Perry Davis' Vegetable Pain Killer,
As an internal remedy, has no equal. In cases of Cholera, Summer Complaint, Dyspepsia, Dysentery, Asthma, it cures in one night, by taking it internally, and bathing with it freely. It is the best liniment in America. Its action is like magnet, when externally applied to head aches, neuralgic, and sprains. For the sick headache and toothache, don't fail to try it. In short, it is a Pain Killer.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.
It is understood in semi-official circles that the criminal Surratt will be offered his pardon on condition that he will testify as a faithful witness against all the parties with whom he had communication, either directly or indirectly, with the atrocious plot.

ROME, Dec. 11.—The man who gave information which led to the arrest of Surratt, is a French Canadian named St. Marie, who was formerly a tutor. Sold out and afterwards served in the Papal Zouaves. Both he and Surratt were in love with the same lady in Washington, and St. Marie betrayed Surratt through jealousy. He says Surratt told him that Mr. Lincoln's assassination was a preconcerted plot, that he, Surratt, carried from Jeff. Davis' Cabinet, at Richmond, the principal details of the plot to Washington, and that the assassination was not only in accordance with Jeff. Davis' Cabinet, but done by their directions and orders.

ROME, Dec. 11.—This morning the French troops evacuated the Castle of St. Angelo. The French flag was run down, and the Pontifical colors hoisted. The 29th Regiment left for France.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Saxon officers refuse to serve under Prussia, and have resigned.

LOXWOOD, Dec. 11, evening.—A quantity of arms, intended for the use of the Fenians, and all the fittings of a gunshop, were seized to-day at Cardiff, while on their way to Ireland. The steamer "Bellevue" has been seized in the Medway, on suspicion of being a Fenian cruiser. A large quantity of arms and ammunition, and 30 tons of gunpowder, were found on board the steamer.

PARIS, Dec. 11, noon.—The evacuation of Rome, which has been in progress for several days past, will be virtually completed to-day.

LOXWOOD, Dec. 10, evening.—Many delegates from the British North American Provinces, leaving in view the final settlement of the Confederation Scheme, have arrived at the residence of the Hon. Mr. Lincoln.

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—It was supposed that the transports to bring home the French troops from Mexico, would sail from Brest, but they are now getting ready in this harbor. There is great activity here.

CHILDREN

TEETHING.

MRS. WINSLOW,

An experienced Nurse and Female Physician, presents to the attention of mothers, her

Soothing Syrup,

For Children Teething.

which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—it will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourself, and RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS.

We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years, and can say with confidence and truth of it, which we have never been able to say of any other medicine—never has it failed, in a single instance, to effect a cure, when timely used, in the matter "what we do know" after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most experienced and skillful nurses in New England, and it has not only relieved the child from pain but invigorated the stomach and bowels, corrected acidity, and given tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the best and safest remedy in the world, in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhoea in children, when the bowels are either too loose or too tight, or when they are affected with worms, or when the child is suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between you and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the face-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

GRACE WELDON.
FREDERICA, THE BONNET-GIRL.
CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

It is not an ignorant man, like this fellow, you have for an enemy here, James. Your foe is an educated and accomplished person, or he could not have written either the note or the draft, as you observe; but more than this, he is a man of business; he is acquainted with banking affairs; he knows my own banking concerns, and is familiar, wonderfully so, with all our banking operations. It is evident that the principal is neither the negro, the lad, nor the female. They are, as she confesses, but tools. The man remains behind the curtain, and puts them forward. You, she said, was this person; but I am satisfied it is another, and she who wrote this false letter is as bad as he.

'This letter, I am satisfied, sir, said James, after having for a few moments been carefully reading it over, "this letter, I am more and more convinced, was not written by a female!"

'That idea never struck me. What leads you to suspect this? It seems to me quite likely that it may be as you say.'

'The business terms she uses, no female would employ. The letter could have been written only by a person acquainted with business far beyond what a woman would be supposed to know. Her language about "checking," "over-checking," "depositing," and the general mercantile air of the whole, lead me to suspect that the person who forged the check and also my handwriting, forged this female signature.'

'You are right, you must be right in your conjectures, James. This note was written by a man, and one familiar with the mode of doing business among merchants. In a word, I think it was written by a merchant.'

'By a merchant?' repeated James, with surprise.

'Yes. There are merchants who are destitute of principle as well as other men. Who have you offended?'

'No one, sir.'

'No merchant's clerk?'

'No—may—I had forgotten—but it is impossible to think of him.'

'We have got to think of somebody, and when we discover the somebody, we shall no doubt be both confounded. We must, therefore, not think it an impossible thing to think of any person on whom our thoughts happen to light. Who is on your mind, James? It is necessary we should probe this matter to the quick. Nothing must be kept behind; for the least thing may serve to throw light upon the path.'

'I was thinking of Carlton Ellery, sir; but I hesitated to speak out my thoughts, lest, for one reason, it might seem to appear that I suspected him because I had been his rival.'

'Have you reason to think young Ellery is your enemy?'

'His looks are not very friendly when we meet and pass in the street; but he has never spoken to me in any hostile manner.'

'Yet you believe him your enemy?'

'To tell you the truth, sir, I have had an instinctive suspicion that he would do me an evil turn if it was in his power. This has been my feeling. It is only a feeling; for as I have said, we have never quarrelled.'

'Mr. Weldon remained a few moments in an attitude of profound thought. James sat with his eyes fixed upon the face of his benefactor with solicitude and attention to the result of his reflections. His face was calm, but pale; his manner dignified, yet depressed. He felt severely, as became a sensitive and honorable mind, the painful position in which he had been so suddenly and mysteriously placed; and although he was convinced, that in the mind of Mr. Weldon there remained not the least suspicion against himself, yet he desired most earnestly to be able to prove him, by proof of his innocence. He could not rest satisfied with the generous acquittal of his benefactor's heart and head, but he wished to prove clearly to him that he had not acquitted without grounds. The fear lest his enemies should keep themselves so concealed that he should be unable to afford this proof, caused him the deepest anguish of spirit. But trusting in his innocence, and the overruling justice of Providence, he tried to hope against despair.'

'What do you know, James, of Ellery's character? Has he not the reputation of being wild?'

'As all will depend on an open scrutiny of the characters that are suggested to me, I will not hesitate to say freely what I know of him. He has the reputation of being dissipated. He attends the theatres frequently. He gives suppers and plays heavily, I am told. But this I have only heard of him recently. He is a young man whose morals are not the most pure.'

'That is my vague suspicion of the young man. Do you know anything against his principles? Have you ever heard any unspoken of, of his, unworthy a gentleman?'

'No, sir; I have only heard his general habits commented upon in the counting-room, by Mr. Finney as freely as any one; and he knows him, I believe, somewhat intimately.'

'Mr. Weldon rose from his chair, placed his hands crossed behind him, and with his head drooped upon his breast, slowly walked the room. James saw that he was deeply meditating the perplexing matter in his mind. He also gave up his thoughts to the train of ideas which Ellery's name had suggested, and suspicious of him tormented himself slowly but most impressively upon him. Suddenly Mr. Weldon stood still before him.

'James, he said, in a low but stern tone, "I suspect this young man! You have no other enemies capable of education and circumstances of perpetrating this enormous and singularly skillful fraud upon him. He is in a mercantile house, too, and hence the knowledge of mercantile affairs manifested in the note as well as in the transaction throughout. He is often in the habit of coming here! He has, therefore, opportunities of getting specimens of your writing, and of getting a knowledge of our banking affairs. You say that Mr. Finney is intimate with him. Through Mr. Finney, by subtle questioning, he may have learned much, for I do not suspect Mr. Finney at all.'

'No do I, sir, answered James, warmly. "But every word you say strengthens my belief that the enemy who seeks my ruin is Mr. Ellery!"

'There is no question of it. It is some one who has had access to our blank check file, and has acquainted the checks I have drawn, perhaps perusing the blank checks, and taken away one of the paid checks from the bank; for I have seen him once or twice in the Director's room with his uncle, Colonel Dune, who is a Director, and whose fortune he will inherit, that is, if he be successful here! He may have obtained one of my dead check within the bank, to serve him as a copy. If it be Ellery, he has been placed under favorable circumstances for accomplishing his various ends; and has shown no little industry, skill, and perseverance.'

'We had one hundred blank checks placed on the wire for use; there are five missing from the wire for the number that has been filled out! His own agency, whoever he be, has probably taken away.'

'Mr. Finney called the merchant, in an elevated tone.

'Sir, answered the book-keeper, opening the door, and partly thrusting in his head, ornamented with a pen stuck over the right ear.

'Come in and what the door, if you please.'

'Mr. Finney did as he was directed to do, and stared at the grave faces of the two gentlemen.

'Mr. Finney, do persons who visit the counting-room during my absence or that of Mr. Daily, ever enter here?'

'Oh, no, sir! No one ever comes here unless you are in! I tell every body that in your section, and no one goes in without very special business! Oh, no, sir!'

'None of your friends?'

'Not one, sir.'

'I didn't know but that perhaps, Mr. Ellery or—'

'Never, sir! Ellery is the last man I would let in here, he is so prying and curious!'

'He is?'

'Yes, sir. He puts twenty questions in five minutes, and seems half the time to have nothing to do but to talk chit-chat in counting-rooms! But that's not to his credit, and he makes him quite indifferent about business. I have known him 'Then he has not been in here?'

'Of that I am most positive, sir! For I remember two or three weeks ago he was in, and was passing into the sanctum in a lounging way, but I shut the door, and he turned away.'

'Did he make any remark?'

'He laughed, sir, and said he wasn't going to steal your bank-book, sir. An odd idea, very solemnly observed the methodical and starched Finney. He laughed and said then he would peep in, and so, as the cross sash was down, he leaned over and looked in here, admiring the neat appearance of every thing, for he said it was the handsomest private counting-room in the city!'

'It is that way he could have reached in and abstracted the blank checks from the file, said James, in an under tone.

'Did he make any remark?'

'Yes. I am satisfied I now know the man! Mr. Finney you may retire.'

CHAPTER XXI.
THE DEED.

THAT Carlton Ellery was the secret enemy who had devised and executed the scheme to ruin James, which had so nearly proved successful, neither Mr. Weldon nor himself had now any doubt. They, therefore, resolved to take such steps as should fasten upon him the guilt.

'It is necessary to proceed with the greatest caution,' said Mr. Weldon, after Finney had closed the door between the two counting-rooms. 'From the skill with which this wicked affair has been managed by Ellery, it will prove a difficult task to bring home the crime upon him. To succeed, we must be as skilful, cautious, and secret as he has been.'

'I see the difficulties in the way, as we have no positive evidence,' answered James. 'I am at a loss how to proceed, unless I wait upon him, and openly charge him with the crime.'

'This would bring out denial, and perhaps make impossible for you to convict him afterwards.'

'We must act with subtlety. Perhaps we should Mr. Weldon, looking fixedly at James, and speaking with slight hesitation, "perhaps it would be policy for me to act as if I believed you to be guilty! Nay, do not start so, with surprise and doubt on your countenance. My surmise is that you, or a day or two, remain away from the counting-room, as if I had discharged you. This will draw Ellery's notice, for he will be now on the watch for the fruits of my knowledge of the forgeries. It is not improbable that he may place himself in the way as we go to dinner, to watch our faces, to see if he can detect any signs of guilt. If we should be seen walking together, and conversing as heretofore, he would at once see that you had succeeded in clearing yourself; and this would either lead him to try some other means to ruin you, or else, fearing suspicion might fall upon the true man, remove himself beyond the reach of the punishment due to his crimes. You see I speak very positively as to his guilt, of which, the more I reflect upon his character and conduct, I have not the least doubt.'

'What think you, James, of bearing the imputation of my displeasure for a few days, until something can be discovered?'

'I approve of your suggestion, sir. It will no doubt lead Ellery, or whoever may be my enemy, to believe that I have been privately dismissed by you, you declining to prosecute.'

'This is what I wish him to believe.'

'But, sir, may he not be told the fact, and may it not be generally believed, that I forged, and have been degraded by you?'

'No, he will not dare speak of it, for he will only betray thereby a knowledge of the facts, which would at once condemn him as guilty. If I should hear that Ellery had told any one that you had been dismissed from my employ because you had forged drafts on the bank, I would not hesitate to have him arrested on a spot, James, as the forger himself! The facts, you know, James, are only known to ourselves, to Mr. Morley, the cashier, and to the roof culprit. Now, if it is removed by any one that you have forged, it must be by this unknown fourth party, who, without question, is Ellery.'

'I see, sir. But Mr. Morley may be not—'

'Mr. Morley will, for his own credit's sake, keep silent. In paying drafts so largely overdrawn, he has done what the board would not justify; and, if known, would subject him to censure, if not to dismissal.'

'I am ready to acquiesce, in your suggestion, sir, answered James, after a moment's grave reflection. 'It seems a judicious, and perhaps the only course. But if Ellery attempts to accomplish his ruin, he will not keep silent when he finds I have left you. He will, by some means, give publicity to my apparent guilt, and then, in the estimation of the world, I am really guilty! My reputation will then be indeed gone!'

'I repeat, James, that he will not dare speak of it! I do not think he cares to destroy you, only as far as you may be prevented from being larger his rival in Grace's affections. I speak plainly, you see. His object is to ruin you in my estimation alone. He only wishes to defeat your object in the attainment of the hand of my daughter. Beyond this, I do not think he has a shadow of a purpose, his purpose will be satisfied. Therefore, when he sees that you have left me, and that all intercourse has ceased between us, he will feel that his aim is achieved; that he need fear you no longer as a rival!'

'That is my opinion, sir, answered James; but I feel a delicacy in putting my mind so plainly as you have done. At all events, sir, if I am unassisted, you, at least, will believe me innocent, he said with emotion.

'Yes; and the world shall too! If a breath is blown abroad against you, I will have Ellery arrested; for on his conviction will then hang your innocence! I have business now in State street, and will leave you. You can depart soon after. If you were anything, call and let me know at my house, after sunset, so that you may enter unobserved; or else write me a note. If I hear anything, I will let you know. Now, good morning, my friend, and bear up manfully; for the assurance that the person in whose eyes you were to be ruined believes you innocent, should, with the consciousness of innocence, render you cheerful, and give you that energy and hope which will be necessary.'

ALL CURES MADE EASY!
BY HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Bad Breasts, and Old Wounds.

No description of wound, sore, or ulcer can resist the healing properties of this excellent Ointment. The worst case readily assumes a healthy appearance whenever this medicinal ointment is applied; sound flesh springs up from the bottom of the wound; inflammation of the surrounding skin is sooted and a complete and permanent cure quickly follows the use of the ointment.

Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammation
These distressing and weakening diseases may with certainty be cured by the sufferers themselves, if they will use Holloway's Ointment, and closely attend to the printed instructions. It should be well rubbed upon the neighboring parts, when all obnoxious matter will be brought to the surface, and water may sometimes be applied at bed time with advantage; the most scrupulous cleanliness must be observed. If those who read this paragraph will bring it under the notice of such of their acquaintances whom it may concern, they will render a service that will never be forgotten, as a cure is certain.

Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia.
Nothing has the power of reducing inflammation and subduing pain in these complaints in the same degree as Holloway's cooling Ointment and purifying Pills. When used continuously they drive all inflammation and depravation from the system, and remove all enlargement of the glands, and leave the sinews and muscles lax and uncontracted. A cure may always be effected, even under the worst circumstances, if the use of these medicines be persevered in.

Eruptions, Scald Head, Ringworm, and other Skin Diseases.
After formation with warm water, the utmost relief and speediest cure can be readily obtained in all complaints affecting the skin and joints, and the simultaneous use of the Ointment and Pills. But it must be remembered that nearly all skin diseases indicate the depravity of the blood and derangement of the liver and stomach, consequently, in many cases, a purgative is required to purify the blood, which will be effected by a judicious use of the PILLS. The general health will readily be improved, although the eruption may be driven out more freely than before, and which should be promoted; perseverance necessary.

Sore Throats, Diphtheria, Quinsy, Mumps, and all other Derangements of the Throat.
On the appearance of any of these maladies the Ointment should be well rubbed at least three times a day upon the neck and upper part of the chest, so as to penetrate to the glands, as salt is forced into meat; this course will at once remove inflammation and ulceration. The worst cases will yield to this treatment by following the printed directions.

Scrofula or King's Evil and Swelling of the Glands.
This class of cases may be cured by Holloway's purifying Pills and Ointment, as their double action of purifying the blood and strengthening the system renders them more effectual than any other remedy for all complaints of a scrofulous nature. As the blood is impure, liver, stomach and bowels being much deranged, requiring purifying medicine to bring about a cure.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases—
Bad Legs, Chilblains, Furuas, Skin-diseases
Bad Breasts, Chilblains, Gout, Bone-aches
Burns, Chapped Hands, Glandular, Sore-throats
Bunions, Corns (Soft), Swellings, Scoury
Bites of Mosquitoes, Lumbago, Sore-heads
Cholera and Contractions, Piles, Tumors
Scald-head, Rheumatism, Rheumatism, Ulcers
Coco-bay, Elephantiasis, Scalds, Yaws, Wounds

Sold at the Establishment of FROSTEN'S HOLLOWAY, 254 Strand, (near Temple Bar,) London; and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the civilized world, at the following prices—1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s., 6s., 11s., 15s., and 20s. each Box.
