

FRENCH MEDICAL ASSOCIATION CLAIMS CURE FOR GANGRENE AND PERITONITIS

A despatch from Paris says:—A serum will cure gangrene and peritonitis. Experiments were begun during the war by Prof. Michael Weinberg of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, and Dr. Benjamin Jablons, Major in the American Medical Corps. It was perfected and given to the world through the French Medical Association. The chief value of the serum during the war was to prevent gas gangrene, and now is to save appendicitis patients, whose infections usually cause death from gangrene or peritonitis.

Prof. Weinberg perfected proved to cure most gangrene cases arising from appendicitis, and also most peritonitis cases from the same cause when used in time. Thirteen of fifteen cases were saved. Meanwhile Dr. Jablons, working in America, perfected a "buffered citrate cure" for dry gangrene, or Raymond's disease. A meeting of the Pasteur Institute will announce the formula of the solution this week and a complete list of its cures. Dr. Jablons is now investigating diabetes in France, having proved since prohibition diabetes has doubled in America. Dr. Jablons blames the overeating of pastry and candy in America and the lack of alcohol in the system, which previously kept the diabetes rate down.

NEW BRITISH ARCTIC EXPEDITION PLANNED

Binney Exploration Party Will Take Two Ships and a Seaplane.

A despatch from London says:—The British Arctic expedition organized by George Binney will shortly sail from Newcastle. Two ships have been chartered—a 300-ton Norwegian whaler and a small Norwegian sealing sloop. A seaplane specially designed for Arctic reconnaissance work will accompany the expedition, which has the support of the Royal Geographical Society, the Air Survey Committee of the War Office and the Air Minister. The chief object of the expedition is to explore North Eastland, an island to the northwest of the main Spitzbergen Island. Other objects are to beat the farthest north record of sailing in navigable waters and to investigate the northwest of the Franz Joseph Archipelago. Col. S. E. Tennant is to lead the sledging party in North Eastland, and Lieut. Aldans will conduct the ground survey. The party will include Captain Helmer Hansen, who was at the South Pole with Amundsen.

FACILITATE MOVING CANADIAN WHEAT

British Government Plans Storage Elevators at Old Country Ports.

A despatch from London says:—Provision of storage elevators at British ports to afford facilities for the movement of Canadian wheat in British bottoms from Vancouver is a plan understood to be engaging the attention of the Labor Government as an alternative to the Imperial Preference. So much interest has been taken by Labor members in the scheme that Hon. Geo. Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, was asked to talk it over with Labor members interested in Empire affairs. Liberal members have also expressed approval of the scheme. The plan would in all probability ultimately resolve itself into a co-operation agreement between the Alberta wheat pool and interests on this side, whether Governmental or private, which would construct storage elevators. It is urged in its favor that a large part of the grain shipped via eastern ports passes over American railroads, is loaded at American ports and financed by American money.

Canada from Coast to Coast

Lunenburg, N.S.—Considerable activity prevails in fishing circles here at present, the fishing fleet having returned from the Banks after one of the most successful trips experienced in some time. Average fares on frozen bait trip are reported to be from 750 to 800 quintals, which is considerably in excess of the corresponding 1923 catch.

May and June. A large proportion of lake shipping is routed via United States points, chiefly in United States vessels. Lake freights are lower this season.

Fredericton, N.B.—Potato shippers in this district are finding a good market for their stocks at the present time, demand being strong and prices fairly satisfactory. It is calculated that about double the acreage of potatoes was planted this year over that planted a year ago.

Winnipeg, Man.—Heavy movement of both wheat and oats from interior points during the week into the States has encouraged big dealers of the Grain Exchange in the belief that the surplus will be cleaned up before mid-summer. Heavy exports, both east and west, have contributed to the easier feeling and reacted sharply on prairie business generally. Clothing, leather goods, farm implements and lumber have been active during the week in rural districts, due to the easier feeling in financial circles. The Eastern United States have placed heavy orders for Canadian oats and one shipment of four million bushels is recorded for the New England States.

Quebec, Que.—Automobiles are gaining popularity to such an extent that, in the course of one month, four thousand cars have been registered here, which exceeds by over one thousand the number registered last year at the same period. Judging by the rush for license plates, it is forecasted that before the end of the present month over 6,000 cars will have been registered, which is more than the number registered for the whole year 1923-24.

Edmonton, Alta.—Spring farming conditions in Alberta, although a trifle late, are extremely encouraging owing to the moisture in the ground, with the exception of two or three isolated districts, which at the present time is ample for germination and early growth. Rapid progress is being made with seeding.

Fort William, Ont.—The report of the Board of Grain Commissioners for the month of April records the commencement of the heaviest spring shipping season on record. The report says that there are indications that all of the surplus of the western crops will be moved as fast as transportation facilities will permit, as export purchases are reported heavier than usual and all ocean tonnage out of Montreal has been engaged for Vancouver, B.C.—The second cargo of B.C. lumber for Newfoundland left here recently for St. Johns, via the Panama Canal. This shipment consisted of about 1,000,000 feet of pipe stock, presumed to be used in the construction of penstocks for the big pulp and paper plant that is being erected on the island, and about 1,000,000 feet of timbers and construction material.

LONDON UNDERGROUND TRANSIT THREATENED

Electric Power Station Men on Strike With Great Western Shopmen.

A despatch from London says:—A partial strike of electric power station men here on Thursday inaugurated what may develop into a nation-wide strike and the complete stoppage of London underground transportation. Forty out of the 140 subway stations in London had closed on Thursday and only about fifty per cent. of normal service was running. The situation is the result of the strike of sixty per cent. of the employees of one of the two big electric power stations supplying the subway. So far it is a purely unofficial strike, not authorized or recognized by the union leaders. The Labor Press service, which is the official publicity organization of the Labor party and the Trades Union Congress, issued a statement on Thursday declaring the strike was fomented by "an unofficial committee dominated by Communist influences." The men struck in sympathy with another unofficial strike of more than 1,600 shopmen of the Great Western Railway, who are demanding an increase of ten shillings a week, a minimum wage of three pounds a week, a guaranteed number of working hours per day and week, and a week's annual holiday with full pay. The railway company refuses to consider the demands until regularly presented through officials of the National Union of Railwaymen. The transportation situation is further complicated by the action taken in Thursday's final meeting of the annual conference of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, which instructed delegates to return to their depots and prepare for a nation-wide strike. They are asking an immediate reply from the railway companies to their demands for revision of the classification and promotion system of locomotive firemen, and for full pay for Sunday work whether or not a full day's work is done.

QUEBEC WOODS AND RIVERS SNOWBOUND

Unusual Conditions Revealed When Aeroplanes Start on Summer Patrol.

A despatch from Quebec says:—Hydroplanes operating under contract for the Lands and Forest Department made their debut this week from the Roberval Air Station, according to advice received by Chief Forestry Engineer Gustave Piche, and have started the inventory work in the section of Peribonka and Chibogama for the season. The first report received at the department here, though describing the flying as most successful, states that an unusual amount of snow has been located in the northern sections just a few miles north of Lake St. John. The reports also refer to the fact that the heads of the rivers are still covered with ice, which is a rather unusual occurrence. At the Forest Protection Branch is expressed over these reports, as well as others coming from other sections of the province, which mean that the dangerous period is still far away. There have been a few small outbreaks recorded, it is learned from unofficial sources, but they have been checked with success, and originated on settler's lots. Last year at this time the province was already devastated by forest fires.

Britain Pays $69,000,000 in Interest to United States

A despatch from Washington says:—Great Britain is to make a payment of $69,000,000 in interest on her war-time indebtedness to the United States on June 15, and it probably will be made in cash this time, instead of Liberty bonds, as all of

FRENCH COLONEL WINS RECORD IN AVIATION

Covers 1,756 Miles in All-Day Flight at Rate of 104 Miles Per Hour.

A despatch from Paris says:—By flying 1,756 miles over the "Military Zenith" course at a rate of 104 miles an hour, including stops, Colonel Vuillemin has established a new record and captured the most important French aviation trophy. The "Military Zenith" competition involves an all day flight twice covering a circuit formed by a chain of cities, including Paris, Tours, Chateauroux, Lyons, Strasbourg, Metz, Dijon, and a return to Paris. The 1,756 mile route has tempted all the greatest military pilots. Colonel Vuillemin, flying the larger part of the day in heavy rain and against a nasty wind for the rest of the journey, accomplished the total distance in sixteen hours, fifty-four minutes and thirty-four seconds, representing an average speed of 104 miles an hour. The previous record holder, Sergeant Major Bonnet, made a speed of 101 miles an hour. Colonel Vuillemin started from the Villa-Coubly Aerodrome Wednesday morning, just after four o'clock, and was back ten minutes after his long flight over the whole eastern half of France. Twenty minutes later he started again for the second circuit. He checked back at Villa-Coubly a few minutes before nine o'clock.

Squadron Due to Reach Victoria, B.C., This Month

A despatch from London says:—The vessels of the Special Service Squadron, which is touring the Empire under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Field, are due to arrive soon at Honolulu, the first port of another power at which they have called since leaving England November 27, 1923. The Squadron will remain at Honolulu until June 12, when it leaves for Canada. The battle-cruisers Hood and Repulse and the light cruiser Adelaide will proceed to Victoria, B.C., and the light cruisers Delhi, Danae, Dauntless and Dragon to Esquimalt.

In the United States one out of every dozen wage earners is a government employee, the annual public payroll amounting to over four billion dollars. The Youth's Companion figures out that if population and the extension of governmental activities increase in the same ratios for another forty years, one out of every five workers will be a government clerk or official supported by the wage earners and taxpayers of the community.

This is the season for American tourists travelling through our fair province in automobiles. We are glad to have them go through as they generally take back a good impression, but there is one thing we would like to see stopped and that is the too prominent display of the stars and stripes on their automobiles. We think some tourists would show much better manners by refraining from proclaiming their nationality so loudly.

ANTICS OF A REAL LIVE HOBBO

A hobo passed through Harriston one day a little over a week ago and striking towards Mt. Forest, landed in to Mr. Harry Aitchison's when the proprietor was out working in a field and when Mrs. Aitchison was in town. Having the house all to himself he did a little investigating, and when he walked away one vest pocket bulged out with a gent's gold watch, while the other was decorated with a fountain pen that was not there before. The tramp then went into Mr. Remms' and from there on to Mt. Forest where he disposed of the watch, but still hung on to the pen. The timepiece was loaned to a Minto resident who lives only a little over a mile from the Aitchison farm. Chief Ed. Johnston got into communication with Chief Cringle of Mt. Forest and although the culprit, who gave his name as Burns, has not been apprehended to date, Mr. Aitchison is again in possession of his watch.

THE HAPPY EDITOR

The joys of running a weekly newspaper are many and not the least of these are the shower of criticisms it is always the editor's lot to receive. He may please a reader nine times and he will never hear of it, but if he displeases just once he hears and quickly too. Says the Park's Falls Arrow.
"A few of our readers can't understand why we don't change the whole policy of our paper after they have called our attention to certain articles of which they don't approve. One good soul gets fearfully shocked if we refer to ladies' legs but admits she read it over a second time. Another thinks we should not report dances, while another wants to know why on earth we give a whole column to a church anniversary services. So there you are. Some time when publication day falls on April 1st we are going to publish a paper that will embrace all the suggestions of our readers and after that we expect to go out of business."
Such is the career of a newspaper editor. It's a great life if you don't weaken.

salaries range from $5100 a year for Squires, the new deputy who supplants W. A. McLean, to $52 per month for the errand boys. The total cost of these 85 officials last year was $119,315.83. Then for 90 clerks who gave temporary assistance, travelling expenses, advertising, office equipment, stationery and other incidentals there was paid out the neat sum of $116,415.43. The higher up you get and the farther away from the Township and Town Council, the less value is given for money spent. But as one man put it who recently went through a mile of mud road when motoring, "The expense is worth the money to the man who gets off a Provincial or County highway."
But there is none so weak but he may improve his character and gradually grow stronger and stronger by brushing excuses aside when they come to him, and thereby raise his standard of character and living.
For, after all, it is the average high standard of what we achieve from day to day that gives us with happiness we are able to enjoy.
And when we lower this standard through selfishness, indifference and a lack of honest interest in life and all that it affords, we affront God and put to rout every carrier of beauty and welfare that hovers about us.
Sometimes it becomes very hard to keep up the standard that we establish while all went happily along. But bravely to bear the standard higher than ever with the oncoming troubles, problems and sorrows is the thing that will give you growth.
Learning your standard is like polishing a handful of useful yesterday and mortgaging a handful of to-morrow's to pay the cost. The heroic belong to the "dandy and lovely" brigade!

A coroner's jury, inquiring into the death of a resident of Guelph, who sustained fatal injuries when a buggy in which he was riding with his wife and daughter was struck by a motor car, returned an open verdict, attaching no blame to any person. But its rider, a recommendation that the provincial government be urged to enact legislation making it compulsory for all vehicles to carry lights on any road or highway after dark, indirectly places the responsibility upon the administration that, a few years ago, refused to enact protective legislation. The unlighted buggy is the greatest menace to night driving and the easiest to eradicate. It has never been suggested that it be made compulsory upon the rural population to equip their buggies and wagons with costly battery lights and automatic "stop" signals. All that has been asked by the motoring public is that legislation be brought down making it necessary for lights to be carried. Humble oil lanterns, suspended fore and aft, would suffice and give adequate warning to drivers of motor vehicles. Many drivers of horse-drawn vehicles for their own protection illuminate their conveyances, but in the absence of compulsory legislation, the great majority neglect to take this precaution and fatalities such as the coroner's jury at Guelph has probed are the result. On misty or foggy nights headlights do not reveal the buggy or wagon ahead until the automobile is almost on top of the slow-moving vehicle. Traffic from another direction may make it impossible to turn out and it may not be possible to apply the brakes in time to prevent a collision. The motorist is not to blame nor the driver of the horse-drawn conveyance, but those who have it in their power to enact protective legislation and neglect to do so are most certainly culpable. The present administration at Queen's Park has invited helpful and constructive suggestions. The Guelph jury has provided it with one.—Ex.

WHAT IT COSTS FARMERS TO LIVE

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

How the farmers of the country live, how much it costs them to do it, and what they get for their money, is a question the United States department of agriculture has set itself to determine. Taking Livingston county, New York, as a typical farming centre or the moderately good-to-do agriculturist, the investigators interviewed 402 farmers, about 14 per cent. of the total number in the county.

Firstly, it was discovered that the average expenditure of the 402 was $2,012 a year, of which about one-third came off the farm in the shape of food and fuel. That left $1,340 in cash money for the farmer to provide for clothing and amusements for himself and his family including the upkeep of the inevitable car. Clothing averaged $277 a family, while, based on the usual statistical number of five persons to a family, would be a little more than $50 a person.

Statisticians learned that father and mother denied themselves their share of the $277 a year allowance that the adolescent boys and girls of the family must make a good appearance. Up to 17 years old the boys may have to wear dad's old duds cut down, and the girls take out an unfashionable appearance in mother's made-over frocks, but as soon as they begin to hood, both boys and girls evidently rebel, from 17 to 22 or 23 years old, the clothing cost of the young people is twice that of the parents.

YE OLD SWIMMIN' HOLE

Ah well I mind first week in June when sun was working toward the pole, the youngsters from the village streets they gathered at the swimmin' hole.

There was no tank in tile and glass with water tempered to the skin, we shivered on the bank a bit a-darin' someone to go in.

And in that pool where willow trees bent weepin' down across the bank, we had what seemed to us just then the world's most famous swimmin' tank.

And in that place, that muddy place, we chased the bullfrog from his home, we scared the leeches from their hut when diving for the lucky stone.

And snappin' turtles dwelt therein disputin' when we came to swim, a bittin' at some luckless lad and barkin' pieces from his shin.

Of course it seemeth crude just now, it ain't the style of '24, a dryin' off beside a fire we built upon the muddy shore.

There weren't no swimmin' lessons then, they grabbed the kids and shot them in, and givin' them the choice they took to either sink or start to swim. Yet I allow as each kid went and choked and sputtered for a spell, that in one lesson of that sect he started swimmin' pretty well.

Of course them boys has went and gone, they're scattered like the leaves in fall, if I went back unto that spot they wouldn't be 'round there at all.

'Praps it's best as how they go and swim in tanks with bathin' suits and prance and swim around a bit and slide upon the slippery chutes.

But let them have their tanks and towels, I'd like to call the village roll and have the gang out just once more and plunge into that swimmin' hole.—Ark.

BANK ROBBER PLEADS "NOT GUILTY"

Louis Austin, alleged to have been implicated in the theft of $27,000 in Victory Bonds from the Royal Bank branch at Mount Forest in 1922, was arraigned before Judge Spottor at Guelph on Tuesday last and pleaded not guilty to the charge. Austin elected to be tried before a judge without a jury, and the date of his trial has been set for June 19. He was brought to Guelph from Little Rock, Ark., where he was apprehended two months ago, and has since been confined to the county jail at Guelph.

HAS STRENGTH OF MAN

A child of 4 years of age who has the strength of a full-grown man, a deep bass voice and a full grown beard is reported as the latest wonder in despatches from Moscow.

The child was born in Vladivostok and was quite normal at birth, and the parents are also perfectly normal. After the first year, however, the child began to grow with startling speed, and is now four feet tall.

He has been brought to Moscow for examination by medical authorities who are planning an operation to cure the abnormality.

CONSTABLE BLOOD TOOK STROKE

Provincial Constable Blood, one of the most efficient officers that ever operated in this section, was seized with a paralytic stroke on Thursday morning last, about 6 o'clock, and for a time very little hopes were entertained for his recovery. It seems that an returning home Tuesday night in his auto after motoring Dr. Douglas, the Owen Sound dentist back to Kingston penitentiary after the latter had given evidence at the Lawrence trial here, that Mr. Blood complained of feeling ill. The next day his condition grew worse, and this was followed by a severe stroke on Thursday morning that completely paralyzed his right arm and leg and deprived him of all power of speech. Since then he has been under the constant care of a doctor, and his condition improved that he is gradually regaining his speech and the use of his disabled limbs, again. Constable Blood is 38 years of age and was of a stalwart robust appearance. The fact that his father died from a paralytic stroke at the same age led the doctors at first to fear the son's case would be similarly fatal, but his progress since has practically dispelled this alarm.

IS ALBERTA COAL COMING?

Negotiations are making good progress for an arrangement with the securing of a low rate of freight on solid trainloads of coal from the mines of Nova Scotia and Alberta to Quebec and Ontario points. The suggestion made is that during the summer months, when a good deal of the railway equipment is not in full use, and time is inclined to be slack in the mines, unbroken train-loads of from forty to fifty cars should be hauled at a rate of six or seven dollars a ton from Alberta and a proportionately lower rate from Nova Scotia; that a special accounting should be taken of this movement by the railways, and if it were shown that it had been hauled at a loss, that loss should be shown in a separate column from the general operating loss of the railway, and should be borne in some way by the people of Canada as a whole.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR BOYS

Here's encouragement for the boys who start down at the bottom in a big business, and that's where wise parents should start their sons in any business. Pat Cowley who was recently promoted to the presidency of the New York Central Railway at a salary of $100,000 per annum, twice the amount Sir Henry Thornton receives for managing the C.N.R., started in the service of his company as a messenger boy. His predecessor, A. H. Smith, started in as a wood piler in the days when wood instead of coal was used to convert water into steam as the propelling power on railways. These boys knew the railway business from the bottom up. No boy could ever feel so big for his job that he objects to sweeping the floor in his apprenticeship days.

WHAT'S THE MATTER, SISTER?

In one of the leading churches of the city the pastor took for the text of his sermon "Better Church attendance." The pastor held that the automobile has taken more people from church than any other thing. He concluded with the exclamation: "The Ford car has taken more people to hell than any other thing I can think of!" Whereupon an old lady in the congregation began to clap her hands and moan: "Praise the Lord! Praise the Lord!"

"What's the matter sister?" asked the pastor.

"The Ford never went any place that it couldn't make the round in and I'm sure all those people in hell will be back.—So praise the Lord!"

The most brittle glass can be wrought almost as easily as brass, by use of cutting tools kept constantly wet with camphorated oil of turpentine.

In Russia vagrancy among children is so prevalent as to shock even people who for ten years have seen little except suffering. Soviet newspapers report efforts by the government to deal with the evil, but the children are many and the means of caring for them are insufficient. The newspaper Pravda recently estimated that there are fifty thousand vagrant children merely in Moscow and its suburbs.

Is a man justified in killing a neighbor's dog if he trespasses on and attempts to destroy his property at night? This question came up in Hull police court the other day when Isadore Dubeau, of Danford, La., sued Clifford Gibson, of the same place, for $99, the value he placed on a dog which the latter acknowledged he had killed on the night of June 3rd last, when he found it attacking a colt in the field adjacent to his home. Judge Miller was of the opinion that the act was justified and dismissed the case against Gibson. Judge Miller stated in dismissing the charge if a man might shoot a thief who entered his house at night with the intent to steal or destroy, he was certainly entitled to do the same to a dog and the onus of responsibility rested on the dog.

A BANKRUPT'S REVENGE

If everybody paid their debts promptly the average business man would have an easy time of it. For verification of this statement, ask any business man in this or any other town. He knows. Human nature is the same the wide world over, and therefore a news item from a southern city will be as much appreciated here as there.

Even though they might not care to give it their endorsement as a regular practice, honest folk will not be wanting in sympathy for the unusual course taken by a Hagerstown Maryland, meat dealer to explain his insolvency. Smarting under the sting of having been forced into bankruptcy, the man posted on his front door a list of persons who he declared owed him money and stated that if they had paid their debts he would have been able to pay his creditors. "These people forced me into bankruptcy," said the sign over the names.

In the list, says the correspondent, reporting the affair, were the names of some of the town. They were naturally not righteously indignant and about twenty of the women stormed the shop and tore the sign down.

Of course it was humiliating to them to have their names exposed to the public gaze in this unpleasant way; yet, if the butcher told the truth—as he probably did—their bankruptcy was not undeserved. The bankrupt suffered worse than humiliation; he lost his business as a result of extending credit to persons who failed to meet their obligations; and he can hardly be blamed for wanting to share his humiliation with those responsible for it.

The incident is illuminating as an example of the manner in which petty defalcations in the aggregate effect business. Probably none of the butcher's debtors owed him more than a few dollars each. Yet in their total these bad debts ruined him, and his insolvency in turn will prove at least slightly embarrassing to his creditors. Misplaced trust may cause annoyance to far more than those directly concerned. Happily most people pay their debts; otherwise it would be impossible to do business on a credit system, and without credit commerce would languish.

The southern housewives whose names were made public as defaulters are angry now; but no doubt in their hearts they are also a little remorseful. They have been taught what the consequences of not paying even small debts may be. If they are more conscientious in meeting their obligations promptly hereafter the butcher's revenge will have served a good purpose.

WHERE WE SHOW OFF BEST

(by Edgar L. Vincent)

Some men pride themselves on how much work they can do in a day. I have heard farmers tell about cradling ten acres of grain in a day. I never could do it myself, and I have wondered if the days of those old-time farmers might not have begun while the stars were still shining and lasted until the dew began to fall in the evening. But how they liked to tell the story of their past achievements!

Another farmer I know has a proud ring in his voice when he says, "I used to put off a load of hay in seven minutes!" And I do not doubt that he told the truth; for I have tried to mow away after his pitching, and had all I could do to keep on top. Others have different things of which they like to boast. They like to have folks know how well they show off while doing their farm work. And that is all right, providing we do not overdo and hurt ourselves.

And yet, this is not the place where farmer folks show off best. It is a sad fact that some of those who take pride in their ability to turn off a big day's work in the field do not show off at all well in other places. Just stop and ask yourself this question: "How do I show off in my own home? Am I as good as I ought to be? Or am I often cross to those I love? Do I lose my temper and storm around till everybody is glad to get out of sight?" Oh, I tell you many of us make a very bad showing just where it counts for most.

Counts for most? How can that be? Is it not fully as important that we should show up well out round the farm—and down-town, where we meet city folks as that we shall appear to good advantage at home? You ask that, but you don't mean it. You know in your heart of hearts that if a man ought to be a man—a good, all-round man—it is in his own home. God has given us all of the big out-of-doors, we possess, and the heart of it all is the little spot shut in by four walls that we call home.

Out yonder we live the life that stands out most prominently in the gaze of men and we do the work which belongs to the growing of crops and feeding of our families and the men and women of the world. But here we live our real lives, the lives that touch the souls of those who are nearest and dearest to us. Here we really live and love and make character for ourselves and for our little ones. How do we show off there?

The world will make its estimate of you largely from the grain you cradle and the hay you pitch, but God and your home folks know best from what they see when you are heart to heart with them.

The largest hotel in the world is to be built in Chicago on the site of the historic Palmer House, which is to be torn down. The cost will be $20,000,000, and there will be 2,268 rooms. That means $9,000 a room, which lets a precursory ray of light play on the future cost of a night's lodging.

CHEVROLET

—a factor in modern business and social activity

If the automobile were suddenly withdrawn from our modern business and social life, do you realize how speedy and complete would be the disorganization?

Wider in its influence and effect than any other factor of present-day existence—the automobile has become of vital importance to commerce and society.

And Chevrolet can claim a prominent place in automobile progress, because it has brought quality and dependability within the realm of the popular-priced car.

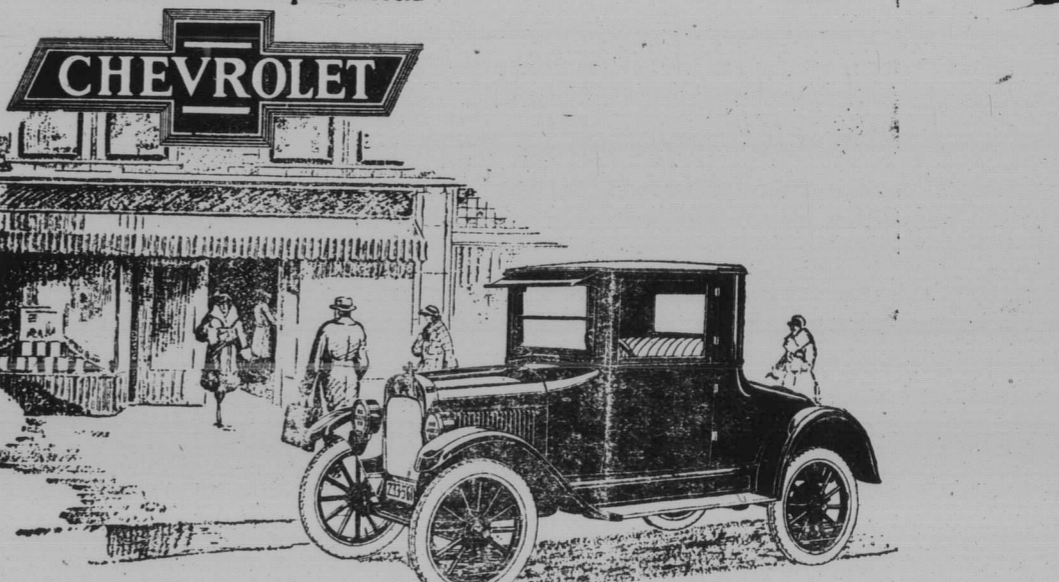

Chevrolet transportation is the most economical per mile. Chevrolet reliability is an established fact among motor-car users. Chevrolet exceeds expectations in the beauty of its appearance and the completeness of its appointments.

The Chevrolet Utility Coupe (with its handsome "body by Fisher") is the choice of the commercial user—the business or professional man, or salesman, whose business the automobile has assisted so materially. The Utility Coupe is a car of which anyone may well feel proud.

REMODELED WINDOWS.

In many of the very old country houses are to be found architectural features that are the despair of their modern occupants. Windows between connecting rooms are one of these; a wing was added to the house and the original windows were not removed.

If the dissatisfied modern occupant owns the house she very likely will have the windows removed and the openings plastered. But occasionally we find a housewife so ingenious that she utilizes these odd features in a way that actually adds to the attractiveness of her house and preserves the old-time charm in its unity.

In one old farmhouse there were two such windows, one at each side of the door leading from the living room to the dining room. The owner removed the sash and hinged them, like doors, at the edge of the casing on the dining room side. Glass doors were procured and hinged in the same way on the sitting room side. Then shelves were placed in the inclosed space. And here the mistress of the house arranged her pretty glass and china. The result is most charming. Never have her glass and china appeared at such an advantage as when seen with the light shining through the glass doors. The soft colors add greatly to the decoration of both rooms and the dishes are protected from the dust.

A window between dining room and kitchen could have paneled doors and would make a very inexpensive connecting cupboard where everyday table accessories could be kept and food passed. If one is troubled about such a window within the house, it pays to think twice before going to the expense of having it removed; because, with a fraction of the expense, a charming feature may be added to the house.—A. CUTTING "CRAWLY" GOODS.

In working with organdies, crepes and other "wiry" or "crawly" materials, I find it is better to pin the material to paper before I cut into it. I used to have a hard time getting organdie collars to lie straight until I tried this plan.

Get big pieces of wrapping paper, or pin newspapers together in a strip. Lay your material on so that the selvages are parallel with the straight edges of the paper and so that the ends of the cloth are square. If the material does not have a visible grain each other in surplus style with a very simple effective closing. One could use jersey, oil silk, rubberized gingham, or silk, as well as alpaca, gingham or satin.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, 34-38; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires 3 1/2 yards of 40-inch material.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15c in silver, by the Wilson Publishing Co., 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Allow two weeks for receipt of pattern.

SHELLAC YOUR KNOTHOLES.

When we painted the woodwork in our bathroom we knew that we should put a coat of shellac over the knotholes before applying the first coat of white paint, for the experienced Danish painter who was enameling the woodwork downstairs was directing our work. We forgot, however, to do it on one door. Within a few months our carelessness was revealed. Those knotholes stood outlined in yellow on the white enamel door. We shall not soon again forget to shellac knotholes before we paint.

It is a good plan, by the way, to shellac the entire surface before applying the flat coat or coats of paint which are the base for enamel. In enameling furniture or book shelves, or in doing any sort of fine interior finishing, much more uniform results can be obtained if the shellac is put on first. It dries very quickly, within an hour or so, and so your work need not be delayed.—M. J. M.

VERSATILE GINGERBREAD.

My gingerbread is easy to make and delicious to eat. You can bake it on baking day, with the bread, and save fuel. You can vary the recipe by adding nuts or raisins, or both. With these additions it tastes like real fruit cake.

You can bake it in a shallow pan and cut in squares, or in an angel-food pan. Or you can bake it in muffin pans. This way is the most convenient for the children's lunches.

Here is the recipe: Bring to boiling point one cupful of molasses and 1-3 cupful of butter.

Add 1 1/2 teaspoonfuls of soda and 1/2 cupful of sour milk. Beat vigorously.

Then add 1 egg, well beaten, 2 cupfuls of flour, 1 teaspoonful of ginger, 1/2 teaspoonful of salt, 1/2 teaspoonful of cloves, 1 teaspoonful of cinnamon, 1/2 cupful of raisins or nuts, or both. The raisins and nuts may be omitted if desired.

Bake slowly forty-five minutes.

"When Hearts Command"

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command,
From minds the sagest counsellings depart."

But, oh, what happy things Jean hoped for from this marriage! Even at great personal loss to herself. She was—she knew—losing a daughter and not, as traditionally expressed, gaining a son. Alice would leave her for ever. Her own lot was cast in less pleasant lines. She had the burden of Hugo, and there was not much fun in that, but at least she would be occupied, and perhaps, after all, it was better to have Hugo than nobody at all. Despite his tiresomeness and the dreadful uncertainty of him, Jean found that she was becoming quite attached to the strange little man. Hugo was an awful creature, one never knew for one moment to the next what he would do or say; he made existence lively and uncomfortable, but he was at the same time woefully pathetic and anxious to please.

Love, as understood between men and women, seemed to have no place in his self-like consciousness. He made no claims upon her as a wife, but he did find his place in her affections. She began to see how, after all, everything was for the best. How could she have been so cruel as to have expected poor Hugo to spend the whole of his life in that dreadful place? What that she had regarded as a cross might well prove to be her crown. Think of it! It would have been like alone in the world without Alice. Perhaps Hugo and she would stay here all the time, and if the heat got too unbearable in the summer, Hector Gaunt might invite them up to the farm for a few weeks, or some very, very cheap little place in the mountains could be found.

It was extraordinary how life simplified itself. One only had to wait, to take things quietly, not to worry—but it was difficult not to worry sometimes—however, know that everything was for the best, and suddenly the clouds slipped over and there was the sun that was always shining somewhere.

She sat down to count her money and discovered that a few of the clouds still lingered. Again that guilty feeling came over her. She had pretended to Hector that paying him back for all he had spent in getting them settled would be a matter of a few weeks at the most, but how awful it would have been had he accepted the money she had vainly tried to press upon him. They would have had nothing to live upon at all. Next quarter day was a long way off. Should she write to Christopher Smarle and remind him of his promise? She hated asking Christopher for money.

Alice's few hundred pounds were inaccessible for immediate purposes. One had to give thirty days' notice of withdrawal at the savings bank. And it was principally for Alice that she required money. They would have to go to Genoa, too, and there would be hotel expenses. Oh, dear!

Well—always remember that somewhere the sun is shining. At least there was enough to buy the silk for the wedding dress.

The next day they went gaily into San Remo and made that interesting purchase, and in the big lace shop Mrs. Carnay fell a helpless victim to the lure of an old confirmation veil—only Lire 100, not more than five pounds sterling. In the big yards of Venetian rose point, the price of which had better not be set down. Before she was half way home, poor Jean made up her mind very firmly that she would forget at once and for ever the hole that Hector's point had made in her heap of soiled banknotes.

When they got back, tired but immensely satisfied, a happy surprise awaited them. Jean discovered that she need not have worried all day about poor Hugo being left alone at the Villa Charmil, to fall over the cliff or otherwise make trouble for himself. Gaunt had looked in on his way to Ventignilla. Hugo had had a lovely day, and there he was with Hector Gaunt having tea in the arbor when his womenfolk returned, and Gaunt had brought them all sorts of things to eat, and there were new songs for the old guitar, and yards and yards of muslin for Jean to make up into curtains and cushion covers, and a new pipe for Hugo, and a big box of chocolates for Alice. Well, no end to it, really!

Jean tried to be shocked at Gaunt's extravagance, but in her heart she was pleased—though guilty to accept so much—and Hugo was as happy as a sandboy.

The little bride-to-be sighed for her lover, but there could be no sadness in this brief parting, and suddenly when dinner was over and the sea wore a filmy opal sheen under the light of the young white moon, and while Hugo was trilling an old Spanish love song by the aid of the guitar, Alice recollected that she could write a letter to Philip. Practically the first love-letter she had ever written.

She slipped away to her room, opening the window wide so as to be sentimentally touched by "Uncle John's" song. It was like a play.

Hugo, his eyes slightly awry and his nose turned to the right, sat in the swiggy arbour and watched the world in thin, sweet melody. There were faded red and yellow ribbons on the handle of the guitar, and Gaunt had playfully decorated the musician's ear with a red rose.

They laughed and he laughed back at them with the glee of a humor-loving child—but their laughter was near to tears.

"I think he enjoyed himself to-day," said Alice and he sat down side by side on the edge of the steep terrace.

Jean nodded, her throat uncomfortably full.

"You've been so good to him, Hector. So kind and good to all of us. It's no use my trying to thank you, I simply don't know how to begin."

Gaunt enclosed the hand which lay nearest him in his big fist, tenderly, gently. Something stirred and fluttered in her heart. Oh, dear Heaven, so long ago it was they had met and loved each other—like a dim dream now.

"How little I've counted in your life, my poor dear—I, who expected to be so much," he said quietly. "You don't know what it means to me to have you here—you, and the little girl. Jean—I'm going to give her away at the church ceremony. Hugo doesn't object. I asked him."

He released her hand, and for safety's sake she let it lie in her lap.

"Hugo doesn't mind?" she asked, her voice husky. "Did he—did he let you know that he understood about Alice?—about her not being his own daughter?"

Gaunt shook his head. "On the contrary. He was rather emphatic that she is his daughter. But he said he thought it would be better if I gave her away. He was horribly pathetic about it—little wretch! The years in That Place, as he calls it, have unnerved him. He feels that he's bewildered and perhaps make a mistake, and he'd be much happier if I stood to her in loco parentis. That was the way he put it."

Jean quivered and sighed. It was the one thing about Hugo that she hated; he would persist in that tiresome attitude. He had even managed to fill Alice with suspicion that he was her father.

At the present moment he had switched abruptly from the airs of Spain to "Knocked 'em in the Old Kent Road." There was the sound of Alice's window going down with an insistent bang, and Gaunt rose and stretched himself. That was Hugo, a faun, an elf, an imp, making them all figuratively speaking, dance to his tune. The atmosphere was swept of sentiment.

"What about spending a few days with me?" Gaunt suggested. "The ladies, I take it will have their hands full with all this dressmaking, and they'd be glad to get you out of the way."

Hugo beamed upon his idol, and Jean's heart gave a joyous leap. How wonderful it was of Hector to think of such things!

"Are you sure you want me?" Hugo asked eagerly. "Could I help with the flowers? I used to do a lot of gardening in That Place, you know."

"Fine! Why didn't you tell me before? Of course I want you, and of course you can help. What about tomorrow? I'll send Carlo for you directly after breakfast."

"What's the matter with to-night?" Hugo inquired. "It won't take me ten minutes to pack a bag."

There was a short, excited argument. Wasn't he too tired? It was a long pull up Monte Nero.

No, Hugo wasn't a bit tired. He danced around excitedly and begged to be allowed to go to-night. They could tie his bag and the precious guitar, which he now regarded as his, to the mule's pack. It would be nothing, climbing up in the moonlight.

Finally he was allowed his way.

It seemed lonely after he had gone, Alice, who had emerged to see what the racket was about, remarked that Uncle John made the place seem quite gay, and it might even be a little dull without him. Then she went back to the letter which had been so rudely interrupted by the "Old Kent Road," and Jean, having unpacked their purchases, sat dreamily in the salon with the Confirmation veil that was to be Alice's wedding veil in her lap, stroking it with soft and tender gestures.

Dear Alice—dear, sweet daughter! They seemed safely to have passed a terrible crisis, bridged a yawning horror.

Two weeks slipped by and they were well in the third, when one morning the post-girl left another letter besides the one which arrived daily from Genoa.

Alice brought it in and gave it to her mother. "For Uncle John," she said. "And Mr. Gaunt won't be in to-day. It looks important; I suppose we ought to send it up to the farm."

It did look important—"John Balles, Esq., c/o Mrs. Carnay, Hotel Mimosa," etc., forwarded on to the villa. In the upper left-hand corner were the name and address of a London solicitor. Jean's fingers itched to open it. Of course Christopher Smarle knew that Hugo was calling himself John Balles—she had written and warned him—but this letter was not from Christopher.

"I'll take it up myself," she said. (To be continued.)

Making wash day pleasant—

Just use Rinso where you used to use bar soap—for soaking, boiling, or in your washing machine.

THE hardest part of wash-day, rubbing, rubbing, rubbing, has given way to the new method of soaking the clothes clean with Rinso. This wonderful new soap gently loosens the dirt and a thorough rinsing leaves things white and glistening as you never could get them before.

Only spots where the dirt is ground-in, such as neck bands, cuff edges, and the like need a light rubbing, and a little dry Rinso rubbed on these spots quickly makes the dirt disappear.

Rinso is sold by all grocers and department stores

The Young Huntsman.

Through the gray isles of the stark, November trees
We saw him pass by, urgent as a fire,
Love, the young Huntsman, riding with the breeze;
Red in the distance, the little Fox, Desire.

Home with the pale moon, home with the star,
Home with his quarry, hunted to the death,
Oh, but the Red Fox rode him fast and far;
Love, the young Huntsman, draws a weary breath.

Blinds down and lamplight, veiling starry eyes,
Off with the silver spurs, gone the scarlet coat,
Love, the young Huntsman, grown old and wise,
Sits by the fireside, incredibly remote.

Close by the chimney shelf, close the Huntsman keeps,
Nods in an armchair, dreaming of the chase;
Love has killed Desire; now he sits and sleeps,
Gray and regretful, for a little space.

—Faith Baldwin.

EXTRA CURTAINS.

Few housekeepers, who have not tried it, realize the saving of work by having a few extra sets of washed draperies for the windows. Many times fresh curtains for a bedroom or the living room or dining room will be needed in a hurry. And it is sure to be when it is inconvenient to take down the soiled ones and launder them immediately.

To have a few in reserve is an excellent plan. Then the soiled ones can be done at leisure and at one's convenience. The simple, straight hangings are more desirable for summer when the windows are open.

The lace or lace-trimmed curtains may then be saved for cold weather furnishing.

Surnames and Their Origin

LIPPMAN.
Variation—Lipman.
Racial Origin—English.
Source—An occupation.
Among the medieval English a Lippman was a "leapman," "leppeman" or "leppman." All three spellings are to be found in the old records. You might conclude from this that the various founders of the Lippman and Lipman families were celebrated as jumpers. Such a conclusion, however, would be entirely erroneous.
The word "lepe" has been for many generations defunct in our language, though the family names derived from the occupation connected with it are very much alive and by no means uncommon.
The "lepe" was a form of basket, strong but flexible, and in wide use about the period when family names began to crystallize from occupations as well as other sources.
In an old Bible, in the parable of the loaves and fishes, is found the following: "And they eaten and weren filled and they taken up that that left of relifs seven leepis."
It was the usual thing to refer to a man by his occupation, as "Roger le Leppeman" ("the maker of baskets"), but quite often without even the article, "le," particularly toward the close of this period, in which common usage made the names mere verbal tags of identification rather than literal descriptions of occupation.

DRISCOLL
Variation—O'Driscoll.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—A given name.
You might not even recognize Driscoll as an Irish family name, though if you run across it in the form of O'Driscoll the significance of that prefix is clear.
Like virtually all Irish names, it is the Anglicized form of an ancient clan name, and this clan name was "O'Ederscoil," which is something quite different in both spelling and pronunciation from O'Driscoll, though your English pronunciation of the Gaelic spelling would probably be wrong, for that syllable "ceoil," containing the three vowels was pronounced simply "col."
The clan was founded by a chieftain named "Ederscoil," who was the great-grandson of "Lugaidh MacCon," the 13th monarch in that line of "high kings" whose reigns stretched through virtually 3000 years.
There are no records which show specially the year in which the clan was founded, but history gives definitely the reign of this great-grandfather of the founder, which was between the years 195 and 225 A.D.

SATISFIED MOTHERS

No other medicine gives as great satisfaction to mothers as does Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are equally good for the newborn babe or the growing child and are absolutely safe. They cannot possibly do harm—always good. The Tablets are mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus relieve baby of any of the minor ills of childhood such as constipation, indigestion, colds, colic, etc. Concerning them Mrs. Arthur Filion, St. Sylvestre, Que. writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets have been of wonderful benefit to my baby who was suffering from constipation and indigestion. I always keep the Tablets on hand and would advise all mothers to do likewise." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Label Them Correctly.
I have seen careless people wash out a medicine bottle, and without changing the label refill the bottle with some entirely different kind of medicine. This is a mighty dangerous practice, as we are not always on the job ourselves and it might prove a very disastrous act to the stranger who is helping us out.

Crimes Which Baffle Men Solved by Police Dogs.

The United States, Japan, Russia, Czechoslovakia and many other countries import trained German dogs to act as detectives in criminal cases. These dogs are second to none in searching for hidden things, writes Dr. Koch.
Since January 1, 1924, the Berlin police headquarters has had a constant night service which in important cases sends dogs to the place where a crime has been committed. Ten excellent German shepherd dogs, among them the record dogs, Wotan and Ito, are in the service.
Their work consists of search, either alone or with a policeman. The latter is the more popular and more successful method. If the dog is allowed to move freely, without being held by a leash, the policeman is hardly able to watch his behavior and his course, which contribute much to any discovery. Anyhow, it is almost impossible for a man to follow a dog, for his race leads frequently over roofs and through hidden hotels to the refuge of the criminal.
Frequently, criminals hide their tracks by pouring gasoline or other liquids on it, or by placing poisoned meat which might kill the dog if he were not watched.
Whether stolen goods are hidden on land or in the water does not matter to a police dog. A cow, for instance, was stolen recently and the police dog, with its policeman leader, was set on the track. He followed the track to a suburban garden and found the dead cow hidden underneath branches and straw. Not satisfied with this disclosure, the dog went on and began to bark in front of a shack, where the two thieves were found, with the bloodstains of the fresh-killed cow on their clothes.
To, the "wonder-dog," found stolen copper and lead in a water barrel. Here also the dog was not content with finding the goods, but discovered the thief, who was with his father in a garden of the neighborhood.
That the splendid police dogs do their duty even in water is proven by the stunt Greif did not long ago when he swam to Berlin's river harbor to locate a stolen tun of oil which the thieves had sunk there by means of ropes and stoncs.

PALE, WAN CHEEKS AND DULL EYES

Is Proof That the Blood is Thin and Impure.
It is the blood that gives color to the cheeks and lips, as well as brightness to the eyes. If your blood gets thin the color will fade and the eyes grow dim. By the time this happens you will notice that you tire easily and are subject to headaches and backaches, for the blood goes everywhere and the entire system feels the effects when it becomes thin. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain the elements necessary to enrich the blood, and this better blood strengthens the nerves and all the organs of the body, brings a glow of health to the cheeks, brightness to the eyes and a general feeling of renewed health and strength. Miss Florence Johnson, Stratford, Ont., who has proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind, says:—"A few years ago I was greatly run down; my blood was very poor and my nervous system in bad shape. The doctor said my condition was due to improper diet and lack of fresh air. I then commenced eating the food he advised and went out daily for a walk. I did not improve, however, and was much discouraged. A friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I can truthfully say that when I had finished the first box I could note an improvement. From then on the progress was steady. My complexion, which had been pale and sallow, began to take on a healthy glow, I felt a great deal stronger and my appetite became normal, and soon my health was fully restored. Before using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I did not know anything about their wonderful qualities, but now I recommend them to all suffering from similar ailments."
You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BETTER GREEN TEA IMPORTED.
Many think that those who drink Green Tea are more critical judges of quality than those who drink black. Such would seem to be the case, because some years ago great quantities of poor quality Japan and China Green Teas were brought into Canada. The demand for this type of tea soon fell off. Now, however, the much finer quality of India and Ceylon Greens, imported mostly by the Salada Tea Company, has sharply revived the demand by those who enjoy the distinctive flavor of Green Tea.

About "Grass Widows."
In the eleventh century in England it was a law of the church that a widow must "remain under God's protection and grace"—not marry—for a year after the death of her husband. Such women were called "Grass Widows," which often went into the parish registers as "grasso widows." This was the first use of the term.
Of more recent origin, however, is its recent intelligent adaptation to indicate a divorcee.
In the days of the Forty-niners in California it was not uncommon for men to "board out" their wives while they went off to dig for gold. Seeing humor in the situation, one of them uniquely referred to the separation as "putting his widow out to grass"—with reference, of course, to the pasturing of cattle.
The term evidently struck what has been called "the American affliction of the funny bone." For applied to the rapidly increasing number of divorcees, "grass widow soon entrenched itself in our slang lexicon.—Kansas City Star.

England Shows Auto Gains.
The use of motor cars is increasing slowly in England, and the revenue from licenses also shows a gain, says an "Associated Press" dispatch from London. During the year 1923 a total of 1,066,000 licenses were granted, an increase of 132,692 over 1922.

Crimes Which Baffle Men Solved by Police Dogs.

The Duke's Popular Col. Miller. It has been with the Keenes that the Duke of York has consented to the resignation of Commander Louis Greig as Comptroller to H.R.H. Indeed, he did so only on condition that the Commander, who is joining a firm of stockbrokers as a partner, should remain as adviser to him in financial matters.
Like most of his race—he is a Glasgow man—Commander Greig has a bent for figures, and has been of invaluable help to the Duke in regard to the management of certain trusts.
Mrs. Coolidge's Retort. Mrs. Calvin Coolidge is noted for her quick flashes of wit and repartee. When her husband was Vice President and she was meeting the ladies of the Senate for the first time at their luncheon club, over which she was to preside, the Senators' wives fled by introducing themselves. When Mrs. John B. Kendrick's turn came, she said:
"I'm Mrs. Kendrick, the junior from Wyoming."
"And I'm Mrs. Coolidge, the freshman from Massachusetts," was her prompt retort.

The Right Way to Gather Flowers.

As every good gardener knows, there are a right way and a wrong way of gathering flowers. In his "Bluebook of Annuals and Biennials" Henry Stuart Orloff, the landscape architect, gives a word about the proper way.
"O word about cutting flowers. A sharp pair of scissors is the best implement," he says. "A clean sharp cut is more readily healed by Nature. Spare the small shoots and branches, for they are the source of a later supply. It is always well to cut an average amount of foliage with your flower; and it is always better taste to use a flower with its own foliage rather than depend on ferns and other things for greenery.
"When the flowers are taken indoors plunge their stems into a deep dish or pail of cold water and let them stand for a quarter to a half an hour, or while you are collecting the various vases and filling them about three quarters full of fresh water. When you have selected your blooms, before you take them from the water, slip off the ends of the stem with your scissors while they are still under water. The reason for this is that while the flower has been in the open air with a cut stem a large amount of air has entered the stalk and so does not permit water to flow readily up the stem as it should."

WOMAN SUFFERED FOR MONTHS

Weak and Nervous. Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Webbwood, Ont.—"I was in a very weak and run-down nervous condition, always tired from the time I got up until I went to bed. Sleep did not rest me at all. My sister recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and others told me about it, but it was from my sister's advice that I took it. It did not take long until I felt stronger, headaches left me and my appetite came back to me. I am a farmer's wife and have many things to do outside the house, such as milking, looking after the poultry, and other chores. I heartily recommend the Vegetable Compound to all who have the same trouble I had, for it is a fine medicine for women."—Mrs. LOUIS F. ELIASSEK, Hillcrest Farm, Webbwood, Ont.

Another Nervous Woman Finds Relief

Port Huron, Michigan.—"I suffered for two years with pains in my side, and if I worked very much I was nervous and just as tired in the morning as when I went to bed. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me so much that I soon felt fine."—Mrs. CHARLES BEELER, 501-14th St., Port Huron, Mich.

UNION STOCK MARKETS
TORONTO

The fact that cattle receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were only of moderate proportions, induced salesmen to ask higher prices but their efforts were unsuccessful. The shipments were about 1500 head lighter than those received on the previous Monday, and considering the size of the offering trade was inclined to be slow. At 2 o'clock only 2,000 had passed over the scale and buying then was by no means active. Prices generally remained about steady for steers, heifers and bulls, but cows were selling a little lower.

Exporters were not as active as they were on the previous Monday, and there was practically no demand for store cattle.

The top price for heavy steers was $8.75, which was paid for a load of 17. Three of these averaged 1510 lbs, four averaged 1570, and the balance of 1460 pounds. They were all taken for export.

In the butcher class two steers averaging 1125 lbs. brought $8 a cwt. The bulk of the choice steers sold at $7.25 to $7.75, with medium to good steers from $6.50 to $7. A few light steers sold downward to $6, and some export heifers brought from $7.25 to $7.50. Good butcher heifers sold from $7.25 to $7.50. Few cows sold above $6, only half a dozen bringing from $6.25 to $6.75. The bulk of the choice cows sold from $5.50 to $6, with medium to good ones from $4 to $5.25. Two bulls brought $6 a hundred, while good heavy ones generally sold from $4.50 to $5.50. Other bulls brought from $3.50 to $4.25.

Prices paid for lambs were down about $1 a hundred from a week ago. Good lambs yesterday sold anywhere from $16.50 to $18. Culls sold from $12 to $13 and the price range for yearlings was the same as for sullen lambs. Good light sheep sold from $6.50 to $7, with heavies from $4 to $5 a hundred.

Hogs generally sold at an advance of 25c a hundred. In most cases the price paid was on the basis of $8.25 fed and watered. Off car sales were made from $8.45 to $8.65. It was stated yesterday that in some cases hogs were bought in the country for 38 c. f.o.b. For today's market the buyers for the abattoirs are quoting on the basis of $8 fed and watered.

"Don't cry little boy, you'll get your reward in the end."
"Yes, that's where I always do get it."

The home merchant is your neighbor and your friend. He is in touch with your affairs and concerned about your success. He bears his part in building the community and the advantages it offers. He pays taxes to keep going schools, government and provide improvements. He contributes liberally to churches and a hundred activities of one kind and another that help to make the community a better place in which to live.

It has been said that the reason the flesh colored hose have become so popular is that when they get a hole in them the girls don't have to mend it.

No person needs to grow old mentally. There are fresh currents of thought, news ideas and accomplishments enough at any time to keep the ambitious individual mentally alert and full of hope. The person who cuts himself off from these helpful influences does himself an injustice, and indirectly helps to retard the progress of society.
