CHAPTER XVIII.

By and by, when we were back in the drawing-room, settled down to make the best of the evening that we could without Nat, she was taken with a fit of shivering—a fit so violent and so completely beyond control that madame, sitting reading on the other side of the fire, put down her book and looked up surprised.

"Dear me, what is it? Are you ill, mademoiselle?"

Mademoiselle did not answer; it was more than she could do to still her chattering teeth.

"Whatever can it be?" cried my mother, rising and approaching her. "It is like a fit! Ned, bring a glass of wine!"

I brought one, and mademoiselle, managing to steady her hand sufficiently to hold the glass, drank the wine. It had some effect, for in a minute or two the paroxysm passed; but she still looked ghastly pale and her hands were icy cold.

"Whatever can it be?" said my mother, anxiously.

"It is nothing—it will pass," mademoiselle murmured, faintly.

"My dear, nonsense! I am afraid you have taken a chill. And yet you have not been out to-day."

"I expect it was when you were out in the park before dinner, mademoiselle," I struck in. "I don't wonder you have taken a chill with nothing over your shoulders. It is very cold."

I suppose my speech was an unlucky one, for the governess shot me a wrathful look from her dark eyes as she replied to madame's surprised query, giving her the same explanation as she had given me. Her head ached, Mlle. Natalie's fall had alarmed her; she had gone out for air. Sleep would be best for her. Would madame permit her to retire?

"Poor thing! She seems to be quite ill," madame observed, commiseratingly, when we were alone.

"Yes. It must be through going out there in such a mad way. Fancy her neck and arms for such a night as this!"

"Very foolish!" assented my mother. "But she has not been herself lately, I fancy—since that fainting fit of hers, you remember."

I remembered well enough. "I almost think she is troubled in some way," pursued my mother.

"Troubled!" I echoed. "Why do you think so?"

"Partly because she has been dull and out of spirits, and partly because of something which occurred just before dinner. She asked me to advance her the quarter's salary, which will not of course be due until the end of the year; she intimated that the money was wanted for some relative. She had letters this morning, and I fancy it may be some family trouble which is weighing upon her mind," continued madame.

"Did you let her have the money, mother?"

"Oh, yes, of course! It made no difference to me. I wish, if there is any trouble, that I could assist her; but she is always so determinedly reticent about her affairs."

"The household went to bed early that night. The great drawing-room seemed a very wilderness without Nat's little figure and merry chatter. I was awfully sleepy too, when I laid my head upon the pillow, and fell asleep almost immediately, thinking that I should not wake until morning. But I did. Without any dream or any noise that I knew of, I awoke suddenly, and sat up, wondering what would have aroused me in such a fashion—for I usually slept soundly.

As most people would have done, I strained my ears for any sound or movement in the house. But there was none. In the deep hush I heard the slow solemn tick of the great clock on the staircase, and even the rapid beat of my watch on the table beside me—nothing more. Stay—surely that was a sound—a sound like the cautious closing of a door; and then the staircase creaked under a stealthy footstep, followed by the cautious sweep of some trailing garment along the corridor!

Was Nat ill? I wondered, straining my ears more than ever. No; the steps did not stop at her door; but stole softly on. There was a subdued creaking of the stairs again, and then on the upper floor a door was closed and locked quietly.

And I lay down again, knowing that the stealthy creature who crept so softly and secretly about Chavasse in the dead hour of the winter night was Lucille Valdini.

CHAPTER XIX.

Although very much against the little lady's wish—for I heard her protesting energetically—madame in her anxiety, insisted that Nat should not come down to breakfast. Her only son though I was, I believe that I might have been pitched over the head of Gray Donald half a dozen times without exciting half such a commotion in the bosom of Madame of the Mount as Nat's mishap had done. Indeed I had an impression that I was looked upon rather as a scapegrace on the present occasion. Clearly the general idea was that I should have come to grief if anybody did.

I did not go into the village, a message having arrived during breakfast to the effect that the Reverend Titus had caught another cold, which was likely to keep him to gruel and mustard-plasters for the next week; and the morning was too windy, snowy, and cold to tempt me out without necessity. Madame with her factotum the governess, disappeared in the direction of old Batterbin's domain, and I betook myself to the library, stretched myself before the blazing fire with a book, and settled down to read away the morning in default of having nothing better to do.

It may have been owing to the book or in consequence of the fire, but the plain fact is that I went to sleep—for how long I do not know, but I was awakened by a pretty smart tug at my hair, and raised my scorched face from the fender-stool to meet Nat's black eyes, twinkling with mischief.

"Oh, you lazy rascal!" she cried. "Eh?" I returned vaguely, my faculties a little confused still, either by my nap or its rather violent termination. "Was I asleep?"

"Oh, dear, no—only thinking with your eyes shut! You goose—of course you were!"

"I'm sure I didn't know it. It was that roasting fire, I suppose," I said, scrambling up and pulling forward a chair for her. "Sit down now, or madame is sure to be at you. How do you feel after your spill? You don't look any the worse."

"And I don't feel so," she replied, sinking down into the chair and stretching out her hands to the blaze. "I haven't even the leese bit of a headache, and yet madame would insist upon my keeping upstairs. Wasn't it ridiculous?"

"What would have happened if you had been really hurt, I wonder?"

"Goodness knows!" she exclaimed, laughing. "There has been such a fuss! There were madame and Mrs. Batterbin and Virtue and Valla holding a kind of consultation round me, each suggesting a different remedy to bring me round, when all in the world that I wanted was my breakfast. They would let me have only a little tea and toast, and I'm as hungry as ever I can be," she concluded, dismally. "I shall have to make a raid on the pantry presently."

"You'll be caught if you do," I said, laughing. "The mother and mademoiselle betook themselves kitchenward directly after breakfast. By the way, didn't she come to tender her sympathy?"

"What!" asked Nat—"mademoiselle? Oh, I don't think mademoiselle's sympathies are particularly active"—this with a queer little curl of her lip, accompanied by an equally queer little elevation of her dark brows. "Certainly they are not so for me."

"Eh?" I said, looking up at her, for I was still lounging on the hearth, with my elbow on the hassock. "How's that?"

"Why, because she doesn't like me, of course!"

"Doesn't like you?" I echoed blankly.

"You silly boy, of course not!" returned Nat loftily. "Where are your eyes?"

"Wherever they are, they haven't seen that. What makes you think it?"

"I don't think it—I know it!"

"Bad taste!" I said, laughing. "But why should she dislike you?"

"Well," said Nat, clasping her hands at the back of her curly head as she looked at me demurely, "there can't very well be two mistresses to folmdane, can there?"

"Oh, I see!"—and I laughed again partly at the notion, and partly at the comical little grimace which was contorting her pretty face. "I rather thought she had dropped the game lately."

"Why should she?"

"Might she be no good," I suggested. "And it isn't you know."

"I wish it were!" she cried, pettishly. "Fraser Froude is horrid, but she is quite nice enough for mademoiselle; and, if he married her, you see, Ned, he couldn't possibly tease me."

"You should send him about his business then."

"I wish I could. I snub him and contradict him whenever he says anything. What else can I do?"

I laughed at this literal truth, no other reply seeming necessary, and Nat, with a pout and a shrug, sunk back in her chair, and turning her eyes upon the fire, became mute and motionless.

I guessed pretty well about whom her thoughts were busy, as I glanced up at the little dark musing face, with a wonderful smile curving the red lips. I wished Yorke could have seen her just then, and wondered vaguely whether one of these days any woman would love me as Natalie Orme certainly loved him. Then my thoughts wandered away to madame, and I wondered what she would say to it all. It could not be long before the news reached her now, for Roger would soon be here and certainly he would speak out directly he got Nat's permission to do so; and I did not think she was the girl to withhold it, for decidedly she did not stand much in awe of madame. And I made up my mind that I'd do all I could to help my friend's cause. Then I wished unceasingly that I possessed Roger's full confidence as thoroughly as he possessed mine. What was the story which he had refused to tell me in which Lucille Valdini was mixed up? Would he tell Nat when she became his promised wife? Of course it might be a mere trifle, as he had declared it was, so far as he was concerned; but the mere fact of his sharing anything like a secret with that woman bothered me. Then I remembered her odd conduct on the day before, and how I had heard her stealthy footstep creep past my door in the night. What had taken her out of her bed in the bitter cold of the December night? Had there been a second interview in the Lady's Walk between the French governess, and my friend, the man whom Natalie Orme loved? Surely if—

What was that? A sudden blow on my shoulder, as Natalie brought her small buckled shoes off the fender and sat bolt upright, effectually dispersed my uncomfortable reflection.

A step was approaching the library door—a step too heavy for a woman's, and yet too light for a man's. We both knew it, and Nat looked at me with elevated eyebrows and a pursed-up mouth of dismay as I scrambled to my feet and old Styles appeared at the door, ushering in Fraser Froude.

AT LAST, HE IS FREE OF LUMBAGO

Because He Took GIN PILLS

Winnipeg, Jan. 6th.

"I have been a sufferer from Lumbago for some years past and during Christmas week had a very acute attack which confined me to the house. About the latter part of April, I met your Mr. Hill and mentioned my complaint to him. He advised me to take GIN PILLS. I have been taking them at intervals during the early part of the present winter, and up to date have had no return of my old trouble—in fact, I feel better than I have for years and think that my old enemy has vanished for good and all."

Cowardice.

BY H. L. RANN.

Cowardice is a disease of the backbone which attacks people who leave home without carrying an emergency tank full of red-corporated courage. It is harder to cure than the mill-dried Vermont asthma, and scatters the nervous forces so widely apart that he is perfectly willing his wife should go ahead and see who is trying to break into the cellar.

When cowardice once gets into the system, it is harder to eradicate than the footprints of a huckleberry pie from the bosom of a new tablecloth. A person can never tell when he is going to have an attack of cowardice. Some men go through life with a red mustache and a fire-eating reputation, and then shatter the confidence of a bold, bristling wife by crawling under the bed when something falls off the kitchen range and makes a noise like opening the back door with a crowbar.

There are two kinds of cowardice—moral and physical. Moral cowardice is the kind which prevents a man from quitting without entering into a joint debate, when he decides that he has had a genteel sufficiency. The moral coward always wants to carry on a long-winded argument and then taper off on five cigars a day. Whenever his heart rears up and beats a tattoo on the bed clothes he swears off with deep emotion, but the next morning he lays it to indigestion and scours around the alley until he finds his pipe.

Physical cowardice is a form of shuffling palsy which is accompanied by a new-born love of peace and a willingness to arbitrate. It is frequently found in large quantities in ferocious, booze-fighting citizens who have never beaten up anybody but their wives. It is an interesting sight to see one of the fourteen-carat paste heroes shriveled up in the midst of a gory recital by some short-legged bantam with sand oozing out of his vest pockets. The physical coward has the respect of everybody until he begins to bluster about his list of dead and wounded.

One Dose Relieves a Cold--No Quinine

Pape's Cold Compound cures colds and grippe in a few hours.

You can surely end Grippe and break up the most severe cold either in head, chest, back, stomach or limbs, by taking a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

It promptly relieves the most insupportable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, running of the nose, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this wonderful Compound as directed, without interference with your usual duties and with the knowledge that there is nothing else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist can supply—except no substitute—contains no quinine—belongs in every home. Tastes nice.

OUR KIND RELATIVES.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Why is it, I wonder, that the average relative regards it as one of his—or more likely her—unavoidable duties to frankly criticize everything about her closest relatives.

If you show a new gown or hat to a friend, she will pick out all the best points about it, all the allures that induced you to buy it, and warm the corners of your heart by commenting upon them.

"Isn't it a wonderful color," she will say, "and what cunning buttons! Try it on and let me see how it looks on you. What a pretty skirt, and so becoming to you. Makes you look so slender. Yes, it certainly is a bargain."

Show the same gown to your relative, and though she may see the good points, she certainly gives no sign of having done so. Of the contrast she kindly points out any disadvantages which she fears may have caused your eye. "The waist is a little too small across the back, isn't it, and the sleeves are too short. Queer how they almost always make the sleeves too short. It is a lovely color, isn't it, but so trying. Too had so few people can wear it. That lace is nice, but then, they always put cheap lace in costly-made things. That's one of the reasons why I like to have my things made up. Of course you can't do it out and put in something better."

The closer the relationship, the closer is the degree of frankness of course. By the way, have you ever happened to notice how the word "frank" like the word "criticize," has been given an unpleasant meaning by usage. "Criticize" originally meant "to pass judgment on the merits or demerits of." Evidently the judgment was usually unfavourable, for criticism is now generally used in the sense of "pick flaws." The first meaning given for "frank" is "free in uttering one's real opinion." For a that, the opinion might be the most favourable in the world. But somehow, when anyone says, "I am going to be frank with you," we don't usually anticipate praise,—nor get it, either.

To return to the original subject,—the other day I showed a new gown to a very close relative, and she delivered a monologue somewhat like the above upon it. One or two things she did praise, but for the most part she picked out flaws. "Well," I sighed to myself, as I laid it away in its tissue paper bed of state, "I am sorry she doesn't like it, for she has good taste."

What was my astonishment to hear later from a mutual friend that she, my critical relative, had been praising my gown to others as one of the loveliest she had seen. She had even compared it favourably to a Parisian creation of one of her wealthy friends, which she had been praising to me. And yet, from her comments I had actually thought she didn't like it.

Is unfavourable criticism really a duty we owe our relatives?

Must we keep all our pleasant words for our friends?

Ruth Cameron

Every growing child should rest one hour each day. If this rule is followed, they are not apt to take colds or any infectious disease.

If eggs are cracked and you wish to boil them, put a teaspoonful of vinegar in the water, and they will not boil out of the shell.

PERSISTENT COUGH.

Blacking & Mercantile Co., Ltd., Amherst, N.S.
Dear Sirs,—We have nothing but good to say of Mathieu's Syrup and can conscientiously describe it as the most popular and successful Cough Medicine we handle. Owing to the absence of any drug store in this vicinity there is a great variety of proprietary medicine sold in the course of the year, and Mathieu's Syrup pre-eminently leads in its own class. Yours sincerely,
D. MARTIN.

Help For the Hands.

An Article for Every Woman Who Studies Her Appearance.

Hands can be red, rough, coarse, clammy, and half a dozen other things—or not! This article tells you how to reach that desirable "not" by prevention or cure.

Red Hands are due to bad circulation. Free yourself if "pinched," and do some simple exercises to send the blood spinning round your body.

Whiten the Hands. Here are two recipes: (1) Add a few grains of fresh chloride of lime to warm, soft water, and wash in this. This bleaches the skin. Afterwards well rub in cold cream—a recipe follows for this—an "exercise." (2) A nicer lotion, but slower in action, is: Powdered borax, 3 drachms; glycerine, ¼ ounce; rose-water, 12 ounces; and the juice of a lemon.

A SOFT WATER RECIPE.

Rough Hands, caused by housework, which also, of course, reddens them, should be dealt with as follows: Remove stains with lemon-juice first; then to hot soapsuds add a handful of fine, white sand. Wash the hands in this for some minutes, then rinse well, dry, and powder with fine starch. Finish by rubbing them with cold cream.

Or, apply at night glycerine and lemon, mixed equally, and in the morning lemon-juice only. Use no water until the morning wax is done, and then only warm, soft water.

The simplest method of "making" soft water, apart from the well-known oatmeal way, is to boil ordinary water, and stand it out of doors for a couple of hours. Or add a little borax.

Hard Hands can be softened, but they need continual care. Here is an excellent softening recipe, which it may interest you to make at home: ¼ pound best mutton fat, ½ ounce camphor and glycerine. Melt together, and stir well till cool. Rub this on at night, and wear gloves.

WHEN HANDS ARE HOT.

A most excellent glove mixture is as follows. It softens, whitens, and prevents chapping. White wax, 2 ounces; oil of sweet almonds, 4 ounces; otto of roses, 6 drops, and the juice of a lemon. Mix the wax and almonds in a paste, then add the lemon juice, and then, slowly, the otto. Spread this over the lining of the gloves.

Chapped Hands arise from too frequent use of water and too little drying. There are several good cures, and this is one of the best: Sweet oil, ½ pint; Venice turp, 1½ ounces; best lard, ¼ pound; beeswax, 1 ounce. Mix over a slow fire till all melted. Rub on when cold, or spread very thinly on linen rag.

Hot, clammy hands, unless very bad, can be prevented by placing a teaspoonful of alum in the washing water, then dust the hands, after washing, with rice-powder.

This is the recipe for home-made cold cream: Peruaceti, 1 ounce; pure white wax, ½ ounce; almond oil, ¼ pint. Melt slowly, and add otto of roses, 6 drops (or other scent), and glycerine, 1 ounce. Keep stirring till nearly cold, when it is ready for use.

The publisher of the Best Farmer's in the Maritime Provinces is writing to us states:

"I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT. It has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

Ever Been Had?

It was in a City restaurant. A gentleman called for his check, but when it was presented to him, he found that he had been overcharged one shilling.

"How is this?" he demanded, and gave the pretty waitress a sharp glance.

But the lady was glib, and retorted: "Well, you see, sir, it was this way—the cashier bet me sixpence you wouldn't spot it."

"Ah! Is that so?" The gentleman's voice was most ungraciously sceptical, but he got into his overcoat in leisurely fashion, and then sat down again, and wrote something with a lead pencil on the back of the check. This he folded, and handed to the pretty waitress, saying: "There, my dear, just run along, and show that to the cashier. I am sure he will be interested."

The girl did as she was told, but to their mutual horror these are the words that sly cashier and waitress read on the back of the doubled check:

"I bet you both a sovereign I won't be here when you come back!"

When frying eggs try adding a spoonful of flour to the fat; it will prevent them from breaking or sticking to the pan.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, Etc.

One Dose Makes Indigestion Go.

Hearthburn, Gas, Dyspepsia and all Stomach distress ended with "Pape's Diapepsin."

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—by an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you must injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief. It's harmless; it's certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. It's millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness, and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin come in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorder is a revelation to those who try it.

Mothers Lore.

Beliefs About Baby's Birth and Baptism.

"Monday's child is fair of face, Tuesday's child is full of grace, Wednesday's child is full of woe, Thursday's child has far to go, Friday's child is loving and giving, Saturday's bairn works hard for his living; But the child that is born on the Sabbath day, Is merry as a birdie alway."

Up Life's Ladder.

Monday's child, for example, it was thought, would be "fair of face," because the tutelary deity of the day was the beautiful Diana, goddess of the moon.

Almost every mother very persistently insists on having her new-born babe carried upstairs before being carried down. And why? Because custom has ordained that if the little one be carried downstairs first, he will not rise afterwards in the world.

Again, very few old-fashioned nurses will allow a child to see its reflection in a mirror until it is at least twelve months old. Should she do so, well, superstition maintains that the child will become a thief.

There is a less common belief to the effect that, should the first tooth appear in the upper jaw, the child is likely to meet with an early death. But at one time even comparatively superstitious people regarded it as unlucky to weigh new-born babies, lest they should either die young or become very delicate.

In Norfolk, a belief prevails that if a boy and a girl are to be baptized at the same ceremony, the boy must be baptized first, otherwise the girl will grow a beard! Whilst in some parts of the Western Highlands it is still thought that the child will not live long unless the day chosen for the ceremony be a Saturday.

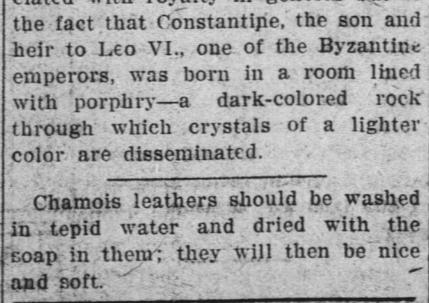

Everybody refers to the lucky child of wealthy parents as being born "with a silver spoon in his mouth." Probably, however, very few people know the real explanation of the phrase. Here it is:

In the Purple.

In olden times it was usual for the sponsors at the baptism to present the child with as many "angustle" spoons as they could afford. If they were well-to-do people naturally they gave the child the full number—twelve. If they were poor, however, they gave a smaller number, and perhaps spoons made of an inferior metal.

The phrase "born in the purple" owes its origin not to the fact that purple is the color commonly associated with royalty in general but to the fact that Constantine, the son and heir to Leo VI., one of the Byzantine emperors, was born in a room lined with porphyry—a dark-colored rock through which crystals of a lighter color are disseminated.

Chamois leathers should be washed in tepid water and dried with the soap in them; they will then be nice and soft.

Notes and Comments.

The Grabbers Must Go!
They are no good to the people. They are too much for themselves.

As we have repeatedly shown, the Morris Government has not made good on bait protection. Witness the protests of the Board of Trade. Witness the Corkum purchase of herring at St. Jacques, as reported by Inspector O'Reilly, two years ago. Witness the taking off of the Fiona from bait protection to give the late Governor, Sir Ralph Champeys Williams, a picnic.

Morris has not made good on his promise to find new markets in countries where our staple export does not find a sale at present. But on the contrary, the Board of Trade expresses the fear that owing to the illegal running of bait to St. Pierre, which is now stored there, the marketing of our bank fish next year will be jeopardized.

The people cannot allow Morris to finish his work. It is absolutely necessary to have at the head of the Government a financier like Sir Robert Bond. It is too risky to leave the country in charge of Morris.

For instance, look at his blundering in financing the branch railway building. He conveyed the impression to the country that his first railway loan, of roughly $4,000,000, would cover the entire cost of building these branch lines.

In introducing his branch railway resolutions in the House of Assembly Sir Edward Morris said: "Now, Mr. Chairman, the Committee is entitled to know what our railways are going to cost. . . . I have made an estimate and have had estimates made of the likely extent of these branches. Some differ from me and think my mileage too high. I do not think so. I think it will be two hundred and fifty miles for the five branches, and possibly a little more. But to be perfectly safe, I will put the estimate at two hundred and fifty miles. This at $15,000 a mile, will cost $3,900,000, or in round figures, $4,000,000, creating an annual interest charge at three and a half per cent. of $140,000 a year. In other words, when all these lines are built, the interest on the cost, which we shall have to pay will be $140,000."

From this it is patent Sir Edward Morris advanced three statements as facts: (1) that the estimate of 250 miles was a PERFECTLY SAFE estimate. In other words he wished the people to feel perfectly safe that it was not an underestimate; (2) that the cost would not be more than $15,000 a mile; (3) that the total burden would not exceed $4,000,000 entailing an annual charge of not more than $140,000.

Two years later the Government Engineer gave the mileage at 343, an increase of 83 miles. Sir Edward Morris ridiculed the idea that the cost of the railway could be estimated at $15,000 a mile, and made it clear that the cost could not be less than $18,000 to $19,000 a mile, and capped it all by borrowing an additional Two Million Dollars, and adding another $70,000 a year to the interest, and yet in face of this, the men are making good good out of the Government?

Floods at Badger

People Had to Quit Houses.
People who arrived here by Monday's express from Badger Brook say that last week the ice of Red Indian Lake was covered with water to the depth of several feet and the country all about Badger Brook became inundated. The waters entered the lower flats of the houses of the residents and flooded some of them so badly that they had to leave their dwellings and take their furniture, bedding and clothing on the highest ground to get away from the water. Others had already to quit their homes should the floods rise higher, and all suffered very much inconvenience and discomfort. Canoes were used for a while to get about but the water had greatly subsided by Saturday last.

Pays 10 Per Cent

The Standard Mfg. Co., held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon. The past year was prosperous. A dividend of ten per cent. was declared and a large amount was put to reserve. The same directors were appointed, namely: Hon. M. G. Winter, President; Hon. A. F. Goodridge, V.P.; T. Winter, Secretary; Hons. G. Knowling, R. K. Bishop, and Mr. D. Bald and Mr. R. C. Grace.

Here and There.

LOADING FISH.—The s.s. Westwood is now loading fish at Shea's premises for Mediterranean ports.

MR. H. D. REID COMING.—Mr. H. D. Reid, Vice-President of the Reid Nfld. Co., is expected to arrive here by the Invermore this evening.

BRINGING BACK MAILS.—Last week a deal of foreign mail matter went out by the express. Owing to the tie-up on the line these mails will be brought back to the city to-day and sent along by the Invermore, which ship is bringing here the mails which have accumulated at Sydney for Newfoundland.

The S. S. Almeriana, Capt. Fairclough, is now overdue and should put in an appearance any moment. She left Liverpool at first for here and after being over a week out on a tedious trip, her machinery got out of order and she put into Queens-town. After repairs were effected she left again for St. John's about 10 days ago, and must be having a rough passage.

SCHOONER'S QUICK RUN.—The schooner Little Pet, which loaded fish at Bald's premises early in January, has arrived at Oporto, after a splendid passage of sixteen days, word to this effect having been received yesterday. Considering the season of the year, this is an excellent performance. Although the smallest "windjammer" bringing fish to foreign ports from St. John's, the Little Pet is a fine sailer, and can hold her own in a stiff breeze with the best of them.

Our Effervescent Saline compares favourably in its medicinal effects with even the highest priced things of its class. For slight cases of indigestion, for biliousness, heart burn, and water brash it is an excellent thing, and in fevers makes a refreshing effervescent drink. A large bottle for 50c.

Marine Notes.

The s.s. City of Sydney is due here to-night.
The R. M. S. Sardinian left Philadelphia yesterday forenoon.
The s.s. Durango is now due from Halifax.
The s.s. Baleine is now unloading fish at Halifax.
The s.s. Florizel leaves New York on Friday for Halifax and this port. The barq. Attila, Capt. Morgan sails for Pernambuco on Saturday, fish laden by Baine Johnston & Co.

Personal.

Mr. E. Penny, of the Herald staff, has been ill for over a week and is suffering from pneumonia.
Mr. Nicholas Coady, the well known grocer of Duggan Street, is seriously ill of La Grippe which is now very prevalent in the city.

Here and There.

LARGELY ATTENDED.—The funeral of the late Samuel Bartlett who was drowned in the accident of Saturday evening took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 22 Monroe Street. The funeral was attended by a large number of people and interment was at the Church of England Cemetery.

EIGHT HUNDRED LOGGERS.—About Badger Brook and neighbourhood there are now over 800 men working in the lumbering camps. These are employed by the A. N. D. Co. and the Nfld. Pine and Pulp Co. The weather is just right now for the industry and an exceptionally good cut is expected. The men receive from $22 to $30 per month.

TAKEN TO GLENWOOD.—The body of the young man Rowell who was killed at Badger Brook a few days ago was brought into Glenwood by the express which arrived here Monday. The body was interred there. The man who was killed instantly when the log hit him was only 22 years old and was to have been married after Lent.

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.—His Majesty the King has been pleased to issue his Exequatur empowering Mr. M. Gooor (Ottawa), to act as Consul General of Belgium for the Dominion of Canada and for Newfoundland.

BORN.

On Feb. 3rd, a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Heber Crocker.

DIED.

On Jan. 22nd, at Brooklyn, N.Y., Charles, second son of Capt. George and the late Annie Coysh, aged 35 years; leaving a father and 4 brothers to mourn their sad loss.

'BON' RETURNING.—The s.s. Bonaventure is returning from the West Indies, where she brought a cargo of fish and is now at Sydney loading coal. She will leave there to-day for this port bringing a cargo of coal to supply Baine Johnston's sealing ships.

You can get Master Workman, Central Union, Sickle, Mayos Cut Plug and B.-L. Cut Plug Tobaccos at P. J. RAYNES, 112 New Gower Street. —Feb 5, 3i

CONCERT.—Last night at the Casino Theatre a concert was held by the Holy Name Society members. It was largely attended and those who took part acquitted themselves creditably. The programme consisted of selections, vocal and instrumental, and recitations, and some of our talented artists contributed songs.

BIBLE CLASS MEETING.—St. Thomas's Men's Bible Class held their regular monthly meeting at Canon Wood Hall last night, when Mr. C. E. Hunt gave an address on the Welsh Disestablishment Bill. During the course of his remarks he referred to the opinions of Premier Asquith and other parliamentarians. The speaker advanced reasons for not passing of the bill, and after denouncing it referred to C. of E. statistics to prove his argument. At the conclusion Mr. R. Dowden proposed a vote of thanks, which was seconded by Mr. E. Lawrence. Rev. E. Clayton also spoke on the bill. The meeting closed at 10.

Why the Men Don't Propose.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Why the men don't propose is a question that was very much discussed a few years ago, but since seems not to have worried the fair sex, but no doubt has.

The increasing number of eligible ladies whose matrimonial prospects are slim, is alarming, not only to their parents but to themselves, and it's my intention to submit in this article what I know to be the principal reasons for such a state of affairs, so that the more reasonable girls may get a chance which shall not come in the way of the unreasonable and giddy gad-about.

The sole ambition of the many, I may say most of the modern girls, is to dress well, and the extent of the ambition of many is to achieve that fact regardless of cost which the poor unfortunate father has to shoulder in order to please his heartless and unreasonable daughter, and preserve peace in the home.

Many of these damsels don't think or don't try to think of the hard work and worry which accompanies the attainment of the necessary, or many would try and soften their hearts and conquer the vanity which they have allowed to become master of their reason and common sense. It's the opinion of the majority of young men, anyway, those that stop to think, that most young ladies, however nice they may appear to be, think more of their hat and other articles that go to make up their attire, than they do of the man who is paying them attention, and seeing that they only take second place in their affection refrain from having anything to do with them, and consequently resort to the clubs and other places where women are conspicuous by their absence, being too expensive a luxury for the man of limited means.

The majority of the young men in this town are not securing salaries that are capable of supporting young ladies of that stamp, and many are wise enough to see it in time to avert an unhappy future, but other poor unfortunates who have been entrapped, are those who didn't think of the future, but the present; in other words were overcome by a disease known as love, which has all been on the man's side, which he discovers later to his sorrow.

My fair readers will likely come to the conclusion that I am a hardened old bachelor, but it's a pleasure for me to inform them that I haven't the slightest intention of being one when I meet my ideal, which I hope I will, as I've the greatest regard for any girl who has brain and uses it as it was intended to be used, not on hats and other non-intelligent subjects, but uses it in an intelligent way to promote harmony and good fellowship between herself and those to whom she is attached by the strongest ties of nature.

Every man has the greatest regard for the woman who reasons out a thing as well as himself, or better, and there are many women who can, but have lost that desire by foolishly trying to dress as well or out rival her sister woman who thinks because some cracked brain in Paris or some other fashion centre says that the hobble skirt or some other such encumbrance is to be the style this year, she must forsooth follow the rule.

There's a man for every girl in the world they say, and I would like to see every sensible girl have her mate and I feel sure the majority of girls would if they appealed to the men through common sense and reason, instead of trying to entrap them by good looks obtained at the druggists, or by a superficial affection and dress.

Every man is willing to deny himself of everything or should, for the woman he has taken for his wife, when he knows that she through love for him would do the same; therefore girls take my advice and follow a more sensible course of ingratiating yourselves with the men.

BACHELOR.

In Dangerous State.

It was Mr. Frank Woodford, not William, who fell into the hold of the s.s. Cynthia, Monday evening. His father and grandfather, Capt. Lynch, of Prince's Street sought for the missing man together all Monday night and early yesterday morning. When searching the ship they were within a few feet of where the unfortunate young chap lay. The belief now is that he fell from the top deck to the middle deck, a distance of about 18 feet, and the wonder is that he was not killed instantly. He fell amongst the cargo which included barrels of rosin, and part of his body struck the bulkheading. He is dangerously hurt internally and up to last night had not regained consciousness. Frank is the eldest son of Mr. John Woodford, and a fine able young fellow, aged 22 years. He is well known in athletic circles and had a splendid reputation as a wrestler. The hope is expressed that his strong constitution will eventually help on his recovery.

Punished by Marriage.

Marriage has at one time been recognized as a form of punishment. Mr. Cyril Davenport, in his book on jewelry, says that "there was an old custom in the Isle, according to which an unmarried girl, who had been deceived by a man, could bring him to trial, and if he were found guilty she would be presented with a sword, a rope, and a ring. With the sword she might cut off his head; with the rope she might hang him; or with the ring she might marry him. It is said that the latter punishment was that invariably inflicted."

Baby Sent by Parcel Post.

Charge Was Fifteen Cents and Package Was Insured for $50.
Batavia, Ohio, Jan. 27.—Vernon O. Lytle, mail carrier on a rural route out of this place, is the first man to accept and deliver under parcel post conditions a live baby. The baby, a boy weighing 10½ pounds, just within the 11 pound weight limit, is the child of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Beagle, of Near Glen Este. The package was well wrapped and ready for "mailing" when the carrier got to it. Its measurements reached 7½ inches, also just within the law, which makes 72 inches the limit. Mr. Lytle delivered it safely to the address of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Beagle, its grandparents, who live about a mile from his home. The postage was fifteen cents and the parcel was insured for $50.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

'Twas a Famous Victory.'

Morris is certainly making good for himself.
So also are the Honorables P. T. McGrath, J. C. Crosbie, Donald Morrison and other honorables.
Let Morris finish his work, and incidentally the country as well.

The Bay Roberts victory certainly rankles in the heart of the Morris party.
That the better element of Bay Roberts repudiated the overcharge is evidenced by the return of the overcharge fee for half.

Piccott will find it very difficult to "pick it" up in Bay Roberts next fall.
And again, the public service is being prostituted in the interests of the party in power, to which nearly every day's outpost despatch bears witness. The daily service is fast becoming a delusion and a snare, like other pet projects of Morris.

With the coming to the country of Reid's two new boats, will the taxpayers be mulcted for an additional service or services, in which to fit the Invermore, Solway and Duchess of Marlborough? To quote the Daily News of some years back, "Capitalists have a great attraction for Sir Edward Morris, who can play the courtier to King Plutus to perfection." And certainly since Sir Edward "went in" Reid is making good (money) out of him at the country's expense, so an extra service or two will not matter.

How many more millions are yet needed to complete the branch railways? Will the Premier kindly rise and answer.

The Bay Roberts Guardian reports Sir Edward Morris as referring to his Government as Directors of Newfoundland, Limited. Very true, they are limited to November 1913.

And notwithstanding that P. T. and John Alexander can say, "IT WAS A FAMOUS VICTORY."

Rough on Railroaders.

Rotary No. 2, which went off the rails near Donovan's, Monday afternoon, left here this morning to go out and clear the Topsails of snow. Two working trains are now making for the Toppails from opposite points one proceeding from Millertown Junction and the other working east from Kitty's Brook. Both have plows ahead and gangs of men are now going ahead of the trains clearing the track of ice with picks and shovels while the push plows dispose of the snow. The Reid Mfd. Co., are employing all the men they can get to help in the work of clearing the rails and getting the engines along. The train from the Junction has a new axle for the damaged rotary which will be put in position immediately on arrival at Kitty's Brook. Unprecedented weather conditions rule in this section of the country. Saturday afforded an illustration of the climatic changes there. During the forenoon and for a while in the afternoon, it was mild with rain and a S.W. wind while the thermometer registered 30 above. Suddenly the wind veered off to the N.W., and in a few hours the glass recorded 12 below zero and a regular blizzard raged all Saturday evening and night. The wind-blew with hurricane force and some of the workmen became frosted. Soon all had to take to the shelter of the cars to leave which meant risking life in the storm which raged. It was mild yesterday across the Toppails but much snow fell filling the cuts.

Why Were Three Fish Merchants Appointed to the Council?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I notice with pleasure that you have taken your stand alongside the Leader of the Fishermen's (Champion, and unfortunately fate having called me to the fishery to eke out an existence for my growing family. I am interested in the institution which has recently made its way to the front, The Fishermen's Union, and be it for "weal or woe" there is no getting away from the fact, that every man who catches a cod fish from Cape Chidley to the Grand Banks has his eye upon this Union and has made up his mind to give this Union a voice in the next Government, we are going to elect when the present gives us an opportunity to do so.

Now, sir, I do not profess to be able to write letters to influence the opinion of any one, but it seems to me, "there is something doing" and unless we as fishermen keep our eyes and ears open and pull together, we are likely to be eodded again. I was one of those foolishly carried away with the wily Sir Edward and his candidate last election, and when Sir Edward told us here that "he could not see why his constituents at Petty Harbor could get $7.20 for their fish, while we in Carbonear only got $3.50 for ours." I thought we should give him a chance and see what he would do for us. Well, Mr. Editor, although we got our fish up to $4.20, the price paid us for last summer's catch was only $3.50—Sir Edward's price again. I have not heard of "our new market" which Sir Edward has found for our fish and the envelopes which "Mr. Piccott" was going to put our fish in must have proven as visionary as the Cold Storage Plants, which were going to give us fresh bait all over the Labrador. But, Mr. Editor, what's up now with the Ship of State? How is it that she has been so short handed right up to the present the last year of Sir Edward's skippership? I notice that by some power from the other side, Sir Edward has signed on "three" new hands for the Legislative Council our local House of Lords.

What for? Perhaps the greatest number of fishermen have often wondered the more so of late years, what we were called upon to pay such a big lot of money every year for this Upper House at all, and of what use or benefit this Legislative Council was or is to the "taxpayers" of the country? What benefits do the fishermen get from paying the large amount in expenses for an Upper House and a salary for the "men of money" to sit on splendid cushioned seats in a nicely heated and decorated room and say nice things about one another, especially when one of the number dies, and after all to do nothing only agree to what our members say shall be law, in the House of Assembly? But what has happened or what is going to happen during the coming session of the House of Assembly? or what has Sir Edward got "up his sleeve" now that he wants three more men in this Upper House? Does he expect Mr. Coaker and the Union to win at the polls in the Fall and does he anticipate that the Union men in the House of Assembly will endeavor to make laws for the benefit of the fishermen? Is he now filling up the Upper House with Fish Merchants in order to block those efforts?

Let us see how this Upper House is composed and how many representatives the fishermen have there. How about the old-time Fish Exporters? What show has this class in this Upper House? Hons. R. K. Bishop, W. C. Job, Edgar Bowring, James Baird and now add to them the three new appointees. Goodridge, Ryan and Templeman. Only seven of those men to look after their interests a rea good representation while Law, Medicine and even the press are equally well represented but what about the Fishermen and the laboring classes? They have not a solitary representative, and therefore our class is not even worth consideration from the man we placed as the head of the Government, Sir E. P. Morris, and yet we hear that this is the age of "bare armed labor." Now then which class is it which represents the earning power of our country and which by hard toil amidst untold dangers brings in the wealth to pay our revenues and keep the "Ship of State" afloat? We have some mines, one or two paper mills, and a good few lumber concerns but let us cut our fisheries out altogether and where are we for revenue? What figures will our exports show?

Time was when we had Captain Edward White in our House of Lords and the late Captain Samuel Blandford, but they have passed on and who has been appointed to fill their places? Not a solitary man who has handled an oar, jigger or float or who knows the comfort of a suit of oilskins or who has ever strained his eyes looking through the dark night for a light nor listened through the fog for the sound of an alarm.

Now then fishermen, consider what an interest Sir Edward Morris has taken and is taking in your class and watch with "eternal vigilance" the move of this wily politician and you'll see why "three" Fish Exporters, Messrs. Ryan, Templeman and Goodridge were appointed to your Upper House and why your calling has marked you as being unfit for such honor in this your own country which you must keep going by your hard and dangerous toil.

Yours truly,
LABRADOR FISHERMAN.

Stop Coughing

It's quite as foolish as it is annoying to keep on coughing since Phoratox Cough Mixture is guaranteed to soothe and heal the irritated parts at once, and to rapidly destroy the very cause of this aggravating nuisance. Hundreds of persons are complaining every day about the cough or cold they have had for a long time and are not able to get rid of it. Don't let a Cough or Cold hang on to you day after day and run the chance of catching and developing the Cough that is not easy to get rid of. You will avoid all this unnecessary worry (about the cough or cold you have) by obtaining "Phoratox Cough Mixture" at once.

A Letter to Home.

Do you write to the old folk at home? Who sit when the day is done, With folded hands and downcast eyes, And think of the absent one.
Don't selfishly scribble "Excuse me, haste," I've scarcely the time to write," But deem it a pleasure when far away, Long letters home to write.
Don't let them think you've no more use For their love and counsel wise For the heart grows strongly sensitive When age has dimmed the eyes.
The duty of writing do not put off, Let sleep or pleasure wait, Least the letter they have looked for long Be a day or an hour too late!
I know the sad old folk at home, With locks just turning white, Are longing to hear of the absent one, So write them a letter to-night!
Tooth brushes should be dried in the open air and the sun should shine on them.
Milk will not boil over if the saucepan is buttered on the upper part of the edge.

Your Hair is Fluffy, Beautiful and Lustrous in a Few Moments

GIRLS! GET A 25 CENT BOTTLE OF "DANDERINE" AND TRY, THIS. ALSO STOPS FALLING HAIR; DESTROYS DANDRUFF.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.
But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

Regulations For Lent.

1. Every day in Lent, except Sundays, is a fast day, on which one meal only and a collation are allowed. A slight relaxation, however, over and above, may be taken by those who need it, with advice of the Confessor.
2. By an Indult from the Holy See, renewed 27th February, 1907 (ad decennium), i.e. until 1917, permission is given to use in cooking the lard or fat of animals on all fast days throughout the year, except Ash Wednesday and Good Friday.
3. Also by the same Indult the use of flesh meat is allowed on all Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, of Lent, except Saturday in Ember Week (February 15th) and Holy Saturday (March 22nd).
4. On Sundays, flesh meat may be eaten as often as desired, but it is forbidden to eat fish and flesh meat at the same meal. The Faithful are exhorted to make some compensation for these Apostolic Indulgences by other pious works, and by giving alms to the poor.
5. Milk, butter and cheese are allowed on all days, also the collation, except on Ash Wednesday and Good Friday.
6. All persons under 21 years of age and over 60 are exempt from the fast. Also all engaged in hard labor or who have to earn their living by doing work of a difficult kind. Also women nursing, and all who are in a delicate state of Health.
7. All dances, parties, balls and theatrical or other public shows or entertainments are strictly forbidden during Lent.
As St. Patrick's Day will fall on Monday in Holy Week this year, the rubrics forbid any celebration of the Festival on that day.

The Ocean Mail Service.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Allow me space to say a few words about our mail service. I called at Shea's office a short time ago as regards passage rates and was more than surprised to find these rates: First class, $65.00; Second, $45.00; Third, $31.25 to Glasgow. You see that we are served pretty badly. Now I only ask what man with a fair wage can really afford to pay such an amount as this. I think myself that it is high time that the people of Newfoundland should awake and sleep and look out for something better. The idea of the Government paying money to outsiders, when I believe we could get others in St. John's that would only be too glad to make a contract with the Government as regards the Mail Service, and at much cheaper rates also, I was speaking to an employee of a Southside firm and in talking over matters of this kind, I think that the firm of Bowring Bros., would find faster boats not less than fifteen knots which would make shorter trips across the Atlantic than are made by the Allan boats. Now that we have one of the firm here, the Premier might make a call on him and see what the result would be by corresponding with the firm at Liverpool, as I understand they are largely interested in steam at the present time.
Now Mr. Editor, what do you think of crafts being moored at wharves in this harbor, keeping the ice from going out the Narrows. All crafts should be moored at the lower end of the harbor. They are the means of stopping all traffic from north side firms to south side firms that want to send fish over to their premises as occasion may require. It is also a great drawback to trade, we want this harbor clear of ice in winter time so that we can go back and forth as business requires for all concerned. For instance, foreign vessels coming in here cannot get to mercantile firms for ice hindering them, to haul ice to north or south side firms. I cannot see how it is that things are so shipshod, as they are in this country. As far as I am concerned I have been waiting now two months to get down the harbor and cannot and many others also. I suppose those in authority are just doing what they please with their arms folded in their office. Now if things are going to be in the same groove as usual, I for one intend to write to higher powers on what I have written, and then our Governor will see for himself. I also understand that Bowring launch is trying to get across the harbor to their Southside premises was much damaged on account of ice. Who is responsible for this? The firm should not be, I take it. What about our ferry boat. Do they ever intend getting another. If they do it is pretty nigh time and not have the people served as they are.
Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space
—W. S.

Work at Port au Port.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I see by your paper a short time ago how they were advertising for laborers and carpenters to go to work at Limeville, Port au Port I was working up there last summer for five months and all I can say is it is a good place to get a job. The work is not hard, the pay is fair, the only thing against it is the high price you have to pay for things when you shack yourself. This is not the Company's fault; the reason is there is only a couple of stores near there, but when there are more shops opened there, you may be sure grub and everything else will be cheaper, and if the company want to keep their men with them any time, it is up to them to try and get as many good stores as they can open there.
If there is any young men about here who is thinking of leaving the country, I would say to them go up to the West Coast first and have a look at MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DANDRUFF.

around at things and see if you could not do better there than going to the States. There are good fisheries, plenty of land and firewood, and room for lots of settlers up there. When I was at Limeville last year, I knew a man who made $1,100 for himself and his family at the lobster fishery, and then had all the rest of the summer to earn beside. It is nothing strange to hear of men earning from $600 to $800 at the lobster fishery every year.
I got to know lots of the people up there and they are the finest I ever met; some people down this way think the people up there are ignorant and backward, but I guess not, they know what's what. The only fault I got with them is that they don't seem to have any opinion of their own public matters, for if they have they keep it to themselves. I have heard of some of the most hard-faced high-handed things being done up there and nobody made the least stir about it. To show you how things work, I will just tell you one thing of many that I was told. Two or three years ago, some fishermen on our side of the bay were brought before the magistrate, and had to pay a big fine for packing bad lobsters. In the same year, nearly every man in a cove on the other side of the bay fished and canned and sold lobsters after the close season and nothing was done to them. I could give you lots of cases like this, and this is just what is going to keep people from this part of the country, from settling in the West Coast. It is a great pity, too, for it is by a long shot the finest part of Newfoundland.

Yours truly,

Children Love Syrup of Figs

Gently cleanses the stomach, liver and waste-clogged bowels.
Every mother immediately realizes after giving her child delicious Syrup of Figs that this is the ideal laxative and physic for the children. Nothing else regulates the little one's stomach, liver and 30 feet of tender bowels so promptly, besides they dearly love its delightful fig taste.
If your child isn't feeling well; resting nicely; eating regularly and acting naturally it is a sure sign that its little insides need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.
When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or your little one has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, tongue coated; give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs and in a few hours all the foul, constipated, clogged up waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness, and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.
With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it cannot be harmful.
Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed—a little given to-day will save a sick child to-morrow.
Full directions for children of all ages and grown-ups plainly printed on the package.
Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.
If one or two teaspoonfuls of sugar are added to turnips when cooking they will be improved.
Yolks of eggs left over from used white can be kept for several days if they are covered with cold water.
If a little ammonia is mixed with the beeswax and turpentine used for floor polishing, the wax will dissolve quickly.
Rancid butter is sweetened by melting and skimming; then put in a piece of light brown toast. The toast will absorb the unpleasant taste and smell.
If the closet where you hang tins and cooking utensils is badly lighted try painting the hooks and nails white.

MANDELL THE JEW.

(BY EDWARD CAHN.)

Mr. Z. Murray, portly, red-faced, dressed in the height of fashion, topknot in fact, flaunting a diamond scarf pin, diamond rings on two fingers and a massive and overly ornate fob, sat opposite Louis Mandell in the latter's private office.

Murray's hat was tilted at a rakish angle ill-befitting his forty-eight years. One thumb was thrust into the arm-hole of his pearl grey waistcoat, and the expression on his face as well as his whole attitude savored of condescension and offensive familiarity.

He had been boasting of everything from his own prowess on the golf links to his wife's triumphs in society, and was just finishing an account of his last fling in the stock market, which had ended very disastrously, though he did not dwell upon that.

Through it all ran an insulting innuendo which boldly said: "I am of the elect, I belong—you do not. I condescend to borrow from you, and in return for your fifty money I am giving you a verbal glimpse of that paradise, Christian society, which you and your wife may not enter. You are that thing accursed, apart—a Jew!"

Mandell was representative of the highest type of his or any other race. As quiet in demeanor as he was in dress, dignified, unfailingly polite, and at the same time a keen and progressive business man. Unprejudiced judges said he was the ablest Jew in the city.

Besides his banking interests he had many other irons in the fire, not the least of which was philanthropy. Not the sort, however, which gives many libraries, schools and what not, widely heralding the donor; but the sort which makes a handsome contribution anonymous, and countless modest ones of the same sort. His bounty knew no creed, no restriction, save that it be unadvertised.

In the business world he was known as "Mandell the Just." The word, used in its true sense, means more than generous—good—kind. It is the essence of all three, and something more. Louis Mandell was absolutely just.

Now, as he listened to the talk of this man Murray, and felt a wave of disgust overwhelming him, he came near to being unjust.

All this preliminary talk he felt sure, was intended to impress upon him the great social prominence of the would-be borrower; his lofty position, and the great honor he meant to bestow upon this money-lending Jew of what he deemed most obscure birth.

Mandell understood this, and the mean motive, and he caught himself hating Murray most heartily. Hating his pretences, his vulgarity and snobishness—his very pearl grey waistcoat! And before he knew it he was glad that he had bought up all Murray's mortgages and "paper."

Then he recalled himself with a start, and despised himself for an unworthy Jew. What! Let such a person ruffle him? Be annoyed at the ignorance and prejudice of an unthinking fool? Never!

He had been intending to bring the interview to a speedy close, but now he decided to let Murray talk on as he would. He would endure his society as a sort of penance, and he was curious to see just how far Murray would go.

Now he understood why Morrison, the retiring financier from whom he had bought Murray's debts, had hated him so bitterly, and his determination to let not ruin Murray, at least to bring him to his arrogant knees.

"Well, to make a long story short, Mandell," Murray was saying, "I want another loan. By Gad! It takes a pile of money to keep afloat these days. Why my wife alone uses a fortune every year! Of course, the girls are growing up, and that counts."

"Indeed, yes," said Mandell, smiling, "my own daughter is getting to be quite a young lady. Soon—"

"Oh, but then she will never be coming out!" interposed Murray. "At least not in the real society that my girls are born to."

He laughed a trifle uneasily, suddenly mindful that such a remark was not becoming in a borrower, even one from the highest society, but an instant later he was reassured, for Mandell's face did not change.

"Thick skinned Jew," thought Murray. "A boor," thought Mandell, but the slow fires of anger were kindling. Murray, his never very nimble wits slightly befuddled with his before dinner potations, was suddenly seized with the idea that Mandell meant to refuse to lend him the money he must procure in some quarter, and he was instantly furious.

While he silently cast about in his mind for a taunt, Mandell lifted his eyes. "Mr. Murray, you have not told me how much you require," he said, evenly.

"By Gad, that's right! I haven't! Hang it! I never was meant for business. Fact is, Mandell, I want twelve thousand dollars."

"When?"

"Right away, as soon as possible. I'll return it inside of three months."

"It is very close to the end of the year, and I don't think the directors care to lend so much to an individual at this time—still—what security do you offer?"

"Security! Pshaw, Mandell—for twelve thousand? Why you could lend me four times that amount yourself; it's a mere bagatelle. If you want security, put it on the building. Hang it! I think it's good for twelve thousand. Well, say! One of the best little office buildings in town!"

"Indeed, it is worth twelve thousand, and many times that—which it carries, but as security for a further loan, I'm afraid not."

"The deuce you say!" said Murray, flushing guiltily and wondering how Mandell happened to know so much about it. Recovering himself, he successively tendered a block of houses, some unimproved real estate, his interest in a theatre, and finally his city home, but Mandell refused them all on the same grounds.

"Well, then," cried Murray, desperately at last, "I'll give you my word of honor!"

"I'm afraid you don't understand banking methods. Whatever my own inclinations might be, I, as an officer of this bank, cannot lend its funds unsecured."

This refusal angered Murray afresh, and now he realized that Mandell possessed full information as to his real standing, fully appreciated the fact that he had tried to deceive him into lending money on worthless collateral, and despised him for it, that he saw through his shallow shams and bluster and with the realization every vestige of caution left him. He leaned forward, purple in the face. "Then you mean to refuse me, eh?"

"I am afraid we shall be compelled to."

"We," sneered Murray, "we, eh? You are the President of this bank and you are Czar. You dictate the policy. Oh, I know, it's common talk. Well, you look out or you will be investigated along with the other crooks some day."

Mandell laughed. "My dear Mr. Murray, truly that is childish and funny." He laughed again and then rose. "Sorry, but we cannot accommodate you."

Murray sprang to his feet. As he did so he brandished his cane and somehow contrived to upset a small oval frame which stood on the desk. It rolled off on to the floor, and he stooped to recover it. As he straightened, his eye fell upon the picture it contained.

"A woman—eh? The tone was offensive."

Mandell extended his hand for the portrait. "My wife," he said, coldly, but now the smouldering anger in his heart burned up brightly in his eyes. "Same thing," said Murray, brutally, glad to have given pain at last.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M.D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Measles, depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

Mrs. G. H. WILLIAMS, of Lynnhaven, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took in all five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female troubles to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine of its kind."

Hurrying on the heels of malice came inspiration.

"Excuse me," he added hastily. "I meant no harm, and to prove it I'll tell you what I'll do. You let me have that twelve thousand and I'll have my wife take up yours and boost her into society, our set. It will be a hard job, of course, but we can do it. What do you say?"

Mandell could not trust himself to speak, and Murray, in love with the idea, rattled on. At length he paused for want of breath, and by that time Mandell was his own man again. "No thank you, my wife has no ambition to appear in your set."

"What! How do you know? Just ask her. Why you have no idea how eager all the women who are 'on' are to be 'in.' Just ask her, and I'll warrant you she will soon make you see what a mistake you are making. She will count twelve thousand dollars cheap for it, too, if she is a Jewess."

"You are quite mistaken. I know. Good afternoon."

"Know! You crazy fool, you seem to know a lot. You Sheenies are all know and nose. I'm sorry I made that proposition. Why, our friends would never forgive us. The idea of your wife in the same set as Mrs. Murray—she—"

"Stop!" Mandell's voice had the edge of chilled steel, and it quieted Murray.

He pointed to a chair. "Sit down," Murray obeyed.

"Mr. Murray, for a man in your position in life, you are singularly lacking in breeding and ordinary common sense. You evidently believe that by calling me a Jew repeatedly, that you are insulting me. That is a mistake, but since you mean it as an offence and have had the taste to extend it to my wife, I bid a lesson may teach you to be more polite in future."

"I will overlook your attempt to get a further loan from me on worthless security, and—"

"Worthless!"

"Yes, worthless. That office building, that land, those houses, the theatre, your city home and country place are all mortgaged up to the last notch—and I hold the mortgages. One mortgage is due, and the interest on two others on December 24th, and I expect payment on time. That's all. Murray's face went gray. "You sold the mortgages! All of them?"

"I do, every one."

Murray could read nothing but cold determination in Mandell's face, and at length he got to his feet and stumbled out in silence.

II.

As Mandell left the bank to go home that same evening, a shabby urchin with a bundle of bills under his arm thrust one of them into his hand, it advertised some political meeting.

"It is appalling what power the present system puts into the hands of a few to wield over the mass of their 'allow men,'" declared a sentence in bold type.

"Home, John," he said to the chauffeur, and climbed into the car. "Appalling power," he muttered. "Yes, it is appalling." His face hardened, then softened, looked ashamed, and by the time he greeted his wife at dinner he was almost his self again.

Rhea Mandell, at forty, was still a beautiful woman. She lived a quiet useful life, sweet with good works and kind thoughts, and she was in every way a worthy wife to a good man. She believed that every woman to be quite happy should study her husband, and she had been studying hers most conscientiously for twenty years.

Mandell had scarcely unfolded his napkin before she was aware that something was amiss, but she was far too clever to say so. She told him the small news of the day in her brightest manner. Gifted with a talent for story telling and mimicry, she told him a story she had heard, and was rewarded with a laugh, but the faintly troubled look returned to Mandell's eyes, and she decided that he meant to wait until after dinner for confidences. She settled back in her chair, and while she idly watched the maid removing the dishes, Mandell looked at her.

The richly furnished room, the leather chair in which she sat, her artistic dress, all seemed merely a setting for her lovely self. He was glad that the children were not at home to-night, for he felt that he wanted her all to himself. How soft her silvered hair looked. How exquisite her face, lit with great brown eyes.

stars and faintly lined with the souvenirs of thousands of kindly smiles. She was smiling now at the maid.
"Tell Maggie this has been a delicious dinner, and we have enjoyed it very much. You have served it very daintily, too, Nora. How hard you try to please us! But I am afraid you are tired; you must go to bed early. If the bell rings after eight o'clock never mind, we will answer it. Now bring Mr. Mandell's smoking things and have your own dinner," she smiled again at the beaming Nora.
"Always kind, Rhea," said Mandell admiringly.
"Am I, Louis? Well, I should be, for you set me an example. I discovered to-day, quite by accident, that it was you who paid poor Casson's doctor's bill, and put him into that little business where he is so happy. Why didn't you tell me?" She came and sat on the arm of his chair.
"Well, Miss, must you know everything? Isn't it enough that I confess my faults to you?" said Mandell, pinching her ear.
"Faults? Though I know I am spoiling you, I must say it. I don't believe you have any."
He puffed reflectively at his cigar. "Don't you, Rhea? Then listen to this." And he related his conversation with Murray.
"Now," he concluded, "this Murray, son of an old family, supposedly rich, supposedly honorable, has borrowed the bank's money through me, and spent it in wasteful living. To-day he tried to trick me, then bribe me, and insulted me over and over, or tried to, which comes to the same thing, but he has done it once too often. He must be taught a few of the realities of life, a little truth, and I'm going to teach him."
Rhea was silent, but her eyes questioned. "How?"
"You see, he is saturated with prejudices against the Jews, and absurd, as it sounds, he believes in this 'society' of his; in his 'friends' in it. I am going to give him an excellent chance to put them to the test. Morrisshin hated him, and bought up all his debts, unknown to him, except the ones with our bank. When he decided to retire and go abroad he sold them all to me, personally. I bought them purely and simply as a good business investment. In less than a month, December 24th, to be exact, three payments aggregating ten thousand dollars fall due. He came to me to borrow that money, not knowing that it was to me he owed it; and I refused him. I meant to make him a proposition that was not unfair to him, until he made it impossible. He cannot raise another dollar unless his friends give it to him, outright and unsecured, and I can force him to the wall, ruin him utterly, before January 1st, if I am so minded. I have made it a point to investigate him thoroughly, and have found that some of his transactions are irregular, though I think mainly through ignorance. He has been despoiled by his own people, and put by them in case of need in the position of scape-goat, criminally liable, you understand. He and his wife and daughters are about as capable as butterflies, but that don't alter things. I can seize everything—land, houses, the very home—he lives in, and turn him and his, dishonored and penniless, into the streets!"
"Louis! Don't talk so. It sounds dreadful. Why should Mrs. Murray and her children suffer for his foolishness? What would become of them?"
"That's Murray's lookout, I'm not responsible."
"Is that right or just? Wouldn't that be a stern revenge for a little bit of foolish talk? Who cares for it? Not we. If his prejudices and ignorance make him cruel, that is his misfortune, not ours. We, as Jews, must not do unworthy things just because one Christian does."
"But, Rhea, even from a business view-point I am justified," said Mandell, with averted eyes.
"Now, Mandell laughed happily.
"Now, Louis, I know I owe you an apology for thinking even for a moment that you meant to be harsh. You are merely hair-splitting for the sake of getting me to argue. You have no idea nor intention of ruining Murray or any man. There come our children!"

Mandell brought his fist down on the table with a bang. "Rhea! I mean to teach that fellow a lesson he will never forget!"
She was silent an instant while she studied his scowling face, but she laughed as she opened the door. "I am not deceived, Louis."

III.

On December 23rd, the office boy ushered into Louis Mandell's private office, a greatly altered Z. Murray.
He was a wreck of his former self. Gone was his paunch, his face was aged and worn and pallid, dejection and defeat in every line. Gone was the overbearing manner, the diamond rings, the fob, the gold-headed cane, the pearl grey waistcoat and the vinous breath. In their places were gravity, a clear, though saddened eye, and strangely enough a certain dignity.
"Sit down," said Mandell, evenly.
"Thanks, you will pardon me if I stand. What I have to say I want to say standing."
"As you like."
"Mr. Mandell," the banker noticed that he used the prefix now for the first time, "I have two things to say."

HOW I MADE MY HAIR GROW

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in first-class condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of the hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all of the hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows:

Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Menthol Crystals, 1/2 drachm; Lavona de Composee, 2 oz. If you like it perfumed add a few drops of To-Kalon Perfume, which mixes perfectly with the other ingredients. This, however, is not necessary.
Apply night and morning: rub thoroughly into the scalp.
Go to your druggist and ask for an eight ounce bottle containing six ounces of Bay Rum; also one-half drachm of Menthol Crystals, and a two-ounce bottle of Lavona de Composee. Mix the ingredients yourself at your own home. Add the Menthol Crystals to the Bay Rum and then pour in the Lavona de Composee and add the To-Kalon Perfume. Let it stand one-half hour and it is ready for use.

to you, and because I know you can't have very much of an opinion of me, I'll say this first: I'm down and out. I can't raise the money I owe you. You will have to foreclose." He paused and then went on with trembling voice. "But Mandell, for God's sake put it off until after the holidays. My girls don't know yet. They are away, and will not be home until Christmas Eve. I—I can't tell them then. Let us keep the house a few days longer, for their sakes and my wife's. Will you?"
"That is not usual," said Mandell, in a deliberate toneless voice, "but I will consider it."
"Thanks. I hope you will. Now, I want to apologize for my offensive remarks, especially about your wife. For her sake I hope she will never give society a chance to treat her as it has treated me. It's heartless and bad, Mandell, and I never knew it until I needed my friends. I have not a single one—and I guess it's my own fault. I am ashamed of the things I said to you about the Jews, and I beg your pardon for them."
He turned without waiting for an answer and started for the door.
"Wait a moment!" cried Mandell, springing to his feet. He overtook Murray in the ante-room and grasped his hand.
"You are a man! I admire you," he said warmly. "As for that money—the papers are my personal property, not the bank's so don't worry about it. Any time will do, six months, a year, whenever you are on your feet again."
The office boy was ushering in a newcomer.
Murray, utterly surprised, stared at Mandell half dazed.
"Do—do you mean that?"
"I surely do. You'll excuse me now. I must see this gentleman at once."

Murray began incoherent questions and thanks, but Mandell stopped him.
"Good-bye now, you really must excuse me and, now that we understand each other better, I hope we shall be friends."

One would scarcely think it, but there are many kinds of eyeglass lenses. There are the old style double Convex and Concave, the Periscope, the improved Toric or Meniscus Lens; in these forms there are Spheres Cylinders and Sphero-Cylinders, any of which may be combined with prisms. Then there is the Lenticular Lens, an arrangement to lighten the weight of thick heavy lenses. In addition to the above there are the various forms of Bifocal Lenses, consisting of the Cement, Perfection, Split and Kryptok Bifocal. All the above can be had in various tints, smoked blue amber, etc., and ground in any forms—oval, full oval, round and other irregular forms. There is just one place in Newfoundland where you can have any of the above lenses made at an hour's notice, that is TRAPNELL, the Eyesight Specialist, fe83,tf

Burn Caused Open Sore

Zam-Buk Worked a Wonderful Cure.
Sometimes a bad burn, a deep cut, or some similar mishap, sets up a more permanent injury, in the form of an open, discharging sore. In such cases Zam-Buk will be found of unequalled value.
Mr. J. Nixon, of 901 William Ave., Winnipeg, a blacksmith at the C.P.R. shops, had his foot badly burned by some molten metal falling upon it. He says: "The burn was a very bad one, and after the first few days it left an open sore, which showed marked signs of blood-poisoning. It discharged freely and caused me terrible agony. For three weeks I suffered acutely and could get no ease. At last I obtained a preparation from the doctor, which seemed to stop the discharging and made me quite hopeful but finally the wound became as bad as ever."
"I was then advised to use Zam-Buk, and from the first application the balm gave me relief. The inflammation was thoroughly checked, and the poisonous matter cleared away in a very short time after beginning with Zam-Buk. Healing then began, and in less than two weeks the wound was thoroughly cured."

One of the main lessons of this case lies right here—try Zam-Buk first for any injury, sore, skin disease or wound. Don't spend money and waste time in experiments. Zam-Buk is equally good for piles, blood-poisoning, festering wounds, chaps, cold sores, children's eruptions, scalp sores, varicose ulcers, chilblains, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., St. John's, Nfld., for price. You are warned against harmful preparations.

Channel Church News.

The annual meeting of St. James' Congregation was held in the school-room on Wednesday evening last, Rev. H. J. Read, Incumbent, presiding. The accounts of the mission as submitted by the Chairman and Wardens were very satisfactory, showing substantial increases over those of last year on the credit side. This mission having for three years past raised over its assessment, a movement has been set on foot to have it erected into a parish, which will be finalized at a subsequent meeting. The following church officers were elected for 1913: People's Warden, Mr. Emanuel Pike; Clergyman's Warden (appointed), Capt. Solomon Gillam; Select Vestry, Messrs. Alex. Chaisson, Eli Manuel, James Evans, George Evans, Wm. Billard and William Stevens; Lay Delegates, Joseph Outerbridge, Esq. (St. John's), Mr. C. T. James; Secretary to the Congregation, Mr. C. T. James; Chairman New School Building Committee, Mr. H. H. Mackay; Superintendent Sunday School, Mr. Wm. Harnett.

Romantic Courtship.

Of a Canadian Surveyor Who Weds Indian Princess.
Masset, Queen Charlotte Island, B. C., Jan. 25.—After a romantic courtship rivaling those of western fictions, Frederick Nash, a well known Vancouver surveyor, has been married to Josephine, an Indian Princess, eldest daughter of Chief Edenshaw, of one of the tribes of Haidin Indians. Princess Josephine was educated at a school for white girls at Metlakatlah, where for some time after her graduation she remained as a teacher. After her return home she was courted by many Indian chiefs, and not a few white men, but she spurned them all, until Nash came along and won the haughty beauty.

During the raw days of February and March, remember this:

Lowney's Cocoa generates more heat for your body than beef, peas, milk or eggs.

There's no better drink than Lowney's to carry you through the cold days.

Lowney's Cocoa is a blend of the choicest varieties of choice cocoa beans.

In our Montreal factory, after roasting and blending, these beans are ground to powder. To insure extreme fineness, the cocoa is sifted through silk before it is put into tins.

Lowney's, prepared according to the recipe makes an even, creamy cocoa that is simply delicious.

Sold by grocers.
In tins—10c to 50c sizes.

Change of Heart.

I used to think when I was digging gravel and whacking wood, to earn a bone a day, and when I watched the rich ones past me travel, my path obscure was but a rocky way. I mopped my brow with my old bandanna and longed to bask on downy beds of ease, and live on birds and terrapin and manna, and oysters fried, and rich imported cheese. My wounded heart with anger used to quiver, when noontime came, and I sat down to eat, and filled myself with onions, bread and liver and moldy kraut and pickled porkers' feet. But now, alas, that I am rich as Croesus, and live on quails, and scrambled peacock's tongue, I fold my hands in front (where all my grease is) and sign and yearn for days when I was young. Where nabobs meet I sit and wield the gavel, my face each day the Beard of Trade expects; but O, the days when I was digging gravel, when I could eat in forty dialects! The dear dead days when meal time found me starving! When all was good, and nothing tasted stale; no finger bowls, no dainty stunts in carving, but just a raid upon my dinner pail! My wealth can buy me yachts and speedy horses, and motor cars and summers by the sea, and it will bring me annual divorces, but it can't bring my hunger back to me!

SPEAKERS LONG-LIVED.

Although the Speaker's office is an exhausting one, all its holders of recent years have lived to a hale old age. Lord Selby, Lord Ossington, and Lord Hampden were well over seventy when they died, and Lord Peel lived to be eighty-three. Lord Eversley, who filled the Chair for thirteen years, attained the age of ninety-four, and was so keen on outdoor pursuits to the last that he bought a new pair of guns when he was ninety-one.

The homely Suet Pudding, or the Dumplings for the Stew are lightest when raised with

"Paisley Flour"

The SURE raising powder.

The most digestible and enjoyable suet puddings are made by adding one part of "Paisley Flour" to eight parts of ordinary flour before mixing the dough. Steaming instead of boiling also helps to make puddings lighter.

"Paisley Flour" mixed 1 part to 12 of ordinary flour, makes delicious light piecrusts and plain pastry for tarts—no doughiness.

"Paisley Flour" is packed in 22c., 14c. and 5c. tins.

The 22c. tin contains 14 ozs. and will raise half a stone of flour.
" 14c. " 7 ozs. " 3 1/2 pounds of flour.
