COUGARS TAKEN ALIVE

UNIQUE FEATURE OF HUNTER IN KOOTENAY.

People of British Columbia Astonished by Daring Performance of Charles Ordist—Fur Company Paid Him Sum of $100 Each For the Live Animals.

FOR years past many hunters in British Columbia have hunted cougars for sport, finding it a fascinating and at times rather an exciting pastime. In addition it has its monetary benefits, there being a good bounty on the cougar's head and the skin fetches a fair price. But no hunter ever started after the big animals unless he was equipped with a reliable rifle so as to be able to bag them once they had taken to the trees. The only way a British Columbia hunter brings a cougar into camp is stone dead.

However, the other day Charles Ordist, a famous American hunter, crossed the line and took up quarters in the East Kootenays. He at once startled the inhabitants by announcing that he was going to take cougars alive, having been offered $100 by a Kansas City fur house for every beast he took in this manner. Shooting cougars was too prosaic for Ordist.

Some people looked upon Ordist's announcement as a little Yankee-gusto, while others were afraid the man was suffering from a hallucination. It appeared like speculative venture with serious injury or even death, as the cougar measures between five and six feet from nose to tip of tail, and a female with one is rather a bad animal to pick trouble with. But Ordist talked about the cougar as though it were as small and harmless as a kitten.

The day arrived for Ordist to set out on his first expedition into the St. Mary's district and as he disappeared into the woods the watchers exhibited a certain uneasiness. He was accompanied by a pack of six dogs, highly trained and with a strain of bloodhound. A .32 long revolver was in a holster on his right hip. On his shoulder he carried a sack containing 120 feet of rope and provisions for himself and his hounds.

When well into the wilds Ordist unleashed his hounds and they sniffed about for a scent. On picking up a cougar's trail the dogs bounded off in pursuit, and on catching sight of their prey barked viciously. Not wishing to fight the pack the cougar took to the trees, and from a safe height snapped and snarled at the hounds. On coming up with his pack Ordist made ready to execute the job of capturing the treed beast. The ordinary hunter would consider his work practically done once the cougar took to the trees. A well-directed bullet would soon bring the brute down. But with Ordist the real work only begins with the treeing.

Boldly the hunter climbed the tree. As he ascended the cougar in alarm climbed to the topmost branches, where it clung with all fours, and spit and snapped in fear of falling among the hounds. In this precarious position the attention of the animal was diverted from Ordist to the baying hounds. Cautiously the hunter climbed to a level with the cougar, and with the assistance of a long stick passed a noose over the animal's head and immediately drew it taut. Quickly Ordist slipped to the ground and attached the rope to a simple device which permitted of a straight down-haul.

From then on there was a chance of a little excitement, even the intrepid Ordist was willing to admit. If the rope broke the hunter would have had to rely upon the accuracy of his revolver to save him from injury. More than once on his expeditions Ordist has faced such a contingency, but his gun has never failed him. However, as long as the noose remained taut the hunter had a stranglehold on the cougar. By strenuous heaving the beast was forced to relinquish its hold on the branches and slowly was lowered to the ground. The frantic pawing finally ceased through the strangling effect of the noose. Immediately the animal touched the ground Ordist roped it securely and when its strength revived it was helpless to battle on.

In this manner Ordist has captured 85 cougars. Altogether he had 400 cuts in his belt, having shot 315 when the situation became too acute to permit roping.—Toronto Star Weekly.

Happy Occasion.

Mother—What's the matter, darling?

Child—P-p-pa hit his finger with the hammer.

Mother—Don't cry about that; you should laugh.

Child—I-I-d-did.

Louisa Ann Ballard

Waterdown's oldest and most highly respected resident passed away at her son's home here on Monday, September 13th, in the person of Louisa Ann Ballard, wife of the late Abraham Baker. Deceased was in her 94th year at the time of her death, and leaves to mourn the loss of a kind and loving parent, three sons, George of Hamilton, Albert of Detroit, Isaac of Waterdown, and two daughters, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Barnes of Hamilton.

Warren-Mitchell Wedding

(From Weyburn, Sask., Herald)

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Mitchell about five miles south of the city, when their eldest daughter, Margaret was married to Joseph H. Warren, of this city. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Wilson, B. A., at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Mr. James Warren, brother of the bridegroom acted as best man and Miss Mildred Mitchell, sister of the bride supported the bride.

The bride was dressed in a navy blue suit of gabardine with hat to match and blouse of maize georgette. She carried a large bouquet of roses and lilies. The bridesmaid was dressed in blue crepe de chene with hat to match. The bride's mother wore a gown of black satin.

A buffet luncheon followed the marriage ceremony at which Martha Hussey, Bertha Bower, Annie Brown and Elsie Metheral served.

The wedding gifts were numerous and costly. A piano was the bridegroom's gift to the bride, and he gave a string of pearl beads to the bridesmaid and a club bag to the best man.

A good fat check was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell to their daughter. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with roses.

The happy couple left on the evening train for Banff for a couple of weeks' honeymoon trip. On their return they will take up their residence on Fifth street.

There were about thirty-five guests present, nearly all of whom were relatives and a few friends. The guests from a distance were Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell, of Macoun, and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, of Regina.

The Herald extends heartiest congratulations to the newly wedded couple and wish them happiness and prosperity in their wedded life.

Note—The bride, Miss Margaret Mitchell, was born in Waterdown, but went West with her parents about twenty years ago. John Mitchell, Waterdown, Dr. A. M. Mitchell Macoun, Sask., Ormond S. Mitchell, Weyburn are uncles and Mrs. Geo. Rohr an aunt of the bride.

BANK JOBS GO BEGGING.

Serious Shortage in Clerks Worrying the Managers.

Think of it, our once-exclusive banks are hanging out cards asking for clerks, just as factories do when they want help. Neat little placards in this connection are hung up near the tellers' cages. Hark to the contents of one of them:

"Employment on the staff of this bank offers an attractive future for young men. We are in a position to place a number of boys with High School education at our different branches throughout Canada.

"For particulars please refer to the manager."

Can't you imagine one of Canada's bygone general managers, pompous of mien, revisiting old haunts and nearly having an apoplectic fit at the sight of such a placard. Advertising for clerks! The very idea! Twenty years ago or more such an expedient would never have been dreamed of. Why, there was keen competition to get jobs in banks. In those distant days of Canada's hard times banks had waiting lists just like modern golf clubs, and picked and chose the young men who were to have the privilege of working for them. Applicants for positions approached a manager in humility and awe.

Not only good appearance, but social pull was necessary for admittance to one of the larger institutions. A boy's ancestry loomed larger with some general managers than did his penmanship. A bank job was the goal of most youths whose parents could not afford them a profession. For the post was a sure thing—banks never actually firing their clerks—and promotion, though slow, was regular up to a point, at least. Moreover—alas! that appeal to snobbishness—a bank clerk was some pumpkins socially in the city, and in the country towns he was absolutely IT. But that was twenty years ago.

Junior clerks started their career of finance in those days with as little as $150 a year. To-day bank juniors are hard to get at $600 and $700 a year. And they have adding machines to do the dirty work. Twenty years ago—yes, less than fifteen years ago—branch managers with long service, several clerks under them and heavy responsibility, frequently received per annum no more than street car conductors and motormen are receiving as insufficient to-day. Ask any senior bank man.

About fifteen years ago the native supply of bank clerks began to peter out in Canada. Better times had come with the opening up of the West, and opportunities offered in the professions and other occupations for young Canadians. The demand, for clerks rose simultaneously with the shortage, as new branches were springing up on the prairie overnight, like mushrooms. One or two large banks began importing clerks from Scotland, which has since furnished Canada with hundreds of hard-head bankers.

The outbreak of war made the situation more stringent. Girls, whom banks had mostly employed as stenographers or at work which did not bring them into contact with the public, presently appeared at tasks hitherto considered unsuitable for feminine endurance. To-day they run the big deposit ledgers and in some country offices even that nerve-racking post, the cash, where she might have to use the loaded revolver lying ready at her side to defend the money from robbers. Some girls receive $1,200 and $1,500 a year in banks.

One Canadian bank has opened no less than 200 new branches within the past two years. Two or three of the larger institutions have from 400 to 500 branches each. All of which illustrates the growth of Canadian banking and the opportunities it offers.

Body Heat.

The immediate nearness of a large and robust person at the theatre or in a street car on a hot summer day may be a cause of discomfort by reason of the amount of heat given off by his or her body.

Such radiation from the human body is so considerable that, as proved by recent experiments, the presence of a man can be detected in the dark, with the help of suitable apparatus, at a distance of 600 feet.

Apparatus of the kind—consisting of a concave mirror to focus the heat rays, a "thermopile" and a galvanometer—proved very useful during the war. If a man crossed the range of the instrument the latter instantly perceived the fact. Even the lifting of a head out of a hole in the ground was registered.

Taken From His Sock.

A humorous story comes from the country districts where an automobile salesman had one of the biggest surprises of his life when an Italian farmer, who had ordered a car, made an old-fashioned specie payment and all in silver coin. The salesman was asked to "wait a minute" for his money. After an hour and a half he was summoned to the back yard, where the farmer had laid out the price of the car on two tables. The coins were all quarters, halves and dollars, piled $10 in a stack. When the salesman undertook to check up he quickly understood why he had been left sitting on the front doorstep so long. It took him another hour and a half to make sure that he hadn't been overpaid.

Re-visiting No Man's Land.
Many a Canadian who fought in the war is wondering what the front looks like now, a year and more after the last shot was fired.

A newspaper writer, who was recently over the ground, states that one actually sees much less change than would be expected. It is so easy to destroy, so difficult to restore.

From the Ypres-Bailleul road, from Hell Fire Corner, from the La Basse-Lens road, from the Arras-Douai road, and from many other such points, one might almost imagine that the armies had withdrawn but yesterday from their lines.

Everything easily lifted has been picked up and carried away by the seekers of souvenirs, but the change that most impresses the soldier is the silence, the now vacant highways once crowded with war traffic. The noise of war is gone, and the color of khaki is seldom seen. You look out over regions that seem to be forever reduced to silence and sterility.

The restoration of France and Belgium is going to be a long job. Those know best how complete the destruction was who were present and saw it done.
