his favor. Carvajal was succeeded in turn as Sov. G. Com. by Ferrer, Conder, Avalos, Oriero, and Panzanoy y Almirall.

Some of the brethren, however, objecting to this resumption by Magnan as ultra vires, seceded and elected as Sov. G. Com., General La Somera in succession to Zorilla. Somera resigned after a twelvemonth in favor of Sagasta, afterwards Prime Minister, and the latter was followed by Antonio Romero Ortiz, Governor of the Bank of Spain, who, dying early in 1884, was succeeded by Don Mannel Becerra. Under Somera, 1874-75, this Grand Lodge (it has dropped the title Orient) absorbed the Iberian Grand Orient mentioned above.

Besides these two Grand Orientes there exists at present a National G.O. of Spain under the Marquis de Seoane. This National G.O. is Calatrava's Grand Orient of Hisperia, which is first heard of circa 1840-43. Calatrava must have considered himself at that date legitimately descended from the original Grand Lodge and the English Prov. G.L., for the official documents bear the following dates:—Grand Lodge, 1728;<sup>2</sup> Grand Orient, 1780; Supreme Council, 1808. Calatrava continued to be G.M. until his death, February 28, 1876.

But these three bodies not being sufficient for our Spanish brethren, a fresh schism arose in 1875. When Somera resigned—December 27, 1875—a certain Juan Antonio Perez, 30°, disapproving of Sagasta's election, induced a friend to pass him to the 33°, and erected a Grand Orient—comprising a Supreme Council and Grand Lodge—of his own. By dint of self-assertion this Grand Orient would appear to have prospered fairly well, judging from observations in the Boletim Oficial of the U.G. Lusitanian Orient for 1880, and the recognition of its Grand Lodge by several governing Craft bodies in America. I am unable to say whether it still exists, or has submitted to the authority of some other Grand Body in Spain. Perez is left unnoticed by the current Masonic journals, nor does his name appear in any of the numerous Calendars of the Craft—native and foreign—which I have consulted.

On December 28, 1879, two Lodges withdrew from the Grand Lusitanian Orient in a perfectly legal manner, and formed themselves into a Grand Central Masonic Consistory 32° at Malaga, with the professed intention of remaining independent for a time, and eventually joining the Grand Orient, which should ultimately succeed in being universally recognised.

With a similar intention 13 Lodges of this same Grand Orient withdrew from its jurisdiction at about the same time, and formed themselves into a Masonic Confederation of the Congress of Seville, extending their sway also to the 32° only. The modesty with which these two bodies refrain from establishing a Supreme Council 33° proves at least the sincerity of their protestations. At the head of this Confederation is J. L. Padilla, 33°.

A further proof of the good intentions of this Confederation may be hailed with hope and rejoicing, although it has had the effect of still further increasing the number of governing bodies. On February 7, 1881, it divested itself of all control over Freemasonry, and now declares in its very title that it has jurisdiction "over the 4th and 32nd degrees" only. This at least was a wise step, in which it followed the example set in many other countries by bodies assuming the title of Supreme Council, A. and A.S.R. 33°.

As a result, on the same date, February 7, the members of the Craft erected a Grand Spanish Independent Symbolic Lodge, "with jurisdiction over the first three degrees," at Seville, under Grand Master Castro, who has since been succeeded by Brantio Ruiz. In a circular of July 29, 1883, the number of subordinate Lodges under this Grand Body is stated to be twenty-one.

I think it quite possible that one more Grand Lodge exists—for when the Iberian Grand Orient was absorbed in 1874 by Somera, some Lodges, nine in all, increased to twelve by three seceders from Somera's Grand Lodge, were dissatisfied with the arrangement, and dissenting from the majority, revived or continued the Iberian G.O. In 1876 it reduced the 33 degrees to 7, condensing the pith of all the others, thus forming the Spanish reformed rite.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand it may be long since extinct.

All these Grand Bodies, with the exception of the one at Seville, work the A. and A.S.R. 33°; that of Perez superadds the modern French Rite of 7 degrees. Of their strength it is impossible to present any statistics, Spanish Lodges being most ephemeral in their nature. The official lists as given in the various Masonic Calendars of current date are of little avail, for they comprise Lodges which long since became extinct. Thus Becerra's Grand Lodge has an apparent following of 299 subordinate Lodges, and according to an official bulletin issued eighty-two new charters in 1882. But the Freemason of August 7, 1880, gives a list of the active Lodges under this G.M., and although the last number is 142, the total of Lodges only mounts up to 45, or about a third. If we apply this scale of proportion—where necessary—to the last lists at my disposal, we obtain (approximately)—Grand National Orient, 1885, 60 Lodges; Grand Lodge, 1885, 100; G.O. of Perez, 1881, 60; G.O. of Portugal, 1885, Lodges in Spain, 41; G.O. of France, 1886, 1; Supreme Council 33° of France, 1885, 5; G.O. of Italy, 1885, 1; and the Grand Lodge of Seville, 1885, 25. The accompanying table of Spanish Grand Lodges may help to make the subject a little less confused; but I have omitted as beside the question non-Spanish Grand Lodges which possess daughter Lodges in the Peninsula.

GREECE.

Freemasonry was late in obtaining a footing on the mainland of this kingdom, but somewhat earlier accounts come to us from what is now an integral part of the territory of Greece, viz., the Ionian Islands. These islands, in early days the prey of Naples, Genoa, and Venice, were ceded to France in 1797. They were next successively taken possession of by Russia and Turkey in 1800, by France in 1807, and by England in 1809. The G. O. of France founded a Lodge at Corfu—St. Napoleon—in 1809, and a second in 1810. In 1815 the islands were formed into the Ionian Republic under the protection of England, and a Lodge, No. 654, "Pythagoras" (to which a Royal Arch Chapter was subsequently attached), was erected at Corfu in 1837. About 1840 we hear also of a Grand Lodge of Greece at Corfu,<sup>1</sup> with Angelo Calichiopulo as G.M. He died November 13, 1842, and further information respecting this Grand Lodge is altogether wanting. Another English Lodge—No. 1182, Star of the East—was established at Zante in 1861. This and Lodge Pythagoras are still active. The Lodges under the G.O. of France (1809-10) are extinct, but two others were constituted by the same authority at Corfu—Phoenix, 1843—and at Zante—Star, 1859,—the former of which survives at this day.

On the mainland there was in existence in 1866 a Provincial Grand Lodge or Directory under the Grand Orient of Italy, with eight subordinate Lodges—at Syra, Athens, Piræus, Chalkis, Corfu, Patras, Lamia, and Argos—dating from 1860-1866. In 1867, these eight Lodges, with the consent of the G.O. of Italy, formed themselves into an independent Grand Lodge of Greece. A council of nine members to direct the Grand Lodge was appointed by the representatives of the Lodges, July 9, 1872. By this council—July 11—Prince Rhodocanakis of Scio was elected G.M., and retained the office until 1881, when he was succeeded by Nicholas Damaschino. The Grand Lodge shook off the fetters of the high degrees, but otherwise retains much of an Italian impress. A Supreme Council 33° was, however, formed at a later period for the degrees of the A. and A.S.R., with the same individuals as office-bearers as in the Grand Lodge, but without any control over or influence in the latter. Of the subordinate Lodges, six are in a flourishing condition—at Athens, 3; Piræus, Corfu, and Zante, 1 each—but the others can hardly be said to exist.

TURKEY.

Turkey can hardly be said to enter into the family of Grand Lodges at all, and possesses no independent or National Grand Lodge. Lodges, however, exist at Constantinople, Smyrna, Damascus, Beyrout, and Ephesus, hailing from England, Scotland, France, Italy, and Ireland. A warrant was also granted for a Lodge—the Royal Solomon—at Jerusalem, by the Grand Lodge of Canada in 1873! The earliest allusion to Masonry in Turkey that I have met with occurs in the St. James' Evening Post of 1738, where, in a letter from Florence, dated May 24 of that year—which has been already referred to—there appears:—"We hear from Constantinople that the Lodges of Smyrna and Aleppo are greatly increased, and that several Turks of distinction have been admitted into them."

No Lodge, however, seems to have been erected in Turkey by virtue of any warrant or patent from a legitimate governing body until February 3, 1748, when, as related at an earlier page, a Lodge was constituted at Aleppo, either by, or under the auspices of, Alexander Drummond. This worthy, however, before receiving a "provincial commission" from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, "had taken up his residence at Alexandretta in Turkey, and erected several Mason Lodges in that part of the country."

The curious manner in which the grant of an early Scottish charter was sometimes recorded, will be seen in the note below,<sup>1</sup> which evidently refers to a later Lodge established by Drummond at Aleppo, though singular to state—no corresponding entry is to be found in the books of the Grand Lodge.

Dr. Dionysius Manasse was appointed English Prov. G.M. "for all Armenia in the East Indies," by Earl Ferrers, 1762-64, and his name only disappears from the official list in 1805! Of this personage nothing further is known. Lodges came into existence, already seen, under the (Grand Lodge (and G.O.) of Geneva, in 1769 and 1787, at Constantinople and Smyrna respectively.<sup>2</sup>

After this period there is nothing to record until we approach our own times. Lodges were established at Constantinople (Pera) by the Grand Lodge of England—Oriental, No. 988—1856; by the Grand Orient of France—L'Étoile Du Bosphore—1858; and by the Grand Lodge of Ireland—166—1865. The Grand Lodge of Scotland has been represented in Turkey (Syria) since 1861 by the Palestine Lodge, No. 415, at Beyrout. The Lodges under the G.O. of Italy have been previously referred to.<sup>3</sup>

In 1859—June 1—the Grand Lodge of England was informed by the Board of General Purposes that a communication had been received from the Oriental Lodge, No. 988, at Constantinople, respecting the existence of irregular Lodges at Smyrna. The Board expressed their belief that the Lodges in question—named Ionic, Anatolia, and Benzenzia—were irregular assemblies, and that the so-called Grand Lodge of Turkey, formed of those three Lodges, was also an irregular body until the same date.

At the next meeting of Grand Lodge—June 23—the President of the Board again called attention "to what was called 'The Grand Lodge of Turkey,' and explained that it had been formed by a brother who was at Smyrna at the end of the Crimean war, and who, it was stated—but no proof had been brought forward on the subject—was in possession of an Irish warrant. That this brother made about twenty Masons, and divided them into three Lodges, which afterwards called themselves 'The Grand Lodge of Turkey.' He therefore moved—"That the W. Masters of all regular Lodges be cautioned against receiving persons claiming admission (either as Visitors or joining Members) on the ground of their having been initiated by such irregular Lodges in Smyrna'—which was ordered accordingly."<sup>1</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The following extracts from the Minutes of Lodge Canongate Kilwinning, Edinburgh, have been supplied to me by Mr. A. Mackenzie:—April 8, 1752, "The Lodge being mett according to adjournment . . . at the same time a charter for constituting a lodge at Aleppo was signed by the Most Worshipful Master and the other proper office-bearers of the Grand Lodge, and also by the office-bearers of this Lodge." June 24, 1760, "the R. W. Master Desired leave to resign that office and having accordingly declared the Chair vacant he proposed for his successor our R. W. Brother, Alexander Drummond, Esq., late His Majesty's Consul at Aleppo."

In 1861 the English Lodges were united in a District Grand Lodge under the British Ambassador, Sir Henry Bulwer, as D.G.M., who was followed in 1869 by John Porter Brown, and in 1873 by Stephen Scouloudi. The number of English Lodges within what for convenience sake may be termed the jurisdiction—for there is at present no District Grand Lodge—is ten—at Smyrna, 6; Constantinople, 3; and Ephesus, 1—an eleventh, composed of Germans, having been unable to maintain its existence. The Grand Orient of France owns 4 Lodges—Constantinople, 3; Beyrout, 1; that of Italy 3—Constantinople, 2; Damascus, 1; and the Grand Lodges of Ireland and Scotland 1 each—at Constantinople and Beyrout respectively.

The Turks, however, are said to have always had secret societies of their own, that of the Begtaschi—it is alleged—numbering many thousands of Mussulmans in its ranks, and in which brotherhood none but a true Moslem can be admitted. The Begtaschi possess certain signs and passwords by which they are enabled to distinguish "true brethren" from vagabond impostors.

The Ancient and Accepted Scots Rite is represented by a Supreme Council 33° of Turkey, founded about 1869, with J. P. Brown as Sovereign Grand Commander. In 1872 he was succeeded by His Highness Prince Halim Pasha, the present head of the Turkish high branch of the rite. The operations of this body are, however, confined to the so-called high degrees, so that Turkey can hardly be said to boast of an independent national Masonry.

ROUMANIA.

Prior to 1859 we hear nothing of Freemasonry in this principality. In that year, however, the G.O. of France warranted a Lodge in Bucharest, and the example was followed by others, so that in 1880 Lodges existed as follows:—Under the G.O. of France, 9; G.O. of Italy, 10; and the Grand Lodge of Hungary, 1. On September 8, 1880, the National Grand Lodge of Roumania was formed, and the official list of 1882 shows 19 Lodges, while that of 1884 presents us with the names of 23. But it may be observed that if Roumania began late, it lost no time in acquiring every possible grade and rite that Masonic inventors could supply. On June 24, 1881, the Supreme Council of the Rite of Memphis 95° was erected; on September 8, 1881, the Supreme Council 33° of the A. and A.S.R.; in 1882 the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons; and finally—March 10, 1883—the Supreme Grand Lodge and Temple of the Swedenborgian Rite of Roumania. The Grand Lodge follows the Memphis or Ancient and Primitive Rite, with 23 Lodges as already stated, besides 9 Rose Croix Chapters, 1 Senate of Kadosch, 1 Grand Tribunal, and the Supreme Council. The Supreme R.A. Chapter has only 1 subordinate Chapter. The A. and A.S.R. 33° possesses 4 Lodges and 3 Chapters, and the Swedenborgians, 2 Lodges. The Grand Master of one and all these bodies is O. Moroin, Captain of infantry.

Roumania is a small province, but the wide world itself could scarcely offer a more choice selection of pretended Masonic wares.

SERVIA.

In Belgrade, the capital, there are two Lodges under the Grand Orient of Italy.

MALTA.

This small link in England's chain around the globe has never possessed a Grand Lodge of its own, but deserves mention, because at the time of the revival, and until the close of the last century, it was an independent state governed by the military order of the Knights of Malta. It has been repeated ad nauseam by foreign writers that the Knights were inimical to the Craft, but so far from this being the case, it has been clearly shown by a recent writer<sup>1</sup> that as individuals they were in many instances staunch supporters of it, and that only officially, and under papal pressure, did the Grand Masters of the Order reluctantly interfere. Acting under this compulsion the G.M. in "1740 caused the Bull of Clement XII. to be published in that island, and forbade the meetings of the Freemasons." "In 1741 the Inquisition pursued the Freemasons at Malta. The G.M. proscribed their assemblies under severe penalties, and six Knights were banished from the island in perpetuity for having assisted at a meeting."<sup>2</sup>

But shortly afterwards Masonry was practised without any great effort at concealment, for an unchartered (or independent) Lodge which dissolved in 1771, reassembled July 2, 1788, under its old title of Secrecy and Harmony. The Master and Deputy Master were Tommasi and De Lovas, both Grand Crosses of the Order, and all the other officers were Knights. A letter of this Lodge is extant, and has been reprinted.<sup>3</sup> In 1789—March 30—the Lodge was constituted by the Grand Lodge of England as No. 539.

The more recent history of Freemasonry in Malta may be very shortly summed up. In 1815 Waller Rodwell Wright was appointed Prov. G.M., and his district was subsequently enlarged so as to embrace the whole of the Mediterranean. Under his successor, Dr. Burrows, Gibraltar and Malta became a linked province, but each at the present day possesses its own District G.M. Tunis was incorporated with the Malta district in 1869.

In Malta itself there are six Lodges, five English—Nos. 349, 407, 515, 1923, and 1926—and one Irish—No. 287, formed in 1851—whilst at Tunis there are two—Nos. 1717 and 1835—both of which are on the roll of the G.L. of England. In the island itself, or rather at Valetta, the capital, where all the Maltese Lodges assemble, the membership, as a matter of course, shows a large military element.

CHAPTER XXIX.

FREEMASONRY IN ASIA—AFRICA—WEST INDIES—MEXICO
—CENTRAL AMERICA—SOUTH AMERICA—AUSTRAL ASIA—OCEANIA.

FREEMASONRY IN ASIA.

IT has been the practice of Masonic writers to pass very lightly over the history of Freemasonry in non-European countries, and to exclude almost from mention the condition or progress of the Craft in even the largest Colonies or Dependencies within the sovereignty of an Old World power. Thus we are told by Findel that "the Lodges existing in these quarters of the globe were one and all under the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, Holland, or France, and therefore their history forms an inseparable part of that of the countries in question." With all deference, however, the position here laid down must be respectfully demurred to. In the East and West Indies—and elsewhere—the natives of many countries commingled, Lodges existed under a variety of jurisdictions, and if an intelligent appreciation of Freemasonry is best attained by comparing one Masonic system with another, the brethren at a distance from Europe enjoyed in many cases opportunities denied to those residing in London, Paris, or Berlin. The most popular and extensively diffused of the Masonic Innovations which either claim an equality with, or a superiority over, the Grand Authority of the Craft, was cradled in the Greater Antilles; whilst in the Lesser Antilles—as in the East Indies—British, French, and Dutch Lodges existed side by side. Indeed, in some of these islands, there were, as will shortly appear, Lodges under still other jurisdictions than those already enumerated, and the reader desirous of studying the Masonic history of the West Indies, would, in the absence of any further materials to facilitate his inquiry, be left very much in the position of an astronomer without a telescope, who might seek to compute the path of a planet by conjecture.

I shall therefore do my best, in all cases where there has been a conflict of jurisdictions, to enable those of my readers who are especially interested in the department of inquiry we are now pursuing, to take what I may venture to term "a bird's-eye view" of Freemasonry—both in a general and contemporaneous aspect—as existing at any time in the various portions of the earth's surface which fall within the purview of the present chapter.

According to Rebold, "After Holland had become incorporated with the French Empire (July, 1810), the Grand Orient of France assumed the control of all the Dutch Lodges which then existed, with the exception of those of the Indies, which remained under the obedience which had created them, and which carried on the title of Grand Lodge of the United Provinces of the Low Countries."'

Thus, for a time and during the temporary obliteration of Holland as a kingdom, what had been the Colonial Lodges of that monarchy, became, in strictness, the only component members of the Grand Lodge.

In another way, as will be presently narrated, the Provincial Grand Lodge of Bengal, in British India, became, on more than one occasion, in everything but name, a Grand Lodge, independent of the mother country, and unless its proceedings formed the subject of a separate inquiry, the student who in all good faith accepted the assurance of Findel, that the history of Masonry in Hindostan was inseparable from that of England, would vainly search the archives of the Premier Grand Lodge of the World, for the names of Lodges that never appeared on her roll, or for an account of transactions that were never entered in her records.

INDIA.

BENGAL.—In 1728 a deputation was granted by the Grand Lodge of England to George Pomfret, Esq., authorizing him "to open a new Lodge in Bengal." Of this personage nothing further is known; but under Captain Ralph Farwinter, who in the following year succeeded him as "Provincial Grand Master of India," a Lodge was duly established in 1730, which in the Engraved Lists is distinguished by the arms of the Company, and is described as No. 72, at Bengal, in the East Indies.

The next P.G.M.s were James Dawson, temp. incert., and Zech. Gee, who held the office in 1740; after whom came the Honorable Roger Drake, appointed April 10, 1755. The last named was Governor of Calcutta at the time of the attack made on the settlement by Surajah Dowlah in 1756. Drake escaped the horrors of the Black Hole by deserting his post and flying to the shipping; but though present at the re-taking of Calcutta in January, 1757, by the forces under Clive and Watson, it is improbable—after the calamity which befell the Settlement—that he resumed the duties of his Masonic office.

The minutes of Grand Lodge inform us that William Mackett, Prov. G.M. of Calcutta, was present at a meeting of that body, November 17, 1760, and we learn on the same authority, that at the request of the Lodges in the East India Company, "Culling Smith, Esq.," was appointed P.G.M. in 1762. At the period in question it was the custom in Bengal "to elect the Prov. G.M. annually, by the majority of the voices of the members then present, from among those who had passed through the different offices of the [Prov.] Grand Lodge, and who had served as Dep. Prov. G.M." This annual election, as soon as notified to the Grand Lodge of England, was confirmed by the G.M. without its being thought an infringement of his prerogative.

In accordance with this practice Samuel Middleton was elected P.G.M. (circa) 1767; but in passing I may briefly observe, that a few years previously a kind of roving commission had been granted by Earl Ferrers—1762-64—to "John Bluvitt, commander of the Admiral Watson, Indiaman, for East India, where no other Provincial is to be found."

Middleton's election was confirmed—October 31, 1768—and as the Dispensation forwarded by the Grand Secretary was looked upon as abrogating the practice of annual elections, he accordingly held the office of Prov. G.M. until his death in 1775.<sup>1</sup>

The records of the Provincial Grand Lodge only reach back to 1774, and it will therefore be convenient if, before leaning on their authority, I give a preliminary outline of the progress of Masonry in Bengal from the erection of the first Lodge in 1730.

A second Lodge soon after sprang into existence, which, becoming too numerous, seven of its members were constituted—April 16, 1740—by the Prov. Grand Lodge into a new and regular Lodge. Of the former nothing further is known; but the Grand Lodge of England, on the petition of the latter, ordered "the said Lodge to be enrolled (as requested) in the list of regular Lodges, agreeable to the date of their Constitution."<sup>2</sup>

A Lodge—No. 221—was formed at "Chandernagore, ye chief French Settlement," in 1752.<sup>3</sup> Others sprang up at Calcutta, 1761—No. 275, now Lodge of Industry and Perseverance, No. 109; and at Patna and Burdwan, 1768—Nos. 354 and 363, erased in 1790. As the last named, however, were styled respectively the 8th, 9th, and 10th Lodges, some others of local constitution must have been erected.

Five Lodges—Nos. 441-445—were warranted in 1772, the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Lodges of Bengal. These were at Dacca, Calcutta, and with the 1st, 3d, and 2d Brigades respectively. All, however, with the exception of the 6th Lodge, No. 442, Calcutta—afterwards "Unanimity"—were erased in 1790.<sup>4</sup>

The 10th and 11th Lodges of Bengal—Nos. 452 and 453—were added to the roll in 1773, and the 12th—No. 482—in 1775. The former were at Moorshedabad and Calcutta respectively; whilst the latter was "with the 3d Brigade." No. 453, which underwent many vicissitudes, appears later as Lodge Humility with Fortitude; whilst No. 482 is described in 1793 as the Lodge of St. George in the East, and in the following year—having then become No. 316—as the Lodge of True Friendship, with the 3d Brigade.

Returning to the year 1774, there appear, from the records of the Prov. Grand Lodge, to have been at that time only three Lodges in Calcutta, viz., (local) Nos. 1, Star in the East—constituted in 1740 as the third, but which became the first, Lodge of Bengal on its predecessor of 1730 dropping out in 1770; 2, Industry and Perseverance<sup>5</sup> and, 3 Humility with Fortitude. Besides these, however, there were Lodges at Chandernagore, Patna, Burdwan, Dacca, and Moorshedabad, and also at some of the military stations or with the army brigades. The Provincial Grand Lodge under England seems to have worked in perfect harmony with a similar body under Holland,<sup>6</sup> "The Grand Lodge of Solomon at Chinsura;" and the officers and members of the two Societies exchanged visits and walked together in processions.

In 1775—February 15—the Prov. Grand Lodge, "taking into consideration the propriety of preserving concord and unanimity, recommend it to the Brethren who call themselves 'Scott and Elect,' that they do lay aside the wearing of red ribbons, or any other

His Highness the Maharajah of Cooch-Behar, G. C. T. E., C. B., P. G. W.

This distinguished Indian Prince was born in 1862. His rule in India has been significant for its enlightened methods. He was initiated into Freemasonry August 27, 1881, in Dalhousie Lodge, Bengal, is a charter member of Lodge 2,446, which bears his own name, and a very active worker in Freemasonry. In 1887, the jubilee year of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, the order of Knight Grand Commander of the Indian Empire was conferred on this illustrious brother, and in the same year he became Past Warden of the Grand Lodge of England.

marks of distinction but such as are proper to the Three Degrees, or to the Grand Lodge as such"—a request, we are told, which was cheerfully complied with.

In the same year Middleton died, and in 1776 Charles Stafford Pleydell was elected in his room; but the confirmation of the Grand Lodge of England was withheld until 1778. The latter was succeeded by Philip Milner Dacres, under whose presidency the Prov. Grand Lodge of Bengal had a very brief existence. It assembled for the last time January 25, 1781. Doubtless, the war in the Carnatic, which broke out about that time, had much to do with its dissolution, and Masonry in India was very nearly swept away by it. Every Lodge in Calcutta, where alone in Bengal Masonry may be said to have existed, was extinguished, with the exception of "Industry and Perseverance," and even there the light glimmered feebly. But the members of that Lodge nobly determined that the light should not go out.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was reopened July 18, 1785, under the presidency of George Williamson, a former Deputy P.G.M., who, on the same date, produced a patent from England, appointing him Acting P.G.M., and directed that a meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge should be held a fortnight later for the express purpose of electing a Grand Master.<sup>1</sup>

The election, however, did not take place until November 14, when four votes were cast for Williamson, and six for Edward Fenwick, a former Grand Warden.

The new Prov. G.M. was installed March 17, 1786, although the patent granted to Williamson clearly indicated that he was to retain his acting appointment until the confirmation from London of the person who might be elected to the office. This led to serious disagreements, which harassed the Fraternity for some years. Williamson was supported by the Grand Lodge of England, but the Prov. Grand Lodge stontly refused to yield to its mandate;<sup>2</sup> and in spite of repeated protests by the Prov. G.M. de jure, Fenwick continued to exercise all the duties of that office, until his election was confirmed, May 5, 1788.<sup>3</sup>

An interesting account of the state of Masonry in Bengal appears in a letter of February 6, 1788, from the Prov. Grand Lodge to Grand Secretary White, from which I extract the following:—

"We earnestly wish to see the whole number of Lodges which existed in 1773 or 1774 re-established. But the Subordinates at Patna, Burdwan, Dacca, and Moorshedabad now consist of such small societies, and these so liable to change, that we must confess it rather to be our wish than our hope to see Lodges established at any of these places.

<sup>1</sup> At this assembly, the Wardens of Lodge "Star in the East" said their meetings had been interrupted, because, in the absence of the Prov. Grand Lodge, no new Master could be installed. Williamson, however, ordered them to proceed with the election of a new Master, and engaged to convene a Prov. Grand Lodge for his installation.

"With respect to the Brigades, they have been divided into six of Infantry and three of Artillery. This regulation has lessened the number of officers in each, and they will be more liable to removals than formerly. The first circumstance must be a great discouragement to the formation of Lodges in the Brigades, and the second would sometimes expose such Lodges to the risk of being annihilated. However, we shall give all encouragement to the making of applications, and all the support we possibly can to such Lodges as may be constituted."

A grand ball and supper was given by the Prov. Grand Lodge, January 14, 1789, to which invitations were sent, not only to residents in Calcutta, but also to "Bro. Tittsingh, Governor of Chinsurah, and other Masons of that Colony; to Bro. Bretel, and the other Masons of Chandernagore; and also to the Masons of Serampore, and to the Sisters of these Colonies, according to what has been customary on such occasions formerly."

In 1790—December 27—Fenwick resigned; and on the same day the Hon. Charles Stuart was elected and installed as his successor. The latter, however—owing to the government of the country devolving upon him in consequence of the absence of Lord Cornwallis from Calcutta—appointed Richard Comyns Birch "Acting Prov. G.M. of Bengal."

The Lodges in the Presidency are thus described in the Freemasons' Calendar for 1794:—

No.		No.
70.	Star in the East, Calcutta, 1st L. of Bengal, . . . . . 1740	316. <sup>1</sup>	Lodge of True Friendship, with the 3d Brigade, 4th Lodge of Bengal, 1773

There was also in existence about this time the "Marine Lodge," Calcutta, which, however, only obtained a local number; and a Stewards' Lodge—established June 24, 1786—with privileges akin to those of its prototype under the Grand Lodge of England.

It unfortunately happened, that the officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge had always been

<sup>4</sup> Constituted 1774, but became dormant. Constituted anew by Acting P.G.M. Williamson as No. 14, and given the local No. 11 in 1787.

<sup>5</sup> 1773, constituted by Middleton; 1787, composed of non-commissioned officers and privates belonging to the 3d Brigade, and called No. 10; 1788, the 3d Brigade moving to Berhampore, a new warrant—No. 12—granted to seven members remaining in Calcutta. Whether Nos. 10 or 13 survived in the Lodge above is uncertain; but the latter supposition is the more probable.

selected from the first two Lodges on the above list, and this circumstance led to no slight dissatisfaction on the part of the other Lodges, who, feeling themselves aggrieved, were not slow to resent the treatment. This it was which mainly conduced to the almost general defection, about the close of the century, from the Prov. Grand Lodge of Bengal, and consequently from the older or legitimate Grand Lodge of England. A Lodge—No. 146—under the Atholl (or Ancient) Grand Lodge, was established at Calcutta in 1767, but it took no root, and it does not appear that any further Lodges were erected by the same authority until the secession I am now about to describe. The Lodges "True Friendship" and "Humility with Fortitude" were the first who transferred their allegiance, the former becoming No. 315,<sup>1</sup> or No. 1 of Bengal—Dec. 27, 1797, and the latter, No. 317,<sup>2</sup> or No. 2 of Bengal—April 11, 1798. The "Marine Lodge" followed their example, and obtained a similar warrant—No. 323<sup>3</sup>—March 4, 1801. Meanwhile, Lodge "Star in the East" fell into abeyance, and "Industry and Perseverance" was on the point of closing also. One meeting only was held in each of the years 1802, 1803, and 1804, after which, for a long period, there were no more. Lodge "Anchor and Hope" obtained an Atholl warrant as No. 325<sup>4</sup>—Oct. 1, 1801. Little is known of Lodge "Unanimity," which, though carried forward at the Union (1813), must have died out at least several years before.

During the ten or eleven years that intervened between the obliteration of the Prov. Grand Lodge and its re-establishment in 1813, Masonry in Calcutta was represented almost exclusively by the Lodges which had seceded from the (older) Grand Lodge of England.

On St. John's Day (in Christmas) 1809, the Lodges, True Friendship, Humility with Fortitude, Marine, No. 338 (Ancients) in the 14th Foot, and the "Dispensation Lodge," working under a warrant granted by No. 338, walked in procession to St. John's Church, where a Masonic sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. James Ward.

Happily, Lodges Star in the East, and Industry and Perseverance, were revived in 1812, and on December 22 of that year, accompanied by the "Officers' Lodge,"<sup>5</sup> No. 347 in the 14th Foot, and Humility with Fortitude, also walked in procession to the same church, and benefited by a like sermon from Dr. Ward.

On October 4, 1813, the Earl of Moira—who had been appointed Acting Grand Master of India—arrived in Calcutta. The first Masonic act of the Governor-General was to constitute a new Lodge in that city—the Moira, Freedom and Fidelity—November 8, and his second, to re-establish the Prov. Grand Lodge of Bengal under the Hon. Archibald Seton.

As soon as the union of the two Grand Lodges of England became known in India, the "Atholl" Lodges at Calcutta tendered their allegiance to the Prov. Grand Lodge. These were, True Friendship, Humility with Fortitude, and Marine. The Anchor and Hope—which also seceded from the legitimate Grand Lodge of England—is not mentioned in the records of the Province 1814-40.

At the period of this fusion, there were the following Lodges under the older sanction: The Stewards,<sup>6</sup> Star in the East, Industry and Perseverance, and Sincere Friendship (Chunnar). Of these Lodges, the first never held a London warrant, and the last was struck off the roll inadvertently at the Union. There were also then in existence the

Out of these eighteen Lodges, however, only seven—Nos. 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 13, and 18 above—secured a footing on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England, <sup>2</sup> and it is not a little curious that of the two now alone surviving, Courage with Humanity (1814), and Independence with Philanthropy (1825), which were placed on the general list in the same year (1828) in juxtaposition, the latter bears the earlier number, and has the higher precedence!

The sway of Earl Moira extended over the whole of India, and he was empowered by the Duke of Sussex to appoint Provincial Grand Masters for Districts, with rank and authority equal to those appointed by the Grand Master himself.

The Acting Prov. G.M.—Seton—left India in 1817, and the Governor-General—then Marquis of Hastings—intimated to the Prov. Grand Lodge that he had selected the Hon. C. Stuart to succeed him. The latter does not appear, however, to have entered upon the duties of his office; and in the following year—January 17—the Hon. C. R. Lindsay was successively appointed, by warrants of Lord Hastings, Prov. G.M. of Bengal, January 17, 1818, and Depnty G.M. of India, January 13, 1819.

On November 30, 1818, an application was made to the Grand Master of India, by eight brethren residing at Poona, in the Deccan, praying for authority to meet as Lodge "St. Andrew" at that station, and also for "a dispensation for holding a Provincial Lodge, for the purpose of making the Hon. Monntstuart Elphinstone a Mason, he having expressed a wish to that effect." The petitioners further requested "that his name might be inserted in the body of the warrant, authorizing them to install him, after being duly passed and raised, a Deputy G.M. of the Deccan." Of the reply made to this application, no record has been preserved.

Lindsay was succeeded as Deputy G.M. of India, and Prov. G.M. of Bengal, by John Pascal Larkins, December 24, 1819. In 1822—December 20—an address was presented to Lord Hastings on his approaching departure; and a week later, on the Festival of St John, that nobleman was present at the Cathedral Church—whither the Lodges had walked in procession—in his capacity of Grand Master.

Larkins returned to Europe in 1826, from which date until 1840 the Craft in Bengal was (nominally) ruled by a Prov. G.M. in England, with a Deputy at Calcutta. This resulted in the extinction of the Prov. Grand Lodge, and the annihilation of all order and constituted authority for a time. In 1827—November 22—Lodge Independence with Philanthropy, at Allahabad, so resented the conduct of the P.G.L. as to return its warrant, intimating that its future meetings would be held under a dispensation obtained from Lodge Union, No. 32 (Irish Register), in the 14th Foot, until a warrant could be obtained from England, for which application had been made direct.<sup>1</sup>

The Lodges in Bengal made their returns regularly, and forwarded their dues punctually, to the Prov. Grand Lodge; but as no steps were taken for the transmission of these returns and dues to their destination, the Grand Lodge of England ceased to notice or regard the tributary Lodges of Bengal. On the submission of a motion for inquiry—March 22, 1828—the Deputy Prov. G.M. "felt himself constrained to resign his chair on the spot, and the Grand Wardens also tendered their resignations."

This led, at the instance of Lodge Aurora, to the formation of a representative body, styled the LODGE OF DELEGATES, who were charged with the duty of preparing a memorial to the Grand Lodge of England, which, bearing date August 28, 1828, was sent to the Duke of Sussex, signed by the Masters and Wardens of the following Lodges:—True Friendship, Humility with Fortitude, Marine, Aurora, Courage with Humanity, and Kilwinning in the East.

To this no reply was vouchsafed. The letters of the Lodges in Bengal remained unanswered, and their requests unheeded. The usual certificates for brethren made in the country were withheld, notwithstanding that the established dues were regularly remitted; and applications for warrants were also unnoticed, though they were accompanied by the proper fees. This state of affairs continued until 1834, when the question of separation from the Grand Lodge of England was gravely and formally mooted in the Lodges. Overtures for a reconciliation at length came in the shape of certificates for brethren who had by this time grown gray in Masonry. Answers to letters written long ago were also received; but the most important concession made by the Grand Lodge of England was the constitution of the first District Grand Lodge of Bengal—under Dr. John Grant—which held its first meeting, February 28, 1840.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> In 1834, some Masons at Delhi applied to their brethren at Meerut for an acting constitution of this kind, which might serve their purpose until the receipt of a warrant from the Grand Lodge of England. At the latter station there were two Lodges, one of which, however, was itself working under dispensation, and could not therefore dispense grace to another. The other belonged to the 26th Foot, No. 26, under the Grand Lodge of Ireland. This Lodge declined giving a dispensation, for the somewhat Irish reason that the Cameronian Lodge had already granted one to another Lodge, of the propriety of which act they had great doubt; and that until an answer had been received from Ireland, they could not commit a second act of doubtful legality! The custom, however, was a very old one. In 1759, Lodge No. 74, I. R., in the 1st Foot (2d Batt.), granted an exact copy of its warrant—dated October 26, 1737—to some brethren at Albany, to work under until they received a separate charter from Ireland. This was changed—February 21, 1765—for a warrant from George Harrison, English Prov. G.M. of New York; and the Lodge—Mount Vernon—is now No. 3 on the roll of the Grand Lodge of that State. Cf. Barker, Early Hist. of the G. L. of New York, preface, p. xviii.

During the decade immediately preceding this epoch eight new Lodges had been erected in Bengal; and from 1840 down to the present year there has been an addition of 81 under the English and 11 under the Scottish registers respectively.

Although the Masonic jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Ireland has always been a favorite one with the rank and file of the British army, and the number of military Lodges under it has ever been vastly in excess of those owing allegiance to any other authority, only a single Irish warrant for a stationary Lodge in India appears to have been issued. This was granted in 1837 to some brethren at Kurnaul, but its activity seems not to have outlasted the year of its constitution. An attempt was made in 1862 to establish an Irish Lodge in Bombay, but on the representation of the Grand Secretary of England to the Deputy Grand Secretary of Ireland that it would be objectionable "to create a third Masonic independent jurisdiction in the province, there being already two, viz., English and Scotch," the Grand Lodge of Ireland declined to grant the warrant.<sup>2</sup>

In the decennial periods 1840-50 and 1850-60 there were in each instance 12 additions to the roll. In 1860-70 the new Lodges amounted to 19, and in 1870-85 to 38. These figures are confined to the English Lodges, but extend over the area now occupied in part by the District Grand Lodges of Burmah and the Punjab, both of which were carved out of the territory previously comprised within the Province of Bengal, in 1868. The following statistics show the number of Lodges existing—January 1, 1886—in the various states and districts which until 1868 were subject to the Masonic government of Bengal: under the Grand Lodge of England—Bengal (D.G.L.), 39; British Burmah (D.G.L.), 7; and Punjab (D.G.L.), 24. Under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, 11—the earliest of which, St David (originally Kilwinning) in the East, No. 371, Calcutta, was constituted February 5, 1849.

The Dutch Lodges in Hindostan have passed out of existence, but with regard to these, and also to certain other Lodges established by the Grand Lodge of Holland in various places beyond the seas, the materials for an exhaustive list are not available to the historian.

MADRAS.—The earliest Lodge in Southern India—No. 222—was established at Madras in 1752. Three others Nos. 353-355, were formed at the same station in 1765. Shortly afterwards, about 1766, Captain Edmond Pascal was appointed Provincial Grand Master for Madras and its Dependencies; and in the following year a fifth Lodge, No. 323, was erected at Fort St. George. It is worthy of recollection that for a short period this Presidency was predominant over all the other English settlements in India; and during the latter half of the eighteenth century the continuous wars with the French, and afterwards with Hyder Ali and his son, cause the Carnatic to figure largely in Indian history.

In 1768, a Lodge—No. 152—was established by the Atholl (or Ancient) Grand Lodge of England at Fort St. George; and in 1773 one by the Grand Lodge of Holland at Negapatam. The next event of importance was the initiation, in 1776, of Umdat-ul-Umará,<sup>1</sup> eldest son of the Nabob of Arcot, at Trichinopoly, who, in his reply to the congratulations of the Grand Lodge of England, stated "he considered the title of an English Mason as one of the most honorable he possessed."

A Provincial Grand Lodge under the Atholl sanction was established at Fort St. George in 1781, "but the dissensions in the settlements had so rent asunder every link of social life, that even the fraternal bond of Masonry had been annihilated in the general wreck."

In 1786—February 20—Brigadier-General Horne was appointed (by the Duke of Cumberland) "Prov. G.M. for the Coast of Coromandel, the Presidency of Madras, and parts adjacent," and under this able officer a union of the brethren in Southern India was effected.

At this period all the Lodges under the older Grand Lodge of England seem to have been extinct; but in 1786 the Carnatic Military Lodge, No. 488, was established at Arcot; and in the following year the Lodge No. 152 tendered its allegiance to General Horne, and surrendering its warrant, joined one of the Lodges under that officer. Of these, four were added to the roll in 1787, Nos. 510-513—Perfect Harmony, St. Thomas Mount; Social Friendship, Madras; Trichinopoly; and Social Friendship, St. Thomas Mount—and styled Nos. 3, 4, 5, and 6, Coast of Coromandel.<sup>2</sup> Two other Lodges were also established in the same year, the Stewards and Perfect Unanimity, which, according to the loose practice of those days, were given the places on the list of the two earliest Madras Lodges, and became (in 1790) Nos. 103 and 233<sup>3</sup> respectively.

A Lodge of happy nomenclature—La Fraternité Cosmopolite—was constituted at Pondicherry in 1786 by the Grand Orient of France, and a second—Les Navigateurs Réunis—in 1790.

In the latter year—July 5—John Chamier received a similar patent—as Prov. G.M.—to that previously held by General Horne, and was succeeded by Terence Gahagan, 1806; and Herbert Compton,<sup>4</sup> 1812. During this period four Lodges were added to the roll—Solid Friendship, Trichinopoly, 1790; Unity, Peace, and Concord, 1798; St. Andrew's Union, 19th Foot, 1802; and Philanthropists, in the Scotch Brigade [94th Foot], 1802, at

<sup>3</sup> Nos. 488, 510 and 512 were "dropped out" at the Union (1813), and 511 and 513 were erased March 5, 1863; 511, however, was subsequently restored to the roll, and is now Lodge of the Rock, Trichinopoly, No. 260.

Madras. These Lodges were numbered 572, 574, 590, and 591 on the general, and 7, 9, 10, and 11 (Coast of Coromandel) on the local lists respectively.<sup>1</sup>

After the Union, the province was ruled by Dr Richard Jebb, 1814; George Lys, 1820; and in 1825 by Compton once more. The name of this worthy only disappears from the Freemasons' Calendar in 1842, and with it the provincial title, "Coast of Coromandel"—exchanged for "Madras," over which Lord Fipphinstone had been appointed Prov. G.M. in 1840.

Within this period—1814-42—numerous Lodges were warranted locally, as in Bengal; but 13 only—of which 7 were in Madras itself—secured places on the London register. Eighteen English Lodges have since been established in the Presidency, and there are at present in existence 20 Lodges on the register of England and two on that of Scotland—both erected in 1875—but the introduction of Scottish Lodges into India will be referred to in the ensuing section.

The French Lodge at Pondicherry—La Fraternité Cosmopolite—was revived (or a new one established under the old title) in 1821. Another—L'Union Indienne—was erected at the same station in 1831. At the present date, however, there exist throughout India and its dependencies no other Lodges than those under the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland respectively.

BOMBAY.—Two Lodges were established in this Presidency during the last century—Nos. 234, Bombay, in 1758, and 569, Surat, in 1798, both of which were carried on in the lists until 1813, but disappear at the Union. A Provincial Grand Master—James Todd—was appointed in 1763, whose name only drops out of the Freemasons' Calendar in 1799. In 1801, an Atholl warrant, No. 322, was granted to the 78th Foot, which regiment was engaged in the Mahratta war under Sir Arthur Wellesley, and took part in the decisive victory of Assaye (1803). In 1818, as we have already seen,<sup>2</sup> Lord Moira was asked to constitute a Lodge at Poona. But none were again established in the Presidency until 1822, in which year the Benevolent Lodge, No. 746, Bombay, was placed on our lists.<sup>3</sup> In 1823, a Military Lodge—Orion in the West—was formed in the Bombay Artillery, and "installed" at Poona as No. 15, Coast of Coromandel, November 15. According to the early proceedings of this Lodge, members "were examined in the Third Degree, and passed into the chair of the Fourth Degree"—for which a fee of three gold mohurs was exacted. In the following year, a second Lodge at Poona was established by the Prov. Grand Lodge of Bengal,<sup>1</sup> which, however, has left no trace of its existence. In 1825, the civilian element of Orion seceded, and formed the Lodge of Hope, also at Poona, No. 802. Here Orion, unrecognized at home, aided in the secession of some of its members, who obtained a warrant, on the recommendation of the parent Lodge, from the Grand Lodge of England. A Lodge was erected at Bombay—Perseverance, No. 818—in 1828. Two years later it was discovered that no notification of the existence of Orion in the West had reached the Grand Lodge of England, nor had any fees been received, though these, including the quarterages, had been regularly paid to the Prov. Grand Lodge of the Coast of Coromandel. It was further ascertained that in granting a warrant for a Bombay Lodge, the Prov. G.M. of the Coast of Coromandel had exceeded his powers. Ultimately, a new warrant, No. 598, was granted from England, July 19, 1833.

<sup>3</sup> Among the Masons about this time in Bombay were thirteen non-commissioned officers who were too poor to establish a Lodge of their own, and too modest to seek admittance in what was considered an aristocratic Lodge. They met, however, monthly in the guard-room over the Apollo Gate, for mutual instruction in Masonry. This coming to the knowledge of the Benevolent Lodge, the thirteen were elected honorary members of No. 746, for which they returned heartfelt thanks. At their first attendance, when the Lodge work was over, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, the thirteen were informed that refreshments awaited them downstairs. Revolting at the distinction thus made among Masons, they one and all left the place. The next morning they were sent for by their commanding officer, who was also one of the officers of the Lodge, and asked to explain their conduct. One of the party—Mr. W. Willis (by whom this anecdote was first related to me), told him that as Masons they were bound to meet on the Level and part on the Square; but as this fundamental principle was not practiced in No. 746, of which they had been elected honorary members, they could not partake of their hospitality. The astonished colonel uttered not a word, but waived his hand for them to retire. Ever after this, the Benevolent Lodge—including the thirteen—met on the Level, both in Lodge and at the banquet-table.

Up to this time the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England had not been invaded; but in 1836 Dr. James Burnes<sup>2</sup> was appointed by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, Provincial G.M. of Western India and its dependences. No Prov. Grand Lodge, however, was formed until January 1, 1838. A second Scottish Province—of Eastern India—was subsequently erected, which, on the retirement of the Marquis of Tweeddale,<sup>3</sup> was absorbed within the jurisdiction of Dr. Burnes, who, in 1846, became Prov. G.M. for all India (including Aden), but with the proviso, that this appointment was not to act in restraint of any future subdivision of the Presidencies.

Burnes, in 1836, may be best described, in ecclesiastical phrase, as a Prov. G.M. "in partibus infidelium," for whatever Lodges then existed throughout the length and breadth of India were strangers to Scottish Masonry. But the times were propitious. There was no English Provincial Grand Lodge of Bombay; and under the Chevalier Burnes, whom nature had bountifully endowed with all the qualities requisite for Masonic administration, Scottish Masonry presented such attractions, that the strange sight was witnessed of English Masons deserting their mother Lodges to such an extent that these fell into abeyance, in order that they might give their support to Lodges newly constituted by the Grand Lodge of Scotland. In one case, indeed, a Lodge—Perseverance—under England went over bodily to the enemy, with its name, jewels, furniture, and belongings, and the charge was accepted by Scotland.

From this period, therefore, Scottish Masonry flourished, and English Masonry declined, the latter finally becoming quite dormant until the year 1848, when a Lodge, St. George—No. 807 on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England—was again formed at Bombay, and for some years was the solitary representative of English Masonry in the Province.

In 1844, Burnes established a Lodge, No. 413, "Rising Star," at Bombay, for the admission of natives—by whom a beautiful medal, cut by Wyon, was struck in consequence'—and No. 414, St. Andrew in the East, at Poona. These were followed by Nos. 421—Hope, Kurrachee—and 422—Perseverance, Bombay—in 1847.<sup>1</sup>

Scottish Lodges were next erected in Bengal—No. 353, now 371, Kilwinning in the East, Calcutta, 1849; and in Arabia—No. 355, Felix, Aden, 1850. At the close of 1885, 33 Lodges in all—or under Bombay, 19; Bengal, 11; Madras, 2; and in Afghanistan, 1—had received Charters from the Grand Lodge of Scotland. With a single exception—which reduces the Bombay Lodges to 18—these are all in existence.

Burnes left India in 1849, and was succeeded by a Prov. G.M. of Western India only. In 1874, however, Captain Henry Morland became Prov. G.M. of Hindostan, and was subsequently commissioned as Grand Master of All Scottish Freemasonry in India.

Returning to the Lodges under the Grand Lodge of England. St. George—No. 807—constituted in 1848, was for ten years the only representative of its class. In 1858, however, Lodges "Concord"—No. 1059—and "Union"—No. 1069—were established at Bombay and Kurrachee respectively. A year later, "Orion in the West" awoke from its dormancy.<sup>2</sup> In 1861, a Provincial Grand Lodge was established, and since that date 18 Lodges have been chartered in the district, 15 of which survive, and, together with Orion, St. George, Concord, and Union, form a grand total of 19 Lodges under the District G.M. of Bombay.

Until of late years, it cannot be said that Freemasonry has taken any real root among the native population of India. Umdat-ul-Umarā, son of the Nabob of Arcot, was admitted a member of the Society, as we have already seen, in 1776. The princes Keyralla Khan (of the Mysore family) and Shadad Khan (ex-Ameer of Scinde) joined, or were made Masons in, the Lodge of "True Friendship" in 1842 and 1850 respectively; and in 1861 the Maharajahs Duleep and Rundeer Sing were initiated in Lodges "Star of the East," and "Hope and Perseverance"—the last-named personage at Lahore, and the other three in Calcutta.

A by-law of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Bengal, forbidding the entry of Asiatics without the permission of the P.G.M., was in force until May 12, 1871; and there was at least a popular belief in existence so late as 1860,<sup>3</sup> that Hindus were ineligible for initiation.

<sup>3</sup> It was at my instance that this Lodge was revived, and I had the pleasure—being then W.M. of No. 1045, attached to the 31st Foot—of installing the Master—Colonel Forster, R.A., an old P.M. of the Lodge—on the occasion.

<sup>4</sup> An assistant military apothecary was initiated in the Meridian Lodge, 31st Foot, in that year. The legality of this act—on the source of the Infrant being a Brahmin—was demurred to in the Masonic press; and the 31st Regiment being with the Expeditionary Force in China, Mr. G. W. Ingram, P.M., No. 845, took up the cudgels on behalf of the Lodge, pointing out, in an elaborate argument, "that the very ground-work of the Brahmin faith is the belief in one Grand Superintending Being." The journal in which these letters appeared ultimately reached the Lodge—then at Tien-Tsin—when I addressed to it a final letter, deposing that, having filled the chair on the occasion alluded to, the individual whose admission had been called in question was, "by his own statement, delivered to me in person, a Christian." Cf. Freemasons' Magazine, April 21, September 8, and October 13, 1860; and May 18, 1861; and for some startling assertions respecting Freemasonry forming a portion of the Brahminical knowledge, see Higgins, Anaclypsis, 1836, vol. i., p. 767-69; and H. Melville, Revelation of Mysteries, etc., 1876, p. 17.

Members of Bangalore Lodge and Mysore Lodge, Southern India

Amongst important places of interest in the Province in this country, will be the above mentioned Bangalore Lodge, No. 1043, which was founded in 1863, for the welfare of the state among the large civil and military population of Bangalore, known as the "cradle of India" and Mysore Lodge, No. 1841, founded in the city of Mysore, capital of the Maharajah of the Mysore State in the highest honored native State in India. The interests of Mysore Lodge are warmly supported, and chiefly due to the presence of the President and Past Masters and the energetic Secretary, Mr. S. V. N. Narasimengar, Controller of the installation of His Highness, the young Maharajah, to the Mysore Throne on the 8th of August, 1902, by his Excellency Lord Curzon, Viceroy and Governor-General of India, a deputation of Freemasons, composed of the above-named lodges, waited on His Highness and presented an address, in which His Highness was congratulated on the assumption of the direct administration of that ancient and historical kingdom, and further expressed a lively gratitude for the benefit derived from the Mysore Throne by the Fraternity.

The Parsees of Western India were the first of the native races who evinced any real interest in the institution, and are to be congratulated on the recent election (1886) of one of their number—Mr. Cama—to the high position of Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of England.

In 1876, a Scottish Lodge, No. 587, "Islam"—presumably for the association of Mohammedans—was erected at Bombay. The extent to which Freemasonry is now practised by the Hindus—who form 73½ per cent. of the total population of India—I am unable to determine. The first of this class of religionists to fill the chair of a Lodge was Mr. Dutt, whose election in 1874 may not have been without influence in the diffusion of Masonic light.

The Indian Freemasons' Friend, a publication of rare merit, was set on foot at Calcutta in 1855, but was short-lived. A new or second series was commenced in May, 1861, and lasted to the end of 1867. In Bombay, the Masonic Record of Western India enjoys an extensive circulation, and is very ably conducted.

EAST INDIA ISLANDS.

CEYLON.—Masonry was established in this island—which I here group with all those which in former days were conveniently included in the expression "East Indies"—by the Grand Lodge of Holland. Lodges were erected at Colombo—Fidelity—1771; Point de Galle—Sincerity—1773; and at Colombo again—Union—1794. In 1795 the British took possession of the Dutch settlements on the island, and annexed them to the Presidency of Madras; but six years after, in 1801, Ceylon was formed into a separate Crown colony.

At this period—February 9, 1801—a charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland was granted to the officers of the 51st Regiment, stationed at Colombo, for the Orange Lodge, No. 274. Lodges under the Atholl (or Ancient) sanction were also formed on the island—Nos. 329—in the 6th Battalion R.A.—1802; and 340—in the 34th Foot—1807.

Under the older Grand Lodge of England, a Provincial Grand Master—Sir Alexander Johnston—was appointed in 1810, whose name, however, disappears from the lists before the establishment of the first stationary English Lodge—St. John's, No. 665—in 1838. But in the meantime greater activity was displayed under other jurisdictions. An Irish Lodge—No. 62—sprang up at Colombo in 1821, and a French one—Union, under the G.O.—in 1822. The latter of these was revived, or a new Lodge formed with the same name, in 1832.

At the present time there are six Lodges on the island, four Irish—Nos. 107, 112, 115, and 298, dating from 1861, 1863, 1868, and 1874, respectively; one English—St. John's above, now No. 454; and one Scottish—No. 611, dating from 1877; an earlier Lodge—No. 446, erected at Kandy in 1865—having ceased to exist. The Irish Lodges are subject to a Prov. G.M. appointed in 1877, and No. 611 to the G.M. of all Scottish Freemasonry in India.

The Dutch Lodges, though now extinct, evinced great tenacity of existence. The two named above survived until within recent memory, and others were constituted, not only in Ceylon, but also in the East and West Indies, of which a very imperfect record has been preserved.

SUMATRA.—An English Lodge—No. 356—was established at Bencoolen in 1765, and two others—Nos. 424 and 559—at Fort Marlborough in 1772 and 1796 respectively. These continued to appear in the lists until 1813; but only one, the “Marlbore” (afterwards “Rising Sun”) Lodge (1772), was carried forward at the Union, which ultimately became No. 242, and having omitted to make any returns for several years, was erased March 5, 1862.

Sumatra was erected into an English province in 1793 under John Macdonald, who was succeeded as Prov. G.M.—December 10, 1821—by H. R. Lewis, and the latter continued to hold office until his death in 1877, there having been one Lodge in existence at the time of his original appointment, and none at all for fifteen years preceding his decease.

At the present date there are two Lodges on the island, one—No. 41, Mata Hari, at Padang; the other—No. 75, Prince Frederick, at Kotta Raja (Atchin). These were constituted by the Grand Lodge of Holland in 1858 and 1880 respectively.

JAVA.—Masonry was introduced into this island in 1769, and a Lodge—Star in the East—constituted by the Grand Lodge of Holland at Batavia, which still exists. Others soon after sprang up in the capital and the larger towns, of which, however, no precise record is obtainable. A second Lodge was erected at Batavia in 1771, and charters were granted to brethren at Samarang in 1801, and at Sourabaya in 1800. At the present time (1886) there are eight Lodges in Java—at Batavia, Samarang, Sourabaya, Djokdjokarta, Rambang, Surakarta, Salatiga, and Problingo. These are governed by Mr. T. H. Dei Kinderen, Deputy National Grand Master for the East Indies of the Netherlands.

CELEBES.—A Lodge—Arbeid Adelt (Labour ennobles), No. 79—under the Grand Lodge of Holland, was erected at Macassar in 1883.

BORNEO.—On this, the largest island of the world—if we regard Australia as continental—an English Lodge was established in 1885, No. 2106, Elopura, at the station of the same name in North Borneo.

THE PHILIPPINES.—Masonry in these islands is of recent introduction, but at Manila, the capital, there are now (1886) four Lodges in existence; one—No. 39—under the National Grand Orient, and three—Nos. 179, 204, and 208—under the Grand Lodge of Spain. The latter form a Province, and are subject to a Provincial Superintendent.

PERSIA.

Thory informs us that Askeri-Khan, ambassador of the Shah at Paris, and who was himself admitted into Masonry in that city—November 24, 1808—took counsel with his French brethren respecting the foundation of a Lodge at Ispahan.<sup>1</sup> Whether this project was ever carried into effect it is impossible to say, but two years later we find another Persian—also an ambassador—figuring in Masonic history. On June 15, 1810, “His Excellency Mirza Abul Hassan Khan” was granted the rank of Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England.<sup>2</sup> This personage—the Minister accredited from the Court of Persia to that of Great Britain—in addition to having been a great traveller both in Hindostan and Arabia, had also performed his devotions at Mecca. In the course of his journey from Teheran he passed through Georgia, Armenia, and Anatolia. At Constantipeople he embarked in a British man-of-war, and reached England in December, 1809. Sir Gore Ouseley, Bart., who was selected to attend upon the Mirza "as Mehmander—an officer of distinction, whose duty it is to receive and entertain foreign princes and other illustrious personages"—in the following year (1810) received the appointment of ambassador to the Shah of Persia, and was also granted an English patent as Provincial G.M. for that country. No Lodges, however, were established in Persia at any time by the Grand Lodge of England, nor—so far as the evidence extends—by any other external authority. The Mirza Abul Hasman Khan was made a Mason by Lord Moira in 1810.* The extent of his services to the Craft we must leave undecided; but it was stated somewhat recently in the Masonic journals, on the authority of a Persian military officer† then pursuing his studies in Berlin, that nearly all the members of the Court of Teheran are brethren of our Society.

West Indies are derived from the (English) “Freemasons’ Calendar,” 1776 and 1778, and the (German) “Handbuch,” which are substantially in accord. For a list of the Dutch Colonial Lodges at the present date, I am indebted to Mr. J. P. Vaillant.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

The Neptune Lodge, No. 344, was established at Penang (or Prince of Wales Island) by warrant of the Duke of Atholl, September 6, 1809, but became extinct in 1819. Three years later, a Military Lodge—Humanity with Courage—was warranted from Bengal.‡ The proceedings of this body, however, becoming irregular by the initiation of civilians, the Duke of Sussex renewed the charter of the Atholl Lodge, which flourished for a time, but eventually fell into decay, and was erased, together with another Lodge, "Neptune"—also at Penang, erected in 1850—No. 846 on the English roll, March 5, 1862. The only Lodge now existing in this settlement is No. 1555, warranted by the Grand Lodge of England in 1875.¶

Passing over Malacca—where a Lodge was formed under the Prov. Grand Lodge of Bengal in 1825, but which never secured a place on the general list—we next come to Singapore, where English Lodges were established in 1845, 1858, and 1867, named Zetland in the East, Fidelity, and St. George, Nos. 748, 1042, and 1152 respectively. Of these the first and last survive, and, together with the Lodge at Penang, compose the province of the Eastern Archipelago, of which Mr. W. H. Read was appointed the first Prov. G.M. in 1858.

COCHIN-CHINA.

In this French dependency, a Lodge—Le Réveil de l'Orient—was established by warrant of the Grand Orient of France, October 22, 1868.

CHINA.

During the last century, two Lodges of foreign origin were constituted in the Celestial Empire—the Lodge of "Amity," No. 407, under an English, and "Elizabeth" under a Swedish, warrant. The former was erected in 1767, the latter in 1788; and in each case the place of assembly was Canton. The English Lodge was not carried forward at the Union (1813), and "Elizabeth," as I am informed by the Grand Secretary of Sweden, came to an end in 1812.

The next Lodge erected on Chinese soil was the Royal Sussex, No. 735, at Canton, for which a warrant was granted by the United G.L. of England in 1844. A second—Zetland, No. 768—was established at Hong-Kong under the same sanction, in 1846; and a third—Northern Lodge of China—at Shanghai, in 1849. No further increase of Lodges took place until 1864, in which year two were added to the English roll, at Hong-Kong and Shanghai respectively: and one each at the latter port under the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Massachusetts.<sup>1</sup> The progress of the Craft in the “Middle Kingdom” has since been marked, but uneventful, though as yet Freemasonry has failed to diffuse its light beyond the British colony of Hong-Kong, and the various ports on the mainland opened up by treaty to the merchants of foreign powers. Mr. Samuel Rawson was appointed by Lord Zetland Prov. G.M. for China in 1847; and a second Province was carved out of the old one in 1877, by the appointment of Mr. Cornelius Thorne as District G.M. for Northern China.

At the present time (1886) there are in existence at Victoria (Hong-Kong), and the Chinese treaty-ports, 13 English, 1 American, and 4 Scottish Lodges; and with a solitary exception—No. 1217, at Ningpo, formed in 1868, under the Grand Lodge of England, but now extinct—all the Lodges erected in China or Hong-Kong since the revival of Masonry in the Far East (1844), are still active, and can therefore be traced in the calendars of current date, by those desirous of further information respecting them.

Many secret societies exist in China, which, under slightly varied names (and spellings), will be found alluded to in the note below.<sup>2</sup>

The best known of these is the Triad Society, which has its headquarters in the Straits Settlements, no longer daring to show itself as an institution within the limits of the Middle Kingdom, though not a few of its members are to be found at and about Amoy. It took its rise some hundred and fifty years ago. The term “Triad” here alludes to a conjunction of the three great powers in nature—Heaven, Earth, and Man; hence it is sometimes called the Heaven and Earth Society. It admits members with ceremonies very similar to our own.<sup>3</sup>

JAPAN.

English Lodges bearing the following numbers were erected at Yokohama—1092 and 1263—in 1866 and 1869; at Yedo (now extinct)—1344—in 1870; at Kobe—1401—in 1872; and at Tôkiô—2015—in 1883. These are subject to a Prov. G.M., who was appointed in 1873.

There are also three Lodges under the Grand Lodge of Scotland—Nos. 498, 640, and 710—at Kobe, Yokohama, and Nagasaki, established in 1870, 1879, and 1884 respectively.

There are numerous stories by the Japanese, during the latter part of the seventeenth and beginning of the eighteenth century, of mysterious documents carefully preserved

Brother Viscount Tadasu Hayashi, D. C. L., Lb. D.

THE JAPANESE AMBASSADOR TO GREAT BRITAIN.

Worshipful Master Mason May 19, 1923 and a Royal Arch Mason May 12, 1924. On the many important meetings held under the banner of Empire Lodge, No. 2,108, London, probably the initiation of Viscount Tadasu Hayashi, the first native of Japan to be introduced into Freemasonry in England, will be remembered as not the least noteworthy. The ceremony was admirably performed by the Worshipful Master Brother Sidney F. Lott, assisted by Brother Sir Edward Letchworth, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England. Many other grand officers and distinguished brethren to the number of 150 were present.

in secret by the natives—precious heirlooms. Several of these are matters of history; and a theory has been advanced that the documents in question were the more important vouchers of Masonic Lodges, warrants, lists of affiliated brethren, etc., and in some instances the certificates of ancestors.<sup>1</sup> A noted Secret Society of Japan, that of the Amos, now extinct or in abeyance, has been referred to at a previous page.<sup>2</sup>

NORTH AFRICA.

EGYPT.—Masonry, according to the "Official Bulletin" of the National Grand Orient at present existing in the valley of the Nile—in form of a Memphis Lodge—was introduced into the country by Napoleon, Kleber, and other French officers in 1798 (?). Lodges of the Craft, however, practising pure and ancient Freemasonry, are not heard of until 1802, when La Bienfaisance was established at Alexandria; which was followed by a second, Les Amis de Napoleon le Grand, at the same city, in 1806. Both Lodges were under the Grand Orient of France. Others have since been constituted by the same authority, at Alexandria, 1847 and 1863; Cairo, 1868; and Mansourah, 1882; the first and last of these are still active. Under the rival French jurisdiction—Supreme Council 33°—a Lodge was constituted at Alexandria in 1862, and others at Ismailia, Port Said, and Suez in 1867—all of which (except the last named) are on the roll for 1886. Still another Lodge of French ancestry—under the newly formed Grand Independent Symbolic Lodge<sup>3</sup>—appears to have been in existence in 1879. Under the Grand Lodge of England Lodges have been formed at Alexandria, Nos. 1221 in 1862, 1082 in 1865, 1154 and 1157 in 1867; at Cairo, Nos. 1068 in 1865, 1105 in 1866, 1156 in 1867, 1226 in 1868, and 1855 in 1871; and at Ramleh, No. 1419 in 1872. Of these No. 1157, at Alexandria, and all the Cairo Lodges, with the solitary exception of No. 1156, are still active. Two Lodges—Nos. 472 and 707—were erected by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, at Suez and Alexandria, in 1867 and 1884 respectively. Under the G.O. of Italy there are now four Lodges each at Cairo and Alexandria, besides one at Mansourah, but the dates of their introduction I am unable to give.

The Rite of Memphis has been referred to in previous chapters,<sup>4</sup> and it again at this point crosses the path of Freemasonry. It will be recollected that in 1862 J. E. Marconis abdicated his position as Grand Universal Hierophant in favor of the Grand Orient of France. According, however, to the "Official Bulletin" already quoted "long before Marconis treated for the transmission of the Rite to the G.O. of France, he constituted in Cairo the Lodge Menes, and in Alexandria founded a Supreme Council of the Order, with the distinctive title of Grand Orient of Egypt, with authority to confer from the first to the ninetieth degree, and to found Lodges, Chapters, Areopagi, Senates, and Consistories."

Upon these (and other) premises, therefore, it is laid down in the same publication, that the course adopted by Marconis was illegal, that he could not cede a Rite which was entrusted to him only as a sacred deposit to be preserved, etc. We next learn that the Grand Orient of Egypt, in accordance with powers which are duly set forth, convoked all the Patriarchs—of whom 95, created such by Marconis, resided in Egypt—and founded the first Sanctuary of Memphis in Egypt, in substitution of the demolished Sanctuary in Paris.

This occurred in 1867, and Pasha Halim Pasha, son of the famous Mehemet Ali, was elected Grand Master of the Order, which prospered greatly until 1868, when the G.M. was exiled, and the Lodges and Councils ceased to work. In 1869 the Sanctuary, which worked for a time in secret with a limited number of Patriarchs, also fell into abeyance; but the Rite of Memphis—which at that time had not resigned its pretensions to control the three degrees of the Craft—revived December 21, 1872, when, with the sanction of the Khedive, S. A. Zola was elected and proclaimed G.M. of the Sanctuary of Memphis—Grand National Orient of Egypt; and in 1874 was further authorized to assume the title of Grand Hierophant—97°—the supreme office of the Rite. In the following year two treaties were concluded between the Grand Orient of Egypt—i.e., the Rite of Memphis working 96 degrees—and the A. and A.S.R., working the 33d and some other (so-called) lower degrees. By these treaties, which recited that the A. and A.S.R. (in Egypt) was established in 1864 by charter from the G.O. of Naples—which in like manner had derived its authority from a Spanish source—and that the Order of Memphis (in Egypt) held under a charter from Paris, dated 1864, it was agreed:—That a Body should be formed like the Grand Council of Rites in Ireland; that the jurisdiction “of the G.O. of Egypt should be limited to the first three symbolic grades, and that the Rites of Memphis, and of the A. and A.S.R., should work the remainder.”

In 1876—May 8—the Grand Orient was reorganized, and constituted a Federal Diet of Egyptian Masonry. It was resolved that there should be three Grand Masonic Bodies in the Valley of the Nile, each of which should be different, distinct, and separate from the others:—I. The National Grand Lodge of Egypt; II. The Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33°; and III. The Sov. Grand Council of the 96° of the Memphis Rite. The two latter bodies were to work from the 4° and upwards, never interfering with the three first or symbolical degrees, which were to wholly belong to the National Grand Lodge of Egypt.

It has been asserted that, in the formation of an Independent Grand Lodge, the initiative was taken some years previously by a few French and Italian Lodges, but even if this was the case, the earlier movement certainly merged into the proceedings of 1876. At this period the number of subordinate Lodges had risen from 8 to 15. In 1878 the Grand Lodge of Egypt was included in the family of European Grand Lodges noticed in the official calendar of the Grand Lodge of England.

Down to 1879 Zola was at the head of each of the three divisions of the Diet; but in that year, in order if possible to bring the English Lodges within the fold, Ralph Borg was elected to the chair of the Grand Lodge, which soon after separated from the other divisions, and proclaimed itself free, sovereign, and wholly independent of the Federal Diet. In the same year the National Grand Lodge entered into a concordat with the National Grand Orient—under Zola—whereby the Memphis Rite, “out of courtesy and goodwill towards its offspring, the Grand Lodge of Egypt,” agreed to waive its right to work the three first degrees of Masonry.

Zola resigned the position of Grand Hierophant—97°—April 6, 1883, in favor of Professor Oddi.

Under the National Grand Lodge of Egypt there are now (1886) 25 Lodges, with a total membership of about 400. The G.M. is Dr. Iconomopulo.<sup>1</sup>

Brother Idrio Bey Ragheb

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF EGYPT AT CAIRO

TUNIS.—In this Regency, as in many other parts of the world where the exercise of "concurrent jurisdiction" by competing Grand Bodies is indulged in, the Craft is represented by a variety of Lodges, which reflect pretty clearly the national instincts of the brethren who compose them. The French Lodges are three in number, the English two, and there is one under the G.O. of Italy. Of the French Lodges, two hail from the Grand Orient—Perseverance (1860) and New Carthage (1883), and one from the S.O. 33°—Secrecy (1862.) The dates of formation of the English Lodges have been already given; that of the Italian Lodge—Resurrection—I am unable to supply.

Besides the above, a Grand Lodge of Tunis held its first session July 17, 1879, under a Signor Casanella as G.M., and claimed at that date to have eight Lodges under its jurisdiction. Two years later—May 2, 1881—this apparently became a Grand Orient under an authority from the Supreme Council—A. and A.S.R. 33°—of Italy.

It remains to be stated that according to the leading journal of this country there is in existence a widely spread system of "Moslem Political Freemasonry." This has five subdivisions, one of which—the powerful confraternity of Sidi Abdel Kader el Chilian—possesses a college at Kairwan.<sup>1</sup>

ALGERIA.—In this French province there are at the present time ten Lodges under the G.O. and five under the S.O. 33° of France. The earliest—Belisarius—which still exists, was founded by the former, January 1, 1832. It may be added that throughout Africa the native race taking the most intelligent interest in Freemasonry are the Arabs of Algeria, of whom the late heroic Emir, Abd-el-Kadr, may be cited as the most prominent example.

MOROCCO.—A Lodge was formed at Tangier—Union, No. 194,—under the S.C. of France in 1867, and one also exists—or at least did so, until quite recently—under the G.O. of Spain at Cetta.

In 1882, the number of competing jurisdictions in the Sultanate was increased by the action of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, which in that year proceeded to throw off a shoot in Morocco. This, however, was effected in a somewhat singular manner, as the "Special Deputy" entrusted with a warrant for the establishment of a Lodge at Tangier, granted the founders permission to assemble temporarily at Gibraltar—and subsequently at St. Roque, in Andalusia. The course thus pursued was disavowed, and the commission of the Special Deputy revoked, but the Lodge—Al-Moghreb-Al-Akbar—is now at work in Tangier, which is the seat of government of the "Masonic District of Morocco," under the Grand Lodge of Manitoba.

WEST COAST OF AFRICA.

Richard Hull was appointed Provincial G.M. for Gambay, West Africa, in 1735; David Creighton, M.D., was similarly commissioned for Cape Coast in 1736; and William Douglas for the African Coast and American Islands in 1737. Notwithstanding these appointments by the (older) Grand Lodge of England, the earliest Lodge in the western portion of the Continent established by that body, seems to have been No. 586, at Bulam, constituted in 1792. After this came the Torridzonian Lodge, No. 621, at Cape Coast Castle, in 1810. The former of these disappeared at the Union (1813) but the latter was only erased March 5, 1862, though doubtless inactive for a long time previously, as three Lodges of much later constitution—Nos. 721, Sierra Leone, 1820: 599, Cape Coast, 1833; and 867, Bathurst, River Gambia, 1851—were likewise struck off the roll on the same occasion. Two further English Lodges were established in the district—Nos. 1075, Cape Coast Castle, 1859; and 1171, Lagos, West Coast, 1867—both of which are still shown in the list.

At Senegal, the name given to the French possessions in Senegambia, there are two Lodges, one—Union, 1874—under the G.O. of France; the other—Misa—under that of Italy.

LIBERIA.—This remarkable State, colonized in 1821 by a handful of freed slaves from the United States, recruited ever since by emigrants of the same class and by the wretched cargoes of captured slave-vessels, acknowledged in 1847 as an independent Republic, governed, and well governed too, on the American model, by the elsewhere despised negro race, with a navy of one vessel (a present from England), a college with professorial chairs all filled by negroes,—this successful outcome of a daringly humane experiment, which has partly civilized countless hordes of natives on its borders, possesses an independent Grand Lodge of its own, with a seat at Monrovia, the capital. I can well imagine that its Masonic history, properly told, would prove both interesting and instructive, but unfortunately nothing beyond the barest statistics are at my command. A Grand Lodge was established in 1867, of which the first G.M. was Amos, an ex-Pennsylvanian slave. In 1870 he died, and was followed by Joseph Roberts, an ex-President of the Republic. According to the Masonic Calendars, in 1876 C. B. Dunbar was the Grand Master, with five Lodges; in 1877, Reginald A. Sherman; and in 1881, William M. Davis, with six Lodges and 125 members. No enlargement of the jurisdiction has since occurred, the same G.M. is in office, and the Rite practised is the pure one of the English Craft.

THE AZORES.—In these, which form a province, and not a dependency, of Portugal, there is a Lodge under the United Grand Lusitanian Orient. That jurisdiction is a favorite one in the islands of the North Atlantic, as we find in MADEIRA three, and in the CANARIES ' nine Lodges, holding warrants from the same G.O.

ST. HELENA.—An (Atholl) Lodge—No. 132—was established in this island in 1764, and another—No. 568—under the (older) Grand Lodge of England in 1798. The former became extinct in 1766, but the latter was carried forward at the Union (1813), though it did not survive the renumbering of 1832. Lieut.-Colonel Francis Robson was appointed Prov. G.M. in 1801, and David Kay, M.D., in 1803, both holding office under the senior of the two Grand Lodges. The latter continued for several years to preside over a Province in which there was no Lodge; but a revival took place in 1843, when No. 718 was erected, and a second Lodge—No. 1214—came into existence in 1862. Both of these meet at James Town, and are still active.

The 20th Foot—to which the famous "Minden Lodge," No. 63, was attached by the Grand Lodge of Ireland in 1748—formed the guard over Napoleon in 1819–21; but the historian of the Lodge informs us, "the political and peculiar state of the island during our station at St. Helena, the severity of duty, the want of a building, all operated to prevent the best intentions . . . to assemble for Masonic purposes."

In the only other British island on the coast of Africa lying south of the Equator—ASCENSION—a Lodge, No. 1029 on the English roll, was erected in 1864, but has ceased to exist.

Masonic Boer Prisoners Around Napoleon's Grave at St. Helena

During the progress of the Boer War in South Africa and at the time Great Britain was sending prisoners of war to the Isle of St. Helena, it was a matter of some interest to find among them many members of the fraternity, mostly hailing from lodges under the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands, who were on friendly terms with the brethren of the two lodges on the island, viz.: the St. Helena Lodge and the Old Rock Lodge. One of the prisoners, writing to a Masonic journal, said: "All agreed they had no reason to complain of our fellow-craftsmen in St. Helena, who have in a most generous way extended to many of us the right hand of fellowship and welcome. A few of us have been allowed parole, through the courtesy of Bro. Lieut.-Col. A. L. Paget, our esteemed camp commandant, to accept invitations to attend the lodge meetings, and there our welcome has been all that could be desired. We meet on a common base English officers, rank and file soldiers, St. Helena merchants and prisoners of war fraternizing in such a fashion as to make it difficult to realize that we have been so far apart in our secular relations in the world beyond the lodge room; and when release does come, our recollections of Masonic ties in St. Helena will be evoked from this island, and will have a better influence in heaving the sore places than all the sophistry of statesmen and legislators.

SOUTH AFRICA.

The Cape Settlement was taken by a British naval force in 1795, restored to Holland in 1802, retaken in 1806, and permanently ceded to Britain at the Congress of Vienna.

Dutch Lodges—"Of Good Hope," and "Of Good Trust"—were erected at Cape Town in 1772 and 1802 respectively. These, happily, survive; but several Lodges, at least, in South Africa under the same jurisdiction appear to have passed away without leaving any trace of their existence.

After the final cession of the colony, Lodges under the rival Grand Lodges of England were established at the capital in 1811 and 1812 respectively—in the former year, the "British," No. 629, under the older sanction; and in the latter, No. 354, the "Cape of Good Hope" Lodge, in the 10th Battalion of the Royal Artillery, under an Atholl warrant.

The first band of English settlers arrived in 1820, and in the following year a second stationary Lodge, under the United Grand Lodge of England—Hope, No. 727—was erected at Cape Town—where, also, a Lodge bearing the same name, under the G.O. of France, sprang up, November 10, 1824. A third English Lodge—Albany, No. 817—was established at Grahamstown in 1828. "The Dutch Lodges received the English brethren with open arms, and with great satisfaction. When English Masonry had increased, and it was considered right to form a Provincial Grand Lodge, the brother selected for the office of Prov. G.M. was the Deputy G.M. of the Netherlands, who continued till his death to hold the two appointments." "This must have been Sir John Truter, who received an English patent in 1829; for although an earlier Prov. G.M. under England—Richard Blake—had been appointed in 1801, the words quoted above will not apply to the latter. Between 1828 and 1850 there was no augmentation of the Lodges; but in the latter year a revival set in, and during the decade immediately ensuing—1851-60—six* were warranted by the Grand Lodge of England.

In 1860, to the jurisdictions already existing (those of Holland and England) was added that of Scotland, under the Grand Lodge of which country a Lodge—Southern Cross, No. 398—was erected at Cape Town. Shortly afterwards, in a single year (1863) two Dutch Lodges were established in Cape Colony, and one at Bloemfontein, in the Orange Free State. This period coincides with the appointment—after an interregnum—of the Hon. Richard Southey as Prov. G.M. under the G.L. of England; and it will be convenient if I here proceed to describe seriatim the progress of Masonry under the three competing jurisdictions. Commencing with that of England, between the date to which the statistics were last given (1860) down to the close of 1885, 62 Lodges were added to the roll. The number at present existing in South Africa, as shown by the official calendar of current date, is 54, viz.: Eastern Division, 24; Western Division, 8; Natal, 11; and 11 not subject to any provincial authority, some of which were formerly under the District Grand Lodge of Griqualand (now abolished), and two—Nos. 1022, at Bloemfontein (Orange Free State), and 1747, at Pretoria (Transvaal)—are situate in foreign territory. Within the same period—1860-85—12 Lodges have been established under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and now compose a Masonic District (or Province). The Dutch Masonic Calendar for 1886 shows 23 Lodges as existing in South Africa. Of these, as already related, two were erected before 1803, and three in 1863. The latest on the present list dates from 1884. These Lodges are distributed throughout the British possessions and the different Boer Republics as follows, viz.: In British South Africa, 16;<sup>1</sup> in the Orange Free State, 4; and in the Transvaal, 4; and at the head of all is a Deputy National G.M.—Mr. J. H. Hofmeijer—at Cape Town.

The relations between the English and Dutch Masons at the Cape have always been of the most friendly character. When the D.G.L. under England was re-erected (1863), the Deputy G.M. under the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands assisted at its re-inauguration, and placed at the disposal of the English brethren the Masonic Hall belonging to the Dutch Fraternity. At the celebration of the festival of St. John, it has long been customary for the English and Dutch Masons to assemble at different hours of the day, in order that the brethren under each jurisdiction might be present at both meetings.

At a quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge of England, held June 5, 1867, it was stated, "recently an objection has been raised by some of the younger English Masons against the establishment of some new Lodges lately formed by the Dutch, on the ground that the Convention of 1770<sup>2</sup> prohibits their doing so, the Cape now being an English possession, and having been so since the early part of the present century. In this view, the District Grand Lodge does not seem to participate. That body is anxious that the amicable relations that have so long subsisted between the English and Dutch Masons should continue. ∴ ∴ After setting the foregoing facts before the Grand Lodge, the Grand Registrar expressed an opinion that whatever might have been the intention of the Convention of 1770, it had not been acted on in the Cape Colony, but that the G.M. of England, by appointing the Deputy G.M. of the Netherlands to be his Prov. G.M. over English Lodges, virtually recognized the Dutch Lodges. It must be taken for granted that both the contracting parties have tacitly consented that it should not apply to the Cape. ∴ He was of opinion that as both parties seem to have considered that the Cape was neutral ground, and the existence of two Grand Lodges having been allowed to continue side by side, it would be for the benefit of the Brethren in that Colony, that as they have gone on working as friends and brothers, they should still continue to do so."<sup>3</sup> A resolution embodying the foregoing was then put and unanimously adopted.

SOUTH AFRICAN ISLANDS.

RÉUNION, or BOURBON.—Masonry appears to have been established with some success in this island, under the sanction of the Grand Orient of France. Lodges "Perfect Harmony," "Happy Reunion," and "Triple Union" were erected in 1775, 1777, and 1784; the second in order at St. Pierre, and the others at St. Denis, the capital—where also there was a Provincial Grand Lodge (taking rank from 1781), presided over in 1787 by De Beurnonville,<sup>4</sup> afterwards Marshal of France. Other Lodges sprang into existence—under the same authority—"Friendship" 1816 (revived 1859); "Happy Union," 1819; and "Beneficence," 1862. With the exception of Lodge "Friendship," however—which is also a Chapter and Areopagus—all the bodies enumerated above have ceased to exist.

<sup>1</sup> The date of constitution of one of these—the "Union," No. 50, at Graaf Reinet—is given as 1834 in the Official Calendar. From this may be inferred, that it was originally formed in 1834, and revived in 1866; also, that other Dutch Lodges were constituted in South Africa between 1802 and 1860, which have ceased to exist?

MAURITIUS, or ISLE OF FRANCE.—Lodges—under the G.O. of France—were established at Port Louis, "Triple Hope," 1778; "The Twenty-One," 1785; "The Fifteen Articles," 1786; and "Peace," 1790. In 1810 the island was captured by Britain, to whom the seizure was confirmed at the peace of 1814. The Earl of Moira, on his way to India, stayed a short time at the Mauritius, and—August 19, 1813—"at the head of all the Masons of the island, laid in Masonic form the first stone of the (Catholic) Cathedral of Port Louis." Lodge "Peace," after a slumber, resumed its labors in 1857, but is again dormant or extinct, and the only Lodges at present active under the Grand Orient of France are "Triple Hope" (1778), and "Beneficence"—constituted in 1881.

In 1811 R. T. Farquhar was appointed Prov. G.M. "of the Isle of France" under the Grand Lodge of England, but no Lodge was formed in the jurisdiction until 1816, when No. 676—Faith and Loyalty—came into existence. This was short-lived, becoming extinct before 1832, and the next English Lodge on the island was the British—No. 1038—erected in 1858. After which came the Lodge of Harmony—No. 1143—in 1860 (now extinct), followed by one bearing the same title—No. 1535—(possibly a revival), in 1875; and Friendship—No. 1696—in 1877.

An Irish Lodge—No. 235—was established at Port Louis in 1858, the warrant of which was surrendered in 1873, but a later one—Independent, No. 236—erected in 1878, still holds its ground.

Scotland is represented by a single Lodge, the "Friendship"—No. 439—chartered in 1864. The fifth and last Masonic jurisdiction which remains to be noticed is that of the Supreme Council of France, under which L'Amitié, No. 245, was added to the roll of Lodges on the island, March 30, 1877.<sup>1</sup>

A resolution, expressing sympathy with the brethren in the Mauritiens under the persecutions they had experienced at the hands of the Roman Catholic authorities in that island, was adopted unanimously by the Grand Lodge of England, December 5, 1855.

SEYCHELLES.—In these dependencies of the Mauritius a Lodge—Sincere Reunion—was erected at Mahé, the largest island of the group, under the G.O. of France in 1869.

MOZAMBIQUE.—This island and town forms the capital of the Portuguese possessions in S.E. Africa. It possesses two Lodges, both of which hold their warrants from the United Grand Lusitanian Orient.

THE WEST INDIES.

By the expression "West Indies," is understood the large group of islands lying east of Central, and north of South America. Of these the northernmost are the Bahamas or Lucayos—a long archipelago. South-west of them stretches the vast island of Cuba, the most important of the whole group, as well as the principal member of the Greater Antilles, within which are also comprised Jamaica, Hayti, Porto Rico, and several smaller islands.

East of Porto Rico begin the Lesser Antilles, also known as the Caribbee Islands, by navigators again sub-divided into the two groups of the Windward and Leeward Islands, so-called in accordance with the direction in which they lie with regard to the prevailing easterly trade wind. With a single important exception all these islands belong to European nations, being shared between Great Britain, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, France, and Spain. The solitary exception is Hayti, which is divided into two independent native states. Some few also of the Leeward group belong to the South American republic of Venezuela.

Much confusion has arisen from the same name being given to different islands, and from the same island having different names. Thus, there is Barbadoes and Barbudo, whilst the Saintes<sup>1</sup> were at one time called Barbata. St. Christopher is commonly termed St. Kitts, Porto Rico was formerly known as San Juan—the proximity of the latter to St. John naturally introducing a new element of uncertainty. Then we have Cariacon, one of the Grenadines, and Curaçoa. The Bahamas, as observed above, were likewise the Lucayos. Hispaniola, St. Domingo, and Hayti are all appellations for one island, and St. Domingo is also the name of the principal city in the Spanish part of it. Two islands are called Anguila; there is a New as well as an Old Providence—and the latter was also known as St. Catherine. The island of Samana occasionally comes in conflict with the peninsula of the same name in Hispaniola. Three islands in the West Indies were called Santa Cruz, and the same name is borne by a group in the South Pacific, and by the capital of the Canaries. There is Tortuga and the Tortugas, and the following very puzzling names of towns:—Basseterre, the capital both of Guadalupe and St. Kitts; St. Pierre, a town in Martinique, and also in Réunion (or Bourbon); St. Louis, common to Guadeloupe and Senegal; St. Denis, a town in France, as well as the capital of Réunion; Port Louis, a seaport of France, and the capital of the Mauritius; St. George, the name of towns in Grenada and Bermuda; and lastly, Santiago, the most familiar title of all, which occurs not only in Old and New Spain (Hispaniola,) the Cape Verde islands, Cuba, and Jamaica, but is also met with both in Central and South America.

It will be seen, therefore, that a study of the Masonic history of the West Indies is beset with a new class of difficulties, differing materially from those which have been already encountered in our previous researches. A great part of the information upon which I am obliged to rely, is contained in old calendars where the name of a town or an island is, as often as not, given without any real approach to exactitude. Less uncertainty prevails as we gradually sail down the river of time, but even when approaching our own times, the reference to Lodges in foreign parts (en pays étrangers) under continental jurisdictions, by the most discursive of writers, are in too many instances both vague and misleading. In every case, however, I have carefully compared all the authorities at my disposal, and to the extent that the particulars I am about to give fall short of being absolutely exhaustive, I hope some readers may be found who, with greater opportunities than myself, will be able to supply the deficiency.

I. THE GREATER ANTILLES.

CUBA.—Le Temple des Vertus T.ologales, No. 103—with the notorious Joseph Cerneau as first Master—was chartered at Havana by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, December 17, 1804.<sup>2</sup> Other Lodges were erected under the same sanction—Nos. 157, 161 in 1818;

<sup>1</sup> This denotes three of the Caribbee Islands, and is also the name of a town in France.

166, 167, in 1819; and (at Santiago de Cuba) 175 in 1820, and 181 in 1822. All, however, but the last two had died out by 1822, and in 1826 the charters of Nos 175 and 181 were revoked, because the Lodges had failed to meet for more than a year. The privilege of warranting Lodges on the island was next assumed by the Grand Lodges of Louisiana and South Carolina, under the former of which bodies sprang up Nos. 7, 1815, 11 and 14, 1818; and under the latter Nos. 50—La Constancia, 1818, and 52—La Amenidad, 1819. Then followed the Grand Orient of France with a Lodge and consistory (33°), 1819; and two further Lodges—La Constante Sophie and L'Humanité, 1821. In the year last named a circular was received by the G. L. of South Carolina from the G. L. of Ancient Freemasons in Havana, stating that a Grand Lodge had been organized there, to which the Lodge La Amenidad requested permission to transfer its allegiance. A favorable answer was of course returned, but the G. L. of South Carolina retained on its roll La Constancia for a few years, when the warrant was surrendered by the members "in consequence of the religious and political persecutions to which they were subjected."

For many years Masonry languished in the "Pearl of the Antilles," its votaries practicing their rites in secret, but not daring to indulge in any overt acts, which might entail not only expulsion from the country, but also confiscation of their property. At length, however, a faint revival set in, and a warrant was granted, November 17, 1859, by the Grand Lodge of South Carolina to St Andrew's Lodge, No. 93, "for the purpose of establishing, with two other Lodges already existing on the island, a Grand Lodge," which was accomplished on December 5 of the same year.

An independent "Grand Lodge of Colon" was thus established at Santiago de Cuba, and—December 27, 1859—a supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33° was founded in the same city by Andres Cassard.<sup>1</sup>

At this time, it must be recollected, the practice of assembling as Freemasons was forbidden by the Spanish laws, which laws, moreover, though destined to become—after the dethronement of Queen Isabella (1868)—innocuous in the Peninsula, remained for a long time in full force in Cuba.

Several, indeed, of the Captains General and other officers who ruled the island were Masons, and therefore from time to time the Craft was tolerated, but its members being always compelled to work to a great extent in the dark, found it necessary to observe the most inviolable secrecy, and even to shield themselves under "Masonic names," lest by the discovery of their own, they might incur the most grievous penalties.

Orleans in 1809, where—October., 1810—the two Lodges first named amalgamated, as No. 117 (Concord), under the G.L. of Pennsylvania, by which body a Charter—No. 118, Perseverance—was also granted the same day to certain petitioners, "chiefly refugees from San Domingo and Cuba."

<sup>4</sup> Cf. ante, pp. 113, 121. Among the names given in an official report dated August 6, 1873, of the officers of the S.C. of Colon are "Bismark" and "Josaphat," but a paragraph states—"the real names of the officers you will find in the enclosed slip, and are not stated here, to prevent their being divulged should this communication come to print" (New England Freemason, February, 1874, p. 80).

For the same reason the Supreme Council and the Grand Lodge, which soon after united in forming a Grand Orient, found a convenient title for the amalgamated body in the name of Colon—the Spanish for Columbus—it being desired above all things to conceal from the public ken the seat of the “Grand East” of the Society.

At the formation of the Grand Orient of Colon, a constitution published at Naples in 1820,<sup>1</sup> was adopted as that of the new organization. By this the Supreme Council necessarily became a section of the Grand Orient. In 1865 a new constitution was promulgated. The Sov. G. Com. of the Supreme Council became—ex officio—G. M. of the Grand Orient, but the G. M. of the Grand Lodge was still required to submit himself for election. All charters for Lodges were issued by the Grand Lodge, but had to be confirmed and *visé*d by the Supreme Council.

In 1867 the Grand Lodge promulgated a constitution of its own, in which, while recognizing its continued membership of the Grand Orient, it claimed the exclusive power to enact its own by-laws, issue charters, constitute and regulate Lodges. Their right to do this was denied by the Supreme Council. In 1868, September 30, the Grand Lodge suspended its constitution until a meeting took place of the Grand Orient, convoked for November 30. But before that time the revolution broke out, and Freemasons being regarded by the Spanish government as revolutionists,<sup>2</sup> the G. O. could not meet. The Grand Lodge, so far as it was possible, resumed labor. But the times were unpropitious. In the winter of 1869, at Santiago de Cuba, by order of Gonzales Bret, an officer of the government, eighteen persons were seized without warrant, and immediately shot, without a trial, for being Freemasons—one of them the M. W. G. M. of Colon—and many others were arrested and committed to prison for the same offence.

The number of Cuban Lodges, which in 1868 amounted to about thirty, had fallen in 1870 to about seven, and in the latter year the S. O. organized a Provincial Mother Lodge at Havana, against which the Grand Lodge very naturally protested. The warrant to this “Mother Lodge” was soon after recalled, but the dispute between the S. C. and the Grand Lodge continued. In 1873—April 11—the Grand Lodge resumed work openly, and in the following year entered into a compact with the Supreme Council, whereby it was agreed that the former should have exclusive jurisdiction over Symbolic Masonry, with the sole right of chartering Lodges, and that it should establish a Provincial Mother Lodge<sup>3</sup> in the western section of the island to govern the Lodges there, but in submission <sup>1</sup> According to M. Lecerff, however—“in Naples a Grand Orient was founded, which in 1820 [not 1820] enacted its constitution and by-laws, entitling the book ‘General Statutes of the Scottish Rite’; these came to America, and happened to come to hand of (sic) Brother Andres Cassard, the propagator of Masonry in South and Central America; in establishing Masonry in those countries, he gave the General Statutes as the universal laws of Masonry, and the Grand Orient system with the allegiance of all to the thirty-third degree was provided for therein” (Proc. Grand Lodge of Cuba, 1879).

<sup>2</sup> This, by the rival Grand Lodge of Cuba, the proceedings of which will shortly enter into the narrative, was most erroneously styled a dissolution of the Grand Lodge of Colon. The Lodges under the latter were in consequence deemed to have become “orphaned” by the former, who straightway constituted itself the foster-parent of a number of them!

<sup>3</sup> I am told by Mr. G. W. Speth, who resided on the island at the time, that the sympathies of the Freemasons were undoubtedly ranged on what the government regarded—not unnaturally—as the wrong side.

to the laws of the Grand Lodge. After this compact it is contended that the Grand Lodge, though still nominally a section in the Grand Orient, had full jurisdiction over Symbolical Masonry. Nevertheless, it is quite clear that there was a divided authority, and apparently great Masonic confusion on the island.

The Grand Lodge of Colon held five meetings in August, 1876, on the last of which—August 26—it declared itself free from all other authority, a sovereign body, with full and unlimited powers over its subordinates.

This action, however, was accelerated by an event which had taken place on August 1, when the representatives of nine chartered Lodges, and of four under dispensation,<sup>1</sup> met at Havana, and formed the Grand Lodge of Cuba. This body from the very first kept itself free from the blighting influence of the (so-called) high degrees,<sup>2</sup> which it willingly consented—December 31, 1876—should be ruled in Cuba by the Grand Orient of Spain. In a circular of September 4, 1876, the Grand Lodge of Colon claimed to have on its register 36 Lodges and 8000 members; whilst its newly-formed rival, the Grand Lodge of Cuba, in 1877, possessed an apparent following of 17 Lodges. In the latter year—June 3—a second Grand Lodge of Colon (or Columbus) at Havana was added to the two existing Craft Grand bodies.

Thus we find three organizations, each claiming to be the regular Grand Lodge. From a circular of the Grand Lodge of Cuba, we learn that in 1879 the three Lodges which formed the Grand Lodge of Colon at Santiago de Cuba in 1859, and four others, adhered to that body; but that the remaining Lodges—excepting those under the Grand Lodge of Cuba—were subject to the control of the Grand Lodge of Colon at Havana. To local jealousies must be attributed this multiplication of Grand Lodges. The representatives of some of the Havana Lodges seceded from the old (or original) Grand Lodge of Colon at Santiago de Cuba, met as the Grand Lodge, and decreed its removal to Havana.

Eventually, however, the Grand Lodges of Colon (at Havana) and Cuba formally united, and—March 28, 1880—the G.M. of one body became Grand Master, and the G.M. of the other body Deputy Grand Master. The title assumed by the new organization was the United Grand Lodge of Colon and the Island of Cuba, and it entered upon its career with a roll of 57 Lodges, and between 5000 and 6000 Masons. The Lodges under the original Grand Lodge of Colon at Santiago de Cuba, I believe, remained true to their allegiance.<sup>3</sup>

In 1885, the number of Lodges under the "United Grand Lodge" had apparently increased to 82, with Provincial Grand Lodges at Santiago de Cuba and Porto Rico; but from the official List,<sup>4</sup> which has just reached me, I find there are now only 58 Lodges in all upon the roll. Of these, 30 are in the capital, or in its vicinity, and 28 in other parts. It is possible that further schisms may have disturbed the peace of Cuban Masonry; and it strikes me as somewhat remarkable, that the Provincial Grand Lodge of Porto Rico—with the fourteen subordinate Lodges on that island, shown in sundry Calendars for 1886—have wholly disappeared in the official list of current date.<sup>1</sup>

It only remains to be stated, that from the statistics before me, there would appear to be in existence on the island 13 Lodges under the National Grand Orient, and 27 under the Grand Lodge of Spain. The latter are subject to a Prov. G.M., whose jurisdiction also extends to Porto Rico.<sup>2</sup>

HISPANIOLA.—This island is divided into the republics of Hayti in the west, and St. (or Santo) Domingo in the east. It was originally a Spanish possession, but the western portion was ceded in 1697 to the French, under whom it prospered rapidly, and in 1789 contained 793 sugar plantations, 3117 coffee plantations, 789 cotton plantations, and 182 establishments for making rum, besides other minor factories and workshops.

But the conflicting diversity of race, and monopoly of political power by the whites, led to a rupture on the outbreak of the revolution in the mother country. After fierce revolts of the mulattoes and negroes, and invasions of the English and Spanish, all the inhabitants of the colony were declared free and equal in 1793, and the command of the army was given to Toussaint l'Ouverture, who expelled the hostile intruders, and restored peace to the island.

English troops arrived in Hayti from Jamaica in 1793, and afterwards were poured into the country; but they came to die. The 82d Foot, numbering 880 men, lost all but 50 in ten weeks. Another regiment, in the same time, lost 700 men out of 1000; and it is stated that the 96th Foot perished to a man.<sup>3</sup> Major-General Sir Adam Williamson, who succeeded the Earl of Effingham as Governor of Jamaica, ultimately followed the troops sent from that island, with the title of Governor-General of St. Domingo. At the close of 1798, however, when the colony was evacuated, millions of treasure had been wasted, twenty thousand soldiers and sailors had perished, whilst there never had been any reasonable prospect of conquering the island.<sup>4</sup>

The Spanish territory was ceded to France in 1795, but Napoleon attempted to re-establish slavery in 1801, and the inhabitants shook off the French yoke in 1803, St. Domingo in that year declaring itself an independent republic. A period of confusion then ensued, there being no less than five distinctive governments upon the island in 1810. The whole of it passed again under a single republic, that of Hayti, in 1822, but in 1844 the Dominicans reasserted their independency, and the two districts have since remained separate. The territory comprised within the republic of St. Domingo was ceded to Spain in 1861, but again declared free by an act of the Cortes, March 3, 1865.

<sup>6</sup> The loss of the English has been estimated by a recent writer at 45,000 men, and twenty millions sterling. Cf. Hazard, p. 131.

Of the present condition of St Domingo, Mr. Mazari, a recent traveller, gives a deplorable account. The fertile plains lie untillied; the rich mines are unworked. There is not a plough in the whole island; and the only steam engine ever set up was destroyed by the Spaniards in 1865.

In the republic of Hayti, on the western side of this beautiful island, the state of things is even worse than in the eastern or Dominican part. All traces of the old French civilisation have vanished. There are no manufactures, and the government is bankrupt; the towns are in ruins, and the men spend their time in idleness, living on the industry of the women.

Two Lodges—St Jean de Jérusalem Écossaise and Concorde—were formed on the island, under the Grande Loge Anglaise de France in 1749. Others soon followed—Frères Réunis, 1763; Amitié Indissoluble, 1765; Vérité, 1767; Les Frères Choisis, 1772;<sup>1</sup> and a Provincial Grand Lodge—under the Grand Orient—October 1, 1778. These were doubtless established on French territory, in the district now known as "Hayti," though the term "St Domingo" is alone used in the lists.

The remaining Lodges, constituted under French authority prior to the Revolution were—L'Unanimité, Petit Goavé,<sup>2</sup> 1774; Les Frères Zélés, Cavaillon, 1775; Raison Perfectionnée, Petit Tron, 1779; Réunion désirée, Port au Prince, 1783; Choix des Hommes, Jacmel, 1784; and Frères Discrètes, Cayes, 1785 (Nos. 292, 291, 456, 466, 521, and 591).

Besides the degrees of the Craft, the rite of Perfection, as we have already seen,<sup>3</sup> had been introduced into the island by Stephen Morin in 1761, and doubtless continued to be worked until swept away—like all other vestiges of French domination—by the great political cataclysm, in which that remarkable personage is himself believed to have perished. We have seen that during the closing years of the eighteenth century Hispaniola had become the headquarters of the newly invented American rite, called—but without any valid reason—the A. and A. S. R. 33rd, and that on the expulsion of the French colonists the rite in question had been introduced into France.

The Dominican, or to speak with precision, the Haytian Lodges, which had served as the basis of the rite, in most cases closed their doors during the political troubles, and

As a rule, Lodges constituted down to the year 1772, will be found in the earlier, and those erected after the formation of the Grand Orient, in the later lists. The numbers attached to Lodges under the S. C. 33rd are the official ones.

Both De Grasse-Tilly and Haquet—who so far antedated him as to be first in the field with the revived Rite of Perfection—the former a planter and the latter a notary, were residents in the French (or western) side of St. Domingo, i.e., the part now known as Hayti.

Freemasonry, which was strictly confined to the white inhabitants, became almost, if not quite, extinct.

A warrant was granted from Pennsylvania, in 1786, on the application of "a Lodge held at Cape François, directed to General Washington as Grand Master of all America." A second Lodge, under the same jurisdiction, was established at Port au Prince in 1789, which continued to meet regularly throughout the political convulsions of 1791, and at the close of 1798 (as related in the Proceedings of the G.L. of Pennsylvania), "after having been obliged by reason of the disturbances in the island, their Lodge being burnt, etc., to suspend their Masonic operations, had again begun, and were carrying on their works."

In 1793—December 4—sundry French brethren, "driven from the island of St. Domingo," were granted a dispensation by the Grand Lodge of New York to meet as a Lodge in that city for the period of six months. This, which was named La Tendre Amitié Franco-Américaine, surrendered its acting warrant, June 4, 1794; but the money and papers of the Lodge were delivered—by order of the Grand Lodge—to L'Unité Américaine, which took its place, May 19, 1795. The latter received a regular charter in 1797, becoming No. 12 on the roll, and in the same year was concerned in a series of irregularities which are not without interest in our present inquiry. From internal bickerings dissensions had arisen in the Lodge, and it decided to return the New York warrant, and revert "to the authority of their natural Grand Lodge of France." Accordingly, a French Lodge, L'Union Française, was established in New York, December 6, by Huet Lachelle, a deputy G. M. under the jurisdiction of the G. O. of France, and Prov. G. M. for St. Domingo. L'Unité Américaine after this made submission, was accorded grace, but split into two parts, one remaining the old Lodge, and the other becoming L'Union Française, No. 14 on the roll of New York. With the subsequent history of these bodies, we are not concerned; it will suffice to have learned from the authority upon which I have relied for the foregoing details, that a large number of Haytian brethren found an asylum in New York; also, that the Prov. G. M. of "St Domingo" and four of his Grand Officers were included in the number of these refugees.

In 1802, owing to the arrival of 30,000 veteran French troops, the negro forces of Toussaint l'Ouverture were compelled to retire to the mountains, and the survivors of the colonists who had fled to different countries returned in great numbers, but in 1803 were for the second time expelled. Meanwhile, however, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania had extended its jurisdiction in Hayti. Several Lodges were erected, a list of which will be found below; and a Provincial Grand Lodge of St Domingo was established January 9, 1802. This was vacated (apparently in error) April 7, but reinstated September 15, 1806, and the jurisdiction extended to the island of Cuba—whither, with two of his Lodges, the Prov. G. M. had retired.

In 1806, in the portion of Hayti ruled by President Pèthion, some of the French Lodges revived, and negotiations were set on foot by one Trichet, which resulted in the erection of two Lodges under the (older) Grand Lodge of England in 1809.<sup>1</sup> This was followed up by the appointment of a Prov. G.M.—John Goff—in 1811,<sup>2</sup> and by the formation of two further English Lodges in 1817.<sup>3</sup> Meanwhile the efforts of the G.O. of France to obtain the upper hand were frustrated by the action of the Government.

About the same time—1810—in that part of the island under the sway of the Emperor Henry I., there was also a revival, and a vast number of so-called degrees, with pompous and unmeaning titles, were introduced by a charlatan named D'Obernay, which were accepted with avidity at the Imperial Court. After this came a pause, owing to the political convulsions which disturbed the peace of the island. In both of the existing Republics—mulatto and black—one revolution seems to have followed another, the only variation being the wars that from time to time broke out between the two States. But after the establishment of a single Government (1822) the English Prov. Grand Lodge was transformed—May 23, 1823—into an independent Grand Lodge of Hayti, with President Boyer as patron, and his Prime Minister, General Ingignac, as G.M. The constitutions were settled January 24, 1824, and the Grand Lodge was established on precisely the same basis as the United Grand Lodge of England. For many years the Craft prospered and pursued the even tenor of its way, until about 1830, when a certain St. Lambert, an envoy of the Supreme Council of France (or A. and A.S.R. 33°), began to stir up strife by again attempting to propagate the high degrees.

Five Lodges in all, the two earliest of which are still in existence, were erected under the authority of the A. and A.S.R.;<sup>4</sup> whilst the rival French jurisdiction, that of the Grand Orient, has only warranted a single Lodge on the island during the present century. This, "Les Mages du Tropique," was established at Cayes in 1831, and has long since disappeared from the roll of the G.O., though as an Areopagus distinguished by an identical title, and meeting at the same place, is shown in the Tableau Des Ateliers, Supreme Council of France, from which an extract will be found below,<sup>5</sup> it is natural to suppose that there must have been a transfer of allegiance.

and those only "reinstated" which are specifically mentioned. Nos. 95 and 97-99 were established in the first instance by the Prov. G.L. of St. Domingo.

<sup>5</sup> AREOPAGUS (30°)—No. 52, Les Mages du Tropique, Cayes, 1834. CHAPTERS (18°)—Nos. 49, La Conscience Eprouvée, Cayes, 1822; 69, Les Elus de la Vérité, St. Marc, 1839; 73, La Croix du Sud, Jacmel, 1840; and 106, Les Croisés Dominicains, St. Domingo, 1846. LODGES—Nos. 10, Les Élèves de la Nature, Cayes, 1832; 59, Les Philadelphes, Jacmel, 1837; 62, La Vraie Gloire, St. Marc, 1837; 97, Les Philalèthes, Port au Prince, 1845; and 105, La Constante Union, St. Domingo, 1846. The italics denote bodies which are dormant or extinct.

In 1836 the Grand Lodge, with a view to terminating the confusion which prevailed, transformed itself into a Grand Orient. This alteration, of course, involved the institution of a Supreme Council 33°, which only claimed the allegiance of all fluctuating bodies under the obedience of any branch of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite.

In 1843, owing to an insurrection of the blacks, Boyer—the mulatto President—was displaced. A few years of turmoil then ensued, and the Craft once more languished. In 1845 a new envoy of the French Supreme Council, Fresnel, having obtained the protection of President Santana, almost overthrew the National G.O., but was himself ultimately expelled for political intrigue. After his departure the G.O. of Hayti revived, entered into a compact with the G.O. of France, and in 1851 ruled over no less than 31 Lodges, besides 49 associations of Masons which met under varied titles for the communication of the so-called high degrees.

The seat of the G.O. is at Port au Prince, and the Grand Masters, as far as I have been able to trace them, were (circa) 1860, J. de Paul, President of the Council; 1865, Dubois, Ambassador at London; 1871-80, A. T. Bonchereau, Senator; and since 1881, F. F. Duplessis, President of the Council of Instruction.

In 1844—February 27—total separation from Hayti was declared by the Dominicans, and the eastern (or Spanish) portion of the island formed itself into the republic of Santo Domingo. In 1861, as already related, it once more placed itself under the government of Spain. A revolt, however, broke out in 1863, and Spain finally relinquished its chargeful child.

A Grand Orient of St Domingo was organized at the capital of the same name December 11, 1858. The Lodges taking part in this proceeding were originally warranted, 1830-34, by the G.O. of Hayti (Port au Prince,) at the time when the whole island was under an undivided rule. Falling, however, into a state of somnolency during the wars, 1844-47, they were suppressed (or erased) in 1849. The G.O. of St Domingo, thus formed by these resuscitated Lodges, appears never to have had more than some half dozen daughters on its roll.

During the reunion with Spain, 1861-65, Masonry either died out or was practised in secret, but a Grand Lodge of the Dominican republic was organized—January 26, 1865—under Benito Perez as G.M. This was followed—October 22—by a Supreme Council for the High Degrees, and the two bodies united—January 1, 1866—in re-establishing a National Grand Orient.

In January, 1867, Thomas Bobadilla presided over the G.O., with Castro as D.G.M.; whilst the Lodges were ten in number, with a total membership of about 2000.

The sequence of Grand Masters of the Grand Lodge has been as follows:—1858-59, Bobadilla; 1860, Antonio Abad Alfari; 1861, Jacinto de Castro; 1861-64, Grand Lodge dormant; 1865, Benito Perez; 1866, Manuel Echenique; 1867, Peter A. Delgado; 1869, Noël Henriquez; 1870, Sully du Breil. From 1871 the presidents of Grand Lodge are no longer given in the official lists, and whilst Bobadilla has ever since been G.M. of the G.O., the Grand Lodge and Supreme Council have evidently been relegated to the position of subordinate chambers, as indeed is generally more or less the custom in all Grand Orient systems.

In bringing this sketch to a close, it is only necessary to add that a solitary Lodge—Alianza, No. 251—appears to have been erected at "Santo Domingo" by the Grand Lodge of Spain, or in other words, by the governing Masonic body of which Don Manuel Becerra is the G. M.<sup>1</sup>

JAMAICA.—Lodges owning fealty to the Mother Grand Lodge of the world were of early introduction in this British dependency. The first was established at Kingston in 1739, and the second at Port Royal in 1742. But it is probable that the number of Masons in Jamaica at that period was much larger than would be inferred from these statistics, as there were ten thousand resident whites on the island in 1741; and in the same year the harbor of Port Royal was crowded with twenty-nine line-of-battle ships, and a large number of frigates, sloops, and transports, containing in all, fifteen thousand sailors and twelve thousand soldiers.<sup>2</sup>

Ballard Beckford, George Hynde, and Alexander Crawford were appointed Provincial Grand Masters for Jamaica by Lord Ward in 1742-44,<sup>3</sup> but the exact dates of their respective appointments there are no means of determining.

A third Lodge was erected on the island in 1746, but as we now approach a conflict of jurisdictions, it will be convenient if the statistics first in order are separately grouped, so that the proceedings of the two Grand Lodges of England in this distant possession may be distinguishable.<sup>4</sup> Before, however, passing away from our immediate subject, the appointments of Thomas Marriot Perkins,<sup>5</sup> 1762-64; William Winter, 1768-69; Jasper Hall, 1772; Sir Peter Parker,<sup>6</sup> 1778; and Major-Gen. (afterwards Sir Adam) Williamson,<sup>7</sup> 1793, as Prov. G. M.'s under the older Grand Lodge, may be briefly recorded.

Although Lodges under the Schismatic (or Ancient) sanction were established at Old Harbor and Green Island in 1763 and 1772 respectively, the two Grand Lodges of England appear to have kept out of collision—at least in the Greater Antilles—until 1775, by warranting Lodges in different parts of the island. In the year named, however, a Lodge was erected at Green Island by the older of these bodies. This, being viewed as an invasion of jurisdiction, led to reprisals, which in the first instance took the form of a counter demonstration at Kingston—hitherto a virgin fortress of the original Grand Lodge—where an "Atholl" Lodge was established in 1786.<sup>8</sup>

After 1775 no further Lodges under the original Grand Lodge of England came into existence on the island until 1812, when a warrant—No. 638—was granted to some French refugees from Hayti. This Lodge, however, soon died out.

In 1806 Dr. (afterwards Sir) Michael Benignus Clare was appointed (Atholl) Prov. G.M. The formation of this Prov. Grand Lodge sealed the fate of the Lodges under the rival sanction. Many of them ceased to work, whilst others accepted provincial numbers at the hands of the enemy. But besides absorbing Lodges already in being, the new Prov. Grand Lodge was instrumental in ushering into existence many others, some of which obtained places on the London roll. Nineteen Lodges, and probably more, if we could trace them, were ranged under the Provincial banner a few years after 1806.

A Lodge, St Andrew, No. 102, was established on the island by the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1760, which remained on the roll, though probably inactive for many years, until 1816. Jamaica has also been the seat of a Scottish province from at least 1771, in which year it is first alluded to in the records of the G.L. of Scotland.

Three Jamaica Lodges were constituted by the Grand Lodge of Ireland during the last century, and a fourth sprang into existence in 1814.<sup>1</sup> At the present time, however, that jurisdiction is unrepresented on the island.

In 1782, of all our former possessions in the West Indies, Jamaica, Barbadoes, and Antigua only remained. Jamaica would have next fallen—in which case its later Masonic history might have formed a part of that of the Grand Orient of France—had it not been for the victory of Lord Rodney over the Comte de Grasse on April 12 of that year. The whole of the battering cannon and artillery intended for the attack on the island was on board the ships then captured.

The Earl of Effingham, who only resigned the office of Acting G.M. of the (older) Grand Lodge of England, on his appointment as Governor of Jamaica, arrived in the colony in 1790, but died November 19 of the same year.<sup>2</sup>

As we have already seen, six British Lodges, which, with a single exception,<sup>3</sup> worked under Atholl warrants, were brought forward at the Union (1813) on the roll of the United Grand Lodge of England. In 1816 Sir Michael Clare—former Prov. G.M. under the junior society—received what may be termed a patent of confirmation, and until the departure of this worthy for England, June 9, 1831,<sup>4</sup> when the Prov. Grand Lodge came to an untimely end, Freemasonry on the whole made satisfactory progress on the island.

Harbor, 1763; 177, Green Island, 1772; 233, Kingston, 1786; 257 [     ], 1789; 262, Royal Artillery, Port Royal, 1790; 261, Port Royal, 1793; 283, Kingston, 1794; 288, Kingston, 1795; 301, Kingston, 1796—became the Prov. Grand Lodge, 1806; and 342, Kingston, 1809. Of these Lodges, Nos. 121, 177, 233, 262, and 301 were not carried forward at the Union; Nos. 257, 261, and 288 died out before 1832; whilst Nos. 283 and 342 survive as the "Royal" and "Friendly" Lodges, present Nos. 207 and 239.

<sup>3</sup> No. 645—former No. 638. The others were Nos. 324, 355, 357, 364 and 438—former Nos. 257, 261, 283, 288 and 342.

<sup>4</sup> During this period nine new Lodges, Nos. 686, Phoenix, Port Royal; 691-97, Sussex, Kingston—Clare, Spanish Town—Atholl, Lucca Bay—Seville, St. Ann's Bay—Duke of York, Falmouth—Concord, Spanish Town—and Cornwall, Montego Bay—all in 1817; and 810, Montego Bay, 1826, were added to the English roll.

During the period last reviewed, 1813-31, some Lodges under other jurisdictions were formed in the colony, to which it becomes necessary to refer. One—as we have seen—sprang up under an Irish warrant in 1814,<sup>1</sup> and two years later the first of a series of Lodges was established by the Grand Orient of France.<sup>2</sup>

According to a local historian,<sup>3</sup> the G.O. in 1817 issued charters to some French refugees at Kingston, empowering them to erect three several chapters or consistories—the Sublime Lodge, for conferring the so-called “Ineffable Degrees”—the second, for a Council of Princes of Jerusalem—and the third, for a Grand Council of thirty-three degrees. The same writer adds, that becoming “wearied of these diversions, and desirous of working legitimate Masonry,” the members of the bodies aforesaid applied in 1818 to the Grand Lodge of England for a warrant to open the Lodge La Bénignité, which, however, drew its last breath in 1829. Here there is manifest confusion with regard to dates, which is heightened by some evidence from another source, which informs us, that in 1811, a charter for Lodge Bienfaisance, No. 1, was granted by the Grand Consistory of Jamaica, to a number of St. Domingo Masons at New Orleans—late residents on the island. Also, unless Bénignité was held at Kingston, none of the French Lodges met at the capital. The Lodge in question, moreover, never obtained an English warrant, one alone having been issued to Jamaica between 1817 and 1840, viz., to the Friendly Lodge, Montego Bay, No. 810, in 1826—which at the present time is still in existence. Nevertheless there is no reason to doubt that the various French rites were extensively worked in the colony. This was apparently the case from very early times, and if those writers are correct by whom Stephen Morin is alleged to have been a Jew,<sup>4</sup> the fact that there has always been a large Hebrew element in Jamaica, coupled with the circumstance that in no other island of the group under examination were either Jews or Freemasons so safe from persecution, will in a great measure account for the causes which have led to its figuring so largely in the history of the A. and A.S.R. 33°.

On the passing of the act for the abolition of slavery—1833—many Lodges closed their doors, nor did any general reaction set in until about the end of 1844, when two new Lodges were erected, one a representative of the Scottish jurisdiction, whilst the other was opened under a charter from the Grand Lodge of Carthage by a number of Columbian patriots who had taken refuge in Kingston. The latter ultimately became No. 754—Union et Concordia—under the Grand Lodge of England<sup>5</sup> in 1845.

The Rev. W. P. Burton had been appointed Prov. G.M. for Jamaica by the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1843, who, however, as in the parallel cases of Colonel Young in the West and Dr. Burnes in the East Indies, at first held office in partibus infidelium.<sup>1</sup> But Scottish Masonry soon secured a firm footing on the island, where there are now ten Lodges, which with No. 357, Greytown, Mosquito, form the present province of Jamaica and Greytown, No. 33.<sup>2</sup>

This resolute action on the part of Scotland threatened to be fraught with the same evil consequences to the English Lodges in the colony as befell those in the Bombay Presidency on the appointment as Scottish Prov. G.M. of Dr. Burnes. It was soon felt that the brethren under the Grand Lodge of Scotland enjoyed a precedence over the others, and the English Lodges at last mustered up courage to petition for the appointment of Dr. Robert Hamilton as their Provincial ruler. Their request was granted, and the Doctor commissioned in the first instance—November 5, 1858—as Prov. G.M. for East Jamaica, a jurisdiction which was subsequently extended over the whole island. Dr. Hamilton died in 1880, and no successor was appointed until 1886. The English Lodges in Jamaica are now eleven in number. Seven of these meet at Kingston, and one each at Port Royal, Savanna La Mar, Spanish Town, and Montego Bay.<sup>3</sup>

PORTO RICO.—The last of the Greater Antilles is this Spanish possession, which alone of the group is entirely colonized, cultivated, and peopled. The climate is healthy, and more favorable for Europeans than that of any other of the West Indian islands. The number of inhabitants (1877) is 635,000, rather more than half of whom are whites; yet though twelve times smaller in extent than Cuba, it contains half the population of that island. Under the numerous Spanish and Cuban Grand Bodies, Porto Rico has generally occupied the position of a separate district under a Provincial Superintendent. Upon its early Masonic history, however, I shall not dwell, inasmuch as it would be only pursuing still further the vein of conjecture in which it has been necessary to indulge whilst attempting to deal with the difficult problem of Spanish Masonry. A Lodge—Le Restauracion—under the G.O. of Colon, was in existence at Mayaguez in 1860, and the fluctuations of which Cuba was the scene during the struggle for existence of the Grand Lodges there, made their influence felt throughout the Spanish Antilles.

In the lists before me Don Manuel Romeno is shown as the Provincial Superintendent of Cuba and Porto Rico under the Grand Lodge of Spain (of which Becerra is the G.M.) No Lodges are enumerated, but we find five on the roll of the Grand Orient of Spain, though in this case without a Provincial Superintendent. The S.C. of France is represented by a single Lodge—Le Phénix, No. 230, constituted 1874. Until quite recently there were fourteen Lodges on the island in subjection to the United Grand Lodge of Colon and Cuba. These, however, formed themselves into an independent Grand Lodge, September 20, 1885. The ports of San Juan, Ponce, and Mayaguez are the greatest cen-tree of Masonic activity; and the last-named town, besides supporting two Lodges, possesses a Consistory 32°, a Council 30°, and a Chapter 18°. It is a little singular that whilst the Lodges at Porto Rico have severed their connection with the "United Grand Lodge of Colon and the Island of Cuba," the Chapters and other associations of Masons in the lesser Spanish dependency are still dutiful in their allegiance to the Supreme Council of the same title.

Upon this a little light is thrown by the action of Don Antonio Romero Ortiz (at the time presiding over the Grand Lodge of Spain), who, in a decree, dated March 13, 1883, "denounced the Grand Lodge of Colon and Cuba and the Masons of its obedience as traitors to the Government and to the Mother Country," simply because they declined to recognize his authority to govern or interfere in the affairs of "Symbolical Masonry" in Cuba. In the same year the United Grand Lodge of Colon and Cuba announced by circular that there being in all three Supreme Councils and three Grand Lodges in Spain, it had recognized the Grand Lodge of Seville as being "the only really independent organization of Craft Masonry" then existing in that country. This, of course, was dealing very summarily with the pretensions of the Grand Lodge (or Orient) under Ortiz, which Mr. Albert Pike pronounced to be the only Grand Body in Spain legitimately entitled to recognition as a regular Masonic body. The name I have last quoted being, as many will be aware, that of the Sov. G. Com. of the S.C. 33° for the U.S.A., Southern Jurisdiction—the body of which he is the head being to other Supreme Councils what the Grand Lodge of England is to other Grand Lodges, and his own personal authority perhaps ranking higher than that of any other Mason either in the Old World or the New.

The Grand Lodge and Supreme Council of Colon and Cuba have therefore followed different roads, the latter treading in the beaten track traversed by Supreme Councils in amity with that presided over by the patriarch and law-giver of the rite,<sup>1</sup> and the former boldly striking out a path of its own.

Owing to the state of political affairs in the island, and from the influential position held by Ortiz in Spain,<sup>2</sup> the charges he made were calculated to subject the Cuban Masons both to surveillance and persecution on the part of the authorities. At Porto Rico the circumstances were somewhat different. Out of Cuba itself the S.C. of Colon was long regarded—and not alone by votaries of the A. and A.S.R. 33°—as a more stable institution than any other of the numerous Grand Bodies which sprang up like mushrooms in the island. When, therefore, the two governing Masonic bodies at Havannah, each in its own way, attempted to solve the problem of Craft sovereignty in Spain, it is not to be wondered at that the confusion existing in the Peninsula was reproduced with more or less fidelity in the Spanish Antilles. In Porto Rico there are no less than five Chapters 18°, besides a Council 30°, and a Consistory 32°. These, as already related, adhered to their allegiance; but the Lodges on the island set up a Grand Lodge of Porto Rico at the city of Mayaguez in 1885, and it is satisfactory to state that the Grand Lodge of Colon and Cuba has since established fraternal relations with the new body.

II. THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.

This name is given to an extensive group of small islands lying between Porto Rico and the Lesser Antilles. The islands are divided between Great Britain, Denmark, and Spain;

Tortola and Virgin Gorda (or Spanish Town) being the most important of those under British rule; St. Thomas, St. John, and Santa Cruz (or Sainte Croix), of those belonging to Denmark; whilst the largest of the Spanish islets—Oulebra—has an area of only ten square miles. The islands changed hands very frequently up to 1815, when their present political position was defined. The British islands are under the governor of St. Kitts, the Spanish are dependencies of Porto Rico, and the Danish governor has his seat at Christianstadt, the capital of Santa Cruz. This island, which, though politically united with the Virgin group, is geographically distinct, has attained to a higher degree of prosperity than any other in the archipelago. English is generally spoken throughout the entire group, with the exception of St. Thomas and St. John, in which the language of their first possessors—Dutch—has been retained.<sup>1</sup>

TORTOLA AND VIRGIN GORDA.—Lodges were established in these islands by the Schismatics or "Ancients" in 1760 and 1763, and by the rival organization—the original or legitimate Grand Lodge of England—in 1765. Each of the three Lodges was continued in the lists until the Union (1813,) when they one and all disappear.<sup>2</sup>

SANTA CRUZ, or ST. CROIX.—A Lodge at this island, dating from 1756, obtained a temporary footing on the English roll in the Engraved List for 1758, as No. 224, and ten years later advanced to a higher niche corresponding with its actual seniority, as No. 216. This was afterwards described as the Lodge of St. George, and is shown in our lists until 1814, when it apparently became subject to Danish jurisdiction in 1776, and died out in 1788. John Ryan was appointed Prov. G.M. under England in 1777, but no English charter has since been granted to the Masons in Santa Cruz, though a Scottish Lodge—Eureka, No. 605—was erected at Christianstadt in 1877.

ST. THOMAS.—A dispensation "to hold a Lodge for six months" was granted for this island, by the G.M. of Pennsylvania, in 1792. Next comes "La Concorde," borne on the register of the Grand Lodge of Denmark, 1798-1823, but whether of "Danish or English origin" there is no evidence to show. The Harmonic Lodge, No. 708, which still exists, was founded by the Grand Lodge of England in 1818. After this, in the year 1855, came Les Cours Sincères, No. 141, under the S.C. for France. Not content, however, with these two jurisdictions, some Masons on the island requested Andrew Cassard of New York to procure them a warrant from the S.C. for the United States S.J., but at his suggestion they eventually applied to the Grand Lodge of Colon—at Santiago de Cuba—and were constituted as a Lodge—Star in the East—under the authority of that body by Cassard in 1871. But the S.C. for Colon claimed that as the Grand Orient had not met, the Grand Lodge was still "in recess," and in 1872 passed a formal decree censuring Cassard for his action at St. Thomas. In the same year the members of Star in the East applied, though without success, to the G.M. of South Carolina for a Dispensation to enable them to continue their labors, alleging that the other Lodges on the island would not recognize them, on the pretext that the Grand Lodge of Colon was not known to be in existence. In 1873, however, they were more fortunate, as a charter and not merely a temporary dispensation was granted them by the Grand Lodge of Louisiana—from which body the circumstance of a prior application having been made to the G.M. of South Carolina had been carefully withheld. But the petitioners were in no better position than before, for they were neither recognized nor allowed to visit by the other Lodges of St. Thomas, and the warrant which had been so imprudently granted by the Grand Lodge of Louisiana was at once withdrawn when the actual circumstances of the case were brought to the notice of that body.<sup>1</sup>

III. THE LESSER ANTILLES OR CARIBBEE ISLANDS.

ANTIGUA.—The earliest Lodges in the West Indies were established in this island, which is the most important of the Leeward group, and the residence of the British Governor-in-Chief. No less than three holding English warrants were in existence in 1739, and a fourth is said to have been established in the previous year by the authority of the Prov. G.M. of New England. A little later the Freemasons in the colony built a large hall for their meetings, and applied to the Grand Lodge of England for permission to style one of their Lodges (No. 192,) "the Great Lodge at St. John's in Antigua," which favor was granted to them in April, 1744.<sup>2</sup>

The Leeward Islands were constituted a Province under England<sup>3</sup> in 1738, and under Scotland in 1769. The first Scottish Lodge in the Lesser Antilles was erected in the latter year at St. Kitts, by which name the province was designated in 1786. But in 1792 the old title—Leeward Caribbee Islands—was restored, and again altered in 1837 on the appointment of Dr. Stephenson of Grenada, to be "Provincial G.M. of the Province comprehending the Caribbee Islands." Lieut.-General James Adolphus Oughton<sup>4</sup> was appointed Lieut.-Governor of Antigua, December 18, 1772, but the presence on the island of a former Grand Master of Scotland was destitute of any Masonic result, as the earliest Scottish Lodge in the colony was not established until 1787.<sup>5</sup> The only Lodges<sup>6</sup> since erected are the two now existing, both of which are on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England.<sup>7</sup>

The following extract from a long-forgotten work will show the exceptional difficulties against which the European residents in the West Indies had to contend, and may serve to excite our surprise—not that more Lodges were not constituted, but that any survived at all in the pestilential climate where the Lodge work had to be carried on. According to my authority, "the 68th regiment was sent to Auxigua in 1805, with its ranks sadly reduced by the climate. It had arrived in the West Indies about five years before, with two battalions, each 1200 strong; and I have understood from their officers that they had buried in those five years 2400 men and 68 officers—the regiment had, of course, received repeated drafts of men from England during that period."

BARBADOES.—Masonry was early established in this the chief of the Windward Islands, and the residence of the Governor-General of the group. It was constituted a Masonic province in 1740,<sup>1</sup> and in the same year the first of a long series of Lodges under the Grand Lodge of England<sup>2</sup> came into existence. None of these, however, were carried forward on the Union roll in 1814, though one—No. 186, St. Michael's Lodge—was a few years later restored to the list, but again left out at the next change of numbers (1832), to be a second time restored (1841), and finally erased, March 5, 1862. It is a little singular that the first five Lodges established in Barbadoes bore saintly appellatives.

Three Lodges were warranted in the colony by the Grand Lodge of Ireland in the last century, and there was a Prov. Grand Lodge in existence in 1804, but this having now become a lapsed jurisdiction, its further consideration may be dispensed with. Though for the information of local antiquaries, the Lodges formerly existing are specified in a note.<sup>3</sup>

The Atholl or Ancient Masons obtained a footing on the island in 1790, and a Lodge constituted in that year still exists. Three others were afterwards erected, but though carried forward at the Union, were dropped out at the change of numbers in 1832.<sup>4</sup>

The Grand Lodge of Scotland has never been represented in the colony by more than a single Lodge, the first—Scotia, No. 267—having been chartered in 1799; and a second (of the same name) in 1844. At the present time there are only two Lodges in Barbadoes—the Scottish one last referred to, and the original "Atholl" Lodge of 1790; for although three others have been constituted since the Union by the United Grand Lodge of England,<sup>5</sup> all these have passed out of existence.

CURAÇOA.—Lodges under the Grand Lodge of Holland appear to have been established on the island in 1757, 1773, and 1787—L'Amitié, L'Union, and De Vergeuoeging. In 1807 it was taken by the English, but restored to the Dutch in 1815. During the British occupation, Nos. 346, Union, and 627, Content and British Union, were warranted in 1810 and 1811 by the Atholl and Original Grand Lodges of England respectively. Both were carried forward at the Union, but are now extinct, the latter not surviving the closing up of numbers in 1832, and the former being struck off the roll, March 5, 1862. Curaçoa is the seat of the Dutch Masonic province of the West Indies, and there are at the present time only two Lodges on the island, one under the Grand Lodge of Holland—

De Vergenoeging (Contentment)—established in 1787, but apparently revived after a period of abeyance in 1854; ' the other under the Grand Lodge of England, No. 939, erected 1855. The close resemblance between the names of the early Dutch and English Lodges might almost suggest that in some instances there was a divided or dual allegiance.

DOMINICA.—The Lodge of Good Friends was formed at Roseau by the Grand Lodge of England in 1773.<sup>1</sup> In the same year a warrant was granted (though not issued) for the colony by the Atholl Masons, and in 1785 a second,<sup>2</sup> under which a Lodge was constituted, also at the capital, Roseau. But neither of the bodies thus established survived the union of the two societies, which is not to be wondered at when we take into consideration that the island was captured by the French in 1778, restored to England in 1783, again surrendered to France in 1802, and finally received back as a British possession in 1814. A revival took place in 1823, when the Lodge of Chosen Friends, No. 777, was established, which remained on the roll until swept away—in company with eighty-eight other foreign or colonial Lodges—by order of the Grand Lodge of England, March 5, 1862. The only Lodge at present on the island is No. 1742, under the same jurisdiction, erected in 1878.

GRENADA.—In 1763—October 8—Brigadier-General Robert Melville was appointed Governor of Dominica. Grenada, the Grenadines, St. Vincent, and Tobago were included in his government—a new one—which was styled that of Grenada. This officer received three patents as Prov. G.M.—(1) for Guadeloupe—when Lieutenant-Governor of Fort Royal on that island, and Lieutenant-Colonel 38th Foot, 1759-62;<sup>3</sup> (2) for the Caribbee and Windward Islands, 1764; and (3) for Grenada, 1780. The year following Melville's appointment to this new government, Lodges were formed on the island by the Grand Lodges of England and France. Three in all were constituted under the former,<sup>4</sup> and two under the latter jurisdiction<sup>5</sup> in the last century; whilst the Atholl Masons, who were five years later in obtaining a footing in the colony, chartered one military and two stationary Lodges within the same period.<sup>6</sup>

None of the English Lodges were carried forward at the Union, and the next evidence of Masonic activity is presented by the erection of an Irish Lodge—No. 252—in 1819, which, however, surrendered its warrant in 1825, and another of later constitution—No. 224, formed 1848—has also ceased to work.

Scotland was next in the field (1820), and four Lodges<sup>7</sup> have been warranted under that jurisdiction, the three latest of which are in existence at this day. A year later (1821) the Masonry of England was again represented, and shortly afterwards by a second Lodge,<sup>8</sup> but both the bodies thus constituted are now extinct. G. G. Munro was appointed Prov. G.M. under the same sanction in 1835, and Felix Palmer in 1831.

The latest foreign jurisdiction by which the colony was invaded would appear to have been that of the Grand Orient of France, if by "Grenade" we are to understand Grenada, where a Lodge—"La Bienfaisance"—was established December 21, 1828.

GUADELOUPE.—In this, the chief West Indian possession of France, and its dependency Marie-Galante, the following Lodges are shown in the lists as having been constituted by the Grand Lodge or Grand Orient of France:—Antigue, 1760; La Vraie Fraternité (Marie-Galante) and St. Jean d'Ecosse, 1768; La Bonne Amitié and L'Humanité, 1770; St. Louis de la Concorde, 1772; La Paix, 1784; Les Philalèthes [under a warrant from the Mother Lodge of the Scots Philosophic Rite], 1806; L'Amenité, 1807; La Fraternité (Marie-Galante), 1829; Les Disciples d'Hiram, 1835; and Les Elus D'Occident, 1864. The Lodges still existing are shown in italics, the two of earliest date being at Pointe-à-Pitre, and the remaining one at Basse-Terre.

Although Guadeloupe was in the hands of the English, 1759-63, and again occupied by them in 1813 and 1815, this—as already related—was attended by no other Masonic result than the grant of a Provincial Patent to Lieutenant-Colonel Melville, one of the officers of the British garrison, 1759-63.

MARTINIQUE.—Masonry, in this magnificent island, appears to have been introduced almost as early as in France itself. Thus, by the Grand Orient, or by the several Grand Bodies which preceded it, we find there were chartered—La Parfaite Union, 1738; St. Pierre des Frères Unis, 1760; La Tendre Fraternité,<sup>1</sup> 1765; La Sincérité des Cœurs, 1777; Les Frères Choisis, 1781; Le Zèle et la Bienfaisance, La Parfaite Amitié, and La Paix (au Marin), 1786.

From 1794 to 1802, and again, 1809-15, the island was in the possession of the English. During the first period a Lodge was established under the Grand Lodge of Ireland—No. 690, in 1801; and during the second another under the (Atholl) Grand Lodge of England—No. 359, Lodge of Chosen Friends, 1813. The former of these was transferred to Trinidad, 1811, and cancelled 1858. The latter, which bore the last number issued by the so-called "Ancients," was carried forward on the Union roll, but died out before the year 1832.

The later Lodges constituted by the G.O. of France were L'Harmonie, 1803; Les Frères Choisis, 1814; La Concorde, 1820; and La Bienfaisance, 1821. At the present time, however, according to the various calendars, there is but a single Lodge at work on the island—L'Union, St. Pierre—established by warrant of the (French) S.C. 33° in 1848.<sup>2</sup>

MONTserrat AND NEVIS.—Although the earliest Lodges in the West Indies sprang up with a luxuriant growth in Antigua, to Montserrat belongs the distinction of having been constituted the first Masonic Province either in the Greater or the Lesser Antilles.

<sup>2</sup> Leon Hyneman (World Wide Register, p. 533) locates two Lodges—Réunion des Artes and Trigonométrie—at Martinique, which, from having been established at Port (not Fort) Royal, I have assigned to Jamaica. He also gives the name of "Sante Trinité" among those of the Lodges at Martinique. Thus, however, I have altogether failed to trace in the lists of Lodges warranted by the G.O. or S.C. of France.

This occurred in 1737 during the administration of the Earl of Darnley;<sup>1</sup> and thirty years later, December 2, 1767, a Prov. Grand Lodge for Montserrat and Nevis—No. 151—was set up by the Atholl (or Ancient) Masons. Up to this time, however, there appears to have been no Lodge on either island; but in 1777 one was erected—No. 507—at Nevis by the original Grand Lodge of England; whilst the Evangelists' Lodge established at Antigua in 1753, shifted its place of meeting to Montserrat shortly before 1780. These two Lodges were continued in the lists of the older Society until the Union, when they disappeared, and so far as my research extends, no others have since been in existence in either island.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW.—A Lodge—Sudermania—under the Grand Lodge of Sweden, existed on this island from 1797 to 1820.

ST. CHRISTOPHER, or ST. KITTS.—Four Lodges were warranted in this colony by the Grand Lodge of England in the last century. The first in 1739, and the last in 1768.<sup>2</sup> The latter did not survive the change of numbers in 1770, but all the other Lodges were carried forward until the Union, and one—the Clarence, originally No. 206—only disappeared at the renumbering in 1832, though a Lodge of the same name was warranted on the island in the following year—which lived until 1865—and may have been a revival. A Prov. G.M. was appointed, January 27, 1798,<sup>3</sup> and a second, the Hon. John Garnett, November 23, 1808.

A Scottish Lodge was erected on the island in 1769, and others in 1786 and 1791.<sup>4</sup> These are now extinct; but a fourth, No. 407, Mount of Olives, 1835, still exists, and is the only Lodge in St. Christopher. During the years 1786-92 the island was the seat of the Scottish West Indian Province,<sup>5</sup> but is now included with some others in Province No. 32.

ST. EUSTATIUS.—Masonry in this island appears to have increased pari passu with its material prosperity. Three English<sup>6</sup> and four Dutch<sup>7</sup> Lodges were at work during the last century, the earliest of the former having been erected in 1747, and of the latter in 1757. Edward Galliard was appointed Prov. G.M. of St. Eustatius and the Dutch Caribbee islands by the Grand Lodge of England in 1754-55; and R. H. de Meessis held a similar commission—extending over St. Eustatius, Saba, and St. Martin—under the Grand Lodge of Holland in 1777.

The settlement was taken by the British, February 3, 1781. All the merchandise and stores were confiscated, the naval and military commanders—Admiral Rodney and General Vaughan—considering it their duty “to seize for the public use, all the effects of an island inhabited by rebellious Americans and their agents, disaffected British factors, who, for base and lucrative motives, were the great supporters of the American rebellion.” At this time, except for warlike stores, St. Eustatius had become one of the greatest auctions that ever was opened in the universe. “Invitation was given,” says Southey, “and protection offered to purchasers of all nations, and of all sorts.”

The English Lodges continued to appear in the lists until the Union, but were probably extinct for many years before that period. In 1813, it must be added, a Lodge—No. 30—was established in the settlement by the Atholl Grand Lodge, but this, like the others, failed to secure a place on the Union roll.

At the general peace the island was finally ceded to Holland, and some of the Dutch Lodges survived until within recent memory. It is possible, also, that others may have been established, of which no record has been preserved.<sup>1</sup> At present there are no Lodges on the island.

ST. LUCIA.—Two Lodges, Le Choix Réuni and L'Harmonie Fraternelle, were established by the Grand Orient of France in 1784. In 1814 the island was ceded to England, under whose sanction a Lodge—No. 762—was formed in 1845, and erased in 1862.

ST. MARTIN.—There are at present no Lodges either in the settlements of the French or the Dutch, between whom the island is divided; but one was formerly in existence—Unie, No. 3, under the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands—constituted in 1800.<sup>2</sup>

ST. VINCENT.—An Irish warrant—No. 733—was granted to some brethren in this dependency in 1806, which was surrendered in 1824. Two Lodges were afterwards established by the Grand Lodge of England, but are now extinct.<sup>3</sup>

TOBAGO.—A Scottish Lodge—No. 488—was erected at Scarborough, the capital, in 1868.

TRINIDAD.—A charter was granted—No. 77, Les Frères Unis—by the G.L. of Pennsylvania in 1798, to some brethren at Port D'Espagne, who had formerly been members of a Lodge at St. Lucia, under a warrant from France. After this, in 1811, No. 690, under the Grand Lodge of Ireland, was transferred from Martinique to Trinidad, but passed out of existence in 1858. Scottish Masonry obtained a footing in 1812, and there are now four Lodges<sup>4</sup> in all under that jurisdiction, which form the present province, No. 44. The first English Lodge on the island had its origin in 1831. This was followed by four other warrants from the oldest of Grand Bodies, and all five Lodges are in existence at this day.<sup>5</sup> Trinidad became a province under the Grand Lodge of England in 1860, but ceased to be one in 1876.

IV. THE LUCAYAS, OR BAHAMA ISLANDS.

The Masonic history of this group begins with the appointment of Governor John Tinkler<sup>6</sup> as Prov. G.M. in 1752, who was succeeded by James Bradford in 1759. But they had apparently no Lodges to control, neither do we hear of any having been established either before or after the jurisdiction<sup>7</sup> of which they were the representatives.

greater part of the inhabitants of our Leeward Islands wished the expedition in 1759 against Martinique to miscarry (1.) because it interrupted their iniquitous trade with St. Eustatia, of transferring French sugars, their property, in Dutch bottoms; (2.) because very many of them had plantations of their own in Martinico" (Ibid., p. 329).

In 1785, however, a warrant for the Bahamas—No. 228—was issued by the "Atholl" Grand Lodge of England. The Lodge thus established died out before the Union, but a second—No. 242—under the same jurisdiction, established at Nassau, New Providence, in 1787, survived the closing up of numbers in 1814, though its vitality was exhausted before the repetition of that process in 1832.

A Scottish Lodge was erected at Turk's Island in 1803, which is now extinct, but others formed in New Providence and Inagua in 1809 and 1856 respectively, still exist, and constitute Province No. 39,<sup>1</sup> under the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

Lodges under the United Grand Lodge of England were established at Nassau, 1837; Grand Turk, 1835; and Harbor Island,<sup>2</sup> 1869.<sup>3</sup> These are still active, and the first and last together constitute the existing Province of the Bahamas, which (under this jurisdiction) dates from 1843.

V. THE BERMUDAS, OR SOMER'S ISLANDS.

This group, like the Bahamas, was provided with a Prov. G.M. long before there were Lodges for him to supervise. Alured Popple received a patent as such from Lord Strathmore in 1744, and William Popple was similarly commissioned during the administration of the Earl of Aberdour (1758-62). The first Lodge under the older (English) sanction was formed in 1761, and the second in 1792.<sup>4</sup> Five years later (1797) the titular "Ancients" gained a footing, and in 1801 possessed, like their rivals, two Lodges.<sup>5</sup> At the Union, however, the former succumbed to destiny, whilst the latter were carried forward, and still survive.

Further English Lodges were constituted in 1819 and 1880—Nos. 712 and 1890—thus making a total of four, which report direct to the Grand Lodge of England, as the succession of Prov. G.M.'s ceased with the appointment of William Popple in 1758-62.

Lodge St. George—No. 266—under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, was erected in 1797, and the Bermudas became a Scottish Province in 1803. This was followed, however, by no increase of Lodges until 1885, when a warrant was issued to No. 726,<sup>6</sup> which, with "St. George," forms the thirty-fourth Province on the roll of Scotland.

Three Irish Lodges have been established at St. George's Island, Nos. 220, 1856 (warrant surrendered 1860); 224, 1867; and 209, 1881. The last two are, singularly enough, the only Lodges now at work under the Grand Lodge of Ireland in any of the West India islands.

Under the Grand Lodge of Ireland there is no West Indian Province, but under those of England and Scotland, there is in the former case two, and in the latter five. Jamaica, with ten (exclusive of Montego Bay), and the Bahamas with two Lodges, constitute the English Provinces (or Districts), though the first named, from the death of Dr. Hamilton in 1880, down to the appointment of his successor, Mr. J. C. Macglashan, in 1886, might be said to have been in a condition of suspended animation. The remaining West Indian Lodges (17) under this jurisdiction are in direct communication with London.

MEXICO.

The so-called "Scottish Rite" was introduced into Mexico—then the principal colony of Spain—by civil and military officers of the Monarchy about the year 1810. After this, Lodges were erected by the Grand Lodge of Louisiana at Vera Cruz and Campeachy in 1816 and 1817 respectively, and the example thus set was followed by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, under which body a Lodge was established at Alvarado in 1824.<sup>1</sup> A period of confusion next ensued, during which Masonry and politics were so closely interwoven as to render quite hopeless any attempt at their separate treatment.

Soon the entire population of the country became divided into two factions, the Escoceses and the Yorkinos. The former were in favor of moderate measures, under a central government, or a constitutional monarchy. The latter were the advocates of republican institutions, and the expulsion of the "old" or native Spaniards.

The Escoceses—originally the "Scots Masons"—numbered among their members all who, under the ancient régime, had titles of nobility; the Catholic clergy, without exception; many military officers; together with all the native Spaniards of every class.

The republican party, according to one set of writers, viewing with dismay the progress of their opponents, resolved "to fight the devil with his own fire," and therefore organized a rival faction, on which they bestowed the name of Yorkinos, the members of which were supposed to be adherents of the York Rite.

The authorities, however, by whom the movement is described as purely Masonic in its inception, are probably right, though at this point the facts do not stand out with the clearness that might be wished, and therefore deductions are of slight value.

Mackey informs us that authority was obtained in 1825 from the Grand Lodge of New York for the establishment of three Lodges in the city of Mexico. These Lodges, according to the same writer, were formed into a Grand Lodge of the York Rite by Mr. Joel R. Poinsett (American Minister), a former G.M. of South Carolina. Here there is a little confusion, as Mr. E. M. L. Ehlers,<sup>2</sup> in kindly replying to my inquiries, expressly states that since the year 1815, no foreign Lodges have been warranted by the Grand Lodge of New York. But however established, the so-called York Rite, or, in other words, pure English Masonry, flourished, and towards the end of 1826 there were 25 Lodges, with a membership of about 700. The Escoceses, or "Scots Masons," finding their Lodges deserted, regarded the Yorkinos as renegades and traitors, and with a view to counter-balance the fast increasing power of the latter, they formed the Novenarios, a kind of militia, which derived its name from a regulation requiring each member to enlist nine additional adherents. These ingratiated themselves with the clergy, who, after having been the most embittered enemies of the Craft in past years, now joined the Escoceses almost in a body.

The Yorkinos, becoming aware of these proceedings, tried to outdo their rivals by recruiting their own Lodges upon the plan of receiving all applicants without distinction.

provided they belonged to the federal, i.e., the patriotic party. Thus, the system of Masonry very soon degenerated into a mere party question, and at last all the adherents of one side styled themselves Escoceses, and of the other side, Yorkinos. In 1828, the two parties resorted to open warfare, with a view to deciding the question at issue by the sword, and the civil war then commenced, lasted for more than a generation.

Somewhere about this time, whilst Dr. Vincente Guerrero—G.M. under the York Rite—was President of the Republic, a law was enacted by which all Masonic Lodges were closed. The Yorkinos obeyed their Grand Master, and discontinued their meetings. The Escoceses went on working, but some of their most influential Lodges were suppressed, and the members banished. Subsequently, all native Spaniards were expelled from Mexican territory.

This internecine strife seriously affected the Fraternity in general, and gave birth, during the darkest hours of the struggle for supremacy, to an organization called the National Mexican Rite, formed by Masons, and composed of distinguished men, but containing innovations and principles so antagonistic to Masonic usage and doctrine, that it was never accorded recognition, even in Mexico, by any Masonic body of acknowledged legality.

This new school of Masonry was established by nine brethren of both rites, and who had belonged to the highest grade of either system, in 1830. To guard against the intrusion of unworthy members and the revival of political antagonism, they resolved to create a rite which should be national, in the sense of not depending upon any foreign Grand Lodge for its constitution, and to obviate by safeguards and precautions of an elaborate character, the dangers to be apprehended from the reception of either Escoceses or Yorkinos.

The National Mexican Rite consisted of nine degrees, which, omitting the first three, were—4°, Approved Master (equal to the 15° “Scots,”); 5° Knight of the Secret (equal to the 18° “Scots,”); 6°, Knight of the Mexican Eagle; 7°, Perfect Architect (or Templar); 8°, Grand Master; and 9°, Grand Inspector General. All these degrees had their equivalents in the A. and A. S. R. 33°. With the “St. John's” (or purely Craft) degrees certain special signs were associated, which, however, were not required from foreigners unless they had acted as auxiliaries in any of the party contests.

A Grand Orient, composed of members of the 9°, was supreme in matters of dogma or ritual. There was also an administrative body or National Grand Lodge, whose members were elective and met in the metropolis. The Provincial Grand Lodges had their seats in the State capitals and were formed by the “three lights” of at least five St. John's Lodges.

But although still preserving a nominal existence, the several Grand Bodies, owing to political convulsions, were virtually dormant for many years after 1833. A Lodge—St. Jean d'Ulloa—was constituted at Vera Cruz, by the Supreme Council of France, in 1843; and another—Les Ecossais des Deux Mondes—at the city of Mexico, by the Grand Orient of the same country, in 1845.

The National Mexican Rite appears to have somewhat recovered from its torpor in 1863. At that date we find in the metropolis, a National Grand Lodge with six working Lodges, one of these one—belonging to the A. and A. S. R.—was constituted by the Grand Lodge of New Granada, and consisted chiefly of foreigners; in Toluca a Prov. Grand Lodge with five Lodges; in Vera Cruz and Guadalajara two Lodges each; and in five other cities single Lodges.

"In the year 1858 or 1859," according to an official report,<sup>1</sup> "Bro. Lafou de Ladebat went to Mexico with authority from Bro. Albert Pike [of Washington, D.C.] to organize and establish Masonry on a sound basis in that country. Unfortunately Bro. Ladebat did not organize a Grand Lodge of Symbolic Masonry first, as instructed, but constituted the Supreme Council with jurisdiction over the three degrees of E. A., F. C. and M. M."

After this came the invasion of Mexican territory by a foreign foe, the establishment of the Maximilian Empire, its overthrow, and finally the war of reform. Meanwhile the Grand Lodge of the Yorkinos had ceased to exist, and the "Scots Rite," which at this time had become divested of its political coloring, had erected—December 27, 1865—a Supreme Council 33°. This, in 1868, joined, or was absorbed by, the Supreme Council of 1858-59, and in the same year the amalgamated body effected a fusion with the National Grand Lodge—one of whose highest officials at the time was Benito Juarez, President of the Republic. The latter union, however, was not of a thorough nature, but rather assumed the features of a friendly pact, as it left each rite independent of the other with regard to ritual and internal government. In 1870 the National Rite numbered thirty-two Lodges, and the A. and A.S.R. twenty-four.

It would seem as if the authority of Juarez alone held these rites together, since at his death in 1872—although he was succeeded as President by his chief follower, Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada, also a prominent Freemason—dissensions arose, and they fell asunder, Alfredo Chavero becoming G.M. of the Grand Orient, and José Maria Mateos of the National Grand Lodge. In 1876 a Lodge of Germans left the G.O. and joined the National Grand Lodge, but in the following year, with the consent of the latter, affiliated with the Grand Lodge of Hamburg—under which body there is also (1886) another Lodge at work in Vera Cruz.

From the scanty information at my disposal it seems probable—more cannot be said—that the two rites again formed a junction about 1882; while, on the other hand, it is quite possible that the National Mexican Rite may still exist, though its proceedings are unrecorded. So far, indeed, as evidence is forthcoming, upon the re-establishment of peace and order in Mexico, the Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Supreme Council throughout the Republic organized State Grand Lodges. A Central Grand Lodge was established in the capital, with jurisdiction over them, and though the Supreme Council made no formal abdication of its authority over Symbolism, this was interfered with very little, save by the Central Grand Lodge. In 1883 there were the following State Grand Lodges:—Vera Cruz and Jalisco, each with seven Lodges; Puebla, Yucatan, and Guanajuato, with six; and Morelos and Tlaxcala, with five; thus making a total of seven Grand and forty-two subordinate Lodges, exclusive of the Central Grand Lodge and the metropolitan Lodges.

It will be seen that at this period there existed at Vera Cruz a State Grand Lodge, but from the fact that it was subordinate to the Central Grand Lodge, it was not deemed by the Grand Lodge of Colon to exercise legitimate authority over Symbolism in that State. Indeed, the whole of Mexico was regarded by the last-named body as "unoccupied territory," and it therefore proceeded to charter three Lodges, which in January, 1883, formed themselves, at the city of Vera Cruz, into the "Mexican Independent Symbolic Grand Lodge."

Two of the Lodges taking part in this movement had originally held Mexican warrants,

Don Cipriano Diaz

but having quarrelled with their superiors, solicited and obtained charters from the G. L. of Colon (now Colon and Cuba), shortly after which the third Lodge was formed, and then, finally, the Grand Lodge, although the Supreme Council of Mexico had formally protested against the invasion of its territory. Indeed the step thus taken by their former superiors appears rather to have accelerated the action of the three Lodges, as in the record of their proceedings it is stated, "that they hasten to constitute themselves into an Independent Grand Lodge, pending the protest of the Supreme Council of Mexico, to relieve their friend and mother, the Grand Lodge of Colon, from any further unpleasant complications!"

The Supreme Council of Mexico, in a Balustre numbered XXX., and dated April 25, 1883, renounced its jurisdiction over the symbolical degrees, and promulgated a variety of regulations with regard to Grand and subordinate Lodges. This threw the Craft into the utmost confusion, and might have ended in the destruction of the greater number of Mexican Lodges, or at least in the establishment of some half dozen Grand Bodies, all claiming supremacy, had it not been for the skill and address of Carlos Pacheco, who succeeded Alfredo Chavero as Sov. G. Com. 33°.

The former Balustre was revoked, and by a new one (XXXII.), dated May 27, 1883, the Supreme Council renounced, in favor of the State Grand Lodges then existing or which might afterwards be formed, the jurisdiction over Symbolism conferred upon it by the Constitutions of the A. and A.S.R. 33°. The transmission of powers was to take effect from June 24 then ensuing. The Lodges having no Grand Lodge were to remain under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge nearest to them, or the oldest if two were equidistant, until they organized their own in accordance with Masonic usage and precedent. The Lodges of the Federal District, however, were directed to form and inaugurate their Grand Lodge on June 15 then following. Balustre XXXII was signed (inter alios) by Carlos Pacheco, Mariano Escobedo, Alfredo Chavero, and Porfirio Diaz.

On June 25, 1883, twelve Lodges at the capital met and established the Grand Lodge of the Federal District (or city) of Mexico, with Porfirio Diaz as the first G.M. The event was announced to the Masonic world in two circulars, the first of which is in Spanish—an immense document of 180 pages! The second is in English, and its only noticeable feature is a declaration that the American system of State Grand Lodges, each with exclusive jurisdiction, has been adopted. Grand Lodges have since been established on the same plan—i.e., in conformity with the edict of the Supreme Council, as promulgated in Balustre XXXII.—in the States of Vera Cruz, Tlaxcala, Morelos, Puebla, Campeachy, and Lower California. The complications, however, already existing in the Republic, were still further increased in 1883 by the action of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, in granting a charter to the Toltec Lodge, in the city of Mexico, which had been provisionally established at the close of the previous year under a dispensation from the Grand Master.

As these sheets are passing through the press, I learn that the recognition of the Grand Lodge of which Porfirio Diaz became the head, by the Grand Lodges of Louisiana and Florida, was duly protested against by Carlos Pacheco, Sov. G. Com. 33°, and Carlos K. Ruiz, the latter of whom claimed to be himself the legitimate G.M. It would appear from La Gran Logia, a bulletin published by some members of the Ruiz Grand Lodge, and denominated their official organ, that on the same day, at the same hour, and in the same hall, when and where the Diaz Grand Lodge was organized and installed, the other body was organized also. There was this difference, however, that whereas the Diaz party transacted their affairs within the body of the Lodge, the supporters of Rnis were reduced to the necessity of attending to theirs in the ante-room—the latter brethren having withdrawn from the original convention whilst it was being organized, but not leaving the building, in the vestibule of which they afterwards conducted their own proceedings.<sup>1</sup>

CENTRAL AMERICA.

NICARAGUA.—The Lodge of Regularity—No. 300—St. John's Hall, Black River, Mosquito Shore, was established under the Grand Lodge of England in 1763, and remained on the roll until 1813. The Mosquito Coast, or Mosquitia, is an ill-defined territory of Central America, which was under British protection from 1660 to 1859, when it was ceded to Honduras. In 1860 it was handed over to Nicaragua, and in 1877 appears to have been claimed by New Granada. Lodges at "Greytown, Mosquito," were erected by the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1851 and 1882. These are included in the Jamaica Province, a practice first carried out under the Grand Lodge of England, by the authority of which body Thomas Marriot Perkins, who was appointed Prov. G.M. of the Mosquito Shore by Lord Aberdour circa 1762, had his authority extended over Jamaica in the same or following year by Earl Ferrera.

BRITISH HONDURAS.—The Lodge of Amity—No. 309—St. George's Quay, Bay of Honduras, was also warranted in 1763 by the Grand Lodge of England, and, like the earlier Lodge on the Mosquito Shore, continued to appear on the lists until the Union. Subsequent English warrants were granted in 1820 to the British Constitutional Lodge No. 723, Bay of Honduras; and in 1831 to the Royal Sussex, No. 860, Belize. Both these Lodges, however, were closed, June 4, 1862.

COSTA RICA.—A Lodge was chartered at San José by the Grand Orient of New Granada, about the year 1837; and, according to the Masonic Calendars, a Grand Orient and Supreme Council 33° for Central America was established at the same town in 1870. Dr. Francisco Calvo was at the head of both bodies, and appears to have been succeeded in 1879, or shortly before, by Carlos Urien. The present G.M. and Sov. G. Com. is Manuel B. Bonilla, and there are twenty-three Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Orient.

GUATEMALA.—A Lodge—Constance—was established in this republic in 1881, by the Grand Orient of Colombia at Carthagena. In 1886 the members divided themselves among three new Lodges, Igualdad, Libertad, and Fraternidad—Nos. 21-23 on the roll of the Grand Orient of Central America (Costa Rica), "installed" May 22, 1886, which adhere to the A. and A.S.R.—and Union—of uncertain parentage—which is alleged to work in accordance with the "York Rite." The last-named Lodge has probably received an American or German charter, as a large number of its members are composed of these nationalities. At the present time there are about 200 Masons in the Republic of Guatemala, of whom about a moiety reside at the capital, and the remainder are distributed throughout the departments.

SAN SALVADOR.—Masonry obtained a footing and the Craft flourished for a time in this State, but in 1882 the Lodges were closed and the members dispersed. In that year, however, some zealous Masons, supported by the then President of the Republic—Rafael Zaklvar—succeeded in reuniting the scattered brethren, and founding a Lodge. Excal-sior, No. 17, was established by charter of the G.O. of Central America (Costa Rica), at San Salvador, the capital, March 5, 1882, and a little later, another Lodge—No. 18, Caridad y Constancia—under the same sanction, at Tecla, a neighboring town.

With regard to HONDURAS, I have no information, beyond the bare fact that in 1885 the G.M. of New York declined to grant a dispensation for a Lodge in the republic. Should, however, any Lodges exist there, or in the other territories of the isthmus previously referred to (beyond those that have been enumerated), they will, in all probability, prove to be offshoots of the Grand Orient of Central America at COSTA RICA.

The latest details in the preceding sketch are derived from the Chaine D'Union.<sup>1</sup> From the same source I transcribe the following remarks on the conditions under which the Craft exists in SAN SALVADOR, though it may be assumed that these are generally applicable throughout the several States of Central America:—"The Masonry of this land has to contend against ignorance, superstition, and fanaticism, fostered by an all-powerful priesthood, allied with men in authority, and assisted by the women—whom they keep under their influence and their control, to a far greater extent than prevails in any country of Europe."

SOUTH AMERICA.

The minutes of the Grand Lodge of England inform us, that Randolph Tooke, Provincial Grand Master of South America, was present at a meeting of that body held April 17, 1735. Of this worthy nothing further is known beyond the bare fact that, in 1731, his name appears on the roll of Lodge No. 19, at the Queen's Arms, Newgate Street, London, of which two persons holding similar appointments<sup>2</sup>—Richard Hull and Ralph Farwinter—together with Sir William Keith, Ex-Governor of Pennsylvania, and Benjamin Cole, afterwards Engraver to the Society, were also members.

The next Prov. G.M., who received an English patent empowering him to exercise Masonic jurisdiction over any part of South America, was Colonel James Hamilton, who was placed at the head of the Province of Colombia in 1824. But as the political changes of subsequent years have left their mark on the nomenclature of the existing States of the Continent, a few preliminary words are essential, before passing in review the Masonry of the Spanish-American Republics, of the Brazilian Empire, and finally, of the European settlements in Guiana, which have politically nothing in common with the other divisions of South America.

New Granada, like all the adjacent portions of the New World, was for some centuries a colony of Spain. Upon the assertion of their independence by the provinces of Spanish America, in the early part of the present century, it formed, with Ecuador and Venezuela, the Republic of Colombia.

In 1831, each of the three States became autonomous, and in 1857, New Granada assumed the title of the United States of Colombia. The other parties, however, to the Federal Union, which was dissolved in 1831—Ecuador and Venezuela—have adhered to their original appellations. This it is necessary to bear in mind, because whilst a Scottish, as well as an English, Masonic Province of Colombia was created during the existence of the earlier republic of that name, the two Lodges under these jurisdictions were established at Angostura in Venezuela.' The first Prov. G.M. under Scotland, Don José Gabriel Núñez, the date of whose appointment is not recorded, was succeeded—May 6, 1850—by Senor Florentino Grillet, and on February 3, 1851, the designation of the Province was changed from Colombia to that of "Guayana in Venezuela."

The evidence, therefore, so far as it extends, points to Venezuela, rather than New Granada, as having been the centre of Masonic activity—at least, in the first instance—while they were both component parts of the (older) Republic of Colombia. For this reason, I shall assign a priority of narration to the record of Venezuelan Masonry. It remains to be stated, that there was in existence a Grand Orient of Colombia at Bogota in New Granada, shortly after the time when the two Lodges were established at Angostura, under British warrants.

The exact date of formation of this body it is not easy to determine. One of the two Grand Orients of what was formerly New Granada, but is now Colombia, and which meets at Bogota, claims 1827 as its year of origin; while there is independent evidence of the exercise of authority in Peru, by a Grand Orient of Colombia at Bogota, in 1825. On the whole, the explanation which seems to me the most reasonable is, that the Grand Orient of 1827, was preceded by a Supreme Council, armed with, or at all events, exercising, the same authority as the Hydra-headed organization of later date?

VENEZUELA.—Masonry is said to have been introduced into Venezuela at the commencement of the present century, when a Lodge was established by the Grand Orient of Spain. Several other Lodges are also reported to have sprung into existence under the same authority. The exercise of jurisdiction by the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland in 1824, within what was then the Republic of Colombia, has already been referred to. In 1825, Joseph Cernean, who presided over a body which he had set up at New York in 1812, under the title of "Sovereign Grand Consistory of the United States of America," formed at Caraccas a Grand Lodge and a Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33°. This may have borne the title of, and doubtless has often been confounded with, the Grand Orient of Colombia in the sister State (New Granada). In 1827, Simon Bolivar, the Liberator, having prohibited all secret societies, the Lodges, with the exception of one at Porto Cabello, suspended their labors. In 1831, Venezuela having become independent by the disruption of the Colombian Republic, a dispensation to hold a Lodge for a year was obtained from certain dignitaries of the extinct Grand Lodge, in their capacity as members of the 33d or highest degree of the A. and A.S.R., by a few brethren, in the hope that within that period they would be able to procure a charter from some foreign Grand Lodge. Their efforts, however, were unsuccessful. The Lodge was suspended, and for several years the Craft languished. But in 1838 a revival took place. The Lodge last referred to renewed its labors, the old Lodges were resuscitated, and a National Grand Lodge of Venezuela was established. Charters were issued to the old Lodges, and new ones were erected. In conjunction with the highest members of the A. and A.S.R. 33°, it established a supreme legislative body, under the name of Grand Orient, and also constituted a Grand Lodge, on the roll of which there appear to have been 16 active and 36 dormant Lodges in 1860. At this time—but the details of its formation I am unable to supply—another Grand Orient was in the field, and each body placed the other under a ban. On January 12, 1865, however, a fusion was effected, and the National Grand Orient of Venezuela established at Caracas. A breach occurred in 1882, but the schism was again healed in 1884. The Grand Orient is divided into a Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter, Grand Consistory, and a Supreme Council, each having its own chief, and possessing entire authority over its own degrees. The present G.M. of the Grand Orient (1884) is General Joaquín Crespo, President of the Republic, and there are about fifty Lodges on the roll of the Grand Lodge. But nothing has yet occurred to oust the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, which is still represented by the Provincial Grand Lodge of "Guayana in Venezuela," and the Lodge "Eastern Star of Colombia," founded 1824.

COLOMBIA (FORMERLY NEW GRANADA).—The Grand Orient of New Granada was formed at Carthagena June 19, 1833. In 1840 there were 19 Lodges on its roll—among them La Mas Solida Virtud, at Jamaica. Francisco de Zubirias was Grand Master in 1865, and Juan Manuel Grau in 1871. Four years later—according to the somewhat fragmentary evidence at my disposal—the latter appears to have given way to, or to have been superseded by, Juan N. Pombo, whose name is shown in the calendars as G.M. from 1875 to 1878. In 1879, however, the name of Juan M. Grau again figures in the lists, whilst that of Juan N. Pombo disappears. Full details are given in the calendars with regard to the Masonic dignitaries of Colombia during the supremacy of either; and as Grau is not mentioned whilst Pombo was uppermost, and vice versa, it is probable—considering the manner in which Masonry and politics are blended together in the Spanish Republics—that they were rival candidates for power in more ways than one.

New Constitutions seem to have been enacted in 1863, and after this a new Grand Orient of Colombia was formed at Bogota for the Southern States of the Republic. The ordinances were definitely settled December 12, 1866. At this date the Lodges were five in number, and the Grand Master, General T.C. de Mosquera—who, however, had given place in 1871 to Juan de Dios Rionnalo.

The two Grand Orients practise the so-called "Scots Rite" (A. and A.S.R.), and appear to have worked together in perfect harmony. In 1879 we find Juan M. Grau at the head of both, with the title of Sov. G. Com. and Sublime G.M. of the Order. The Secretary General (or Grand Secretary) was also for a time the same for the two bodies, though there was always a separate Lient. G. Com. (or D.G.M.) at Carthagena and Bogota. In 1883, Leon Echeverria was elected G.M. of the Order, an office which he continues to hold, according to the Calendars of 1886, where, however, his name is also shown as Sov. G. Com. of the Supreme Council at Bogota, "founded in 1827," whilst that of Juan M. Grau is similarly shown as the head of the Supreme Council of Carthagena, "founded in 1833." An English Lodge—Amistad Unida, No. 808—established in 1848, still exists at Santa Martha. Other foreign jurisdictions were formerly represented. "Les Philadelphes," No. 151, was erected at Colon-Aspinwall by the S.C. of France in 1858, and the Isthmus Lodge by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in (or before) 1866. Both these Lodges, however, have ceased to exist.

ECUADOR.—Masonry was introduced into this Republic in the year 1837 by the Grand Orient of Peru, which organized Lodges in Guayaquil and Quito. Three years later the Dictator, Garcia Moreno, sought admission into the Fraternity. His application was refused on account of his notoriously immoral character; and in revenge he called in the Jesuits, and ruthlessly suppressed the Lodges. He was assassinated in 1875, but twelve months elapsed before the population were able to shake off the oppressive yoke of the priesthood. Rumors of a Grand Lodge at Guayaquil have obtained currency, but the evidence is wanting by which alone they can be substantiated.<sup>1</sup>

PERU.—It is traditionally asserted that Freemasonry was introduced into Peru about the year 1807, during the French invasion, and that several Lodges were at work until the resumption of Spanish authority and of Papal influence in 1813, when their existence terminated. But the authentic history of Peruvian Masonry cannot be traced any higher than 1825, when the independence of the Republic, declared in 1820, was completely achieved. In that year, General Valero, a member of the Grand Orient of Colombia at Santa Fé de Bogotá (New Granada), visited Lima, and as the representative of that body proceeded in the first instance to legitimate the Lodges and Chapters which had already been established in the new Republic, and afterwards to found and organize others. At this time there appear to have been four Lodges at the capital, and nine others were soon after erected in the provincial towns.<sup>2</sup>

A Supreme Council of the A. and A.S.R. 33° was instituted at Lima in 1830 by the senior (local) member of the Rite, José María Monson, Roman Catholic Chaplain in the Army of Independence, and afterwards a Canon in the Cathedral of Trujillo. In the following year—June 23—deputies from the Supreme Council 33°, the Consistory 32°, the Areopagus 30°, and the Chapters 18°, together with the Masters and Wardens of the Lodges, assembled in the capital under the presidency of the Sov. G. Com. of the S. C., and established a Grand Lodge, with Thomas Ripley Eldredge as G. M. The constitutions were settled on August 11, 1831, when it was unanimously resolved to substitute for the title "Grand Lodge," that of "Grand Orient of Peru. Shortly after this, owing to the political disturbances, there was an entire cessation of Masonic labor.

In 1845, after a recess of some twelve years, a few metropolitan brethren, members of the Lodge "Orden y Libertad," and of a Rose Croix Chapter, met and continued to work regularly until November 1, 1848, when a General convention of Masons was held, and the Grand Orient was revived. In 1850 the G. O. again assembled, and sanctioned a constitution for the government of the Lodges. Marshal Miguel San Roman—afterwards President of the Republic—was G. M. of this Grand Orient until 1852, but the Supreme Council 33° not only held aloof from its proceedings, but apparently ignored even its existence.

On July 13, 1852, the supreme Masonic body was reorganized under the title of Grand National Orient of Peru, and the members of the so-called high degrees recovered their supremacy. At this meeting twenty-five brethren represented the Supreme Council, Consistory, Areopagus, and the Rose Croix Chapters. There were also present the Masters and Wardens of three Lodges—Orden y Libertad, and Estrella Polar, of Lima; and Concordia Universal of Callao. Of these, the first named was founded in 1822, the second (by the G. O. over which Marshal San Roman presided) in 1850-52, and the third (by the Supreme Council of Peru) in 1852.

<sup>2</sup> Lima—Paz y Perfecta Union, 1821; Orden y Libertad, 1822; Virtud y Union, 1823; and Constancia Peruana, 1824; Cuzco—Sol de Huayna Coapac, 1826; Lambayeque—Union Justa, 1826; Pinar—Constancia Heroica, 1829; and Ica—Filosofia Peruana, 1829. Five other Lodges were also formed about the same time in Arequipa, Trujillo, Cajamarca, Puno, and Huamachuco respectively, but their names and dates of constitution have passed out of recollection.

In the same year, (1852) a Royal Arch Chapter—Estrella Boreal—No. 74 on the roll of the Grand Chapter of Scotland, was established at Callao. This, however, was not recognized by the Supreme Council of Peru, nor was it allowed a voice in the deliberations of the Grand National Orient.

In 1855 a new Lodge under an old title—Virtud y Union—was erected at Lima by charter of the Supreme Council 33°.

New statutes were promulgated by the Grand Orient May 5, 1856. These were very defective, consisting only of some disjointed extracts from the laws of the G.O. of Venezuela, and placed the government of the Fraternity entirely in the hands of the Supreme Council 33°. At this time there were seven Lodges holding warrants from the Supreme Council—acting on behalf of the Grand National Orient. Of these five were in Peru, and one each in Ecuador and Chile. Additional regulations, framed with the especial object of restraining certain irregularities which—it was alleged—had penetrated into the Lodges, were enacted in May, 1857. The new statutes caused the cup of indignation to overflow, and three Lodges—Concordia Universal, Estrella Polar, and Virtud y Union—on June 3, 6, and 10 respectively ensuing, declared their independence. These were joined by others to the number of fifteen, and a Grand Lodge was erected at Lima, November 20, 1859. In 1860 there was another schism in the Supreme Council, and the seceders, with the G.L., formed a G.O. and S.C. under a charter from the Grand Orient of Colombia (New Granada). In 1863, however, dissensions arose in this body, and it passed out of existence.

Irish Lodges were established at Lima in 1861 and 1863, and several foreign jurisdictions soon after became represented. Among these Scotland is entitled to the first place, having chartered no less than thirteen Lodges.<sup>1</sup> Under the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts a Lodge was formed by dispensation at Arica in 1866, but is now extinct. The Grand Orient of Italy and the Grand Lodge of Hamburg each possess a Lodge at Lima, the Italian Lodge bearing the name "Stella D'Italia," and the German one "Zur Eintracht" (Concord).

The Supreme Council reorganized the Grand Orient, but again suppressed it in 1875, and sentenced the opponents of this summary proceeding to "perpetual expulsion." The sentence was revoked in 1881, the G.O. once more revived, and the Lodges placed under it. This gave umbrage to the latter, who contended that even if the S.C. was justified in separating itself from the Lodges, it could not possess the right of turning them over to any other body. Ultimately, in March 1882, five Lodges met in convention at Lima, and organized the "Grand Lodge of Peru." Four out of the five Scottish Lodges at the capital are said to have given in their adhesion on May 31, and shortly after a Lodge was established at Guayaquil in Ecuador. The present G.M. is Caesar Canevaro—General and Senator—and the Grand Lodge has a following of twenty-two Lodges.<sup>2</sup>

BOLIVIA.—There is no Grand Lodge in this Republic. In 1875 a Lodge was chartered by one of the competing jurisdictions in Lima, and is possibly included among the four Lodges in Bolivia under the present G.L. of Peru.

CHILÉ.—Masonry is said to have been practised in Chilé, under a French warrant, as early as 1840, but the first Lodge in the Republic which I have succeeded in tracing is L'Etoile du Pacifique, established at Valparaiso by the Grand Orient of France, September 12, 1851. The next was the Pacific Lodge, formed shortly afterwards, under a dispensation from the G.M. of California, but its existence was limited to a single year. After this came L'Union Fraternelle—under the G.O. of France—also at Valparaiso, chartered in 1854. The fourth Lodge—Anrora du Chilé—is said to have been established under the same sanction at Concepcion, and to have subsequently assumed the name of Fraternidad, but I have been unable to trace it in the French Calendar. The fifth—Estrella del Sur—which also met in Concepcion, was chartered by the G.O. of Peru, but the warrant was returned in the year 1860.

The next three Lodges, Bethesda, Southern Cross, and Hiram of Copiapo, derived their origin from the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, the first in 1853, and the last two in 1858. Bethesda and Southern Cross met at the capital, and Hiram—as its name imports—at Copiapo in the first instance, and afterwards at Caldera. The Lodge of 1853—Bethesda—is still at work, but those established in 1858—Southern Cross and Hiram—became extinct about 1860 and 1881 respectively.

In 1861 a member of the A. and A.S.R. 33°, from Lima, Peru, established by his own authority a Lodge called Orden y Libertad in Copiapo, which forthwith addressed circulars to the other Lodges in Chilé, asking for recognition. This they declined to accord, basing their refusal on the ground that the founder of the new Lodge belonged to a spurious and irregular Supreme Council 33°, and had been expelled from the Grand Orient of Peru; also that it was not within the power of even a regular Inspector General 33° to establish a Lodge as it were single-handed, or, in other words, without the sanction of a Supreme Council of the Rite.

In April, 1862, the news that Marshal Magnan had been appointed by the Emperor G.M. of the Grand Orient of France reached Chilé. The Lodges, L'Union Fraternelle, Valparaiso, and Fraternidad, at Concepcion, immediately threw up their charters, and, it is said, were formally erased from the roll of the G.O. of France by decree dated November 10, 1863.

The two Lodges followed up their secession by asking L'Etoile du Pacifique to unite with them in forming a Grand Lodge, but their request met with a refusal. Nothing daunted, they then, in order to obtain a quorum of Lodges, formed a third, called Progreso, but to which no charter was given.

On April 20, 1862, these three Lodges met in convention, where they also found delegates from Orden y Libertad, of Copiapo, the very same Lodge to which recognition had been refused in the previous year. The delegates, however, were received, and thus four Lodges combined to form the Grand Lodge of Chilé.

Javier Villanneva was G.M. in 1872, and his address—as reported in the Boletín Oficial of that year—announced internal prosperity and good prospects; the consecration of two new Lodges; large contributions by the Craft for the erection of a Masonic Temple at Valparaiso; and a satisfactory explanation of the action of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in her establishment of Lodges in the jurisdiction. The Grand Lodge of Chile had then nine subordinate Lodges. Their strength is not given, but in the previous year there were seven Lodges, with a total membership of eight hundred and seven. The number of Lodges on its roll has since risen to eleven, and the Grand Master at the present date (1886) is Don José-Mignel Faez. There are also some Lodges under the A. and A.S.R. 33°, which, according to Van Dalen's Calendar, obeyed a Grand Orient, established in 1862; but in the Annuaire of the G.O. of France, are rendered subject to a Supreme Council, founded in 1870.

Foreign jurisdictions are numerously represented. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts has two Lodges—Bethesda, 1853, and Aconcagua, 1869—at the capital, besides Hnelen, 1876, in Santiago, and St. John's Lodge, constituted in 1885 at Concepcion. These are subordinate to a District Deputy Grand Master, the Rev. David Trumbull, D.D. Under the Grand Lodge of Scotland there are Nos. 509, Star and Thistle, Valparaiso, 1871, and 616, St. John, Coquimbo—both included with the Lodges of Peru in Province No. 54. The Grand Lodges of England and Hamburg have each chartered a single Lodge, No. 1411, Harmony, 1872, existing under the jurisdiction of the former, and Lodge Lessing under that of the latter. Both of these meet at Valparaiso. The Lodge of earliest date in the country, L'Etoile du Pacifique, established by the Grand Orient of France in 1851, is still active, and has never swerved from its original allegiance.<sup>1</sup>

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC, OR CONFEDERACY OF LA PLATA.—The province of Buenos Ayres, after forming for some years a distinct State, re-entered in 1860 the General Confederacy of La Plata, or Argentine Republic, of which it constitutes the head. The Masonic history of the allied States down to the year named may be very briefly summed up. A Lodge—No. 205, Southern Star—was chartered at the city of Buenos Ayres by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, September 5, 1825. This capital, as the largest town and the outlet of all the trade of the Republic, has always exercised a preponderating influence in the formation and execution of the intrigues, conspiracies, and insurrections, which constitute the political history of the Confederation. From the close connection, therefore, between Masonry and politics, which we find subsisting in all parts of South America, it will excite no surprise that, without exception, all the early Lodges in La Plata, of which any trace has come down to us, were held at Buenos Ayres. Some were in existence there in 1846, but, about that time, the political aspect becoming gloomy in the extreme, their labors were suspended.

Two Lodges bearing the same name—L'Amie des Naufragés—were established by the Grand Orient of France in Buenos Ayres and Rio-de-la-Plata respectively in 1852. The example thus set was followed by the Grand Lodge of England, under whose authority the first of a series of Lodges<sup>2</sup>—in what is now the Confederacy—was erected in 1853. In 1856, there seems to have been in existence a body claiming the prerogatives of a Grand Lodge. It practised the A. and A.S.R., but was never recognized by the family of Supreme Councils, and soon ceased to exist. Two years later—April 22, 1858—a Supreme Council and Grand Orient of the Argentine Republic was established at Buenos Ayres by the S.C. and G.O. of Uruguay, at Monte Video.

About this time—so at least it is gravely related—"the Roman Catholic Bishop [at Buenos Ayres] fulminated a Bull against all Masons within his bishopric, and he went the length of declaring the marriage contract dissolved, and absolving the wife a vinculo matrimonii, in all cases where the husband refused to renounce Masonry. Some parties, as high in temporal authority as the Bishop was in spiritual, appealed from his decree to his Holiness Pius IX. at Rome. After waiting a long time for a reply or decision upon the appeal, and receiving none, an inquiry was instituted as to the cause of the delay, when it was found, to the great satisfaction of the Roman Catholics of La Plata, who were unwilling to bow to the behests of the Bishop, that, during a sojourn at Monte Video in 1816, the venerable Pontiff—then a young man—received the degrees, and took upon himself the obligations of Masonry?"<sup>1</sup>

This story has now passed into oblivion, but its salient feature—the initiation of Pius IX.—served for a long time as the text for innumerable disquisitions, in which, however, the scene is not always laid in South America, but shifts from Uruguay to Pennsylvania, and from North America to Italy. A statement of similar character (and value) was made long before by J. L. Laurens in his Essai Historique, with regard to Pope Benedict XIV., of whom it is related that, being himself a Freemason, he, not unnaturally, mitigated in some slight degree the rigor of the Papal edict against the Craft, which had been launched by his immediate predecessor Clement XII.

In 1861 a treaty was concluded between the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Orient of the Argentine Republic. This empowered the former to establish Lodges in La Plata, and to appoint a district G.M. to rule over them. The Rev. J. Chubb Ford presided over the English District Grand Lodge until 1867, when he was succeeded by Mr. R. B. Masfield.

About the year 1877, the invariable rebellion of the Lodges against the domination of the Supreme Council 33°, which is always met with in the histories of Grand Orient, occurred in Buenos Ayres. There appears to have been both a protest and secession, but without, in this case, culminating in any definite result.

There were some 13 Lodges under the Grand Orient of La Plata in 1860, 39 in 1878, and 60 in 1886. The Grand Master, who has held office for several years, and was previously the Grand Secretary, is Dr. Mannel H. Langenheim. Foreign jurisdictions are represented by four Lodges under the Grand Lodge of England; by two under the Grand Orient of Italy; and by one each under the Grand Orient of France and the Grand Lodge of Hamburg. With the exception of two (English) Lodges, all these meet at Buenos Ayres. The French Lodge was established in 1852, and has already been referred to, Teutonia, under the Grand Lodge of Hamburg, appears to be of English origin, as a Lodge of the same name, working in the German language, was established at the capital by the Grand Lodge of England in 1859.*

PARAGUAY.—When this country proclaimed its independence of Spain, the reins of government were seized by Dr. Francia, a well-meaning despot, who, during his long administration, carried into effect his ideas of advancing the material interests of the state by shutting it off from all communication with the outer world. Under his government Paraguay was for a long period as effectually closed as Japan had been before it. The same exclusive policy, though without carrying it quite so far, was pursued by his successor, Don Carlos Antonio Lopez. The latter was followed in turn by his son, Don Francisco Solano Lopez, whose action involved the country in the disastrous war of 1864-70 with Brazil, Uruguay, and the Argentine Republic. This war cost Paraguay nearly one-half of its territory, and reduced its population from nearly a million and a half to about 220,000, of whom only 29,000 were men. If, conjointly with this, we bear in mind that Paraguay is the only country in South America without any seaboard, it will occasion no surprise that the traces of Masonry in the existing Republic are so faint as to be almost indistinguishable. The population of Asuncion, the capital, had fallen after the war from nearly 50,000 to about 10,000, of whom 3000 belonged for several years—if they do not at the present time—to the Brazilian army of occupation. The Masonic calendars of 1881-82 show a Lodge under the G.O. of Brazil as existing at Paraguay, but whether composed of natives or of the Brazilian garrison, and whether it still exists, are points upon which the statistics at my command leave me wholly in the dark.

URUGUAY.—Masonry—if we may credit Dr. Mackey—was introduced into this Republic in 1827 by the Grand Orient of France, which in that year chartered a Lodge called the "Children of the New World." But I have failed to trace any such Lodge in the French Masonic calendars, and it is important to recollect that the independence of Uruguay, or, as it was formerly called, Banda Oriental (Eastern Side), as a Republic, was only definitely established by a treaty dated August 27, 1828. The country prides itself on possessing one of the finest political constitutions in South America. It sounds, therefore, almost like irony to be obliged to add that this Republic has been cursed with more frequent revolutions than any other in the New World. In one respect, however, Uruguay is decidedly in advance of the Indian Republic of Paraguay. It has a large, well-built, and pleasant capital, Monte Video, of which one-third of the residents are foreigners. A Lodge—No. 217, Asilio de la Virtud—was chartered in this city by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, February 6, 1832. After this the Masonic history of Uruguay is a complete blank until the year 1841, in which year, also at Monte Video, Les Amis de la Patrie—ultimately a Lodge, Chapter, Areopagus, and Consistory—was established by the Grand Orient of France. Further Lodges are said to have been erected under warrants from Brazil, but of these no exact record is forthcoming. The next event of any importance occurred in 1855, when authority was obtained from one of the then existing Grand Orientes at Rio Janeiro to establish a governing Masonic body, and the Supreme Council and Grand Orient of Uruguay were formally constituted at Monte Video. The present Sov. G. Com. and G.M. is Dr. Carlos de Castro, who has held both offices for some years. The number of subordinate Lodges is thirty-four.

Besides Les Amis de la Patrie, under the G.O. of France, which still exists, foreign jurisdictions are represented at Monte Video by the following Lodges—England, No. 1178, Acacia, 1861; Spain (Becerra's Grand Lodge), No. 281, Paz y Esperanza; and Italy, I. Figli Dell' Unità Italiana, and I. Liberi Pensatori. A Lodge, Avenir et Progres, No. 182, was formed—also at the capital—under the Supreme Council of France in 1865, but is now extinct.

BRAZIL.—In 1820 the solitary representative of the Craft in the then kingdom of Brazil was a Lodge at Rio Janeiro, which is said to have been established under a French warrant in 1815. In 1821 this Lodge threw off two shoots, or, more correctly speaking, divided itself into three parts, and these by their depties formed the first Grand Orient of Brazil. The modern French rite of seven degrees was adopted, or rather continued, which, together with the traditional ancestry of the original Lodge, will account for the speedy recognition of the new organization by the G.O. of France. In the same year Dom Pedro, Regent, and afterwards Emperor, of Brazil, was initiated in one of the three Lodges. This was immediately followed by his being proclaimed Grand Master, but soon convincing himself that the Masonic associations were in all but name mere political coleries, he ordered their meetings to be discontinued in 1822.

In the following year—November 17—Le Bonclier de l'Honneur Français was erected at Rio Janeiro by the G.O. of France, but there is no reason to suppose that it enjoyed any better fate than befell the Lodges of earlier date, all of which remained in an enforced trance until the departure for Europe of the Emperor Dom Pedro in 1831.

After the abdication of that monarch a "Grand Brazilian Orient" was established, which led to the revival of the older (or original) "Grand Orient of Brazil," under its first G.M., Jose Bonifacio de Andrada e Silva. Political enmities soon made their presence felt. The Grand Orient of 1821 was despotic, and that of 1831 democratic. Both worked the modern French Rite, but each anathematized and hurled defiance at the other.

In 1832 Montezuma, Viscount Jequitinhonha, who had served as ambassador at several European Courts, returned to Brazil, where he was empowered by the Supreme Council of Belgium to establish a branch of the A. and A.S.R. Accordingly, in November, 1832, he proceeded to institute a Supreme Council 33° for Brazil. The rivalry of this new body put the two Grand Orients on their mettle. They at once commenced to warrant Chapters and Consistories, and ended by each erecting a Supreme Council. In 1835, however, further complications arose. Dissensions occurred among the constituents of Supreme Council No. 1. Some of these cast in their lot with the "G.O. of Brazil," and elected Andrada e Silva their Sov. G. Com.; another section erected a Supreme Council of its own (No. 2); whilst the remainder continued steadfast in their allegiance to their founder, Montezuma. At this period, therefore, there were in active existence two Grand Orients and four Supreme Councils. In the same year (1835) the first of a series of Lodges in the Empire was chartered by the Grand Lodge of England,<sup>1</sup> and the peace of the Craft was much harassed by political disturbances in the Province of Pará—the last in Brazil to declare its independence of the mother country and acknowledge the authority of the first Emperor. According to a recent writer, at this time the native party in Pará were much enraged with the Portuguese. There was a serious revolt, and the former in an evil hour called to their aid the ignorant and fanatic mongrel and Indian population. "The cry of death to the Portuguese was soon changed to that of death to the Freemasons, then a powerfully organized society, embracing the greater part of the male white inhabitants."<sup>2</sup>

In 1838 Viscount Albuquerque succeeded Andrada e Silva as G.M. of the Grand Orient of Brazil (G.O. No. 1), and was followed in 1850 by the Marquis d'Abrantes. Meanwhile, in 1842, the Grand Brazilian Orient (G.O. No. 2) had openly rejected the Modern French Rite, and transferred its allegiance to the A. and A.S.R. 33°. This in turn had been followed by a junction between the Grand Brazilian Orient and Supreme Council No. 2. Thus only three distinct and separate organizations were left in the field, viz, the two Grand Orients, each with a Supreme Council, and the Original Supreme Council (No. 1) under Montezuma.

A list of Brazilian Lodges, numbered in consecutive order from 1 to 130, is given in the World Wide Register for 1860. In the year last named—September 30—(Grand Orient No. 2 and Supreme Council No. 1 were dissolved and suppressed by Imperial decree. This left the older (or original) G.O. of Brazil in possession of the field. Not, however, for any long period. In 1863 there was further strife, and the Grand Orient split into two parts, each of which became popularly known by the name of the street in which it assembled. One body, the G.O. of Lavradio Valley, chose as its G.M. Baron Cayru, who was followed by Dr. Joachim Marcellino de Brito in 1865, and by the Visconde do Rio Branco in 1870. The other moiety, the G.O. of Benedictine Valley, elected Dr. Joachim Saldanha Marinho to preside over them.

In 1872 the schism was apparently healed by the amicable fusion of the two Grand Orients, but within a year dissensions again broke out, and with undiminished virulence, each of the two opponents once more seeking recognition as the legitimate Grand Orient of Brazil.

The Lavradios were again arrayed under the standard of Rio Branco, Prime Minister of the Empire; whilst the Benedictinos renewed their fealty to Saldanha Marinho, a former Minister of State, and the head of the Liberal party. The various Lodges throughout the country once more divided their allegiance, some adhering to the Lavradio faction, but the larger number enrolling themselves on the side of the Benedictinos.

The discord passed through sundry phases. In the first instance, and to go back beyond the temporary fusion of 1872, the two Grand Orients reflected pretty accurately the prevailing opinions of the rival parties in the State. In course of time it became a recognized fact that the Lavradios were supporters of the clerical authority, whilst the Benedictinos, on the other hand, everywhere denounced the evils of priestcraft and Ultramontaniam. At this period the clergy entered fully into the fray. On one party they bestowed high praise; on the other they lavished terms of opprobrium. The Lavradios, however, under the benignant rule of Rio Branco, gradually grew less bigoted and illiberal in their ideas, and in 1873 twenty-three of their Lodges went over to the enemy. This example was quickly followed by fifteen others. It is probable that the secession just referred to was also in some measure the result of proceedings which it becomes my next task to relate.

The Jesuits, driven from most of the European countries, selected Brazil as a field for their enterprise. For a long time the Church and the Freemasons had lived in peace, and the population of Pernambuco was always recognized as the type of Christian piety. But the Bishop of that diocese—a young monk, aged twenty-three—at the bidding of the Jesuits, attempted to enforce the Papal Bull against the Freemasons. The prelate had counted on the support of the people, but his high-handed measures turned the tide of popular feeling. The Bishop was mobbed in his own palace, and the military had to be called in to protect him.

Eventually the Government interfered, and the Bishop, disdaining to avail of the locus penitentis which had been devised for him, was sentenced to four years' imprisonment.

The Archbishop of Bahia and the Bishops of Olinda, Pará, Rio Janeiro, Diamantina, and Marianna are also said—in violation of the orders of their Government—to have hurled their anathemas against the Craft.

The fickle populace then turned once more against the Freemasons, who suffered much at the hands of the mob, and were refused the sacraments of the Church, and burial for their dead in consecrated ground, by the clergy. The Benedictines nevertheless held their own, and especially distinguished themselves in the spread of liberal ideas. Among the measures they energetically supported were acts for the abolition of slavery and for the foundation of public libraries. Instructive lectures, moreover, were delivered from time to time by members of this party. Meanwhile the Lavradios had gradually shaken off the yoke of their clerical allies, by whom they were ultimately regarded with the same aversion as their rivals, and in 1877 there were attempts at a fusion. At this time the Benedictines under Saldanha Marinho numbered 216, and the Lavradios, under Rio Branco, 56 Lodges.

Six years later—January, 18, 1883—the union was perfected, and Francisco José Cardoso proclaimed G.M. and Sov. G. Com. of the (sole) Grand Orient of Brazil. Three rites are recognized by this body—the A. and A.S.R. 33°, the Modern French (7°), and the Adonhiramite rites. Each of these is governed by a Chamber of the G.O., which is styled a Grand Lodge. In 1883 there were 139 Lodges, 48 of these meeting at the city of Rio Janeiro, and 91 in the provinces. At the present date (1886) the total number of Lodges under the G.O. is 210. Foreign jurisdictions (or Grand Lodges) are represented by the following Lodges:—ENGLAND: No. 970, Southern Cross, Pernambuco, 1856; SCOTLAND: No. 473, Progresso, Rio Grande, 1867; and HAMBURG: of the Palm of Peace, Blumenau, 1885. Among the Lodges formerly existing, but now extinct, may be named Le Bouclier de l'Honneur Français, Rio Janeiro, 1823 (G.O. of France); No. 378 [ ], Maranhão, 1856 (Grand Lodge of Ireland); and "German Friendship of the Southern Cross," originally two Brazilian Lodges, which amalgamated in 1856, and found a place on the roll of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg in 1859.<sup>1</sup>

GUIANA.

I must now devote a few words to the region situated north of Brazil and east of Venezuela, which forms the only remaining portion of the Southern Continent still held by European Powers. Guiana, or Guayana, in its widest sense, certainly embraces the whole of the Sierra Parimé, thus including districts belonging to Venezuela and Brazil; but the term is now generally restricted to the colonial possessions of England, France, and Holland in this part of the world.

BRITISH GUIANA.—Two Lodges are known to have been in existence at the capital, Georgetown or Demerara, in the last century. The first—St. Jean de la Re-Union—was established by the Grand Lodge of Holland in 1771, and the second No. 887, on the roll of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, apparently very soon after the cession of a portion of Guiana—now forming the British Colony of that name—in 1796. Three years later a Dutch Lodge, bearing the somewhat singular name of Cœlum non Mutat Gesù, was formed in Berbice; and in 1801 the "Chosen Friends of Demerara" was established by the Grand Lodge of New York. The fourth Lodge at Georgetown—Union, No. 358—was constituted under an Atholl warrant, July 28, 1813; and the fifth—Mount Olive, No. 812—by the United Grand Lodge of England in 1827. Further English Lodges—Nos. 682, Lodge of Fellowship, and 1183, Phoenix—were erected at New Amsterdam in 1839 and 1867 respectively. The four earliest Lodges have long since ceased to exist; No. 682 under the Grand Lodge of England was erased June 4, 1862; but all the other Lodges above enumerated are still active. In 1858, a dispensation to open a Lodge at Demerara was refused—in my opinion, very prudently—by the Grand Lodge of Canada.

DUTCH GUIANA, OR SURINAM.—In the Freemason's Calendar, 1776, a list is given of the Lodges in Holland and the Dutch colonies. Among these are La Vertueuse, 1769, and La Fidèle Sincérité, 1771, at Batavia; and Concordia, 1762, La Zelée, 1767, and Le Croissant des Trois Clefs, 1768, at Surinam. Apparently the same Lodges, though with slightly varied dates of formation, and in a solitary instance a change of name, are also shown in the edition of the same publication for 1778.<sup>1</sup> Of these there seem to be two survivors at the present day, which in the Official Calendar of the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands (1886) are described as Nos. 8, De Ster in het Oosten, 1769, Batavia; and 13, Concordia, 1773, Paramaribo. They are included in the Masonic province of Surinam.

Other Lodges in Guiana, of which there is no complete record, have doubtless lived their span and died; but the only particulars with regard to them that I have been able to glean will be found in the note below,<sup>2</sup> to which, however, must be added, that there was a "Surranam Lodge" under the Prov. G.L. of New England in 1761.

FRENCH GUIANA, OR CAYENNE.—Three Lodges in all appear to have been constituted at Cayenne, the capital of the colony, which is now scarcely anything more than a penal settlement of the French Government. The first, L'Anglaise, was established in 1755 by the Mother Lodge of the same name—No. 204—at Bordeaux; the second, La Parfaite Union, in 1829, by the Grand Orient of France; and the third, La France Equinoxiale, in 1844, by the Supreme Council 33° of the same country. The last named is at present the only Lodge at work in Cayenne.<sup>3</sup>

The only region of South America which still awaits notice is PATAGONIA, and it is almost needless to state that Masonry is as yet unknown to the various Tehuelche tribes which roam between the Rio Negro and the Strait of Magellan.

AUSTRALASIA.

Tasmania and New Zealand, together with the whole of Australia, were originally subject to the government of New South Wales, and the following are the dates on which the former colonies became independent of the latter:—Tasmania, 1825; Western Australia, 1829; South Australia, 1834; New Zealand, 1841; Victoria, 1851; and Queensland, 1859.

NEW SOUTH WALES.—The Lodge of Social and Military Virtues—No. 227 on the roll of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, attached to the 46th Foot in 1752, after undergoing many vicissitudes, was at work in the same regiment at Sydney in 1816. This paved the way for the establishment of stationary Lodges, and Irish warrants were issued to Nos. 260, Australian Social, in 1820, and 266, Leins*, in 1824. The third (strictly colonial) Lodge, No. 820, Australia, was erected by the Grand Lodge of England in 1828. The last named, as well as the Irish Lodges, met at Sydney, the capital. The first established in any other part of the Colony was No. 668, St. John, constituted at Paramatta in 1838, and the second, No. 697, the Lodge of Australia Felix, at Melbourne—then included in the government of New South Wales—in 1841. An Irish Lodge—No. 275—was erected at Windsor in 1843, and in the same year, No. 408, Australasian Kilwinning, at Melbourne, received a Charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

From this point the statistics will be given according to the jurisdictions represented. Thus, the number of Lodges established in the Colony during the two decennial periods next ensuing was as follows:—1844-53, English, seven; Irish and Scottish, one each: 1854-63, English, fourteen; Irish, one; and Scottish, seven. In the twelve years immediately following (1864-75), the additions were: English, fourteen; Irish, three; and Scottish, ten. The subsequent numbers (1876-85) are: English, thirty-three; Irish, two; and Scottish, thirty-one. The Lodges now active under the three jurisdictions, reckoning the further additions during the current year (1886), are: English, seventy-four (including one in New Caledonia); Irish, one; and Scottish, fifty (with a membership of 2342).<sup>1</sup> An English Provincial Grand Master was appointed in 1839, an example which was followed by the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1855, and by that of Ireland in 1858. The present rulers of the Craft (under the jurisdiction of the mother countries) in this Colony are: District Grand Masters, Mr. John Williams (E.), and Dr. W. G. Sedgwick (S.). The Irish Provincial G.L. has ceased to exist.

So far as I am aware, the question of separation from the mother Grand Lodges was first formally mooted in Victoria. Still, for some years, at least, before the event which it becomes my next task to relate, "there had existed in Sydney a body styling itself 'the Grand Lodge of New South Wales,' formed from the great majority of a regular Lodge—St. Andrew's. It affected to make, pass, and raise Masons, grant charters, and issue certificates."<sup>2</sup>

On December 3, 1877, the representatives of twelve or (at most) thirteen Scottish and Irish Lodges met at Sydney, and established another Grand Lodge of New South Wales, to which, however, the pre-existing body of the same name eventually made submission, and accepted an ordinary Lodge warrant at its hands. At this time (1877) there were eighty-six regular Lodges in the Colony: English, forty-seven; Scottish, thirty; and Irish, nine. The thirteen Lodges which thus assumed to control the dissenting majority of seventy-three, sheltered themselves under a perverted principle of Masonic law<sup>3</sup>—applied to a wholly illusory state of facts. This was, that any three Lodges in a territory "Masonically unoccupied"—the three jurisdictions already existing being thus coolly and quietly ignored—could form themselves into a Grand Lodge, and that when so formed, the remaining Lodges—averse to the movement—were they one hundred or one thousand in number, would be irregular!

<sup>1</sup> The services of the District G.S., and the expansion of Scottish Masonry in New South Wales, which are alike phenomenal, represent cause and effect. Mr. Higatrim, it may be added, has more than once declined the offer of a similar though more highly paid appointment in the Colony.

<sup>3</sup> I.e., of American Masonic Law. Mr. Josiah H. Drummond observes:—"The proposition, then, derived from the original principle, as expounded by universal practice in this country, is—Not less than three Lodges, comprising a majority of the Lodges in a new territory, may form a

The leader in this "misguided and untimely movement,"—as it has been happily characterized by the present Scottish D.G. Secretary, Mr. Higstrim—was Mr. James E. Farnell, who had been appointed Prov. G.M. under the Grand Lodge of Ireland in 1869. In Australia, as in Canada, the Irish Lodges first raised the flag of independence, but in the former unlike the latter country, there was not the community of feeling, produced by an equal pressure of discontent, which had induced the brethren under the three British jurisdictions in North America to unite for the furtherance of a common end. The disadvantages, indeed, with which all the Australian Lodges had (and still have) to contend were considerable, but, on the other hand, there were (and are) in many minds, feelings—not wholly sentimental—opposed to working under any other warrants of Constitution than those granted by the three earliest of existing Grand Lodges. It may be taken as an axiom, that in any country where matters are ripe for the formation of an independent Grand Lodge, the movement will proceed and mature, and that the large majority of Lodges and brethren will connect themselves with it. If, however, a step in the direction of independence is taken before the Lodges are quite ready for it, the success of the movement will be mainly contingent upon the amount of influence wielded by the leaders of the agitation, or, in other words, upon the extent of their following. Mr. Farnell—according to his own statement in 1881—served for twenty years as a member of the parliament of New South Wales, and was also for a time prime minister, but his influence as a Mason does not seem to have been great. When he was elected Grand Master, the affairs of the Irish Province of New South Wales were in thorough confusion,<sup>1</sup> and not the least of the motives which weighed with his supporters—Scotch as well as Irish—appears to have been the growing indisposition to be taxed by (or remit fees to) the mother countries.

The new organization, at the close of 1883, had been recognized as the only regular governing Masonic body in the Colony by thirty-eight Grand Lodges, chiefly, however, American. There seems, indeed, in the United States a decided inclination to regard eachprising of the Lodges in a British colony, as a tribute to the efficacy of a certain doctrine which has been laid down by Dr. Mackey with regard to the formation of Grand Lodges. But those American jurisdictions which have lent a willing ear to the specious representations of the Grand Lodge of New South Wales, are now running the gauntlet of intelligent criticism, and the several committees by whom they have been hoodwinked or

Grand Lodge, having exclusive jurisdiction in such territory." But the same distinguished writer goes on to state:—"The idea that a small minority of the Lodges may form a Grand Lodge, and force the other Lodges into it against their will, or drive them out of existence, seems to us monstrous. In almost all matters in Masonry the majority rules; and while we allow a minority in certain cases to have a decisive negative upon proposed action, in no case do we allow a minority to adopt affirmative action against the will of the majority" (Proc. G.L. Maine, 1885, p. 163). Cf. Proc. G.L. Tennessee, 1885; and Louisiana, 1886.

<sup>1</sup> According to the Dep. G. Sec. of Ireland (in a letter to Mr. H. A. Richardson of Paramatta, dated February, 1879), no returns or remittances had been received from the Prov. G.L. for a considerable time, and to clear off the arrears of the subordinate Lodges, the Grand Lodge of Ireland had consented to accept £200, or a composition of about 15s. in the £.

mised, may read with profit some of the reports on correspondence in the larger States, notably, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and New York, where the unaccountable delusion into which so many Grand Lodges have fallen is discussed with equal candor and ability. It is almost needless to say that a Grand Lodge thus constituted by a small minority of the Lodges in New South Wales, has been refused recognition by the Grand Lodges of the British islands.

In December, 1885, the G.M. was Dr. H. J. Tarrant. There were forty-four subordinate Lodges, and the total number of initiations since the inauguration of the Grand Lodge had been 1926.

VICTORIA.—The Lodges of Australia Felix and of Australasia (now Nos. 474 and 530) were established at Melbourne by the Grand Lodge of England in 1841 and 1846 respectively. Scottish Masonry obtained a footing in the same city—with "Australasian Kilwinning"—in 1843; and an Irish Lodge—Uram, No. 349—was also chartered there in 1847. In the same year a third English, and apparently the fifth Victorian, Lodge—Unity and Prudence, No. 801—was constituted at Geelong. After this the Craft advanced in prosperity by leaps and bounds. Forty-six English Lodges were added to the list between 1847 and the close of 1862; twenty-eight during the ensuing thirteen years, and twenty within the decennial period commencing January 1, 1876. During corresponding intervals of time, the Irish warrants granted in the colony were respectively twelve, seven, and three; and the Scottish, three each in the first two periods, and two in the last.

The first Provincial G.M. of Victoria (or Australia Felix) was the Hon. J. E. Murray. The date of his appointment by the Grand Lodge of Scotland has not been recorded, but he was succeeded by Mr. J. H. Ross, August 3, 1846. The present District G.M. is Sir W. J. Clarke, who received his Scottish patent in 1883. English and Irish Provinces were established in 1855 and 1856 respectively, and the following has been the succession of English Provincial (now District) Grand Masters:—Captain (now Major-General Sir Andrew) Clarke, 1855; Captain F. C. Standish, 1861; and Sir W. J. Clarke, 1883. The rulers of the Irish Province have been Mr. J. T. Smith, 1856-79; and from 1880, Sir W. J. Clarke.

The Lodges now (1886) at work under the three jurisdictions, all of which, however, are in a manner united under a single Provincial G.M. are:—English, ninety-one; Irish, seventeen; and Scottish, twelve (including one in Levuka, Fiji).

The idea of forming an independent Grand Lodge of Victoria seems to have been first launched in 1863, and after encountering the opposition of the Earl of Zetland, was debated—March 2, 1864—in the Grand Lodge of England, by which body a resolution was passed declaring its "strong disapprobation" of the contemplated secession. It was observed in prescient terms by the late John Havers, that "every new Grand Lodge was the forerunner of new and conflicting degrees. It was a stone pulled away from the foundations of Masonry, and opened another door for inroads and innovations;" and he exhorted the brethren in Victoria to "remember that union was strength, and universality one of the watchwords of Masonry."

In 1876, the agitation for a local Grand Lodge was renewed, but again slumbered until 1883, when the scheme was fairly carried into effect by an insignificant minority of the Lodges.

In the latter year a meeting was held, and a Masonic Union of Victoria formed, April 27. At this time there were seventy English, fifteen Irish, and ten Scottish Lodges in the colony—total, ninety-five. On June 19 certain delegates met, and the adhesion of eighteen Lodges—twelve Irish, five Scottish, and one English—to the cause was announced. But the number has since been reduced by the subtraction of the English Lodge and one other, which were erroneously named in the proceedings. By this convention it was resolved "that the date of founding the Grand Lodge of Victoria should be July 2, 1883." Thus we find sixteen Lodges, with an estimated membership of about 840, calmly transforming themselves into the governing body of a territory containing ninety-five Lodges, and a membership of five thousand!

This organization has a following of about twenty subordinate Lodges; and as the proceedings of some Grand Lodges baffle all reasonable conjecture, it will occasion no surprise to learn that by seventeen of these bodies the titular "Grand Lodge of Victoria" had been duly recognized at the close of 1885, as the supreme Masonic authority in this Australian colony. At the same date Mr. G. Coppin entered upon the second year of his Grand Mastership, having been installed—November 4—in the presence of the Grand Masters of New South Wales and South Australia.

Meanwhile, however, the English, Irish, and Scottish Lodges, which have remained true to their former allegiance, are united in a solid phalanx under a single Provincial (or District) G.M.—Sir W. J. Clarke; and should the day arrive when independence is constitutionally asserted by the century and more of Lodges which obey this common chief, those bodies by whom the soi-disant Grand Lodge has been accorded recognition, will find themselves confronted by an interesting problem, not unlike that propounded with so much dramatic effect by the late Mr. Sothorn in the rôle of Lord Dundreary, viz., "whether it is the dog that wags his tail, or the tail that wags the dog?"

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—The South Australian Lodge of Friendship, Adelaide, No. 613 (and later, No. 423), on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England, was constituted at the British metropolis in 1834. The founders were all in London at the time, and two persons—afterward Sir John Morphett, President of the Legislative Council, and Sir R. D. Hanson, Chief Justice of the colony—were initiated. A second English Lodge was established at Adelaide in 1844, and in the same year, also at the capital, a Scottish one.

In 1855 the first Irish charter was received in the colony, and in 1883 the total number of Lodges formed in South Australia was as follows:—English, twenty active, one extinct; Irish, seven active, three extinct; and Scottish, six, all active.

The initiative in forming a province was taken by Scotland in 1846, a step followed by England in 1848, and Ireland in 1860.

In 1883 there were premonitory symptoms that the lamentable examples set by a minority of the Lodges in the adjacent colonies of New South Wales and Victoria, in usurping the authority and honor which should belong to the majority, would be followed in South Australia. The imminence of this danger induced Mr. H. M. Addison to form a Masonic Union, whose labors resulted—April 16, 1884—in a convention of 85 delegates, representing twenty-eight Lodges, by whom the Grand Lodge of South Australia was established. The proceedings of the executive committee of the Masonic Union, which were characterized throughout by the most scrupulous regularity, were crowned by an unprecedented unanimity of feeling on the part of the Lodges. A resolution in favor of independence was carried nem. con. in eighteen English, four Irish, and six Scottish Lodges, and with a single dissident in one English, and with two dissidents in one Irish Lodge; whilst in the sole remaining Lodge under England, and in the "Mostyn" under Ireland, a majority of the members joined the Union. Thus, in effect, out of a grand total of thirty-three Lodges under the three British jurisdictions, only a single Lodge—No. 363—Duke of Leinster (I.), has adhered to its former allegiance. The new Grand Lodge (besides the usual indiscriminate recognition of American Grand Bodies) has been admitted to fraternal relations with the Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland. The privilege, however, accorded by the last name in August, 1885, was cancelled in the November following, a proceeding, there is every reason to believe, arising out of the inconsistent action of the colonial Grand Lodge in recognising the authority of the Grand Lodge of New South Wales—the irregular establishment of which, it was declared by Mr. Addison, at the formation of the Masonic Union in Adelaide, July 30, 1883, would, if imitated, "bring Masonry in South Australia into disrepute throughout the world."

The Hon. S. J. Way, Chief Justice of the Colony, and Mr. J. H. Cunningham, formerly District Grand Secretary (E.), have been Grand Master and Grand Secretary respectively, since the foundation of the Grand Lodge. The subordinate Lodges are thirty-six in number, with a total membership of 2277.

QUEENSLAND.—The North Australian Lodge was established at Brisbane by the Grand Lodge of England in 1859, and two others under Irish and Scottish warrants respectively, were constituted at the same town in 1864.

Each jurisdiction is represented by a Provincial (or District) G.M., and the number of Lodges is as follows:—English, twenty-six active, two extinct; Irish, eleven active, three extinct; and Scottish, twelve, all active.

WEST AUSTRALIA.—Eight Lodges in all have been formed in this colony, the first of which—St. John, No. 712—was erected at Perth in 1842. Seven of these survive, and being included in no Province, report direct to the Grand Lodge of England, which in this solitary instance has not suffered from the exercise of concurrent jurisdiction by other Grand Bodies.

TASMANIA.—Lodges under the Grand Lodge of Ireland were established at Hobart Town in 1823, 1829, 1833, and 1834, but the three earliest of the series are now extinct. A fourth Lodge under the same sanction was constituted at Launceston in 1843, and it was not until 1846 that English Masonry obtained a footing on the island. In that year Tasmanian Union, No. 781, was formed at Hobart Town, and a second English Lodge—Hope—sprang up (in the first instance under a dispensation from Sydney) in 1852. In the following year the Rev. R. K. Ewing became the Master of the latter, and in 1856 the Lodges of Faith and Charity were carved out of it—Mr. Ewing then becoming, on their joint petition, Prov. G.M. The other English Lodge—Tasmanian Union—objecting to these proceedings, as having been carried on clandestinely, was suspended by the Prov. G.M., and remained closed for nine months. The strife thus engendered nearly put an end to English Masonry in Launceston. Lodge Faith became dormant, Charity was voluntarily wound up, and even in Hope the light almost went out. Soon, however, there was a revival, and in 1876 the Grand Lodge of Scotland also began to charter Lodges on the island, where there are now four in existence under its jurisdiction. These are included in the Province of New South Wales. The Grand Lodges of England and Ireland have each a roll of seven Lodges on the island,—one under the former body, and four under the latter, having surrendered their charters. The English Prov. Grand Lodge died a natural death on the removal of Mr. Ewing to Victoria, but a new one was established under Mr. W. S. Hammond in 1875. The Irish Lodges were constituted into a Province in 1884.

NEW ZEALAND.

The first Lodge in the Colony—Française Primitive Antipodienne—was founded at Akaroa by the Snpreme Council of France, August 29, 1843; the second—Ara—at Auckland, by the Grand Lodge of Ireland in 1844; and the third—New Zealand Pacific—by the Grand Lodge of England in 1845. No further charters were issued until 1852, when English Lodges were established in Lyttelton and Christchurch, whilst others sprang up at New Plymouth and Auckland in 1856, at Wanganui in 1857, and at Nelson and Kaiapoi in 1858. In the latter year an Irish Lodge (the second in the colony) was formed at Napier, and in 1860 an English one at Dunedin—where also the first Scottish Lodge was erected in 1861. After this the diffnsion of Masonry throughout New Zealand became so general, that I must content myself with giving the barest statistics, which, for convenience sake, will be classified so as to harmonize as far as possible with the Provincial systems of the three competing jurisdictions. Between 1860 and 1875 there were warranted in the colony twenty-five English, eight Irish, and twenty-one Scottish Lodges; whilst in the ten years ending January 1, 1886, the numbers were respectively forty-seven, seven and thirty-two.

The Lodges in New Zealand are usually classified according to the Masonic Provinces of which they form a part. Of the latter there are five English and three Scottish, of late years denominated Districts, in order to distinguish them from bodies of a like character in Great Britain; and one Irish, to which the more familiar title of Provincial Grand Lodge is still applied. These preliminaries it will be necessary to bear in mind, because the arrangement which seems to me the simplest and best, is to group the Lodges according to their positions on the map, which in the present case will correspond very closely with the territorial classification, or division into Districts, by the Grand Lodge of England.

NORTH ISLAND.

AUCKLAND DISTRICT.—The District (or Provincial) Grand Masters are Mr. G. S. Graham (E.), Sir F. Whitaker (S.), and Mr. G. P. Pierce (I.); whilst the number of Lodges under the several jurisdictions is eighteen under the G.L. of England, and six each under those of Scotland and Ireland, that is, if taken according to locality, for all the Scottish Lodges on the North Island are comprised within the Auckland District, and the whole of the Irish Lodges in both islands within the Auckland Province.

WELLINGTON DISTRICT.—The only D.G.M. is Mr. C. J. Toxward (E.); and the number of Lodges is respectively eighteen (E.), eight (S.), and four (I).

MIDDLE, OR SOUTH ISLAND.

CANTERBURY DISTRICT.—The D.G.M.'s are Mr. Henry Thomson (E.) and the Rev. James Hill (S.), who rule over nineteen and nine Lodges respectively. The seat of government is at Christchurch, where there is also an Irish Lodge, the only one in the District.

OTAGO AND SOUTHLAND DISTRICT.—Mr. T. S. Graham presides over one D.G.L. (E), and Mr. G. W. Harvey over the other (S.). There are fourteen Lodges in each District, i.e., according to the local arrangement, for the Scottish D.G.L. (of which there are only two in the South Island exercises authority beyond the territorial limits of Otago and Southland. The total number of Lodges on its roll is twenty-one.

OCEANICA.

TERRITORY OF HAWAII.—In 1843, Captain Le Tellier, in command of a French whaling vessel, the Ajax, an enthusiastic Freemason, who was held in such high estimation by the Supreme Council 33d degree of the Scottish Rite in France, that he was empowered to institute Masonic Lodges in ports of the Pacific and South Seas, arrived in the harbor of Honolulu. During his advent there he met several brother Masons, to whom he granted authority to organize a Lodge under the name of "Le Progrès de l'Océanie," working under the Grand Lodge of France.

The first meetings of this Lodge were held on board the Ajax, and after her departure, were continued at the residence of Brother John Meek. Thence the Lodge moved to a building on King Street, the use of which was donated by Brother Meek. Search for documents containing the names of the original members of this first Lodge has failed of discovery, the earliest records having been burnt when the residence of Brother Henry Sea was destroyed by fire, and it is feared the identity of all but three of the founders of Freemasonry in Hawaii is lost, viz: Captain Le Tellier, John Meek, and Henry Sea.

In 1849 when the tide of humanity swept towards the golden shores of California, these islands furnished their full quota, during which, Lodge Le Progrès de l'Océanie and its membership seemed to have become scattered to the four winds. It continued and revived until merged into Oceanic Lodge, No. 371, October 12th, 1905. Both Kings Kamehameha IV. and Kalakaua were Masters of this Lodge during its existence. Its affairs were satisfactorily wound up December 25th, 1905.

While Freemasonry was dormant for a time, on the evening of December 8th, 1851, a meeting of about a dozen Master Masons was held at the residence of Captain John Meek, to take into consideration the practicability of forming a regularly constituted Lodge of F. & A. Masons in the City of Honolulu, under the Grand Lodge of California, to whom a petition was addressed, praying for a charter to be granted for HAWAIIAN LODGE, No. 21, and Brothers Lemuel Lyon and P. D. Penhallow were appointed a committee to wait upon the Grand Master with the petition. They were given full power to exercise their judgment in the furtherance of the wishes of the Brethren, and the charter was granted on May 5th, 1852, to work under its jurisdiction. The first annual election of officers under its charter was held December 31, 1852. They were installed January 7, 1853 by Brother Robert C. Wylie, then Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Hawaiian Government, who had been deputed for that purpose.

On the 5th of May, 1902, this Lodge, the oldest in point of continuous life in the islands, celebrated its Golden Jubilee with much eclat in its handsome temple, which was transformed into a tropical auditorium by the introduction of palms and maile,—the decorative scheme of which was entirely that of Brother Joshua D. Tucker. The occasion was full of meaning to a Lodge which has numbered among its members Kings, ministers, professional men and toilers in the humble fields, magnates and clerks. Introductory remarks were made by Worshipful Master Frederick Whitney and the opening address delivered by P. M. W. Fessenden Allen. It was a celebration full of oratory and reminiscence, of music and good fellowship. The applause which punctuated the historical address of P. M. Hassinger and the laudatory one of P. G. M. Estee showed the strength of the Masonic feeling existing among its people throughout the territory.

Brother Joshua D. Tucker, 33°

INSPECTOR MASONIC DISTRICT NO. 59, TERRITORY OF HAWAII FOR GRAND LODGE OF CALIFORNIA
GRAND PERSIVANT GRAND LODGE OF CALIFORNIA F. & A. M.
PAST EMINENT COMMANDER K. T., PAST COMMANDER IN-CHIEF HAWAIIAN CONSISTORY

MAUI LODGE, No. 223, at Wailuku received a charter from the Grand Lodge of California, on October 18, 1873, but its membership being somewhat scattered, after several years of harmonious working, it was regretfully voted to surrender its charter, and its affairs were creditably closed, most of its remaining members affiliating with Honolulu Lodges.

PACIFIC LODGE, No. 822, HONOLULU.—A number of the Craft deemed that the occasion warranted the forming of a new Lodge in Honolulu; they applied for and obtained a dispensation, and a charter granted on August 1, 1895, by the District Grand Master of New South Wales, under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and the Lodge was instituted on that date. It has grown steadily along safe lines, and enjoys prosperity, both actively and financially.

KILAUEA LODGE, No. 330, HILO, ISLAND OF HAWAII, was granted a charter from the Grand Lodge of California October 15, 1897, since which time it has progressed until its membership is now (1909) 122 Master Masons. It has a new steel and concrete building costing forty thousand dollars ($40,000), and all paid for when completed.

MAUI LODGE, No. 984, KAHULUI, MAUI, through a misunderstanding, the members applied, in 1904, for a dispensation to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the same was granted, and in the latter part of the year received its charter. The membership of this Lodge is composed of the best element of the white population of the Island of Maui. It has erected a handsome and complete hall at Kahului. It is in a most prosperous condition, active, and doing its share for the advancement of Freemasonry.

OCEANIC LODGE, No. 371, HONOLULU.—On August 28, 1905, twelve master masons, each of whom presented dimitts from Lodge "Le Progrès de l'Océanie," held a preliminary meeting for the purpose of forming a new Lodge, at which the necessary arrangements were made to petition the Grand Lodge of California for a dispensation. Permission was granted by Grand Master George W. Hunter, and on September 20th, 1905, the first meeting was held and officers installed by the Inspector, Joshua D. Tucker, 33°. The first officers were the same who had presided over "Le Progrès de l'Océanie," they having resigned from their respective offices for this purpose.

Oceanic Lodge was granted its charter by the Grand Lodge of California on October 12, 1905, and the members of "Le Progrès de l'Océanie," having dimitted, were elected to membership. It is prosperous, growing in membership, and has efficient and zealous officers, sustaining most cordial and fraternal relations with its sister Lodges.

As an evidence of the flourishing condition of Freemasonry in Hawaii at the present time (1909) the foregoing in relation to its five Lodges of Master Masons is self-evident. It would seem, however, appropriate to record here the fact of the prosperous work of numerous higher branches of the Order, including Honolulu Chapter of "Royal Arch Masons," Honolulu Commandery of "Knights Templar," Kamehameha "Lodge of Perfection," Nuuanu Chapter of "Rose Croix," Alexander Liholiho "Preceptory Council Knights of Kadosh," Hawaiian "Consistory," Bodies of the Scottish Rite, and Aloha Temple of the "Mystic Shrine" at Honolulu. Kalani "Lodge of Perfection," Lehua Chapter "Rose Croix," Waianaelue "Council Kadosh," at Hilo.

Nearly all the members of these higher branches are members of the local Blue Lodges, except a few who retain membership in their own Lodges in other lands.

It was a happy thought to link in and perpetuate with local Freemasonry the names and words which are inseparable from Hawaiian History.

CHAPTER XXX.

SEA AND FIELD LODGES.

THE only Stated Lodges in ships-of-war appear to have been held under English warrants, though in Portugal and elsewhere there have been meetings of Occasional Lodges where members of the Craft, persecuted on shore, have sought a refuge in the shipping. Field Lodges have existed in numerous jurisdictions, and are variously described. The title used by me occurs in a calendar of 1763, and while sanctioned by early usage, will admit of the inquiry being restricted to the existence of Lodges in military bodies—attached to the latter both in quarters and in the field. The earliest of these Lodges was established in the 1st (British) Regiment of Foot in 1732, under the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and four other similar Lodges, making a total of five, were at work in the same jurisdiction at the close of 1734.<sup>1</sup> The number had risen to eight in 1743, when the first Military Warrant was issued by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and stood at twenty-nine when the earliest Lodge of the kind was established—1755—by the Grand Lodge of England, in the 8th Foot.

The Irish jurisdiction has always included the greater number of (British) Army Lodges, and in 1813 possessed a military following of one hundred and twenty-three. At the same date, the number of Lodges in regiments under the other British Grand Lodges, and without counting the remote pendicles under Provincial Grand Lodges in foreign parts, was: England, fifteen; Ancients, sixty-two;<sup>2</sup> and Scotland, eighteen. This total has declined, in 1886, to fifteen Lodges, of which nine are Irish and the remainder English.<sup>3</sup>

A record of all the Lodges in regiments, or other movable military cadres, warranted by the British Grand Lodges or their representatives abroad, will be found—to the extent that I have succeeded in tracing them—in the present chapter.<sup>4</sup> The enumeration of stationary Lodges in garrisons or fortresses, even though composed exclusively of military members, lies, however, beyond the scope of my present purpose. The same may be said with regard to the distinguished roll of general officers, who have been active members of the Society. Of these I shall merely cite the names of Abercrombie, Moore, Earl Moira, and Sir Charles Napier. The task before me is to exhibit in the smallest possible compass a picture of an almost obsolete branch of Freemasonry, and neither sympathy with

<sup>1</sup> Pocket Companion, Dublin, 1735. From this year I am mainly dependent on information supplied from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, but as four out of the five Lodges named above are not mentioned in it, and for other reasons, I think there must have been many Irish Lodges in the British army of which all traces have been lost.

<sup>4</sup> In cases where a portion of the general subject has been already dealt with, as in the instance of the Brigade Lodges in India (ante, p. 129 et seq.), the reference will be given.

the subject, nor in affluence of materials collected with a larger object in view, must divert me from this imperative duty.

Of the Sea Lodges there is nothing further to be said beyond the passing allusion that the existence of all of them was probably due to the exertions of a single individual.<sup>1</sup> With the Field or Army Lodges it is different, and the outline of these bodies, as given in successive tables, I shall to a limited extent fill in, by prefacing each separate list with a brief introduction, commencing with the Lodges in British Regiments and deriving the materials for my sketch in great part from their actual minutes and records.

The Gibraltar Lodge (128),<sup>2</sup> in the 30th Foot,—“Primus in India,”—claims to have made the first Mason in India, under a European Warrant, in 1757. It subsequently founded numerous Lodges in various parts of Hindostan. There is a stone let into the wall in Fort-William, Calcutta, commemorative of the early history of this Lodge. All its working tools and jewels fell into the hands of the enemy during the Peninsular War, but were subsequently returned to the regiment. The same fate befell the Lodge chest in the 6th Dragoon Guards (577,) which was returned under a flag of truce and with a guard of honor. The 17th Foot lost its Warrant (18) in the American War, and it was courteously transmitted to them by General Parsons, with a fraternal letter. The 46th Foot (237) twice lost its chest, which was sent back on the first occasion by order of General Washington,<sup>3</sup> and on the second, by the French military authorities, three years after its capture at Dominica, in 1805. The historian of the 43d Foot complains, in 1758, that “the time passes very wearily” at Nova Scotia, and adds, “when the calendar does not furnish us with a loyal excuse for assembling in the evening, we have recourse to a Freemason’s Lodge, where we work so hard that it is inconceivable to think what a quantity of business of great importance is transacted in a very short space of time.”<sup>4</sup> This Lodge I have not succeeded in tracing, and the same is the case with regard to another, in the 54th Foot, attached to that corps, at St. John, New Brunswick, in 1786.<sup>5</sup> A battalion of the 9th Foot was wrecked on the French coast in 1805, and the members of the Lodge (183) solaced the weary hours of their captivity by assembling regularly at Valenciennes until the peace of 1814. The colonel of a regiment often became the first master of the Lodge attached to it. Thus in the 20th Foot, A.D. 1748, Lord George Sackville presided in the first instance over the Minden Lodge (63), though it cannot have borne that title until after his famous escapade at the battle of the same name in 1759.<sup>6</sup>

The following announcement appeared in the Newcastle Courant of January 4, 1770:—

“This is to acquaint the public, That on Monday the first instant, being the Lodge (or monthly meeting) Night of the Free and Accepted Masons of the 23d Regiment, held at the Crown near Newgate (Newcastle), Mrs. Bell, the landlady of the house, broke open a door (with a poker) that had not been opened for some time past, by which means she got into an adjacent room, made two holes through the wall, and, by that stratagem, discovered the secrets of Freemasonry: and she, knowing herself to be the first woman in the world that ever found out the secret, is willing to make it known to all her sex. So any lady who is desirous of learning the secrets of Freemasonry, by applying to that well-learned woman (Mrs. Bell, that lived fifteen years in and about Newgate), may be instructed in the secrets of Masonry.”

"It would be interesting to know," continues my authority,<sup>1</sup> "how many pupils Mrs. Bell obtained, and why she appealed to her own sex in particular."

The 38th Foot still possesses a Lodge (441), originally constituted in 1765, and as its proceedings have figured largely in the Masonic journals, some account of these, derived from the actual minutes and records, may be interesting to my readers. The Lodge re-opened at St. Pierre, Martinique, on November 8, 1796, "the former registry, with the chest, warrant, and jewels, having been captured by the enemy at Helvoet-Sluis in January, 1795." The regiment proceeded to St. Lucia and Saints, 1797; Ireland, 1803; Cape Town, 1806; Buenos Ayres and Monte Video, 1806-7;<sup>2</sup> and after a period of home service, the Lodge, which was closed in 1811, re-opened, November 7, 1819, at Cape Town, when a letter—dated April 5 of the same year—was read from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, of which the following is an extract:—

"The Union of Ancients and Moderns in England had no particular effect in this country, as we never had any Lodges but Ancient, neither have we adopted any of their new ceremonies."

The working of the Royal Arch degree was resumed in the Lodge November 14, 1822, when a letter, dated May 15, 1820, from the Deputy Grand Secretary, was read, of which the following passage is recorded in the minutes:—"There is not any warrant issued by the Grand Lodge of Ireland other than that you hold; it has therefore always been the practice of Irish Lodges to confer the Higher Degrees under that authority."<sup>3</sup> The names of the members of the degree are headed, "Roll of Excellent-Super-Excellent Royal Arch Masons of Lodge No. 441."<sup>4</sup>

The Lodge was next opened at Berhampore, E.I., in the same year (1822), but closed in 1823, and remained dormant until 1840, when it resumed work at Limerick. At this period Lord Ebrington was the Lord-Lieutenant, on whose arrival in Ireland, the Lodge No. 473 at Enniskillen, knowing that he was Provincial Grand Master of Devon, voted him an address, but in his published reply he declared that Masonry was not suited to the condition of Ireland, and that therefore he could not countenance it. Shortly after this a paragraph appeared in the papers announcing the revival of Lodge No. 441 in the 38th Foot, and the commander-in-chief, Sir Edward Blakeney, set in motion by the Lord-Lieutenant, peremptorily ordered the meetings to cease, and "all documents connected <sup>1</sup> Chambers's Journal, 1882, p. 400. According to Clavel (p. 34), Madame de Xaintrailles, who had been given the rank of captain for service in war, by the First Consul, was made a Mason at Paris in the Lodge "Frères-Artistes," of which many French officers were members. An incident of the late American Civil War appears to be on all-fours with the stories of Miss St. Leger and Mrs. Bell. The life of a young Irishman, taken red-handed as a guerilla by a party of the Iowa Regiment in 1861, was spared—so it is related—through his sister making a Masonic sign for relief, it proving on Examination that she had passed all the degrees (Weekly Budget, U.S.A., March 28, 1883).

<sup>2</sup> The 38th formed the storming party at the attack and capture of this city. The colonel, who was mortally wounded, after entering the breach, surveyed the scene, supported by his orderly sergeant, James Matthews (a member of the Lodge), and his dying words were, "Bravo, 38th, my brave regiment."

with the institution to be forthwith returned to the Parent Society." The warrant was therefore sent to the Grand Lodge, from whom, however, a hint was received in 1842—the 38th being then at Corfn—that "it was as much at the disposal of the members as when in their own possession;" and in the same year the box containing it, which had not been opened, was returned to the regiment.

As appears above, the Irish Lodges always worked according to the system in vogue among the so-called Ancient Masons, or perhaps it would be better to say, that the latter took their Masonry undiluted and unchanged from the former. The result, however, in America, where the influence of the Army Lodges made itself chiefly felt, was very marked. The customs of the Scottish Regimental Lodges were in no respect different to those of the Irish, and the older Grand Lodge of England was too sparsely represented among the military forces of the crown to exercise any counter-influence, if indeed her Field Lodges in foreign parts did not—as I imagine must have generally been the case—acquire the tone and character of the vast majority of these associations.

The active part played by Lodges in British regiments in the Masonic history of Massachusetts and New York will be separately narrated, but it may be incidentally observed that the predominance in North America of the "Ancients" over their rivals, the titular "Moderns," must be ascribed in great part to the influx of Regimental Lodges from the Old World, and to their subsequent dissemination of the principles and the practice of what was then termed "Ancient Masonry" throughout the length and breadth of the continent.

The muster-roll of Field Lodges in the British Army has been drawn up so as to agree with the order in which the various regiments were understood to rank, before the recent abolition of numerical titles, though, for convenience sake, I shall not interrupt the regimental sequence by placing the Royal Marines and the Rifle Brigade after the 49th and 93d Foot respectively, in accordance with their regulated precedence.

During the last century so many battalions were raised and disbanded, with the resultant shuffling of numbers, as to render it impossible to be quite sure in all cases whether the numerical titles of regiments are those borne on the dates when the Lodges attached to them were erected, or at a later period. The identification of particular corps has been a laborious task. These are sometimes described by the names of their colonels, and at others by territorial or (obsolete) regimental designations. Thus we meet with Lodge No. 612 (L) "in the First Ulster Regiment"—which is the only entry that has baffled me—and No. 277 "in the 2d Green Horse" (now 5th Dragoon Guards), 1757.

The Irish Lodges were always chiefly, and in many cases exclusively, known by their numbers, which, whenever practicable, were made—by exchanging the ones previously held—to correspond with those of the regiments whereunto such Lodges were attached.

When there were several Lodges existing in a regiment at the same time, this fact will ordinarily coincide with a plurality of battalions, but the possibility of two Lodges working simultaneously in a single battalion of the ordinary strength, is evidenced by the proceedings at the centenary of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, in 1836—when the members of Lodges "Hibernia" and "St. Andrew," in the 42d Foot (or Black Watch), attracted admiration, alike for their martial appearance and Masonic behavior.

The exact rank of the Hon. Artillery Company of London has never been definitely settled. According to the historian of the corps, "the members are usually classed with the Volunteers, which, properly speaking, they are not; and it is still an open question whether the officers would rank before or after militia officers, or with them according to the dates of their commissions."

No Lodge has yet been established in the Indian Native Army, though the erection of one—to be called "John of Gaunt in the East"—in the 15th Madras N.I., was all but carried into effect in 1858.

<sup>1</sup> A Lodge in the 17th F. (which arrived in Boston, Jan. 1, 1776) is shown at this number on the rolls of the G.L. of England (A.) and Pennsylvania, and the warrant captured by the Americans was returned to the Unity Lodge, No. 18, in the 17th F., by General Parsons, in 1779. The Scottish Lodge (166) bore the same name, and I think must have become No. 18 on the Provincial List. Cf. Freemasons' Chronicle, July 10 and 24, and Oct. 2, 1890.

<sup>3</sup> Afterwards No. 843 on the general list, and a stationary Lodge until about 1838, when it was attached to the Rifle Brigade.

<sup>5</sup> The Court of Assistants in this year sanctioned the formation of a Masonic Lodge to consist of members of the company only. A proposal to establish "the Hon. the Artillery Company's Lodge" was agreed to in 1781, but negatived at the next Court (G. A. Raikes, Hist. of the Hon. Art. Company). Although the "Fitz-Roy" Lodge, now No. 569, is stationary in a sense, as having met hitherto at the Armory House of the Company, it would, without doubt, accompany that distinguished corps should it ever change its head-quarters in time of peace, or be arrayed with the regular forces in time of war.

SWEDEN.—An ancient document in the archives of the Grand Lodge informs us that "the Lodge St. Jean Auxiliaire"—instituted in 1752—was formed by sundry brethren of the military and travelling Lodges (loges militaires et voyageurs) existing at that time; but with regard to the number of these itinerant bodies, the field of their operations, or indeed to any further particulars concerning them, we are left wholly in the dark. The next evidence in point of date—afforded by the same source of authority—relates to the formation of the "Lodge of the Swedish Army" (Svenska Arméns) at Greifswald, in Pomerania, January 10, 1761. According to its statutes, the seat of the Lodge was to be at the headquarters of the Swedish army during the continuance of the (Seven Years') war, and at Stockholm in time of peace. Captain (afterwards General) the Count of Salza was the first Master, and among the other founders were Barons de Beck-Trius, de Cederstrom, de Duval, and the Comte de Crensz—all Swedish military officers. During the continuance of the war, the Lodge threw off shoots at Greifswald, Stralsund, and Christianstadt. At the peace of 1763, it removed to Stockholm, after having received—February 17—a confirmation of its charter from the Grand Lodge of Sweden. The "Lodge of the Swedish Army" established a pension fund for wounded soldiers, and the recipients of its bounty wore silver medals, struck at the expense of the Lodge. Prince Frederick-Adolphe, Duc d'Ostrogothie, the king's brother, was its Master at the period of his decease; but in 1781 its labors came to an end, and the members joined other Lodges at the capital.

RUSSIA.—In 1761 a Field Lodge was formed in the Russian Army, which at that time had its winter quarters in West Prussia, and its headquarters at Marienburg. A second was established at the same place in 1764, which afterwards became the stationary Lodge "of the Three Towers." The latest appears to have been "George the Victorious," constituted by Grand Lodge Astrea, March 12, 1817.

* The present numbers are here given, but up to this point the various changes, except in the case of the Irish Lodges, have not been recorded. All the numbers, however, borne by the Scottish Field Lodges, will be found in the Constitutions, G. L. of Scotland, p. 166; whilst those of the entire body of English Lodges from 1729 down to the present date, are given by Lane in his "Masonic Records," a work of extraordinary merit, involving vast labor, which presents at a glance the skeleton history of every Lodge of English maternity.

GERMANY.—Throughout the empire, Field or Camp Lodges are regarded as merely auxiliary to the regular or stationary Lodges. The former are in every case erected to serve a temporary purpose, and before a candidate is accepted for initiation, he is required to name one of the latter as the Lodge he will repair to for admission, when the warrant of the movable and transitory body is surrendered or withdrawn. They only exist in time of war, or when an appeal to arms is believed to be impending. In the last century there were Military (which sometimes became Field) Lodges. There were constituted in garrisons and fortresses during peace as well as war. Examples are afforded by the three Lodges which head the unjoined table. The first was founded by Frederick the Great,<sup>1</sup> the second by French prisoners of war,<sup>2</sup> and the third by military officers in Potsdam. The Flaming Star, originally a Military Lodge, was established February 24, 1770, it being thought desirable by Krüger<sup>3</sup> "to take the brethren of Military rank out of all the Lodges, and to erect a separate Lodge for them, which, in the case of war, might follow the camp, and exemplify the benefits of Masonry in the field." From this time all military candidates were sent to the Flaming Star for initiation.

In 1778, there was a concentration of troops both in Saxony and Silesia, and the military duties of the Master—Marschall von Bieberstein—taking him in the former direction, he was accompanied by the Flaming Star, whilst a branch or "Dispensation" Lodge—duly constituted by the G.M.—under Major von Kleist, proceeded to diffuse Masonic light in the other. On August 23, 1779, the brethren were reunited in a single Lodge, which is still in existence at Berlin.

Nos. 12-14 on the list were also erected in Saxony and Silesia in the commencement of the Bavarian War of Succession—the most important being the Golden Goblet, of which Zinnendorff was a member. No. 16 was established by Count von Lottum, in furtherance of his resolution to found a Lodge "on hearing that General Blücher was to command the Army Corps on the Prussian coast of the Baltic." The latter was a member of Field Lodge No. 1, in 1812. The particulars with regard to No. 8 are a little confusing, and it is not clear that it ever received a warrant, or if so, at whose hands. The general in command appears to have arrested its development at a very early stage, and the same thing occurred in 1816, when an attempt was made by thirty military brethren to establish a Lodge in Sedan.<sup>4</sup>

Two Lodges in Frankfort—of which mention has already been made<sup>1</sup>—are not shown in the foregoing table. One of these (consisting chiefly of foreigners) was founded by Count Schmettau in 1743, and the other would appear to date from about the year 1760. The latter, in the Royal Deux Ponts' Regiment, affiliated in 1763 with Lodge Union of Frankfort, receiving at the same time a local warrant empowering it to resume work as a "Field" (and daughter) Lodge on quitting that city. The Royal Deux Ponts Lodge joined the Strict Observance in 1771, but we again meet with one—Les Dragons Unis des Deux-Ponts—in the same Regiment, which was taken on the roll of the G.O. of France in 1783, with precedence from the previous year. This Regiment, and possibly the Lodge—which may have only shaken off the fetters of the S.O. in 1782—accompanied the expedition of General Rochambeau to North America in 1780, and was commanded by the Marquis de Deux Ponts.

No warrants for Field or Army Lodges have been granted at any time under the jurisdictions of Switzerland, Greece, Denmark, Hamburg, and Darmstadt. In the Austro-Hungarian empire, the members of both the sea and land services are forbidden to become Freemasons, "for which reason," writes the Grand Secretary of Hungary (1880), "there are no Military Lodges in existence, nor any military brethren among us."

FRANCE.—Entombed in the archives of the Grand Orient are the records (dossiers) of about two hundred Regimental Lodges, together with a number of documents formerly belonging to the Lodges established in England by French prisoners of war, and which subsequently came under the G.O. These books and papers, according to their official custodian, "contain very valuable information (renseignements précieux)," which, however, considerations of time and space would have prevented my making any use of, even had I not been effectually barred from any such endeavor by the consciousness of already possessing what, for the purposes of this sketch, may be termed a superfluity of materials. The Lodges in the following table are shown, as nearly as possible, in the order of their appearance in any official list. They are seventy-six in number, and while some were founded by the Grand Lodge, all such Lodges were afterwards newly constituted by the Grand Orient. The roll extends to 1787, and an asterisk in each instance is placed before the names of the fifty-two Lodges which in that year were represented at the G.O. by their deputies. The dates of origin given are those from which the Lodges were allowed to rank. Some of the regiments named in the table—as holding warrants for long periods—served in America during the War of Independence; and the stability, or tenacity of existence, of the older French Army Lodges, as contrasted with the ephemeral character of their successors under the Consulate and Empire, has induced me to describe the former with a minuteness of detail which would be altogether out of keeping with the importance of the latter in a general history of Freemasonry.

The Lodge Montmorenci-Luxembourg, constituted June 1, 1762, in the Regiment of Hainault Infantry, of which the Duke of Luxembourg was the Colonel, was accorded—April 18, 1772—by the Grand Lodge of France, the privilege of attendance at all its meetings. This Lodge has been styled, with great show of reason, the stem or trunk from which the Grand Orient budded forth in December, 1773. The list of its members in 1772 is certainly a remarkable one. The Duke of Luxembourg was the Master, the wardens were his son and the Prince de Rohan-Guéméné, and among the members—who were all, with one exception, noblemen—may be named the Princes of Condé, Ligne, Taroute, Montbazon, Nassau, and Pignatelli; the Dukes of Lauzun, Coigny, and Fronsac; and many others of lesser rank. Of the first officers of the Grand Orient, the five highest in rank (after the Duc de Chartres, G.M.), and nearly the whole of the honorary grand officers, were members of this Lodge.<sup>1</sup>

The last Lodge on the list was constituted March 16, 1787, and its first Master was André Masséna—afterwards Marshal of France—at that time Adjutant of the Royal Italian Regiment.

The abbreviations, Inf., Cav., Drag., Art., Chass., and Huss., denote Infantry, Cavalry, Dragoons, Artillery, Chasseurs, and Hussars, respectively.

No Field Lodges were constituted in 1788 or 1789, and only eight between 1790 and 1801. The next seven years, however, witnessed an addition of sixty-four; but at the close of this period nearly all the Lodges established under the old Monarchy had ceased to exist. The Calendar of 1805 shows a total of forty-three, of which one only was of earlier date than the Revolution, the next in point of age being a Lodge of 1790, whilst no less than thirty-five had been warranted in 1802-4. In 1809, sixty-seven regiments had Lodges attached to them, and three years later the number had risen to sixty-nine. At this time the Lodges were both opened and closed with a cry of "Vive l'Empereur!" In 1811-13, six further Lodges were established, but, as already related, no less than four hundred and twenty-nine on the general roll became dormant in 1814. Two new Lodges were formed in 1817-19, but only three regiments in all are shown as possessed of Masonic warrants in 1820. Three Lodges were constituted between 1821 and 1834; and ten years later, "Cirnus" (1821), in the 10th Regiment of the line, the last of the long roll of French Military Lodges, disappeared from the scene. It may be added, that a confidential circular from the Minister of War—Marshal Soult—to the colonels of regiments, in 1845, declared "that it was contrary to the rules of the service for any of the military to become even members of the institution." Soult himself was a Freemason, as were also many other marshals of France—for example, Serurier, Buernonville, Kellerman, Masséna, Lefebvre, Mortier, Perignon, Bernadotte, Murat, Macdonald, Lauriston, Magnan, and (it is alleged) Augereau, Brune, and Sebastiani.

AMERICA.—The general history of Masonry in the United States may be divided into three periods—the first extending to the year 1755, the second to the Peace of Versailles in 1783, and the third until the present date. Of these, the first and last will be hereafter considered, but the second—so far, at least, as the details are capable of being treated as a whole—I shall, to the best of my ability, deal with in the current section, premising, however, that in the next chapter the story will be duly brought up to the point thus reached by anticipation, and continued after a smooth and methodical fashion.

According to a talented writer, "all warranted American Lodges, previous to the French War [1755], had worked the rituals and acknowledged the authority of the Grand Lodge of England only (sometimes denominated the Grand Lodge of Moderns); but during this war Lodges holding warrants from the Grand Lodges of Scotland, Ireland, and the Ancients of London, were working in America. They probably owed their introduction to the Military brethren."

Here it may be convenient to explain, that while the members of Lodges under all the jurisdictions of the British Islands, with the exception of the Original Grand Lodge of England, were generally classified as "Ancient Masons," the terms "Ancient York Masons" and "Ancient York Masonry" were at first only employed by the English Schismatics, and did not come into common use—in America—until towards the close of the century.

A list of the stationary Lodges established in North America by the authority of European Grand Lodges, other than that of the earliest of such bodies, will be found in Chapter XXXI., but the influences which conduced to their formation, and to their subsequent predominance over the original Lodges of the Continent, I shall now proceed to narrate.

It will, however, in some degree clear the ground for our inquiry to mention that prior to the French War the only Lodge of a military character known to have been established in America was one at Annapolis Royal, in Nova Scotia, formed in 1738 by Erasmus James Phillips—Fort-Major of that garrison—as D.G.M. under an authority from Boston.

1755.—General Braddock arrived in America with two thousand regular troops, and was defeated by the French and mortally wounded, July 8. Other regiments were dis-

"Ancient Masonry," however, in the conventional acceptation of that term, is so closely associated with the proceedings of the numerous Field Lodges in America, that its consideration becomes indispensable to the present narrative, and will, it is to be hoped, enable the reader to grasp the subject more firmly than if the entire history of American Masonry were to be presented in Chapter XXXI.

patched from Britain in this and later years. The movements of these battalions can be easily traced in a number of well-known books. A list of the British regiments to which Lodges were attached has been already given.

1756.—In this year there were six battalions and eight independent companies of King's troops in America, the whole being under the Earl of Londonderry. Richard Gridley was authorized—May 13—by the Prov. G.M. of North America, "to congregate all Free and Accepted Masons in the Expedition against Crown Point, and form them into one or more Lodges." For military reasons, however, the proposed movement against Ticonderoga and Crown Point was not attempted.

Richard Gridley—the younger brother of Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M. of North America—was born in 1711, and after seeing much active service, was appointed Chief Engineer and Colonel of Infantry in 1755. For his distinguished services at the siege of Quebec he received a pension and grant of land from the British Government. Appointed Major-General by the Provincial Congress, September 20, 1775. D.G.M., St. John's Grand Lodge, Boston, January 22, 1768, and continued to hold that office until the Union of the two Grand Lodges in Massachusetts (1792), though his presence in Grand Lodge is last recorded under the year 1787. It is probable that the connection of this veteran soldier and Craftsman with the older Grand Lodge was not without influence in preventing its total collapse, pending the happy amalgamation of the two Grand Lodges in 1792. Scottish charters for Lodges in Blandford (Virginia) and Boston were granted March 9 and November 30 respectively.

1757.—Lodge at Lake George named in the Boston Records' April 8. Colonel John Young, 60th Foot, appointed Scottish Provincial G.M. in America, November 14. Three Ancient warrants sent by Laurence Dermott to Halifax, in one of which Erasmus James Phillips was named as Prov. G.M. About this year "several persons in Philadelphia, active in political and private life, were made Masons according to the practice of the Ancients."

1758.—Capitulation of Louisbourg, July 26: a Lodge formed there in the 28th Foot by Richard Gridley, November 13. A warrant—No. 69—granted by the Ancient or Schismatic G.L. of England to Philadelphia. After this year there were only—in that city—one or two notices of any Lodges under the older (English) sanction. Scottish charters were issued by the Grand Lodge and "Mother Kilwinning" respectively to brethren at Fredericksburg* and Tappahannock* (Virginia).

1759.—Abraham Savage was authorized by Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M. of North America, to "Congregate all Free and Accepted Masons in the Expedition against Canada into one or more Lodges," April 13. Crown Point surrendered, August 4; and twelve officers of the 1st Foot were made Masons in the Lodge there by the Master, Abraham Savage. Capitulation of Quebec, September 18. "The anniversary of St. John the Evangelist was only observed by the several Lodges of Freemasonry in the Garrison,"* where, at the time, Colonel Young, Provincial Grand Master of North America, under Scotland, was present with his regiment, the 60th Foot or "Royal Americans."

1760.—Quebec invested by the French, May 11. Commodore Swanton, with the Vanguard and two frigates, arrived and raised the siege, May 16. Charter of St. Andrew's Lodge—granted<sup>1</sup> in 1756—received at Boston, September 4. No. 98 (S.) erected at Charleston, South Carolina.

1761.—The members of the "Boston Regular Lodges" were forbidden to visit St. Andrew's. Charter—No. 89—appointing William Ball Prov. G.M. of Pennsylvania, granted by the Ancients, but not received. No. 92 (A) erected at Charleston, S.C.

1763.—Nos. 117 (S.) erected at Norfolk, Virginia, and 399 (L.) at New York.

Owing to the loss of a great part of its records by the Grand Lodge of Ireland, the number of stationary Lodges warranted in America from that jurisdiction must remain a matter of uncertainty. Lodge No. 74, in the 1st Foot, as we have already seen,<sup>3</sup> gave an exact copy of its warrant to a set of brethren at Albany (N.Y.) in 1759, and it is unreasonable to believe that it was a solitary instance of the kind. Schultz<sup>4</sup> mentions three Lodges of unknown origin in Maryland, as having existed in 1759, 1761, and 1763, and it is possible, to say the least, that one or more of them may have derived their authority either directly or indirectly from Ireland? Dove, also, in his account of the early Lodges in Virginia, names the Irish as one of the five jurisdictions by which that State was Masonically "occupied" in 1777.<sup>5</sup>

1764.—Provincial warrant—No. 89—received in Philadelphia from the Ancient or Schismatic G.L. of England. "From the time of the establishing of these Lodges of the four degrees by the Ancients, such records as we can find," says a careful writer, "show the speedy decline of the Moderns." A Lodge at Quebec—probably constituted by Richard Gridley or Abraham Savage—is first named in the Boston Records of this year.

1765.—No. 346, at Joppa, Maryland, under the Original Grand Lodge of England, was inaugurated November 21; and the 14th by-law, passed the same day, enacts:—"That none who hath been Admitted in any Modern Lodge shall be Admitted as a Member of this Lodge, without taking the respective Obligations Peculiar to Ancient Masons."<sup>6</sup>

1766.—In this year bickerings occurred between the St. Andrew's and the "Boston Regular Lodges," and "a Union of Love and Friendship," to which the members of both jurisdictions should be parties, was proposed by the former.

1767.—The funeral of Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M., North America, took place September 12, and the members of St. Andrew's Lodge—sixty-four in number (Joseph Warren being the S.V.)—walked in the procession. After this, however, when every generous effort on the part of St. Andrew's had completely failed, and when it became evident that no "Union of Love and Friendship" could be effected, the members of that Lodge changed their ground. Men like Warren, Revere, Hancock, and others of illustrious name, felt their patience exhausted, and determined not to quietly submit to be any longer denounced as clandestine Masons and impostors. The early proceedings of St. Andrew's were indeed as irregular as it is possible to conceive. Originating in the association of nine Masons who had been made clandestinely, it was chartered by the G.L. of Scotland in 1756, and then numbered twenty-one members, exclusive of the original nine, who had left Boston in the interval. Its charter did not arrive until 1760, at which time the Lodge had been increased by eighteen additional members, so that in all thirty-one candidates were initiated before the Lodge received its charter, and thirteen before the charter was signed. At a conference—held April 28, 1766—between committees of St. John's G.L. and St. Andrew's Lodge (Richard Gridley being a member of one and Joseph Warren of the other), the representatives of the latter fully admitted the illegality of their early proceedings, but contended that it was in the power of the G.M. of Scotland to "make irregular Masons, Regular." Against this, the other committee formulated their belief that "the Language of the Constitutions for irregularities was SUBMISSION." The older Society forgot for a moment its animosity over the grave of its Grand Master, and, as already related, the brethren of both jurisdictions walked together in the procession. Subsequently, however—and this brings us to the point reached above—the spirit of manliness prompted the leading members of St. Andrew's to vindicate their own characters as Masons, and to stand forth in defence of the Lodge which made them. It was therefore voted unanimously on St. Andrew's Day (November 30), that during the continuance of the interdict against Masonic intercourse imposed by the English Prov. G.L., the brethren under that jurisdiction, unless also members of, or raised Masters in, St. Andrew's, were not to be admitted as visitors.

In this year there were three Lodges at work under the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania (Ancients,) the last of which—Royal Arch Lodge—was constituted October 20.

From the earlier records of this Lodge, it appears "that they received and acted upon the petitions of at least one hundred Modern Masons, who petitioned to be made Ancient Masons, and upon their petitions taking the same course as the profane, they were, after approval by ballot, regularly initiated." No. 3 maintained a close intercourse with a Lodge in the 18th Foot—No. 351 (I.)—and the Royal Arch furniture of the two bodies became in a measure common property.

1768.—The Grand Lodge of Scotland erected a Lodge—No. 143—at East Florida, and appointed Governor James Grant, Prov. G.M. for North America, southern district. In this year a standing army was quartered in Boston. The 14th, 29th, and a part of the 59th Regiments, with a train of Artillery, arrived October 1, and a short time after, the 64th and 65th Regiments, direct from Ireland. In these regiments were three Lodges, all working under what was then commonly known as the "Ancient System"—Nos. 58 (A.,) 14th Foot; 322 (I.,) 29th; and 106 (S.,) 64th. The presence of these troops created an intense excitement, and the members of St. Andrew's, particularly Joseph Warren, participated in the universal feeling of opposition to the continuance of this strong force in Boston. Nevertheless, the members of the Lodge saw the opportunity before them of forming a Grand Lodge under the authority of the Grand Master of Scotland, and with this end in

None of these Field Lodges were present at the installation of John Rowe—the Prov. G.M. under England—on November 23, but all of them joined St. Andrew's, in December, in a petition to the G.L. of Scotland, requesting the appointment of "a Grand Master of Ancient Masons in America," and nominating Joseph Warren for that office.

1769.—The Earl of Dalhousie, G.M., Scotland, appointed Joseph Warren, "G.M. of Masons in Boston, New England, and within one hundred miles of the same," May 30. The commission was received in September, but in the interval the 64th Regiment had been removed from Boston. Little notice was taken of the Lodges in the other regiments in the arrangements for the installation, and they were merely informed of the approaching event. The Grand Lodge was formally inaugurated on December 27, in the presence of St. Andrew's and of Lodges Nos. 58 and 322, in the 14th and 29th Regiments respectively. Although for convenience sake this body will be henceforth referred to as the "Massachusetts Grand Lodge," it may be observed that it did not adopt that title until December 6, 1782.

1771.—No. 169 (A.), established in Battery Marsh, Boston. This Lodge, which is only once named in the records of the Massachusetts G.L., accompanied the British army to New York on the evacuation of Boston in 1776.

1772.—By a further Scottish patent, signed by the Earl of Dumfries, Joseph Warren was appointed Grand Master for the Continent of America, March 3. The strife between the rival systems of Masonry is thus pleasantly alluded to in the records of a Lodge at Falmouth, Massachusetts, under the date of December 16 in this year:—

"In order to establish harmony amongst the Freemasons in this town, it is Voted, That (for the future) the Lodge be opened one evening in the Modern form and the next evening in the Ancient form, which is to be continued till the Lodge vote to the contrary."

"N.B.—The makings to be as usual in this Lodge."

1773.—A resolution was passed nem. con. that the members of St. Andrew's and of the Lodges under the "Massachusetts" Grand Lodge should be admitted as visiting Brothers in the Lodges under the older (Boston) jurisdiction, January 29. John Rowe, "G.M.," and Henry Price, "P.G.M." attended the meeting of the English Prov. G.L. on Boston Neck, June 24; and among the visitors was Joseph Warren, also described as "G.M." Meetings of both Grand Lodges took place, December 27, on which date Warren was installed under his patent of the previous year, and at a fixed hour each G.L. drank the health of the other.

In this year certain ships laden with tea were boarded in Boston Harbor by Paul Revere and others, disguised as Mohawk Indians, and their cargoes, consisting of 342 chests of tea, valued at £18,000, thrown into the sea, December 16.

1774.—Nos. 177 (S.) and 190 (A.) were established at Philadelphia and Charleston, S.C., respectively. No. 243 (I.) in the 59th Foot, placed itself "under the Protection and Direction" of the Massachusetts G.L. The British Government shut up the port of Boston, repealed the charter of the State of Massachusetts, and sent a body of troops to Boston der General Gage. The other colonies took the part of the people of Boston, and deputies from each Province were sent to Philadelphia, where they assembled in Congress for the first time, December 5.

1775.—On April 18, the day before the battle of Lexington, Dr. Joseph Warren, hearing of the intended approach of the British, under General Gage, to Concord and Lexington, dispatched Paul Revere to the latter town, via Charlestown, to announce the British expedition of the following day.<sup>1</sup>

Paul Revere was an active member of St. Andrew's Lodge, and after filling both Wardens' chairs, and twice holding the office of D.G.M. in the "Massachusetts G.L.," served as G.M. of the (United) G.L. of Massachusetts, 1795-97.

Hostilities commenced between Great Britain and America, April 19. The town of Boston became a garrison, and was abandoned by many of its inhabitants, so that the regular meetings of the stationary Lodges were suspended.<sup>2</sup> Joseph Warren appointed Major-General, June 14. Battle of Bunker's Hill, and death of Warren, June 17. Colonel Richard Gridley, D.G.M., St. John's G.L., the engineer who planned the works that Warren laid down his life to defend, was also wounded in the fight. The war was carried into Canada, and Major-General Montgomery fell at the assault of Quebec, December 31.

Prince Hall, and fourteen other free colored citizens of Boston, were initiated in "a travelling Lodge attached to one of the British Regiments in the army of General Gage,"<sup>3</sup> March 6. St. John's Regimental Lodge, No. 1, New York,<sup>4</sup> organized July 24; and a "Kilwinning" charter granted to brethren at Falmouth, Virginia, December 20.

1776.—American Union Lodge, established February 15, by a warrant issued in the name of John Rowe, G.M. (St. John's G.L.), and bearing the signature of Richard Gridley, his Deputy. Boston evacuated by the British, March 17. Funeral of Joseph Warren, April 8. Richard Gridley was a pall-bearer, but John Rowe, though present by invitation of Joseph Webb (D.G.M., Mass. G.L.)—according to his own diary—"was very much insulted," and retired.<sup>5</sup> Declaration of Independence, July 4. It is said that all but three of those that signed it were Freemasons. British occupation of New York, September 15, and introduction of so-called "Ancient Masonry" into that State. Little or no intercourse was held between the Army and the Provincial Lodges. Of the Lodges in the city of New York virtually ceased to meet, while the others, with the exception of St. Patrick's—which met at Johnson Hall, the family seat of the Prov. G.M.—continued their labors, and were subjected to but little interruption during the war. St. Patrick's G.L., under Sir John Johnson, there are no records after this year. St. Patrick's Lodge was constituted in 1766, Sir William Johnson serving as Master until 1770, when his son-in-law, Colonel Guy Johnson, took his place. Sir John (the Prov. G.M. and second Baronet) was <sup>2</sup> There are no records of the St. John's and Massachusetts Grand Lodges, in the former case between January 27, 1775, and February 17, 1787; and in the latter, between April 19, 1775, and December 27, 1776.

SWEDEN.—An ancient document in the archives of the Grand Lodge informs us that "the Lodge St. Jean Auxiliaire"—instituted in 1752—was formed by sundry brethren of the military and travelling Lodges (loges militaires et voyageuses) existing at that time; but with regard to the number of these itinerant bodies, the field of their operations, or indeed to any further particulars concerning them, we are left wholly in the dark. The next evidence in point of date—afforded by the same source of authority—relates to the formation of the "Lodge of the Swedish Army" (Svenska Arméens) at Greifswald, in Pomerania, January 10, 1761. According to its statutes, the seat of the Lodge was to be at the headquarters of the Swedish army during the continuance of the (Seven Years') war, and at Stockholm in time of peace. Captain (afterwards General) the Count of Salza was the first Master, and among the other founders were Barons de Beck-Trina, de Cederstrom, de Duval, and the Count de Cronz—all Swedish military officers. During the continuance of the war, the Lodge threw off shoots at Greifswald, Stralsund, and Christianstadt. At the peace of 1763, it removed to Stockholm, after having received—February 17—a confirmation of its charter from the Grand Lodge of Sweden. The "Lodge of the Swedish Army" established a pension fund for wounded soldiers, and the recipients of its bounty wore silver medals, struck at the expense of the Lodge. Prince Frederick Adolphe, Duc d'Ostrogothie, the king's brother, was its Master at the period of his decease; but in 1781 its labors came to an end, and the members joined other Lodges at the capital.

RUSSIA.—In 1761 a Field Lodge was formed in the Russian Army, which at that time had its winter quarters in West Prussia, and its headquarters at Marienburg. A second was established at the same place in 1764, which afterwards became the auxiliary Lodge "of the Three Towers." The latest appears to have been "George the Victorious," constituted by Grand Lodge Astrea, March 12, 1817.

All the numbers, however, borne by the Scottish Field Lodges, will be found in the Constitutions, G. L. of Scotland, p. 166; whilst those of the entire body of English Lodges from 1739 down to the present date, are given by Lane in his "Masonic Records," a work of extraordinary merit, involving vast labor, which presents at a glance the skeleton history of every Lodge of English maternity.

GERMANY.—Throughout the empire, Field or Camp Lodges are regarded as merely auxiliary to the regular or stationary Lodges. The former are in every case erected to serve a temporary purpose, and before a candidate is accepted for initiation, he is required to name one of the latter as the Lodge he will repair to for admission, when the warrant of the movable and transitory body is surrendered or withdrawn. They only exist in time of war, or when an appeal to arms is believed to be impending. In the last century there were Military (which sometimes became Field) Lodges. These were constituted in garrisons and fortresses during peace as well as war. Examples are afforded by the three Lodges which head the subjoined table. The first was founded by Frederick the Great, the second by French prisoners of war, and the third by military officers in Potsdam. The Flaming Star, originally a Military Lodge, was established February 24, 1770, it being thought desirable by Krüger "to take the brethren of Military rank out of all the Lodges, and to erect a separate Lodge for them, which, in the case of war, might follow the camp, and exemplify the benefits of Masonry in the field." From this time all military candidates were sent to the Flaming Star for initiation.

In 1778, there was a concentration of troops both in Saxony and Silesia, and the military duties of the Master—Marshall von Bieberstein—taking him in the former direction, he was accompanied by the Flaming Star, whilst a branch or "Dispensation" Lodge—duly constituted by the G.M.—under Major von Kleist, proceeded to diffuse Masonic light in the other. On August 23, 1779, the brethren were reunited in a single Lodge, which is still in existence at Berlin.

Nos. 12-14 on the list were also erected in Saxony and Silesia in the commencement of the Bavarian War of Succession—the most important being the Golden Goblet, of which Zinnendorff was a member. No. 16 was established by Count von Lottum, in furtherance of his resolution to found a Lodge "on hearing that General Blücher was to command the Army Corps on the Prussian coast of the Baltic." The latter was a member of Field Lodge No. I., in 1812. The particulars with regard to No. 8 are a little confusing, and it is not clear that it ever received a warrant, or if so, at whose hands. The general in command appears to have arrested its development at a very early stage, and the same thing occurred in 1816, when an attempt was made by thirty military brethren to establish a Lodge in Sedan.*

Two Lodges in Frankfort—of which mention has already been made—are not shown in the foregoing table. One of these (consisting chiefly of foreigners) was founded by Count Schmettau in 1743, and the other would appear to date from about the year 1760. The latter, in the Royal Deux Ponts' Regiment, affiliated in 1763 with Lodge Union of Frankfort, receiving at the same time a local warrant empowering it to resume work as a "Field" (and daughter) Lodge on quitting that city. The Royal Deux Ponts Lodge joined the Strict Observance in 1771, but we again meet with one—Les Dragons Unis des Deux-Ponts—in the same Regiment, which was taken on the roll of the G.O. of France in 1783, with precedence from the previous year. This Regiment, and possibly the Lodge—which may have only shaken off the fetters of the S.O. in 1782—accompanied the expedition of General Rochambeau to North America in 1780, and was commanded by the Marquis de Deux Ponts.

No warrants for Field or Army Lodges have been granted at any time under the jurisdictions of Switzerland, Greece, Denmark, Hamburg, and Darmstadt. In the Austro-Hungarian empire, the members of both the sea and land services are forbidden to become Freemasons, "for which reason," writes the Grand Secretary of Hungary (1880), "there are no Military Lodges in existence, nor any military brethren among us."

FRANCE.—Entombed in the archives of the Grand Orient are the records (dossiers) of about two hundred Regimental Lodges, together with a number of documents formerly belonging to the Lodges established in England by French prisoners of war, and which subsequently came under the G.O. These books and papers, according to their official custodian, "contain very valuable information (renseignements précis)," which, however, considerations of time and space would have prevented my making any use of. Even had I not been effectually barred from any such endeavor by the consciousness of already possessing what, for the purposes of this sketch, may be termed a superfluity of materials. The Lodges in the following table are shown, as nearly as possible, in the order of their appearance in any official list. They are seventy-six in number, and while some were founded by the Grand Lodge, all such Lodges were afterwards newly constituted by the Grand Orient. The roll extends to 1787, and an asterisk in each instance is placed before the names of the fifty-two Lodges which in that year were represented at the G.O. by their deputies. The dates of origin given are those from which the Lodges were allowed to rank. Some of the regiments named in the table—as holding warrants for long periods—served in America during the War of Independence; and the stability, or tenacity of existence, of the older French Army Lodges, as contrasted with the ephemeral character of their successors under the Consulate and Empire, has induced me to describe the former with a minuteness of detail which would be altogether out of keeping with the importance of the latter in a general history of Freemasonry.

The Lodge Montmorenci-Luxembourg, constituted June 1, 1762, in the Regiment of Hainault Infantry, of which the Duke of Luxembourg was the Colonel, was accorded—April 18, 1772—by the Grand Lodge of France, the privilege of attendance at all its meetings. This Lodge has been styled, with great show of reason, the stem or trunk from which the Grand Orient budded forth in December, 1773. The list of its members in 1773 is certainly a remarkable one. The Duke of Luxembourg was the Master, the wardens were his son and the Prince de Rohan-Guéménée, and among the members—who were all, with one exception, noblemen—may be named the Princes of Condé, Ligne, Artois, Montbazon, Nassau, and Pigault; the Dukes of Liancourt, Coigny, and Fronsac; and many others of lesser rank. The first officers of the Grand Orient, the five highest in rank (after the Duke de Charolais, G.M.), and nearly the whole of the honorary grand officers, were members of this Lodge.

The last Lodge on the list was constituted March 16, 1787, and its first Master was André Masséna—afterwards Marshal of France—at that time Adjutant of the Royal Italian Regiment.

The abbreviations, Inf., Cav., Drag., Art., Chass., and Huss., denote Infantry, Cavalry, Dragoons, Artillery, Chasseurs, and Hussars, respectively.

No Field Lodges were constituted in 1788 or 1789, and only eight between 1790 and 1801. The next seven years, however, witnessed an addition of sixty-four; but at the close of this period nearly all the Lodges established under the old Monarchy had ceased to exist. The Calendar of 1805 shows a total of forty-three, of which one only was of earlier date than the Revolution, the next in point of age being a Lodge of 1790, whilst no less than thirty-five had been warranted in 1802-4. In 1809, sixty-seven regiments had Lodges attached to them, and three years later the number had risen to sixty-nine. At this time the Lodges were both opened and closed with a cry of "Vive l'Empereur!" In 1811-13, six further Lodges were established, but, as already related, no less than four hundred and twenty-nine on the general roll became dormant in 1814. Two new Lodges were formed in 1817-19, but only three regiments in all are shown as possessed of Masonic warrants in 1820. Three Lodges were constituted between 1821 and 1834; and ten years later, "Cirrus" (1831), in the 10th Regiment of the line, the last of the long roll of French Military Lodges, disappeared from the scene. It may be added, that a confidential circular from the Minister of War—Marshal Soult—to the colonels of regiments, in 1845, declared "that it was contrary to the rules of the service for any of the military to become even members of the institution." Soult himself was a Freemason, as were also many other marshals of France—for example, Serrurier, Buernonville, Kellerman, Masséna, Lefebvre, Mortier, Perignon, Bernadotte, Murat, Macdonald, Lanriston, Magnan, and (it is alleged) Angerean, Brune, and Sebastiani.<sup>1</sup>

AMERICA.—The general history of Masonry in the United States may be divided into three periods—the first extending to the year 1755, the second to the Peace of Versailles in 1783, and the third until the present date. Of these, the first and last will be hereafter considered, but the second—so far, at least, as the details are capable of being treated as a whole—I shall, to the best of my ability, deal with in the current section, premising, however, that in the next chapter the story will be duly brought up to the point thus reached by anticipation, and continued after a smooth and methodical fashion.

According to a talented writer, "all warranted American Lodges, previous to the French War [1755], had worked the rituals and acknowledged the authority of the Grand Lodge of England only (sometimes denominated the Grand Lodge of Moderns); but during this war Lodges holding warrants from the Grand Lodges of Scotland, Ireland, and the Ancients of London, were working in America. They probably owed their introduction to the Military brethren."<sup>2</sup>

Here it may be convenient to explain, that while the members of Lodges under all the jurisdictions of the British Islands, with the exception of the Original Grand Lodge of England, were generally classified as "Ancient Masons," the terms "Ancient York Masons" and "Ancient York Masonry" were at first only employed by the English Schismatics, and did not come into common use—in America—until towards the close of the century.

A list of the stationary Lodges established in North America by the authority of European Grand Lodges, other than that of the earliest of such bodies, will be found in Chapter XXXI.,<sup>3</sup> but the influences which conduced to their formation, and to their subsequent predominance over the original Lodges of the Continent, I shall now proceed to narrate.

It will, however, in some degree clear the ground for our inquiry to mention that prior to the French War the only Lodge of a military character known to have been established in America was one at Annapolis Royal, in Nova Scotia, formed in 1738 by Erasmus James Phillips—Fort-Major of that garrison—as D.G.M. under an authority from Boston.

1755.—General Braddock arrived in America with two thousand regular troops, and was defeated by the French and mortally wounded, July 8. Other regiments were dis-

"Ancient Masonry," however, in the conventional acceptation of that term, is so closely associated with the proceedings of the numerous Field Lodges in America, that its consideration becomes indispensable to the present narrative, and will, it is to be hoped, enable the reader to grasp the subject more firmly than if the entire history of American Masonry were to be presented in Chapter XXXI.

patched from Britain in this and later years. The movements of these battalions can be easily traced in a number of well-known books. A list of the British regiments to which Lodges were attached has been already given.

1756.—In this year there were six battalions and eight independent companies of King's troops in America, the whole being under the Earl of Loudoun. Richard Gridley was authorized—May 13—by the Prov. G.M. of North America, "to congregate all Free and Accepted Masons in the Expedition against Crown Point, and form them into one or more Lodges." For military reasons, however, the proposed movement against Ticonderoga and Crown Point was not attempted.

Richard Gridley—the younger brother of Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M. of North America—was born in 1711, and after seeing much active service, was appointed Chief Engineer and Colonel of Infantry in 1755. For his distinguished services at the siege of Quebec he received a pension and grant of land from the British Government. Appointed Major-General by the Provincial Congress, September 20, 1775. D.G.M., St. John's Grand Lodge, Boston, January 22, 1768, and continued to hold that office until the Union of the two Grand Lodges in Massachusetts (1792), though his presence in Grand Lodge is last recorded under the year 1787. It is probable that the connection of this veteran soldier and Craftsman with the older Grand Lodge was not without influence in preventing its total collapse, pending the happy amalgamation of the two Grand Lodges in 1792. Scottish charters for Lodges in Blandford (Virginia) and Boston were granted March 9 and November 30 respectively.

1757.—Lodge at Lake George named in the Boston Records' April 8. Colonel John Young, 60th Foot, appointed Scottish Provincial G.M. in America, November 14. Three Ancient warrants sent by Laurence Dermott to Halifax, in one of which Erasmus James Philips was named as Prov. G.M. About this year "several persons in Philadelphia, active in political and private life, were made Masons according to the practice of the Ancients."

1758.—Capitulation of Louisbourg, July 26: a Lodge formed there in the 28th Foot by Richard Gridley, November 13. A warrant—No. 69—granted by the Ancient or Schismatic G.L. of England to Philadelphia. After this year there were only—in that city—one or two notices of any Lodges under the older (English) sanction. Scottish charters were issued by the Grand Lodge and "Mother Kilwinning" respectively to brethren at Fredericksburg* and Tappahanock* (Virginia).

1759.—Abraham Savage was authorized by Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M. of North America, to "Congregate all Free and Accepted Masons in the Expedition against Canada into one or more Lodges," April 13. Crown Point surrendered, August 4; and twelve officers of the 1st Foot were made Masons in the Lodge there by the Master, Abraham Savage. Capitulation of Quebec, September 18. the time, Colouel Yonng, Provincial Grand Master of North America, under Scotland, was present with his regiment, the 60th Foot or "Royal Americans."

1760.—Quebec invested by the French, May 11. Commodore Swanton, with the Vanguard<sup>1</sup> and two frigates, arrived and raised the siege, May 16. Charter of St. Andrew's Lodge—granted<sup>2</sup> in 1756—received at Boston, September 4. No. 98 (S.) erected at Charleston, South Carolina.

1761.—The members of the "Boston Regular Lodges" were forbidden to visit St. Andrew's. Charter—No. 89—appointing William Ball Prov. G.M. of Pennsylvania, granted by the Ancients, but not received. No. 92 (A) erected at Charleston, S.C.

1763.—Nos. 117 (S.) erected at Norfolk, Virginia, and 399 (I.) at New York.

Owing to the loss of a great part of its records by the Grand Lodge of Ireland, the number of stationary Lodges warranted in America from that jurisdiction must remain a matter of uncertainty. Lodge No. 74, in the 1st Foot, as we have already seen,<sup>4</sup> gave an exact copy of its warrant to a set of brethren at Albany (N.Y.) in 1759, and it is unreasonable to believe that it was a solitary instance of the kind. Schultz<sup>5</sup> mentions three Lodges of unknown origin in Maryland, as having existed in 1759, 1761, and 1763, and it is possible, to say the least, that one or more of them may have derived their authority either directly or indirectly from Ireland? Dove, also, in his account of the early Lodges in Virginia, names the Irish as one of the five jurisdictions by which that State was Masonically "occupied" in 1777.<sup>6</sup>

1764.—Provincial warrant—No. 89—received in Philadelphia from the Ancient or Schismatic G.L. of England. "From the time of the establishing of these Lodges of the four degrees by the Ancients, such records as we can find," says a careful writer, "show the speedy decline of the Moderns." A Lodge at Quebec—probably constituted by Richard Gridley or Abraham Savage—is first named in the Boston Records of this year.

1765.—No. 346, at Joppa, Maryland, under the Original Grand Lodge of England, was inaugura<sup>7</sup> d November 21; and the 14th by-law, passed the same day, enacts:—"That none who hath been Admitted in any Modern Lodge shall be Admitted as a Member of this Lodge, without taking the respective Obligations Peculiar to Ancient Masons."<sup>8</sup>

1766.—In this year bickerings occurred between the St. Andrew's and the "Boston Regular Lodges," and "a Union of Love and Friendship," to which the members of both jurisdictions should be parties, was proposed by the former.

1767.—The funeral of Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M., North America, took place September 12, and the members of St. Andrew's Lodge—sixty-four in number (Joseph Warren being the S.W.)—walked in the procession. After this, however, when every generous effort on the part of St. Andrew's had completely failed, and when it became evident that no "Union of Love and Friendship" could be effected, the members of that Lodge changed their ground. Men like Warren, Revere, Hancock, and others of illustrious name, felt their patience exhausted, and determined not to quietly submit to be any longer denounced as clandestine Masons and impostors. The early proceedings of St. Andrew's were indeed as irregular as it is possible to conceive. Originating in the association of nine Masons who had been made clandestinely, it was chartered by the G.L. of Scotland in 1756, and then numbered twenty-one members, exclusive of the original nine, who had left Boston in the interval. Its charter did not arrive until 1760, at which time the Lodge had been increased by eighteen additional members, so that in all thirty-one candidates were initiated before the Lodge received its charter, and thirteen before the charter was signed. At a conference—held April 28, 1766—between committees of St. John's G.L. and St. Andrew's Lodge (Richard Gridley being a member of one and Joseph Warren of the other), the representatives of the latter fully admitted the illegality of their early proceedings, but contended that it was in the power of the G.M. of Scotland to "make irregular Masons, Regular." Against this, the other committee formulated their belief that "the Language of the Constitutions for irregularities was SUBMISSION." The older Society forgot for a moment its animosity over the grave of its Grand Master, and, as already related, the brethren of both jurisdictions walked together in the procession. Subsequently, however—and this brings us to the point reached above—the spirit of manliness prompted the leading members of St. Andrew's to vindicate their own characters as Masons, and to stand forth in defence of the Lodge which made them. It was therefore voted unanimously on St. Andrew's Day (November 30), that during the continuance of the interdict against Masonic intercourse imposed by the English Prov. G.L., the brethren under that jurisdiction, unless also members of, or raised Masters in, St. Andrew's, were not to be admitted as visitors.

In this year there were three Lodges at work under the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania (Ancients,) the last of which—Royal Arch Lodge—was constituted October 20.

From the earlier records of this Lodge, it appears "that they received and acted upon the petitions of at least one hundred Modern Masons, who petitioned to be made Ancient Masons, and upon their petitions taking the same course as the profane, they were, after approval by ballot, regularly initiated." No. 3 maintained a close intercourse with a Lodge in the 18th Foot—No. 351 (I.)—and the Royal Arch furniture of the two bodies became in a measure common property.

1768.—The Grand Lodge of Scotland erected a Lodge—No. 143—at East Florida, and appointed Governor James Grant, Prov. G.M. for North America, southern district. In this year a standing army was quartered in Boston. The 14th, 29th, and a part of the 59th Regiments, with a train of Artillery, arrived October 1, and a short time after, the 64th and 65th Regiments, direct from Ireland. In these regiments were three Lodges, all working under what was then commonly known as the "Ancient System"—Nos. 58 (A.,) 14th Foot; 322 (I.,) 29th; and 106 (S.,) 64th. The presence of these troops created an intense excitement, and the members of St. Andrew's, particularly Joseph Warren, participated in the universal feeling of opposition to the continuance of this strong force in Boston. Nevertheless, the members of the Lodge saw the opportunity before them of forming a Grand Lodge under the authority of the Grand Master of Scotland, and with this end in view, did not scruple to enter into fraternal communion with, and to make use of, their brethren in the obnoxious regiments.<sup>1</sup>

None of these Field Lodges were present at the installation of John Rowe—the Prov. G.M. under England—on November 23, but all of them joined St. Andrew's, in December, in a petition to the G.L. of Scotland, requesting the appointment of "a Grand Master of Ancient Masons in America," and nominating Joseph Warren for that office.

1769.—The Earl of Dalhousie, G.M., Scotland, appointed Joseph Warren, "G.M. of Masons in Boston, New England, and within one hundred miles of the same," May 30. The commission was received in September, but in the interval the 64th Regiment had been removed from Boston. Little notice was taken of the Lodges in the other regiments in the arrangements for the installation, and they were merely informed of the approaching event. The Grand Lodge was formally inaugurated on December 27, in the presence of St. Andrew's and of Lodges Nos. 58 and 322, in the 14th and 29th Regiments respectively. Although for convenience sake this body will be henceforth referred to as the "Massachusetts Grand Lodge," it may be observed that it did not adopt that title until December 6, 1782.

1771.—No. 169 (A.), established in Battery Marsh, Boston. This Lodge, which is only once named in the records of the Massachusetts G.L., accompanied the British army to New York on the evacuation of Boston in 1776.

1772.—By a further Scottish patent, signed by the Earl of Dumfries, Joseph Warren was appointed Grand Master for the Continent of America, March 3. The strife between the rival systems of Masonry is thus pleasantly alluded to in the records of a Lodge at Falmouth, Massachusetts, under the date of December 16 in this year:—

"In order to establish harmony amongst the Freemasons in this town, it is Voted, That (for the future) the Lodge be opened one evening in the Modern form and the next evening in the Ancient form, which is to be continued till the Lodge vote to the contrary."

"N.B.—The makings to be as usual in this Lodge."

1773.—A resolution was passed nem. con. that the members of St. Andrew's and of the Lodges under the "Massachusetts" Grand Lodge should be admitted as visiting Brothers in the Lodges under the older (Boston) jurisdiction, January 29. John Rowe, "G.M.," and Henry Price, "P.G.M.," attended the meeting of the English Prov. G.L. on Boston Neck, June 24; and among the visitors was Joseph Warrar, also described as "G.M." Meetings of both Grand Lodges took place, December 27, on which date Warren was installed under his patent of the previous year, and at a fixed hour each G.L. drank the health of the other.

In this year certain ships laden with tea were boarded in Boston Harbor by Paul Revere and others, disguised as Mohawk Indian and their cargoes, consisting of 342 chests of tea, valued at £18,000, thrown into the sea December 16.

1774.—Nos. 177 (S.) and 190 (A.) were established at Philadelphia and Charleston, S.C., respectively. No. 243 (I.) in the 59th Foot, placed itself "under the Protection and Direction" of the Massachusetts G.L. The British Government shut up the port of Boston, repealed the charter of the State of Massachusetts, and sent a body of troops to Boston under General Gage. The other colonies took the part of the people of Boston, and deputies from each Province were sent to Philadelphia, where they assembled in Congress for the first time, December 5.

1775.—On April 18, the day before the battle of Lexington, Dr. Joseph Warren, hearing of the intended approach of the British, under General Gage, to Concord and Lexington, dispatched Paul Revere to the latter town, via Charlestown, to announce the British expedition of the following day.<sup>1</sup>

Paul Revere was an active member of St. Andrew's Lodge, and after filling both Wardens' chairs, and twice holding the office of D.G.M. in the "Massachusetts G.L.," served as G.M. of the (United) G.L. of Massachusetts, 1795-97.

Hostilities commenced between Great Britain and America, April 19. The town of Boston became a garrison, and was abandoned by many of its inhabitants, so that the regular meetings of the stationary Lodges were suspended.<sup>2</sup> Joseph Warren appointed Major-General, June 14. Battle of Bunker's Hill, and death of Warren, June 17. Colonel Richard Gridley, D.G.M., St. John's G.L., the engineer who planned the works that Warren laid down his life to defend, was also wounded in the fight. The war was carried into Canada, and Major-General Montgomery fell at the assault of Quebec, December 31.

Prince Hall, and fourteen other free colored citizens of Boston, were initiated in "a travelling Lodge attached to one of the British Regiments in the army of General Gage,"<sup>3</sup> March 6. St. John's Regimental Lodge, No. 1, New York,<sup>4</sup> organized July 24; and a "Kilwinning" charter granted to Brethren at Falmouth, Virginia, December 20.

1776.—American Union Lodge, established February 15, by a warrant issued in the name of John Rowe, G.M. (St. John's G.L.), and bearing the signature of Richard Gridley, his Deputy. Boston evacuated by the British, March 17. Funeral of Joseph Warren, April 8. Richard Gridley was a pall-bearer, but John Rowe, though present by invitation of Joseph Webb (D.G.M., Mass. G.L.)—according to his own diary—"was very much Insulted," and retired.<sup>5</sup> Declaration of Independence, July 4. It is said that all but three of those that signed it were Freemasons. British occupation of New York, September 15, and introduction of so-called "Ancient Masonry" into that State. Little or no intercourse was held between the Army and the Provincial Lodges. Of the latter, those in the city of New York virtually ceased to meet, while the others, with the exception of St. Patrick's—which met at Johnson Hall, the family seat of the Prov. G.M.—continued their labors, and were subjected to but little interruption during the war. Of the Prov. G.L., under Sir John Johnson, there are no records after this year. St. Patrick's Lodge was constituted in 1766, Sir William Johnson serving as Master until 1770, when his son-in-law, Colonel Guy Johnson, took his place. Sir John (the Prov. G.M. and second Baronet) was

SIGNERS OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

The Revolution was won under the administration of the Continental Congresses, and of which Peyton Randolph, a Mason, was President of the First, in 1774, which adopted resolutions declaratory of American rights, and also a resolution of commercial non-intercourse with Great Britain. John Hancock, a Mason, was President of the Second, in 1775, and that Congress appointed George Washington, a Mason, Commander-in-Chief of the armies. John Hancock, the Mason, was again President of the Third Continental Congress in 1776, and that Congress was nearly all Masons, and adopted the Declaration of American Independence. On the seventh day of June, 1776, Richard Henry Lee, a Mason from Virginia, introduced into that Congress a declaration declaring that these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states; that declaration was referred to a committee composed mostly of Masons, among them Livingston, Grand Master of New York, Benjamin Franklin, Grand Master of Pennsylvania, who reported the full text of that declaration, and on the Fourth day of July, 1776, it was adopted. And of the fifty-six signers of the declaration of American Independence fifty-two were Masons, the first and boldest signature is that of John Hancock, the Mason President of that Congress.

The declaration was written upon a white lambskin, a Mason's apron. The original is in the archives of the government at Washington, sacredly kept as were the tables of stone in the ark of the covenant at Horeb, the only signature yet legible being that of John Hancock, the Mason President of the Congress of 1776. And as the sons of freemen look upon that almost blank parchment, with that one immortal Masonic name, what sacred memories it awakens! What hopes and glories of the future it foretells! Only a blank white lambskin, yet it was a sacred thing to patriot millions dead. It is a sacred thing to patriot millions living, and will be a sacred thing to patriot millions yet unborn. It's only a blank white lambskin, yet it is the charter of a nation's liberties. Only a blank white lambskin, yet it is the grandest page the muse of history has ever read or written, or ever will.

In addition to the foregoing mentioned names, particular attention is called to those of Thomas Jefferson, its author, Roger Sherman, Elbridge Gerry, John Witherspoon, Robert Treat Paine, Francis Hopkinson, Benjamin Rush, Robert Morris, and others of that patriotic band.

With such an example before us of these illustrious men, is it not a source of pride to every American Mason that they can thus call them BROTHERS?

a regular attendant from 1767 to 1773. Sir William, late in life, took to his home as his wife Mary Brant, or "Miss Molly," as she was called; and her brother, Joseph Brant, or Thayendanegea was afterwards secretary to Colonel Guy Johnson, who succeeded his father-in-law as General Superintendent of the Indian Department. Joseph Brant was a Freemason, and during the fierce struggle for independence, many military brethren owed their lives to his protection, one of whom, Captain John M'Kinstry, at the period of Brant's interposition on his behalf, after the battle of the Cedars, near Montreal, in 1776, was actually bound to a tree, and surrounded by the faggots intended for his immolation.<sup>1</sup> Similar tales are related of Tecumseh, the famous Shawnee warrior and orator, in connection with the war of 1812.

1777.—The authority granted to Joseph Warren by the G.L. of Scotland having died with him, the Master and Wardens of the subordinate Lodges were summoned to attend and elect a Grand Master by Joseph Webb, his late Deputy. Accordingly, eleven brethren<sup>2</sup> met as a Grand Lodge, and elected Joseph Webb Grand Master, March 8. This, if we leave out of present consideration the Lodge (and Grand Lodge) at Philadelphia, in 1731, which will be referred to at some length in the next chapter, was the first Independent or self-created Grand Lodge on the Continent. Philadelphia was occupied by the British, September 27. At that time the Provincial Grand Lodge (A.) had eighteen Lodges on its register. The American army took post at Valley Forge, twenty-six miles from Philadelphia, and traditions affirm that Lodges were held in this camp, which Washington often attended. There can hardly be a doubt that such was the case, but unfortunately no records of the Continental Field Lodges, for this year, are in existence.

1778.—Philadelphia evacuated by the British, June 18. The Grand Lodge of Virginia, the second Independent organization of the kind, formed October 13. The Lodges in this State had derived their charters from the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland, "Mother Kilwinning," the Prov. G. Lodges of New England and Pennsylvania, and (according to Dove<sup>3</sup>) the G.L. of Ireland. At the close of this year, the city of New York, the town of Newport, Rhode Island, and Savannah, Georgia (captured December 29,) were alone held by the British.

1779.—No. 210 (A.), constituted at New York—making with No. 169 (A.)—removed from Boston in 1776—two "Ancient" Lodges in that city. Three Lodges in the Continental Army were chartered by the Prov. G.L. (A.) of Pennsylvania.<sup>4</sup> "The membership of the Lodges subordinate to the two Grand Lodges in Philadelphia gradually became merged, the Ancients receiving and remaking the Moderns. The records of the Grand Lodge contain the names of many Modern Masons who were subsequently identified with the "Ancients."<sup>5</sup> A notable instance of this is the case of Dr. William Smith, Provost of the University, who was a so-called "Modern" in 1755, and became Grand Secretary of the Ancients (in Pennsylvania), October 22, 1779.

1780.—Washington nominated as General Grand Master by the G.L. of Pennsylvania,

January 13; Convention of American Field Lodges at Morristown, February 7. A French force, under General Rochambeau, arrived at Newport, R.I., July 12. Among the subordinate officers employed with this expedition were the Dukes de Laval Montmorency, de Castries, and de Lauzun, Prince de Broglio, the Marquis and the Count de Deux Ponts, Count de Segur, and many other noblemen. The Baron de Kalb, a Major-General in the American army—mortally wounded at the battle of Camden, August 17—was buried with military and Masonic honors by his victorious enemies. In this year No. 212 (A.) was established at New York; and three further warrants were granted in the Continental army by the G.L. of Pennsylvania, on the roll of which body there were now thirty-one subordinate Lodges.

1781.—The "Ancient" and Field Lodges in New York met as a Grand Lodge, and elected Grand Officers, January 23; and a warrant for a Prov. Grand Lodge—No. 212—was granted by the (Atholl) G.L. of England, September 5. A Lodge in the Continental army was established in this year under a Pennsylvanian charter.

1782.—Provincial Grand Lodge of New York (A.) inaugurated by the following Lodges:—Stationary—Nos. 169, 210, 212 (A.); and Nos. 132 (S.) 52 (A.), 441 (I.), 213 (A.), and 215 (A.) together with a Lodge under dispensation—in the 22d, 37th, and 38th Regiments, the 4th Battalion Royal Artillery, the Regiment of Anspach-Beyreuth, and the 57th Foot respectively, December 5. The title of "Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Ancient Masons" was assumed by the G.L. at Boston under Joseph Webb, December 6, and from the official records of the same date we learn that three subordinate Lodges were constituted before the death of Joseph Warren, and fourteen subsequently.

1783.—Peace of Versailles, April 19. The first independent Grand Lodge, that of Maryland, organized July 31. A majority of the Grand Officers, being about to leave New York with the British army, commended the "Grand Warrant" to the care of their successors, September 19. At this date seven Lodges had received charters from the Prov. G.L., four of which were attached to the New Jersey Volunteers, the 57th Foot, the Regiment de Knyphausen, and the Loyal American Regiment; also two Irish Lodges, Nos. 478, in the 17th Dragoons, and 90, in the 33d Foot, had at different dates ranged themselves under its banner. In this year there were forty Lodges on the roll of the G.L. of Pennsylvania, and eighteen under the Grand Body of which Webb was the head, in Massachusetts. Of the former, ten were established in Maryland (before the close of 1782), five in New Jersey, four in Delaware, three each in Virginia and South Carolina, and single Lodges in North Carolina and Georgia. Of the latter, six were outside the State of Massachusetts, viz., in Connecticut three, and in New Hampshire, Vermont, and New York one each. Thus making a grand total of thirty-three Lodges from these two sources only—whose members gloried in the title of "Ancients," and believed that they were walking in the old paths, from which the older Grand Lodge of England and her daughter Lodges had lamentably strayed.

Ten Lodges in all were at work in the American army during the Revolution, the earliest of which was—

ST. JOHN'S REGIMENTAL LODGE, warranted by the Prov. G.L. of New York, July 24, 1775, i.e., before the military occupation of that city by the British. There are no records, and we only learn that it was attached to the United States battalion during the war.

AMERICAN UNION, though of later date, was the first Lodge organized in the Continental army, and may be justly regarded as the eldest Masonic daughter of the Federation. It was formed—February 15, 1776—by warrant of the English Prov. G.M. of North America—John Rowe—in the Connecticut Line of the army, wherever stationed, provided no other G.M. held authority. Shortly after, the Lodge having removed to New York, asked for a confirmation of their charter from the D.G.M., Dr. Middleton; but a new warrant was granted to the members under the name of Military Union, No. 1. The Lodge is described as having "moved with the army as a pillar of light in parts of Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey." Joel Clark, the first Master, was taken prisoner August 27, and died in captivity. He was succeeded by S.H. Parsons (the first treasurer), and the latter by Jonathan Heart (the first Secretary). The original warrant was taken by Heart to Marietta, Ohio, and the Lodge is now No. 1 on the roll of that State.

WASHINGTON LODGE, No. 10, was constituted at West Point—November 11, 1779, by Jonathan Heart, as representative of Joseph Webb, G.M. Massachusetts G.L. The first Master was Brigadier-General J. Paterson, and the Wardens, Colonels Benjamin Tupper and John Groaton. At this and the previous Lodge (American Union) General Washington was a frequent visitor.

ARMY LODGE, No. 27, in the Maryland Line, was warranted by the G.L. of Pennsylvania in April, 1780. The first Master was Brigadier-General Mordecai Gist, and the Wardens, Colonel Otho Williams and Major Archibald Anderson. All three greatly distinguished themselves at the battle of Camden, August 17, 1780, Gist in command of a brigade, and Williams as Adjutant-General; while after the defeat of the Americans Major Anderson was the only infantry officer who kept together any number of men.

No records of the American Field Lodges of the Revolution have been preserved, except a portion of the minutes of American Union, and some returns of the Washington Lodge. The latter merely inform us that in 1782 two hundred and forty-five names had—up to that date—been borne on the roll of the Lodge.<sup>1</sup> The former are of a more interesting character. The principal officers of the army, and the general in command, are frequently named as visitors, and at all the banquets, while the first toast was "Washington" or "Congress," the second was invariably—"Warren, Montgomery, and Wooster," followed by the Dead March.<sup>2</sup>

Dr. Warren was the first man of distinction to lay down his life in the cause of American liberty. "At Boston," says a famous writer, "Joseph Warren, a young man whom nature had endowed with grace and manly beauty, and a courage that bordered on rash audacity, uttered the new war-cry of the world, FREEDOM AND EQUALITY." . . . "The good judgment and daring of Warren singled him out above all others then in the province as the leader of rebellion."<sup>3</sup> He presided over the Provincial Congress the day before the battle of Bunker's Hill—where, though holding the commission of Major-General, he fought as a volunteer. It was ordered by Congress that a monument should be erected at Boston in remembrance of him, and—having left behind him very little of this work, a substance—that his son should be considered as the child of the public, and be educated at the expense of the United States.

Warren was initiated in St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston, in 1761, and became its Master in 1768. During his Grand Mastership there were thirty-seven meetings of the Grand Lodge, thirty-four of which were held in "ample form."

Montgomery was of Irish birth, and after serving with distinction in the French war, settled in America. The commission of Brigadier-General in the Continental Army was bestowed upon him early in the war, and he was killed at the attack on Quebec, December 31, 1775. No man that ever fell in battle during a civil contest was more universally regretted, and his untimely fate was as much deplored in England as in the country of his adoption. He was among the Masonic friends who gathered around Washington at Cambridge in the beginning of the war.

David Wooster, who was born in 1711, served as a Captain in the expedition against Louisburg in 1745. In the French war he commanded a regiment, and subsequently became a Brigadier-General. In 1776 he was appointed Major-General in the American Army, and was mortally wounded while leading an attack on the British troops at Ridgefield, April 27, 1777. General (then Captain) Wooster was the first Master of the first chartered Lodge in Connecticut, instituted in 1750—now Hiram No. 1.

According to the late C.W. Moore, all the American Generals of the Revolution, with the exception of Benedict Arnold, were Freemasons. The Marquis de Lafayette was among the number, and it is believed that he was initiated in American Union Lodge at Morristown, the jewels and furniture used on the occasion being lent by St. John's Lodge at Newark, N.J.

In nearly all cases the Army Lodges, in the event of removal from one State to another, were authorized to continue working, unless there was in existence a Grand or Provincial Grand Lodge, when the sanction of the presiding officer had to be obtained. In this we may possibly discern the first germ of the principle of Exclusive (State) Jurisdiction.

It is supported by evidence, that the asperities which characterized the rivalry of the two Masonic systems, found no place in the Army Lodges. To quote the words of a somewhat impassioned orator, "the 'Ancient and Modern' contest turned to ashes in the red-hot furnace of liberty," and it is on record, that at the constitution of Washington Lodge, Jonathan Heart of "American Union," under the titular "Moderns," was appointed by Joseph Webb, G.M. of the Boston "Ancients," his Special Deputy Grand Master, to open and inaugurate the new Lodge.

On December 27, 1779—the headquarters of the Army being then at Morristown, New Jersey—the American Union Lodge met to celebrate the festival of St. John. At this meeting "a petition was read, representing the present state of Freemasonry to the several Deputy Grand Masters in the United States of America, desiring them to adopt some measures for appointing a Grand Master over said States;" and it was ordered "that the petition be circulated through the different Lines in the Army;" also, "that a committee be appointed from the different Lodges in the Army, from each Line, and from the Staff of the Army, to convene on the 1st of February, at Morristown, to take it into consideration." There were present on this occasion thirty-six members of the Lodge, and sixty-eight visitors, one of whom was General Washington.

Before, however, these proceedings ripened into action, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, at a special meeting—held January 13, 1780—passed three resolutions; the first, a regular attendant from 1767 to 1773. Sir William, late in life, took to his home as his wife Mary Brant, or "Miss Molly," as she was called; and her brother, Joseph Brant, or Thayendanegea was afterwards secretary to Colonel Guy Johnson, who succeeded his father-in-law as General Superintendent of the Indian Department. Joseph Brant was a Freemason, and during the fierce struggle for independence, many military brethren owed their lives to his protection, one of whom, Captain John M'Kinstry, at the period of Brant's interposition on his behalf, after the battle of the Cedars, near Montreal, in 1776, was actually bound to a tree, and surrounded by the faggots intended for his immolation.<sup>1</sup> Similar tales are related of Tecumseh, the famous Shawnee warrior and orator, in connection with the war of 1812.

1777.—The authority granted to Joseph Warren by the G.L. of Scotland having died with him, the Master and Wardens of the subordinate Lodges were summoned to attend and elect a Grand Master by Joseph Webb, his late Deputy. Accordingly, eleven brethren met as a Grand Lodge, and elected Joseph Webb Grand Master, March 8. This, if we leave out of present consideration the Lodge (and Grand Lodge) at Philadelphia, in 1731, which will be referred to at some length in the next chapter, was the first Independent or self-created Grand Lodge on the Continent. Philadelphia was occupied by the British, September 27. At that time the Provincial Grand Lodge (A.) had eighteen Lodges on its register. The American army took post at Valley Forge, twenty-six miles from Philadelphia, and traditions affirm that Lodges were held in this camp, which Washington often attended. There can hardly be a doubt that such was the case, but unfortunately no records of the Continental Field Lodges, for this year, are in existence.

1778.—Philadelphia evacuated by the British, June 18. The Grand Lodge of Virginia, the second Independent organization of the kind, formed October 13. The Lodges in this State had derived their charters from the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland, "Mother Kilwinning," the Prov. G. Lodges of New England and Pennsylvania, and (according to Dove<sup>2</sup>) the G.L. of Ireland. At the close of this year, the city of New York, the town of Newport, Rhode Island, and Savannah, Georgia (captured December 29,) were alone held by the British.

1779.—No. 210 (A.), constituted at New York—making with No. 169 (A.)—removed from Boston in 1776—two "Ancient" Lodges in that city. Three Lodges in the Continental Army were chartered by the Prov. G.L. (A.) of Pennsylvania.<sup>3</sup> "The membership of the Lodges subordinate to the two Grand Lodges in Philadelphia gradually became merged, the Ancients receiving and remaking the Moderns. The records of the Grand Lodge contain the names of many Modern Masons who were subsequently identified with the "Ancients."<sup>4</sup> A notable instance of this is the case of Dr. William Smith, Provost of the University, who was a so-called "Modern" in 1755, and became Grand Secretary of the Ancients (in Pennsylvania), October 22, 1779.

1780.—Washington nominated as General Grand Master by the G.L. of Pennsylvania, January 13; Convention of American Field Lodges at Morristown, February 7. A French force,<sup>1</sup> under General Rochambeau, arrived at Newport, R.I., July 12. Among the subordinate officers employed with this expedition were the Dukes de Laval Montmorency, de Castries, and de Lansun, Prince de Broglie, the Marquis and the Count de Deux Ponts, Count de Segur, and many other noblemen. The Baron de Kalb, a Major-General in the American army—mortally wounded at the battle of Camden, August 17—was buried with military and Masonic honors by his victorious enemies. In this year No. 212 (A.) was established at New York; and three further warrants were granted in the Continental army by the G.L. of Pennsylvania, on the roll of which body there were now thirty-one subordinate Lodges.

1781.—The "Ancient" and Field Lodges in New York met as a Grand Lodge, and elected Grand Officers, January 23; and a warrant for a Prov. Grand Lodge—No. 219—was granted by the (Atholl) G.L. of England, September 5. A Lodge in the Continental army was established in this year under a Pennsylvanian charter.

1782.—Provincial Grand Lodge of New York (A.) inaugurated by the following Lodges:—Stationary—Nos. 169, 210, 212 (A.); and Nos. 132 (S.) 52 (A.), 441 (I.), 213 (A.), and 215 (A.) together with a Lodge under dispensation—in the 22d, 37th, and 38th Regiments, the 4th Battalion Royal Artillery, the Regiment of Munsbach-Beyreuth, and the 57th Foot respectively, December 5. The title of "Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Ancient Masons" was assumed by the G.L. at Boston under Joseph Webb, December 6, and from the official records of the same date we learn that three subordinate Lodges were constituted before the death of Joseph Warren, and fourteen subsequently.

1783.—Peace of Versailles, April 19. The third independent Grand Lodge, that of Maryland, organized July 31. A majority of the Grand Officers, being about to leave New York with the British army, commended the "Grand Warrant" to the care of their successors, September 19. At this date seven Lodges had received charters from the Prov. G.L., four of which were attached to the New Jersey Volunteers, the 57th Foot, the Regiment de Knyphausen, and the Loyal American Regiment; also two Irish Lodges, Nos. 478, in the 17th Dragoons, and 90, in the 33d Foot, had at different dates ranged themselves under its banner. In this year there were forty Lodges on the roll of the G.L. of Pennsylvania, and eighteen under the Grand Body of which Webb was the head, in Massachusetts. Of the former, ten were established in Maryland (before the close of 1782), five in New Jersey, four in Delaware, three each in Virginia and South Carolina, and single Lodges in North Carolina and Georgia.<sup>2</sup> Of the latter, six were outside the State of Massachusetts, viz., in Connecticut three, and in New Hampshire, Vermont, and New York one each. Thus making a grand total of thirty-three Lodges from these two sources only—whose members gloried in the title of "Ancients," and believed that they were walking in the old paths, from which the older Grand Lodge of England and her daughter Lodges had lamentably strayed.

Ten Lodges in all were at work in the American army during the Revolution, the earliest of which was—

ST. JOHN'S REGIMENTAL LODGE, warranted by the Prov. G.L. of New York, July 24, 1775, i.e., before the military occupation of that city by the British. There are no records, and we only learn that it was attached to the United States battalion during the war.

AMERICAN UNION, though of later date, was the first Lodge organized in the Continental army, and may be justly regarded as the eldest Masonic daughter of the Federation. It was formed—February 15, 1776—by warrant of the English Prov. G.M. of North America—John Rowe—in the Connecticut Line of the army, wherever stationed, provided no other G.M. held authority. Shortly after, the Lodge having removed to New York, asked for a confirmation of their charter from the D.G.M., Dr. Middleton; but a new warrant was granted to the members under the name of Military Union, No. 1. The Lodge is described as having "moved with the army as a pillar of light in parts of Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey." Joel Clark, the first Master, was taken prisoner August 27, and died in captivity. He was succeeded by S.H. Parsons (the first treasurer), and the latter by Jonathan Heart (the first Secretary). The original warrant was taken by Heart to Marietta, Ohio, and the Lodge is now No. 1 on the roll of that State.

WASHINGTON LODGE, No. 10, was constituted at West Point—November 11, 1779, by Jonathan Heart, as representative of Joseph Webb, G.M. Massachusetts G.L. The first Master was Brigadier-General J. Paterson, and the Wardens, Colonels Benjamin Tupper and John Groaton. At this and the previous Lodge (American Union) General Washington was a frequent visitor.

ARMY LODGE, No. 27, in the Maryland Line, was warranted by the G.L. of Pennsylvania in April, 1780. The first Master was Brigadier-General Mordecai Gist, and the Wardens, Colonel Otho Williams and Major Archibald Anderson. All three greatly distinguished themselves at the battle of Camden, August 17, 1780, Gist in command of a brigade, and Williams as Adjutant-General; while after the defeat of the Americans Major Anderson was the only infantry officer who kept together any number of men.

No records of the American Field Lodges of the Revolution have been preserved, except a portion of the minutes of American Union, and some returns of the Washington Lodge. The latter merely inform us that in 1782 two hundred and forty-five names had—up to that date—been borne on the roll of the Lodge.<sup>1</sup> The former are of a more interesting character. The principal officers of the army, and the general in command, are frequently named as visitors, and at all the banquets, while the first toast was "Washington" or "Congress," the second was invariably—"Warren, Montgomery, and Wooster," followed by the Dead March.<sup>2</sup>

Dr. Warren was the first man of distinction to lay down his life in the cause of American liberty. "At Boston," says a famous writer, "Joseph Warren, a young man whom nature had endowed with grace and manly beauty, and a courage that bordered on rash audacity, uttered the new war-cry of the world, FREEDOM AND EQUALITY." . . . "The good judgment and daring of Warren singled him out above all others then in the province as the leader of rebellion." He presided over the Provincial Congress the day before the battle of Bunker's Hill—where, though holding the commission of Major-General, he fought as a volunteer. It was ordered by Congress that a monument should be erected at Boston in remembrance of him, and—having left behind him very little of this world's substance—that his son should be considered as the child of the public, and be educated at the expense of the United States.

Warren was initiated in St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston, in 1761, and became its Master in 1768. During his Grand Mastership there were thirty-seven meetings of the Grand Lodge, thirty-four of which were held in "ample form."

Montgomery was of Irish birth, and after serving with distinction in the French war, settled in America. The commission of Brigadier-General in the Continental Army was bestowed upon him early in the war, and he was killed at the attack on Quebec, December 31, 1775. No man that ever fell in battle during a civil contest was more universally regretted, and his untimely fate was as much deplored in England as in the country of his adoption. ### Brother Gilbert-Motier de Lafayette

THE ILLUSTRIOUS FRENCH STATESMAN AND PATRIOT, HELD IN HIGH ESTEEM BY ALL AMERICANS.

Was admitted into Freemasonry in "American Union Military Lodge," which was held in a room over the old Freeman's Tavern on the north side of the Green, Morristown, N. J., during the winter of 1777, at which Brother George Washington presided in person, and whose quarters were there at the time. The jewels and furniture used on the occasion were lent by St. John's Lodge, of Newark, N. J.

affirming the principle that it would be for the benefit of Masonry "that a Grand Master of Masons throughout the United States," should be nominated on the part of that Grand Lodge; the second, unanimously electing General Washington to the office; and the third, directing "that the minutes of the election and appointment should be transmitted to the different Grand Lodges in the United States, and their concurrence therein should be requested."

At the same meeting a committee was nominated "to inform themselves of the number of Grand Lodges in America, and the names of their officers"—a point upon which a good deal of ignorance prevailed throughout the country at large, as I shall hereafter have occasion to show.

On February 7, 1780, "according to the recommendation of the Convention Lodge," held December 27, a committee of ten met at Morristown, delegated by the Masons in the Military Lines of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, and Maryland; St. John's Regimental Lodge, the Staff of the Army, and the Artillery. The representatives of the Massachusetts and Connecticut Military Lines—John Pierce and Jonathan Heart—also acting on behalf of Washington and American Union Lodges respectively. Mordecai Gist was chosen President, and Otho Williams, Secretary of the Committee. An address was then drawn up to "the Grand Masters of the several Lodges in the respective United States of America." In this—to avert "the impending dangers of Schisms and Apostasy"—the expediency was maintained of "establishing one Grand Lodge in America, to preside over and govern all other Lodges, licensed or to be licensed, upon the Continent;" and the Grand Masters, or a majority of their number, were requested to nominate as M.W. G.M., a brother whose merit and capacity might be adequate to a station so important, and to submit his name, together with that of the Lodge to be established, "to our Grand Mother Lodge in Europe for approbation and confirmation." This "address" being read and unanimously agreed to, was "signed in convention, and the committee adjourned without delay."

A "Convention Lodge" from the different Lines of the Army and departments, was held—March 6—under the authority of the American Union Lodge, at which the proceedings of the committee were unanimously approved.

At this period the only Grand Lodges (in the contemplation of the Committee) were those in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Virginia; and although the name of Washington as Grand Master designate does not appear in the address from the Masonic Convention in the army, yet it was formally signified to these Grand Lodges that he was their choice. It will be observed that the Masons of the various Military Lines met three times in convention—on the first occasion to propound a scheme, on the second to arrange the details, and on the third to ratify the proceedings of the executive committee. Washington, therefore, whose name is recorded among those of the visitors on St. John's Day, 1779, was as much a party to the proceedings of that date as were the actual members present of the American Union Lodge. This doubtless led to the project being taken up so warmly by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, by which body it was communicated to other jurisdictions; but they did not view it with favor, and no action resulted. It is a little singular that in Philadelphia—then the metropolis of North America—the governing Masonic body were only "informed" on July 27, 1780, that there was a Grand Lodge in Virginia, and the records from which this is gleaned give—under the same date—the following:—

"It is reported that there is a Grand Lodge in Boston." In the same year—September 4—Joseph Webb (Massachusetts) knew of but two American Grand Lodges, that of Pennsylvania and his own, and had heard of no increase in the number beyond the G.L. of New York so late as March 8, 1787.

The idea of a General Grand Master or Superintending Grand Lodge was revived in 1790, when it was taken up by Georgia, and at various other times (and ways), some seventeen in all, the last occasion being in 1862. It is somewhat curious that the project, though constantly revived by a number of American Grand Lodges after 1780, has since that date encountered the determined opposition of the Masonic community in Pennsylvania. The belief that General Washington was Grand Master of the United States—at one time a very prevalent one—was strengthened by a Masonic medal, struck in 1797, having on one side the initials, "G.W., G.G.M." The following, however, is his Masonic record briefly told:—He was initiated in the Fredericksburg Lodge, Virginia, November 4, 1752, and became a Master Mason, August 4, 1753. This Lodge derived its authority from Boston, but obtained a Scottish charter in 1758, which seems on the whole to fortify a conjecture which has been advanced by Hayden,<sup>1</sup> that Washington was "healed and re-obligated" in No. 227 (46th Foot) in order to qualify him for admission into a Lodge held under a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Ireland. In 1779 he declined the office of G.M. of Virginia, but accepted that of Master of Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, in his native State, in 1788. As President of the United States he was sworn in—April 30, 1789—on the Bible of St. John's Lodge, New York, by Chancellor Livingstone, G.M. of that State. In 1793—September 12—he laid the corner-stone of the Capitol, and is described in the official proceedings as "Grand Master pro tem., and Worshipful Master of No. 22, of Virginia." Washington died in 1799, and was buried with Masonic honors on December 18 of that year.

It is a curious circumstance, and deserves to be recorded, that with the exception of Major-General Richard Gridley, who attended two meetings of the St. John's Grand Lodge, Boston, in 1787, Washington appears to have been the only man of mark, who, graduating under the older system of Masonry before its popularity was on the wane, associated himself at all closely with the proceedings of the Craft, either during the war with England or at any later date. Before the political troubles—as will be hereafter narrated—no one figured more prominently on the Masonic stage than Benjamin Franklin; but we nowhere read of his participating in Masonic fellowship, in the country of his birth, after his return from England in 1762. According to a publication of great weight and authority, "the 'Moderns' numbered among their prominent members many who were opposed to the independence of the colonies, while the Ancients were mostly in favor thereof." In 1776 the earliest Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was practically extinct, its members having been sharply divided in political sentiment at the era of the Revolution, and their Grand Master, Chief Justice Allen, having placed himself under the protection of General Howe. At the same date the condition of affairs was very similar in New York, the Prov. G.M. of which State, Sir John Johnson, was commissioned as a colonel by the British, and (according to an unfriendly biographer) "directed the movements of as bloody a band of savages and outlaws as existed during the Revolution;" while at Boston the influence of Joseph Warren, both in Masonry and politics, has already been narrated.

At the termination of hostilities in 1783, we find, therefore, that in Pennsylvania the Ancients were not only supreme but unchallenged. In Massachusetts about an equal number of Lodges held charters from each of the two Grand Lodges, and at the Union of these bodies in 1792 the only allusion to the diversity of rites was the single proviso that "All distinctions between Ancient and Modern Masons shall be abolished as far as practicable." In New York many of the Lodges under the older sanction gradually attached themselves to the predominant system, and beyond the fact that their members were understood to have shifted their allegiance, and to have become "Ancients," very little more seems to have been required of them. In South Carolina the strife lingered for some years, and this I imagine to have been mainly the result of the presence of a large British garrison in that State during the closing years of the struggle for independence.

Gradually, however, all distinctions between the two systems were removed throughout the Continent, and the prudent course adopted by the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, in 1807, must be commended, by which body the difficulties of reconciling any discrepancies were at once surmounted by the appointment of a committee "to consider of and introduce an uniform system of working to be observed throughout the several Lodges of the State."

The first ten Lodges on this list were in existence during the Revolution. The third in order, now "Montgomery," No. 19, Philadelphia, is traditionally asserted to have been "originally a Military Lodge, with a travelling warrant from the G.L. of England." All warrants issued to military bodies were recalled by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in 1784, and from that date the Army Lodges either ceased to exist or assumed a new character.

An application for "a warrant to hold a Travelling Lodge in the armies of the United States" was refused by the G.L. of New Jersey in 1791; and in the same year a "Travelling Warrant" was granted by the G.L. of New York to some non-military brethren desirous of erecting a Lodge in the Island of Curaçoa.

The first Field Lodge, after the peace—No. 58 (P.)—was established in the "Legion of the United States," commanded by General Anthony Wayne, in 1793; and it is said that nearly all the members were killed in the Indian War. After this, in the G.L. of New York—March 2, 1814—"a petition from a number of officers of the second division of the Northern Army, at Plattsburgh, praying for a 'marching warrant,' to be called Northern Light Lodge, was read and referred to the Grand Officers." Whether the charter solicited was granted or not, I am unable to state; but later in the same year a Field Lodge—No. 140—was erected by the G. L. of Pennsylvania, to be held wherever the Master for the time being should be stationed in the Army of the United States.

The last two Lodges on the list were established during the Mexican war, and it is quite possible that there were others, though the particulars with regard to them have not fallen in my way.

Field Lodges sprang up with rather a luxuriant growth during the late civil war, and were freely established on both sides. But the experience of the war was decidedly unfavorable to their utility, and we find the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, in 1865, congratulated on having "kept herself free from the difficulties, embarrassments, and entanglements, which the issuing of warrants for Army Lodges could not but have led to." The practice was, to issue dispensations, and when the Regiments in which they were held were mustered out of the service, or the individuals to whom they were granted returned to civil life, the Lodges ceased to exist.

CHAPTER XXXI.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

DOCUMENTARY evidence and tradition are alike silent with regard to the introduction of Masonry into America. Lord Alexander, Viscount Canada, who in company with his brother Anthony—Master of Work to the King—became a member of the Lodge of Edinburgh in 1634, shortly afterwards founded a colony on the river St. Lawrence.<sup>1</sup> But if any Lodges were established by early explorers of the continent, they perished before the dawn of accredited Masonic history, leaving behind them no traces of their existence. It has indeed been related that in 1658 the three degrees of Masonry were introduced by some Dutch Jews into Newport, Rhode Island,<sup>2</sup> but the statement is unworthy of serious refutation.

Governor Belcher, as mentioned at an earlier page,<sup>3</sup> was admitted (according to his own testimony) into the Craft in 1704, and must have carried back with him some slight acquaintance with its principles on his return to the New World in 1705. Ten years later—March 10, 1715—a letter is said to have been written by John Moore, the King's Collector at the port of Philadelphia, in which he alludes to a few evenings spent in festivity with his Masonic brethren.<sup>4</sup> There is also a tradition that a Lodge under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England was duly warranted at Boston in 1720, but died out shortly afterwards owing to the violent opposition it encountered.<sup>5</sup> After this we are brought down without a break to the year 1730, when the real history of Masonry in the United States may be said to have its commencement, and we find ourselves fairly launched upon an inquiry of great interest and singular complexity.

It is not so difficult a task to plant new truths as to root out old errors, and therefore the practice of Timotheus, an ancient teacher of rhetoric, must be commended, who always demanded a double fee from those pupils who had been instructed by others, since in that case he had not only to plant in, but also to root out.

So long, indeed, as specious probabilities are placed on the same footing with well-attested facts, so long will Masonic history be a misleading guide, and the misfortune is—to quote Hobbes, who considered all books to be merely extracts and copies—"that most authors are like sheep, never deviating from the beaten path."

Of late years, it is true, many new facts have been brought to light, and the materials for an exhaustive sketch of the early Masonry of America have been vastly extended. Nevertheless the story continues to be told in the old way, and there has hitherto been no attempt to deal with the subject as a whole, divested of the incrustations of error which have been laid over it by successive narrators.

To those who love to ride at anchor, it may be a disquieting reflection that no Statute of Limitations is recognized in our courts of literary jurisdiction. But this fact notwithstanding, the student of our antiquities cannot always hold his opinions in solution, expecting that fresh discoveries will keep pace with the search for them.

In historical inquiry—as observed at the outset of this work—finality can have no place; but while I readily admit that the conclusions to which I am about to give expression may be overturned by additional facts, I shall cherish the hope that no evidence available at the time of writing will be found to have been neglected, nor that I have anywhere failed to indicate with sufficient fullness the points on which differences of opinion may rationally exist.

With the names of Daniel Coxe and Henry Price the generality of Masonic students will be familiar. The former received a deputation as Provincial Grand Master, but there is hardly a scintilla of evidence to show that he ever exercised any authority under it. The latter, on the other hand, exercised all the authority of a Prov. G.M., though no absolute proof is forthcoming that he was at any time in lawful possession of a deputation.

The various questions arising, directly or indirectly, out of the authority granted or exercised by Coxe and Price respectively, have been largely debated in the journals of the Craft. By one set of writers the Masonic precedence of Philadelphia, and by another that of Boston (Massachusetts), has been affirmed. But it seems to me equally impossible to side completely with the former or the latter, and the examination upon which we are about to enter will, I think, necessitate our following the example of Lord Keeper Bridgman, of whom it is related “that if a case admitted of divers doubts, what the lawyers call points, he would never give all on one side, but either party should have somewhat to go away with.”

In the earliest minute-book of the Grand Lodge of England there is a list of Lodges, with the names of their members, as registered in 1731-32. Although there are some omissions—in the absence, doubtless, of returns—a roll is given of by far a majority of the Lodges, the total silence of the records with regard to the membership of the “Old Horn Lodge,” being perhaps of all the lacunæ the loss that will be chiefly deplored. The last Lodge on the list is No. 104, at the Virgin’s Inn, Derby, constituted September 14, 1732. With the exception of the dates of constitution, which I have taken from the Engraved Lists, and the publication of Dr. Anderson (1738 edition), the following are extracts from this register. The names shown are in each case a selection from the actual list of members.

<sup>2</sup> In dealing with the early history of American Masonry, I have looked through the small end of the telescope, while in the latter—or comparatively modern—portion, the instrument has been reversed, and by treating the subject in broader outline, I have endeavored to bring it within the limits of a general history.

Brother Colonel Daniel Cox

FIRST PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER APPOINTED FOR AMERICA

R. W. Brother Daniel Cox was born in London before August 31, 1673, on which date his baptism is registered in the Church of St. Botolph, Aldersgate, London. He was the son of Dr. Daniel Cox, of London, who was one of the physicians of King Charles II., and also of Queen Anne. Died April 25, 1759, at Trenton, N. J., and buried in the old graveyard of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Burlington, N. J.

No.	Description.	Date of Constitution.
8	DEVIL TAVERN, WITHIN TEMPLE BAR. Claude Crespigny (Master), Edw. Ravenell, (S. W.), John Houghton, and Daniel Coxe.	April 25, 1773.
75	RAINBOW COFFEE-HOUSE, IN YORK BUILDINGS. John Pitt (Master), Edward Ravenell, John Houghton, "Sen .," John Houghton, "Jun .," and Henry Price.	July 17, 1730.
79	CASTLE, IN HIGHGATE. Thos. Moore (Master), A. Chocke (D.G.M., 1737), W. Blackerby (G. Treas., 1730-37), and Claude Crespigny.	1731.

In the Lodge at the "Devil" there were twenty-eight members, and the name of Daniel Coxe appears as the eighteenth on the list. The Lodge at the "Rainbow" boasted a much larger membership, no less than sixty-three names figuring in the roll, of which the fifty-third in order was that of Henry Price.

At about the middle of the last-named list there is an apparent break, and then follows a further series of names belonging in all probability to brethren who had become members in 1732. There can hardly be a doubt as to the Daniel Coxe and Henry Price of the Lodges Nos. 8 and 75 being the American worthies bearing the same names. The former was certainly in England in the early part of 1731, and the latter refers on more than one occasion to having been personally acquainted with some of the leading Masons of London about 1733. Moreover, his patent as Prov. G.M., which he always stated was delivered to him in person, bears the date (according to records, the authority of which will be presently examined) of April 30 of that year.

It will be seen that three persons—Claude Crespigny, Edward Ravenell and John Houghton—belonged at the same time to more than one Lodge, while in the case of two of them, the dual membership was of an identical character. These points may be usefully noted, as a good deal of speculation has arisen with regard both to Coxe and Price, which the details here given may assist in placing on a sounder basis. Thus, to slightly anticipate, Claude Crespigny, the Master of the Lodge to which Coxe belonged, was also a member of No. 79, then meeting at the Castle in Highgate, but shortly to become vacant, and later still to be arbitrarily assigned in a publication of 1735, to a Lodge within Coxe's jurisdiction. To this may be added, that Edward Ravenell and John Houghton apparently enjoyed Masonic fellowship both with Coxe and Price.

Among the members of other English Lodges at the same period, as shown in the register of Grand Lodge, were Governors Burrington and Tinker, Sir W. Keith, Bart., Richard Hull, Randall Took, Ralph Farwinter, Captain William Douglas, and Alexander Pope. The last name, though an illustrious one, is not connected in any way with the spread of Masonry beyond the seas, but the others are those of well-known characters, who were all either Colonial Governors or Provincial Grand Masters abroad.

Daniel Coxe was the son of Dr. Daniel Coxe of London, who from the year 1687 to 1690 was the largest landed proprietor and also the Governor of the Province of West Jersey. The father was a man of large wealth, and before his arrival in America had been in succession the physician to the Consort of Charles II., and to Queen Anne. The younger Coxe, who was born about the year 1674, arrived in England in November, 1716, and six years later published "A Description of the English Province of CAROLANA." This was written in support of a claim, which he had inherited from his father, to the extensive region then called "Carolana." It included the present States of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, and all the country north on both sides of the Mississippi, up as high as Kentucky. In the preface the author suggests that all the North American colonies should be UNITED, and it has been maintained "that the celebrated 'Albany plan of Union,' recommended by Dr. Franklin in 1754, is little more than a transcript of the design sketched by Daniel Coxe many years before."

A letter written by Coxe from Trenton, Falls of Delaware, dated April 28, 1728, shows that he must have returned to America in the interval preceding the Masonic occurrences which it becomes my next task to relate.

On June 5, 1730, he was appointed by the Duke of Norfolk Provincial Grand Master of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania—his deputation or commission differing, it may be observed, in some important particulars from those of any similar instrument of this class. The term of office of Daniel Coxe was limited to two years, from June 24, 1730, "after which time," the brethren "in all or any" of the three colonies aforesaid, were "empowered every other year on the feast of St. John the Baptist to elect a Provincial Grand Master," who, with the concurrence of his Deputy and Wardens, might establish Lodges at his discretion. An account in writing of the number of Lodges so constituted, with the names of the members, was to be furnished annually, but there is no allusion whatever to the payment of a fee for registration or for any other purpose. The deputation was granted, it may be added, on the petition of Coxe himself "and several other brethren residing and about to reside" in the Provinces over which his authority was made to extend.

In 1731—January 29—Coxe attended a meeting of the Grand Lodge of England, on which occasion his health was drunk "as Provincial Grand Master of North America."

In the same year, according to the records already referred to, we again meet with his name as a member of Lodge No. 8, meeting at the Devil Tavern, within Temple Bar.

The date of his final return to New Jersey I am unable to supply, but it is on record that he was appointed Associate Justice of that Province in 1734, an office held by him until his death, which is thus announced in Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette of April 26, 1739:—

"Yesterday morning, died at Trenton, the Hon. Daniel Cox, Esq., one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the Province of New Jersey."

The archives of the Grand Lodge of England contain no further allusion to the subject of this memoir, and a thorough inquiry among his descendants for letters and papers bearing upon the subject has failed to disclose any testimony whatever of the exercise by him, or by any one acting under his authority, of the prerogatives conferred by his deputation.

If, however, we accept without demur the statements in the following letter, which is said to have been written—November 17, 1754—by Henry Bell,<sup>1</sup> at that time residing in Lancaster, to Dr. Thomas Cadwallader,<sup>2</sup> of Philadelphia, there can remain no doubt as to the first Grand Master in America having constituted a Lodge at Philadelphia:—

'As you well know, I was one of the originators of the first Masonic Lodge in Philadelphia. A party of us used to meet at the Tun Tavern, in Water Street, and sometimes opened a Lodge there. Once, in the Fall of 1730, we formed a design of obtaining a Charter for a regular Lodge, and made application to the Grand Lodge of England for one, but before receiving it, we heard that Daniel Coxe, of New Jersey, had been appointed by that Grand Lodge as Provincial Grand Master of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. We therefore made application to him, and our request was granted."

The documentary evidence last presented rests on the authority of the Library Committee, Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, who state, "The letter was exhibited in the Grand Secretary's office [Philadelphia], in 1872. It bore all the marks of being genuine, and we have no doubt of its being correct." But, it has been pertinently observed, "Where has the letter been for one hundred and twenty years? In whose custody? Why has it never been brought to light before? What is the full text? These, and numerous other questions, must be satisfactorily answered before we can admit this piece of evidence. For an item that has been waited for almost one hundred and fifty years, it comes remarkably pat. If not a swift witness in one sense, it is in another, for it certainly covers the whole ground."

Again, the opening words of the letter, addressed to Cadwallader, who was only initiated—in a Lodge of which Bell was at no time a member—in 1737, are somewhat enigmatical. Moreover, we are led to believe that in the fall of 1730, there was but a single body of Masons in Philadelphia, whereas the existence of at least a plurality of Lodges, on December 8 of that year, is distinctly stated in Franklin's newspaper.

What is new is not necessarily true, and indications are not wanting that, even in Philadelphia itself, among those by whom the authenticity of the letter was formerly upheld, there are some persons who begin to doubt the validity of the proofs, and it is, at least, a significant fact, that since the discovery by MacCalla of some genuine records dating from 1731, the document has been as far as possible withdrawn from the arena of discussion.

The letter, indeed, though inadmissible as evidence in any court of justice, has derived a factitious importance from its appearance in two official publications,<sup>1</sup> though it may be well doubted whether we should have heard of it at all, had the early ledger of St. John's Lodge (liber B.)—with which it elashes—been discovered ten years earlier than it actually was.

The only other evidence that I have met with relating to the possible exercise of jurisdiction by Coxe, occurs in a letter of July 28, 1762, written from Elizabeth Town, New Jersey, claiming a deputation, which Jeremy Gridley, Prov. G.M. at Boston, had promised to send, on the receipt of satisfactory proof that Daniel Coxe had died before 1754.<sup>2</sup>

The Pennsylvania Gazette of December 8, 1730, contains the earliest printed notice of the Craft in America:—

"As there are several Lodges of Freemasons erected in this Province, and people have lately been much amused with conjecture concerning them, we think the following account of Freemasonry from London will not be unacceptable to our readers."

Then follows a recital, that "By the death of a gentleman who was one of the Brotherhood of Freemasons, there has lately happened a discovery of abundance of their secret signs and wonders, with the mysterious manner of their admission into that Fraternity, contained in a manuscript found among his papers."

Although Franklin here deposes to the existence of several Lodges in 1730, there is no further evidence that will enable us to identify more than one of them—St. John's Lodge, Philadelphia—in which that remarkable man is believed, with good reason, to have himself received the light of Masonry in February, 1731. The date of Franklin's initiation remained for a long time uncertain, although it was rightly assumed that the insertion by him in his newspaper of a so-called "Exposure of Masonry" must have necessarily preceded his own membership of the Society.

The discovery by Mr. Clifford P. MacCalla, in 1884, of an original Masonic record, dating from 1731, has thrown much light on the early history of the Craft in Pennsylvania. The book in question is bound in parchment or vellum, and bears on the front cover the words—

"PHILADELPHIA CITY,

"ST. JOHN'S LODGE, LIBRE B."

The title with which it is labelled suggests a "Liber A.," or earlier record of the Lodge. This, however, has not yet been found, and it would be idle to speculate upon its contents. Liber B. is the Secretary's ledger account with all the members of the Lodge from June 24, 1731, to June 24, 1738. Altogether, the names are given of fifty members between 1731 and 1737. The initiation or entrance fee was £3, until 1734, when it was raised to £5. The monthly dues (also styled "quota" and "omition") were 6d. per member, and there was a fine of 1s. for absence. The lodge met on the first Monday of each month, and (in the opinion of local antiquaries) was constituted (with thirteen members) at the close of 1730, or the beginning of 1731.

Among the names—June 24, 1731—we find those of "Wm. Button, late Mast.; Wm. Allen, Esq., Grand Mast.;" and William Pringle Deputy Mast.:" the last two brethren being continued in their respective offices in the following year, as we shall see by an extract from Franklin's newspaper to be present'y quoted. The name of one Warden is given for the year 1735, and of both for 1736, 1737, and 1738. These are identical with those of the Grand Wardens for the same years, and in every case the brethren named as Grand Officers in the period covered by Liber B., were members of the private Lodge. If, indeed, any lingering doubt remained as to the Lodge and the Grand Lodge being one and the same body, this would be dispelled by a printed notice of June 16, 1731, signed by "Thomas Hopkinson, Grand Master," and his officers, "on behalf of all the members of St. John's Lodge at Philadelphia."

Dr. Thomas Cadwallader, whose name is first given under the year 1737, was a (Grand) Warden in 1738. Of Henry Bell there is no mention. Benjamin Franklin is charged—June 24, 1731—"To remainder of your £3 entrance is £2, 0s.," and had apparently paid the sum of £1, five months before, or some time during that period, as he is charged with five months' previous dues. This will tend to prove that he was made a Mason in February, 1731. The last entries in the records or accounts, were made by Franklin, and an inter-

FAC-SIMILE PAGES OF THE FIRST LODGE ESTABLISHED IN AMERICA.

In presenting these fac-simile pages of the Ledger of the first Lodge established in the United States in 1730, "St. Johns of Philadelphia," we would say that it is remarkable that the original record was for so long a time in the possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and that it should have remained unnoticed by the searchers in History until brought to the knowledge of the Masonic fraternity by Bro. Clifford P. McCalla, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. Its importance cannot be over estimated when it is considered how very meagre the earlier Lodge records are. By the kind permission of the "Historical Society" the Craft are put in possession of this very valuable document.

The book appears to have been intended to contain the minutes of the Lodge; but owing, possibly to the over cautiousness of the earlier Masons to commit any part of the Lodge proceedings to writing, we regret to say that the minutes were never written in full. In the year 1790 and 1791 the book was used to keep the accounts of the number of "Testaments delivered," of "Prayer books done," and "copies of the Laws sent to the State House" by the printing firm of which Benjamin Franklin had previously been a member.

The ledger is 8 inches long by 12 $\frac{1}{4}$  inches wide, and contains about 2000 pages, a large number being blank. It is bound in parchment or vellum, with no ornamentation whatever; on the front of the cover is written and printed in ink—

"Philadelphia City"
"St. John's Lodge Libre B."

The paper is the usual style of that day, unpressed and not calendered, and has as water-marks, on some pages a ribbon or garter with the legend, "Honi Soit—Mal y Pease," in the centre a shield quartered, surmounting the ribbon is a crown; on other pages is a circle with two sprigs of leaves forming a wreath, with the letters "G. R." in centre, surmounted by a crown.

On the back of the book are the words—

"George F Ingham
from

His Mother Aug. 4."

The record shows that Benjamin Franklin was Secretary of St. John's Lodge, 1735-36, and balanced the accounts of the members.

esting report, drawn up—June 5, 1732—by a committee of the members, is pronounced on good authority to be in his handwriting.

This report is distinct from the Ledger, but both these ancient documents fulfill the legal requirement "of coming from the proper custody," having been inherited by Mr. G. T. Ingham, together with other old writings and papers, formerly the property of David Hall, for many years Franklin's partner in the printing business.<sup>1</sup> Two of the "Resolutions" agreed to by Franklin and the other members of the committee are so quaintly expressed, and withal so admirable in their tenor, that I am induced to transcribe them:

- "1. That since the excellent Science of Geometry and Architecture is so much recommended in our ancient Constitutions, Masonry being first instituted with this Design, among others, to distinguish the true and skilful Architect from unskilful Pretenders; total ignorance of this art is very unbecoming a Man who bears the worthy Name and Character of MASON:

"We therefore conclude, that it is the Duty of every Member to make himself, in some Measure, acquainted therewith, as he would honour the Society he belongs to, and conform to the Constitutions.

2. That every Member may have an Opportunity of so doing, the present Cash to be laid out in the best Books of Architecture, suitable Mathematical Instruments, &c."

It will be remembered, that by the terms of his Patent, Daniel Coxe was to hold office until June 24, 1732, when a new Grand Master was to be elected, and the following notice, which appeared in the Pennsylvania Gazette of June 26, in that year, has been relied upon, as proving to demonstration that a successor to Coxe was duly chosen in strict accordance with the terms of the Deputation.

"Philadelphia, June 26.

"Saturday last being St. John's day, a Grand Lodge of the ancient and honorable Society of FREE and ACCEPTED MASONS was held at the Sun Tavern in Water Street, when, after a handsome entertainment, the Worshipful W. Allen, Esq., was unanimously chosen Grand Master of this Province for the year ensuing, who was pleased to appoint Mr. William Pringle Deputy Master. Wardens chosen for the ensuing year were Thomas Boude and Benjamin Franklin."

But as Allen and Pringle were already Grand Master and Deputy, respectively, in 1731, this piece of evidence will only become consistent with the supposition that Coxe's mantle really fell on Allen, by indulging very largely in conjecture. If, then, a loose rein is given to the imagination, it may be possible to conceive that Coxe obtained permission to resign in favor of Allen in 1731, or that the entries in the ledger of St. John's Lodge were not made during the actual years under which they appear?

Allen was succeeded in the chair of St. John's (and the Grand) Lodge by Humphrey Murray, in 1733, and the latter by Benjamin Franklin, in 1734. Before attaining this distinction, however, the printer and editor of the Pennsylvania Gazette had visited Boston, where he seems to have made the acquaintance of Henry Price, in the autumn of 1733.<sup>2</sup>

The election of the journalist of that era, but who was afterwards destined to take high rank as a philosopher, diplomatist, and statesman, is thus announced in the columns of his own newspaper:—

“Philadelphia, June 27 [1734].

“Monday last a Grand Lodge of the Ancient and Honorable Society of Free and Accepted Masons in this Province, was held at the Tun Tavern in Water Street, when BENJAMIN FRANKLIN being elected Grand Master for the year ensuing, appointed Mr. John Crap to be his Deputy: and James Hamilton, Esq., and Thomas Hopkinson, Gent., were chosen Wardens. After which a very elegant entertainment was provided, and the Proprietor [Thomas Penn], the Governor, and several other persons of distinction, honored the Society with their presence.”

This paragraph was reprinted in several of the London papers,<sup>1</sup> a circumstance which we shall do well to bear in mind, when the appearance of a Philadelphia Lodge in a list given by a Dublin Calendar as the roll of the Grand Lodge of England for 1734, has to be considered, and if possible accounted for.

In the same year, Franklin reprinted Dr. Anderson's Book of Constitutions, and wrote two important letters, one an official communication to the Provincial Grand Lodge at Boston, the other a private note to Henry Price, the G.M. They are thus worded:—

“RIGHT WORSHIPFUL GRAND MASTER AND MOST WORTHY AND DEAR BRETHREN,—We acknowledge your favor of the 23d of October past, and rejoice that the Grand Master (whom God bless) hath so happily recovered from his late indisposition; and we now, glass in hand, drink to the establishment of his health, and the prosperity of your whole Lodge.

“We have seen in the Boston prints an article of news from London, importing that at a Grand Lodge held there in August last, Mr. Price's deputation and power was extended over all America, which advice we hope is true, and we heartily congratulate him thereupon, and though this has not been as yet regularly signified to us by you, yet, giving credit thereto, we think it our duty to lay before your Lodge what we apprehend needful to be done for us, in order to promote and strengthen the interest of Masonry in this Province (which seems to want the sanction of some authority derived from home, to give the proceedings and determinations of our Lodge their due weight), to wit, a Deputation or Charter granted by the Right Worshipful Mr. Price, by virtue of his commission from Britain, confirming the Brethren of Pennsylvania in the privileges they at present enjoy of holding annually their Grand Lodge, choosing their Grand Master, Wardens and other officers, who may manage all affairs relating to the Brethren here with full power and authority, according to the customs and usages of Masons, the said Grand Master of Pennsylvania only yielding his chair when the Grand Master of all America shall be in place. This, if it seems good and reasonable to you to grant, will not only be extremely agreeable to us, but will also, we are confident, conduce much to the welfare, establishment, and reputation of Masonry in these parts. We therefore submit it for your consideration, and, as we hope our request will be complied with, we desire that it may be done as soon as possible, and also accompanied with a copy of the R.W. Grand Master's first Deputation, and of the instrument by which it appears to be enlarged as above mentioned, witnessed by your Wardens, and signed by the Secretary; for which favors this Lodge doubt not of being able to behave so as not to be thought ungrateful.

“We are, Right Worshipful Grand Master and Most Worthy Brethren, Your Affectionate Brethren and obliged humble Servts., “Signed at the request of the Lodge,

“B. FRANKLIN, G.M.

Brother Clifford Paynter MacCalla

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF PENNSYLVANIA; MASONIC LITERAIEUR AND SCHOLAR, AND FOR OVER TWENTY YEARS
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR OF "THE KEYSTONE."

From an original photograph presented by him to Bro. John C. Yoxton just prior to his last visit to Egypt, where he died

"DEAR BROTHER PRICE,—I am glad to hear of your recovery. I hoped to have seen you here this Fall, agreeable to the expectation you were so good as to give me; but since sickness has prevented your coming while the weather was moderate, I have no room to flatter myself with a visit from you before the Spring, when a deputation of the Brethren here will have an opportunity of showing how much they esteem you. I beg leave to recommend their request to you, and to inform you that some false and rebel Brethren, who are foreigners, being about to set up a distinct Lodge in opposition to the old and true Brethren here, pretending to make Masons for a bowl of punch, and the Craft is like to come into disesteem among us unless the true Brethren are countenanced and distinguished by some such special authority as herein desired. I entreat, therefore, that whatever you shall think proper to do therein may be sent by the next post, if possible, or the next following.

"I am, Your Affectionate Brother & humb. Servt.,

"B. FRANKLIN, G.M.

"Pennsylvania.

"PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28, 1734.

"P.S.—If more of the Constitutions are wanted among you, please hint it to me."

From these letters it may be inferred that a rumor of Price having received an extension of authority had reached Philadelphia; also, that at the time of their being written, the Masonic body over which Franklin presided had not received a warrant from either Coxe or Price, since in each of these cases "the sanction of some authority derived from home" would not have been required. It will be observed, moreover, that a confirmation of privileges already existing is all that is solicited. Some analogy between the Masonic and the political dependence of a colony upon the mother country was doubtless present to Franklin's mind. But that he considered his own position as being one whit inferior to that of Price, under the latter's first deputation, is negatived by the stipulation providing for "the Grand Master of Pennsylvania only yielding his chair when the Grand Master of All America [should] be in place."

According to a long series of authorities, a Lodge was warranted at Philadelphia by Henry Price in 1734; but this exercise of jurisdiction, if it took place at all, cannot have occurred until after the two letters of November 28 in that year were written. This point, however, we shall approach later, and I pass to a curious entry in the Pocket Companion for Free-Masons, printed at Dublin in 1735. At the end of the book a list is given of the warranted Lodges in Ireland, Great Britain, etc. The Irish Lodges head the roll, and absorb thirty-seven numbers, the first English Lodge being therefore shown as No. 38. At the 116th place on this compound list, or, if we deduct the 37 Irish Lodges, at the No. 79, there appears: "The Hoop in Water Street in Philadelphia, 1st Monday." The work quoted from is a reprint of a London publication of the same name and date; and except with regard to one particular, the list of English Lodges given in the latter has been reproduced with scrupulous fidelity in the former. The Pocket Companion, London, shows a vacant niche at the No. 79, which, as we have seen, is filled, in its Dublin namesake, by a Lodge at Water Street, Philadelphia, meeting on the first Monday in the month.

The judicial office to which Daniel Coxe was appointed in 1734, together with his death in 1739, have already been recorded. During the period covered by these years, the "Earliest Grand Master in America" resided within twenty miles of Philadelphia. Neither the letters written by Franklin in 1734, however, nor his obituary notice of Coxe in the Pennsylvania Gazette, betray the slightest knowledge by the former of the latter being even a member of the Society. This silence with regard to the grant of a deputation to Coxe it is now impossible to explain. Yet if we put on one side the letters of 1734, and the newspaper entry of 1739, the remaining evidence affords good reason for supposing that Franklin was aware of Coxe's appointment in the former year, and still strong ground for believing that it could not have been absent from his knowledge in the latter.

The proceedings of the Grand Lodge of England were circulated far and wide—by the newspapers and in private letters, as well as by oral communication. But, passing over the earlier date, there is scarcely any room for doubt that in 1739 Franklin must have read—or, at the very least, have had his attention called to—the positive statement in the Constitutions of 1738, that Coxe was appointed a Provincial Grand Master during the administration of the Duke of Norfolk?

Why, then, it may be asked, if the grant of a patent to Coxe may be reasonably assumed to have come to the knowledge of Franklin, do we meet with no allusion to the fact in the newspaper of the latter? Towards the solution of this problem I shall merely offer a conjecture. If Daniel Coxe never exercised the authority conferred upon him by his deputation, or, in more homely language, withdrew from Masonry on his return to America, this would afford some ground for supposing that his brethren of the Craft entertained a very natural disinclination to claim as a member of the Society one who, so to speak, had plainly but unmistakably turned his back upon it. I may also add, with special reference to the obituary notice of 1739, that, as far as we can now discern, between the years 1737 and 1749, Masonry in Pennsylvania was under a cloud, and courted not the light.

We may, however, assume with some confidence—and on this point the Franklin letters of 1734 seem to me conclusive—that the brethren at Philadelphia would not have applied to Henry Price for a deputation or charter, confirming their privileges of holding a Grand Lodge annually and regulating their own affairs, if they had received at any previous date “an authority from home,” under the hand of Daniel Coxe.

Franklin was succeeded as Grand Master by James Hamilton, who in turn gave place to Thomas Hopkinson, the latter being, at the time of his election, the Admiralty Judge in the province, and the former subsequently becoming the first native Governor of Pennsylvania. Each year there was a new occupant of the chair, which in 1737 was filled by William Plumsted, a member of the Common Council, whose tenure of office was preceded by a lamentable event, that was fraught with much evil to the Society. On June 13, 1737, an apprentice to an apothecary at Philadelphia sustained such injuries from his master and two others, whilst receiving at their hands what he believed to be a Masonic degree, that death was the result.<sup>1</sup> This incident, as might be expected, was turned to the disadvantage of the Fraternity by the anti-Masons of that period; and the Weekly Mercury—a rival sheet to the Pennsylvania Gazette—falsely accused Franklin of conniving at the transaction. The parties concerned in this tragical occurrence were not Masons; and the Grand Officers, in a public notice (dated June 16), to which I have already in part alluded,<sup>2</sup> expressed, after reciting the facts of the outrage, “in Behalf of all the Members of St. John's Lodge, at Philad'a, the Abhorrence of all true Brethren to such Practices in general, and their Innocence of this Fact in particular." Nevertheless, the growth of Masonry in the province was arrested, and its progress retarded, by the catastrophe. Grand Officers were apparently chosen in 1739 and 1741; but after the latter year the font becomes dried up whence particulars of the annual elections have hitherto been derived, so we can only conclude, from the silence of Franklin's newspaper with regard to St. John's Lodge, that it vegetated in obscurity until 1749.

<sup>1</sup> June 16, 1737.—“We hear that on Monday night last, some people, pretending to be Free Masons, got together in a cellar with a young man, who was desirous of being made one, and in the ceremonies, 'tis said, they threw some burning spirits upon him, either accidentally or to terrify him, which burnt him so that he was obliged to take his bed, and died this morning” (Pennsylvania Gazette).

In the year last-named—July 10—Franklin was appointed Provincial Grand Master by Thomas Orndard, whose jurisdiction extended over the whole of North America—from which it seems to follow, as a logical deduction, that he eventually obtained in 1749 what he had vainly applied for in 1734.

At the first Grand Lodge held under this deputation—September 5, 1749—Franklin appointed his Grand Officers, and "at the same meeting a warrant was granted to James Pogreen and others to hold a Lodge in Philadelphia." So far Dr. Mease,<sup>1</sup> whose sketch of the "Society of Masons" is given in full in the official history of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania,<sup>2</sup> and the latter informs us (on a later page) that the charter in question was granted to "St. John's Lodge," of which, however, the first Master is stated to have been James Pogrew. The same name apparently, though again we meet with a slight variation of spelling, occurs in an original document showing the debts due for quarterage by members of the "First Lodge" in June, 1752. In this the name of "Jas. Polgreen" is given, his liabilities extending to December, 1751, beyond which the record does not go.<sup>3</sup>

The Lodge of 1749 seems therefore not to have been a new creation, but a revival of the body over which Allen presided in 1731, and if such was the case, Franklin himself, in both instances, Grand Lodge and Lodge, served as the conduit pipe through which his anxiously sought "authority from home" was derived.

Meetings of the Prov. Grand Lodge were regularly held until March 13, 1750, when William Allen, Recorder of Philadelphia, presented a patent signed by Lord Byron, G.M. of England, appointing him Provincial Grand Master, which was duly recognized, and he then nominated Benjamin Franklin as his Deputy.

The first Masonic Hall in America was erected at Philadelphia, in 1754, and in the following year—the same Grand and Deputy Grand Masters holding office as in 1750—we find that three subordinate Lodges were represented at the Feast of St. John the Baptist. In the official publication<sup>4</sup> upon which I am mainly relying at this part of the narrative, it is assumed that two of these were the First and Second "St John's" Lodges, or in other words, the unchartered and the chartered bodies of 1731 and 1749 respectively. But the evidence with which we are presented by no means justifies this conclusion, nor can we be quite certain that more than a single Lodge was in existence before 1754.<sup>5</sup>

In 1758 Pennsylvania was invaded by the "Ancients" or Schismatics, and from that time the Lodges under the older sanction declined, and gradually faded into obscurity. The last printed notice of any of them occurred in 1760, and in the same year—November

<sup>5</sup> All the subordinate Grand Officers appointed by Franklin on September 5, 1749, belonged to the First or St. John's Lodge, which body (it is said) in concert with the Grand Lodge erected the hall in 1754. But I strongly suspect that the subscribers were all members of the Lodge. The fact, moreover, that no other Lodges contributed to the expenses, affords a strong argument against the possibility of there being any such in existence at that time.

17—Franklin was present at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of England, in the minutes of which body he is described as "Prov. G.M. of Philadelphia," a title that may suggest the possibility of his having been elected to the office previously held by Allen?

Afterwards, during his diplomatic career, and while a resident in France, Franklin joined the Lodge of the Nine Muses, of which Lalande and other literary celebrities were also members.<sup>1</sup> He took a prominent part in the initiation of Voltaire, and on the death of that philosopher, acted as S.W. of the Lodge of Sorrow held to celebrate his memory.

The Lodge of the "Nine Muses" regarded Franklin with such veneration, that it struck a medal in his honor, and he was greeted with much cordiality by a Lodge at Rouen as late as 1785.

The last official act of the First Lodge in Philadelphia occurred in 1782, at which date it still existed, but in a state of suspended animation, and with but few members. About eleven years later all the Lodges in that city under the original Grand Lodge of England<sup>2</sup> ceased to exist. Their hall was sold, and a part of the proceeds, amounting to nearly $10,000, was handed over to the civic authorities to aid in forming a fund for supplying the poor inhabitants with fuel in the winter season.

At this point, and before proceeding with a memoir of Henry Price, and a review of the evidence which is closely associated with his name, it will be convenient if we pause to examine a little in detail some of the leading features of the early Masonry of Pennsylvania.

In the first place, the documentary evidence showing the existence of a Lodge reaches back to 1731, and as we then only commence with "Liber B.," the actual date at which the brethren who are named in it (or those they may have succeeded) associated together as a body, must remain a pure matter of conjecture. "Liber A.," if produced, might indeed bring us within measurable distance of this period, but on the other hand it is equally possible—not to say probable—that it would point to an uninterrupted succession of Philadelphian Masons meeting at St John's Lodge, to use a familiar expression, "from time immemorial," which, as we all know, signifies in Masonic phrase, an era more or less remote from the existence of actual records, but at all events going beyond, or as it were, behind them.

But without going back any farther than the year 1731, we shall do well to reflect that the sovereignty of Grand Lodges was then only on its trial. Such bodies had been formed, it is true, at London, York, and Dublin, though we should be careful to remember that the latter towns were as much under English government as Philadelphia. But in Scotland—the most ancient home of Masonic precedent—there were as yet no chartered Lodges, and assemblies of brethren, formed as in Philadelphia, were the only Masonic associations existing in that country. Brethren united to form Lodges in neighborhoods where there were fair chances of their continuance, and such assemblies, though without any other sanction, were not styled irregular when the Grand Lodge of Scotland was erected in 1736, the old Lodges, whether offshoots of "Mother Kilwinning," or other ancient courts of Operative Masonry, or simply the results of local combinations, uniting to form that organization which has happily continued to this day.

It is evident that brethren who had left the old World, and brought to their new homes a knowledge of the Craft, were as much within their rights in holding Lodges in Philadelphia, Portsmouth (New Hampshire), and elsewhere in America, as those who assembled

In like manner in England and Scotland; and just as in the latter countries the members of such Lodges were accepted as petitioners for written Constitutions without their legal status as Masons being demurred to, so we shall find that the Boston authorities raised no objection to the Masonic regularity of the Portsmouth brethren, but granted their request for a warrant in 1736. We have already seen that in 1734 the Prov. G.M. of New England was requested to confirm Dr. Franklin and others in their privileges in Pennsylvania—thus completing the parallel.

In those early days a piece of paper or parchment, containing a written or printed authority for certain brethren and their successors to meet as a Lodge, was not held in the superstitious reverence with which it afterwards became regarded.<sup>1</sup> The old customs were gradually being supplanted by the new, but the former evinced great tenacity of existence in some instances, especially in the British colonies, where they appear to have remained for the longest period of time unmodified. The modern doctrine with respect to the formation of Grand Lodges it is not my purpose to examine at any length. Every case should, I think, be judged on its own merits, and the hard and fast rule laid down that three Lodges must be represented on such an occasion<sup>2</sup> seems to me as inconvenient in practice as it certainly is deficient in authority. But even if the rule in question were now regarded as sound Masonic law throughout the universe, we could hardly, by any feat of ex post facto legislation, so strain its application as to embrace the proceedings of the brethren at Philadelphia in 1731. The Fraternity there must be held to have been as much and as legally a Grand Lodge as that of "All England at York." Their meetings, for all we know to the contrary, may have been held before the era of Grand Lodges, and they certainly were before the influence of the earliest of these bodies had made itself felt across the seas.<sup>3</sup>

Henry Price—as we learn from the epitaph upon his tombstone—was born about 1697, and came to New England about 1723. No trace of him can be found in Boston until 1732, when he is described in some legal proceedings as a tailor, from the nature of which, however, it has been conjectured that he must have been established in his business a year or two earlier. So far his fullest biographer, but other authorities who have worked their way through the same materials which he used for the compilation of his memoir, are of opinion that there is no evidence whatever to support the statement that Henry Price was known in Boston before 1733. The discrepancy is immaterial. If the name shown on the roll of the Lodge at the Rainbow, No. 75, was his, he must have been in London—judging from its position on the list—in 1732. That he was also there in the following year we may infer from his own written statements in 1755 and 1768, and it was then, as he tells us, that he received a deputation appointing him Provincial Grand Master of New England. The visit, therefore, was in all probability a continuous one. In the spring of 1733 he seems to have returned to Boston, and in the same year Governor Jonathan Belcher appointed him Cornet in his troop of Guards, with the rank of Major, and from that time—at least so it is averred—he was known as Major Price.

<sup>1</sup> Later in the century, both in England and America (and the practice was not unknown in France), the existence as well as the regularity of a Lodge was deemed to be bound up with its Charter. Thus the succession of members might come to an end, but after any interval, no matter of what duration, the issue of the old warrant to an entirely new set of brethren, was viewed as a re-instatement or revival of the original Lodge. The absurdity of this custom is self-evident, and its unfairness becomes apparent, when we reflect that under the G.L. of England the only Lodges that would necessarily become extinct on the death or dispersion of their members, were the memorable Four by whose act that body came into existence! Cf. Chap. XVII., p. 92.

In 1736 he entered into partnership with Francis Beteillo, who was a shopkeeper, while Price himself carried on the tailoring department. The latter branch of the business appears to have been given up about 1739, as after that date both partners are described as shopkeepers. Price became the sole partner in 1741, and as a merchant or shopkeeper carried on the business alone until 1750, when he retired.

About May 14, 1780, while using an axe in splitting rails, it glanced and struck him in the abdomen, inflicting a severe and fatal wound. His will was executed on the following day, and in the words of the authority upon which I am relying for the preliminaries of this sketch, "it especially shows what his religious character was; the possession of three pews in meeting-houses not of his faith and of his Church evince the strong sympathy he had for religious instruction, and the aid he afforded for its support."

Price lingered until May 20, when he died at his homestead in Townsend, aged eighty-three years. He left an estate of great value, but which was afterwards much reduced by lawsuits, insecurity of his titles to real estate, and by the general depression resulting from the war of the Revolution upon all property in the new States.

We have it on the authority of Price himself that he received one deputation from Viscount Montague in 1733, appointing him Provincial Grand Master of New England, and another from the Earl of Crawford in 1734, extending his powers over all North America. No record, however, has been preserved in the archives of the Grand Lodge of England of the issue of any such documents; neither does Price's name appear in the lists of Provincial Grand Masters given in the Constitutions of 1738, 1756, and 1767. It is shown, indeed, in the Engraved list for 1770 as Prov. G.M. of North America—an appointment then actually held by John Rowe, whose name never appears at all in the English Calendars, though that of Price, having once gained a footing, was continued annually until 1804—twenty-four years after his decease!

The tangled web of Masonic history in Massachusetts is not to be easily unravelled; but as every writer may hope to profit by the labors of those who have preceded him—to some extent, at least—I shall indulge in this consolatory reflection while engaged in the examination of a subject which has been so largely canvassed in the journals of the Craft.

According to the stream of Masonic writers, a Provincial Grand Lodge, and also a private Lodge, were established at Boston by Henry Price in 1733. It is important, however, to recognize, at the outset of our inquiry, the very precarious foundation of authority on which the early Masonic history of Massachusetts reposes. The actual records of the Provincial Grand Lodge—by which I mean a contemporaneous account of its proceedings

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS FROM 1872 TO 1875, AND ITS

—date from 1751. There are also "what appear to be transcripts of brief memoranda describing the important incidents in the history of that body between 1733 and 1750; or they may have been made up from the recollection of brethren who had been active among the Craft during these seventeen years."

From the documents of the latter class we learn that on July 30, 1733 (Old Style), Henry Price gathered round him ten brethren, and opened the provincial Grand Lodge. Eight persons were then made Masons, and the whole eighteen brethren joined in a petition, asking that they might be formed into a constituted and regular Lodge, which prayer was granted on the same day.

A copy is given of the deputation granted to Price by Lord Montague, but the original petition signed by the eighteen and addressed to the former has been preserved. Of the latter Charles Pelham made a transcript, which—after a close comparison—Mr. Jacob Norton says "contains many ideas that are not in the original;" and adds: "If he took liberties with one document, he may have done so with the others." This remark is incontrovertible, but even a sullied stream is a blessing compared to a total drought, and in the present case I do not think much benefit will arise from too minute a verbal criticism of the evidence. Even if the text of the missing deputation had been supplied by Pelham from conjecture, this would not invalidate the fact—if such it be—that Price was at one time the lawful owner of an English patent. Not, indeed, that there is reason for supposing any such thing. For my own part, I altogether fail to trace the clumsy hand of the forger in the alleged transcript; and unless we bid Henry Price stand aside as a witness wholly unworthy of credit, the text of the deputation actually granted in 1733 comes down to us duly attested by the original holder. This document bears date April 30, 1733, and the text, like that of the Coxe deputation, of which it is almost a counterpart, is without any allusion to fees; but there is no proviso for the election of a successor, and the Prov. G.M. was empowered to constitute Lodges without the concurrence of his Deputy and Grand Wardens.

Price's memory has suffered more at the hands of panegyrists than calumniators; but I shall endeavor to steer equally clear of the "special pleading" of the one, or the "historical pyrrhonism" of the other.

The "First Lodge in Boston," or "Holy Lodge of St John," was really constituted August 31, 1733. This is placed beyond dispute by two letters of 1736, in which brethren are recommended (by that body) to the favorable notice of the Grand Lodge of England and of Lodge Glasgow Kilwinning respectively. These are severally dated June 23 and September 1. Both documents are signed by Price (as G.M.) and his Deputy, and the later one by the Master (Robert Tomlinson) and officers of the Lodge. Each letter recites that the Lodge was constituted August 31, 1733, by Henry Price, Provincial Grand Master.* Copies of both are among the Boston records; but the letter of September 1, 1736,

Mr. Sereno D. Nickerson, G.S., in Proc. G.L. Mass., 1883, p. 157. Mr. Jacob Norton states: "In 1751, Charles Pelham was appointed G.S.; but instead of beginning his record with June, 1751, he thought best to manufacture first a record from 1733. That part of the record is therefore unreliable; but yet certain facts therein are corroborated by original MSS. of that period, and some statements we may take for granted. The Lodge record, as well as that of the Master Masons' Lodge, were also the handiwork of Bro. Pelham" (Freemason's Chronicle, Nov. 10, 1877).

has also been transcribed into the minutes of Lodge Glasgow Kilwinning of November 2 in the same year, from which a certified extract has been published by Lyon.<sup>1</sup>

In 1734, as we have already seen, a rumor was afloat that Price's deputation and power had been extended over all America. From Franklin's letter of November 28 in that year, we may, I think, infer that the belief in Price's earlier patent was at least a prevalent one; while the subsequent action of the G.M. of Pennsylvania goes far to prove that the alleged later commission empowering Price to dispense grace beyond the limits of New England had no real existence.

Among the documentary evidence, however, of the inferior class still preserved at Boston, there is a singular memorandum which merits our attention:—

"June 24, 1734.—About this time our Worsh<sup>l</sup> Bro<sup>r</sup>. M<sup>r</sup>. Benj<sup>n</sup>. Franklin from Philadelphia, became acquainted with Our R<sup>t</sup>. Worsh<sup>l</sup>. Grand Master, M<sup>r</sup>. Price, who further Instructed him in the Royal Art, and said Franklin on his Return to Philadelphia call'd the Brethren there together, who petition'd Our R<sup>t</sup>. Worsh<sup>l</sup>. Grand Master for a Constitution to hold a Lodge, and Our R<sup>t</sup>. Worsh<sup>l</sup>. Grand Master having this Year Rec<sup>d</sup>. Orders from the Grand Lodge in England to Establish Masonry in all North America, did send a Deputation to Philadelphia, appointing the R<sup>t</sup>. Worsh<sup>l</sup>. M<sup>r</sup>. Benj<sup>n</sup>. Franklin first Master; which is the beginning of Masonry there."

This was first printed, I believe, in 1792,<sup>2</sup> and I am not aware that its accuracy was ever called in question until 1869.<sup>3</sup> There are persons still living who took part in a solemn centennial celebration by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in 1834.<sup>4</sup> At the present date, however, it is only of service in assisting us to gauge with greater precision the historical value of the collection, of which it forms a part. There is a substratum of truth in the memorandum. Undoubtedly Franklin asked Price for a warrant, which, it is almost as equally demonstrable, was never granted,—or, to vary the expression, never accepted. In legal phraseology, there was no attournment (or acknowledgment of Price's authority over him) by Franklin. But this was, nevertheless, confidently assumed to have taken place by Pelham, or the Boston archivist for the time being. The facts, it is true, do not altogether square with the hypothesis. Franklin's visit to Boston occurred in 1733, and his letters to Price were written towards the close of 1734. Still, it is not necessary to impeach the good faith of the annalist. The Lodge at Philadelphia applied, without doubt—through Franklin—to Henry Price for a Charter, and if any excuse is needed for the conclusion which was arrived at in 1751, or earlier, by the Provincial Grand Officers, we find it in a recent review of the evidence, by the Grand Master for the time being of Massachusetts, where it is stoutly maintained "that Franklin received what he asked for."<sup>5</sup>

The date, however, of the application from Philadelphia seems to have been passed over very lightly. It is, at all events, free from doubt, that Franklin and the others could not have received before November 28, 1734, what they only solicited on that date. Then there is the rebutting evidence of the year 1749, which, in the opinion of most people, will

BROTHER BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Notwithstanding the prominence of Franklin in Pennsylvania Freemasonry; strange as it appears, he does not mention a word of his Masonic connections or career in his Autobiography, or in any of his correspondence, with but two exceptions, so far as known. This omission is the more remarkable when we look at his Masonic career while in France during the later years of his life. There, his activity and intimacy with the Brethren was intimate and close, both personal and official, Franklin taking an active part in their proceedings, even advancing to the so-called higher degrees. Franklin carefully retained all of his French Lodge notices and correspondence, while of his American and English career not a scrap can be found. The exact date of Franklin's initiation is not known, but it was before the legal year of 1730 expired, evidently in February 1730-31. Shortly after he was brought to true Masonic light.

The Masonic career of Benjamin Franklin extends over a period of almost sixty years, during which time he was accorded the highest Masonic honors at home and abroad. He was born at Boston, January 17, 1706, and was initiated in St. John's Lodge, Philadelphia, 1730-1, June 24th, 1732, he was elected Junior Grand Warden, and June 24th, 1734, was elected Grand Master of Pennsylvania. In August, 1834, he published his reprint of Anderson's "Constitutions of the Freemasons," the first Masonic Book printed in America. The State House (Independence Hall) was built 1734-5, during Franklin's administration as Grand Master. According to the old Masonic traditions, the corner stone was laid by him and the Brethren of St. John's Lodge. He served as Secretary of St. John's Lodge during 1735-8.

April 13th, 1738, Franklin, in a letter to his mother, wrote: "Freemasons have no principles or practices that are inconsistent with religion and good manners." June 10th, 1749, he was appointed Provincial Grand Master by Thomas O'neal, of Boston. March 12th, 1752, he was appointed on the committee for building "the Freemason's Lodge," in Philadelphia, and on June 24th, 1755, he took a prominent part in its Grand Anniversary and Dedication, it was the first Masonic building erected in America.

Towards the close of 1776, he was sent as Ambassador to the Court of France, and while there, affiliated with the Masonic Lodges, and in 1777, was elected a member of Lodge des IX Soeurs (Nine Sisters or Muses), in which Lodge, on February 7th, 1778, he assisted at the initiation of Voltaire, and on November 28th, officiated at the "Lodge of Sorrow" or Masonic funeral services of Voltaire. In 1782, he was elected Venerable (W. M.) of Loge des IX Soeurs, Grand Orient de Paris, and on July 7th a member R. L. De Saint Jean de Jerusalem. April 24th, 1785, he was elected Venerable d'Honneur of R. L. De Saint Jean de Jerusalem, and an honorary member of Loge des Bone Amis (Good Friends), Rouen, France. He remained in France until September, 1785, when he returned home, during which time he negotiated and signed the Treaty of Peace with England, as well as effecting Treaties with France and Prussia. On December 27th, 1786, in the dedication of a sermon delivered at the request of the "R. W. Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania," by Rev. Joseph Pilmore in St. Paul's Church, Philadelphia, Franklin is referred to as "an illustrious Brother whose distinguished merit among Masons entitles him to their highest veneration." April 17th, 1790, Benjamin Franklin passed to the Grand Lodge above, aged 85.

be decisive of the whole point at issue, and justify the inference that the entire proofs were not forthcoming with which Franklin very properly asked to be supplied.'

The "first Lodge in Boston"—constituted by Price August 31, 1733—obtained a place on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England in 1734. The Engraved (or official) Lists for 1731-33 are missing, which is to be regretted, as a curious problem presents itself in connection with an unofficial<sup>1</sup> list of Lodges really dating from 1734, from which the Lodge at Boston is excluded, while, to make up for the omission, one at Philadelphia finds a place.

In 1731, as we have already seen,<sup>2</sup> the sign of the house, where the seventy-ninth Lodge on the general list met, was the Castle at Highgate. The place or number occupied by the Lodge in question was vacant in 1733<sup>3</sup> and 1734,<sup>4</sup> but in 1735 we find it again filled, and on this occasion the sign of the house is the Crown and Angel, Little St Martin's Lane,<sup>5</sup> which is also given in the official list for 1736.

In the Engraved List for 1734 there are 128 numbers in all (the 79th being vacant), and the last three are thus shown:—

126, Boston, in New England [no date]; 127, Valenciennes, in French Flanders [no date]; and 128, Duke of Marlborough, Petticoate Lane, White Chapell, November 5, 1734.

In a list of the following year, evidently taken by Picart from an official one published after February 24, and before June 24, 1735, there are no vacant numbers (the 79th being again filled). Nos. 126-128 are occupied in the same way as narrated in the last paragraph, and it contains an additional Lodge—No. 129—at the Mason's Arms, Plymouth, constituted January 26, 1735.

Next comes the evidence of the Pocket Companion for Freemasons, of which editions bearing the imprint "MDCCLXXV.," were published both in London<sup>6</sup> and Dublin.<sup>7</sup>

The earlier of the two was, without doubt, the English publication; and in this we find a roll of Lodges, of which there are 126 in all, agreeing exactly (including the vacancy at the 79th place) with that given in the official list for 1734, down to the No. 125, but at the following and last number—126—we meet with the Duke of Marlborough's Head, which, in the Engraved Series, appears at the No. 128. Thus, the Lodges at Boston and Valenciennes are omitted from the Pocket Companion, which must have been printed after November 5, 1734, the date of constitution of the Lodge at the Duke of Marlborough's Head, and apparently before the admission on the roll of the two foreign Lodges above named.

In the Pocket Companion, Dublin, the 79th place—which in the English or earlier edition is vacant—is filled by the Lodge at the Hoop, Water Street, Philadelphia. In other respects the Lodges on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England are given in the same order, and described in the same words, as in the Pocket Companion, London.

The appearance, of a Philadelphian Lodge in the Irish edition is consistent with the theory that the notice of Franklin's election in 1734, must have been seen and read in Dublin, where, it seems at least a reasonable conjecture, in the interval between the two publications, intelligence may also have been received from London of the constitution of an American Lodge? Here we have, what I shall venture to term, a natural explanation of the mystery. It is quite clear that the existence of the "First Lodge at Boston," as a unit on the Grand Lodge roll, must have become commonly known almost immediately after the appearance of the Pocket Companion, Dublin. Therefore we have only to hazard the supposition, that shortly before the publication of the work in question, the bare fact of a new Lodge in British North America having been taken on the general list, had in some way obtained currency—and that this addition to the roll was assumed in Dublin to be identical with the Lodge at Philadelphia?

A theory, however, has been advanced that the first Lodge borne at the No. 79 on the English roll was the one at the Hoop (or other tavern) in Water Street, Philadelphia, in which case it must have been placed on the general list in 1730 or 1731. In support of this view it is argued that the date on which the Lodge at the Castle, Highgate, paid its fee for constitution—November 21, 1732—was unusually late for a Lodge formed in 1731, and fairly warrants the inference that an earlier Lodge must have previously occupied the same number. The position of the Lodge at Philadelphia, on the Dublin list, it is then contended, among other Lodges of 1730 or 1731, altogether squares with this hypothesis.

Yet although the Engraved Lists for 1731-33 are missing, we learn from the official Calendar for 1736 and the Constitutions of 1738, that Nos. 77 and 81 were constituted on January 11 and November 1, 1731, respectively. The three intermediate Lodges were erected in the same year, but the months are not given. We can therefore only assume that, as the centre of the group, the position of No. 79 on the list indicates that it was warranted about June, 1731. At all events we may conclude that the number was allotted after March 25, as Anderson has not in this instance added the date of the historical to that of the legal year, which he appears to have invariably done when describing any day between January 1 and March 25.

This will harmonize perfectly with the list of Lodges as shown in the Grand Lodge Register for 1731-32. Next, the payment by No. 79 of the fee for its constitution on November 21, 1732, proves that it had a continuous existence down to nearly the close of that year. Nor would such a payment import a proximate dissolution. All we know with certainty is, that according to a list drawn up by Dr. Rawlinson, apparently between March and July, 1733, the Lodge at the Castle, Highgate, was extinct, and No. 79 a vacant one—remaining so until after November 5, 1734, the date borne by the last Lodge on the Engraved List for that year.

St John's Lodge, Philadelphia, of which Franklin was "Grand Master" in 1734, assembled on the first Monday in the month, which was also the day of meeting of the Lodge at the "Hoop" in the same city, as described by the Pocket Companion.

There was a "Sun" as well as a "Tun" tavern in Water Street, Philadelphia. According to Franklin's Gazette the "Grand Lodge" in 1732 met at the former, and in the two following years at the latter. All three designations, Sun, Tun, or Hoop, are believed by MacOalla to apply to one public-house at different dates not far apart.

I shall now pass from the consideration of No. 79 to that of No. 126 on the same list.

It is a well-established fact that more than one edition of the Engraved Series was often published in the same year. This may serve to explain why the Lodges at Boston and Valenciennes are not shown in the Pocket Companion, London,<sup>1</sup> but which includes nevertheless a London Lodge—No. 126, at the sign of the Duke of Marlborough—subsequently placed below them on the list. The first Lodge at this number, then, was constituted November 5, 1734, and the date is of importance as assisting us to determine about what period the First Lodge at Boston obtained a footing on our roll. This apparently occurred in November or December, 1734, or to speak roundly, about fifteen months after its original constitution. The delay in registration is a material point, since it forms one of the aggregate of minor circumstances upon which I think we shall do well to base our final judgment of Henry Price. It has been nowhere doubted that the Lodge was regularly established, but it has been urged that the deputation granted to Price was simply an authority to open a Lodge, or in other words, a warrant of constitution—not a patent as Provincial Grand Master. Had this been so, the Lodge at Boston would have appeared on the roll in 1733, at (about) the No. 113, as the roll was arranged according to “seniority of constitution,” an expression the meaning of which has now become obsolete, but in use at that time to indicate that the precedence of Lodges was to be regulated by the priority of the written instruments severally possessed by them. In plainer words, the “constitution” of a Lodge <sup>was</sup> its warrant or authority to assemble, and the columns headed “constituted” in the Engraved Lists merely gave the dates when the various Lodges were chartered by the Gr. Master or his Deputy. Thus, the days of meeting of the Boston Lodge, with the year and month of its formation, would have been duly entered in the register of Grand Lodge, and thence transferred in the ordinary course to the published list, had the deputation granted to Price been of the limited character which has been suggested. But the Lodge did not even secure a footing on the general list until some fifteen months after its establishment, while the days of meeting—“2d and 4th Sat.”—appear for the first time in the Engraved List for 1738, and the year of constitution, though without the month, through the same channel of publication in 1740. Yet, there is no room for doubt that the Lodge was regarded as having been properly constituted by some competent authority, which in the case before us could only have emanated from Price. In other words, the admission of the First Lodge of Boston on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England, involved as a necessary corollary a recognition of the Provincial commission under which it was called into being.

Great stress has been laid on the absence of Price's name from the lists of Provincial Grand Masters published in the successive editions of the Constitutions. But with regard to this purely negative evidence there are some considerations which have not as yet received their due weight. The preservation or destruction of historical materials is as providential as the guidance of events.<sup>2</sup> Of this aphorism the existing records of the Grand Lodge of England afford a good illustration. The first minute-book of that body relates the proceedings of the Grand Lodge from June 24, 1723, to March 17, 1731. In the same volume are contained several lists of Lodges, with the names of their members, and copies of various deputations granted to brethren in foreign parts—and among them the exact text of the patent issued to Daniel Coxe.

The second minute-book begins with the proceedings of March 27, 1731, and ends with those of April 26, 1771. Volume II., however, was not used like its predecessor, as a receptacle for documentary waifs and strays, which, by transcription into the actual minute-book of Grand Lodge, were happily preserved from destruction. From the date, therefore, at which the earliest minute-book ends, many occurrences not actually forming a part of the proceedings in Grand Lodge, must have been recorded on loose papers or in books that have now perished. Dr. Anderson, in preparing the second edition of his Constitutions, had the minutes of Grand Lodge to refer to; but with regard to what other records were placed at his disposal, it is now, of course, impossible to speak with precision. Still, judging by results, there is very little in the Constitutions of 1738 which betrays a deeper fount of information than the recorded proceedings of the Grand Lodge.

The deputation granted to Daniel Coxe necessarily came under observation, but not so the later patent to Henry Price, the date of which precluded its being entered in the first volume of minutes, and, as already related, documents of that class found no place in the second. William Read, moreover, who had been Grand Secretary from December 27, 1727, was succeeded—March 30, 1734—by John Revis; and it was not until February 24, 1735, that Anderson sought the permission of Grand Lodge to bring out a new edition of his Constitutions. Above all, we must not forget that the latest contribution to the literature of the Craft by the "Father of Masonic History" has come down to us without any great weight of authority.<sup>1</sup> Bearing all this in mind, we need attach less importance to the omission of Price's name in the successive editions of the Constitutions. The case of his successor, Robert Tomlinson, whose appointment is duly recorded, stands on quite another footing. It is but natural to suppose that Anderson obtained from John Revis a list of Provincial Grand Masters in foreign parts appointed during his own tenure of office. For the same reason, I am inclined to regard the claim advanced by Price to have had his authority extended over all America by Lord Crawford, in 1734, as an hallucination arising out of circumstances which are only dimly shadowed in Franklin's letter of that year.<sup>2</sup> The files of Boston newspapers for 1734 are incomplete, and the "article of news from London" referred to by the "Grand Master" of Pennsylvania cannot be found. A search by me in the library of the British Museum has been equally fruitless. But the accuracy of Franklin was such<sup>3</sup> as to leave no room for doubt that a statement, importing the extension of Price's "deputation and power over all North America," duly appeared in some Boston print.

On February 5, 1736, a petition (the original of which has been preserved) was addressed by six brethren at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to Henry Price, whom they style "Grand Master of the Society of Free and Accepted Masons held in Boston." The petitioners described themselves as "of the holy and exquisite Lodge of St John," and asked for power to hold a Lodge "According to order as is and has been granted to faithfull Brothers in all parts of the World," and they declared that they had their "Constitntions both in print and manuscript as good and as ancient as any that England can afford." The favor, was asked because they had heard "there is a Superiour Lodge held in Boston." Be it noted, this was early in 1736, when no Lodge had been warranted at Portsmouth; and as the brethren stated they possessed "Constitntions" in manuscript—which it is hardly possible could have been anything else than a copy of the "Old Charges"—as well as in <sup>3</sup> "Through the press, no one was so active as Benjamin Franklin. His newspaper defended freedom of speech and of the press, for he held that falsehood alone dreads attack and cries out for auxiliaries, while truth scorns the aid of the secular arm, and triumphs by her innate strength." print, the evidence is consistent with the supposition that while at the date named the Lodge must have been some years in existence, its origin may have reached back even to the seventeenth century.

I am anxious not to lay too much stress on the precise meaning attached by me to the mention of manuscript Constitutions; nevertheless I think the petition may be taken as fair evidence that in 1736 there were brethren in New Hampshire (meeting as Masons in a Lodge) who possessed a copy (or reprint) of the English Constitutions published in 1723, as well as a version of an older set of laws in MS., thus pointing to the possible existence of the Lodge at even an earlier period than the Grand Lodge era of 1716-17.

In the same year (1736) Price is alluded to in the two letters of recommendation from the First Lodge of Boston, which have been previously referred to, as "Provincial Grand Master." The later of these is dated September 1, 1736, and three months afterwards—December 7—the charge of the province of New England was committed by patent to Robert Tomlinson. Whether Price resigned or was superseded, there is no evidence to show; but it is not unreasonable to suppose that, with the influx of many new members of higher social standing, there may have arisen a feeling that his occupation in life was incompatible with the appointment. Therefore, choice was made of Tomlinson, "a gentleman of means and distinction." The deputation to Price's successor recites that it was granted in response to the prayer of a petition that a new Prov. G.M. for New England might be nominated. To the word "new" great importance has been attached by some commentators, but I think without reason, as the more we rely upon the early Boston records as independent authorities, the greater becomes the necessity of critically appraising the weight and thereby the value of their testimony.

The deputation requires the sum of two guineas, in respect of every new Lodge constituted by the Prov. G.M., "to be paid into the Stock of General Charity." This fee, it may be remarked, gradually increased in amount, becoming, as we learn from subsequent patents, two guineas and a-half, in Oxnard's time, and three guineas under later administrations.

In 1738, Tomlinson went to England, via Antigua, "where," says the Rev. T. M. Harris, "finding some old Boston Masons, he went to work and made the Governor, and sundry other gentlemen of distinction, Masons, whereby from our Lodge sprung Masonry in the West Indies." Soon after his arrival in London, he was present at a meeting of the Grand Lodge—which was also attended by John Hammerton, Prov. G.M. of Carolina—January 31, 1739.

His death in 1740 left the province without a head, and an interregnum of some duration ensued, during which—so the Boston records tell us—Price presided and acted as Provincial Grand Master.

The vacancy was filled up, September 23, 1743, by the appointment of Thomas Oxnard, a merchant of character and influence. The deputation contains a recital, that "a Provincial Grand Master for North America, in the room of Robert Tomlinson," had been asked for, so it is highly probable, that the enlarged patent conferred on Oxnard—wherein the jurisdiction craved is duly granted to him—simply originated in a mistake, either on the part of the Grand Secretary, or on that of Governor Belcher, at whose instance the appointment is said to have been made. Nor can the error, if such it were, be styled an uncommon one, for the same comprehensive title was bestowed on Daniel Coxe, when the Deputy Grand Master proposed his health in 1731.<sup>1</sup>

The "Second Lodge in Boston" was constituted in the usual manner, on February 15, 1730. In the previous year, as we have already seen, Franklin received a Provincial Commission from Oxnard, and it will be convenient, therefore, if at this point the narrative is interrupted, while we pause to consider some of the more striking features in the system of Masonry which for nearly twenty years had existed side by side in the two Colonies of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

At each capital, Boston and Philadelphia, there was a Society of Masons, meeting sometimes as a Grand, and at other times as a Private Lodge. That the same characteristics were common to the two brotherhoods, we may fairly assume, which is so far an advantage, inasmuch as while our stock of information is but small regarding the one, we know absolutely nothing of the inner life of the other. To the extent possible, an outline has been already given of the early Masonry of Pennsylvania, and I shall now proceed to supplement that sketch, by some remarks of a kindred character.

Whether Henry Price was the first Master of the Lodge founded by him in 1733, is a matter of uncertainty, but he appears to have filled that position at the establishment of the Lodge of Masters, and Second Lodge of Boston, in 1738 and 1750 respectively. In the First Lodge only two degrees were conferred, the third not being given in it until 1794.

A separate set of minutes was kept of the Master Masons' Lodge, or, in other words, of the "Lodge of Masters." Independent records of the Third Degree were frequently kept in this country also. Mr. Norton estimates that between 1733 and January 2, 1739, the number of Masons identified with the "First Lodge in Boston" was 103, 15 of whom, he thinks, founded the Master Masons' Lodge, and 6 only were subsequently raised therein. From the latter period to September, 1751, 238 joined the Lodge, of whom 84 became Master Masons, so that many appear to have been content with the First and Second Degrees, just as we find was formerly the case in Scotland—where the practice was a very general one until late in the last century—and is still so in Germany. Thomas Oxnard (afterwards Pro. G.M.), who was Master of the Lodge in 1736, and again in 1737, was not raised to the degree of Master Mason until 1739.

The "Lodge" and the "Grand Lodge," at Boston, appear to have been regarded—at least during the first decade of their existence—as one and the same body, both at home and abroad. The letter of September 1, 1736, despatched in the lesser capacity to Lodge Glasgow Kilwinning, is signed by Price as G.M., while a communication dated June 27, 1739, "from the Grand Lodge at the Court-house in St John's," Antigua,—written by command of Governor Mathew, the Prov. G.M.,—was addressed, not to the G.L. of New England, but to the First Lodge of Boston. The latter body was styled the Mother Lodge of New England, and of America, by a committee of its members in 1741, the two titles being used in a correspondence with Governor Belcher and his successor Governor Shirley. Jonathan Belcher was Governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire from 1730 to 1741, and it was in the latter year, when thanked for his protection by the First Lodge of Boston, that he placed on record his long connection with the Society, to which I have adverted on an earlier page.<sup>2</sup> Governor Shirley was not a Mason, nor did he avail of the sufficiently broad hint that he should become one, thrown out by the "MOTHER LODGE OF AMERICA,"<sup>3</sup> through their committee in 1741—"As it has been the Custom for men in the most exalted Station to have the Door of our Society's Constitution always opened to them (when desired), we think it our Duty to acquaint your Excellency with that Custom, and assure you, that we shall cheerfully attend your Excellency's Pleasure therein."

It is probable that at Boston, as well as in Philadelphia, the brethren assembled as a Lodge at all meetings except (on St John's Days, and) when officers were elected (or appointed). This was evidently the practice in the latter city, where, indeed, the possibility may be conceived of the expression "Grand Lodge" bearing in the first instance only the restricted signification of the adjective, without the meaning which is now conventionally ascribed to it in conjunction with the noun. Besides, we must not lose sight of the fact, that for half a century and more after the occurrences I am relating, there was nothing at all unusual in the assumption by a private Lodge of a prefix now only met with in connection with a governing body. So late as 1786, the Grand Lodge of Scotland found it necessary to ordain, that no Master should be addressed by the style or title of Grand, except the Grand Master Mason of that country.<sup>1</sup> The expression, "Mother Lodge of America," used in 1741 by a committee of the first Lodge in Boston, forcibly reminds us of the maternal title assumed under closely analogous circumstances by the Lodge of Kilwinning, the "Three Globes" at Berlin, and other European Lodges. The members of the Prov. Grand Lodge of New England, so long as there was only one Lodge in the province, must have belonged to it, but they formed after all but a single brotherhood, though meeting at times in different capacities.

Oxnard went to England in the summer of 1751, and on October 7 of the same year a "Humble Remonstrance," signed by the Masters and Wardens of the First, Second, Third, and Masters' Lodges of Boston, was addressed to the G.M. of England, in which it was requested that a "Full and Plenary Commission to act as Grand Master in and over all the Lodges in North America" might be granted to him and his successors. On January 20, 1752, the D.G.M. (M<sup>c</sup>Daniel) convened a meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge, to decide who should take the chair under Old Regulation XXI. It was moved that the right belonged to Henry Price, but on a vote being taken whether two of the Brethren should be sent to desire him "to come and resume his office, it passed in the negative." Whether the movement, or the opposition thereto, grew out of any ill feeling, or whether Oxnard's appointment had any connection with it, cannot now be determined. Price did not resent the vote, for he was present at the next meeting, and at the Festival, at each of which M<sup>c</sup>Daniel presided.

On June 26, 1754, Oxnard died after a lingering illness, his funeral, attended by the Prov. Grand Lodge, taking place on the 29th; and on the 12th of the following month two brethren were appointed by the Deputy Grand Master to wait upon Price and request him to resume his office as G.M.,—which he did on the same day.

On October 11, 1754, a Committee was elected to obtain the appointment of "Jeremy Gridley, Esq.", Counsellor at Law." The petition to the G.M. of England, signed by M<sup>c</sup>Daniel (D.G.M. under Oxnard) and six others, recites that on the decease of Oxnard, Henry Price, "formerly G. Master, reassumed the chair pro tempore," and expresses the desire of the members that "all future Grand Masters should be deputed for three years only," this being clogged, however, with a proviso for the continuance in office of the Prov. G.M. at the will of the P.G.L. Mention is also made in the petition of the origin of

Masonry "here" (i.e., Boston) in 1733, "and in the year following" (it continues), "our then G.M., Price, received orders from G.M. Crawford to establish masonry in all North America, in pursuance of which the several Lodges hereafter mentioned have rec<sup>d</sup> Constitutions from us." They likewise craved "due precedence, and that in order thereunto our G.M. elect may in his deputation be styled G.M. of all North America."

Price wrote—August 6, 1755—in support of the petition, describing his services as Prov. G.M., and how he was succeeded by Tomlinson, and the latter by Oxnard, when the chair reverted to him again, "according to the Constitutions." He declared, that with his consent, all the Brethren in North America had made Choice of their Bro<sup>r</sup>., Jeremy Gridley; after which he mentions the payment of the fee of three guineas, per Capt. Phillips, to the Rev. John Entick, and expresses surprise at receiving no acknowledgment.

Price, with pardonable pride, records the great success of Masonry in America since his settling there. "No less than forty Lodges," he says, have "sprung from my first Lodge in Boston." "Therefore," he proceeds, "we desire that our deputation may be made out for, or over, all North America."

At this point it may be convenient if the narrative is interrupted by a list of the Lodges warranted at any time by Price or his successors, so far at least as their names have been preserved in documents now extant. The following table has been compiled from the "Boston Records," and an asterisk denotes in each case that the Lodge is mentioned for the first time among those represented or otherwise at a meeting of the Grand Lodge. Thus, the Lodge in Virginia, which appears under the year 1766, was probably that in which Washington received the light of Masonry at Fredericksburg in 1752; and it is scarcely possible that such a cluster of Lodges could have been formed in a single year (1766) without some allusion to their charters or fees of Constitution appearing in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge. There was certainly one other Lodge—American Union—which received a warrant from the same source of authority, but, as explained above, the list has been made up from actual entries in the official records of the G.L. of Massachusetts.

Gridley's deputation, dated April 4, 1755, was granted prior to the receipt of Price's letter. It conferred authority over "all Such Provinces and Places in North America and the Territories thereof, of which no Provincial Grand Master is at present appointed." The commission winds up with an exhortation to the holder to remit the sum of three guineas to the Grand Treasurer, in London, for every Lodge he should constitute.

It will be observed that the deputation of 1755 to Gridley was a qualified one, in respect to his appointment for "all America." Not so, however, the one sent to Oxnard of 1743, which simply specifies his title to be "Provincial Grand Master of North America." I assume, nevertheless, that in reality Oxnard possessed no further powers than were bestowed on Gridley, viz., to act as Prov. G. M. in North America, in districts or territories for which no Prov. G. M. had been appointed; for we may rest assured that neither of these two representatives of the Grand Lodge of England in the Western Hemisphere, had any authority over the Prov. G. M.'s of Pennsylvania, New York, and South Carolina, who had been appointed from home during their respective tenures of office.*

Attorney-General Gridley—an initiate of the St. John's Lodge, May 11, 1748—was installed as Prov. G. M. by Henry Price on October 1, 1755, with great pomp and ceremony, the two brethren, "clothed with their jewels and badges, walking together" in the procession to Trinity Church, after the Masonic meeting held in the Concert Hall in Boston.

Jeremy Gridley, who at the time of his decease was Attorney-General, a member of the General Court, and a Justice of the Province, Colonel of the First Regiment of Militia, and President of the Marine Society, died September 10, 1767. The Provincial Grand Lodge in the following month requested Price to reassume his old office, and on October 23 he was invested with the Jewel of Grand Master by John Rowe, D. G. M., who addressed him in the following words:—"You, (to the Satisfaction of all the Lodges") have had the Honour of first introducing Masonry into these Parts of the World, and intentionally, for the good of Masonry, have resign'd the Chair of Grand Master to three Successors, whom Providence has deprived us off."

neas and a half actual money, must have been made on behalf of the Lodge chartered at the meeting presided over by Franklin in 1749.

* Ante, p. 219.

* Of this there is distinct evidence in the case of Gridley, who, in 1762, only consented to warrant a Lodge at Elizabeth-town, New Jersey, on receiving information that Daniel Coxe had died before the grant of his own deputation. Cf. ante, p. 233.

* The words within parentheses may either be a merely complimentary phrase, or they may import that Price had made good a disputed title to the "Honour" upon which he was congratulated?

The Feast of St John the Evangelist was observed December 30, 1767, Henry Price presiding. The same day, as Grand Master, he executed a commission to Thomas Cooper as D.G.M. of North Carolina, "by virtue of the power and authority committed to [him] by Lord Viscount Montague, Grand Master of Masons."

At an adjourned Grand Lodge held January 22, 1768, on the nomination of the Grand Master (pro tem.), John Rowe (D.G.M., and Treasurer) was elected to the office of "Grand Master of Masons for North America," 12 out of 16 votes being recorded in his favor, whereupon he was saluted as G.M. elect.

A committee of nine was appointed to write to England for the patent, and, having settled the text of the communication on January 25, 1768, signed the petition accordingly. The appointment was solicited for three years only, but with certain reservations, which, as in the former instance, would have rendered nugatory the provision for a restricted term of office.

The petition winds up with the following clause:—

"Whereas Masonry in America originated in this Place Anno 5733, and in the year following, our then Grand Master Price received Orders from Grand Master Craufurd to establish Masonry in all North America, in Pursuance of which the several Lodges hereafter mentioned have received Constitutions from us. We therefore crave due Precedency, and that in Order thereunto, Our Grand Master Elect may, in his Deputation, be styled Grand Master of all North America."

Then follow the signatures of the petitioners (or Committee), and after these, there is a postscript or memorandum which reads:—

"2d Lodge, or No. 2 in Boston, Constituted Febrary 15, 1749 [O.S.], meets the 3d Wednesday in every month at the British Coffee House, in King Street."

"New Haven Lodge, in Connecticut, Constituted in November, 1750, kept at the Golden Lion in that Town."

"Providence Lodge, in Rhode Island Government, Constituted January 18, 1757, meets the first and third Wednesday of every month."

"Marblehead Lodge, in this Government, Constituted March 25, 1760."

A letter dated January 27, 1768, was forwarded at the same time by Price, addressed to the G.M., Grand Officers, and Brethren, "in Grand Lodge assembled," stating that "the money now sent to you is for the Constitution of four Lodges in America, which I pray may be Registered in the Grand Lodge Books; the money would have been paid long before, but some unforeseen accidents prevented." It will be seen that no explanation is really given with regard to the delay in remitting to England fees which, on the writer's own showing, had been in arrear from 1750. Virtually, indeed, it was the first "return" made by the Prov. Grand Lodge since 1733; but Price expresses a hope that "the said Lodges will not be denied their Rank, according to the Time of their Constitution, notwithstanding the above Omission;" and for particulars the Grand Master is referred to "the Letter from the Grand Committee of the Grand Lodge here, which goes by the same hand that presents this to you."

<sup>1</sup> Hugh McDaniel, chairman of the Committee, was made a Mason in the First Lodge, January 30, 1735, less than eighteen months after the organization of the Grand Lodge by Price. In June, 1736, he was elected Senior Warden of the First Lodge, which constituted him a member of the Grand Lodge, and continued to represent that Lodge as Warden or Master until 1744, when he was appointed Deputy Grand Master. Thus (it is contended), he must have been thoroughly informed of the early history of Masonry in New England and of the Provincial Grand Lodge.

Price then goes on to say that "several other Lodges have been Constituted by the Grand Lodge here in different parts of America, who have not yet Transmitted to us the Stated Fees for their Constitution." Payment, however, was promised on the amounts being received, so that such Lodges might "likewise be Registered." He next recites the oft-told tale of his having been appointed Prov. G.M. of New England by Lord Montacute in 1733, and that in the year 1735 [1734] his commission was extended over all North America by Lord Cranford. On inquiry, however, he found that "said Deputations were never Registered, though [he himself] paid three Guineas therefor to Thomas Batson, Esqr., then Deputy Grand Master, who, with the Grand Wardens then in being, signed [his] said Deputation." He then proceeds with the claim that his own patent was the first ever issued "to any part of America"—here, as we see, plainly ignoring the earlier appointment of Daniel Coxe, as officially stated in the editions of the Constitutions for 1738, 1756, and 1767. "So," he continues, "would submit it to your Wisdom and Justice whether said Deputations should not be Registered in their proper Place, without any further Consideration therefor, and the Grand Lodge here have Rank according to Date, as it has (by Virtue of said Deputations) been the foundation of Masonry in America, and I [Henry Price] the Founder." The letter concludes with the following:—

"P.S.—R<sup>d</sup> Worshipful, I herewith send you an Attested Copy of my said Deputation in the Grand Lodge Book of this Place, under the Hand of our Grand Secretary, whose Signature you may depend upon as genuine.
H. P."

The copy of this epistle in the Boston Records, contains two misstatements, which have been much criticized—one, the name (Montacute), wrongly assigned by Price to Lord Montague; and the other, his assertion with regard to the extension of his powers, in 1735. But the first is easily explained on the supposition that his clerk (or amanuensis) must have followed the spelling given by Entick (Constitutions, 1756), and both are to a great extent neutralized by the fact that the petition which accompanied the letter states the name of Lord Montagne correctly, and dates the extension of powers at 1734.<sup>1</sup>

But the letter has other features which demand our attention. It is, for instance, a curious circumstance that the attested copy of Price's deputation was made from a transcript, and not from the original; while the alleged payment to D.G.M. Batson stands in need of some further explanation, as it is doubtful whether any fee was paid at that time by a Prov. G.M. for his deputation, and the sum of three guineas does not represent the ordinary amount which he was required to contribute at a subsequent period.

William Jackson, who took the petition and letter to England, carried also with him a recommendation from the Grand Lodge in Boston, dated January 22, 1768—signed by <sup>1</sup> Another copy of the letter is preserved in the archives of the Grand Lodge of England. In this the name of Lord Montague is correctly spelt, while the words ascribed to Price with regard to his Grand Lodge are, that it had been "the Foundations of Masonry in America." Four original letters from Henry Price to the Grand Secretary of England are in the same custody. These are dated June 3 and December 20, 1769, and January 29 and May 16, 1770. The letter of June 3, 1769, is in duplicate. Each of the others is endorsed "L<sup>r</sup>. from the P.G.M. for America." With one unimportant exception (December 20, 1769), copies of the letters are given by Gardner. In every case Price's own handwriting is limited to his signature.

Henry Price, G.M., and his Grand Wardens—to their "Mother Lodge" in England. He returned to Boston with a deputation for John Rowe, who is styled "Provincial Grand Master for all North America, and the Territories thereunto belonging, where no other Provincial Grand Master is in being," issued by order of the Duke of Beaufort, G.M., and dated May 12, 1768.

We are told that "the Depntation of Rowe contains a complete and thorough vindication of Price." It recites that he was "constituted Provincial Grand Master for North America" by Viscount Montague, April 13, 1733, and that "He Resigning, Recommends John Rowe."

From this, according to the same commentator, there is no appeal; but putting aside the notorious fact that the historical value of recitals in Masonic charters is very much in keeping with that of the preambles of ancient statutes,<sup>1</sup> the misstatements with regard to locality, date, and the resignation of Price, seem to me to carry with them their own condemnation.

John Rowe outlived Henry Price—who died in 1780—and continued to hold the office of Prov. G.M. until his own decease in 1787. But from about the date of the former's appointment until 1804, the name of the latter was annually shown in the Calendar of the Grand Lodge of England as "Provincial G.M. for North America." Why it was persistently kept there throughout this long period—and there is distinct evidence that in 1792, if not before, the grand Secretary in London was informed of Price's death—is, in my opinion, only another example of the gross carelessness of the executive of the Grand Lodge of England with regard to the foreign and Colonial Lodges on the roll of that body. The explanation given by Gardner is, that the Grand Officers, desirous of repairing "the injury which had been done to the fame of Henry Price, purposely retained his name upon the Official Calendar for thirty-six years, a period of time equal to that which had elapsed from the time of his appointment in 1733 to the date of his recognition in 1768!"

This far-fetched scheme of reparation need not be seriously discussed. It will be wiser to balance one error of the Grand Lodge publications against the other. From this we may safely arrive at the conclusion, that the omission of Price's name in the Constitutions of 1738, 1756, and 1767, is of no greater historical value than its insertion in the Calendars of 1770-1804.

It remains to be stated that Rowe's name does not appear in any English Calendar as Prov. G.M., also that there are no communications in the archives at Boston addressed to him in such capacity.

In reply to Price's letter of January 27, 1768, Grand Secretary French wrote a long letter, dated November 29, in the same year. French succeeded Samuel Spencer, whose protracted illness was the cause of the delay. The Grand Secretary consented to register the four Lodges as desired, but requested that in future an account might be forwarded immediately of every Lodge, when constituted, as otherwise it could not be expected that they should rank in their order of precedency. Why Price's name was not to be found in the list of Prov. G.M.'s he expressed himself unable to explain, but his letter goes on to state, "These mistakes might have been long since rectified, if you had kept up, according to your Charter, a regular annual correspondence with the Grand Lodge. However, as it appears by some loose papers<sup>1</sup> in my possession that you had resigned in favor of John Rowe, [the Grand Master] desires you will forward a letter to me relating to this point, per first opportunity, that the Provincialship may be properly settled, with an account of the date of his warrant. No deputation which has been granted since your appointment for any part of America can affect you, as their authority can only extend over those provinces where no other Provincial Grand Master is appointed." Here we find French asking for the date of Rowe's patent, evidently not being aware of its having been signed earlier in the same year by his predecessor (deceased). This shows what little interest was taken at that time in Masonry beyond the seas. The Grand Secretary also informs Price that no deputation granted since his own could affect his status. This assertion was simply ridiculous, as the later deputations to Oxnard, Gridley, and Rowe gave them authority over all parts of North America for which no Prov. G.M. was appointed; consequently Price's position was wholly ignored, and indeed was not officially recognized (except indirectly) until 1768, in Rowe's patent, by which, however, Price himself was superseded.

<sup>1</sup> Gardner, p. 53—in a review of whose "Address," however, Mr. Jacob Norton observes—"The petition for the First Lodge of Boston stated that Price's deputation was dated April 13, 1732, and in the year of Masonry 5732, but both dates were altered several years afterwards into 1738 and 5738" (Freemason, vol. v., 1872, p. 493). The final 8 in each case certainly appears—from a facsimile of the petition—to have been originally a 2. As a motive for the alteration, the tardy discovery by Price of the fact that Viscount Montague only became Grand Master on the nineteenth day of April, 1732, has been suggested?

To the request of the Duke of Beaufort, G.M., as communicated through Thomas French, Price replied—June 3, 1769—in the following words:—"It would be tedious to explain the matter of my resigning as Provincial Grand Master; I recommended our Right Worshipful Brother John Rowe to be Provincial Grand Master of New England, but you cannot find that I ever gave up my own Appointment over all North America: this . . . . I shall explain to you . . . . face to face in London, some time in the Fall . . . . then we may settle the Provincial Grand Masters and Raulk the Lodges properly."

Yet the writer of this letter had himself particularly requested that the deputation to Gridley might be "made out for all North America," and on the decease of that Brother, nominated John Rowe for the vacant appointment. Price, it is quite evident, was not possessed of a very retentive memory, but it is only fair to recollect that his age at that time exceeded the three score and ten, which, the Scripture informs us, is the ordinary span of man's activity.

The letter last cited was acknowledged by James Heseltine—appointed Grand Secretary April 28, 1769—who in a communication dated September 6, 1769, requests Price to forward certain proceedings of the Grand Lodge of England "to the Lodges in America, except those in Canada, North and South Carolina, to which Lodges [he had] forwarded the same [himself]." This letter was addressed to "Henry Price, P.G.M. for America," and it indicates clearly that—Canada and the Carolinas alone excepted—his authority was understood in England to extend over the whole Continent. With one further allusion I shall bring to a close my extracts from this correspondence. On January 29, 1770, Price wrote to Heseltine, and once more expresses an intention of soon visiting London, when he purposes to "Give the Grand Lodge a true State of Masonry in America."

Price attended the Prov. Grand Lodge for the last time on January 28, 1774. There were but three Communications held after this prior to the siege of Boston, when the meetings of all the Lodges were suspended. At the last of these—January 27, 1775—Richard Gridley presided as D.G.M., and was again nominated to that office, but at his own request a ballot was taken, which resulted in his being unanimously elected.

In 1776, the diary of John Rowe records, under June 25, "dined with the Brethren of the Lodges under my direction." The next evidence brings us to 1783, in which year—February 7—the First and Second Lodges of Boston amalgamated; the Third Lodge seems to have passed quietly out of existence, but the Fourth, which was originally an offshoot of St. John's, rejoined its parent Lodge in 1791. In 1784, according to a local almanac, there were thirty Lodges under the St. John's and twenty under the Massachusetts Grand Lodges. In the same year, the African Lodge—No. 459—Boston, received an English charter, and St. Andrew's split into two parts, one (with the warrant) separating from, and the other adhering to, the Massachusetts Grand Lodge. The latter became the "Rising States Lodge," with the rank of No. 1, and in 1809 united—under the old name—with the former, which in that year was readmitted within the fold.

John Rowe died in 1787, and meetings of the St. John's Grand Lodge were held on February 7 and August 4 of that year under the presidency of Richard Gridley, D.G.M., with John Cutler (a former grand officer) as S.G.W. The latter—after whose name again appear the letters "S.G.W."—took the chair "as Grand Master" on July 29, 1790, when a Grand Lodge was held for "the Choice of new G. Officers," and a Grand Junior Warden, Treasurer, and Secretary were elected. Further meetings took place November 25, 1791, January 13, and March 2 and 5, 1792, at all of which Cutler presided, and on the last occasion is described as "D.G.M." This date—March 5—is that of the Union of the two Grand Lodges in Boston, the initiative with regard to which was taken by the junior body in 1787, though nothing came of it until 1792, when seven electors from each of the Grand Lodges, under the chairmanship of Paul Revere, D.G.M. of the younger Society, made choice of John Cutler as the first Grand Master of the "Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The following American Lodges were placed on the English Register, and without exception continued to figure annually in the official lists until 1813. The first date in each

Returning to Pennsylvania, it has been already shown that this was the first of the American States in which a stationary Lodge was established by the Ancients or Schismatics. We have also seen how the older system of Masonry was completely swept away in this part of the continent by the preference accorded to the Lodges working four degrees. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, "acting by virtue of a warrant from the [Schismatic] Grand Lodge of England, was closed for ever," September 25, 1786, and on the following day, "at a Grand Convention of thirteen Lodges," was established as an independent Grand Lodge.

The annexed table gives a list of the Lodges formed in the United States by warrants from the British Islands, other than those issued by the original G.L. of England. A solitary Lodge, formed in Virginia by the G.O. of France, has also been included.

The territory forming the present State of Michigan was retained (as part of Canada) by Great Britain after the War of Independence, and in 1796 ceded to the United States.

<sup>2</sup> The localities in which Nos. 517 and 520 were originally constituted, only ceased to be Canadian territory about the year 1796.

<sup>3</sup> Ante, p. 215. The first entry in each line gives the locality, after which (when known) the name of the Lodge is shown within a parenthesis. With the abbreviations used to distinguish the various States American readers will be familiar, but for the information of others, it may be stated, that Mass. denotes Massachusetts; Va., Virginia; Pa., Pennsylvania; S. C., South Carolina; N. Y., New York; Fla., Florida; and Md., Maryland. The letters placed between the numbers of the

I shall now pass to the remainder of the thirteen or original States of the Union, taking them in the order of their connection with Freemasonry. The statistics of all the American Grand Lodges, so far as these can be conveniently grouped, it may be observed, will be found at the close of the chapter.

NEW YORK.—The first Provincial G.M. was Daniel Coxe (1730), after whom came Richard Riggs, 1737; Francis Goelet, 1751; George Harrison, 1753; and Sir John Johnson, 1767. The earliest Lodge of which any record has been preserved was in full working order, and had probably existed for some time, on January 24, 1738. During his long administration Harrison warranted at least eleven Lodges, and five others, meeting at New York City, are also supposed to have been constituted by him. Sir John Johnson, who was not installed until 1771, appointed Dr. Peter Middleton his D.G.M., and the authority of the latter continued during the war. A Lodge at Schenectady, St. John's Regimental, and Military Union, were warranted by the last-named Prov. G.M. or his Deputy.

The military occupation of New York by the British in 1776, and the erection of a Masonic Province by the "Ancients" in 1371, has already been related. After the war the body so established abandoned its provincial character, and assumed the title of Grand Lodge of New York. The "Grand Cheque Word" is mentioned in the proceedings of December 3, 1794, as having "continued in use for a longer time than was at first intended, and it was resolved to change it." In 1823 there was a schism, but the two Grand Lodges united in 1827. A few years later, however, further dissensions occurred, and the "St. John's Grand Lodge" was established September 11, 1837. In 1848 a law was passed by the G.L. of New York depriving Past Masters—except each "immediate" P.M.—of their votes. This was repealed in a highly irregular fashion in March, 1849, and on June 5 following, the G.M.—Willard—declaring the law of 1848 to be a part of the constitution, on the motion of the acting J.G.W.—Isaac Philips—and amid great uproar, a Provisional Grand Master and other Grand Officers were elected in dumb show. After this there were three Grand Lodges, and it will be sufficient to state that two earliest in point of date amalgamated in 1850, and were joined by the "Philips" Grand Lodge in 1853.

Lodge Pythagoras of New York—instituted June 24, 1841—at first sided with the Philips party, but afterwards joined the "Willard" Grand Lodge, having in the interim applied to the G.L. of Hamburg for a charter, which was granted in 1841 and in the same year the Lodge returned its original warrant to the G.L. of New York. Eventually, however, it resumed its old place under the jurisdiction of origin, and thus happily terminated a suspension of intercourse between the Grand Lodges of Hamburg and New York. Two further Lodges were warranted in the same way<sup>1</sup> by the former body, but have died out or joined the latter, which has now on its roll twenty-eight Lodges working in the German language, with a membership of 3208.

NEW JERSEY.—Although the "earliest Grand Master in America" resided in this colony, there is no record of a Lodge having been chartered by him, or of his having performed any official act as the owner of a Deputation. Neither of the Grand Lodges of England were directly, though both were indirectly, represented in this territory. The first Lodge was warranted at Newark from New York in 1761; and two others sprang up Lodges and the dates of their constitution represent, as in the last chapter, the different sources of origin. There is only one addition to the previous list, viz., "Fr.," which here signifies Grand Orient of France, by which body a Lodge was established in Portsmouth, Virginia, in 1786.

under charters from Boston in the next and following years. A similar number of Lodges was then established by the Prov. G. Lodge of Pennsylvania (Ancients), in 1767, 1779, and 1781. The Grand Lodge of New Jersey was organized by a convention of Master Masons on December 18, 1786, and in the following year—April 2—the Lodge of 1767 was given the first place on the roll, the others balloting for their numbers, which resulted in the Lodge at Newark drawing the No. 2.

GEORGIA.—The Charity of the Society was solicited in the Grand Lodge of England—December 31, 1733—to enable the trustees of the new colony “to send Distressed Brethren to Georgia, where they may be comfortably provided for.” In 1735, a deputation to Mr. Roger Lacy, for constituting a Lodge at Savannah, was granted by Lord Weymouth. This—the second American Lodge on the English roll—was doubtless the body referred to by Whitfield in his diary, where he records under June 24, 1738 (Savannah), “was enabled to read prayer and preach with power before the Freemasons, with whom I afterwards dined.” In all, three English warrants were issued for Savannah. Grey Elliot was appointed Prov.-G.M. by Lord Aberdour (1757-61), and he was succeeded by the Hon. Noble Jones about the year 1772.

In 1784, a Lodge was chartered by the G.L. of Pennsylvania at Savannah, and on December 16, 1786, the Grand Lodge of Georgia was organized. The details are wanting, but according to Mackey, “Samuel Elbert, the last Prov. G.M. [whose name I have elsewhere failed to trace], resigned in favor of William Stephens, who was elected the first Grand Master.”

SOUTH CAROLINA.—The first Provincial Grand Master was John Hammerton, appointed by the Earl of Loudoun in 1736. After this the office appears to have become elective, as James Graeme—Chief Justice of the colony in later days—who held it on December 27, 1737, was again chosen Grand Master for the ensuing year. Chief Justice Leigh succeeded to the charge of the Province in 1754, and was succeeded by Benjamin Smith under a patent dating between 1758 and 1762.

Five Lodges are shown in the Engraved List of 1760, the earliest of which was probably identical with the Lodge at Charleston constituted by Henry Price in 1735. A sixth Lodge was placed on the English roll in 1763, and about the year 1768 Egerton Leigh became Prov. G.M. This worthy, it is stated, was in England in 1777, in which year the Prov. G. Lodge elected the Hon. Barnard Elliot “Grand Master of Masons in the State.” The new ruler died in the following year, and no meetings of the “Grand Lodge” took place in 1779 and 1780. In 1781, on the death of Leigh, the Provincial G. Lodge—wholly ignoring its own proceedings of 1777—met and elected John Deas, Prov. G.M.<sup>1</sup> Elliot’s election is open to some doubt, but there is none with regard to the Provincial Grand Lodge awaking from its slumber, and continuing to assemble until after the peace. Indeed, the English patent granted to Deas was dated November 26, 1788, which will harmonize with the supposition that without any formal act beyond a mere change of title, the body over which he presided became what was ultimately styled the “Grand Lodge of Moderns” in the State.

The rival system was represented by eight Lodges, warranted between 1760 and 1786—one by the G.L. of Scotland, and three and four respectively by those of Pennsylvania and England (Ancients). Some of these combined, and on March 24, 1787, erected a "Grand Lodge of Ancient York Masons." In 1808 the two Grand Lodges united, but again separated in the following year, and a permanent union did not take place until 1817, when the two bodies were merged into one, under the name of "The Grand Lodge of Ancient Freemasons."

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—One Lodge was warranted in this State by Henry Price (1736), and four by the Massachusetts G. Lodge—the latter in 1780, 1784, and (two) in 1788 respectively. The G.L. of New Hampshire was organized on July 8, 1789—there being at the time only three Lodges in the State—by one Deputy from the Lodge of 1736, and four from that of 1784—five Deputies from two Lodges.<sup>1</sup>

RHODE ISLAND.—The two Lodges, established under warrants from Boston in 1749 and 1757, met and formed the Grand Lodge on June 25, 1791. The early history of Masonry in this State has only one feature of interest, namely, the decision of the Grand Master of North America in 1759, that the warrant granted by Oxnard to the Newport Lodge in 1749 was an insufficient authority to confer more than the first two degrees of the Craft.

MARYLAND.—Lord Baltimore, who was proprietary Governor from 1715 to 1751, resided in the Province from 1732 to 1734. This nobleman was made a Mason in 1730, and seven years later assisted in forming the "Occasional Lodge," at which Frederick, Prince of Wales, was initiated;<sup>2</sup> but with these exceptions his Masonic record is a blank, and it is altogether unknown whether or not he was a supporter of the Craft in America. Lodges were warranted from Boston in 1750, England in 1765,<sup>3</sup> and three—in 1759, 1761, and 1763—of uncertain origin. Ten more—the first dating from 1766, and the last from 1782, derived their existence from the Prov. G.L. of Pennsylvania. A Lodge at Baltimore (without date) is shown on an Irish list, and it is traditionally asserted that there were two others of foreign origin—besides a Lodge near Newmarket, in 1776. The former are assigned to Georgetown and New Bremen, with the dates of 1737 and (before) 1789 respectively. The earlier of these—supposed to have been composed of Scottish Masons—is believed to have opened a branch Lodge at Joppa in 1751. The Lodge at New Bremen is said to have derived its constitution from Germany. Robert Molleson was Prov. G.M. under England in 1776, and Henry Harford in 1783; but there is no evidence to show that either of them exercised any authority under the appointment.

The Grand Lodge of Maryland was organized July 31, 1783, by a convention of five Lodges, there being eight in the State at the time, all of which were on the roll of the G.L. of Pennsylvania. Four years later—April 17, 1787—actuated by a laudable desire not to err, but if at all on the side of caution, the same number of Lodges again met in convention and re-organized the Grand Lodge, choosing the same Grand Master and Grand Secretary as on the previous occasion.<sup>4</sup>

CONNECTICUT.—Seven Lodges were chartered in this State by Oxnard and his successors at Boston—the first in 1750, the last in 1771; three by the Prov. G.M. of New York—in 1762, 1765, and 1766; and six by the Massachusetts Grand Lodge. A seventeenth Lodge, King Solomon's, at Woodbury, of unknown registry, was in existence when, "in pursuance of a recommendation of a committee of thirteen Lodges of the State, holden at New Haven on March 18, 1783," delegates from twelve Lodges met in convention, and formed what was virtually a Grand Lodge, though in lieu of the usual Grand Officers they elected a Moderator and Clerk. Of these Lodges, four held warrants from Boston and three from New York—under the older sanction; four from the Massachusetts G.L. (Ancients); and one (King Solomon's) has left behind it no trace of its origin. From this time it was arranged that General Conventions should be held half-yearly; but on July 8, 1789, a Grand Lodge was duly formed with the usual solemnities, the same number of Lodges being represented as in 1783.<sup>1</sup> The delay receives some explanation from the Early Proceedings of the G.L. of New York, the officers of which body were appointed—February 4, 1784—"a committee to determine the most eligible mode for the Grand Officers Elect of the State of Connecticut obtaining a Grand Warrant from the Grand Lodge in England."

<sup>4</sup> Schultz, passim. The G.L. of Pennsylvania, in 1783, doubted the regularity of the G.L. of Maryland, as being formed without a warrant, though at the same time they frankly confessed their inability to decide "from what authority a warrant could be issued."

VIRGINIA.—From lists already given in this chapter, it will be seen that four Lodges were established by the G.L. of England, and two each by the Grand Lodge and Lodge Kilwinning of Scotland. One Lodge received a charter from Boston, and the jurisdiction of Ireland is also supposed to have been represented in the State. The Prov. G.L. of Pennsylvania (Ancients) established Lodges at Winchester, 1768; Alexandria, 1783; and Portsmouth, 1784. H. P. Thornton was Prov. G.M. under the original G.L. of England about the year 1764, and Peyton Randolph in 1774. In this State it was customary, in the absence of a warrant from any Grand Lodge, for a competent number of Master Masons to obtain a written authority to assemble, which document operated as their warrant. It has also been inferred that in many instances the degrees of Masonry were imparted to non-military persons in Field (or travelling) Lodges, who received a warrant to confer these degrees on others in lieu of a certificate of enrolment.<sup>2</sup>

The Grand Lodge of Virginia was established October 13, 1778, by a Convention at which four Lodges were represented. This assumed, however, the form of a Lodge, and the Master and Wardens of Williamsburg Lodge presided. John Blair, Past Master of the same Lodge, was elected Grand Master, and duly installed. There was an invasion of the jurisdiction by the Grand Orient of France in 1785, in which year a warrant was issued to some brethren in Portsmouth, and again in 1849, when a new Lodge was established at Richmond; but on the latter occasion the charter was recalled at the request of the G.L. of Virginia, and the Lodge advised to apply for one to the local authorities, which was done.

NORTH CAROLINA.—Lodges in this State appear in the English Lists of 1756 and 1767, and under the year 1766 in the Boston Records. In 1767—December 30—Thomas Cooper was appointed by the Prov. G.M. of North America D.G.M. of North Carolina, with power to congregate the brethren into one or more Lodges. A year or two later, Joseph Montford became Prov. G.M. under the G.L. of England, and, it is said, constituted St. John's Lodge at Newbern in 1771. According to Mackey there were nine (and to another authority, ten<sup>3</sup>) Lodges in the State in 1787, all of which were represented at the organization of the Grand Lodge on December 9 of that year.

DELAWARE.—Five Lodges in this State received warrants from Pennsylvania, the first in 1765 and the last in 1802. There was also, if we may believe some authorities,<sup>1</sup> the Union Lodge, which is said to have been erected by the G.L. of Scotland about the middle of the last century. Of this, however, there is no trace in the official lists of that body. Four Lodges combined to organize the Grand Lodge on June 6, 1806; but it was refused recognition for some time by the G.L. of Pennsylvania on the ground that less than five Lodges having been represented the brethren had not "formed themselves in that regular way pointed out by the ancient Constitutions."

The remaining States and the territories of the Union will now be noticed according to the order in which Grand Lodges have been established in them, and after they have all been passed in review, a table will be given showing the number of Lodges and the aggregate of members (or Master Masons) under the several jurisdictions.

VERMONT.—Lodges were established in this State by the "Massachusetts G.L." in 1781 and 1785, the first of which was authorized to meet at Cornish, Vermont, and appears to have been held at Charlestown, New Hampshire. For a period of four years, ending in February, 1782, both sides of the Connecticut river were to some extent common territory; but after that date, when the boundaries were better defined, the Lodge moved to Windsor, Vermont, and took the name of Vermont Lodge, No. 1. The third Lodge was erected by Sir John Johnson, Prov. G.M. Lower Canada, who granted a warrant to Thomas Chittenden, Governor of the State, and others, in 1791. This is a little remarkable, as showing that neither the Provincial G.M. of a part of Canada (and who had held a similar position in New York), or the Chief Magistrate of an American commonwealth, then believed that the War of Independence had severed the Masonic connection between the parent power and the newly created States on the northern continent. Two further Lodges were established by the G.L. of Connecticut in 1793 and 1794.

The representatives of these five Lodges met in Convention, October 10; a Grand Lodge was organized October 14; and that body duly held a meeting, October 15, 1794. In no State of the Union did the anti-Masonic party, as a political power, exercise so much influence as it did in Vermont. The Grand Lodge was compelled to suspend its labors in 1833 (or 1836), and all the Lodges under its jurisdiction surrendered their charters. The Grand Lodge resumed work in 1846.<sup>2</sup>

KENTUCKY.—Five Lodges were established under warrants from the G.L. of Virginia, the earliest of which—erected in 1788—was the first Lodge instituted west of the Alleghany Mountains. These Lodges met in Convention, and—October 16, 1800—organized the Grand Lodge, by which body warrants were shortly after issued for parts of Tennessee, Mississippi, Indiana, Ohio, and Missouri.<sup>3</sup>

OHIO.—"American Union" met for the last time as an Army Lodge, April 23, 1783, and was ordered "to stand closed until the W. Master should call them together."<sup>4</sup> This occurred in 1790, when a colony from New England having become established north-west of the Ohio, the Lodge was reopened at Marietta by Jonathan Heart, the Master, with Benjamin Tupper and Rufus Putnam officiating as Wardens.<sup>5</sup> In the same year "Nova

Cæsarea was chartered at Cincinnati by the G.L. of New Jersey; but the warrant, which was not received until 1795, was returned in a somewhat irregular manner in 1805, and some of the members obtained in lieu thereof an authorization to meet as the "Cincinnati" Lodge, No. 13, from the G.L. of Kentucky. These two Lodges, however, for all practicable purposes, must be regarded as one, since the members were reconciled in 1812, and all irregularities condoned. The third Lodge—Scioto—was erected by the G.L. of Massachusetts, also in 1805, and the fourth (for which I am able to assign a date and jurisdiction)—Amity—by that of Pennsylvania, in 1806. There were also, in 1808, two others—"Erie," No. 47, and "New England," No. 48—and all the Lodges enumerated, or a total of six—Cincinnati, No. 13, being named, and Nova Cæsarea, No. 10, not—are stated to have been represented at the organization of the Grand Lodge on January 6 of that year. By other authorities the number of Lodges participating in this movement has been reduced to five by the omission of "New England, No. 48," which agrees with the official version,* though as this includes "Nova Cæsarea," and leaves out "Cincinnati," while, as a matter of fact, it is certain that the former had been superseded by the latter,† I am inclined to discredit it.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—This territory—the seat of the Federal Government—is enclosed by the States of Maryland and Virginia, from which jurisdictions it received in all five warrants of constitution. The Grand Lodge was organized, December 11, 1810, by four Lodges, one only standing aloof from the movement. This was "Alexandria Washington," No. 22, which is at the present time both within the Masonic and the territorial jurisdiction of Virginia.

LOUISIANA.—A Lodge—La Consolante Maçonne—was established at New Orleans by the Lodge Anglaise de Bordeaux, in 1764. After a long interval, in 1793-94, refugees, chiefly from the island of Guadeloupe, established the Lodges Perfect Union and Polar Star, the former working the "York," and the latter the French or Modern Rite, and holding warrants from the G.L. of South Carolina and the Mother Lodge "la Parfaite Sincérité" of Marseilles respectively. Polar Star, it may be observed, was reconstituted by the G.O. of France in 1804, and the G.L. of Pennsylvania in 1811. The first Lodge under a warrant from Philadelphia was erected in 1801, and the last—Polar Star—making nine in all, in 1811, but in several instances the charters issued were virtually warrants of confirmation, authorizing brethren who had previously met in Lodges beyond the limits of Louisiana, or under other Masonic jurisdictions, to work in subordination to the G.L. of Pennsylvania. In 1804, many fugitives arrived from San Domingo, and among them the members of La Reunion Desirée (Port au Prince), who obtained a duplicate charter from the G.O. of France in 1806, but being desirous of working according to the "York Rite," changed it in 1808 for a warrant empowering them to meet under their original title, as a daughter Lodge of Pennsylvania.

"to visit each of the Lodges in that State, in order that there might be uniformity in the mode of working." He retained the position of Master, on the revival of "American Union," until August, 1791, when he joined the army of St. Clair, and was killed in the following November at the battle of Fort Recovery.

The first Lodge that worked in the English language was "Louisiana," established by the G.L. of New York in 1807; and the second, "Harmony"—the latest but one of the Philadelphian Lodges—warranted in 1810. Nor were there any others until 1826, when both of these had ceased to exist.

In 1811, Polar Star obtained a Philadelphian warrant, and a new Lodge—Bienfaisance—was erected by the Grand Consistory of Jamaica; the latter, however, soon after affiliated with Lodge Concord, under the G.L. of Pennsylvania.

In 1812, there were seven Lodges in full activity at New Orleans—Perfect Union (S.C.), Louisiana (N.Y.), Charity, Concord, Perseverance, Harmony, and Polar Star (Pennsylvania). Of these all but Louisiana and Harmony—the two English-speaking Lodges—took part in the organization of the Grand Lodge, June 30, 1812. Afterwards the French novelties obtained the upper hand, and there was much confusion. Seven Lodges were chartered in the State by the G.L. of Mississippi, February 21, 1848; and on March 8, next ensuing, these formed a second Grand Lodge. The Schism lasted until March 4, 1850, when a Union was effected.<sup>1</sup>

TENNESSEE.—The Lodges in this State, with the exception of one that derived its origin from Kentucky, were all held under warrants from North Carolina until the close of 1813. In that year—December 27—by order of the G.M. of North Carolina, a convention was held, at which eight Lodges were represented, and the Grand Lodge of Tennessee was organized.

INDIANA.—The Grand Lodge was formed, January 12, 1818, at which date there were eight Lodges in the State—one under Ohio, the remainder deriving their authority from Kentucky. Five of these were represented on the occasion.<sup>2</sup>

MISSISSIPPI.—Three Lodges were established by the G.L. of Kentucky—the first in 1801—and two by that of Tennessee. The Grand Lodge of the State was organized by the representatives of three of these Lodges, July 27, 1818.

MAINE.—This became an independent State in 1820, and a Grand Lodge was organized by twenty-four Lodges on June 1 of that year. Maine had previously been within the territorial as well as the Masonic jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and the Grand Lodge of the latter State very gracefully consented to an equitable division of the Charity and other funds, when so large a cluster of daughter Lodges separated amicably from her.

MISSOURI.—Lodges were erected in this State by the Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania in 1807 and 1808; Tennessee, in 1816 and 1819 (2); and Indiana, in 1820. Three of these met in convention, April 23, 1821, and organized the G.L. of Missouri.<sup>3</sup>

ALABAMA.—The Grand Lodge was organized June 14, 1821, by seven<sup>4</sup> or nine<sup>5</sup> Lodges, the latter being the number then existing in the State. These are said to have been warranted by the Grand Lodges of Tennessee and North Carolina,<sup>6</sup> but the only point with regard to their origin that seems quite clear from the authorities is, that one was chartered by the G.L. of South Carolina in 1819.

MICHIGAN.—Three Lodges at Detroit received warrants from the Grand Lodge of England. The earliest of these, Zion, affiliated with the Prov. G.L. of Lower Canada in 1794, and the G.L. of New York in 1806, remaining on the roll of the latter until the formation of the G. L. of Michigan in 1826. The last-named body became dormant in 1830, and was revived in 1841; but this step being deemed irregular by the other American jurisdictions, a majority of the Lodges again met in Convention, and organized the present Grand Lodge in 1844. The G. L. of Michigan is stated to have been formed by four out of five Lodges in the State.

Initiated into Freemasonry January 28, passed February 11, and raised April 15, 1902, in Lincoln Lodge
No. 19, of Lincoln, Neb.

FLORIDA.—This peninsula was ceded to Britain in 1763, and Masonry obtained a footing from Scotland in 1768. The 14th Foot, in garrison at St. Augustine, 1776, was ordered a renewal of its charter—No. 58—by the Ancients in 1777; and a second warrant for the same place was granted by them—which failed to reach its destination—in 1778. After the war Florida again became Spanish territory, and, July 12, 1783, a warrant was issued from Pennsylvania "to St Andrews Lodge No. 1, late of West Florida," and then at Charleston, S. C. A Lodge was next established at St. Augustine from Georgia in 1806, but suppressed by the Spaniards in 1811. The country was sold to the United States in 1819, and in 1820 and 1824 warrants not fated to endure were granted from South Carolina. In 1826, however, three Lodges—from Tennessee and Georgia—were established and took root, all uniting in the organization of the Grand Lodge on July 5, 1830.

TEXAS.—Three Lodges were erected in this territory by the G. L. of Louisiana, the first in 1835. These united to form the Grand Lodge of Texas, December 20, 1837.<sup>1</sup> By one writer, however, it is affirmed that two additional Lodges, holding warrants from the G. L. of Mississippi, participated in this movement.<sup>2</sup>

ARKANSAS.—Owing to the loss of its early records there is much confusion with regard to the formation of a Grand Lodge. Mackey and Wyneman<sup>3</sup> date the event in 1832, and three Lodges are said to have united for the purpose; but, according to a Committee of the G. L., it is traditional that Masonry was introduced into Arkansas by the Spanish more than a century ago, and that the present Grand Lodge was formed in 1838 by four Lodges, two holding warrants from Louisiana, and one each from Alabama and Tennessee.<sup>4</sup>

ILLINOIS.—A Grand Lodge was established in 1823, which became extinct in 1828, but was reorganized, April 6, 1840, by six chartered Lodges, an equal number not being represented, one of which was dormant, and three held dispensations only.

The remaining Grand Lodges, which I am compelled by exigencies of space to pass over very briefly, were organized by a majority<sup>5</sup> of the Lodges in the respective States or territories as follows, the actual number of Lodges represented on each occasion being shown between the name of the Grand Lodge and year of its formation:—

Wisconsin, three, 1843; Iowa, four, 1844; California, three, 1850; Oregon, three, 1851; Minnesota, three, 1853; Kansas, three, 1856; Nebraska, three, 1857; Washington, four, 1858; Colorado, three, 1861; Nevada, eight, 1865; West Virginia, nine, 1865; Montana, three, 1866; Idaho, four, 1867; Utah, three, 1872; Indian Territory, three, 1874; Wyoming, four, 1874; Dakota, six, 1875; New Mexico, three, 1877; and Arizona, four, 1881.

<sup>5</sup> In the Indian Territory and New Mexico, however, there were six and seven Lodges respectively, and in each case the Grand Lodge is said to have been "legalized" by an additional Lodge joining shortly after its formation.

HENRY PRICE, ESQ.,

FIRST PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER OF MASONRY IN NEW ENGLAND

BY SIDNEY HAYDEN

AUTHOR OF "WASHINGTON AND HIS MASONIC COMPERS"

THE introduction of Freemasonry into America has neither written nor traditional date. From a period extending so far back into the gray ages of antiquity that it antedates the twilight of written history, its mystic rites are said to have been practiced in the eastern world; and when the first explorers of the western continent formed their infant settlements here, they may have brought with them some knowledge of its mysteries.

For more than a century after the English commenced their settlements in America, Masonic lodges were held in all countries without any written warrants, but by the inherent right of Masons, sanctioned by immemorial usage. Such Lodges kept no written records of their proceedings, and American history is silent on the subject of Freemasonry until the commencement of the third decade of the eighteenth century. At that time the Masonic chronicles of England state that a deputation was granted to Daniel Coxe, constituting him Provincial Grand Master of New Jersey. A copy of this deputation, recently obtained by the Grand Lodge of New Jersey from the Grand Lodge at London, shows that it constituted Daniel Coxe, Provincial Grand Master of the Provinces of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. This deputation was granted by the Duke of Norfolk, Grand Master of Masons in England, and bore date the 5th of June, 1730. From the same source we also learn, that Daniel Coxe was present at the meeting of the Grand Lodge in London on the 29th of the following January, where his health was proposed and drank as "Provincial Grand Master of North America." Of his personal history, we only know that he was the son of Dr. Daniel Coxe, of England, who was physician to the Queen of Charles the Second, and to Queen Anne, and who held extensive proprietary claims to lands in New Jersey and other American colonies; and that he was his father's agent and representative in this country. His residence is believed to have been in Burlington, New Jersey. He was for many years a member of the council of that Province under Lord Cornbury, and the speaker of the House of Assembly during a part of the administration of Governor Hunter. He was also, it is historically stated, for a time, deputy governor of Western New Jersey. He represented his father's claims to an extensive tract of country lying on the Gulf of Mexico, which he made some attempts to colonize. In furtherance of this object, he wrote a dissertation on this territory, entitled, "A Description of the English Province of Carolina, by the Spaniards called Florida, and by the French, La Louisiane." This, we believe, was first published in England in 1741, although some authorities state it was published in 1722. Two existing proprietary claims to this territory were possessed by his father, the first of Spanish, and the second of English origin. It was Mr. Coxe's desire to hold and settle it as an English Province; and he accordingly, in the preface to his pamphlet, proposed a colonial alliance of all the English settlements as a defence against the Indians, and also the French and Spanish colonies in the vicinity. The terms of this proposition for an English colonial union in America, we believe, antedate any such ideas by others; and we cannot forbear to insert them here as curious in the civil history of our country, being published prior to the Union recommended by Dr. Franklin at the Colonial Congress in Albany, in 1754, viz.:

"That all the colonies appertaining to the crown of Great Britain, on the northern continent of America, be united under a legal, regular and firm establishment; over which a lieutenant or supreme governor may be constituted and appointed to preside on the spot, to whom the governors of each colony shall be subordinate." "It is further humbly proposed," he continued, "that two deputies shall be annually elected by the Council and Assembly of each province, who are to be in the nature of a great council, or general convention of the estates of the colonies; and by the order, consent or approbation of the lieutenant or governor-general, shall meet together, consult and advise for the good of the whole, settle and appoint particular quotas or proportions of money, men, provisions, etc., that each respective government is to raise for their mutual defence and safety, as well as, if necessary, for offence and invasion of their enemies; in all which cases the governor-general or lieutenant is to have a negative, but not to enact any thing without their concurrence, or that of a majority of them."

May not this proposition of our Masonic brother and first American Grand Master, have been the germ of thought from which sprang our present form of civil government? Mr. Coxe, we believe, died at Burlington, New Jersey, and was there buried; for there is said to exist in the east transept of the old Episcopal Church there, a marble slab bearing this inscription:

"DANIEL COXE
DIED, APRIL 25, 1739. AETAT 65."

To this digression from the Masonic design of our sketch, we will only add, that so little has been left on record of the Masonic history of Daniel Coxe that even his Grand-mastership has been deemed a myth. His name stands in the annals of American Masonry like the morning star at dawn rising above the mountain's misty top, and then fading from our vision in the sunlight of the bright skies that followed.

In 1733, three years later, the written records of Freemasonry in America commence. Upon the 30th of April of that year, a deputation was granted by Lord Montague, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, to Henry Price, the subject of this sketch, "in behalf of himself and several other brethren" then residing in New England, appointing him "Provincial Grand Master of New England aforesaid, and dominions and territories thereunto belonging." From the powers contained in this deputation sprang the first existing Lodges in the country, and Henry Price is regarded as the father of American Lodges of Freemasons.

The deputations or commissions to Daniel Coxe in 1730, and Henry Price in 1733, were in form and verbiage nearly the same; but they differed somewhat in powers conferred. That to Mr. Coxe confined his powers to the Provinces of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania; while that to Mr. Price, gave him Masonic authority in New England, and "dominions and territories thereunto belonging." That to Mr. Coxe also continued his powers for two years from the following feast of St. John the Baptist; "after which time," it continues, "it is our will and pleasure, and we do hereby ordain, that the brethren who do now reside, or who may hereafter reside, in all or any of the said provinces, shall, and they are hereby empowered every other year, on the feast of St. John the Baptist, to elect a Provincial Grand Master, who shall have the power of nominating and appointing his Deputy Grand Master and Grand Wardens." That of Mr. Price was unlimited in time, and revokable at the pleasure of the authority that issued it. We have no Masonic Lodge records in this country previous to 1733; but it is a curious fact that newspapers printed in Philadelphia as early as 1732 state the existence of a Masonic Lodge in that city at that date, and that William Allen, then recorder of the city (and afterwards chief justice of the Province), was, on St. John the Baptist's day of 1732, elected Grand Master in Philadelphia. Were the brethren in that city at that time holding Lodges under authority from Daniel Coxe, or by the old immemorial right and usage of Masons? It is an interesting point in our Masonic history, but one which we are not called upon to consider further in this sketch. Our task is to give a brief memoir of the Masonic history of Henry Price, and even this would embrace more of the history of the early progress of Masonry in this country than our limits admit.

History has recorded but little of his life, except what is found on its Masonic pages. He was a native of England, and was born in London about the year 1697. He came to America about 1723, and settled in Boston, where he commenced business as a merchant tailor. He was then about twenty-six years of age, and had doubtless been made a Mason in London, in one of the four old lodges of that city. It was about ten years, therefore, from the time he came to America, before he received the deputation granted him by Lord Montague, to assemble the brethren of the Masonic Fraternity and constitute Lodges in New England.

At that time, nearly three months were required to transmit documents from London to Boston, and the promptness with which he entered on his new duties is seen from the record, that on the 30th of July, 1733, just three months from the date of his commission, he assembled the brethren then residing in Boston, at the "Bunch of Grapes Tavern," and causing his deputation to be read, he appointed Andrew Belcher his Deputy Grand Master, and Thomas Kennelly and John Quann his Grand Wardens. We have few written records from which to give the social position of the members of this Grand Lodge. Mr. Price, its Grand Master, was the same year appointed "cornet in the governor's troop of guards, with the rank of major." He was also at one time pay-master in Queen Anne's regiment. Jonathan Belcher was the governor of Massachusetts, and Andrew Belcher the Deputy Grand Master, was his son.

The same day that Mr. Price organized his Grand Lodge, he received a petition from eighteen Masons in Boston, in behalf of themselves and "other brethren," asking to be established as a regular Lodge. They had probably often convened and worked as Masons in that city before, without any authority except the ancient immemorial right which the Craft had formerly exercised, of meeting when and where circumstances permitted or required, and choosing the most experienced one present as Master, for the occasion a Lodge. In such assemblages of the Craft, temporarily convened, with little ritualistic labor, but with simple forms, it is probable most of the old Masons in America have been admitted to the knowledge of our mystic rites. But having now an opportunity to conform to the newly established custom in England of working under the sanction of a Grand Lodge, composed of a Grand Master and other officers, and representatives of all the brethren in the jurisdiction they seem at once to have availed themselves of the privilege. Their petition was accordingly granted, and they were formed and constituted by Mr. Price a regular Lodge the same evening, their officers being installed by him in person. This Lodge was denominated "First Lodge" in Boston until 1783, when it took the name of St. John's Lodge, by which it has since been known. As it was constituted by Grand Master Price in person, it was not at that day thought necessary that it should have a written warrant, his own act of personally constituting it, being at that time a sufficient authority to perpetuate itself as a legal Lodge.

Early in the following year, Major Price granted Warrants to brethren in Philadelphia and in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, to hold Lodges in those places, and for this purpose written instruments of authority were first used by him in America. He also received an extension of his authority in 1734 from the Grand Master of England, giving him jurisdiction over all North America. Under it he granted a Warrant, on the 27th of December, 1735, for a Lodge at Charleston, South Carolina. It is probable that some, if not all these warrants, were to confirm and bring under regular Masonic government, bodies of Masons that had previously met and worked as Lodges.

Major Price was superseded as Provincial Grand Master, in 1737, by a like commission granted by the Grand Master of England to Robert Tomlinson. Mr. Tomlinson held the office for seven years, and was succeeded by Thomas Oxnard, who held it about ten years, and died with his commission unrevoked. Upon the death of Mr. Oxnard, Major Price, as the oldest Provincial Past Grand Master in America, was called to the vacant Grand East until a new appointment could be made by the Grand Master of England. He therefore held the office at this time, by virtue of his priority in that position, from the 26th of June, 1754, until October 1st, 1755, when Jeremy Gridley was duly commissioned and installed. Mr. Gridley continued as Provincial Grand Master until his death in September, 1767, when Major Price again resumed the office until the 25th of November, 1768, when John Rowe was regularly appointed to it by the Grand Master of England.

Such is a brief sketch of the connection Major Price had with American Masonry as Provincial Grand Master. But his Masonic labors were not confined to his duties in his Grand Lodge. By an early regulation of the mother Grand Lodge in England, Apprentices could be made Fellow-crafts and Master Masons only in the Grand Lodge, unless by special Dispensation from the Grand Master. This rule was soon afterwards relaxed, and "Master's Lodges" were instituted to confer the second and third degrees on candidates who had received the first in regular Lodges.

About the year 1738 a "Master's Lodge" was instituted in Boston, which met monthly. Major Price was its first Master, and he occupied this position and performed its labors until 1744, when he resigned the office. During this period the record shows that he was absent but one evening; and after he resigned the chair, he was generally present at the meetings of the Lodge, and frequently officiated as master pro tem., until 1749, when he again held it one term by election. He frequently performed the duties of the minor offices of the Lodge, and was ever an active member. He was also a member of the "First Lodge," and gave it his active support.

Major Price had been successful in his mercantile business in Boston, and was able to support a country seat a few miles from the city. The records of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts show, that in April, 1751, that Grand Body resolved to celebrate the coming St. John's Day at "Brother Price's house" in Menotomy (West Cambridge); but when the day arrived, the record further shows, that his house "being encumbered by sickness," the celebration was held at the house of another brother in Cambridge. Soon after this he lost his wife, and also a daughter of about the age of nineteen years; and on the 20th of April, 1766, he lost his only surviving child, a son, who was apprenticed to an apothecary. This son died suddenly in a fit. The stricken father was now childless and lonely, and he wrote to his friends in London, in 1771, that as soon as his affairs in Boston could be intrusted to a suitable person, he contemplated returning to England. He was then nearly seventy-five years old; yet he again married, and in 1774 he relinquished his business in Boston, and retired to a farm in Townsend, a few miles from the city, which town he afterwards represented in the General Court. The second wife of Major Price was a widow, Lydia Abbot, of Townsend, who had at the time of this marriage two daughters by her former husband, and she afterwards had two daughters more by Major Price. He continued his residence in Townsend until his death at about the age of eighty-three years, which occurred on the 20th of May, 1780. He was buried in the public burial-ground there, where his tombstone still stands with this inscription:

"IN MEMORY OF HENRY PRICE, ESQ.

"Was born in London about the year of our Lord 1697. He removed to Boston about the year 1723; received a deputation appointing him Grand Master of Masons in New England; and in the year 1733 was appointed a Cornet in the Governor's Troop of Guards, with the rank of Major. By his diligence and industry in business, he acquired the means of a comfortable living, with which he removed to Townsend in the latter part of his life. He quitted mortality the twentieth of May, A. D. 1780, leaving a widow and two young daughters, with a numerous company of friends and acquaintances to mourn his departure, who have that ground of hope concerning his present lot, which results from his undissembled regard to his Maker, and extensive benevolence to his fellow-creatures, manifested in life by a behavior consistent with his character as a Mason, and his nature as a Man."

Major Price provided by his will equally for his two step-daughters as for his own, giving to the four all his property, after having made suitable provision for his widow. His descendants still live in Massachusetts; and one of them, a few years ago, presented to the Grand Lodge of that State an original portrait of their first Grand Master, taken in middle life. It is a valuable memento of one who is justly regarded as the Father of Freemasonry in America.

A Foreword to the American Addenda

WHEN I came to collect the materials for the "History of Symbolic Masonry in the United States," I soon found that the general and usually accepted history of particular jurisdictions was defective and in many cases absolutely erroneous. Accordingly I laid aside what others had written, and for my facts went to the published Proceedings and Records of Grand Lodges. While this largely increased the labor involved, it insured a much greater degree of accuracy; moreover it led to the preparation of matter to more than double the amount contemplated and promised; but the publishers decided to include the whole in this work, trusting to an increased sale to reimburse them for the additional outlay.

The publishers deserve to be amply repaid by the craft for the sacrifice they make, as they make because they believe the craft will reap a large benefit from it. I can say this, for be the value of my work great or small, they are moved by a desire to serve the craft and take this course in the belief that they are doing so.

In the preparation of my part of the work, I have spared no pains to obtain the facts from authentic sources, neither have I confined myself to a mere statement of events and dates. I have had it in view, in particular, to bring out the usages of the craft bearing upon the jurisprudence of Freemasonry, especially in the early days of its existence in this country.

The present system of law relating to the craft like the Common Law, has been drawn largely from usage; indeed, it followed as a matter of course, that an Institution, jealous of committing to writing anything in relation to it, would be governed by the usage in the past. Its early "Books of Constitutions" were largely a statement of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge, and in those proceedings precedents were followed with great exactness.

It will be seen that, in several respects, the usages of the Old Grand Lodge of England differed from those of the "Ancient Grand Lodge," and the effect of that difference can be plainly traced in the respective Grand Lodges, which sprang from them: in scarcely any, however, have the usages peculiar to one prevailed exclusively. In almost all cases the usages of both the parent Grand Lodges have been modified, in consequence of there being in the same jurisdiction Lodges derived from the two different sources.

Pennsylvania more closely adheres to the usages of the "Ancient Grand Lodge" than any other jurisdiction, and in some respects, her laws, derived from usage, differ from those of any other Grand Lodge.

It is believed that it will be exceedingly interesting to every member of the Fraternity to be able to trace the different usages in the different jurisdictions, and in preparing this history, that matter has been kept in view, as all the facts are from the records of the various Grand Lodges.

JOSIAH H. DRUMMOND, 33°

BROTHER JOSIAH H. DRUMMOND, 33°

This illustrious Brother was born in the town of Winslow, Maine, August 30, 1827, and was over 75 years of age at the time of his decease, October 25, 1902.

He devoted himself to the study of law, won high renown as a leader in his chosen profession. He was several times Attorney-General for the State of Maine, and continued in that office until he voluntarily declined further election. While an active business man and faithful to all his duties as a citizen, statesman, and a leading professional man, he yet found time for a thorough study of Freemasonry, and for long service in its ranks.

He was made a Master Mason, January 22, 1849, in Waterville Lodge, Maine; a Royal Arch Mason, November 29, 1855, in Jerusalem Chapter, No. 4, Gardiner, Maine; a Royal and Select Master in Portland Council, No. 5, Portland, Maine; and a Knights Templar in Maine Commandery, No. 1, Gardiner, Maine. In the A. A. Scottish Rite, he received the Degrees from the 4th to 18th inclusive, July 14, 1859, in a Lodge of Perfection, a Council of Princes of Jerusalem, and a Chapter of Rose Croix, all held under the Charter of Dunlap Chapter of Rose Croix, Portland, Maine. He received the Degrees from the 19th to the 32nd inclusive, May 7, 1862, in Maine Consistory, U. D., at Portland, Maine; and on the 21st of May, 1862, he was created a Sovereign Grand Inspector-General, thirty-third degree, in Supreme Council, at Boston, and on the following day crowned an Active Member of that Body.

His official services in the various branches of the Masonic Fraternity is a long and unusually interesting one. Having passed through the chairs of Waterville Lodge, No. 33, being its Secretary in 1853 and Worshipful Master, 1855-56; High Priest of Greenleaf Chapter in 1862 and Em. Com. of St. Alban's Commandery in 1866-67. He was Gd. Master of the Gd. Lodge Maine 1860-62, Gd. H. Priest of the Gd. R. A. Chap. 1866-67; Gd. Master of the Gd. Council Royal and Select Masters 1868, also Gd. Com. of Gd. Commandery of K. T. of Maine 1878-79. He was also Gen. Gd. Master of the Gen. Gd. Council of Royal and Select Masters of the U. S. 1880-83, and Gen. Gd. H. Priest of the Gen. Gd. R. A. Chap. of the U. S. 1871-74. In the Sup. Council A. A. S. Rite he was Sov. Gd. Com. from 1867 to 79, and by the death of Albert Pike, in 1891, he succeeded to the office of Prov. Gd. Master of the Royal Order of Scotland, which position he held until his decease.

He was Chairman of the Committees on Masonic Jurisprudence and Foreign Correspondence in all the Masonic Bodies with which he was affiliated from 1803 to the time of his decease, the longest continuous service in those capacities ever performed by any one man.

To all his service for the Craft in these various positions, he added his published writings upon various Masonic subjects; his "Treatise on Masonic Jurisprudence," a most valuable work and a standard authority upon Masonic law and, what was by no means least important, his individual service on the floor of the various Grand Bodies, State and National, of which he was a member.

Brother Drummond's performance of the official duties imposed upon him by his Brethren in the Organizations of all Grades, from the Lodge to the highest governing Bodies known to the Craft, by no means covered all his labors in the interest of Freemasonry. As a Masonic jurist, he had no superior, and he was ever ready and willing, by his voice and with his pen, to give his Brethren the full benefit of his good judgment and his vast stores of knowledge of all that related to the ethics, history, and jurisprudence of the Order.

He was the Nestor of Masonic Jurisconsults in America, and was the Peer of any Mason of any period in construing the laws of Freemasonry. He was a lawgiver, a counselor, a Masonic student and a Masonic statesman. His recommendations were conservatively wise and his judgment deferred to in Masonic affairs of weighty character.

HISTORY OF SYMBOLIC MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

CHAPTER XXXII.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE GRAND LODGE SYSTEM AND THE LAW OF TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.

THE introduction of Masonry into America was soon followed by consequences which mark an era in the history of the Institution, of scarcely less importance than the organization of the Grand Lodge system in 1717. The multiplication of Grand Lodges, and the assertion of the doctrine known as the "Law of Territorial Jurisdiction," were the direct result of establishing Lodges in this country, and have had much to do with the immense growth of Masonry throughout the world. The organization of Grand Lodges in every State was really an outgrowth of the idea of Territorial Jurisdiction. Originally the government of a Lodge (so far as the Lodge did govern) was personal: and the government of the Grand Lodge was of the same character; it governed the Lodges and members of its obedience without regard to any territorial limits.

This Jurisdictional Law, like most other old Masonic Laws, is a deduction from the fundamental principles of the Institution. It has grown, rather than been made. While it is called the American Law of Jurisdiction, it is properly so called only because that in this country it was first formulated, and circumstances have called for its extensive application. But the idea did not originate here. When commissions were first issued to Provincial Grand Masters to form Provincial Grand Lodges, the territory over which those officers were to exercise authority was specified in the commission; and an examination of Chapter XXXI. shows conclusively that it was intended to confine the powers of the Provincial Grand Master to the territory thus specified, and that great care was taken to avoid conflict of jurisdiction. Thus the commission of Daniel Coxe was for New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and that of Henry Price was for New England: and while for a time there was a Provincial Grand Master for North America, as early as 1755 the appointment was for "such provinces and places in North America and the territories thereof, of which no Provincial Grand Master is at present appointed." The commission of Coxe went still further, for while he was appointed for New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, his term of office was limited to two years, and his commission further provided that at the expiration of that time, the brethren in any or all of these Provinces might elect a Grand Master for their particular Province. Thus, as early as 1730, the idea of Territorial Jurisdiction for Provincial Grand Lodges was entertained and put in practice by the Grand Lodge of England; and not only was the general idea then entertained, but that Grand Lodge then recognized the propriety of each Province having its own governing Masonic body, whose jurisdiction, moreover, should be exclusive in its territory.

In 1768, the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England wrote to Henry Price:

"No deputation, which has been granted since your appointment for any part of America, can affect you, as their authority can only extend over those Provinces where no other Provincial Grand Master is appointed."

When the division between the "Moderns" and the "Ancients" came, each party appointed Provincial Grand Masters without reference to appointments by the other; in fact, all the Grand Lodges in Great Britain claimed to exercise, and did exercise, concurrent jurisdiction in this country; but all had the same system, and all, so far as their own obedience was concerned, adopted the Law of Exclusive Territorial Jurisdiction. This doctrine of concurrent jurisdiction among themselves and exclusive jurisdiction as to other Grand Lodges, in the Dependencies of Great Britain, has been maintained by the British Grand Lodges to this day. It appears by a letter from the Grand Master of Scotland that, in 1763, the Boston Lodges holding under the Grand Lodge of England looked upon the establishment of St. Andrew's Lodge in Boston by the Grand Lodge of Scotland as an infringement of the jurisdiction of Jeremy Gridley, as Provincial Grand Master of North America; but the Grand Master of Scotland said,

"I do not doubt nor dispute his authority as Grand Master of all the Lodges in North America, who acknowledge the authority and hold of the Grand Lodge of England, as he certainly has a warrant and commission from the Grand Master of England to that effect. The Grand Master and Grand Lodge of Scotland have also granted a warrant and commission to our Rt. Worshipful Brother, Col. John Young, Esq., constituting and appointing him Provincial Grand Master of all the Lodges in North America who acknowledge the authority and hold of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. These Commissions when rightly understood can never clash or interfere with each other."

From the first creation of chartered Lodges in this country down to the Revolution, Masonry was governed through the Provincial Grand Lodge system, except that occasionally Lodges were chartered directly by the home Grand Lodge in provinces in which it had no Provincial Grand Lodge. When hostilities commenced, there were Provincial Grand Lodges, in real or nominal existence, in Massachusetts (for New England), New York, Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia under the Grand Lodge of England ("Moderns"); in Massachusetts (for Boston and within one hundred miles thereof) under the Grand Lodge of Scotland; and in Pennsylvania under the "Ancient" Grand Lodge of England: in 1781, the Athol Grand Lodge established a Provincial Grand Lodge in New York.

During the Revolution, communication with the Mother Grand Lodges was largely interrupted, and in most cases wholly ceased. The situation was further seriously com-planted by the death or absence of many of the Provincial Grand Masters and the Division of the Craft on account of the war.

John Rowe, Provincial Grand Master of the St. John's Provincial Grand Lodge at Boston, was held to have proclivities in favor of the royalists, and though taking little, if any, part in the contest, was looked upon with suspicion by the patriots; the occupation of Boston by the British army, with other causes, prevented the holding of the communications of his Provincial Grand Lodge; after the evacuation of Boston the communications were not resumed, and the body did not meet during Rowe's life, the first meeting of which there is any record being held in 1787 to attend his funeral. Gen. Joseph Warren, Provincial Grand Master of the Scottish Provincial Grand Lodge in Boston, was killed at the Battle of Bunker Hill. Sir John Johnson, Provincial Grand Master of New York, having adhered to the royal cause, was forced to seek the protection of the British Army. The records of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania previous to 1779 were lost, undoubtedly in consequence of the troubles incident to the war, and that its meetings were interrupted, we may well presume. Sir Egerton Leigh, Provincial Grand Master South Carolina, foreseeing the approaching storm, left for England in June, 1774. The Provincial Grand Masters of Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia exercised their functions, only spasmodically, if at all.

The Lodges were also affected; in many the members were divided, and some left, to return only after the war, and some, not to return at all. The result was, that many Lodges ceased to work; others worked only occasionally, as circumstances allowed; and in others, the work was scarcely interrupted. However, the condition of the Provincial Grand Lodge did not seem to affect its Lodges, but they seem to have gone on without concerning themselves about Provincial Grand Lodges or Provincial Grand Masters. They seem to have practically held that, having been created, they could go on in the discharge of their duties without the sustaining aid of any higher power whatever.

At first, all expected a restoration of relations with Great Britain; but when the Declaration of Independence was adopted, a new question was precipitated upon the Masons who adhered to the side of the colonies. While it might well be held that the existing lodges could continue to exercise their functions, the creation of new Lodges raised a very different question. The Provincial Grand Lodge in Boston, holding under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, was the first one called upon to meet this question. After the death of Warren, this body did not meet till December 27, 1776, when Joseph Webb, the Deputy, appointed and installed by Warren, presided. It met again February 14, 1777, when a petition for the charter of a new Lodge was presented and evidently discussed.

The idea of Territorial Jurisdiction in connection with Masonic Government had now become so firmly implanted in the minds of the Craft, that they evidently assumed that it was one of the laws of the institution. Independence in civil government naturally suggested independence in Masonic government. The circumstances in which the Craft were situated after the Fourth of July, 1776, brought home to every member, with great force, the importance of the question of their Masonic allegiance. They had been taught that obedience to lawful civil authority was one of the first duties of a Mason. They held, as citizens, that the Continental Congress was the lawful supreme civil authority: could they (they then asked) properly remain under the authority of a Grand Lodge, all the members of which held that their obedience as men was due to the British Crown, of which they had just declared themselves independent? Especially when they were in arms to maintain that declaration? It was inevitable that they should conclude that Masonic government should be in accord with civil government.

The petition for the new Lodge was evidently fully discussed, and the question of its disposition was referred to a future meeting.

It was then

"Voted, that the Depnty Grand Master send a summons to all the Masters and Wardens under this Jurisdiction to assemble here on the seventh of March, 1777, in order to consult upon and to elect a Grand Master for this State in the room of our late worthy Grand Master deceased."

The meeting was held and adjourned to the next evening, March 8, 1777, when "on a motion made, voted, this Grand Lodge proceed to the choice of a Grand Master to act in that capacity till Friday, June next." Joseph Webb was chosen Grand Master and the other Grand Officers were elected. The charter was then granted. The heading of the charter sets out the new authority:

"TO ALL THE FRATERNITY OF FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS.

"To whom these presents shall come:

"The most worshipful Joseph Webb, Esq., Grand Master of Antient Free and Accepted Masons, duly authorized and appointed and in ample form installed, together with his Grand Wardens, sends greeting."

Thus was formed the first sovereign Grand Lodge in this country. Its first act, after its organization, was the granting of the Charter of Berkshire Lodge. The record is very meagre, but at the same time suggestive of full discussion and careful consideration. Neither the reasons for the movement, nor the grounds upon which the proceedings were based, are stated in the record.

In a communication, in 1785, to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, a committee of the Grand Lodge, composed in part of those who had been leading spirits in 1777, state the reasons for forming the Grand Lodge and the principles upon which the action was based as follows:

"In the year 1777 application for charters of erection and constitution having been made by a number of Masons to the Ancient Grand Lodge, of which the late Jos. Warren, Esq., had been G. M., as many of the officers of that Grand Lodge as could be assembled, met in form of a Grand Lodge, the Depnty Grand M. then in the chair. And after carefully attending to the constitutions and usages of Masons in all ages and the principles upon which that Grand Lodge existed, they were unanimously of opinion that they could not legally grant charters, because the late G. M., J. W., held his authority by virtue of a commission given to him only, as Provincial Grand Master, and to be revoked at the pleasure of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Now the principal being dead the commission was of consequence vacated. They then assumed the powers of a Grand Lodge.

"From the foregoing, the principles then adopted by this Grand Lodge, upon which they have practiced and from which they have never seen occasion to recede, may readily be collected."

* * * * *

"As to applications for Grand Warrants, it was originally the opinion of this Grand Lodge that the only proper authority for constituting Grand Lodges in these sovereign States, was that which should be derived from the people—and that wherever a number of Lodges existed in a free, sovereign and independent State, those Lodges had a right of convening to erect a Grand Lodge, and it appears from the book of constitutions, that when by reason of revolutions in the State, or the neglect of the Grand Master or Grand Lodge, communications had been for some time discontinued, the officers of the respective Lodges assembled, formed a Grand Lodge, and chose a Grand Master accordingly. Should the Grand Lodge of any one State delegate a power to Masons in another State to hold a Grand Lodge, it is clear that the Grand Lodge so constituted must be subjected to that from which the power was derived, a distinction which it was thought ought not to subsist between the Grand Lodges of these United States.

"The W. G. L. perceiving this, when associations were forming in another State, did not grant them a charter in the usual style, but a dispensation to hold a Lodge and make Masons till there should be a Grand Lodge in that State, an event which it was thought would probably take place in each of the states in the union."

The rule stated in the last sentence was rigidly adhered to, and when a charter for a "travelling" (military) Lodge was prayed for, the Grand Lodge in 1779

"Voted, a charter be granted them for holding regular Lodges, make Masons, pass and raise, in this State or any of the United States of America, where no other Grand Master presides: but in any other State, where there is a Grand Master, constituted by these United States, they are to inform him and receive his sanction."

For about five years the Grand Lodge pursued the even tenor of its way, granting charters and exercising all the functions of a sovereign Grand Lodge. In 1780 and 1781, some correspondence was had with the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in relation to the election of a Grand Master General, and the first question raised by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts related to the powers to be entrusted to the Grand Master General, and the Grand Master in his reply said, "I am confident that the Grand Lodge in this State will never give up the right of electing their own Grand Master, and other officers annually." It was finally "voted, that any determination upon the subject cannot with the propriety and justice due to the craft at large, be made by this Grand Lodge until a general peace shall happily take place thro' this continent."

While the Grand Lodge was thus zealously guarding against any invasion of its sovereignty, there evidently was some question among the members of its obedience, especially the members of St. Andrew's Lodge, as to the legality of the Grand Lodge. St. Andrew's Lodge had assisted in forming the Grand Lodge, had been represented therein, and, when its Charter had been withheld from its possession, had petitioned for and received one from the Grand Lodge. But so it was, that at a special communication held June 10, 1782, a committee was appointed "to draught resolutions explanatory of the powers and authority of this Grand Lodge respecting the extent and meaning of its jurisdiction and of the exercise of any other Masonic authorities within its jurisdiction."

The Committee was an able one, being composed of Bros. Perez Morton, Paul Revere, John Warren, James Avery and John Jntean. At the December communication, the Committee presented their report, as follows:

"The Committee appointed to take into consideration the conduct of those brethren who assumed the powers and prerogatives of a Grand Lodge on the ancient establishment in this place, and examine the extent of their authority and jurisdiction, together with the powers of any other ancient Masonic institution within the same, beg leave to report the result of their examination founded on the following facts, viz.:-

"That in consequence of a petition from a number of brethren of this town to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, a Charter was granted them under the name of St. Andrew's Lodge, by the most Worshipful and Right Honorable Sholto, Charles Douglas, Lord Aberdour, and that by means of a subsequent petition of the said St. Andrew's Lodge, a Commission was made out and presented from the most Worshipful and Right Honorable George, Earl of Dalhousie, Grand Master of Scotland, to the late Most Worshipful Joseph

Warren, Esq., constituting and appointing him Provincial Grand Master of the Ancient and Honorable Society of Free and Accepted Masons, with power of granting charters of erection within one hundred miles of this metropolis, but that during the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge in form and manner thus appointed, three Lodges only were constituted by the authority thereof.

That the Commission from the Grand Lodge of Scotland granted to our late Grand Master, Joseph Warren, Esq., having died with him, and of course his deputy whose appointment was derived from his nomination being no longer in existence, they saw themselves without a head, and without a single Grand officer, and of course it was evident that not only the Grand Lodge, but all the particular Lodges under its jurisdiction must cease to assemble, the brethren be dispersed, the pennyles go unassisted, the craft languish, and ancient Masonry be extinct in this part of the world.

"That in consequence of a summons from the former Grand Wardens to the Masters and Wardens of all the regular constituted Lodges, a grand communication was held, to consult and advise on some means to preserve the intercourse of the brethren.

"That the political head of this country having destroyed all connection and correspondence between the subjects of these States and the country from which the Grand Lodge originally derived its commissioned authority, and the principles of the craft inculcating on its professors submission to the commands of the civil authority of the country they reside in, the brethren did assume an elective supremacy, and under it chose a Grand Master and Grand Officers, and erected a Grand Lodge with independent powers and prerogatives, to be exercised, however, on principles consistent with and subordinate to the regulations pointed out in the constitution of Ancient Masonry. That the reputation and utility of the craft under their jurisdiction has been most extensively diffused by the flourishing state of fourteen Lodges, constituted by their authority, within a shorter period than that in which three only received dispensations under the former Grand Lodge.

"That in the history of our craft we find that in England there are two Grand Lodges independent of each other, in Scotland the same, and in Ireland their Grand Lodge and Grand Master are independent of either England or Scotland. It is clear that the authority of some of these Grand Lodges originated in assumption, or otherwise they would acknowledge the head from whence they derived.

"Your Committee are therefore of opinion that the resolutions of the said present Grand Lodge were dictated by principles of the clearest necessity, founded in the highest reason, and warranted by precedent of the most approved authority."

"Your Committee beg leave to recommend the following resolutions to be adopted by this Grand Lodge, and to be ingrafted into its Constitutions:

"1st. Resolved, that the brethren of the Grand Lodge, in assuming the powers and prerogatives of an independent Grand Lodge, acted on the most laudable motives and consistently with the principles which ought forever to govern Masons, the benefit of the craft and the good of mankind; and are warranted in their proceedings, by the practice of ancient Masons in all ages of the world.

"2nd. Resolved, that this Grand Lodge be forever hereafter known and called by the name of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Ancient Masons, and, that it is free and independent in its government and official authority of any other Grand Lodge, or Grand Master in the universe.

"3d. Resolved, that the sovereign power and authority of the said Grand Lodge be construed to extend throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and to any of the United States, where none shall be erected over such Lodges only as this Grand Lodge shall there constitute.

"4th. Resolved, that the Grand Master for the time being be desired to call in all the charters which were held under the jurisdiction of the late Grand Master, Joseph Warren, Esq., and return the same with an endorsement thereon, expressive of their voluntary recognition of the power and authority of this Grand Lodge.

"5th. Resolved, that no person or persons ought or can (consistently with the rules of Ancient Masonry and the good order of the Craft) use or exercise the powers or prerogatives of an Ancient Grand Master, or Grand Lodge, to wit, to give power to erect Lodges of Ancient Masonry, make Masons, appoint superior or Grand officers, receive dues, or do anything which belongs to the powers or prerogatives of an Ancient Grand Lodge, within any part of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the rightful and appropriated limits to which the authority of this Grand Lodge forever hereafter extends."

The report "was read paragraph by paragraph, and after mature deliberation thereon the same was accepted and ordered to be recorded in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge." It was further ordered that the report be printed and a copy sent to each lodge "in order that it may be kept in, and considered a part of, the Book of Constitutions."

Bro. Juteau, one of the Committee and Master of "Perfect Union" Lodge, filed his dissent to the report and the resolutions, but both he and his Lodge adhered to the Grand Lodge. On the contrary St. Andrew's Lodge voted 30 to 19 against "acknowledging Massachusetts Grand Lodge independent of all Grand Lodges in the universe."

The matter was discussed between committees of the two bodies till January 29, 1783, when the Lodge notified the Grand Lodge that it considered the steps of the Grand Lodge inconsistent with Masonic principles, but by a vote of 22 to 14 decided to send up the Master and Wardens "until peace is declared with Great Britain." On the ninth day of March following, it protested against the Grand Lodge on the ground that Warren's commission died with him, and political changes have nothing to do with Freemasonry. Early in 1784, the Lodge decided by a vote of 29 to 23 to continue its adherence to the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

The twenty-three, headed by Col. Revere, received a Charter from the Grand Lodge for a Lodge by the name of "Rising States;" litigation followed, which seems to have been settled by a reference.

These circumstances occasioned further examination of the correctness of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge and of the principles upon which those proceedings were based. Several Lodges petitioned the Grand Lodge for permission to call a convention of the Lodges to consider the matter. The permission was given and a convention was held

26, 1785. St. Andrew's and Tyrian Lodges declined to be represented; but delegates of twelve Lodges met and spent the day in debating the matter, and thereupon appointed a Committee to consider the various matters under consideration. At an adjourned session, the Committee reported as follows:

"I. The Committee appointed by the convention report,—having examined the charter originally granted to the Grand Lodge in this Commonwealth by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, they find the grant to have been made to the Grand Master by said Charter appointed and to him only, without any provision for a successor.

"II. That St. Andrew's, the Tyrian, the Massachusetts, and St. Peter's Lodges were the only Lodges which, at the commencement of the war, had existence under said Charter in this Commonwealth.

"III. That soon after the commencement of the war, and the death of the Grand Master, by the Charter aforesaid appointed, the craft was in danger of decay, from the circumstance of there being no Grand Lodge established, and all communication being cut off by the war with the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

"IV. At a meeting of the delegates from St. Andrew's, the Tyrian and St. Peter's Lodges (Massachusetts then from the circumstances of the war not having congregated), a Grand Lodge was established, and Grand Master Webb elected by the free suffrages of the Members assembled, and was commissioned accordingly, without any reference to, or consideration of the Charter from Scotland, other than as that gave existence to the said St. Andrew's, Tyrian, and St. Peter's Lodges.

"V. That this Grand Lodge was thus formed from the necessity of the case, for the purpose of enabling the brethren to carry out the design of Masonry, and for the purpose of constituting new Lodges.

"VI. That all the Lodges of Ancient Masons in the Commonwealth, as well as all represented in this convention, except the said St. Andrew's, Tyrian, Massachusetts and St. Peter's, were constituted by the authority of the said Grand Lodge, called the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, and that they are Lodges from, or by, no other authority whatever.

"VII. That this establishment was about two years since communicated to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, with a request of their sentiments on the subject, but no answer, that your Committee find, has ever been received.

"VIII. This your Committee report as a state of facts, and take leave to remark thereon, that if the said Grand Lodge is not a legal constitutional Grand Lodge, as it is in this Commonwealth but four legal constituted Lodges of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, viz., the said St. Andrew's, Tyrian, Massachusetts and St. Peter's, and all the others are spurious, as being derived from a spurious original.

"IX. But they are of opinion that the said Massachusetts Grand Lodge is a constitutional Lodge, as it appears from proceedings in the Book of Constitutions, that it has been the usage of Masons in free, sovereign and independent nations and states, when they thought it for the good of Masonry to establish Grand Lodges, with the authority of such.

"X. And it appears to your Committee perfectly consistent with the principle of Masonry, which is universal benevolence, with the usage of Masons in former ages, and with reason, that Masons in every free and independent state should have such power.

"XI. More especially that the said mentioned Lodges should of right have exercised that power when they did, as the benefits of Masonry in a time of war are most needed, and are of more immediate service to Masons, and there was no other mode in which the benefits could be extended.

"XII. Your committee are further of opinion, that an union and correspondence of all Ancient Lodges through the United States is an event much to be wished for by all good Masons, and that they think an opportunity is now offered for such union and correspondence by the letter from the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania.

"XIII. On the whole then, as there have been with some Ancient Lodges a doubt respecting the constitutionality of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, and as (though we think it a constitutional Grand Lodge) there appears to us some defects in the regulations of the said Grand Lodge, to mention particularly but one, viz.: the circumstances of the Grand Master's nominating his successor, which we conceive is not perfectly consistent with freedom of election: your Committee therefore take leave to recommend that the several Ancient Lodges in this Commonwealth, and such as are represented in this convention, if they think proper, shall appear by themselves or proxies, at the Massachusetts Grand Lodge on the next grand feast, then and there perfectly to recognize the constitutionality of said Grand Lodge, choose new Grand officers, and make such alterations in the present regulations as to them shall appear expedient and proper to be made: and that the said Grand Lodge be then empowered to correspond with the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and other Grand Lodges in the United States, and to form with them such union as may be thought for the good of Masonry in general."

The resolutions were acted upon separately and each carried, either unanimously or with but one dissenting vote, and the report as a whole was adopted with but one dissenting vote.

The proceedings do not appear to have been officially reported to the Grand Lodge, but they were published and disseminated at home and in other States. St. Andrew's Lodge, however, continued to maintain its former position, while the Lodge, composed of the members seceding from it, was very active in supporting the independent Grand Lodge.

During this time, another plan of Masonic government in this country had been proposed and discussed. While the Grand Lodge (St. John's) at Boston had suspended its meetings, Grand Master Rowe had not ceased entirely to exercise the functions of his office. On February 15th, 1776, he granted a Charter to a military Lodge in "the Connecticut line" by the name of "American Union Lodge" "now erected in Roxbury, or wherever your body shall remove on the continent of America, provided it is where no

Grand Master is appointed." This last clause was not a mere formality. The Lodge worked in Connecticut and New Jersey, where there was no Provincial Grand Master, without any other authority; but when it came to meet in New York, the record commences as follows:

"The American Union Lodge held by authority under the most worshipful John Rowe, Esq., Grand Master of all Masons in North America, where no special Grand Master is appointed, confirmed by the most worshipful Peter Middleton, M. D., Provincial Deputy Grand Master for the Province of New York, by the name of Military Union Lodge."

Middleton was the Deputy of Sir John Johnson. Thus it is seen that Grand Master Rowe, as well as the Scottish Provincial Grand Masters, recognized the Law of Territorial Jurisdiction; this Lodge chartered by him strictly adhered to it.

The "Minute Book" of this Lodge from February 5, 1779, to April 23, 1783, has been preserved, and published "nearly entire."<sup>1</sup> It celebrated the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, December 27, 1779. A large number of members and visiting brethren (among them General Washington) were present. A form of petition to the several Provincial Grand Masters, to be signed in behalf of the Army Lodges and the Masons in each line, for the appointment of a Grand Master for the United States of America, was submitted, approved and ordered to be circulated. The grounds of the movement are thus stated:

"With sincere regret we contemplate the misfortunes of war which have unhappily separated us from the Grand Lodge in Europe, and deprived us from the benefits arising therefrom, so essentially necessary for the well-being of Masonry, and which has in many instances been subversive of the very institution of the order. At the same time we lament that political disputes and national quarrels should influence the exercise of charity and benevolence, and their several virtues, so necessary for our present and future happiness. Yet, considering the present situation of our Lodges, and Masonry in general, the necessity for the honor of the craft, and the importance of enjoying the benefits of so valuable an Institution, that some exertions are made for checking the present irregularities, restoring peace and harmony to the Lodges, for opening a way to the enjoyment of the fruits of Benevolence, Charity and Brotherly Love, and for the re-establishment of the order on the ancient respectable foundation; which we conceive can never be done more effectually than by the appointment of a Grand Master in and over the United States of America.

"We therefore most earnestly request that the present Provincial Grand Masters, in the respective United States, would take some measures for the appointment of a Grand Master in and over the said thirteen United States of America, either by nominating a person proper for that office, whose abilities and rank in life shall answer the importance of that conspicuous and elevated station, and transmitting such nomination to our Mother Lodge in Britain, that the appointment may be made, or in such other manner as shall to them appear most eligible. And we further beg leave to express our wishes, that the several Provincial Grand Masters in these States would, in the intermediate time, enter into unanimous and vigorous measures for checking the growing irregularities in the society, cementing the different branches, erasing the distinction between Ancient and Modern in these States, that the Craft may be established in unanimity, the established principles of its institutions more universally extended, and that our conduct may not only be the admiration of men in this world, but receive the final applause of the Grand Architect of the universe in the other, where there is nothing but Light and Love."

It was also voted, that a committee be appointed consisting of one from each organization, to meet on the first Monday of February, 1780, to take the petition into consideration.

The Lodge, at its next meeting, unanimously approved the petition, and appointed its master as a "representative of this Lodge and the Connecticut Line." The Committee met accordingly, and, at "a convention Lodge from the different lines of the army and the departments, held in due form under the authority of the American Union Lodge at Morristown, the sixth day of March, in the year of salvation, 1780," presented the following report:

"At a Committee of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, met this 7th day of the second month in the year of salvation, 1780, according to the recommendation of a convention Lodge, held at the celebration of St. John the Evangelist:

"Present Bro. John Pierce, M. M., delegated to represent the Masons, in the military line of the State of Massachusetts Bay and Washington Lodge No. 10; Bro. Jonathan Hart, M. M., delegated to represent the Masons in the military line of the State of Connecticut and American Union Lodge; Bro. Charles Graham, F. C., delegated to represent the Masons in the military line of the State of New York; Bro. John Sanford, M. M., delegated to represent the Masons in the Military line of the State of New Jersey; Bro. George Tudor, M. M., delegated to represent the Masons in the military line of the State of Pennsylvania; Bro. Otho Holland Williams, M. M., delegated to represent the Masons in the military line of the State of Delaware; Bro. Mordica Gist, P. W. M., delegated to represent the Masons in the military line of the State of Maryland; Bro. Prentice Brown, M. M., delegated to represent St. John's Regimental Lodge; Bro. John Lawrence, P. W. M., delegated to represent the Brothers in the Staff of the American Army; Bro. Thomas Machin, M. M., delegated to represent the Masons in the Corps of Artillery.

"The Brothers present proceeded to elect a President and Secretary, whereupon Bro. Mordica Gist was unanimously chosen President, and Bro. Otho Holland Williams unanimously chosen Secretary of this Committee.

"The Committee proceeded to take into consideration an address to be preferred to the Right Worshipful Grand Masters in the respective United States, whereupon Bro. Williams presented the following address:

"To the Right Worshipful the Grand Masters of the several Lodges in the respective United States of America.

UNION.

FORCE.

LOVE.

"The subscribers, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons in convention, to you, as the patrons and protectors of the craft upon the continent, prefer their humble address.

"Unhappily the distinctions of interest, the political views and national disputes subsisting between Great Britain and these United States have involved us, not only in the general calamities that disturb the tranquillity which used to prevail in this once happy country, but in a peculiar manner affects our society, by separating us from the Grand mother Lodge in Europe, by disturbing our connection with each other, impeding the progress and preventing the perfection of Masonry in America.

"We deplore the miseries of our countrymen, and particularly lament the distresses which many of our poor brethren must suffer, as well from the want of temporal relief as for a want of a source of light to govern their pursuits and illuminate the path of happiness. And we ardently desire to restore, if possible, that fountain of charity, from which to the unspeakable benefit of mankind owes benevolence and love. Considering with anxiety these disputes, and the many irregularities and improprieties committed by weak or wicked brethren, which too manifestly show the present dissipated and almost abandoned condition of our Lodges in general, as well as the relaxation of virtue amongst individuals.

"We think it our duty, Right Worshipful Brothers and Seniors in the craft, to solicit your immediate interposition to save us from the impending danger of schisms and apostacy. To obtain security from those fatal evils, with affectionate humility we beg leave to recommend the adopting and pursuing the most necessary measures for establishing one Grand Lodge in America, to preside over and govern all other Lodges of whatsoever degree or denomination, licensed or to be licensed, upon this continent; that the ancient principles and discipline of Masonry being restored, we may mutually and universally enjoy the advantages arising from frequent communion and social intercourse. To accomplish this beneficial and essential work, permit us to propose that you, the Right Master of said Lodge a brother whose merit and capacity may be adequate to a station so important and elevated, and transmitting the name and nomination of such brother, together with the name of the Lodge to be established, to our Grand Mother Lodge in Europe for approbation and confirmation, and that you may adopt and execute any other ways or means most eligible for preventing impositions, correcting abuses, and for establishing the general principles of Masonry; that the influence of the same in propagating morality and virtue may be far extended, and that the lives and conversation of all true Free and Accepted Masons may not only be the admiration of men on earth, but may receive the final approbation of the Grand Architect of the universe, in the world wherein the elect enjoy eternal light and love.

"Signed in convention in Morristown, Morris County, this seventh day of the second month in the year of our Saviour 1780, Anno Mundi 5780. Which being read, was unanimously agreed to sign, and ordered to be forwarded with an extra copy of their proceedings signed by the President and Secretary, to the respective Provincial Grand Masters. And the Committee adjourned without day."

The report was discussed and unanimously approved. At the meeting in December, when the form of petition was approved, there were present thirty-nine members of the Lodge and sixty-six visiting brethren, nearly all from the army, and representing nearly all the States: the Committee represented at least seven of the States: and when the Lodge approved the report, forty-seven members were present. This movement was thus made by brethren, influential in number and position.

Immediately after the matter was first submitted to American Union Lodge, it was taken up by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and was acted upon even before the Committee met. Indeed, from the records it might well be inferred that the movements by the Lodge and the Grand Lodge were entirely independent of each other; but Morristown, where the Lodge met, is sufficiently near Philadelphia to justify the inference that this action was soon known to the Grand Lodge; and as the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge in his letter to the Grand Master of Massachusetts says, "it has been a measure long wished for among the brethren, especially in the army, and from them the request came originally to us," it is quite certain that the movement by the Grand Lodge was in consequence of the action of the Lodge. But, be that as it may, at a Grand Lodge of Emergency held in Philadelphia January 13, 1780, five Lodges being represented, the matter was considered, and it was unanimously determined that "a Grand Master of Masons throughout the United States shall now be nominated on the part of this Grand Lodge." Upon proceeding to a ballot, George Washington was unanimously elected. It was thereupon ordered, that the minutes of the election be transmitted to the different Grand Lodges in the United States and their concurrence therein requested. A committee, with the Grand Secretary as chairman, was appointed to expedite the business by ascertaining the number of Grand Lodges in America, and the names of their officers, and by preparing circular letters "to be sent them as directed above, with all expedition." Still no progress was apparently made until July, when information was received that there was a Grand Lodge in Virginia and it was reported that there was one in Boston: it was ordered that further inquiry should be made in relation to the Grand Lodge in Boston, and the Grand Secretary was requested to write to the Grand Master of Virginia and enclose him one of the circular letters (which had been printed); and to request the concurrence of the Grand Lodge, if ancient Masons, "in the appointment of General Washington as Grand Master General of Masons in America." The Committee of the Army Lodges expected by the movement to obliterate all distinction between "Ancient" and "Modern" Masons, but the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania naturally limited the organization to "Ancient Masons," although as can now be seen that limitation would, of itself, have been fatal to the plan. The idea, too, of the Army Lodges seems to have been to have a National Grand Master and Grand Lodge, with Deputy Grand Lodges, similar to the previously existing Provincial Grand Lodges in the several States. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania did not seem to have at first a very definite idea of the nature of the organization which it was proposing. On October 16, 1780, the Grand Secretary submitted a copy of a letter, bearing date August 19, 1780, which he had sent to Grand Master Webb of Massachusetts, and the reply thereto. As already stated, Grand Master Webb desired more definite knowledge of the proposed organization. He said:

"I am well assured that no one can have any objections to so illustrious a person as General Washington to preside as Grand Master of the United States; but at the same time it will be necessary to know from you his prerogative as such; whether he is to appoint sub-Grand or Provincial Grand Masters of each State: if so, I am confident that the Grand Lodge of this State will never give up their right of electing their own Grand Masters and other officers annually. This induces me to write to you now, before the result of the Grand Lodge takes place, and must beg an answer by the first opportunity, that I may be enabled to lay the same before them. I have not heard of any State except yours and this that have proceeded as yet, since the independence, to elect their officers, but have been hoping that they would.

"I do not remember of more Grand Masters being appointed when we were under the British government than South Carolina, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts, but now it may be necessary.

"I have granted a charter of dispensation to New Hampshire till they shall appoint a Grand Master of their own, which I suppose will not be very soon as there is but one Lodge in their State."

This led to a more careful consideration of the matter by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania: a Committee was appointed, of which the learned and accomplished Grand Secretary, William Smith, D. D., was Chairman, to draft a reply to Grand Master Webb. The Committee reported to the Grand Lodge the following draft of a reply, which was unanimously approved:

"RESPECTED SIR AND R. W. BRO.:

"Your kind and interesting letters of the 14th and 19th, by some delay in the post-office, came both to my hands together, and that not before the 10th inst. They were both read and maturely considered at a very full Grand Lodge last evening, and I have it in charge to thank you and all the worthy members of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts for the brotherly notice they were pleased to take of the proposition communicated to you from the Grand Lodge of this State.

"We are happy to find that you agree with us in the necessity of having one complete Masonic jurisdiction under some one grand head throughout the United States. It has been a measure long wished for among the brethren, especially in the army, and from them the request came originally to us, that we might improve the opportunity which our central situation gave us of setting this measure on foot.

"From these considerations, joined to an earnest desire of advancing and doing honor to Masonry, and not from any affectation of superiority or of dictating to any of our brethren, we put in nomination for Grand Master over all these States (and elected, so far as depended upon us) one of the most illustrious of our brethren, whose character does honor to the whole fraternity, and who, we are therefore persuaded, would be wholly unexceptionable. When our proposition and nomination should be communicated to other Grand Lodges and ratified by their concurrence, then, and not before, it was proposed to define the powers of such a Grand Master General, and to fix articles of Masonic union among all the Grand Lodges by means of a convention of committees from the different Grand Lodges, to be held at such time and place as might be agreed upon. Such convention may also have power to notify the Grand Master General of his election: present him his diploma, badges of office, and install with due form and solemnity.

"To you who are so well learned in the Masonic art, and acquainted with its history, it need not be observed that one Grand Master General over many Grand Lodges, having each their own Grand Masters, is no novel institution, even if the peculiar circumstances of the Grand Lodges in America, now separated from the jurisdiction from whence they first originated, did not render it necessary. We have also a very recent magnificent example of the same thing in Europe, which may serve in respect to the ceremonies of installation, as a model for us.

"I will copy the paragraph as dated at Stockholm, in Sweden, the 21st day of March last, as you may not perhaps have seen it.

"The 19th of this month (March, 1790) will always be a memorable day to the Freemasons established in this kingdom, for on that day the Duke of Sudermania was installed Grand Master of all the Lodges throughout this kingdom, as well as those of St. Petersburg, Copenhagen, Brunswick, Hamburg, &c. The Lodge at St. Petersburg had sent a Deputy for this purpose, and others had intrusted the diploma of the installment to Baron Leyonhufvud, who had been last year to Copenhagen and in Germany on this negotiation. This installment was attended with great pomp. The assembly was composed of more than four hundred members, and was honored with the presence of the king, who was pleased to grant a Charter to the Lodge, taking it under his royal protection, at the same time investing the New Grand Master with an ermine cloak; after which he was placed upon a throne, clothed with the marks of his new dignity, and there received the compliments of all the members, who according to their rank were admitted to kiss the hand, sceptre, or medal, struck to perpetuate the memory of this solemnity, which passed in Exchange Hall. It is said the king will grant revenues for the commanderies, and that this royal Lodge will receive each an annual tribute. This solemnity hath raised the order of Freemasons from a kind of oblivion into which they were sunk."

"What the particular authorities of the Grand Master of these United States were to be, we had not taken upon us to describe, but (as before hinted) had left them to be settled by a convention of Grand Lodges or their Deputies. But this is certain, that we never intended the different Provincial or State Grand Lodges should be deprived of the election of their own grand officers, or of any of their just Masonic rights and authorities over the different Lodges within the bounds of their jurisdiction.

"But where new Lodges are to be erected beyond the bounds of any legal Grand Lodge now existing, such Lodges are to have their warrants from the Grand Master General, and when such Lodges become a number sufficient to be formed into one Grand Lodge the bounds of such Grand Lodge are to be described, and the warrant to be granted by the Grand Master aforesaid, who may also call and preside in a convention of Grand Lodges when any matter of great and general importance to the whole united fraternity of these States may require it. What other powers may be given to the Grand Master General, and how such powers are to be drawn up and expressed, will be the business of the convention proposed.

"For want of some general Masonic authority over all these States the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, ex necessitate, have granted warrants beyond its bounds, in the Delaware and Maryland States, and you have found it expedient to do the same in New Hampshire, but we know that necessity alone can be a plea for this.

"By what has been said above, you will see that our idea is to have a Grand Master General over all the United States, and each Lodge under him to preserve its own rights, jurisdictions, &c., under him as formerly under the Grand Lodge of Great Britain, from whence the Grand Lodges in America had their warrants, and to have this new Masonic constitution and the powers of the Grand Master General fixed by a convention of committees aforesaid.

"Others, we are told, have proposed that there be one Grand Master over all these States, and that the other Grand Masters, whether nominated by him or chosen by their own Grand Lodges, should be considered as his Deputies. But we have the same objection to this that you have, and never had any idea of establishing such a plan as hath been suggested before.

"This letter is now swelled to a great length. We have therefore only to submit two things to your deliberation:

"First. Either whether it be best to make your election of a Grand Master General immediately, and then propose to us a time and place where a committee from your body could meet a committee from ours to fix his powers and proceed to installment; or "Second. Whether you will first appoint such a place of meeting and the powers of the proposed Grand Master, and then return home and proceed to the election, and afterwards meet anew for installment. This last mode would seem to require too much time, and would not be so agreeable to our worthy brethren of the army, who are anxious to have this matter completed.

"As you will probably choose the first mode, could not the place of our meeting be at or near the headquarters of the army, at or soon after St. John's day next? At any rate, you will not fix a place far northward on account of some brethren from Virginia who will attend, for we propose to advertise the business and the time and place of meeting in the public papers, that any regular Grand Lodges, which we may not have heard of, may have an opportunity of sending representatives."

It was natural that the Masons of the army Lodges should favor a national organization, and equally as natural that civilians should be jealous of a central governing power. The States were as yet only a confederation, and each one was jealous of its own independence and sovereignty. The same reasons influenced the same men when they considered the question of Masonic Government.

But the Massachusetts Grand Lodge was not willing to adopt the plan proposed by American Union Lodge, even as modified by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, without the concurrence of other Grand Lodges, and as their sentiments could not then be ascertained, the consideration of the matter was postponed "until a general peace shall happily take place through the continent." This action of Massachusetts was more significant than at first appears. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was an "Ancient" Grand Lodge, and the members of its obedience did not recognize the "Moderns" as regular Masons: it proposed, as has already been stated, to limit the national organization to "Ancient" Grand Lodges. The Massachusetts Grand Lodge derived its origin from the Grand Lodge of Scotland: and while it was an "Ancient" Grand Lodge in all respects, except in origin, it recognized the "Moderns" as Masons, and it had endeavored for years to establish mutual visitation with the Lodges under the St. John's Grand Lodge. When the foregoing correspondence took place, the Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts were all the "Ancient" Grand Lodges, Provincial or Independent, that existed in a state of activity in America. Pennsylvania contemplated the formation of the national organization by those two Grand Lodges, unless it should appear that there were other "Ancient" Grand Lodges in the country. But Massachusetts evidently contemplated the union of all the Grand Lodges, whether "Ancient" or "Modern": the postponement of the matter for such a purpose was equivalent to an absolute rejection of the plan proposed by Pennsylvania.

The project of a national governing organization was practically abandoned. It was not renewed when peace was declared. In 1785, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania issued a circular proposing a convention of Deputies from each Grand Lodge "for the only purpose of conferring together and mutual advice," with no other or higher powers.

In 1790, the Deputy Grand Master of Virginia laid before his Grand Lodge "a letter from a committee of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge purporting a wish to constitute a supreme Grand Lodge composed of Deputies from every Grand Lodge of the United States." The term "Supreme Grand Lodge" could scarcely have been used in the circular, because when, in that same year, the Grand Lodge of Georgia proposed the creation of a supreme Grand Lodge, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania

"Resolved, unanimously, that the constituting of a federal or supreme Grand Lodge to have jurisdiction over the respective Grand and other Lodges throughout the continent, as proposed by the R. W. G. Lodge of Georgia, is inexpedient and appears impracticable; but that a convention of deputies from the several Grand Lodges of the United States for the purpose of forming a more intimate union and establishing a regular and permanent intercourse betwixt the said Grand Lodges, would be highly advantageous to the fraternity, and that this Grand Lodge will appoint Deputies to such convention for the aforesaid purposes."

Referring to this resolution, the Grand Lodge of Virginia spoke of the convention therein proposed as a "Supreme Grand Lodge," evidently meaning a mere meeting of Deputies from the different Grand Lodges. In fact, since 1780, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania has steadily opposed the formation of a supreme Grand Lodge with any governing powers. But the convention project of Pennsylvania and the supreme Lodge project of Georgia both failed: similar propositions have since that time been made and discussed, but none of them have been received with sufficient favor to be adopted.

But while this particular plan of organizing Masonry in America failed, the two fundamental ideas, upon which the plan was based, were by no means abandoned, but were entertained with an increased confidence and determination to put them in practice. The doctrine of the exclusive jurisdiction of each Grand Lodge in its own State was now unquestioned: indeed, the Grand Lodges justified the formation of Lodges in other States only upon the plea of necessity, and held that jurisdiction over such Lodges could be maintained only until a Grand Lodge should be formed in such State: charters were granted upon this previously declared condition. Also the idea of independence of all allegiance to any Grand Lodge in Great Britain had spread more widely and become more fully impressed upon the minds of the craft. It was expressly declared or assumed as indisputable, that the duty of Masons to be obedient to the laws of their country and loyal to its flag, necessarily gave the Masons of an independent State the right to have an independent Grand Lodge in such State. The very condition upon which they became Masons was that Masonic duty and allegiance never interfere with duty to their country. It follows (they reasoned) that civil allegiance and Masonic allegiance must be in harmony. It inevitably follows further that a Grand Lodge should be formed in every independent State.

They further held that the manner of forming Grand Lodges had already been settled in entire accordance with these principles.

Thus in Virginia, on May 6, 1777, the delegates of five Lodges, assembled in convention, were of the unanimous opinion "that a Grand Master ought to be chosen to preside over the craft in this Commonwealth:" at an adjournment held a week later a circular was sent out to the Lodges, in which it is said,

"We find upon record, that the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland and Ireland founded their original right of election upon their sole authority, by mutual consent, distinct and separate from all foreign power whatever. We therefore conclude that we have and ought to hold the same rights and privileges that Masons in all time heretofore have confessedly enjoyed."

In response to this circular, a convention was held June 23, 1777, but as there was not a majority of the Lodges represented, it was deemed inexpedient to proceed then to the choice of a Grand Master. There was evidently doubt in the minds of some, as a method "by which scrupulous Masons may be reconciled to such a measure," was proposed, but it was voted that if that method failed to effect the result within a year, the President of the convention should then call it together, to proceed to the election of a Grand Master. The proposed method proving abortive, the convention was called together October 13, 1778, and a Grand Master elected. The following resolution was also adopted:

"It is the opinion of this convention, that it is agreeable to the Constitution of Masonry, that all the regular chartered Lodges within this State should be subject to the Grand Master of said State."

At the session of the Grand Lodge, held June 24, 1779, it was

"Resolved, that all the regular Lodges within the State ought not to hold their charters from the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland and Ireland or elsewhere, but ought to have their charters renewed in the Grand Lodge to be holden on the tenth day of November next, in this State, and that the Secretary order the different Lodges to transmit attested copies thereof by their Deputies to the Grand Lodge, to be held on the tenth day of November next, in the Lodge room in the city of Williamsburg, that due regard may be paid to the seniority of the charters of the different Lodges."

And in 1778, it declared:

"The Grand Lodge of this State is holden by the powers given to it by the free consent of all the Lodges independent of all authority whatsoever."

And a few days later:

"The fountain of all power is originally derived from the people who have a right to grant it; the unanimous consent, or we'll say a majority, have a right to confer this authority so far as to bind themselves, and in some cases others."

So also in Pennsylvania.

In a circular to other Grand Lodges approved by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania August 4, 1784 (before it had declared its independence), it is said:

"It is a prevailing opinion among brethren here that the alteration of the political relation between our country and that from which we received our warrants, renders it improper to continue any acknowledgment of dependency, and ought to exclude every kind of foreign jurisdiction."

And the last act of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was the adoption of a resolution in which it is declared:

"That this Grand Lodge is, and ought to be, a Grand Lodge independent of Great Britain, or any other authority whatever."

The Independent Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was organized September 25, 1786. An account of this was published in a newspaper of the day. The author of the account was evidently one of the leaders in the movement. Among other things he said:

"This measure is not without precedent to sanctify it in the annals of Masonry. Such has been the conduct of other Lodges similarly circumstanced with ourselves, and seems to arise from the providential order and disposition of human events. For although Masonry disowns any connection with politics or faction, and 'tis right it should be so; yet, considering a separation has taken place between the once united countries of Britain and America, it would be as improper and absurd that we should again yield an obedience to her wild, extravagant claims of power, as that Lodges of this independent empire should be subservient to jurisdictions from abroad."

Similar declarations were made by other Grand Lodges, which will be noticed in the particular accounts of the several Grand Lodges, in subsequent chapters. The same principles were expressly declared by the "Ancient" Grand Lodge of England in its communication to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in 1792, in which it is said:

"The accession of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania to a fraternal alliance with the Grand Lodge of England, and consequently with the several Grand Lodges in the different quarters of the globe in alliance with that of England, so conducive to the honor and interest of our Ancient Craft, must necessarily be highly satisfactory to the Masonic world at large."

"Having perused your book of Constitutions, we reflect with pleasure that the Grand Lodge of England has given birth to a Grand Lodge in the western world, whose strict adherence to the ancient and immutable landmarks of our order reflects honor on its original founders. Here we must beg leave to state that we conceive that, in constituting your Grand Lodge, we necessarily communicated to it the same independent sovereign Masonic authority within your jurisdiction which we ourselves possess within ours amenable to no superior jurisdiction under heaven, and subject only to the immutable landmarks of the Craft.

"All Grand Lodges in Masonry being necessarily free, independent, and equipollent within their respective jurisdictions, which consequently excludes the idea of subjection to a foreign authority or the establishment of an imperium in imperio.

"It having, however, pleased the Almighty Architect of the Universe to erect the Province Pennsylvania into a sovereign State, we coincide with you in opinion, that it became expedient to remove those doubts which either had or might be entertained by the uninformed upon that point, by declaring in the most explicit manner the independence of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, the full and ample authority of which, limited only by the unchangeable landmarks of the system, as it cannot be increased, so neither can it ever be diminished by political changes or revolutions."

During this period, the question whether one Grand Lodge could properly grant a charter for the formation of another Grand Lodge, was considerably mooted. It was practically decided in the negative. One reason given seems somewhat illogical, viz.: that a Grand Lodge thus created would not be the peer of the one giving the authority to create it: but as a son on arriving at manhood is the peer of his father, it is not perceived why a Grand Lodge formed by authority from another would not be the peer of all other Grand Lodges. But the reason that that method would be contrary to the constitutions of Masonry and the usages of the Craft, was decisive.

Within seven years after the close of the War of the Revolution, the system of Grand Lodges with Territorial jurisdiction was firmly established. While there was some difference as to minor details, the consensus of opinion and usage had crystallized into law the following propositions, as necessary deductions from the fundamental principles of Freemasonry:

I. It is the inherent right of the Lodges in an independent State to organize a Grand Lodge according to the constitutions of Masonry, "amenable to no superior jurisdiction under heaven, and subject only to the immutable landmarks of the Craft."

II. The Grand Lodge thus created has exclusive jurisdiction over Masons and Masonry in the State in which it is established.

III. Such Grand Lodge may create Lodges in another State in which no Grand Lodge exists, and maintain them until a Grand Lodge is established in such State, and no longer.

In 1790, independent Grand Lodges, created in accordance with these principles, existed as follows: in Massachusetts (two, St. John's and Massachusetts), New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York ("Ancient"), Pennsylvania ("Ancient"), New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina (two, "Ancient" and "Modern") and Georgia; one was formed in Rhode Island in 1791; their example has been very extensively followed, as will be seen in a subsequent chapter.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE ANTI-MASONIC EXCITEMENT.

THE adoption of the Grand Lodge system and the consequent organization of a Grand Lodge in each State, with no national governing body, necessarily preclude giving a history of Masonry as a whole in the United States. As each Grand Lodge has been sovereign in its own jurisdiction, and the peer of all the others, each has its own history separate from that of the others.

But one event and its consequences had such a material effect upon the Institution throughout the whole country, affecting every jurisdiction in common, although some to a greater extent than others, that a general account of it seems necessary.

Up to the year 1826, the growth of Masonry had been rapid, but apparently solid. It then met a reverse which seemed likely to destroy it utterly in this country, and did actually paralyze it for almost twenty years. The excitement was so great that the histories, written at the time, were so colored by prejudice, that they are wholly unreliable; and even now, after the lapse of sixty years, it is impossible to get at the whole truth. It is proposed to give in this chapter an account of it gathered from official documents, judicial investigations, and other reliable sources of information.

In Batavia, the shire town of Genesee County in New York, in 1825, lived a man by the name of William Morgan. Upon the authority of William L. Stone, the author of the anti-Masonic letters to John Quincy Adams, Morgan's character was such that "more can be said than will do good to his memory:" he was an operative mason by trade, but had led a roving life, at one time having been, according to his own statement, a private soldier in the war of 1812; he was of rather a prepossessing appearance, "with a quick, intelligent, but sly and sinister-glancing eye;" he had received a common school education, but had added to it by considerable reading; he was a hard drinker, and "his nights, and sometimes his days also, were spent at tippling houses, while occasionally, to the still greater neglect of his family, he joined in the drunken carousals of the vilest and most worthless of men;" "his disposition was envious, malicious and vindictive;" such is Mr. Stone's portrait of the man.

According to the same authority, he was "a bright Mason," that is to say, was a very excellent proficient in the first three degrees, but where he received those degrees is not known, and many doubted if he ever received them at all. He was indolent and not ashamed to beg of Masons, and his support was made up in part by Masonic charities, "in devising means to procure which he was remarkably ingenious."

He came to Batavia from Le Roy, in the same county, where he had received the Capitular degrees upon the avowment of a leading citizen and Mason, with whom he was intimate at first, but afterwards quarrelled.

After his removal to Batavia, a petition for a new Chapter was started, which he was allowed to sign; but before it was presented some of the signers had become aware of his character and habits, and that petition was destroyed and a new one substituted, so that when the Dispensation came, his name was not in it. Stung with rage, he "was suddenly transformed from an ardent and zealous friend of the Masonic institution, into a public, determined and inveterate foe," says Mr. Stone. But it seems that he was not wholly actuated by revenge: the hope of gain stimulated him as well.

He had, early in the year before (1825), commenced writing upon Freemasonry. He visited New York city that year, and was often closeted with a man of talents and scholarship, who had been expelled in 1824; he had also taken means to obtain a more perfect knowledge of the high degrees. Whether he originally had any design of publishing, of course cannot be told.

One of Morgan's intimate associates was David C. Miller, the editor of a political paper in Batavia, but a man of dissolute habits; he had received the first degree in Albany many years before, but had never been advanced. At this time he had sunk so low that another paper had been started, and he was embarrassed pecuniarily as well as disgraced generally. He conceived the idea of publishing Morgan's work, and arrangements were made with others to furnish the capital for the enterprise, out of which all concerned expected to reap very great profits.

The intended publication of a full disclosure of the secret ceremonies of Freemasonry was then publicly announced, but at first attracted but little attention. This did not suit the plans of the projectors; for if the book was unnoticed or unopposed by the Fraternity, its sale would be small; but if the opposition of the Masons could be aroused, the curiosity of the public would be irresistible, and the demand for the book immense. Articles, cunningly devised to excite the Masons, by apparently proceeding from members of the Craft, but really, it is believed, prepared by Miller, were published in the newspapers. These brought out others from indiscreet Brethren, and soon great excitement prevailed among them.

Some of the more discreet had conferences with Morgan and expostulated with him: he professed to relent, and agreed to suppress the publication, and even professed to deliver up his manuscripts. Soon it was discovered that he was doubly treacherous, and that he had merely given up pretended manuscripts to lull the opposition, while Miller was at the very time in possession of the copies prepared for the press, and was pushing their publication with all his might.

In consequence of this conduct of Morgan, notices appeared in the newspapers denouncing him as a swindler and impostor. It was claimed by the anti-Masons afterwards, that these notices were connected with the subsequent events and the alleged murder of Morgan; but that claim has long since been abandoned.

It is undoubtedly true that, among the more excitable Masons, there was a determination to prevent the publication; they did not know what it was to contain, but only that it claimed to give the full secret ceremonies. Morgan and Miller were both pressed by their creditors, and the former arrested and held to bail on old debts.

Miller also affected to be alarmed for his personal safety and the security of his office, and took measures for defence. He claimed that an attack on his office was organized among the Masons of the surrounding country, and that forty or fifty of them met at a rendezvous six miles away and came to Batavia, but on learning that the office was to be defended with fire-arms, relinquished their design and dispersed in the gray of the morning. On the night of September 10, 1826, the stairs leading to Miller's office were discovered to be on fire. It was soon extinguished. It was perfectly evident that the fire was incendiary; but its speedy extinguishment, and the fact that several barrels of water were standing in close proximity, led to the conclusion that the fire was set by Miller to increase the excitement and arouse the sympathy of the public in his favor.

The next morning, Morgan was arrested on a charge of larceny at Canandaigua, fifty miles from Batavia. He was carried there by a posse, tried, and acquitted on the ground that he had borrowed the articles he was charged with stealing, and, therefore, though he had not returned them, he was not guilty of larceny. He was then arrested for debt and committed to jail.

The next day (September 12) Miller professed to receive an anonymous note that his office was to be again attacked that day. A body of sixty or seventy men (says Stone) did appear in Batavia, but made no demonstration against the office; but a constable with a single assistant did go there and arrest Miller, and carried him, under a strong guard, to Le Roy, but allowed him to communicate with his counsel and friends; arriving at Le Roy, the constable left Miller with the magistrate and went to find the plaintiff, but not returning at once the magistrate discharged Miller, just as the constable was coming in; the latter attempted to arrest Miller, but he escaped, and, by the help of his friends, eluded the officer and returned home during the night.

In the meantime, Morgan's wife went to Canandaigua and proposed to deliver up his manuscripts to obtain his release; but she was informed, as she afterwards alleged, that the debt had been paid and Morgan released, but again arrested on suit of a Pennsylvania creditor and taken to that State.

It turned out that the manuscripts, which she surrendered, were only those which had been printed, and for which Miller had no further use. It is claimed by her friends, that, on her return home, a leading Mason accompanied her and told her that she would not see her husband for at least a year, and perhaps more, but that he was not dead, and that she and her family would be well provided for; also that on her arrival home, another Mason called on her and told her that the Lodge had appointed him to provide for her and her children, and that he had made arrangements for boarding them at the public house; and that she had promptly rejected both offers.

Days passed away and nothing was heard from Morgan. The friends of his wife, becoming alarmed, sent a special agent to Canandaigua to ascertain what had become of him. He reported that Morgan had been released from jail by the payment of the debt by one Lawson, on the evening of the twelfth of September; that, on leaving the jail, he was seized by Lawson and another, and in spite of cries of "murder," was dragged away down the street, two other men by the name of Chesebro and Sawyer standing by and not interposing, but following them down the street, and one of them having picked up Morgan's hat; that a carriage at once followed down the street and soon returned and drove off towards Rochester, being empty when it went down, and having several persons in it when it drove back; that it arrived at Rochester about daylight, and was driven three miles beyond, when the party alighted, and the carriage returned; that the driver stated that the parties were all strangers to him, and that he did not notice any violence. While there was no positive testimony that Morgan had been carried away, this report aroused the most intense excitement. Public meetings were held in Batavia to denounce the outrage and secure the punishment of those concerned in it. Prominent Masons took part in them, and were the foremost in demanding an investigation. The excitement spread like wild-fire; meetings were held in adjacent counties; committees were appointed to make further investigations; and the conduct of some Masons aided in working up the public mind to a high pitch of exasperation. All those charged with the abduction of Morgan were Masons; others treated the matter lightly; and others said substantially, "served him right;" these remarks of excited men were repeated with additions and embellishments; remarks of horrible character, but never made, were imputed to Masons; and, worse than all, reckless and unscrupulous politicians seized upon the excitement to promote their own advancement. The consequence was, that while the great body of the fraternity denounced the crime, they were all equally assailed by the fanatics, without any discrimination, unless, in the language of Mr. Stone, "by public renunciation, they confessed themselves to have been either knaves or fools." The Governor of New York, at the time, was that distinguished man and eminent Mason, De Witt Clinton. He issued proclamations, and did all in his power, by offering rewards, to assist in ferreting out the guilty parties and discovering the whereabouts of the missing man.

The investigations of the committees showed that when the parties left the carriage beyond Rochester, they entered another and proceeded west through Lewiston, and so on to Fort Niagara, changes of horses being provided, as if spontaneously almost, a part of the way. Eli Bruce, the sheriff of the County of Erie, was with it. When the party arrived at Fort Niagara, the four occupants of the carriage, one of whom was Bruce, left it, dismissed the driver and proceeded towards the Fort, which was about eighty rods distant.

Bruce was immediately arrested on the charge of the abduction of Morgan, but was acquitted by the magistrate, because it could not be proved that any one was abducted, nor that any force or violence had been exercised towards any person in the carriage.

Lawson, Chesebro, Sawyer, and a man by the name of Sheldon, were indicted for conspiring to abduct Morgan, and also for carrying the conspiracy into execution. The three former pleaded guilty to both indictments, but it was adjudged that they could be sentenced on only one. Sheldon admitted the abduction, but denied that he was concerned in it; an alibi was proved by overwhelming evidence, but it did not avail and he was found guilty. They were all sentenced to imprisonment in jail, Lawson for two years, Chesebro for one year, Sheldon for three months, and Sawyer for one month. It subsequently transpired, that beyond question Sheldon was innocent, but was mistaken for another man. The excitement was so great that an accusation was equivalent to a conviction. The Judge was abused for imposing so light sentences, and the charge was made and repeated for years that it was on account of his Masonic obligations, whereas he was not and never had been a Mason.

Governor Clinton addressed letters to the Governors of the two Canadas, requesting them to cause inquiry to be made respecting Morgan, as it was suspected that he had been carried to Canada. Governor Clinton says:

"During the last year he put a manuscript into the hands of a printer in Batavia, purporting to be a promulgation of the secrets of Freemasonry. This was passed over by the great body of that fraternity without notice and with silent contempt: but a few deperate fanatics engaged in a plan of carrying him off, and on the 12th of September last, (1836,) they took him to Canandaigua by force, as it is understood, and conveyed him to the Niagara River, from whence it is supposed that he was taken to His Britannic Majesty's dominions. Some of the offenders have been apprehended and punished, but no intelligence has been obtained respecting Morgan, since his abduction."

Meanwhile, the excitement continued to increase; the Courts and the laws were assailed, and Freemasonry was more fiercely denounced than ever: the community was in a whirlwind of passion, and politicians "came to the front" and procured the passage, at public meetings, of resolutions against voting for Freemasons "for any offices whatever." As many of the leading men in both parties were Masons, the undoubted object of carrying the matter into politics was to secure the advancement of those who would not be able to succeed upon their own merits. To "fire the public heart," all kinds of stories were invented and published. Among them, that Morgan was delivered to John Brandt, son of the old Mohawk Chief, and by him sent to the North-west Territory; this had scarcely been denied when another was published, that Morgan had been taken to the Canadian shore, tried by a Masonic tribunal, and executed by a young Indian; this was at once exploded, and then it was said that the Masons of Canada had been requested to take Morgan to Quebec and ship him on a vessel of war, but that this being refused he was put into a boat and turned adrift over Niagara Falls; then it was said that he was tried at Fort Niagara, by a Masonic council, pursuant to an express order from the Grand Chapter, and put to death in the manner prescribed in one of the alleged obligations as given in Morgan's book!

The excitement was further increased by the leaving of three men, who had been charged with greater or less participation in the abduction, viz.: Burrage Smith, John Whitney and Col. King; the two former were supposed to go to New Orleans, while the latter procured the situation of sutler in the western part of Arkansas.

Still there came a slight reaction; Sheldon had now been shown to be innocent of the crime of which he had been convicted; another man, who had gone down to his grave under the charge of murder, was, now he had died, publicly exonerated by his accusers; a member of the committee which had reported the finding of blood in the magazine at Fort Niagara, now authorized the statement "that no signs of blood, or any other probable evidences of the murder of Morgan, had been discovered at Fort Niagara." The persons who had arrested Morgan and taken him to Canandaigua, were tried and acquitted by instructions from the Court, on the ground that their warrant protected them.

But this was only a lull in the storm, which soon came on more fiercely than ever. One Richard Howard was charged by one Mann with having admitted to him that he set Miller's office on fire; and by a second affidavit with having confessed to him that Morgan had been murdered; that lots were drawn to determine who should do the act, and that it had fallen upon him. A warrant was issued for Howard's arrest, but further inquiry caused a suspension of proceedings. Mann proved to be insane, and in a few months died a raving maniac. Howard, however, left that part of the country, and, it is alleged, came to New York and sailed for England, his native country. Stone charges Howard with all that Mann accused him of, but as his name is not even mentioned in any of the numerous trials, after the whole community had made themselves detectives to ferret out all who were engaged in the crime or in any manner connected with it, it is safe to conclude that Mann's statements were the mere ravings of a lunatic.

Stone assumes that Howard was the man to whom Avery Allyn (the author of "Allyn's Ritual") referred in an affidavit published in 1829, to the effect that in March, 1828, he attended an Encampment in New York city, and the Prelate had told him that they were certain of Morgan's death, as the person who had executed the penalty of his obligation upon him had been in that Encampment and confessed that he was the one who gave the fatal blow, and that another Templar corroborated the statement, and both declared that they had furnished the man money and sent him to Europe. Stone investigated the matter at the time, because it involved a gentleman of his acquaintance who was above suspicion, and he came "to the full and entire belief that not one word of Allyn's statement was true." Such was also the general verdict. It is true that after Stone became a stronger anti-Mason, he expressed doubts whether Allyn's affidavit might not have been substantially true, except that he was in error as to the persons who made the statement! The denial of the Masons cannot be overcome by such a mere guess as that.

In April, 1827, four persons were tried for abducting Morgan, as hereinbefore related, and three were convicted and sent to jail, and one acquitted. While the evidence scarcely warrants the finding of the jury that legal process was used only as a color, and, therefore, no protection to the accused, and did not warrant the conviction of the fourth man, the Anti-Masons were greatly enraged at his acquittal, and he was indicted for two other alleged offences, but never tried upon them.

In May, 1827, seventeen persons were tried for taking Morgan from the jail and removing him to foreign parts; it appeared, however, beyond question that they were concerned only in carrying him to the jail, and whatever was done afterwards was in pursuance of a new plan unknown to them, and they were acquitted in accordance with the advice of the presiding judge. This result increased the public clamor.

About this time, parties were sent to arrest and bring home for trial, Smith, Whitney, and Col. King. They returned without success; but immediately after their return, King came of his own accord; and after a short time, Whitney, also; and Smith was dead. The return of these men utterly astounded the anti-Masons, and deprived them of their material for denouncing the Masons. King surrendered himself for trial, but died before it came on; Whitney was tried and convicted.

The election was approaching, and all manner of stories were put in circulation and printed by the anti-Masonic newspapers, a large number of which had sprung into existence. An examination of them now leads one to conclude that the editors were generally most unscrupulous knaves or most credulous fools; but large allowance must be made for the prevailing excitement.

The anti-Masonic party had grown rapidly, and was exceedingly aggressive, and they entered the campaign literally with fury. They murmured against Gov. Clinton. He had removed Eli Bruce from his office of Sheriff, but not so promptly as they demanded. The character of the excitement, and the ease with which people were gulled, are shown by an incident which happened in October. The body of a drowned man was found on the beach about forty miles from Niagara; an inquest was held, and "accidental drowning" was the verdict of the coroner's jury; the body being putrid was buried with all convenient speed; but it was not destined to remain undisturbed; the suggestion was made that it was Morgan's body, and that it had been hastily buried by those interested in its not being identified. To be sure Morgan was believed to have been dead some thirteen months, and the physical impossibility that the body could have been so far preserved in the waters of Ontario as to be capable of identification, was scouted out of sight. It was announced all over the country that "Morgan's body has been found;" a new inquest was called, and Mrs. Morgan and other witnesses were examined, and they identified the body! A dentist who had extracted two of Morgan's teeth produced them, and declared that they fitted in a place on the same side of the mouth where the deceased had lost two teeth. It is true, that not one single article of clothing upon the body had ever belonged to Morgan, or ever been known to have been worn by him; it is also true, that in the pockets were found some religious tracts, which Morgan's course of life would not induce people to suppose that he would have in possession; but it was said that the change of clothes was a trick of his murderers. The coroner's inquest officially declared the body to be that of William Morgan! It is evident that some of the more intelligent did not swallow the story; a distinguished politician is said to have remarked, "It's a good enough Morgan till after the election." The funeral followed; the body was first removed with great parade to Batavia, creating a prodigious sensation. The air actually rang with imprecations, not only upon the murderers of Morgan, but upon the whole Fraternity, all of whom were charged with being accessory to his murder. Thousands were present at the funeral; and it was difficult to tell whether its purpose was to bury the body, or to curse the Masons! After the funeral came handbills, addresses and appeals to the worst passions of the people, as thick as autumn leaves.

The Masons scouted the idea that the body was Morgan's, and insisted that the whole was a show for political effect; and with much truth so far as many were concerned, but erroneously as to the multitude, who believed in it implicitly. The Masons instituted inquiries and soon found that a man by the name of Monroe had been drowned in Niagara River, and his body had not been recovered. His widow and son came over and described the clothes which Monroe had worn, and the description was precisely that of those found upon the body. To be brief, a third inquest was held and the body shown to be, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that of Monroe. But the exposure of the imposition came only a day or two before election and too late for any effect.

And yet in a work ("The Broken Seal") published within twenty years past to aid an attempted crusade against Freemasonry, the author gravely declares his belief that the body was Morgan's; with characteristic fairness and honesty, he recites the evidence tending to show the identity, but conveniently omits the other facts, which utterly destroy the force of his statements.

To return: at this time also, one R. H. Hill avowed himself to be the murderer of Morgan, and surrendered himself for trial; he went before the Grand Jury and repeated his confession; but his story was discredited and he was dismissed as insane and was heard of no more.

Another illustration of public credulity in those times immediately followed the Monroe affair. One Hamilton traveled about the country giving lectures and exhibitions of Masonic ceremonies, by which he was reaping a harvest. He was a man of vile character, but professed to be a minister, and as he preached anti-Masonry he succeeded with his imposition. He was intemperate, and having taken too much stimulus just before commencing a lecture, his stomach rebelled, and, while his lecture was in progress, relieved itself by ejecting a portion of its contents. But he was equal to the occasion; his landlord was a Mason; and he at once made the charge that he had been poisoned to prevent his exposure of Masonry. The landlord submitted to the imputation, but not quietly. A man of means, who repeated the statement, was sued and ultimately mulcted in heavy damages for the slander. Hamilton fled into another part of the country and added to his lectures a highly colored account of the persecution to which he had been subjected and the attempts on his life. One morning, after one of his most bitter lectures, he was missing. The day passed and the next, without tidings of him; but on the next came word that a man had been found drowned in the creek a few miles away. Here was another murder by the Masons! A committee went to the spot and disinterred the body, (which had been buried,) but there was no excuse for pronouncing it to be Hamilton's; they returned disappointed, still believing that Hamilton had been made away with; but they were soon set right. As they entered the village, they met their supposed martyr crawling out of a grog shop, where he had been lying drunk for days. He left; went to the East; was received into his house by an anti-Mason, whom he repaid by attempting an outrage on a daughter of tender age, for which he was sent to the state prison for seven years.

In November, Gov. Clinton received from Gov. Cass of Michigan (a Past Grand Master) some depositions giving the confession of one Hopkins, that he was present when Morgan was put in a canoe and set adrift over Niagara Falls; but the unquestioned facts proved that this statement could not be true, and nothing came of it.

But the author of "The Broken Seal" published in his appendix an account of this statement, with the assurance that it is the true account of what became of Morgan!

In February, 1828, Gov. Clinton died; he was at the time General Grand High Priest of the General Grand Chapter; for this reason, his high character and the unwearied exertion he had made to bring to justice all connected with the outrage upon Morgan, did not save him from the attacks of the anti-Masons, who did not cease, even at his death, from their attempts to cast a stain upon his name, and even went so far as to charge it, stung with remorse for sanctioning Morgan's death, he had taken his own life. A Pennsylvania politician printed an address in which he charged that the Governor of New York, and the Governors of two other States, assisted at a council which decided that Morgan's publication must be suppressed at all hazards, and Morgan himself put out of the way! We would scarcely believe that there could be so great a fool as to publish such stuff, or so great a knave as to suppose there would be so great fools as to believe it when published, did we not see it paralleled by the anti-Masonic fanatics of the present time.

But Clinton's offence was, that although he denounced the crime, and used all the power of his office to bring the perpetrators to justice, he did not join in the crusade against the Masons as a body. In a letter to the Batavia Committee (January 8, 1827), he says:

"I am persuaded, however, that the body of Freemasons, so far from having any participation in this affair, or giving any countenance to it, reprobate it as a most unjustifiable act, repugnant to the principles and abhorrent to the doctrines of the fraternity. I know that Freemasonry, properly understood, and faithfully attended to, is friendly to religion, morality, liberty and good government: and I shall never shrink, under any state of excitement, or any extent of misapprehension, from bearing testimony in favor of the purity of an institution which can boast of a WASHINGTON, and a FRANKLIN and a LAFAYETTE, as distinguished members, which inculcates no principles and authorizes no acts, that are not in perfect accordance with good morals, civil liberty and entire obedience to government and the laws. It is no more responsible for the acts of unworthy members than any other association or institution. Without intending in the remotest degree, a comparison, or improper illusion, I might ask whether we ought to revile our holy religion, because Peter denied and Judas betrayed?"

In August, 1828, Eli Bruce and two others were tried for abducting Morgan from Canandaigua. The witness relied upon to convict Bruce's associates, was rejected on account of his want of religious belief, and the prosecution against them was abandoned. Bruce was convicted, although Stone says that there was then no evidence to show that Morgan was in the carriage on which Bruce rode; and was ultimately sentenced to jail for two years and four months, not, however, until after he had testified and given an account of his connection with the affair.

At the election in that State (New York) the anti-Masons cast over thirty-three thousand votes, having refused to vote for the candidates of the National Republicans, because their candidate for Governor, while not a Mason, was not an anti-Mason. In 1829 they cast sixty thousand votes. The next year the anti-Masons and National Republicans united, but many of the latter, who were Masons, voted for the opposing candidate and he was elected by eight thousand majority.

In August, 1828, John Whitney, who (as above stated) voluntarily returned from the South for that purpose, was tried. Special counsel had been appointed by the Governor to manage these cases. He was an able lawyer and powerful advocate. Up to this time there had been no positive proof that Morgan was in the carriage which left Canandaigua, or that he was one of the party which left the carriage at Fort Niagara; but on this trial it was clearly shown that Morgan was with the party all the way from Canandaigua to Fort Niagara. Bruce was a witness and testified that he was informed that Morgan was voluntarily going to Canada to get rid of Miller, with whom he had had difficulties, and would be at Lewiston that night on his way; that he went with the party to Fort Niagara, then to the ferry and crossed over into Canada, where Morgan was to have been left on a farm; but the arrangements not having been completed, they all returned to the American side, and Morgan was placed in the magazine of the fort to await the preparations in Canada, and that he (Bruce) left the Fort before daylight and had never seen Morgan since, nor did he know what had become of him. Whitney was convicted and sentenced to jail for one year and two months. The Masons quite generally believed Bruce's statement that he supposed Morgan was going to Canada willingly, and regarded the prosecution of Bruce as persecution. The anti-Masons, on the other hand, regarded him as one of the chief conspirators, and denounced the Masons bitterly for visiting him in prison and providing for him "every comfort that the laws would allow."

So earnestly was the prosecution pushed, that the driver of one of the carriages was indicted, but, after a sharply fought trial of ten days, he was acquitted.

The keeper of the Fort was next tried, but the prosecution failed to connect him with the affair, and he was acquitted. Bruce and Whitney refused to testify, and were sent to jail for thirty days each, and afterwards both were indicted for their refusal and fined two hundred and fifty dollars each; Turner also refused to answer several questions, and was sent to jail thirty days for each refusal.

The trial of another driver and the keeper of a hotel immediately followed; the testimony to show knowledge on the part of the accused was slight, and the jury, after being out thirty-six hours, returned a verdict of acquittal.

Other trials followed, but resulted in acquittals or disagreements of the jury.

On one of these trials (in 1831), Edward Giddings, whose testimony had been rejected on the trial of Bruce and others in 1828, on account of his infidelity, was a witness, the law having been changed for the purpose since the former trial. He testified that Col.

King called him up about midnight on the twelfth of September, 1826, saying he "had got the d—d perjured scoundrel who had been revealing the secrets of Freemasonry," and wanted to be ferried over to Canada; that he took them over the river, and besides himself and Morgan, there were King, Hague and Bruce; that Morgan was hoodwinked and had his arms tied behind him, and when he uttered some complaint a pistol was put to his breast with a threat that if he said anything more, he would be shot; that when they got across two of the party left them and returned after an absence of two hours, with the report that the Canadians were not ready to receive Morgan; and thereupon they returned to the American side and put him into the magazine, of which the witness had the key. He testified to the proceedings during the next day (thirteenth), which are not material; but he said that in the evening it was determined to kill Morgan, and they started under the direction of King to do it, but on the way one made an objection, and it was then concluded to send to the East for instructions, and they so apprised Morgan. The witness said he told King he was going to release Morgan, and King was angry and told him to do it at his peril, and that he then gave up the key to King, saying that he would have nothing further to do with it, and King gave the key to another man; that on the seventeenth he went to York, (Canada,) and returned on the twenty-first, when Col. Jewett, the Keeper of the Fort, informed him, that "they had murdered that man." His testimony was contradicted by four witnesses, as to facts to which he testified, and as to different accounts he had before given; his testimony was also in conflict with that of Bruce and Whitney (both of whom testified in the case), especially as to the threats, restraint, hoodwinking and binding. The Judge substantially told the jury that the case turned upon the evidence of Giddings; as the jury acquitted part of the accused, and disagreed as to others, they must have failed to believe Giddings. One fact seriously affecting the credibility of his testimony, seems not to have been adverted to: in June, 1828, he issued a prospectus for an anti-Masonic Almanac for 1829, which should contain a full account of what he knew about the matter, illustrated with cuts; in his prospectus he magnifies as much as possible the scope of his promised disclosures, to create a large sale for his Almanac; he undoubtedly took care that his statement should come up to his manifesto, and having published it, such a man as he was, would naturally repeat it as published, when he came to testify.

The special counsel, who tried the cases, came to the conclusion that Morgan's life had been taken; that none of the persons present at the perpetration of the crime were living and in the United States, except one, and that as to him the belief was rather a matter of inference than of proof; he thought no good would result from another trial of those parties in whose cases the jury did not agree; but he said that the information elicited by the trials was sufficient, he trusted, "to satisfy the public mind as to the ultimate fate of Morgan; that he was taken into the Niagara, at night, about the nineteenth of September, and there sunk. Yet the evidence, although apparently sufficient for all purposes of human belief, is not sufficient to establish with legal certainty, and according to adjudged cases, the murder of Morgan."

Mr. Stone concludes that Col. King, Hague, Smith, Howard and Adams, were concerned in the murder; but as he takes for true the whole testimony of Giddings, and the depositions of the crazy Mann, and adduces as evidence the declarations of Masons admittedly not connected with it, his conclusions are utterly unreliable. It is very singular that the commission of the alleged homicide should be charged upon men who were dead when the investigation closed; for all those above named were then dead, except Howard, who was probably then alive.

A careful examination shows that at the time of Morgan's arrest, the Masons who had interested themselves in the matter, supposed that they had secured enough of the manuscript to prevent Miller's going on with the work, unless Morgan should replace what was missing; to make sure that Morgan should not do that, undoubtedly a plan was laid to get Morgan away from Miller; it was to get him into Canada and arrange for him to stay there, or else to be sent out of the country on a voyage to sea; this was to be done secretly, so that Miller might not find it out, and be able to follow Morgan. Quite a number were cognizant of the proposed plan and engaged to forward it, but among them was no prominent member, nor any officer of any Grand Body. The General Grand Chapter was in session in New York City, during the week of Morgan's abduction, the session commencing on the fourteenth of September. [When the Anti-Masons afterwards charged the originating of the plot to the General Grand Chapter, they, with deliberate falsehood, fixed the time of its meeting a month earlier.] Samuel L. Knapp, a member of the General Grand Chapter from Massachusetts, says, that on the second day of the session, the presiding officer stated that a special communication had been received from the western part of New York, and suggested that it be referred to a committee without reading; that this was done, Knapp being Chairman of the Committee; that the committee found in their room a young man in a high state of excitement, who put into their hands some printed pages and a manuscript, stating that some of the fraternity in his part of the country apprehended that mischief might arise from its publication; that the committee heard his story, deliberated on it, and returned the papers to the messenger without examination, telling him distinctly that it was a subject in which the General Grand Chapter could take no part; that they made a verbal report, and it was accepted with few or no remarks, and without a dissenting voice; that the General Grand High Priest (Clinton) was not present, and when he came in, and was told what had been done, approved the course taken, saying that the Body had nothing to do with the subject and that it was not worthy the notice of Masons; that the messenger seemed disappointed, and hinted that the writer of the manuscript might at the time be in prison for debt, but was told, if that was so, to go and get the money among the fraternity, pay the debt and restore the manuscript. But this was before the days of telegraphs or railroads, and the advice came too late to be available: before the messenger could have reached home, the last scene in the drama had closed; Morgan had been arrested, carried to Canandaigua, committed to jail, released therefrom, seized and carried by force (or if he assented, it was probably on account of threats, or delusive promises, or intoxication) to Fort Niagara, thence across the river to Canada, and then back again to our shore, and imprisoned in the magazine of the Fort; the plan of disposing of him in Canada, as at first proposed, had failed. What his fate actually was never has been ascertained; whether his captors, finding him on their hands, added murder, which they had not at first contemplated, to their crime, or whether he died from exhaustion and fright, and they were compelled to conceal his body, or whether he was really sent off, the most searching investigation prolonged for nearly six years failed to disclose.

As already stated, the special counsel was an able lawyer. As incentives to perform his duty to the utmost of his ability, he had, in addition to his obligations as an officer, the maintenance of his personal and professional reputation and his interest as one of the most intense anti-Masonic politicians of the times; he had at his command all the resources of the great State of New York, and the assistance, as detectives, of his political associates, whose intense hatred of the Masons led them to use all the means in their power, honorable or dishonorable, to fasten the murder of Morgan upon members of the Fraternity, and to show that all adherents to it were accessories to the crime. But in spite of all these incentives and those means, the attempt failed. That he was abducted was fully proved; but that he was murdered there is no credible evidence, beyond the admitted fact of his disappearance and his not being heard from after his imprisonment in the magazine of the Fort.

That the perpetrators of his abduction had no excuse for their acts is no more true than that they found not the slightest warrant in the laws or precepts of Freemasonry for them: a comparatively few misguided men did it all, and it is believed that many who participated, did so in ignorance of the real nature of the transaction. But the Anti-Masons made the great mistake of charging the act upon the whole Fraternity; and, confounding the innocent with the guilty, they held every member responsible for it. The inevitable result was that while the weaker ones succumbed to the pressure and renounced Masonry, the good and true Masons stood together, shoulder to shoulder, biding their time, until the storm should pass over; that the storm would pass over, they had the most perfect faith. On the other hand, the Anti-Masons fully believed that the Institution had received its death-wound, and that its life was waning rapidly away. Even Mr. Stone, in 1832, said: "As well might they think of establishing Mahometanism in this enlightened land, as to cherish the idea of re-establishing Freemasonry." In less than forty years from the time he wrote, it numbered six times as many members as in its best days before the excitement.

While New York was the theatre of the principal events described, the excitement spread all over the country. The rapid growth of the anti-Masonic party in that State excited the belief among its members that it would sweep the old parties out of existence. In 1832, it nominated a candidate for President. The candidates of both the leading parties, Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay, were Masons and Past Grand Masters. There was a partial breaking up and re-forming of parties and the election resulted in the re-election of Gen. Jackson by an overwhelming majority of the Electoral College, the Anti-Masons carrying only the State of Vermont. This was a death-blow to political Anti-Masonry. It struggled feebly a few years, however, before it realized that it was actually dead, and then gave up even the "name to live."

This country has seen fierce and bitter political contests, but no other has approached in intensity those of the Anti-Masons against the Masons. No society, civil, military or religious, escaped its influence; no relation of family or friends was a barrier to it. The hatred of Masonry was carried everywhere, and there was no retreat so sacred that it did not enter. Not only were teachers and pastors driven from their stations, but the children of Masons were excluded from their schools, and members from their churches. The sacrament was refused to Masons by formal vote of the church. Families were divided, and brother arrayed against brother, father against son, and even the wife against her husband. Desperate efforts were made to take away chartered rights from Masonic corporations, and to pass laws that should prevent Masons from meeting and performing their ceremonies. Investigations were set on foot, which needed only the rack to assimilate them to the Inquisition. Illustrations will be given in the history of particular Grand Lodges.

The Fraternity met these attacks with prudence, fortitude and justice. The Grand Bodies generally passed temperate resolutions disavowing all connection or sympathy with the outrage on Morgan, and claiming that a whole great Fraternity should not be held responsible for the unauthorized and unmasonic acts of a few misguided men. In many places they advised the suspension of work, or the surrender of charters; but this did not content or even appease the fanatics, who insisted not only upon the renunciation of Masonry, but also its denunciation. Of course this was disastrous to the growth and progress of the Institution. Masonic work almost entirely ceased; the most of the Lodges suspended their meetings, and many surrendered their charters.

In some States the Grand Bodies suspended their meetings for years; but in every jurisdiction were some faithful Brethren, who kept the Masonic faith in their hearts and the Masons live upon the altar.

While political Anti-Masonry had entirely disappeared in 1836, the effects of the shock it had received and Masonry did not at once revive. But soon her members began to catch the glimmering of the light, which they had implicitly believed would surely come. Lodge after Lodge resumed labor, and candidates in abundance knocked at the door. Many true brethren lived to see the day when no one of the most bitter of his former adversaries was willing to admit that he had ever been an Anti-Mason!

This sketch would not be complete without noticing some of the theories which have been published (some of them recently) in relation to the ultimate fate of Morgan.

One is that he was taken from the magazine by Anti-Masons and sent abroad, that they might use his "murder" for political capital. This is entirely inadmissible, for there were no Anti-Masons until long after he left the magazine; indeed his friends had not begun to look for him until after his actual disappearance from the country if he was living, or his death, if he was dead.

Since the first draft of this sketch was originally prepared, Thurlow Weed's autobiography, in which he devotes much space to "the Morgan affair," has been published. Weed, at the time, was the publisher of an Anti-Masonic paper (established for the express purpose of prosecuting the crusade against Masonry) and was one of the most active and bitter of the Anti-Masonic politicians. He was on committees of investigation, and personally aided in procuring witnesses, going even into other States for that purpose. His political and professional success depended (as it seemed to him) upon the success of the Anti-Masons; his autobiography is largely a defence of his own course, and shows that his connection with the affair had been a source of distress to him. He writes under the pressure of intense personal feeling, and naturally seizes upon every circumstance that tells in his defence, and accepts statements as true which are utterly unreliable. While he in terms exculpates the mass of the Fraternity, he still makes a strong effort to inculcate leading men in the Order, and endorses as true statements whose falsity has long since been shown. He accepts Giddings's testimony as true, relies upon hearsay three times removed from its origin, and retails as truth the utterances of madmen. He leaves it in doubt whether the body washed ashore as hereinbefore stated was that of Morgan or Monroe. He imputes to Masonic Bodies action that was never taken. In fine he evidently makes a most desperate attempt to justify his own course. His account cannot be accepted as history, but only as a plea in his own defence.

Taking away the coloring given by his personal feelings, the main facts up to the time when Morgan was imprisoned in the magazine, are essentially in accord with those herein given. But he goes on with an absolutely incredible statement. He says that in 1831, John Whitney confessed to him in the presence of two other men, that he (Whitney), Col. King, Howard, Chubbuck and Garside took Morgan from the magazine, carried him in a boat to the mouth of the river, wound a rope around his body, attached weights to each end and threw him overboard. This statement, on its face, shows that it is utterly unworthy of credence; that Whitney, if guilty, should have made a confession involving himself and at least two others in a trial for murder; that he should have made it to Weed, who was not only personally bitterly hostile, but also was the leading spirit upon the committee charged with the detection and punishment of the murderers; that he should make it, at a time when a trial for the alleged murder had just been concluded, and it was expected that another trial would soon follow in which Whitney was a witness; that he should make a confession in the presence of two others, whose testimony would be received by every body as true; that these two men should have concealed it; and that Weed should also have concealed it for over fifty years, are each and all, as before stated, absolutely incredible. If the statement is true, Whitney not only confessed that he was a murderer, but also that he had just committed perjury to conceal it, and had betrayed the secret of his Masonic brethren to the extent of endangering their being sent to the gallows; while Weed stands confessed as the betrayer of the trust committed to him by the public, and as being accessory after the fact to the very murder, which he had, by accepting a place on the committee, pledged his honor to use his utmost endeavors to detect and punish!

But the statement conflicts with the statement of Whitney made afterwards, to the effect that Morgan was carried to Canada out of the reach of Miller; that five hundred dollars was paid to him upon his promise of silence and reformation; and that he secretly left the place where he had agreed to remain, and nothing was heard from him afterwards.

Whitney died in 1869; but Chubbuck, one of those named in Weed's statement, lived till within a few years; and it was not till after the death of the last survivor that Weed's statement was published.

There has been quite a general belief that Morgan went to Smyrna, in Asia Minor, and passed the rest of his life there; this theory was started in 1828, but the party suggesting it saw the man whom he took to be Morgan in Smyrna in March, 1826, six months before Morgan left Batavia. The late Ben-Perley Poore, about fifty years ago, was in Smyrna, and from information he then gathered, he firmly believed "that William Morgan resided for a number of years in Smyrna under the name of Mustapha."

But none of the recent publications furnish any reliable evidence of what became of Morgan after he was imprisoned in the magazine at Fort Niagara; and the matter is to-day as much of a mystery as ever.

One other curious fact should be mentioned: the work published as Morgan's was not his work, but the copy of a work previously published in England. As previously stated, it has never been discovered where Morgan was made a Mason, and many believe that he was an impostor, and that he procured this work and copied it for publication, pretending that he was exposing the secrets of Freemasonry. If he had been made in any lodge in this country by the name that has become so notorious, the excitement in relation to him would have brought out this fact, so that there is good ground for this belief; but after all, it must be said that the history of his life, until about the time when he came to New York, is involved in the same mystery as his ultimate fate.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE UNITED STATES GRAND LODGES.

IN this chapter are given sketches of the Grand Lodges, substantially in the order of seniority.

MASSACHUSETTS.

On July 30th, 1733, (O. S.) Henry Price called together ten other brethren at "The Bunch of Grapes" Tavern in Boston, and organized and opened a Provincial Grand Lodge—the first meeting of Masons in America held under written authority, so far as history has as yet disclosed. His commission or deputation was read and eight candidates were at once initiated.

The eighteen brethren joined in a petition for a Lodge, which was granted by the Provincial Grand Master; he proceeded at once to constitute the Lodge "in the form prescribed in our printed book of constitutions." Thus was organized "the first Lodge,"—properly so named, as it was the first Lodge in this country formed under chartered authority—in accordance with the regulations adopted under the Grand Lodge system established in 1717. The original petition for this Lodge still exists: a fac simile of it was published in the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts for 1871.

The commission or deputation was issued to Henry Price, by "Lord Montague, Grand Master of the Free and Accepted Masons of England," under date of April 30, 1733, appointing him Provincial Master of New England. At one time, the authenticity of this commission was denied by a zealous antiquarian, mainly because the original was not in existence and no record of it could be found in the archives of the Grand Lodge of England. The fact that the question was first raised nearly a century and a half after the occurrence, during all which time frequent public mention of it had been made, would seem to be a sufficient answer to the allegation: in the courts, this fact would be so decisive, that no allegation to the contrary would be heard. That the document is not found in the archives of the Provincial Grand Lodge, is of no consequence, for it did not belong there; it was the personal muniment of title of the Provincial Grand Master and properly remained in his possession; it was proper to record a copy of it in the books of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and that was done. As to the other point, it is well known that documents issued by the Grand Master were often omitted from the record, especially when, as in this case, they were not attested by the Grand Secretary: Grand Masters did not then report such matters to the Grand Lodge.

There are numerous facts showing that the denial of the genuineness of this commission has no foundation to rest upon; but it is necessary to state but one: all the action of Price under this commission was recognized by the Grand Lodge. The undisturbed deputation to his successor in 1737 recited a petition for the appointment of a New Provincial Grand Master; the Lodge established by him is given in the Grand Lodge calendar prepared within three years after the organization of the Lodge and the first ever published; Price's successor (Robert Tomlinson) was made a Mason in this Lodge under Price's administration, and was elected Master of this Lodge to make him eligible to the office of Provincial Grand Master. That a man made a Mason in a Lodge organized under a "forged" commission, should within less than four years from its date, be appointed Provincial Grand Master for New England approaches so closely to the absurd, that the proposition scarcely deserves serious consideration.

The early records of the Provincial Grand Lodge are meagre; those for the first sixteen years were not entered in the book now in existence till 1749 or 1750; an attempt has also been made to discredit these records on account of that fact; but considering the well-known Masonic custom to enter the minutes on loose papers or a book other than the regular record, and subsequently at convenience, to transcribe them, the objection has no force; moreover, these records are abundantly corroborated by other contemporary records and publications.

The Lodge at once entered upon a career of prosperity, most of the business relating to the craft being transacted in it. St. John's days were celebrated by the Grand Lodge, "tho' not proper records kept thereof" in many cases. The Lodge also met and chose its Master on the same days.

On April 20, 1737, Robert Tomlinson received a commission from the Grand Master of England dated December 7, 1736, appointing him "Provincial Grand Master of the Province of New England with the territories and dominions thereunto belonging." The record states that he was appointed in room of Price, who had resigned. Tomlinson was Deputy Grand Master under Price. A copy of his commission is spread on the record.

In like manner, upon the death of Tomlinson, Thomas Oxnard (who was made a Mason in "the first Lodge" during Price's administration) was appointed Provincial Grand Master of North America, April 23, 1743.

From and after April 13, 1750, full accounts of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge are entered on the records according to the present usage.

At that time several Lodges had been established. The record states that Price sent a deputation to Benjamin Franklin, upon the petition of himself and other Masons in Philadelphia, to constitute a Lodge in that city. He also granted a warrant early in 1736 (N. S.) for a Lodge at Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

On January 2, 1738 (N. S.), the Masters' Lodge at Boston was founded, with Henry Price as Master: at that time Lodges conferred only the first two degrees.

The record contains a memorandum, "omitted in place," that Price granted a deputation for a Lodge in Annapolis, Nova Scotia, to hold a Lodge there, and appointed Maj. Erasmus James Phillips (who was made in the first Lodge) Deputy Grand Master; and that Phillips afterwards granted a constitution for a Lodge at Halifax, with Edward Cornwallis as Master. It is elsewhere stated that the Lodge at Annapolis was constituted in 1738. It has, therefore, been claimed that the statement that Price granted this deputation is an error: that does not necessarily follow. Phillips was made a Mason, November 14, 1737, and of course could not have received the deputation before that, so that no question is made that its date was in or after 1738. The Provincial Grand Master Tomlinson was absent in England during that year and until May, 1739, and no Deputy was appointed on St. John the Baptist's Day nor on St. John the Evangelist's Day. Under the regulations of the Grand Lodge at that time, the Grand Master's authority, in case of his absence, reverted to his immediate predecessor. In this case, not only was the Grand Master absent, but the office of Deputy was vacant, and there is no record of the appointment of Grand Wardens. While no mention of the matter is made in the record, the circumstances indicate that Price acted as Provincial Grand Master while Tomlinson was absent, and during that time granted the deputation to Philip for the Lodge at Annapolis, Nova Scotia.

In 1752, when Grand Master Oxnard left for Europe, his Deputy, McDaniel, called the Grand Lodge together "to consider the twenty-first article in the printed book of Constitutions relating to the successor to the chair in the absence of the Grand Master." It was moved that the chair devolved upon Price. "After the brethren had severally given their opinions," the question was put and "passed in the negative." This course of the Deputy was in precise accordance with that article of the regulations: but if its strict letter had been followed, the motion should have "passed in the affirmative;" however, under the fourteenth article, the Deputy is to act in the temporary absence of the Grand Master, and undoubtedly the brethren held that, as the Grand Master's absence, though "beyond sea," was temporary, his Deputy was authorized to act: their decision seems to be correct, but if the Deputy had also been absent, or the office had been vacant, no question could have been made on the reverting of the authority to Price. In 1754, when Oxnard died, the Deputy called the Grand Lodge together, sent two brothers to wait on Bro. Price to request him to resume his office as Grand Master, "which now of course reverts to him;" Price appeared and "the Deputy Grand Master presented him with the Grand Master's Jewel and delivered him the chair." In 1738, full records were not kept, and the fact that no mention of Price's acting during Tomlinson's absence, is made in the record, is not material. Again, Price acted as Grand Master from Tomlinson's death until Oxnard's appointment: and the date, 1738, may be too early.

During Oxnard's administration constitutions were granted for Lodges as follows: in Newfoundland in 1746; at Newport, Rhode Island, December 27, 1749; the "Second Lodge" in Boston, March 7, 1749 (O. S.); at Annapolis, Maryland, August 12, 1750; at New Haven, Conn., August 12, 1750, but dated November 12, 1750, now Hiram Lodge; at New London, Conn., January 12, 1753; and at Middletown, Conn., February 4, 1754.

St. John the Baptist's Day in 1754 fell upon Sunday, and the celebration was held on the Tuesday following; but it was a sad day for the Craft, for Grand Master Oxnard died that morning. He was buried on the first day of July, his corpse being attended to the grave by a numerous train. "The Free and Accepted Masons, dressed in black and clothed with white aprons and gloves, walked before in a procession of two, with the Grand Master's Jewel, usually worn by him, pendant from the ribbon on a tasselled black velvet cushion carried next to the corpse. Immediately before the cushion, walked the Deputy Grand Master with the Grand Wardens; the Past Grand Officers, the other Officers of the Grand Lodge, the Masters, Wardens, and Officers of the other Lodges in town in their order, all the Masters and Wardens with their jewels pendant upon black ribbon. After the interment, the fraternity walked before the relations, and returned with them to the Mansion House of the deceased, where they took their leave."

As before stated, Price resumed the office of Grand Master; he reappointed Oxnard's officers.

In January, 1754, a regulation had been adopted to the effect that no brother, under thirty years of age, should be Master of a regular Lodge: but the Grand Officers were authorized to dispense with this, so far as related to the two New Lodges in Connecticut, "they being young Lodges are incapable of complying." This Regulation was repealed in January, 1755.

At the communication, October 11, 1754, the Grand Lodge voted that when a petition should be sent for the appointment of a Grand Master of North America, "it shall be desired that such Grand Master shall be continued in the chair for three years and no longer." Jeremy Gridley was selected by ballot and a committee chosen to draw a petition for his appointment. The petition states that Oxnard had died, "upon which our Right Worshipful Brother, Mr. Henry Price, formerly Grand Master, had resumed the chair pro tempore," and prays that all future Grand Masters be deputed for three years only, except that if the Lodge should see fit to continue the same Grand Master, the deputation should remain in force for the continued term. It closes as follows:

"And whereas Masonry originated here Anno 5733, and in the year following our then G. M. Price received orders from G. M. Craufurd to establish Masonry in all North America, in pursuance of which the several Lodges hereafter mentioned have received constitutions from us. We therefore crave due precedence, and that in order thereunto our G. M. elect, may in his deputation be styled G. M. of all North America, and your petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray."

The Lodges mentioned are Philadelphia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Antigua, Annapolis in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Rhode Island, Halifax in Nova Scotia, Annapolis in Maryland, and New Haven, New London and Middleton, in Connecticut.

Tomlinson went to England via Antigua in 1738: the record says that finding some old Boston Masons in Antigua, he went to work and made the Governor, and sundry other gentlemen of distinction, Masons: it is also stated in the record that sundry Brethren going to South Carolina met with some Masons in Charleston and went to work: but no mention is made of the granting of a Charter or Constitution in either case.

Gridley's commission dated, April 4, 1755, was laid before a special Grand Lodge held August 21, 1755. He was appointed "Provincial Grand Master of all such provinces and places in North America and the territories thereof of which no Provincial Grand Master is at present appointed." It did not contain the requested limitation to three years.

Gridley was installed October 1, 1755, at Concert Hall. After the installation, in accordance with a previous vote of the Grand Lodge, the Lodges, the members clothed and the officers wearing their jewels, and the Grand Lodge, its officers wearing their jewels and badges, went in procession to Trinity Church, where prayers were read and a sermon preached; after the services the procession in reverse order returned to Concert Hall where dinner was served.

From the time when the keeping of full records was commenced there were regular payments to the Grand Lodge for the Charity Fund; in 1756 a committee was appointed to "consider of some method in order to raise a fund for charity." The committee reported nine regulations which were adopted as the "regulations for charity." They provided for a Grand Lodge Charity Fund and the distribution of the income of it by the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge exercised the power of making Masons, especially of applicants from a distance. On January 31, 1757, five gentlemen "came to town from Marblehead on purpose to be made a Mason," and the Grand Lodge unanimously agreed to do it. The Grand Master appointed Richard Gridley "to make the above five gentlemen Masons," and they were made and passed.

Richard Gridley, J. G. Warden, was commissioned by the Grand Lodge to form Lodges; by virtue of this authority he granted a dispensation November 13, 1758, to brethren at Louishurg for a Lodge in the twenty-eighth regiment of foot then stationed at that place.

The Grand Master granted a warrant for a Lodge in the "expedition to Crown Point," May 13, 1756: for one at Providence, R. I., January 18, 1757: for one "in the present expedition against Canada," April 13, 1759; and for one at Marblehead, March 25, 1760.

On March 20, 1759, he granted a warrant for a Master Masons' Lodge at Newport, R. I. It seems that the brethren there, supposing that they had authority to do so, had raised several fellow crafts: the Grand Master confirmed the work done.

In the great fire in Boston, March 20, 1760, many of the brethren were burned out, and several of them (including Hugh McDaniel, Past Dep. G. Master) were relieved from the Charity Fund of the Grand Lodge.

For about twenty-five years, the brethren enjoyed a career of prosperity and harmony: but then arose a disagreement which was not fully composed for nearly fifty years. It seems that some brethren in 1752 commenced meeting at the "Green Dragon" tavern and opened a Lodge "under ancient usage." The next year they commenced doing work. It does not appear where the brethren, who organized the Lodge, were made Masons: and while the regularity of those, who were made Masons in this Lodge, was afterwards denied, it does not appear that any question was raised as to the regularity of its founders. They were probably made under the authority of the Grand Lodge of Scotland and had adopted the polity and work of the "Ancient Masons." It is stated that, in 1754, they sent a petition for a Charter to the Grand Lodge of Scotland; they secured the approval of the Falkirk Lodge in Scotland: it was presented to the Grand Lodge, and was acted upon by the Grand committee, November 22, 1756. Whether there is an error as to the year when it was sent, or it was delayed on its passage or the committee took time for inquiry, does not appear. The Grand Lodge immediately (November 30, 1756) voted to grant the Charter; it was not then issued, however, but for some reason was withheld during 1757 and 1758: it was not "expedited" by the Grand Lodge till May 21, 1759, and was not actually received by the Lodge till September 4, 1760. In the correspondence, the failure to pay the fee, and the omission of the name of the proposed Lodge in the petition, appear as reasons for this long delay. But there were other causes, as is evident from an examination of the records.

Some of the petitioners were made in the voluntary Lodge self-organized in 1752. At that time, the law of both the English Grand Lodges and the Grand Lodge of Scotland was that no new Lodge could be lawfully formed without a warrant. Of course, the work of this Lodge was irregular, and the Grand Lodge evidently hesitated to grant a charter to petitioners, a part of whom were so made. At a later date, when the Provincial Grand Lodge denied that the new body was a lawful Lodge, on the ground that the petitioners were not regular Masons and had concealed that fact from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, it was alleged in reply that all the circumstances were communicated to that Grand Lodge, and this allegation was substantially admitted. There is strong reason for believing that the delay in issuing the charter was due to the hesitation of the Grand Lodge on account of the status of the petitioners.

During the interval between the time of sending the petition and its receipt by the Lodge, it had continued to meet, except that from September, 1758, to the fourth of April, 1760, it either did not meet or else the record has been lost. It did work up to April, 1758: it admitted members from the other Lodges, and the only accessions it had during 1759 and 1760 were the admission of two members who had been made in "the first Lodge." In the published list of "past members * * with the year of their admission" all the charter members are put in the list for 1756, which must contain not only the names of those admitted that year, but also some, if not all, of those admitted during the previous years. The failure to do work indicates a state of suspense on the part of the Lodge, and the admission of members, made in other Lodges, shows an attempt to strengthen their position.

During this interval, also, quite likely at the suggestion of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the petitioners for the Charter, or some of them, applied to the Provincial Grand Lodge at Boston to be healed or "regularized."

Isaac Decoster is the first named in the Charter; he was Master of the inchoate Lodge from April 10, 1756, to July 10, 1760. At a communication of the Grand Lodge held January 13, 1758, he presented a petition, the contents of which are not stated; but it was evidently of an unusual character, for it was referred to a committee of seven of the ablest and wisest members of the Grand Lodge. To consider it, the committee held a formal meeting on the twenty-fourth of the next month, at which all its members were present and also the Grand Master, his Deputy, Past Grand Master Price and two others; their action was recorded upon the records of the Grand Lodge as follows:

"The petition of Isaac Decoster for himself and others was read, debated; and afterwards

"Voted, that the said Decoster and those of his company who had a clear and good character, should be admitted to be made Masons by dispensation of the Grand Master, they paying the charge of the entertainment."

This report was signed by all the committee, and at the April quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge was referred to the Grand Master. Apparently nothing came of it; the report of the committee seems to contemplate the admission of the petitioners "who had a clear and good character" without other fee than the "charge of the entertainment." It was afterwards said by the Committee of the Lodge that the Grand Master of Scotland was duly informed of their being irregular Masons, and that Decoster had applied for admittance into the Lodge, but was refused, only by two votes, upon which the rest despaired of gaining admittance. It is quite likely, however, that the application and action taken upon it, had a decided influence upon the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

Only two members were admitted in 1760, but in 1761 the Lodge was exceedingly active, receiving not less than twenty-six members, four of whom had been made Masons in the "First Lodge."

The Grand Lodge at its session in April, 1761, forbade the members of its obedience appearing at "the meeting (or Lodge so-called) of Scots Masons in Boston, not being regularly constituted in the opinion of this Lodge;" and the Masters and Wardens of the several Lodges were desired to take notice of this order at their next meeting.

So far as the records disclose, the Grand Lodge took no further notice of St. Andrew's Lodge till 1766. In the meantime, Grand Master Gridley continued to grant warrants for Lodges; no formal entry of these charters was made on the record: but the names of the additional Lodges were recorded on the roll to be called at each communication.

In 1766, there were, in addition to those in Boston, thirty Lodges on the roll, viz.:

Portsmouth, New Hampshire, Lodge.	Middletown Lodge.	Salem Lodge.
Charlestown, S. Carolina, Lodge.	Crown Point Lodge.	Virginia Lodge.
Antigua Lodge.	Providence Lodge.	Surinam Lodge.
Annapolis Royal Lodge.	Louisburg Lodge.	St. Christopher's Lodge.
Newfoundland Lodge.	Newport Masters' Lodge.	Barbadoes Lodge.
Newport, R. Island, Lodge.	Quebec Lodge.	Elizabethtown Lodge.
Hallifax Lodge.	Newbury Lodge.	Hartford Lodge.
Annapolis, in Maryland, Lodge.	St. John's, Newfoundland, Lodge.	Waterbury Lodge.
New Haven Lodge.	Marblehead Lodge.	Falmouth Lodge.
New London Lodge.	Norwich Lodge.	Pitt County, N. Carolina, Lodge.

Three of these were military Lodges: only four were in Massachusetts, and one of the four was in the district of Maine; three were in Rhode Island, six in Connecticut, and one each in New Hampshire, South Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, New Jersey, and North Carolina.

Nor had St. Andrew's Lodge been idle. It had grown rapidly and already numbered among its members some of the most active and influential men of the city. Many, who had been made in the other Lodges, joined it. Then a Mason could belong to more than one Lodge, and one receiving the degrees in a Lodge did not become a member without a subsequent election to membership. St. Andrew's Lodge admitted to membership, or as visitors, members of all other Lodges: but the other Lodges did not reciprocate. Its first Master under its charter was William Burbeck, who was made a Mason in "the first Lodge" and had been its Senior Warden; its second Master was Joseph Webb (afterwards Grand Master of Massachusetts Grand Lodge) also made in "the first Lodge," and Past Junior Warden of it; and up to 1767, its Masters and Wardens, with scarcely a single exception, were Masons made in Lodges subordinate to the Provincial Grand Lodge. Whether this was merely accidental, or was done with the purpose of strengthening the legality of the Lodge in the eyes of the Craft, is now only a matter of conjecture.

Be that as it may, at the communication of the Grand Lodge held January 24, 1766, a committee of five from St. Andrew's Lodge, headed by two brethren who were made Masons in the first Lodge, appeared and were admitted: they presented their petition and a "letter from the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge in Scotland to the said St. Andrew's Lodge, which highly reflected on Right Worshipful Grand Master:" both were read, and their consideration postponed until the following Monday evening. Their votes were passed to the effect that the Charter members of St. Andrew's Lodge were not at the time of its constitution Free and Accepted Masons; that their application was an imposition on the Grand Lodge of Scotland; that they and all who had then been added to their fraternity were irregular Masons; that several of them had applied to visit the regular Lodges and had been refused on account of their irregularity: that, therefore, members of the regular Lodges could not visit them: and that a copy of the votes be transmitted to the Grand Master of England, and one given to the committee "when demanded."

St. Andrew's Lodge adopted a reply, which was presented to the Grand Lodge by its committee, composed of the same members and two others, who had been made Masons in Lodges under the authority of the Grand Lodge. The committee were not admitted but their communication was referred to a committee, which should confer with them, and report to the Grand Lodge. The material part of the reply of St. Andrew's Lodge is as follows:

"2d, Voted, that the second vote of the said Grand Lodge which asserts that the aforesaid application was 'an imposition on the Grand Lodge of Scotland' is at least a mistake: the truth being as follows: our Worshipful Brother James Logan, who had been Master of a Lodge in Scotland, and a member of the Grand Lodge there, was, when in Boston, A. L. 5754, perfectly informed of the manner and circumstances by which the persons aforesaid became acquainted with the mysteries of Masonry, and was desired upon his return to Scotland, truly to represent their difficulties to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and to endeavor to procure for them a Charter: the Grand Lodge of Scotland, finding from the relation given by our Brother Logan, that a number of persons in Boston intrusted with the secrets of Masonry were, notwithstanding their repeated application refused admittance into the regular Lodges in said Boston, the said Grand Lodge, in their great wisdom, thought fit to grant them a Charter of new erection, with ample privileges, thereby manifesting their approbation of them, as Free and Accepted Masons."

The two committees had a long conference, which, while no result was reached, narrowed the controversy to a single point. The Grand Lodge committee substantially withdrew the charge of imposition upon the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

The other committee frankly said:

"They also acknowledge in behalf of said Lodge, that all the proceedings of those persons before their application for a Constitution from the Grand Master of Scotland were irregular and wrong; but are fully of opinion, that the proceedings of said St. Andrew's Lodge, after their Constitution, have been regular and just; and that although they, before their Constitution, were irregular, yet the Grand Master of Scotland has a power of dispensation, and can make irregular Masons regular: therefore they think themselves regular."

But the Grand Lodge Committee denied the correctness of this conclusion, and insisted that the members of St. Andrew were irregular, and that "the law of Masons requires irregular Masons to make a proper submission, before they can be received."

In spite of the failure to come to an agreement, some members of St. Andrew's Lodge were allowed to join the others at the dinners of St. John's days. They were chiefly those who had been made Masons in "the first Lodge," and it seems that some of them still retained their old Membership; however, at least one, who was made a Mason in St. Andrew's Lodge, was allowed to participate, and his name was entered with the others on the Grand Lodge record.

In later times, it was argued that the Grand Lodge of Scotland, by using the term "Charter of New Erection," intended to confirm what the Lodge had already done, as well as to authorize it to work in the future: but an examination shows that this term was used in contradistinction to the term "Charter of Confirmation:" the former was used in creating a new Lodge, and the latter in confirming an organization already existing.

On September 10, 1767, Jeremy Gridley, the Grand Master, died in the sixty-second year of his age. As a man and as a Mason, he was very highly respected, as is shown by the vast concourse at his funeral, as well as by the tribute to his memory on the records of the Grand Lodge. At a special session called to arrange for his funeral, a committee of St. Andrew's Lodge was admitted by unanimous vote, and the request of their Lodge, that they might attend the Grand Master's funeral in due form as Masons, was granted, and a place in the procession assigned to them. The Tyler and Stewards of St. Andrew's Lodge headed the procession; then the members of that Lodge; then the Grand Stewards: then the Members of the First, Second and Masters' Lodges (the Third Lodge being then extinct); then the officers of St. Andrew's Lodge: then the officers of the other Lodges: then the Past Grand Officers: then the Deputy Grand Master and the Grand Wardens: then the Grand Tyler carrying the late Grand Master's jewel on a black cushion: then the body of the late Grand Master. The brethren were clothed as Masons, and the officers wore their jewels and official badges: in all, one hundred and sixty-one Masons were in the procession, undoubtedly a larger number than ever before present in this country on a Masonic occasion. The fraternal feelings which, it might be supposed, would be engendered on such an occasion, were not destined to last. The Grand Lodge resumed its former policy, and St. Andrew's Lodge, on November 30, 1767, voted that "this Lodge will not from henceforth admit of the visits of the members of any of the Lodges in this town, or any person that shall be made therein, until the said vote of said Grand Lodge shall be reconsidered and made void, except they are members of this Lodge, or have been raised Master here."

Price again succeeded to the Grand Mastership, and notice thereof was given in the public newspapers to "all the fraternity in North America and the West Indies, under this jurisdiction." He continued the Grand officers for the remainder of the year, and appointed Thomas Cooper Deputy Grand Master for North Carolina, by commission dated December 30, 1767.

In January following, John Rowe, then Deputy, was nominated for Grand Master and a committee chosen to request his appointment for three years, as Grand Master of all North America. To William Jackson, one of the committee, who was about to sail for England, was entrusted the petition, as well as a letter from Henry Price to the Grand Lodge of England, and a letter of introduction for himself. Price, in his letter, states that he was appointed Provincial Grand Master of New England in 1733; and that his authority was extended over all North America in 1735; but that upon inquiry he finds that said deputations were never registered, though he had himself paid three guineas therefor to Thomas Batson, then Deputy Grand Master: he, therefore, requested that they be registered in the proper place and the Grand Lodge have rank according to its date. To facilitate the inquiry, which he solicits, he encloses an attested copy of his deputation as registered in the Grand Lodge book. This payment, by himself, of the fee shows that his deputation was granted and delivered directly to him while he was in England; and this fact accounts for the failure to register it and the absence of any correspondence in relation to it.

The festival of St. John the Baptist was celebrated in 1768, and there were present, according to the record, William Burbeck and Joseph Webb, both Past Masters of St. Andrew's Lodge but both made Masons in the First Lodge.

On September 30, 1768, Jackson returned from England, bringing with him Rowe's deputation: he reported that the Grand Lodge jewels (which it seems had been ordered) were unfinished when he left, but were to be sent in the vessel next to arrive.

Extensive arrangements were made for the installation on November 23, 1768: the Grand Secretary wrote to all the Lodges in the vicinity, inviting their attendance. Finally a "General Grand Lodge" of all the regular Masons in town "was called, and the Grand Secretary was desired "to issue out summonses to all the known and accepted brothers in town." There was a large attendance, including at least five who had attended Gridley's funeral as members of St. Andrew's Lodge. The programme was not carried out in all particulars, but was recorded "for the direction of those who may have the management of such a solemnity on any future occasion." Of it, the Grand Secretary says:

"Thus was ended this grand solemnity, much to the honor of the fraternity, as the like had never been seen in America before: what from the richness of the jewels, badges, clothing, and ensigns of office, the good order and regularity of the procession, the appearance of many honorable and respectable brethren, and the uniformity of the clothing, the spectators of all ranks were struck with admiration, except some few who called themselves brethren, who had sufficient to raise their envy, for it appeared in the countenances of several of them, as the procession passed through the streets to and from church."

The "few who call themselves brethren" were probably members of St. Andrew, who had not been permitted to participate in the ceremonies.

The deputation granted in 1762 for a Lodge at Falmouth (now Portland), Maine, not having been acted upon on account of the sickness and death of the Master, a new one was granted March 30, 1769; and a warrant was issued for a Lodge at Wallingford, Conn., May 1, 1769.

At the Quarterly communication, January 20, 1770, Henry Price, as Acting Grand Master in his absence, appointed the Grand Officers for the ensuing year.

Upon the presentation of a petition for a Charter, the Grand Lodge decided that "three Master Masons are necessary to the constituting a new Lodge." Routine business occupied the attention of the Grand Lodge for some time: Charters were granted for Lodges in Sherbourne; Guilford, Conn.; and for Rising Sun Lodge in Boston.

On January 29, 1773, the question "whether the members of St. Andrew's and Massachusetts Lodges, if found to be good Masons after a proper examination, shall be admitted as visiting brothers in the respective Lodges under this jurisdiction" was presented, considered, debated, put and "passed in the affirmative, Nemine Contradicente." If this course had been taken in 1766 as the result of the conferences, the course of events would in all probability have been greatly changed; it is not unlikely that St. Andrew's Lodge would have passed under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge; but in the interval, important events had transpired delaying the substantial union of the Craft for nearly twenty years, and the full union for over thirty years.

Col. John Young was appointed Provincial Grand Master of all Lodges in North America under the authority of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, November 14, 1757. In a letter dated October 13, 1759, it is stated that he was then in America. In a letter dated June 4, 1762, the Grand Master of Scotland speaks of his appointment as being then in force. But so far as it is known, he never undertook to exercise his authority. He was a military officer accompanying his regiment, and so not really a resident in this country.

On November 30, 1767, when the vote of non-intercourse with the Grand Lodge was adopted, St. Andrew's Lodge had become a large and powerful body. In spite of the irregularity of its origin, it had vindicated its claim to regularity from the date of its constitution under its Charter. In this connection, it is proper to state that the account of this Lodge in Chapter XXX. under the year "1767" is in part erroneous, in part inaccurate, and in part unsustained by authority. In the "Centennial Memorial" it is stated that the record previous to 1756 is lost. The statement in Chapter XXX., "originating in the association of nine Masons who had been made Masons clandestinely, it was chartered in 1756 by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and then numbered twenty-one members exclusively of the original nine, who had left Boston in the interval," is manifestly erroneous. As hereinbefore stated, during the sharpest period of the controversy, no question was ever raised as to the original founders being regular Masons. If they had been clandestine, that point would surely have been made against them, and it is not believed that the Grand Lodge of Scotland would have granted a charter to them or their initiates. By making the point, that because they had no warrant, their initiates were not regular Masons, the Provincial Grand Lodge admitted the regularity of all other than initiates. Charles W. Moore and Hamilton Willis, in their centennial addresses, say that the only irregularity in the organization of the Lodge was that it presumed to organize and work without a Charter; and that the Charter of new-erection was intended to confirm the work done; not to heal clandestine Masons, but to confirm work done by regular Masons in an irregular manner. Nor is there any authority for the suggestion, that all the original nine had left Boston in the interval.

The statement of the number of initiates is inaccurate, but the loss of the record prevents an accurate statement. The list, in the "Centennial Memorial" of past members "with the year of their admission" begins with 1756. It is certain that that list contains the names of persons who were made Masons before that year, and the natural conclusion is, that it contains the names of all the members at that time, without reference to the year of their admission. This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that it includes every one of the Charter members. Of course it is possible that the Charter members were none of them petitioners and were made Masons in 1756 and fixed upon even after the Grand Lodge voted to grant a Charter, but it is not probable. In the list mentioned, there are thirty-nine names from 1756 to 1760 inclusive; of these, nine are known to have been initiated in other Lodges and admitted to membership in this Lodge; how many more are included in the same category is not known. In "a true list of St. Andrew's Lodge from the time it was first held in Boston, N. E., after receiving the deputation from the Grand Lodge in Scotland," purporting to be for the year 1763, in the archives of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts are twenty-three made in other Lodges and fifty-eight "made in St. Andrew's Lodge;" among the latter are the names of George Bray and four others connected by a brace with a mark referring to a note partially expunged, indicating that they, with the first five in the other list, "formed the first Lodge after we received the Charter;" of these ten, only two were named in the Charter. In this 1763 list are included none of those found in the lists in the "Memorial" from 1756 to 1760 inclusive, except those who were made in other Lodges and the five made in St.

Andrew, who helped form the first Lodge after the Charter was received, as above stated, and all of whom are in the list for 1766. If we take this 1763 list for a criterion, all those made in St. Andrew's Lodge prior to the actual receipt of the Charter, except the five last mentioned, were dropped from the roll. With the exception of "the five" and six others (at the foot of the list), all those in the 1763 list under the head "made in St. Andrew's Lodge" are found in the lists in the "Memorial" for 1761 to 1763 inclusive; the six were probably "made" but not admitted to membership. A list of the members in 1762, given in the "Memorial," includes those made in other Lodges, "the five" and those made in St. Andrew's in 1761 and 1762, and no others. The conclusion is inevitable that, except "the five," all those made in the Lodge prior to the receipt of the Charter were completely ignored. "The five" who were present and assisted in forming the Lodge under the Charter, were practically all whom that instrument "made regular."

It is evident that the difference between the Provincial Grand Lodge and St. Andrew's Lodge, at the time of the installation of Grand Master Rowe on November 23, 1768, was more violent than ever before; for immediately after, steps were taken to form a Provincial Grand Lodge under authority of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The course of public events gave an opportunity. Three British Regiments were stationed in Boston, having but recently arrived; in each was a military Lodge, one Scottish, one English, and one Irish, but all working under the "Ancient" system. Warren was Master of St. Andrew: on November 30, 1768, a Committee of that Lodge was appointed, with Warren at its head, to consider the expediency of applying to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for a Grand Master of Ancient Masons in America and "to confer with such committees as shall be appointed by the other Ancient Lodges now in town." On December 8, the Committee reported favorably, and a petition was drawn up, signed in behalf of the four Lodges by their Masters and Wardens, and transmitted to Scotland. It is difficult to determine the reason of having the three military Lodges join in the petition. The arrival of those regiments caused great excitement in Boston; Warren, Revere and other members of St. Andrew were soon after, if not then, vehemently opposed to their remaining in the city. Warren was one of the Committee which, in March following, drew up a petition to the king for the removal of the troops.

The reason could not have been that the concurrence of a certain number of Lodges was necessary, as, under the Ancient system, a Provincial Grand Master could be appointed and a Provincial Grand Lodge formed without a single Lodge; the requirement of a number of Lodges related wholly to the formation of an independent Grand Lodge, and then five were required. The most plausible reason is, that either the promoters of the plan deemed the concurrence of all the Ancient Lodges in Boston necessary, or that their concurrence would strengthen the petition.

The petition was granted, and on May 30, 1769, a commission was issued appointing Joseph Warren Grand Master of Masons in Boston, New England, and within one hundred miles of the same: it was not received in Boston until the following September, when the Lodge of St. Andrew fixed the 25th of December for the installation.

In the meantime, the Lodge had voted that Modern Masons "not members of any Lodge" might become candidates for membership, and that "huzzing be omitted for the future except on feast days."

It seems that a dispensation had been issued by the Master, or the Lodge, for a new Lodge in another British Regiment, for on May 11 of that year it was voted "that the dispensation granted to the Masons in the Sixty-Fifth Regiment was unconstitutional." Before the receipt of Warren's commission, that regiment, and the regiment in which was the Lodge held under Scottish authority, had left town.

St. Andrew made preparations for the Installation without regard to the military Lodges, or consultation with them: the only notice taken of them was, that on the 14th of December, the committee reported that, in their opinion, information should be given to the two of those Lodges then in town that "the installment of a Grand Master will be on Wednesday, the 27th, at Town Hall." It was also voted, that the "installment be public, but without a procession."

On the day fixed, St. Andrew, and the English and Irish Lodges were represented by their Masters and Wardens: Warren's commission was read, and he was installed "in ample form:" other Grand officers "for the year ensuing" were elected and installed, one by proxy. The Grand Wardens were both from the Irish Lodge. So far as the record discloses, neither of them was ever present at any subsequent meeting of the Grand Lodge. In May following, at the request of one of them, a letter of recommendation was granted to him, and it was also voted that a like letter be granted to the other, if he should apply to the Grand Secretary for it. At the meetings in January and March, 1770, the military Lodges were represented by their Masters and Wardens, but never after. At the session in March, 1771, the complaint was made that one of them was making Masons "for a less sum than the Constitution allows," and it was ordered, that the Masters and Wardens of the Lodge be notified of the information, and desired to attend at the June meeting "when they will have an opportunity to answer to said information;" but no mention of them is found in the record of that meeting, or in any subsequent record: and it may be safely presumed that the military Lodges then ceased to be constituents of this Grand Lodge. They were never in fact more than a merely nominal part of it; St. Andrew's Lodge was really the Grand Lodge.

On March 2, 1770, a Charter was granted for Tyrian Lodge, at Gloucester, and on May 13, 1770, for Massachusetts Lodge in Boston. Only one of the Charter members of the former seems to have been a member of St. Andrew, though more of them were probably made Masons in it; but all the Charter members of the latter were members of St. Andrew. The Charter of Tyrian Lodge was granted at once but the petition for Massachusetts Lodge was considered and debated at a Grand Lodge specially summoned for the purpose, and finally granted by a vote of eight to four, none of the petitioners voting. All who voted were members of St. Andrew's Lodge. During the discussion the commission of the Grand Master was read, by vote of the Grand Lodge. While this petition was under discussion, one for another Lodge was denied three times: at first it had but three names; it was presented a second time with four names, and a third time with six names.

This Grand Lodge on May 11, 1770, affirming the rule of the civil law in relation to a quorum,

"Voted unanimously as the opinion of this Lodge, that whenever summonses are issued for convening a Grand Lodge by the Grand Master or his direction, and the Grand Lodge in consequence thereof is congregated, the same is to all intents and purposes a legal Grand Lodge, however few in number, and as such may, with the strictest propriety, proceed to business."

This has been the law in Massachusetts ever since; and it probably prevails in all jurisdictions in which the matter is not regulated by express constitutional provisions. This rule prevented the suspension of the meetings of several Grand Lodges during the Anti-Masonic excitement, by enabling a few members to keep them alive.

On March 6, 1772, a Charter was granted for St. Peter's Lodge, at Newburyport: a petition for a Lodge at Portsmouth, N. H., was presented and considered at several sessions of the Grand Lodge, but was finally denied. The three Charters enumerated were all that were granted during Grand Master Warren's administration.

St. John's day (June 24, 1772) was publicly celebrated: the Grand Lodge met at Concert Hall, was opened in ample form, formed in procession, "all clothed in their respective jewels and with their several badges of office," and marched to Christ's Church, where "a very suitable and pertinent discourse was preached;" after which the procession marched to Masons' Hall in reverse order, where several votes of thanks were passed and the Grand Lodge closed: the Brethren then dined together under a tent in the garden.

On December 27, 1771, Grand Master Warren, by a commission in due form, appointed Joseph Webb Deputy Grand Master, and he was, at the next session of the Grand Lodge, formally installed. The issuing of a commission to a Deputy was without precedent, so far as any record shows. Viewed in the light of subsequent events, this fact has led to considerable speculation as to the cause of this proceeding: additional interest in this inquiry is given by the fact that, by its terms, it was "to remain in full force and virtue until recalled by me, or my successors in office." Some have suggested that Warren, with prophetic vision, then foresaw the great events that within less than four years actually did happen: but the more natural conclusion is that Warren, being familiar with what had already happened more than once in the other Grand Lodge—the death of the Grand Master and the reversion of his authority to a former Grand Master—intended to make provision for the succession in case of his own death. By the law then existing, in case of the death of the Grand Master, his authority reverted to the Junior Past Grand Master, or if there was no Past Grand Master, then the Deputy Grand Master should act as principal until a Grand Master be chosen; there was no Past Grand Master of his Grand Lodge, and the appointment of a Deputy was necessary to prevent the extinction of his Grand Lodge, or, at best, a suspension of its functions, in case of his death: whether Warren so understood it or not, his action in appointing a Deputy to hold commission until recalled by him, or his successors in office, was in exact conformity to the law and was the only method by which his Grand Lodge could exercise its functions in an emergency which might happen and which actually did happen. It is not necessary to assume that he foresaw the Revolution, but only that he intended to provide for an emergency that might happen at any moment.

On December 27, 1773, the Grand Master presented a commission from the Grand Master of Scotland, dated March 3, 1772, appointing him Grand Master of Masons for the Continent of America, and he was thereupon installed into office. He then caused to be read a commission appointing Joseph Webb, Deputy Grand Master, "who was accordingly installed:" this commission to Webb is not recorded, but undoubtedly it was like the former one in all respects, except the territory for which he was appointed. The commission was convenient and proper evidence of Webb's appointment; but it must be remembered that it was merely his appointment as an officer, whose powers and duties were found, not in the commission, but in the constitutions and regulations of the Grand Lodge of Scotland and of the Provincial Grand Lodge held under its authority.

The Grand Lodge decided, October 1, 1773, that neither the Lodge located at Castle William (a military Lodge) nor any other travelling Lodge has a right to make Masons of citizens. This was an early affirmation of the doctrine of territorial jurisdiction.

During this year also, there came before the Grand Lodge a curious complication that had arisen in the Lodge of St. Andrew. William Burbeck was the first Master under the Charter, and was Master for the year ending December 27, 1767: although his term of office had expired, he still retained possession of the Charter. No satisfactory reason for his doing so has ever been given. He was a Charter member, the first Master under the Charter, and when he ceased to be Master, was the only Charter member that was then a member of the Lodge. It may be, that he deemed it to be his right and duty to hold the Charter, because he was the only one remaining of those to whom it was granted. It has been suggested that he feared that Paul Revere would attempt to cut loose from the Grand Lodge of Scotland; but he took the Charter a year before the movement for the appointment of a Provincial Grand Master was commenced, and two years before the Provincial Grand Lodge was organized. Whatever his reason was, the Lodge at first acquiesced, and it is probable that he produced it at the meetings; no action by the Lodge was taken during 1768, 1769, or 1770, but on March 4, 1771, it was voted unanimously that the money advanced by Bro. Burbeck for the Charter be offered to him. On the eleventh of the next month, the Master was desired to demand the Charter of Bro. Burbeck; demand was made and Bro. Burbeck refused to give it up, and it was voted to apply to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for a copy. During the remainder of 1771, and during 1772, nothing seems to have been done in the matter, save that at the annual election in the latter year, Burbeck was nominated for Master, but declined. Early in 1773, another demand was made on him for the Charter, but he returned no answer. Thereupon the Lodge petitioned the Grand Lodge for a dispensation until the copy of the Charter should be received from Scotland. When the matter came before the Grand Lodge, it was first voted that the members of St. Andrew's Lodge "have no voice in the determination of this petition;" and then the petition was granted unanimously.

Upon receipt of the dispensation, Burbeck was suspended "until he gives satisfactory reasons for detaining the Charter." It was ordered that the dispensation be kept by the Master, and laid on the table each Lodge night, and the Lodge continued to work under it, no reply being received from Scotland.

As the Lodge did not recover the original Charter into full possession till more than forty years after it was first withheld, and as it is still preserved as the only Charter in existence in the United States issued by the the Grand Lodge of Scotland, a brief statement of its subsequent history is given.

On February 10, 1774, a committee on affairs with William Burbeck was chosen, but nothing seems to have been effected, for on December 13, 1776, it was voted to reconsider his suspension "upon his laying the Charter on the table each night." He does not appear to have performed the condition, but was always afterwards treated as a member. When the Lodge refused to submit to the authority of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, the letter to the Grand Lodge of Scotland was written by him; and he attended many sessions of the Grand Lodge between 1777 and 1782. He died in the latter part of 1785, and, on his death-bed, delivered the Charter to two brethren; they announced the fact to the Lodge, which voted that one of them, Bro. Elisha Sigourney, should retain it "until further orders." Thus the matter rested until 1789, when Bro. Sigourney was requested to lay it on the table each Lodge night; and the Secretary was directed to read it at each annual meeting, to transcribe it on the record of the Lodge, and have a copy made and attested by a notary public under his official seal. In 1793, the Lodge seems to have awoke to the fact that it was working under a Charter which it did not control, or under a dispensation from a Grand Lodge whose authority it denied. After considerable discussion, it resolved that its old Charter was valid, and wrote the Grand Lodge of Scotland, asking to have all its proceedings approved; no answer came till after six years of doubt, anxiety and perplexity; but then an answer came confirming the Charter and the action of the Lodge.

Sigourney, however, continued to hold possession of the Charter, and finally was made responsible for its safe preservation. Meantime the discussion of the question of becoming subordinate to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts was going on, until it resulted in the Lodge giving in its adhesion on May 11, 1809. Three days afterwards, at a session of the Lodge, Bro. Sigourney presented the Charter to the Lodge, stating that he received it from Bro. Burbeck under the solemn injunction not to give it up until the difficulty then (in 1785) existing between the Grand Lodge and St. Andrew's Lodge should be settled. It has since remained in the archives of this Lodge.

This injunction, taken with other facts, suggests that Bro. Burbeck took a broader view of the matter than has heretofore been supposed. During all the time while he held the Charter, he was a member of the First Lodge. This became dormant during the Revolution; and in 1783, he was one of a Committee in behalf of the First and Second Lodges, which petitioned Grand Master Rowe for a Charter consolidating those two Lodges into one by the name of St. John's Lodge. The Charter was granted, and he was one of the Charter members. Who will say, in the light of these facts, that when he gave that solemn death-bed injunction in relation to the Charter, he did not have in mind "a complete Masonic union throughout the Commonwealth?" Whether he did or not, the restoration of the Charter in accordance with that injunction, was the final act in the consummation of "complete Masonic union."

Returning to the history of the two Grand Lodges, we find little of importance in 1773 and 1774. Matters and events, which were to culminate in the independence of the Colonies, absorbed the attention of leading men. Grand Master Warren and his associates, and many of the members of the Lodges under his jurisdiction, were exceedingly active. The records of the Lodges and of the Grand Lodge show that other and public duties prevented the performance of the usual routine Masonic duties. The meetings were kept up, however, although but little business was transacted. St. John's day (December 27, 1773) was celebrated by both Grand Lodges. Grand Master Warren sent a committee to wait upon Grand Master Rowe, the Grand Officers and Brethren convened with him, to acquaint them that "their healths would be drank half after four o'clock." The committee returned for answer that Grand Master Rowe and the Brethren with him would return the compliment at the same time. William Burbeck, the holder of the Charter for St. Andrew's Lodge, was among those who had "convened" with Grand Master Rowe in celebrating the day.

The preceding 24th of June, St. John's Grand Lodge celebrated and the other

Grand Lodge did not; but Grand Master Warren, William Burbeck and others, were the guests of Grand Master Rowe. But for the Revolution, this fraternal interchange of courtesies might have paved the way for an early union; but such a result was hardly probable while the Grand Lodges were not independent, although one Brother (Samuel Barrett) seems to have been at that time an active member of both Grand Lodges, as well as of a Lodge under the jurisdiction of each.

In the latter part of 1773, Grand Master Rowe laid before his Grand Lodge a plan for "A general Fund of Charity." It was carefully considered and referred to a Committee, by which it was discussed at several sessions and then reported to the Grand Lodge, by which it was unanimously adopted.

The intention was to create a permanent fund, the income of which only should be expended: it was to be a Grand Lodge fund, and it was not to "have any connection with, or lay any restraint on charitable acts which any Lodge may choose to make on their particular Funds of Charity."

The Grand Lodge "highly approved" a letter of the Grand Secretary in which he said, "when any Brother petitions a particular Lodge for relief, and they are satisfied with the petitioner's character and circumstances, it lays entirely with them to grant him such a sum as they think convenient, or none at all, if they find the state of their Lodge at a low ebb." This denies that a Mason has any absolute right to relief, and leaves the granting of it to the members of the Lodge acting under the influence of their Masonic obligations, and no warrant is found in it for any claim to reimbursement under any circumstances.

But little was done, however, in execution of the plans "by reason of the precariousness of the times," as one Lodge expressed it.

The Grand Lodge met in January, 1775, but before the time for the next quarterly communication arrived, the war of the Revolution had actually begun on the fields of Lexington and Concord. The meetings of the Grand Lodge were suspended for many years. Grand Master Warren's Grand Lodge resumed its meetings as soon as the British forces left Boston, but Grand Master Rowe's did not, though he occasionally exercised his functions as Grand Master.

It appears from his diary that the friends of independence looked upon him with suspicion.

In 1773, he was consignee, or in some other way connected with the shipment of tea. In fact, one of the cargoes emptied into Boston harbor came in a vessel with which he was connected. He was interviewed by a committee of which Warren was chairman, received anonymous and threatening letters, and was so worried about the matter that he records that he "would rather have lost five hundred guineas than Capt. Bruce should have taken any of this tea on board his ship." Still, it is evident that he strongly disapproved of the proceedings of the "Sons of Liberty." Referring to a fast "recommended by some of the ministers on account of the miserable situation of this town," he says, "I cannot reconcile this measure, and should much rather the people would do justice and recommend the payment for the tea instead of losing a day by fasting." While there undoubtedly existed among the people a grave distrust concerning him, there was no special manifestation of it, so far as known, until Warren's funeral, April 8, 1776. By invitation of Joseph Webb, then Deputy Grand Master of the other Grand Lodge, he went to attend the "funeral of the remains of Dr. Warren." He went to the Council

THE GREEN DRAGON TAVERN.

A MASONIC LANDMARK OF BOSTON.

American Freemasonry is so closely interwoven with the early life of the Republic that we can trace the workings of the Craft in several of the important events that gave the nation its birth.

Those interested in early American history look to Boston, from whence sprang the spirit that shaped the destinies of the world's greatest republic. One of the early landmarks of that Anglo-Saxon settlement is none other than "The Green Dragon Tavern," which, as a public house, dates back to 1712, and will probably outlive all others in New England in the popular estimation.

In 1752 the lodge of St. Andrew was established under the law of "ancient usage," and met at the Green Dragon Tavern. Shortly after some alterations were made in the old building and a large room was furnished for the lodge. On Nov. 30th, 1756, the Grand Lodge of Scotland granted a charter, its meetings were held at the "Green Dragon," which was then styled "Freemasons' Arms." Beneath that ancient roof Gen. Joseph Warren, Commodore Edward Preble, Josiah Bartlett, Col. Paul Revere, Dr. John Warren, Col. Thomas Crafts, Gen. Benjamin Lincoln, Col. Edward Proctor, Col. Joseph Webb, Hon. Perez Morton, Benjamin Coolidge, Hon. Amos Lincoln, William Hopkins, Dr. Benjamin Frothingham, Ezra Collins, Francis Tate, and a host of the old godfathers of the American Revolution, were made Freemasons.

On the 12th of January, 1764, the Lodge of St. Andrew resolved by vote to purchase the estate, and on March 31st following, Catherine Kerr, by her deed of that date, conveyed the famous "Green Dragon Tavern" to the committee of the lodge, consisting of such well-known men of early Boston as Thomas Millikin, Samuel Barrett, Edward Foster, Caleb Hopkins, Moses Deslon, William Harkins, Joseph Webb and John Jenkins. The estate is to-day still the property of the Lodge of St. Andrew. It was in the "long room" of the Green Dragon where were organized the "Sons of Liberty, 1766-1776," the "North End Caucus," Saint Andrew's Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, Massachusetts Lodge, the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts; also the Grand Chapter of Massachusetts. Out of the "Sons of Liberty," "North End Caucus," etc., sprang the spirit which gave birth to the Revolution. The famous "Boston Tea Party" of 1773 was planned at the Green Dragon Tavern, and most of those taking part in it were Freemasons.

Freemasonry in the American past has been an important factor on the side of toleration and free thought. Washington and all of his Major-generals were of our great international brotherhood. Nearly all of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were of the Craft. May their lives be lessons to our members in the infant days of the 20th century.

The Green Dragon Tavern, Boston

BUILT IN 1712, WHEREIN THE FORCE OF ST. ANDREW FIRST MET IN 1752. IT WAS HERE THAT THE SONS OF LIBERTY WERE ORGANIZED 1766-1776, FROM WHOM SPRANG THE BOSTON TEA PARTY, WHICH GAVE BIRTH TO THE REVOLUTION. MOST ALL OF THOSE TAKING PART IN IT WERE FREEMASONS.

Chamber with the intention of walking in procession with the Lodges under his jurisdiction, with their jewels and clothing, "but" (he says) "to my great mortification was very much insulted by some hot and furious persons, without the least provocation." It was deemed prudent that he should retire and he did so. He adds, "This has caused some uneasy reflections in my mind, as I am not conscious to myself of doing anything prejudicial to the cause of America either by will, word or deed."

The derangement of affairs, caused by the war, was of itself a very serious obstacle to the prosecution of Masonic work, and when there was added a division between the Grand Master and very many of the craft upon the questions which were being settled by the arbitrament of arms, it is not strange that such work was entirely suspended. The Grand Lodge records show no meetings for twelve years. However, on June 25, 1776, the Grand Master celebrated the day by dining with the Brethren of the Lodges under his direction. Some of the Lodges became dormant, but others kept up their organization and occasionally met.

While the other Grand Lodge, over which Warren presided, had among the members of its obedience those loyal to King George, the larger part took the opposite side, and many of them were very active and among the leaders of the incipient revolution. This was especially true of the members of St. Andrew's Lodge. It then met at the "Green Dragon Tavern," and that was also the headquarters of the "Sons of Liberty." The annual meeting in 1773 fell on the thirtieth of November, and there were only seven members present. The Secretary adds a note in his record, "N. B. Consignees of Tea took up the brethren's time." The election was postponed to the 2d of December. On the evening of December 16, the Lodge met with only five present, and was closed till the next evening, "on account of the few members in attendance." The Secretary makes a very brief record and then covers all the rest of the page with flourishes, each one of which is a well defined T. The absent members were then engaged in discharging three cargoes of TEA into Boston Harbor, and the Secretary may be excused for his flourishes, as his record is the only known record of their proceedings!

It is not necessary to refer particularly to the part taken in the subsequent public events by Gen. Joseph Warren, Paul Revere and other members of Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge over which Warren presided, for it is part of the history of the country. But their position drew to the support of their Grand Lodge the same public sentiment, which Rowe's unsatisfactory position withheld from his Grand Lodge; in consequence the former was prosperous, while the latter suspended the active exercise of its functions.

Warren's Grand Lodge held a meeting on March 3, 1775, at which he presided. The record of this meeting is followed by "Memo. 19th April, 1775, Hostilities commenced between the troops of Great Britain and America in Lexington battle. In consequence of which the town was blockaded and no Lodge held until December, 1776."

The meeting in that month was to celebrate St. John's day: but on April 8, 1776, the Grand Lodge had met for the performance of a sad and solemn duty. Their Grand Master had fallen at the battle of Bunker Hill and been buried on the field. After the evacuation of Boston by the British troops, his burial place was found and his body recovered, and on the day last named it was buried with Masonic honors. The services were held in King's Chapel: "Rev. Dr. Cooper prayed and Mr. Perez Morton delivered an oration." "There was a handsome procession of the craft with two companies of soldiers."

A special meeting of the Grand Lodge was called for February 14, 1777, to consider a petition for a Charter for a new Lodge; but when the Brethren met they were confronted by a question in comparison with which all others were of no importance. What was the status of their Grand Lodge after the death of their Grand Master? The law of succession was plainly set forth in the Constitutions, and undoubtedly Grand Master Warren well understood it. There being no Past Grand Master, the authority vested in his Deputy. It has been accepted as true, that either the Brethren had doubts upon this point, or else that they were ignorant of the law. But their proceedings indicate that their doubts did not arise in reference to this point, but in relation to a question of vastly greater importance—whether they had not the right to organize a Sovereign Grand Lodge.

After discussing the question, the Grand Lodge voted to summon all its members to meet "in order to consult upon and to elect a Grand Master for this State, in the room of our late worthy Grand Master Warren, deceased." The meeting was held and the question discussed, but action was deferred until the next evening. At that time, March 8, 1777, the Grand Lodge voted to proceed to the choice of a Grand Master to act in that capacity till the next June.

Joseph Webb (then Deputy) was chosen, after which the other Grand Officers were elected. The petition for the new Lodge was then granted.

It has been doubted whether those brethren, by whom these proceedings were taken, intended to organize a sovereign and independent Grand Lodge, or understood that they were doing so. But their acts leave no room for doubt. By the existing Masonic law, the Deputy Grand Master became Acting Grand Master, until the office should be filled by a new appointment by the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The very election of a Grand Master was the exercise of one of the highest prerogatives of sovereignty; and doubtless in the previous discussions, this point was taken. The election of a Grand Master was an exercise of powers which could be exercised only by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, if its authority was then recognized. The nature of the act was such that they must have understood its significance.

But we are not left to rely upon inferences from the election and the circumstances under which it was made. A notice of Webb's election as Grand Master, signed by the other Grand Officers and the Master and Wardens of St. Andrew's Lodge and the representatives of Tyrian and St. Peter's Lodges, under seal of the Grand Lodge, was issued, of which the following is a copy (omitting signatures):

"To all the Fraternity of Antient Free and Accepted Masons around the Globe Greeting.

"Be it known & made manifest That by the decease of our late worthy

Grand Master the most Worshipfull

JOSEPH WARREN ESQR.

"That important office is become vacant, and as his commission was derived from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, & all intercourse, and connection that way being dissolved by a Declaration of this State together with twelve other United States Free and Independent of Great Britain,

We therefore the Grand Lodge, together with the Delegates of the other Lodges under this jurisdiction, taking into consideration the absolute necessity of having a Grand Master of our own appointment for this state, Have thought fit to appoint & do by these Presents Constitute, appoint, & Elect our trusty & well beloved Brother Joseph

Webb Esqr To be Grand Master of Antient Masonry through this state of Massachusetts Bay, and we for ourselves & successors in Office, Do, by these presents acknowledge our Subjection to him, as Grand Master aforesaid, & all the Lodges under this Jurisdiction are hereby enjoined to acknowledge & conduct themselves accordingly, agreeably to the Antient rules & customs of Masonry.

In Testimony whereof, We have caused the Seal of our Grand Lodge to be hereunto affixed, & have also sett our Hands this eighth Day of March in the year of our Lord MDCCLXXVII & of Masonry 5777."

Here it is expressly stated, that all connection with the Grand Lodge of Scotland, being dissolved by the independence of the States, there was an absolute necessity of having a Grand Master of their own appointment for their State. It does not purport to be a mere temporary appointment until the return of peace: that idea is absolutely excluded.

Again: the same thing appears from the terms of the Charter granted the same day. Former Charters recite the authority as coming from the parent Grand Lodge; but this Charter emanates from "The Most Worshipful Joseph Webb, Esq., Grand Master of antient, free and accepted Masons, only authorized and appointed and in ample form installed, together with his Grand Wardens."

Thus was organized the first independent Grand Lodge upon the American Continent, and its organization was based upon the principles enunciated in a former chapter. While it is possible that some of its members did not fully understand that they were cutting loose from the parent Grand Lodge, it is beyond question that the principal participants fully understood the nature of the movement and intended to form, and believed they did form, a Grand Lodge which was the peer of any other Grand Lodge in the world.

For fifteen years, Massachusetts Grand Lodge kept on in the even tenor of its way, meeting regularly and frequently celebrating St. John's day. Charters were granted for Berkshire, Trinity, United States, Unity, Essex, Friendship, Amity, King Solomon's (constituted by Grand Lodge), Hampshire, Friendship (in Berkshire County) and Fred-eric Lodges in Massachusetts: Warren Lodge at Machias, Maine, September 4, 1778: St. Patrick's at Portsmouth, March 17, 1780; Rising Sun, at Keene, March 5, 1784; Faithful at Charlestown, February 22, 1788; and Dartmouth Lodge at Hanover, December 3, 1788, all in New Hampshire: Vermont, at Cornish, November 8, 1781; North Star, at Bennington, January 19, 1785; both in Vermont: Wooster, at Colchester, January 12, 1781; St. Paul, at Litchfield, May 22, 1781; King Hiram at Darby, January 3, 1783; and Columbia at Norwich, July 23, 1785, all in Connecticut: and for a Lodge in the State of New York, September 6, 1782, the name and number of which are not given. A Charter was also granted for Washington Lodge, connected with one of the regiments: it ceased to exist when the regiment was disbanded and was reported extinct, December 8, 1785; its Secretary, at one time, was General Henry Sewall. The first Friendship Lodge was at first composed of Frenchmen; Le Barbier Du Plessis, afterwards connected with the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, was a leading spirit in it. It seems to have been a turbulent Lodge; charges against various members of it were before the Grand Lodge, which finally annulled its Charter and granted a new one to a portion of its members, (leaving out Du Plessis,) May 8, 1781, by the name of Perfect Union Lodge. When St. Andrew's Lodge refused to recognize the Grand Lodge, it divided, and the minority were recognized at first as St. Andrew's Lodge, but on September 2, 1784, the Grand Lodge granted to it a renewal of its Charter by the name of Rising States Lodge. St. Andrew's Lodge, as already stated, took a Charter from this Grand Lodge, March 1, 1782, which, however, it soon repudiated. Perfect Union Lodge surrendered its Charter June 24, 1786, by permission of the Grand Lodge: the Lodge got possession of it afterwards, and attempted to work under it, but the Grand Lodge declared the return of the Charter unauthorized and the work irregular, and the Lodge became extinct. The business depression consequent upon the war produced a serious effect upon the Lodges and many became delinquent in payment of dues, making returns and being represented in Grand Lodge: in addition Tyrian Lodge and St. Peter's Lodge, both of which were chartered by Warren, when Provincial Grand Master, were inclined to deny the independence of the Grand Lodge. Strenuous and long-continued efforts were made to secure from the Lodges a performance of their duties, and they were in part successful. But six Lodges failed to respond and on June 6, 1788, Essex, Amity, United States, Unity, St. Peter's and Tyrian Lodges were erased from the roll, and notice thereof given to the craft. Essex Lodge in Salem was rechartered, June 2, 1791. A dispensation for Harmonic Lodge, at Boston, composed of foreigners, was granted December 8, 1790. Massachusetts and Rising Sun Lodges became so nearly dormant that they were revived by special vote of the Grand Lodge. In 1792, there was given a list of fifteen Lodges, "considered as within the immediate jurisdiction of the late Massachusetts Grand Lodge:" this list includes Rising States, Massachusetts, Berkshire, Trinity, Warren, King Solomon's, Hampshire, Friendship, Harmonic and Essex, in Massachusetts, (Warren being in the District of Maine); Rising Sun, Faithful and Dartmouth in New Hampshire; and Vermont and North Star in Vermont. A Grand Lodge had been formed in Connecticut, and the Massachusetts Grand Lodge held that when a Grand Lodge was formed in a State all the Lodges therein passed at once under its jurisdiction; and so the Lodges which it had chartered in Connecticut were not included in this list. There had also been a Grand Lodge formed in New Hampshire, to which two of the Lodges, chartered by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, had given in their adhesion, but apparently the fact had not been communicated to the Mother Grand Lodge.

Webb continued to be Grand Master till December 24, 1782, when John Warren (brother of Joseph) was elected: he served till June 3, 1784, when Webb was again elected; he served till his death in 1787, when Warren succeeded him and served one year; in 1788, Moses M. Hays became Grand Master and served till 1792.

Some interesting questions of Masonic law and usage were decided during this period. The Grand Lodge held that five members could hold a Charter and carry on the work of the Lodge, and that while five members were willing to sustain the Lodge in the town in which it was located, the Grand Lodge would not remove the Lodge into another town, but would charter a new Lodge. United States Lodge was charged with receiving candidates rejected in other Lodges, and was ordered to suspend work until it should clear itself of this charge in the Grand Lodge. On December 1, 1780, the Grand Lodge voted that thereafter no one should be a member of more than one Lodge in the same town. Permission was granted in 1785 for the Lodges in the vicinity of Boston to hold a convention; while the object is not stated in the Grand Lodge record, the principal matter considered was the status of the Grand Lodge and the legality of its organization as stated in Chapter XXXIII. The Grand Lodge decided by its action that it might annul or revoke the Charter of a Lodge at its pleasure.

BROTHER GENERAL JOSEPH WARREN.

This patriotic Brother, was born at Roxbury, Mass., in 1741, and fell at the battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775, one of the first martyrs of liberty. He was a graduate of Harvard University, and at 23 commenced the practice of medicine in Boston. In a few years he became one of the most eminent physicians of that city.

General Warren was made a Mason in St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston, 10th Sept. 1761, and passed 2d Nov. following, and raised 28th Nov. 1765. On the 30th May, 1769, Earl Dalhousie, Grand Master of Scotland, appointed him Prov. Grand Master of Boston. Dalhousie was succeeded by Earl of Dumfries, and he appointed Warren "Grand Master of the American Continent," 7th March, 1772. He was a zealous Mason, and had the confidence of the craft. In 1792, a monument was erected by King Solomon's Lodge, Charlestown, on Bunker Hill, to his memory.

In 1768, he was a member of the association in opposition to British tyranny. On the 5th March, 1770, a British officer dispersed a crowd by force of arms, and hence styled the "Boston Massacre." On the 5th March, 1775, it was determined to have an oration in defense of the Colonial rights. It was the custom of the English officers to attend these assemblies, and overawe and threaten the speaker and people. Warren solicited the position, and at the appointed time walked into the crowded church, filled with troops and citizens, and delivered his address. Shortly after this he was elected President of the Committee of Safety and the Provincial Congress, and on the 18th April, 1775, gave notice of the intended move of the British to Concord and Lexington. The British received a warm welcome from the stone walls, where the hero patriots stationed themselves, and poured into them a destructive fire. On the 14th June, 1775, he was elected a major-general by the Provincial Congress, and three days afterward fell a martyr on Bunker Hill.

Brother Major-General Joseph Warren, M. D.

HERO OF BUNKER HILL, AND PAST GRAND MASTER OF MASONS IN BOSTON AND NORTH AMERICA.

Was initiated into Freemasonry November 20, 1761, in St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston, Mass.

Unity Lodge forwarded to the Grand Lodge £100 for the education of the children of Past Grand Master Warren. It is believed that other Lodges, or their members, contributed funds for the same purpose. A note in the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Maine states that Warren Lodge so contributed, but the authority for this note is not known.

Upon the earnest request of Massachusetts Lodge, the Grand Lodge voted, February 16, 1789, that John Welsh, Past Grand Secretary, "be buried with the honors of Masonry and under direction of this Grand Lodge;" and the Committee was "requested to invite the Modern Grand Lodge under direction of the R. W. Bro. Cutler."

The only apparent check to the prosperity of the Grand Lodge was the unexpected course of St. Andrew's Lodge in relation to the independence of the Grand Lodge. Its members had been foremost in the organization of the Grand Lodge and the circular issued declaring its connection with Scotland dissolved, had been signed by the Master and Wardens of St. Andrew's Lodge and several of its members as Grand Officers. But in 1782, doubts were raised which led to a re-examination of the questions involved and to an affirmation of the legality of its proceedings and a formal declaration as to its status. But St. Andrew's Lodge, on December 16, 1782, by a vote of 30 to 19, denied the conclusions of the Grand Lodge, to which its action was communicated. The Grand Lodge appointed a committee to confer with the Lodge, and the conference resulted in the Lodge's voting to continue its adhesion to the Grand Lodge till the return of peace, but at the same time denying the independence of the Grand Lodge. The matter continued to be discussed till January 22, 1784, when the Lodge voted, 30 to 23, to continue under the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Thereupon James Carter, Grand Warden elect, Thomas Urann and John Symmes, Grand Deacons, and Samuel Barrett, Past Grand Warden, declined further connection with the Grand Lodge; the last three signed the circular above quoted declaring the independence of the Grand Lodge. A communication was sent to the Grand Lodge desiring it "to take notice that all connection and debates between the Grand Lodge and the Lodge of St. Andrew are at an end." As already stated, the result was a division of the Lodge and the organization of a new Lodge. It was also invited to join in the Convention in 1785, but it "most explicitly refused" to accept the invitation and stated that in the future no notice would be taken of similar communications.

On March 2, 1787, a letter was received from John Cutler, S. G. W., and thereupon a committee was appointed "to confer with the other Grand Lodge in order, if possible, to obtain a union among Masons, respecting the choice of a Grand Master." The committee was to report at the next meeting and the Secretary was directed to issue a summons to every member requesting his attendance "and mentioning the business to be acted upon respecting the Book of Constitutions and the union of the Lodges." At that next meeting "Upon motion, to perfect a plan of union between the two Grand Lodges, as no official accounts were received from said Lodges, this Grand Lodge came to the following resolution: that a new committee consisting of seven be appointed to act in conjunction with the other committee who were to form a plan of union between the two Grand Lodges, and that said committee write to the several Lodges holding under this jurisdiction to obtain their sentiments upon the subject, either by proxy or otherwise, and to report at the next Quarterly Communication." But nothing further was done in relation to the union until December, 1791.

At that time "the other Grand Lodge" had met for the first time for twelve years, on February 17, 1787, to attend the funeral of Grand Master Rowe. It met again August 4, 1787, for the transaction of routine business: at both of these the Deputy Grand Master, Richard Gridley, presided.

The members of the First and Second Lodges had become scattered during the war, so that on February 7, 1783, they determined to join in a petition to Grand Master Rowe to be united in one Lodge under the name of St. John's, surrendering all powers by which they acted in their separate capacities. The Charter was granted: in form it purports to be issued by Rowe as Grand Master, "duly authorized and appointed, and in ample form installed, together with the Grand Wardens;" that is to say, the Charter assumes to emanate from an independent and sovereign Grand Lodge. Among the petitioners were John Outler, then Senior Grand Warden, William Burbeck and Mungo Mackay; the two latter had been members of St. Andrew's Lodge, and it has been suggested, that they "courteously lent their names for the occasion:" but they were at the same time, and from the start had been, members of the First Lodge. As Mackay's name does not appear in the list of those voting on the question of adhering to the Grand Lodge in 1784, he had probably ceased to be a member: or rather, it is probable that the Mungo Mackay, Junior, who became a member of St. Andrew's in 1780, was the son of the Mungo Mackay who had been an attendant upon the St. John's Grand Lodge more than ten years before. On November 25, 1791, Rising Sun Lodge upon its petition was, by vote of the Grand Lodge, also consolidated with St. John's Lodge.

On July 29, 1790, that Grand Lodge met, and the Brethren, considering the death of many of the Grand Officers (including the Grand Master and the Deputy), voted unanimously to proceed to the choice of new Grand Officers. They filled the vacancies below Senior Grand Warden, but did not elect a Grand Master. But one meeting was held in 1791.

Meanwhile Massachusetts Grand Lodge met regularly. Under the administration of Grand Master Moses M. Hays, the system of Grand Lodge visitations was inaugurated and (as ever since) produced highly beneficial results. The preparation of a Book of Constitutions was frequently before the Grand Lodge, and apparently while considerable progress was made by the various committees to which the matter was entrusted, no definite result was reached. On December 3, 1791, Bro. Thaddeus M. Harris was added to the Committee; and when all the other committees were discharged, in view of the union, this one was directed to report to "the new Grand Lodge."

On December 5, 1791, a committee of seven was appointed, "agreeably to the spirit of a vote of the Grand Lodge at a former meeting," to confer with St. John's Grand Lodge "upon the subject of a complete Masonic union throughout this Commonwealth." Upon notice of this action, St. John's Grand Lodge on January 13, 1792, voted that a committee of seven be appointed to confer with the other committee, "and promote the proposed union, provided it can be done on true Masonic principles." This committee met and "duly debated on the subject" and concluded—

"That such a union would be for the benefit of Masonry in general and for the happiness of the Lodges in this Commonwealth in particular," "being perfectly satisfied, from examining the Book of our Constitutions, that we have full power and right to agree to such union, and when united, to proceed to the choice of all officers, necessary to rule the Lodge."

The two Committees met and agreed unanimously upon a plan of union, and a meeting of St. John's Grand Lodge was held March 3, 1792, to act upon their report. It would seem that there had been an intervening meeting, the proceedings of which had not been entered on record: for at the two next preceding meetings John Cutler, "S. G. W.," presided, and Samuel Dunn, who had been elected Junior Grand Warden, acted as Senior Grand Warden, and Mungo Mackay as Junior Grand Warden: but at this meeting Cutler was "in the chair," and Dunn as Senior Grand Warden, and Mackay as Junior Grand Warden, were respectively permitted to resign their jewels; and Cutler appointed Samuel Barrett Senior Grand Warden, and Job Prince, Junior Grand Warden, and they "were invested with the jewels of their respective offices accordingly:" at the next meeting, they in turn were permitted to resign, and Richard Salter and Thomas Denile were appointed in their places, and Cutler called up each and, "with the usual ceremonies on that solemn occasion," invested him with the appropriate jewel. It may be that these were merely pro tempore appointments, but the facts that Dunn had been actually elected Junior Grand Warden, that these officers were "solemnly" installed, and that in the list of candidates for officers of the united Grand Lodge, Cutler is described as "Grand Master-elect," indicate that there had been an election which is not recorded. It will be noticed also that Samuel Barrett, who had denied the legality of Massachusetts Grand Lodge and had adhered to St. Andrew, had accepted office in St. John's Grand Lodge. It may be added that he was active, as a member of the latter, in accomplishing the union of the two Grand Lodges, and afterwards served on the committee on "The Book of Constitutions."

At this meeting, the committee reported in favor of an immediate union of the two Grand Lodges and submitted a number of Rules and Regulations for the government of the new Grand Lodge; and recommended that, in order to secure harmony, electors be chosen who should appoint the new Grand Officers. Their recommendations and the proposed Rules and Regulations were unanimously adopted: and it was further voted to hold a special Session March 5, 1792, to carry the same into effect.

On that day Massachusetts Grand Lodge also met and the action of the joint Committee and of St. John's Grand Lodge was laid before it, and was unanimously concurred in. The report of the Committee was not spread upon the record of either Grand Lodge, and, so far as known, has not been preserved. Each Grand Lodge proceeded to nominate Grand officers and choose seven Electors. Both Grand Lodges nominated John Cutler for Grand Master, Samuel Dunn for Junior Grand Warden, and Samuel Parkman for Grand Treasurer, but made different nominations for Senior Grand Warden and Grand Secretary: St. John's Grand Lodge confined its nominations to its own members; but Massachusetts Grand Lodge nominated three from the other body: a committee from Massachusetts Grand Lodge waited upon St. John's and informed that body that "this Grand Lodge have unanimously accepted the Constitution, and, having taken the necessary steps, are now ready to proceed to the choice of Grand Officers." The electors proceeded to discharge the duty entrusted to them, and soon reported to each Grand Lodge, that "agreeable to the Constitution and with great unanimity and brotherly affection, had made choice of the following brethren." "as the first officers of THE GRAND LODGE OF THE MOST ANCIENT AND HONORABLE SOCIETY OF FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS FOR THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS:"

John Cutler (St. John's) Grand Master,

Joshua Bartlett (Massachusetts) S. G. Warden,

Mungo Mackay (St. John's) J. G. Warden.

Samuel Parkman (St. John's) Gr. Treas.

Thomas Farrington (St. John's) Gd. Sec'y.

Mackay had not been nominated by either Grand Lodge.

Massachusetts Grand Lodge then "VOTED THAT THIS GRAND LODGE BE DISSOLVED;" while the concluding entry on the record of St. John's Grand Lodge is "THE LODGE WAS THEN CLOSED IN DUE FORM."

The United Grand Lodge met on the same day, a very large number being in attendance, and was opened by Past G. Master John Warren. After prayer and the reading of the Constitutions and other necessary records, Bro. Warren installed John Cutler, as Grand Master, who installed the other Grand Officers, appointing John Lowell (Massachusetts Grand Lodge) Deputy Grand Master. At a special meeting on the 2d of April, it was ordered that a circular letter be sent to all the Lodges holding under either of the former Grand Lodges, "and that a similar letter be sent to the R. W. Master, Officers, and Brethren of St. Andrew's Lodge." The latter is preserved in the archives of the Grand Lodge; it consists of a statement of the proceedings and the reasons therefor, but does not urge the Lodge to give in its adhesion, except so far as the statement of the reasons for the union may do so: the Lodge acknowledged the receipt of the letter with renewed assurances of fraternal affection and esteem. The Lodge continued to stand out, while the Grand Lodge claimed jurisdiction over all Lodges in the Commonwealth. After trying persuasion, until there seemed to be no hope that the position of the Lodge would be changed thereby, the Grand Lodge resolved that

"All Masons under our jurisdiction are forbid to hold correspondence or communication with any Mason or Masons, citizens of the United States, who hold authority under, or acknowledge the supremacy of any foreign Grand Lodge, or who do not, by their representatives, communicate and pay their dues to the Grand Lodge of the State where they reside."

This action was communicated to the other Grand Lodges and was concurred in by the Grand Lodges of Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and other States. Evidently St. Andrew's Lodge soon appreciated the danger of complete isolation by the refusal of all American Masons to hold Masonic communication with it, or any of its members; and on the other hand, the Grand Lodge was not disposed to resort to extreme measures. After learning of the action of other Grand Lodges, the Grand Lodge adopted a constitutional provision, by which a Lodge under a foreign jurisdiction could come under its authority, preserving its Charter and its precedence. The Lodge on June 1, 1798, decided by a vote of 19 to 8 to write to the Grand Lodge of Scotland in relation to passing under "the jurisdiction" of the Grand Lodge. The reply was not received till December, 1799, and when received left the special matter unanswered. The Grand Lodge appointed a Committee of Conference, which was met by a committee of the Lodge; the latter was evenly divided, but a motion to appoint a new committee was defeated by a vote of 21 to 6. The reply to the Grand Lodge was, in substance, that the Lodge could not give in its adhesion to the Grand Lodge without the consent of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, but when it could be justified in acknowledging the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge, it would not hesitate a moment to do so, "being fully convinced from experience, that we should thereby be relieved from much anxiety and trouble." Thus the matter rested, save occasional discussions, till 1807: the Grand Lodge acquiesced in Masonic communication and visitation between the members of its obedience and St. Andrew's Lodge. Previously to the annual meeting in 1807, a committee was appointed to consider the matter. It submitted a report at that meeting to the effect that it would tend much to the honor, increase and prosperity of St. Andrew's Lodge if it could come under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge; and to that end the full sum due the Grand Lodge of Scotland should be remitted, and if the Lodge could be received under the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts with honor to themselves and the Grand Lodge, the Grand Lodge of Scotland be requested to consent thereto. This report was accepted and a committee chosen to confer with the Grand Lodge, by which a similar committee was appointed. The two committees readily agreed upon a basis of union, and, thereupon, the dues were remitted to Scotland and the Grand Lodge requested to discharge the Lodge from its allegiance. It was nearly two years before the answer came; but on September 7, 1809, a committee was appointed to inform the Grand Lodge, that at its annual meeting "St. Andrew's Lodge would become one of its members agreeably to the communication made in December, 1807." Accordingly, at the annual meeting, the Master and Wardens took their seats. The Master addressed the Grand Lodge, and the Grand Master responded with a cordial greeting and directed the Charter of the Lodge to be countersigned and recorded: the election followed and a member of St. Andrew was elected Grand Treasurer. This action completed the chain of union, and since that time the Grand Lodge has had no more loyal and zealous constituent than the Lodge of St. Andrew.

Upon the consummation of the union of the two Grand Lodges, the Craft entered upon a career of great prosperity. Among the first matters that received the attention of the Grand Lodge was the publication of the Book of Constitutions. An able Committee, consisting of thirteen members, was appointed, but the work was chiefly compiled by Thaddeus Mason Harris, but being published by Isaiah Thomas (afterwards Grand Master) it has been usually known as "Thomas's Constitutions;" it was dedicated to George Washington, and a copy was sent to him with an address. He sent a response in which he speaks of the Institution as a "Society whose liberal principles are founded on the immutable laws of truth and justice." In less than six years the book was out of print, and in 1798 another edition, or rather a new "Book of Constitutions," was published, "more complete in all that related to the ancient principles, practices and government of the Society."

The first Lodge chartered by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts was Lincoln Lodge in the then "District of Vaine;" but Charter after Charter followed in rapid succession. In September, 1794, Tyrian Lodge, which had been erased from the roll of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, submitted to the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge and was again enrolled. St. Peter's Lodge at Newburyport, on March 5, 1795, followed the example of Tyrian Lodge, and the Grand Lodge voted that it should hold its former rank. The members of Unity Lodge reorganized, and the Lodge was enrolled December 15, 1796.

The festivals were celebrated, the monument erected by King Solomon's Lodge to General Warren was dedicated, and the corner stone of the new State House was laid with Masonic ceremonies.

On his retiring from his office, the Grand Lodge presented to President Washington an affectionate address. In his reply he says, "My attachment to the Society, of which we are members, will dispose me always to contribute my best endeavors to promote the honor and interest of the Craft." These replies effectually dispose of the slander circulated in later times, that while Washington became a Mason when he was young, he abandoned and repudiated the Institution in his maturer years: the last reply was written on his retirement from the Presidency and within less than three years before his death.

On June 11, 1798, the Grand Lodge presented an address to President John Adams, though not a Mason; it states that "discussions of political opinions are inconsistent with the principles of the ancient Fraternity, but that we feel the strongest obligations to support the civil authority which protects us." The President made an extremely felicitous reply.

Before 1800 there were over fifty Lodges in the Commonwealth (including the District of Maine) under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge. Nor was the interest confined to the mere "work" of the Lodge. The constitution of Lodges, the dedication of halls, and the installation of officers were accompanied with addresses, which were published and circulated. The Institution commanded the devotion of its members and the high respect of the public.

In 1820, Maine became a State, and, in consequence, the Grand Lodge of Maine was organized. By this, the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts lost from its roll thirty-one Lodges; but so great and solid had been the growth of the Institution, that this loss was scarcely felt.

Prosperity and growth, in all that makes an Institution prosperous, continued until the breaking out of the Anti-Masonic storm, an account of which is given in the preceding chapter. This storm raged in Massachusetts with almost more violence than in New York; the warfare against Masonry was all the more bitter because the Masons of Massachusetts did not choose to be passive, but stood up for their rights as citizens. But many Lodges, especially in the smaller villages, were obliged to suspend work, and in not a few instances to surrender their Charters. There were some incidents in this contest in Massachusetts that deserve special mention.

In 1830, the lease of the Hall in Boston, in which the Grand Lodge met, expired. As the best method of securing permanent quarters, a lot was purchased for the erection of a Masonic Temple. In spite of the bitter opposition and public excitement, it was determined to lay the corner stone with Masonic ceremonies. The Brethren met in Faneuil Hall, organized, and, headed by Boston Encampment of Knights Templar, marched out into the hooting and yelling crowd which packed the square in front of the Hall and every street through which the procession was to pass. But the character of the men in the procession, in which were numbered hundreds of high reputation and social standing, and their calm firmness, prevented any violence more dangerous than opprobrious epithets and bitter taunts. It required a good deal of both physical and moral courage to appear in public in a Masonic procession, but over two thousand Masons did it, and the corner stone was laid. The hopes that this exhibition would allay the excitement were not realized, and the effect was precisely the reverse. Soon after a semi-weekly Anti-Masonic paper was started in Boston, which was more violent than any of its predecessors.

The procession had one effect: men began to believe that the Masons could not be guilty of the outrageous things with which they had been charged. Parties holding these views began to press for a denial of the charges. The Grand Lodge, however, was not inclined to act at that time. Finally, says Charles W. Moore, the matter was pressed so hard upon the Fraternity in Boston that the Grand Master called together his officers and advisers and submitted the matter to them. A document in the nature of an argument, learned and powerful, but long, was actually prepared to be laid before the people; but its character and length rendered it unsuited for its purpose, and the result was that nothing was done. In the meantime, the members of Boston Encampment of Knights Templar, numbering twenty-five or thirty, were accustomed to meet weekly at each other's houses to consult together, and for social purposes. They were devoted Masons, true as steel, and unawed by the popular commotion. At one of these meetings in 1831, it was proposed that they should issue a declaration over their own names "and give the lie to the scandals with which they were daily and hourly assailed." The proposition was adopted, and a committee, of which Charles W. Moore was chairman, was appointed: Moore wrote the "Declaration," and at the next meeting it was adopted and signed. It was originally intended for members of the Encampment only, but the movement became known to other Brethren, and they pressed so earnestly, that the document was submitted to others, among them the Grand Master, by whom the plan was immediately endorsed, and all others were abandoned. In a week, it was signed by four hundred and twenty-seven Masons in Boston. In the meantime the country Masons heard of it, and desired to sign it, and the result was that when it was published, it bore the signatures of fourteen hundred and thirty Masons: it was adopted in other jurisdictions, and was ultimately signed by over six thousand Masons in New England. It was presented to the public December 31, 1831. As this was the first heavy blow given to Anti-Masonry, and as it is as true now as when it was issued, and as it is a fitting commentary upon some recent events, it is given in full:

"While the public mind remained in the high state of excitement to which it had been carried by the partial and inflammatory representations of certain offences, committed by a few misguided members of the Masonic Institution, in a sister State, it seemed to the undersigned (residents of Boston and vicinity) to be expedient to refrain from a public declaration of their principles or engagements, as Masons. But, believing the time now to be fully come when their fellow-citizens will receive, with candor, if not with satisfaction, a solemn and unequivocal denial of the allegations, which, during the last five years, in consequence of their connection with the Masonic Fraternity, have been reiterated against them, they respectfully ask permission to invite attention to the subjoined declaration.

"Whereas, it has been frequently asserted and published to the world, that in the several degrees of Freemasonry, as they are conferred in the United States, the candidate on his initiation and subsequent advancement binds himself, by oath, to sustain his Masonic brethren in acts which are at variance with the fundamental principles of morality, and incompatible with his duty as a good and faithful citizen; in justice, therefore, to themselves, and with a view to establish truth and expose imposition, the undersigned, many of us the recipients of every degree of Freemasonry known and acknowledged in this country, do most solemnly deny the existence of any such obligations in the Masonic Institution, so far as our knowledge respectively extends. And we as solemnly aver that no person is admitted to the Institution, without first being made acquainted with the nature of the obligations which he will be required to incur and assume.

"Freemasonry secures its members in the freedom of thought and of speech, and permits each and every one to act according to the dictates of his own conscience in matters of religion, and of his personal preferences in matters of politics. It neither knows, nor does it assume to inflict upon its erring members, however wide may be their aberrations from duty, any penalties or punishments, other than those of admonition, suspension, and expulsion.

"The obligations of the Institution require of its members a strict obedience to the laws of God and of man. So far from being bound by any engagements inconsistent with the happiness and prosperity of the Nation, every citizen who becomes a Mason is doubly bound to be true to his God, to his Country, and to his Fellowmen. In the language of the 'Ancient Constitutions' of the Order, which are printed and open for public inspection, and which are used as text-books in all the Lodges, he is 'required to keep and obey the Moral Law; to be a quiet and peaceable citizen; true to his government and just to his country.'

"Masonry disdains the making of proselytes. She opens the portals of her asylum to those only who seek admission, with the recommendation of a character unspotted by immorality and vice. She simply requires of the candidate his assent to one great fundamental, religious truth—The Existence and Providence of God—and a practical acknowledgement of those infallible doctrines for the government of life which are written by the finger of God on the heart of man.

"Entertaining such sentiments as Masons, as Citizens, as Christians, and as Moral Men, and deeply impressed with the conviction that the Masonic Institution has been, and may continue to be, productive of great good to their fellow-men; and having 'received the laws of the society and its accumulated funds, in sacred trust for charitable uses,' the undersigned can neither renounce nor abandon it. We most cordially unite with our brethren of Salem and vicinity, in the declaration and hope that, 'should the people of this country become so infatuated as to deprive Masons of their civil rights, in violation of their written constitutions and the wholesome spirit of just laws and free governments, a vast majority of the Fraternity will still remain firm, confiding in God and the rectitude of their intentions for consolation, under the trials to which they may be exposed.'"

While the "Declaration" was a heavy blow to Anti-Masonry, it had acquired too much strength to be overthrown at once. Its power was all the greater because it had been made an element in partisan politics; still the excitement, which had been studiously fomented by its leaders, had begun to subside. The next movement was a desperate attack upon the Grand Lodge. The latter had been chartered as a charitable institution by the Legislature in 1817, with power to hold real estate to the amount of $20,000 and personal estate to the amount of $60,000. The enemies of Masonry conceived the idea that the repeal of the Charter would be fatal to the Grand Lodge, and that the hearing before the Legislature would give an opportunity to ventilate their scandalous charges, and, by securing for them the endorsement of the Legislature, deal a finishing blow to the Institution. The situation of the Grand Lodge seemed such, that these results would follow. When it was obliged to move from its old Hall in 1830, as already stated, it purchased a lot and commenced the erection of a Temple: this involved the holding of more real estate than its civil Charter allowed, but no one supposed that the Legislature would hesitate a moment to consent to an amendment of the Charter allowing it to hold the same amount of property, but changing the amounts and making the limit of real estate $60,000 and personal property $20,000; but the vindictiveness of the Anti-Masons succeeded in defeating the proposed amendment. This was in 1831: and now, at the session in 1834, it was believed that the repeal of the Charter would complete the ruin of the Grand Lodge. Accordingly measures were instituted for the purpose, and the Grand Lodge was notified to appear and show cause why its Charter should not be repealed. But the Grand Lodge had not been idle. Under the authority it already possessed, it had conveyed its real estate to Trustees to be held for charitable purposes, and put it beyond the power of the Legislature to reach, directly or indirectly. The Legislature could not impair the obligation of a contract, and the trust funds of the Grand Lodge were secure from the malice of its enemies, even if their power in the Legislature had been equal to their evil intentions. The course of the Grand Lodge was a complete surprise to them and left them completely baffled. It proceeded in a formal and legal manner to surrender its Charter. Having taken the necessary measures, it appointed a committee to return the Charter to the Legislature with a "Memorial" prepared by Charles W. Moore. This document was a master-piece and a fitting companion of the "Declaration." It recites the organization of the Grand Lodge; the creation of its charity fund to be held in sacred trust, and the income applied only to relieve the distressed and suffering; the scrupulous performance of the duty imposed by its creation; the incorporation of the Grand Lodge for the purpose of enabling it to administer this trust far more safely and more conveniently; the transaction of its business with a scrupulous regard to the original purposes of its institution, and an honorable endeavor to preserve the inviolability of its corporate powers; the conduct of its members as honest and peaceable citizens, and recognizing in the Ancient Charges of their Order the unexceptionable rules of duty in all their social and political relations, that they have "agreed to be good men and true and strictly to obey the moral law; to be peaceable subjects, and cheerfully to conform to the laws of the country in which they reside; not to be concerned in plots and conspiracies against government, but patiently to submit to the decisions of the supreme Legislature; to pay proper respect to the civil magistrate, to work diligently, live creditably and act honorably with all men:" the reasons which led the Grand Lodge to enter upon the erection of a Masonic Temple, without a suspicion that there could be any objection to the modification of its Charter; the application therefor, and its rejection: "for reasons which impartial history will doubtless exhibit, but the pertinence of which the wisdom of the historian may not easily recognize;" the consequent embarrassment of the Grand Lodge; its conclusion to proceed with the building, and trust to the unanimity and justice of a future Legislature for the necessary modification of its Charter or dispose of the property, as circumstances might require; the adoption of the latter alternative, and the formal notice to the officers by the service upon each of them of a copy of the petition; and then goes on to say:

"The ultimate object of this petition seems to be a revocation of the act of incorporation of the Grand Lodge. On the face of it, however, is spread out a series of direct charges and scandalous insinuations against the principles and practices of that corporation. But, as they are true or supposable, only as a faithful representation of the spirit and proceedings of those who originated them, a due regard to the blamelessness and respectability of the said Grand Lodge, as well as a personal sense of self-respect, alike admonish your memorialists to refrain from any more particular notice of them. The Grand Lodge can enter into no discussion of the principles of Freemasonry with prejudiced and abusive partizans; but especially would it avoid the indecorum of obtruding such a controversy into the presence of the Legislature of the Commonwealth. All controversy which may be honorably avoided is inconsistent with the conciliatory and beneficent designs of our association. We are required rather to suffer undeserved persecution and injury than unnecessarily to maintain strife and bitterness. And although as citizens of a government of laws we can submit to nothing that is clearly wrong, as the friends of peace and order, we can persist in nothing that is not clearly right. Actuated by these sentiments, and by a sincere desire to spare the Legislature the annoyance and unprofitable consumption of time, which the political party interested in the petition may otherwise occasion, the Grand Lodge has determined to make a voluntary surrender of its civil Charter; and the undersigned, the present memorialists, have been duly appointed to inform the Honorable Legislature that by a vote, passed at a regular meeting of that Corporation, on the evening of December 27, 1833 (a copy of which is hereunto annexed), its corporate powers were relinquished, its act of incorporation vacated, and your memorialists instructed to return it to the Honorable Legislature, from whom it was derived.

"Finally, that there may be no misunderstanding of this matter, either in the Legislature or among our fellow-citizens, we beg leave to represent precisely the nature and extent of the surrender contained in this Memorial. By divesting itself of its corporate powers, the Grand Lodge has relinquished none of its Masonic attributes or prerogatives. These it claims to hold and exercise independently alike of popular will and Legislative permission—not of toleration, but of right. Its members are intelligent freemen, and although willing to restore any gift or advantage derived from the government, whenever it becomes an object of jealousy, however unfounded, nothing is further from their intentions, or from their convictions of duty, than to sacrifice a private institution, for social and benevolent purposes—the interests of which have been entrusted to them—in order to appease a popular excitement, of which that Institution may have been the innocent occasion.”

The last paragraph rang through the country like a clarion, carrying dismay to the enemies of Freemasonry, but establishing more strongly the confidence of the faithful craftsmen, giving firmness to the wavering and restoring the courage of the timid.

The tide of popular feeling began to turn. But another blow at the enemy was dealt in Massachusetts. Charles W. Moore and his partner, Seavy, were the publishers of a Masonic paper in Boston: they attacked Samuel D. Green, the editor of the “Anti-Masonic Christian Herald,” also published in Boston, and were indicted for libel: their defence was that Green was of depraved and vicious character, and that their published statements were true; they proved the truth of their allegations, and were acquitted. Anti-Masonry in Massachusetts could not rally from the effect of this trial, and soon lived only in memory.

With the decline of Anti-Masonry, the proper work of the craft recommenced. Dormant Lodges were revived; surrendered Charters were restored; the alarm at the outer door was again heard, as the best men in the community sought admission. The ranks of the craft had been purified by the withdrawal of time-servers, the over-timid, those who became Masons to subserve their own interests, and those who never appreciated the real character and object of the Institution. The consequence was the comparatively rapid, yet solid, growth of the Institution, which has been maintained ever since.

On March 1, 1859, the Grand Lodge was again incorporated with power to hold real estate to the value of $250,000 (afterwards increased to $500,000) and personal property to the value of $50,000. It has erected and paid for a magnificent Masonic Temple, already affording a large income for charitable purposes.

It adheres to the old doctrine in relation to the powers of Grand Lodges. Its Constitution declares that “By the ancient Constitutions and usages of Freemasonry, the Grand Lodge, as the supreme Masonic authority in this Commonwealth, is invested with certain privileges;” among them is the power of legislation for the government of the craft: the control of “the work;” and the issuing and revoking of Charters: it has also “the inherent power of investigating, regulating and deciding all matters relative to the craft, to particular Lodges, or to individual brothers, which power it may exercise either by itself, or by such delegated authority as, in its wisdom and discretion, it may appoint; but in the Grand Lodge alone resides the power of revoking the Charter of Lodges and expelling brethren from the craft.” It concedes that “the Grand Master enjoys all the powers and prerogatives conferred by the ancient Constitutions and the usages and landmarks of the craft;” * * * that “for dereliction of duty, or other unmasonic conduct, he may suspend a brother or a Lodge, until the next meeting of the Grand Lodge;” * * “and do all other acts and deeds as are warranted or required of him by the regulations and the ancient usages of the Fraternity.” It holds that Lodge funds are held in trust by the Lodge, and when the Lodge ceases to exist, the Grand Lodge succeeds it as Trustee, and holds the funds and property for charitable purposes. Lodges exercise their powers "agreeably to their Charters, the laws of the Grand Lodge and the ancient usages of the craft;" and "every warranted Lodge is a constituent part of the Grand Lodge in which assembly all the powers of the Fraternity reside."

This Grand Lodge has rigidly adhered to the ancient laws and usages of the Craft; resisted all attempts to introduce modern methods and ideas. Its prosperous position and high reputation are thus maintained by 230 Lodges, with a membership of 52,260 in its jurisdiction, according to the statistical report of 1908.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Although the present Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, as an independent Grand Lodge, is not next in order of seniority, yet it granted so many Charters in other States, that it becomes convenient to give a sketch of its history in advance of those of some Grand Lodges of an earlier organization.

The loss of its early records is irreparable: and in consequence the historian is limited to scanty materials in tracing the history of Masonry in that jurisdiction through one of the most important periods of its existence.

The statement of Dr. Franklin in the Pennsylvania Gazette of December 8, 1730, that there were then several Lodges in that Province, must be received with some grains of allowance. He was not then a Mason, and therefore had not the means of accurate knowledge; the general statements of newspapers in regard to such matters in those days were even more liable to be erroneous than at the present day, when such a statement, unsupported by other evidence, would have little weight. His statement is not supported by contemporaneous authority of any kind, nor by subsequent history, while the fact that all, who are known to have been Masons at that time and during several years afterwards, were members of one Lodge, raises a strong presumption that for "several Lodges" we should read "one Lodge." It must be remembered, too, that in those early days the term "Lodge" was applied to the "communication" or meeting of a Lodge, as well as to the body itself: and that a Grand Lodge was a "General Assembly" of Masons, instead of a meeting of the representatives of Lodges, according to the present usage. Such had been the practice in England, and while a change was introduced in 1717, the new system did not get fully established till several years later, and considering how little was printed, and how difficult communication was between the Old World and the New, it requires too great a stretch of the imagination to presume that the new system was understood in Pennsylvania as early as 1730. This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that so far as history discloses, the old system, and not the new, was acted upon. In the newspaper notices in 1732 and succeeding years, it was "a Grand Lodge" and not "the Grand Lodge," which "was held," not "met." A "Lodge" was the meeting of the members of the particular Lodge, while a "Grand Lodge" was no more nor less than a meeting of all Masons, whether members of the same Lodge or not. This was the practice before the day of chartered Lodges; and the description given in the newspapers of the day, was applicable to the system of voluntary Lodges and general meetings of the craft, and inapplicable to the system of chartered Lodges, and the meeting of their representatives in Grand Lodge.

The first Lodge meeting held on American soil, so far as history gives evidence, was held in the City of Philadelphia. This fact has been known many years. The recent discovery of one of its books, has added much to the knowledge of its composition, and many other very interesting details; but its contents throw no light upon the origin of the Lodge, except by inference from what it contains and from what it does not contain.

Daniel Coxe was appointed Provincial Grand Master for the Provinces of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, June 5, 1730. Until recently, it has been taken as true, that he never exercised his powers under that commission; but within a few years, it has been strenuously maintained, that this Lodge in Philadelphia was chartered by him, although no evidence has been produced to sustain this theory. The commission recites that the application was made by Coxe and "by several other Brethren, free and accepted Masons, residing or about to reside in the said Provinces." If this language excludes the inference that it was made by Coxe in behalf of the others, it shows that the application was completed in England before presentation to the Grand Master, and certainly suggests that Coxe was in England at that time. He had been in America in April, 1728, and was in London and attended the Grand Lodge, January 29, 1731; but it is not as yet known whether he was in America at all between June 5, 1730, and January 29, 1731; and a careful consideration of the known facts indicates very strongly that he was not. If he was in London on June 5, 1730, he would scarcely have gone to New Jersey and returned to London by the twenty-ninth of January following; if he was not in America between these dates, the fact that "thorough inquiry for letters and papers bearing upon the subject among the descendants of Bro. Coxe, has failed to disclose any testimony whatever of the exercise by him, or by any one acting under his authority, of the prerogatives contained in the deputation," is fully accounted for. Again, a commission dated June 5, 1730, could scarcely have been carried or transmitted from England to New Jersey, and a Lodge in Philadelphia constituted in season for Coxe to have been in London January 29, 1731, with the means of communication then existing; and it is agreed that this Lodge had existed before December 8, 1730, in accordance with Franklin's statement, the conclusion is irresistible that this Lodge was formed before the deputation to Coxe could have been acted upon.

Then what was this Lodge? All the indications point to the conclusion that it was a voluntary Lodge, without any charter or warrant, formed precisely as the "four old Lodges" were organized. The book recently discovered ("Libre B") was the Lodge ledger, and was commenced, according to the earliest date in it, June 24, 1731, when William Allen was chosen Grand Master, a fact inconsistent with the theory that the Lodge was acting under Coxe as Grand Master. Each member was charged six pence for each Lodge meeting, which, the dates show, was held on the first Monday of each month. The twenty-fourth of June was the day for the meeting of the Grand Lodge, and did not count as "a Lodge day." On the day the book was opened, each member was charged with the dues of five "Lodge days," except that one was charged with four "before you sailed for Newfoundland;" the number of members so charged was fourteen, three of whom, including Benjamin Franklin, were charged with a balance of "your entrance fee." The members were thus charged with dues as far back as February, 1731 (N. S.), showing that the Lodge was then in existence, and, it may be, at an earlier date, as if a Lodge was not held at the stated time, no dues were charged for that time. The charges to Dr. Franklin show that he was made in that Lodge as early as February, 1731. The conclusion is that while the Lodge may have worked before, as an occasional Lodge, it did not perfect a regular organization until about the first week in February, 1731, when William Button was elected Master, and Thomas Hart a Warden. Button sailed for Newfoundland in May, and William Allen was elected in his place. On the twenty-fourth of June, 1731, a Grand Lodge was held, according to the old usage in England, and William Allen was also chosen Grand Master. If the lodge was formed after December 8, 1730, (when Franklin published that statement about the Lodges in the Province) Coxe was in England or on his way there, at the time of its foundation.

For several years the accounts were kept in this book with great particularity of detail; but later the items were more general. It ceased to be used in 1738. The number of members whose names were entered in it was forty-eight; after the first year it does not show the names of the Master or Wardens, except the Wardens for the last three years. We learn by contemporaneous publications that Grand Lodges were held on St. John's day in 1732, 1733, 1734, 1735, 1736, 1737, 1738 and 1741, at which Grand Officers were elected. The Grand Master and Grand Wardens were the same persons who, at the time, were Master and Wardens of the Lodge, so far as the names of the latter are given, and unquestionably such was the case as long as both bodies continued to exist. Under the system then followed in Pennsylvania, the functions of the Grand Officers were merely nominal; they acted in such at the Grand Feast on St. John's day, but beyond this, they seem to have had no practical duties; in the Lodge, however, they seem to have borne the same title as in the Grand Lodge.

In 1734, Benjamin Franklin, who was then Grand Master, as well as Master of the Lodge, made a visit to Boston, and became acquainted with Henry Price; and, as their subsequent correspondence shows, conferred with him upon Masonic matters. The same year, and evidently after his return, he published his edition of the Book of Constitutions, which he says on the title page was "reprinted in Philadelphia, by special order, for the use of the Brethren in North America." This "special order" was undoubtedly given by Price, as no one else in America then had any authority to approve a book "for the use of the Brethren in North America," and it appears from the subsequent correspondence, that copies of the book had been sent to Price for use in Boston, before that correspondence took place.

Franklin received a letter from Price, dated October 23, 1734, which unfortunately has not been preserved, but which was evidently written a considerable time after Franklin's return, as in the mean time Price had been sick, and thus prevented from making an intended visit to Philadelphia. Franklin replied by an official letter and a personal letter<sup>1</sup> dated November 28, 1734. He had seen in the mean time in the Boston papers a statement that Price's authority had been extended over all America, and in consequence he hastened to solicit the exercise of that authority, by the granting of a warrant of confirmation to the Lodge in Philadelphia, and also by confirming the Brethren in the privilege of holding a Grand Lodge annually as they had been accustomed to do. The reason given in these letters, for his request, conclusively shows that neither the Lodge nor the Grand Lodge, with which Franklin was connected, existed by chartered authority. These letters also give additional proof, if any were needed, that there was then only one Lodge in Philadelphia.

This Lodge was situated precisely as St. Andrew's Lodge in Boston was situated twenty years later, and in the same manner sought a Charter of "confirmation" rather than one of "erection." In spite of its existence as a merely voluntary Lodge, the Grand Lodge of Scotland granted to St. Andrew a Charter "of new erection," leaving, as we have seen, the question of the status of those previously made in it undecided. But there was a vast difference in the Masonic law in this respect as it existed in 1730 and in 1760. At the latter date, the law requiring a warrant for the regularity of a Lodge had become pretty well settled, while in 1730, that law had not acquired the sanction of usage; the Lodge, therefore, would be held to be a substantially regular Lodge, and would receive a Charter of confirmation as a matter of course. In fact, in the final event, the work of this Lodge was recognized as regular, either upon its own merits or because it was confirmed by Price.

In response to the request made to Price, as we have seen in the Boston records, a Charter was granted to Franklin's Lodge, with him as Master. Franklin had also asked to have the Philadelphia Brethren confirmed in the privilege of holding a Grand Lodge annually. But this was beyond the power of Price to grant; he was, it is true, Provincial Grand Master for North America, but he was only provincial Grand Master, and while he could issue warrants for Lodges situate in any part of America, he could not create or confirm a Grand Lodge in any particular Province; but all Lodges created by him must be of the obedience of the Provincial Grand Lodge at Boston. From this fact, it is quite certain that the Boston record, that Franklin's petition was held to be for a "Constitution to hold a Lodge," and that Price "did send a deputation to Philadelphia, appointing the Right Worshipful Mr. Benjamin Franklin first Master," is a correct statement of the authority granted; and that Price did not undertake to confirm his Philadelphia Brethren in the privilege of holding a Grand Lodge. But did Franklin accept and act upon this Deputation? There is no positive record evidence that he did or did not; but from the fact that there was no future correspondence between Franklin and Price, or his successors, for several years, that has been preserved, and more especially from the fact that the Philadelphia Masons continued to meet in Grand Lodges as before, and choose the officers of their Lodge to corresponding offices in the Grand Lodge, it seems that Franklin adhered to the wish of himself and his Lodge to have a Provincial Grand Lodge for Pennsylvania, and did not act upon the authority he received from Price. Still it must be said, that if it was a Charter of "confirmation" and was acted upon, no mention of it would naturally have been made in "Libre B," or any other record that has been preserved; and the Brethren, although not authorized by Price, may have gone on as usual in holding a Grand Lodge; but this does not seem probable. However this may have been, the Lodge continued to meet; and there is no trace of the existence of any other Lodge in the Province. In 1737, at a mock Lodge held by "a party of idle men, not members of the craft," a man, whom they pretended to initiate, was so injured that he died. The deed was charged to the Masons, and in spite of their formal and indignant denial, the excitement of the public was so great that Masonry was for some time under a cloud. "Libre B" shows that, nevertheless, the Lodge continued its meetings and received new members: but as that book was used only till 1738, the history of the Lodge cannot be further traced. It is stated on unquestionable authority, that the last entries in the Masonic portion of the Book are in the handwriting of Benjamin Franklin; that the book was used many years later as a memorandum book by the firm of which Franklin was then had been a member; and that there are still a large number of blank pages in it. The inference is, that in 1738 the Lodge ceased to keep accounts with its members, and it would almost necessarily follow, that it ceased to work. The Grand Lodge met in 1738, but no notice of its meetings in 1739 and 1740 have been discovered; it did meet in 1741, and from the failure to find notices of it in Franklin's paper, and the fact that the Deputy of 1738 was chosen Grand Master in 1741, it is believed that it did not meet in the intervening years. The history of Masonry in that Province for the next eight years after 1741, is a blank; so far no allusion to it during that time has been found in contemporaneous publications; undoubtedly both the Grand Lodge and the Lodge were dormant, and in fact practically ceased to exist, and while "the work" of the Lodge was subsequently recognized without question, the Lodge itself was never revived.

On July 10, 1749, Thomas Oxnard, Provincial Grand Master of North America, appointed Benjamin Franklin, Provincial Grand Master of Pennsylvania, with authority to appoint other Grand Officers, hold a Grand Lodge and issue warrants. Under this authority, a Grand Lodge was held September 5, 1749, Grand Officers appointed, and a warrant granted to hold a Lodge in Philadelphia, which was called the "First Lodge." Unless, between the time of his appointment in 1743 and the date of the warrant, Oxnard's powers had been increased to an extent unparalleled in Masonic history, he exceeded his powers in issuing it; his original commission was limited precisely as Price's was, and did not contemplate the exercise of powers vested only in a sovereign Grand Lodge and its Grand Master. This seems to have occurred to the Philadelphia Masons, as in six months (March 13, 1750) William Allen presented a commission appointing him Provincial Grand Master of Pennsylvania; his authority was admitted, and he appointed Franklin as his Deputy; Franklin's associates as Grand Officers were, with one exception, members of the old Lodge in 1738, and Allen seems to have appointed the same ones, except that each one took the office next below the one he held under Franklin. Two other Charters were granted for Lodges in Philadelphia before June 24, 1755.

None of the records of this Provincial Grand Lodge or of any of its subordinates are extant, so far as is known; but the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, through the chairman of its Library Committee, has collected with great diligence, and published, all documents and notices in the various publications, which bear upon the history of Masonry before 1779, the date of the first Grand Lodge record now existing.

A subscription paper for the erection of a Masonic Hall (the first in America) dated March 13, 1754, has been preserved. From this it appears that on March 12, 1752, at a meeting of the Grand Lodge and of the First Lodge, a Committee was appointed to procure a lot, and take measures to erect a Hall "for the accommodation of the said Lodges, Philadelphia Assembly, and other uses." There were thirty-two subscriptions of fifteen pounds sterling each, two of twenty pounds, one of twenty-five and three of fifty. The members of the "First Lodge" subscribed first, and then follow eight subscriptions by former members of the old Lodge. In a list dated June, 1752, of forty members of the First Lodge owing Quarterages, there is not a single name found in "Libre B" of the old Lodge. The eight former members of the old Lodge, who were among the subscribers for the Hall, are recorded as present at the meeting of the Grand Lodge held June 24, 1755, five of them among the Grand Officers and the others as "Members of the Grand Lodge;" there were also present Visiting Brethren and the "Masters, Wardens and Members of the three regular Lodges," "in the whole 130 Brethren." A sermon was preached by Rev. William Smith, afterwards the distinguished Grand Secretary of the "Ancient" Grand Lodge. If the old Lodge had been in existence September 5, 1749, the name "First Lodge" would not have been given to another Lodge; and as the names of none, who were members of the old Lodge in 1738, or previous years, are found in the lists of members of the First Lodge in 1752, the statement already made, that the "First Lodge" was not the old lodge, is as certainly established as circumstantial proof can establish it.

The Masonic Hall was erected, and, with its three Lodges, the Provincial Grand Lodge seemed to have entered upon a prosperous career: little is known of its subsequent history: but it is known that the Ancients gained a foothold in Philadelphia in 1758, and apparently the other Grand Lodge began to decline. In 1760 was published the notice of a meeting of Tun Lodge, No. 3, to celebrate St. John's Day. On February 28, 1782, Edward Shippen addressed to John Swift, then in Bucks County, a letter (which has been preserved) relating to the First Lodge. It stated that a meeting of the members had been held on the Monday preceding, at which but six were present, and that they had agreed to hold another meeting on the eleventh of March: he wished that Swift would attend and would notify Mr. Kidd, "as it was intended to have as great a number of the subscribers together as possible." He adds, "So many deaths and removals have happened lately, that we can't expect above ten or twelve."

The "Ancients" had been occupying the Hall and apparently supposed that they had an interest in it, for at an "Extra Grand Lodge" held August 6, 1782, "information was given from the chair," that Gen. Roberdeau (a member of the "First Lodge" in 1752 and a subscriber to the Hall Fund in 1754), for himself and others, claimed rent for the "Lodge House," and after considerable debate a Committee was appointed to investigate, and "act in every sense, as they view necessary to defeat the designs of the Gen. Roberdeau in his claims:" and to solicit subscriptions to purchase the property or the ground rents; and, if any legislation should be sought by any claimants, to oppose it. At another "extra meeting" held November 7, 1782, the Committee reported that the Grand Lodge (Ancient) had no interest in the house or any part of it, and that they had met "the Master and members of the First Lodge of Modern Masons and other Subscribers towards the building of the House," and had received from them a proposition which they submitted with their report. The proposition purports to be an extract from the Minutes of the First Lodge at a Lodge held October 30, 1782, the Master (Edward Shippen), Wardens, Secretary and one visitor (a subscriber to the Fund) being present, and it recites that the Trustees of the Lodge and the other members were willing that the Ancients should occupy the upper rooms every Monday and Friday for one year, "paying to the Trustees five shillings as a consideration therefor." This nominal rent was undoubtedly required to prevent any further question of title. The Ancient Grand Lodge considered the matter one evening and postponed further action: but on December 23, 1782, the proposition was accepted. At a later date, a proposition was made to the Ancient Grand Lodge by a committee of the proprietors of "the House," to rent it for thirty pounds a year, and it was accepted; but there is no reference to any action by the Lodge.

The War of the Revolution and the occupation of Philadelphia by the British army were serious obstacles to the maintenance of masonic work in that city, but there are some indications that the Grand Lodge of 1749 suffered more severely by the defection of many members of its obedience who went over to the Ancients, first being healed: among these was Rev. Dr. Smith, who preached the sermon on St. John's day in 1755. But at this time, in the absence of all records, it is impossible to tell which was the cause and which was the consequence; that is to say, whether the decline of the Grand Lodge caused many of its members to join the Ancients or whether the defection of its members caused the decline: it is said that in Philadelphia, as in Boston, the members of the "Ancient" Lodges were more prominent supporters of the cause of the Colonies, while the "Moderns" were more generally inclined to take the part of the British Government; in Massachusetts, the attempted neutrality of John Rowe prostrated the Grand Lodge of which he was Grand Master, and as Grand Master Allen in Pennsylvania was so thorough a loyalist that he left his home and put himself under the protection of Gen. Howe, and even made an unsuccessful attempt to raise a regiment for the British, the effect of his position must have been disastrous to his Grand Lodge; but whatever the cause, the Provincial Grand Lodge organized by Franklin and all its subordinates became extinct: and in 1793, the Masonic Hall was sold under the authority of the Legislature by two Trustees (Edward Shippen and John Swift, both members of the First Lodge in 1752), and one-third of the proceeds, $1533.57, turned over to the City to be held as a fund "for supplying out of the interest thereof, the necessities inhabitants of the said City with fuel in the winter season," and was ultimately merged in the "City Fuel Fund;" the portion thus disposed of was the part which belonged to the First Lodge, the members of which, who ordered this disposal of the funds, numbered but seven. The notice of the meeting of No. 3, Shippen's letter in 1782, the extract from the minutes of the Lodge held in October in that year, and the letter to the City announcing the disposal of the First Lodge's portion of the proceeds of the sale of the Masonic Hall lot are the only documents that have as yet been published relating to the Franklin-Allen Grand Lodge after the year 1755.

It is stated in a list of Lodges published in the "Early History of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania," that Tun Lodge, No. 3, chartered in 1753 or 1754, "continued in existence till about 1793." The authority for this statement is not given, and it cannot be accepted as true: the latest mention of this Lodge in any document or publication, was in 1760, and it could scarcely have existed thirty years longer without leaving some trace that could now be discovered.

It was believed that the act of the Legislature under which the Trustees sold the Hall in 1793, might throw some light upon the history of the First Lodge: search has been made, and it has been ascertained that the act was passed September 6, 1785. It has apparently not been published since it was printed (in black letter) about the time of its enactment.

It recites that a number of the members of the Grand and First Lodges of Freemasons, residing in the city and neighborhood of Philadelphia, purchased the lot April 1, 1754; that the members of said Lodges entered into a subscription of moneys to be added to the stock of said First Lodge and therewith to defray the expenses of erecting a building thereon, "which was accordingly done and the same has ever since been called and known by the name of the Free Masons' Lodge;" that the title was vested in William Plimsted, Thomas Bond, Hugh Davey, Edward Shippen, S<sup>r</sup> Mifflin, John Swift, D<sup>n</sup> Pomerdean, John Wallace and William Franklin, Esquires, as joint tenants, "and although no other use or trust was expressed or declared in the said deed, yet from the minutes of the said first Lodge it appears that the same was intended for the accommodation of the said Lodges at their periodical meetings, and in all intermediate times to be rented to any private assembly or company of people to meet in, and that the rents and profits arising therefrom were to be applied in manner following, viz., first, to distribute and pay to the several subscribers towards the erecting of said building, their several proportions of two thirds of the said rents and profits as the same should grow due and be received, and the other third part of the said rents and profits were to be applied to the use of the said first Lodge, those being the just proportions which the moneys subscribed bore to the Stock of the said first Lodge; and by the said minutes it further appears, that it was agreed by and between all the said subscribers, that as they or any of them should depart this life or remove out of the then province, with design to settle in another place, the shares of those so dying or removing should devolve on the remaining subscribers, saving to them and their heirs, executors and administrators, the right of disposing of their said shares to any of the members of the said first or Grand Lodge, if done within one year of their deaths or removal as aforesaid, but not otherwise: that "from the length of time elapsed, a considerable number of the subscribers are dead, and the survivors by their petition to this House have represented, that their number is so small that the said building is no longer necessary for their accommodation or for the purpose originally intended, and they are desirous to sell the same, but doubts had arisen whether the surviving grantees could sell, convey, and assure the same, discharged from the said parole trust or agreement without the aid of the Legislature, wherefore they prayed leave to bring in a Bill to enable the surviving Trustees, now residing in this State, to sell the House and lot for the benefit of the said remaining owners, as to two thirds of the produce thereof, and as to the remaining one third thereof, to the use of the said first Lodge, to be applied to such charitable use as they may think proper:" that notice had been ordered and given in the Pennsylvania Journal for four weeks; and that no one had appeared to object: and it was accordingly enacted that the Hon. Edward Shippen, Esq. and John Swift, Esq. the only surviving grantees named in the deed, then resident in the State, be authorized to sell the property at auction and convey the same discharged of the trust, the proceeds to be disposed of as follows: "one equal third part thereof to the Members of the said first Lodge of Free Masons of the State of Pennsylvania, for the use of the said Lodge, to be by them distributed and applied to such charitable uses as they shall think proper; and shall distribute and pay the remaining two third parts thereof to and among all and every the persons who originally subscribed moneys for erecting the said building, who are now living and resident within this State, and the executors and administrators of such original subscribers as were living and resident within this State, one year before the passing of this Act, and the assigns or representatives of the heirs, executors, or administrators of such original subscribers, who disposed of the shares respectively belonging to them, to some Member or Members of the said first or Grand Lodges, within one year after the death, or removal from this State, of such dead or removed subscribers according to the true intent of the said first Lodge, in just and rateable proportions to the several and respective sums of the money subscribed by themselves, or the persons whom, by such assignment as aforesaid, they represent."

We thus learn that the minutes of the First Lodge were in existence in 1785, and as they had escaped destruction during the war, the hope is revived that they may ultimately be found, and the very valuable information, which they contain, be given to the Masonic world. It may be, too, that the petition upon which the act was based, will be found on the files of the State and further information gained from that. But it is manifest that in 1785, the Franklin-Allen Grand Lodge had ceased to exist, and that the First Lodge had become so reduced as to be practically dead also: the further conclusion that there were no other Lodges, holding under that Grand Lodge, in either actual or nominal existence, is quite irresistible. It may be safely said, that as early as 1785 the Lodges in Philadelphia, working under the Moderns, ceased to exist; for the meeting in 1793, at which the disposition of the funds was made, was not a formal meeting of the Lodge, but a meeting of its old members for a specific purpose.

It will be noted also that at that early date it was assumed as law, that Lodge funds are trust funds and can be applied only to charitable purposes. If the doctrine, attempted to be established in later times, that Lodge funds belong to the Lodge to be disposed of at its pleasure, the portion of the proceeds of the sale which belonged to the First Lodge, might have been distributed among its members; but the whole proceedings show that it was held that this could not lawfully be done, but that the funds must be devoted to some charitable use, so that to-day those funds form a part of the City Fuel Fund, still called "The Freemasons' Fund," and still testifying not only that Freemasonry is a charitable Institution, but also that its funds are trust funds devoted to charity and incapable of being lawfully used for the private gain of its individual members.

In 1758, by warrant dated the seventh day of June, the "Ancient" Grand Lodge in London established a Lodge in Philadelphia, the first Lodge chartered by that Grand Lodge in America. From that Lodge, the present Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania takes its origin. The voluntary Grand Lodge of 1731 became extinct. The Franklin-Allen Grand Lodge, organized in 1749, and its subordinates did not, as was done in Massachusetts, unite with the other Grand Lodge, but went out of existence; and such members of its obedience as were received into the "Ancient" Lodges, were not recognized as regular Masons, but were required to submit to be healed as if irregular, or re-made as if profanes.

Soon after the organization of this Lodge, application was made for a Provincial Grand Lodge; the application was granted, but the reception of the warrant was delayed by various accidents. The Grand Secretary, Dermott, wrote that he had actually issued three: the first, which, according to the Grand Lodge record, was dated July 15, 1761, was sent by a vessel which was taken by the French; the next was lost in some unknown manner; the third dated June 20, 1764, was safely received; while it bore a later date, in fact, by a memorandum upon it, it seems that it was entitled to date from July 15, 1761, the date borne by the record of it in the Grand Lodge books.

The records of this Grand Body previous to July 29, 1779, are missing; but it is known to have met regularly from its organization, except during the occupation of Philadelphia by the British army. It was also active, granting many warrants for Lodges in other States as well as in Pennsylvania; the loss of the records prevents giving an accurate list, but from other sources it has been ascertained that warrants were granted for nine Lodges in Pennsylvania, including one military Lodge, for two in Delaware, five in Maryland, one in New Jersey and one in Virginia, before July 29, 1779.

The "minute book" of Philadelphia Royal Arch Lodge No. 3 (so named because it conferred the Royal Arch Degree), chartered October 20, 1767, has been preserved, and it affords us nearly all that can be ascertained concerning Masonry in that jurisdiction for the next twelve years after the organization of this Lodge. It is chiefly interesting as showing the usages of the craft at that time. It recognized, as a regular Mason, a Brother who had been "duly and lawfully entered, passed and raised" in 1759, by three Brethren," all Royal Arch Masons," but it declined to admit him to membership because he belonged to the army, and there was a regular Lodge in a regiment stationed there, which they had promised they would not enter, pass, or raise any person belonging to the army. Another Lodge made complaint to this, that two Brothers had used the Master and that Lodge "with great indignity," and, thereupon, it was voted that the two Brothers should not be allowed to visit this Lodge until they should make satisfactory acknowledgment. Three Brethren had permission to leave the Lodge to unite in forming a new Lodge, and fifty shillings were voted to each as his share of all the property of the Lodge. A meeting was held October 10, 1777, to determine what to do with the jewels, Books of Lodge No. 2, and the former Lodge No. 3, which had been stolen but subsequently recovered: it was determined to take an account of the articles and hold them subject to the order of the Grand Lodge: the inference is that Lodge No. 2 had been broken up. The Junior Warden and Secretary "having gone with the enemy," new appointments were made. A brother elected Master was proscribed as inimical to the State, and in consequence he declined to serve "lest it should be disagreeable to any brother;" he afterwards produced a lawful discharge by the court, and was received by the Lodge "as a respectable brother;" the entry is made on the minutes also that "he had prudently relinquished the chair, lest he should incommode the harmony of the Lodge."

But the great event was the celebration of St. John's day, December 28, 1778, an account of which is given in contemporaneous history. General Howe had evacuated Philadelphia, and the Grand Lodge, which had necessarily suspended its meetings during the occupation of the city by the British army, had re-organized. A committee, consisting of the Masters of the different Lodges, had waited upon General Washington, and invited him to participate in the celebration, and he had accepted the invitation. Nearly three hundred brethren met at the College, formed in procession in regular form, the Grand Master and his Deputy supporting General Washington, and marched to Christ Church, where prayers were read by Rev. Mr. White, an anthem sung and a sermon preached by Rev. Dr. Smith (afterwards Grand Secretary). "The brethren being all newly clothed, and the officers in the proper jewels of their respective Lodges, and their other badges of dignity, made a genteel appearance," says the chronicler.

While the Grand Lodge re-organized in December, 1778, and celebrated St. John's day, it either held no regular meeting till July 29, 1779, or no minutes were made in such manner as to be preserved. The record commences at the date last mentioned; in the book is a "Preface" in which it is stated that the former minutes of the Grand Lodge had either been mislaid or carried away, so that it became necessary to open new books.

At the first meeting four Lodges (including Nos. 2, 3, and 4) were represented; the officers of a new Lodge were installed; two Lodges, which had been prevented from meeting for a considerable time, upon their application were instructed to "resume the proper business of the Lodge." A meeting of the Masters of the City Lodges was held October 22, 1779, apparently in consequence of a disorganized condition of the Grand Lodge; they agreed to request the Grand Master to appoint a Grand Secretary pro tem. and instruct him to summon the Lodges to attend a meeting of the Grand Lodge. The Grand Master appointed Rev. Dr. William Smith, Provost of the College, Grand Secretary pro tem., and he gave notice that a meeting of the Grand Lodge would be held on December 20, to choose Grand Officers; and the Lodges were required to produce their warrants and records. At that meeting twelve Lodges were represented, and the warrants of all except two were produced, and "found regular and genuine." The highest number of a Lodge represented was No. 22, recently chartered; as there was no No. 1, this shows the previous granting of twenty-one charters, three of which had been granted since the time when the new Grand Lodge record commenced; one of the charters had been surrendered, so there were twenty Lodges on the roll. There is much difficulty in ascertaining the precise number on account of the loss of the records, the practice of giving vacant numbers to new Lodges and the issuing of warrants by the Grand Master without a vote of the Grand Lodge. At this meeting the Master of No. 2 produced the warrant of his Lodge, granted as "No. 69, Ancient Masons, in England," "and desired that the same might be renewed under the authority of this Grand Lodge," which was agreed to. This would indicate that the idea of an independent Grand Lodge was then entertained, but if so, it was abandoned for the time. The Grand Lodge proceeded to the election of Grand Officers; William Ball, the provincial Grand Master was elected Grand Master "for another year," "and was proclaimed and saluted in due form." He appointed and installed his Deputy; and the Grand Lodge elected the remaining Grand Officers; the record says that the Grand Wardens were installed, but is silent as to any installation of Grand Treasurer and Grand Secretary. A Committee was appointed to revise the "Book of Constitutions;" no result was reached, however; ultimately the Grand Secretary took charge of the matter, and in 1783 published the well-known "Ahiman Rezon," compiled largely from Dermott's. As Franklin's edition of Anderson's Constitutions was a mere reprint, this work of Dr. Smith's was the first American Masonic Text Book, or Monitor. The Grand Lodge met the next day, when three other warrants were produced and confirmed. It was reported that one Lodge had admitted members rejected by other Lodges, and had recommended their own rejected candidates as worthy; these proceedings were held to be "illegal, irregular and unconstitutional," and the Grand Secretary was directed to write the Lodge accordingly. It was also ordered that the transactions of another Lodge "respecting their determining the internal police of their own Lodge, exclusive of all superior jurisdiction whatever, be ceased, such determination being unconstitutional and repugnant to the fundamental rules and true order of Masonry."

From this time forward the Provincial Grand Lodge, and then the Grand Lodge, pursued a very prosperous career, being occupied chiefly in the able and vigorous administration of its affairs.

In 1780, fifty copies of its minutes were ordered to be printed and distributed to the Lodges; action already noticed<sup>1</sup> was taken in relation to the appointment of a General Grand Master; the new "Book of Constitutions" was sanctioned November 22, 1781, and "the Mason's Arms" ordered to be engraved as a frontispiece, and in case General Washington would allow the book to be dedicated to him, his "arms be engraved and prefixed to the Dedication;" it was dedicated to him, but did not contain an engraving of his "arms;" before the work was completed, the Grand Lodge ordered the sermon and prayer, "as delivered by Brother Smith, Grand Secretary some time since," be printed in the Book of Constitutions, with the vote of thanks to him, "for his care and attention in forming the same;" two thousand copies were published.

The distinction between "Modern" and "Ancient" Masons was rigidly adhered to, until after the Grand Lodge informally declared its independence. Upon an application from Maryland in 1781 for a charter, the Grand Lodge resolved "that if, on proper application, some of the members of the Modern Lodge are found worthy, and entered, passed and raised in one of the Ancient Lodges in Baltimore," and that Lodge would recommend them, and they would surrender their modern warrant, the Grand Lodge would grant them one; and in the meantime it was recommended to the Lodges to be cautious in not admitting them to sit in the Lodge "while remaining Moderns." In 1782, a dispensation was granted to a Past Deputy Grand Master and the Grand Secretary, or either of them, "taking to their assistance such brethren, as they may see proper, to enter into the mysteries of Masonry," gentlemen in Maryland, "who, being of the modern order, wish to go over again in the ancient form." In 1783, a petition was presented for a Lodge in Virginia, but was not granted until the proposed Master went through the several steps of Ancient Masonry, in Lodge No. 2 in Pennsylvania. But on December 27, 1785, it was "agreed that a letter be prepared and sent to the different Modern Lodges, expressive of our wishes of a general attachment and union;" this was practically the end of the distinction in that jurisdiction between the "Ancients" and the "Moderns;" but the "Modern" Lodges had become so nearly extinct that none of them passed under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge. Before this time, when communications were received from a Grand Lodge, great care was taken to ascertain if it was an "Ancient" Grand Lodge; but, thereafter, the question was not raised. In 1790, a communication was received from the Grand Lodge of New Jersey in relation to Modern Masons, and the Grand Lodge replied, "informing them of the wish of this R. W. G. Lodge to see Modern and Ancient Masons united, but they are of opinion that the same should be submitted to a Grand Convention, which it is hoped will soon take place." That Convention was not held, but the term "ancient" as indicating an existing distinction between Masons is not again found in the Grand Lodge record.

On February 3, 1783, "at the particular request of the attending members, the R. W. Grand Master, who possessed the right, dispensed with the forms, and called Brother Joseph Howell, jr., to the chair as Master of a Lodge, and he was saluted by the Brethren accordingly." This "Passing the chair by dispensation" has been practised ever since: and is the only method by which the "Past Master's degree" as a prerequisite for the Royal Arch Degree can be obtained; the practice prevails in no other jurisdiction.

On August 4, 1784, a Circular Letter unanimously approved by the Grand Lodge was sent out to the other Grand Lodges. It was not inserted in the record, but subsequent references to it show that it contained a declaration that the "subordinate connection" of that Grand Lodge "with the Grand Lodge of England no longer existed." On February 3, 1786, a motion was made that the words usually inserted in the warrants, "declaration of such subordination," be not inserted in any future warrants; after consideration "it was agreed to postpone the same." At the Quarterly meeting in March, a circular was ordered to be sent to all the Lodges, "informing them that it is the wish of the Grand Lodge to establish themselves as a Grand Lodge independent of Great Britain or any other authority, and that it is intended to take up the matter at the Quarterly Communication in September, and requesting their attendance at that time, either by their proper officers or by deputation in writing." At the September meeting twelve Lodges were represented. It was unanimously resolved "that it is improper that this Grand Lodge should continue any longer under any foreign jurisdiction." A declaration was then drawn up by a committee, and ordered "to be signed by the Grand Master and Secretary, and sealed with the seal of this Lodge," and extended on the minutes. The gist of it is in the resolution unanimously adopted as follows:

Resolved, That this Grand Lodge is, and ought to be, a Grand Lodge independent of Great Britain or any other authority whatever, and that they are not under any ties to any other Grand Lodge except those of brotherly love and affection, which they will be happy to cultivate and preserve with all Lodges throughout the globe."

The Grand Lodge, "acting by virtue of a warrant from the Grand Lodge of England, was closed forever." The next day, September 26, 1786, the representatives of thirteen Lodges met in convention and voted to form a Grand Lodge, and that the late Grand Officers be continued as officers of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, under the old Rules and Regulations, until others should be adopted. The Grand Lodge was then opened, the proceedings of the Convention read and "unanimously agreed to." A Committee was appointed to draft a form of a warrant for Lodges, and to "write a letter to the Grand Lodge of England taking final leave of them." As stated in a preceding chapter,<sup>1</sup> a reply was received six years later (December 3, 1792), and the independence of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania then acknowledged.

The Maryland Lodges had previously taken action in relation to forming a Grand Lodge, but after some discussion, had come to the conclusion that their proceedings were irregular; the account of those proceedings more properly belongs to the history of that Grand Lodge.

The deputation to William Ball and his associates was for "Pennsylvania aforesaid, and the territories thereunto belonging;" and they were empowered to establish Lodges "within his Worship's jurisdiction aforesaid;" but nevertheless charters were granted for Lodges in other States; this was justified by Dr. Smith, the learned Grand Secretary, only on the ground of necessity. After the Grand Lodge became independent, of course it was not limited in its jurisdiction, save by the rules recognized by all Grand Lodges. Charters for Lodges in other States and countries were granted freely.

Seven Lodges were established in Delaware; two appeared to have "died and made no sign;" the Charter of one was vacated for failure to make returns and pay dues; three others took part in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Delaware, and the Grand Lodge, holding that those proceedings were irregular, vacated the Charters; the other remained under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge till 1816, when it joined the Grand Lodge of Delaware.

Nine Lodges were chartered in Maryland; eight in Louisiana; three in Virginia; three in New Jersey; four in South Carolina; one each in Georgia, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri. One Charter was granted for a Lodge at Mingo, in the North West Territory, but was soon after cancelled; one in Cape François, since surrendered; one in Trinidad; one in Mexico; the last four have undoubtedly gone out of existence, but the record does not show the manner.

Lodges were established in St. Domingo, and later a Provincial Grand Lodge, which also established Lodges until there were eight Lodges in the Island. But April 7, 1806, the charters of the Provincial Grand Lodge and of all the Lodges were vacated. The Provincial Grand Lodge was reinstated September 15, 1806, and the jurisdiction extended to the Island of Cuba. One of the Lodges was reinstated at the same time, but surrendered its warrant September 4, 1809; another was reinstated March 21, 1808, but its warrant was finally vacated October 27, 1810. Seven Lodges were chartered in Cuba between 1804 and 1822, but none of them are now borne on the roll. Since 1832, no charters have been granted for Lodges outside of the State, and for many years the Grand Lodge has exercised jurisdiction only over Lodges in the State of Pennsylvania, although it still retains the title of the Grand Lodge of "Pennsylvania and Masonic jurisdiction thereunto belonging."

One of the South Carolina Lodges had apparently been St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1 of Florida. The record recites the receipt of a "memorial from the brethren of St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1, late of West Florida, and now of Charlestown, South Carolina, with sundry papers relative thereto;" a warrant was drawn and transmitted to the Master of No. 38 to be delivered, "provided that the master and members of said Lodge are found to be of the Ancient and Honorable Fraternity, and accept to be under this jurisdiction:" the warrant was delivered and accepted and the Lodge became St. Andrew's No. 40. Of its origin and previous history nothing certain is known.

Six charters for Military Lodges were granted during the Revolution but were recalled at the end of the war: they were required to work "without interfering with the rights of any stated or fixed Lodges." A charter was granted March 25, 1793, for a Lodge in "The Legion of the United States" commanded by Gen. Anthony Wayne: it soon became extinct, nearly all the members, it is said, being killed in the Indian War. Another was granted in 1814, which existed only for a short time. During the Civil War this Grand Lodge, in common with others, declined to grant warrants for military Lodges. One of the early military charters has been preserved: it prohibits the initiation of citizens in the vicinity of any Lodge in the United States, except by the special dispensation of the Grand Master (or his Deputy) of the Grand Lodge within whose jurisdiction the Lodge may be convened.

William Ball served as Grand Master from the organization of the Provincial Grand Lodge in 1761 till December, 1782: then William Adcock served six years: then Jonathan Bayard Smith also served six years: William Ball was then again called to the chair, but at the end of the year declined further service on account of his age and ill-health. Smith was then elected but declined, and William Moore Smith was elected: he retired at the end of two years at his own request and was succeeded by Jonathan Bayard Smith, who was Grand Master till 1802: so that for forty-one years, this Grand Lodge had only four Grand Masters.

The scope of this work confines the writer to the early history of the Grand Lodges, with at best a very general statement of events occurring later, although of much interest in themselves.

In 1795 certain parties undertook to establish chapters of Royal Arch Masons, and a Grand Chapter as well. Previously the R. A. degree had been conferred in chapters appurtenant to Lodges and under authority of the Lodge warrant; and the Grand Lodge claimed jurisdiction over the degree. The action of these parties coming to the knowledge of the Grand Lodge an investigation was had, when it appeared that James Molan undertook to introduce the "new scheme;" that he dissolved the chapter appurtenant to one Lodge and formed another according to his own system; that he and his associates obtained the charter of another Lodge, without its authority, and opened another chapter; that in the absence of the Master of another Lodge, the same parties got possession of its charter and formed another chapter; they also "arched" one brother from Maryland and one from Georgia, "considering those as having the force of three Lodges under the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania, one under that of Georgia and one under that of Maryland," they resolved themselves into a pretended Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Pennsylvania, independent of the Grand Lodge. Pending the investigation, the charter of the three Lodges had been suspended. The Grand Lodge denounced the pretended Grand Chapter as illegal, and commanded the brethren to withdraw from it. This was generally done; the Grand Chapter was dissolved; and the members of Pennsylvania Lodges participating in the movement were restored to good standing. The Grand Lodge reaffirmed its Supreme authority over all Lodges of Ancient York Masons in Pennsylvania; declared that the officers of such Lodges are members of this Grand Lodge "although they may never have obtained any degree above that of Master Mason;" and that it is the right of all regular warranted Lodges to make Masons in the higher degrees; and resolved that a Grand Royal Arch Chapter be opened under the sanction and authority of the Grand Lodge. All warrants were to be issued by the authority of the Grand Lodge, and the Grand Master was ex officio Grand High Priest. The Grand Lodge retained and exercised authority over the Grand Chapter and the chapter degrees until January 5, 1824, when it assented to a constitution which gave the Grand Chapter full authority over Royal Arch Masonry and its degrees, with one exception: The Past Master's degree continued to be, and still is, conferred only in a Past Masters' Lodge held under the warrant of a symbolic Lodge; if the candidate is not the actual Master-elect of the Lodge, he "passes the chair" and receives the degree by dispensation from the Grand Master; this practise, as already stated, prevails in no other jurisdiction.

Reference has been made to the erection of a Masonic Hall or "House for the Lodge" in 1754 and its sale in 1793. On March 7, 1796, the Grand Lodge took into consideration the matter of "building a Lodge Room," and on the thirty-first of May following adopted a "Scheme" devised for the purpose, but it failed. On January 21, 1797, Lodge No. 3 submitted to the Grand Lodge a plan "for erecting a structure wherein the different Lodges in the city might perform their labors;" it was referred to a committee which reported a plan for organizing the "Pennsylvania Freemason's Hall Association;" the report was accepted but no further results followed. In the mean time, a place of meeting in the State House was procured. In 1801, a Committee was appointed to purchase a lot, but on May 3, 1802, was discharged, having come to no conclusion. A Committee, consisting of the Deputy Grand Master and one from each of the twelve city Lodges, was at once appointed with full power "to devise and carry into effect the means of erecting a permanent building." On May 29, the committee purchased a lot and building and took a conveyance thereof to trustees to be held for the Grand Lodge, and to be conveyed in trust or in fee simple as and when the Grand Lodge might order. The hall was completed in season to be dedicated on the following twenty-seventh day of December under the name of the "Pennsylvania Freemasons' Hall." In a few years it was found insufficient to accommodate the Lodges, and on April 26, 1807, the Grand Lodge voted to sell it and erect another. This was done, and on June 24, 1811, the Grand Lodge occupied the new hall, which had cost nearly $90,000. On March 9, 1819, this hall was burned down, but was rebuilt the next year; the result was the incurring of a heavy debt, which was carried, however, without apparent difficulty till 1834, when it was found that it was increasing in consequence of the falling off of the income of the Grand Lodge; after much consideration the property was sold for about $110,000, the debt paid and a new hall purchased for about $25,000, which was known as Washington Hall. This was occupied until 1855, when the "New Masonic Hall" was erected and occupied. But this in its turn proved insufficient to meet the wants of the craft, and the Grand Lodge proceeded to erect the most magnificent Masonic Temple in the world, which was completed and dedicated in 1873. While a large debt was incurred for this purpose it has been funded at a low rate of interest, and a sinking fund has been created which, with its accumulations and annual additions, will be sufficient to extinguish the debt in a comparatively few years.

On December 26, 1831, Stephen Girard, a somewhat eccentric but very benevolent man, a useful citizen and highly esteemed Mason, died: by his will, he bequeathed to trustees, in trust, for the use and benefit of the Grand Lodge, $20,000, to be held until, with its accumulations, it should amount to $30,000, which should remain forever a permanent fund, the income of which might be applied for the relief of poor and respectable brethren. This fund has been so successfully managed that it now amounts to over $60,000.

At quite an early day in its history, the Grand Lodge commenced the accumulation of a Grand Charity Fund; but, undoubtedly on account of the heavy debt it was carrying and the falling off in its income in consequence of the anti-masonic excitement, small additions were made to this fund, so that at the time of Girard's death its amount had not reached $2,000. This fund, however, has always been kept separate from other funds. With the revival of Masonry in 1838, it began to increase, and it now amounts to almost $75,000.

In 1788, the Grand Lodge received a letter from the "Secretary of the Sublime Lodge of Perfection" containing the information that one of its members (named) had been tried and expelled; the letter was ordered to be filed and entered on the minutes of the Grand Lodge. This "Sublime Lodge" was then generally recognized by the Masons of the Symbolic degree as a Masonic body.

In 1792 the Grand Lodge, in order to show its just regard and respect for "our late Brother Laurence Dermott, the patron and founder thereof," recommended that its members appear on St. John's Day "with aprons bordered with black or other marks of mourning." Accordingly on St. John's Day (June 24) the brethren appeared so decorated. Undoubtedly more correspondence was had with Dermott by officers of this Grand Lodge, than has been published.

In 1797, Brother Israel Israel stated to the Grand Lodge that a Lodge was said to be held in Philadelphia "by a number of people of black color;" that by invitation, he, with several other Brethren, went to visit them when they were "holding a Lodge as they called it;" but that he found they were not acquainted with the mysteries of the craft; therefore the Grand Lodge ordered that "none of the members of our Lodges visit the said pretended Masons of black color on pain of expulsion." On June 24 following, a letter from "African Lodge" was read, requesting the Grand Lodge to appoint a com-

Fellow-citizens and Brothers, of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania

I have received your address with all the feelings of brotherly affection mingled with those sentiments, for the Society, which it was calculated to excite

To have been, in any degree, an instrument in the hands of Providence to promote order and union, and erect upon a solid foundation the true principles of government, is only to have shared with many others in a labour, the result of which let us hope, will prove through-all ages, a sanctuary for brothers and a lodge for the virtues. —

Permit me to reciprocate your prayers for my temporal happiness, and to supplicate that we may all meet thereafter in that eternal temple whose builder is the great Architect of the Universe

"REPLY TO THE ADDRESS PRESENTED TO HIM DECEMBER 27, ANNO LUCIS 5796," BY THE GRAND LODGE OF PENNSYLVANIA, ON THE OCCASION OF HIS INTENDED RETIREMENT FROM PUBLIC LABOR, AS ANNOUNCED IN HIS FAREWELL ADDRESS

From the original in the Archives of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania

mittee to inspect them, and, if deserving, acknowledge them, "and praying our protection;" it was referred to the Committee on Correspondence. No answer appears to have been made to this letter, but the committee at the next session presented a letter (with others) "written by them to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts respecting the African Lodge (as they style themselves) held in this city;" but that, with the other documents presented, was laid upon the table, and no further action seems to have been taken.

On the election of Washington as President, the Grand Lodge presented to him an address of fraternal congratulations, to which he replied tendering his thanks and best wishes. On December 27, 1796, another address to him was adopted, in view of his announcement of his design to retire from public life; this was presented to him by a deputation. His reply is still preserved in the archives of the Grand Lodge. On December 26, 1799, the Grand Lodge, on the invitation of the Committee of Congress, voted to attend the delivery of a funeral oration in honor of Washington. After passing a resolution of sorrow for his death, the Grand Lodge closed and the brethren formed in order and joined the general procession, and attended the services. At the regular session on the next day, further resolutions were adopted. On the twenty-second of February, special services were held under the auspices of the Grand Lodge. The Lodges joined with the Grand Lodge in procession, with emblems of mourning, and marched to Zion Church, where an address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Magaw. Many lodges held similar services; those by the French Lodge L'Aménité were exceedingly impressive.

The anti-Masonic excitement growing out of "the Morgan affair" reached Pennsylvania. As in other States, politicians seized upon it to promote their political interests. In January, 1836, the House of Representatives appointed a committee "to investigate the evils of Freemasonry;" it was armed with the power to send for persons and papers. Under the influence of high expectations of making political capital, it started out determined to push matters to extremity. It summoned before it to testify many of the leading Masons of the State; among them was GEORGE M. DALLAS, who had just retired from the Grand Mastership. When he was called, he read a protest denying the power of the Legislature to interfere in such matters. He said, "I will not consent to hold my rights and liberties of private intercourse, private sentiment, or private business, subject to the domiciliary visitations, the changeable majority, or the ideal policy of any body of men whatever;" and he refused to be sworn; others followed his example. This dignified, manly and decided course, in defense of the rights of the citizen, made such an impression that the vexatious, unjust and tyrannical proceeding came to a sudden end. Masonry soon recovered its former prosperity in the State and has ever since maintained it.

In all the other jurisdictions in the United States in which the "Ancients" distinctively gained a foothold, there was more or less a union, or, more properly speaking, an amalgamation, with the so-called "Moderns;" as a consequence, there were modifications in the work, polity and jurisprudence of each. The labors of Webb and his immediate followers had much to do with this, and with securing a great degree of uniformity in "the work" in essential points throughout the country; his Monitor, based on the work, ceremonies and usages of "the Moderns," was largely instrumental in causing their general adoption. But in Pennsylvania there was no such union or amalgamation; as we have seen, "the Moderns" went to the wall; their Lodges ceased to exist; they themselves were healed in "Ancient" lodges. The Grand Lodge naturally continued the work, usages and polity of "the Ancients," without change or modification. It published its own Ahiman Reson, and neither Webb's "work" nor his "Monitor" came into use in that jurisdiction. The result was, that, while in all absolute essentials, it is in accord with the other Grand Lodges, in many respects it has a polity peculiar to itself. The mode of working is different; it allows few if any public masonic ceremonies, while in almost every other jurisdiction, the ceremony of laying corner stones and burial services are always performed by the Grand Lodge, or the Lodge duly formed as such; and the constitution of Lodges, the installation of Grand Lodge officers, and the dedication of Masonic halls may be in public at the discretion of the officer having charge, and, whether public or private, the ceremonies are in the strict sense Masonic work; and there are other differences.

This Grand Lodge tenaciously adheres to its ancient usages, and no attempt to introduce modern methods, or even ancient methods different from its own, finds the least countenance. The Grand Lodge is the supreme authority, the source of all Masonic power; the prerogatives of the Grand Master are recognized to the fullest extent. If a Lodge, in initiating a candidate, neglects the observance of any requirement of the law, however small, the action is held to be void and the name of the initiate struck from the roll as an unlawfully made Mason, and, therefore, as still a profane; the doctrine of "perpetual jurisdiction" was very early asserted and has ever since been maintained; as early as 1825 the rule in relation to the "physical qualification" of candidates was declared to be that no person can be initiated, "either by dispensation or otherwise, who is so far maimed or defective in his limbs or members as to be incapable of gaining a livelihood for himself and family, or to perform all the work required of an individual member within the body of a Lodge;" in the Anti-Masonic days, no visitor, not vouched for, could be examined without producing the proper certificate of the Lodge, if he hailed from that jurisdiction, or of the Grand Lodge if he hailed from without the State, but this regulation was soon repealed.

The fact that this Grand Lodge has maintained steadily some of the usages peculiar to the "Ancients," without modification as in other jurisdictions, illustrates its conservatism and its emphatic opposition to all innovations. Whatever success efforts to promote the delusive and dangerous doctrine of "progress and advancement in Freemasonry" may meet with elsewhere, it is certain that they will avail nothing in this jurisdiction, which extends over forty-eight districts, having 477 Lodges, with a membership of 92,135 in the year 1910.

VIRGINIA.

The proceedings of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, in declaring its independence and establishing itself as a Sovereign Grand Lodge in the early part of 1777, were immediately followed by action on the part of the Masons of Virginia looking to the establishment of an independent Grand Lodge in that colony. But the condition of Masonic affairs in Virginia was very different from their condition in Massachusetts. Brief accounts of the early history of Masonry in Virginia have been published, and Dr. Dove's sketch has been assumed to be correct: this sketch, on its face, is incomplete and fuller investigations show that it contains many errors.

He states that in certain lists of Lodges, published in Edinburgh and London, are "No. 172, Royal Exchange" in Norfolk and "No. 204, York-town" in Virginia, and that the former dates from December, 1733, and the latter from August 1, 1755. "Thus it

ALEXANDRIA-WASHINGTON LODGE, NO. 22, OF VIRGINIA.

The first regular communication of this historical Lodge was held February 25, 1783. It was instituted by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and known as No. 39 of that Jurisdiction. General Washington was elected as an honorary member shortly after his return from the Revolution, and his fondness for the old institution is evidenced by the following letter he wrote to the Lodge:

MOUNT VERNON, 28th Dec., 1788.

GENTLE :—With a pleasing sensibility I received your favor of the 26th, and beg leave to offer you my sincere thanks for the favorable sentiments with which it abounds.

I shall always feel pleasure when it may be in my power to render service to Lodge No. 39, and in every act of brotherly kindness to the members of it, being with great truth

Your affecte. Brother and Obedt. Servant
GEO. WASHINGTON.

Robt. Adam Esqr. Master,
& the Wardens & Treasr. of Lodge No. 39.

After the surrender of the Pennsylvania warrant, application for a new charter was made to the Grand Lodge of Virginia, and Brother Washington became the first or charter Master of Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, A. F. & A. M., and was subsequently elected to succeed himself, serving in all about twenty months. The instrument containing his name as Master, signed by Brother Edmund Randolph, Governor of the Commonwealth and Grand Master of Masons in Virginia, is still the Lodge badge of authority, and hangs on its wall in silent testimony of the love and loyalty of Washington and Randolph for the noble tenets of our institution.

This picture of the old Lodge shows the Washington Chair, old desks, altar, lesser lights and the Williams picture of Brother George Washington in Masonic regalia. Fabulous prices have been offered for many of the historical relics, but presented, as they were, by the relatives and friends of its first Master, the Lodge has rightly refused to even consider the most flattering inducements, preferring to keep them where they were intended to be kept by the donors, for the pride and glory of our fraternity.

The records of the Lodge are kept in the vaults of the Citizens' National Bank, Alexandria, and are virtually an unbroken chain of historic Masonic events, from 1783 to the present time, stretching over the whole period of our National existence and beyond. Time-faded and worn, they have come down with the old charter, through all the civil and military vicissitudes of a century and a quarter, telling the story of the faithful to the Craft in the long ago.

will be seen from reliable data," he says, "that Masonry was practised in Virginia, under chartered privileges, in 1733, derived directly from the mother Grand Lodge of England." The date is erroneous; for 1733, we must read 1753. If Lodges were actually organized under these charters, all traces of them have been lost.

Cornelius Harnett, according to Dr. Dove, was appointed Provincial Grand Master for Virginia, by the Grand Lodge of England, while residing at Norfolk. According to the same author, he never exercised his authority: but there is evidence tending to show that he established a Lodge in the place of his residence. When the Grand Lodge of Virginia in 1786 established the precedence of the Lodges, "Norfolk Lodge" heads the list and the date of its constitution is given as June 1, 1741. This official determination must be presumed to have been made upon positive and decisive evidence, and the fact and date of the constitution of this Lodge to have been shown by its warrant. But the records of no Grand Lodge show the issuing of a warrant for such a Lodge: and its origin can be accounted for only upon the presumption that it was organized by Harnett, at the place where he then resided. It is stated in Chapter XXX., that a Lodge, by the same name, appears upon the English Register in 1753, and in the published Calendar for 1754: it is there numbered 236, and not 172, as in the list quoted by Dr. Dove. The apparently reliable statements in relation to this Lodge can be reconciled only upon the assumption that it was organized by Harnett and worked under his authority till 1753, and then was chartered by the Grand Lodge of England.

The same list of Lodges "according to their precedence" adopted by the Grand Lodge of Virginia gives as the second in rank "Port Royal Kilwinning Cross Lodge" constituted December 1, 1755. Its name proves its Scottish origin and indicates that it sprung from Kilwinning Grand Lodge: but no positive evidence of the authority, under which it was constituted, has been given.

Cabin Point Royal Arch Lodge is recorded as constituted, April 15, 1775: its origin is a mystery. A Lodge was chartered by Kilwinning in 1775 and is entered on the roll as local. Falmouth, Virginia: one writer says that Cabin Point Lodge was chartered by the Grand Lodge of Scotland: while the location of this lodge is stated in the record to be at Prince George Courthouse, it is probably the Falmouth Lodge.

Blandford Lodge was chartered by the Grand Lodge of Scotland March 9, 1756, but, according to the Virginia official list, was constituted September 9, 1757.

The Grand Lodge of Scotland also chartered Fredericksburg Lodge, July 21, 1758; but when and how this Lodge originated, cannot now be ascertained. When the Grand Lodge of Virginia was formed, the date of the charter of this Lodge was given as 1758. Dove, in his sketch of "Masonry in Virginia," published in the Masonic Text Book, states that it was chartered in 1758; in a recently published address by a member of the Lodge, it is stated that the charter was granted July 21, 1758, but it had existed previously and for several years: its records for 1752 and subsequent years are in existence, though its later ones were destroyed during the civil war: Washington was initiated in it November 4, 1752. According to the historian of Botetourt Lodge, it had, previously to 1758, assumed to exercise the functions of a Grand Lodge. He says that Botetourt Lodge was organized under a dispensation from Fredericksburg Lodge dated in 1757, in which it was recited that Fredericksburg Lodge had been chartered by the Grand Lodge of Scotland; that that dispensation was in existence in 1857 and he had frequently examined it before its accidental destruction. The probability is, that his recollection of its contents was erroneous, and that its date was in 1759 instead of 1757. It chartered and organized a Lodge at Falmouth March 30, 1768, and another at Gloucester, October 10, 1770; but both of these had apparently ceased to exist before 1778, unless the latter was Botetourt Lodge, afterwards chartered at the same place by the Grand Lodge of England. The absence of all evidence in relation to the origin of Fredericksburg Lodge points strongly to the conclusion that it was originally a voluntary Lodge, self-constituted, precisely in the manner in which St. Andrew's Lodge at Boston was originally formed.

It is suggested in Chapter XXXI., that this Lodge was originally chartered by the Provincial Grand Lodge at Boston, but, at best, this is a mere conjecture. It is true that in 1766, St. John's Provincial Grand Lodge bore on its roll the name of Virginia Lodge, Virginia: the date when the warrant was granted is not given: but so far as the Massachusetts record shows, nothing was ever heard from it after the warrant was granted. The additional facts, that up to 1752 it was the custom to note the issuing of charters and this one was not noted; that many lists of Lodges are given before 1766 and the Virginia Lodge is not named therein; and that in these lists the Lodges are usually named in the order of their ages and the Virginia Lodge is named after Lodges chartered as late as 1757, show very clearly that it could not have been chartered as early as 1752, at which date Fredericksburg Lodge was actively at work.

It is quite improbable too that, if Fredericksburg Lodge had a charter from duly constituted Masonic authority, it would ask for, or could obtain, a charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The correspondence of the Grand Master of Scotland with St. Andrew's Lodge shows that that Grand Lodge would not trespass upon the rights of the Grand Lodge of England. At that time the Grand Lodge of Scotland treated the Grand Lodge of England as its peer, and respected its rights as such.

The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania chartered three Lodges in Virginia, two of them after the formation of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, but evidently without knowledge of its existence; for at the time it received official information of the organization of that Grand Lodge, it had before it an application for a charter for another Lodge, which it refused to grant, referring the petitioners to the Grand Lodge of Virginia. A charter was granted by the Provincial Grand Lodge for a Lodge at Winchester, Virginia, October 4, 1768. In consequence of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, this Lodge surrendered its charter March 17, 1787, and took a new one: it acted under this charter till March 5, 1807, when it was surrendered. The Lodge notified the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania that it desired to withdraw from the jurisdiction of that Grand Lodge, and place itself under the Grand Lodge of Virginia, within whose jurisdiction (territorial) it was held, and desired instruction how to proceed: the Grand Lodge cordially approved the proceedings of the Lodge and gave it leave to "resign" its warrant and take another from the Grand Lodge of Virginia, all arrearages of dues being first paid. This was done, and at the next session of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, after some discussion and "due deliberation," a charter was granted for the "permanent establishment of the Lodge." On February, 3, 1833, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania (during the time when the Grand Lodge of Virginia was unable to meet on account of the war) chartered a Lodge at Alexandria. In 1788, it asked for, and received a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Virginia. It does not appear that the former warrant was actually surrendered, although in the petition for the new one, the intention of doing so was stated: the Pennsylvania record of this Lodge says "Joined the Grand Lodge of Virginia." On June 26, 1784,

BROTHER GEORGE WASHINGTON.

SURROUNDED BY MASONIC EMBLEMS.

After the lapse of more than a century, this interesting portrait has once more been brought to the notice of our American Brethren, by Bro. James M. Lamberton, of Harrisburg, Pa., in his admirable address on Washington as a Freemason, delivered at the Sesqui-Centennial Commemoration in Philadelphia, November 5th, 1902.

It is best to let Bro. James M. Lamberton tell the story in his own words:

"Among Washington's books were five volumes of the Sentimental and Masonic Magazine from July, 1792, to December, 1794, published in Dublin, Ireland, by 'John Jones, Proprietor,' and sent by him with a complimentary letter, dated January 25th, 1795, in which he states his intention of prefixing a portrait of the President 'executed by an Irish artist in an elegant manner' to the Sixth Volume, and dedicating it to His Excellency; and he hopes that 'that liberty will not be deemed too presumptuous.' They are now in the library of Bishop John F. Hurst, of Washington, D. C."

"The June, 1795, number of the Magazine, accordingly, is 'embellished' with 'a portrait of His Excellency, George Washington, supported by emblematic figures,' one of which, Justice, wears a Masonic apron, on which are depicted the Square and Compass. In the foreground is an open book, with 'Vide Ande Tace' (See, Listen and Be Silent) on the right hand page, and letter 'G,' radiated, on the right."

Mild JUSTICE dooms him in his Virtues line,
And LOVE, and HONOR, still attend the Rite.*

AFTER THE ORIGINAL PUBLISHED IN THE MASONIC MAGAZINE, DUBLIN, IRELAND, JUNE, 1795

before the Grand Lodge met after the war, the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania chartered a Lodge at Portsmouth; on June 24, 1790, it surrendered its warrant and took a new one from the independent Grand Lodge. This was vacated April 7, 1806, for failure to make returns. The Grand Lodge of Virginia issued a charter for a Lodge at the same place December 16, 1807, presumably to members of the old Lodge.

According to the historian of Botetourt Lodge, on November 6, 1773, the Grand Lodge of England, Lord Petrie Grand Master, granted charters for three Lodges in Virginia, St. Tammany at Hampton, Williamsburg and Botetourt at Gloucester.

But in the list of Lodges in the record of the Grand Lodge, the date of constitution of St. Tammany Lodge is given as February 2, 1759. In the list of Lodges in Chapter XXXI. is Tappahannock Lodge in Virginia, chartered by Kilwinning in 1758: in the record of the Grand Lodge of Virginia for October 30, 1778, Tappahannock Lodge is mentioned and evidently as identical with the Lodge at Hampton; nor is any such Lodge found in the list of Lodges chartered by the Grand Lodge of England, the conclusion, therefore, seems irresistible that the lodge at Hampton, and called Hampton after 1786, was the Kilwinning lodge chartered in 1758.

Williamsburg and Botetourt Lodges are found on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England ranking from 1773. The historian of the latter<sup>1</sup> says that the Lodge was organized under dispensation granted by Fredericksburg Lodge in 1757. As already stated his recollection of the date must be erroneous, for as Fredericksburg Lodge was chartered July 21, 1758, it cannot be admitted either that it was twice chartered by the same Grand Lodge, or that it would grant a dispensation reciting in it that it had been chartered by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, when such was not the fact. The early records of this Lodge have been lost; it is probable that the lodge shown by the records of Fredericksburg Lodge to have been constituted by it at Gloucester, October 10, 1770, was the old Lodge revived, and that finding that the authority, under which it was organized, was insufficient, it sought and obtained, in 1773, a charter from the Grand Lodge of England.

The roll of Lodges of the Grand Lodge of Scotland gives St. John Lodge, at Norfolk, taking rank from 1763; but the Virginia records do not mention it, unless it has been confounded with one of the Norfolk Lodges already mentioned.

These are all the Lodges in Virginia, not chartered by her own Grand Lodge, of which there is now any specific trace. It is thus seen that Masonry came into Virginia from several distinct sources, and, except perhaps in a single instance, without the intervention of Provincial Grand Masters. So true is this, that while H. P. Thornton was appointed Provincial Grand Master by the Grand Lodge of England about 1764, and Peyton Randolph in 1774, the fact seems not to have been known to the Masons of the Colony, for at the convention of October 13, 1787, they solemnly resolved that Harnett's authority no longer existed: if they had known of the other appointments, they could not have failed to notice them.

Cut off by the war from all correspondence with the parent Grand Lodges, the Masons of Virginia found a necessity for some governing power: accordingly Williamsburg Lodge proposed, that the Masters and Wardens of the different Lodges or their deputies should meet for the purpose of choosing a Grand Master for the State of Virginia. The convention met May 6, 1777: five Lodges, Norfolk, Kilwinning, Blandford, Williamsburg and Cabin Point, were represented. Letters (not given in the record) were received from Fredericksburg and Botetourt Lodges. It was the unanimous opinion that a Master ought to be chosen, and a committee was appointed to draw up a statement of the reasons why such a step should be taken, which was ordered to be sent out to different Lodges.

In this statement, it is said that the Lodges in the State "held their charters from distinct and separate authorities, England, Scotland, Ireland, Pennsylvania and America (the last at second hand)." After stating the evils arising out of the situation in which Masonry was placed, it proceeds to declare the right of the craft to choose a Grand Master. The Lodges were invited to send deputies to a convention to be held on the 23d, 1777: at that convention, five Lodges were again represented; Norfolk Lodge, which was represented before, was not represented, but the number was made good by Fredericksburg Lodge. Letters from other Lodges were read and charters were examined. The opinion was unanimous that a Grand Master should be chosen, but, as a majority of the Lodges were not represented, it was deemed expedient to "decline the choice of a Grand Master for the present." It was concluded that the several Lodges should agree upon a fit person for Grand Master of Virginia and should solicit their respective Grand Masters to appoint him, with authority "to resign the superiority of his principal into the hands of the respective Lodges, in order that such Lodges, by their deputies, may form a general convention of the craft to elect a Grand Master and proper officers of a Grand Lodge at a future time to come."

The convention named Gen. Washington as a fit person to be Grand Master, but it left it to the Lodges to select whom they might please and give notice of their selection to Williamsburg Lodge, which should declare "on whom the majority falls to be nominally Grand Master of this State." But the convention voted that if no appointment of Grand Master should be made by the first day of the next June, the president of the convention or in case of his death, the Master of Williamsburg Lodge, was directed to call a convention to elect a Grand Master. Whether any attempt was made to carry out this plan for selecting a Grand Master does not appear; if one was made, it failed.

In consequence a convention was called and held October 13, 1778: four Lodges, Blandford, Williamsburg, Botetourt and Cabin Point were represented. The convention voted unanimously that a sufficient number of Lodges was present "to proceed to business;" "that the power and authority of Cornelius Harnett, Esq., as Deputy Grand Master of America does not exist;" and that it is agreeable to the constitution of Masonry that the regular chartered Lodges within this State should be subject to the Grand Master of said State." John Blair was nominated and unanimously elected Grand Master and accepted the office. On the thirtieth of the same month a convention was held, a Lodge was opened in form, and the Grand Master installed by the Master: the other Grand Officers were appointed and those present installed: "assistant stewards" were appointed from seven Lodges, none being taken from Williamsburg, the Grand Master's Lodge; among these seven is "Tappahannock" Lodge, not previously named, but undoubtedly Tammany Lodge at Hampton as above stated. These eight Lodges seem to have been all the Lodges in the State, then active, except the Pennsylvania Lodge at Winchester; if others were in existence they made no sign in the subsequent events.

In the statement of the convention, it is said that Ireland was one authority under which charters were held; but if there had been Irish Lodges in the colony, these had ceased to exist without leaving any trace. It will be observed that charters were derived

BROTHER GEORGE WASHINGTON'S LODGE CHAIR.

This interesting chair is the one that was occupied by Brother George Washington at the time when he was Worshipful Master of "Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22," Virginia. It was in continuous use for 117 years, but as "constant dripping wears the stone," so this Old Gainsborough, which had borne its precious burden when new and strong, began slowly to yield to the grind of time and usage.

The rips in the seat and arms were, however, the work of vandals, the ever-present and unscrupulous relic-fiend. To preserve it from further abuse, it was placed in a glass case some few years since, and is not used except on very important occasions.

The frame is mahogany and inlaid with white holly, and upholstered in leather. In the course of its long service, many distinguished visitors have occupied it, among them General Lafayette in 1825, Ex-Vice-President Fairbanks, Speaker Joseph Cannon, Admiral Schley and others.

It is not generally known, but the introduction of Freemasonry into this country occurred during the Colonial period, about 1730, and prior to the Revolutionary War of Independence. In commemoration thereof we append the following poem by Brother Robert Morris, LL.D., our first Masonic Poet-Laureate.—

TRIBUTE TO GEORGE WASHINGTON.

O! Brothers of the MYSTIC TIE,
Come round me, if you please;
Lay down the GAVEL and the SQUARE,
And let the TROWEL cease;
The work may stop a little while—
The Master will not blame,
While I from memory sing of one
Right worthy of the name,—
A true, old-time Freemason,
Whose name was WASHINGTON!

Of every superfluity
His mind he did divest;
He would not set a timber up
Unless it was the best;
He plumbd, and squared, and leveled well
His BLOCKS, and set them true;
Then turned his apron MASTER-WISE
And spread the mortar due,—
This true, old-time Freemason,
Whose name was WASHINGTON!

When bloody war at foreign hands,
His country threatened sore,
He thought it right to take the sword,
And guard his native shore;
He stood where bravest hearts are found,—
He struck for liberty;
But when the white-winged angel flew,
A man of peace was he,—
This true, old-time Freemason,
This glorious WASHINGTON!

Upon his Apron was no stain,
His work had no defect;
The OVERSEER accepted all,
And nothing to reject.
He lived in peace with God and man;
He died in glorious hope,
THAT CHRIST, THE LION, JUDAH'S PRIDE,
Would raise his body up,—
This true, old-time Freemason,
OUR BROTHER WASHINGTON!

from two distinct sources in Scotland. So far as can be learned from the records, however, no discrimination was ever made in consequence of the different sources from which they had sprung. Each evidently recognized the others as regular Masons and their Lodges as lawful Lodges. This may be due to the fact that no strictly "Ancient" Lodges took part in the organization of the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge did not adopt any Rules for its government, but assumed to conduct its affairs under the general law of Masonry. It met next December 22, 1778, to receive and act upon two petitions for initiation; the candidates were accepted and initiated. The third meeting was held June 24, 1797: it was then resolved to meet on the tenth of November "for the purpose of choosing a Grand Master and for forming such regulations as will promote the general order and interests of the craft." It was also resolved that the Lodges in the State ought not to hold their charters from the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland and Ireland, or elsewhere, but ought to have their charters renewed at the Grand Lodge to be holden on the tenth of November "in this State," and that the Secretary order the different Lodges to transmit attested copies by their deputies to the Grand Lodge, that due regard might be paid to the seniority of the Lodges.

But no session appears to have been held on the day fixed, and the Grand Lodge did not meet till December 28, 1780. A charter was granted for a Lodge at Richmond, and the Grand Lodge voted to meet at Richmond on the tenth of April following, the meetings up to that time inclusive having been in Williamsburg. The Grand Secretary was ordered to notify the Lodges accordingly and "summons them to attend with the numbers and dates of their charters for the purpose of electing a Grand Master." A contribution of five hundred dollars was presented from the York Lodge "to be added to the general fund for charitable purposes." This Lodge had been chartered February 22, 1780, whether by the Grand Master, or by the Grand Lodge at a session the proceedings at which are not recorded, does not appear. The proceedings were entered on the minutes, but the minutes were not copied into the record till several years later, and it is very probable that some of the minutes were lost before they were recorded. This probability approaches closely to a certainty, when it is considered that when rules were shortly after adopted, the power of issuing charters was declared to be vested solely in the Grand Lodge.

In consequence of the war, the Grand Lodge did not meet in 1781, 1782, or 1783. It met November 4, 1784, six Lodges being represented. Grand Master Blair "resigned" and James Mercer was elected to succeed him, and installed. The twenty-eighth of October was fixed for the date of the annual meeting of the Grand Lodge: a committee was appointed to draft regulations and directed to provide themselves with copies of the charters of all the Lodges in the State duly authenticated. At the annual session in 1785, the previous proceedings of the Grand Lodge were read, approved and confirmed, and a Committee of Charity appointed. The committee reported eight rules, which were considered and adopted. The first two relate to the composition of the Grand Lodge: the third to the right of voting; the Grand Master and Deputy having one vote each, the other Grand Officers one vote collectively, the Past Grand Officers collectively one vote, and the officers or deputies of each Lodge one vote: the fourth provides for the election of Grand Officers, except the Deputy, who was to be appointed by the Grand Master: the fifth relates to chartering Lodges: the sixth, to issuing new charters to existing Lodges: the seventh provides that the charters shall give power to initiate, pass and raise to the degree of Master, "but that all degrees of Arch and higher orders, shall be conferred in Grand Lodge only, except where such power shall have already been duly vested in any Lodge by charter:" the eighth relates to Grand Lodge dues, which were five guineas for any degree in Grand Lodge "for the purpose of the Grand Charity;" and from Lodges one fourth of the fees received for conferring the degrees of Fellow Craft "or other higher degrees," to be applied to the same purpose.

A circular was sent out to the Lodges, stating (among other things) that "The Grand Lodge, considering the diffused situation of the craft in this State, was pleased to delegate to all Lodges, the power of raising to the degree of Fellow Craft and Master, though in Europe and in large cities that power is solely confined to the Grand Lodge, and that the Grand Lodge, considering that the principles of the sublime degrees are not so generally understood in Virginia, as to expect uniformity or propriety in the inferior Lodges, have retained the power of conferring such degrees in their own hands with some exceptions in favor of old charters, which it is supposed may contain such powers. But the Grand Lodge have full confidence in that regard, which such Lodges must have for the honor of the craft, and hope that such Lodges will relinquish so much of their new charter as may contain such power and accept a new one similar to those granted to the other Lodges, so that all cause of jealousy between the inferior Lodges may be prevented and all Lodges in Virginia stand upon one and the same ground and be united under one head:" and also that new charters had been prepared "with blank as to name and number"—the name to be entirely at the pleasure of the Lodge, but the number to be determined by the Grand Lodge.

How many of the Lodges took new charters is not known; Fredericksburg Lodge took one bearing date January 30, 1787.

At the session of the Grand Lodge in 1786, the rank of the Lodges was established and the list (including six Lodges chartered at that session) was recorded. The rule in relation to Grand Lodge dues was amended by providing that every person admitted to any degree in a Lodge should pay five guineas to the grand charity, and each Lodge should contribute, for the same purpose, "such donations as their circumstances will enable them to make." Edmund Randolph was elected Grand Master: he appointed as his Deputy John Marshall, afterwards the distinguished Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and who was elected Deputy in 1792, and Grand Master in 1793 and 1794, and served with signal zeal and ability, declining a re-election in 1795.

The regulation in relation to making Royal Arch Masons continued in force till 1790, when upon the petition of Staunton Lodge "setting forth the hardships and inconveniences" arising by its adoption, it was repealed.

In 1787, provision was made for sending communications to other Grand Lodges proposing "a friendly communication, from time to time, of such matters as may be for the general good of the craft."

The contributions by the Lodges for the grand charity were not satisfactory, and it seems to have been a perplexing question for the Grand Lodge. In 1789, it required from each Lodge the payment of one initiation fee annually, promising the order by the following declaration:

As all particular Lodges derive their authority for congregating and working as becometh Free-Masons from a Grand Lodge, it is, therefore, the duty of the particular Lodges to support this source of their power, in order that the general welfare of

BROTHER GEORGE WASHINGTON.

This illustrious Brother was born in Virginia, Feb. 22d, 1732. In 1752, a short time before he was 21 years of age, he was a candidate for the mysteries of Masonry, in Fredericksburg Lodge, Virginia. During the Revolutionary War quite a number of Military Lodges worked in the Colonial army. The American Union Lodge was warranted by John Rowe, Grand Master of Mass., 15th Feb., 1776, and constituted while the Colonial army lay at Roxbury, near Boston. Washington attended these meetings of the brethren, and while at Valley Forge had constant intercourse with the Lodges held among that glorious band of patriots. In Dec. 1776, Washington took part in the festival of St. John, which was celebrated by the Grand Lodge of Penn., at Phila. Washington was honored with the chief place in the procession. Rev. Wm. Smith, Grand Sec. of G. L. of Pa., preached the sermon at Christ's Church, alluding, in prophetic language, to Washington as being the Cincinnatus of America. In 1779, the headquarters of Washington were again established at Warrenton, N. J., where the American Union Lodge celebrated the 27th Dec., St. John's Day. At this meeting a petition was circulated by members of various Grand Lodges, to the appeal that a Grand Master should be appointed over all the States, "that the principles of Masonry may be correctly established and the abuses corrected," etc. On 13th Jan., 1780, before the address of the army reached the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, that body met to consider the propriety of appointing a General Grand Master over all Grand Lodges in the United States, agreeing as to the good to be derived from such a measure; a ballot was had, and George Washington was unanimously chosen. It was then ordered that the minutes of the election be transmitted to the different Grand Lodges in the United States, and their concurrence therein be requested. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, doubting the expediency of electing a General Grand Master, declined to come to any determination on the question, and so the subject was dropped. This will correct the error into which many foreign Grand Lodges and Masonic writers have fallen, of supposing that Washington was ever a Grand Master of the United States. In 1797, a masonic medal was struck, which had upon one side the bust of Washington, with the inscription, "Geo. Washington, Prest., 1797," on the other side, "Amor Honor et Justicia, G. W., G. G. M."

Washington was always an earnest and zealous Mason, and thus expressed himself regarding the Institution:—"Being persuaded that a just application of the principles on which the Masonic Fraternity is founded must be productive of private virtue and public prosperity, I shall always be happy to advance the interests of the society, and to be considered by them as a deserving brother of a society whose liberal principles are founded on the immutable laws of truth and justice—the grand object of Masonry—and to promote the happiness of the human race. As far as I am acquainted with the principles and doctrines of Freemasonry, I conceive them to be founded on benevolence, and to be exercised only for the good of mankind."

Washington on retiring to the privacy of his estate, he still received greetings from all quarters from his Masonic friends, to all of which he responded. On the 12th Dec. 1799, Washington took sick, and died on the 14th. The funeral ceremonies were under the direction of Lodge No. 22, of Alexandria, Va., and he was buried at Mt. Vernon on the 18th. Cols. Gilpin, Marsteller, Tuttle, Simes, Ramsey, and Payne, all members of his Lodge, were the pall-bearers. The Grand Lodges throughout the country met and passed letters of condolence, and sent them to Mrs. Washington.

the craft may be promoted, and a grand fund for charitable purposes be established, and that some mode more certain in its operations must be adopted to carry into effect the humane purposes of the Institution and to secure to the distressed that relief which it is characteristic of Masonry to administer.

This tax was found to operate unequally on the Lodges, and at the next session a per capita tax of three shillings on every member, to be collected by each Lodge in such manner as it should see fit, was substituted.

Out of the collection of Grand Lodge dues and other matters arose a controversy between the Grand Lodge and Fredericksburg Lodge commencing apparently in 1787 and terminating in 1795, between which dates the Lodge was rarely represented in the Grand Lodge. But little of the correspondence has been preserved. It is evident that the Lodge denied the right of the Grand Lodge to tax it. In 1790, a communication from the Lodge was laid before the Grand Lodge complaining of the Grand Lodge and of the publication of its proceedings. The Grand Secretary was directed to reply to it. He suggests that if the representatives of the Lodge had been present in Grand Lodge, they might, by their arguments, have lessened the cause of complaint. He tells them that the Grand Lodge is the judge of what is for the benefit of the craft, and substantially that they are a component part of the Grand Lodge and responsible for its action, and, therefore, that they should be present at the next session and bring forward such measures as they may think conducive to the general weal of the craft. In 1791, the matter was again before the Grand Lodge; but a message was received from the representative of the Lodge that he was prevented by indisposition from being present, and promising to attend at any future time the Grand Lodge might direct, so soon as his health would permit; and thereupon, the consideration of the papers from the Lodge was postponed. The matter seems to have rested till 1793, when the Grand Lodge ordered the Grand Secretary to notify Lodges delinquent in dues or representation, that their charters would be revoked at the next session unless good cause to the contrary be shown. At the next session, the representatives of the Lodge were present and submitted a memorial: upon consideration, the Grand Lodge voted that the Lodge ought to pay all arrearages under the Eighth Regulation, and on their so doing, the controversy between them and the Grand Lodge should be considered as fully adjusted. At the session in 1795, the Grand Secretary was directed to write to the Lodge, acknowledging the receipt of their proceedings, and expressive of the pleasure of the Grand Lodge that the dispute had been adjusted, and urging them to forward their arrearages as soon as possible.

Considering the different sources from which the Lodges originated, it is almost wonderful that controversies concerning "the work" did not arise. The first action was in April, 1790: it would seem that the Pennsylvania Ahiman Rezon of 1783 had been in use in Virginia: in 1790, a committee reported "that it appears consistent with the lawful exercise of the power of the Grand Lodge and at the same time conducive to the welfare of the craft," that that work should be reprinted, and thereupon it was voted that it be done under the management of a special committee: at the October session a copy of the work was laid before the Grand Lodge "with information of such innumerable typographical errors" as rendered the work unintelligible; thereupon the work was rejected, and the printer allowed twenty pounds for his labor, "provided the work be given up to the Grand Secretary to be burnt." This appears not to have been done, for the Grand Lodge voted to send to each Lodge one copy of "the imperfect Ahiman Rezon;"

and at the next session the Grand Lodge, on petition of the printer, voted to give him ten pounds additional, "provided he should give a receipt in full and deliver the work to the Grand Secretary to be disposed of as the Grand Lodge shall direct." As soon as the work was rejected, the Deputy Grand Master (John K. Read) proposed to print a work on his own account, but the Committee decided that the best mode of "obtaining such a revival of the Constitution of the Grand Lodge and such a compilation of the Ahiman Rezon as may elucidate the science of Masonry" would be obtained by sending a copy of the imperfect Ahiman Rezon to each Lodge with a request to make such comments and suggest such alterations and regulations as they may think necessary, and transmit them to Bro. Read or Past G. Master Alex. Montgomery, who should be a Committee to collect them and prepare a manuscript edition of a Book of Constitution and Ahiman Rezon and lay it before the Grand Lodge at its next session for ratification. The Grand Secretary was ordered to request, in a particular manner, the attendance of deputies at that session, "as business of great importance will be laid before them." At that session the manuscript was presented and referred to a committee of four, with power to authorize the printing of it, if they should "find the extraneous matter collected by the printer be not unmasonic." At the same time, the Lodges were ordered to send to the next Grand Lodge "one or more deputies of great Masonic skill, as objects of considerable importance will then be contemplated." But at that session (October, 1791) no action was taken beyond the adoption of the following resolution (so far as the record shows):

Resolved, That the Masters and Wardens of every Lodge under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge, be requested to meet in the City of Richmond, on the fourth Wednesday in November next, in Grand Communication, in order to consider of and adopt an uniform mode of working to be observed by all the Lodges under this jurisdiction, and that special summons be issued by the Grand Secretary for the purpose.

At that session "The Grand Lodge took under consideration the business for investigating which this meeting was principally appointed, and established certain rules and regulations to be engraved on the hearts of all present but not proper to be committed to writing."

In the meantime, Read's Ahiman Rezon had been published: it was approved by the Grand Lodge and issued under its sanction as the proper guide in working, the use of all other publications being forbidden. It included "a system of laws for the government of the Grand Lodge" which was adopted as standing regulations. In 1794, Read sent a memorial to the Grand Lodge stating that he had published "a code of laws for the government of the Grand Lodge and other Lodges in Virginia:" the Committee recommended that the Grand Lodge subscribe for two hundred and fifty copies, but their recommendation was laid over till the next session and then, after full discussion, rejected.

The work thus adopted was practised till 1819, when James Cushman (a disciple of Jeremy L. Cross, who had previously visited Virginia) exemplified his work, which came to him from Thomas Smith Webb through Cross, and it was adopted as the authorized and obligatory work of the Grand Lodge, and Cushman was appointed Grand Lecturer until the next session of the Grand Lodge. Whatever "work" had prevailed before, from that time since the "work" in Virginia has been substantially the Webb work, as distinguished from the "Ancient" "work" practised in Pennsylvania.

While as already stated, in the early days of the Grand Lodge, the terms "Ancient" and "Modern" were unknown in Virginia Masonry, in process of time the terms were introduced, undoubtedly in consequence of the intimate relations of the Grand Lodge with the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. In the record of the Grand Lodge for 1791, the phrase "agreeably to the customs of Ancient Masons" is used instead of "agreeably to ancient usage," which had invariably been used before that date, and this is the first appearance of the word "Ancient" as applied to Masons. The new phrase was used in 1792, and after that "agreeably to ancient usage" and "agreeably to ancient custom" are occasionally used. In 1798, however, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That if any member of a Lodge under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge shall visit or work in any Lodge of Masons, commonly called Modern Masons, or any Lodge of Masons not working agreeably to the ancient usages of York Masons, he shall be reprimanded by the Lodge to which he belongs, and if he should afterwards be guilty of a similar offence, he shall be expelled from the Lodge, and be excluded from the benefits of Masonry.

As four of the eight original constituent Lodges of the Grand Lodge were of those "commonly called Modern Masons," and as one of the Lodges represented, when this resolution was adopted, was originally a Lodge of the same kind, it is safe to presume that the matter was not understood, and that these "commonly called Modern Masons," were supposed to be of recent as well as spurious origin.

Among the early usages and laws of this Grand Lodge were the following: in the absence of the "chair officers" of the Grand Lodge, it was opened by the Master of the oldest Lodge present; it was made the duty of the Grand Master to report to the Grand Lodge his official acts during the recess; after 1793, a Lodge might appoint the member of another Lodge its representative in the Grand Lodge; a Mason expelled by a Lodge could be restored by the Grand Lodge; on appeal the Grand Lodge reversed the decision of a Lodge and pronounced a final judgment: at an early day, balloting upon petitions for initiation was limited to Master Masons: the Grand Lodge opened on the fourth degree, as early as 1791, and raised two brethren to the degree of Past Master, one of them being the Master and the other the Senior Warden of a newly chartered Lodge, and then installed them into their respective offices; re-elected Grand Officers were not installed (1792); the nearest Lodge had jurisdiction to discipline a resident Mason, whether a member of a Virginia Lodge or not; in one instance, on an appeal the proceedings were reversed, and the brother, who had been expelled by the Lodge, was reinstated in all the privileges of Masonry, and being Senior Warden of his Lodge, was admitted to a seat in the Grand Lodge.

While John Marshall was Grand Master (1795) a called Grand Lodge was held to lay the foundation stone of a bridge. The Grand Lodge was opened (says the record) in ample form in the first degree of Masonry. The brethren formed in procession, and proceeded to the appointed place, and there the Grand Master laid the foundation stone (after consecrating it with corn, wine and oil and depositing a silver plate thereon appropriately inscribed) agreeably to ancient custom. The procession then returned to the hall and the Grand Lodge was closed. The inscription upon the plate states that the stone was laid by John Marshall, M. W. Grand Master of the Society of Free Masons, Virginia, assisted by the Deputy G. Master and Wardens (naming them) and by the Grand Lodge of Virginia.

In 1799, the Grand Master of Maryland submitted a letter to the Grand Lodge stating that a dispute had unhappily arisen between himself and his Grand Lodge: the Grand Lodge of Virginia took the whole matter into consideration and expressed its opinion upon each point that had arisen in the dispute. The conclusion was that both the Grand Lodge and the Grand Master had acted erroneously, but that the matter was of such a nature as easily to admit of conciliation, and it was "seriously recommended to them to take effective measures to restore that harmony and fraternal understanding which ought always to subsist among the craft." Copies of the report and resolutions were ordered to be forwarded to the Grand Master and to the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Maryland.

In addition to the Ahiman Resons of 1791 and 1818, Text Books, approved by the Grand Lodge, were published in 1847, 1854, 1866 and 1877.

It should be stated that Kilwinning Cross Lodge continued to work under their original charter till 1796, never having received (as stated in their memorial) the charter issued to them by the Grand Lodge of Virginia. The memorial states that their original charter was granted by the Grand Lodge of Scotland: but this statement was erroneous.

In 1802, Cabin Point Lodge had been dormant some years: a petition was presented in its behalf, praying that its charter from the Grand Lodge of Virginia might be renewed, and "that they may be privileged to retain the charter originally granted them by —, formerly a Provincial Grand Master:" according to the evidence, that old charter was granted by Kilwinning Lodge and not by a Provincial Grand Master.

This Grand Lodge has had a steady growth, nearly all the time since its organization. It was less affected by the Anti-Masonic excitement than more northern jurisdictions. Of course, it suffered greatly in the Civil War. It has been distinguished for the large number of the members of its obedience, who have been prominent in public life, as well as in the professions, and in business affairs. The statistics show it to have, in 1908, 299 Lodges, with a membership of 18,892.

MARYLAND.

The first Lodge in Maryland, of which there is any certain knowledge, was the Lodge chartered by Thomas Oxnard, Provincial Grand Master at Boston, August 12, 1750. All traces of it have been lost, except the references to it in the Massachusetts records and in the public newspapers; the latter mention it in 1761, 1763, and 1764. It was dormant, undoubtedly, several years before the inauguration of the Grand Lodge. Apparently the Brethren composing this Lodge met for some purpose before it received its charter; for, according to the public prints, it celebrated St. John's Day on June 25, 1750, by attending Divine Service. As in those days the term "Lodge" was applied to the meeting as well as the body, it is probable that the meetings before the charter was received were not the meeting of a Lodge but of the brethren, and that they met only for such purposes as individual Masons could meet without a warrant, and that no Masonic work was done by them.

In the archives of the Grand Lodge of Maryland is the record book of a Lodge at Leor . . . town. The first record refers to money received for the use of the Lodge "at a Lodge formerly held at this place;" this indicates that a meeting had been previously held. The record gives no clue to the origin of the Lodge, and that contains all that is known of it: it held meetings in 1759, 1761, 1762 and 1764.

Brother John Marshall

EMINENT JURIST, STATESMAN AND CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR

at Joppa, which held its first meeting on the twenty-first of the following November. This was after the "Ancients" had obtained a strong foothold in Pennsylvania. Curiously enough this Lodge supposed itself an "Ancient" Lodge, and adopted a By-Law that no one, who had been admitted in any Modern Lodge should be admitted a member of that Lodge "without taking the respective obligations peculiar to 'Ancient Masons.'" The explanation probably is that the first members were made in the Ancient Lodge in Philadelphia, and, by mistake, applied to the other Grand Lodge for a charter. Two Brethren were complained of for attending the work of an "unconstituted and unwarranted Lodge." A committee was appointed to confer with them and report to the Lodge. One of the brethren promised to abstain from attending any such Lodge, the other said he was not convinced that he had "made any breach in our law;" the Lodge concluded that the matter should be "considered in full Lodge," but nothing further appears in relation to it. This shows that it was not then fully settled that voluntary Lodges were illegal. In March, 1766, an invitation was received from Lodge No. 3, Ancient York Masons, "Held at John Kelley's, in Pewter Platter Alley in Philadelphia," to open a regular correspondence, "which desire was immediately agreed to." The Ancient Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania refused to recognize this Lodge as an Ancient Lodge, and in consequence, in 1782 it took a charter from that body. It took no part in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, and seems to have become dormant about ten years after it received its second charter.

The Ancient Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania chartered two Lodges in Maryland in 1766, two in 1770, one in 1773, three in 1780 (one a Military Lodge), and two in 1782.

Tradition has it that several other Lodges were established in the State, and in the old records there are references to other Lodges, but no specific traces of such Lodges now exist. R. Molleson in 1778, and Henry Harford in 1783, were appointed Provincial Grand Masters for Maryland, by the Grand Lodge of England, but there is no evidence that either of them ever exercised any authority in the State. It is quite likely that some of the Lodges, of which tradition speaks, were chartered by the Franklin-Allen Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania; but if so, they ceased to exist without leaving any trace behind.

At the close of the Revolutionary war, there existed in Maryland eight active Lodges all hailing under the authority of Pennsylvania: the military Lodge had of course ceased to exist, and one of the Lodges chartered in 1770 had become partially dormant, and active only at times, and finally some of its members in 1795 took a charter from the Grand Lodge of Maryland.

In 1783, the "Eastern Shore" of Maryland seems to have been the most important part of the State, and six of the eight Lodges then existed there. Undoubtedly, influenced by the same reasons that had actuated their brethren in Massachusetts and Virginia, the Masons of the Eastern Shore of Maryland associated the idea of Masonic independence with that of political independence. We have no means of ascertaining what the preliminary measures were, but on June 17, 1783, representatives from five of the Lodges on the Eastern Shore, met in convention for the purpose (judging by their action) of forming an independent Grand Lodge; among the visiting Brethren were a former member of one of the other Lodges, and John Coats, Past Deputy Grand Master of the "Ancient" Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. They resolved unanimously, "That the several Lodges, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, consider it as a matter of right, and that they ought to form a Grand Lodge, independent of the Grand Lodge in Philadelphia."

But Rev. Dr. William Smith, representative of one of the Lodges, was not authorized to go into an election of Grand Officers, so that five Lodges (the number required to form a Grand Lodge upon the theory of the Ancients) were not represented: for this reason the organization of the Grand Lodge was postponed; but it was agreed that a petition should be forwarded to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania for a warrant for a Grand Lodge to be held on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and the convention then adjourned to meet on July 31, 1783, for the election of Grand Officers and completing the organization. The convention met according to adjournment. The Lodge whose representative had not full authority, and one Lodge not represented at the former meeting, were represented, but one of the Lodges that was represented at the former meeting was not represented at this. The representatives at this meeting were the Masters, Wardens and Past Masters; thus while but five Lodges were represented at the same meeting, all six of the Lodges on the Eastern Shore participated in the movement. Rev. Dr. William Smith was present and presided. He had been Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and his term of office had not then expired, but he had ceased to act as such, and certain entries in the Pennsylvania records indicate that he, as well as John Coats, then lived in Maryland. It does not appear that the petition to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania had been forwarded, and no mention of it is found in the records of that Body. The convention again adopted the resolution declaring its right to independence, and voted unanimously to organize a Grand Lodge. Grand Officers were chosen, John Coats, Grand Master, and Charles Gardiner, Grand Secretary.

The Grand Lodge adjourned to meet on the eighteenth day of December, and met according to adjournment, but there not being a full representation on account of the "weather and season," it adjourned to the next day, after the Grand Master had laid before the Grand Lodge his correspondence with the Grand Master of Pennsylvania.

His letter is dated August 18, 1783. Among the reasons which he gives for forming the Grand Lodge are his doubts whether the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, whose warrant was expressly for that State, could rightfully charter Lodges in Maryland; and whether that Grand Lodge could charter another Grand Lodge, any more than one subordinate Lodge could charter another Lodge. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania replied, admitting that it could not resolve his doubt on the latter point, but, on the authority of several quotations from Dr. Smith's Ahiman Rezon (the pertinence of which it is difficult to perceive), denying the power of the Maryland Lodges to organize a Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge met the next day; five Lodges were represented; the missing Lodge being one that had been represented at both the other meetings. Resolutions to the effect that the Lodges were willing to pay their dues to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania to the day of the first convention, and that the dues be sent up by a Committee (named) who were "to settle with the Grand Lodge and negotiate the business of the warrant" as set forth in the following resolution:

"Resolved, Unanimously, that application shall be made to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania for a warrant to constitute ourselves into a Grand Lodge, and that, in case of refusal, we think we have power to form a Grand Lodge ourselves."

Brother Winfield Scott Schley, 3rd

REAR-ADMIRAL OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY, RETIRED.

Brother Schley was born near Frederick, Md., October 9, 1839. His great-grandfather, John Thomas Schley, came to America from Germany in 1745. His father, also named John Thomas Schley, was successively a lawyer, a merchant and a farmer, as well as a leading man in the community in which he lived. To use the words of his now famous son, he had the characteristics of "a man of high morality, respect for the law, and an enthusiastic love of country." Brother Schley is an earnest and enthusiastic member of the Fraternity, and received all of the degrees to which he has attained in the city of Washington, D. C., viz.: Master Mason in B. B. French Lodge, No. 15, October 21, 1899; Royal Arch Mason in Lafayette Chapter, No. 5, in the same year; created a Knights Templar in Columbia Commandery, No. 2; received the philosophical and doctrinal grades in Evangelist Chapter of Rose Croix H. R. D. M., December 9, 1902; the ancient and traditional grades in Robert De Bruce Council, Princes of Jerusalem, January 27, 1903; the modern, historical and chivalric grades in Albert Pike Consistory, S. P. R. S., 32nd, February 10, 1903. He is also a member of Almas Temple, A. A. O. N. of the Mystic Shrine of Washington, D. C.

was issued, in which it was said that, "The present presiding officer means on that day to resign the chair, and hopes that you will in the meantime think of a successor."

But from "accident and other causes" no meeting was held. An able address of the Grand Master is recorded, which he prepared for delivery at that meeting; in it he gives an account of his visit to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania (the other members of the Committee not being present), and his arguments in favor of the position the Maryland Brethren had taken. He said:

"I then enlarged upon our situation as Freemasons, and free men of a State, independent and sufficiently numerous to form a constitution, and at the same time wishing to promote the most brotherly intercourse with the craft, not only in Pennsylvania, but through the globe. I wanted to know where we were to receive our authority. If your Grand Lodge gives us a warrant, we must demean ourselves to it, otherwise it will be of no force or virtue, consequently void. Pray do you think yourselves bound to pay that obedience to the Grand Lodge of London, from whence you originate? Are you, the representatives of Pennsylvania, dependent upon them? If you are, I, for one as a member, as a Past Master of this Grand Lodge, protest against it. Who formed a Grand Lodge in England, Scotland, and Ireland, or any other state blessed with a Grand Lodge? their own independence. They owe no subjection, but are always happy in meeting and acknowledging their brethren, wheresoever they come, upon equal terms."

A Committee was appointed by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania to "inquire whether this Lodge has power and authority to grant a warrant to form another Grand Lodge:" but the record discloses no other action in the matter, although the Grand Master "candidly admitted that he thought the same" as Brother Coats.

Among the other causes for not holding the meeting on June 17, 1784, was undoubtedly this action, or rather refusal to act, by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania: what other causes existed is not known.

The Grand Lodge did not meet in 1784, 1785 or 1786; but on April 19, 1787, in response to a summons from Grand Master Coats,<sup>1</sup> the representatives of five Lodges met in convention or Grand Lodge: the same five Lodges were represented as at the meeting next preceding. The former proceedings were referred to, and in effect affirmed; but apparently to make sure, the members agreed to establish a Grand Lodge and appoint Grand Officers; the Grand Master and Grand Secretary were re-elected. According to the precedents which had then been set by Massachusetts and Virginia, and which were followed implicitly afterwards, the Grand Lodge of Maryland was legally organized July 31, 1783; and moreover the proceedings, (undoubtedly directed by Dr. Smith) were a model of regularity: this Grand Lodge was never formally dissolved; but on the contrary the Grand Master, then elected, through the Grand Secretary, also then elected, called the meeting of April 17, 1787, in his official capacity, when the former proceedings were affirmed: so that although the Grand Lodge did not meet for nearly three years and although it celebrated its centennial anniversary in 1787, it really dates from 1783.

The only objection to its organization was, that it did not have a charter to authorize its action: but if that objection was not overthrown by Grand Master Coats, it was soon after, by universal consent in this country. It is surprising that it should ever be thought that one sovereign could be chartered by another sovereign, whose peer it was to be.

The Grand Lodge adjourned to meet on September, 19, 1787, when the Lodge at Baltimore applied for and received a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Maryland; the Lodge at Joppa had become dormant, so that now all the Lodges in the State (seven) hailed under the banner of the new Grand Lodge. It, thereupon, ordered that the old charters be cancelled, and that the Lodges take charters from itself.

In due time this action was communicated to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. Since the former correspondence, a great change had taken place in Pennsylvania; the Provincial Grand Lodge had dissolved and the representatives of the Lodges had organized an independent Grand Lodge; it is quite likely that the vigorous arguments of Grand Master Coats had much effect in causing this action, which was in substance so similar to the action of the Maryland Convention in 1783, that the latter seems to have been taken for a precedent, as it was in other cases later. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania returned a reply that it was convinced by the solidity of their reasons, approved of their conduct, recognized their authority and perfectly acquiesced in a separation dictated by reason and necessity. It should be stated that between the formation of the Grand Lodge of Maryland in 1783, and its reorganization in 1787, no new Lodges in Maryland were chartered either by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania or any other Masonic authority. By 1787, the Western part of the State had increased in importance, especially the City of Baltimore, and new Lodges were soon chartered in that section. In 1794, the seat of the Grand Lodge was changed to Baltimore, where it has met semi-annually ever since, except that its semi-annual communication in May, 1806, was held at Easton on the Eastern Shore.

When the Baltimore Lodge asked and received its new charter, there was apparently a division in the Lodge: for at the next session of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, Robert Stewart (or Steward) of Baltimore appeared with a petition signed by some members of that Lodge, seconded by some of the members of the defunct Lodge in Baltimore. He succeeded in obtaining a dispensation for a new Lodge in Baltimore by the name of "Baltimore Union Lodge," to continue in force till the twenty-eighth day of October, next ensuing, when the Grand Lodge was to meet again. The Grand Secretary was directed to write a letter to David Stodder, inquiring into the state of Masonry in Maryland, and upon what ground he "styles himself D. G. M." and "requiring a true state of the matter of differences subsisting between the Brethren of Lodge No. 15." Stewart was, or had been, Master of the Lodge, and, according to the letter of the Grand Secretary, claimed that the warrant had been unjustly withheld from him, and he was supported in this claim by members of the other Lodge: the Grand Secretary adds that according to a letter from Stodder a Grand Lodge had been erected for the State: but that it appeared that one Lodge and a branch of another Lodge had never concurred, and, as he found, on inquiry, that there were but three Lodges in Maryland, "the matter stands in equilibrio," one Lodge and a half having created a Grand Lodge and one and a half having "seceded." He says, "the unanimous consent, or we'll say a majority, have a right to confer this authority so far as to bind themselves and, in some cases, others." He requests full information in the matter, however. Stodder signed the petition for the new charter as the Master of the Lodge, and he signs a letter as Master of the Lodge in 1788, about the time the Grand Lodge of Virginia met. What, if any, answer he made does not appear: no charter was granted, nor any further action taken by the Grand Lodge of Virginia (so far as the record discloses) till 1790. The Lodge is recorded as represented by William Waddill, the Grand Secretary (undoubtedly as proxy), in April, 1789, and by John Burke, also Grand Secretary, in April, 1790. At the latter session, it was ordered that a communication from the Lodge under date of the second of March be replied to by the proper committee, and that a copy of the letter of the Past Grand Secretary relative to the matter be forwarded: the letter referred to, in this vote, was evidently the letter of 1788. At the annual session of 1791, the Lodge was represented by the Senior Grand Deacon of the Grand Lodge, and by the same brother in 1792 and 1793, after which it was not represented, and in 1807 its number was given to another Lodge. The Virginia record shows no charter, and it was the practice to allow Lodges U. D. to be represented in the Grand Lodge; but still it seems improbable that a Lodge, existing only by virtue of a dispensation that had expired, would be allowed to be represented; and yet the only references to the Lodge in the records indicate that the original dispensation was the only authority the Grand Lodge of Virginia ever issued. In 1791, formal complaint against this Lodge and the Lodge chartered by Pennsylvania was made to the Grand Lodge of Maryland, and the Grand Master and Deputy were requested to communicate with the Grand Lodges of Virginia and Pennsylvania in relation to the matter; but if anything was done, no record of it was made. However the Virginia Lodge soon after disappeared, and the other Lodge, which seems to have been alternately active and dormant for several years, ceased to exist, and some of its members in 1795 took a charter from the Grand Lodge of Maryland. It took no part in organizing the Independent Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, was never represented in it, and undoubtedly never took a charter from it. The preponderance of evidence is that neither of these Lodges was a lawful Lodge, when the complaint was made against them in 1791.

It is a singular fact that only one of the Lodges, which took part in the organization of the Grand Lodge, and only one of the first six Lodges chartered by the new Grand Lodge, survived the year 1800; the other ten ceased to exist in the decade between 1790 and 1800.

Some of the members of one Lodge having changed their residence, upon their petition their Lodge granted to them a dispensation to meet at their new place of abode as a part of their old Lodge, with power to appoint officers and to do all the work of Ancient Freemasons in proper form, "except only entering, passing and raising a brother, for which a perfect charter must be obtained from the Right Worshipful Grand Lodge of Maryland." This seems to correspond pretty nearly to the modern "Lodge of Instruction;" the body, however, soon applied for and received a charter.

When the Grand Lodge of Georgia, in 1790, proposed to establish a General Grand Lodge, this Grand Lodge adopted the resolution already adopted by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania against the measure; this position it maintained down to 1845, when it supported the proposition.

On September 18, 1793, the Grand Lodge laid the corner stone of the Capitol at Washington, President Washington presiding and conducting the ceremonies, at the request and (legally speaking) under the direction of the Acting Grand Master.

In spite of the early demise of so many Lodges, this Grand Lodge was comparatively prosperous and had a steady growth. During the war of 1812 its growth was retarded; it also suffered severely from the Anti-masonic excitement—to such an extent in fact, that but one Lodge is said to have maintained its regular meetings, and when the reaction began, it had but thirteen Lodges with a membership of less than 300. It recovered from these, but later its prosperity received a severe blow from another cause.

The erection of a Masonic Temple with no means in hand as a set-off occasioned much disquietude and anxiety, and the property was threatened by the creditors. Bro. Francis W. Burns and John W. Garret (not a Mason) came to the rescue, and, by the united efforts of the brethren, with good financial management, not only was the debt reduced, but in 1887, the time the centennial was celebrated, financial prosperity was assured for the future. By the latest report of 1906 there are 111 Lodges, with 12,310 members. An item of interest to the members of this Grand Lodge is the fact that Brother Thomas Shryock has been Grand Master since 1883.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

This State was the battle-ground of the fiercest contest between the "Ancients" and the "Moderns." For nearly twenty years each party had a Grand Lodge in active operation, and the contest was maintained for many years after it had ceased elsewhere in this country, and after the union had taken place in England.

The date usually given as the origin of the Grand Lodge of South Carolina is March 24, 1787. This is the date of the organization of the Ancient Grand Lodge. Her own historians, however, claim an earlier date as the organization of the other Grand Lodge, and with reason, even if their claims are not allowed to their full extent. It antedates the Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania, Georgia and New Jersey, and perhaps Maryland. Its claim to antedate Virginia, and perhaps even Massachusetts, will be noticed in its place.

By the ravages of three wars and four fires, the early records of both Grand Lodges and many subordinate Lodges have been destroyed or lost. Even the larger part of the edition of Dr. Mackey's History was burned, so that copies of the work are exceedingly rare, and no full file of the published proceedings and other official documents is known to exist; as a consequence neither absolute certainty, nor even strong probability, as to the facts in many cases, can be asserted.

A deputation for the formation of "Solomon's Lodge" at Charleston was granted in 1735, by Lord Weymouth, Grand Master. The same year, a deputation was granted for a Lodge by the same name at Savannah, Georgia: by confounding the two, or for some reason not known, the former was not entered on the roll while the latter was. The former does not appear on the English list until 1760, when it was allowed to date from 1735. But it is certain that the authority for a Lodge at Charleston was granted in 1735, and it is shown by contemporary newspaper accounts that it was actually organized October 28, 1736.

In 1735, the Provincial Grand Lodge of Massachusetts granted a warrant for a Lodge at Charleston, "sundry brethren" having gone there from Boston. In the early part of 1738, it was referred to in a newspaper as being held at the "Harp and Crown," and as having Dr. Newman Oglethorpe for its Master. This is the only known allusion to it in any document extant: it probably existed only a few years.

John Hammerton was appointed Provincial Grand Master in 1736, or early in 1737. He resigned in July following, and in August James Graeme was appointed his successor. His commission has not been preserved, but it would seem that he was appointed only till the end of the year, when his successor was to be chosen by the Provincial Grand Lodge; for on St. John's Day in December following, Graeme was unanimously elected Grand Master, and was re-elected in 1738 and 1739; John Houghton was chosen in 1740,

Brother Thomas J. Shryock, 33°

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF MARYLAND CONTINUOUSLY SINCE 1885.

Initiated into Freemasonry in Waverly Lodge, Baltimore, Md., August 20, 1874.

John Hammerton in 1741, and Benjamin Smith in 1742. After this date until 1751, the newspaper makes no allusion to Freemasonry. Dr. Mackey thinks that the reason for this is found in the law adopted in 1741, by the Grand Lodge of England, prohibiting the printing of the proceedings of any Lodge. This could scarcely have prevented a notice, in a newspaper, of the public celebration of St. John's Day, if one had occurred. However all that can be said with certainty is, that during these ten years, there is a hiatus in the history of Masonry in that State. The question whether, during this time, the Provincial Grand Lodge continued to exist, has been ably discussed, but the evidence is necessarily very slight, and hardly overcomes the presumption arising from the silence of the Gazette, which, before that time and after it, was in the habit of noticing Masonic events of a partially public character.

Solomon's Lodge was active and celebrated St. John's Day (in December) annually up to 1742, inclusive, with public exercises.

Mackey says that this Lodge worked uninterruptedly till 1811, when it suspended labor: it was revived in 1817, but again became dormant in 1838, and was revived in 1841, since which time it has been as active as the wars, fires and earthquakes, through which it has passed, have allowed.

In the English list of 1760, there were, in addition to Solomon's Lodge, four others—Prince George at Winyaw, or Georgetown, dating from 1743; Union at Charleston, dating from 1755; Masters' at Charleston dating from 1756, and Port Royal at Beaufort, dating also from 1756: these were followed by St. Mark's Lodge in 1763. The Gazette gives an account of the celebration of St. John's Day in 1751, by a Lodge at Beaufort. Dr. Dalcho, in 1822, says that St. George's Lodge at Dorchester, Prince George's at Winyaw, and Port Royal at Beaufort were constituted soon after the organization of Solomon's Lodge.

St. John's Day in 1752 was celebrated at Charleston and Beaufort in the usual manner, and at Charleston in 1753. The Gazette, in its account of this celebration, says "the Provincial Lodge was formed." Dr. Mackey concludes that this means Solomon's Lodge, while De Saussure, in his historical address, assumes that it means the Provincial Grand Lodge. A comparison of the titles of the officers then elected with the titles always used in former accounts, and the names of those officers with the names of the officers of the Lodge elected the next year, and with the names of those of Leigh's Provincial Grand Lodge, makes it quite clear that Dr. Mackey's conclusion was correct. In the By Laws of Solomon's Lodge, bearing the date of 1753, are references to the Provincial Grand Lodge: it is not certain that these were new. By-Laws of an old Lodge, made or revised that year, cannot be accepted as proof of the existence of the Provincial Grand Lodge at that time. A Masonic funeral was held at Dorchester, January 25, 1754. If it were not for the practice of holding annual elections, the presumption would be that the Provincial Grand Lodge existed, but gradually became dormant, although the Lodges were active during the whole or part of the time; but what would be considered at that time the effect of not electing Grand Officers annually, according to the custom, is wholly left to conjecture. The subsequent appointment of a Provincial Grand Master by the Grand Lodge of England, and the organization of a new Provincial Grand Lodge, show that the body, formerly existing and perpetuating itself by annual elections of officers, had ceased to exist either by want of action on its part or by being superseded.

On March 30, 1754, Peter Leigh, who had just been appointed Chief Justice of South Carolina, was appointed Provincial Grand Master of that State by the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England. He arrived in Charleston on the twenty-second of October following, and immediately organized a Provincial Grand Lodge. St. John's Day (December) was celebrated with great zest. The Provincial Grand Master presented the Grand Lodge with a sword, which was said to have been in his family for many years: it remained in possession of the Grand Lodge and was borne in all public processions till 1838, when it was nearly destroyed in the great fire; the blade only was saved, the point of that being broken off. In the confusion it was mislaid, but in 1854 (the centennial anniversary of its presentation to the Grand Lodge) it was found, ingeniously repaired, and used during the celebration of that year. Since 1865 it has disappeared and the most persistent efforts have not been able to discover it.

The Provincial Grand Lodge continued to meet, at first annually and then quarterly till 1759, when, in consequence of the French and Cherokee war, and the death of the Provincial Grand Master, it did not meet. It is to be observed that under Leigh's administration the Grand Officers were not elected, but were appointed by him: when he died, his Deputy discharged the duties of the office until a successor was appointed.

In 1755 and 1756, St George's Lodge at Dorchester celebrated St. John's Day (June); this Lodge is not named on the English list, and no more is known of its history than what Dr. Dalcho said of it and what appears in the newspapers. In the summons for the meeting of the Grand Lodge in 1758, it is stated that there were then "five regular and constituted Lodges" under the Provincial jurisdiction. Six had been chartered; so that one had become dormant, unless St George's Lodge hailed under some other authority. It is probable that "Masters' Lodge" was chartered to confer the Master's degree, the other Lodges having authority to confer only the first and second degrees. There was a Masters' Lodge in Boston, one in Newport, R. I., and as late as 1769, the Lodge at Falmouth, Maine, conferred only the first and second degrees, while the third was conferred in a distinct Lodge called the Masters' Lodge. The Masters' Lodge at Boston was represented in the Grand Lodge, but those at Newport and Falmouth were not, and such may have been the case in Charleston; and when five Lodges were named, the Masters' Lodge may not have been included.

Union Lodge, chartered in 1755, judging from the names of its members, had quite a number of Scotchmen in it. In 1759, they sent five guineas to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for its Charity Fund: that body showed its appreciation of the gift by issuing a charter to the donors for a Lodge by the name of Union Kilwinning. The Lodge adopted the name but continued its old allegiance, although the Grand Lodge of Scotland carried its name on the roll for many years.

In 1761, Benjamin Smith was appointed Provincial Grand Master and served till 1767, when he resigned, and for two years afterward his Deputy, Egerton Leigh, acted in his stead. When Smith resigned, the craft unanimously voted to request Leigh to allow them to petition the Grand Master for his appointment, and he consented; in consequence he was styled Grand Master-elect, but was really Deputy and Acting Grand Master through 1769.

Up to 1766, the Provincial Grand Lodge had been composed of the Grand Officers, Past Grand Officers, and Masters and Wardens of the Lodges; but in that year the summons required the attendance of the Masters and Wardens of Lodges "or their deputies."

St. Mark's Lodge was warranted February 8, 1763: its location is not given, but it seems to have had an ephemeral existence. Marine Lodge at Charleston was chartered December 22, 1766, and Mackey counts this with the other three Charleston Lodges and the Lodges at Georgetown (or Winyaw), Dorchester and Beaufort to make "the seven Lodges" mentioned in the Grand Lodge summons of that year. But as there were eight Lodges the next year, and there is no mention of the creation of a new one during the year, it is more probable that the summons was issued before Marine Lodge was chartered, and that St. Mark's Lodge was one of the seven in 1766, and one of the eight in 1767. It would seem also that Masters' Lodge was incited in the number.

In the latter part of 1769, Egerton Leigh was appointed Provincial Grand Master, and the appointment was officially announced February 20, 1770, at a communication held for that purpose. The accounts in the newspapers during the following years are rather meagre. Men's minds were occupied with more exciting matters: events were happening that were to lead to war, revolution and separation from the mother country. There is evidence, however, that the Lodges were active. In June, 1774, Leigh, whose sympathies were decidedly with the British Government, finding that the popular sentiment was strongly against him, left the country; but he did not resign the office of Provincial Grand Master.

No account of a meeting of the Grand Lodge that year, or in 1775, has been found.

On December 19, 1776, a notice appeared in the Gazette, that "the Grand Anniversary and General Communication" would be held on the twenty-seventh, "when all Brethren throughout this State are earnestly requested to assemble:" it was signed "By order of the Grand Lodge, John Wells, Jr., G. S. pro tem." Robert Wells had been Grand Secretary under Leigh; as the latter was absent, he could not have appointed the Grand Secretary pro tem. The words "By order of the Grand Lodge," imply that a meeting had been held and the appointment made by it. Since Leigh had left, events of the most momentous importance had transpired; war had actually commenced, battles had been fought, and, more than all the rest, the Colonies had declared their Independence and were fighting vigorously to maintain it. South Carolina, even in advance of the National Declaration, on March 26, 1776, had organized an independent State government, fought the battle of Fort Moultrie, and in effect driven the royal government from the State. The use of the word "State" in the notice was in accordance with the new order of things.

The language of this notice indicates that the meeting was to be a general meeting of the craft: there was no notification to the members of the Grand Lodge as such. There is no evidence that any action was then taken by the Grand Lodge, but rather evidence to the contrary, as Wells continues to sign as Secretary pro tem.

But on January 2, 1777, a notice was published in the Gazette desiring the members of the Grand Lodge to meet in Quarterly Communication on the third of February following. On December 11, 1777, a notice was published for the "Grand Anniversary and General Communication" on St. John's Day: this notice was signed by Wells as Grand Secretary, "by order of the Grand Master-elect." In the Gazette of January 1, 1778, is a brief account of the meeting on St. John's Day, in which it is stated that Barnard Elliott was then "installed Grand Master of Masons in this State." There had been an election of Grand Officers at a previous meeting, presumably at the meeting in February. What transpired at any of these meetings, beyond what has been stated, is not known.

But upon the known facts, Dr. Mackey claims that the Grand Lodge was organized as an independent Grand Lodge in 1777, presumably on December 27. De Saussure claims that it should date from December 27, 1776, and therefore, that it was the first independent Grand Lodge in America: but as the date of the installation of the Grand Officers is universally regarded as the date of the organization of a Grand Lodge, it cannot date from a day earlier than December 27, 1777. If this organization had been maintained as an independent Grand Lodge, Dr. Mackey's position would be impregnable; but subsequent events show that it must have been, and must be considered, a continuation of the Provincial Grand Lodge.

A quarterly communication was called "by order of the Grand Master" in February, 1778. On October 25, 1778, Elliot died and the Masons attended his funeral as mourners. No notice in relation to this branch of Masonry appeared in the Gazette for three years; in the meantime Leigh had died, and Charleston had been reconquered by British troops, and the State pretty well reduced to the possession of the British authorities. In the Royal Gazette of November 31, 1781, a notice was published reciting that the office of Provincial Grand Master was vacant by the death of Leigh, and requesting the Masters and Wardens of the regular Lodges throughout the Province to "consider of a fit and proper brother to fill that high and important station and of other matters of greatest importance to the craft." This was followed by a notice "By order of the Grand Lodge," from "John Wells, Jr., G. S.," in the Gazette of December 19, 1781, calling a meeting of the Grand Lodge for the ensuing St. John's Day, desiring "all former Grand Officers and the present Masters and Wardens of the regularly constituted Lodges throughout the Province, under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Grand Lodge, in particular, and the Brethren "in general," to attend. The fact that John Wells acted as Grand Secretary, and the composition of the Body, show that this was the same Grand Lodge that had elected Elliot, and not the old Provincial Grand Lodge reorganized. In the account of this meeting, given in the Gazette, it is stated that the Provincial Grand Master's chair being vacated by Leigh's death, John Deas was unanimously chosen to fill it. The election of Elliot was ignored, probably because it was held that his election was void on the ground that Leigh was then Provincial Grand Master; but all the other proceedings appear to have been accepted as valid.

Charleston was evacuated by the British troops, December 14, 1782, in consequence of the treaty with Great Britain. No notice calling a meeting of the Grand Lodge in 1782 or 1783 is found in the Gazette, but a meeting was held on December 27, 1783, an account of which is given in the Gazette of January second: while the meeting is called in this account the twenty-ninth anniversary, it is evident that at that meeting the Grand Lodge exercised all the functions of an independent Grand Lodge, and ever after continued to do so. It is probable that if a meeting was held in 1782 the same was true of that meeting; but until evidence is found that there was such a meeting, the twenty-seventh of December, 1783, must be taken as the date from which the Grand Lodge of South Carolina takes rank. In the summons for the meeting in 1784, the officers of the eleven Lodges "constituted, holding under and acknowledging the jurisdiction of the said Lodge," are desired to attend. The phraseology is emphatic as well as new, and undoubtedly was intended to convey the idea of independence and sovereignty, as well as a distinction between its own Lodges and those holding under other authorities, with which it was soon to come into collision.

For about twenty-five years, after the independence of the Grand Lodge in 1783, its career was a comparatively uneventful one: its sphere of operations was restricted, according to Dr. Mackey, to Charleston and its vicinity. It celebrated St. John's Day occasionally, but how often, the loss of its records, and the failure to preserve copies of contemporaneous newspapers, prevent being known. Its number of Lodges increased slowly, being only twelve or fifteen in number as late as 1808.

This was in part due to the organization and rapid growth of its rival, the Ancient Grand Lodge, or, as it saw fit to call itself, the "Grand Lodge of Ancient York Masons." The name suggests two delusions, which those connected with it entertained. It had no connection with York: its rival organization was the most "ancient": its claim was that it practised "ancient" Masonry, but its votaries soon came to understand that their organization was of ancient origin while that of their rivals was of modern origin.

The "Ancient" Grand Lodge of England chartered three Lodges in Charleston, No. 92, in 1761; No. 190, in 1774; and No. 236, in 1786. There is some evidence that the last had previously been chartered by the Grand Lodge of England, that one of its members visited Philadelphia and became an "Ancient" Mason, that on his return he persuaded the members of his Lodge to follow his example, and thereupon a warrant was obtained from the "Ancient" Grand Lodge of England. The "Ancient" Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania chartered three Lodges in Charleston: No. 38, December 23, 1782; No. 40, July 12, 1783; and No. 47, November 22, 1786. No. 40 surrendered its warrant when the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was formed and took a new one, May 25, 1787: it was originally granted, according to De Saussure to brethren formerly of St. Andrew's Lodge in West Florida. In addition to these, the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania on December 27, 1785, granted a petition for a charter for a Lodge at Winnsborough, but the name and number of this Lodge do not appear on the published list of Pennsylvania Lodges. The oldest Lodge, No. 92, if ever organized, disappeared before No. 190 was chartered. The first public notice of any "Ancient" Lodge is of No. 190, in 1777, when it celebrated St. John's Day: other celebrations were held in later years, that of 1784 by three Lodges.

On December 24, 1786, a preliminary meeting was held by which the Master of No. 190 was requested to call a convention on the first of January for the purpose of deliberating on the expediency of forming a Grand Lodge. Dr. Dalcho says that the Ancients had previously proposed terms of union to the Grand Lodge then existing, but as each party insisted upon conditions which the other would not accept, the attempt to effect a union failed.

The convention met on the first of January as proposed, five Lodges, Nos. 190, 38, 40, 47 and 236 being represented by their Masters, Past Masters and Wardens. It was determined to form a Grand Lodge, and the fifth of February was appointed for the election of Grand Officers and the forming of a Grand Lodge "free from any other jurisdiction." Accordingly, on the day fixed, the Convention met, voted to form a Grand Lodge and elected Grand Officers and adjourned to meet March 24, 1787, when the Grand Officers were installed and the new Grand Lodge formally organized. Five Lodges were represented in the earlier meetings, but whether the Lodge at Winnsborough was represented at any of them, or not, cannot be ascertained. However, if it was not represented, it gave in its adhesion and became No. 6; it resisted the union in 1808, and became extinct in 1810, or soon after. St. Andrews' Lodge, No. 40, for some reason, repented of the course it had taken or was dissatisfied with the proceedings. As already stated, it surrendered its warrant and took a new one from the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, May 24, 1787; it entered a protest before a Notary Public, August 9, 1787, and is said to have addressed a memorial to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. No mention is made of this memorial in the printed record, and in the list of Lodges it is stated that its charter was surrendered, September 24, 1787. This seems to be sufficient evidence that it then gave in its adhesion to the new Grand Lodge, and yet the Pennsylvania record shows that it was represented at every meeting of that Grand Lodge from March, 1787, to December 27, 1788, inclusive, with a single exception, but never afterwards. As the representation was undoubtedly by proxy, its significance is not great, and does not necessarily overthrow the presumption that it gave in its adhesion to the new South Carolina Grand Lodge when it surrendered its Pennsylvania warrant.

This Grand Lodge soon outgrew its rival. It is a singular fact that the "Ancient" Masons were everywhere zealous, aggressive, and intolerant towards the so-called "Moderns." The latter seemed to hold strictly to the principle that profanes must seek them, while the rapid growth of their rivals has indications of proselyting. In South Carolina, a feeling of mutual hostility prevailed, and while "the Moderns" in a few cases seemed inclined to permit the "Ancients" to visit their Lodges, the compliment was not returned; the Ancients were taught, and taught, that no others were Masons, and that the "Moderns" could be made Masons only in the same manner as profanes. More than a year before this "Ancient" Grand Lodge was formed, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania had directed a letter to be prepared and "sent to the different Modern Lodges expressive of our wishes of a general attachment and union," and thereafter dropped the word "Ancient," which it had formerly used, and invited to its Feasts "all Free and Accepted Masons;" and had ordered correspondence to be opened with "every Grand Lodge in the United States:" the one mention of this subject which is nominally, but not really, an exception to this statement, has been given in the history of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania.

But in South Carolina the line of distinction was very sharply drawn. The Ancients, however, increased rapidly. In four years its six Lodges increased to thirty-five, while the "Moderns" had but eleven or twelve. Both bodies held their regular sessions: in 1791 both were incorporated by the Legislature; the records of neither were printed, and those of both have been lost. No newspaper accounts have been preserved; few details of the history of either for twenty years after 1787 are known: but in 1807, the "Ancient" Grand Lodge had over fifty Lodges on its registry, while the "Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons" had but about fifteen.

Perhaps one cause of the superior growth of the former was, that all Past Masters were members of the Grand Lodge, and it allowed Lodges to be represented by the proxies of their Masters and Wardens.

However, in 1807, the leading men on both sides saw (what had been seen everywhere else in America twenty years before) that the integrity and usefulness of Masonry, as well as the principles of the Institution, demanded a reconciliation and union. When this was seen, their duty became plain. In this country, it is believed, the differences in the ritual of the two parties were then slight. Dr. Dalcho expressly so states. Dr. Mackay argues to the contrary, but Dalcho lived at the time and knew whereof he affirmed, and his statements are in substantial accord with evidence from other sources.

After considerable preliminary discussion, commencing in 1807, and several unofficial

The Masonic Apron of an American Prisoner of War

FROM THE ORIGINAL IN THE GRAND LODGE LIBRARY OF PENNSYLVANIA

The story of this beautiful and interesting apron is, that Eleazar Clark, an American skipper, whose ship was captured by the British during the war of 1812, and that he, with his wife, were taken prisoners and incarcerated at Plymouth, England. While in prison Mrs. Clark made the Apron. All of the emblems are artistically worked in silk and gold thread, in needle work, upon white satin.

interviews between representative men of the two parties, on July 9, 1808, each Grand Lodge appointed a committee to meet each other for the purpose of "inquiring into the eligibility of forming a union between the two Grand Lodges." Several meetings were held by the joint committee, and on September 8, 1808, they agreed upon Articles of Union. They were the necessary details for the union of the two Grand Lodges, on terms of equality, and the uniting of their Lodges under one governing jurisdiction. But there were two provisions that now seem unnecessary, both contained in one Article: one, that the members of the Grand Lodge were required to appear therein at the next meeting, "and there receive and take the customary oath of secrecy," and the other, that "as soon thereafter as convenient, the Masters of the several subordinate Lodges shall administer the said oath to their respective officers and members." This was afterwards the subject of bitter discussion, but a careful examination shows that the taking of it was regarded as indicating to which side the party taking it adhered, and also as proof that the united Grand Lodge had departed from the ancient ways. It was agreed that the Grand Lodge should adopt a uniform work after the union, and until it should be adopted, each Lodge might work as it had been accustomed to do. It was agreed that all the fraternity should be known as "Free and Accepted Masons," and that the use of the words "Ancient" and "Modern," as terms of distinction, should "hereafter cease." These Articles were ratified by the Ancient Grand Lodge on September 24, 1808, and by the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons three days later. The seventeenth of December was fixed for consummating the union. As an earnest of "the good time coming," the two Grand Lodges united in laying the corner-stone of a public building.

Dalcho says the Articles of Union were ratified unanimously by both Grand Lodges. But the unanimity was not destined to continue; among the Ancients were found, at first a few, but afterwards many, who insisted, as the St. John's Masons of Boston had done nearly fifty years before, that there could be a union only by "submission," or, in other words, only by the "Moderns being made" in Ancient Lodges. The Master of one of the Charleston Lodges (St. John's, No. 31) was the master spirit in the revolt which followed. He carried his Lodge with him; and at the meeting of the Grand Lodge on the seventeenth of December, he and his Wardens, under the instructions of the Lodge, appeared and undertook to have one of the Articles of union repealed. The Grand Master properly ruled the motion out of order. It was then voted to receive the Committee of the other body in open Grand Lodge, and thereupon the Master and Wardens of St. John's Lodge retired. The "Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons" was then introduced and the united Grand Lodge proceeded to the election of Grand Officers, who were installed, and the "Grand Lodge of South Carolina," formally installed on the thirty-first day of December, 1808. The Lodges and Masons, who had been of the obedience of the old Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, heartily and earnestly sustained the union, without, so far as is known, a dissenting voice: all the "Ancient" Lodges in Charleston except one, did the same; but one Lodge in Charleston and many of the country Lodges, and many Masons in the others, were dissatisfied. As soon as the union was fully completed, St. John's Lodge determined to revive the Ancient Grand Lodge. On the seventh of January they sent out a circular well calculated to excite the prejudices of the country Lodges against those in the city: the leaders in the union movement had given a pretext for those prejudices by having the Articles of Union acted upon before there had been time for them to be sent out and examined by the country Lodges. The Committee rested their case upon the proposition, that a "Modern" Mason could not be admitted into an "Ancient" Lodge, without a violation of obligations, and therefore, that it was "impossible to comply with the seventh article of their convention, which admits of Modern Masons into Ancient Lodges without having gone through the forms required by Ancient Masonry," as "no man can be admitted into a Lodge of Ancient Masons, without being regularly entered, passed and raised in a regular constituted Lodge of Ancient York Masons." Favorable replies were received from many Lodges. The "oath of secrecy" was objectionable for two reasons: by taking it a Modern Mason could visit an Ancient Lodge, and an Ancient Mason could not attend his own Lodge without taking it. The Grand Lodge made matters worse by prohibiting the admission of members to their own Lodge, until they had taken this oath: what this oath was, it is difficult to determine, and it is still more difficult to understand the reason of it. If it had been an oath of fealty to the new Grand Lodge, some reason can be seen for requiring it, but even that would have been of doubtful policy: but really this matter was an immaterial one, and was only used to "fire the hearts" of the Ancients.

St. John's Lodge soon passed a resolution declaring that it would not acknowledge the Grand Lodge of South Carolina, nor admit any of its members, or any members of its Lodges, "that have taken the test or oath of secrecy for Moderns to enter the Lodge before taking the regular obligation, as we have." It will be perceived that the real objection was the substitution of the "Oath of Secrecy" for the "regular obligation," in favor of Modern Masons.

The Grand Lodge acted with energy and the contest became excited and bitter. Addresses and counter addresses rapidly followed each other: St. John's Lodge was declared to be a clandestine Lodge; every Mason made in any Lodge not holding under the Grand Lodge was declared to be a clandestine, Mason, but this was not to apply to country Lodges, till after the June Quarterly Communication. The recurrent Lodges in reply declared that those adhering to the new Grand Lodge had either never been, or had ceased to be, Masons; they were thus placed in the position of being compelled to make an absolute surrender, to acknowledge themselves clandestine, or to organize a new Grand Lodge or resuscitate the old one. They chose the latter alternative.

St. John's Lodge called a Convention, to meet on the first day of May, 1809, for the purpose of reviving the Grand Lodge: the proxies of sixteen Lodges responded to the call. Resolutions, evidently carefully drawn by an able lawyer, were adopted, declaring that the Grand Lodge by its unmasonic conduct had forfeited all rights under the act of incorporation, and that only the Lodges which had refused to take warrants from "The Grand Lodge of South Carolina, Free and Accepted Masons," were the only true Lodges of "Ancient York Masons" in the State, and have power to perpetuate the Grand Lodge of Ancient York Masons. They then elected Grand Officers and fixed the fifteenth of the same month for their installation; the Convention was held in Columbia, but the meeting to install the Grand Officers was held at Charleston.

The contest then became more bitter and exciting than ever. It was carried into the Legislature, when the United Grand Lodge applied for an act of Incorporation; and it was also carried into the courts. Each claimed to be regular; each denounced the other as spurious and clandestine, and each expelled all the Lodges of the other, which had been "Ancient" Lodges. Beyond question, "the work" was very similar under both jurisdictions: in fact, as already stated, the differences were not great in the two Grand Lodges before the union, and those were in unimportant details. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania claims to have preserved and to practise the "Ancient" work, and its ritual differs from the "Webb work" in no essentials that prevent unrestricted intercourse between her Masons and those of other jurisdictions; but undoubtedly then, as too often now, great stress was laid upon the details of the work, as if they were the very foundation stone of Freemasonry.

The revived Grand Lodge received strong support from the action of other Grand Lodges, taken under a misapprehension, not then unnatural, but which now seems almost absurd. The Grand Lodges of Georgia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Kentucky denounced the union of the two Grand Lodges and sustained the sixteen Lodges in the course which they had taken.

A brief view of the general situation is necessary in order to understand how those Grand Lodges could so misapprehend the facts as to be led to take the action which they did take. It must be remembered that in 1809, communication between States remote from each other was slow and infrequent: that Webb's Monitor, the Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Maryland Ahiman Resons, the Massachusetts Constitutions and a few others of similar character, were all the Masonic books in circulation in this country, and their circulation was local and limited: that scarcely any of the Grand Lodges published their Proceedings: that no printed documents of a Masonic character were received from England: that the history of Masonry had not been written: that for some twenty years, outside of South Carolina, the terms "Ancient" and "Modern" as indicating classes of Masons had ceased to be used: that it is doubtful if there were ten Masons in this country who knew the actual history of the "Ancient" and "Modern" controversy: that those in our Grand Lodges, who knew something of the practical meaning of these terms had gone on, and their places had been filled by younger men; and that in twenty years the composition of our Grand Lodges, so far as particular individuals are concerned, is almost entirely changed.

Under such circumstances it is not wonderful that when news came from South Carolina that the Ancient Grand Lodge of that State had united with an association of Modern Masons, it should not have been understood that merely the Grand Lodge descended from the Athol Grand Lodge of England, and calling itself "Ancient," had united with the Grand Lodge descended from the older Grand Lodge, called by its opponents "Modern"; nor that it should have been understood that the Grand Lodge had united with an association of Modern Masons, not deriving their origin from "ancient craft Masonry:" it is not very surprising that they did not understand the terms "Ancient" and "Modern" as names, but did understand them in their general sense as meaning—the one, of old origin, and the other, of recent origin. The word "York" also misled them—they understanding it in the same sense as now used when we speak of the "York Rite."

In 1809, there were Grand Lodges in fifteen States, besides South Carolina. Those of Delaware and Ohio had been so recently formed that they had not secured recognition; the remaining thirteen (and in addition the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia) had recognized each other, were maintaining Masonic correspondence with each other, and the members of the obedience of each were visiting the Lodges of each other with as free admission and as warm a welcome as at the present time. Whether "Ancient" Masons or "Modern" Masons (according to the original meaning of those terms) it made no difference: in fact the great body of the craft did not know that such a division had ever existed. If the Grand Lodges, which sustained the seceding Lodges in South Carolina and their Grand Lodge, had understood that in the pronouncements from that State, "Ancient York Masons" meant Athol Grand Lodge Masons, and "Modern Masons" meant Grand Lodge of England Masons, it is certain that they would never have taken that course. That they could not have taken it is evident from the following considerations: the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, then existing, was the result of a union precisely the same in all respects as the union in South Carolina, and it was everywhere recognized; the Grand Lodge of Virginia (which used exceedingly severe language in relation to uniting with Modern Masons) was formed by Lodges, no one of which was an "Ancient" Lodge, while four were "Modern" Lodges, some of which were present, by their representatives, when the action in question was taken; the Grand Lodge of Georgia (whose action was also emphatic) was organized by one "Modern" Lodge and one "Ancient" Lodge, (or if more than two Lodges participated in the organization, the others were "Modern" Lodges) and the "Modern" Lodge was the largest and most influential—a union, in principle, precisely the same as that in South Carolina; the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire was formed by one "Modern" Lodge and one "Scottish" Lodge—a similar union—and was everywhere recognized; the Grand Lodge of Connecticut was formed by "Modern" and Scottish Lodges—several of each—a similar union, and it was everywhere recognized; the Grand Lodge of Vermont was formed by two Scottish, two Connecticut, and one "Modern" Lodge, and was everywhere recognized; the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania was formed by "Ancient" Lodges, but had, years before, practically abolished the distinction between "Ancient" and "Modern," and was then receiving unto its Lodges "Modern" Masons in precisely the same manner as it received "Ancient" Masons the same was true of Maryland. It is needless to enumerate more; the facts already stated show that everywhere in America, except South Carolina, there was no discrimination between Lodges originally "Ancient" or "Modern," and that there were no longer "Ancient" Masons, or "Modern" Masons, but all were "Free and Accepted Masons" and "Brethren, united by one common tie."

But the action of these Grand Lodges, though founded upon misapprehension, was no less effective. The new Grand Lodge was encouraged, and Masons who had gone into the Union began to fear that they were wrong and to go over to the other party. For nearly eight years the contest was maintained: but in 1813, the two rival Grand Lodges of England united, so that there, too, the terms "Ancient" and "Modern" lived only in history. This had its effect in South Carolina. The revived Grand Lodge had secured the support of all the country Lodges, and had two in Charleston, having thirty-five in all; the united Grand Lodge had fifteen Lodges, all in Charleston. The actual difference between them was in name alone. The good men, with broad views, on both sides, in 1816 began to comprehend the situation and to consider how a union might be effected. They secured the appointment of Committees by each Grand Lodge, which after many conferences, marked by a fraternal spirit on both sides, on January 1, 1817, agreed on a basis of union. One of the articles provided for a mutual inspection of work by Committees: each Grand Lodge exemplified its work in the presence of a Committee from the other, and both Committees joined in a report that no difference existed in the work of the respective Grand Lodges.

The Grand Lodges, thereupon, adopted respectively the articles of union. To avoid the mistake made in 1808, they were submitted to the subordinate Lodges. Twenty-two of the thirty-five York Lodges, and fourteen of the fifteen Free and Accepted Lodges ratified them: as nothing is said of any negative votes, it is presumed that the remaining Lodges failed to act. The two Grand Lodges held a joint meeting, the Grand Master of the united Grand Lodge presiding, in accordance with the decision of the committee, who had determined the matter "by lot": the Grand Master then proclaimed the union of the two Grand Lodges, under the name of the "Grand Lodge of Ancient Freemasons of South Carolina." Grand Officers were then elected, and on the next day, December 27, 1817, were installed, and the organization completed. The Proceedings were printed, by order of the Grand Lodge, under the title of "The Masonic Family Reunited;" this pamphlet is now exceedingly rare.

The Lodges surrendered their warrants and took new ones: it would seem that some of the Lodges on the roll at the time of the union were dormant, as but thirty-eight of the fifty were thus re-chartered.

The Grand Lodge commenced the publication of its Proceedings annually and has continued it ever since, except that none were published after the fire in 1838 till 1845, and in a few cases the proceedings of more than one year are in the same pamphlet.

While harmony prevailed throughout the jurisdiction, there was not much growth of the Institution. One of the natural effects of the division and contest had been an unnatural increase in the number of Lodges, and of course the effect of the union was the consolidation of Lodges in some instances, and the surrender or suspension of charters in others; so that in 1827, eleven Lodges had become extinct and thirteen were marked "suspended," leaving thirty-one in active operation, although it is said that some of the Lodges marked "suspended" still retained their charters and were doing work. The Anti-Masonic excitement produced no marked effect in this jurisdiction, but probably the "great apathy," which was reported to exist "on the subject of Masonry," was in part at least due to that cause. The Grand Lodge had no Grand Chaplain for fourteen years, and Dr. Mackey says there was not, during all that time, a single clergyman of character and influence who took an active part in Masonry, on account, as he thinks, of the Anti-Masonic excitement.

But an enterprise, in which the Grand Lodge engaged in 1837, was destined to become a heavy burden on the craft, and produce effects from which the Institution has not yet fully recovered. It undertook the erection of a Masonic Hall, the corner stone of which it laid August 23, 1837. On the twenty-seventh of the following April, Charleston was devastated by a fire which destroyed the new Hall then in course of erection, and the Hall where the Grand Lodge and many of the subordinate Lodges in the city then met, with the furniture of the Masonic bodies and all the old records of the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge held a meeting within ten days and determined to rebuild at once, and measures were taken to carry this determination into effect; but the fire was a heavy blow, and the Grand Lodge, for the first time in its recorded history, at the June Quarterly Communication, could not be opened for want of a quorum.

It released its interest in the old lot for $4,500, but it was in debt and its net assets were only about $3,000, and the building of a Hall was, for the time, abandoned.

At this time, the Grand Lodge decided that Lodge funds are intended for charitable purposes and not for distribution among its members, and that when a Lodge was dissolved by its own act, its funds must be turned over to the Grand Lodge to be held for the same purposes. This was in accordance with the civil law, as in several cases the affairs of a Lodge were wound up by proceedings at law, and the assets, after paying the debts, were turned over to the Grand Lodge, by which, of course, they must also be held for charitable purposes, although the Grand Lodge might, as it did in some cases, return the funds to the Lodge when it should be reconstituted.

But the Grand Lodge had not given up the idea of a Masonic Hall, and in 1840 measures for its erection were taken and a lot purchased. The various Masonic bodies tendered a loan of their funds, which was accepted; contracts were made and the corner stone laid. The State had appropriated two million of dollars to relieve the sufferers by the fire, as a Building Loan, to be secured by first mortgage on the property on which the building was to be erected; it was payable in ten years, and that time of payment was afterwards extended. This naturally led to improvident undertakings and consequent disastrous results. The Grand Lodge availed itself of the privilege and borrowed $12,000: in effect the Hall was erected with borrowed money. The work was conducted with despatch, and the Hall completed and dedicated September 22, 1841.

But the Grand Lodge found itself confronted with the serious problem of providing for ways and means: its debt was large and funded at a high rate of interest. Without entering into details, it may be said, that owing to the effects of the Civil War, damage by fire and the "earthquake's shock," the Grand Lodge has not been able up to this time to free itself from debt, but by careful management a large reduction has been made, and unless some new calamity intervenes, it will soon free itself from a burden which it has borne with serene patience and confidence in ultimate relief for nearly fifty years, and will continue in the career of growth and prosperity upon which it has already entered.

The Grand Lodge was represented in the Baltimore Convention in 1843, held for the purpose of securing "uniformity in working" throughout the country. An effort was made to introduce the work adopted by that Convention, but it failed, and the Grand Lodge returned to the work taught by John Barney as early as 1825, which he had obtained at second hand from Webb and which was essentially the "Webb work." This fact is very strong evidence that the work of the "Ancient" Lodges in 1808 and 1817 could not have differed materially from the work in the "Modern" Lodges, which was based on Webb's Monitor.

Many questions involving usage and law were from time to time decided. Up to quite a recent period, it required two black-balls to reject; no one could be Master until he had served as Warden, except in emergent cases; only Past Masters (i. e. Masters who had held the office a full year) were eligible to office in the Grand Lodge, but ineligibility for want of this qualification was cured by installation. As early as 1846, an attempt was made to establish a "Masonic Mutual Relief Association," based on dues and benefits, but it resulted in the organization of the "Masonic Benevolent Society," based on charitable relief. The reversal by the Grand Lodge, of a judgment of expulsion by a Lodge, was held to restore the party to membership in his Lodge, and was affirmed against the protest of the Lodge; jurisdiction to discipline sojourners for offences committed in the State was sustained, and a member of a Texas Lodge expelled, and that Grand Lodge notified of the proceedings; the power of the Deputy Grand Master to issue dispensations, the Grand Master being alive and within the State, was denied, unless such power is given by express enactment; the decision of a Master in declaring a member suspended for non-payment of dues, without action by the Lodge was reversed; a regulation was adopted that votes, which, under the By-Laws, may be decided by acclamation, shall be decided by "uplifted hands" in accordance with the old Regulation of the Grand Lodge of England: but the most important action was the disfranchisement of Past Masters from membership in the Grand Lodge, a measure to which there was no constitutional objection so far as it was prospective, but deemed to be an invasion of the vested rights of individuals, so far as it was retrospective in its operation. It was, however, acquiesced in by all interested, although the adoption of the same measure had, but a few years before, "rent in twain" the largest Grand Lodge in the country. In 1908 this Grand Lodge had 216 Lodges, with a membership of 10,817 under its jurisdiction.

GEORGIA.

The records of the Grand Lodge of Georgia were burned in 1820, and no Proceedings had been printed before that date. The records of its oldest Lodge before 1785 have been lost: the materials, therefore, for its early history are scanty.

At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of England in 1733, the Deputy Grand Master "recommended the new Colony of Georgia in North America to the benevolence of the particular Lodges." Roger Lacey was Steward of the Grand Lodge of England, and in 1731 George Carpenter was Senior Grand Warden. Both were among the emigrants to Georgia in 1733.

Lord Weymouth, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, in 1735 granted a deputation to Roger Lacey to establish a Lodge at Savannah. It is believed that the Lodge was organized soon after under the name of King Solomon's Lodge. It was undoubtedly the Lodge referred to by Whitfield, when he mentions in his diary, June 24, 1738, that he preached to, and dined with the Freemasons.<sup>1</sup> In the English list for 1740, the Lodge at Savannah was designated as "Arms Lodge," undoubtedly from its place of meeting. It appears on those lists as follows: in 1736, as No. 139; in 1740, as No. 124; in 1756, as No. 75, and in 1770, as No. 63. It was active in 1758, as Gov. Ellis, in his report to the Home Government of his reception in Savannah, mentions the Masonic Fraternity as one of the distinguished bodies which received him. It is believed that the Lodge was in a flourishing condition when the war of the Revolution began. But for four years the British army was in possession of the town, and it is believed that during these times the early records were lost. In 1781, the Lodge was opened in Augusta. The first records in 1785 show that the Lodge had been re-organized in December, 1784. From 1785 to 1885, the historian<sup>2</sup> of the Lodge says "the brethren have never failed to open the great lights of Masonry on every Lodge night"—a record that few, if any, of the Lodges in this country can parallel.

The Grand Lodge of England chartered Unity Lodge, in Savannah, in 1774, and Grenadiers' Lodge in the same place in 1775; these Lodges disappeared, leaving no sign of existence.

On October 29, 1784, a petition was received by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania from brethren in Savannah, for a warrant to establish a Lodge in Savannah. A letter accompanied the petition stating that they had "formed themselves into a society of brethren with the concurrence of the brethren in South Carolina." A committee was appointed to answer the letter. On the twentieth of December following, another petition was received and it was ordered that a warrant be issued, bearing date October 29, 1784. The Master of this Lodge (named in the warrant) became Junior Grand Warden at the organization of the Grand Lodge: he, as Master of No. 42, notified the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania that his Lodge had taken a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Georgia. These facts identify this Lodge as Hiram Lodge. It became dormant before 1818, and was revived in 1826, but soon became defunct.

An account of the formation of the Grand Lodge has recently been discovered in the "Gazette of the State of Georgia," issued December 21, 1786.

Gray Elliott was appointed Provincial Grand Master in 1757; Noble Jones about 1772; and in the account of the formation of the Grand Lodge, it is stated that Maj. Gen. Samuel Elbert was then the Grand Master (Provincial) and resigned the chair. His conduct had been so "generous and masonic" that the Grand Lodge "unanimously hailed him Father of Independent Masonry, and appointed a committee to present him the thanks of the Masonic State with a Past Grand Master's emblematical jewel, in testimony of their respect and brotherly affection."

There were evidently only two Lodges represented, King Solomon's hailing under the Grand Lodge of England, and Hiram Lodge, chartered by the Ancient Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania; but the brethren did not seem to understand that there was any distinction, and, so far as now appears, the war of the "Ancients" and "Moderns" never vexed this jurisdiction. The newspapers speak of cementing the different Lodges in the State under one head, but the Grand Officers were all members of the two Lodges, King Solomon's having the Grand Master, William Stephens; the Deputy, Gen. James Jackson; the Grand S. Warden, Sir George Houston; the Grand Treasurer, James Maberham; and Grand Secretary, Samuel Stirk; while Hiram Lodge had the Grand J. Warden.

In this State, Masonry seemed to flourish at first only in the cities: according to a report made in 1818, there were only ten active Lodges, three of which were in Savannah: but in 1822 there were thirty Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge, and the Institution was exceedingly prosperous: but there followed a season of depression caused by action on the part of the Grand Lodge of an anomalous character.

After the great fire in Savannah in 1820, when the records of the Grand Lodge were burned, a new constitution was adopted. It provided for quarterly meetings of the Grand Lodge; and to appease a jealousy existing between the northern and southern parts of the State, it provided that the first two meetings in each calendar year should be held in Savannah, and the other two in Milledgeville, the capital of the State. The first communication in the year was the annual meeting for the choice of Grand Officers. The State was so large and the facilities of travelling so poor, that the composition of the Grand Lodge at the two places was as different as if there were two distinct Bodies; the Grand Officers, even, did not attend both, and at first the officers at the Milledgeville meetings were nearly all pro tem. officers: this soon led to the appointment of Deputy Officers, so that in fact, the Grand Lodge had two sets of officers, one for the southern and one for the northern meetings. In theory it was the same Grand Lodge at both places, but practically there were two Grand Lodges, each revising and repealing and thus annulling the action of the other. Two sets of records were kept, but it was the duty of the Secretary of each to transmit to the other a copy of his minutes: still each published its proceedings annually, and for the years 1821 to 1826 inclusive, and probably for 1827, two pamphlets were published, one by the Savannah Body, and one by the Milledgeville Body.

The inevitable result followed: dissensions arose between the two Bodies; criticisms were made in other Grand Lodges; and at its meeting in December, 1825, the Milledgeville Body adopted the report of a Committee which declared that the existing constitution was "inadequate to insure prosperity to the craft and that its numerous defects could not be remedied by the ordinary method prescribed in such cases," that is to say, in the manner prescribed in the constitution for amending it. The committee recommended that the sense of the Lodges be taken in relation to calling a convention at Milledgeville in December, 1826 (the time of the quarterly communication), to frame a new constitution, and the Grand Lodge so ordered. A committee was appointed to count the vote, and if the result was in the affirmative, to call the convention.

The Grand Lodge at Savannah, in March, 1826, agreed to this action, with the proviso that the new constitution should be submitted to the Grand Lodge for approval; but the Milledgeville Body met this by a declaration that the Masons comprising the subordinate Lodges have the right to ratify or reject the constitution—or in plain terms, that a convention authorized by a majority of the members of the Lodges has the power to frame a new constitution; the effect was to declare that the proposed new constitution should not be submitted to the Grand Lodge for its action. The committee found that seventeen Lodges voted for a convention, and one against it, and that three hundred and nine members voted in favor of the convention: the result was announced in the newspapers of the day, and the committee called the convention, giving each Lodge two representatives. The convention was held and a new constitution was adopted, abolishing quarterly communications of the Grand Lodge and providing for an annual communication at Milledgeville. But the Grand Lodge at Savannah met as usual in March, 1827: it refused to recognize the new order of things and elected Grand Officers. The Milledgeville Body met for the first time on the third of December, 1827. Each side argued the matter ably, the Savannah Grand Lodge taking the ground that the method of proceeding was unconstitutional, and the Milledgeville Body arguing in effect that a majority had the right to do so, without regard to the constitution. The Savannah Body was clearly right as to Masonic law as theretofore held, and as since held with perhaps a slight modification. The result, however, was an illustration of how a movement, illegal in its origin and progress, becomes a revolution by success, and final ratification, acquiescence or submission of all concerned. The large majority of the Lodges adhered to the Milledgeville Grand Lodge, which proceeded at once to declare the action of the Savannah Body null and void. At its next communication one of the Savannah Lodges had given in its adhesion; but thirteen Lodges stood out, and the Grand Lodge gave them until the next annual communication to make returns and pay their dues. No one of them complied, but continued to respect and obey the Grand Officers elected at Savannah. While this state of things existed, the Anti-Masonic excitement reached Georgia, and raged with much violence. From this combination of causes, the recusant Lodges, with a single exception, died out: among them was Union Lodge No. 3, which has been supposed to be Unity Lodge, chartered in 1774 by the Grand Lodge of England, but which, in all probability, was chartered by the Grand Lodge of Georgia. Among them also was Hiram Lodge, No. 2, which had become dormant and then revived in 1826, as No. 35. Nor were the Milledgeville Lodges exempt from disaster; they died out so rapidly that the Grand Lodge was obliged to reduce the number necessary for a quorum to five, and even then it could hold no meeting in 1833 or 1834, for want of a quorum. The practice of this Grand Lodge in renumbering its Lodges, thus giving them but temporary numbers, makes it difficult to trace the Lodges, and ascertain what ones survived the storm. But King Solomon's Lodge, in spite of its controversy with the Grand Lodge and the assault of the Anti-Masons combined, continued to hold its meetings and do work, "conferring degrees on all worthy applicants."

In 1829, the Grand Lodge declared the charters of all the recusant Lodges forfeited, and gave their numbers to loyal Lodges, but provided that by making amends they might be received into good standing and take the highest vacant numbers: none availed themselves of this permission. In 1831, King Solomon's Lodge, whose charter had been declared forfeited, and the title to its property vested in the Grand Lodge (but which still remained in its possession), was cited to appear at the next annual meeting to show cause why it should not be expelled and its members placed under the ban of the Grand Lodge. No notice was taken of this summons. In 1832, a new citation was ordered to be issued and sent by mail to the Master or first three officers. No sessions were held in 1833 or 1834, but on the last day of the session in 1835 a resolution was adopted, declaring the Lodge expelled.

About this time, however, there arose a feeling in the Lodge in favor of reconciliation with the Grand Lodge, especially among the younger members; but it was opposed by the older members. On January 5, 1837, an effort was made in the Lodge, which the Master favored, looking towards a settlement of the contest; but the Lodge adopted a resolution not to take any notice of the Grand Lodge: thereupon the Master and other members resigned their membership and petitioned the Grand Lodge for restoration, which was refused on the ground that no evidence was presented that the petitioners were Masons.

As Masonry began to revive there arose a general feeling throughout the State that the schism should be healed. The Brother, who offered the resolution expelling the Lodge, visited it on November 20, 1838, and urged a reconciliation. The Lodge met him in the same spirit, and adopted resolutions to the effect that the difference between the Lodge and the Grand Lodge was beneficial to neither, but injurious to the craft: that the Lodge sincerely desired reconciliation on honorable terms; and that when the Grand Lodge would rescind the resolution of 1835, the Lodge would "stand ready to effect a reconciliation, on such terms as may, in a spirit of mutual concession, be hereafter agreed upon by the parties." Two weeks previously, the Grand Lodge had directed the Grand Secretary to renumber the Lodges, and he proceeded to do so, giving "No. 1" to a Lodge at Augusta. At the session of the Grand Lodge in 1839, the matter was brought up, but the resolutions of the Lodge had been lost or mislaid. Representatives of the Lodge were in the city and it was resolved that they be admitted to seats; a committee was appointed to confer with them and they were introduced and the causes of the estrangement discussed: the committee was increased and directed to ascertain upon what terms a reconciliation could be effected: upon conferring together it was wisely concluded that it was "unnecessary to refer to the grounds of the difference," and the committee reported resolutions to the effect that the sentence of expulsion be removed, and that upon payment of dues and a sufficient apology, the Lodge be considered in good standing, all sentences against the Lodge or its members repealed,

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW JERSEY

GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW JERSEY SINCE 1908

Initiated in Enterprise Lodge, No. 48, Jersey City, N. J., July 12, 1886

Passed to Fellow Craft August 13, 1886. Raised to Master Mason September 17, 1886 and its representatives admitted to their seats in the Grand Lodge. The resolutions were adopted unanimously. The Master made the apology; and, thereupon, the Grand Lodge remitted all past dues (since 1825), gave the Lodge its old place at the head of the list, restored its old number, and gave its representatives all the privileges of members in attendance upon the Grand Communication.

Immediately the Institution began a prosperous growth: this received a severe check by the Civil War and the consequent depression of business, and also, more recently, by the multiplication of societies, partly imitating Masonry but exchanging its obligations of charity for business obligations. It also undertook enterprises of a charitable character, which, in consequence of the circumstances already alluded to, involved it in a debt that threatened disaster; but by efficient management and temporarily holding its sessions only biennially (omitting those in 1879 and 1881) it has freed itself from debt and has now (1908) under its jurisdiction 530 Lodges, with a total membership of 28,420. Masonic prosperity reigns in this jurisdiction.

NEW JERSEY.

The centennial celebration of this Grand Lodge was held January 25th, 1887. In the historical account then given by Henry R. Cannon, he says that there is no evidence that the Philadelphia Lodge of 1731 obtained its warrant from Daniel Coxe. Recent investigation only confirms the conclusion previously reached, that Coxe never exercised the authority granted to him, and that probably he was not in this country during the two years his commission was to be in force. A deed, in which his father, Dr. Daniel Coxe (known as the "Great Proprietor" in New Jersey), is named as a party, is on record in the Registry in Boston, but the land described in it has not been identified.

George Harrison was appointed Provincial Grand Master of New York, June 9, 1753, and was publicly installed by his predecessor on December 26, 1753. He granted a warrant for a Lodge at Newark May 13, 1761, the first in the State: it is still active, although it suspended work for nearly fifteen years between 1772 and 1787.

Jeremy Gridley, Provincial Grand Master of Massachusetts, granted warrants for a Lodge at Elizabethtown, June 24, 1762, and for a Lodge at Princeton, Dec. 27, 1763. Oliver Ellsworth, afterwards Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, was one of the charter members of the latter. Both of these Lodges ceased to exist before the close of the war of the Revolution, but it cannot be ascertained when, as their records have been lost. Also, American Union Lodge, an Army Lodge warranted by Grand Master Gridley, held a meeting at Morristown, famous by inaugurating the movement for a Grand Master of Masons for the United States.

A Lodge was established at Basking Ridge in 1767;<sup>1</sup> it is said, by the authority of Royal Arch Lodge of Philadelphia. In the list of Pennsylvania Lodges published in 1877 this is given as No. 10, but it is said the date of the charter is not known. It (that is, No. 10) does not seem to have been represented in the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania since the time when the preserved record of that Grand Body commenced, although it was in existence at the close of the war. If it was chartered by Royal Arch Lodge and not by the Grand Lodge, the question is raised whether the generally accepted theory as to the origin of the former is accurate, as a Lodge chartered by a Provincial Grand Lodge would not be likely to undertake to charter another Lodge.

Military Lodges in the "New Jersey Line" were chartered, one in 1781, and one in 1782, by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and one in 1782 by the Athol Provincial Grand Lodge of New York. When the army disbanded, these Lodges ceased to exist and their records have not been preserved.

Although Rev. Dr. Smith, Grand Secretary of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, in his letter to the Grand Master of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, dated October 17, 1780, says that "necessity alone can be a plea" for granting warrants for Lodges beyond the bounds of Pennsylvania, that was done freely and systematically, and apparently without doubt as to its right, although when Grand Master Coats challenged its right, it passed the matter over in silence. In the warrant creating this Grand Lodge, Ball was appointed Provincial Grand Master "in Pennsylvania aforesaid and the territories thereunto belonging:" the inscription, in the oldest Book of Records commencing in 1779, purporting to be written by William Moor Smith (son of Dr. Smith), Deputy Grand Secretary, calls it the Grand Lodge * * * "In Pennsylvania and the adjacent districts of America therewith united in Masonic jurisdiction:" when the Independent Grand Lodge was formed, it assumed the name of "The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and Masonic Jurisdiction thereunto belonging," and has retained it ever since. It would seem that the question of its right to establish Lodges out of Pennsylvania was never raised until it was done by Dr. Smith and Grand Master Coats, but that its right to do so was taken for granted.

It issued a warrant for a Lodge at Middleton, New Jersey, December 20, 1779, and it is said that at an Emergent Communication held in Burlington, New Jersey, March 27, 1781, it granted a warrant for a Lodge at that place; but the Pennsylvania record shows that the charter was granted at a Grand Lodge held in Philadelphia the day before, and that the Deputy Grand Master and Senior Grand Warden were requested to go to Burlington and install the officers of the new Lodge, and doubtless the "Emergent meeting" was held by those officers to constitute the Lodge and install its officers.

At the close of the war, the Lodges at Basking Ridge and Burlington were the only active Lodges in the State, and apparently the former continued to be active during the intervening three years before the organization of the Grand Lodge. If that Lodge was chartered by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, it seems to be unaccountable that it should be allowed to work, year after year, without being represented, or apparently in any manner noticing the Grand Lodge or being noticed by it. In the Sketch of Masonry in New Jersey by Joseph H. Hough, it is said that there is a reference (and the only one) to Basking Ridge Lodge, on the journal of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania at the meeting held March 26, 1781, as follows:

"Bro. Gray informed the Lodge, that he had seen the warrant of No. 10, in the possession of Dr. Blatchley. Ordered that the Grand Secretary be directed to write to him concerning it."

This is not found in the printed Proceedings, but if it is correct, it shows that Bro. Cannon's statement made more recently is erroneous, especially as in 1786 Ebenezer Blatchley described himself as "Junior Past Master of Lodge No. 10."

A similar entry was made June 12, 1786, in relation to the Lodge at Burlington:

the city of Burlington, No. 32, is in some person's hands in that place, and is made no use of.

"Ordered that the Sec'y be requested to write some brother residing in that place, requesting him to use his endeavors to find the same and transmit it to the Grand Lodge."

This, of course, indicates that the Lodge was then dormant: its minutes up to the close of 1783 have been preserved, and probably it then suspended work.

The proceedings to form the Grand Lodge of New Jersey were of a unique character. Pursuant to a notice, the origin of which is not known, but probably issued by Lodge No. 10, whose Officers seemed to be the leaders, a Convention of Masons resident in New Jersey was held at New Brunswick December 18, 1786, "for the purpose of establishing a Grand Lodge in the said State, when the following instrument was drawn up and unanimously agreed upon and signed by the members of said Convention."

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, IN AMERICA.

NEW BRUNSWICK, December 18th, 1786.

The underwritten, being Master Masons, as every of them find upon strict trial and due examination, and residing in the State of New Jersey, taking into consideration the propriety and necessity of forming a Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New Jersey, do hereby unanimously nominate and elect the following Master Masons to the several offices following, to wit:

(Then follow the names of the Grand Officers).

To continue in said several offices till the Anniversary of St. John the Evangelist, which will be in the year of Masonry, 1787, on which day the officers of the Grand Lodge shall be elected, or continue in office till others are elected, the said Grand Lodge and their successors to be a Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, to be called and known by the name of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, and to exercise the powers and duties of the Grand Lodge, in as full and ample a manner as any Grand Lodge in the world.

And we the underwritten, do hereby solemnly promise and engage to support the said Grand Lodge to the utmost of our power, and also to deliver up and cause to be delivered up to the said Grand Lodge, upon their being installed, all warrants and dispensations for Lodges in our possession under other jurisdictions, hereby authorizing the said Grand Lodge and their successors to form as well, rules and regulations for the government of the said Grand Lodge, as the By-Laws for the Lodges constituted by the said Grand Lodge and their successors, with the assistance of the representatives of the several Lodges under the jurisdiction of the said Grand Lodge. The By-Laws of every Lodge to be in all things the same; Provided always, that every Lodge shall have the privilege of appointing the time and place of their meeting.

This was signed by William McKissack, "Master of Lodge No. 10, as by the warrant constituting said Lodges and filled herewith will appear." Then under the heading "Members of said Lodge" follow the names of four officers, one Past Master, and then ten Members.

Then follow ten other names, hailing from various Lodges, one of them from the old Lodge at Newark: it was afterwards signed by a Past Master and the last officers of the Lodge at Burlington and others, seven in all. Still later, it was signed by sixteen others, among whom were Ebenezer Blatchley, Junior Past Master of Lodge No. 10, and the Masters and several members of an Army-Lodge, and three members of a Lodge in Pennsylvania, located near the State line.

In accordance with notice by the Grand Secretary, given by order of the Grand Master and published in the newspapers, the convention met January 30, 1787, when the Grand Lodge was organized by the installation of the Grand Officers. Dispensations were ordered to issue for Lodges at Newark, Bedminster, Elizabethtown, Morristown and Monmouth. At the next session, the Lodges were numbered, old No. 10 being made No. 1, and the others numbered by lot, thereby indicating that No. 10 was the only active Lodge and that the other four were warranted on the same day.

The Grand Lodge was immediately recognized by other Grand Lodges. It voted in 1790 against the proposition for a General Grand Lodge, and has maintained the same position ever since.

It grew and prospered, chartering many Lodges (one of them in Cincinnati—the only one out of the State) until the time of the Anti-masonic excitement, which not merely checked its growth but put out of existence many of its Lodges. When the reaction came, and as late as 1841, out of fifty-seven Lodges, only eight were active; of the others seven had been struck from the rolls, nine had surrendered their charters, and thirty-three had ceased work, retaining their warrants. In 1842, the active Lodges were renumbered, and there were but ten. Since then, however, it has prospered, and when it celebrated its centennial, it had on its roll 155 Lodges with a membership of nearly 12,500. Its records from its organization have been preserved: it has not missed an annual session, although it did not meet in 1847 in consequence of changing the time of meeting from November to January.

It is doubtful if a Grand Lodge, formed as this was, could now secure recognition; it will be noticed, however, that the idea that five Lodges are required in order to organize a Grand Lodge was recognized. One active Lodge and four dormant ones were represented, and warrants were at once granted to the whole five, upon the assumption that they were in fact regular Lodges.

Although the founders of the Grand Lodge hailed under different authorities, no question as to "Ancients" and "Moderns" seems ever to have arisen. In 1802, the Grand Master reported that there was great uniformity in the work. In 1822, Cross's system of work was recommended to the Lodges, and from 1825 to 1830, inclusive, except 1826, James Cushman was Grand Lecturer and taught the work he had learned from Cross. In 1859 the work, agreed upon at the Baltimore Convention of 1843, was formally adopted, and with slight variations has since continued to be used.

Joseph H. Hough was elected Deputy Grand Secretary in 1838 and re-elected annually till 1842; elected Grand Secretary in 1843, and filled that office continuously until his death, Dec. 15, 1890. In this jurisdiction in 1908 there were 184 Lodges, with 28,475 members.

NEW YORK.

New York was within the territory for which Daniel Coxe was appointed Provincial Grand Master by the Grand Lodge of England, June 5, 1730; but no claim is made that he ever exercised any authority therein. Richard Riggs was appointed by the same authority Provincial Grand Master for New York, November 15, 1737. No records of his administration have been preserved. In the Gazette during 1739 are notices of the meeting of "the Lodge," "by order of the Grand Master." He must have exercised his authority, but the notices indicate that only one Lodge, or it may be only a Provincial Grand Lodge, was formed.

Francis Geolet succeeded him in 1751, and held office two years; no details of his administration are known, except that he is said to have publicly installed his successor.

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW JERSEY
WORSHIPFUL MASTER ORIENTAL LODGE OF NEWARK, N. J. 1883-1891

George Harrison was appointed by the same authority June 9, 1753, and was installed December 26, 1753. He served eighteen years and granted warrants to a large number of Lodges, one in 1757 and one in 1760, in New York City; one in Albany, in 1765; one in Johnstown, in 1766; one in Albany, in 1768; one in New York, in 1769; and one in Poughkeepsie, in 1771. The first five are still in existence, and are now Nos. 1 to 5 inclusive on the roll of the Grand Lodge of New York. He also issued charters to three Lodges in Connecticut, two of which still exist, and one in Detroit. During his administration, the following Lodges existed in New York City: Temple (1758), Trinity (1767), Union (1767), King Solomon's (1767) and Hiram (1769). These, or the most of them, were probably established by him. No trace of any Lodge, created before his administration, has been preserved. Judging from the accounts in the public prints, the Provincial Grand Lodge held its annual meetings regularly during his administration.

Sir John Johnson succeeded Harrison: he received his deputation in 1767, but was not installed till 1771. He appointed Dr. Peter Middletown as his Deputy, who, after Johnson was obliged to seek the protection of the British Army, attended to the business of the office. Johnson chartered a Lodge at Schenectady in 1774, and, also through his Deputy, two military Lodges, one in 1775 and the other in 1776.

Up to this time, with perhaps a single exception, all the Lodges in New York were chartered under the authority of the Grand Lodge of England. The Irish Registry has No. 399, located in New York, dating from 1763; but no evidence has been found to show that it was ever organized.

But when the British Army took possession of New York City in 1776, the Lodges already existing in the City, as well as those in other parts of the State, ceased work except St. Patrick's at Johnstown, which continued active during the war; the Provincial Grand Lodge also ceased to meet. With the British army, came "Ancient" Masonry. Lodge No. 169, chartered in 1771, had been located in Boston, but in 1776 it was transferred to New York. No. 210 was chartered in 1779 and No. 212 in 1780 in New York: all three were "Ancient" Lodges. With these were several Army Lodges. No. 169, while not an Army Lodge by charter, was composed largely of persons connected with the Army. The representatives of these and three Army Lodges met January 23, 1781, and elected Grand Officers, and upon application of these, undoubtedly, a warrant was issued by the "Ancient" Grand Lodge, September 3, 1781, for a Provincial Grand Lodge in New York, with Rev. William Walter, as Provincial Grand Master. There was considerable delay in effecting the organization of the Provincial Grand Lodge, but it was accomplished December 15, 1782: the three Ancient Lodges above named, and six Army Lodges (one U. D.), took part in it. Four of the Army Lodges, including the Lodge U. D., were Ancient Lodges, and one was Scottish and one Irish. The record from the organization has been preserved. The Grand Lodge at first met monthly but after February 4, 1784, it met quarterly.

During 1783, it granted warrants for four military Lodges, one of them being the Lodge U. D., which participated in the formation of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and one of them being in the "Loyal American Regiment." On January 2, 1783, "after mature deliberation," it was resolved, that a modern Mason might be healed and admitted in the manner then determined, and the plan was recommended to the Lodges. At the next session, a petition was received from St. John's Lodge, "praying to become Ancient Masons:" it was voted to grant the prayer of the petition, and thereupon the Master and Wardens were admitted and initiated according to the form determined upon at the previous meeting. At a special meeting held the next week, a petition was presented from St. John's Lodge, "representing that they are Modern Masons and praying to become Ancient," and that a warrant be granted to them, having conformed to the regulations in that case made and provided": on the second of January, the petition was granted and the Master and Wardens installed. It seems that when the British took possession of New York, a part of the Lodge left and took the warrant with them: that the proceedings in the Provincial Grand Lodge were taken in behalf of those who remained: that after the war the Brethren returned bringing back the warrant: that they found the properties of the Lodge in possession of the other body known as St. John's Lodge No. 4: that, against strong opposition, they voted to unite with the other Lodge: that before the union was consummated, the Senior Warden obtained possession of the old warrant and withheld it for a time; but that on March 3, 1784, it was presented in the Grand Lodge, and, thereupon, the Lodge was received under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge and its representatives admitted to seats.

Two charters were granted, one of them in blank, which was placed in the hands of the Deputy Grand Master, with liberty to fill it with such names as he might deem proper. He had resigned and was about to leave the country, and this charter was given to him in order that he might establish a Lodge where he might fix his future residence: in 1785, it was returned to the Grand Lodge by Parr Lodge of Nova Scotia. An attempt was made in June, 1783, to remove No. 210 to Nova Scotia, but the Grand Lodge forbade the change, although apparently a majority of the members were about to go there to live. Army Lodge, No. 90, presented its warrant in the usual manner, and it was received and its officers admitted to seats in the Grand Lodge, August 5, 1783.

Upon the declaration of peace, a great change took place in the Grand Lodge. All the Grand Officers resigned, and their successors were elected and installed, nearly all of them being members of No. 169. All the Army Lodges went with the regiments to which they were attached, leaving as the subordinates of the Grand Lodge Nos. 169, 210, 212, 4 and 6. William Cock was elected and installed Grand Master, September 19, 1783.

It has been thought that the Grand Lodge of New York should date its independence from the installation of Grand Master Cock, inasmuch as from that time it exercised all the powers of a Grand Lodge. This is true, but it is also true, that the Provincial Grand Lodge from its origin exercised all the functions of a sovereign Grand Lodge; but all the while it recognized the Athol warrant as its authority: so when Cock became Grand Master, the warrant was left with him and he accepted it, after the matter was fully discussed in the Grand Lodge, and in February following it was unanimously voted that the Grand Officers be a committee "to determine the most eligible mode for the Grand Officers elect of the State of Connecticut obtaining a Grand warrant from the Grand Lodge of England." This shows that at that time a "Grand Warrant" was deemed necessary, and, of course, that the idea of independence was not then entertained: the English Lodges also still retained their old numbers and hailed from the English Registry. On February 5, 1784, Cock resigned as Grand Master, and Robert R. Livingston was unanimously elected in his place and installed by proxy; but at the meeting on the third of March, he attended and was installed in person, and proclaimed Grand Master.

Immediately upon his installation, the Master, Past Masters and Wardens presented the warrant of St. John's No. 2, "which was accepted accordingly:" its representatives took their seats and two of them were appointed Grand Officers. Union Lodge at Albany was one of the Lodges constituted by Harrison, and was, of course, a "Modern" Lodge. No record, up to the date of this meeting, is found of its transfer of its allegiance to the Provincial Grand Lodge. Livingston was its Master in 1771, and undoubtedly a member of it when elected Grand Master: he appointed a member of it Grand Treasurer.

On February 5, 1784, the Grand Stewards' Lodge was created, which was to meet monthly. At its meeting on March 27, 1784, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved nnaniously,—

First. That St. John's Lodge, No. 2, having surrendered their warrant to the Grand Lodge, the third inst. and agreed to conform to its regulations, be entitled to all the rights and privileges of members of said Grand Lodge, and take rank of all Lodges that may be constituted by the Grand Lodge after said surrender.

Second. That all other Lodges in the State, who were in the same situation as St. John's Lodge, No. 2, and who are willing to conform to the regulations of this Grand Lodge, be received in like manner as St. John's Lodge, No. 2, and be entitled to all the rights and privileges of other Lodges now in the City.

At the next meeting of the Grand Stewards' Lodge, the Representatives of Royal Arch Lodge appeared and surrendered its warrant, "praying a new warrant from this Lodge." A committee was appointed to visit the Lodge and "report on the propriety and regularity of their proceedings." The committee reported that they "found the members regular in their work and duly qualified," and recommended a renewal of the warrant, which was granted, June 2, 1784. The warrant of No. 5 (Army Lodge) had been deposited with the Grand Lodge, but upon the memorial of some of its members it seems to have been restored to them.

A Grand Lodge of Emergency was held June 23, 1784, Past Grand Master Cock presiding. Lodges Nos. 169, 210, 212, 4, 8 (new), 2, and 8 (old), were represented, and there were present representatives from Union, Masters, Solomon's, and "Lodge No. 1, held at Clarke's Town." These representatives "in behalf of their respective Lodges acknowledged the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge and were ordered to take their seats accordingly." It was also represented that the warrant of St. Patrick's Lodge had been carried off to Canada, and a new one was ordered to be issued "as soon as possible."

Thus were all the so-called "Modern" Lodges united under the jurisdiction of a Grand Lodge, which had its origin by virtue of a warrant from an "Ancient" Grand Lodge, and was still nominally an "Ancient" Provincial Grand Lodge; but when it elected a "Modern" Mason its Grand Master, it scarcely needed the adhesion of the "Modern" Lodges to show that all distinctions founded upon the terms "Ancient" and "Modern" had ceased to exist. At this time there were thirteen Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge, six "Modern," six "Ancient," and one (at Clarke's Town) whose origin does not appear.

But the question concerning the relations of the Grand Lodge with the Grand Lodge of England was not to be kept in abeyance. On November 29, 1786, the representative of No. 210 notified the Grand Stewards' Lodge that his Lodge had voted to pay no dues to the Grand Lodge of the State, owing to the "receipt of letters from the Grand Lodge of England requesting them to pay up their dues:" the matter was referred to the Grand Lodge, which voted December 6, 1786, "That no Lodge can exist in this State but under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge"—a brief but comprehensive and emphatic assertion of the doctrine of exclusive territorial jurisdiction. The Grand Lodge had previously recognized the same doctrine by refusing to charter a Lodge in New Jersey.

It had voted to have a procession on St. John's Day, 1786. But St. John's Lodge No. 2. adopted resolutions that it could not join in the procession, without surrendering its right of precedence. There were other resolutions, which are not given in the record, but which, the context shows, related to the status of the Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge voted that it did not intend, in prescribing the order of procession, "to infringe the rights of St. John's Lodge, or any other Lodge." It further ordered that at the next Grand Lodge, the Lodges should produce their warrants, or duly authenticated copies, "that the rank and precedence of the whole may then be determined:" and the second recommendation of St. John's Lodge was also referred to the next meeting. At the next meeting the arranging of the rank of the Lodges was further postponed: the other matter was fully discussed, and finally a Committee of nine was appointed "to consider the propriety of holding the Grand Lodge under the present warrant; and the proper measures to effect a change, if it should be thought constitutional and expedient;" and the Masters and Past Masters of the Lodges were authorized, if they thought proper, to meet with the Committee and confer with them on the subject.

The Committee made a brief report, June 6, 1787, which was not spread on the record, but was "read, accepted and confirmed." The report was a little uncertain: it was in effect that the Grand Lodge is established "according to the ancient and universal usages of Masonry," upon a Constitution formed by the representatives of the regular Lodges, convened under the Athol warrant; and that nothing was necessary or essential in the future proceeding of the Grand Lodge upon the subject matter, but to prepare a draft of "the style of warrant to be hereafter granted by the Grand Lodge: conformable to said Constitution." The same Committee was appointed to prepare the draft of the proper warrant. This was intended to be a declaration of the Independence of the Grand Lodge, which thus dates from June 6, 1787.

At the next session the Lodges were directed, as soon as the precedence of rank should be settled, to deliver up their old warrants and take new ones: the Grand Lodge divided upon this question, but there were "only two negatives," and by the order of the Grand Lodge their names are recorded. One of these was from 210, whose representatives at the next Grand Stewards' Lodge excused the delay in paying the dues of the Lodge because "they were in daily expectation to receive letters from England to solve some doubt about the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England over the Grand Lodge of this State." It was unanimously voted that they be allowed until the next Grand Lodge "to give their resolution respecting the supremacy of this Grand Lodge," "and no answer given by the time limited, their seat in the Grand Lodge would be vacated." At that time they appeared and "entreated indulgence until they received answers to letters which they had wrote the Grand Lodge of England respecting the authority of constitution, we having laid aside the Provincial Grand Warrant:" "after several learned debates," it was voted that they pay up their dues in twenty days and acknowledge the supremacy of this Grand Lodge; otherwise have their names erased from the books," and be reported accordingly. The conditions were not performed and the Lodge was suspended: but afterwards, its representative informed the Grand Stewards' Lodge that "they were determined in future to conform in every respect to the regulations of the Grand Lodge in this State, and had renounced every idea of foreign jurisdiction." thereupon at the next meeting of the Grand Lodge, the suspension was repealed and the rights of the Lodge restored.

About this time, the old Lodges took names, No. 169 being St. Andrew's; No. 210, Temple; and No. 212, Solomon's: those chartered by the Grand Lodge took names when chartered, in almost every case.

An application was made "by an old and worthy member" of St. John's Lodge, that the fraternity "attend his benefit play in their Masonic clothing, but it was voted that consent could not be given to the 'Brotherhood' attending the theatre in their Masonic clothing, or as a Society." Several cases of discipline came before the Grand Lodge, which acted upon the assumption that no Mason could be expelled by a Lodge unless the proceedings were confirmed by the Grand Lodge, or Grand Stewards' Lodge, which, under the constitution, was vested with many of the powers of the Grand Lodge.

In 1788, the Grand Secretary called attention to the necessity of an alteration in the seal of the Grand Lodge, as the word "Provincial" was inconsistent with the form of warrants, which the committee had prepared and was in use. He was directed to substitute "Grand Lodge of the State of New York" in place of the former inscription.

In 1788, a difficulty arose in No. 212, and its warrant was brought into the Grand Lodge and surrendered. At the same time a petition was presented by a part of the members for the renewal of the charter under the name of St. Patrick's Lodge No. 212. The warrant was granted upon the condition that the petitioners should pay the arrearages of dues of the old Lodge, but with the assurance that the Grand Lodge would consider the question of remitting the dues: this was done at the next session, and the dues remitted. Union Lodge was reported as in fact dissolved; but a committee was appointed to correspond with the members of it.

The idea that the warrant must be present in order to hold a Lodge was illustrated in the case of No. 210. The Master went away taking the warrant with him, but afterwards wrote to the Deputy Grand Master returning the warrant and giving his reasons for withholding it. The Deputy Grand Master had granted a temporary dispensation which had expired, but he had withheld the warrant and thought it necessary "that the Grand Lodge should now take some effectual measures for setting the disturbances which seemed to subsist in that Lodge." A petition was presented that the old warrant be cancelled and a new one issued to the petitioners: the Grand Lodge requested the Deputy Grand Master to issue a dispensation to the Senior Warden for holding the Lodge, to be in force for thirty days, and appointed the Masters of the other Lodges a committee to "convene the members in their Lodge room," inquire into the matter and report. The committee found the Lodge divided into two parties, without hope of reconciliation, and advised that the warrant be renewed to one of the parties. Both parties petitioned, and the committee endorsed one of them; after a long discussion a motion to dissolve the Lodge was carried "by a very large majority." A charter was then granted to the party headed by John Harrison for Jerusalem Lodge, with the rank that No. 210 had previously held, and a warrant was refused to the other party. Subsequently this party got possession of the old warrant of No. 169, and held a Lodge under it, but soon sent a communication to the Grand Lodge acknowledging the impropriety of their conduct, "praying forgiveness" therefor, and asking for a warrant. The Grand Lodge discussed the matter during two sessions, and the motion to grant a warrant "passed in the negative by a large majority," and the petitioners were given leave to withdraw.

Quite a contest took place over assigning the rank of the City Lodges, Nos. 5 and 212 voting in the negative upon almost every proposition, but the rank was fixed according to the dates of their original charter: St. John's No. 2 was awarded the first rank; Royal Arch Lodge, the second; No. 169, the third; No. 210, the fourth; No. 212, the fifth; St. John's No. 4, the sixth; Hiram No. 5, the seventh; and Holland Lodge (recently chartered) the eighth. At first these were regarded as merely fixing the order of precedence; but at the beginning of 1790, the Lodges are recorded with numbers corresponding to the rank assigned to them.

Livingston continued to be Grand Master till 1801, when he declined a re-election, having been appointed Minister to "the French Republic" and being about to depart on his embassy. During his administration a very large number of charters were granted for Lodges throughout the State, which were allowed to be represented in the Grand Lodge by proxies. Numerous calls for charity were made upon the Grand Lodge and in almost all cases met a favorable response: in one case two Algerine Brethren were relieved and given letters of credence.

But dissensions in some of the City Lodges disturbed the harmony of the craft. In some cases charters were granted, as the event showed, for Lodges that could not be sustained. Upon the whole the craft, during this period, increased in numbers and influence. St. John's Day was celebrated infrequently in comparison with other Grand jurisdictions: it was celebrated with a procession in 1785, 1789, 1793, and 1795. The Grand Lodge, with the Lodges, also joined in the procession in honor of Washington, December 31, 1799. In all these cases, in the order of procession places are assigned to Knights Templar "properly clothed," as escort; but no mention of Royal Arch Masons is made in any of them. Each Lodge formed separately, left in front, the junior Lodge heading the procession; in addition, at the funeral of Washington, one standard was borne by three Masons (walking in a triangle) on which was written "Faith, Hope, and Charity;" this was followed by another, borne in the same manner, inscribed "Wisdom, Strength, Beauty;" a brother followed with a standard inscribed with the name of Washington and appropriate sentiments and emblems: the Grand Secretary, carrying an Urn, walked under a dome, supported "by five columns on an equal square" with inscriptions, and carried by "four Masons of superior degree;" and the Grand Treasurer carried Incense in one hand and Flowers in the other. As early as this time there seemed to exist an objection to processions—a matter that, in the future, was to cause a serious trouble in the jurisdiction.

In 1789 a communication was received from three brethren, stating that they were the three officers of a Lodge working at Warwick, in Orange County, under the old warrant of St. John's Lodge No. 1 at Clarke's Town, and praying for a new warrant; the matter was referred to a Committee to report to the Grand Officers, who were authorized to grant the charter, if the report was favorable. This is the second mention of an old Lodge, whose history has not been traced; the fact that it was No. 1, while St. John's was No. 2, indicates that its warrant was granted by Harrison or his predecessor before the first of December, 1757.

The resolutions of the Grand Lodge of Georgia in favor of a "Federal Supreme Lodge" were presented and adopted. Perhaps this result was partly due to a previous visit of

Brother Robert R. Livingston

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW YORK, 1784-1801.

Master of Union Lodge of New York in 1771; an LL.D. and Chancellor of the Court of Equity of the State of New York for twenty-four years (1777-1801), when he resigned to become Minister to France; Member of the Continental Congress 1775-1777; Secretary of Foreign Affairs 1781-1783; Delegate to Congress, Philadelphia, 1784, and in 1788 Chairman of the Convention of New York that adopted the Constitution of the United States, 1789. While Chancellor he administered the oath of office as President to Brother General George Washington, in New York City. He died February 26, 1813, at the age of 63.

the Grand Master of Georgia, who, on June 24, 1789, visited the Grand Lodge, was received with Masonic Honors, and joined in the celebration of the day; he was given the post of honor in the procession next in rear of the Grand Master. In addition to the usual escort of the Grand Deacons, a body guard of Knights Templar marched on each side and in the rear.

By the usages, under what was regarded as settled law, the surrender of the warrant by the Master to any one of the Grand Officers, was a suspension of the functions of the Lodge. The warrant was entrusted to the Master, and he was held responsible for the proper use of it; therefore, when he found that the Lodge was not proceeding regularly, he surrendered it to some officer of the Grand Lodge, and the Lodge, not having it present, could do nothing: the charter was the tangible and visible emblem of authority, which must be present, or the Lodge could not be opened.

In 1790, the warrant of No. 6 was placed in the hands of the Deputy, and he concluded to retain it; and upon report being made to the Grand Lodge, the warrant was retained, and a dispensation for thirty days granted, pending an investigation. The matter resulted in the Grand Lodge ordering an admonition to be given to the Master and Lodge in the presence of the Masters and Wardens of the other Lodges. Two years later, the Grand Lodge was notified of the expulsion of the Master at the time, but it does not appear that the expulsion was confirmed by the Grand Lodge. In 1794, the Master reported "violent differences and unmasonic conduct of some of the members of the said Lodge," and the Grand Lodge again intervened: the warrant was placed in the hands of the Grand Secretary and a temporary dispensation issued. A complaint was made by "St. John's Mark Lodge" against the Master and Wardens of St. John's Lodge, which was referred to a committee of which DeWitt Clinton was chairman, whose report was favorable to the officers and, thereupon, the warrant was ordered to be restored.

A warrant was granted for a Lodge and issued, but the brother, to whom it was intrusted, not being satisfied with the character of the charter members, withheld it and the Grand Lodge recalled it. In another instance, the Deputy Grand Master reported that a Lodge lost its warrant, which prevented the Lodge from assembling, and he had granted a dispensation to continue until the decision of the Grand Lodge should be known: his action was approved.

Numerous cases happened, in which it was taken as a matter of course that a Lodge could not be held in the absence of the warrant. The order of the Grand Lodge, that all the Lodges should surrender their old warrants and take out new ones not having been complied with, it was voted in 1792 that no Lodge should be allowed a vote in the Grand Lodge, until the vote should be complied with. The Lodges at Albany and in its vicinity had not complied, and seemed unwilling to surrender their old warrants. A committee was appointed to confer with Masters' Lodge, but nothing was effected; finally the Deputy Grand Master went to Albany in 1797 and the matter was committed to him. He got Solomon's Lodge to surrender its charter and take a new one; but it was a year before Masters' Lodge complied with the order. Union Lodge hesitated at first, until its rank should be decided. It had two Provincial warrants, one dated February 26, 1765, and upon consideration, the Grand Lodge decided that it should take rank from that date; but even then it was not satisfied, and Clinton, who had personally visited it and endeavored to induce the members to surrender the old warrant and acknowledge the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge (as it had once done), had not been able to succeed, recommended that decisive measures be adopted by the Grand Lodge to assert and maintain its authority over the Lodge, but it was not until June 4, 1800, that the Grand Secretary was able to report that Union Lodge had acknowledged the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge and promised to surrender its warrants, three in number, and take a new warrant with rank from 1765: nevertheless it did not actually surrender its old charter till 1806. In New England, the surrender of the warrants was not required: it was regarded that the Lodges in the jurisdiction passed at once under the authority of the new Grand Lodge, so that, to this day, very many of the old Lodges are working under their original warrants. In other parts of the country, it is the custom to allow Lodges to retain their old warrants after endorsement by the new Grand Lodge.

In 1791, a letter was received from American Union Lodge and ordered to be spread upon the record. It is much to be regretted that this course was not taken generally. The record shows correspondence with the Grand Lodge of England and the American Grand Lodge which must have been of important character, but none of it on either side is spread upon the record. In March, 1800, two letters were received from the Grand Lodge of South Carolina, described as "letters of importance for Masonry," were "read by the chair," and referred to a committee to report as speedily as possible; at the next meeting the committee "made a report of the plan proposed by said Grand Lodge," and it was voted unanimously that the report be accepted and a "committee of seven appointed for the execution thereof," and the Deputy Grand Master, Grand Wardens, Grand Secretary and three other leading members of the Grand Lodge were appointed: no further hint of the matter is given, and there is no subsequent reference to it.

On June 5, 1793, it was voted that the Grand Lodge Cheque Word be continued for six months; and on December 3, 1794, it was mentioned that the Grand Cheque Word had continued in use for a longer time than was intended, and the Deputy Grand Master was requested to fix a new one and the method of disseminating it was provided. It is not again mentioned in the record, and no reason for its use is given.

On December 4, 1793, a resolution was adopted that every petition for a new Lodge must be recommended by the officers of the nearest Lodge: and in 1797, petitions were laid over and the petitioners informed that the reason was, that the Grand Lodge would not accept the recommendation of Lodges which have not made their returns and paid their dues to the Grand Lodge.

In 1793, a dispensation for six months was granted to some St. Domingo refugees, but it was not renewed, and the Grand Officers were authorized to issue Grand Lodge certificates to such of them as they might find deserving, but with power to withhold them at their discretion.

On March 6, 1793, the representative of Holland Lodge read a resolution of that Lodge "begging the Grand Lodge to come to some resolution regarding modern Masons, whether they may or may not be admitted into the Lodges under the Jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge after being hailed, and if they may, to determine the manner in which the hailing is to be conducted." The resolution was referred to a committee consisting of the Grand Officers and the Masters of the city Lodges, "who are authorized to bring any skillful brethren with them." This happened at the time when Lee was at work under his Quebec travelling warrant, and whether the one had any connection with the other can only be conjectured. No record is found of any report or of anything to indicate that the committee ever met. It is the only allusion to the subject found in the records during Livingston's administration.

In 1792, it was reported to the Grand Lodge that some clandestine Masons were meeting in the City and working under a travelling warrant from the Grand Lodge of Quebec. A list of them was obtained and a copy sent to each Lodge with orders not to suffer any of them to visit a Lodge. In 1795, "Bro. Lee and his associates" petitioned for a dispensation for the purpose of closing their business under the travelling warrant, and the Grand Lodge repealed the previous resolution and empowered the Grand Officers to heal the parties, and to grant them a dispensation to close their unfinished business, if, on examination, they should be found worthy. Subsequently the Junior Grand Warden reported that he had healed a number of persons made by Lee under the travelling warrant and granted them a dispensation which had then expired. Lee and others petitioned for a warrant for a Lodge and a dispensation for six months was issued. In 1797, it was reported that Edward Lee (presumably the same man) was working clandestinely, under a travelling warrant as he claimed, and this, upon investigation, being found true, the Grand Lodge voted to exclude him from all Masonic communication and notify the Lodges accordingly. He seemed to continue in his course, for complaint was made that certain Masons had associated with Lee "in the higher degrees of Masonry:" this was found to be true and the Grand Lodge excluded one "from all Masonic communication," and suspended others until the next meeting of the Grand Lodge, when they were reinstated.

On December 7, 1796, in response to a communication from the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, it was,

"Resolved and declared by this Grand Lodge, That no charter or dispensation for holding a Lodge of Masons, be ever granted to any persons or persons whatsoever, residing out of this State and within the jurisdiction of any other Grand Lodge."

In 1794 there arose a dissension in Jerusalem Lodge (originally No. 210), which became so violent, that a majority of the members voted to dissolve the Lodge. The Master notified the Deputy Grand Master that he intended to surrender the warrant, but he summoned the Lodge and held a meeting, the proceedings of which the Grand Lodge declared void, and required the surrender of the warrant: the result was that the Lodge was dissolved, and a warrant granted to each party for a new Lodge. The three old "Ancient" Lodges ultimately disappeared from the roll. No. 169, as St. Andrews No. 3, existed till 1827, when it surrendered its warrant. No. 212 became Solomon's Lodge, and was dissolved and a warrant granted to a part of its members for St. Patrick's Lodge, as already stated. This Lodge was dissatisfied at the action in establishing the precedence of Lodges, and apparently dwindled, and finally its warrant was surrendered. Later a dispensation was granted to a part of its members for a Lodge of the same name with a different number; but when a charter was granted, the new Lodge took the name of Temple, and in 1799 this charter was revoked.

In 1793, a dispensation was granted to sundry French brethren in the city. A difficulty arose among them which the Senior Grand Warden was enabled to settle, but as a part of the settlement, it was agreed that the degrees should be conferred on one man, and at the next session of the Grand Lodge he was introduced into the Grand Lodge and the degrees conferred on him therein, the work being done in the French language: a new dispensation was issued for six months. At its expiration, it was extended for a year, and on January 18, 1797, a charter was issued; but trouble immediately arose and the Lodge expelled a member who was its Master. The Grand Lodge submitted the matter to a Committee, which reported doubts as to the power of a Lodge to try its Master; that the dispute was "a mercantile difference," not proper for the investigation of the Lodge, and, if it were, that the evidence did not sustain the charges. The report of the Committee was accepted and the Master reinstated in all his rights: thereupon a committee of the Lodge returned the warrant to the Grand Secretary with a communication which was laid before the Grand Lodge. It held that a majority of the members of a Lodge may expel a member at pleasure, and every decision of a Grand Lodge contrary to this principle is an abuse of authority: it affirmed that its former action, expelling its Master, was a judgment that the Grand Lodge could not invalidate; and declared that the Lodge cannot enjoy its liberty under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of New York, and, therefore, they would return their New York warrant and take one under the Grand Lodge of France. The Grand Lodge voted that the warrant be restored to the Master, with power to assemble his Lodge in any convenient place; that the communication was anti-masonic, an insult to the Grand Lodge, and its sentiments subversive of Masonic government and destructive of the harmony of the Society; and that a committee ascertain who advised or agreed to the proceedings, and report to the next Grand Lodge. The Masters of the other Lodges were directed to attend the meeting of the Lodge (L'Unité Americaine) and report its proceedings. The committee reported the names of eleven, one of them an active member of the Grand Lodge, who appeared to have taken part in the proceedings, and they were ordered to appear at the next meeting to answer "certain charges which will then be exhibited to them."

But in the meantime action had been taken that gave a much graver aspect to this matter. At the session of the Grand Lodge held December 6, 1787, the Deputy Grand Master, who was presiding, read a letter from Huet Lachelle, styling himself "a Deputy Grand Master under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of France," requesting permission to visit the Grand Lodge in that character or in his private character as a Master Mason. The Deputy Grand Master at the same time said that he had ascertained that Lachelle had granted a warrant for a Lodge in New York City: undoubtedly it was issued to the former members of Lodge L'Unité Americaine.

The Grand Lodge appointed a committee to wait on Lachelle, and inform him that his conduct in granting the warrant was contrary to the rules of the Grand Lodge and an infringement of its rights, and that he could not be admitted unless he would pledge himself in writing to revoke the powers granted by him in that warrant. The committee reported that Lachelle admitted the granting of the warrant and persisted in having the right to grant them when and where he pleased, but would not show his authority, and would not revoke the warrant. At the next meeting the Grand Lodge prohibited Lachelle and his associates in his Lodge and the eleven members of the French Lodge (by name) from visiting or otherwise associating with any Lodge, until further action by the Grand Lodge. At the next meeting twenty-eight members of the old Lodge presented a memorial in which they pleaded ignorance of the forms of proceeding, and averred that they really supposed that they were acting upon Masonic law when they applied to Lachelle, and had no idea of giving offence to the Grand Lodge: but that upon reflection they were satisfied that in every distinct government there should be "a supreme Masonic authority from which each individual Lodge should exclusively derive its authority and

Brother Daniel D. Tompkins

FAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW YORK.

Initiated into Freemasonry February 3, 1800, in Hiram Lodge No. 72, at Mount Pleasant, Westchester Co., New York; elected Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge in 1804, and served till 1805, when he resigned. In 1820 he was elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, and re-elected in 1821. From 1807 to 1817 he was Governor of the State of New York. In 1816 he was elected Vice-President of the United States, retiring in 1825 in which year he died at the age of 51.

to which it should be accountable," and they pray for authority to meet as a Lodge under such officers as they should nominate.

The Grand Lodge adopted a preamble and resolution to the effect that "whereas the petition admits that the above persons have hitherto acted improperly, and also admits the exclusive jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge," it was resolved that they be admitted to Masonic Communication upon delivering up the Lachelle warrant and complying with such disposition of the papers and property of the Lodge as the committee should direct. The committee were also desired to inform Lachelle that his apology was not satisfactory, and to demand from him such apology as they might deem satisfactory. The active member of the Grand Lodge, who had been named as concerned in the matter, sent in a full denial, and his suspension was at once taken off. The result was that the Grand Lodge allowed the Master and the few with him to retain the old warrant and granted a dispensation to the other, and much more numerous, party for six months. At the end of this time a charter was granted for the new Lodge by the name of L' Union Française: soon after, the warrant for the old Lodge was surrendered. But the Grand Lodge had successfully vindicated its right to "exclusive jurisdiction" in the State as against a foreign Masonic authority, as it had previously vindicated its right of jurisdiction over "every Lodge in the State," including those chartered before it was organized—a doctrine which, very recently, has apparently been denied by it.

Col. Jacob Morton, who had been Deputy Grand Master and had really presided for several years in the sessions of the Grand Lodge, succeeded Livingston and served till 1806. DeWitt Clinton succeeded and served till 1820, when Daniel D. Tompkins was elected and served two years. Tompkins was nominated against Clinton in 1819, but the latter was then elected, and declined the following year; Tompkins also declined a second re-election. Morton was installed with great ceremony, and his brief address on the occasion is the first one preserved on the records; the Grand Master of Georgia was one of the guests. The Grand Lodge was received at the entrance of the building by a Lodge of Knights Templar, "dressed in the Insignias of their Order and with drawn swords, who conducted them into the Lodge and to their seats."

Perhaps it was in consequence of this that a resolution was introduced prohibiting the appearance of any Mason in the Grand Lodge, or in any procession thereof, without the appropriate badges of a Master Mason, and with any distinguishing clothing or ornament, save what the constitutions of the Grand Lodge or custom have conferred upon the degree of a Master Mason; but after consideration and full discussion it was rejected, only one Lodge voting in the affirmative.

During the time of service of these three Grand Masters, the number of Lodges was very largely increased and the growth of the Fraternity almost marvellous, with an apparent prosperity seldom equalled. There was, however, an increasing jealousy on the part of the country Lodges in relation to the overshadowing influence and control of the city Lodges. This was first voiced by Union, Masters' and Temple Lodges in Albany in a circular dated December 25, 1801, sent out by a joint committee calling a convention of the country Lodges to consider the removal of the Grand Lodge from New York to Albany, or the establishment of another Grand Lodge. The causes of complaint were that the representatives of only five Lodges make a quorum; that the proxy of a country Lodge must be a Master or Past Master in New York City; that if not so limited the attendance of the proxies would cause difficulty, delay and expense; that the city Masons had engrossed all the Grand Lodge offices; and that the dues were large and the system "unexampled in the former constitutions." To the circular, Apollo Lodge of Troy returned a spirited answer, and laid the whole matter before the Grand Lodge. It declared that as the Lodges were under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge, the only place in which the matter could properly be discussed was in the body of the Grand Lodge, wherein every Lodge is, or ought to be, properly represented; and a convention for the purpose proposed without a dispensation therefor, "would be irregular and an infringement upon the rights, dignity and privileges of the Grand Lodge and a breach of excellent constitutions and Masonic obligations;" and that moreover they could not perceive that the complaints would be at all remedied by removing the Grand Lodge from New York to Albany. The Grand Lodge adopted a similar view and directed the issue of a circular to the Lodges informing them of the impropriety of the proposed measure, and requesting them not to accede thereto. This seems to have put an end to the movement for the time, but it was destined to be renewed twenty years later with more serious results.

A system of visitation of Lodges was adopted in 1806. Tammany Society invited the Grand Lodge to join in a procession and ceremonies, apparently in relation to persons who had died on board the British prison ships, but finding no evidence that any Masonic brethren were among them, the Grand Lodge held that it was improper to accept the invitation. Complaint was made that a certain brother had made a key to the work for his own use, but a committee of the Grand Lodge having examined the matter and reported that without an explanation it was utterly impossible to ascertain its contents, and in their opinion what he had done was "consistent with the privileges and ancient usages of our Order," their report was adopted by the Grand Lodge. It was decided against the report of a committee that "stiffness in the knee" is not "such a defect as to disqualify a candidate;" also that a Past Master of a Lodge in another jurisdiction, although a member of a New York Lodge, is not a member of the Grand Lodge. Lodges were forbidden to publish expulsions; the use of distilled spirits in Lodge rooms at Lodge meetings was prohibited in 1816; and Lodge dues were declared to be contributed for charitable purposes and not to be diverted from the benevolent purposes for which they were intended.

In 1809 arrangements were made with the trustees of the New York Free School, by which fifty scholars were received into the school for the sum of three hundred dollars to be paid annually by the Grand Lodge; and this was continued for several years. In 1816 the Lodges were urged to pay $16.00 each towards furnishing clothing for the scholars: a committee had charge of the matter, visiting the school and reporting to the Grand Lodge. The dispensing of the charity of the Grand Lodge was given to the Grand Stewards' Lodge and later to a committee of that Body. For a time the proceedings of the Grand Stewards' Lodge are recorded with those of the Grand Lodge.

In connection with communications from the Grand Lodges of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, indicating similar action on their part, a resolution was adopted in 1813, prohibiting any Lodge from initiating any candidate until he should satisfy the Lodge whether he had made a previous application and been rejected; and, if it should appear that he had been rejected, then not till the Lodge should be satisfied that such rejection was not on account of any circumstance that ought to preclude him from the benefits of Masonry: this, of course, utterly ignored the doctrine of perpetual jurisdiction, and of any jurisdiction by the rejecting Lodge over rejected candidates.

Brother William H. Milnor

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW YORK

Initiated into Freemasonry in the Lodge of Strict Observance No. 91, of New York City, in June, passed and raised in July, 1846; Master of Holland Lodge from 1847 to 1849; elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge in 1850; died July 25, 1862.

In 1809 the contending parties in South Carolina sent communications to the Grand Lodge which were referred to a committee, but no report was then made. In 1814 another communication was received and referred to the Grand Officers, and at the next session, the Grand Master, DeWitt Clinton, made a report in relation to the Union in England as well as in South Carolina: the committee either did not fully comprehend the situation or else chose to ignore the existence of the revived Grand Lodge, for it assumed that the union had been made and that there was then only one Grand Lodge. It reported a resolution embodying an important principle of inter-Grand Lodge law:

Resolved, That all Freemasons, who are acknowledged as such by any of the Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, Ireland and South Carolina, shall be considered as legitimate Freemasons by the Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge.

In 1814 two sessions of the Grand Lodge were held for a unique purpose: New York was threatened by a British fleet; the citizens, under the direction of a "Committee of Defence," were erecting fortifications to repel the anticipated attack: the Grand Lodge voted to perform one day's labor on the fortifications at such time as should be assigned, earnestly requesting the Fraternity in general to co-operate, and appointed a committee of arrangements. On the day fixed (September 1) an emergent meeting of the Grand Lodge was held, Grand Master Clinton in the chair: the Grand Lodge was opened in a room at the City Hall, proceeded thence with the brethren of nineteen Lodges in grand procession to the fortifications, and "having labored diligently through the day, returned in like order to the City Hall, when the Grand Lodge retired to a room in the same and was duly closed." "The order of arrangements" is given: the brethren of the Lodges met at sunrise in the Park and formed at once, the brethren with their aprons and the officers with their jewels: they embarked on a steamboat, preserving their places as nearly as possible; on arriving they laid aside their Masonic clothing and proceeded to labor: when the work of the day was finished, at a signal from the Grand Lodge, the brethren re-clothed, formed in order, returned to the City, proceeded to the Park and were dismissed.

One of the Forts was called Fort Masonic, in recognition of this service of the craft; the Grand Lodge determined to contribute another day's labor to its completion, and on the nineteenth the Grand Lodge held a meeting and repeated what was done on the first and in the same manner. It is believed that there has been only one other instance in this Country in which a Grand Lodge has actually engaged in the work of operative Masonry, or work so nearly akin to it.

In 1819 the Lodges in the whole State were given numbers, with the effect of changing the numbers of several of the city Lodges: the Lodges had then increased to three hundred and twenty-three, an average increase of fifteen a year. After 1813 there were annually a large number of suspensions for non-payment of dues, indicating a too rapid growth.

It was decided that to admit the principle that it was necessary for a widow to send back to the State in which her husband had been made a Mason in order to obtain relief, was striking at the very root of Masonry; and that being necessitous and deserving, her claim was equally strong in every part of the world where Masonry was known and cultivated: also that pecuniary disputes cannot be the ground of Masonic proceedings, because if the Lodges assume cognizance of matters which the law commits to the civil tribunals, it cannot fail to excite a jealousy of Masonry which will inevitably render the craft odious; and the Lodge cannot compel attendance of witnesses, put them under oath nor compel them to testify, and therefore is unable to investigate such matters: also that the Master or majority of a Lodge, exercising due discretion, may refuse to admit a Mason, applying to visit.

As already stated, there was a jealousy on the part of the country Lodges towards the city Lodges, which were accused of controlling the Grand Lodge in their own interests and laying heavy burdens on the country Lodges: there was a feeling that the system of visitation by "Grand Visitors" was oppressive, and especially that the limitations upon representation by proxy were so effective as really to deprive many of the country Lodges of any representation. A convention of the Lodges in the western part of the State was held at Canandaigua, January 10, 1821, and amendments to the constitution proposed. The Grand Lodge adopted a resolution declaring in substance that the course pursued by the convention was improper and irregular, but requesting the Grand Master to change the system of visitation; the committee recommended a change of the law in relation to proxies, but the Grand Lodge rejected the recommendation. There was a project also for the Grand Lodge to build a "Grand Masonic Hall" in the City, and this undoubtedly had its effect. At the annual session in 1821, the representatives of the country Lodges were in the majority and amended the rules materially, reducing dues, allowing one proxy to represent five Lodges and a Past Master to be represented by another Past Master as his proxy, with the same limit as to number, providing for mileage and per diem for representatives of Lodges located more than ten miles from the city, except that the amount paid the representatives of any one Lodge should not exceed the Grand Lodge dues of such Lodge, and prohibiting the passage of any regulation affecting "the interests or obligations" of the country Lodges and the adoption of any amendment to the constitution at any other than the annual communication; the provision in relation to mileage and per diem was made applicable to the representatives at that session. At the session in 1822 the representation was very large, and of course the country Lodges again in the ascendant. Tompkins declined a re-election and Joseph Enos was unanimously elected Grand Master, the city Lodges making no contest, but Richard Hatfield, Elias Hicks and Cornelius Bogert of the city party were elected respectively Junior Grand Warden, Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer; the election of these was detrimental to the interests of the country party, as the event proved. A committee composed of members from different parts of the State was appointed to revise the constitution. Just before the Grand Lodge was closed, an amendment to the constitution was presented to be acted upon at the next session, providing for two Grand Lodges—one having jurisdiction over the city Lodges and such country Lodges as should choose to adhere to it, and the other having jurisdiction over the remaining Lodges: the brother presenting this belonged to the city party, which now saw that they were liable to have cause of grievance, instead of the other party. At a Quarterly Communication a regulation was adopted to prevent the issuing of blank proxies by Lodges, by requiring the proxy to be filled out in open Lodge and to have a certificate of the Master and Wardens attached. At the next annual session in 1823 there was a full attendance. A discussion arose on a motion to appoint a committee on credentials, and on an amendment proposed that the committee should be governed by the new regulations in relation to proxies. In the midst of an exciting debate the Grand Master adjourned the Grand Lodge until the next day. The representatives of thirty-one Lodges, with the Junior Grand Warden, Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer immediately repaired to another hall and reorganised the Grand Lodge: Grand Officers were elected, and the amendment to the constitution, providing for two Grand Lodges, unanimously adopted. The Grand Master elect declined and Martin Hoffman was elected in his place; the Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer were appointed a committee to employ counsel to defend any suits that might be instituted against them to recover property in their possession, belonging to the Grand Lodge. The other Grand Lodge met the next day and adopted the pending resolution without the amendment, and adjourned till the next day. The Grand Master, Deputy, Senior Grand Warden and one of the Grand Deacons adhered to this party. The next day the Grand Lodge met and the Grand Master sent a summons to the Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer to attend with the books, papers and property of the Grand Lodge, but they did not respond. The Grand Lodge proceeded to elect Grand Officers. The old Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer were again summoned to show cause why they should not be dealt with for contempt of the Grand Lodge, and not responding were suspended for ten years. Authority was given to the new officers to take the necessary legal proceedings to recover the books and property of the Grand Lodge. The City Grand Lodge immediately issued a circular giving a history of the proceedings, their reasons for their action, and a proposition for a settlement, by the formation of District Grand Lodges: no response was made to the proposition. In 1825, the Country Grand Lodge proposed to have two Grand Lodges in the State and divide the territory, giving the City Grand Lodge only New York, Long Island, Richmond and Westchester Counties; the City Grand Lodge rejected the proposition on account of the small territory proposed for it. The Country Grand Lodge met annually: it chartered very many Lodges, thirty in one year and over forty in the next. At the installation of its Grand Officers in 1825, DeWitt Clinton delivered an address, in which, while taking part with neither side, he urged with great force the duty of accomplishing a reunion. In 1826 a report on the subject of the secession of the city Lodges made and printed, was ordered to be suppressed, and members, who had received copies, were requested to return them to the Grand Secretary: a Committee of Conference was appointed, but later it was discharged, and the Grand Master, Stephen Van Rensselaer, and DeWitt Clinton were requested to receive any communications that might be made by the city Lodges, and consult them on all differences and report at the next session of the Grand Lodge. Nothing seems to have come from this, and a few days before the session of 1827 a meeting of members of the country Lodges was held and a committee appointed, which met the committee for the other body and agreed upon terms of union. The material ones were, that there should be one Grand Lodge located in New York City and to be deemed a continuation of the old Grand Lodge; all proceedings of both bodies to be confirmed and deemed regular: the Grand Master or Deputy to be chosen from the city and the other from the country; both Grand Wardens from the country and the Grand Secretary and Treasurer from the city: these articles, in practice, remain law to the present day. The articles were ratified by both Grand Lodges; and they met together the same evening at Tammany Hall, elected Grand Officers, adopted a new constitution, and fully completed the union. With the charters recently granted, the united Grand Lodge started out with five hundred Lodges on its roll. But the Grand Lodge, at the very moment when it seemed secure in its position of great influence, growth and usefulness, met a disaster as destructive in its effects, as it was sudden and unforeseen in its origin. This State was the birth-place of the Anti-Masonic excitement, and nowhere else did it rise with such unprecedented and bitter fury. The rapid growth of the Institution had not been a solid growth: men had evidently joined it out of curiosity and because it was popular, and these fell off the instant it became an object of attack. A demoralization almost amounting to a panic pervaded the time-serving Masons: on the other hand, the intolerant and causeless attack upon them aroused the interest and the firmness of others. They stood together all the more solidly, and insisted upon their rights. But before the storm was allayed another disaster followed. There had always been in New York City and its immediate vicinity, members of the Fraternity who were ambitious, wilful, impatient of restraint, disinclined to submit to superior authority, but, when possessing authority, arbitrary, apparently for the only purpose of showing their power. It had been the law that no Masonic procession could take place without permission from the proper Grand Officers; and there had been in the Grand Lodge a large number who, judging by their votes, were opposed to having Masonic processions except on very rare occasions: but still there was no prohibition in the Constitution of 1827, or the Regulations of the Grand Lodge. In 1837 York Lodge concluded to celebrate St. John's Day by a procession, oration and dinner, and invited other Lodges to join them, and three Lodges accepted the invitation. A Committee waited upon the Deputy Grand Master, who was a resident of the city, and the Grand Secretary, with the inquiry whether there was anything in the constitution prohibiting a procession on St. John's Day, without a dispensation. The answer was in the negative; whether the committee were informed that usage required such permission does not appear; the preparation for the celebration went on: but very late on the evening before the twenty-fourth of June, the Deputy Grand Master sent a notice to Henry C. Atwood, prohibiting the celebration. The prohibition at so late an hour seems inexcusable, as certainly the procession could do no harm; but Atwood was not a man to be suppressed so readily. He made no effort to stay the proceedings. The next morning the Deputy and Grand Secretary appeared at the hall of one of the Lodges and sent for Atwood; in response to their inquiry he denied the right of the Deputy to issue the edict, and insisted that, if he had the power, he had waived it by the answer he had given to the committee, and moreover the prohibition was exceedingly ill-timed. The celebration took place, some three hundred attending. A special session of the Grand Lodge was called and charges preferred against Atwood and Piatt, Past Master, who participated in the celebration. A motion was made to refer the matter to the Grand Stewards' Lodge, to which objection was made; it is claimed that the motion was twice defeated upon a division, but the Deputy Grand Master presiding insisted that there was some mistake, and put it a third time and declared it carried, although half a score declared that it was lost by six majority. Atwood and Piatt were summoned to appear before the Grand Stewards' Lodge to answer the charges. They declined to appear and were expelled, together with all the officers and members of York Lodge. They claim to have appealed to the Grand Lodge, but by grossly illegal proceedings, as they alleged, the appeal was prevented from coming before the Grand Lodge, which confirmed the proceedings of the Grand Stewards' Lodge. The parties thus expelled and others, including two Lodges subsequently also expelled, on September 12, 1837, organized "St. John's Grand Lodge" with nine constituent Lodges. This body met regularly until 1850, when, with great ceremony, St. John's Grand Lodge was merged in the regular

Grand Lodge. Its Lodges, twenty-seven in number, were put on the roll and their work recognized as regular; its Past Grand Officers were admitted as members of the Grand Lodge, with the same rank and upon an equality with its own Past Grand Officers. While other Grand Jurisdictions did not recognize St. John's Grand Lodge, nor justify the course its organizers had taken, they generally approved the settlement. But some of the impatient spirits soon grew restless and organized another revolt. Reuben H. Walworth was elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge in 1853: it was charged that he had at least wavered in anti-masonic times and said some things that required explanation: but he was regularly elected and installed. These malcontents seized upon his election as a pretext for revolt, and organized a Grand Lodge, or, as they said, revived St. John's Grand Lodge: while there is plenary evidence that Atwood aided and abetted it, he was not prominent. Robert B. Folger was the leading spirit: as chairman of a committee he prepared the pronouncement setting forth their grievances, all except the election of Walworth having existed when he and his associates, only three years before, gave in their adhesion to the Grand Lodge. In this "report" he declared that Atwood had nothing to do with the movement, but within the year Atwood figured nominally as Grand Master, although, judging by the style, Folger prepared the "Circular Letters" and addresses. It appears that at this time there were spurious Lodges in New York City, organized by Atwood under the authority of what he called a Supreme Council of the Scottish or some other Rite: these the Grand Lodge declared to be irregular Lodges and their initiates clandestine, and interdicted all Masonic communication with them.

Atwood and Folger and their associates were expelled, and their Lodges held as irregular and spurious. The body which they formed had a brief and precarious existence. In 1856, when negotiations were pending between the Grand Lodge of New York and the Phillips Grand Lodge, this body, through its committee, sent a communication to the other committees proposing another union, and a conference was had at which the committee of this body submitted propositions of a character that implied that the Grand Lodge must be so desirous of a union that it would permit the seceders to dictate terms to it; the propositions were summarily rejected and the negotiations came to an end.

"St. John's Grand Lodge" disappeared from view, and presumably it went out of existence in the latter part of 1856, for in 1857 Folger was restored by the Grand Lodge. The record in relation to it, is very brief: it notes the reception of his petition for restoration and its reference to the committee, the report of the committee recommending his restoration and the acceptance of that report. It does not appear whether the illegal body, which he was prominent in forming, had ceased to exist, or whether, in turn, he had seceded from that; inasmuch as many of his associates were afterwards restored, the presumption is that the body had ceased to exist.

The membership of Past Masters in the Grand Lodge was for many years a source of complaint. In 1848 the Grand Lodge adopted a regularly proposed amendment to the constitution, depriving all Past Masters except the Junior Past Master, of a vote in their own right in the Grand Lodge: it was retrospective as well as prospective in its operation. To become effective, it had to be adopted by a majority of the Lodges, or by a vote of the Grand Lodge at a subsequent annual session; this was sent out to the Lodges and, before the session in 1849, it was known that a majority of the Lodges had voted for its adoption: but the Past Masters insisted that under the landmarks they had an inherent right to vote in the Grand Lodge and they determined to maintain their rights. At an early hour, in large numbers, they entered the hall where the Grand Lodge was to meet, and took the best seats. The Lodge was opened by the Grand Master in the usual manner, and the Grand Secretary proceeded to call the roll, but, before doing so, announced the amendment to the constitution in relation to Past Masters having been adopted by a majority of the Lodges, and was a part of the constitution. The roll-call showed a great diminution in the number of representatives. When the Grand Master rose to read his address the confusion prevented him, until the proceedings of the Quarterly Communication were read and approved. At this point great disorder prevailed, in consequence of the Grand Master stating that the amendment had been adopted, inasmuch that there was an adjournment to the next day. Unfortunately the Grand Treasurer was on the side of the malcontents in sentiment, but was absent from the session of the Grand Lodge—a significant circumstance. The books, papers and money of the Grand Lodge were seized and violently carried off. It was also discovered that the seceders had got a lease of the hall, had broken into the office of the Grand Secretary, taken possession of that, and had control of the funds of the Grand Lodge by the action of the Grand Treasurer. Both bodies completed their organizations and the Grand Lodge expelled the principal actors after usual notice and summons. This brought about a schism which was deeply deplored, but the Grand Lodge was sustained by other Grand Lodges and the seceders denounced. This schismatic organization lasted until 1858, when, after several futile efforts, a union was effected. The article in relation to Past Masters was in effect to make the amendment prospective, leaving Past Masters anterior to 1849 unaffected thereby.

The deprivation of the franchise from Past Masters is attended by very serious conclusions, and while there may be a shade of justification, according to certain views of the matter, the injustice is so manifest that it may be safely assumed as the settled Masonic policy that such an amendment as that which occasioned so much discontent will never hereafter be made retrospective in its operations.

Since the union in 1858, the Grand Lodge of New York has grown and prospered. It has been vexed by the maintenance of a Lodge in its territory by the Grand Lodge of Hamburg. The matter was extensively discussed, as the question of exclusive jurisdiction was involved; but it has ceased to excite interest, for the Lodge has so far dropped out of view that it is not known whether it still exists.

This Grand Lodge adopted very stringent rules in regard to unaffiliated Masons, which, with other causes, occasioned for some time an annual decrease in its membership; but within a short time it had recovered itself and begun to make additions, with the prospect of continuing to do so. It erected a magnificent Masonic Temple, at great expense, and with a heavy debt. At the close of 1888 every dollar of this was paid, outstanding bonds cancelled, its treasury in good financial position, and at the present time (1910) this jurisdiction is in a most flourishing and prosperous condition.

One of the principal relics in the archives of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York is an autograph letter of Brother George Washington, and it is the earliest Masonic correspondence of Washington that is known to be extant. Its history is as follows:

Washington was well known in France as a Mason at this period (1782); and a Franco-American mercantile firm there, composed of Messrs. Watson and Cassoul, both of whom were Masons, wishing to send some testimony of respect to him, procured some nuns in a convent at Nantes to manufacture a Masonic sash and apron of the finest satin, wrought with gold and silver tissue, on which the French and American flags were conbined with various Masonic emblems beautifully delineated. They were executed in a superior and expensive style, and forwarded from France to Brother Washington, accompanied by the following letter. Brother Watson had known General Washington in America. He was the officer who had charge of the convoy of powder from Providence to the American camp when they were so destitute of that article before Boston:

"TO HIS EXCELLENCY GENERAL WASHINGTON, AMERICA:

"Most Illustrious and Respected Brother: In the moment when all Europe admire and feel the effects of your glorious efforts in support of American liberty, we hasten to offer for your acceptance a small pledge of our homage. Zealous lovers of liberty and its institutions, we have experienced the most refined joy in seeing our chief and brother stand forth in its defence, and in defence of a newborn nation of republicans.

"Your glorious career will not be confined to the protection of American liberty, but its ultimate effect will extend to the whole human family, since Providence has evidently selected you as an instrument in His hands to fulfil His eternal decrees.

"It is to you, therefore, the glorious orb of America, we presume to offer Masonic ornaments as an emblem of your virtues. May the Grand Architect of the universe be the guardian of your precious days, for the glory of the western hemisphere and the entire universe. Such are the vows of those who have the favor to be, by all the known numbers,

"Your affectionate brothers,

WATSON & CASSOUL.

"East of Nantes, 23d 1st month, 5782."

Washington replied to this letter as follows from his headquarters at Newburg:

STATE OF NEW YORK, August 10, 1782.

"Gentlemen: The Masonic ornaments which accompanied your brotherly address of the 23d of January last, though elegant in themselves, were rendered more valuable by the flattering sentiments and affectionate manner in which they were presented.

"If my endeavors to avert the evil with which the country was threatened by a deliberate plan of tyranny should be crowned with the success that is wished, the praise is due to the Grand Architect of the universe, who did not see fit to suffer His superstructure of justice to be subjected to the ambition of the princes of this world, or to the rod of oppression in the hands of any power upon earth.

"For your affectionate vows, permit me to be grateful, and offer mine for true brothers in all parts of the world, and to assure you of the sincerity with which I am

"Yours,

G. WASHINGTON.

"Messrs. Watson & Cassoul, East of Nantes."

The sash and apron to which it relates were often worn by Washington, and were after his death presented by his legation to Washington Lodge, No. 22, at Alexandria, Va., where they are still preserved.

This Grand Lodge leads all the American Grand Lodges in numerical strength. Its jurisdiction, in 1908, comprised 41 Districts with 779 Lodges, and a membership of 152,928. It takes also a high rank for the soundness of its policy, its adherence to ancient usages, and the broad views and ability of those entrusted with the administration of its affairs.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The title, which this Grand Lodge bore for many years, illustrates how readily the term "Ancient" was used, and that it often was used where it had no reference whatever to the distinction between the terms "Ancient" and "Modern" as applied to the Grand Lodges in England. This Grand Lodge used for many years the title "Grand Lodge of Ancient York Masons," while more recently its title is "Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons;" but the term "Ancient" in both cases must receive its general meaning, as no connection can be traced between this Grand Lodge and the "Ancient" English Grand Lodge. In Webb's Monitor of 1803 it is stated that the Grand Lodge was first constituted by virtue of a charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1771; this statement was repeated afterwards and quite generally taken as true, but recent investigation shows that it was erroneous.

The calendar of the Grand Lodge of England for 1756 shows a Lodge at Wilmington, North Carolina, ranking from 1754. According to Dr. Dove, Cornelius Harnett was appointed Provincial Grand Master for Virginia; in 1771 he had resided so long at Wilmington that he had become one of "the most prominent men of the day," and in 1775 he was placed at the head of the provincial government created by the "Congress of North Carolina;" while there is no evidence that he exercised his authority as Provincial Grand Master in North Carolina, it may well be believed that the institution of a Lodge at Wilmington, the place of his residence, was due to him. A Lodge was also established by the Grand Lodge of England at Halifax, August 21, 1767.

The Provincial Grand Lodge at Boston granted a warrant for a Lodge in Pitt County in North Carolina in 1766: the precise date cannot be given, as by direction of the Grand Lodge the issuing of warrants was recorded by the Grand Treasurer in his books, and those books have not been preserved: this Lodge was on the roll in 1766, and in 1767 made a return to the Grand Lodge. The Lodge is called the "First Lodge in Pitt County," and the return is up to June 24, 1767: the officers were Thomas Cooper, Master; Peter Blinn and Col. John Simpson, Wardens; Capt. Richard Evans, Treasurer; James Hall, Secretary; Thomas Hardy and James Hill, Stewards, pro tem.; and Richard Richardson, Tyler: the members were William Pratt, John Lesslie, Peter Richardson, Robert Newell, William Brown, John Barber, Robert Bignell, Lenington Lockhart, George Miller, Nathaniel Blinn, James Glasgow, Peter Johnson, Bolen Hall, William Kelley, George Evans, William McClellan and Col. Thomas Hall. The return states that it was forwarded by Thomas Cooper, the Master, who would give any further desired information.

On December 30, 1767, Thomas Cooper was appointed by Henry Price, Acting Provincial Grand Master after the death of Gridley, Deputy Grand Master for the Province of North Carolina, with power to congregate the Brethren there resident into one or more Lodges as he should think fit, or in other words to establish Lodges there. The Massachusetts records show no return made by him of anything done under this commission.

On January 14, 1771, Joseph Montfort was appointed Provincial Grand Master "of and for America." In 1812, Robert Williams, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina, said that he had had in his possession the charter granted by the Duke of Beaufort, "Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ancient York Masons," appointing Joseph Montfort, then of Halifax, North Carolina, Provincial Grand Master of America: and that several of the oldest Lodges in the State derived their authority under that warrant, among them Royal White Hart Lodge, No. 2, in the town of Halifax. The warrant had been preserved in the archives of that Lodge, but it afterwards came into the possession of the Grand Lodge, and at the centennial celebration in 1871 a copy was published. If Grand Secretary Williams meant that it was issued by the Grand Lodge in England calling itself "Ancient," he, of course, was in error, as the warrant was issued

BROTHER EDWARD M. L. EHLERS, 83°

The name of this distinguished craftsman whose best efforts have been given in promoting the well being of the Ancient and Honorable Fraternity in the State of New York for many years and whose ability in the office of Grand Secretary has been duly recognized by his long service in that office.

Brother Ehlers was born in Denmark on the 31st of January, 1810. His parents came to the United States in 1844. His early education was acquired in the public schools of New Jersey and at Bloomfield Institute. As the clouds of Civil war gathered we find his patriotism aroused, and he enlisted as a private in the Twelfth New York Militia, April 19th, 1861. Brother Ehlers was mustered out and received an honorable discharge August 5th, 1861.

The fascination of military life had, however, taken hold of him and we again find him in the service of his country as a Second Lieutenant in the 52d New York Volunteers. He was promoted First Lieutenant January 10th, 1862, and Captain January 16th, 1863. He was engaged in a number of hard fought battles and received serious wounds which caused his transfer to the Veteran Reserve Corps December 10th, 1863. He was brevetted a Colonel of Volunteers "for gallant and meritorious services at the battles of Fair Oaks, Gaines Mills, Peach Orchard, Savage Station, White Oak Bridge, Malvern Hill, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam and Fredericksburg, to date from March 13, 1865."

He was wounded at Antietam, disabling him for duty for a time. At the battle of Fredericksburg he received three gunshot wounds simultaneously. These placed him in the hospital at Washington where he came near losing his leg by amputation. January 1st, 1868, he was honorably discharged.

Brother Ehlers was "made a Mason" June 6th, passed June 20th, and raised July 18th, 1865, in Continental Lodge, No. 287, New York City. In 1869 he was Junior Warden, and presided in the East during 1870 and from 1874 to 1876. He was appointed by Grand Master James W. Husted as his Deputy in the 6th Masonic District during 1876. He filled the office of Grand Marshal during 1881 under appointment of Grand Master Horace S. Taylor. On the death of Dr. James M. Austin, Grand Secretary, December 2, 1881, Brother Ehlers was appointed to fill the office until the annual communication of Grand Lodge the following June, when he was permanently elected, filling the office ever since.

In Capitular Masonry Brother Ehlers became a member of Triune Chapter, No. 241, of Royal Arch Masons, advanced to the degree of Mark Master on the 11th of October, regularly passed the chair on the 22d of November, was received and acknowledged a Most Excellent Master on the same date, and exalted to the most sublime degree of the Royal Arch on the same evening, November 22d, 1870.

He served as King for two years, and as High Priest the same length of time. On December 10th, 1880, he dimitted and affiliated with Phoenix Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M. In Cryptic Masonry he was received and greeted a Royal and Select Master June 17th, 1871, in Adelphic Council, No. 7, R. & S. M. He was Deputy Master in 1881-82, and Thrice Illustrious Master during 1883-84.

In Chivalric Masonry Brother Ehlers was created and constituted a Companion of the Illustrious Order of the Red Cross June 12th; dubbed and created a Knight of the Temple June 26th, and made a Knight of Malta June 26th, 1871. He filled the office of Captain General from 1874 to 1877; Generalissimo from 1877 to 1879, and Eminent Commander from 1879 to 1881.

In the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite he received the several grades to the 32d degree on the 26th of September, 1873. He was Deputy Master of the Lodge of Perfection; Orator of the Council of Princes, and Master of the Rose Croix Chapter for seven years. He filled the office of First Lieutenant Commander in the Consistory for six years, and September 20th, 1881, was crowned a Sovereign Grand Inspector General of the 33d and last degree. He is one of the original members of Mecca Temple, organized in New York City, 1876.

Most Worshipful Edward M. b. Ehlers, 33°

GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW YORK SINCE 1881.

by the Grand Lodge which was called "Modern" by its adversaries. It is also to be remarked that White Hart Lodge at Halifax had been chartered some four years previously, and Williams was undoubtedly in error in his statement about that Lodge.

A military warrant was granted by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, according to its list recently published, but at what date and what became of it is not known.

The statement in Webb's Monitor of 1805 (and subsequent editions) that this Grand Lodge was first constituted by virtue of a charter from the Grand Lodge of Scotland in 1771, undoubtedly refers to the English warrant of the same year. Webb further says that the Grand Lodge convened occasionally at Newbern and Edenton, where the records were kept before the Revolution; when the British forces occupied that town, the records were destroyed and the meetings of the Grand Lodge were suspended. It did not again meet as Provincial Grand Lodge.

On December 9, 1787, a convention was held at Tarboro, for the purpose of organizing an Independent Grand Lodge. The following Lodges were represented: Unanimity, Edenton; St. John's No. 2, New Berne; Royal Edwiu, No. 4, Windsor; Royal White Hart, No. 403, Halifax; Royal William, No. 8, Winton; Union, Fayetteville; Blandford, in Bute County, and Old Cone, Salisbury: on the eleventh, the representatives from Kinston Lodge, No. 3, appeared: the delegates from Domock Lodge, No. 5, Warrenton, were refused admission on the ground that the Lodge was not properly constituted: a constitution was adopted and Grand Officers were elected and installed December 12, 1787, the true date of the organization of the independent Grand Lodge of North Carolina.

The names of these Lodges and the numbers which they then bore, give a clue to the origin of several of these Lodges; St. John at Wilmington (chartered in 1754) was not represented, but came immediately under the government of the Grand Lodge, and when the Lodges were numbered in 1791, became No. 1; Royal White Hart Lodge then retained its number 403, showing that it had been organized and was working under its original charter, and therefore, did not take a new one from Montfort, as has been supposed; it was his own Lodge, and so when he came to charter his first Lodge, St. John, at New Berne, he called it No. 2; the Lodge at Kinston (afterwards called St. John's) being No. 3, was the second Lodge chartered by Montfort; Royal Edwiu, No. 4, at Windsor, was the next; Domock, No. 5 (afterwards called Johnston Caswell), was the next; as Royal William, of Winton, was No. 8, there must have been two intervening Lodges chartered by Montfort.

When the Lodges were numbered in 1791, "agreeable to the claims of precedence from the different Lodges," they received numbers in the order above stated until Domock Lodge, No. 5, was reached; it would have been No. 6 if it had been "properly constituted," but presumably took a new charter by the name of Johnston Caswell Lodge and went to the foot of the list of the old Lodges, becoming No. 10: Royal William Lodge, which, from its old number, should have been No. 9, became No. 6, so that the two intervening Lodges must have then become extinct; the Lodge at Blandford in Bute County, which took part in the organization of the Grand Lodge, had disappeared from the roll in 1791. In the record of the organization of the Grand Lodge no numbers were given to Unanimity, Union (afterwards Phoenix) and Old Cone Lodges; this fact has led to the opinion that these Lodges were not chartered by Montfort, but from the numbers given to them in 1791, they must have been younger Lodges than Royal William, No. 8, and therefore chartered after the organization of the Provincial Grand Lodge and undoubtedly by it. Unanimity Lodge has a record commencing in 1778. Taking all the facts together, the better opinion seems to be that, with the exception of the two Lodges chartered directly by the Grand Lodge of England, the North Carolina Lodges in existence when the Grand Lodge was organized, were chartered by Montfort, or the Provincial Grand Lodge formed under his deputation: at any rate no evidence has as yet been given that any one came from any other source.

The Lodge in Pitt County, chartered by St. John's Grand Lodge in Boston, is not identified as one of the Lodges which formed the Grand Lodge. James Glasgow, one of its members in 1767, was one of the representatives of Kinston Lodge in the Convention and was chosen Grand Secretary. The indications are that the Pitt County Lodge had become extinct.

In 1803, this Grand Lodge had (according to Webb) thirty-three Lodges on its roll, including three in Tennessee; the first Lodge in Tennessee was at first named St. Tammany, but afterwards its name was changed to Harmony, which name it bears in Webb's list: in 1816, according to the same authority, it had forty-eight Lodges on its roll, and in 1818, fifty-two: but this includes the Tennessee Lodges which Webb still keeps in the North Carolina list: in 1818, one Mississippi Lodge is also included.

North Carolina claimed exclusive jurisdiction in Tennessee. In 1805 the Grand Lodge of Kentucky chartered a Lodge in Tennessee, then one of the United States. There was quite a controversy about it. The Grand Lodge of North Carolina claimed that, when it was formed in 1771, Tennessee was a part of North Carolina, and, therefore, that it then had exclusive jurisdiction therein. From an early date up to 1784, it is true that Tennessee was included in North Carolina and probably longer; but in 1789, North Carolina ceded it to the General Government, and in 1796 Tennessee was admitted into the Union as a State. Dr. Morris in his History holds that the claim of North Carolina to exclusive jurisdiction over Tennessee, after the latter was separated from the former, was not tenable; and the decisions in more recent cases sustain his position. However, the matter was argued with great ability on the part of North Carolina, and the Grand Lodge of Kentucky recalled the charter and recognized the exclusive jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina. In the discussion it was stated that in a convention in which delegates from Tennessee Lodges took part, the "Grand Lodge of North Carolina and Tennessee" was formed. This seems to have been an error: the Grand Lodge of North Carolina assumed that name in 1803 and retained it till about 1813, when the Grand Lodge of Tennessee was formed: it seems to have assumed it, and changed it without any formal action. In its claim, it also relied on the Massachusetts Resolutions of 1796, in relation to jurisdiction, which it had approved and adopted.

From 1813 forward, it grew steadily for many years; its growth was somewhat checked by the anti-masonic excitement, but not so greatly as in many other jurisdictions. In 1860 its Lodges numbered up to 209, of which 133 were borne on its roll, with a membership of about 7000; quite a number of the older Lodges had become dormant, but the oldest three were still alive. In 1866, the number of Masons in the State reached 12,000; the number then fell off slightly but continued to be over 11,000 till 1882; but this included the estimated number of members in Lodges not making returns, and the number of Masons, unaffiliated, either voluntarily or by the demise of their Lodges. In 1883 the Grand Secretary abandoned estimating resident Masons not members, and for that reason and the extinction of more Lodges the number was much reduced. Recent reports of this Grand Lodge state that the "wave of prosperity has not diminished, and it is now, numerically and morally, stronger than ever before." The returns for 1908 give 361 Lodges, with 18,008 in membership, as evidence of progress.

This Grand Lodge has engaged in a charitable enterprise of an important character. In 1842, it started out to establish an institution for the education of "the poor children of Masons throughout the State, and such others as the means of the Grand Lodge would allow:" in fifteen years (1857) by the most strenuous and persevering effort, it succeeded in the erection and completion of St. John's College." But full success was not yet attained: business depression and a consequent decrease of interest in the enterprise were soon followed by the civil war, and for years the enterprise seemed on the eve of failure; but the Grand Lodge persevered, and in 1872 "St. John's College" became an Asylum for the poor orphans of the State. While the change was a necessity, it seems that it was a good one, and that the Asylum is doing more good by relieving destitution and preventing suffering, than the College could possibly have accomplished. As it is, the State aids it: the benevolent of all opinions contribute to its support: the Grand Lodge not only furnishes means for maintaining it, but also takes an active interest in its management.

CONNECTICUT.

Masonry was first introduced into Connecticut from Massachusetts. St. John's Grand Lodge chartered Hiram Lodge at New Haven, August 12, 1750, with David Wooster as Master; a Lodge at New London, January 12, 1753, which ceased to exist before the formation of the Grand Lodge in 1789; St. John's Lodge at Middletown, February 4, 1754; St. John's at Hartford, late in 1762; Compass at Wallingford, April 28, 1769; St. Alban's at Guilford, July 10, 1771, which became dormant in 1776, and was revived May 17, 1797; and Union at Danbury, March 23, 1780.

George Harrison, Provincial Grand Master of New York, under the Grand Lodge of England, chartered St. John's Lodge in Fairfield (afterwards located at Bridgeport) in 1762; St. John's in Norwalk, May 23, 1763; Union Lodge at Greenwich, November 18, 1764; and St. John's, at Stratford, April 22, 1766.

Massachusetts Grand Lodge chartered Wooster Lodge, at Colchester, January 12, 1781; St. Paul's, at Litchfield, May 27, 1781, but the charter is dated June 21, 1781; King Hiram, at Derby, January 3, 1783; Montgomery, at Salisbury, March 5, 1783; Columbia, at Norwich, June 24, 1785; and Frederic, at Farmington, September 18, 1787. The issue of the charter to Montgomery Lodge was not noted on the Grand Lodge record, and when, in 1786, it was discovered that no record had been made of it, a committee was appointed "to inform themselves of the erection of a Lodge at Danbury by the name of Union and also of another at Salisbury by the name of Montgomery, whose time of creation and record of charter is not to be found in the Grand Lodge books;" but no report is found in the record.

The history of the organization of Union Lodge at Danbury is curious, and shows how little the division among the Massachusetts Masons was known beyond the limits of that State: the petition for that Lodge was addressed to Joseph Webb, then (January 5, 1780) Grand Master of Massachusetts Grand Lodge: it was recommended by Jonathan Hart, then Master of American Union Lodge, chartered by St. John's Grand Lodge and by the Lodges at Fairfield and Norwalk both chartered by Harrison, Provincial Grand Master of New York, under the old Grand Lodge of England; the petition was in some manner transferred to Rowe, Grand Master of St. John's Grand Lodge, who granted the charter March 23, 1780. The Master was installed April 19, 1780, but the Lodge held a special meeting April 13, 1780, to act upon the petition of Dr. Josiah Bartlett, in order that he might be initiated on the evening of the installation: Dr. Bartlett afterwards became a member of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, and was Grand Master of Massachusetts in 1797.

In addition to these, St. John's Grand Lodge put on its list Waterbury Lodge, in 1765: this Lodge was located at Waterbury in this State: its records have not been preserved, except its By-Laws adopted December 25, 1765, signed by fourteen members, among whom was Joel Clark, first Master of American Union Lodge; it is not known how long this Lodge existed, but it became extinct before 1789. There was also King Solomon's Lodge at Woodbury, which was not in the list of St. John's Grand Lodge nor mentioned in the record of Massachusetts Grand Lodge; the number given to this Lodge indicates that it was chartered between May 23, 1765, and April 22, 1766; these facts make it quite certain that this Lodge was also chartered by George Harrison, as well as those above named.

The celebrated American Union Lodge, chartered by St. John's Grand Lodge, February 15, 1776, was attached to a Connection Regiment: it maintained its organization, meeting wherever the regiment was stationed, until the close of the war, when it disbanded: but it was reorganized June 28, 1790, at Marietta, Ohio, as will be noted later; its old minutes have been preserved, and are published in the first volume of the Reprint of the Proceedings of this Grand Lodge. It admitted only persons connected with the Army: it celebrated St. John's Day, December 27, 1779, at Morristown, New Jersey; an address was delivered "by Rev. Dr. Baldwin, of the Connecticut Line"—undoubtedly Ashbel Baldwin, afterwards Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge; thirty-six officers and members of the Lodge were present and sixty-eight visitors, among whom were Washington and other distinguished officers of the American Army.

"General Conventions," composed of representatives of Lodges, were held prior to the formation of the Grand Lodge, the records of but few of which have been preserved. A "committee of thirteen Lodges" met, March 18, 1783, and called a "General Convention," which met on the last Tuesday of April, 1783: twelve Lodges (all then existing except Union of Greenwich) were represented; after the choice of a moderator and clerk, the credentials of the delegates and the charters and by-laws of the several Lodges were read, "and the convention proceeded to business." It "formed" three by-laws, to be adopted by all the Lodges in the State: the first fixed the initiation and other fees; the second provided that every candidate should stand proposed one month, and longer if any brother desired it, except in cases of emergency; and the third related to the admission of visitors: measures were taken to secure uniformity of work, and Jonathan Hart, who had been one of the charter members, Secretary, Senior Warden and Acting Master, and Master of American Union Lodge, was selected to visit the Lodges with that view: a committee of four was appointed "for the purpose pointed out in the third article of the resolves of the last General Convention;" the Convention adjourned to meet in September following. It met according to adjournment: an oration was delivered by Oliver Lewis, which was published: but the proceedings are not given in the Reprint. The arrangement was for the Convention to meet semi-annually, and there is little doubt that several meetings were held; but no record of them exists or has been published, so far as is known.

On May 14, 1789, a convention was held at Hartford, to consider the question of establishing a Grand Lodge: a committee was appointed to "prepare a systematic plan for forming a Grand Lodge" and lay the same before a convention to be held on the eighth of July following. The convention was held accordingly, and a "Constitution, Regulations and Ordinances were adopted for the government of the Grand Lodge," and Grand Officers elected, who entered at once upon the discharge of their official duties. July 8, 1789.

There had then been (including Waterbury Lodge) nineteen Lodges chartered in Connecticut. As already stated four had become dormant or dead: of the remaining fifteen, twelve were represented in the convention, and their representatives signed the Constitution: the three not represented were Union at Greenwich, St. John's at Norwalk, and King Hiram at Derby; but these three immediately gave in their adhesion, as a matter of course, and were represented in the Grand Lodge. For some reason not stated on the record, Union Lodge at Danbury, which had been represented in the convention of 1783, in that which organized the Grand Lodge, and in the Grand Lodge in 1791, refused or neglected to take out a new charter until October 18, 1797, when, having "formally acknowledged the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge and presented a request for a new charter," the Grand Secretary was directed to issue a new charter, but, as the Lodges had already been numbered, with the number (40) which it would have had if it had been an absolutely new Lodge. At the same session a charter was granted for a Lodge at Waterbury, but no mention is made of the old Lodge.

Nothing is found to indicate that any distinction between "Ancients" and "Modern" was recognized, or even known. Of the Lodges forming the Grand Lodge, eight came from the Grand Lodge of England, and four from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, through Provincial Grand Masters or Grand Lodges appointed by, or springing from them, Hiram Lodge at New Haven being the only one that found a place on the English list: or, taking all the Lodges in the State at that time, ten came from the old (not "Ancient") Grand Lodge of England, and five from the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Moreover, these lodges had met in convention, without discrimination, in 1783, over six years before the formation of the Grand Lodge.

On October 15, 1790, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Rt. Worshipful Grand Master, for the time being, issue new charters to all the regularly constituted Lodges in this State, upon their former charters being produced to him; which new charters being issued, as is provided in and by the Constitution, all such former charters may be returned by the Grand Secretary to the Lodges from which they were received (if required), being first registered, with such new charters, by the Grand Secretary in the records of this Lodge, and such register certified on the back of said former charter.

This method differs from all the three methods already described as adopted by other Grand Lodges. In accordance with this regulation, new charters were taken by all the Lodges, and in many instances the old charters were also returned to be held in the archives of the Lodge in order to show their origin, while the new charters issued were the only authority under which the Lodges could act.

It is understood that the early records of this Grand Lodge have not been preserved.

The "Reprint" contains only extracts evidently obtained from Circulars, previously to October, 1795. The Grand Lodge had met semi-annually, however, but in consequence of the loss of the records we have no account of its action at several of its sessions, and but meagre account of what transpired at the others.

In 1795 a regulation was adopted that in case a candidate applied to a Lodge other than the nearest, or one in the town in which he resided, the other Lodge must be notified and the question taken by ballot "in the same way as for the initiation of a candidate," whether "there are any real objections to his person or character," and the result transmitted to the Lodge to which the application was made; if the result was adverse to the applicant, he could not be admitted. This is believed to be the first regulation ever adopted in relation to the territorial jurisdictions of Lodges, and it will be perceived that it had for its object, not the benefit of the Lodge, but the prevention of the admission of unworthy candidates.

At the next session, a regulation was adopted that no initiate should be advanced in any other Lodge than the one in which he received the preceding degree, without the concurrence of such Lodge, signified by ballot "in the same way as for the admission of a candidate."

In 1796 the resolutions of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, in relation to exclusive jurisdiction, were approved and adopted. In 1779, on appeal, the decision of a Lodge was reversed and the party accused was "restored to all the privileges and rights of a Mason and member of said Lodge." In 1800, a resolution was adopted concurring in the action of Pennsylvania adverse to the formation of a Supreme Lodge as proposed by the Grand Lodge of South Carolina: the same action was taken in 1803, and again in 1808, when also action adverse to a triennial convention was taken.

In 1802 an attempt was made to revive Columbia Lodge, chartered by Massachusetts Grand Lodge in 1785, but after some discussion the petition was withdrawn. The Lodge, however, reorganized and proceeded to work; and in 1803 applied to be recognized by the Grand Lodge; but it was found that the Lodge worked only about a year after its organization in 1785, and then became dormant, and that the greatest part of its members, if not all, became charter members of another Lodge, constituted in the same town about ten years afterwards (1795); and that many of them had since withdrawn and undertaken to revive the old Lodge: the Grand Lodge decided that the Lodge had forfeited and voluntarily relinquished all right under the old charter; was defunct, and its charter null and void when the Lodge was formed, and could not be, and ought not ever to be, resuscitated; the Lodge, therefore, was declared irregular, and Lodges forbidden to admit any of its work, past or future. About the same time, the Grand Secretary published a circular warning the craft against two spurious Lodges, one in Middleton and one in New London: the chief promoter was said to be a person who had previously been declared to be an "impostor" and "arch deceiver" who had founded a spurious Lodge in Wallingford.

This Grand Lodge, very soon after its organization, adopted the system of fining Lodges for failure to be represented, unless excused for satisfactory reasons, and has continued that system to the present time; the result has been, that the representation of the Lodges at the communications of this Grand Lodge has been greater, in proportion to their number, than in any other American Grand Lodge. It grew steadily, and at times rapidly, until the Anti-Masonic excitement: the effect of that is first found (so far as the record discloses) in 1828, when, although there was a very full representation, the Grand Master declined a re-election, the Deputy declined "any office in the Grand Lodge," the Grand Master-elect and Deputy G. Master-elect declined to accept, and the Grand Lodge passed a resolution that it was inexpedient at that time to grant any new charters; the Deputy of the preceding year was finally elected Grand Master, and accepted. In 1829 the Grand Secretary reported a large and increasing delinquency of Lodges in making returns "on account of the prevailing excitement and panic now existing on the subject of Masonry," but still there was a very full representation of the Lodges: in 1831, the panic seems to have reached its height; every Grand Officer except the Grand Treasurer and Grand Tyler declined re-election, and so few Lodges were represented that the roll was not recorded: in 1832, the panic had ceased, and the Massachusetts Declaration was adopted by the Grand Lodge and signed by 1235 Masons. For a few years afterwards, the number of Lodges represented was comparatively small; many had surrendered their charters; others had become dormant: the Grand Lodge used lenient measures and soon the dormant Lodges began to revive, confidence was restored and the Institution commenced a new growth. Many charters, however, were revoked, and among them those of some of the Lodges which took part in the organization of the Grand Lodge.

Some useless Lodges were struck off, and the Grand Lodge started on a growth of prosperity which it has maintained up to the present time. There are now (1908) under this jurisdiction 110 Lodges, with a membership of 21,421.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

On June 24, 1735, a petition was presented to St. John's Grand Lodge in Boston, for a charter for a Lodge in Portsmouth, and it was granted. In the new charter granted by the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire in 1790, it is recited that the old charter was granted in 1736, by Robert Tomlinson by virtue of a deputation from the Grand Master of Masons in England; but Tomlinson did not receive his deputation till April 20, 1737, so there must be some error in the recital: the new charter also says that the "Lodge has continued from that time, in regular succession till the present day." There are no records extant earlier than 1739. Richards, writing in 1804, says that the charter was received and the Lodge constituted immediately on the appointment of Tomlinson in 1736: but the Lodge celebrated its Centennial Anniversary in 1837. For nearly ten years between 1778 and 1788, no election of Master was held, but the Lodge met occasionally: with that exception, the Lodge met regularly from as early as 1739. Among its earlier Masters were John Sullivan, Hall Jackson, Nathaniel Adams, Thomas Thompson, Clement Storer, Edward Jennings Long (the first six Grand Masters of the Grand Lodge) John Wentworth, Samuel Livermore and other leading men of their time, in the State.

On March 17, 1780, Massachusetts Grand Lodge granted a charter for St. Patrick's Lodge at Portsmouth: it continued active until the latter part of 1790, when it ceased work and soon became extinct, the most of its members joining St. John's Lodge.

A charter was granted by Massachusetts Grand Lodge, November 7, 1781, for a Lodge at Springfield, Vermont; the line between New Hampshire and Vermont was in dispute, and this town was in the "Debatable Land." The Lodge was actually held at Charlestown in New Hampshire until 1788: on the twenty-second of February of that year, members of the Lodge presented a petition to the Grand Lodge which voted that "that part of the prayer of the petition which requests an alteration in their charter could not consistently with propriety be granted:" but a charter was granted for Faithful Lodge at Charlestown, and the work already done was legalized. The old Lodge did not meet again in Charlestown, but at once moved over the line into Vermont.

Massachusetts Grand Lodge granted a charter March 5, 1784, for Rising Sun Lodge at Keene, and on December 18, 1788, a charter for Dartmouth Lodge at Hanover.

On the eighth of July, 1789, "deputies" from St. John's and Rising Sun Lodges met at Portsmouth, voted to establish a Grand Lodge, prescribed of whom it should be composed and when the quarterly communication should be held, elected a Grand Master, Secretary and Treasurer and adjourned. A second meeting was held July 16, 1789, at which three Lodges were represented: a seal was adopted and the price of charters, and the Grand Lodge dues, were fixed: a session was held and the Grand Master was installed by the Master of the oldest Lodge and the organization of the Grand Lodge completed April 8, 1790.

Massachusetts Grand Lodge, true to its repeated declaration, after this date declined to exercise jurisdiction over any Lodge in New Hampshire. The new Grand Lodge required the Lodges to surrender their old charters and take new ones. St. Patrick's Lodge was already near death's door and took no new charter, and soon became extinct. St. John's Lodge applied for a new charter and received one dated April 28, 1790. On the same day charters were granted for Federal Lodge at Dover and Columbia Lodge at Nottingham; the former was not taken out, and the grant lapsed, but a new one was granted October 24, 1792, which however was surrendered April 25, 1798. Columbia Lodge took out its charter but was not constituted till August 2, 1792. Rising Sun Lodge applied for and received a new charter, August 3, 1792, and as the Grand Lodge numbered the Lodges according to the date of the new charter, this Lodge became No. 3. Faithful Lodge did not take its new charter till April 30, 1800, and became No. 12; Dartmouth Lodge had but a brief existence and took no charter from the new Grand Lodge. In 1796, a charter was granted for a Lodge at Hanover, but no mention is made of the old Lodge.

Thus when the Grand Lodge was formed there were in the State five Lodges: three of them took part in the preliminary proceedings, and two of the three took new charters, while the third became extinct. One of the remaining Lodges took a new charter and the other dissolved before the organization of the Grand Lodge was completed. The date usually given for the organization of this Grand Lodge is July 8, 1789; but the installation of the Grand Master is now generally taken to be necessary for the organization of a Grand Lodge, and the date of that act is held to be the date on which the Grand Lodge is organized; so that the correct date for the organization of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire is April 8, 1790.

No record of any meeting in 1791 has been found, but with this exception the Grand Lodge met quarterly until 1814, since which time it has met annually in June.

In 1793, it was decided that a Lodge could be held only in the town named in the charter, and could not be held in territory not in the town at the time, although a part of the town when the Lodge was chartered. On April 26, 1797, the regulations of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in relation to exclusive jurisdiction were formally adopted by the Grand Lodge. On June 24, 1801, the Grand Officers were installed in public in St. John's church: the Grand Lodge opened in ample form in the hall, marched in procession with the Lodges to the church, and after the services returned to the hall and closed. On the twenty-second of July, 1801, Washington Lodge was constituted and its officers installed in public. The Grand Lodge met at a hall and opened in ample form; the officers of the new Lodge were summoned before the Grand Master, examined and found "to be Master Masons and well skilled in the mysteries of the craft and worthy of trust and confidence." The Grand Lodge then formed in procession and marched to the hall of the Lodge, which, with many visiting brethren, had already assembled: the Grand Lodge officers took the places of the Lodge officers, with those on their left. "All the Brethren retired except Masters and Past Masters of Lodges, while the new Master was bound and placed in King Solomon's chair." The Brethren returned, and after saluting the Master formed in procession and marched to the church, where the officers of the Lodge were invested with their jewels and the insignia of their respective offices "with pertinent charges respecting their use:" the Past Grand Master then delivered a charge to the Master, and the Grand Marshall proclaimed the constitution of the Lodge. In addition a discourse was delivered; the services were interspersed with music. The Grand Lodge and Lodge returned to their respective halls and closed. This description, condensed from that in the official record of the Grand Lodge, is given in order to show how "public installations" were conducted in those early days.

Thomas Thompson became Grand Master in 1801, and served seven years: his administration was of such character as to produce upon the Institution a marked effect which was felt for many years after he ceased to be Grand Master. He was strict and almost severe in enforcing obedience to law. During his administration the District Deputy system was adopted, and the duties of the Deputies were required to be so fully and faithfully performed, that every Lodge felt their influence. It is scarcely too much to say, that the rigid system of visitation by Deputies then inaugurated, did very much to carry the Grand Lodge through the Anti-Masonic excitement with so small a loss, as compared with neighboring jurisdictions, and to maintain the good condition of the Lodges down to the present time. A degree of looseness and disregard of law had crept in before his time, and milder efforts having failed to remedy the evil, a Lodge was formally impeached before the Grand Lodge; the regulations adopted on the occasion, the forms used, and the full proceedings are spread upon the record. At this distance of time, it seems as if individuals should have been disciplined instead of the Lodge, but probably the bad element was so large that the course taken was necessary. The charges in effect were; 1. That a Master had been chosen and had served for eleven months, who had never been Warden, although there were "good and sufficient Wardens to be found;" 2. That a few members, without the knowledge of the Master, had admitted and made a candidate, who had been "almost unanimously negatived and refused admission the evening preceding." 3. Making two candidates from the jurisdiction of other Lodges without inquiry of those Lodges as expressly required in the general regulations. 4. "Misconduct of some members of the Lodge, both in and out of the Lodge, causing evil reports and imputations on the whole body of the Lodge and of the whole craft throughout the State." The trial was conducted in a most impressive manner: the Lodge was found guilty of the charges by a unanimous vote on each charge. All then retired from the hall except the Grand Master, the Deputy and the Grand Wardens; after consultation they agreed upon a sentence. The members of the Grand Lodge were then called in, the sentence submitted to it and approved. Then the parties were called in, and the sentence announced, expelling the Lodge "from all privileges, immunities and rights as a Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons throughout the globe." A time was fixed for the Lodge to close up its affairs and until then it was allowed to meet for business purposes only: at the end of the time, an attempt was made to have a rehearing, and a dispensation was issued giving the Lodge the right to meet as before provided, but finally the petition was withdrawn and the charter returned to the Grand Lodge, which, by solemn vote, ordered the seal on the charter to be broken and the signatures to be "defaced." Perhaps the reason why the petition was not pressed, was that the Grand Master informed the Lodge explicitly that the Master, who had been elected without service as Warden, could never be recognized.

The Grand Master also appointed a special "Grand Deputation" to visit all the Lodges in the State, "to examine their books and records, inquire into their transactions, proceedings, and conduct as men and Masons, to communicate and give them instructions, and to do and perform whatever may be found beneficial for the craft, agreeably to the ancient customs of Masons and the rules and regulations of the Grand Lodge." The duty was performed and the reports, spread upon the record, show that it was performed "without partiality, favor or affection." While several of the Lodges were criticized quite freely, the most of them were reported to be in good condition; but one was found "in so distracted a situation as never to be able to gain a reputable standing among men or Masons," and the deputation, sitting as a Grand Lodge, required a surrender of the charter. This was done and the Grand Lodge in full session approved the action of the Deputation; the seal of the charter was broken and the signatures thereon were defaced. These two Lodges thus extinguished were Nos. 2 and 3, the latter being one of those which organized the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Master on finally retiring from office, being unable to attend the Grand Lodge, sent in a very forcible valedictory address, in which he besought his brethren to guard against innovations (particularly at that session, as attempts in that direction were then to be made), and at all times to remember that they "had sworn to maintain the ancient landmarks and constitutions of Masonry," and "that it is not in the power of any man or body of men to make alterations or innovations in Masonry." He cautioned them that the harmony theretofore prevailing was in danger of being "disturbed by the introduction of Royal Arch Masonry;" but he was especially severe against the "Knight Templars;" he declared that the effect of "these fanciful degrees" would be the "prejudice and neglect of true Masonry." He said that about forty years before (which would be about 1768), he passed through, in England, all the degrees then known in Masonry to his "great disappointment afterwards," and he gives as the result of his observation and experience "that the first and original degrees alone are universal Masonry."

Soon after 1800, Rev. George Richards, who had been Grand Secretary of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, became a member of this Grand Lodge, and was very active and effective in Masonic work. In 1804, he published the first American Edition of Preston's "Illustrations of Masonry," to which he added considerably; over two thousand copies were subscribed for, some Lodges apparently subscribing for a copy for every member, an edition was printed the same year at Alexandria, and from the fact that Richards had over eight hundred copies subscribed for in Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, it is probable that the Alexandria edition was also published by him, although it differs, in the number of pages which it contains, very materially from the Portsmouth edition. In 1806, "Letters of Masonic Credence" under the seal of the Grand Lodge, commending him as well skilled in the Prestonian Lectures, in all the degrees, and specially deputing him to receive, and enjoining him to give, all such information and instruction "as may tend to the improvement of the craft, abolishing the distinctions between ancient and modern Masons, in one uniform mode of lecturing and working." Later he read a "report on the state of Masonry in Connecticut, Pennsylvania," etc., for which he received the thanks of the Grand Lodge and a copy of which he was requested to deposit in the archives of the Grand Lodge.

In 1805, the Grand Lodge was incorporated, and a Committee was appointed to devise a plan by which the benefits of the incorporation might be also extended to the subordinate Lodges. A report was finally made, and after some discussion it was concluded that the Lodges could not derive any benefit from the act, and further consideration of it was dismissed.

From this time the Institution grew steadily until after the anti-Masonic excitement had gained considerable force; the special feature in the administration of its affairs was the faithful and effective service of the District Deputies, whose reports were spread upon the record. The anti-Masonic excitement was briefly referred to by the Grand Master in 1827; he referred to it as a thing of the past, and congratulated the Grand Lodge on the flourishing condition of the craft in the State and in the country. But the next year, on account of the excitement, he deemed it his duty to discuss the character of the Institution and notice one objection which had been made against it. The charge had been made that intemperance was the natural effect of their meeting; this he denied, saying, that few Lodges permitted even the use of ardent spirits at their meetings. The representation in the Grand Lodge was very full, but before the close of the year several Lodges ceased to meet, and others followed their example, so that in 1840, the Grand Lodge struck from the roll twenty-six Lodges, leaving twenty-two then in good standing; but this, as compared with other States, was a large proportion. In 1839, the statistics of forty-eight Lodges are given; of these, two had done no work since 1827; twenty-two, none since 1828; eight, none since 1829; four, none since 1830; three, none since 1831, while only four had done work the previous year; seven Lodges made their last return in 1828, and year by year others became dormant, until more than half had ceased to be active, and only fourteen were represented in Grand Lodge.

One of the Lodges, in 1835, voted to dissolve, and to divide the funds among the members, one of whom sued the Treasurer for his share; but the court decided that the funds of the Lodge were held in trust by it for charitable purposes; that the vote to divide them among the members was null and void; that the dissolution of the Lodge made no difference, as the court would appoint a trustee to administer the trust; and that the funds, including those already divided, were still holden to be applied for charitable purposes, and upon proper proceedings instituted for the purpose, such disposition of them would be enforced. It is quite certain that, if the relations of the Grand Lodge to its Lodges had been shown to the court, it would have been held that, upon the dissolution of the Lodge, the Grand Lodge becomes the trustee and entitled to the possession of the funds to be held in trust by it for the same charitable purposes for which they were held by the Lodge. In 1841, the dormant Lodges began to be revived, and the active Lodges began to receive applications for initiation and for membership; in 1842, the Grand Master was requested to visit, in person or by Deputy, the delinquent Lodges, thirty-one in number, with the view of reviving those worth reviving and closing up those whose cases should be deemed hopeless. Very few charters were restored, however, and the growth was slow. In most cases in which a Lodge was subsequently called for in a place where an old Lodge had existed, the Grand Lodge granted a new charter instead of restoring the old one; still a few were restored, some of them several years after they were declared forfeited.

The membership has increased, and the Grand Lodge maintains its high reputation for prosperous growth, adherence to old usages, exemplary administration of its affairs and important work. There are at this time (1908) under its jurisdiction seventy-nine Lodges, with 9,727 members.

RHODE ISLAND.

Thomas Oxnard, Provincial Grand Master at Boston, on December 24, 1749, granted a charter for a Lodge at Newport with Caleb Phillips as Master. This was the introduction of Masonry into that State so far as we have any tangible evidence. There is a tradition that Masonry had been practiced there at an earlier date, and the house is still shown in which, according to tradition for very many years, the Masons used to meet; while it is probable that there was a foundation for the tradition even that gives no details. In 1759, it was found that the Master Masons at Newport were conferring the Master's degree; Jeremy Gridley, then Provincial Grand Master, on March 20, 1759, issued a warrant for a Masters' Lodge there, with John Mawdsley as Master, and confirming the work that had already been done, reciting that the parties engaged in it did not think "but they had authority to do so;" indications point to the conclusion, that the Lodge already existing received this warrant as granting to it additional powers, and that two separate organizations were not maintained.

Gridley had, on January 18, 1757, issued a warrant for a Lodge at Providence, with Captain John Burgess as Master. There are no records of any meetings from July, 1764, to December, 1768; after June 7, 1769, it became dormant, and was revived by a warrant from Grand Master Rowe, dated July 15, 1778.

The Grand Lodge was formed in a peculiar manner. There were in 1790 but two Lodges in the State, the one at Newport, and the one at Providence. In that year, the Lodge at Newport submitted to the other Lodge "A plan for constituting a Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations within the United States of America." It was a constitution (as the word is now used) for a Grand Lodge. A committee of the Providence Lodge amended it in some particulars and signed a report, approving it, December 16, 1790. The committee of the other Lodge accepted it as amended: the Newport Lodge adopted it March 14, 1791, and the Providence Lodge, April 6, 1791. This plan provided for electing one half of the Grand Officers and two honorary members from each Lodge: these each Lodge proceeded to elect, the Newport Lodge having the Grand Master.

The constitution provided that the Grand Lodge should meet alternately at Newport and Providence on the twenty-fourth of June annually, except when that day should fall on Saturday or Sunday, when the day should be fixed by the Lodge at the place of meeting. On June 27, 1791, the Grand Lodge met at the State House in Newport; the Master of the oldest Lodge (Newport) installed the Grand Officers. Immediately after the installation, the Grand Lodge formed in procession and marched to Trinity Church, where a discourse was delivered and a collection taken up, the proceeds of which were ordered "to be invested into wood and distributed to the poor of this town the ensuing winter."

The Grand Lodge returned to the State House and opened for business, which was brief and of a merely routine character: the Grand Lodge then closed and the brethren dined together. The names of all the members of the two Lodges are given in the printed record, and thereafter annually for many years the names of those admitted are given, so that the Grand Lodge record gives the names of all who became members of the subordinate Lodges.

Newport Lodge returned one hundred and thirteen members, among whom were Moses M. Hays, then Grand Master of Massachusetts Grand Lodge, John Mawdsley, the first Master of the Masters' Lodge at Newport, and Moses Seixas, who was one of the leaders in the movement to organize the Grand Lodge. Providence Lodge returned one hundred and twenty-one members, among whom was Jabez Bowen, to whom Gridley granted the warrant reviving Providence Lodge.

In 1792, the Grand Master was requested to issue "certificates to the two deputed Lodges in this State, expressive of the powers wherewith they are vested and their subordination to the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge." In both Lodges a separate vote was taken upon the admission, as members, of those who had received the degrees in the Lodge: Entered Apprentices were apparently not eligible to membership, but Fellow Crafts were.

For many years the Grand Lodge met and celebrated the day with a procession, a discourse and a dinner, and did but little more, as affairs in the jurisdiction were requiring no particular attention from it: the membership of the two Lodges increased, that of Providence Lodge the most rapidly. A brief "Masonic Burial Office" for services at the grave was adopted in 1797.

New Lodges were created only by vote of the Grand Lodge, and generally were required to work under dispensation for several years before a charter was granted. Charters were granted to Washington Lodge, in Warren, in 1796; to Mt. Vernon Lodge in Providence, and Washington Lodge at South Kingston, in 1799; to St. Albans Lodge at Bristol, in 1802; to Friendship Lodge at Gloucester and Mt. Moriah Lodge at Smithfield, in 1805; to Harmony Lodge at Pawtuxet and Union Lodge at Pawtucket in 1808; and to King Solomon's Lodge at East Greenwich and Manchester Lodge at Coventry in 1810. Lodges, to which dispensations were issued by vote of the Grand Lodge, were allowed representation in the Grand Lodge before they were chartered. In 1800, it was ordered that the Lodges be numbered according to the date of their warrants. In consequence some Lodges, which received dispensations before other Lodges received theirs, nevertheless received later numbers.

All these Lodges, with perhaps one exception, were constituted and their officers installed in public by the Grand Lodge; the Washington Lodges in 1799, and the last two in 1810: the possible exception is Mt. Vernon Lodge, no account of whose constitution is found in the printed record: its officers, however, were installed in public by the Grand Lodge at its Annual Communication in 1803. The Grand Master was unable to be present at the constitution of Harmony Lodge in 1808, and Thomas Smith Webb, Past Grand Warden, as his special Deputy, opened the Grand Lodge and performed the services.

In 1800 the Grand Lodge established the territorial jurisdiction of Lodges by forbidding the reception of a petition from one residing nearer another Lodge, without the recommendation of such Lodge.

In 1791 the Grand Lodge appointed a representative to attend a convention to form a Supreme Grand Lodge, and in 1793 renewed the appointment; but in 1802 voted against forming such a Body, but in favor of a convention for the purpose of adopting a uniform mode of working and such general regulations as might be deemed expedient and proper.

In 1800 Thomas Smith Webb became a member of St. John's Lodge in Providence, and attended the Grand Lodge in 1801: he was at once called to serve on committees, among them one to revise the constitution. He acted as Grand Secretary pro tem. at special meetings during the year, and at the next session was elected Junior Grand Warden; in 1803 and in 1804 he was Senior Grand Warden, and in 1805 the two years' limitation for holding that office was repealed and he was re-elected, but declined to accept. The original constitution limited the offices of Grand Master and Deputy Grand Master to Past Masters of Rhode Island Lodges, and under this clause Webb was not eligible to either of those two offices. In 1808 the constitution was revised, and any one "who had sustained the office of Master in some regularly constituted Lodge" became eligible to those offices: the same change was made in relation to the Past Masters, members of Lodges in that jurisdiction, who became members of the Grand Lodge.

After 1805, Webb continued to attend the Grand Lodge and serve on important committees and in the places of absent Grand Officers till 1811, when, being a Past Master of Temple Lodge in Albany, he was elected Deputy Grand Master, re-elected in 1812, elected Grand Master in 1813 and 1814, and declined a re-election in 1815. In the vote of thanks, the Grand Lodge included "for the great and signal services he has rendered to Freemasons in general and particularly to it in this State." He had published an edition of his Monitor in 1797, before he came to Providence, and when elected Grand Master he had published four additional editions: two others, with different varieties of each, were published in his lifetime. He died suddenly of apoplexy, in July, 1819, at Cleveland, Ohio, on his way to visit his daughter. His body was removed to Providence, at the expense of the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter, and the other Masonic Bodies in Providence, and re-interred by the Grand Lodge, November 8, 1819. Within a few years, the Grand Lodge has taken measures to obtain the means for erecting a suitable monument to his memory.

As the constitution of 1808 was prepared by a committee of which Webb was chairman, and was undoubtedly his work, a statement of some of its more important features is given as bearing upon the history of the Institution. In its preamble, the power and character of the Grand Lodge are thus stated.

"Every Grand Lodge has an inherent power and authority to make local ordinances and new regulations for their own benefit and the good of Masonry in general; provided always, that the ancient landmarks be carefully preserved. This hath never been disputed, for Grand Lodges are the true representatives of all the Fraternity, with legislative authority in their respective jurisdictions."

In the Grand Lodge, in the absence of any Grand Officer, the Grand Officer next in rank succeeded to his place, and in the absence of all, "the members, according to seniority and abilities, shall fill the vacant offices." "And the same rule shall be observed in all Lodges under its jurisdiction." Officers and members of the Grand Lodge could appoint proxies, but the proxy of an officer of a Lodge must be a member of the same Lodge.

The Grand Lodge, by a two-thirds vote, could authorize the Grand Master to issue a dispensation for a new Lodge, to which the Grand Lodge might grant a charter or not as it should determine; but no charter could be delivered to a Lodge until it was constituted.

No one could be made a Mason at the same meeting at which he was proposed, and "from this rule no dispensation shall be allowed." Rejected candidates could not be received by another Lodge without the unanimous recommendation of the rejected Lodge: but no recommendation could be granted or moved "in favor of a candidate who has been rejected by more than two votes."

Quarterly communications were held under the new constitution, in addition to the annual communication, which was for the choice and installation of Grand Officers and the Feast: no other business, unless urgent, could be transacted, "in order that nothing may occur to interrupt the harmony and tranquillity of the brethren at the anniversary festival." Later this was changed and only semi-annual, annual, and Festival communications are now held.

In 1811, a petition was presented for a Lodge on the Island of St. Bartholomew: but the Grand Lodge determined that it did not have sufficient information, and directed inquiry to be made if there was a Lodge in the Island, and if so, under what authority it was held, and if there was a Grand Lodge in the Kingdom of Sweden. This action recognized the doctrine of territorial jurisdiction.

It was decided by the Grand Lodge, upon a report made by Webb, that, according to ancient usage, the Master of a Lodge can be installed only by the Grand Master, the Deputy, the Past Master or a Past Master thereunto specially authorized by the Grand Master or the Deputy.

A dissension in Newport seriously disturbed the Grand Lodge in 1816. A new Lodge had been chartered which undertook to meet in the same hall with the old Lodge. A disagreement between the Lodges arose, and the Grand Lodge sent a committee to endeavor to harmonize them. The committee reported an adjustment which they supposed was agreed to by both parties. There were two parties in St. John's Lodge, and one of them carried a vote in the Lodge to exclude the other Lodge from the hall. The new Lodge soon surrendered its charter. In the meantime, the Grand Lodge had reversed the proceedings of the Lodge in expelling two members from membership and reinstated them: and had also declared the election of officers void and ordered another. The malcontents robbed the hall of the charter, records, jewels, and other property of the Lodge, declared themselves a Lodge independent of the Grand Lodge, and published their declaration in the public newspapers. The Lodge, however, elected officers, who were installed by the Grand Master who was presiding. It then expelled eight of the principal men engaged in the revolt, and the Grand Lodge confirmed its action. The spurious Lodge met at a tavern and undertook to act as a regular Lodge. They were denounced as impostors, and the public warned against them. They, in their turn, sued the Grand Master and Grand Secretary for slander in several suits, claiming over $20,000 damages: the Grand Lodge assumed the defence. The other party even threatened to sue clergymen if they should officiate as Grand Chaplains, but the Grand Lodge promptly voted to indemnify them, and the clergymen paid no heed to the threats. The Grand Lodge accepted an invitation to lay the corner stone of a public building at Newport and performed the ceremony. The names of all the initiates were also published and all Lodges and Masons warned not to recognize them. In 1819, the Grand Lodge, on petition of the Newport Lodge, passed a vote allowing the Lodge to receive back those who were expelled (apparently not including the leader), and to receive those who had been initiated in the spurious Lodge, provided they were found worthy and "will come forward and receive the three degrees in the Lodge."

A special communication of the Grand Lodge was held September 27, 1814, to tender to the "Committee of Defence" the services of the Society for the erection of fortifications, and the third of October was named as the time. The offer was accepted, and on the day appointed the Grand Lodge opened, and with a large number of brethren from the Lodges, including many from Eastern Star Lodge of Rehoboth, Mass., formed in procession with the Grand Master, Thomas Smith Webb, at their head, and marched with music to Fox Point and went to work at the erection of a fort which had been there laid out. At sunset they had completed their labors by the erection of a breast-work about four hundred and thirty feet long, ten feet wide and five feet high; they then formed a procession, and having marched upon the parapet several times from one extremity to the other, the Grand Master named the work "Fort Hiram." In the evening the Grand Lodge waited upon the Governor, and he approved the proceeding and sanctioned the name given to the fort. The record says, "Perhaps in no instance has there been a greater work accomplished in one day by an equal number of persons than was done on this ever-memorable occasion."

The Anti-Masonic excitement caused the extinction or suspension of a few Lodges, but did not prevent the regular meetings of the Grand Lodge. Several of the subordinates continued their meetings but did not work for about fifteen years. No new Lodges were chartered after 1826 for thirty years, No. 19 having been chartered in 1826 and No. 20 in 1856; and it is a curious fact that the three of the Lodges, which became extinct during, or immediately after, the excitement and had not revived at the time of the centennial celebration of St. John's Lodge in Providence in 1857, were the three youngest Lodges, chartered in 1825 and 1826.

Political Anti-Masonry was fierce and aggressive in this State. A memorial was presented to the Legislature charging Masons with "designs, principles and practices adverse to religion and morality, and subversive of civil government and incompatible with all the social and civil virtues and duties." In 1831, the Legislature appointed a committee to investigate the matter. The Grand Lodge published an address in answer to the memorial and appointed a committee to answer in its behalf before the committee of the Legislature. In 1832, the committee made a long report fully exonerating the institution in the State from the criminal charges brought against it, but still recommending its discontinuance. The Grand Lodge declined to adopt the recommendation, alleging that political power, and not the public good, was the object of the instigators of the attack, and determined to "adhere to our institution through evil, as well as good report." Thereupon the Anti-Masons petitioned the Legislature of 1833 to repeal the civil charters of the Lodges. The latter were summoned to show cause why this should not be done; the Grand Lodge and St. John's Lodge of Providence employed counsel to appear and defend, and a sharply contested battle of ten days followed; nothing was done at that session but in January, 1834, six charters were repealed, and sixteen left in force. A law was also passed prohibiting the administration of "extra-judicial oaths," but it became a dead letter.

On March 17, 1834, the Grand Lodge surrendered its civil charter and recommended the same course to the Lodges; some of them did so, but St. John's Lodge of Providence declined, and its charter was never taken away.

In spite of the severity and bitterness of the attack, it is said that not more than twelve in the whole State renounced Masonry; four of these were clergymen; one of them committed suicide within a few weeks, and within a few months the other three were all deposed from the ministry for gross immorality.

A new constitution was adopted in 1826, and also in 1848. The original constitution was materially changed in several respects. One important amendment vested in the Grand Lodge the power of amending its own constitution, without referring it to the Lodges otherwise than in giving them notice of the proposition. In this jurisdiction the old doctrine in regard to the prerogatives of the Grand Master has always prevailed. The law of exclusive territorial jurisdiction has been always scrupulously maintained; in 1856, it adopted a Regulation that if any resident of the State should go out of the jurisdiction and be made a Mason, he should not be recognized as such "except by unanimous vote of the Lodge nearest his residence, the same caution to be used in admitting him to a seat in the Lodge as if he applied for initiation." During the civil war it issued a charter for a Military Lodge, but without the power of making Masons; it was really a Lodge of Instruction.

The growth of the institution since the revival has been gradual but healthy. Almost without exception, a great degree of harmony has prevailed, increased no doubt by the custom of holding a "Festival Communication" annually. In 1863, however, the harmony was broken. The Grand Lodge had revised "the work" in order to secure uniformity. As usual a few were found, to whom "the work" was all of Masonry, and the work which they had learned was the only true work. Unfortunately one of these was Master of Mt. Moriah Lodge. He refused to accept the revised work and carried his Lodge with him. The Grand Master gave him notice of a proposed visit to the Lodge to witness the work. The Master assembled the lodge an hour earlier than usual, and when the Grand Master arrived the work was finished; the charter had been sent away, evidently to keep it out of his reach. The Master and Lodge disobeyed the Grand Master and treated him with contempt. Efforts were made to induce the Lodge to obey the law, but they failed. Charges were filed in the Grand Lodge against the Lodge, the Master and several members (one of which was for opening the Lodge in the absence of the charter, in violation of law). On the trial the charges were sustained by a unanimous vote, the charter revoked, the Master expelled and twenty members suspended; one of the latter made the necessary acknowledgment and was restored. The recusants threatened legal proceedings and continued to meet as a Lodge and do work. The Grand Lodge notified the Masonic world of its action, and warned the craft against recognizing these spurious Masons. A few of them succeeded at first in visiting Lodges in other States, but soon the doors of every Lodge were closed against them; the Grand Lodge expelled six of the suspended Masons for attending a clandestine Lodge. In 1865, ten of the suspended ones at last saw their folly, and made the required acknowledgment and were restored; at the same time five of the six last expelled, applied for restoration; three were restored and the petition of two was denied. Upon petition the charter was restored and the Lodge revived. It thereupon asked to have the remaining ones restored; the Grand Lodge held the matter under consideration till 1867, when it restored all except the Master, whom it held responsible for the whole trouble. It is strange that men of intelligence will join in such a revolt. They must know that the Grand Lodge will be sustained by all the other Grand Lodges, and they themselves become Masonic Ishmaelites if they persist; but, taking the jurisdiction together, such cases are few and seldom, when a captious brother disturbs the harmony of the Craft, and leads others astray to their Masonic injury. The jurisdiction in 1908 comprised 37 Lodges, with 6,917 members.

VERMONT.

Two attempts were made, one in 1778 and one in 1781, to transfer the allegiance of certain New Hampshire towns bordering on the Connecticut River to Vermont, and the last attempt came near resulting in civil war. On November 8, 1781, Massachusetts Grand Lodge granted a charter for Vermont Lodge at Springfield, Vermont; the Lodge actually organized, November 29, 1781, on the other side of the river at Charlestown, which was one of the New Hampshire towns then claiming to belong to Vermont. As already stated, this Lodge continued to work in Charlestown till 1788, when it moved to Springfield and worked there till 1795, when it was moved to Windsor.

North Star Lodge at Manchester also was chartered by Massachusetts Grand Lodge, January 20, 1785, and held its first meeting on February 3, but was not "installed" (constituted) till December 4, 1787.

Dorchester Lodge at Vergennes was chartered May 5, 1791, by Sir John Johnson, Provincial Grand Master, under the old Grand Lodge of England.

The Grand Lodge of Connecticut chartered Temple Lodge at Bennington, May 18, 1793, and Union Lodge at Middlebury, May 15, 1794. Two brethren from Connecticut were present and assisted at the organization of Union Lodge, October 2, 1794.

On August 6, 1794, the representatives of North Star, Dorchester, and Temple Lodges met in convention for the purpose of forming a Grand Lodge. Vermont Lodge was not represented and Union Lodge had not received its charter. The convention met the next day, appointed a committee to draft a constitution, ordered the other Lodges to be notified of its action, and adjourned to meet at Rutland on the tenth of October.

The convention met according to adjournment, when three delegates from each of the five Lodges were reported to be present. It voted that it was fully authorized "to proceed in forming a constitution for a Grand Lodge," and that it was expedient to do so. It spent five days in organizing, and in considering and adopting a constitution, which was engrossed and signed by the delegates, except that only one sign for Vermont Lodge: at the same session Grand Officers were elected and the convention then dissolved.

The constitution reserved the power of amending it to a convention to be called by the Grand Lodge, which it declared, however, was "independent and governed solely by its own laws." There is no record of the installation of the Grand Officers, but the next day, October 15, 1794, the Grand Lodge met and proceeded to act as a Grand Lodge, granted a charter for a Lodge at Rutland, appointed a committee to prepare a form for charters, transacted other routine business, and adjourned till January, when it met, approved the proposed form of charter and closed to meet at the Annual Communication in October.

Applications for charters were presented to the Grand Lodge in the following years in rapid succession, many of which were granted and many refused. The reading of the records gives the impression that the institution grew too rapidly in this jurisdiction, and that too many Lodges were chartered. However, it grew wonderfully up to the time of the Anti-Masonic excitement. The old Lodges, in accordance with the provisions of the original constitution, surrendered their old charters and took new ones. Charters for new Lodges were at first granted to five Master Masons; but the Grand Lodge found it necessary to pass regulations, from time to time, in order to prevent the undue multiplication of Lodges, which seemed to be asked for in almost every town. Attempts were made to prevent the establishment of Lodges within twenty miles of each other, but the proposition was changed so as to require the consent of all the Lodges within twenty miles or, if it was refused, that they should be notified that a charter would be petitioned for at the next session of the Grand Lodge; later the consent of two thirds of the Lodges in the same district was required. It was ordered that no charter should be granted until the proposed officers should pass a satisfactory examination, unless they could be "satisfactorily vouched for by a member of the Grand Lodge."

A convention was called in 1804 to amend the constitution, but it was really a special session of the Grand Lodge, at which a large amount of other business was transacted.

Up to 1805, business seems to have been done in the Entered Apprentice Lodge, and all allowed to vote. In that year the right of voting was limited to Master Masons. At the same session a regulation was adopted that Lodges should have the power to suspend, expel and restore members by a two-thirds vote, and from the decision there should be no appeal. In 1806, the District Deputy system was adopted, but the expense of visitation was required to be borne by the Lodge visited. Lodges were authorized to try all offenders, whether their own members or not, for offences committed within their "immediate vicinity." In 1809, in order to secure uniformity of work, Jonathan Nye was appointed Grand Visitor and instructed to spend two days at least with every Lodge; and in 1811, he was authorized to suspend charters, if he judged it to be for the good of Masonry. As a natural consequence of the rapid increase of Lodges, many soon became delinquent, and the Grand Lodge occupied itself often in determining what course to take in relation to them. Among the Lodges whose charters were revoked, were Temple Lodge and North Star Lodge, two of the five which organized the Grand Lodge. In 1819, a committee reported recommending Cross's "Masonic Chart" to the patronage of the Fraternity, but the report was rejected. An Edition of Webb's Monitor had been published in Vermont in 1816, and probably was at this time in general use in the State; at this very session Jonathan Nye, P. G. Master, had delivered a eulogy upon Webb at the request of the Grand Lodge.

One curious case arose: there had been a Lodge in New York, near the line, of which many residents of Vermont were members. Later a Lodge was chartered on the Vermont side, and then the New York members surrendered their charter and took membership in the Vermont Lodge. Later still, the residents on the New York side of the line took a new charter from their Grand Lodge, and then demanded a part of the property of the Vermont Lodge. The controversy lasted some time, and finally, after various reports upon it to the Grand Lodge, it appointed referees to hear the parties and decide the matter. They reported that the Vermont Lodge should pay the New York Lodge eighty dollars in full of all claims, thus terminating a controversy that bade fair to involve two Grand Lodges in it.

In 1826, the Grand Lodge voted by an overwhelming vote, "That no ardent spirits or public dinner shall be hereafter furnished this Grand Lodge at any of its Communications;" and soon after, the Grand Lodge recommended to the Lodges to prohibit the use of ardent spirits at their meetings and in their halls.

The Anti-Masonic storm swept over Vermont with great fury. There had always been in the State an element of opposition to Masonry. In 1824, it was officially reported to the Grand Lodge that a clergyman of the highest character, as a Christian minister, had been dismissed from his charge because he had become a Mason. In the able and practically valuable address of Grand Master White, when he retired from the chair in 1827, he referred "with pain and extreme regret" to the "rash and inconsiderate step taken by a disaffected brother, calculated to bring the Institution of Masonry into disrepute." In 1826, one Lodge surrendered its charter, and in 1827, another; while several Lodges failed to make returns, and more failed to be represented. At this time seventy-three Lodges had been chartered. In 1829, the dues paid indicated that only thirty-six had been initiated during the year, and twenty of these were in one Lodge. Fifteen Lodges had become delinquent, and the District Deputies were instructed to take up the charters, unless satisfactory reasons were given for the neglect. An address to the people of Vermont was adopted by the Grand Lodge and signed by a large number: while it states that the charges made against the Masons, were largely on account of political Anti-Masonry, the address takes the defensive in most energetically denying the charges. In 1830, the condition of things was worse, and in 1831, a proposition was made in the Grand Lodge to "dissolve the Institution." The Grand Master, Nathan B. Huswell, knowing that the proposition was to be made, in his address spoke eloquently against it. He advised his brethren to "Breast the Storm." In conclusion he said:

"We are a Frontier Post in Masonry, and as such are receiving at the present time the combined attack of foreign and domestic foes in our own and neighboring States. The eyes of the Christian and the philanthropist are upon us, viewing the conflict, watching to see whether we capitulate and surrender our Masonic Citadel. And this day, my brethren, will decide whether in Vermont it stands or falls. Although a frontier post in Masonry, our mountains and 'the everlasting hills' by which this hall is surrounded, planted by God as monuments of His unchangeableness, and from which we may glean lessons of wisdom, should be emblematic of our firmness and moral courage, in resisting encroachments, thus showing to our brethren in other States, and throughout the world, our continued fidelity in sustaining and defending our altar and our principles."

The resolution was offered, discussed ably at considerable length, and dismissed by a vote, taken by yeas and nays, of 90 to 19. The Lodges were advised to meet twice a year—once for discipline and instruction in Masonry, and once for the election of officers.

In 1832, only ten Lodges were represented: the Deputies were directed to ascertain if the Lodges met as advised in 1831. In 1833, some thirty-five Lodges were represented. Since the last meeting the political Anti-Masons had carried the election in the State, and many representatives came to the Grand Lodge to dissolve it, or failing in that, to surrender their charters. When the Grand Lodge was opened, Philip C. Tucker, then Deputy Grand Master, moved a resolution that the Grand Lodge was ready to receive the charters of such Lodges as desired to surrender them, and that the representatives, instructed to surrender charters, be requested to deposit them with the Grand Secretary; but the resolution was laid on the table. But little business was done that day. The Grand Lodge met at nine the next day, and very soon after a preamble and resolutions were introduced, the former reciting that the Communication had been specially notified to consider the surrender of charters, and that however good Masonry may have been in former times "the day of utility is gone;" and the latter revoking all charters, authorizing the Lodges to dispose of their property as they should see fit, dissolving the Grand Lodge and releasing all from allegiance to it. Of course, the preamble endeavored to sugar-coat the pill with protestations and declarations that the Grand Lodge took the proposed course of its own accord and for the public good. The matter was discussed all the forenoon, and until late into the afternoon, by the leading members of the Grand Lodge, as well as by Rev. Paul Dean, of Boston. The preamble was then withdrawn and a vote to dismiss the resolutions was carried by a vote of 79 to 42. Tucker's resolution was then adopted, amended, however, by providing that the surrender might be made to the Grand Secretary in vacation, and that Lodges might dispose of their property as they saw fit, the Grand Lodge recommending, however, that the avails be appropriated to the common school fund of the State. Grand Officers were elected, John B. Hollenbeck (who alone still survives) being elected Grand Secretary. No charters were then surrendered; even the mover of the resolutions did not offer to surrender the charter of his own Lodge. The Grand Officers issued an address to the people, which, though temperate in tone, took the offensive, and directly charged the attack upon Masonry to dishonest politicians who were only trying to promote their own interests under the false pretext of anxiety for the public welfare.

In 1834, seven Lodges only were represented. During the year Masonic conventions had been held; the Grand Lodge adopted resolutions denouncing these as unconstitutional, affirming its previous declarations as to the aims and objects of Masonry, and declaring that any attempt to mix it with partisan politics is a gross innovation upon its principles. It did not meet in 1835, for when it adjourned in October, 1834, it was to meet in January, 1836. The Grand Lodge then met and adopted resolutions of the same character as those of former years, and an additional one providing that the Grand Master, Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer, with such members of the Grand Lodge as saw fit to do so, should meet on the second Wednesday of the next January and adjourn the Grand Lodge for two years, and so on, meeting biennially.

Those three Grand Officers accordingly met in 1837, 1838, 1840, 1842 and 1844, and passed resolutions adjourning the Grand Lodge as contemplated in the resolution.

In the latter part of 1845, the excitement had subsided and Grand Master Haswell, who had never given up the idea of resuming Masonic work, took advice in relation to reviving the meetings of the Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge of Michigan had recently been revived, but it was generally held that the proceedings were not regular, and he was more cautious on that account.

In this section of the country, by long usage, the rules of the civil law had become Masonic law in relation to many matters. An association does not cease to exist by merely ceasing to meet, but it continues to exist as long as it has a quorum of adhering members; officers hold over until their successors are chosen and qualified. The laws of the Grand Lodge did not prescribe the number necessary for a quorum, and as three make a Master Masons' Lodge, three made a quorum in the Grand Lodge; so that the Grand Lodge had met regularly according to technical law; but it was not necessary to rely upon this, for when the Grand Master, Officers and permanent members of the Grand Lodge met on the day fixed in its constitution, in January, 1846, it was as legal a meeting of the Grand Lodge, even if it had not met since 1636, as if it had met regularly the year before. The same rule applied to Lodges whose charters had not been surrendered or revoked; in fact very many Lodges in the New England States met on their regular days, after they had been dormant ten or more years, and went on with their work just as if they had met on their last regular communication day.

In pursuance of an invitation from the Grand Master, forty-two Masons met on January 14, 1846, the day fixed by the constitution for the session of the Grand Lodge, and after consultation and consideration, finding that several of the Lodges had kept up their meetings and some of them had continued to work during the ten years since any had been represented in the Grand Lodge, and that the representatives of several were in attendance, they determined to open the Grand Lodge, declaring that, in their opinion, the Grand Lodge had, by the proceedings taken, maintained its proper organization.

The Grand Lodge was accordingly opened, ten Lodges being represented, and the Grand Master, Deputy, Grand Junior Warden, Grand Treasurer and Grand Secretary last elected, all being present. The Grand Master (Haswell) made an address reviewing the past and present situation; he said that but eight Lodges had surrendered their charters in accordance with the permission given by the Grand Lodge. Annual sessions were re-established; the forfeiture of charters was waived; but Lodges were required to surrender their charters unless they should be represented the following year. In 1847, ten Lodges were represented and were reported active, ten extinct, and four had forfeited their charters. Philip C. Tucker was elected Grand Master, and for several terms ably and vigorously administered the affairs of the Grand Lodge. The growth was slow. In 1848, thirteen Lodges were reported active, and thirteen as having surrendered their charters. The Grand Lodge gave the others further time, but in 1849 forty-six Lodges were formally declared to be extinct, ten others were given a year longer in which to re-organize, and the others, fifteen in all, were re-numbered. Others were revived very soon, so that the number of Lodges increased, at first rapidly, and then more slowly, until they have reached one hundred and one in number. The membership in 1854 was 1,156, and increased up to 1874, when it was 8,631; then it fell off till 1882, and then began to increase again. In 1908 there were 103 Lodges with 12,078 members.

KENTUCKY.

The history of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky down to about 1860, has been fully written by Dr. Rob Morris, whose recent death brings to mind the great extent and variety of his labors for the craft. Not only was he the Historian of his Grand Lodge, but he served it with ability and zeal in many official stations, including that of Grand Master, and upon the most important committees. He published Monitors and a work on Masonic Jurisprudence, but large as were his labors in this direction, his fame will last the longest as the Masonic "Poet Laureate" of his day; and his Masonic poems will be repeated and admired as long as the Institution shall endure.

From an early time up to 1792, Kentucky was a part of Virginia; as a consequence the Grand Lodge of Virginia exercised jurisdiction over it. It chartered in Kentucky, Lexington Lodge, November 17, 1788; Paris Lodge, November 25, 1791, Georgetown Lodge, November 29, 1796, which had received a dispensation January 9, 1790; and Hiram Lodge, December 11, 1799, whose dispensation was issued September 20, 1799. In the latter part of 1779, or in 1800, the Grand Master issued a dispensation for Abraham's, afterwards Solomon's, Lodge, at Shelbyville.

Pursuant to a notice from Lexington Lodge, representatives from these five Lodges met at Lexington, September 8, 1800, in convention, and voted that it was "expedient, necessary and agreeable to the Masonic constitution that a Grand Lodge should be established in this State." The proceedings in organizing the Grand Lodge of Maryland were taken as a precedent. The formation of the Grand Lodge was assumed to be a right. The consent of the Grand Lodge of Virginia was not asked, but in accordance with the order of the convention, a communication was forwarded to that Grand Lodge, giving the reasons for the step about to be taken, and stating that it was not necessary to refer to precedents to authorize this measure, as they "must be familiar to the Grand Lodge of Virginia." The convention then issued a call for a second convention to meet October 16, 1800, for the purpose of forming a Grand Lodge.

Accordingly the Masters, Wardens and Past Masters of the five Lodges (including the one U. D.) met, organized by putting the oldest Past Master in the chair, and proceeded at once to the election of Grand Officers, who were immediately installed. Thus on October 16, 1800, the Grand Lodge of Kentucky took its place as the fourteenth American Grand Lodge.

The Ahiman Rezon of Virginia of 1792, and the subsequent regulations of that Grand Lodge, were adopted as the "rule of government" of the new Grand Lodge. The Lodges were required to surrender their warrants and take new charters, the Lodge U. D. being charged a double price; they were numbered according to their old numbers under the Grand Lodge of Virginia.

The Grand Lodge approved a circular, prepared by a committee appointed for the purpose, to be sent out to other Grand Lodges. No answer had been received to the very fraternal letter sent to the Grand Lodge of Virginia; none had been expected, for the time fixed for the organization of the Grand Lodge was two months in advance of any session of the Grand Lodge of Virginia at which an answer could be given. The circular affirmed that the Kentucky Masons were not influenced by any want of satisfaction with, or fraternal regard for, the mother Grand Lodge, but by the necessity incident to their situation. The reasons were set out in detail with great force, and their right to form a Grand Lodge was declared to be undoubted; but a regard for the opinions of their brethren induced the Grand Lodge to develop the circumstances which compelled, rather than induced, "this measure to be adopted as a matter of right and choice." At the Annual Communication in October, 1801, the reply of the Grand Lodge of Virginia was received; it was marked by the same fraternal spirit which characterized the communication from Kentucky. The Grand Lodge approved the course which had been taken, and of the respectful manner in which it had been advised of the proceedings; fraternal correspondence, and hearty coöperation in all efforts to promote the interests of the craft, were promised. The declaration that the proceedings of both Grand Lodges may well be taken for a model, in the formation of a new Grand Lodge, is worth repeating.

According to the Ahiman Rezon, five Lodges were necessary for a quorum. At the session in October, 1801, only three Lodges were represented the first day, but the Grand Lodge opened and adjourned till the next day, when but four Lodges were represented. It determined that "the good of the craft" required that it "should proceed to business" and thereupon amended the law, so that the representation of a majority of the Lodges should constitute a quorum; but even this proved embarrassing, and afterwards the law was again changed so that the representation of three Lodges should be sufficient to authorize the Grand Lodge to proceed to business. It is believed that the word "quorum," and the idea which it expresses, are innovations in Masonry, and were borrowed from other institutions. The ritual teaches the composition of a Lodge. In the early times, the same rule was applied to a Grand Lodge; indeed the Grand Lodge was regarded, and generally spoken of, as "a Lodge." Several Grand Lodges still adhere to the old usage; but most of them have departed, in this respect, from the fundamental idea of a Grand Lodge.

This Grand Lodge was soon formally acknowledged by the other Grand Lodges, and began to extend its borders by chartering new Lodges; but the country was sparsely settled and its growth was at first slow. It met semi-annually till 1807 and afterwards annually. Up to the same date it transacted much of its business in "Committee of the Whole"; then it began to appoint standing committees which, by division of labor, saved time. From its organization, the Grand Master, as well as the Grand Secretary, has signed the minutes; this practice is founded upon the theory that the Grand Master is responsible for their correctness, and the Grand Secretary is only his assistant, to be appointed by him. In 1803, a Charity Fund was established, to which additions continued to be made annually. In 1804, "Chapter Past Masters" were admitted as members of the Grand Lodge on an equality with those who had been Masters of Lodges, and in the same year the practice of suspending for non-payment of dues was commenced. In 1802, the Grand Lodge conferred the degrees on a candidate "for the purpose of procuring his attendance as Grand Tyler." In 1808, the Grand Lodge published a Book of Constitutions; this marks an apparent change in the polity of the Grand Lodge. Before, it had used the Virginia Ahiman Rezon founded on Dermott's; this new work was based upon Webb's Monitor and Anderson's Constitution. The Webb-Preston work seems also to have been practically, if not formally, adopted. It also, acting upon the error already mentioned in relation to the meaning of the terms "Ancient" and "Modern," repudiated the United Grand Lodge in South Carolina and approved the course of the seceding Lodges. It at first declared the incorporation of Masonic Bodies to be contrary to Masonic polity, but afterwards reversed its decision and took a charter from the State.

From 1812, until the Anti-Masonic excitement commenced, the Grand Lodge grew rapidly. In 1810, there had been twenty Lodges chartered; in 1820, sixty; and in 1827, ninety. In 1826, fifty Lodges were represented in Grand Lodge, the largest number in its history up to that time, and not to be again reached till 1845, when fifty-four were represented. From 1826, the number gradually, but steadily, decreased till 1834, when but thirteen chartered Lodges were represented; in 1836, the number was only eleven; then the number began to increase, and in 1840, thirty-three were represented. Of the ninety-five Lodges chartered up to 1835, seventy-four (including those out of the State) disappeared from the roll before 1845, but at that time eighteen of them had been restored. After 1845, the number of Lodges increased very rapidly; in 1850, eighty were represented; in 1858, two hundred and twenty-nine, there being then three hundred on the roll, with a membership of over 10,000. Thirty years later, the number previously chartered was 640, the number on the roll about 500, and the total membership about 15,000.

Brother the Hon. Henry Clay

EMINENT STATESMAN, ORATOR AND UNITED STATES SENATOR; MEMBER OF LEXINGTON LODGE, KY., 1803; GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF KENTUCKY, 1820-21.

But during this time the number of Lodges and of members had increased and in turn diminished: in 1872, the membership was over 20,000, and it diminished within twelve years from that time over thirty per cent. Notwithstanding these fluctuations there are now (1908) 527 Lodges, with 30,727 members.

The Grand Lodge of Kentucky has engaged in several educational and benevolent enterprises, but the most important one, and the one which has justly become the pride and glory of that Grand Lodge, is the founding and maintaining of a Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home. For years after the plan was adopted, the Grand Lodge struggled for success against very many discouraging circumstances. The erection of the buildings made necessary a comparatively heavy tax upon the members. This at once produced increased delinquency in the payment of dues; many members, who were not willing, or did not feel able, to pay the tax year after year, demitted and many others were suspended. Many Lodges either surrendered or forfeited their charters. But enough remained to carry the plan through to success, and the result is one of the most important institutions in the country for the relief and assistance of widows and orphans. A tax of fifty cents on each member in the State is still collected annually for the maintenance of the "Home." While its history is of great interest in all respects, it shows that our membership is largely affected by the rate of taxation, and that what appears to be, and is, a light tax, will seriously diminish its number, and cause Lodges to become extinct. Whether these losses are an actual loss or not, is an inquiry not within the scope of this work.

DELAWARE.

Masonry, in organized form, was introduced into Delaware by the Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania and Maryland. The former chartered a Lodge at Cantwell's Bridge, June 24, 1765; it did not join in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Delaware, but gave in its adhesion to it in 1816, having till then remained under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. The same Grand Lodge chartered a Lodge at Christiana Ferry, afterwards Wilmington, December 27, 1769; also one at Dover, August 16, 1775. The warrant of this Lodge was produced in Grand Lodge in 1779 and confirmed; it was represented in the convention which organized the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in 1786, and is said to have surrendered its old warrant and taken a new one in 1787; but on March 1, 1790, the Grand Master read a paragraph of a letter concerning it, and thereupon it was voted that a "former resolve of this Grand Lodge, concerning the renewal of warrants, be suspended in respect to that Lodge;" and as it does not appear to have been represented after 1786, and the record does not show what became of it, the better opinion seems to be that it did not take out a new warrant, and so failed to be put on the roll of the independent Grand Lodge, and soon after became extinct.

The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania also chartered a Lodge at New Castle, April 3, 1780, and one at Duck Creek Cross Roads, June 24, 1785. The latter was represented in the convention in 1786, and apparently a few times immediately afterwards and then disappeared. It undoubtedly soon became extinct, probably not having taken out a new warrant; also one at Lewistown, May 28, 1794, but its charter was vacated April 7, 1806, for delinquency: also Delaware Hiram Lodge at Newark, December 6, 1802.

The Grand Lodge of Maryland chartered St. John's Lodge in Sussex County, September 18, 1792; its charter was forfeited for delinquency, and on June 13, 1800, the Grand Lodge refused to revive it; but apparently, instead of reviving it, on the same day chartered Hope Lodge at the same place.

On June 6, 1806, a convention was held for the formation of a Grand Lodge. There were then five Lodges in the State—the ones at Cantwell's Bridge, Wilmington, New Castle and Newark, chartered by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and the one in Sussex County, chartered by the Grand Lodge of Maryland; the first three had taken part in the organization of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. Four of these (all except the one at Cantwell's Bridge) were represented in the convention. A resolution was unanimously adopted that the members considered it "a matter of right and for the general benefit of Masonry" that a Grand Lodge should be formed in that State, and that they "now do proceed to form and organize themselves into a Grand Lodge." A committee of five was appointed to prepare a set of regulations, and the convention adjourned to meet the next morning.

They met according to adjournment on June 7, 1806, appointed Grand Officers pro tem., and opened the Grand Lodge of Delaware. The proceedings of the previous day were "read, approved, confirmed and ratified." The committee reported a set of regulations, which were read, amended and unanimously adopted. It was voted that warrants issue under the authority of the Grand Lodge, as of that date, numbered according to the dates of their old warrants. Grand Officers were then chosen, and the Deputy Grand Master, Grand Treasurer, Grand Secretary and Grand Marshall installed. A committee of five Past Masters was appointed to install the absent officers of the Grand Lodge, when convenient, any three of them being empowered to act. The Grand Lodge then closed to meet on the third Monday of January following.

The Grand Lodge communicated its proceedings to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and the Lodge at Wilmington made a special communication on its own account. That body referred them to a committee, which made a report on both communications at a subsequent meeting. The committee say that Wilmington Lodge had undertaken to make a return, but that there was much more due the Grand Lodge than was returned, and that the Lodge had offered to pay only about one-third of what they had returned as due for a full discharge, and that its representative had stated that the amount he had offered was all he was authorized to offer, and that the Lodge considered itself independent of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, as it had taken a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Delaware; the committee further reported that, according to ancient usage, the Lodge should have informed the Grand Lodge of its intention and have settled its dues, an indispensable prerequisite to enable it to obtain a charter from any regular Grand Lodge.

It was, thereupon, resolved that the papers had not been presented with the respect due from a Lodge to the Grand Lodge, that the amount offered for dues could not be accepted, and that the warrant of the Lodge, for the reasons mentioned, be cancelled.

The committee also give a history of the formation of the Grand Lodge and take several exceptions to the proceedings. They object to the opening of the Grand Lodge before the officers were installed; but if it was not a Grand Lodge, it was the convention in regular session and the proceedings were proper, and when the Grand Officers were installed it became a Grand Lodge. The appointment of Past Masters to install the absent officers is sustained by quite universal usage at the present day. They declare the form of the officers' obligation to be an irregularity; they do not state wherein, and as it is almost identical with the clause of that obligation as now used, it is not perceived wherein it was irregular. But the objection, considered conclusive against the regularity of the Grand Lodge, was that only four Lodges participated in the proceedings, five being deemed "indispensably necessary." Such is not the law now, and was not then. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania had then recognized, as regular, more than one Grand Lodge formed by not exceeding three Lodges. The point that the Lodges should have settled their dues before withdrawing was well taken, so far as duty was concerned: but that did not affect the legality of the proceedings. The Grand Lodge declined to recognize the new Grand Lodge, and declared that the warrants of the three Lodges had been superseded by their joining in the establishment of the pretended Grand Lodge of Delaware, "and that the same be vacated."

The Grand Lodge of Maryland also declared the Grand Lodge of Delaware to be an illegal Body, and summoned Hope Lodge to appear at its next session and show cause why the charter should not be annulled, and the members suspended. At the next session a communication was received from the Grand Lodge of Delaware, but the Grand Lodge declared that it saw no reason to recede from its former resolution; and in 1808 it passed a vote annulling the charter of Hope Lodge.

The matter was brought before the Grand Lodge of Virginia, which held that the Lodges had the right to form a separate Grand Lodge, but it was their bounden duty to pay up all the arrearages due to the Grand Lodge from which they are about to separate, ask its permission to withdraw and to crave its assistance. The legality of the proceedings was really admitted, but the Grand Lodge declined to fraternize with the new Grand Lodge "till they be reconciled to their mother Lodge."

In 1806, two members of one of the Delaware Lodges petitioned the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, referring to the vacating of the charter and asking for a Grand Lodge certificate; and the Grand Lodge directed a special certificate to be issued.

But neither these decisions, nor the course pursued by the mother Grand Lodges, caused the new Grand Lodge to reverse or revise its action; it maintained its organization and held its regular communications. In due time it was recognized by other Grand Lodges, by some tacitly and by others formally. In 1816, the Lodge at Cantwell's Bridge gave in its adhesion and was numbered five. At that time there were five other Lodges. In 1818, the number had increased to nine Lodges.

The Anti-Masonic excitement affected it somewhat, but the Grand Lodge held its communications regularly and published its proceedings annually during the years when that excitement was at its highest pitch.

In 1887 there were twenty-one Lodges, with 1,553 members. The return for 1908 shows twenty-two Lodges, with 2,888 members.

OHIO.

After the close of the Revolutionary War, the Master and quite a number of the members of American Union Lodge settled at or near Marietta, Ohio. They had with them the charter of the Lodge, which had been closed "to stand closed until the W. Master should call them together." In 1790, or early in 1791, the Master reorganized the Lodge and sent out communications to the Grand Lodges, with a copy of its charter and by-laws, announcing its proceedings and requesting recognition. It seemed to assume that it was a Lodge at large and not under the jurisdiction of any Grand Lodge, and in fact to claim that it was "invested with every power necessary to constitute, rule and govern" Masonry in the Territories. It was recognized by the Grand Lodges of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York and perhaps others, but only as a constituent of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. It continued to work for several years until its charter was destroyed by fire. Then it sought a revival of it from the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, which declined to do more than grant a charter to it as a constituent of its own. Then it applied to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, which authorized it to resume work under a copy of the original charter, but, it is said, with an express provision that the charter should be in force only until a Grand Lodge should be formed in the territory in which it was located. Whether this provision was in the charter or not is immaterial, because such was the express law of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, under which its charters were granted; and also this authority was granted only upon the assumption that the Lodge was a subordinate of that Grand Lodge. When the convention to form the Grand Lodge of Ohio was held, this Lodge by its representatives took an active part in all the preliminary proceedings. One of its representatives presided, and they all signed the proceedings of the Convention, which voted to form a Grand Lodge, and elected Grand Officers; but when the inchoate Grand Lodge met to complete its organization, this Lodge was not represented. It was understood then that the reason was that the town had been inundated, and the incident distress and confusion prevented the attendance of the representatives. Railroads and telegraphs did not then afford facilities for immediately ascertaining the facts, and the Grand Lodge proceeded upon the assumption that the representatives were unable to attend. But the Lodge continued to stand aloof. The Grand Lodge, by formal vote, sent copies of its proceedings to it, but no notice of them was taken, although it kept on working. The Grand Master, at the request of the Grand Lodge, addressed a letter to the Lodge, again inviting it to join the Grand Lodge. Correspondence ensued in which it claimed that, as it was a duly chartered Lodge in existence when the Grand Lodge was formed, it had a right to continue to work under its old charter and its old allegiance, and not become subordinate to the Grand Lodge of Ohio. It is scarcely necessary to add that in this position it did not have the support, aid or encouragement of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. In Grand Lodge the correspondence was referred to a committee, which reported, reciting the facts and referring to the amicable means used to convince the Lodge of its duty, and the hope entertained that it would come under the authority of the Grand Lodge, until that hope could no longer be cherished, as the Lodge had a little time before formally rejected the Grand Master's invitation and declared its independence. In consequence, the committee reported resolutions declaring that the Lodge had forfeited its privileges and become an unauthorized Lodge, and forbidding all Masonic intercourse with it, and declaring its work in the future clandestine, but allowing it to meet once to consider the resolutions, and also providing that when it should surrender its old warrant, the Grand Master was empowered to issue a dispensation authorizing it to continue its labors until the next Grand Communication; the resolutions were unanimously adopted. At the next session (1816) a petition was received from some of the former members of American Union Lodge for a charter. It was referred to a committee, which found it necessary to consider the rights of those who were claiming to continue work under the old charter. The conclusion was that the charter contained a limitation of its duration to the time when a Grand Lodge should be established in the State; that the Lodge was bound by the part it had taken in the formation of the Grand Lodge; and further the committee say,

"But if the charter had contained no express limitation it appears to your committee to be a just inference from the nature of the authority, and the boundaries of the various Masonic jurisdictions, as they are settled and established in the United States, that the operation and effect of the instrument would cease on the formation of a Grand Lodge in the State."

The Lodge participated in the preliminary proceedings, but withdrew before the Grand Lodge had been organized, so that technically it did not give in its adhesion to the Grand Lodge. But the doctrine of the Committee, that upon the formation of a Grand Lodge in a State, every Lodge therein passes at once under its authority, is that which had already been announced by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and approved by the other Grand Lodges.

By unanimous vote of the Grand Lodge, a charter for American Union Lodge, No. 1, was granted to the petitioners, containing such a reference to the old charter as to show that it was a revival of the old Lodge and entitled to the books, funds and other property which belonged to that Lodge. The Lodge was authorized to reinstate its members who had continued to work in spite of the prohibition at the previous session, provided they would give satisfactory assurances of obedience to the rules and regulations of the Grand Lodge. It does not appear how many of the members availed themselves of this privilege; but some did not, as in 1817 a Lodge was censured for admitting some of them as visitors, and it was stated in Grand Lodge, that some of them had continued to work as a Lodge in spite of the prohibition of the Grand Lodge; whereupon it was voted that a notice be prepared and published warning the craft against them, and all Lodges were ordered to make specific inquiry of every visitor if he had been connected with that spurious Lodge since February 1, 1816, and, if he had been, to reject him as an impostor. In 1820, the Grand Lodge ordered the Lodge to demand of these parties the books, funds and properties of the old Lodge. In 1821, the Lodge made some report to the Grand Lodge in relation to the recusants, and it decided that the Lodge had the authority to discipline them; this seems to have been the last of the old Lodge, as no further complaint or action in relation to it is found in the Grand Lodge record. The new Lodge became dormant early in 1829, in the Anti-Masonic excitement, but was revived October 20, 1843, by vote of the Grand Lodge.

The history of this Lodge is important on account of the contest which it made against the doctrine of complete and exclusive jurisdiction of a Grand Lodge in its territory. It also illustrates the two ideas or theories of a charter of a Lodge. In Massachusetts, the idea of a charter was that it creates a Lodge with the inherent power of sustaining itself and capable of government by any Grand Lodge in whose jurisdiction it may be located, without change of the charter; thus in Maine the old Lodges are still working under the charters granted to them by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. The other idea of a charter was that, while it creates the Lodge, it is the necessary connecting link between the Lodge and the Grand Lodge which grants it, and that a Grand Lodge can govern only such Lodges as hold charters from it. The logical result of the latter doctrine is, that with the dissolution of a Grand Lodge all the charters issued by it become void; while under the former, the Lodges would continue to exist, and, if three or more in number, might organize a new Grand Lodge.

On June 4, 1798, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania received a petition for the charter of a Lodge at Charlestown, Virginia. Of course it declined to grant it at that time, but directed the Grand Secretary to write, in relation to it, to the Grand Lodge of Virginia. That Grand Lodge declined to give its consent; thereupon the petitioners requested that the charter be granted for a Lodge in Mingo Town, in the Northwestern Territory, now Ohio, and the petition was granted, and a charter issued, dated March 4, 1799. But under a rule, then supposed to exist, that a Lodge might meet within five miles of the place in which it was located, it actually met for about two years in Charlestown; after that a dissension arose, many of the members demitted and the Lodge became so demoralized that it ceased to meet, and on April 7, 1808, its charter was vacated by vote of the Grand Lodge. Afterwards five members and nine other Masons petitioned to have the charter restored and the Lodge located at Steubenville, Ohio, which was represented to be only three miles from Old Mingo Town; the petition was referred to a committee, which seems to have failed to report and the charter was not restored. Thus, while this Lodge was located in Ohio by its charter, it never worked in that jurisdiction.

On September 8, 1791, the Grand Lodge of New Jersey chartered a Lodge in Hamilton County, "in the Territory northwest of the river Ohio," by the name of Nova Cesarea Lodge. For some unexplained reason, the charter was not received till December, 1794, and then the Master had moved away and the Senior Warden declined to act; thereupon the members chose new officers, who were installed by a Past Master. These proceedings were communicated under date of March 13, 1795, to the Grand Lodge, which, on July 1, 1795, confirmed them. Nothing further was heard from the Lodge till 1801, when a letter dated December 8, was received, excusing the non-payment of Grand Lodge dues. On December 10, 1805, the Grand Lodge received the charter with a letter from the late Master stating that the Lodge was dissolved, and the charter surrendered; the Grand Lodge accepted the charter and ordered it deposited in the archives. At the session, November 19, 1807, a petition dated a year before was received by the Grand Lodge asking for a restoration of the charter, which was refused. On May 9, 1810, a petition was made by twenty old members of the Lodge for the restoration of the charter, alleging, among other things, that the surrender of the charter was illegal, no previous notice of the proposition to surrender it having been given. The Grand Lodge found that the surrender was illegally made, but as a Grand Lodge had been formed in Ohio, it could not restore the charter, and could only commend the petitioners to the favorable consideration of that Grand Lodge for redress.

The Grand Lodge of Connecticut, October 19, 1803, granted charters for Erie Lodge at Warren, in Trumbull County, and New England Lodge at Worthington, Ohio, both to be in force for "one year after the formation of a Grand Lodge in the State of Ohio." The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania chartered, June 24, 1805, Lodge of Amity at Zanesville, Ohio, with Lewis Cass as Master. This Lodge surrendered its charter to the Grand Lodge of Ohio, when organized, but in 1810 the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania requested the Lodge to surrender it; the Grand Lodge of Ohio directed the Grand Secretary to write to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in relation to it, but the result was that the charter was returned, December 29, 1813. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts chartered Scioto Lodge, at Chillicothe, in 1805. The Grand Lodge of Kentucky chartered Cincinnati Lodge, at Cincinnati, March 19, 1806. In a petition to the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, it was alleged that the charter members of this Lodge were the same persons who

Brother Willam McKinley, K. T.

From an original photograph presented by him to Brother John C. Vorston in 1898.

Twice President of the United States of America. Born at Niles, Ohio, January 29, 1843. He was initiated into Freemasonry at Hiram Lodge, Winchester, Va., May 3, 1865, and afterward became a charter member of Eagle Lodge, Canton, member of Canton Chapter, and of Canton Commandery, K. T., of Canton, Ohio. On September 6, 1901, while on a visit to the Pan American Exposition, at Buffalo, N. Y., and attending a public reception in the Music Hall of the Exposition, he was fatally shot by an anarchist named Czolgosz, and died September 14, 1901, regretted and mourned by a sorrowful nation. His last words were: "IT IS GOD'S WAY! HIS WILL BE DONE."

illegally surrendered the charter of Nova Cesarea Lodge, and that the new Lodge had obtained and were holding the properties of the old Lodge. Doubt has been expressed whether the old Lodge was not really in existence at the time of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, but at that time the charter had been actually surrendered and the surrender accepted by the Grand Lodge, and the existence of the Lodge thus terminated.

Pursuant to previous notice, representatives from American Union, Erie, New England, Scioto, Cincinnati, and Amity Lodges, being all the Lodges in the State, met at Chillicothe, January 4, 1808. Upon examining the credentials, those of the representatives of New England Lodge were rejected, and that Lodge was not allowed representation in the convention. After debate, on motion of Lewis Cass, it was unanimously voted "That it is expedient to form a Grand Lodge." A few regulations were adopted. The Lodges were directed to settle their dues with their respective Grand Lodges, and at the first session of the Grand Lodge (fixed for January 2, 1809) they should produce their charters, by-laws, and receipts for Grand Lodge dues; the charters were to be surrendered to the Grand Lodge, to be disposed of as it might direct, and new ones issued in their stead. Grand Officers were elected, and a record of the proceedings made and signed by the representatives of the five Lodges, including American Union Lodge. The convention held four sessions, on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday evenings; in the reprint of the Proceedings the dates are erroneously given.

On the date fixed the Grand Lodge met; the Grand Master being absent on account of ill-health, the Deputy opened the Grand Lodge and presided. But only four Lodges were represented. New England Lodge had been excluded from the Convention and did not appear in the Grand Lodge; American Union Lodge was not represented, as then conjectured for accidental reasons, but probably by design and for some reason never explained. The representatives from the four Lodges produced their credentials, their Charters and By-laws; the Senior Warden elect of American Union Lodge was present but without credentials; a committee was appointed to determine what steps it was necessary to take and the Grand Lodge adjourned until the next day.

At the adjourned session, the committee reported the facts, and stated that it was doubted whether only four Lodges could form a Grand Lodge, and suggested that if that question should be decided in the negative, the Senior Warden elect of American Union Lodge should be admitted to represent that Lodge. The report was laid on the table. On motion of Lewis Cass, resolutions were adopted for the appointment of a committee to examine whether the Grand Lodge could transact the necessary business with representation from four Lodges only, and report their opinion to the Grand Lodge with their reasons; and if they should be of opinion that the Grand Lodge could not proceed, to inquire into what measures could be adopted by the Grand Lodge "in the novel and difficult situation in which it is placed."

The next day, Cass, as Chairman of the Committee, reported a Circular Letter to be sent out to the Grand Lodges, and that it was "expedient to proceed to the installation of this Grand Lodge." The committee reported that according to the precedents and laws of the Institution "the rule, requiring a representation of five Lodges to be present at the establishment of a Grand Lodge, is a municipal regulation adopted for its propriety, and not a fundamental principle of our Order." It stated further that the ancient regulations were that "a Grand Lodge should be composed of its officers, and the officers and representatives of the subordinate Lodges, without requiring any particular number;" and that the modern regulations (those adopted by the "Ancients") "require that a representation from five Lodges should be present." The report was agreed to; the credentials of the representatives of the four Lodges declared satisfactory and their representatives took their seats. A committee was appointed to prepare a constitution and the Grand Lodge adjourned till the evening of the next day.

The committee, the next evening, reported recommending the temporary adoption of the constitution of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky, and the report was adopted. The "Lodge in the third degree of Masonry was then closed and a Past Master Masons' Lodge was opened;" the Deputy Grand Master elect was introduced and installed; and a Master Masons' Lodge opened, and the subordinate officers installed by the Deputy Grand Master.

Thus, on January 5, 1809, the Grand Lodge of Ohio was organized. The Grand Master-elect declined serving on account of old age and failing health. Under the constitution which had been adopted an election of Grand Officers was necessary. Accordingly they were elected and installed; Lewis Cass was elected Deputy Grand Master, and William Skinner, Senior Warden-elect of American Union Lodge, was elected Senior Grand Warden; the latter, being a Royal Arch Mason, was recognized as a Past Master. A code of By-Laws was adopted. The work of each degree was exemplified, "considered and agreed to." At the next Annual Communication, New England Lodge was represented, and its representatives admitted with the others; there is no intimation of any change in its situation or condition since it had been excluded from the convention. Lewis Cass was elected Grand Master (1810) and served three years. New Lodges were chartered in quick succession and the institution grew rapidly. The Grand Lodge, at a special session in 1810, recommended that the Lodge confer the Past Master's degree only on actual Masters of Lodges, and refrain from conferring "any of the higher degrees of Masonry" until the Grand Lodge should "determine on the propriety of such a proceeding."

In 1812, the matter of Nova Cesarea Lodge was presented to the Grand Lodge. Cincinnati Lodge was directed to withdraw its old charter from the custody of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, and return it with its dues to the Grand Lodge of Kentucky, and then inform the Grand Lodge of New Jersey of this action and request the return of the original charter, promising to pay all dues. And it was further voted that the name of the Lodge should be Nova Cesarea, and it should be entitled to a new charter upon complying with these directions, and not otherwise. In 1813, it was decided substantially that the two Lodges should be consolidated and receive a new charter under the name of Nova Cesarea Harmony Lodge No. 2, and it appearing that both Lodges had paid up their dues and returned their charters to the Grand Lodges which had granted them, and that the members of both were desirous of uniting in one Lodge, it was voted that a charter be issued accordingly.

In 1813, resolutions of grief for the loss, and affection for the memory, of Benoni Pierce, "who died nobly while fighting bravely the battles of his country," were adopted and fifty dollars were sent to his widow with a letter of condolence.

There was considerable delay in issuing the new charters, and for some time both the old and new Lodges worked under dispensation, but were all allowed representation in the Grand Lodge. In 1815, it was unanimously voted that the Grand Lodge has "the Masonic right of replacing an expelled brother in his former standing as a member of our Fraternity." Two separate attempts, one in 1814 and one in 1815, were made to adopt the law of territorial jurisdiction for subordinate Lodges, but they were both defeated by an almost unanimous vote.

When the Grand Lodge was organized, it changed the rule requiring the presence of the representatives of five Lodges to make a quorum, and provided that the representatives of a majority of the Lodges should be required. In 1817, before it had concluded its business, the Grand Lodge found itself without a quorum; the Grand Master, however, installed the Grand Officers and then closed the Grand Lodge. At the next session the original provision was restored, except that "fifteen" was substituted for "five;" this rule in its turn came near preventing a session of the Grand Lodge in Anti-Masonic times, for at one session less than fifteen Lodges were represented.

In 1823, the distinction between suspension from Masonic rights and deprivation of membership was recognized by the Grand Lodge by ordering the entry on the record that the return of the suspension of certain brethren "originated in mistake; that they are still in good standing as Masons, having only forfeited their membership in said Lodge." In 1830, the system of paying mileage and per diem to representatives was adopted. In 1839, Grand Master William J. Reese introduced the custom of making an official report; it was brief that year, but in 1840 he delivered an elaborate address. The Grand Lodge endorsed his action by adopting a resolution making it the duty of the Grand Master to make an official report annually immediately after the appointment of the committees.

While but few references are made to the Anti-Masonic excitement, its effect is plainly to be traced in the record. The representation began to fall off, and went down in 1837 to thirteen Lodges, when there were over one hundred on the roll. In 1831, twenty-five Lodges were reported delinquent in representation and returns. In 1834, Scioto Lodge was revived, the Grand Lodge declaring that its course in suspending work was excusable, "inasmuch as that course was considered the best to allay the excitement then existing against Masonry." In 1837, a "Grand Visitant" was appointed to visit the dormant Lodges; he was able to visit but a few; part of these he reorganized, and of others he took the charters. In 1838, Lodges began to resume quite rapidly; but still in 1842, after many had been revived, forty-six Lodges within the State were reported as "having ceased to exist, without any known hopes of resurrection." After 1842, the Lodges increased rapidly in number by the reorganization of dormant ones and the creation of new ones.

In 1850 there were 171 Lodges (including those under dispensation), with 6,148 members. In 1860 there were 295 Lodges, with a membership of 14,000; in 1870 over 400 Lodges and over 24,000 members; in 1887 488 Lodges and 33,856 members, and in 1908 514 Lodges, with 68,679 members.

This Grand Lodge, if not the first to reprint its early Proceedings, was preceded by the Grand Lodge of California by only a few weeks; in both States the work was in progress at the same time.

The Proceedings contain decisions in relation to Masonic law, polity and usage too numerous to be detailed in a general history of this character. In recent years this Grand Lodge has promulgated the doctrine that it has the rightful power to determine for the members of its obedience what Masonry is, and to prohibit them from practising as Masonry any system or ceremonies which it has not recognized. It has enumerated the bodies which it had previously recognized as Masonic, and has declined to extend recognition to any others. And it has forbidden the members of its obedience to become members of any bodies claiming to be Masonic and to perform Masonic rites, other than those which it has recognized. In this respect, it has taken the same position as the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

FREEMASONRY IN CANADA

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE GRAND LODGE OF NOVA SCOTIA

BY M. W. BRO. HON. WILLIAM ROSS (SENATOR)

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NOVA SCOTIA

EDITED BY

BRO. JOHN C. YORSTON, 32°, MEMBER OF "QUATUOR CORONATI" LODGE, LONDON, ENGLAND

FREEMASONRY has the prestige of antiquity in its progress and expansion throughout the whole of the civilized world. In its modern growth it may be regarded as a system and institution representing the growth and ideas of human association during past ages of the world's history. The principle of fraternity is the one vital element in the life of Freemasonry. That principle has been proved all down the centuries, it has been the strongest bond of fellowship, brotherly love and truth and of mutual interests, the establishing of societies within those lines. Men animated by a common faith and purpose might hold secret ceremonies, co-operation for the general good, thus making their lives freer, happier and more useful than they could otherwise be. As brothers we come together, stand by each other upon well-known tests, of which the outside world has no knowledge.

We need not, therefore, concern ourselves much about the origin of Freemasonry, though the beginning of its life could be exactly determined, and every phase of its course marked out. It is not without interest and profit, however, that careful search is made for the antecedents of modern Freemasonry. Coming, therefore, to what may be termed the first dawn of Freemasonry on the continent of America, in a letter now in the possession of the New England Historical Society, written by Dr. Charles T. Jackson, of Boston, the celebrated chemist and geologist, and addressed to J. W. Thornton, dated June, 1856, we find:

"When Francis Aigars and myself made a mineralogical survey of Nova Scotia in 1827 we discovered upon the shore of Goat Island, in Annapolis Basin, a gravestone partly covered with sand and lying on the shore. It bore the Masonic emblems of square and compass, and had the figures 1606 cut in it. The inscription was undoubtedly intended to commemorate the place of burial of the French soldiers who came to Nova Scotia, to Annapolis Royal, Acadia, in 1603, the slab bearing the date 1606. I had it brought over by the Ferryman to Annapolis, and ordered it to be packed in a box to be sent to the Old Colony Society of Plymouth, Mass., but Judge Halliburton, then Thomas C. Halliburton, prevailed on me to abandon it to him, and he has it now carefully preserved. On a late visit to Nova Scotia I found the Judge had forgotten how he came by it, and I told him all about it."

Our Fraternity may well unite with the historian in the opinion that there are few localities in America around which the memories of the shadowy past more interestingly cluster than around the ancient town of Annapolis. Notwithstanding the various fortunes and misfortunes that befell that locality, the Masonic fire seems to have smouldered there with singular persistency.

In the library of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts is a very rare book entitled "A Concise Account of the Rise and Progress of Freemasonry in the Province of Nova Scotia from its first settlement to the present time, 1796," from which we learn that the Royal Art crossed the Atlantic with the first emigrants and settled in various parts of America. It is said to have been known in Nova Scotia, while in the hands of the French, and it is certain that as soon as the English took possession of it, they took care to encourage this charitable institution. They saw that it had a tendency to relieve distress and to promote good order. By this early attention it had the happiness to gain repute with the then rising province, known poetically as "Acadia."

As early as 1750, which was as soon almost as there were any houses in Halifax, a number of brethren met together with Governor Cornwallis at their head, "Deeming it" as they expressed it, "for the good of the fraternity that Masonry should be propagated in the province." Erasmus James Phillips, Esq., of Annapolis Royal, was Provincial Grand Master, and they agreed to petition him for a warrant for a new lodge at Halifax, and that his Excellency might be master of it. This warrant was received July 19th, and on the same evening Lord Colville and a number of navy gentlemen were entered apprentices in this lodge, together with many of the principal inhabitants and most of the gentlemen holding considerable offices in the province. It was in this lodge that the Right Worshipful and Honorable Richard Bulkeley, Esq., was made a Master Mason. Governor Cornwallis, indeed, while he resided in the province was Master of this lodge, and governed it by a Deputy, according to the custom prevailing in Scotland. He was succeeded in the Government and in the Chair by Governor Lawrence, who enjoyed both till his death, Oct. 19, 1760. On March the 18th, 1751, the second lodge was formed at Halifax.

VIRGIN LODGE, R. N. S., commenced its meetings at Halifax on February 18th, 1782, under a dispensation by the two warranted lodges, 155 and 211, then at a lodge of quarterly communication held January 21st, 1782, and worked under such dispensation until October, A. D. 1784, when a warrant was granted to the body by the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia (R. W. Bro. John George Pyke, Provincial Grand Master) under the title of Artillery Lodge, No. 2, on the Registry of Nova Scotia, under which warrant the lodge continued working until September 22nd, 1800, when the body, by the permission of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, resumed its original name of Virgin Lodge. In 1828 the warrants issued by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia (established in Sept., 1784) were called in by H. R. H. the Duke of Sussex, then M. W. Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England; and the old warrant of 1784 having been given up in October, 1829, a new warrant was granted to the lodge by the Grand Lodge of England, under the title of Virgin Lodge, No. 829, on the Registry of England; and in October, 1833, the number of the lodge was changed by the Grand Lodge of England to No. 588; and in July, 1863, was again changed by the Grand Lodge of England to No. 396, R. E.

We have the continued record and copies of warrants from 1783 down to the present time with the respective names of the honored Grand Masters who followed each other on the roll of time. These ancient warrants on parchment, with their old-fashioned seals of wax, stamped into a leaden mould, tell the early history of many a lodge still in existence in strength, love and unity, and some that have been discontinued. From 1784 to 1820 there were 34 lodges under one Provincial Grand Lodge, proving the widespread hold that Freemasonry had in the early history of the province. Many of these lodges, from written files of letters safely cared for, contain facts of Masonic interest sufficient to form an historical paper in itself. Take for instance the most interesting and continuous Masonic history of any Lodge within this province, that of St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1, one of the living Lodges that has continued without a break since its origin in March, 1768, and has never failed to meet on the first Tuesday of each month, and even at other times when emergent business required it. Then again, St. John Lodge, chartered June 3rd, 1780, by the Right Worshipful and Most Noble Prince John the Third, Duke, Marquis and Earl of Atholl, then known as No. 161, but now as No. 2 in the register of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia.

From the formation of the Provincial Grand Lodge, Sept. 24th, 1784, there were continuous applications for charters to form lodges. For instance, on September 29th, 1784, no less than six separate applications were made to receive warrants and charters to form lodges. The wording of these charters is all the same, reference being made to His Royal Highness Prince Edwin of York, and to the year 926, from which year operative Masonry appears to date its origin.

Temple Lodge No. 7, was chartered on the 11th day of Oct., 1784; Hiram Lodge No. 10, was chartered March 3rd, 1785, to meet at Shelburne; St. George's Lodge No. 11, was chartered November 22nd, 1784. We must mention that Annapolis Royal Lodge, now No. 33, was chartered 27th January, 1795, with Daniel Kendrick, M. D., W. M.; Francis Ryerson, S. W., and Robert Wolsley, J. W., to hold their Lodge meetings in the house of Brother Frederick Sinclair. Another Lodge was chartered in Sydney, C. B., 27th August, 1800, named Harmony Lodge—William McKinnon, W. M., William Cox, S. W., and George Moir, J. W.

On November 13th, 1758, Provincial Grand Master Jeremy Gridley, of Boston, granted a dispensation to R. W. Edward Huntingford to hold a Lodge in His Majesty's 28th Regiment, to be called Louisburg Lodge, 28th Regt., so early did Masonry spring up in Cape Breton after the fall of Louisburg. This regiment was at Quebec with Wolfe the following year, under Colonel Richard Gridley, receiving a pension and a grant of land for his distinguished services at Quebec in 1759.

In 1808 Admiral Murray, of the White Squadron, was Master of St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1. In 1813 thirty shillings was voted to George Grigason, an American prisoner of war at Dartmouth. In 1819, when Grand Master Pyke retired from that position he stated: "In having my conduct approved by the oldest Lodge of the Province, is truly gratifying to me."

May 22nd, 1820, St. Andrew's Lodge joined a procession to lay the corner stone of Dalhousie College, which ceremony was performed according to ancient custom and Masonic usage by the Earl of Dalhousie. On July 26th, 1825, this Lodge marched with Grand Lodge and Earl Dalhousie to break ground of the Shubenacadie Canal. This Lodge was permitted under all the changes to retain its original charter, and is in possession of many interesting relics, such as the punch bowl, so much admired on account of its age and interesting history, a gift from His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, a chair, and other things of historic value.

An incident of importance connected with the Masonic acts of the Duke of Kent was that he laid the corner stone of Freemasons' Hall in Halifax in 1800 and that stone bearing this inscription, is preserved in a glass case, and reads

"In the name of God in the reign of George III, His Royal Highness Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, Commander in Chief of British North America, Grand Master of Lower Canada, in behalf of Richard Bulkeley, member of His Majesty's Council, Grand Master of Nova Scotia, laid the foundation stone of Freemasons' Hall, 6th June, A. D. 1800, and of Masonry 5800."

In 1813 the only Lodges carried forward on the Union roll were Nos. 155 and 211 (now 1 and 2, N. S.), and the Prov. Grand Lodge continued to exist as before, electing its Grand Master yearly, paying tribute to none, and exacting the respect due to any independent Grand Lodge, until 1822, when its proceedings were styled irregular by the Grand Master of England. John Albro, the Prov. Grand Master at that time, was annually re-elected until 1829, when he received a Patent from England, and in the same year seventeen Lodges—Nos. 828-44—were removed from the local to the general list. Nineteen others were added to the English roll between 1840 and 1868. Scotland entered the field in 1827, and Ireland in 1845. From the latter country only two warrants were received, but under the former a Province was erected, by ten of whose daughter Lodges a Grand Lodge was established, June 21, 1866. This, on June 24, 1869, formed a Union of the Lodges then working in the province, under the Grand Lodges of England, Nova Scotia and Scotland, into one Supreme Grand Lodge—twenty-five Lodges on each side, and one Scottish one, or fifty-one in all, taking part in the regular organization of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. A single (English) Lodge adhered to its original allegiance, of which the Grand Master of Nova Scotia remarks (1880)—"working side by side with us, a healthy emulation is produced, and both parties are the better for it." Since which time Freemasonry has continued to flourish in this Province, and has made very satisfactory progress. During 1910 and 1911 there was an increase of 186 over the preceding year. At the present time, 1912, there are 72 Chartered Lodges, with a membership of about 6,500, according to the reports of the present Grand Secretary, the esteemed and worthy Brother, Thomas Mowbray, who has held that office since 1900, having succeeded M. W. Brother the Hon. William Ross, Senator, who was Grand Secretary from 1889 to 1900, and Grand Master in 1903. He died at Ottawa, March 17th, 1912, honored and respected not only by his Brethren and others in the Province, but throughout the whole of the Dominion of Canada.

M. W. Brother Duncan Cameron Frazer, Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, who was Grand Master in 1892-1893, died September 27th, 1910.

At the Forty-sixth Annual Communication held in Freemasons' Hall, in the City of Halifax, June 21st, 1911, a telegram was read by the Grand Secretary, from St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 7, inviting Grand Lodge to hold its next Annual Communication in the City of Sydney. It was moved by R. W. M. B. Dickenson, Seconded by R. W. Bro. T. W. Publicover, that the invitation of St. Andrew's Lodge be accepted, passed, to meet again in Annual Communication in the City of Sydney, on the second Wednesday in June, 1912.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, THE DUKE OF KENT

H. R. H. Prince Edward Augustus, Duke of Kent, K. G.; K. T.; K. St. P., was born November 2d, 1767, and was the fourth son of George III and the father of Her Most Gracious Majesty, Queen Victoria, and grandfather of King Edward VII.

In 1789 he was appointed to a colonelcy in the Royal Fusiliers. With this rank he spent some time at Gibraltar, and in 1791 was transferred to Canada. He served in the West Indies under Lord Grey, assisted at the capture of St. Lucia, distinguishing himself by personal bravery, and on returning to Canada held a command at Halifax, first as major-general, and in 1796 as lieutenant-general, until 1798, when he returned to England. In 1799 he was created a peer, with the title of Duke of Kent and Strathearn and Earl of Dublin, and in May of the same year was appointed commander-in-chief of the British forces in Canada.

March, 1802, he was appointed Governor of Gibraltar, whence he returned to England in May, 1803. In 1818 he married Her Serene Highness, Victoria Maria Louisa, the youngest daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. From this marriage was born, at Kensington Palace, May 24th, 1819, Alexandrina Victoria, Queen of England. The Duke, though taking a great part in all social questions, and devoting his time and personal influence to all charitable and philanthropic undertakings, kept aloof from politics. In recognition of his valor, Fort Royal, in Martinique was changed to Fort Edward, and the name of the Island of St. John changed in his honor to Prince Edward Island.

He was initiated into Freemasonry at Geneva, in "La Loge des Coeurs Unis," in 1790, and was, on his return to England, elected Grand Master of the Ancient or Athole Masons in Dec., 1813, and did much to bring about the Union, under which the Grand Lodge and Freemasonry have so much flourished in England. He was made an Honorary Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England (Moderns) on the 10th day of February, 1790, and was also appointed by the same Grand Lodge as Prov. Grand Master of "Gibraltar and Andalusia," which office he held until 1800.

As Prince Edward, he arrived at Quebec from Gibraltar, August 11th, 1791, in command of the Seventh Royal Fusiliers. On March 7th, 1792, he was deputed Provincial Grand Master of "Lower Canada," by Official Warrant No. 273, by the Grand Master of the rival Grand Lodge of England (Ancients) the Duke of Athole; and was installed with Great Ceremony at Quebec as said Provincial Grand Master, on June 22d, 1792. He resided at Quebec until 1794, when he left with his Regiment for the West Indies.

The great interest of H. R. H. in the Ancient Craft is evidenced by his activity while in Canada and one or two items connected with him may not be out of place. On the 23d November, 1793, the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia presented an address to His Royal Highness an hearing from England that he was appointed Grand Master of the P. G. L. Quebec. A touching incident, proving his Masonic spirit being properly directed was his finding, in March, 1793, that Brother Alexander Galloway, 241 Royal Artillery, died poor, and having left a wife and two children, his Royal Highness having been apprised of the fact advised that the deceased brother be masonic. "y interred, with the request that all the Lodges in Quebec would make a voluntary subscription for the expense of the funeral and the relief of the widow, stating that he would personally attend the funeral and that a band of music would come with him. On another occasion, at a quarterly meeting of Grand Lodge, a brother, speaking to the question discussed, addressed the Grand Master as His Royal Highness, whereupon the Grand Master called the brother to order and said: "Worshipful Brother, there is no Royal Highness here, we are all Brethren." The effect is said to have been electrical, and the incident is often recalled to this day.

The history of the Grand Lodge of Quebec gives his name as Grand Master, beginning with 1792 to 1811, but in 1812 he intimated his desire to resign the Grand Mastership of the G. L. of Lower Canada. He was succeeded by Hon. Claude Denechau, a distinguished Frenchman. At the close of the West India Campaign he was appointed to the Command of Nova Scotia and remained at Halifax for some years. While resident in that city he was presented with an address from the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, by Most Wor. Richard Buckley—Grand Master—extolling him for his great attention to the craft; for the bright example he had always set and exhibited to the Brethren, and the many virtues for which he was so highly distinguished.

To this address, signed by the Grand Master, Richard Bulkley, His Royal Highness returned the following answer:

"To the Members of the Grand Lodge of Ancient Freemasons in Nova Scotia: Brethren,—I return you my best thanks for the flattering address which you have this day favored me. The assurance you give me of your firm adherence to the British constitution, of your loyalty to the person of His Majesty, and your attachment to the whole of his family gives me the truest satisfaction. The notice you take of the exertions I thought it my duty to make in the service of my country in the late campaign in the West Indies is as flattering to me as is the kind interest you have taken in my personal preservation. As it has been, so it always will be a particular duty with me to give any attention to the royal craft as far as my abilities go, and, while I express my grateful acknowledgement of every wish you offer for my present and future happiness, I am happy of embracing the same opportunity of publicly offering my prayers to the Grand Architect of the Universe for the protection of the craft in general, and more particularly for that of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, from the members of which I have just received the most flattering mark of attention in this day's address."

After his return to England, 1798, he was created Duke of Kent and resigned as Grand Master of Lower Canada, in 1812, and was elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England "ancients" in December, 1813.

Elsewhere in this work will be found full information pertaining to the unhappy division into which Freemasonry was divided in England into two separate authorities, known as the Ancients and Moderns, but in June, 1814, the union was effected, by the truly Masonic and philanthropic endeavors of those Most Worshipful and illustrious brethren, their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of Kent and of Sussex, who were Grand Masters of their respective fraternities. At the meeting which finally settled the amalgamation, the Duke of Kent declined further honors and proposed his Brother, the Duke of Sussex, as the Grand Master of the "United Grand Lodge of England." This illustrious Freemason, the Duke of Kent, passed away at Sidmouth on the 23d day of January, 1820, in the fifty-third year of his age, and was interred in the Chapel Royal, Windsor Castle.

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF LOWER CANADA, 1792-1812

FREEMASONRY IN CAPE BRETON

BY BRO. ANGUS G. McLEAN

PAST D. D. GRAND MASTER DISTRICT NO. 9 NOVA SCOTIA, PAST PROV. GRAND PRIOR NOVA SCOTIA.

ALTHOUGH forming a part of the Province of Nova Scotia, we are separated from the Mainland by the Strait of Canso, which is about fifteen miles long, and less than a mile in width in some parts. Cape Breton is about 110 miles in length from North to South, and about 90 miles in width from East to West. It is the Easternmost part of the Dominion of Canada. It is divided into four Counties, viz: Cape Breton, Inverness, Richmond and Victoria, and contains a population of 122,084. It is Masonically divided into two Districts:—No. 9 comprising the Counties of Inverness, Richmond and Victoria, and No. 10 the County of Cape Breton. These Districts are under the supervision of two District Deputy Grand Masters.

In the year 1786 the first lodge in Cape Breton was organized in Sydney, the Charter of which is now in possession of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. The name of this Lodge was "Cape Breton," No. 16. The records of this Lodge from 1811 to 1826 are in possession of St. Andrew's Lodge No. 7, Sydney, and form most interesting reading. On the 27th of August, 1800, another Lodge, called "Harmony," No. 28, was organized in Sydney.

On the 24th of January, 1814, the W. M. of Cape Breton Lodge, No. 16, received information of the union of the two Grand Lodges of Ancient and Modern Masons of England. After the reading of the letter containing this information "the brethren responded with three cheers, with the honors of Masonry." The following officers were elected:—Bros. John Battersby, Robert McComb, Beth Welton, John Laraway and J. . . . . . The descendants of some of these still reside in Sydney. There is no record of any meeting of either Cape Breton, or Harmony Lodges, from the end of 1814 to 1816. In 1818, "it was unanimously agreed by the members of Cape Breton Lodge, No. 16, that the members of Harmony Lodge, No. 28, be admitted as joining members of this body, under the regulations and agreeable to the resolution of October 7th, 1818." On the third Tuesday of November, 1818, Harmony Lodge, No. 28, joined Cape Breton Lodge, No. 16. After the year 1826 there is no record of any meeting of this Lodge having been held.

The next Lodge organized in Cape Breton was St. Andrew's, now No. 7, on the Registry of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. The first meeting of which there is any record, was held in Sydney, December 19th, 1843. The following officers were present viz: W. M. Bro. Rauna Cossit, S. W. Bro. M. Florian, P. M., J. W. Bro. Thos. Kirk, P. M., Sec.-Treas. Bro. Charles Dodd, P. M., Tyler Bro. Howie, P. M.

Being all Past Masters it is presumed they had been members of Cape Breton Lodge, No. 16. The next communication of St. Andrew's Lodge was held on St. John's Day, Dec. 27th, 1843. "The brethren sat down to a sumptuous repast." St. Andrew's Lodge was chartered on the 29th of August, 1844, by the Grand Lodge of England, of which Thomas Dundas, Earl of Zetland, was then Grand Master. It was numbered 732, and worked under this number until the 22nd of Sept., 1863, when the number was changed to 499.

Up to the year 1869, the different Lodges in the Province of Nova Scotia (including Cape Breton) received their Charters and were working under the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland and Ireland respectively. All these Lodges, with the exception of our Lodge in Halifax, agreed to form a Grand Lodge for the Province of Nova Scotia, and on the 24th day of June, 1869, the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia was formed with fifty-one Subordinate Lodges. All these Lodges were at that time chartered.

At the time of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, there were six Subordinate Lodges in Cape Breton, as follows:—

- St. Andrew's, No. 7, Sydney, Chartered Aug. 29th, 1844, with 36 members.
- Royal Albert, No. 19, North Sydney, Chartered Mar. 13th, 1868, with 28 members.
- St. Marks, No. 35, Baddeck, Chartered Mar. 20th, 1866, with 37 members.
- Thistle, No. 36, Port Morien, Chartered April 26th, 1866, with 45 members.
- Tyrian Youth, No. 45, Glace Bay, Chartered June, 1867, with 9 members.
- Solomon, No. 46, Port Hawkesburg, Chartered Mar. 13th, 1868, with 26 members.

Showing a total membership of 181.

The following Lodges have been organized in Cape Breton since the formation of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia in 1869:—

- Morien, No. 55, Port Morien, Chartered Mar. 4th, 1870.
- Richmond, No. 64, Arichat, Chartered June 5th, 1872.
- Sircom, No. 66, Whycocomah, Chartered June 4th, 1873.
- Mariners, No. 80, Louisburg, Chartered April 6th, 1892.
- Inverness, No. 83, Inverness, Chartered June 9th, 1904.
- Sydney, No. 84, Sydney, Chartered June 15th, 1905.
- Royal Oak, No. 85, Sydney Mines, Chartered June 12th, 1907.
- Maple Leaf, New Waterford, Chartered June, 1912.

Morien Lodge, No. 55, Amalgamated with Thistle Lodge, No. 36, in 1869. Richmond Lodge, No. 64, ceased working and surrendered its Charter in June, 1891. The membership of the Chartered Lodges in Cape Breton on the 31st of March, 1911, was 1213.

CAPITULAR MASONRY. On the 5th day of June, 1877, Prince of Wales Chapter No. 10, R. N. S. Royal Arch Masons of Sydney was Chartered. Membership about 175. Maple Leaf Chapter No. 15, R. N. S. Royal Arch Masons was instituted at Glace Bay July 13th, 1903. Membership about 70.

KNIGHTS TEMPLARY. Cape Breton Preceptory No. 43, G. R. C., was instituted at Sydney in 1905, Chartered August 9th, 1906. Membership 125.

GRAND LODGE OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

BY P. R. W. D. G. M., G. W. WAKEFORD AND P. G. M., D. DARRACH

OF THE GRAND LODGE OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

IN the year 1797 a number of Masons residing in the Island St. John (in 1798 the Legislature passed an Act changing the name to Prince Edward Island in honour of Duke of Kent), petitioned the "Provincial Grand Lodge of the Most Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons of the Province of Nova Scotia in North America," for a Warrant of Constitution. The petition was favorably received and a charter granted to St. John's Lodge, No. 26, on the 9th day of October, 1797, signed by Richard Bulkeley, Grand Master; Duncan Clark, Deputy Grand Master; James Clarke, Senior Grand Warden; John Bremner, Junior Grand Warden, and John Selby, Grand Secretary, to open a lodge at the house of Alexander Richardson, or elsewhere in Charlottetown, on the second Tuesday in each calendar month, and on all seasonable times and lawful occasions, appointing Ebenezer Nicholson, Worshipful Master; William Hillman, Senior Warden, and Robert Lee, Junior Warden. The then Lieutenant Governor, Edmund Fanning, was a member of the Lodge, and on the 27th day of December, 1797, presented to it a copy of the Holy Bible, still a part of its furniture. After the union of the two Grand Lodges in England the Lodge was given a new number, 833, and continued as the sole Lodge in Prince Edward Island 'till 1827, when Sussex Lodge was created. It ceased work and was erased in 1837. In 1858 a new Lodge, Victoria, was organized under a Warrant of Constitution received from the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Later on the following Lodges were erected under authority of the Grand Lodge of England: King Hiram, St. Eleanors, 1858; St. George's, Georgetown, 1861; Mount Lebanon, Summerside, and Alexandra, Port Hill, 1863; Zetland, Alberton, 1867; True Brothers, Tryon, 1869.

DISTRICT GRAND MASTER.

From 1797 to 1869 the Lodges holding under authority of the Grand Lodge of England were subject to the authority of the District Deputy Grand Master of Nova Scotia. In the latter year the Lodges in Nova Scotia erected an independent Grand Lodge, the then District Grand Master, the Honorable Alexander Keith, being elected its first Grand Master, he thereby vacated the office held by him under the Grand Lodge of England, leaving the fraternity in Prince Edward Island without a provincial head or one in authority to grant dispensations when required. The matter being brought to the notice of the Grand Lodge in England, the Right Honourable, the Marquis of Ripon, Grand Master of England, in January, 1871, appointed Right Worshipful Adam Murray, District Grand Master for Prince Edward Island.

GRAND LODGE OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

On the 23d June, 1875, delegates, representing the eight Lodges in the province met in Charlottetown and organized the Grand Lodge of Prince Edward Island, and on St. John's Day (June 24th) the Honorable John V. F., Grand Master of New Brunswick, assisted by his Grand Officers, installed the Honourable John Yeo as Grand Master, 1875 to 1880. The other Grand Officers being installed at the same time. Since that period the following have presided as Grand Masters, viz: Neil MacKelvie, *J. W. Morrison, D. Darrach, S. W. Crabbe, *T. A. McLean, R. McNeill, M.D., J. L. Thompson, Leonard Morris, J. A. Messervey, R. MacMillan, *John Muirhead, W. R. Ellis, *Benjamin Rogers, Sr., Chas. H. S. Sterns, W. K. Rogers, D. F. MacDonald, W. P. Doull, W. S. Stewart, and Judge H. C. MacDonald, in 1911.

Past Grand Master W. P. Doull, at the opening of the Thirty-fifth Annual Communication, held June 23d, 1910, said:—

"Like a kaleidoscope, the scenes are always changing—brilliant, sombre, variegated—but changing ever. The same picture is never reproduced, the same circumstances and situations never recur, hence the need of our assembling annually, to receive from the Grand Master a résumé of the past year's work, followed by a deliberation, an approval or condemnation, a lesson of example where commendable, a note of warning where unsatisfactory and an election of some one else to try to do better next year."

Since the establishment of the Grand Lodge seven Lodges have been organized. One has surrendered its charter, leaving fourteen Lodges with a membership on the roll in 1912 of about 750.

Royal Arch Masonry in P. E. I. is under the Grand Jurisdiction of Nova Scotia. There are two Chapters, one in Charlottetown and one in Summerside.

There is also a Council of the Cryptic Rite under the Supreme Grand Council of the Maritime Provinces at Kensington.

The Order of the Temple was established through the efforts of Past Grand Master Dr. R. MacNeill. Prince Edward Preceptory, No. 35, being opened by R. Em. Sir Knight J. B. Nixon, of Toronto, with others, under Dispensation dated Nov. 12, 1895, receiving its Warrant of Constitution from the Great Priory of Canada, dated Sept. 6, A.D. 1896.

The A. & A. S. Rite was also introduced by Ill. Bro. R. MacNeill, 33°, who was appointed Deputy for the Province.

Albert Edward Lodge of Perfection was constituted by Ill. Bro. John A. Watson, 33°, of St. John, N. B., as Special Deputy, on the 23d day of September, 1896, under Dispensation granted by M. Ill. J. W. Murton, 33°, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Snpreme Council of the A. & A. S. R. for the Dominion of Canada, dated August 10, 1896.

A Chapter of Rose Croix was instituted in due course (May 19, 1898), followed in 1909 by a Consistory of the thirty-second degree, opened on the sixth day of July under patent granted by Sovereign Grand Commander Hon. J. M. Gibson, 33°, dated April 12, 1909.

THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW BRUNSWICK

BY THOMAS WALKER, M.D., 33°, P. G. M.

THE history of Freemasonry in New Brunswick may be said to have commenced the 7th November, 1783, when Jared Betts wrote from St. Ann's, N. S., now Fredericton, the capital of New Brunswick, to Joseph Peters, Secretary of the Masters Lodge No. 211, Halifax, to know if he could proceed under a warrant which he held granted by Dermott who is described as the Grand Master of Ireland. The authority to this warrant was denied and a dispensation was actually issued from the two warranted lodges, Nos. 155 and 211, then existing at Halifax. On August 22nd, 1792, a warrant was granted by the Provincial Grand Lodge at Halifax, to Ephraim Betts and others, at St. Ann's, for Solomons Lodge, No. 22—now No. 6, Registry of New Brunswick. New Brunswick was made a separate province in 1784, and the first Lodge instituted there Sept. 7th, 1784, was Hiram Lodge. The second Lodge instituted was St. George Lodge, Mauderville, in 1788. The third Lodge, New Brunswick, was instituted at Fredericton in 1789.

In 1795 Hiram Lodge "rebelled" against the authority of the Provincial Grand Lodge, at Halifax, by which it had been warranted as No. 17. On September 7th, 1796, its warrant was withdrawn by the Provincial Grand Lodge, and all its members, twenty-two in number, were "expelled for apostacy," etc. There were so far as can be ascertained 5 lodges in New Brunswick contemporary with Hiram Lodge, viz., New Brunswick No. 541 at Fredericton; St. George No. 19 at Mauderville, 1788; Zion No. 29 at Kingston, Kings Co., N. B., 1792; Solomons No. 22 at Fredericton, 1792; Hiram York No. 23 at Fredericton, 1793. The first of these lodges was chartered by the Grand Lodge of England, and the others by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia; all of these ceased to exist many years ago. Of the lodges existing at present in New Brunswick St. Johns Lodge No. 2 is the oldest, and was constituted April 5th, 1802, under a warrant issued by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. The ceremony was performed by the R. W. Brother William Campbell, Deputy Provincial Grand Master at St. John.

While it is undoubtedly a fact that steps were taken towards the formation of a Grand Lodge as early as the year 1829, and the Rev. Benjamin Gerrish Gray, D.D., Rector of Trinity Church, actually elected as Grand Master, no further proceedings were taken, and the Grand Lodge so attempted to be formed, apparently died a natural death.

In the year 1867, however, after the confederation of the various Provinces of Canada, there was a meeting of the Masters and Past Masters of Lodges held in the City of St. John on 16th August, 1867, looking to the formation of a Grand Lodge. There were present representatives from Albion Lodge, St. John's Lodge, Carleton Union Lodge, Union Lodge of Portland, New Brunswick Lodge, Hibernia Lodge and Leinster Lodge. It was resolved at this meeting to address a circular to all the lodges in New Brunswick under the jurisdiction of England, Ireland and Scotland stating that this meeting deemed it desirable that a convention be held to consider the present position of Masonic affairs in the Province, and to take such action thereon as may be deemed necessary. The lodges so addressed to be requested to authorize their Masters, Past Masters and Wardens to meet in such convention. Pursuant to this resolution a meeting was held in the City of St. John on the 9th and 10th of October, 1867. There were present representatives from Albion Lodge, St. John's Lodge, Solomons Lodge, Carleton Union Lodge, Midian Lodge, Union Lodge of Portland, Woodstock Lodge, St. George Lodge, Alley Lodge, Howard Lodge, Northumberland Lodge, Miramichi Lodge, Zetland Lodge, New Brunswick Lodge, Hibernia Lodge, Sussex Lodge, Leinster Lodge, St. Andrew's Lodge, and Lodge St. Andrew. Worshipful Bro. B. Lester Peters, P.M., of Albion Lodge, was called to the chair and W. Bro. Wedderburn, P.M., of St. John's Lodge, was requested to act as Secretary. At this meeting it was resolved to form a Grand Lodge of New Brunswick. The delegates from St. Andrew's Lodge asked and obtained permission to retire from the convention, and the delegates from Howard and Zetland Lodges stated that though personally in favor of the resolution they had no authority to record a vote for their respective lodges. The remainder of the lodges unanimously voted in favor of forming a Grand Lodge of New Brunswick. R. W. Bro. Robert T. Clinch was unanimously, and by acclamation, was elected M. W. Grand Master. Brother Clinch, however, while appreciating the compliment paid him, declined to accept the office on account of the official position he held as District Grand Master under the M. W. Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, and which he had not resigned. In consequence thereof, Worshipful Brother B. Lester Peters was unanimously elected in his place as the first M. W. Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick, together with the following: William Wedderburn, Deputy Grand Master; Hon. William Flewelling, Senior Grand Warden; David Brown, Junior Grand Warden; Rev. William Donald, D.D., Grand Chaplain; and William H. A. Keans, Grand Treasurer. William F. Bunting, Grand Secretary.

On January 22nd, 1868, the Grand Master-elect and the other grand officers were duly installed "in the presence of a large and influential gathering of the Craft," of the Registries of England, Ireland and Scotland, "from all parts of the Province," by Worshipful Brother John Willis, Past Master of Hibernia Lodge, and the Senior Past Master of the jurisdiction. The Grand Lodge was thereupon "consecrated and dedicated."

A resolution was adopted proffering equal privileges to all outstanding lodges in the Province, which should adhere to the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick, on or before the 31st day of March following; and that any lodge not of allegiance to Grand Lodge, on or before the 31st of May succeeding, should be dealt with by the Grand Master as he may in his wisdom and discretion determine, until the next communication of Grand Lodge. Ultimately all the lodges in New Brunswick came under the authority of the Grand Lodge and received new warrants.

The V. W. Grand Secretary reported that, immediately after appointment to the responsible office he had the honor to fill, he, with the concurrence of the M. W. Grand Master, addressed a printed note to the Grand Secretaries of the respective Grand Lodges of Canada, the United States and elsewhere, asking to be furnished with copies of their constitution and regulations.

It gave him much pleasure to inform the Grand Lodge that his note met with a willing and hearty response from nearly every jurisdiction addressed.

On motion of the V. W. Grand Secretary, seconded by the W. Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies, it was "Unanimously Resolved That the thanks of the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick be extended to the Grand Secretaries of the respective Grand Lodges for their brotherly courtesy."

The Centennial of the Introduction of Freemasonry into New Brunswick was celebrated July 1st, 1884, and consisted of an imposing procession formed by different Masonic bodies in the City of St. John and the Province of New Brunswick. About 500 Freemasons, accompanied by seven bands of music, appeared in the ranks. The procession marched through the principal streets and passed the location of the first lodge in the city, which was on Britain Street near Charlotte, thence to the Mechanics' Institute where interesting services were held, consisting of an address by M. W. Grand Master John Valentine Ellis, in which he detailed the history of the Craft in the Province of New Brunswick up to that time. He also referred to it in his address at the 18th Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick, held at the Masonic Temple, St. John, on the 28th day of April, A. L. 5885, as follows:

"The most interesting local event of the year was the celebration on 1st July last of the Centenary of the introduction of Freemasonry into New Brunswick. The arrangements were under the directions of a committee of the Masonic organisations in St. John, and the whole of the proceedings interested not only the fraternity but the public generally. I deemed the matter of sufficient importance to justify the calling of an Emergent Communication; and Grand Lodge had the satisfaction of having present a large representation of the Craft in the Province, and the pleasure of receiving a visit from the Grand Master of Nova Scotia, M. W. Lieut.-General Bro. J. Wimburn Laurie, R. W. Bro. William Taylor, Past Grand Master and our representative in the sister Province, with other Brethren from Nova Scotia, and many whom it was a pleasure to greet from the neighboring State of Maine. A Memorial Medal in commemoration of the event was struck by the Centenary Committee, and, with the concurrence of the Board of General Purposes, I gave permission for the Medal to be worn as one of our Jewels, until Grand Lodge should take action in the matter. A permanent regulation thereon should be by constitutional enactment. It is a most agreeable reflection that our fraternity was able to command the services on such an occasion of so able and eloquent an orator as the V. W. and Reverend Bro. D. MacRae, D.D., Past Grand Chaplain, whose masterly address can never be forgotten by those who heard it. In this brief reference I must not overlook the services of Bro. J. Macgregor Grant, who, as Mayor of the City, not only participated in the proceedings at the Mechanics' Institute, but extended generous and courteous hospitalities to representatives of Grand Lodge and to the eminent visiting Brethren."

R. W. Bro. B. Lester Peters, P. G. M., and Representative of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, introduced M. W. Bro. Lieut.-General J. W. Laurie, Grand Master of Masons in Nova Scotia, and R. W. Bro. William Taylor, Past Grand Master of Nova Scotia, a Representative of this Grand Lodge at the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, both of whom were received with the Grand Honors.

M. W. Grand Master the Hon. John Valentine Ellis, on behalf of Grand Lodge, cordially welcomed these distinguished representative Masons to Grand Lodge on such an auspicious occasion, to which they both replied in fitting terms.

On behalf of and in the name of the Centennial Committee the Grand Master invested both visitors with the Medal which had been struck in commemoration of the Centennial.

New Brunswick is divided into five Masonic districts, with a District Deputy Grand Master over each, viz.: No. 1, City and County of St. John and Counties of Kings and Queens; No. 2, Counties of Westmoreland and Albert; No. 3, Counties of Kent, Northumberland, Gloucester and Restigouche; No. 4, Counties of York (except the town of McAdam), Carleton, Victoria, Madawaska and Sunbury; No. 5, County of Charlotte and the town of McAdam.

The following is a list of lodges under the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick:

ALBION LODGE No. 1, N. B. R., was organized Sept. 5th, 1825, under a dispensation dated August 20th, 1825, issued by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. It was formally constituted under its warrant dated January 23rd, 1826, by R. W. Bro. Benjamin L. Peters, Deputy Grand Master.

Freemasonry is in a flourishing and progressive condition in New Brunswick, with a membership of 3061 Brethren at the present time, according to the latest reports of Grand Secretary J. Twining Hartt.

FREEMASONRY IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

BY WILL. H. WHYTE,

GRAND SECRETARY GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC, A. F. AND A. M.

THOUGH traces of the Masonic Craft have been found, which indicate that members of the ancient fraternity had visited "Acadia," now Nova Scotia, upwards of three hundred years ago, and although it has been affirmed by French and other writers that a Lodge of Freemasons existed in Quebec in the year 1755, yet no reliable records are known to be in existence, and Masonry in Canada, or that portion of the Dominion which formed "old Canada" before Confederation, is only reckoned back to the year 1759, when the "Lily" flag of the Bourbon was replaced over New France by the British "Union Jack." With the advent of the British troops, English Freemasonry was transplanted to Canadian soil, or, more strictly speaking, Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry, for the Grand Lodge of Ireland was more largely represented among the regiments that took part in the capitulation of the cities of Quebec and Montreal. In these days many of the regiments in the British army carried traveling warrants authorizing them to hold lodges, and among those taking part in the siege of the first-named city five regiments held Irish warrants, and one an English warrant, and at the latter city five regiments likewise held Irish warrants, one an English and one a warrant from the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Among the number, Lodge 227 of the Irish Regiment in the 46th Regiment of Foot still survives, and is now called the "Lodge of Antiquity," No. 1, on the registry of the Grand Lodge of the Province of Quebec.

Quebec capitulated to the Army of Wolfe, September, 1759, and on the following St. John's Day, December 27th, 1759, eight Military Lodges met to celebrate the festival of their patron saint, and there and then formed themselves into a Grand Lodge, and elected Lieut. Guinnett of the 47th Regiment, a member of Lodge No. 192, under the Irish Register as Grand Master.

FIRST GRAND LODGE. "THE GRAND LODGE AT QUEBEC."

For thirty-three years this Provincial Grand Lodge had control of Masonry, as the Provincial Grand Lodge of Canada, under the Grand Lodge of "Moderns," England, the headquarters being located in the city of Quebec. Among the Grand Masters were Colonel the Hon. Simon Fraser, 78th Highlanders, 1760 (who was installed by Sir Thomas Dunkerley, then an officer on H. M. S., the "Vanguard"), Captain Milborne West, 47th Regiment, 1761; Lieut. Turner, 47th Regiment, 1763; Hon. John Collina, 1765; Col. Sir Guy Carleton (Lord Dorchester), 1786, and Sir John Johnson, Baronet, 1788. This Provincial Grand Lodge chartered many subordinate Lodges, upwards of forty having been traced, the first four being located in the city of Quebec, two, Albion No. 2 and St. John's No. 3, being still on the roll of the present Grand Lodge of Quebec, and the fifth in the city of Montreal, under the name of St. Peter's, No. 4. This Lodge was in active operation for thirty years and lapsed about 1792. In 1767 a Deputy Provincial Grand Lodge was created in Montreal, and Bro. E. Antill appointed Deputy Provincial Grand Master. On November 8, 1770, a warrant was again issued for another Lodge in Montreal, under the designation of St. Paul's, No. 10.

The Provincial Grand Lodge warranted several other Lodges in Montreal and various places, including points on Lake Champlain, Detroit, Kingston, Niagara, Cornwall, Ogdensburg and Rawdon (Ont.) ; the majority of these, however, disappeared at the end of the last century. In 1752 a schism occurred in Masonry in England, and a rival Grand Lodge was formed, which took to themselves the title of "Ancient" and dubbed the premier Grand Lodge the "Moderns." This new body was composed of many of the younger and more aggressive members of the craft, and proved a very formidable rival to the Premier Grand Lodge. The rivalry between the two bodies was at its height when "Prince Edward," Father of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, arrived at Quebec in 1791, with the 7th Royal Fusiliers, of which Regiment he was Colonel. At this time there were three lodges hailing from the "Ancients" in the City of Quebec, who were in a strong and prosperous condition.

SECOND GRAND LODGE. "THE GRAND LODGE OF LOWER CANADA."

With the advent of Prince Edward came a new era in Masonry in the Province. On March 7, 1792, the Grand Lodge of the Ancients in England issued a patent deputing the Prince "Provincial Grand Master" of Lower Canada, and on the 22nd June, 1792, His Royal Highness was duly installed with great éclat (a religious service and procession to the Recollet Church (R. C.) forming part of the ceremony). His Royal Highness remained Grand Master of this Grand Lodge until the year 1813, when he was elected Grand Master of the Ancients in England in succession to the Duke of Athole. The Prince was created Duke of Kent in 1799, and on the amalgamation of the two Grand bodies in 1813 he nominated his brother, the Duke of Sussex, as the Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge. This Grand Lodge of Lower Canada warranted some 26 Lodges between the years 1792 and 1823, five of which are still in existence under the present Grand Lodge of Quebec. These five are: Dorchester, No. 4, at St. Johns; Select Surveyors (now Prevoist), Missisquoi Bay; Nelson, at Caldwell Manor; Golden Rule, at Stanstead, and Sussex (now St. Andrew's), at Quebec. Zion, No. 1, at Detroit, still holds an original warrant, Zion, No. 10, issued by this Grand Lodge, of date September 7, 1794. Among the Montreal warrants were Union Lodge, No. 8, chartered in 1793, which lapsed in 1826; St. Paul's, No. 12, May 1, 1797, (which apparently was applied for and granted to the members of the former St. Paul's, No. 10), and Wellington Persevering, No. 20, formed in 1815 and dissolved 1826. These years were ones of prosperity for the brethren of the mystic tie. In 1816, Union, No. 8, made an effort to raise a fund for the purpose of building a Freemasons' Hall in the city of Montreal and founding a school for the education of children, but the effort did not materialize. The Duke of Kent having resigned, the Hon. Claude Denéchau, M. P. P., was duly elected to succeed him as Grand Master of the Provincial Grand Lodge, which important post he acceptably filled until 1822. Many pleasant and important incidents are related and on record regarding the doings of the craft during these thirty years. The celebration of St. John's Day, the 27th December, was annually held with much enthusiasm. At the request of the Royal Grand Master the lodges in Quebec met and marched in procession for some years to the Recollet (R. C.) Church, which was kindly placed at their disposal, when service was held and a sermon delivered by the Grand Chaplain, the brethren dining together in the evening. Before his departure from Canada, H. R. H. presented an antique Masonic square of gold, with an inscription that it was "a gift from H. R. H., Prince Edward, to the R. W. the Grand Lodge of Lower Canada." This, together with a large "key" of gold surmounted with a crown and monogram, the gift of H. R. H. Prince William Henry, afterwards "King William IV," are preserved with religious care by the present Grand Lodge of Quebec.

THE HONORABLE CLAUDE DÉNÉCHAU, M. P. P.

GRAND MASTER GRAND LODGE OF LOWER CANADA "ANCIENTS," A. D., 1812-1822

The Honorable Claude Dénéchau, Seigneur of Berthier, Justice of the Peace, was a well-known and highly respected Citizen of Lower Canada in the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. He was for some years a member of the Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada, representing therein the County of L'Islet.

R. W. Bro. Dénéchau was for many years a leading and enthusiastic Mason. The existing records do not show in what lodge he was initiated, but likely in some of the Quebec Lodges holding under the "Moderns," for on the 14th of January, 1800, he was "healed" from "Modern" to "Ancient" Masonry in St. Paul's Lodge No. 12, Montreal; then under the Grand Lodge of Lower Canada "Ancients."

The list of officers of this Grand Lodge records that he was Grand Treasurer, 1801, and was a member of Lodge No. 40, in the City of Quebec. He was Junior Grand Warden, 1805; Senior Grand Warden, 1807; Deputy Grand Master, 1811, and elected Grand Master in succession to the Duke of Kent (resigned), on the 29th of December, 1812, holding this office until the Masonic dismemberment of the Province, in 1823, by the newly formed "United Grand Lodge of England."

His eloquent address upon his Installation as Grand Master, in 1812, concludes with the following:

"Let us then as brethren in our respective situations in life, as men and Masons, strive to emulate each other by showing that we are true friends of benevolence, charity and brotherly love, the great basis on which rests our institution, and let us practice the virtues laid down by our rules, which will be the unerring guide to attain that happiness which reigns in the Grand Lodge of the Divine Architect of the Universe."

Again, upon his Installation for the last time as Grand Master of the "Grand Lodge of Lower Canada," he urged upon the Brethren their duty:

"As Citizens, as Husbands, as Fathers, as Brothers let your conduct be straight and exemplary, each fulfilling with honesty and cheerfulness the station to which it has pleased God to call him, refuting the uprightness of his life the Calumnies of his enemies, and above all things adhering with loyal steadfastness to the King and his Government, and to the true principles of that happy Constitution we enjoy under his fatherly protection."

On the 23d of April, 1823, he was installed as Provincial Grand Master of the "District of Quebec and Three Rivers," under patent of the Duke of Sussex, Grand Master of England, which office he held until his death in 1851.

M. W. Bro. The Hon. Claude Denechau, M. P. P.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER OF UNITED "ANCIENT" FREEMASONS OF LOWER CANADA, A. D. 1812-22
DISTRICT G. M. OF QUEBEC AND THREE RIVERS, 1823-36

PROVINCIAL OR DISTRICT GRAND LODGES

The War of 1812 between England and the United States had a very depressing effect on Masonry and the removal of some of the Military Lodges, as well as a number of the Brethren who had taken an active part in the Grand Lodge of Lower Canada, caused this body to become very inactive for several years.

The year 1823 marked another era in the history of the Craft in the Province of Quebec. The Lodges in Montreal, as well as some of the others in the Province, forwarded their Canadian Charters to the recently formed United Grand Lodge of England, and exchanged them for English warrants, and then petitioned England to establish two Provincial Grand Lodges under that Grand Body—one for Montreal and the Borough of William Henry (now called Sorel), and the other for the cities of Quebec and Three Rivers. This request was acceded to, and the Honorable William McGillivray was appointed Provincial Grand Master of the former, and the Honorable Claude Denéchau as Provincial Grand Master of the latter.

The history of these two District Grand bodies during the thirty years that elapsed until a new Canadian Grand body was formed is not an active one, especially in the Quebec District. In the Montreal District several lodges were constituted, however.

In 1836, St. George Lodge was established, it having previously received a dispensation from the Provincial Grand Lodge in 1828. Zetland Lodge was constituted in 1844 and St. Lawrence in 1854. On September 5, 1828, K. n. Claude Denéchau, Provincial Grand Master, installed John Molson, Esq., as Provincial Grand Master of the District of Montreal and William Henry. The Brethren, accompanied by the band of the 76th Regiment, attended Divine service in Christ Church, Montreal, the sermon being delivered by the Rector, the Rev. Bro. Jno. Bethune, Grand Chaplain. In the year 1836, the Grand Master, the Hon. John Molson, died, and the Provincial Grand Lodge did not meet again for over ten years. On May 20, 1846, the Provincial Grand Lodge was again revived, an especial Grand Lodge being held in the Lodge Room in "Macks Hotel" in the City of Montreal, to install the Hon. Peter McGill as Provincial Grand Master. In 1847, the Grand Lodge of Scotland established Elgin Lodge in Montreal, and the Lodge of "Social and Military Virtues" in the 46th Regiment (now Antiquity) was finally located in the same city. In 1849, the Hon. Peter McGill resigned office on account of ill-health and the Hon. William Badgley succeeded him. In the City of Quebec the late Hon. Claude Denechau, deceased, was succeeded by Thos. Harington, Esq., and he in turn by James Dean, Jr., Esq., in 1857. The Provincial Grand Lodge at Quebec finally dissolving in 1870 the members joining the then new "Grand Lodge of Quebec." That of Montreal and William Henry, which had dwindled down to three Lodges after the formation of the Grand Lodge of Canada in 1855 had no active existence, and in the later years of the late Judge Badgley, who was the last Provincial Grand Master appointed by the Grand Lodge of England, it never met.

THIRD GRAND LODGE. "THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA."

The history of Freemasonry in the Province of Quebec can be divided into periods of about thirty years each.

A third period had thus elapsed when in October, 1855, the representatives of forty-one Lodges in Canada West (now Ontario), and thirteen in Canada East (now Quebec), met in the City of Hamilton and formed the "Grand Lodge of Canada," holding jurisdiction over the two Provinces. This governing body gave quite an impetus to the fraternity, and many new Lodges were formed, some thirty in the Province of Quebec.

From 1855 to 1869 this Grand Lodge was the controlling Masonic Power in the Province of Quebec until the Confederation of the Canadian Provinces under one Government.

FOURTH GRAND LODGE. "THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC."

With the birth of the Dominion of Canada, in 1867, appeared an agitation for the formation of separate Grand Lodges for each Province, the Provinces of Canada West and East being renamed Ontario and Quebec. Nothing definite was done until 1869, when a meeting was held in the city of Montreal on August 12, and adjourned until September 24, when it was fully decided to call all the Lodges in the Province to a convention on October 20 for the formation of a Grand Lodge. Upon this date the present Grand Lodge of Quebec was duly formed by twenty-eight of the warranted Lodges then in the Province, M. W. Bro. John Hamilton Graham, LL.D., being elected Grand Master. The Grand Lodge of Canada strenuously opposed this movement, and a number of her Lodges held aloof, and did not at once join in. Matters Masonic were very unpleasant for several years, but in September, 1874, "Canada" finally withdrew from the Province of Quebec, her jurisdiction being now confined to the Province of Ontario only. All her 20 Lodges then in the Province of Quebec affiliated with the new Grand Lodge.

In June 1878, the Grand Lodge of Scotland instituted two new Lodges in the City of Montreal, which together with Elgin Lodge already of its obedience were formed into a "Provincial Grand Lodge." This invasion of territory was energetically opposed by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, who immediately issued an Edict of Non-intercourse. Three years later amicable proposals resulted in the three Scottish Lodges affiliating with the Grand Lodge of Quebec on the 27th of January, 1881, and the dissolution of the Scotch Provincial Grand Lodge.

At the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, the Grand Lodge of England proffered recognition under certain restrictions which Quebec declined, but in 1906 the matter was again considered, resolutions adopted by both Grand Bodies, and an exchange of representatives made, M. W. Bro. the then Pro. Grand Master of England, the Earl Amherst, accepting Quebec's commission, and M. Wor. Bro. Sir Melbourne M. Tait, of Montreal, Chief Justice of the Province of Quebec, receiving a commission from the Grand Lodge of England. Upon the death of Earl Amherst in the fall of 1910, Lord Amphill, who succeeded him as Pro. Grand Master, became the representative of the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Following closely upon this action, St. Lawrence Lodge, No. 640, of Montreal, affiliated with Quebec on the 20th of October, 1906, leaving St. Paul's, No. 374, and St. George, No. 440, still holding under England.

Since the advent of the Grand Lodge of Quebec Freemasonry has made steady strides in the Province. The first five years showed a membership of 2,700 in 40 Lodges, a number of whose warrants have since been returned, some by amalgamation and others through change of population in their localities. The advance, however, has been most marked in the past ten years. In 1901 the roll stood at 57 Lodges and a membership of 3,825. At the last session, 1912, the roll of Lodges had increased to 64 and a membership of 7,021, with assets of over $54,000.

The Brethren who have filled the chair of Grand Master since its formation in 1869 have been:

On the roll of the Grand Lodge of Quebec there are a number of Lodges, whose history and formation, though not going back to the centenary period, have records most interesting, and have given many bright leaders to the Craft.

OLD LODGES

Many interesting incidents could be related of some of the old Lodges now under the banner of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. No. 1 Antiquity, now 159 years old, has had an eventful history. Originating in the 46th Regiment in 1752, under the title of the "Lodge of Social and Military Virtues" it has held its meetings in many parts of Europe, Asia and North America. It was at the capitulation of Montreal in 1760. The Lodge has a Bible still in existence, upon which, tradition hath it, but not proven, Bro. General Geo. Washington took some obligation. In 1777 the chest which contained their belongings fell into the hands of the American troops in Pennsylvania. It was returned by command of the Commander-in-Chief General Washington to the 46th Regiment under a flag of truce. This old trunk again proved unfortunate by falling into the hands of the French at the defence of the Island of Dominica in 1805, but was returned by order of the Emperor, Napoleon I. In 1814 it was in Australia and the first Masonic Lodge to open and hold a meeting on that continent. In 1846 it was again in Canada, at Kingston, and finally located in Montreal in 1847. In order of its age, this Lodge, together with Albion Lodge of Quebec also instituted in 1752, St. John's, No. 3, of Quebec formed in 1787, and originally established the α.<sup>α</sup> Dorchester, No. 4, at St. John's, 1792; Prevoost of Dunham, 1793; Nelson, 1802; Golden Rule of Stanstead, 1803, all over the century mark, are authorized to wear gold lace on their aprons, with St. Andrew's, No. 6 of Quebec established in 1816 fast closing in.

St. George No. 10, Montreal, dates its formation to July, 1829, and among its noted members the name of Lieut.-Col. A. A. Stevenson, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, stands out quite prominently for his strong personality as a Mason and a prominent citizen, and also for many years as an active military officer. M. Wor. Bro. Dr. Aldis Bernard, also a Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada and a Mayor of the City was long an active member.

Zetland No. 12, 1844, presided over for a number of years by M. Wor. Bro. John H. Isaacson, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec for 32 years, and one of its early initiates; as well as by the present Grand Master, M. W. Bro. the Rev. Frank Charters, D. C. L.

Elgin No. 7, 1846, formerly under the G. L. of Scotland, affiliated with the G. L. of Quebec in 1881, and was given the vacant number seven on its roll. It has always been an active Lodge.

St. Lawrence No. 14, formed in 1854, was for 50 years under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England and became a Quebec Lodge on the 20th October, 1906. Its membership has been strong and vigorous.

St. Francis No. 15, of Richmond, formed in 1855, has been noted for its Masonic zeal. The late M. W. Bro. John H. Graham, the first Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, 1869, was long an active member. The third Grand Master, Most Wor. Bro. Sir Melbourne M. Tait, as well as Lieut.-Col. Thos. P. Butler, Grand Master in 1893, were both initiated therein.

Shefford No. 18, Waterloo, also formed 1855, is the Mother Lodge of M. W. Bro. John P. Noyes, Grand Master of Quebec in 1894, as also M. W. Bro. the late H. Lake Robinson, Grand Master in 1888.

Victoria No. 16 of Sherbrooke, instituted in 1856, has given many enthusiastic members to the Craft, and its confrère in the same city, "Prince of Wales Lodge No. 63," formed in 1877, is also an active Lodge.

Montreal Kilwinning No. 20, received its dispensation December, 1859, and has always been a large and energetic Lodge. It celebrated its semi-Centennial in 1910. Among its first initiates was M. Wor. Bro. Isaac H. Stearns, Grand Master 1889, 1890. The late M. W. Bro. J. H. Isaacson assisted at its formation, and held the chair for two years.

Yamaska No. 21, of Granby, and Shawenegan, of Three Rivers, are both over fifty years old, having been instituted in 1860.

Royal Albert No. 25, of Montreal, founded 1864, has given many bright members to the Craft, among the names on the roll, the late M. W. Bro. Frank Edgar was Grand Master in 1890-1891, and M. Wor. Bro. B. Tooke in 1899-1900.

St. John's No. 27, of Mansonville, instituted in 1864, has been a steady, consistent country Lodge, and has Most Wor. Bro. David A. Manson, Grand Master of Grand Lodge in 1905-1906, on its roll.

Ascot No. 30, of Lennoxville (presided over by M. Wor. Bro. I. H. Stearns in 1860); Ashlar 31, of Coaticook; Doric 34, of Danville; Brome Lake No. 35, of Knowlton, and Sutton No. 39, of Sutton, all founded during the years 1867 and 1868.

Mount Royal No. 32, instituted in 1868, has one of the largest rolls of Past Masters. It is the Mother Lodge of Past Grand Masters Lieut.-Col. F. Massey, 1895-96; John B. Tresidder, 1903-04, and Geo. O. Stanton, 1907-08. Montarville Lodge, which amalgamated with it in 1890, brought to it a number of very active Masons, among them the late M. Wor. Bro. J. Fred. Walker, Grand Master in 1886-1887.

Chateauguay No. 36, the Home Lodge of M. W. Bro. J. Alex. Cameron, Grand Master 1909 and 1910, has been for many years an active exponent of the Craft in the County of Huron.

Mount Moriah No. 38, instituted in 1870, has had many active and zealous Masons on its roll. R. W. John McLean, a P. G. P. of G. Chap., is its S. Past Master.

Two Lodges composed of French Canadian Brethren, and whose work is all done in the French language, are on the roll of Grand Lodge, "Les Coeurs Unis" No. 45, founded in 1870, and "Denechau" No. 80, instituted in 1906. This latter Lodge is called after the Prov. Grand Master of Lower Canada, who succeeded H. R. H. the Duke of Kent, in 1812. Both are prosperous and enthusiastic.

A number of Lodges were instituted during the years 1872-74-75, and among those who have been most active and given a number of officers to Grand Lodge are Prince Consort No. 52, St. Andrew's No. 53, Ionic No. 54, and Royal Victoria No. 57, all of Montreal. The latter is now the largest Lodge on the roll of Grand Lodge.

The latest addition to the list of City Lodges is that of The University Lodge, founded in 1911 by the late Dr. James Chalmers Cameron, with Doctors J. J. Ross and T. A. Starkey as Wardens. It is composed of graduates and students from McGill University, and gives promise of being not only a Lodge of much ability, but of great good and assistance to the student life of "Old McGill."

Westmount Lodge, in the suburban city of Westmount, and Waverley Lodge, instituted in the town of St. Louis, now a ward of the City of Montreal, are two Lodges that can compare most favorably with the Lodges in the greater city.

M. W. BRO. ISAAC HENRY STEARNS, 33°

PAST GRAND MASTER GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.

The Grand Lodge of Quebec has given to the Craft many distinguished members, but not one of which the Fraternity is prouder than M. W. Bro. Stearns, born in the town of Dunbarton, New Hampshire, May 3d, 1837. His father, Isaac Stearns, M.D., was an energetic and enthusiastic Freemason and was W. M. of Bible Lodge, No. 93, Goffstown, New Hampshire, in the year 1826.

Bro. Stearns came to Montreal when young and entered into the commercial life of the city, and for thirty years was one of its most successful and eminent citizens. He was for twelve years an Alderman.

As evidence of his benevolence and great generosity to the poor and the suffering, we have but to cite the facts that Bro. Stearns was a Founder of the Verdun Protestant Hospital for the Insane, of which he is a Life Governor. For forty years he has been a Life Governor of the Montreal General Hospital, is a Life Governor of the Western Hospital, of which he was its Honorary Treasurer for twelve years, and was also President of the Montreal Dispensary for two years.

Of his brilliant Masonic achievements and unbounded enthusiasm so much has been written by eminent and able writers, not only in this work but elsewhere, that it would be superfluous to expatiate further upon them here, hence will conclude this brief sketch with the facts from his MASONIC CHRONOLOGY:

Initiated in Montreal Kilwinning Lodge No. 124 C. R. May 14th, 1860.

Was elected its Worshipful Master December, 1864, and re-elected December, 1865.

Elected Grand Junior Warden Grand Lodge of Canada, July, 1866.

Assisted at the formation of Ascot Lodge, No. 188, C. R. at Lennoxville, Que., May 15th, 1867, and was its first Worshipful Master.

Elected Grand Senior Warden Grand Lodge of Canada, July, 1867.

Appointed D. D. G. M. Grand Lodge of Canada for St. Francis district, July, 1869.

In October, 1870, was appointed D. D. G. M. Grand Lodge of Quebec for the district of Montreal. Elected Grand Treasurer Grand Lodge of Quebec, 1878, which office he held for eleven consecutive years, until January, 1889, when he was elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and was unanimously re-elected January, 1890. Again elected Grand Treasurer of Grand Lodge of Quebec, January, 1891, which position he now holds.

Received the Capitular Degrees in Carnarvon Royal Arch Chapter, August, 1861, for which Chapter he was five times First Principal Z. Was elected Grand Treasurer Grand Chapter of Canada, August, 1867, and Grand Principal H, August, 1875. Assisted at the formation of the Grand Chapter of Quebec, December 12th, 1876, and was elected its first Grand Treasurer. On the 21st of September, 1880, he was elected Grand First Principal Z of the Grand Chapter of Quebec, and unanimously re-elected in 1881, but declined to serve. He assisted to organize and was one of the Charter Members of "Richard Cœur de Lion" Preceptory, December 5th, 1863. Elected eminent Preceptor 1873 to 1877 and has served thirty-four consecutive years as Treasurer of that body; was Charter Member of "Sussex Preceptory," Sherbrooke, also Charter Member of "William de la More" Preceptory, Quebec. Served eleven years as Provincial Prior, Quebec, from 1878 to 1889 inclusive. In October, 1882, he received the Honorable Declaration of Knight Commander of the Order of the Temple by patent from H. R. H. Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII.

Illustrious Brother Stearns was one of the Charter Members of the three bodies of the A. & A. Scottish Rite, located in the city of Montreal, and has held many offices in all of them. On the 13th of October, 1875, he was created Sovereign Grand Inspector General 33° in the Supreme Council of the Dominion of Canada. In October, 1898, he was elected M. P. Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Dominion of Canada. He is a member of the Royal Order of Scotland and last year was appointed on the roll of honor.

THE LODGE OF ANTIQUITY, NO. 1, G. R. Q.

BY R. W. BRO. J. BEAMISH SAUL, P. D. D. GRAND MASTER G. L. QUE.

MEMBER OF QUATUOR CORONATI LODGE 2076, LONDON, ENG.

IN considering the upward trend of Freemasonry in some of the famous British Regiments, the student will find much of romance, interwoven with the events of actual historic value of the prowess and kindness of heart of men long since passed away and otherwise forgotten.

In tracing the History of this Lodge, formerly "Lodge of Social and Military Virtues No. 227" in the 46th British Regiment, it is necessary to follow the movements of the Regiment in its wanderings during a period of over a century.

Raised in 1741, and being known as "Murray's Bucks," its first engagement was in Scotland, later in Ireland, the Masons in the corps were granted a Travelling warrant by the Grand Lodge on March 4th, 1752. In 1757 it is found in Nova Scotia, and the next year formed part of the army which went down to defeat at Ticonderoga, July, 1758. Its Colonel being killed, the command devolved upon the Major, Eyre Massey, who had fought at Culloden, won renown at Fort Niagara in 1759, and again at Fort Levi the following year on the advance of the army under General Amherst to the surrender by the Marquis de Vaudreuil, of Montreal, the last stronghold of the French, September 8th, 1760. At this time Colonel Massey, retiring from the 46th, advanced rapidly in his profession, later gaining a peerage as Baron Clarina of County Limerick, and promoted Field Marshal. In 1761-2 the regiment is fighting at Martinique and Cuba, and later, 1764-5 in Canada, around Niagara and Detroit in the fierce warfare of Pontiac and his Indian confederates.

In 1776 it is again in America, operating with much success in the Revolutionary War, at Brooklyn, New York, White Plains, Fort Washington, and following the Americans through New Jersey, wintered at Amboy. In the Spring of 1777, under Colonel Bird, it destroyed the enemy's supplies at Peekskill on the Hudson, then with General Howe in the defeat of Washington's army at the Brandywine River, September 11th, and Germantown, where Colonel Bird fell October 4th. Next the regiment is in Philadelphia with the army of occupation, and later in the fight at Monmouth, N. J., June, 1778, on the passage of the Army to New York, and in September with Major-General Charles (afterwards Earl) Grey in the attack on New Bedford, Mass., then again with Grey in the surprise and slaughter at night of Colonel Baylor's Horse at Tappan, N. J., on the west side of the Hudson September 28th, and while scouting and reconnoitering in that section, is recalled to New York, going aboard the fleet with the army under Major-General Grant, which sailed for the West Indies November 2d, 1778.

In 1805 it is found guarding the Island of Dominica, when the French fleet appears and landing four thousand men sets fire to the town, and after in vain demanding the surrender of the chief officer, departs, taking on board regimental property, including the Masonic chest. After correspondence, the Masonic property was restored some two years later by order of the French Government, with complimentary apologies. The loss of the warrant is recorded by Grand Lodge 1805 with revival in July the same year. Owing to the brave defense of the island, the Royal authority was issued permitting the 46th to bear the word "Dominica" on its colors and appointments.

It has travelled to Australia, and spent many years in Southern India. Being much reduced in numbers, it returned to England in 1833, Captain Lacy, one of the Masons of the regiment, bringing back the chest containing the Bible, warrant and what remained of the jewels of the Lodge which had fallen into decay owing to the heavy toll of its members by disease, death and exchanges. A new warrant was granted, and Lieutenant-Colonel Lacy, with other brethren, were installed as first officers of the revived Lodge in 1834. The regiment continued on its travels, arriving in Montreal in 1845, when the Lodge, having already become dormant owing to changes in the regiment, what remained of the regalia, jewels, books, etc., were transferred by Bro. Captain W. Child, its custodian, to Sergeant-Major W. Shepherd, W. Robinson and R. Balfour, to form a permanent semi-military Lodge in Montreal. The warrant having been returned to Grand Lodge, a new one at the same number was issued July 1st, 1847, when the above named brethren were installed in St. George's Lodge, Montreal, and its career began with varying success.

In 1855 it joined in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Canada, the name being changed in 1857 to the Lodge of Antiquity authorized to wear gold instead of silver and enrolled at the head of the list. After the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, it became affiliated as number one, and the brethren were later commissioned to wear a centenary jewel.

The famous Bible of the regiment, which, from the family history written on its pages during a series of years to 1769, proved to be the property of Benj. West, of Bedford, Mass., was taken away by men of the 46th when that village was sacked September 5th, 1778, during the expedition under Grey, and the following month, when the regiment was foraging and reconnoitering, also under Grey, already alluded to, on the west side of the Hudson, the Masonic chest, with the Bible and regalia, together with other regimental baggage, was seized by a body of American troops operating near the British base.

General Washington at the time (October, 1778) had his headquarters at Fredericksburg, a village a few miles distant on the east side of the Hudson, and was regularly informed of all movements in that section. When the above mentioned capture became known to him he ordered the return, under a flag of truce, of the Masonic property, at the same time sending a message that the Americans were not warring against institutions of benevolence.

In confirmation of these particular events we have the very clear statement found in the oration (preserved in the archives of G. L. of Mass.), delivered at the service held in Boston in memory of the General two months after his decease. Whatever Masonic degree was conferred upon Washington in connection with this Bible, which was a strong tradition handed down to Brothers Lacy, Child and Maxwell, of the old regiment, and which we do not attempt to cast aside, still following the march of events the honor could only have been conferred before the book came into possession of the regiment. Washington was made, passed, and raised in Fredericksburg, Va., 1752-3. Of this fact the records speak for themselves.

In 1782 territorial distinctions having been adopted for the Infantry, the 46th was named the "South Devonshire." In 1903, the Grand Master of New South Wales addressing Grand Lodge, said: "The earliest record of duly recognized Masonic work was in the year 1816, when the Lodge of Social and Military Virtues held meetings at Sydney, and that Lodge No. 227 was its sponsor for 'Australian Social 260,' granted by Ireland in 1820."

Immediately after the defeat at the Brandywine, the Light battalion won the distinction of the "Red Feathers" September 20th, 1777, by a night attack with the bayonet on a detachment of fifteen hundred men hidden in a forest under General Wayne, who had been ordered by Washington to attack any troops who might be found away from the main body. Major-General Grey was sent with a force of light infantry of the 46th and those of five regiments as a counter-blast, and he having detached the flints from the guns, approached Wayne's sleeping camp in silence in two divisions, and by the light of the camp fires made such havoc with the bayonet that those who escaped vowed vengeance, sending word that should they meet again no quarter would be given. The "Light Bobs" replied that to prevent others from suffering, they had stained their "Feathers Red," and throughout the war the light battalion was so distinguished, and later by Royal warrant, the 46th were permitted to wear a "Red Ball Tuft" in memory of bravery on that occasion. The following month, at the battle of Germantown, the men, under Wayne, seeing the light infantry, cried out, "Have at the bloodhounds, revenge Wayne's affair at Paoli."

Notwithstanding the excitement of war and hurried marches, the brethren met, and many fraternal visits were exchanged and kindness shown, even to prisoners between the contending forces. The late Bro. Charles E. Myers, in his records and writings of the G. L. of Pennsylvania, says: "In the Lodge during the turmoil of war, the Royalists and Federalists were wont to meet upon the Square, both sides meeting upon the Level."

The Marquis Duquesne, Governor General of New France, under whose regime Fort Duquesne (Pittsburg captured by the British November, 1758) was built, was a member of the Masonic Order.

The Lodge has in its archives a few of the old jewels, some of tin, very crude in workmanship, also the jewels of a past master and warden, together with a silver trowel, engraved with the donor's name and date, 1819, which are much esteemed. The Bible is still with the regiment, and in its new Lodge "Dominica" is preserved with care, while the Lodge of Antiquity has a fac-simile copy, with about thirty of the pages containing the written data of the West family, which have been photozincographed, with which is bound a paper written by Lieutenant-Colonel Lacy, in which he endeavored to trace the history of the Bible, read by him before the Royal Gloucester Lodge, in Southampton, in 1870.

The Lodge holds an Annual Military Night on the 17th of March, in honor of its Irish origin, when our military brethren, both members and visitors, appear in the uniform of the corps to which they are or were attached, and the banquet hall fittingly decorated with banners, shields and arms, is alive with music, song and story, recalling to mind feats of daring and the fraternal actions of our military brethren of the past.

ALBION LODGE NO. 2, ST. JOHN'S LODGE NO. 3,
AND ST. ANDREW'S LODGE NO. 6.

BY M. W. BROTHER E. T. D. CHAMBERS, P. G. M. G. R. OF Q.

ALBION LODGE NO. 2.

THE earliest written records of Albion Lodge known to be extant are to be found in a Minute Book still in its possession, the first entries in which were made at Woolwich, England, on the 9th of January, 1789. The temporary residence of the Lodge at Woolwich was due to the fact that it was attached for some time to the Fourth Battalion of the Royal Artillery. Less than two years after the dates of the early entries in the Minute Book in question the Lodge had held its first meeting in Quebec. This was on the 4th of November, 1790. It was not then known as Albion Lodge, however, its official designation at that time having been simply "No. 9 E. R. (Ancients)." Not until 1814 was the Lodge known as Albion.

Under a charter for a Lodge in the Fourth Battalion of the Royal Artillery, then stationed in New York, to be known as No. 213 E. R. (Ancients), the Lodge first met in that city on the 3rd of July, 1781, and took part in the following year in the formation of the Provincial Grand Lodge for New York of the Ancients. The independence of the United States having been recognized by England in 1783, the Fourth Battalion of the Royal Artillery was removed from New York to Newfoundland, and thence to England. It must not, however, be supposed that what is now Albion Lodge had no earlier existence than that accorded by charter in New York to old 213. Long prior to the issue of the charter, "No. 9 E. R. (Ancients)" had been engaged in Masonic work. It was chartered as No. 11 on the 12th of June, 1752. To the English warrant of that date can Albion Lodge legitimately trace its lineage, though it passed into possession, in 1787, of what had hitherto been known as No. 213. The latter had practically worked without interruption, save such as was necessitated by the removal of the Battalion to which it was attached from place to place, while No. 9 had remained dormant since about 1760. For the privilege of working in future under the Warrant of No. 9, or Albion as it is now called, "No. 213," in accordance with the then prevailing practice under the Grand Lodge of England, paid five guineas to the Grand Charity. It was only under the English Union enumeration of 1814 that No. 9 of the Ancients became Albion Lodge No. 17 on the New Registry of the United Grand Lodge of England, and not till the 27th of January, 1829, that Albion became, by renewal warrant, a civilian Lodge. It continued its allegiance to the Grand Lodge of England until the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, with which it affiliated by unanimous vote on the 27th of December, 1869.

Its old records furnish many interesting details of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century history of Freemasonry.

For some time there was a Mark Mason Lodge in connection with old No. 9, and half a dozen large pages of the early Minute Book already described are filled with the marks of the different members of the Lodge and with the description of the same.

At a meeting held at the Royal Mortar at Woolwich on the 13th of November, 1789, a complaint was made that a certain Bro. had deserted the Regiment, and as there appeared to be no doubt as to the fact, he was at once excluded by unanimous consent and ordered to be reported to the Grand Lodge.

Prominent Freemasons of Canada

M. W. BRO. J. ALEN. CAMERON
Past Grand Master Grand Lodge Quebec

M. W. BRO. F. T. D. CHAMBERS, 32°
Past Grand Master Grand Lodge Quebec

M. W. BRO. J. H. GRAHAM, PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC

H. G. ELLIOTT, 32°
P. G. Z., Grand Chapter Quebec

EDWARD A. EVANS, 32°
P. G. Z., Grand Chapter Quebec

On the 27th of December, 1790, the first St. John's day spent by the Lodge in Quebec, the Brethren dined together and also sent a delegation to No. 214 (Now St. John's, No. 3), who returned the same compliment.

At first the Lodge met at the home of Bro. Ward; afterwards at Mr. Daly's, St. John street; then at the Cork Arms; later, in their Lodge room over the Artillery mess, and at a still later date, in the Dauphin Barracks.

The quaintly worded minutes of St. John's day, 1791, record that:

"At one o'clock the Wor: Master call'd to order and open'd a Master's Lodge, when having sumptuously dined together, Bro. Burrell had the honour confer'd upon him of passing the chair and setting the Lodge to work in due form. Then the elected officers were regularly install'd with an Anthem and Homaged by the Brethren according to the Ancient custom. A deputation was sent to visit the Brethren of Lodges Nos. 40 and 214, to congratulate with them on the Joy of the Day, the Compliment being gratefully returned by the above Brethren."

The minutes of the 22nd of June, 1792, describe the installation of His Royal Highness, Prince Edward, as Grand Master of Ancient Masons in the Province of Lower Canada, and we are told that R. W. Bro. Alexander Wilson gave the necessary obligation to His Royal Highness. The Brethren then proceeded to the Recollet Church, which stood near the present site of the English Cathedral, where "a truly Masonic sermon was preached by the Rev. Bro. Keith, Grand Chaplain. After Divine service we accompanied the Grand Lodge to where we joined them. Took a respectful leave and returned to our respective Lodges. After dining sumptuously and a repast at half-past four o'clock, the Brethren of No. 9 went by desire of the Right Worshipful Grand Master and joined the Grand Lodge. The usual compliments were passed and returned, the Grand Lodge being closed. We returned to our Lodge room again, where we took regular refreshments till 10 o'clock."

Under date of the 17th of December, 1792, it is recorded that the Wor: Master proceeded to raise certain Brethren to the Degree of a Mark Mason.

A curious misunderstanding occurred in February, 1793, between the Lodge and His Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent, Grand Master, which is instructive as illustrating two important facts: First, that the Lodge was unwilling to admit material into the Lodge as ordinary members, of which it could not approve, even though recommended by the highest authority; and, second, that it was never the intention of the Duke of Kent to recommend such a line of action. The following extracts from Minutes in connection therewith speak for themselves:

"The persons recommended by His Royal Highness, Prince Edward, Grand Master of Ancient Masons for the province of Lower Canada, last regular lodge night, in obedience to our bylaws lay over on our books one month, and came forward by ballot this night: Drum Major Smith, rejected; Biggs, not finally decided: Barefield, rejected; McGinnis to be entered the ensuing Lodge night or before if it meets with the approbation of the body; Fraser found to be under mature age, did not come forward to a ballot."

The following letter was subsequently forwarded to Prince Edward: "We had the honour to explain our reasons for not initiating into the mysteries of Freemasonry part of the Candidates recommended to us by Your Royal Highness. Since which time we have been credibly informed they were all meant to perform as musicians at our grand ceremonies, which, of course, puts them in the same state with those made in December last, who were admitted without a ballot."

"With the utmost humility and respect we beg leave to express our regret in not understanding the intention of Your Royal Highness in this particular.

"We hope Your Royal Highness will not be offended at our close adherence to the laws we have bound ourselves to. At the same time we beg leave to answer you it is both our inclinations and wish to comply with your commands in receiving not only those who met with the approbation of our Body, but also all those that may receive Your Royal Highness' recommendation."

Appearing in the Minute Book immediately after the above letter is the following entry:

"His Royal Highness, Prince Edward, Right Worshipful Grand Master, in open Grand Lodge, was pleased to signify to the Worshipful Master of Lodge No. 9, pro tempore, his entire approbation of the above letter, and at the same time signified his wish that the same might be communicated to Lodge No. 9 on their first night of meeting."

In April, 1855, Albion Lodge donated the sum of ten pounds sterling for the benefit of widows and orphans of Brethren who fell in the Crimean War, and in 1862 the Grand Lodge of England, to which the lodge at that time owed obedience, issued a Centenary Jewel warrant to the Lodge, authorizing the members to wear a special centenary jewel, in celebration of the fact that the Lodge had experienced an existence of over a century.

On the 9th of January, 1880, Albion received a large accession of membership by the amalgamation with it of two Quebec Lodges, Harrington, No. 17, Q.R., formerly Independent Lodge, No. 237, I.R., and St. George's Lodge, No. 23, Q.R., formerly Quebec Garrison Lodge, No. 160, C. R.

Though ranking as No. 2 on the Grand Registry of Quebec, Albion wants but a few weeks of being the oldest Lodge in the jurisdiction. It has just cause to be proud, not only of its early association with the Craft in the Old Land as well as in the New, in New York and Newfoundland as well, but also of its loyalty and devotion to the Mother Grand Lodge of England, remaining of obedience to her until such time as Canadian Freemasonry shared in the constitutional self-government so graciously accorded to the Dominion in a political sense by the Mother Land, and now and for many years past contributing to the peace and harmony of the Masonic world, by its union with and obedience to the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and thus adopting the course so well known to be in harmony with the wishes and desires of the dear old Mother Grand Lodge herself.

Like the other Lodges of the Quebec and Three Rivers District, Albion has had its dark as well as its bright days. The withdrawal of the British troops caused it quite a loss of membership, for it was always a favorite Lodge with the military.

To the Grand Lodge of Quebec it has furnished a number of its most useful and most devoted officers.

Some of the weaker Lodges of the District practically owe their very existence today to the sacrificing labors on their behalf of members of old Albion, who gave freely and ungrudgingly of their time and talents to the work and sustenance of these weaker sisters.

In recent years, prosperity has smiled upon the good old Lodge, the ability and zeal of its officers have been the pride of the District, and the veterans whose interest in its affairs is unflagging have good cause to be congratulatory not only upon the present condition of No. 2, but also upon its prospects of continued pre-eminence in work, in peace and in harmony.

ST. JOHN'S LODGE NO. 3.

THE original Minutes of the establishment of St. John's Number 3 are still in possession of the Lodge, and as fresh and distinct as they were on the day they were written, now close upon a century and a quarter ago. They bear no signature, but are doubtless in the handwriting of Brother Thompson, the first Secretary.

Their introductory portion reads as follows:—

"Lodge of Emergency, Quebec, 30th May, 1768. Present B: Wm. Beatty, W. M." etc., etc.

"The W. Master intimated to the Brethren the cause of their being called together was at the request of Brother Archibald Ferguson, who then informed the Body the reason for his doing so, and opened the business of the day by laying before the Brethren the Warrant from the Antient Grand Lodge of England, and the instruction that accompanied it; the W. Master then proceeded to close the Lodge under the sanction of the Dispensation, when the Body, agreeable to the instructions given, formed a Grand Lodge by virtue thereof."

Brother Archibald Ferguson acted as Grand Master. "Grand Lodge being opened, the Grand Master ordered the Warrant to be read to all the intelligence the Grand Lodge had favored him with, and the instructions for the solemn constituting and installing the officers mentioned in the Warrant. The G. M. ordered the Master who acted under the Dispensation to perform the ceremony of installing the Master to act under the Warrant, when the D. G. M. (Brother Charles Chambers) took the chair the worshipful Brother Archibald Ferguson was installed Master in the Grand Lodge in the name of Grand Master Antrim, Chas. Chambers, Senior Warden, and Samuel Casey, Junior Warden. This finished the business of the Grand Lodge, the G. L. proceeded to close with the usual solemnity and opened a Lodge in the third degree of Masonry, when all the necessary business was performed, the remaining part of the day was spent in harmony, to the general satisfaction of the whole, with every testimony of sincere and warm regard to the welfare and general good of the Antient Craft, and the greatest prosperity to the Antient Grand Lodge of England, and all those under her sanction, of which we have the honor to be a part."

The date of issue of the Warrant was the 22d of October, 1787, as appears by the records of the Grand Lodge, in which the Lodge was recorded as No. 241. This number it retained until the union of the two formerly existing Fraternities of Masons on the 27th December, 1813, when it became No. 302. By the closing up and consequent alteration of numbers in the year 1832, it became No. 214. In the English enumeration of 1863, its last-mentioned number was changed to 182, and under this number it continued its allegiance to the Grand Lodge of England, until the formation of the independent Lodge of Quebec, with which it then threw in its lot.

After 65 years of honorable existence—or slightly more than midway between its organization and the date of the present sketch, it was found that the original Warrant, bearing the honored name of "Antrim" as Grand Master, had "by time or accident" become defaced, and on due representation of the fact having been made to the Grand Lodge of England, and a Warrant of Confirmation applied for, Grand Master the Earl of Zetland was pleased to order the issue of the Warrant of Confirmation, under which the Lodge now meets and works. It is interesting to note that the then W. Master of St. John's, who with his officers applied for the Warrant of Confirmation, was Brother Thomas Douglas Harrington, afterwards Grand Master himself of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and who for many years during his residence in Quebec as Receiver-General, took a prominent part in the affairs of St. John's Lodge and indeed in those of Freemasonry in the ancient capital in general. The Senior Warden who joined in the petition was Dr. James A. Sewell, a son of Chief Justice Sewell, the great friend in Canada of the late Duke of Kent, and a man who played a prominent part in Canadian history.

One of the most interesting incidents in the history of St. John's Lodge was the part taken by it in the installation, as Provincial Grand Master, of His Royal Highness Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, who was at that time (June 22d, 1792) in command of the 7th Royal Regiment of Fusiliers at Quebec. The old minute book already referred to, and which is at present open before the writer at the date just above mentioned, says of the installation ceremony: "The Body proceeded to Frank's Tavern or Freemason's Hall, in order to install His Royal Highness, Prince Edward, as Provincial Grand Master of Lower Canada, which ceremony being performed, a grand procession was formed in order to hear Divine Service at the Recollet Church. After Divine Service was over, returned in form to Frank's, and the Right Worshipful Grand Master closed and adjourned the Lodge till a quarter past four o'clock. At that time the R. W. G. M. opened an Entered Apprentices' Lodge. After drinking several Masonic Toasts, and our thanks returned in ample form, the R. W. G. M. was pleased to close the Grand Lodge and everybody returned to their proper Lodges. After spending the evening in social harmony attended by the Masonic Band, the W. M. No. 241 was pleased to close with the usual solemnities, and the Brethren departed in peace and harmony. Expenses £9 6s 1-1/2. Money collected."

St. John's Lodge carried no drones on its books in its early years. The W. M. on one occasion brought to the notice of the brethren the case of a member who had already missed two meetings in succession and failed to appear also on the following meeting. It was decided to serve the Brother in question with a special summons, and in case of non-attendance he was to be expelled.

On the 11th November, 1789, it was voted to send home the Grand Lodge report and dues, the latter amounting to ten shillings sterling, by the hands of Captain Watt of the Brig Hope. A year later the Lodge was notified that the Hope had been wrecked on the coast of Holland and that every soul perished.

In August 1792, two candidates were recommended by The Duke of Kent for membership in the Lodge and were duly initiated.

Brother Pennoyer, on one occasion, observed a person entering while the Lodge was at refreshments and taking his seat as a Brother. He moved "That he be examined regarding his pretensions. . . and on being examined was found not worthy of sitting in this Body, having pretended to be a member of No. 40 Nova Scotia. His name is James McDonnell, but as he could give no further satisfaction he was desired not to attempt the like in future."

Brother Alex. Galloway of the Royal Artillery, a member of Lodge 241, died on the 18th March, 1793, leaving a widow and two children in poor circumstances, "and without the means of interring him in a decent manner." When the case was brought to the notice of the Prince, he gave orders to the different Lodges to assemble for the funeral, declaring that he would be there himself and that there would be a band of music. He also urged that subscriptions should be taken up for the distressed family. After the funeral a vote of thanks was passed by Lodge 241 to "our royal and R. W. Grand Master for his personal attention and his distinguished affability in promoting the good of Masonry by ordering such a splendid interment to our late Brother Galloway."

The Lodge records furnish further proof of the deep interest taken in the Craft by His Royal Highness during his stay in Quebec. A report of a Committee of members of the Lodge written in 1806, states for instance that "a social intercourse of visitation" was recommended to them by His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent.

The Masonic charity of the brethren of old 241 even extended to their country's prisoners of war, and during the war of 1812-14 between the United States and Canada, they voted the sum of two pounds for the relief of a Brother who was an American prisoner of war in the Quebec jail, and whose needs had been represented to them.

Persistent drunkenness was punished by the Lodge in those days by expulsion, while profanity, like non-attendance at Lodge meetings, called for the payment of fines.

On several occasions the Lodge attended the Duke of Kent, at his request, during his Grand Mastership, and the minutes of the celebration of St. John's Day, 1792, show that the brethren went with the Grand Master to church to hear Divine service, which was performed by Brother Wetherall, Grand Chaplain, and then at 7 o'clock met him again for the installation of officers, after which "His Royal Highness," says the minutes, "was pleased to enjoy in company several Masonic songs and toasts selected for the occasion," the day having been spent "with that harmony and conviviality so conspicuous among the ancient Craft."

Many of the leading citizens of Quebec during the last century and a quarter were members of St. John's Lodge, as it is now called, and many other leading Masons of the same period, besides the Duke of Kent, have closely identified themselves with the members and the meetings of this time-honored Lodge.

Two prominent members of St. John's Lodge, namely, H. P. Leggatt, Past Master, and George Veasey, Treasurer, were among those who signed the call for the convention which met in Montreal on the 20th of November, 1869, to establish the Grand Lodge of Quebec. It was another distinguished Past Master of the Lodge, in the person of Brother James Dunbar, who presided at the convention in question, and who became the second Grand Master of the newly formed jurisdiction.

During a portion of the last decades of the nineteenth century a period of depression, almost amounting, for a time, to stagnation, was experienced by St. John's Lodge, but such a revival of prosperity has marked its more modern history, such ability and zeal have distinguished its management and work, and such a series of brilliant successes has attended the administration of its affairs by those who have presided over its destinies for several years past, that it may be truthfully said that its high rank as No. 3 upon the Grand Registry of Quebec is justified, not only by the age of its Charter, but also by the efficiency of its work and its devotion and zeal to the principles and teachings of the Craft.

ST. ANDREW'S LODGE NO. 6.

ST. ANDREW'S LODGE No. 2, Quebec, which was attached to the famous 78th Regiment of Highlanders in 1760, then in garrison in the Ancient Capital, is supposed by M. W. Brother Graham to have had a continued existence, some years later, with change of allegiance, as "St. Andrew's Scotch Lodge," No. 349, R. S., working under a Warrant granted by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and dated the 2d of August, 1819. The above supposition led Brother Graham to remark that "further researches 'may show' that St. Andrew's Lodge No. 6, Q. R., is of actual descent from the St. Andrew's Lodge No. 2, Quebec, 1760, attached to the famous 78th." Unfortunately for what would undoubtedly have been a source of much pride of pedigree to the members of No. 6, G. R. Q., there is nothing to establish any such connection. On the contrary, it is only necessary to compare the date of St. Andrew's of 1819 with that of the origin of the present St. Andrew's, No. 6, in order to prove its absolute impossibility. The present St. Andrew's received its Warrant on the 29th April, 1816, from the Grand Lodge of Lower Canada, under the Jurisdiction of the Antient Grand Lodge, or Antient York Masons of England. This Warrant was for the holding of Lodge No. 22, afterwards known as Sussex Lodge. So that St. Andrew's, No. 6, was really in existence, under another name, three years before St. Andrew's Scotch Lodge of 1819 origin.

Sussex Lodge, as the present St. Andrew's was at first called, received a Warrant of Confirmation in June, 1825, on due petition therefor, from the United Grand Lodge of England, through the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec and Three Rivers, under which it worked as 1801 and afterwards as No. 531, when on the 9th of May, 1849, the Lodge delivered up its Warrant from the United Grand Lodge of England to Sir Allan MacNab, Provincial Grand Master in Canada for the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and received in lieu thereof, a dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Scotland for Lodge St. Andrew, subsequently No. 356. The same W. M. Brother William Clark, who had ruled the Lodge as Sussex No. 531, G. R. E., and who presided as W. M. of such Lodge on the 10th April, 1849, opened his Lodge the following month as St. Andrew's, No. 356, G. R. S., and read the dispensation from Sir Allan MacNab, which was his Warrant for so doing. The minutes of the Lodge fail to show either when or why application was made by the members of Sussex Lodge for a Scotch Warrant under the name of St. Andrew's, but it may have been brought about by a difficulty which seems to have existed about credit for dues. The following not over clearly expressed entry appears in the minutes of the meeting of the 11th July, 1848. "The quarterly return from the Grand Lodge of England having been received, up to the 1st March, 1848, after having perused the same, 'Sussex' still remains blank in regards their monies, in acknowledgement to their having sent home, on former occasions."

Sussex Lodge was so called after H. R. H. the Duke of Sussex, Grand Master from 1813 to 1842, of the United Grand Lodge of England, and it is understood that the beautiful old chairs used by the principal officers of the Lodges with backs formed of Masonic devices, were presented to it by His Royal Highness.

Another much prized relic of the Lodge's early days is an old snuff mull which was lost for a number of years and finally recovered in June, 1848, through the good offices of Albion Lodge. This action was so much appreciated that a resolution was moved and seconded by all the officers and brethren present to the effect "that the unqualified thanks of Sussex Lodge be given to Albion Lodge for the prompt and Masonic manner in which they responded to the request of Sussex Lodge regarding a snuff mull, and that a copy of the above resolve be transmitted to the Wor. Master of Albion Lodge, assuring him that the Sussex Lodge highly value this proof of the fraternal spirit of Albion Lodge."

There was some delay in receiving the Charter of St. Andrew's Lodge from Scotland, and there are letters in existence showing that direct charges of neglect of Masonic duty were in consequence laid against Sir Allan MacNab, the representative in Canada of that Grand Lodge.

By the removal of the 54th Regiment from Quebec to Kingston, in 1853, the Lodge was deprived of thirteen of its best members, and a resolution was passed expressive of regret at the parting. The thirteen brethren in question were also entertained at a farewell dinner.

The Degree of Past Master was quite commonly conferred in this Lodge upon brethren who had but just before taken the Master Mason's Degree, and frequent mention of the fact is made on the minutes.

Some of the entries in the various minute books of the Lodge are worthy of special mention. Thus in describing the calling off of the Lodge from labor to refreshment on St. John's day, 1849, the Secretary records as follows: "The Junior Warden having erected his column, the Brethren refreshed themselves according to their several inclinations until 6 P. M., when they sat down to an excellent dinner, when, after having honored the day in the usual manner, also sending and receiving deputations of congratulations to and from the city Lodges of Albion and St. John's, the W. M. was pleased to close his Lodge in good time and with solemn prayer. The Brethren then departed to their respective homes well satisfied with Masonry, themselves and their entertainment."

In October, 1869, St. Andrew's Lodge co-operated in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, becoming No. 5 Q. R., in 1870, and No. 6, in 1876. Two of the Past Masters of the Lodge signed the call for the Convention at which the Grand Lodge was established, and one of them, R. W. Brother John Soles Bowen was elected the first Deputy Grand Master of the newly-formed Grand Lodge.

St. Andrew's has furnished two Grand Masters to the Grand Lodge of Quebec, the first Brother from the Quebec District to hold that office having been M. W. Brother James Dunbar, who presided over the convention at which the Grand Lodge was formed, and who was an honorary member of St. Andrew's Lodge. The Lodge has always been noted for the efficiency and zeal of its officers and members, and has furnished to the Grand Lodge some of its most active and most devoted members.

DORCHESTER LODGE.

A. F. &amp; A. M. NO. 4 OF ST. JOHNS.

Dorchester Lodge, No. 4, located at St. Johns on the Richelieu River, about 24 miles south of Montreal, is one of the historical Lodges of the Province of Quebec, and dates its institution to the year 1792. The conflagration of 1876, which destroyed the greater part of the business portion of the Town of St. Johns, swept away all the minute books and many rare records, documents and Masonic relics belonging to this old, historic and centenary Lodge, which for over one hundred years, with varying success, had strived and struggled on the banks of the "Richelieu," and was named in honor of Sir Guy Carleton, "Lord Dorchester," Governor of the Province from 1786 to 1796, and who was acting Grand Master of the Provincial Grand Lodge in 1785-1787.

The appellation of "Dorchester" likewise designated the Town of St. Johns at this time, and in Bonchette's "Canadian Topography," 1815, it is referred to as the Town of Dorchester and Fort of St. Johns in the "Barony of Longueuil," in the Counties of Huntingdon and Kent. The town was also known as St. Johns-Dorchester, but in later years the latter part of the designation was dropped.

1790.—The earliest information is to be found in the minutes of No. 241, A. Y. M., in the city of Quebec, now called St. Johns Lodge, No. 3, Q. R., for at a meeting of the said No. 241 held at the Merchant's Coffee House at Quebec, November 3d, 1790, a letter was read from Sergeant-Major Reid, of the 65th Regiment, and Master of Lodge No. 631, Irish Register, stating that a number of the inhabitants of St. Johns in this Province wished to get an "Ancient Warrant" from the Grand Lodge. It was resolved to forward the information and that No. 241 would recommend them.

1792.—The next record is of date March 14, 1792, and is also from the minutes of Lodge No. 241, wherein it is stated that "a letter was read from Mr. William Thompson endorsing another from Brother Thomas Franks, of St. Johns Fort, asking advice and assistance how he and other brethren could obtain a warrant. A brother, Patrick Conroy, being present, named the following brethren as officers, viz: Simon Zilotas Watson, Master; Thomas Franks, Senior, and James Bell, Junior Wardens.

It was agreed to lay the letter before Lodge No. 9 (now Alhion No. 2) and Lodge No. 40 (then Merchants) and with their concurrence to petition H. R. H. Prince Edward after his installation as Grand Master, to grant the first warrant under his sanction to the brethren of St. Johns.

The petition was duly granted, but the desire of the brethren of St. Johns to receive the first warrant from Prince Edward was not realized, for the first charter was issued to the "Glengary Lodge, No. 1," 2d Batt. Royal Canadians, the next to the "Royal Rose" Lodge, in the 7th foot at Richelieu (now Sorel), the third warrant, however, going to St. Johns under the nomenclature of "Dorchester" No. 3.

H. R. H. Prince Edward (created in 1799 Duke of Kent) father of Her late Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, arrived at Quebec in March 1792 in command of the 7th Royal Regiment of Fusiliers. He immediately formed the Lodges then existing into the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lower Canada (Ancients) and was installed as Grand Master on the 22d day of June, 1792.

The old warrant of Dorchester Lodge is still in existence and is at present in the custody of the Grand Lodge of England. It bears the signatures of "Edward," Grand Master; Alexander Willson, Deputy Grand Master; Jonas Watson, Senior Grand Warden; Thomas Ainslie, Junior Grand Warden; and James Davidson, Grand Secretary.

1793.—A record of this date states that Dorchester No. 3 purchased three Lodge chairs from Lodge No. 7 in the Sixth Regiment of Foot, which at this time was temporarily stationed at Fort St. John, but was ordered off to Europe, Great Britain having declared war against France.

Tradition connected these chairs with H. R. H. Prince Edward during his residence in Quebec, and they were much prized. Unfortunately they were destroyed in the disastrous fire previously mentioned.

1795.—R. W. Bro. Thos. B. Harris, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Canada, in 1859 endorsed the following on the Warrant of Dorchester Lodge:

"It appears from a minute book now in possession of this Lodge that No. 3, A. Y. M., was regularly working in St. Johns, Dorchester, as early as the 2d of July, A. L., 5795, and continued to meet up to the year A. L. 5818, when its officers were regularly installed. From which date no minutes transpire until revived under Dispensation on the 4th day of April, A. L. 5843."

1815.—In connection with the above record a Lodge certificate still in existence bears the following: "And God said, 'Let there be Light.'" We, the Master and Wardens of Dorchester Lodge, No. 3, A. Y. M., held in the Town of Dorchester, in the Province of Lower Canada (now Quebec), under the patronage of His Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent, do hereby certify that the bearer, and beloved Brother, James Badger, who has signed his name in the margin, has been regularly entered, passed and raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason in our said Lodge. His upright conduct during his residence among us induces us to recommend him in the strongest terms to all the Fraternity wheresoever convened or congregated round the Globe.

"Given under our hands and the seal of our Lodge at Dorchester, this 10th day of April, 1815, and in the year of Masonry, 5815, (Signed) Louis Marchand, Master; Thomas Gouden, Senior Warden; James Drennon, Junior Warden; Morey Bingham, Secretary."

1816.—The Parish Record Book of St. James Episcopal Church, St. Johns, contains the following entry:

"The corner-stone of St. James Church was laid in Dorchester, in the Province of Lower Canada, the 22d day of July, A. D. 1816, and the 56th year of the reign of His Majesty George the 3d, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, by the Reverend Micajah Townsend, Minister of Caldwell and Christie Manor in the name of the Holy and undivided Trinity, and the event celebrated with Masonic honors by the members of Dorchester Lodge, No. 3, A. Y. M., acting under the Warrant of His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, G. M."

1823.—The Province of Lower Canada (Quebec) was now divided into two separate Masonic districts under England, and called the District of Quebec and Three Rivers; and the District of Montreal and William Henry. In a Provincial list, of date 1824, Dorchester Lodge is numbered No. 1, and in 1848, No. 4.

1842.—In 1842 R. W. Bro. Ben. Burland was transferred from the "Customs" in Montreal to the Port of St. Johns, when he gathered the old members of "Dorchester," No. 3 together, and revived the Lodge, which had been for some time dormant, and sent a petition to the Grand Lodge of England, which now held jurisdiction in the Province, for a Charter. The Grand Lodge issued a Dispensation dated April 4th, 1843.

1846.—Of date August 1, 1846, Dorchester Lodge obtained a warrant numbered 775, E. R. The warrant had the signatures of "Zetland," the Grand Master, Worsley, D. G. M., and William H. White, Grand Secretary.

In this year the Lodges in Montreal together with Dorchester Lodge called a meeting and reorganized the District or Provincial Grand Lodge for the District of Montreal and William Henry, which had been for some years dormant.

1855.—The Grand Lodge of Canada, with jurisdiction over the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada (now Ontario and Quebec) was formed on the 10th day of October, 1855, and Dorchester Lodge was represented and took part in the formation.

1859.—On petition Dorchester Lodge obtained a renewal Charter or Warrant of Confirmation from the Grand Lodge of Canada, dated August 1st, 1859.

1869.—The Majority of the Lodges in the Province of Quebec met and organized the Grand Lodge of Quebec. The members of Dorchester Lodge, however, declined to affiliate with it, whereupon a number seceded and obtained a Warrant from the G. L. of Quebec on the 26th of September, 1872, under the name of "Burland."

1873.—For a number of years Dorchester Lodge was attached to the Bedford District under Canada, and at the Annual Communication this year, R. W. Bro. Geo. H. Wilkinson was elected as D. D. G. M. of the District.

1874.—On the 23d of September, 1874, Dorchester Lodge, No. 4, Canada, affiliated with the Grand Lodge of Quebec and ultimately became No. 4, under that G. R.

1876.—What is still called the great fire of St. Johns took place this year. The Masonic Hall was completely destroyed, and the Lodge lost all its old and valuable possessions and documents, many of them priceless.

1877.—Burland Lodge united with Dorchester Lodge on the 4th day of December.

1884.—At the Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of Quebec in January, 1884, Dorchester Lodge was transferred to the Montreal District where it had been attached to the Provincial Grand Lodge thirty years previously.

1892.—July 20, 1892. The Centenary Anniversary of Dorchester Lodge was held this date. The Grand Master and many of his Grand Officers paid the Lodge a visit and participated in a most enjoyable excursion up the historic Richelieu River, or "River of the Iroquois," as it was called by the French settlers of New France, and the Lodge has since worn gold fringe on their aprons and collars as a centennial lodge.

A number of the past masters of this lodge have held rank in Grand Lodge. R. W. Bros. G. H. Wilkinson and George T. Morehouse, D. D. G. Ms; R. W. Bros. I. B. Futroye and E. R. Smith, Grand Registrars; Rev. Bros. Canon Renaud and the Rev. W. Windsor, Grand Chaplains; V. W. Bros. J. I. Phillips and W. J. Wight, Grand Directors of Ceremonies.

GOLDEN RULE LODGE, No. 5, Q. R.

Golden Rule Lodge, A. F. & A. M., located at the border town of Stanstead close to the line between the Province of Quebec and the State of Vermont, is one of the Centennial Lodges of Quebec. The Lodge possesses its original charter ordered issued by the Grand Lodge of Vermont, October, 1803. It was then named "Lively Stone" Lodge, and located on the boundary between the present villages of Rock Island, Quebec, and Derby Line, Vermont. Their first hall was destroyed by fire, the second was situated on the boundary line with entrances from the Canadian and Vermont sides.

The War of 1812 between England and the United States caused a readjustment of this friendly intercourse, and it was decided by the Canadian Brethren, who were in the majority, that it would be better to open in the village of Stanstead, a few miles from the border on Canadian territory, in order to allay the suspicions of the civil authorities, and application was made to the Grand Lodge at Quebec. was granted under the name of "Golden Rule" Lodge No. 19, December 27th, 1813, and signed by the Hon. Claude Denechau, Grand Master. Twenty-two names were on the petition, two of them being also the charter members of the original "Lively Stone" Lodge, and they were duly instituted January 18th, 1814.

The Grand Lodge at Quebec becoming somewhat dormant, 1820 to 1823, a number of the Lodges exchanged their Canadian Warrants with the newly amalgamated "United Grand Lodge of England" for English charters, and Golden Rule Lodge among the number, obtaining Warrant No. 517 E. R., of date April 26th, 1824, signed by the "Duke of Sussex," Grand Master. The majority of the Quebec Lodges thus coming under control of the Grand Lodge of England, the Province was divided into two Provincial or District Grand Lodges and designated "Quebec and Three Rivers" and "Montreal and William Henry."

Golden Rule came under the rule of the latter Provincial Grand Lodge, and its charter was endorsed by the Hon. Peter McGill, the Provincial Grand Master, at Montreal, March 24th, 1847.

In 1856 the Brethren in the Provinces of Canada East and Canada West (now Quebec and Ontario) formed a Grand Lodge for both the Canadas, and Golden Rule Lodge threw in its lot with the new Grand Body and received Warrant No. 8 from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and signed by Wm. Mercer Wilson, Grand Master, of date April 30th, 1856.

In 1857 it received permission to hold a Lodge once in every year on the top of "Owls Head" Mountain, 2,400 feet high, on the shores of Lake Memphremagog, which can be seen from their present Lodge room. Many notable Lodge meetings have since then been held in accordance with this authority.

On the 20th October, 1869, Golden Rule co-operated in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and has been an ardent supporter of that Grand Body since that date. Under their Warrant Golden Rule Lodge claimed authority, as a number of others in the early days did, to work other than the Craft degrees, and their records show that the Mark Degree was conferred in 1817, 1818 and 1819, and that on the 22d April, 1821, they organized a Chapter of Royal Arch Masons under the name of St. John's Chapter.

On the 21st May, 1861, the Grand Lodge of Vermont generously handed to Golden Rule Lodge the original charter of "Lively Stone Lodge," by which they were designated and held Lodge at Derby Line, Vermont, previous to 1812. In April, 1903, Golden Rule Lodge submitted proofs of their existence for 100 years and received authority as a Centennial Lodge to wear gold lace on their Regalia and celebrate their Centenary. This was accordingly held on June 24th, 1903. The Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, M. Wor. Bro. J. B. Tresidder and most of his Grand Lodge officers attending. The Master of the year was R. W. Bro. A. N. Thompson, and all the chairs were filled by Past Masters R. W. Bros. H. E. Channell, W. M. Pike, R. C. Parsons and E. W. Morrill. Chairmen of the various committees arranged a most entertaining programme. The three neighboring villages of Rock Island, Derby Line and Stanstead being "en fête" and gaily decorated for the occasion, a large concourse of Brethren from both the Province of Quebec and the State of Vermont joined in the festivities. The Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Vermont, M. W. Bro. O. W. Daly, with many of his Grand Officers, joining with the Grand Master of Quebec and his suite. The Lodge has had a most interesting history, and by authority given them by the Grand Lodge of Vermont, has concurrent jurisdiction across the border in the Vermont village of Derby Line.

ST. PAUL'S LODGE, MONTREAL, NO. 374, E. R.
BY A COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY THE WORSHIPFUL MASTER OF THE LODGE.

THE history of St. Paul's Lodge, which is without doubt one of the oldest Lodges in Canada, takes one back to the commencement of British Rule in Canada. Shortly after the capitulation of Montreal in September, 1760, a brief reference to its founding is noted in an old book which belonged to one of the Past Masters, but which is now in the possession of the Lodge; and in 1770 a Warrant issued to St. Paul's Lodge by the then Provincial Grand Master, Honorable John Collins, gives authenticity to its early establishment in Canada; but the fire which, on the 23th April, 1833, destroyed the Masonic Hall, where St. Paul's Lodge had held meetings for several years, destroyed at the same time, and without almost any exception, the old books, records and papers belonging to the Lodge. This was a very serious loss, as much information, valuable in antiquity as well as in material, for compiling any history of the Lodge, and extending no doubt a long way back, was irretrievably lost.

The earliest mention of St. Paul's Lodge has reached us in a curious manner. Some time ago, in December, 1869, through the courtesy of the Mechanics' Institute of this city, an old book from the Library of that Institution, called "Looking unto Jesus," came into the possession of the Lodge. This book appears to have been printed in Edinburgh, in 1723, and it bears on its title-page the name of its owner, in his signature—Gwyn Owen Radford,—who was Master of St. Paul's from December, 1803, to June, 1804. On the inside cover of this book is pasted part of a summons of St. Paul's Lodge, No. 12, dated Montreal, 8th June, 1818, and on which was written, apparently in Bro. Radford's handwriting, "Founded by Lord Abordour's Warrant 1760." Now Lord Abordour was Grand Master of England from 18th May, 1757, to 3rd May, 1762, and, during his term of office, a Provincial Grand Master was appointed in Canada (see Preston's Masonry, sec. 10). This points to the actual existence of St. Paul's Lodge ten years earlier than shown in any other record, and, though unsupported by any other testimony available, it is not likely, seeing that a Provincial Grand Master was appointed to Canada, at some period between 1757 and 1762, that this statement would have been put forth, unless it was known to have been the fact and could have been established at that time.

While, of course, it cannot therefore actually substantiate the existence of the Lodge at this early date, incidental circumstances point to its extreme probability. It was a period of great activity in Masonry, which was very flourishing, both in England and abroad, under the English Constitution; so much so, as to be called the "Golden Era of Free-Masonry." This being so, with a Provincial Grand Master appointed to Canada, there is every reasonable ground for belief that a regularly constituted Lodge, under a Warrant derived from the Grand Lodge of England, was working in Montreal, then a place of some importance, as far back as 1760, but, whether before, or after, its capitulation to the British Forces, on the 8th September of that year, we have no means of ascertaining. It is quite possible, however, that at this period a "St. Paul's Lodge" may have been attached to one of the regiments under command of General Amherst, at the capitulation, as some ten or eleven thousand men were here at that time, and encamped in and about the neighborhood of what is now the Beaver Hall portion of the city, and if this were so, it would, of course, move with the regiment, and so explain the later date of a warrant issued to a "St. Paul's Lodge," with a fixed domicile in the city, the name of which may have been suggested by recollections of the other.

But, that St. Paul's Lodge was established in Montreal, as early as the year 1770, by warrant dated 8th November, 1770, granted by the R. W. and Hon. John Collins, Provincial Grand Master for Canada, by virtue of a Patent from His Grace the Duke of Beaufort, who was Grand Master of England from 27th April, 1767, until 4th May, 1772, and which Patent bore the date of London, 2nd September, 1767, admits of no doubt whatever. This Patent or Warrant was in existence in 1831, and was destroyed by fire in April, 1833, and though it has been impracticable to ascertain the names of the Masters who presided over the Lodge from that year until 1778, the names of those who filled the Chair from that date onwards, and in regular succession, down to the present day, are known and given in the various editions of the By-Laws and History of the Lodge. The list, up to December, 1830, inclusive, was compiled from official documents existing in 1831, by the R. W. Bro. D. P. G. M. Frederick Griffin, Q. C., an old Master of St. Paul's, and, from that date down to the present time, the list is completed from existing and regular records of the Lodge.

Among the documents in existence connected with the Lodge, and which carry it back to 1797, is a copy of the By-Laws printed in 1814, the preamble to which, dated Montreal, 18th August, 1797, sets forth that they are the "Rules, Orders and Regulations which are to be punctually observed and kept by the Free and Accepted Ancient 'York Masons of St. Paul's Lodge, No. 12, held in the City of Montreal, in the Province 'of Lower Canada." The Lodge derived its Charter of 1760, and that of 1770, from the Grand Lodge of England, whose central authority was in London; and though the Provincial Grand Lodge, which issued the Warrant to St. Paul's Lodge, in 1770, appears to have lapsed from some cause now involved in obscurity, yet another Provincial Lodge was established at some period antecedent to 1791, with the R. W. Bro. Sir John Johnson, Bart., as Provincial Grand Master, under authority of a Warrant from the Right Hon. Thomas Earl of Effingham, acting G. M. under His Royal Highness Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, elected Grand Master of England in 1781. And while it is natural to suppose that St. Paul's Lodge then hailed from that Grand Lodge, it is found working in 1797, under the Grand Lodge of all England, deemed the Mother Lodge of England, and whose central authority was in the City of York. These bodies were quite distinct in their jurisdiction, and wholly independent of each other; but we have no means now of arriving at the causes which led to the lapsing of the old Warrants, to the change of jurisdiction, or to the period when it took place.

Considering that authentic records did exist to show that St. Paul's Lodge was regularly established in 1770, it may seem somewhat strange that it does not hold a higher position at present on the Registry of England; but no record can be found that it ever had a status on it prior to 1824, when the Lodge was No. 782 E.R. From the subsequent renumbering of the Lodges, it became No. 514 E.R., in 1832, and so continued until 1863, when it ranked No. 374 E.R., at which it now stands. A copy of a Circular Letter, dated Quebec, 27th Dec., 1820, addressed to masonic bodies, by the Chevalier Brother Robert d'Estimauxville, Grand Secretary of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lower Canada, held at Quebec, gives a list of Grand Officers for the year 1821, with a list of the Lodges under its jurisdiction; of these, three only, and all meeting in Quebec are on the Registry of England; the others, twenty-six in number, are on the Registry of Lower Canada; and St. Paul's Lodge appears as No. 12. In the early days of the Lodge, up to 1783 inclusive, it was No. 10. From 1786, to 1st May, 1797, it was No. 4; no mention being made of any rank on the Registry of England. In all the old documents available, it is called No. 12, and so continued until 1823, when the masonic territory, under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec, was divided into two districts, that of Quebec and Three Rivers, with the R. W. Bro. Claude Denéchau as Provincial Grand Master; and that of Montreal and the Borough of William Henry, with the R. W. Bro. William McGillivray as Provincial Grand Master. His installation took place at the Masonic Hall, on the 8th October, 1823, by virtue of a Warrant from the M. W. the Grand Master of England, His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex. At this time, St. Paul's Lodge became No. 3; and, more recently, when, after being dormant for many years, the P. G. Lodge for Montreal and William Henry was reorganized in the Spring of 1846, with the R. W. Bro. the 1st Hon. Peter McGill as Provincial Grand Master, it became No. 1 on the Provincial Registry.

Moreover, it appears on reference to a letter written in December, 1845, by the late R. W. Bro. P. D. P. G. M. McCord, giving a short sketch of the masonic state of this section of the Province, that, immediately on the installation of the R. W. Bro. William McGillivray, the Lodges then recorded as working, or in existence, were ordered to send in their Warrants, and received dispensations to work from the Provincial Grand Master, until new Warrants should be forwarded to them from England. Of the twelve Lodges then known, nine complied with the order, and among them, St. Paul's Lodge; and there can be no doubt that it was the issue of these new Warrants with a number on the Registry of England (in St. Paul's case, No. 782 E.R.), that first gave them a status on the Roll of the Grand Lodge of England, and which were evidently intended to supersede the others—the old Provincial Warrants—which carried no status outside of the jurisdiction of Lower Canada. Had St. Paul's Lodge possessed it before, no local cause, such as the division of an old masonic district, or the creation of a new one here, could affect its status in England, or call for new Warrants thence. Such a contingency could only arise from, or follow, circumstances within the exclusive prerogative and initiative of the Grand Lodge of England.

There can be no question of the Lodge being fairly entitled to precedence, much above its present number, (No. 374,) on the Registry of England; for though, before the union in 1813, the Lodge may have been working under its number on the Registry of Canada only, and been known only by it, it will not be disputed that it did exist under a genuine Warrant emanating from rightful and legal authority derived immediately from one of the two Grand Lodges in England, holding in the Cities of London or York, and from whichever of the two it hailed, at the time of the union, there can be no doubt whatever that St. Paul's Lodge was legally working, and in active existence, for a very long period anterior to the Union, since the names of all those who filled the office of Master from 1778 to the present time, in regular succession, are known from official record.

While, therefore, the failure to register in England, from whatever cause it may have arisen, may, perhaps, in a strictly legal sense, bar the claim to be placed higher on the roll, yet the Lodge is entitled to it in equity; and, at any rate, to lay claim to every other privilege which so long and unbroken a record as St. Paul's Lodge unquestion-ably possesses and carries with it; among others, the right to possess and wear the Centenary Jewel. Registering regulations first commenced in England, 28th October, 1768. This is eight years subsequent to the alleged date of St. Paul's existence, during Lord Aberdour's Grand Mastership, and two years prior to that during the Duke of Beaufort's tenure of office. In the first case, the Lodge could have no number in England, because the registering regulations did not exist; in the other, with the then tardy means of intercommunication, and the limited intercourse that probably existed between Masonic bodies here and in England, the existence of these regulations may have remained unknown for an indefinite period, or may not have been compulsory on Lodges out of England.

No Lodge could now find itself in so anomalous a position; for the Constitution makes it imperative that all applications for Lodge Warrants shall be made to the Grand Master of England; and while, pending the issuing of them, provisional Warrants may be granted by District or Provincial Grand Masters, any authority they carry ceases at once, on the receipt of the Warrant from England.

An interesting fact became known to the Lodge in the Spring of 1875, and which helped to bridge the gap, created by the loss of its old records, between St. Paul's Lodge of more modern days and the early part of the present century. This was the accidental discovery, in the old Dorchester Street Protestant Burying Ground, in May, 1875, of the grave of one of the old worthies of the Lodge, Worshipful Brother John Greatwood, who was elected Master in June, 1803, and died in the month of October following, during his actual tenure of office. The existence of the grave was made known to the Lodge through Brother James Vaughan Morgan, and the remains were removed on 25th May, and reinterred on the 15th June, 1875, in a lot purchased by the Lodge, No. 503, Section G, on the S. W. side of Mount Royal Cemetery, and a new tombstone was placed over it with this much of the old inscription on it:—

ERECTED
By the Members of
ST. PAUL'S LODGE No. 12,
(Ancient York Master)
To the Memory of the late
Worshipful Master,
JOHN GREATWOOD,
WHO DIED 13TH OCTOBER, 1803.
AGED 23 YEARS.

In taking out the old tombstone, it fell to pieces, and could not be put in sufficient repair again to withstand the elements, and it was unfortunately broken up and the fragments scattered.

Of the antecedents or standing of the members of St. Paul's Lodge, in its early days, or of its mode of working, no accurate data is obtainable. For more than half a century it has occupied a foremost place among Masonic bodies, and has had a name, not only throughout Canada, but elsewhere, as well for the excellence of its working, as for the social standing and prominent position of its members generally,—and, as "in England, our order has been thought worthy of the attention of many of the best and most able men, and has secured to itself the sympathy of well-cultivated minds of all ranks and conditions; the flower of the nobility, the greatest excellence and genius among the Commoners of the three kingdoms having belonged to it and played a conspicuous part in its pages," so can the roll of St. Paul's Lodge show many well-known and distinguished names, not only as Freemasons, but as members of society, eminent in their public and private capacities and avocations. Ample evidence of which is given by the list of its Past Masters, the portraits of most of whom appear in the group accompanying this chapter; which group is taken from portraits hanging on the walls of its reception room which form a gallery probably unique in the history of any Lodge in Canada.

The Lodge had a large military membership from the various regiments that were quartered here, during a long succession of years, and the names of many able and distinguished officers will be found who hail St. Paul's as their mother Lodge, or who have affiliated with it from other Lodges. Among these, may be mentioned the Duke of Athole, who received his M. M. degree in this Lodge, when Marquis of Tullibardine, the Earl of Dunmore, Colonel Lord Abinger, Major Lord Edward W. P. Clinton, General Piper, Lieut.-General the Hon. George Cadogan, C. B., Lieut.-General C. A. Lewis, Major-General Brownrigg, C. B., Major-General Claremont, C. B., Major-General Sir Charles Staveland, K. C. B., Major-General Stephenson, C. B., Major-General Sir Garnet Wolseley, K. C. B., K. C. M. G., Surgeon-General Longmore, C. B., Colonel the Honorable John Elphinstone, Colonel W. B. Ainslie, C. B., Colonel Edward W. D. Bell, V. C., C. B., Colonel Hampden Moody, C. B., Colonel Talbot, Colonel Currie, Colonel Pasley, Lt.-Col. G. H. Moncrieff, Lt.-Col. Ready, Lt.-Col. Penn, C. B., Brigade-Major Maquay, School of Military Engineering, Surgeon-Major Smith, D. I. G., Surgeon-Major Prescott, Colonel Kenneth M. Moffat, Captain John S. D. McGill, &c., &c.

In her allegiance to the Grand Old Mother Lodge of England, St. Paul's Lodge has been true and steadfast. Amidst the changes which have taken place in the Masonic Jurisdictions of Canada, though a good deal of pressure has been brought to bear upon her to affiliate with the Canada Grand Lodges now in existence, she has steadily resisted it, and announced her firm determination to remain on the Registry of that Grand Old Lodge, to which over 2,900 subordinate Lodges in all parts of the world, owe masonic allegiance and obedience; to hand down to those who may come hereafter, that goodly heritage which is to be found in the prestige which attaches to our connection with England, the "cradle of masonic history, where freemasonry has developed itself into a union embracing all mankind"; and to bequeath to future members of St. Paul's Lodge, as a legacy, the earnest hope that she will always continue to cherish the associations that have gathered round a connection of more than a century, and the ties that have been and strengthened with it during that long period, as too highly prized, too close and intimate in their nature, to admit of their being sundered or severed.

In December, 1830, the date of the oldest minute book at present extant, St. Paul's Lodge held its meetings in the "Masonic Hall," situated on the corner of St. Paul and Bonsecours Street. This "Masonic Hall" was erected by the W. Bro. the Hon. John Molson, an old Past Master of the Lodge, and who afterwards became Provincial Grand Master for Montreal and William Henry. An entire story was set aside for the purposes of the craft, and it was at the especial request of St. Paul's Lodge No. 3, that that portion of the building, was solemnly dedicated to the purposes of masonry, with the usual masonic rites and ceremonies, by the Provincial Grand Lodge of the District, on the 13th May, 1825.

Masters Lodge
E. R.

The Lodge room was most chastely and classically fitted up, with double rows of columns, of the Tuscan, Doric, Ionic and Corinthian Orders, in pairs, and terminating, on the Eastern side, by a magnificent throne of the Composite order.

In this Hall, the Lodge continued to meet until the destruction of the building by fire, on the 24th April, 1833. After that, it met at Mack's Hotel, afterwards the Central Police Station, whence it removed, on the 12th May, 1835, to Rasco's Hotel, St. Paul Street. Here it remained until the 13th December 1836. On the 27th of that month, the Lodge assembled at Privat's Hotel and so continued until the 2nd of June, 1837. On the 15th November of that year it was found at Mussen's, Notre Dame Street, where it was held, (with the exception of two meetings that took place, on the 21st March and 18th April, 1838, at the late Brother Campbell Sweeney's rooms, which were in a large building, long known as the Natural History Society Building, but, for the holding of which meetings there, no reason is given,) until the 13th November, 1838. On the 10th December, 1838, and until the 10th December, 1839, the "Globe Inn," was its place of meeting. Thence it removed to "Sword's Hotel," on the East side of St. Vincent Street, where it is found on the 27th December, 1839, and until the 14th December, 1841, when it again met at Rasco's Hotel, on St. Paul Street, and so continued until the 16th May, 1844. On the 24th June, 1844, it was domiciled at Tetu's Hotel, Great St. James Street and St. Peter Street, where it remained until the 9th April, 1850. After that date, it removed to Freemasons' Hall, Notre Dame Street and Dalhousie Square. The total destruction of this building by fire, in the tremendous conflagration of 8th July, 1852, when some 1,200 houses were burnt, again left St. Paul's Lodge without a lodge room. On the 27th October, 1852, its sittings were resumed in the "Zetland" lodge room, No. 731, E. R., held in Murphy's Hotel, Notre Dame and Gosford Streets, and we find it there until the 10th May, 1853. In the interval between that date and the 8th November, 1853, a removal to the "Saint Lawrence Hall" took place, and there it met for a continuous period of seventeen years. On the 8th November, 1870, the brethren assembled in a new lodge room, No. 910 St. Catherine Street, and continued to meet there until the 13th April, 1875. After that date, the Brethren met, on the 11th May and 9th November, at the "Royal Albert" Lodge Room, No. 6, Phillip's Square, and, on the 14th and 27th December, 1875, at the Aaylum of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, No. 1052, St. Catherine Street, where, on the latter date, the Installation of Officers for 1876 took place.

On the 11th January, 1876, the Lodge held its first regular Communication in the New Lodge Room, Academy of Music, Victoria Street, the banquet on St. John's day, 27th Dec., 1875, having been previously held in the Lodge Room.

On the 10th February, 1885, the Lodge met for the first time in the new Rooms in Hall & Scott's Building, McGill College Avenue and St. Catherine Street, and since that date have continued to meet at that place.

Within its portals, St. Paul's Lodge has always inculcated harmony among its members, and the great principles of brotherly love, relief and truth. They have come together as "faithful friends in a Society modelled according to the perfection of good fellowship"; and while always given to a generous hospitality after work, the Lodge meetings have always been most pleasant gatherings where, aloof from the toil and trouble and turmoil of the outer world, many happy hours have been spent, and the associations connected with them long remembered and treasured.

III. BRO. CHARLES RAYNES, K. C. 33°

Was born at Montreal, P. Q., September 27th, 1859, and educated at Bishop's College School, Lennoxville, P. Q., of which school, in 1876, he was the Captain. While there he won the Governor General's (the Earl of Dufferin) silver medal for Classics. At McGill University he took his B. A. degree in 1880 and his B. C. L. in 1881, when he was called to the Bar. He entered into practice with the late Edward Cornwallis Monk, and was for many years in partnership with his brother, the Hon. F. D. Monk, the present Minister of Public Works for Canada.

Bro. Raynes was initiated in St. Paul's Lodge, No. 374, E. R. Montreal, December 27th, 1888.

Passed February 12th, 1889.

Raised March 12th, 1889.

He was I. G. in 1890.

Junior Deacon in 1891.

Junior Warden in 1892-1893.

Senior Warden in 1894-1895-1896.

Worshipful Master in 1897-1898.

It is not the custom of St. Paul's Lodge to present their Masters with a Jewel, but Bro. Raynes proved to be such an enthusiastic and efficient officer that an exception was made in his case, and on St. John's night, 1899, he was presented with a Past Master's Jewel.

In St. Paul's Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 131 E. R. Montreal, he was Advanced November 5th, 1890, M.O., Junior Warden, Senior Warden and became its Worshipful Master for 1896, 1897 and 1898, and has been its Treasurer since 1893.

In St. Paul's Royal Arch Chapter, No. 374 E. R. Montreal, he was Exalted December 18th, 1890, Scribe E., P. S. and J. February 16th, 1899, H. December 20th, 1900, and Z. February 20th, 1902, to which office he was re-elected December 18th, 1902, and again December 17th, 1903.

In the Ancient & Accepted Scottish Rite he received in Hochelaga G. Lodge of Perfection at Montreal the 14° March 10th, 1893, G. S. W., and in Hochelaga Sov. Chapter of Rose Croix, Montreal, held the offices of 2nd General and 1st General, and for four years was M. W. S. 1898-1902. In Montreal Consistory he held the offices of 2nd Lieut. Commander, 1st Lieut. Commander and Commander-in-Chief for the years 1907-08-09. He was presented with the Past Commander-in-Chief Jewel March, 1910. Was elected and received the Supreme Council 33° for Canada and became an Honorary Inspector General October, 1903.

THE BANNERS OF ISRAEL AND THEIR USE IN CHAPTERS OF THE HOLY ROYAL ARCH

BY REV. GEORGE A. MACLENNAN, B.A.

P. Z. ST. ANDREW'S CHAPTER, NO. 139, R. A. M., G. R. C.; P. Z. CARNARVON CHAPTER, NO. 5, MONTREAL, R. A. M., G. R. Q.

[ABBREVIATIONS.—T., Talmud; Q., Quebec; C., Canada; E., England; S., Scotland.]

THE question of the Banners is a very obscure and difficult one, presenting a great variety of opinion, concerning which convincing conclusions are not likely to be reached at any time.

The use of Banners in a R. A. Chapter is suggested by Numbers 2:2—"Every man of the Children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard."

The Bible gives us no information as to the form, device or color of these standards. To the Talmud, and particularly to the explanatory Targums, do we turn for assistance. Let us bear in mind, however, that prior to the destruction of the Temple and the dispersion of the Jews that their traditions, the Mishna and the Gemara, or the second law or learning and the commentaries thereon, were handed down orally, but with greatest care. The authoritative commitment to writing only dates back to about 190 A. D.

Banners have been used from earliest times to mark tribal encampments, or to direct armed bodies. Banners are frequently represented on the Monuments of Egypt and Assyria. They might be simple bunches of leaves or wisps of grass tied to a pole, or a figured metal receptacle for fire, or a piece of cloth bearing some device usually of a sacred character.

Three words occur in the Hebrew representing respectively (1) the divisional standard, (2) the tribal banner and (3) a signal. Modern critical scholars generally conclude that two banners were implied in Numbers 2:2—the divisional standard and the tribal banner. This is true to the custom of the modern Bedouin.

The historical section of the Talmud represents the devices and colors of the Banners as corresponding to the twelve precious stones of the Breast Plate of the High Priest. The Grand Chapter of England and the Grand Bodies issuing from her have adopted this view.

Tribal Banners. While the Bible is silent as to device and color, the Jewish commentators have with a free hand supplied both, arranging their scheme after Jacob's blessing of his sons, Gen. 49; supplemented by Moses' blessing, Deut. 33, and Exodus 28:17-20.

Devices Upon the Tribal Banners. There is a large measure of agreement between the Grand Chapters of England, Scotland, Canada and Quebec, and they follow the Talmud.

1. Judah—a lion couchant, with crown and sceptre.
2. Issachar—an ass couching between two burdens.

The T. has the Sun and Moon from their supposed influence upon vegetation.

3. Zebulun—a ship.
4. Reuben—a mandrake, rudely moulded into the form of a man. T. & Q.; a man erect. S.: wavy lines, after the LXX, translated, "unstable as water," E. & C.

5. Simeon—T., a city; S., a tower; Q., a sword and dagger crossed; E. & C., a sword or swords, Gen. 34:25; Gen. 49:5 (R. V.).

Levi—When Levi became the priestly tribe, their office and portion became national, they ceased to be numbered. The T. associates Levi with the Urim and Thummim.

6. Gad—a troop of horsemen. The T. has a camp.
 7. Ephraim—the portion of Joseph became the inheritance of his two sons; an ox or bullock charging, symbolical of strength.
 8. Manasseh—The T. and Q. have adopted the mythological unicorn, due to a mis-translation of Deut. 33:17. The "reem" was a two-horned ox or ox-antelope noted for the length and strength of its horns; E., S. and C. have adopted the device of a vine beside a wall, after Jacob's blessing of Joseph, Gen. 49:22.
 9. Benjamin—a wolf.
 10. Dan—The T. & Q., a serpent; E., an eagle; S., an eagle with a serpent in its talons; C., a serpent biting a horse's heel, the horse representing the foreigner. Dan's position being at a gateway of Israel, he was ready, like a serpent coiled in a camel track, to spring upon the enemy.
 11. Asher—The T. has a female figure and a full-leaved olive tree, the symbol of fertility and abundance. Q., C., S. and E. adopted the overflowing cup. c/f Ps. 23:5.
 12. Naphtali—a hind let loose.

Divisional Standards. The camp of Israel was divided into four great divisions under the tribes of Reuben, Judah, Ephraim and Dan. The devices associated with each are a man, a lion, an ox and an eagle, respectively, following the device of the tribal banner, with the exception of Dan. There is an old Hebrew saying that there are four superb creations in the world—the lion among wild beasts, the ox among tame, the eagle among the birds, and man, who surpasses them all. The Cherubim was a favorite with the Hebrews as symbolizing the sanctifying presence of God, in majesty and power, in Israel. The Hebrew saying doubtless suggested to Ezekiel the form of his vision of the Cherubim, a vision in the mind of the companions of 1753, and explaining the adoption of the Cherubim upon the seals of Grand Chapters. The American Rite has adopted these four standards and places them at the veils.

Color of the Banners. According to the Talmudists this was determined by the color of the stones of the Breast Plate of the High Priest. This presents a question of great difficulty, involving the identification of the stone, its color, its order, and the tribal name with which associated.

There are three sources of information:

- (1) Talmudic traditions, oral until about 190 A. D.
  - (2) The Septuagint (LXX) version of the Old Testament, prepared in Alexandria, Egypt, about 280 B. C.
  - (3) Modern Egyptological research of Petrie, Myres and Rabbi Hirsch. This largely supports No. 2.
- (1) Talmudic traditions. Quebec has consistently adopted this view, as she has done throughout, with one slight exception (the device of Asher). Puzzled with the conflict of opinion and desirous of some authority to guide her, she conferred with a learned Rabbi in the matter and followed his opinion.

- (2) The Septuagint tradition has been adopted by other Grand Chapters, but with a strange want of agreement in the detail of the color scheme, particularly in some subordinate Chapters. My own research has led me to adopt the modern form of the Septuagint tradition.

The names and arrangement of the stones of the Breast Plate occur in Exod. 28:15-17 and 39:8-14. In the margin we find the names of the tribes.

A serious difficulty confronts us at the outset in finding modern stones to correspond with the stones of the Hebrew list. The Talmudists have allowed fancy free play, and the translators of the Authorized Version have clearly adopted some names at random. The Septuagint, translated by Alexandrian scholars from the Hebrew, for Hellenistic Jews, at the very heart of the jewel trade of the day, presented a favorable opportunity for a correct identification of the stones and to give the Greek equivalent to the Hebrew names. This identification they made, and modern research upholds their opinion.

The majority of precious stones were unknown to the ancients. Such as they were acquainted with they classified according to color rather than composition or form. Further, only stones which would engrave easily would serve. The diamond, emerald and sapphire, if known, would be too hard. Large stones, not gems, would be proportionate with the rest of the Breast Plate.

In the following table I will place these two views side by side, using Quebec and Canada as illustrations. The differences between Canada, England and Scotland is for the most part one of color shade.

Tribes.	Stone.	Quebec.	Canada.	Modern Name and Color.
Reuben.	Sardius.	Red.	Scarlet.	Red Jasper.
Siméon.	Topaz.	Green.	Yellow.	Greenish-yellow Serpentine.
Levi.	Carbuncle.			Colorless Rock Crystal.
Judah.	Emerald.	Sky Blue.	Crimson.	Red Garnet.
Dan.	Sapphire.	Blue.	Green.	Lapis Lazuli, blue with reddish-yellow dots.
Naphtali.	Diamond.	Wine.	Blue.	Dark Green Jasper.
Gad.	Ligure.	Grey.	White.	Brilliant Yellow Quartz or Agate.
Asher.	Agate.	Pearl.	Purple.	A Grey and White Agate.
Issachar.	Amethyst.	Black.	Sky Blue.	Purple Amethyst.
Zebulon.	Beryl.	White.	Purple.	Yellow Jasper.
Joseph.	Onyx.	Jet Black.	Green.	Green Felspar or Malachite.
Ephraïm.	Onyx.	Jet Black.	Green.	Green Felspar or Malachite.
Manasséh.	Onyx.	Jet Black.	Flesh.	Green Felspar or Malachite.
Benjamin.	Jasper.	Combined colors.	Green.	Green Jasper, with variants of yellow, red and opalescent.

The Standards. A baritha on the Tabernacle says that there were four Standards—large and ornamented with colors in white, purple, crimson and dark blue, wrought with embroidered work. Quebec uses the colors of the Tribal Banner of Judah, Reuben, Ephraïm and Dan; England and Canada use either crimson, scarlet or green; the American Rite has adopted the suggestion of the baritha; Scotland has but two large Standards, that of Judah being of crimson color and bearing the device of "four-headed animals," and the motto, "In Domino fiducia omnis," that of Reuben being of purple color and bearing for device the signs of the Zodiac.

Arrangement of the Tribes. There are two views:

- (1) The Talmudic, in which the leading tribe of the Division holds a central position. This is the view of Prof. G. L. Robinson, of Chicago. The encampment was, according to Numbers 2:3—in the form of a hollow square—a strong camp. The Tabernacle was in the centre, and a division protected each a side of this square, the Levites forming the inner lines; thus—

In Camp—The Talmudic View.

	Issachar	Judah	Zebulon
	54,400	74,600	57,400
Naphtali	Moses and the Sons of Aaron			Simeon
53,400	Merarites	                     Tabernacle                 	Kohathites	59,300
Dan				Reuben
62,700				46,500
Asher		Gershonites		Gad
41,500				45,650
	Benjamin	Ephraim	Manasseh
	35,400	40,500	32,200

(2) The Septuagint view, in which the leading tribe of the division leads, thus—Reuben, Simeon, Gad; Ephraim, Manasseh, Benjamin.

The line of march, Numbers 10, may have been a "column" or "line." Schiek (Leaders of Israel) favors the "column;" military men, having regard to ease of march and strength of defence through an enemy's country, declare the "column" to be very weak and the "line" the best. In "line" formation the order would be something like this:

The Ark, (Num. 10: 33; Exod. 33: 7).

Judah's Division.

Reuben's Division.

Levites bearing materials of Tabernacle.

Dan's Division.

Ephraim's Division.

The arrangement of the Camp, a quadrilateral, is unsuitable to "labor," so two parallel lines have been substituted, with the tribal banners arranged as in the order of march in Numbers 10. Whether we follow one or other of the above orders we must keep the Divisions together and not separate Judah from his Division or Ephraim from his, as has been done in some arrangements of the Banners.

(1) Talmudic order—

First line, Issachar, Judah, Zebulon: Simeon, Reuben, Gad:

Second line, Naphtali, Dan, Asher: Benjamin, Ephraim, Manasseh.

This (the Talmudic view) is the authorized arrangement of the Grand Chapter of Quebec.

(2) Septuagint order—

First line, Judah, Issachar, Zebulon: Reuben, Simeon, Gad:

Second line, Naphtali, Asher, Dan: Benjamin, Manasseh, Ephraim.

THE TRIBAL BANNERS AND THEIR RELATIVE LOCATION IN THE CHAPTER

BY WALTER J. FRANCIS, C. E.

P. Z., CORINTHIAN CHAPTER R. A. M., NO. 36, G. R. C.;

P. Z., CARNARVON CHAPTER R. A. M., NO. 5, G. R. Q.

IN my anxiety to know something more about the banners of the chapter beyond the fact of their being the armorial bearings of the twelve tribes of Israel and the standards of the four divisions of the army of Israel, I made careful inquiry of my instructors and authorities without success. I was at length rewarded with some interesting light through a careful review of the Pentateuch, where two phases of the subject are referred to. In the forty-ninth chapter of Genesis, which describes the death-bed scene of Jacob, one by one the patriarch blesses his sons. He speaks figuratively, and the expressions used by him seem to be the subject of the devices used on the tribal banners authorized for use in the jurisdiction of the Grand Chapter of Canada.

To Reuben he said, "Reuben, thou art my first-born, my might, and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power: unstable as water, thou shalt not excel; because thou wentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it; he went up to my couch." The banner of Reuben bears a device of wavy lines, to represent water. In other jurisdictions the device is a man, while in Quebec the Grand Chapter authorizes a mandrake bearing some general resemblance to the form of a man.

The two brothers, Simeon and Levi, were taken together, and the words of Israel to them were, "Simeon and Levi are brethren; instruments of cruelty are in their habitations. O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honour, be not thou united: for in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall. Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel." The Levites having been subsequently set apart for the ministrations of the tabernacle and not being numbered among the tribes, the words of the prophesy apply remarkably to the device on the banner of Simeon which is a sword and a dagger.

Judah received a blessing in which the lion, kingship and power are dominant. They are typified on his banner as a reclining lion, a crown and a sceptre. "Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee. Judah is a lion's whelp: from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up? The sceptre shall not depart from Judah nor a law giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."

Addressing Zebulun the patriarch said, "Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea; and he shall be for an haven of ships; and his border shall be unto Zidon." The device on the banner of Zebulun is a ship.

To Issachar these words were addressed, "Issachar is a strong ass couching down between two burdens; and he saw that rest was good, and the land that it was pleasant; and howed his shoulder to bear, and became a servant unto tribute."

On the banner of Dan is depicted a serpent attacking a horse which threatens to throw its rider backward. In some jurisdictions the serpent only is used. The words of Jacob to Dan were, "Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse heels so that his rider shall fall backward."

The device on the banner of Gad is a troop of horsemen, referring undoubtedly to the words, "Gad, a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last."

The wine cups on the banner of Asher derive their origin from Jacob's blessing, "Out of Asher his bread shall be fat, and he shall yield royal dainties."

To Naphtali Israel said, "Naphtali is a hind let loose: he giveth goodly words." On the banner of Naphtali is a bounding hind.

The words which Israel addressed to Joseph were, "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall: The archers have surely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him: but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb: the blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." Later we find that Ephraim and Manasseh were considered as separate tribes. In the forty-eighth chapter of Genesis Jacob took each of the two sons of Joseph as his own. Since the Levites were deputed to serve in the tabernacle and were not numbered among the tribes, the acceptance of Ephraim and Manasseh in this way keeps the number of tribes constant at twelve. The device on the banner of Manasseh is a vine branching over a wall near a well, a reference, doubtless, to the first part of Joseph's blessing, while the latter part of the blessing referring to the riches of the land is referred to in the ox on the banner of Ephraim.

The banner of Benjamin bears a picture of a wolf. The words of Jacob were, "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil."

Regarding the colors of the banners the Law seems to be silent. The order of precedence, however, is well defined.

The two opening chapters of the book of Numbers describe the census of the tribes, their leaders and their order. The tabernacle of the congregation was the vital centre. Specific instructions were laid down regarding the location of the tribes about it, both on the march and at rest.

The Levites who had now lost their identity as an ordinary tribe, not even being counted in the census, were to attend solely to the needs of the tabernacle and were to encamp or march about it. The twelve tribes were divided into four divisions of three tribes each, one division camping on each side of the tabernacle when at rest, and two divisions preceding and following it when setting forward.

Each large standard represents one of the divisions, that of Judah being a lion, Reuben, a man, Ephraim, an ox, and Dan, an eagle. The choice of the devices for the first three seems clear from what has already been noted. The selection of the eagle for the division of Dan is more obscure.

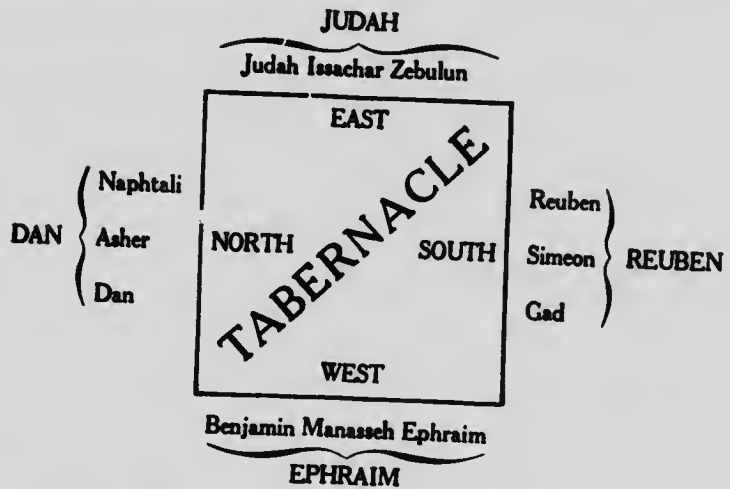

In the division of Judah were included also Issachar and Zebulun. The Judah division, consisting of 186,400 males, twenty years old and upwards, pitched on the east side of the tabernacle and went foremost on the march.

The division of Reuben, 151,450, included Simeon and Gad. It pitched on the south side when resting, while on the march it followed Judah and preceded the tabernacle with the Levites.

With Ephraim were Manasseh and Benjamin, forming the division of Ephraim, 108,100 strong. They encamped on the west side, and followed the tabernacle on the march.

Encamped on the north was the division of Dan, consisting of Dan, Asher and Naphtali, and numbering 157,600 fighting men. On the march the division of Dan brought up the rear.

The order of the banners as used in the work is apparently derived from the positions in the encampment. Diagrammatically the tribes were thus located:

By dividing the camp as nearly as practicable along the centre from east to west, but not breaking up a tribe, we have on the one side Judah, Naphtali, Asher, Dan, Benjamin and Manasseh, while on the other we have Issachar, Zebulun, Reuben, Simeon, Gad and Ephraim, the exact order authorized by the Grand Chapter of Canada.

ROYAL ARCH MASONS

CARNARVON CHAPTER OF MONTREAL, No. 5, G. R. Q.

BY WILL. H. WHYTE, P. G. Z.

PAST SUPREME GRAND MASTER KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OF CANADA

THE members of the Masonic Fraternity in the Province of Quebec can well be proud of its long and honourable history. Within fifty years of the establishment of the first governing body of the Craft in the year 1717, the Grand Lodge of England (the mother Grand Lodge of the world), the Masons in this Province in 1759 also formed a Grand Lodge at the City of Quebec. This Grand Body issued warrants for some forty subordinates, and various circumstances indicate that during this early period, the Mark, Past and Royal Arch Degrees were conferred in this Province, under the warrants of these Lodges, and chiefly under the Military Warrants then in Quebec and Montreal. The earliest records which have come to light as yet, date back as far as 1783.

In 1810 a Mark Lodge was held in the City of Montreal and the first regular Chapter apart from Lodge control or warrant, was opened at Stanstead in the year 1831. In 1857 the Chapters then existing in Upper and Lower Canada (now the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec) united in forming a Canadian Grand Chapter, and the organization of this Supreme governing body gave an impetus to Capitular Masonry. The advisability of opening a Chapter in the City of Montreal was discussed by the Craft during the Winter of 1860-1861. A petition was finally forwarded to the Grand Chapter of Canada, and a Dispensation accordingly issued to Companions Aldis Bernard, John Helder Isaacson, Lawrence L. Levy, George Towner, Richard Rowe Grindley, Henry Benjamin, Sebastian Compain, Samuel Browning and Simon Siehel. A number of these Companions were well-known men around town, some afterwards achieving distinction in the Masonic Fraternity. They have all been called during the lapse of years to the silent majority. Of these petitioners, Dr. Aldis Bernard became Mayor of the City, and Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada. Col. John Helder Isaacson, a well-known surveyor, Lieut.-Colonel of the Hochelaga Light Infantry, afterwards the Sixth Fusiliers, for thirty-three years the honored and beloved Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, passing away at a ripe old age, in 1902. Richard Rowe Grindley for many years was General Manager of the Bank of British North America. Henry Benjamin, a Dry Goods Merchant on Notre Dame Street, just East of the Notre Dame Church, in the upper story of whose building the Chapter met, and unfortunately burnt out shortly after its formation, and Samuel Browning for many years the Proprietor of the "Ottawa Hotel"—then a well-known hostelry on St. James Street, a few doors East of the Bank of Toronto.

The Chapter was formally instituted on the 8th day of March, 1861, and at the next Convocation of the Grand Chapter, received its Charter as No. 21 C. R. In the earlier days Chapters did not hold their Meetings monthly, the Convocations being held quarterly and the first Convocation of Carnarvon after its formation was held on the 14th day of May, 1861. At this meeting ten candidates were present to receive degrees. Among those receiving the Mark at this Meeting being, now Most Excellent Companion, Isaac Henry Stearns, the only remaining initiate of that Meeting, and the Chapter's Senior First Principal Z. Lt.-Col. A. A. Stevenson, lately laid to rest in beautiful Mount Royal, filled the chair of the Chapter in 1863, and became Grand H. of the Grand Chapter of Canada, and Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada. Hon. Alexander W. Ogilvie, one of the founders of the well-known milling firm of that name, becoming a Senator of the Dominion, and Edwin Morris, a popular tobacco merchant and D.D.G.M. of the Montreal District under Canada.

The original records of the Chapter were lost in the fire already mentioned during the winter of 1861 and 1862, and the first records extant are of date August 21, 1862. The winter of 1862 was an exciting one in Canada. The "Trent" affair brought a number of British regiments in anticipation of trouble with the U. S., that fortunately did not occur. Many of the officers in the Garrison took an active interest in Masonry, and Carnarvon and Mount Horeb Chapters especially received many of the Companions of St. Paul's Chapter, (held under the English Register), with which many of the officers were connected, who desired to possess the intermediate Degrees. The Arch according to the English system being the only degree conferred in an English Chapter. Among the then well-known British officers accepted in Carnarvon Chapter during this period of military occupancy, were the Earl of Dunmore and the Hon. F. Elphinstone of the Scots Fusilier Guards. Major Lewis Penn, Commandant of the famous Penn's Gray Battery, whose magnificent gray horses always drew a large crowd of the citizens to view them out on parade or exercise. Captain Brooke, Lieut. Price, Lieut. Hitchins, among others whose names were on the roll, and active members of the Fraternity, as well as Col. W. H. Hutton, a well remembered commanding officer of the "Victoria Rifles of Canada." Among those who received their Degrees in 1863 was the late Doctor John Hamilton Graham, the well-known Principal of St. Francis College at Richmond, P.Q., who afterwards became the first Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and the first Grand Principal of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Quebec. 1867 and 1868 saw Comp. I. H. Stearns in the Chair and the reception of Comp. Richard B. Angus of the Bank of Montreal, and Dr. Gilbert P. Girdwood, both alive to-day (1912).

Owing to the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec in 1869, matters Masonic were very unpleasant between the Brethren holding under that Grand Lodge, and those who adhered to the Grand Lodge of Canada. This trouble crept into the Chapters which were now increased to four: Mount Horeb formed in 1863, Montreal in 1870 and Royal Albert in 1871. In 1870 the Chapter was moved from the Lodge room in Place d'Armes Square to the British Masonic Rooms on Notre Dame Street, where the majority of the Lodges under the new Grand Lodge of Quebec met. Among other enthusiastic members of these days was Eugene Mortimer Copeland, who held the Chair in 1872 and 1873, and James T. McMinn in 1874. Comp. I. H. Stearns was again in the Chair during 1875-1876 and 1877. These were gray days for Capitular Masonry, and it was difficult to persuade anyone to accept office, nor yet to get the statutory number to attend the meetings in order to meet and confer the Degrees on the few who occasionally presented themselves. Amalgamation between the Carnarvon and Montreal Chapters was discussed, but the proposition eventually fell through.

In December, 1876, a convention of all the Chapters in the Province was called for the formation of a Grand Chapter for the Province, and on the 21st of the same

CARNARVON CHAPTER

No. 5, R.A.M. Q.R.

1861-1911

month the "Grand Chapter of Quebec" was formally constituted. Comps. Stearns, Stratton, Grant and McMinn being the delegates from Carnarvon Chapter. Since then the Companions have ever taken a deep interest in that Grand Body, many of them have held high rank in it, a number filling the chair of Grand First Principal Z.*

Among those whose names can be found on the Roll of Carnarvon and occupying the office of Grand First Principal Z are the following: Most Excellent Comps. J. H. Graham, I. H. Stearns, Frank Edgar, H. L. Robinson, Will H. Whyte, David Seath, John B. Tresidder, Edward A. Evans and T. A. Emmans.

Comp. Angus Grant, who had been responsible for much of the active addition to the membership, held the Chair in 1878. The Companions in order to mark their appreciation of long and faithful services presented Comp. I. H. Stearns with a marble clock. Comp. Will H. Whyte succeeded to the Chair in 1879, and William R. Cuthbert in 1880, and although matters were slightly on the mend, the enthusiasm was not marked by any means. After 18 years' existence the membership had now increased to 39. In the endeavor to enthuse the Chapter, it was moved in 1881 to the Royal Albert Rooms, No. 6 Phillips Square, and Comp. David Seath was installed as Z in 1882.

Carnarvon Chapter at its formation was named after the then pro Grand Z of England, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Chapter had the honor and pleasure of receiving a visit from his Lordship on the 18th day of September, 1883.

A special Convocation was called in the Royal Albert Rooms, and an illuminated address, beautifully engrossed, was presented to him on behalf of the Chapter, by the Grand Z, M. E. Comp. H. L. Robinson. The Earl expressed his deep pleasure at the opportunity of visiting a Chapter bearing his name. A large number of the active members of the Craft were present.

Comp. James K. Whyte filled the Chair in 1884 and was succeeded in 1885 by Comp. Fred. Massey. Comp. J. Fred. Walker, one of the most popular Grand Masters of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, held the Chair during the years 1886 and 1887. He was elected Grand Third Principal of the Grand Chapter in 1893, but died shortly afterwards, deeply mourned by every member of the Craft. In 1888 Comp. J. B. Tresidder occupied the Chair, and received an official visit from the Grand First Principal Z, another son of "old Carnarvon," M. E. Comp. Will. H. Whyte. The Chapter this year decided on another move of quarters, to the rooms formerly occupied by St. Paul's Lodge in the Academy of Music on Victoria Street. This move did not create any extra enthusiasm among the members, and in 1889 under the occupancy of Comp. W. E. Cooper, another peregrination was made back to the old British Masonic Rooms on Notre Dame Street. In 1890 Comp. C. P. O'Connor as Z had the pleasure of welcoming another Carnarvon member on his official visit as Grand Z, viz: M. E. Comp. David Seath. Comp. Wm. T. Anderson was first Principal during 1892 and the succeeding year. In October, 1894, under Comp. Geo. C. Bown, the Chapter turned out in large numbers to assist at the laying of the corner-stone of the present Masonic Temple, and on the 10th day of May following, under Comp. John T. Gladston, met for the first time in that building. Comp. Gladston was re-elected Z and still another son of Carnarvon paid an official visit in 1896, as Grand Z, viz: M. E. Comp. John B. Tresidder. Comp. Geo. H. Wilkinson was in the Chair the next two years, being succeeded by Comp.

*Grand High Priest in the American Rite.

J. I. Phillips in 1899. At the February Convocation in 1900 the Chairs were filled by the Past Principals, Comps. Will H. Whyte, David Seath and J. B. Tresidder filling the Council Chairs respectively, and conferring the Royal Arch on five candidates. Among the candidates being the Rev. Frank Charters, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. (1911.) During the years 1901, 1902 and 1903, Companions D. A. Young, T. A. Emmans and D. McL. Brophy occupied the Chair. On the 25th November, 1903, an unique event in Royal Arch Masonry, was presented in old Carnarvon. The Royal Arch was conferred on a class of twelve candidates, the Chairs being filled by the Past Grand First Principal Z's of the Grand Chapter of Quebec, as follows:

M. E. Comps. Will H. Whyte, as Z; I. H. Stearns, Past Z; David Seath, H; J. B. Tresidder, J; E. T. D. Chambers, Principal Sojourner; Geo. O. Stanton, Scribe N, and B. Tooke, Senior Sojourner. The first time on record, as far as can be found, that Past Grand Principals filled the Chairs and conferred the Royal Arch. Comps. Harry R. Hale, Walter W. Williamson and James D. Hudson were the first Principals during the years 1904, 1905 and 1906, and interesting and large meetings of the Chapter were held, as the flow of Candidates had come in a steady stream. Comp. Hale in his year exalting fifty candidates. Very successful "At Homes" in the King's Hall on the birth night of King Edward the 7th, being held each year.

Comp. Frank T. Bown was in the chair in 1907. 1908 saw Comp. W. L. Chipchase presiding. Comp. A. B. Wood was installed at the January Meeting of 1909, and Comp. A. B. J. Moore had an interesting year in 1910. A large deputation from Ancient Frontenac and Cataraqui Chapter of Kingston, Ont., was received, who presented a Traveling Triangle, which was making its journey around the world, instituted by "The St. Patrick Chapter" of Toronto. The visit was an interesting one.

Comp. P. W. A. Burket was duly inducted into the Chair for 1911, forty Companions of the rank of First Principal Z taking part in the ceremony. The Annual Statements showing now a membership of 342.

The Semi-Centennial of the Chapter was celebrated with much enthusiasm March 10th, 1911, over 300 Royal Arch Masons being present. The presentation of a loving cup to M. E. Comp. I. H. Stearns, jewels to eleven of the Senior Past First Principals and souvenirs to all the Companions. A visit was paid to St. Paul's Chapter, of Boston Mass., in April, to deliver to that Chapter the Traveling Triangle, and proved a most enjoyable event.

A large composite photograph of the members of the Chapter was taken during the year, in order to mark the fiftieth anniversary.

Comp. Edward C. Bentley was installed as First Principal for 1912, at the January convocation.

THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA, IN ONTARIO

ADVENT OF FREEMASONRY IN THE COUNTRY. THE PROVINCES UNDER ENGLAND. ORIGIN AND PROGRESS OF "THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA" IN THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

BY GEORGE J. BENNETT

PAST D. D. GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO.
GRAND Scribe E. GRAND CHAPTER ROYAL ARCH MASONS OF CANADA.

IT is related that the founders of many of the early settlements on the coasts of, what are now familiarly known as, the Maritime Provinces and Quebec were enterprising, adventurous and wealthy French gentlemen, Huguenots as well as Catholics. It is even stated that one of these, a certain Sieur DeMonts, was the founder of Quebec city, deponent giving only a second place to a compatriot, the fearless and gallant Champlain. The beauty and fertility of Acadia (Nova Scotia) appealed to the pioneer DeMonts who, after a coast voyage of discovery in 1604, landed on the shores of the Bay of Annapolis and there founded what was then called Port Royal, and later, Annapolis Royal. The historian further states that among the artificers brought out by the explorers were a number of the craft of operative masons and that stones indented with peculiar marks have been found at various times and places.

A letter now in the possession of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston, and written by Dr. Charles T. Jackson, of that city, under date 2d June, 1856, states that, while engaged in a geological survey of Nova Scotia, in 1827, he discovered on the shore of Goat Island, in Annapolis Basin, a stone on which were rudely cut the square and compasses, and beneath them the figures 1606, all much weather worn, but quite distinct. He carried the stone to Halifax, intending to send it to the Old Colony Pilgrim Society, of Plymouth, Mass., but instead left it with the late Chief Justice Haliburton, perhaps better known, abroad, by his pen name "Sam Slick." In 1829 the judge published a work entitled "Historical and Statistical Accounts of Nova Scotia," in which a description of the stone is given and the writer there avers that it presented little indications of having been intended for any pretentious structure, as it was apparently of the rough ashlar variety with no visible appearance of even an attempt at dressing. Its discovery, if it established nothing, provided material for much imaginative creation then and since.

Under British occupation Annapolis became a military post, a fort was erected and garrisoned and at the period when speculation deals with Masonry's advent in that province (1737-40) it was a place of considerable importance. To a British officer, Ensign Erasmus James Phillips, of the 40th Regiment, nephew of Gov. Phillips, is attributed the introduction of Freemasonry into Canada. This brother was appointed Fort Major at Annapolis, and in that capacity was something of an administrator. As such he had to periodically journey to headquarters at Boston, and took advantage of one of those protracted visits to seek admission into the fraternity, and as the records show received the degrees in the "First Lodge in Boston" in 1737.

There is fairly good local evidence, as well as indirect documentary proof, that he founded a lodge in Annapolis on his return and that then, or later, he was clothed with authority by the Provincial Grand Master at Boston, Henry Price, to act in a similar capacity for Nova Scotia. That this position was accepted as genuine is borne out by a letter directed to him from Halifax dated 12 June, 1750, and signed by five in-fluent brethren, requesting his permission to establish a lodge there with Governor Cornwallis as its head. Next year a second lodge was formed at Halifax, and thereafter, down to 1791, the activity of the Craft in that city was centered in three lodges.

The authority vested in Phillips by Henry Price was confirmed by the Earl of Blessington, Grand Master of England in 1785, who signed a warrant constituting "Erasmus James Phillips, Esq., Provincial Grand Master of Nova Scotia and the territories thereunto belonging."

The only two lodges that appear to be traceable to Phillips' authority were those claimed to have been warranted at Annapolis in 1738 and at Halifax in 1750. The Annapolis lodge, it is said, was removed to Halifax in 1749, becoming No. 1. There is no record however of its original working or subsequently, and although the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia possesses much ancient and valuable MSS in connection with early Craft events in that province, the past, so far as Annapolis is concerned is practically a blank. There will be no one to dispute Nova Scotia's just claim to the proud honor of being the first resting place of the Masonic banner in Canada, nor to deprive the memory of the soldier Mason, Bro. Erasmus James Phillips, of the distinction of being its bearer.

To quote a Massachusetts writer, "Our Fraternity may well unite with the historian in the opinion that there are few localities in America around which the memories of the shadowy past more interestingly cluster than the ancient town of Annapolis. Notwithstanding the various fortunes and misfortunes which befell that locality, the Masonic fire smouldered there with singular persistency. The soldier, the poet, the philanthropist and the historian contributed each his share to draw Acadia and Massachusetts into very close relations for the next succeeding two centuries."

If a fair knowledge of calligraphy had been incorporated with at least one of the liberal arts and sciences to which the progressive Craftsman is urged to devote his leisure, we of the present might have been brought to a better realization of the inestimable value to the Masonry of old colonial days, of the military lodges under field warrants, which were so active at that period, but alas, the secretary's achievements were not then under the supervision which has prevailed, more or less, since, and consequently much that would have been otherwise treasured by the antiquary is regretted as something that might have been, but was not.

Ireland, in 1737, was the first Grand Lodge to issue these traveling warrants; England followed several years later. In the interval the number of regiments which had applied for and received those Irish authorizations had reached a comparatively formidable figure and that they were not permitted to lie idle is manifest in existing records, indicating that the activities of those soldier Masons were not confined to redecoats, but that the principles and teachings of the ancient Craft were disseminated through their missionary efforts among the best of the settlers of those primitive days.

In 1756-8 the Grand Lodge of Boston authorized warrants for lodges in the expeditions against Crown Point and other places in Canada, while Scotland, about the same period, appointed Col. Young, of the 60th Regiment, Provincial Grand Master over the "Lodges in America," holding warrants from that country.

After the siege and capitulation of Quebec, in 1759, seven lodges, holding field warrants, met and celebrated the St. John's Day festival in December, after which the Masters and Wardens discussed the formation of a Provincial Grand Lodge, which was agreed to. They elected Lieut. Guinnett, of the 47th Regiment, as P. G. M., and the

R. W. BROTHER GEORGE J. BENNETT

Few men are better known in Toronto amongst the Masonic Fraternity than Bro. George J. Bennett, Grand Scribe E. of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Canada. He received the Symbolic degrees of Masonry in Ireland, in 1870, in which Country he was born. He subsequently was exalted a Royal Arch Mason under the English Constitution. Arriving in Toronto, Canada, in 1879, he affiliated with Alpha Lodge No. 384 G. R. C., and became its Worshipful Master in 1883. He was also, in 1893, Worshipful Master of Zeta Lodge, No. 410, in the same city. In 1886 he was elected Grand Registrar of the Grand Lodge of Canada and in 1890-1 was chosen District Deputy Grand Master of Toronto District.

In Capitular Masonry he was First Principal of Antiquity Chapter No. 91 G. R. C. Toronto, in 1885, and also First Principal of Tuscan Chapter, No. 95 G. R. C. Hampton, Ont., in 1891. He was elected Grand Scribe E. of the Grand Lodge of Canada in 1899, which office he has held ever since.

In the Egyptian Rite he filled, during its activity in Ontario, most of the offices in the Grand Council and became Most Illustrious Grand Master.

In the Templar body he is a Past Grand Registrar of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, as well as a member of the Scottish Rite body, 32°.

For nearly twenty-five years he was connected with the "Evening Telegram," of Toronto in an Editorial capacity and has been Chairman of the Committee on the Report of Foreign Correspondence of the Grand Chapter of Canada for a long period, his work being looked upon as ranking among the finest in that field of Masonic labor.

GRAND SCRIBE E. OF THE GRAND CHAPTER OF CANADA
GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND CHAPTER ROYAL ARCH MASONS

following year succeeded him with Col. Simon Fraser, of the Fraser Highlanders, afterwards the 78th Regiment, who held the office a brief six months. Col. Fraser it is related, a statement since doubted, was installed by the famous Thomas Dunckerley, then a master in gunnery on H. M. S. "Vanguard" and subsequently a noted figure in English Masonic circles.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec formed, as stated, by the military lodges, developed with time, and in 1765 was presided over by the Hon. John Collins of the Executive Council, whose identity with the Craft was more pronounced than any of his predecessors, mainly owing to the zeal displayed by him in the creation of lodges in many of the settled but distant sections of his great territory, and notably in the direction of the great lakes.

Thus the early progressive work of Masonry in Canada was, under the auspices of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec, of military origin, which began with the memorable year of 1759, but of which there is little or nothing to show in the way of record. In the territory west of the Ottawa River, and which became Upper Canada in 1791 under the altered conditions, there were ten lodges, one of these working under a field warrant from England in the 8th, or King's, Regiment of Foot, two at Detroit, E.R. inactive, St. James, No. 14, at Cataraqui (Kingston) and St. Johns, No. 15, Mackinac, both warranted by Quebec's Provincial Grand Lodge. St. Johns Lodge of Friendship, No. 2, origin unknown; the New Oswegatchie, No. 7, of Prov. Grand Lodge of New York, origin Brockville; St. Johns, No. 19, Niagara, warranted in 1787 by Quebec. Rowdon, or "The Lodge Between the Lakes," E.R. (Moderns), No. 498, at York, and a Union Lodge, Cornwall, supposed origin, Quebec.

With the political partition of, what once had been, Quebec, and which by act of Parliament became the provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, the Masonic division was likewise defined, and in 1792 Provincial Grand Masters for each were decided upon. Sir John Johnson, who, in 1788, had succeeded Sir Christopher Carleton as Provincial Grand Master, under the "Modern" regime in Quebec, was the last who held that position. The "Ancients," or Athol Grand Lodge, had three warrants in Quebec, but never had agitated for Provincial authority until this period, when learning that H.R.H. Prince Edward, afterwards Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria, and who, after his initiation in Switzerland, had allied himself with the first Grand Lodge of England, "Moderns," was appointed to a military command in Lower Canada, appealed to him to become their Provincial Grand Master. He graciously acquiesced, and in March, 1792, was so appointed and subsequently installed. There is no record of the "healing" of Prince Edward from "Modern" to "Ancient" allegiance, and it is presumed that his first submission to the later body was made on the occasion of his installation.*

At about the same period the appointment as Provincial Grand Master of Upper Canada was vested in R.W. Bro. William Jarvis, who had been sent out as Provincial Secretary to His Excellency Governor Simcoe. The warrant of appointment issued to Prince Edward was ample in its provisions and practically clothed its possessor with all the rights and prerogatives of a supreme power, including the issue of lodge warrants direct. On the other hand, Jarvis was restricted to the issue of dispensations subject to confirmation by the Grand Lodge at London. It is surmised that the Masonic rank and experience of the Royal brother were factors in influencing the dis-tion and, indeed, the Masonic activity of R.W. Bro. Jarvis in the early period of his rulership was not of a nature to excite exuberant enthusiasm.

*See J. Ross Robertson's "History of Freemasonry in Canada."

The very imperfect records show that a Provincial Grand Lodge was summoned to meet at Newark (Niagara), then the seat of government, in 1795, the representatives of five lodges being present. A printed document of the year 1796 gives the list of lodges as twelve. Two other lodges were in existence in the province, one at Edwardsburg and the other at Niagara, both coming to the front subsequent to the Jarvis appointment and both holding their authority from Quebec. These, it is stated, however, were of posthumous brand, as each owed its origin to the former Quebec Grand Lodge, "Moderns," but had remained inactive in the interval.

Between 1793 and 1817 Jarvis had, in defiance of the terms of his authority, issued warrants for some twenty-six lodges. The administration headquarters were transferred in 1797 from Newark to York (Toronto) and the zeal of the Provincial Grand Master, who was careful to remove his warrant at the same time, perceptibly cooled. The devoted brethren at Newark with R.W. Bro. Robert Kerr, D.G.M., in command, on the contrary, kept the embers alive, and as they believed that the Grand East was rightly in their bailiwick, they conducted and continued the business of the Grand Lodge, merely forwarding documents for necessary signature to York. Such a condition of affairs could not be expected to prevail. A spirit of enquiry and consequent unrest was aroused in the lodges by circular letter from the Grand Secretary containing a peremptory request for dues. The right to do so was challenged by the lodge at Kingston on the ground that there was no Grand East at Newark, and it may be added that Jarvis held the same view. The brethren at Newark decided to act. They notified the P.G.M. that a brother had been nominated for his office in case he failed to appear at the quarterly meeting.

The revolt took definite shape when, in April, 1803, R.W. Bro. Jarvis received a letter from the Provincial Grand Secretary at Newark (Niagara) announcing the election of George Forsyth as Grand Master and demanding the return of the jewels and other property in his possession forthwith. That the leading spirits of the Newark brethren inclined to an independent Grand Lodge was evident, but they had to reckon with the lodges which remained unshaken in their allegiance to the authority from the Duke of Athol and vested in Jarvis. The apathy displayed by the latter down to this period was inexplicable. He was induced at last to move, and called a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge at York for 10th February, 1804, W. Bro. Jermyn Patrick, of the lodge at Kingston, acting as Secretary. Eight lodges were represented at this meeting, each reaffirmed its loyalty to Jarvis, unanimously decided to summon the recalcitrant brethren of Newark to answer the charge of unmasonic conduct and to report the entire situation to the Grand Lodge in England.

Meantime the schismatics had proceeded on their way hopefully, if mistakenly, assuming all the prerogatives of a Grand Lodge including the issuance of warrants for new lodges, for which they remitted fees to England, unacknowledged, of course, as were their letters. The spasmodic attempt in 1804 to reinfuse life into the body headed by Jarvis proved abortive. With peculiar consistency the Provincial Grand Master had been reprimanded by England for his former neglect, and the communication apparently did not have the effect intended. Discontent was rife, and from 1804 to the death of Jarvis, in 1817, the Provincial Grand Lodge as an active body was heard of but once. It continued, in name only, down to 1822.

M. W. BRO. LIEUT.-COL. ALEXANDER ALLAN STEVENSON.

FAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO.

This beloved brother was born at Bellfield, Ayrshire, Scotland, January 25th, 1829, his parents being James Stevenson and Janet Frances Allan, the latter a cousin of Scotland's immortal poet, Robert Burns, their mothers being sisters. He was named after his uncle, Alexander Allan, of Glasgow, founder of the shipping firm which established the "Allan Line" of steamships. Both of his parents died when he was very young. His brother, the late James B. Stevenson, for many years principal in the drygoods firm of Stevenson & Co., came to Montreal in 1842, whither he was followed by the rest of the family in 1846.

Shortly after his arrival in Montreal, M. W. Bro. Stevenson entered the printing office of the late J. W. Harrison as an apprentice, was subsequently employed in the Herald office, which position he resigned in 1853 to start in business for himself, and which he carried on successfully until 1880. He always manifested a great interest and spirit in public affairs. When the organization of military corps was authorized by the Militia Act of 1855, Major Coffin was entrusted with the organization of the Montreal Field Battery, and would not be satisfied until he had received the assurance of young Stevenson's assistance, and whose name appears upon the first nominal roll of the Battery, as senior staff sergeant. In 1891, Lieutenant Colonel Stevenson, beloved by his men and respected by all having the best interests of the militia of Canada at heart, retired from the Battery, after thirty-six years of continuous service in that corps, having had the command, with conspicuous credit to himself, for no less than thirty-four years. When Col. Stevenson turned over the equipment of his Battery on retirement, it was so complete that not a buckle was missing. It was his proud and justifiable boast that during his long service in his Battery he had never missed a single outdoor parade. He had the honor of commanding his Battery on active service along the Huntingdon frontier at the time of the Fenian Raids, and received the Medal commemorative of that service, with clasps for 1866 and 1870. At the time of the smallpox riots in Montreal, in the autumn of 1885, Lieutenant-Colonel Stevenson, in the absence of the D. A. G., as the senior officer, had command of the whole of the Montreal Division, called out in aid of the Civil Powers, his dispositions of which meeting with the approval of General Middleton, when he arrived from Ottawa.

From 1861 to 1867, and again from 1882 to 1900, a total of 24 years, he filled with marked ability the position of Alderman of Montreal.

M. W. Bro. Stevenson was initiated into Freemasonry and first saw its light in St. George Lodge, Montreal, July 15th, 1856, and was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason October 21st, 1856. So great was his popularity, that at the first election after his initiation he was chosen to fill one of the chairs, that of Junior Deacon. At the following election in December, 1857, he was elected to the position of Junior Warden, and the succeeding year, December, 1858, he was chosen Worshipful Master of the Lodge, and re-elected for three consecutive years. He was a model Master.

As a Grand Lodge officer he was elected Grand Junior Warden in 1859, and in 1860 District Deputy Grand Master for the Montreal District, a position which he filled for three years. In 1864 he was elected Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, and in 1868 was chosen for the position of its Grand Master, which office he held for three years with marked ability.

His progress in Capitular Masonry was no less distinguished. He entered Carnarvon Chapter, No. 21, of Montreal, May 16th, 1861, and was exalted to the Royal Arch degree in the following August. A year later he was elected to the position of J., and in August, 1863, he was chosen First Principal of the Chapter, a position he filled with marked credit for four years, down to 1867.

In 1864 he was chosen Eminent Commander of Richard Cœur de Lion Encampment of Knights Templar and retained the position for ten years. He also filled for three years the position of Provincial Grand Prior for the Province of Quebec. He was also a member of the Ancient & Accepted Scottish Rite body. He died April 9th, 1910, regretted and much respected by all who knew him.

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA 1868-1869

INITIATED JULY 15TH, 1856. PASSED AUGUST 19TH, 1856. RAISED OCTOBER 21ST, 1856
ST. GEORGE'S LODGE No. 10, Q. R.

Born January 25th, 1829. Active in Canadian Freemasonry until the time of his death, April 9th, 1910

UNIVERSALLY BELOVED NOT ONLY BY MASONS, BUT ALL MANKIND

The irregular organization at Niagara also failed to maintain its former activity, and matters Masonic in Upper Canada were in a decidedly chaotic condition. Culpable indifference combined with blundering efforts at management contrived to bring about a deplorable state of affairs that reflected neither lustre nor credit on any one concerned in the period from 1792 to 1822, and to which the war of 1812-15 did not contribute any enlivening aid.

If, within the limits of a brief paper, it were permitted to glance at the workings of the individual lodges, it would be found that there was no lack of incident to establish the fact that the rank and file of the fraternity were in possession of the elements that tend to the conservation of the fraternity and its teachings. That the humble Craftsmen were not indifferent to existing conditions and the wretched failures of deputed authority is indicated in the records of their discussions. One of these took place at a meeting of the lodge at Bath, which originated the famous Masonic Convention at Kingston, 1817-22, a movement that materially assisted to again elevate the Craft to its appointed status in the community. The invitation to the first Convention was sent out to all the lodges, but the adherents of the irregular body at Niagara, which had by some means secured the Jarvis warrant and had entrenched itself behind its authority, declined to accept. The Convention met on August 27th, 1817, with the representatives of eleven lodges; R.W. Bro. Z. a M. Phillips was chosen President, and it was decided to memorialize England to confirm the nomination of Roderick MacKay, Esq., a local gentleman of repute, to succeed the late William Jarvis, as Provincial Grand Master. The memorial to England was drafted with care and due courtesy and, accompanied by a draft for £30, forwarded to London, but elicited no reply for years.

In the meantime death, by accidental drowning, had removed Bro. MacKay, the nominee of the Convention. That organization was again summoned in February of 1819 and, in the absence of any communication from England, steps were taken to further organize in the interests of the existing lodges, and "Articles of Association," or a constitution, were drawn up and agreed to. Another petition to England was mailed, but with like result. At the third meeting of the Convention, a year later, it was learned indirectly that the money draft sent in 1817 had been duly received in England, but to the Convention's request an apparently deaf ear had been turned. A brother who was about to visit England offered to personally communicate with the authorities there. He did so, and a few weeks after the fifth annual meeting of the Grand Convention, February, 1822, had adjourned, a letter from the Grand Secretary of England arrived, which referred to a communication of his dated 19 November, 1819, relating to Masonic affairs and which he declared must have miscarried. He was careful to state that England's interest in Canadian matters was sincere, and conveyed a hint that "a distinguished member of our order" would probably be commissioned to enquire into the difficulties complained of.

In July, 1822, R.W. Bro. Simon McGillivray arrived from England, bearing his appointment as Provincial Grand Master for Upper Canada, and empowered, by commission, to examine into, and report upon, the condition of the fraternity in that territory. As a beginning he addressed a letter to the valued secretary of the Convention, Bro. John Dean, with a request for information. He also interviewed R.W. Bro. Robt. Kerr, of the Niagara body, and wrote to its secretary, Bro. McBride, asking for similar information. Having acquired all the material he could, R.W. Bro. McGillivray prepared in earnest for the work of reorganization, first journeying to Niagara. His tour completed, he believed he saw his way to the formation of a Provincial Grand Lodge and took steps to that end. On the 23d Sept., 1822, the delegates assembled in York in obedience to summons, and the second Provincial Grand Lodge was constituted in form. With a justice and impartiality which characterized his acts throughout, and with a view to cementing the reconciliation, the various offices were distributed between the members of the late irregular Grand Lodge and those of the Grand Convention. In the following year Bro. McGillivray returned to England, but in 1825 again visited Canada, where finding matters were not proceeding along the lines he had mapped out, he complained of the official neglect and threatened resignation. Yet he continued to keep an interested eye on Craft matters, though handicapped by protracted but necessary absence in England and elsewhere.

About this period there was a perceptible falling away in the activities of the Provincial Grand Lodge and the individual lodges complained of the lack of a governing head. Even Bro. Beikie, the Dep. Prov. G.M., had resigned his position, ostensibly because of the Morgan panic. In the years 1834-7 Masonry was in a dormant condition in Upper Canada. A weak but ineffectual attempt at an independent body was made at London in 1836. In 1837 McGillivray was again heard from through a letter addressed to an English brother, John Auldjo, about to visit Canada, whom he appointed Deputy Provincial Grand Master for the Province and for whom he had secured a patent. Bro. Auldjo may have entered upon the mission entrusted to him, but no record survives. Then ensued a period of dormancy extending over many years. McGillivray died in London in 1840, at the age of 56, a victim of heart disease.

In 1842 R.W. Bro. Ziba M. Phillips, who, in 1817-22, displayed remarkable executive ability as president of the Kingston Masonic Convention, undertook, with something of his old zeal, an attempt at revival. He held the rank of Past Provincial Deputy Grand Master, conferred upon him many years previously in recognition of his services, by R.W. Bro. McGillivray. As of yore, appeals to England proved fruitless and remittances to headquarters remained unacknowledged. He summoned a meeting of the lodges at Kingston, where a petition to England's Grand Master was drawn up requesting that august brother to authorize the appointment of Hon. Robert Baldwin Sullivan as Prov. G.M. for Upper Canada. Leading members of the former Prov. Grand Lodge present expressed dissent at the proceedings, claiming that a resolution of that nature from an unauthorized body was ultra vires of the recognized regulations. They went farther, and even wrote to England in protest. No reply to the petition was vouchsafed by the mother Grand Lodge. At a second Convention, in 1843, the petition was duplicated. So too was England's eloquent silence. In 1844 the Convention confirmed all the acts of Bro. Phillips, sustained him in his position, declared for the immediate establishment of a Grand Lodge and chose their leader to preside over it as Grand Master. These efforts of Bro. Phillips to reawaken the dormant Masonic spirit were not without their effect in the west. It alarmed those who desired perpetuation in the line of descent from the provincial warrant of 1792.

Sir Allan Napier MacNab, of Hamilton, had received a patent from Scotland as Provincial Grand Master, for a territory where there were no Scotch lodges, and under peculiar circumstances. His jurisdiction covered both Upper and Lower Canada, but only in the latter province did he avail himself of the right to warrant lodges. In 1844 England appointed him Provincial Grand Master for Upper Canada, a creation that occasioned as much surprise as it did satisfaction. The Provincial Grand

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO.

Few names in Canada are so familiar to all sorts and conditions of its people, and one of whom the Masonic Fraternity may well feel proud, as that of our honored Brother, John Ross Robertson, of Toronto, who was born there on December 28, 1841. Identified from youth with the newspaper and public life of the country, his personality has inseparably linked itself with the progress of his native city and the vast territory of which it is a recognized centre. His father, the late John Robertson, was a successful wholesale dry goods merchant of Toronto from 1833 to 1875, a native of Nairnshire, in Scotland, and boasted the best of Highland blue blood, being a descendant of Struan, chief of the Clan Donnachaidh, or Robertson, as it is now known.

Educated at Upper Canada College, Toronto, Bro. Robertson early displayed a penchant for "the art preservative," and during his college experience issued The College Times, the pioneer of many such publications. Successful achievement whetted his desire for the profession, and he allied himself to it in sober earnest, going through all its stages from "devil" to "boss."

The year 1864 found him a reporter on The Leader, a leading morning newspaper of its period; he then became city editor of The Globe, a daily which has since taken the place of the other, and in 1866 he was partner in the proprietorship of The Daily Telegraph, a Toronto morning paper which enjoyed an extensive patronage, but demised six years later from political complications.

At the close of 1869 the first Northwest rebellion broke out under Louis Riel, the half-breed. This was enle railway times. Robertson, with the keen instinct of the news-gatherer, undertook in mid-winter the perilous northern cross country journey to Fort Garry, now Winnipeg, the insurgent headquarters. He went by way of St. Paul and Fort Abercrombie, thence across the prairies to Pembina on the boundary line between the United States and Canada. Accompanied by another plucky newspaper man he faced the four hundred mile journey to battle with frost and blizzards and their inevitable risks. Twice they lost their bearings in the blinding snowstorms, but happily succeeded in making camp at the critical moment. It was an achievement that elicited expressions of surprise and commendation from Dr. Schultz, who, after the Rebellion, was Governor of the territory. On reaching Fort Garry they were at once seized by Riel and held in durance for several days. Riel, however, appreciated their pacific intentions, but preferred their room to their company, and sent them back under armed escort to Pembina, a sixty-five mile ride in Arctic weather.

In the spring of 1876 he founded The Toronto Evening Telegram, a newspaper venture which proved to be a success from its inception, and which may, with truth, be claimed to be at the present time one of the most popular as well as the most productive of journalistic enterprises in Canada. It started with a circulation of a few hundred per day, until it has now, in its thirty-sixth year, passed the sixty thousand mark.

On three different occasions Bro. Robertson has been asked to allow his name to be put forward for the position of Mayor of Toronto, an honor he gratefully declined. In 1896, however, he yielded to a call from the East Riding of his native city; to represent it in the Dominion Parliament, that resulted in his triumphant election. Like his newspaper, he maintained in Parliament an attitude of aggressive independence, completing his five year term without ever having sat in party caucus or moved to the crack of the party whip. He was again offered the seat without opposition, but his business interests compelled him to decline.

The same earnest zeal that distinguished his successful business enterprises has characterized his Masonic life and actions. In 1867 Bro. Robertson was initiated in King Solomon's Lodge No. 22, Toronto, but not until ten years subsequently did he undertake office therein. Meantime he had affiliated with Mimico Lodge of Islington, near Toronto, and there attained the chair in 1879. His ambition to preside over his mother Lodge was gratified in the following year when he came out of an exciting contest successfully. An eventful, busy and beneficial term so impressed his brethren that a handsome testimonial, significant of his term of office, was decided on, but gratefully declined by him on the ground that the honor of being chosen W. M. of his mother Lodge was of itself sufficient recognition of services which he gladly gave, and suggested, what would be equally of value to himself, the expenditure of the amount in assisting the widow and orphan. When in after years having served in higher offices and offered more costly testimonials, Bro. Robertson always consistently adhered to this course, and applied such to the purposes of Masonic charity.

In the activities of Grand Lodge administration he was a foremost figure. From 1882 to 1886 he was Chairman of the Committee on the Condition of Masonry, and his reports elicited the highest encomiums, and did untold good in localities where improvement in methods and working was a desideratum. His rearrangement of the districts of Grand Lodge was in 1885 accepted by Grand Lodge with acclamation.

In 1886 Bro. Robertson was elected District Deputy Grand Master for the Eleventh, or Toronto, district, which comprised some forty lodges. That he was faithful to the trust is demonstrated in the fact that each of them were visited twice and many oftener, while his admirable narration of those inspections was summed up by the D. G. M. the late M. W. Bro. Walkem as "a model report and one that the lines of which might well be followed by succeeding officers in that capacity."

The Grand Lodge in 1890, at Kingston, gave him its unanimous vote for Grand Master, and re-elected him the following year at London, thereby enabling him to accomplish the task which he had set out for himself, viz:—to establish a record by visiting every lodge in his jurisdiction. At that time there were 354 lodges in the territory which, between east and west, extended some two thousand miles, the most northerly lodge being located about four hundred miles above Lake Ontario. In the first year he made 131 visits, in the second, 232, and, including his 80 visits as D. G. M., he made a total of 443 visits and addressed over 30,000 brethren. To accomplish this by road and rail he covered in actual travel on this mission 22,768 miles. Referring to this achievement of Bro. Robertson and its resultant revival, the Chairman of the Committee on the Grand Master's address in his report, presented to Grand Lodge at London, in 1892, said, "His name will for all time occupy a high and distinguished place among the eminent members of the Craft."

During Bro. Robertson's term in the Grand East he proposed a new method of balloting for office in Grand Lodge. The system in vogue provided for a distinct ballot in each case involving a separate deposit, count and announcement "The Robertson Ballot," as it is called, provides for a simultaneous vote for each office and on the same paper. It, however, took seven years to bring conviction home, and in 1898 the new system was adopted and has proved a success.

In December of 1892, Bro. Robertson organized a celebration of the centennial of Masonry in Upper Canada and presided at a banquet in Toronto at which Bro. Sir Geo. A. Kirkpatrick, Lieutenant-governor of Ontario, was present along with four hundred prominent members of the Craft in the Province. It was a memorable occasion.

Honorary membership has been conferred upon Bro. Robertson by Zeta Lodge No. 410, Toronto, Niagara Lodge No. 2, Niagara, St. Andrews Lodge No. 16 and King Solomon's No. 22, Toronto. He is also an active member of Zetland Lodge No. 326, Toronto. In Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, London, a warm welcome is always ready for the brother from Canada, who, having crossed the Atlantic every year for forty years, it can be understood the expected happens in his case, and his periodical visit looked for. He is one, No. 23, of the 32 Founders and Members of the "Inner Circle," of "Quatuor Coronati Lodge No. 2076, London," being the only member of that select Masonic literary body on this side of the Atlantic. He is also an honorary member of historic "Mary's Chapel" Lodge No. 1, Edinburgh, and of "Fortrose" Lodge No. 108, Stornoway, in which his grandfather, Hector Sinclair, was initiated in 1798. In 1903 the M. W. Bro. was honored by appointment to the rank of Junior Grand Warden at the hands of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England.

In Royal Arch Masonry he has been active since his exaltation in King Solomon's Chapter No. 8, Toronto, in 1867, and served in the several chairs. Grand Chapter elected him its Grand First Principal in 1894, and was re-elected the following year. During his rulership he visited all the Chapters in the jurisdiction. In the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Knights Templar, he holds rank as Past Provincial Prior. He is Past Grand Master of the Grand Council Royal and Select Masters of Canada, and in 1903 achieved the ultima gradis in the A. and A. Scottish Rite, Honorary Grand Inspector General, 33d degree.

As a writer, Masonically and otherwise, Bro. Robertson has attained an enviable distinction, mainly as an historian. His Masonic works may be said to have commenced with his "History of the Cryptic Rite," collaborated with the late Josiah H. Drummond, of Portland, Maine, in 1888. Two years later he published his "History of the Knights Templar of Canada," and in 1891 appeared a small but most interesting volume from his pen entitled "Talks with Craftsmen," containing many excellent suggestions. His greatest achievement, however, and the one to which he devoted nearly sixteen years, was his "History of Freemasonry in Canada." It is a monument of research, and in recognition thereof the Grand Lodge of Canada, in Ontario, created the office of Grand Historian and elected Bro. Robertson to fill it.

We cannot close this brief sketch of our Illustrious Brother without referring to his private acts of benevolence which he himself has endeavored to conceal, and to emphasize his strong sympathy for those who are in trouble or distress. These things have made his name familiar all over Canada and beyond; they are as nothing, however, compared with his loving kindness and mercies to the little bruised flowers in the garden of humanity, the sick and maimed children. It is for what he has done on their behalf that he will be best loved and longest remembered. It is not necessary to dilate upon the magnificent hospital erected in Toronto by his energy and the generous expenditure of his own means. It is a model for such institutions. To mark his connection with the Craft he founded on Toronto Island and overlooking the blue waters of Lake Ontario, at a cost of $75,000, a summer sanitarium, or convalescent home for the tiny sufferers from the mother hospital in the city, and known as "The Lakeside Home for Little Children." He is the one philanthropist in the body of Freemasonry in Canada, and it is not too much to say that, had there been no John Ross Robertson, there would have been no Sick Children's Hospital in the city of Toronto. This great charity has strong claims upon the Craft because the M. W. Brother imbedded in the constitution of it a condition that the children of Masons were to be admitted free and receive the most skillful treatment and greatest care, without money and without price, and for which purpose he made a further gift of $200,000, the interest thereof to be used to defray the cost of the same. These Hospitals for Sick Children will keep the M. W. Brother's memory green as long as Canadian Masonry exists.

Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario
P. Gd. First Principal, Gd. Chapt. of R.A. Masons of Canada,
P. Gd. M.Gd. Council Royal Select Masters, Ontario.

Lodge was summoned for the 9th August, 1845, and after the customary preliminaries, officers were appointed and installed. Although R.W. Bro. Ziba M. Phillips, had been accused, informally, of being at the head of an irregular organization, it is not recorded that he was ever arraigned therefor, probably because in a letter to the Prov. Grand Secretary the eloquent defence of his actions and position, written in reply, convinced the brethren that they were dealing with a true-hearted, unselfish Mason, earnest only for the welfare of the Craft. Apparently all was working well for the Craft under the new regime. The P.G.M. was not a regular attendant at the communications, but he had an indefatigable Deputy and Secretary, R.W. Bros. Thomas Gibbs Ridout and Francis Richardson, respectively. The old trouble however was again the canker to foster disquiet and irritation. England's cool indifference to reasonable and just demands was once more having its effect, and mutterings of an approaching storm were deep during the latter years of the existence of the third Provincial Grand Lodge.

Probably the most important and interesting epoch in the chequered history of the Craft in Canada, from the advent of R.W. Bro. Jarvis' authority as Provincial Grand Master of Upper Canada, in 1792, was the period embracing the years 1852-55, when the provincial governing body under R.W. Bro. Sir Allan N. MacNab began to chafe at the intolerable attitude of silence maintained by England's Grand Lodge to Canada's many demands and appeals in behalf of legitimate requirements. The irritation passed the grumbling stage when at the semi-annual communication, in 1852, a delegate from Belleville had the hardihood to give notice of a motion to the effect that owing to the great increase of lodges in Canada working under English and Irish authority which were annually remitting moneys which should be retained and devoted to Masonic purposes in this country, the Grand Lodge of England be petitioned to authorize the Provincial Grand Lodge to exercise sole control over Masonic affairs in its own jurisdiction and to use its influence with the sister Grand Lodge of Ireland to induce its subordinates in Canada to submit to the same local authority. At the following communication a resolution declaring for independence and to petition England to that effect was carried.

This was the germ that developed into an agitation that bore fruit later, but, alas, not through the Provincial Grand Lodge. The memorial of 1853, embodying the request expressed in the resolution, was duly, and in choice diction, drafted and forwarded to the Grand Lodge of England, where it was received and diligently pigeon-holed until September, 1855, when it was exhumed and discussed by a special committee, which reported with characteristic disregard to the serious nature of the request and in a style bordering on persiflage. This, in view of modern methods, may sound harsh and perhaps uncharitable, but litera scripta manet.

England's action, or rather non-action, contemptuous as usual of the reasonable demands of colonial brethren, furnished the golden opportunity which unfortunately the worthy but ultra loyal element in the Provincial Grand Lodge hesitated to seize, and thus assisted to cultivate a spirit of unrest that even then threatened serious consequences.

In the meantime, the lodges holding under Ireland had mooted and actively discussed the independence question, and at a convention held at Hamilton, in May, 1855, decided to send a delegation to attend the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge at Niagara Falls in the following July. The convention further adopted a resolution to the effect that an independent Grand Lodge should be at once established if the management of Masonic business was to be conducted in conformity with the dignity of the Craft and that the Grand Lodge of Ireland be communicated with, requesting its countenance and sanction to the proposition. Subsequent meetings only strengthened the determination of the Irish brethren, and as the parent body had yielded so far as to agree to the formation of a Provincial Grand Lodge it was accepted as an encouragement to proceed, and the brethren only awaited the outcome of the approaching meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Canada West before resuming activities. As events proved, that august body saved all further heart burnings, but to the Irish lodges belong the credit of the initial movement that finally led to independence.

Scant courtesy, however, was accorded their delegates when they attended the meeting and not only to the presentations of the Irish brethren, but to those also who were inclined to their way of thinking, was the deaf ear turned. Their carefully prepared resolutions were ruled out by the Deputy Grand Master presiding, who determinedly refused to submit them to the meeting and abruptly adjourned the Grand Lodge. His indiscreet action hastened the inevitable. The indignant Craftsmen at once gathered to talk the situation over, and it was resolved to hold a convention of delegates at Hamilton in the following October to consider the expediency of establishing an independent Grand Lodge of Canada, and that every lodge be notified.

On the 10th of October, 1855, the convention assembled and the gratifying announcement was made that forty-one of the lodges in Quebec and Ontario had sent duly accredited representatives. A committee was formed to prepare a series of resolutions setting forth the views of the convention. There was no evidence of inattention when those resolutions were submitted to that eager, interested gathering. The historian says:

"The resolution which placed Canadian Masons under a sovereign body was prefaced by a preamble which briefly recited the grounds for action, viz.: the diversity of interest caused by the occupation of territory by the Grand Lodges of England, Ireland and Scotland; the objections to Canadian Freemasons being made contributors to the charity funds of England from which they derived no benefit and which created a constant draw on the funds of the Canadian Craft; the inconvenience caused by delays of months, and even years, in receiving warrants and certificates, though asked and paid for; the fact that moneys sent from Canada were unacknowledged for years by England; that the communications of Canadians were treated with silent contempt by England; that the Provincial Grand Masters were merely nominees of England irresponsible to Canadians, and that under the present system the Provincial Grand Lodges were practically independent of the Canadian Craft and that these bodies had not the respect or attention of the mother Grand Lodge."

One or two pacifically disposed amendments were attempted, but received little consideration, and the resolution, as follows, was adopted nem dis:

"That we the representatives of regularly warranted Lodges here in Convention assembled, resolve: 'That the Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of Canada be, and is hereby, formed upon the Ancient Charges and Constitutions of Masonry.'"

The following day was devoted to the consideration and adoption of a draft constitution and the arranging of other necessary preliminaries, all of which received the closest care and attention, so that ancient usage and established custom might be observed and leave no loophole for a possible charge of irregularity. The election of officers was an interesting episode of the memorable session, and it was with the keenest satisfaction that the brethren received the announcement that M.W. Bro. (Judge) William Mercer Wilson, a most capable man, was the choice for first Grand Master of the new Grand Lodge.

On the 2d November following, the convention was again summoned for the purpose of installing the Grand Master and other officers elect, the ceremony being conducted by M.W. Bro. H. T. Backus, P.G.M. of the Grand Lodge of Michigan.

M. W. BRO. E. T. MALONE, K. C. 33°.

P. G. MASTER AND GRAND TREASURER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO.

M. W. Bro. Malone, of Toronto, was born in Kings County, Ireland, on the 11th of February, 1854, and came to Canada when about eight years of age with his parents, who settled at Ingersoll, County of Oxford, Ontario. In 1873 he went to Toronto and studied law, was called to the bar in February, 1876, and immediately went into partnership with Hon. J. D. Edgar, under the firm name of Edgar & Malone, since which he has successfully practiced law, and at the present time represents some of the largest corporations, institutions and firms in Toronto, under the firm name of Malone, Malone & Long, of which he is the head.

M. W. Bro. Malone was initiated into Masonry in the Zetland Lodge, No. 326, of Toronto, on the 23rd of March, 1877, and in 1881 was elected and installed its Worshipful Master and has devoted much time and attention to the building up this large and popular lodge, in which he is recognized as "Father of the Lodge," and it is considered one of the strongest and most wealthy in Ontario.

He is an honorary member of Barton Lodge, No. 6, of Hamilton, and about 1894, in conjunction with R. W. Bro. H. A. Collins, he was instrumental in the removal of Georgiana Lodge, No. 343, to Toronto, with which he affiliated, and it has enjoyed phenomenal success.

He was an appointed officer of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario in 1882, Grand Registrar in 1883, District Deputy Grand Master of Toronto District in 1887, Chairman of the Committee of Grand Lodge on the condition of Masonry for ten years commencing in 1888, Deputy Grand Master 1898-9, and Grand Master 1900-1901, and is now its Grand Treasurer, having filled that office since July, 1901. He is also the representative of the Grand Lodge of South Dakota, and Past President of Toronto Past Masters' Association, in which he takes great interest.

In Capitular Masonry he received the several degrees in King Solomon's Chapter, Toronto, in 1878, and has filled the offices of J and H. and was Z. of his Chapter. Also filled the offices of J., H. and Z in York Chapter, Eglinton, now North Toronto. He was elected Grand Scribe N. of the Grand Chapter in 1880, and is the representative of Grand Chapter of Texas.

In Knights Templarism he was created and constituted a Knight of Geoffroy de St. Aldeman Preceptory No. 2, Toronto, in 1883, and has filled various offices in Preceptory, was Presiding Preceptor in 1885, Vice-Chancellor of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Provincial Prior, Chairman of the Committee on Condition of Templarism, and became its Deputy Grand Master in 1890 and 1891 and Supreme Grand Master in 1892. He is the representative in Canada of the Great Priory of Ireland and is an Honorary Member of Damascus Commandery of Detroit, Michigan, and Ottawa Preceptory, Ottawa. At the meeting of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada in 1897 he was presented with a magnificent Past Grand Master Jewel.

His introduction into the A. & A. Scottish Rite took place when he became a member of the Toronto Lodge of Perfection in March, 1879, since which he has filled various offices in the Lodge, Rose Croix Chapter and Consistory, as presiding officer in both Lodge and Chapter, was made an Honorary Inspector General 33° of the Supreme Council of Canada, October 24th, 1894, at which time his brethren manifested their appreciation by the presentation of a magnificent set of appropriate regalia, and was crowned an active member 33°, October 29th, 1896. He is the representative of Grand Supreme Council of Greece.

M. W. Bro. Malone takes great interest in the work, and is considered one of the best ritualists in Canada. He is a Masonic student, and impresses on the brethren the necessity of encouraging increased appreciation of Masonic literature. He has read several valuable papers on Masonic subjects prepared by himself. He is popular among the brethren. His advice is frequently sought and always generously given. During his Grand Lodge career he has had the united support of his home district, and is highly respected and admired by the fraternity, not only throughout the jurisdiction, but the whole of Canada and elsewhere.

PAST GRAND MASTER AND GRAND TREASURER THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GREAT PRIORY OF CANADA

With a brother of such undoubted attainments at the head of affairs it was to be expected that he not only possessed the confidence of his immediate following but was respectfully feared by not a few of those who were still opposed to the recent creation. At the first annual communication, held in the city of Hamilton on the first Wednesday of July, 1856, he presented an admirable address dealing with the leading events of the preceding nine months. England's Grand Lodge, as well as those of other countries and States had been officially notified of the establishment of the Grand Lodge of Canada and its attendant procedure. With its customary elegant leisure the former failed to even acknowledge receipt of the communication. New York, influenced by statements contained in a circular letter issued by the Provincial Grand Lodge, expressed disapproval and declined recognition, while other Grand Bodies which analyzed the situation with views unbiased, declared in favor of the regularity of Canada's position, and others again, equally satisfied but timorous, preferred to await England's action before deciding. Nothing of this daunted Grand Master Wilson. He knew that sooner or later vindication would come. To use his own words:

"We should continue all fraternal offices to those brethren whose conscientious scruples have deterred them from at once joining us in the establishment of an independent Grand Lodge, feeling assured that when the justice of our cause has become fully understood, the Grand Lodge of Canada will unite under its banner the whole Masonic Fraternity of the Province."

It was reported at that meeting that thirty lodges had affiliated in proper form and warrants issued to them, that the register showed 1,179 members in good standing, that nine dispensations for new lodges had been granted and applications for others were coming in. It was also announced that the Grand Lodge of Ireland was the first of the parent Grand Lodges to extend recognition to the Grand Lodge of Canada.

England at this juncture exhibited symptoms of shaking off its somnolency so far as Canadian affairs were concerned and gave expression to a desire to take up the matter of the complaints from its adherents across the sea. Well disposed brethren in the mother Grand Lodge had espoused the Canadian cause and vigorously condemned the official apathy which characterized the Grand Secretary's office at London in connection with the Provincial Grand Lodge of Canada West and its just demands. Little of benefit or redress was effected and the Provincial body resolved to test the merits of another memorial, which was duly drafted and despatched, and this time brought a reply dated 16 April, 1857. The memorial had been referred to a recently appointed committee termed "The Colonial Board" to deal with. As usual, these brethren, blind to the true conditions, blundered in their estimate of colonial endurance and with fatal results for the Anglo-Canadian connection. The letters from England presented to the Provincial body in June, 1857, were so indefinite, except in expressions of fraternal affection, that it was at once patent that the limit of patience had at last been reached and a series of resolutions favoring Masonic union was actually submitted and approved.

Meantime the young Grand Lodge of Canada was growing in strength and influence and receiving accessions constantly. On the other hand there was a perceptible weakening of the Provincial body and the leaders in both, anticipating the future, held frequent consultations, while the brethren appointed to discuss a possible union in committee prepared for the eventful day under a mutual understanding to present the result of their labors, when the Provincial Grand Lodge was to assemble, perhaps for the last time.

On the 9th September, 1857, the Provincial body met in special communication in Toronto. The respective committees presented their reports in the form of voluminous minutes of their proceedings, which, after discussion, were agreed to. The Provincial Grand Master then announced that by the agreement so reached the body over which he had presided had declared its independence and in the name of the Grand Master of England he called for the warrants of the various lodges issued by that authority. The parchments were on hand and duly surrendered by the delegates, whereupon it was resolved that in succession to the late Provincial Grand Lodge of Canada West a Grand Lodge be formed constituted and proclaimed under the title of the "Ancient Grand Lodge of Canada." A second resolution declared the former Provincial Grand Master to be the Grand Master of the new body and a third decided on the adoption of England's constitution mutatis mutandis. The prearranged programme was admirably adhered to and carried through with perfect decorum and without any unnecessary hitches. The forty-seven lodges which had surrendered their English warrants were provided with the necessary documentary authority to proceed under the new regime, in fact every convenience was provided for as if the "Ancient Grand Lodge" was assured a future existence as prolonged as Tennyson's "Brook." Not the least of the actions that closed a memorable three days session was a fraternally worded memorial to England in which the why and wherefore of the change effected was but lightly touched upon, but requesting recognition and expressing the hope that the herewith returned warrants might be sent back to be retained as souvenirs.

That the tidings created a sensation in England is to put it mildly. The Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland, was apparently blind to the fact that his own treatment of the Canadians had contributed to the result. In a letter in which he declared himself as unalterably opposed to any recognition of the seceders, he said with all apparent innocence:

"I cannot contemplate without the deepest concern the separation of so many lodges from the parent body, and the more so when it is attempted to be shown that the conduct of the Grand Lodge of England has driven them to that course."

This and further correspondence only served to exhibit England's diamay and irritation at the course pursued by the Canadian fraternity.

In the interval, diplomatic negotiations were progressing in Canada looking to a union of the two Grand Lodges, and history repeated itself when in Toronto, on the 14th of July, 1858, the articles of union were submitted to both bodies meeting simultaneously in distinct halls, and approved. To Grand Master Wilson, presiding over the deliberations of the third annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Canada, it was announced at the evening session that a deputation from the Ancient Grand Lodge was in waiting. The brethren were greeted, and their spokesman informed the Grand Master of the action of their Grand Lodge, to which M.W. Bro. Wilson replied that similar action had been taken in the Grand Lodge of Canada and that the latter was now prepared to receive the members of the Ancient Grand Lodge, which, on the return of the deputation, at once acquiesced in the invitation, and proceeded in a body to the hall where the Grand Lodge of Canada awaited them.

Historian John Ross Robertson graphically describes the memorable scene when Grand Master Wilson stepped down from the dais and grasping the hand of Grand Master Sir Allan MacNab bid him cordial welcome, and as the three hundred brethren of the two bodies mingled and clasped hands in a fraternal chain, the Grand Master from his place in the East and in a clear voice said: "May the links thus united never be broken." Needless to add the enthusiasm that ensued was of a nature to enhance the happy consummation, and as the terms of union were ratified by the combined bodies the "Ancient Grand Lodge" was declared dissolved, and thenceforward the Craft was to be a closely united family under the paternal egis of the Grand Lodge of Canada.

M. W. BRO. D. F. MACWATT, 33°.

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO.

M. W. Bro. Judge D. F. Macwatt, of Sarnia, is a native of Scotland, having been born at Nairn on July 9th, 1853. His father, Charles Macwatt, M. A., Aberdeen, was the proprietor and publisher of The Nairnshire Mirror. His parents died when he was only thirteen years of age, and from that time forward young Macwatt had to make his own way in life. At the early age of 14 he entered the service of the Highland Railway Company at Blair Athole, in Perthshire, where he laid the foundation of that business tact and energy which has since distinguished him.

Looking out for a wider sphere in which to utilize his natural talents, he came to America in 1869, and entered the employment of Messrs. Slauson & Company, wholesale confectioners, of New York, in the capacity of office boy. He advanced rapidly to the position of bookkeeper and confidential clerk for the firm. His failing health in 1873 forced him to give up the prospects of a business success and he moved to Canada. Having chosen the profession of law, he entered into articles as student-at-law with Dalton McCarthy, Q. C., of Barrie, in 1876. Having successfully completed the usual course of study, he obtained a certificate of fitness early in 1881, was called to the Bar of Ontario at the Michaelmas Term of the same year, and immediately entered into partnership with the legal firm of McCarthy, Pepler & McCarthy of Barrie. He remained a member of this firm until 1887, when he formed a partnership with John Dickinson, B. A., Wm. Lount, Q. C., M. P., having been for a time the senior partner in this firm.

R. W. Bro. Macwatt first saw Masonic light in Corinthian Lodge, No. 96, Barrie, in June, 1885, and was Master of the Lodge before 1891. He has been D. D. G. M. of Georgian District, No. 9, and in July, 1907, was elected Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, at Ottawa; in 1909, at London, he was elected Grand Master and re-elected in 1910 at Belleville. He proved to be one of the most efficient Grand Masters the Grand Lodge ever had.

He was the first Grand Superintendent of the Georgian District under the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Canada, was also Past Grand Master of the Royal and Select Masters, and President of the Order of the High Priesthood for the province of Ontario.

In Knights Templarism he has been Provincial Prior of the Toronto District and Past Sovereign Grand Master of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada. In the A. & A. Scottish Rite he has also presided over Barrie Lodge of Perfection as T. P. G. M. and has been M. W. Sovereign of the Rose Croix Chapter since its institution in 1888, at Barrie. He was elected an active Sovereign Grand Inspector General, 33°, at Ottawa, in 1896, and at present holds the office of Grand Standard Bearer of the Supreme Council 33° for the Dominion of Canada.

M. W. Bro. Macwatt is a member of the Quatuor Coronati Lodge, No. 2076, London, England.

Although generously enthusiastic in everything he undertakes, our zealous brother, however, has been enamored of Masonry, it fills his heart and occupies much of his life. This feeling has stimulated his activity and sustained his perseverance.

He has discharged with gracious ability the multitudinous duties of the important offices and positions to which he has been called.

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO
PAST SUPREME GRAND MASTER KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OF CANADA

From that notable event of the 14th of July, 1858, the sun of peace and prosperity continued to shine on "The Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of Canada," and although, in the passing of time, clouds occasionally dimmed its brightness they were of brief duration and only served as reminders of the troublous days of old when the spark of hope had well nigh been extinguished and when the remnant of the faithful with despairing eyes saw little in the future but disaster to reward their long suffering patience. Rejoicing in the revivifying atmosphere of home rule and with implicit confidence in their leaders, the brethren of the young Grand Lodge sought the recognition which their peers of the older creations were only too pleased to acknowledge. New York at the outset held aloof under a misapprehension of the situation. A few had taken New York's lead.

England, as was to be expected, hesitated at recognition, or, if Canada's Grand Lodge had to be acknowledged it was to be done after English fashion, in other words it vouchsafed recognition to the Grand Lodge of "Canada West," ignoring the fact that the two provinces by acts of the imperial and colonial parliaments had, in 1841, become fused and the young Grand Lodge claimed jurisdiction over the united territory. In Lower Canada there were six lodges holding English warrants, while there were twelve of Canadian obedience, and the apparent object was to retain for the English lodges a maternal protection, which an admission of sovereignty in regard to the Canadian body would otherwise imperil. A tentative agreement was brought about by which England accorded recognition on the understanding that the English lodges, if they desired to maintain their allegiance, were to be permitted to do so and no further warrants were to be erected. It was a mistaken yielding on the part of Canada and occasioned no little trouble in later years.

Grand Master Wilson was continued in office until 1860. Under his beneficent sway the Grand Lodge had grown in strength and influence. He was succeeded by Thomas Douglas Harington, one of the brightest minds in a host of rare, devoted and intellectual brethren which Canada's Grand Lodge was fortunate to boast at that period. At the sixth annual convocation, held in London, Ont., in July, 1861, there were 116 lodges represented. A committee was appointed to raise an Asylum Fund, to which Grand Lodge promised to donate $20,000 if the brethren contributed a like amount. This was a similar, if more pretentious, project to which many years previously the far-seeing Provincial Grand Master Simon McGillivray had disapproved.

An incident of the year 1860 is worth relating, as it indicates the phase of opposition to which our brethren of Eastern Canada have then and since been subjected. H.R.H. Prince of Wales was then touring Canada for the first time. The government authorities at Ottawa had arranged that on the occasion of his visit to the Capital the corner stone of the Parliament Buildings would be laid, and it was understood that they were favorable to the Masonic fraternity taking part in the ceremony. The Grand Lodge was duly summoned and assembled to that end, but, in the meantime, the powerful influence of the "Roman Catholic Church" had been used to such extent that the officers of the Masonic body were quietly told that their services could not be utilized on that occasion.

In the following year it was reported that 155 lodges were on the roll. Keen regret was expressed at the death of Thomas Gihhs Ridout, Hon. Past Grand Master. A Board of General Purposes was organized and a permanent location for the meetings of Grand Lodge suggested. Grand Master Harington expressed himself very emphatically in the matter of the tacit support given by their Grand Lodges to subordinates of English and Irish origin, which continued to work within the jurisdiction of the Canadian Grand Lodge and dwelt upon the attitude of the English Colonial Board in its mistaken interpretation of Canada's view of the situation. His address of the next year contained similar references and deplored the anomalous condition of the Craft in Canada due to the non-recognition by England of the principle of exclusive jurisdiction.

In 1865 the Grand Lodge had completed its first ten years of existence as such and exhibited a most encouraging statement both as regards funds and membership. In the following year Grand Master Simpson was invited to instal the Grand Master of a newly-formed Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, but declined on the ground that its preliminaries were irregular. Three years later Grand Master Stevenson reported that he had installed the Nova Scotia Grand Master.

The Grand Lodge of Quebec was formed in 1869, but was not then recognized by Canada owing to alleged irregularity of procedure, and an edict of suspension was issued against certain brethren in connection therewith. In 1870 the claim to recognition was again rejected, but was favored, conditionally, in 1871. The conditions, however, were not acceptable to the Quebec brethren as they implied a right to the retention of lodges which might desire to hold to their former allegiance. Vermont's Grand Lodge espoused the Quebec side of the argument and threatened non-intercourse with Canada. To this Grand Master William Mercer Wilson, who had been again chosen to preside, promptly responded with an edict against Vermont. In 1874 he reported that the differences with Quebec were amicably adjusted and that fraternal relations were re-established with Vermont. A sum of $4,000 was voted to Quebec as its proportion of the accumulated funds. M. W. Bro. Wilson was re-elected Grand Master, but in the early days of January, 1875, death claimed this distinguished brother and the mourning assumed, in obedience to command, gave little indication of the genuine grief universal<sup>ly</sup> felt for the beloved Craftsman who had labored diligently and successfully in the interests of a united fraternity. Another serious loss was sustained in the passing of the devoted Grand Secretary R.W. Bro. T. B. Harris, who had filled the office since the formation of Grand Lodge twenty years previously.

The organization of Grand Lodges in Manitoba and Prince Edward Island marked the next year, which was also one of prosperity for Canada. A sum of three thousand dollars was paid for purposes of relief. Trouble was originated by the opposition of existing lodges in London, Ont., to the establishment of a lodge in that city recently formed and working under dispensation. Grand Lodge declined to confirm the latter and in the interests of harmony acting Grand Master J. K. Kerr offered a suggestion for consideration which the promoters of the young lodge refused. Despite the fact that their dispensation was no longer operative they continued to receive candidates, and a breach, that grew in extent daily, went beyond the possibility of closing by the secession of its members, the leaders being promptly expelled from the Craft. This was the beginning of the irregular body known as "The Grand Lodge of Ontario," which although it gained adherents, was so much out in the cold, that after a fitful tenure of many years offered unconditional submission and passed out of existence with the healing of a few of those who had labored in vain to give it a semblance of life.

The succeeding years were successful beyond the fondest hopes of even the most sanguine, but comparatively uneventful. The Grand Orient of France by removing a fundamental requirement, a belief in the Deity, was shut off from fraternal communion by Grand Lodges in general, and in 1878 Canada joined in the exclusion. In 1883 England as a disquieting element loomed up again. Grand Master Daniel Spry at the

M. W. BRO. AUBREY WHITE, 33°.

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO.

There are few men in the Masonic Fraternity in the Province of Ontario who are more prominent in its work or better known than M. W. Bro. Aubrey White. His zeal for the Craft marked him as one worthy of the confidence and esteem of his brethren and capable of filling, with credit to himself and the several bodies with which he is connected, any position to which he might be called. It is not surprising, therefore, that he climbed, round after round, the ladder that has lead him to fame and distinction in our mystic circle.

M. W. Bro. White was born in 1845 at Lisonally House, near Omagh, County of Tyrone, in the north of Ireland. He is the fourth son of the late David White, then of Lisonally House and Mountjoy Forest, near Omagh, in which town M. W. Bro. White's father and grandfather were well-known lawyers. Like most north of Ireland men, the subject of our sketch is half Scotch, his mother being the daughter of Alexander Mackenzie, of Donaghmore House, Tyrone, who was, however, a native of the town of Dumfries, in the land o' cakes.

He came to Canada in 1863 and went straight to Muskoka, which, at that time, was a veritable wilderness. Here for a number of years M. W. Bro. White was engaged in various pursuits as lumberman, explorer, and forest ranger, which has so well fitted him for his present responsible position, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, Province of Ontario. He entered the employ of the Provincial Government as Crown Lands and Free Grant agent at Bracebridge in 1877, and in 1882 was removed to headquarters at Toronto, where his practical ability and experience in timber matters are fully appreciated and recognized.

M. W. Bro. White's Masonic career began nearly thirty-five years ago, when he was initiated in Muskoka Lodge, No. 360, Bracebridge, on the 27th of August, 1878. On his removal to Toronto he affiliated with King Solomon's Lodge, No. 22, where he at once took an active part in the work of the lodge, and after serving in its various offices was rewarded with the position of Worshipful Master in 1895. In 1897 he was elected District Deputy Grand Master of the 11th Toronto Masonic District, and in that capacity proved himself an able exponent of the principles of the fraternity, well fitted to fill any office in the gift of his brethren. On retiring from the office he was appointed by the then Grand Master, M. W. Bro. John M. Gibson, to the Board of General Purposes of Grand Lodge, since which he has filled the following positions and offices, viz.: Chairman of Committee on Condition of Masonry, Grand Lodge until 1900. Elected Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario at London, in 1909, and elected Grand Master at St. Catharines, 1911, and re-elected at Toronto in 1912.

In Capitular Masonry he has also taken an active interest, being exalted in St. Paul's Chapter, October 9th, 1889. "Z" of St. Paul's Chapter, Grand Principal Sojourner of the Grand Chapter of Canada, Chairman of the Board on Condition of Capitular Masonry, which position he still holds.

In Knights Templarism he was Knighted in Cyrene Preceptory 1889, is a past Preceptor and Provincial Prior for Toronto District.

In the A. & A. Scottish Rite he was constituted and proclaimed in 1889 and became the Master of Toronto Lodge of Perfection, a Member of Toronto Chapter of Rose Croix, and Moore Consistory 32°, Hamilton, and has also received the Honorary Inspector General 33°.

In the Royal Order of Scotland he is a member of the Grand Lodge of Ontario and Quebec, and also a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, Rameses Temple, Toronto.

M. W. Bro. White is the representative of the Grand Lodge of Maryland at the Grand Lodge of Canada. Representative of the Grand Chapter of North Carolina at the Grand Chapter of Canada. Vice-President of the Toronto Masonic Temple Company. Representative to Masonic Hall Board, Toronto, of King Solomon's Lodge.

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO

annual communication in Ottawa directed the attention of Grand Lodge to the fact that a rejected candidate of a Toronto lodge had been initiated in one of the lodges holding under England in Montreal. Complaint to England brought a characteristic reply, stating that the Grand Master could not agree with the Canadian contention touching invasion of jurisdiction and the matter took the usual protracted time for adjustment.

In 1885 the Montreal English warrants were the occasion of an edict of non-intercourse by the Grand Lodge of Quebec. Four years later M.W. Bro. R. T. Walkem, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, undertook the role of mediator in the hope of arranging a satisfactory basis of settlement. The edict was thereupon withdrawn by Quebec and the M.W. Bro. was most fraternally received at headquarters in London. His statement of the case was accepted with every mark of courtesy and polite attention and he was assured that the matter would receive the consideration it merited. It only remains to add that the English warrants are still a working commodity in Montreal and prolific of future possibilities.

During 1888 the last of the Irish warrants, which, like those of England, were in 1858 mistakenly permitted to continue, No. 159 at Vankleek Hill, was surrendered, its membership requesting admission to the Canadian fold. The prosperity of the Grand Lodge and its usefulness were very marked at this period. Two hundred and sixty of the lodges were represented at the annual communication in Toronto and the funds reported as $70,000.

One hundred years previously R.W. Bro. William Jarvis had unfolded his warrant in historic Niagara and later held it in the little town of York. In 1892 the latter had become the great metropolitan city of Toronto with a Masonic fraternity in proportion to its remarkable expansion, and the centenary of the Craft in "Upper Canada" was fittingly celebrated by a banquet to which over four hundred leading brethren sat down, presided over by Past Grand Master M.W. Bro. J. Ross Robertson, Historian of the Grand Lodge.

The unveiling, by the same indefatigable brother, of a handsome polished granite column to the memory of "The Dead of the Craft" in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Toronto, was the occasion of another notable Masonic demonstration in June of the following year. The plot on which the monument stands was the gift of Bro. Robertson.

Thenceforward the progress of Canada's Grand Lodge was in keeping with the country's amazing growth and prosperity and when in 1905 Grand Master Allen, presiding at the fiftieth annual convocation, congratulated Grand Lodge on its achievements of half a century, he did it no injustice when he said:

"For the Mason of to-day, who knows no other conditions than those which our predecessors aimed to create, it may be difficult to realize and appreciate fully the intangible advantages which we enjoy as the fruit of the great change effected half a century ago."

"The 1,500 Masons of the 41 lodges of our first establishment have become about 35,000, comprising 390 lodges, notwithstanding the loss of over 40 lodges ceded to Quebec and Manitoba. We have yielded up a great territory, yet our membership has increased over twenty-fold."

"Beginning with not even sufficient funds with which to purchase regalia for its Grand officers, and with an initial balance sheet showing receipts of only £93 and disbursements of but £64, Grand Lodge finds itself to-day, as the result of the sound policy of its rulers, possessed of a well-invested capital of over $110,000."

"The Grand Masters of the early years handed out, in their discretion, the few dollars then available for charitable purposes. But, with increasing resources, the institution of the 'Benevolent Fund,' and the creation of machinery for its distribution, this great department of Masonic work began to assume its proper place and proportions and to-day, in the course of steady growth, we find that about $14,000 or fifty per cent. of the moneys received by Grand Lodge from the lodges in the ordinary course during the year, has been paid out for the relief of the needy and deserving of the Craft."

To further express gratitude to the Giver of all Good "for favors already received" and to mark the particular epoch in the history of the Craft in Ontario, M.W. Bro. J. E. Harding, who presided as Grand Master in 1902-4, inaugurated a "Semi-Centennial Fund" of $100,000, to be contributed by the active members of the lodges in the jurisdiction, with a view to supplementing the good work of the Benevolent Fund and applying the income derived from it to the relief of extreme cases which the latter fund was unable to meet. The levy was to be at the rate of $3 per member and payable in that number of years. The fund, at this writing, is practically completed.

Few, if any, are left who can recall the stirring events of over half a century ago, events pregnant with future benefit, but the Craft of to-day, which rejoices in an atmosphere of tranquility and comparative affluence, would be ingrate indeed were the memories of the past, to which it owes everything, permitted to fade and extinguish for lack of occasional reminder. That "The Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario," with its 420 lodges, embracing 48,000 members, is enabled, at this period, to dispense for the relief of our less fortunate brethren, their widows and orphans, a sum of $20,000 annually, is a tribute, not to the present generation, which but lightly feels the call, but to the brethren of the dead and gone past, who so valiantly struggled through long years of discouragement to keep the standard of the ancient Craft afloat.

The intervening years have been uniformly peaceful and the close of 1910 furnished abundant evidence of the steadily growing vigor and influence of the fraternity. Under the rule of capable and wise brethren who realized their great responsibility the Craft in the province of Ontario has demonstrated its ability to accomplish the great mission entrusted to it and gives promise of doing further on similar lines in the not distant future. One may well quote Historian Robertson when in looking back on the years which have sunk into a shadowy past and reviewing the achievements and failures of our pioneer fathers.

"Yet all must admit—and especially we who have a direct knowledge of their work—that in their mission they were earnest and sincere and did the right as God gave them to see the right. Their successes and reverses, their triumphs and tribulations come to the Masons of Canada as lessons eloquent of instruction."

Of the twenty-four brethren who since 1855 have been selected to fill the chair of the Grand East twelve have passed to their reward, viz.: M.W. Bros. Wilson, Harington, Simpson, Stevenson, Seymour, Weller, Henderson, Moffatt, Spry, Murray, Walkem and Hungerford. The following is a list of Grand Masters in order of succession:

1856-1860—William Mercer Wilson.	1890-1892—John Ross Robertson.
1860-1864—Thomas Douglass Harington.	1892-1894—John Morrison Gibson.
1864-1866—William B. Simpson.	1894-1896—William R. White.
1866-1868—William Mercer Wilson.	1896-1898—William Gibson.
1868-1871—Alexander A. Stevenson.	1898-1900—Elias Talbot Malone.
1871-1872—James Seymour.	1900-1901—Richard B. Hungerford (died 9th Sept., 1901).
1872-1875—William Mercer Wilson.	1901 —John E. Harding, Acting G.M.
1875-1877—James Kirkpatrick Kerr.	1902-1904—John E. Harding.
1877-1879—William H. Weller.	1904-1905—Benjamin Allen.
1879-1881—James A. Henderson.	1905-1907—James H. Burritt.
1881-1882—James Moffatt.	1907-1909—Augustus T. Freed.
1882-1884—Daniel Spry.	1909-1911—Daniel Fraser MacWatt.
1884-1886—Hugh Murray.	1911-1912—Aubrey White.

DEPUTY GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO

EARLY HISTORY OF FREEMASONRY IN UPPER CANADA

NIAGARA LODGE, NO. 2; THE ANCIENT ST. JOHN'S LODGE, NO. 3;
 SUSSEX LODGE, NO. 5; AND THE BARTON LODGE, NO. 6,
 AND OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST AND FACT.

BY M. W. BRO. AUGUSTUS T. FREED

PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO

I HAVE had the privilege of reading the excellent article, written by R. W. Bro. George J. Bennett, of the early history of Masonry in Canada and of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Canada; hence I do not propose to tread the path traversed by him, but shall endeavor to supplement his narrative with some account of lodges warranted in the early days of Masonry in that part of Canada formerly called Upper Canada or Canada West, and now forming the Province of Ontario.

R. W. Bro. William Jarvis, who was appointed to the civil position of Provincial Secretary of Upper Canada in 1792, was at the same time made Provincial Grand Master of Masons; and, between the year named and 1817, he issued warrants to twenty-four lodges. Some of these continue to the present time, but most of them have "fallen on sleep."

Four of the old Jarvis lodges have, by resolutions of Grand Lodge, been permitted to wear gold lace on their aprons and to work with gold jewels, in recognition of their rank in the craft and their service to Masonry in this jurisdiction. These are now known as Niagara Lodge, No. 2; The Ancient St. John's, No. 3, of Kingston; Sussex, No. 5, Brockville; and The Barton, No. 6, of Hamilton.

Niagara Lodge, No. 2, was the first warranted by Jarvis. It has experienced many vicissitudes, and for a number of years its meetings were interrupted; but it has survived all blows of time and chance, and is now a prosperous and active body. The town of Niagara, formerly called Newark, was burned by the troops of the United States in the war of 1812, when the lodge room and all the original records were destroyed, though the warrant was saved, and hangs on the wall of the present Lodge room.

In June, 1814, while the United States troops were still in possession of Niagara, Lieut. Fitzgibbon, with a small body of British rangers, was stationed at Decew's house, a few miles south of St. Catharines, and was the cause of a good deal of annoyance to the invading force. General Dearborn therefore decided to capture him, or at least to dislodge him, and sent Col. Boerstler, commanding the Fourteenth regiment of United States regulars, with other troops, to do the work. Mrs. Laura Secord, wife of a Mason, accidentally learned of the proposed expedition, and determined to give warning to Lieut. Fitzgibbon. Accordingly, taking a pail in her hand, as if about to go out to milk her cows, she passed the sentries, and made her way for nineteen miles through woods swarming with Indians, till she reached the Decew house and warned the Lieutenant of his danger. It is not probable that the action of Mrs. Secord had any bearing upon the subsequent engagement, for the Indians, under command of Captain W. J. Kerr, were watching the movements of Colonel Boerstler; they fought the battle of Beaver Dams; and before the regulars, under Lieut. Fitzgibbon, arrived on the field the United States troops were beaten to a standstill. Lieut. Fitzgibbon succeeded in persuading Col. Boerstler that he was surrounded by a vastly superior force of Indians and British regulars, and the colonel surrendered his whole force. Bro. Secord was not a member of Niagara Lodge, but of a lodge which met at Stamford, near Niagara Falls.

In 1826 William Morgan was abducted from Batavia, New York, and taken to Fort Niagara, on the New York side, where he was temporarily placed in a magazine. Some of his abductors passed over to the Canadian side of the river, and endeavored to secure the co-operation of the Niagara brethren in disposing of the prisoner. There are several accounts, no one of them trustworthy, of subsequent events. One is that the abductors killed Morgan in the magazine of the fort, sewed the body in a sack, carried it to a boat, rowed out into the river and sunk it. The next is that, failing to get assistance from the Canadian Masons, they returned to Fort Niagara, and found that Morgan had died from dissipation, exposure and fright. A third that they took Morgan, still alive, into the boat, weighted him with irons and threw him overboard, and the fourth is that the Canadian Masons did receive him, and passed him on to Toronto, near which place he lived for a number of years. I have conversed with a number of the oldest Masons at Niagara on the subject, and they agree in the assertion that the brethren of their lodge refused to have any hand in the business, while they also think that Morgan was passed on toward Hamilton and lived for some years on the north shore of Lake Ontario.

The lodge room was destroyed by fire in 1860, and all the old documents, together with the jewels and other property of the lodge, were burned. The building now owned and occupied stands on the site of that in which the lodge first met, and in which the Provincial Grand Lodge formed by Jarvis held its meetings.

The Ancient St. John's Lodge, of Kingston, No. 3 on the present register of the Grand Lodge of Canada, was No. 6 of the lodges warranted by William Jarvis. It worked for a short time under dispensation, and its warrant was dated November 20, 1795. This lodge has always held a prominent place in the Masoury of Ontario; has always exercised great influence in Masonic circles; and yet there is little in its records which has more than local interest. It is remarkable rather for the number of prominent men who were initiated in it than for events of magnitude in its history. One of the charter members was Richard Cartwright, great-grandfather of Sir Richard Cartwright, who for the past half century has taken a leading part in the political history of the country, and who is now a Senator of Canada. Other members of Ancient St. John's who have made names for themselves in the history of Canada were Sir Alexander Campbell, William Henry Draper, Sir Henry Smith and Sir John A. Macdonald, for many years Premier of Canada.

In 1834, owing to the anti-masonic excitement in the United States the brethren deemed it prudent "to cease working until such time as the lodge might beneficially work with advantage to the craft and the world at large." The meetings were not resumed until 1843.

M. W. Bro. John Ross Robertson says that Sussex Lodge, No. 5, was originally formed in a regiment raised for the royal service by Sir John Johnson, during the Revolutionary War. Its first warrant was issued by the Grand Lodge of New York, in 1783, to "a lodge in his Majesty's Loyal American Regiment." Soon after the close of the war many members of the regiment settled on the north side of the St. Lawrence, near the present town of Prescott, and they appear to have carried the lodge organization with them. There it was called the New Oswegatchie Lodge.

Oswegatchie was the old name of Ogdensburg, New York. About 1790 a warrant appears to have been obtained from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec. The early minutes of the lodge are full, and are of value as showing the character of the Masonry which existed in those days, but they have little interest for the general reader. At later dates the lodge worked under warrants from the Provincial Grand lodge of "Ancients" of Upper Canada, then from Provincial Grand Lodges under the United Grand Lodge of England. It was not called Sussex Lodge till 1822. It was the first named on the list of the lodges which met at Hamilton, in 1855, to form the Grand Lodge of Canada. W. B. Simpson, a Past Master of the lodge, was active in the work of organization, and was elected the first District Deputy Grand Master of the Central District. He was elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in 1864, and served with eminent ability for two years. Another valuable and prominent member of the lodge was R. W. Bro. Ziba M. Phillips. He was President of a convention held at Kingston, in 1820, which promoted the revival of Masonry in Canada West in 1822, and was a power in the Craft till the time of his death.

The Barton Lodge, No. 6 on the register of the Grand Lodge of Canada, was the ninth of those warranted by William Jarvis. Its charter, dated November 20, 1795. The document cannot now be found; but the receipt for the charter fees is preserved, dated Nov. 1795, and Lane's Masonic Record (English) says the date of the original warrant was Nov. 20, 1795. The first members were men who were called in Canada United Empire Loyalists. They had lived in various parts of the country now forming the United States, had adhered to the royal cause in the War of the Revolution, and at the end of the struggle they were deprived of their property, and compelled to seek new home in the then almost unbroken wilderness of Upper Canada. Those who settled on or near the spot on which Hamilton now stands put down stakes in the forest (for the land was not surveyed), and started life anew. Among these pioneers came Davenport Phelps, a missionary sent out under the auspices of Trinity Church, New York. He was also a notary public, and withal Grand Secretary of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Upper Canada, of which William Jarvis was Provincial Grand Master. Several of the settlers at "the Head of the Lake," as the country at the western extremity of Lake Ontario was then called, were Masons; and when Davenport Phelps came among them he apparently found no difficulty in gathering them together in a Masonic fold.

Of Robert Land, one of the founders of the lodge, the following story is told: He was a farmer, living in Southern New York, near the Pennsylvania line. While absent with his regiment, Indian allies of the colonials raided the settlement, burned the houses, and killed or carried off all the inhabitants, mostly women and children. Land, returning from service, found his home a heap of ashes, and was told that his wife and two children had been killed. Heartbroken, he returned to his regiment, and at the close of the war went to Canada, and was given a tract of land at the Head of the Lake. The wife and children, however, had not been killed, but were rescued by British troops and taken to New York. Thence they were sent by sea to Halifax, and there they remained for some years. In course of time information reached Mrs. Land that her husband was living at the Head of the Lake and she was sent to that place by the military authorities of Nova Scotia. As Robert Land sat in the door of his cabin one summer evening he saw a woman and two boys approaching. They proved to be his wife and sons, and the long-divided family was reunited.

The minutes of the earliest meetings of the lodge were kept on loose sheets of paper, and are lost. The first which now exist are those of a meeting held January 31, 1796, which was attended by twelve members and four visitors. Among the members appears the name of "Bror. Capt. Brant." This was Thayendanegea, the celebrated Indian chief. He lived about ten miles from the meeting place of the lodge on a square mile of land given him by the British Government. There is no other evidence than this record to show that he was a member of the lodge.

The old minutes are very interesting, as showing the customs of the time, and illustrating the condition of the country, but they have no great interest for the general reader. We read in one place that the "Treasurer take as much money out of the chest as will purchase three gallons of whiskey against the next lodge night," and in another place that "the liquors for the use of the lodge shall be purchased with the money belonging to the lodge by the barrel or quarter cask." So we have no doubt that when the brethren were called from labor to refreshment, as they were several times in the course of the evening, the phrase used was no mere figure of speech. Again, when we read that brethren were permitted to pay their annual dues in "good merchantable wheat, delivered at Bro. Rousseaux's mill," we need no further intimation that, at the end of the eighteenth century, cash was a scarce article at the Head of the Lake.

Another entry is of wider interest, and exhibits a broader spirit. I may be pardoned for copying the minute in full. The lodge met on the 12th of December, 1800, and the Secretary—

Read a letter from the Grand Secretary informing this lodge of communication received from the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania announcing the death of the Right Worshipful Grand Master Washington, and requesting this lodge to go in mourning at their public and private meetings six months, including their first meeting; in consequence of which Bro. Aikman moved, seconded by Bro. J. Showers, that a piece of black ribbon should be purchased for that purpose. The motion being put was carried. Bro. John Lottridge agreed to furnish the lodge with the ribbon.

Let it not be forgotten that a large majority of the members of The Barton Lodge at that time were men who had fought on the royalist side in the War of the Revolution, and that they had lost their property and had been exiled from the place of their birth because of the part they had taken; notwithstanding which they could rise above the passions of the conflict and resentment at what they must have believed to be injustice and spoliation, and could remember as Masons the brother who was so eminently worthy of honor.

A few years later war again broke out between Great Britain and the United States, and Upper Canada was several times invaded by the forces of the republic. Members of The Barton did their share of work in the several battles which took place along the Niagara frontier and farther west. In 1813 a strong force under Generals Winder and Chandler advanced from Niagara against the British General Vincent, who was entrenched at Burlington Heights, in the western part of what is now Hamilton. Ephraim Land, a brother of that Robert Land of whom mention has been made, fearing that the property of the lodge would be carried off or destroyed by the invaders, took the warrant, the jewels and other portable articles, and buried them in his flower garden, planting a branch of geranium over them to mark the spot. The precaution, however, was not necessary. After the battle of Stony Creek the United States forces fell back, and Bro. Land dug up the articles so carefully interred. They were not again used for many years. When the war closed the membership of The Barton Lodge was sadly reduced. William Jarvis, the Provincial Grand Master, had for many years ceased to be active in Masonry; and he died shortly afterwards, in 1817. Besides, the warrant of the lodge had been issued under authority from the so-called Ancient, or Athol, Grand Lodge of England. That body had (in 1813) united with the original Grand Lodge to form the United Grand Lodge of England; and the brethren of The Barton were in doubt as to their Masonic standing. And so for about twenty years there was no meeting of the lodge. By the year 1835 Hamilton had grown to be a considerable village, and among its inhabitants were several unaffiliated Masons. These and a few of the survivors of the original members of The Barton met and resolved to attempt a revival of the lodge. In the end they were successful. The United Grand Lodge of England issued a new warrant, numbered 733 on the English register, and under that warrant The Barton worked until the formation of the Grand Lodge of Canada in 1855.

One of the men who took a leading part in the reorganization was William Johnson Kerr, a son-in-law of Joseph Brant, the great Mohawk chief, and a relative of Sir William Johnson, so prominent in New York during and before the War of the Revolution. Bro. Kerr was in command of the Indians who won the battle of the Beaver Dam. He and his family are buried in the cemetery of the little English church at Burlington. A few years ago the members of The Barton Lodge placed a memorial stone at the head of his grave.

In November, 1895, The Barton Lodge celebrated its Centennial. A gold medal was struck to commemorate the event and Grand Lodge granted the members of The Barton Lodge permission to wear this medal as a Masonic jewel.

R. W. Bro. George J. Bennett has sufficiently told the history of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Upper Canada, and I must not duplicate the narrative. I may be permitted, however, to add a few facts. In 1844 the body was without an executive head, and a proposal was made to petition the Grand Lodge of England to appoint R. W. Bro. Thomas Gibbs Ridout, of St. Andrew's Lodge, Toronto, to the vacant position. Then, in a very dramatic manner, Sir Allan Macnab, of The Barton Lodge, appeared on the scene, and produced a patent appointing him to the place. Sir Allan was not an exemplary Mason. A resident of Hamilton, he went down to Toronto, and was initiated in St. Andrew's Lodge. The Barton Lodge protested against the invasion of its territory, and Sir Allan received his second degree in Hamilton. Soon afterward, he visited Scotland, and while there he was made Provincial Grand Master for Upper and Lower Canada. He was not even a Master Mason at the time, and there were no Scotch lodges in Upper Canada. There is no evidence that Sir Allan ever attempted to act upon his Scotch patent. After he was made Provincial Grand Master for Upper Canada by the Grand Lodge of England he took but little interest in Masonic affairs, leaving routine work to his lieutenant, Bro. Ridout, who generally presided at the meetings of the Provincial Grand Lodge. A great deal of dissatisfaction existed, not only at the carelessness and neglect shown by officials of the Grand Lodge in England, but because there was to some extent a clashing of interests between the lodges of English and Irish origin. The latter had no provincial organization, and the brethren of those lodges were also dissatisfied with the want of attention paid to their communications by the home brethren. The first open protest against this state of things came from The Barton Lodge. On the 10th of December, 1851, it was resolved, "That a committee be appointed to confer with Strict Observance Lodge concerning the propriety of addressing the various sister lodges in Canada on the subject of withdrawing from the Grand Lodge of England, and establishing an independent Grand Lodge of Canada." The brethren of the Lodge of Strict Observance declined to take part in the movement; but the matter was brought before the Provincial Grand Lodge at its next ensuing meeting in June, 1852, when notice of motion was given that at the following communication a resolution would be introduced to "petition the Grand Lodge of England to be permitted to exercise sole control over the affairs of Masonry in this province, and that the Grand Lodge of England be Masonically requested to use its influence with the Grand Lodge of Ireland to induce those lodges now working under its authority to submit to the decision of this Grand Lodge." At the next semi-annual meeting the resolution was duly moved and carried. It affirmed that feelings of respect and reverence for the Grand Lodge of England were entertained by the Canadian brethren, but added:

That it is absolutely necessary for the welfare of Masonry that a separate Grand Lodge be established, with full power to control the working and operations of the craft in this quarter of the globe, to secure which a committee be appointed to draft a petition to the Grand Lodge of England, based on the foregoing resolutions, praying for permission to establish a Grand Lodge in that part of the Province of Canada formerly constituting Upper Canada, with full power and authority to manage and control all matters connected with such Grand Lodge, and all lodges now working under the constitution of the Grand Lodge of England; and that the said committee be fully empowered to carry on all correspondence with the Grand Lodge of England for the purpose of securing the absolute independence of such Grand Lodge.

For the next three years letters and memorials were sent to England, pointing out the disadvantages under which Canadian Masons were suffering, but these were not even answered. The subject was before the Provincial Grand Lodge at every session, but no final action was taken.

While all this was going on the brethren of lodges chartered by the Grand Lodge of Ireland were suffering similar neglect and expressing like dissatisfaction. It must be remembered that the Irish lodges, ten in number, had no provincial or local organization, and could make representations to their mother Grand Lodge only as individual lodges or by convention specially called for the purpose. The first formal action, so far as is known, was taken by King Solomon's Lodge, Toronto, on the tenth of November, 1853, when a resolution was adopted appointing a committee to correspond with other lodges holding under the Grand Lodge of Ireland, for the purpose of establishing "a ruling power in Canada West." The committee performed the work assigned it, and, on the 8th of December, 1853, the convention was held at Hamilton. Four lodges were represented. In May, 1854, another convention was held at London, which appointed a committee to draft a constitution for the Grand Lodge of Canada West, and adjourned to meet at Hamilton in October. This meeting was again adjourned to November, at Toronto, when a proposal from the Grand Lodge of Ireland to grant a Provincial Grand Lodge to the Irish Lodges in Canada West was discussed. The Grand Lodge of Ireland was not willing to grant to the Irish Provincial Grand Lodge the powers demanded, and in May, 1855, King Solomon's Lodge instructed its representatives to unite with the English lodges for the purpose of petitioning the Grand Lodges of England, Ireland and Scotland to grant an independent Grand Lodge for the Province of Canada West. Negotiations between the Irish lodges and the Grand Lodge of Ireland then ceased.

At the regular meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge (English), held in May, 1855, it was resolved to summon a lodge of emergency, to be held as early in July as possible, "for the purpose of taking into consideration the motion to be proposed by the mover of this resolution," and the Grand Secretary was instructed to forward a copy of the resolution to each lodge in the jurisdiction.

The Lodge of Emergency was held at the Clifton House, Niagara Falls, on the 19th and 20th of July, and the minutes inform us that—

It was duly moved and seconded, "That a meeting of delegates from all the lodges in the Province, under all jurisdictions, be invited to meet at an early day to take the necessary steps for communicating with the Grand Lodge of Great Britain and Ireland, for the purpose of forming an independent Grand Lodge." The motion, being put to the vote, was lost.

That, however, did not end the business. When the Grand Lodge adjourned on the 19th, a number of the delegates met in convention, with several representatives of Irish lodges, and it was resolved—

That a convention of delegates be held at Hamilton on the second Wednesday in October next, for the purpose of considering the expediency of establishing an independent Grand Lodge of Canada, and to proceed with such matters as may be deemed most desirable for the benefit of Masonry in this Province.

The convention assembled in the room of The Barton Lodge, on the 10th of October. Forty-one lodges were represented, of which thirty held English warrants, nine Irish warrants, and two Scotch warrants. At that convention the Grand Lodge of Canada was formed. At an adjourned meeting, held on the 2d of November, the Grand Lodge was formally constituted and consecrated, and its officers installed and invested, by M. W. Bro. H. T. Backus, Grand Master of Masons in the State of Michigan.

It may not be out of place to tell here why the "Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario" retains its present title, when its jurisdiction is confined to the Province of Ontario, and when there are eight other Grand Lodges in the Dominion of Canada. In 1855, when the Grand Lodge was formed, it exercised jurisdiction over the whole of Canada as it then existed, that is, the present provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Twelve years later (in 1867), the Dominion of Canada was formed by the union of all the old provinces; and shortly afterwards the territories of the Hudson Bay Company were acquired by purchase, and the Province of British Columbia seceded to the Dominion, so that Canada extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the United States border to the Arctic Ocean. About the same time the lodges in Quebec, adopting the American doctrine of territorial jurisdiction, formed the Grand Lodge of Quebec. It was not at once acknowledged by the existing Grand Lodge, but controversy extended over several years. This was ended in 1874 by recognition of the new body. Then, it may seem, it would be easy and proper to adopt the title of Grand Lodge of Ontario, and nobody would have been more happy than the brethren of Ontario to take that name. But there were lions in the path. While the controversy with Quebec was in progress some brethren, having or believing they had, a grievance, established a clandestine body, and took the territorial name. Not only so, but some colored people formed lodges, established a Grand Lodge of their own, and assumed the same title. Not only did they take the title, but they obtained an act of incorporation from the legislature, and thus fortified themselves with legal warrant. It is possible that if the legitimate Grand Lodge in this Province were to assume the same name now, its right to do so might be challenged by the colored people; and in any case it would not be pleasant for one to be asked to which Grand Lodge of Ontario he owed allegiance—the clandestine Grand Lodge, the colored Grand Lodge, or the regular and legitimate Grand Lodge. For these reasons the best course was pursued, and the body calls itself the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario.

THE GRAND LODGE OF MANITOBA

BY JAMES A. OVAS, 33°

PAST GRAND MASTER AND GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND LODGE OF MANITOBA.

THE first Lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons to organize in what is now the Province of Manitoba, was by authority of M. W. Bro. A. T. C. Pierson, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Minnesota, under a dispensation dated the thirteenth day of September, 1863, coming by way of Pembina, Dakota Territory, to Fort Garry (now Winnipeg), in what was then known as the Red River Settlement.

In his address to the Grand Lodge of Minnesota, at the eleventh Annual Communication, held at the City of St. Paul, on the twenty-seventh day of October, 1863, M. W. Bro. Pierson, Grand Master, says: "About the middle of last month I received an application signed by W. Bros. C. W. Nash, J. L. Armington, A. T. Chamblin, Charles H. Mix, and eight others, who were en route for Pembina, Dakota Territory, for a Dispensation authorizing them to open and work a Lodge. Pembina is the most northern point in the territory of the United States, a great central point where concentrates a large amount of emigration, and of travel between the two oceans. The want of a Lodge at that place has been long felt and often expressed; and as the brethren named were active, well-informed and discreet Masons, the first two former Masters, and the latter Wardens of Lodges within this jurisdiction—and as they expected to remain in that region for at least two years, I granted a Dispensation to establish a Lodge at Pembina.

The Lodge held its first meeting about the middle of January, 1864, and during the few months it remained active in Pembina, several residents of Fort Garry and vicinity made application, were accepted and received the three degrees of Freemasonry, among whom were Bros. A. G. B. Bannatyne, W. B. Hall and William Inkster.

In the early part of 1864, application was made to M. W. Bro. Pierson, Grand Master, for a continuance of the Dispensation and for authority to transfer it to Fort Garry. This was granted, as in his address to the Grand Lodge at the twelfth Annual Communication, held in the City of St. Paul, on the twelfth day of October, 1864, the M. W., the Grand Master, reports as follows: "I also renewed the Dispensation of Northern Light Lodge, removing it to the Red River Settlement."

The first meeting of the Lodge in Fort Garry, was held on the eighth day of November, 1864, in a room over the trading house of Bro. A. G. B. Bannatyne, described by W. Bro. Schultz, in a letter to the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, in 1893, thus: "And a novelty it was indeed in this country at that time. It was spoken of far and wide, and the description, which did not decrease in detail, or increase in accuracy as to what was done therein, were listened to with much curiosity, and in some cases with awesome wonder which was enhanced by the jocoseness of Bro. Bannatyne's clerks, who spoke knowingly of the whereabouts and propulsive propensities of the goat, and who pointed out from the room below (to wit, the trading house) exactly in what part of the up-stairs room the W. M. hung his hat while the Lodge was at work. The lodge room itself was made as tasteful as the circumstances of that day would admit." etc. W. Bro. John Schultz, was the first W. Master; Bro. A. G. B. Bannatyne, Senior Warden; Bro. William Inkster, Junior Warden.

The three principal Officers mentioned above remained in their respective offices until the twenty-third day of December, 1867, when Bro. A. G. B. Bannatyne, was elected W. Master; Bro. Thomas Bunn, Senior Warden; Bro. John Bunn, Junior Warden, but am unable to find any record of their installation.

R. W. BRO. T. HARRY WEBB, 33°
Grand Treasurer Grand Lodge Manitoba

The Dispensation was continued year by year by the Grand Lodge of Minnesota, until the year 1867, when a Charter was granted with the No. 68, the Committee on Lodges, U. D., reporting as follows; "From Northern Light Lodge, U. D., located at Fort Garry, no late returns or records have been received. In this the Committee deem it proper to present the following facts: Fort Garry is situated on the northern confines of the State, several hundred miles from St. Paul, and far outside of the usual mail or transportation facilities, the mails being carried at long intervals by dog trains, through the intervening wilderness, and often lost in transit. Transportation is mostly confined to the spring months. These facts may reasonably account for the non-representation and non-receipt of the records and receipts of the Lodge. The Lodge was originally organized under letters of Dispensation, granted in 1863, to our present M. W. Grand Master, and others, by G. M. Bro. A. T. C. Pierson, and has been continued by dispensation of successive Grand Masters to the present time, and it would seem that the time has arrived when the Lodge should be relieved from its anomalous position. The Committee have had the fullest assurance from responsible sources that the brethren comprising Northern Light Lodge, U. D., are men of excellent character, of good Masonic attainments, and of undoubted ability to carry on the work of the Order. After considering these facts they have arrived at the conclusion that it is wrong to make the remote position and consequent inability of these brethren to communicate with the Grand Lodge at its Annual Communication a reason for depriving them of the benefit of a Charter; and therefore recommend that a Charter be granted to them, to be issued as soon as they have made their returns to, and settled their accounts with, the Grand Secretary, to the satisfaction of the Grand Master."

The Lodge was never constituted under the Charter, as during the troublesome times of 1868-9 the members becoming scattered it eventually ceased to exist. In his address at the Annual Communication in 1869, M. W. Bro. C. W. Nash, Grand Master, makes the following reference: "The Lodges which were chartered at the last Grand Communication have all been properly constituted and the officers installed, either in person or by proxy, except Northern Light Lodge No. 68, at Fort Garry, British America. The charter of this Lodge remains in the possession of the Right Worshipful Grand Secretary. The great distance of Fort Garry, from an organized Lodge has rendered it impracticable to constitute the Lodge and install its officers." M. W. Bro. William S. Combs, Grand Secretary, at the same session reports as follows: "The charter issued by the Grand Lodge, at its session in 1867, to Northern Light Lodge No. 68, has not been called for by the proper officers. I anticipate, however, that the same will be attended to very soon, as I have been in correspondence with the brethren at Fort Garry." Thus the pioneer Lodge of the great Canadian Northwest, after four years of activity, terminated its existence.

On the twenty-first day of November, 1870, a Dispensation was issued by M. W. Bro. Alexander A. Stevenson, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, to Bro. Robert S. Patterson, W. Master; Bro. Norman J. Dingman, Senior Warden; William N. Kennedy, Junior Warden, and five others, to form and hold a Lodge designated Winnipeg Lodge, which was afterwards changed by permission of the Grand Lodge to Prince Rupert's Lodge, in the City of Winnipeg, Province of Manitoba. The Lodge was instituted on the tenth day of December, 1870, a Charter granted on the thirteenth day of July, 1871, and the Lodge regularly constituted and consecrated as Prince Rupert's Lodge, No. 240, G. R. C., and the officers installed, Bro. William N. Kennedy succeeding Bro. Norman J. Dingman, who had removed from the Jurisdiction, as Senior Warden, and Bro. Matthew Coyne, succeeding Bro. William N. Kennedy, as Junior Warden.

On the fourth day of January, 1871, a Dispensation was issued by M. W. Bro. Alexander A. Stevenson, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, to Bro. John Frazer, W. Master; George Black, Senior Warden; Thomas Bunn, Junior Warden, and four others, to form and hold a Lodge designated Manitoba Lodge, which was afterwards changed by permission of the Grand Lodge to Lisgar Lodge, at Lower Fort Garry, in the Province of Manitoba. The Lodge was instituted on the twentieth day of February, 1871, a Charter granted on the thirteenth day of July, 1871, and the Lodge regularly constituted and consecrated as Lisgar Lodge No. 241, G. R. C., and the officers installed, Bro. George Black succeeding Bro. John Frazer, as W. Master, Bro. Thomas Bunn, succeeding Bro. George Black, as Senior Warden, and Bro. William J. Piton, succeeding Bro. Thomas Bunn, as Junior Warden. Subsequently permission was granted to remove the Lodge from Lower Fort Garry, to Selkirk, Manitoba.

On the nineteenth day of September, 1872, a Dispensation was issued by M. W. Bro. William M. Wilson, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, to Bro. James Henderson, W. Master; Arthur H. Holland, Senior Warden; Bro. Walter F. Hyman, Junior Warden, and nine others, to form and hold a Lodge designated Ancient Landmark Lodge, at Winnipeg, in the Province of Manitoba. The Lodge was instituted on the sixteenth day of December, 1872, a Charter granted on the ninth day of July, 1873, and the Lodge regularly constituted and consecrated as Ancient Landmark Lodge, No. 288, G. R. C., and the officers installed.

No more Lodges were instituted up to 1875, but during this year a far more important step was decided on, namely, the formation of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba. The preliminary steps were taken April 28, 1875, by issuing the following circular: "To the Worshipful Masters, Past Masters, Wardens, Officers and other Brethren of the several Lodges of A. F. and A. M., in the Province of Manitoba:

BRETHREN—At an influential meeting of brethren hailing from the different constitutionally chartered Lodges of the Province, held in the City of Winnipeg, on the twenty-eighth day of April, A. L. 5875, it was, after mature deliberation, unanimously resolved that a circular be forwarded to all the Lodges in this Province, requesting them to be duly represented at a convention to be held in the Masonic Hall, in the City of Winnipeg, on Wednesday, the twelfth day of May, 5875, at three o'clock P. M., for the purpose of taking into consideration the present state of Masonry in this Province, and to proceed, if decided, to form a Grand Lodge for the Province of Manitoba."

To some, no doubt, this undertaking must have been entered into with many misgivings. For three Lodges with a membership of only 210, to sever their connection with such a strong organization as the Grand Lodge of Canada, and undertake directing the affairs of a Grand Lodge in a new country sparsely inhabited, must have seemed to many a stupendous undertaking, but it serves to show the character of the men who carried out this project to a successful issue, and there is no finer trait known to mankind than the honor and respect accorded to men who have risen above the adverse and obscure conditions and won. From the proceedings of the convention held on the twelfth day of May, 1875, I quote the following resolutions, all of which were carried unanimously: "That we, the Representatives of the three Warranted Lodges, being all the Lodges in this Province, in Convention assembled, Resolve, That 'The Most Worshipful, the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, A. F. and A. M.,' be and is hereby formed upon the Ancient charges and constitution of Masonry

"That in severing our connection from the Grand Lodge of Canada, we desire to express our most profound gratitude to that venerable body for the kind consideration and attention they have always displayed towards us both as Lodges and individually, and we most ardently desire that the same parental feeling may always be entertained towards us by our Mother Grand Lodge, which we will remember with pride and affection.

"That the Lodges in the Province be numbered on the Grand Register according to their seniority, viz:—Prince Rupert's Lodge, to be No. 1, Lisgar Lodge, to be No. 2, Ancient Landmark Lodge, to be No. 3.

"That a committee of three be appointed to assist the M. W. Grand Master in preparing the address to Sister Grand Lodges and that R. W. Bro. James Henderson, Grand Senior Warden, R. W. Bro. John Kennedy, Grand Treasurer, and R. W. Bro. Rev. Canon O'Meara, Grand Chaplain, be that committee." In his address to the Grand Lodge at the first Annual Communication, held on the fourteenth day of June, 1876, M. W. Bro. W. C. Clarke, Grand Master, says:—"The usual address to the Sister Grand Lodges was sent to all the Grand Bodies on the American continent, that to the European Grand Bodies being deferred till after this communication, and I am happy to inform this Grand Lodge that in no single case has any fault been found with the constitutionality of our procedure, but that in some instances I have been congratulated on behalf of the formers of Grand Lodge by high Masonic authorities on the entire correctness of the steps which have been taken and the result attained. It is my pleasing duty to congratulate you upon the marked success which has so far attended your efforts in the interest of the royal craft." The Mother Grand Lodge of Canada was first in extending fraternal intercourse under date of the fourteenth day of July, 1875. As the country became settled Lodges were formed in the different towns in the Province and the Northwest Territories, the Grand Lodge having extended its jurisdiction over the Districts of Alberta, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and the Yukon Territory, until the twelfth day of October, 1905, when the Lodges on the Grand Register numbered 104, with a membership of 5,725, on which date eighteen Lodges in the Province of Alberta met at the City of Calgary and formed the Grand Lodge of Alberta. M. W. Bro. William G. Scott, Grand Master, was present and installed the Officers of the new Grand Lodge, and was elected Past Grand Master. At the Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge, held in the City of Winnipeg, on the thirteenth day of June, 1906, fraternal recognition was extended, with the most kindly greetings and the wish that success and prosperity attend them, the first daughter Grand Lodge of this Grand Body. On the ninth day of August, 1906, twenty-nine Lodges in the Province of Saskatchewan met at the City of Regina and formed the Grand Lodge of Saskatchewan, the second daughter Grand Lodge from this Grand Body. M. W. Bro. John McKechnie, Grand Master, and M. W. Bro. James A. Ovas, P. G. M., Grand Secretary, were present and installed the Officers of the new Grand Lodge, and were elected Honorary Past Grand Masters. At the Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge, held in the City of Winnipeg, on the twelfth day of June, 1907, fraternal recognition was extended, and the same good wishes expressed that had been extended to their sister Grand Lodge of Alberta. At this Communication Yukon Lodge No. 79, Dawson City, and White Horse Lodge No. 81, White Horse, in the Yukon Territory, applied for permission to surrender their Charters and to be allowed to apply to the Grand Lodge of British Columbia, for affiliation. The principal reason advanced being, "that the Province of British Columbia is adjacent and contiguous to the Yukon Territory and bound to it by commercial and other relations, causing continual intercourse between residents of both Districts." The petition was duly considered by the Board of General Purposes and, upon their recommendation, granted by Grand Lodge, leaving on the Grand Lodge Register 57 Lodges, with a membership of 3,724, which has increased to date, 1912, to 72 Lodges, with a membership of 5,619.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SASKATCHEWAN

BY HARRY H. CAMPKIN, 32°

FIRST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF SASKATCHEWAN.

IT was in the early part of the year 1879 that a few Masons of the Prince Albert Mission found that they had a sufficient number to apply for a Dispensation, and on the 28th of March of that year met in the Hudson's Bay Company's old store to discuss the movement.

The nearest Grand Body was at Winnipeg, 650 miles to the east, and at that time there was no railway communication, only trail and boat service for the transportation of mail and goods, and as many of the members present were from eastern Canada, or "The Old Land," and at the time not sure which ritual had been adopted by the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, they decided to petition the Grand Lodge of Canada for a Dispensation for the formation of Kinistino Lodge, naming therein Bro. Young as the first W. M.; Bro. J. McKenzie as S. W.; and Bro. Duck as J. W.

The names of the brethren signing the application were Charles Mair, John Frederick Kennedy, Jos. M. Coombs, A. E. Porter, Edward Stanley, George Tait, John L. Reid, with the three named as officers.

The Dispensation was granted on the 22nd of May, A. D. 1879, but it was in the latter part of the year before the regalia and supplies were received. The first meeting was held on the 3rd of October, and the first degree work on the 5th of December, when Bros. Thomas McKay, Justice Duncan Wilson and Thos. E. Baker were initiated.

Owing to the distance that many of the members resided from the Mission, the very scattered population, difficulties of travel and transportation, the Lodge had a struggle for life, and at the end of the second year the total membership was twenty-eight.

The Grand Lodge of Canada granted a Warrant of Constitution on the 14th day of July, A. D. 1880, and shortly after that date negotiations were entered into by the Grand Lodge of Manitoba with a view of Kinistino Lodge coming into and under their jurisdiction. This was consummated on the 9th day of November, A. D. 1883, Kinistino being assigned the number 16 on the register of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba.

Kinistino Lodge was the first Masonic Lodge within the area that now comprises the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Saskatchewan and Alberta. In 1883 a lodge was started at Battleford, about 140 miles to the southwest of Prince Albert, and one at Edmonton. Kinistino, Battleford and the Edmonton Lodge constituted the three Lodges in the first Saskatchewan Masonic District, and Bro. Chas. F. Young was the first District Dep. Grand Master.

Wascana Lodge was formed on the 6th day of March, 1883, and located at Regina, then the capital of the Northwest Territories. The charter members were: Bros. Jas. H. Benson, A. G. M. Spragge, John A. Kerr, Arthur Osborne, John Secord, W. D. Firstbrook, F. W. Evetts, T. C. Johnstone, Jas. Bole, D. A. Johnson, J. S. Laidlaw, W. J. Lindsay, Thos. Barton and C. H. Barker, and the first officers were Bros. J. H. Benson, W. M.; A. G. M. Spragge, S. W.; and J. A. Kerr, J. W.

The first meetings were held in a building owned by the Presbyterian Church and later in a hall on Broad Street. In March of 1885 they met in a larger hall on Scarth Street, thence to rooms at the corner of Rose and South Railway, which was destroyed by fire in 1889. In August of 1890 the Lodge occupied the third floor of the brick block on Scarth Street, where they remained until the completion of the Masonic Temple in 1907. During the early years this Lodge had also a struggle for life, owing chiefly to the unsettled condition of the country and members not being permanently located.

In 1884 and 1885 Lodges were formed and are still in existence at Moose Jaw, No. 26; Fort Qu'Appelle, No. 32; Indian Head, No. 33; Qu'Appelle, No. 34; and Moosomin, No. 35.

Within the next few years Lodges were started and are still in existence at White-wood (47); Maple Creek (56); Greenfell (57); Royal Northwest Mounted Police (2nd Regina) (61); Yorkton (69); Duck Lake (72); Sintaluta (80); Carnduff (88); Saskatoon (89); Carlisle (91); Melford (95); Battleford (96); Weyburn (103); Arcola (104); Rosthern (105); Lloydminster (106); Wolseley (107); all numbers from the Grand Register of Manitoba.

Five Masonic Temple Companies have been formed, and own the buildings in which the meetings are held, viz: Moose Jaw, Regina, Saskatoon, Prince Albert and Qu'Appelle, and each have palatial quarters and equipment.

The Grand Lodge of Saskatchewan was formed August 9th, 1906, being comprised of 24 Constituted Lodges and 5 U. D. Lodges, all taken from the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, and was organized from no ill feeling or contentious matter, but from the creation of the Province in a part of the area covered by the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba and the Northwest Territory.

The initiatory movement for the formation of this Grand Lodge was taken by Wascana Lodge, No. 23, located at Regina, on April 3rd, 1906. In the opinion of that Lodge it was deemed advisable in the best interests of Masonry in the Province to form a new Grand Lodge, but Kinistino Lodge, No. 16, located at Prince Albert, being the oldest in the province, was asked to concur, which it gladly did, issuing notices for a convention to be held at Prince Albert on the 25th of May following. The convention was held on that date and concurred in the resolution passed by Wascana Lodge and appointed R. W. Bros. Tate and Fawcett to lay the matter before the Grand Lodge of Manitoba at its annual Communication in June. The Grand Lodge gave great encouragement to the formation of the new Grand Lodge.

At a convention called for August 9th, 1906, at Regina, of the twenty-nine Lodges of the Province, twenty-one were represented by their officers and four by proxy, and a Constitution was adopted based on that of Manitoba. The following Grand Officers were installed by M. W. Bros. John McKechnie and James A. Ovas, of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, viz:—M. W. Grand Master, H. H. Campkin; Deputy Grand Master, C. O. Davidson; Senior Warden, H. Jagger; Junior Warden, Rev. W. B. Tate; Grand Treasurer, Alex. Sheppard; Grand Secretary, Dr. John M. Shaw; Grand Chaplain, Rev. E. Matheson; Grand Registrar, A. H. Smith; Grand Senior Deacon, C. H. Griffin; Grand Junior Deacon, J. I. Ross; Grand Deacon of Ceremonies, John Rutledge; Grand Organist, R. B. Taylor; Grand Pursuivant, W. Barber; Grand Tyler, Wm. Barnwell. M. Bros. John McKechnie, James A. Ovas and G. B. Murphy, of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, were elected P. G. Ms. of the new Grand Lodge of Saskatchewan in recognition of their efforts.

The membership started with about 900. During the year seven Dispensations were issued for new Lodges, and by the 31st of March, 1907, the membership had increased to 1,400.

At the first Annual Communication held at Prince Albert on June 18th, 1907, the address of the Grand Master and the reports of the various Grand Officers showed the condition of the Grand Lodge to be most satisfactory, exceeding the expectations of the most sanguine, and all the Grand Officers were re-elected.

During the second year ending the 31st of March, 1908, eleven Dispensations for new Lodges were issued, and the membership had increased to over 2,000.

At the second Annual Communication held at Regina on June 17th, 1908, R. W. C. O. Davidson, of Prince Albert, was elected Grand Master.

On the 31st of March, 1908, the surplus funds in the Treasury amounted to $1,745 on General Account, and $650 for Benevolent Account, the Grand Lodge of Manitoba having donated $1,000 of its accumulated funds to the Grand Lodge of Saskatchewan.

At the third Annual Communication held in the City of Moose Jaw on the 16th day of June, 1909, R. W. Bro. H. Jagger was elected Grand Master, and for the year ending March 31st, 1909, eleven Dispensations were issued for the formation of new Lodges, while the membership was 2,229.

At the fourth Annual Communication held in the City of Saskatoon on the 15th day of June, 1910, R. W. Bro. Tate was elected Grand Master, and for the year ending March 31st, 1910, thirteen Dispensations were issued for the formation of new Lodges.

At the fifth Annual Communication held in the City of Regina on the 28th day of June, 1911, R. W. Bro. Hopkins was elected Grand Master, and for the year twelve Dispensations were issued for the formation of new Lodges, while the membership as at the 31st of March, 1911, was 3,475, an invested fund of $4,000, and a surplus to General Account of $1,658.68, and Benevolent Account of $255.84.

The success has this year been phenomenal and with but few troubles in subordinate Lodges, which in the most cases have been happily terminated. Harmony prevails throughout the whole jurisdiction, and at all of the Annual Communications, with the best of brotherly love, and I trust the same may long continue so to do.

At the present time, 1912, there are 88 Chartered Lodges with a membership of over 4,000, and rapidly growing.

There are nine Chapters of the Royal Arch in the Province located at Prince Albert, Saskatoon, Battleford, Moose Jaw, Regina, Sinitluta, Arcola, Estevan and Weyburn, and three Knights Templar structures, located at Prince Albert, Regina and Saskatoon; also a Temple of the Mystic Shrine, located at Regina.

A Lodge of Perfection of the A. and A. S. R. is also located at Regina, and steps are now being taken for the formation of another at Saskatoon.

THE GRAND LODGE OF ALBERTA.

BY DR. GEORGE MACDONALD.

PAST GRAND MASTER AND GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND LODGE OF ALBERTA.

THE first Masonic Lodge to be formed in what is now the Province of Alberta was organized in Edmonton as Saskatchewan Lodge No. 17, on the register of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba. Their Charter was granted in the year 1882, but was subsequently surrendered about the year 1890.

The next attempt to establish Masonry in Alberta was made in Calgary in May, 1883, when a notice was issued calling upon all Masons to meet in Bro. George Murdock's store, which then stood on the east bank of the Elbow River, nearly opposite the present site of the barracks of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Only five Masons presented themselves at this meeting, namely, Bros. George Murdock, E. Nelson Brown, A. McNeil, George Monilaws and D. C. Robinson. Bros. James Walker and John A. Walker were to have attended, but were unavoidably prevented from being present. At this meeting the unanimous opinion of the brethren present was that the time was not opportune for the formation of a Lodge, as there was no suitable place in which to meet, there was not a sufficient number of Masons to successfully carry on a Lodge, and there was a scarcity of material to work on. After a few months had passed people began to arrive in greater numbers with the advent of the railway. The C. P. Ry. track was laid through the site of what is now the City of Calgary on the 15th of August, 1883. A few days later the first freight train arrived, bringing with it the printing outfit of the Calgary Herald. In the first issue of that paper a notice was inserted calling upon all Masons interested in the formation of a Masonic Lodge to meet in George Murdock's shack, east of the Elbow River. A photograph of this shack is still preserved on the archives of Bow River Lodge No. 1. To the surprise of all a large number of Masons assembled. R. W. Bro. Dr. N. J. Lindsay, at that time D. D. G. M. for No. 1 (Essex) District, Grand Lodge of Canada and the present Grand Treasurer of Alberta, was elected chairman, and R. W. Bro. George Murdock, Secretary. Meetings were regularly held every Friday night, an attendance register kept and minutes of all proceedings recorded, but no Masonic work was done or examinations made until the petition for a Dispensation was about to be signed.

A petition was forwarded to the Grand Lodge of British Columbia asking for a Dispensation, the greater number of those signing it having lived in that Province. Discouraged at the long wait for a reply, petition was made to the Grand Lodge of Manitoba. A favorable reply was received from both these Grand Lodges at about the same time. However, on account of the easier communication with Manitoba it was decided to accept Dispensation from their Grand Lodge. This Dispensation was obtained about the 1st of January, 1884, and the first meeting held on the 6th of January. R. W. Bro. Dr. N. J. Lindsay was elected first Worshipful Master. R. W. Brother Lindsay then attended the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba, held in Winnipeg on the 11th of February, and at that meeting was elected Junior Grand Warden. At that meeting a charter was granted to Bow River Lodge, Calgary, numbered 28 on the Register of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba. Bow River Lodge is now No. 1 on the Grand Register of Alberta.

At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba in 1884 charters were granted to Lodges at Regina, Moosimin and Calgary; these, with the Lodges at Edmonton and Prince Albert, might legally have formed a Grand Lodge for the Northwest Territories, which comprised the Districts of Saskatchewan, Assiniboia and Alberta, all being under one Territorial Government. As even then it was deemed probable that Provincial formations were not far distant, it was recognized that a Territorial Grand Lodge would be broken up by the division of the territories into provinces. It was accordingly decided to leave in abeyance any desire to form a Grand Lodge.

The three Districts forming the Northwest Territories have now been divided into two Provinces, Alberta and Saskatchewan, Assiniboia being absorbed by the other two.

Until the formation of the Grand Lodges of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the Grand Lodge of Manitoba claimed jurisdiction over all the Northwest Territories, although in their first Constitution it was declared that the Grand Lodge was formed in and for the Province of Manitoba; they also provided that in the absence of the Grand Master the officer next in rank should assume the duties of that office.

In 1893 Dr. Goggin, of Winnipeg, was elected Grand Master, and Thomas Tweel, of Medicine Hat (District of Assiniboia) was elected Deputy Grand Master. During the year Dr. Goggin was appointed Superintendent of Education for the Northwest Territories and moved to the capital, Regina. This gave rise to a rather peculiar situation, the Grand Master had left the Jurisdiction and the Deputy had been elected from without the Province, and to further add to this peculiar condition the Grand Lodge had decided to hold the Communication of 1894 at Banff, Alberta. To meet this difficulty an amendment to the Constitution was proposed wherein the Grand Lodge would add the Northwest Territories to its Jurisdiction, thus making it the largest Masonic Jurisdiction in America, and the only Grand Lodge that ever extended its boundaries after being once constituted. The proposal was at first opposed, but finally passed.

The political changes which culminated in the division of the old Northwest Territories into the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan on the 1st of September, 1905, precipitated the division of the Manitoba Grand Lodge; for, though it was long considered by many brethren that the large number of Masonic Lodges in the Canadian northwest, and their separation by hundreds of miles from the central authority, necessitated a change, the spirit of loyalty to Manitoba was so strong that nothing short of absolute necessity could change it.

"Provincial Autonomy" was expected in the spring of the year 1905, and accordingly the "Medicine Hat Lodge" No. 31, took the initiative. It was at their request that Bow River Lodge, No. 28 (the oldest Lodge in Alberta), called a convention in Calgary on the 25th of May, 1905, the result being the formation of the "Grand Lodge of Alberta," on October 12th, 1905; when, out of eighteen Lodges within the political boundaries, seventeen were represented by 79 delegates, and the change was adopted. The present Grand Secretary, Dr. George Macdonald, was elected first Grand Master.

No better exemplification of the beauties of Masonry can be adduced than the fact that W. G. Scott, the M. W. Grand Master of Manitoba, personally undertook the long journey to Calgary, in order to be present and invest the Grand Master of Alberta with authority over this Western Province of Canada—and, on behalf of the Mother Grand Lodge, to facilitate its offspring on arriving at maturity.

Freemasonry is making very satisfactory progress throughout the Province, and at the present time, 1912, there are 65 Chartered Lodges with about 4,200 members.

THE GRAND LODGE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

BY DR. W. A. DEWOLF SMITH

GRAND LIBRARIAN, HISTORIAN, AND GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND LODGE.

FREEMASONRY in British Columbia traces its descent directly from the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland, and the honor of establishing the first Lodge in the Province (or colony, as it then was) belongs to the former. The first Warrant was issued to Brothers J. J. Southgate, George Pearkes and W. Jeffray, authorizing them to hold a Lodge in the City of Victoria. The Warrant was signed by the Earl of Zetland, at the time Grand Master of England, and was dated the 19th of March, 1859. For some reason, however, the Warrant did not arrive in the Colony for about a year, and it was only on the 20th of March, 1860, that a notice in "The British Colonist" newspaper informed the brethren that the long-looked-for document had at last arrived. Even then there were delays, and it was not until the 28th of the following August that the Lodge was organized, the name selected being "Victoria," and the number assigned being 1,085.

The regular and annual meeting of the Lodge was held on the 27th of December, 1860, when a visit was received from the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Washington Territory, M. W. Brother E. Garfield. The officers, that is, the Master, Treasurer and Tyler, were elected for the ensuing year, and the day was celebrated by a grand ball in the evening. The ball was held in the Court House, James' Bay, and according to "The British Colonist," the company present was "large and highly respectable." His Excellency Governor Douglas and the Grand Master of Washington Territory honored the occasion with their presence, and, to again quote from "The British Colonist,"

"The varied regalia of the Fraternity, combined with the uniforms of the gallant representatives of the Royal Navy, and all set off with the beauty and charms of the fair sex, presented a picture of enjoyment, whilst whirling in the giddy waltz, that could not well be surpassed."

About the time these events were taking place in Victoria, gold was discovered on the Thompson and Fraser rivers, while previously coal had been found at Nanaimo. This caused settlements to be established at Nanaimo, at Fort Yale, and at Fort Langley, the last-mentioned place being the metropolis of the mainland, although the town was soon afterwards moved to New Westminster, which became the seat of government of the colony of British Columbia, while Victoria remained the capital of the colony of Vancouver's Island. Cariboo also shared in the excitement and attracted a large number of men.

It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that shortly after the establishment of Victoria Lodge a second Lodge was organized, and this time at New Westminster. A meeting to organize a Lodge was held at New Westminster during the winter of 1860, and it was agreed to ask for a Warrant of Constitution from the Grand Master of England, the name selected for the new Lodge being "Union," because the petitioners came from different Grand Lodges.

The petition was accordingly sent to England, but the Warrant was refused, because, according to the English Constitution, the first office-bearers must be registered in the books of the Grand Lodge of England, and the Brother chosen for the first Junior Warden was a Scotch Mason. Subsequently some of the members of Victoria Lodge, whose names cannot now be ascertained, signed the petition, and a new Junior Warden was selected, the result being that a Warrant was granted bearing the date of the 16th of December, 1861, and the number 1,201. Unfortunately the earlier records of Union Lodge were lost in a fire which occurred in 1886, and the details of its organization and early proceedings are wanting.

The gold excitement, and perhaps other reasons, drew a large number of Americans to Victoria, and among them naturally a number of Freemasons. These, being unacquainted with the work practiced by Victoria Lodge, desired to organize one which would use the American work, and proposed to apply, if they did not actually apply, to the Grand Lodge of Washington for a dispensation. This did not suit the brethren of Victoria Lodge, who held that as this was a British colony, it was a close preserve for the British Grand Lodges, and on the 24th day of January, 1861, the Lodge passed the following resolution:—

"WHEREAS, We have been informed that a party in this community have applied to the Grand Lodge of Washington Territory for a dispensation or warrant to organize a lodge of F. & A. M. in this town, it is therefore

Resolved, That while we hail the Grand Lodge of Washington Territory, and all other Grand Lodges, as Brethren and Masons, we do not recognize their power to grant dispensations or warrants out of the district of their own country, and all dispensations and warrants emanating from any other source than the Grand Lodges of the mother country in this place we shall hold as clandestine, and all Masons visiting such Lodges cannot be recognized as Masons."

This discouraged the applicants and the project was abandoned. Shortly afterwards, however, a number of brethren decided to apply to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for a Warrant and asked Victoria Lodge to recommend their petition. The request was received by Victoria Lodge on the 15th day of May, 1862, and was granted, the brethren being careful, however, to preserve the precedence of the Grand Lodge of England, as may be seen by the tenor of the following resolution:—

Resolved, That Victoria Lodge, No. 1085, cordially responds to the petition of the Brethren desirous to establish a Lodge under the Grand Lodge of Scotland; but in doing so they reserve the precedence of the Grand Lodge of England in general Masonic affairs within the colony, and they communicate this resolution to the Grand Lodge of England as a matter of record."

In due course a Warrant was granted, and on the 20th of October, 1862, a meeting was held in the hall of Victoria Lodge to organize the new Lodge, which was known as Vancouver Lodge No. 421 on the Scotch Registry.

Some years then elapsed before a fourth Lodge was organized. Some time during the year 1865 a meeting of Masons was held at Nanaimo, the names of those present being unknown. At this meeting it was decided that a petition for a Warrant for a Lodge, to be held at Nanaimo, should be sent to the Grand Master of England, which was done. The Warrant was expected from England in the spring of 1866, and as there was no suitable hall in the town, a house was rented at twenty-five dollars per month. The building was altered to adapt it to Masonic purposes, and the necessary furniture was procured. Considerable delay occurred, the Warrant having been lost with the steamer carrying the mails between San Francisco and Victoria. A duplicate Warrant was sent for, and eventually reached the colony in the spring of 1867. The meeting to organize the Lodge was held on the 18th day of May, 1867, and its constitution was attended with considerable ceremony. On the 13th of May an emergent meeting of Victoria Lodge was held, at which the Worshipful Master stated that by virtue of a Dispensation from the Grand Master he was empowered to authorize the brethren to proceed to Nanaimo in regalia for the purpose of constituting the new Lodge. They accordingly embarked on the steamer "Sir James Douglas," with several members of Vancouver Lodge, and accompanied by the band of the volunteer militia. The members of the new Lodge and the visitors from Victoria assembled on the morning of the 15th, Brother Holbrook, of Union Lodge, New Westminster, also being present. Probably because Brother Holbrook had held an office in one of the Provincial Grand Lodges of England (Cheshire) he was requested to take charge of the proceedings, which he did, and the Lodge was duly constituted as Nanaimo Lodge, No. 1,090.

In 1867 another Lodge was Warranted in Victoria by the Grand Lodge of England, under the name of British Columbia Lodge, and the number 1,187, the date of the Warrant being the 26th of July, 1867.

In this year the Grand Master of Scotland appointed a Provincial Grand Master for the Province, the Brother selected for that honor being W. Brother I. W. Powell. Unfortunately the minutes of the Provincial Grand Lodge are not available, the only record of its meetings that I have been able to find being a small leaflet. R. W. Brother Powell's commission was dated the 6th of May, 1867, but it was not until December of that year that he called the representatives of his Lodges together and organized the Provincial Grand Lodge. This meeting was held on the 24th day of December, and after the Provincial Grand Lodge had been called to order the Provincial Grand Master addressed the brethren briefly, stating that he had already granted Dispensations for the formation of two Lodges, Cariboo, at Barkerville, subsequently Warranted as No. 469, and Caledonia, at Nanaimo, which afterwards obtained a Warrant numbered 478.

The brethren of the English Constitution had at an early date in their history endeavored to secure the appointment of a District Grand Master, and at various times had passed resolutions and had sent petitions to the Grand Lodge of England urging such appointment. For some time, however, the Grand Master of England hesitated to grant the request. The reason at first given was that no District Grand Master would be appointed until there were at least three Lodges in the Colony working under the English Constitution. This difficulty was removed early in 1866, when Nanaimo Lodge was constituted. In July, 1867, the British Columbia Lodge was Warranted, making the number of English Lodges four, but still no patent was granted. Shortly before that date, however, the Grand Master Mason of Scotland had, as already mentioned, appointed a Provincial Grand Master for the colony, and the Grand Lodge of England may have feared that the precedence so carefully reserved by Victoria Lodge was in danger of being lost, for in the fall of 1867 a patent dated the 10th of September, 1867, was issued to W. Brother Robert Burnaby, appointing him District Grand Master for the colonies of Vancouver Island and British Columbia.

Although dated as above, it is probable that the patent was not received by Brother Burnaby until early in 1868, for it was not until the spring of that year that he communicated to several brethren the fact that he had received the patent. On the 14th of March, 1868, a meeting was held at Brother Burnaby's residence to make the preliminary arrangements for the formation of a District Grand Lodge, and the District Grand Master announced the names of the brethren he had nominated as officers of the District Grand Lodge.

The Provincial and District Grand Lodges being now in working order, matters proceeded smoothly enough, the Provincial and District Grand Masters being warm personal friends and each being imbued with an ardent desire to promote the welfare of the Craft in general. The only thing that occurred to mar the harmony existing between the two Jurisdictions was a complaint made by certain Lodges in Victoria that material rejected by them had been accepted by Lodges of the other Jurisdiction. This, however, was strongly denied by the Lodges concerned, and apparently the denial was accepted.

A fourth Lodge under the Grand Lodge of Scotland was formed by Dispensation of the Provincial Grand Master—Mount Hermon Lodge, which was organized at Hastings, in January, 1869. In anticipation of the Dispensation the brethren at that place had erected "a handsome and commodious hall," and had furnished it with "all the comforts and attractions of a model Lodge room." The Provincial Grand Master was invited to set the Lodge to work, and accordingly proceeded to Burrard Inlet on the 15th of January, 1869, when he instituted the Lodge and installed its officers, at the same time dedicating its hall. The Warrant from the Grand Lodge of Scotland is dated May 31, 1869, and the number assigned it was 491.

One other Dispensation for a new Lodge was issued by the Provincial Grand Master for Scotland—that for Quadra Lodge—but no new Lodge was formed under the English Constitution.

After some preliminary meetings the brethren of Quadra Lodge were called together on the 7th of January, 1871, when the Lodge was constitutional and the officers installed by R. W. Brother I. W. Powell. The Warrant from the Grand Lodge of Scotland probably arrived in due course, but it is doubtful whether the Lodge ever worked under it. It could not have arrived until late in the year, and by that time the formation of an independent Grand Lodge was being proceeded with. The minutes of the Lodge up to and including those of the 1st of December, 1871, are headed

"QUADRA LODGE NO. — OF SCOTTISH FREEMASONS IN THE PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA,"

while following the minutes of this meeting is a "Return of Intrants" pasted into the Minute Book in which the number of the Lodge is given as 508. The next meeting, a regular meeting held on the 8th of December, 1871, has its minutes headed

"QUADRA LODGE, NO. 8, ON THE REGISTRY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA."

I infer from this that the Warrant arrived shortly before the formation of the new Grand Lodge, but evidently after the convention to organize the new Grand Lodge had been held. It is probable that the numbers of the various Lodges taking part in the new organization were discussed and allotted at this convention, which would account for the Lodge attaching the number "8" to the minutes two or three weeks before the Grand Lodge was actually organized.

Thus there were, early in 1871, four Lodges under the English Constitution and five under the Scottish, governed by a District Grand Lodge of England and a Provincial Grand Lodge of Scotland respectively. At the head of the District Grand Lodge was R. W. Brother Robert Burnaby, and under him were the Lodges:

Victoria, No. 783,
Union, No. 899,
Nanaimo, No. 1,090, and
British Columbia, No. 1,187.

Over the Provincial Grand Lodge R. W. Brother I. W. Powell presided, and the Lodges in his charge were:

Vancouver, No. 421,
Cariboo, No. 469,
Caledonia, No. 478,
Mount Hermon, No. 491, and
Quadra, u. d., or No. 508, as the case may be.

Some time before this a movement to organize an independent Grand Lodge for the colony had been started, Vancouver Lodge apparently taking the lead. On the 16th of December, 1868, a regular meeting of that Lodge was held, there being present thirty members of the Lodge and seven visitors, three of whom were from Cariboo Lodge and one from Union. A series of resolutions, too long to be given here, were introduced, the mover, W. Brother R. H. Adams, stating that he would bring them up for action at a subsequent meeting. Briefly, they recite the condition of Freemasonry as it then existed in the colony; the difficulties that continually occurred because of the distance from the parent Grand Lodges and the long delays in correspondence; and the desirability of, and the advantages to be secured by the formation of an independent Grand Lodge.

These resolutions were accordingly brought up at a meeting of the Lodge held on the 2nd of January, 1869, and were adopted. They were forthwith communicated to the other Lodges in the colony, with the suggestion that each Lodge appoint a committee to confer with a committee from Vancouver Lodge as to the best mode of carrying them into effect. They were variously received. Most of the Scotch Lodges at once fell in with the proposal and appointed delegates, Caledonia Lodge refusing to do so. The English Lodges, on the other hand, declined to entertain the proposition, with the exception of Victoria Lodge, which sent the resolutions to the District Grand Master with the request that he lay them before the Grand Lodge of England. This he did in a letter remarkable for its temperate and impartial statement of the case, addressed to the Grand Secretary of England, who was at the time V. W. Brother John Hervey. The letter received by the District Grand Master in reply expressed the regret of the Grand Secretary that the brethren in the colony should do anything which might tend to lessen the influence they possessed as members of the English Constitution, and the fear that a Grand Lodge of such limited membership would simply be the laughing-stock of the Masonic world.

The Provincial Grand Master of Scotland, although he fully recognized the desirability of an independent Grand Lodge, also declined to move in the matter without the consent of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and accordingly transmitted to his Grand Lodge a copy of the resolutions. If any reply to his communication was received there is no record of it.

Vancouver Lodge, however, seems to have gone ahead with the scheme, and evidently submitted it to a number of Canadian and foreign Grand Lodges, with the view of ascertaining what kind of a reception the new Grand Lodge might expect. Apparently the result was encouraging, for at a meeting held on the 18th of January, 1871, it was announced that all the Grand Lodges communicated with had signified their sympathy with and approval of the project. Thereupon a committee was appointed to arrange for the meeting of a convention of the Masters, Wardens and Past Masters of the different Lodges in the colony.

The committee accordingly issued a call for a convention to be held in the City of Victoria on the 18th of March, 1871. Again Victoria Lodge was the only English Lodge which favored the movement, and upon receipt of the communication from Vancouver Lodge forwarded it to the District Grand Master, with a request that the Lodge be allowed to attend the meeting. The District Grand Master submitted the correspondence to the District Board of General Purposes which, after due consideration, decided that the time was not opportune for the formation of an independent Grand Lodge, although such a step might be advisable in the future, and acting on this advice the District Grand Master refused to allow his Lodges to send delegates to the convention.

Notwithstanding the aloofness of the English brethren the representatives of the Scotch Lodges held the convention on March 18th, 1871, according to schedule, and decided to form a Grand Lodge for the colony. There is no record of the meeting, and it is not known who were present. R. W. Brother I. W. Powell, who, however, was absent from the colony at the time, was elected Grand Master and Brother H. F. Heisterman, Grand Secretary, and an invitation was sent to and accepted by M. W. Brother the Hon. Elwood Evans, Past Grand Master of Washington, to attend and install the officers of the new Grand Lodge. An invitation to be present was also sent to R. W. Brother Burnaby, whereupon he instructed the District Grand Secretary to attend the meeting and protest against its proceedings. This he did, and the protest was effectual, for the representatives of Caledonia Lodge returned home with the information that the formation of a Grand Lodge had been indefinitely postponed.

Some time during the summer of 1871, R. W. Brother Powell returned from England and found the Craft in a state of dissension and discord. Feelings were high, and the two sections of the Craft were hardly on speaking terms. He and R. W. Brother Burnaby held several consultations on the subject, and after agreeing between themselves that the formation of an independent Grand Lodge was advisable, decided to submit the question to a vote of all the members of their respective Jurisdictions. It was stipulated and understood by the brethren that in the event of the Craft voting in favor of an independent Grand Lodge, either Brother Powell or Brother Burnaby would be the first Grand Master, and whichever was not elected Grand Master would be made Past Grand Master.

A circular was accordingly issued by the District and Provincial Grand Masters to their respective Lodges, instructing the brethren to vote on the question of forming an independent Grand Lodge. The result of the vote was one hundred and ninety-four in favor of and twenty-eight against the proposition. The result of the vote being so overwhelmingly in favor of forming a Grand Lodge another convention was called and was held in Victoria on the 21st of October, 1871, there being present the representatives of all the Lodges in the Province with the exception of Union Lodge, which declined to join. Brother James A. Graham, of Quadra Lodge, was appointed chairman of the meeting, and Brother H. F. Heisterman, of the same Lodge, Secretary. A resolution declaring it expedient to form a Grand Lodge in and for the Province of British Columbia was carried unanimously and with great applause, and immediately afterwards another declaring the Grand Lodge of British Columbia to be formed was also carried unanimously. R. W. Brother I. W. Powell was elected Grand Master, and in consideration of their valuable services R. W. Brother Burnaby was made an honorary Past Grand Master and W. Brother James A. Graham an honorary Past Deputy Grand Master of the new Grand Lodge. After some formal business was transacted the meeting adjourned, and was called together again on the 26th of December, 1871, when the officers-elect were installed by R. W. Brother Burnaby.

Nanaimo Lodge and Caledonia Lodge displayed some reluctance to accept Warrants from the new Grand Lodge, fearing that they would be called upon to change their rituals (and in the case of Caledonia Lodge, their clothing). However, a letter from the Grand Master was read in Nanaimo Lodge, and one from the Grand Secretary in Caledonia Lodge, stating that all the Lodges could practice their own rituals so long as they desired, which seemed to dispel the fears of the brethren, and the new Warrants were accepted.

The first special or emergent meeting of Grand Lodge was held in the city of New Westminster on the 30th of July, 1872, the occasion being the laying of the cornerstone of the Mortuary chapel of the Masonic cemetery at Sapperton. Besides the Grand Lodge Officers there were present about sixty of the brethren, and the stone was laid in due and ancient form by the Grand Master, M. W. Brother I. W. Powell.

At the time of this meeting Union Lodge was still on the English Registry. It shortly afterwards joined the new Grand Lodge, for at the Annual Communication held on December 7th, 1872, the Grand Master expressed his gratification that unification of the Craft had been accomplished by Union Lodge transferring its allegiance. The fraternal feeling displayed by the new Grand Lodge in laying the corner-stone for Union Lodge—and probably the persuasive eloquence of Brothers Powell and Burnaby—no doubt hastened the action of Union Lodge in the matter, for M. W. Brother Powell stated in his address that it was only a few days after the emergent meeting that a request for admission to the fold was received from the Lodge. The few months' delay, however, lost Union Lodge its place on the roll, and instead of being No. 2 it had to be content with No. 9.

At this Communication the Grand Master reported that all the Grand Lodges of the Dominion and all those of the United States, with the exception of Indiana, had "extended a hearty recognition and warm welcome" to the new Grand Lodge. Indiana had not refused to recognize them, but was waiting to see what action would be taken by the British Grand Lodges.

At the Annual Communication in 1873 the Board submitted these rules, which provided for the establishment of two funds—a Benevolent Fund and a Widows' and Orphans' Fund. These were to be inaugurated by a contribution from each Lodge of two dollars for every member on its roll and the same for every Brother affiliated. The support of the Funds was provided for by levying an assessment of three dollars per annum on every member. Of the money so collected three-fourths were to be devoted to the Fund of Benevolence and one-fourth to the Widows' and Orphans' Fund.

In this year (1873) on the 5th of November, the two Lodges in Nanaimo, Nanaimo No. 3 and Caledonia No. 6, agreed to amalgamate, and their request to be allowed to do so was granted by Grand Lodge on the 8th of December. At the same time the name of the Lodge was changed to Ashlar, the number of Nanaimo Lodge being retained.

Some objection having been made to the date of meeting of Grand Lodge, no Annual Communication was held in 1874, but an emergent meeting was held at Nanaimo on the 21st of October of that year to lay the corner-stone of the new Masonic Hall at that place. Although this is called a special Communication of Grand Lodge, it does not appear that Grand Lodge was opened at all. The Grand Master opened Ashlar Lodge and laid the corner-stone, after which he surrendered the gavel to the Worshipful Master of Ashlar Lodge, who conferred the Entered Apprentice Degree upon a candidate. When this had been done the Lodge was called to refreshment, to partake of the inevitable banquet, after which labor was resumed and the Lodge drunk the healths of the Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master, and of anyone else whose name happened to occur to them.

At this meeting, whether one of Grand Lodge or Ashlar Lodge, the announcement was made that the Grand Lodge of England had extended recognition to the new Grand Lodge.

Affairs Masonic proceeded uneventfully until the meeting of Grand Lodge in February, 1878, the Craft holding its own but making no material advance. At this Communication it was announced that the four Lodges in Victoria had amalgamated into two—Victoria and British Columbia Lodges uniting to form Victoria-Columbia Lodge No. 1, and Vancouver and Quadra Lodges joining to make Vancouver and Quadra Lodge No. 2.

In 1879 another change was made in the time of meeting of Grand Lodge, the date being altered from February to June.

Although application for recognition had been made to the Grand Lodge of Scotland immediately upon the formation of Grand Lodge, that Grand Lodge, for some unknown reason, but in a manner quite consistent with its constant practice, paid no attention to the communication, and in the Addresses of different Grand Masters we find reference to this apparent lack of courtesy. However, in 1880 M. W. Brother Harrison informed Grand Lodge that the Grand Lodge of Scotland had at last recognized the Grand Lodge of British Columbia—nine years after the request had been made. Even then it was a conditional recognition, Scotland claiming the right

- 1st. To protect the interests of any of its Lodges which might exist in the Province, and
- 2d. To protect the rights of any Lodges which might subsequently be formed in the Province under its authority.

To the first claim, as M. W. Brother Harrison pointed out, there could be no exception, as no Scotch Lodges remained, but to the second he entered a strong protest in which he was heartily supported by the Committee on his Address. The Grand Lodge, too, adopted a resolution denying the right of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, or of any other Grand Lodge, to Warrant Lodges in the Province. It is satisfactory to note that the Grand Lodge of Scotland has made no attempt to invade the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of British Columbia.

In spite of the expectations of rapid progress which obtained when the Grand Lodge was organized, no attempt was made for some years to institute a new Lodge in the Jurisdiction. In 1881 the Board of General Purposes reported that the preliminary steps had been taken to organize a new Lodge at Yale, which was then a flourishing town. The Board stated that the requirements of the Constitution had been complied with and recommended that a Warrant be issued. Fifteen brethren joined in the petition for the new Lodge, a dispensation for which was issued on the 22d of June, 1881, under the name of Cascade Lodge No. 10. On the 5th of July, 1881, "a more extended dispensation" was issued, and on the 29th of October, 1881, by order of the Grand Master, a Warrant was given it. Its existence was of short duration, a fire at Yale and the changes incident to railway construction having made it expedient to return the Warrant to Grand Lodge inside of a year. The Board of General Purposes in 1882, in reporting the fact, stated that in view of the circumstances under which the Warrant had been returned it had been agreed to issue a new Warrant free of charge to a sufficient number of the original petitioners at any time during the ensuing twelve months, should it be thought advisable. Unfortunately the happy hour never came, and the first-born of the Grand Lodge died in infancy.

The membership of the Jurisdiction, too, remained practically stationary for a number of years. At the time of its organization in 1871 the Grand Lodge had under its jurisdiction 293 members, and it was not until 1886 that the Grand Master was able to report any substantial gain. In that year the returns showed 333 members on the roll, and the Grand Secretary reported the formation of a new Lodge, this time at Kamloops, under the name of Kamloops Lodge No. 10, the number of the defunct Lodge at Yale.

In 1886 the Canadian Pacific Railway was completed through to the coast, bringing with it a large number of Eastern Masons and opening the way for many others to come and settle in the province. From this time the history of the Grand Lodge is one of uninterrupted progress. New Lodges have been added year by year, and the Craft has steadily grown, until now (1912), there are 56 Warranted Lodges in the Jurisdiction and 6 U. D. with a membership of 5,017.

III. Bro. John Walter Murton, 33°

FIRST SECRETARY GENERAL A. A. SCOTTISH RITE OF CANADA 1874-1886, LIEUTENANT GRAND COMMANDER 1886-1892

M. J. P. SOV. GRAND COMMANDER 1892 UNTIL HIS DEATH, 1898

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA

BY ILL. W. H. BALLARD, 33°, SECRETARY GENERAL, H. E.

THE Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry was introduced into the Dominion of Canada on the tenth day of July, 1868, by virtue of a patent held by the Illustrious Brother Col. William James Bury Macleod Moore from the Supreme Council for England and Wales and the Dependencies of the British Crown.

Under this authority the first bodies of the Rite were established as follows:
In the Province of Ontario—

Moore Sovereign Consistory S. P. R.
S. 32 at Hamilton.

Hamilton Sovereign Chapter Rose
Croix at Hamilton.

London Sovereign Chapter Rose
Croix at London.

In the Province of New Brunswick—

Moore Sovereign Chapter Rose Croix at Saint John (not opened, however, until April, 1870).

Other bodies under warrants from the same Supreme Council were soon after established as follows:

Keith Chapter of Rose Croix at Halifax, in the Province of Nova Scotia, in October, 1870.

Harington Consistory, at Saint John, New Brunswick, under warrant dated July, 1872; opened in September of the same year.

Macleod Moore Chapter Rose Croix,

at Maitland, Ontario, under warrant dated May, 1873.

Toronto Chapter Rose Croix, at Toronto, Ontario, 14th May, 1873.

Hochelaga Chapter Rose Croix, at Montreal, Province of Quebec, July, 1873.

Under a combined warrant from the Supreme Council for Scotland the following bodies were established in Saint John, Province of New Brunswick:

New Brunswick Council of Kadosh, Oct., 1871.

New Brunswick Chapter Rose Croix, Oct., 1871.

Ill. Bro. Moore, who was so active in his efforts to introduce Scottish Rite Masonry into Canada, was an enthusiastic missionary in the cause of Masonry generally. He was born in Ireland in 1810, initiated into Freemasonry at the early age of 17 years in Aberdeen, Scotland, where he also received the Royal Arch degree. He became a Knight Templar in Ireland, received the degrees of the A. A. S. Rite in New York in 1863, and in 1868 was made an active member of the Supreme Council for England, and in the same year, as has been already shown, began the organization of the Rite in Canada. Perhaps his principal activity was manifested in Knights Templarism: in 1850 he established the first Templar Encampment in connection with Freemasonry in the Island of Malta, and soon after coming to Canada, in 1854, revived an old dormant Templar warrant. This marks the first establishment of the Templar order in this country on a constituted basis. He was rightly considered one of the greatest authorities on Knights Templarism in the world.

From the constant association and frequent interchange of visitation of members of the Rite in the Dominion with those in the United States, the heads of the order in Canada considered it necessary that the system to be followed should be assimilated as closely as possible with that which obtained in the bodies of the Rite in the Northern and Southern Jurisdictions of the United States. This was considered impossible under the régime of the Supreme Council of England and Wales which, working only the 18th, 30th, 31st and 32d degrees, had no provision for conferring in full the degrees subordinate thereto, in many respects the most important of the system. In addition to this the scale of fees for the Consistory degrees was so high and requiring so long an intermission of time between them, that the propagation of the Rite was so narrowly limited as to amount almost to prohibition.

Some concessions were made after considerable time had elapsed and petitions had been sent forward for modifications of these stringent rules and the Supreme Council did grant a code of regulations under which the bodies of the Rite made much more satisfactory progress. Those most deeply concerned for the welfare of the order came to the conclusion, after mature deliberation, that unless the Rite in Canada was placed under its own Sovereign Body it would never command that respect to which, through its intrinsic merit, it was entitled, and accordingly an earnest appeal was made to the Mother Body for absolution from vows of fealty and allegiance and for authority to establish a Supreme Council 33d degree for the Dominion of Canada.

The Supreme Council in England took immediate action on this application and requested the votes of the various bodies of the Rite in Canada in order to learn whether the desire for independence proceeded from the members holding the 33d degree only, or was the wish of the members of the Rite generally. Accordingly a vote was taken and found to be unanimous for separation.

Thereupon the Supreme Council promptly, and with the greatest kindness and courtesy, issued a Patent to the Illustrious Brother Thomas Douglas Harington, 33d degree (their representative at the time for the Dominion, excepting the Maritime Provinces), to open a Supreme Council 33d degree for the Dominion, naming the said Illustrious Brother as the M. P. Sovereign Grand Commander ad vitam; whereupon by virtue thereof a convention of the members of the 33d degree was summoned to meet at Ottawa on the 16th of October, 1874.

In obedience to the summons issued the following members of the 33d degree assembled in convention: T. Douglas Harington, W. J. B. Macleod Moore, John W. Murton, Hugh A. Mackay, David R. Munro, together with two distinguished visitors, Ill. Bro. Albert Pike, M. P. Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, and Ill. Bro. D. Burnham Tracy, representing Ill. Bro. Josiah H. Drummond, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council for the Northern Jurisdiction of the United States.

By authority of the Patent, Bro. Harington appointed Robert Marshall, 33d degree, of St. John, New Brunswick, Lieutenant Grand Commander, and they (by written assent of the latter) appointed John W. Murton, 33d degree, the third member to hold the office of Grand Secretary General.

Ill. Bro. Pike declared the Supreme Council to be duly and constitutionally established, and "The Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General of the 33d degree for the Dominion of Canada" had its birth.

The Supreme Council was opened in due form and the following members of the 33d degree duly elected to active membership therein: Hugh A. Mackay; D. R. Munro; J. K. Kerr; J. Domville and H. W. Chisholm. The following members of the 32d degree were severally elected to receive the 33d degree, and Bro. Pike elevated them to the rank of S. G. Inspectors-General, 33d degree, and declared them active members of the Council: John V. Ellis, of St. John, New Brunswick; William Reid, of Hamilton, Ontario; William H. Hutton, and Eugene M. Copeland, both of Montreal, Quebec.

The necessary elections to the various offices having been duly conducted the Supreme Council assumed its full form as follows:

T. Douglas Harington, M. P. Sovereign
Grand Commander.

Robert Marshall, Lieut. Grand Commander.

John Walter Murton, Secretary-General.

Hugh Alexander Mackay, Treasurer-General.

John Valentine Ellis, Grand Chancellor.

David Ransom Munro, Grand Master of Ceremonies.

James Domville, Grand Marshal-General.

James Kirkpatrick Kerr, Grand Standard Bearer.

Hugh Williams Chisholm, Grand Captain of the Guard.

ACTIVE MEMBERS.

Col. W. J. B. Macleod Moore, Laprairie,
Quebec.

William Reid, Hamilton, Ontario.

William Henry Hutton and Eugene Mortimer, both of Montreal, Quebec.

III. Bro. Pike, who had taken such an active interest in the formation of the new Council, loyally stood sponsor for it and immediately formulated and sent out a circular letter to the several Supreme Councils with which the Supreme Council for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States had relations of amity and correspondence, making known that the Supreme Council for the Dominion of Canada was duly established and organized in strict accordance with the dispositions of the Grand Constitutions of 1786, and requesting that these Councils recognize it as a regular and lawful Supreme Council, and offer to enter into relations of amity and correspondence with it. So prompt was the response to this request that at the next annual meeting Sovereign Grand Commander Harington was able to announce that more than a dozen of these Councils had sent fraternal notices of recognition and that with the greater number of these, representatives had already been exchanged.

Of the five members of the 33d degree who met in convention to establish the Council one still survives—III. Bro. Hugh A. Mackay, of Berlin, Ontario. He was elected Treasurer-General at the inaugural meeting and has held the office continuously to the present time; also without intermission throughout the same period he has been the representative of the Northern Supreme Council of the United States near this Supreme Council. Bro. Mackay was at the meeting at which the Rite was inaugurated in Canada in 1868, went to London two years later to interview the English Supreme Council in the interests of greater freedom for the Canadian brethren, was raised to the 33d degree in 1871 and has been constantly interested and active in the work of the Council ever since. There must be few living who have worn the honor longer or more worthily.

The Supreme Council having perfected its own organization undertook at once the completion of such a system of Masonry in the higher degrees as would lay down a foundation that could be hereafter built upon with confidence and success and at the same time adapt itself to the genius of the people who were to become its members.

Although the English Council had already made some concessions it was thought well to depart still farther from the requirements of the British usage in devising a system to be adapted to the Dominion as a whole.

In England the 32d and the 31st degrees were conferred by the Supreme Council and were strictly limited in number, the 31st to 99 and the 32d to 54 members. Membership in the 30th degree was not definitely limited as to number, but no Prince Rose Croix could receive this degree unless a present or past M. W. S. and had been three years a member of the 18th degree, except by special dispensation.

In England the Lodge of Perfection as a separate body does not exist and none named on the English register, the Rose Croix Chapter covering both the Council of Princes of Jerusalem and the Lodge of Perfection.

None of these restrictions commended themselves to the members of the Canadian Council and accordingly membership in the 30th, 31st or 32d degree is unlimited either as to a restriction to definite numbers or to the requirement of having previously held office in a subordinate body. Lodges of Perfection exist also as separate and distinct organizations with their own officers and system of administration, and may exist in localities where Chapters have not yet been established. Too rapid progress through the various grades of the Rite is checked, however, by statutory time limits. A candidate who has just received the symbolic degrees will require more than two years to complete those of the Scottish Rite unless under a special dispensation, which can be granted only by the Sovereign Grand Commander or by the Deputy of the Council for the province in which the candidate resides.

The degrees above that of Rose Croix are not conferred by the Supreme Council as in the United Kingdom, but by Consistories of S. P. R. S. 32d degree, covering Tribunals of G. I. I. C. 31st degree and Councils of G. E. K. K. H. 30th degree, one, and one only, of which is allotted to each province of the Dominion.

While the number of those known as active members of the Supreme Council is limited to thirty-three the ordinary membership in the Council increases pari passu with the work done in the Lodges of Perfection, the statutes providing that "each province under the jurisdiction of the Supreme Council shall have the right to one additional Honorary Inspector-General for every additional fifty Grand Elect Perfect and Sublime Masons made in the Province without regard to Lodge or locality in which they may be members," the Council reserving to itself the right to create additional Honorary Members when, in its judgment, the interests of the Rite so require.

The Supreme Council is required to meet annually on the fourth Wednesday in October, at such place in the Dominion as it shall determine; but the meeting at which the officers shall be elected must be held at the Grand Orient, and as this occurs every third year, one annual session at least out of every three must be held in the City of Montreal. A special meeting may be called by the Sovereign Grand Commander to be held at any time or place that he may deem expedient.

Although the first Sovereign Grand Commander was appointed ad vitam and held the office till his death in January, 1822, this mode of tenure was not adopted, and all succeeding holders of the office have been elected by the active members of the Council for the statutory three years' term.

M. W. Bro. Col. the Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K. C. M. G., 33°

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF ONTARIO
PAST GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF CANADA IN ONTARIO
SOVEREIGN GRAND COMMANDER OF A. A. SCOTTISH RITE OF CANADA

The complete list of Sovereign Grand Commanders is as follows:

1874-1882. Thomas Douglas Harington.

1882-1886. William Henry Hutton.

1886-1892. John Valentine Ellis.

1892-1898. John Walter Murton.

1898-1904. Isaac Henry Adams.

1904- Sir John Munson Gibson.

The office of Secretary-General has been held as follows:

1874-1886. John W. Murton.

1886-1904. Hugh Murray.

1904- William H. Ballard.

The first Secretary-General, John W. Murton (Lieut.-Grand Commander 1886-1892, and then Sovereign Grand Commander until his death in 1898), was one of the most enthusiastic and energetic of those who interested themselves in the introduction of the Rite into Canada. He received the degrees, 4th degree to 32d degree, in the Southern Jurisdiction U. S. in 1863 and the 33d from the Supreme Council for England in 1868. He took a prominent part in the formation of the first bodies of the Rite and was for many years the Commander-in-Chief of the Moore Consistory, having been virtually its first presiding officer.

The Scottish Rite in Canada having thus secured its own governing Council and settled with a fair degree of definiteness by what system of statutes and regulations its bodies and members should be governed, proceeded with satisfactory rapidity to increase in numbers and influence. New bodies were rapidly formed and increased enthusiasm in the propagation of its principles soon became manifest.

The splendid and copious ritual, the high conception necessary to the proper rendering of the lessons contained in the successive degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite and the paraphernalia requisite to the satisfactory staging of the varying scenes demand mental capacity, a sense of devotion to Masonic duties and financial support such as smaller places can scarcely hope to furnish in sufficient abundance to insure continuity of efficient work.

The enthusiasm and zeal of a few may start a body going, but the persistent effort of the many is thereafter necessary to provide a constant force to preserve the momentum already communicated.

Thus it was that in the earlier years of the growth of the Rite flourishing bodies existed for a time in some of the smaller towns in several of the Provinces, but eventually met the inevitable fate of those who take up a burden which they cannot bear and surrendered their warrants.

Another retarding factor was found to exist in places which, though numerically large enough, had, from their situation in newly settled parts of the country, a population more or less shifting. This feature retarded the progress of the Rite to some extent in Western Canada, even so important a centre as Winnipeg moving slowly for some years; but now that fixity of residence is more pronounced in the larger centres flourishing bodies of the Rite have sprung up in Winnipeg, Vancouver, Edmonton and Regina.

The following table exhibits pretty accurately the present condition of the Rite in Canada and the growth it has made in the 38 years of its existence:

COL. WILLIAM J. B. MACLEOD MOORE, O. C. T., 33°

SUPREME GRAND MASTER KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OF CANADA.

FOUNDER OF THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE IN CANADA.

To Most Eminent Frater W. J. B. Macleod Moore the Order of the Temple in Canada owes its revival, and in a great measure its success.

Early birth an Irishman, he received his education in Scotland and was at an early age Initiated into Masonry and exalted in St. Machers Royal Arch Chapter in Aberdeen. When with the 69th Regiment, in which he held a commission, he was quartered in Ireland and was Installed as a Knight Templar in the year 1844 in the Encampment attached to Lodge No. 242 Irish Registry at the Town of Boyle, County of Roscommon. Six years afterwards when stationed with his regiment at Malta he was instrumental in establishing an Encampment in that Island which he named "Melita." In 1852 the Grand Conclave of England and Wales installed him into office as Second Grand Captain. In the same year he received an appointment as a Staff Officer of Pensioners and ordered to Canada. Being stationed in Kingston, Ont. for sometime, he ascertained that an old Encampment had existed in that city and set about reviving it. He obtained in the year 1854 a warrant from England for its revival under the name of "Hugh de Payens," with his appointment as its Presiding Officer.

To his exertions the revival of the Order is thus wholly due. He organized two other Preceptories and then obtained a Patent as "Provincial Grand Commander," with authority to organize a Provincial Grand Conclave, which was formed on the 9th of October, 1855. In May, 1868, the Provincial body having increased to eight Preceptories, was named the "Grand Priory of Canada" and Frater Macleod Moore became the "Grand Prior." Upon the formation of the Convent General in England in 1873 he received from the Grand Master, H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, the rank of Grand Cross of the Temple. In 1876 the increase in the Canadian Preceptories to nineteen, made it advisable to constitute Canada into a National Great Priory under the "Convent General," and in August, 1876, the "National Great Priory of Canada" was formed with the enthusiastic frater as the "Great Prior."

In the year 1884 Convent General having become moribund the complete independence of Canada was effected, H. R. H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the Order acceding to their request, released the fratres of Canada from their time-honored allegiance to the Order in the old country. The Sovereign Great Priory of Canada was formed on the 8th day of July, 1884, and his whole-souled devotion to the Order, as well as his talents, for he was well known throughout the Templar World for his erudite allocutions, Most Em. Frater Macleod Moore was unanimously elected Supreme Grand Master "ad vitam," which office he worthily filled to the time of his demise at the Town of Prescott on the first day of September, 1890, at the age of 80 years, and was buried by his Fratres in Mount Royal Cemetery at Montreal. An earnest and enthusiastic Templar, an able and learned historian, his name will ever be lovingly connected with the Order of the Temple in Canada. Frater Moore was also active, and through his efforts, introduced the degrees of the A. & A. S. Rite into Canada July 10th, 1868. He was created an active 33° by the Supreme Council of England.

WHO INTRODUCED SCOTISH RITE MASONRY INTO CANADA, IN 1868
THE FATHER OF KNIGHTS TEMPLARISM IN CANADA

THE ORDER OF THE TEMPLE IN CANADA

BY M. EM. SIR KNIGHT WILL. H. WHYTE,

PAST SUPREME GRAND MASTER KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OF CANADA.

THERE is an old tradition that the Knights Hospitaller (Knights of St. John and Knights of Malta, alternately so called) were in active existence in the City of Quebec in the 17th and 18th centuries. It is claimed that Champlain, who came to Quebec in 1603, was a Knight of Malta. Montmagny, who was Governor of Quebec from 1636 to 1648, especially was untiring in his efforts to advance the interests of the Order of Malta, but after his recall the Order declined. Captain John Knox, in his journal of the Siege of Quebec under date of 1st October, 1759, describes the chief edifices of the city and refers to the unfinished but imposing house of the Knights Hospitaller. The American Gazetteer, published in Italian at Leghorn, 1763, in describing the Town of Quebec, refers to the house of the Knights of Jerusalem, a superb building of square stones and which is said to have cost £40,000 sterling. The Abbé Bois, F.R.S.C., states that the Knights established a bureau in the year of the Castle of St. Louis, costing 40,000 livres (not pounds). The gable contained a large stone set in the wall, on which was engraved the arms of the Order. The edifice was destroyed by fire during the siege of July, 1759, and the stone which bore a gilt Maltese Cross and the date 1647, remained among the ruins until 1784 when it was unearthed and placed in the wall of the Chateau Yard. This stone is still to be seen in the archway, which faces St. Louis Street, of that handsome hostelry, the "Chateau Frontenac," now standing on the site of the famous old Chateau St. Louis of many historic memories.*

RECORDS IN BOSTON.

1769—The oldest record pertaining to the Order of the Temple on this continent is found in the first meeting recorded of St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter of Boston, August 28th, 1769, when one William Davis received the four steps of Excellent, Super Excellent, Royal Arch, and Knight Templar.

RECORDS IN NOVA SCOTIA.

1782—The first records in Canada, so far as known, are from Halifax, in the Province of Nova Scotia, which gives the minutes of a chapter of Royal Arch Masons held under warrant of No. 211 on the "Ancient Grand Registry of England," on the 20th September, 1782, and the conferring of the Royal Arch Degree on three candidates, after which, "an assembly or encampment of Sir Knight Templars being formed, the "said Brothers, J. G. Pyke, John Clark, and Joseph Peters, were instituted and dubbed "Knights of the Most Noble and Right Worshipful Order of the Knights Templars." There are similar records of ten other meetings.

RECORDS IN QUEBEC.

1791—In the old minutes of Albion Lodge No. 2, in the City of Quebec, it is recorded, June 10th, 1791, that Archibald Ferguson, Knight Templar, was present. Letters from H.R.H. Prince Edward, afterward Duke of Kent, Colonel commanding the Royal Fusiliers, and father of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, and dated at Quebec, 27th October, 1792, written to Sir Thomas Dunckerley, Grand Master of the Templar Order in England, states: "Nothing gives me greater pleasure than to hear of the advancement of that Order, which, in my humble opinion is, of all Masonry, the most valuable." Also of date November 20th, 1793, H.R.H. writes, "I shall think myself particularly fortunate when circumstances shall permit my meeting the Knights of Grand Chapter in London." H.R.H., who was Grand Master of the G. L. of Lower Canada from 1792 to 1812, and resided for some years at both Quebec and Halifax, also held during the latter part of that period the office of Grand Patron of the Order of Masonic Knights Templar. There are many records in the minutes of the old Lodges in the Province of Quebec relating to the Order of the Temple in the beginning of the 19th century.

FIRST WARRANT, KINGSTON, ONT.

1800—In the early days of the Order the degrees were always conferred under a Craft Warrant, but the year 1800 produced the first Templar Warrant in Canada for holding a separate organization for the assembling of the Fratres and conferring the Order of the Temple. This old Templar Warrant is dated 31st October, 1800, and was issued to Sir Knight Companion Christopher Danby as Captain General and signed:

Frederick Hirschfeldt, Grand Master,
John Danley, Generalissimo,
Francis Wycott, Capt. General,
William Mackay, First Captain,
Thomas Sparham, Second Captain,
John McGill, Recorder pro tem.

A list of the members, dated 2nd November, shows a roll of fourteen names. There is also preserved two invocations, one a prayer to be used at the making of Knights Templar, and the other for the closing ceremonies of the Encampment.

SECOND WARRANT, KINGSTON, ONT.

1823—The next record appears to have been a dispensation for an Encampment of Templars at Kingston on the 10th day of March, 1823. This dispensation was granted to Sirs John Butterworth, Thos. Ferguson and William Chestnut, and a constitutional number of Knights Templar and Knights of Malta, in the Town of Kingston, and signed by Ziba M. Phillips, General Grand Master, K.T., K.M. This Encampment was known by the style and title of No. 1 or St. Johns in the Town of Kingston, and met in the house of Sir George Millward, known by the sign of the Old King's Head. This body was also known as St. Johns Encampment No. 1.

1824—This dispensation was followed by a warrant dated 12th February, 1824, signed by Ziba M. Phillips, G.M., and Phillip F. Hall, Grand Recorder, P.T. The Petitioners all resided in Kingston and were British subjects.

1827—The next document is a letter from Hall the Recorder, to the Grand Encampment at Montreal, and the reply is dated at Montreal, January 24th, 1827, and is signed by Gwyn Owen Radford, Past Grand Master K.T. and K.M., who writes for the Grand Master, in the absence of the Grand Recorder.

1840—The Order in the Maritime Provinces received its first impetus, by the issuing of a charter by the Supreme Grand Encampment of Ireland, on the 5th April,

MOST EM. WILL. H. WHYTE, 32°

PAST SUPREME GRAND MASTER OF THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OF CANADA

Few Canadian Masons are better known throughout the Masonic World than R. W. Bro. Will. H. Whyte, of Montreal. Born in said city, he was initiated in Prince Consort Lodge No. 52, on the 20th of November, 1872, and was installed Worshipful Master, December, 1876. Elected District Deputy Grand Master of the Montreal District, in 1885, and succeeded the late M. Wor. Bro. J. H. Isaacson as Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, January, 1902.

Exalted to the Royal Arch in Carnarvon Chapter No. 5, on November 29th, 1875, and filling successively various Chairs in the Chapter, was elected First Principal, December 18th, 1877; Grand Superintendent of the Montreal District, 1881-83, and Grand Third, Grand Second and Grand First Principal Z. of the Grand Chapter of Quebec, holding the latter office for the years 1888-89. Has held the office of Grand Scribe E. from 1893.

Received the Cryptic Degrees in Cyrus Council, in Winnipeg, Man., in 1882, and is a Past T. I. P. M. of Victoria Council No. 13, of Montreal, 1900, and R. Ill. Grand Conductor of the Works in the Grand Council of the Maritime Provinces since 1901.

In the "Order of the Temple" he was Knighted in Albert Edward Preceptory No. 24, Winnipeg (now named "King Edward" Preceptory), in 1882. Affiliated with Richard Coeur de Lion Preceptory No. 7, Montreal, December, 1883, and elected Presiding Preceptor, January, 1890. Provincial Grand Prior of the Province of Quebec, 1891 to 1893. Deputy Grand Master of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, 1894, Supreme Grand Master, 1895 and 1896 and Grand Chancellor since 1897.

Is an Honorary member of Detroit Commandery No. 1, and the Second Knight Templar to be elected an honorary member of the Grand Encampment K. T. of the United States, at the Triennial conclave, Chicago, 1910; Earl Euston, Grand Master of England, being the first.

Received into the Lodge of Perfection of the A. A. S. Rite, at Montreal, February 8th, 1882, and elected T. P. G. M., 1891-92-93. Received the "Rose Croix" degrees in 1883, and subsequently those of the Consistory to the 32°.

Gave to "Karnak Temple" of the Mystic Shrine, at Montreal, its name; assisted at its formation, November 8th, 1889, and was Chief Rabban from 1889 to 1902.

Received the "Allied Masonic Degrees" of the Grand Council of England and Wales, 1904, and is a member of "Stewart" Council No. 16, London, England.

Received the "Royal Order of Scotland," September, 1909, and appointed Provincial Deputy Grand Master of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Was Foreign Correspondent for the Grand Chapter of Quebec for some years, and also wrote the Correspondence report of the Grand Lodge of Quebec for two years, while M. W. Bro. E. T. D. Chambers was Grand Master. Has been Correspondent of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada K. T., since 1897. The many important offices he has held, as well as his reviews and historical sketches have brought Bro. Whyte very prominently before the Craft for many years.

≡ Will. S. Whyte 32°

GRAND SECRETARY OF THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC SINCE 1902

1840, to "Hibernian Encampment" No 318, located at St. Andrews, N.B. This body, however, went out of existence in May, 1860, and its warrant was returned to Ireland.

1843—Frat<sup>r</sup> J. Ross Robertson's history of the Knights Templar of Canada states a warrant was issued by Ziba M. Phillips in 1843 for Victoria Encampment at Smith's Falls, also one from Ireland in 1850 to be attached to Lodge No. 159, Irish Register, at Hawkesbury, Canada West. There is no record of Templar work at this latter place. The warrant is signed by Augustus Frederick, Duke of Leinster, the Supreme Grand Commander of the High Knights Templar of Ireland.

THIRD WARRANT, KINGSTON, ONT.

1854—In the year 1854 the late Col. Wm. B. McLeod Moore, who had arrived in Canada a few years previously, found that an Encampment had been in existence in Kingston, and that two of the original members, Fratres Samuel Boyden and Robert Sellars, still resided there. The warrant of 1824 was eventually found and forwarded, accompanied by a petition signed by the two surviving members and other Templars, to England, praying that it might be exchanged for a new one to be called "Hugh de Payens."

This new warrant was issued by Colonel Kemeys Kemeys Tynte, Grand Master of England, on the 10th March, 1854, with Colonel McLeod as First Commander. In July of the same year the Colonel received a patent making him Provincial Grand Commander for the Province of Canada.

From this time dates the revival of the Order of the Temple in Canada.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CONCLAVE.

In the same year (1854) a warrant was issued to open Geoffrey de St. Aldemar in Toronto, dated 8th September, and William de la More the Martyr, at Quebec, was constituted on the 28th July, 1855, with Frat<sup>r</sup> T. D. Harington as Eminent Commander. These three Encampments, on the 7th October, 1855, formed the first governing body of the Order, the "Provincial Grand Conclave" at Kingston, the predecessor of the present Sovereign Great Priory. The Premier Preceptory, Hugh de Payens, of Kingston, installed at its inception and had among its earlier members a number of Knights whose names are very familiar to all Canadian Masons, among them James A. Henderson, Q.C., afterwards Supreme Grand Master of Canadian Templars; S. B. Harman, Thos. D. Harington, Sir Allan Napier MacNab, the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, afterward Prime Minister of Canada, and Sir Alexander Campbell, the latter three becoming in later years distinguished Canadian statesmen.

1856—On the 22nd April, 1856, a dispensation was issued by the Chapter General of Scotland to a number of Knights resident in Saint John, N.B., under the designation of the Encampment of St. John, No. 48; a charter followed dated February 11th, 1857. John Willis, who in 1827 was a member of the St. John's Encampment No. 1, Kingston, was the first Lieutenant Commander of this body. This Encampment has had a notable existence, and came under the banner of the Sovereign Great Priory in 1897. On the 11th October, 1858, Nova Scotia Preceptory of Halifax was chartered by Convent General, and together with Union de Molay of St. John (founded in 1869) formed a Provincial Grand Priory for Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. This provincial body kept a separate existence until the death of the Provincial Prior, the Hon.

Alex. Keith, in December, 1872, when by instructions from the Great Priory of England, they came under the Grand Priory of Canada.

1859—In 1855 a charter had been granted by Ireland for an Encampment in the City of Hamilton, and in April, 1859, a number of Knights Templar resident in said City, petitioned for a charter from England, and forwarded with their petition this warrant or Charter No. 231 from the Grand Encampment of Ireland. A new warrant was issued by Col. Tynte, Grand Master, for Godfrey de Bouillon of Hamilton, to bear date from the Irish warrant, October 25th, 1855. The next warrants were, Richard Coeur de Lion of London, Ont., in 1857; King Baldwin of Belleville, 7th June, 1861; Richard Coeur de Lion of Montreal, 3rd December, 1863; Plantagenet of St. Catharines in 1866, and Plantagenet of Stanstead, 1867. The name of this latter body was subsequently changed to Sussex.

GRAND PRIORY OF CANADA.

1868—The last session of the Provincial Grand Priory was held at Ottawa in 1867 and request forwarded to England that owing to the confederation of the Canadian provinces this year into a Dominion or National body, it was highly expedient to likewise confederate the various Templar organizations into a Supreme Grand Conclave. This was agreed to by England, and at the annual session of the Order in Montreal, in 1868, it met as a Grand Priory, and under the regime of this governing body the following subordinates were given life, viz., in 1869, Hurontario at Collingwood, afterwards removed to Guelph and re-named Victoria; Mount Calvary at Orillia, afterwards removed to Barrie; Geoffrey de St. Aldemar of Toronto, which had been practically dormant for several years, was revived in 1871. Harington was chartered for Trenton, but it practically went out of existence in 1873. In 1872 Gondemar was instituted at Maitland, St. John the Almoner at Whitby, Palestine at Port Hope, and Odo de St. Amand at Toronto. In 1873, William de la More the Martyr, which, upon the removal of the Government to Ottawa, was taken to that city, and had languished in a semi-dormant manner, finally returned its warrant. Sussex this year was moved to Dunham, in 1874 it was removed to Montreal and became dormant, was later on revived and moved back to its first home Stanstead, and in 1900 was finally located in Sherbrooke.

NATIONAL GREAT PRIORY OF CANADA.

1876—In 1876 Grand Priory, after nine years' existence, met under that name for the last time in Montreal. In August, 1873, a Conclave for the formation of a National Great Priory had been called to meet in Kingston, but no action was taken until 1876 in Montreal, when it was finally consummated by consent of the Supreme authorities in England.

At this meeting the Grand Sub Prior, in order to place on record the action taken on the Memorial of Grand Priory, read the extract of the minutes of Convent General of October, 1873, and of the Great Priory of England and Wales, 10th December, 1875; the patents erecting Canada into a National Great Priory and Col. W. J. B. Macleod Moore as the first Great Prior. During the eight years' existence of the National Grand Priory, from 1876 to 1884, the following additions were made to the roll of Preceptories: "Kent" of Chatham, in 1877; "Burleigh" of St. Thomas, in 1878; "St. Elmo" of Goderich, in 1880, this Preceptory removed to Stratford in 1896; "Ray" of Port Arthur, in 1880, name changed in 1894 to "Rhodes," and a preceptory chartered in the same year (1880) to Quebec, to be known under the old cognomen of "William de la More the Martyr." "Albert Edward" (name subsequently changed to King Edward) was instituted in Winnipeg in 1880, and "Windsor," in Windsor, Ontario, in 1882.

GRAND CROSSES.

1881—In 1881 V. E. Frater A. Stavely Hill, M.P., Chancellor of the Great Priory of England, paid Canada a visit and received a Templar greeting and welcome in Richard Cœur de Lion Preceptory, Montreal. The occasion was memorable, for H.R.H., the Prince of Wales, as Grand Master, had commissioned the Eminent Knight to convey to the following fratres of Canada the decoration and patent of "Grand Cross of the Order of the Temple" to Col. Macleod Moore and W. B. Simpson, and "Knight Commanders of the Temple" to I. H. Stearna of Montreal, Hon. Robert Marshall of St. John, James Moffatt of London, C. D. Macdonald of Peterborough, and L. H. Henderson of Belleville. These were supplemented afterwards by the conferring of the "Grand Cross" upon J. A. Henderson, Q.C., D.C.L., of Kingston; James Kirkpatrick Kerr, Q.C., Toronto, and Daniel Spry, of Barrie, the Grand Chancellor, and "Knights Commander" upon G. O. Tyler, A. G. Adams, Montreal; Robert Ramsay, M.D., Orillia, and E. H. D. Hall, of Peterborough.

Convent General, the governing body of the Order, to which Canada was attached, was now practically dead. Ireland and England had disagreed over various changes, Canada had not been consulted, and much dissatisfaction had been expressed over the condition of Templar affairs. At the annual session of 1883 a resolution was passed looking to the complete independence of Great Priory.

SOVEREIGN GREAT PRIORY.

1884—On the 8th July, 1884, the Fratres of the National Great Priory met in Toronto for the ninth and last time, and having been absolved by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales from their allegiance to him as Grand Master, formally inaugurated the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, with Col. Wm. Bury Macleod Moore, G.C.T., as Supreme Grand Master, ad vitam. At this session the honorary rank of "Past Supreme Grand Master of Knights Templar of Canada" was, by resolution, conferred upon H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, "as a mark of the very high esteem and affection in which he was held by the Templars of this jurisdiction."

With the change in status and nomenclature the "Order of the Temple" in Canada secured a new lease of life and energy. Harington Preceptory, dormant for some years, was resuscitated and removed to Almonte, and Gondemar Preceptory to Brockville. Many of those in existence put on more vigor, though the membership in many was somewhat small, the total roll at this time standing at twenty-six preceptories with less than 1,000 members. The Grand Encampment of the United States promptly recognized Canada's sovereignty, and an exchange of Grand Representatives between the two bodies was made. The year 1886 saw "Malta Preceptory at Truro, in Nova Scotia, instituted, and a preceptory chartered at Melbourne, in Victoria, Australia. The issuing of this Australian Warrant brought a strong protest from England, who had instituted a preceptory in that Colony some years previously, which had ceased to exist, and the territory was therefore considered practically unoccupied. With the issuing the following year of two more warrants for Victoria, trouble ensued, and the Great Priory of England severed all fraternal intercourse with the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, which condition of affairs lasted for some years. In the year 1888 the three Australian preceptories seceded from Canada and formed the "Great Priory of Victoria," which survived for a few years, but eventually ceased to exist. In July, 1887, Sovereign Great Priory forwarded an address to "Queen Victoria," extending heartiest congratulations upon Her Majesty attaining the 50th anniversary of her reign. In the same year the City of Toronto established a second preceptory, which was named "Cyrene" No. 29, and which has lately justified its existence.

1890—The death of Col. W. L. B. Macleod Moore, which occurred a short time after the annual assembly, in Sept. 1890, removed a most enthusiastic Templar, as well as a most prominent figure in Masonic history in Canada. He had presided over the destinies of the Knights Templar of Canada for 36 years, from 1854 to 1867 as Provincial Grand Commander, from 1868 to 1875 as Grand Prior, from 1876 to 1883 as the M.E. the Great Prior, and as Supreme Grand Master, from 1884 to 1890, and had achieved the reputation of being an able and learned historian, especially in all that pertained to the Templar Order.

A special assembly was held in Hamilton on October, 21st following, and the Deputy Grand Master Frater James A. Henderson, of Kingston, unanimously elected to the vacant chair. Frater Henderson was far from well and not at the meeting, and he followed his illustrious predecessor within a few weeks of his elevation to the Grand Mastership.

At the annual assembly, July, 1891, M. E. Frater Henry Robertson, LL.B., was elected Supreme Grand Master, followed the next year, 1892, by M. E. Frater E. T. Malone, of Toronto. During the years 1893 and 1894 M. E. Frater E. E. Sheppard, also of Toronto, occupied the chair, and M. E. Frater Will. H. Whyte, of Montreal, in 1895 and 1896. Frater Whyte was the first Canadian Grand Master of Templars to officially visit the Grand Encampment of the United States. He attended the Triennial at Boston in 1895, accompanied by Most Em. Frater Malone. M. E. Frater Daniel F. MacWatt was Grand Master in 1897 and 1898. With the death of the venerable frater who had so long presided over the destinies of the Order in Canada, the old regime passed away. New methods and new ideas had been struggling into life for some years, and with the above earnest and enthusiastic fratres in command, increasing interest was taken by the members in the Order. These years were ones of much steady development, new regulations and statutes were effected for the smoother working of both the Supreme and constituent bodies and a motion brought forward providing that when the provinces were each sufficiently strong, Provincial Grand Bodies were to be formed. A by-law was adopted providing for a neat black uniform and a new edition of the Ceremonies issued, making them more attractive.

During these years nine preceptories were instituted, viz.: "Western Gate" at Victoria, B. C., in 1891, followed in 1892 by "Yarmouth" at Yarmouth on the Atlantic coast. "Ottawa" Preceptory in 1893 at the Capitol was instituted by M. E. Frater Malone; and in 1894, Most Em. Frater Sheppard gave life to two Western preceptories, viz., "Cyprus" Preceptory at Calgary, and "Columbia" Preceptory at Vancouver, and Most Em. Frater Whyte was responsible in 1895 for "Prince Edward" Preceptory at Charlottetown, P. E. I., and "Ivanhoe" Preceptory at Moncton, N. B., two eastern preceptories, followed by "St. Simon of Cyrene" at Sarnia, Ont., in 1896, and by the affiliation in 1897 of the "Encampment of St. John" at St. John, N. B., holding a warrant from the Chapter General of Scotland. In 1899 Most Em. Frater MacWatt granted a Dispensation for "Rossland" Preceptory at Rossland. At the session of 1894, a communication was received from the Great Priory of England and Wales containing the information that the edict of non-intercourse against Canada had been withdrawn and friendly relations restored.

During this decade ten additions were thus made to the roll and an added membership of nearly 1,000. Every endeavor was made to enthuse the membership and a number of American Commanderies invited to the Annual Sessions and the Canadian Preceptories requested to meet them. The Order received a shock at the somewhat sudden death of the oldest officer of Great Priory, Grand Chancellor Daniel Spry, G.C.T., and Hon. Past Supreme Grand Master, on August 13th, 1897, a few days before the annual assembly held at Montreal. This enthusiastic Frater had held the Grand Chancellorship of the Order in Canada for upwards of twenty years, and had also held high office in every branch of the Masonic Fraternity. At the session in Montreal, Most Em. Frater Will H. Whyte, the retiring Grand Master, was elected to succeed Frater Spry as Grand Chancellor. 1897 being Queen Victoria's jubilee year, an address on vellum handsomely bound was transmitted, and reply received that the address had been laid before the Queen and that "Her Majesty returned her sincere thanks to the Knights Templar of Canada for the expressions of loyalty and devotion contained in the handsome volume."

1900—Great Priory met at Windsor in 1899, and Most Em. Frater J. V. Ellis was elected Grand Master, and also celebrated the Centennial of the first Knights Templar body at Kingston in 1800 by meeting in said city in 1900. Upon the death of Queen Victoria, January, 1901, profound sympathy and sincere devotion to her successor was cabled to King Edward by the Grand Master. At the City of St. John, in 1901, Most Em. Frater D. L. Carley was elected Grand Master, and during his tenure of office for two years, "Gibson" Preceptory at Sault St. Marie, Ont., in 1902, and "Offanto" Preceptory at Owen Sound, Ont., were instituted. He was an energetic officer and visited every District in the Dominion.

Most Em. Frater William Gibson succeeded to the chair in 1903 and 1904, and reported issuing dispensations for new preceptories at Woodstock, N. B.; Jacques de Molai at Niagara Falls, Ont.; Cape Breton, at Sydney, N. S.; Selkirk, at Cranbrook, B. C., and Mount Carmel, at Neepawa, Man., located in five of the Provinces of the Dominion and stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, showing thereby increased interest in the Order. In September, 1904, the Earl of Euston, Grand Master of the Great Priory of England, accompanied by a suite of five of his officers, visited Montreal on his return from the Conclave of the Grand Encampment at San Francisco. They spent two very pleasant days as guests of Great Priory and Richard Cœur de Lion of Montreal, and expressed much pleasure at the attentions shown them.

Great Priory held its session the following year, 1905, in Winnipeg, Man., and M. E. Frater J. B. Tresidder, of Montreal, was elected Grand Master. At the following assembly in Montreal he reported the formation of a preceptory at Edmonton, Alta., followed the next year by dispensations for Cornwall, Ont., and Dawson City, in the Yukon. M. Em. Frater Tresidder, accompanied by a number of his Great Priory officers, paid an official visit to the Grand Encampment of the United States, at the Saratoga Triennial, and was most hospitably entertained.

Most Em. Frater A. A. Campbell, of London, Ont., was elected Supreme Grand Master for 1907 and 1908, and at the assembly, held in Toronto in 1908, had the pleasure of welcoming Most Em. Sir Knight the Rev. Henry W. Rugg, D.D., Grand Master of the Grand Encampment of the United States. Dr. Rugg was the first Grand Master from the United States to visit the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada.

Leamington Preceptory, Ont.; Fredericton Preceptory, N. B., and Wascana Preceptory, of Regina, Sask., were instituted this year, 1908, and the following year St. George Preceptory, of Picton, Ont., was formed. At the annual session in Truro, N. S., 1909, a Concordat, which had been adopted by the Great Priories of England, Ireland and Scotland, was also adopted by Sovereign Great Priory, followed in 1910 by the Grand Encampment of the United States, thus uniting all the Grand Bodies of the Order in a short amicable treaty.

1910—Easter and Ascension Day Services, as well as Burial Services were adopted at this assembly. M. Em. Frater L. B. Archibald, of Truro, was elected Supreme Grand Master and filled the office for the second year. He paid an official visit to the Triennial at Chicago, August, 1910, accompanied by a number of his leading officers, including Past Grand Masters Will. H. Whyte and J. B. Tresidder, the former being made an honorary member of the Grand Encampment, the second frater so honored by this Grand Body, the Earl of Euston being the first. The death of King Edward, Honorary Past Supreme Grand Master, in May, was a momentous event, and Great Priory's deepest sympathy was cabled, and later a floral offering was forwarded upon the death of Rev. Dr. Rugg, Grand Master of the United States, and Canada's representative. Dispensations were issued for preceptories at Prince Albert, Sask., and Crusader Preceptory, at Medicine Hat, Alta. Earl Euston, the Pro-Grand Master of England, again visited Montreal with his staff on the way back from Chicago, and was courteously entertained for several days. The new preceptories added to the roll in 1911 were Saskatoon Preceptory, Sask.; Westminster, at New Westminster, B. C., and "Beausejour," at Amherst, N. S. At the annual assembly in 1911, the roll of preceptories stood at 57, with a membership of 6,316, doubling the membership of six years previously, and M. E. Frater Wm. P. Ryrie, of Toronto, was elected Supreme Grand Master.
