CHAPTER XXI.

"My Dear Alf: We are off—to-morrow will find us en route for Paris. The battle is won! Norma is mine, as certainly as if she was signed, sealed, and delivered! What a superb beauty it is—a belle reine! Ah, Earncliffe! you don't know what you have lost! But one man's loss is another man's gain; and so benedictio!"

AUSTREY.

Lord Earncliffe read it, as he lay slipped and dressing gowned in his room, annoyed nearly to death, and at expression, half angry, half contemptuous, came over his face. How little she must ever have loved him to forget him so soon!

A life of inaction, of stagnation, was little suited to the gay, volatile nature of Alfred Disbrowe; yet some perverse spirit seemed to possess him now, and hold him in chains at Disbrowe Park. He scarcely ever went to London. He visited but little among the neighboring gentry, and seldom ever saw any one at the hall. He rarely rode, or hunted, or quitted home, and, altogether, became a sort of anchorite, a hermit, a Robinson Crusoe, shut up and fortified in his "castle."

The young ladies of the neighborhood pouted, and were terribly mortified to find the handsome and wealthy young peer so insensible to all their fascinations, while the sentimental ones looked upon him with romantic interest, and fell in love with his dark, melancholy eyes, and wished to comfort him in his solitude.

Having nothing better to do, Disbrowe amused himself with looking after his tenantry and improving his estate; and this, with lying lazily on a sofa, and smoking no end of cigars, constituted his indolent and aimless life.

He felt a little ashamed of himself sometimes, and his useless existence. But a spell—a languor of mind and body—was upon him, and he wanted a motive to make him rise, like another Sampson, and burst his bonds.

So passed the winter; and spring and summer found him still loitering at Disbrowe Park.

At odd times he received short, spasmodic letters from his friend Austrey, to tell him they were doing "gondolas in Venice, or St. Peter's at Rome, or risking their necks up the great St. Bernard, or other cold and uncomfortable places in the Spiguen Alps. According to his account, their travels were something in the style of the "Dodd Family Abroad"—a continued series of mishaps and misadventures, together with jealous Austrian governments, rampaging Italian beggars, savage and unreasonable couriers, or ferocious, brigandish guides, who would persist in not understanding him—Lord George—when he swore at them in English, and screamed out his directions in the same language. He further went on to express the strongest sort of contempt for the whole Continent, vehemently asserted England, with all its fogs, was the only place fit for a rational Christian to live in. As for foreign scenery, he had a poor opinion of it. The Rhine was well enough, but not fit to hold a candle to the Serpentine, and as for Baden, Ramsgate was worth a dozen of it. All this had very little interest for Disbrowe; but the postscript had, where Lord George wound up by informing him Norma was in excellent health and spirits, and "his affair" was progressing as "well as could be expected." At first, this used to invariably put Disbrowe in a fume; but he got used to it after a time, and almost as indifferent about Norma as the rest. Her father had joined them, evidently quite reconciled to the broken-off match, and, what was better still, great friends with the volatile young lord. It was quite uncertain when they would come back, but probably not until late in the next autumn.

Of his American friends, since his arrival in England he had heard nothing. As time cooled and toned down his feelings, he began to regret the hasty manner in which he had left his uncle's roof, who, harshly as he had treated her whom Disbrowe never named now, even in his own mind, had been always kind to him.

Therefore, in a fit of patience, during the previous winter, he had written him a long and cordial letter, urging him to come to England, and visit him at Disbrowe Park, and bring Augusta and little Orrie with him.

It was strange, how ardently he wished to see the little, wild, elfish girl again; partly for her own sake, and the strange, strong love she bore him, and partly for her mother's sake—that dead mother, his first, his last, his only love.

No answer had come, although the June roses were in blossom, and the letter had been written in December, until, one morning, the mail brought him a brief note, in the well-known writing of Mr. De Vere. It was dated London, and informed him that he, and Augusta, and Orrie had arrived and awaited him there.

Disbrowe took time to digest his surprise and pleasure, and immediately started for London, and went direct to their hotel. And then there was one of those pleasant meetings of old friends, that gleam like bright little flashes of unalloyed sunshine through this tangled life of ours, more than compensating us for the sorrow of parting.

Mr. De Vere looked half a dozen years older than when he had seen him last, and had a dreary, lonely look, the cause of which Disbrowe well understood. But Augusta was still more changed; she had wasted away to a shadow, with white, sunken cheeks, and hollow, lustrous eyes looking unnaturally dark and large in her thin and haggard face. All her old hauteur and lofty pride seemed to have faded away like a dream, and she stood before him dejected, spiritless, ghastly—like a spirit from the grave.

The deep mourning she wore contrasted glaringly with her pallid face and blue-veined, transparent hands, and Disbrowe was inexpressibly shocked and grieved as he beheld her.

And Orrie—he scarcely recognized her in the richly-attired, half timid little miss, who shrank back and eyed him askance with a glance half shy, half laughing, that reminded him with a thrill and a shock of Jacquetta. A year—most of it spent in the artificial atmosphere of a fashionable boarding school—had robbed little Orrie of most of her eldritch boldness and brightness, but still it broke out fitfully at times. She had lost, partly, her wild, elfish, precocious look, too; and with her shining, coal-black hair smoothly braided, and her pretty dress of rich black silk, she was quite another being from the wild little kelpie in boy's clothes who had once stabled his horse. They all seemed to have changed; and Disbrowe half sighed as he took her in his arms and kissed her, and inwardly wondered if he had changed, too.

"And Frank," he said, "how is he?" "Frank is quite well," said Mr. De Vere. "I got him a midshipman's commission, last winter, and he has gone off like a second Jack to seek his fortune. We found Fontelle terribly dull, and your kind invitation came at a most opportune moment. Change of climate may do something for Augusta, whose health is falling rapidly."

"I noticed Miss De Vere was not looking well," said Disbrowe, lowering his voice that she might not hear. "She is greatly changed since I saw her last. What is the matter?"

"That is a question I cannot answer," replied her father, with a sigh. "She has no bodily ailment, the doctors say; but something is evidently preying on her mind, undermining both life and happiness. In fact, she has never been the same since that visit of old Grizzle Howlet's; whatever she told her. Since that time she has pined and faded away; and if I believed in the evil eye, I should say my poor Augusta was under its influence."

"Have you never tried to discover what this strange secret is?"

"Repeatedly; but in vain. Augusta only wrings her hands, and cries for me to leave her, until I have no longer the heart to resist. Oh, Alfred, my boy, it goes to my heart to see her suffering like this," said Mr. De Vere, with filling eyes.

Disbrowe pressed his hand to effent sympathy.

"Do you think she would tell you, Alfred?" She asked you, and she might. Do you really think she would?" he said, eagerly.

"I fear not, sir. When she refused to tell you, it is not likely she would make me her confidant—a comparative stranger?"

"I am sorry! I am sorry! If she would only speak and tell, it might save her life—the poor Augusta—my poor, poor girl!"

"Does Grizzle Howlet still reside at the old inn?" asked Disbrowe, after a pause, to divert his mind from the subject.

"Yes, the old limb of Satan! Oh, Alfred! that a wretched old hag like that should have caused us all so much misery!"

"Her day of retribution will come he assured of that, sir!" said Disbrowe, almost sternly. "And her son frere, Captain Tempest, what has become of him?"

"Gone off in the Fly-by-Night on one of his dark, devil's cruises of crime." He went shortly after you left."

THE SMITH-JARVIS CASE.

TORONTO, Oct. 26. Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer in the United Farmers of Ontario Government and Aemilius Jarvis, Sr., Toronto Broker, who on Friday were sentenced respectively to three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary and six months in jail for conspiracy to defraud the Government and to pay between them a fine of $600,000 were brought Saturday to the City Hall in a Provincial police car. After a few minutes in the cells where they partook of sandwiches and coffee, they were taken upstairs and their photos and finger prints taken. Later they returned in the same car. Owing to misunderstanding, Chief Meredith was not in Assize Court Saturday for the arraignment of Peter Smith on the remaining charges of conspiracy for which there are twelve counts. These charges are in connection with his Home Bank transactions and include one of fraud in failing to account for $15,000 in money or securities paid to him by the Home Bank as rebate on the sales of bonds to the province.

PARAFF WASN'T ABOARD MULLHOUSE.

BREST, France, Oct. 23. Max J. Paraff, German-American resident of New York, was not among the pirates who boarded and looted the French steamer Mullhouse of 36,000 cases of whiskey, off the Canadian Coast last June, according to affidavits of the Mullhouse officers and crew which were read Saturday at Paraff's trial. Paraff is being tried for complicity in the alleged piracy. Martin LeGasse, General Manager of the Company which owns the Mullhouse, in his testimony, declared that the first schooner to reach the Mullhouse after the pirates took charge was the Patara, Capt. William Maccock, of Lunenburg, N.S.

Shantung Province, on the Tientsin Pukow Railway, according to seemingly reliable report received from Tientsin. The report declared General Wu and a considerable portion of his army have withdrawn from Shanhaiwan to Chin Wang Tao, a nearby port, late last night and said the belief was that they had boarded the Chinese war craft and transports in Chin Wang Tao Harbor. Their destination was given as Shantung.

A SOVIET BOMB IN THE ELECTION CAMPAIGN.

LONDON, Oct. 25. The publication of Foreign Office documents, supposedly revealing a Red Moscow plot against Great Britain, startled the public today. The document included the text of the alleged letter marked "Very Secret" from M. Zinovieff, the President of the Executive of the Communist International to the Central Committee of the British Communist Party containing, in the words of the Foreign Office, instructions in this country to work for the violent overthrow of existing institutions in this country, and for supervision of His Majesty's armed forces as a means to that end. The communication from the Foreign Office to the Russian Charge d'Affairs, M. Rakovsky, calls attention to the alleged Zinovieff letter, and protests against this violation of the specifics and solemn undertakings repeatedly given to His Majesty's Government. The Foreign Office letter was signed by J. F. Gregory, one of the permanent officials, in the absence of Premier MacDonald, who is also Foreign Minister. The publication of the letter has aroused some curiosity as to why the critical moment of an election campaign was chosen for their issuance. The opponents of the Government, whether Conservatives or Liberals, contend that the reason for the dramatic appearance of the correspondence was that the Government became aware that the very secret letter was in the hands of the press and was to be printed to-day in any case and accordingly, that it made haste to rush its protest.

THRILLING RESCUE OF 27 NEWFOUNDLANDERS.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 25. Twenty-seven men and women, rescued by the American steamer Mt. Clay, from the schooner L and S, east of St. John's, Newfoundland, on Thursday, arrived in port this morning, bearing thrilling tales of their narrow escape from death. The little schooner, which was en route from Francis Harbor, Labrador, with twenty-one passengers, including three women, a young girl of sixteen, and a lad of twelve, who had spent the summer fishing at Labrador and were bound to their homes in Cape Earl, began to leak in the heavy seas the next night off Cape Bonavista. A goodly portion of the cargo was jettisoned, many gallons of oil being thrown overboard in the hope of quieting the tempestuous seas, after heroic working of the pumps. Distress signals were displayed, according to members of the rescued party. These signals were evidently misunderstood by one passing steamer and apparently ignored by another. Finally, after the party had given up all hopes of being rescued, the Mount Clay put in an appearance and, after effecting a rescue, extended every kindness to the nearly exhausted men and women, bringing them to this port from whence they leave for home, it is expected, by Red Cross liner Silvia, on Tuesday morning. The members of the crew are as follows:—Capt. William McCarthy; Mate, Reuben Horwood; Cook, Thomas Oakes; Seamen, Thomas Butt, Ambrose Kennedy and Edward Legge. The passengers on board were:—Mrs. Lena Oakes, Mrs. Ann Penny, Mrs. Margaret Horwood, Miss Susie Russell, Augustus Oakes, aged 12 years; Wm. Horwood, Willis Burden, Richard Horwood, Herbert Burden, Lillian Hodges, George Horwood, Clement Penny, John Horwood, Arthur Penny, Sam Burden, Elliot Penny, Maurice Murphy, Robert Burden, Felix McCarthy and Edward B. Joyce, agent at Labrador for the John Rorke and Sons of Carbonear. The crew and passengers are quartered in the Navy League Building, and the Shipping Master has telegraphed the Newfoundland Government about them and is now awaiting word.

Tablet to be Erected

IN MEMORY OF THE HEROISM OF A BRATE LAD.

On the 23rd of November, 1797, His Majesty's Frigate, "La Tribune," struck on Thrump Cap Shoal and after coming off, sank a little to the south of Herring Cove.

Out of 240 men and some women and children, all but twelve lost their lives. The Nova Scotia Historical Society have decided to unveil a Tablet at the Lighthouse, Herring Cove, in the memory of the heroism of Joe Cracker, a sailor lad of thirteen years of age, of Herring Cove, who was the first to rescue two men from the wreck. The plucky lad was afterwards, it is said, made a midshipman for his bravery, but did not stay long in the Navy. The following are the particulars of the loss of the frigate:

"La Tribune" was one of the finest frigates in His Majesty's service, carrying forty-four guns, and had been lately captured by the Unicorn frigate. She was commanded by Captain S. Barker, and sailed from Torbay on the twenty-second of September, 1797, as convoy to the Quebec and Newfoundland fleets. She lost sight of the fleets on the 19th of October, and on Thursday morning, the 23rd of November, came in sight of Halifax Harbor, when Captain Barker proposed to the master to lay the ship to till a pilot was got. The master remarked that the wind was fair, and as he knew the harbor well, no pilot was necessary. About 12 o'clock the ship had approached so near the Thrump Cap Shoals that the master became alarmed and sent for Mr. Galvin, the master's mate, who was sick below. Galvin had just appeared on deck, not having time to observe the position of the ship, when she struck. The captain had gone below to look over some papers which he had intended to take ashore with him, and on the ship striking, immediately went on deck. Signals of distress were made and answered by the military posts and ships in the harbor. Boats from all the military posts from His Majesty's ships and the dockyard proceeded to the relief of the La Tribune. Some of these reached the ship, but others had to return on account of the weather. The ship was immediately lightened by throwing all her guns overboard, so that at 9 o'clock she got off the shoals. The chain pumps were put in action and it was thought that she might be kept afloat. The gale now intensified, the wind blowing from the southeast. Her anchors were dropped, but failed to bring her to and she was fast driven towards the Western shore. It was now 10 o'clock and little hope was entertained of saving the ship or the lives of those on board of her. About 10.30 the ship lurched suddenly and went down; 240 men and some women and children were now struggling for their life in the water. With many of them the struggle was very short; a number clung to the shrouds, the tops and other parts of the wreck, but owing to the severity of the storm, they, one by one, dropped off through exhaustion, and disappeared in the raging billows. The cries and groans of the unhappy sufferers, from the bruises many of them had received, and as hope of deliverance began to fall them, were heart-rending. Although the wreck was so near shore that their cries could be distinctly heard—only eight persons survived to see the light of day.

The first effort made for their relief was by a boy thirteen years of age, who ventured off in a skiff by himself, about eleven o'clock next day. After great labor, the little hero succeeded in backing his boat so near that two men were thus saved. Two men named Dunlop and Monroe had preserved their strength and spirits. The others lay exhausted in the tops being unable to move. Through great exertion Dunlop and Monroe got them into the boy's boat and remained on the wreck themselves until succor came. The little boy bravely put to sea again, but on account of the heavy gale could not get sufficiently near to be of service. His example, however, shamed others with larger boats, who put off, and thus the eight persons were rescued.

A Quartermaster belonging to the ship, named McGregor, had his wife on board; they were greatly attached to each other. McGregor, from his affectionate solicitude for her safety, endeavored to persuade her while the ship lay on the shoals, to go on shore in one of the boats which came off from the island, as his mind would be more at ease. To his solicitations she replied that she never would abandon him, and that if it was his lot to perish she wished not to survive him. She shared the common fate. A considerable time after the ship had foundered a man was discovered swimming towards the wreck. On his approach it was found to be McGregor. He informed his comrades who were hanging to the wreck, that he had swam towards the shore—that he had ventured as far as he could with safety into the surf and feared that if he went further he should be dashed to pieces, and he cautioned them all to avoid making a similar attempt, but it was possible to hold by the wreck. ## Some Increase in Buying Power of Saskatchewan

DESPITE LOWER GRAIN YIELD HIGHER PRICES HAVE RAISED REVENUE.

In view of the increased prices of nearly all grains, the total farm revenue of the province of Saskatchewan should be a slightly larger amount than that of last year. The volume of the yield, however, will be considerably smaller and this means that many of the farmers will have to buy seed for next year, at the higher level of prices. On the whole, the province has been severely affected by the drought and other enemies of the farmer. While there are sections where the yield has been greater than that of last year, and where the farmer's net profit will be greater than at any time, at least since 1915, there are vast sections where the outcome has been extremely disappointing, and the purchasing power during the coming winter will be small.

The wheat crop, which is Saskatchewan's most important, and in which Saskatchewan far surpasses the other provinces, has fallen off very materially in volume and quality. With the radical rise in price, however, there is promise that the total value of the crop will exceed $200,000,000 in comparison with $184,000,000 last year. If this is the case, the position of the Saskatchewan farmer will be much better than has been the case for some time, despite the bumper yield of 1923. This, of course, will depend on the volume of wheat that the farmer is able to dispose of while prices are still high.

Whale is Model for Unusual Speed Boat

Resembling a whale or submarine in appearance, when out of water, a new type of speed boat under construction in England is expected by its designers to set new speed records when it is tested soon on the Thames River.

The low part of the hull is of hydro-plane design, with a lifting step to raise the hull when the boat is traveling at high speed, and to decrease the water resistance.

The deck work is streamlined. For speed driving in heavy seas, the pilot is almost inclosed. Only his head is exposed above the round deck.

One of the many novel features of the boat is a tail plane fitted across the rudder just above the propeller. This plane is designed to function in connection with the sliding step under the hull. A 450-horsepower engine is expected to propel the craft at record-breaking speed.

Exploring the Mysteries of Kilauea's Crater

To measure the temperatures in lava at various depths, a party of United States volcanologists are drilling a series of holes in the huge crater at Mount Kilauea in Hawaii.

The possibility of utilizing the steam from the crater for power purposes will be studied at the same time. To do this a small laboratory with small engines and condensers has been built over the hottest of the crater holes.

In drilling, much difficulty has been encountered, due to the great hardness of the basalt rock that forms the solid lava foundation. It is possible to bore only two or three feet a day. The work is expected to reveal new facts concerning the increase in temperature toward the center of the earth, as well as new knowledge of mineral and gas changes underground.

Jagged Rock Spires Carved by the Rain

The same forces of nature that sometimes dig unsightly gullies in your yard during a heavy rainstorm, were the sculptors that carved the lofty, oddly shaped spires of rock found at the edge of Crater Lake, a vast depression that once was the crater of an active volcano, in Crater Lake National Park of southwestern Oregon. Geologists who have studied it recently say it is the most striking illustration ever discovered of the tremendous power of rain in cutting away rock formations.

Ages ago, when this cavity was the crater of an active volcano, they say, it threw forth vast masses of volcanic dust and lava fragments. Through the centuries, these consolidated into layers of rock. Near the top of the rock strata was formed a layer harder than the rest.

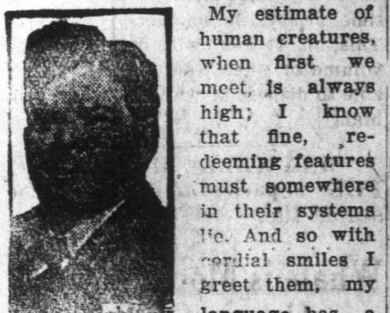

It was this hard layer that made possible the formation of the strange rock pinnacles. For, as countless rainstorms beat down upon the crater, century after century, certain portions of the hard layer resisted, and wherever it resisted it served as a shelter to protect the softer rock that lay directly beneath it.

Meanwhile, where the rain broke through, it washed away the softer material, leaving the protected material standing in the form of rock-capped spires.

The process is known as erosion. It is the process that slowly wears away the hill and mountains.

The next time it rains, go out into your garden or roadway. There you can see, on a small scale, how Nature carves.

SIZING THEM UP.

My estimate of human creatures, when first we meet, is always high; I know that fine, redeeming features must somewhere in their systems be. And so with genial smiles I greet them, my language has a genial flow; I to the drugstore wend and treat them to links that cost five cents a throw. I look on them as worthy hikers along the road where mortals range; they have to prove that they are pikers before my estimate will change. Sometimes this attitude ensnares me, I fall for fakers full of guile; but still, though ingratitude tears me, I greet the stranger with a smile. My inborn faith in human beings still thrives as strong as the blooming yew, and, after sundry jolly-cheelings, unpleasant matters I forget. I'm sorry for the man so bitter he views all people with disdain, and sees in every human creature some deep laid plots and projects vain. I'm sorry for the man who's feeling contempt for all the human race, because some fakers, glibly spouting, once got his roll with skill and grace. I'm sorry for the man who's hating all females in our growing town, because when once he thought of mating, a stay-eyed dame turned him down. I size up every fellow stranger as being worth his weight in gold, until he puts my wad in danger, and then no hatred do I hold. For every one who proves a sinner I know a hundred who are great; my neighbors do not make me shiver because one neighbor is a skater.

Huge Generator Does Work of 5,400,000 Men

A monster steam generator which, it has been estimated, is capable of doing more work in 24 hours than could have been performed by the entire slave population of the United States in 1860, has been constructed by the General Electric Company for installation in an Illinois power station.

It is rated at 80,000 horsepower, or 80,000 kilowatts, and includes both high-pressure and low-pressure units. The steam that has been used in the high-pressure section is re-superheated before being used in the low-pressure unit. Exhaust from the low-pressure turbine flows into two passages, each leading to a large vertical condenser.

A graphic illustration of the power of a generator of this size was given vividly by the late electrical wizard, Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, as follows: Each horsepower is equal to the work of 22½ men, so that 80,000 horsepower would equal the work of 1,800,000 men. But a man cannot work 24 hours a day, while the turbine can and does work that way. Therefore the big Chicago turbine will do the muscle work of three times 1,800,000 men, or supply as much energy as 5,400,000 men working in three eight-hour shifts, thus exceeding the capacity of the entire slave population of the United States before the Civil War, which was 4,000,000.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

THE HELPLESS MAN.

"Last night I dreamed I'd died," said also, "Passed from this world and trouble-free; And getting up to Heaven's gate, I was received in royal state.

"Come in and rest," St. Peter said, "Poor, weary wife be comforted, Come in and put your cares away." "No, no," said I, "I must not stay."

"What troubles you?" he asked and smiled, "At last you've come to Heaven child!" "I know," I said, "and I am proud To think in here I'd be allowed, But back to earth please let me go My helpless husband needs me so: Since first I took his wedding ring He hasn't found a single thing."

"I have to find his shoes and spats His overcoats and the and hats; At noon I've passed him out his hose, Where they are kept he never knows, And were they right beneath his nose He'd never see them. When he goes Upon a little business trip I must be there to pack his grip."

"Poor man, he'll quickly come to grief He cannot find his handkerchief. In vain about the house he'll look For his pyjamas on the hook. For thirty years I now assure, I've put the buttons in his shirt. Without me now I'm asking you 'Whatever will my husband do?'"

Loeb and Leopold to be Tried on a New Charge

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—If State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who prosecuted Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb for the murder of Robert Franks is re-elected next month, he will consider placing them on trial again for another murder. It was made known to-day. While Crowe refused to make a statement, he had had conferences with Joseph Tracey, father of Freeman Tracey, who was shot to death near the Leopold and Loeb homes.

The killing of Tracey is one of a number of crimes laid to the millionaire murderers. The father of the victim is known to have given Crowe new evidence said to be proof that his son was killed by Loeb and Leopold.

Crowe has a mass of evidence the investigations of several "mystery crimes, including the evidence dealing with episodes A.B.C. and D. listed in the report of the alienist obtained by the Leopold-Loeb defence.

Should Crowe decide to push new prosecutions, the youths would be given into his custody by the authorities of Joliet State Prison, where they are serving life terms for the Franks kidnapping and murder.

The boys may appear in court here at an early date to testify in the suit for $100,000 filed against them on behalf of Charles Rosin, a chauffeur, who charged Leopold and Loeb dragged him and mutilated him several nights before the Tracey murder.

New York's Tong War

SIX BULLETS IN BODY OF ON LEONG MEMBER.

New York, Oct. 16.—Tong warfare, which has blazed and smoldered in Chinatown for a fortnight, flashed forth to-day to claim the life of another Chinese.

The victim was Tong Woo, of the On Leong Tong. Bleeding from six bullet wounds, he was found on the floor of his equalled tenement house, feebly lifting a police whistle to his lips and trying to blow it.

A pistol with chambers full of exploded shells lay near the door. Someone evidently had slipped in while Woo lay abed and emptied the revolver before he could get up a defense.

Woo died at Gouverneur Hospital a few minutes later without giving police a clue to his murderer.

Lee Wah was taken into custody when he attempted to force entrance to the scene of the crime. He is a member of the Hip Sing Tong.

The Tong war that broke out on October 2, has thus far written five deaths and two other shootings upon police records.

To-Day's Election

To-day Bonavista Bay decides who will represent their interests in the House of Assembly, namely, those who have shown during their short time in public life that they have the interests of the country at heart, or men who proved their inability to govern when they had the opportunity, and who have spent the campaign period trying to frame excuses for the deplorable manner in which they fell down on their jobs.

The news which has reached the city to-day indicates that the electorate have not been deceived by plausible promises or by the simulated indignation of the Opposition, and it is generally conceded that Monroe and Winsor will win a sweeping victory.

The Zinovieff Letter

The startling announcement in the press dispatches on Saturday of the discovery of a secret letter from Zinovieff, the President of the Committee of the Communist Internationale, urging the Soviet envoys to extend their propagandist activities, has promptly been followed by a denial from Moscow of any knowledge of the matter, and by indignant demands for an apology.

The publication of the letter is claimed to have been the work of political agitators, and was also intended to arouse further hostility to the Anglo-Russian Treaty, but the disclosure was made by an official of the Foreign Office, and it is as impossible to conceive that it had not received consideration by the Leader of the Labour Party who is in charge of that Department, as it is to understand that his motive could be in exposing the alleged conspiracy on the eve of an election.

The former conduct of the Soviet representatives in London has not been such as to warrant the public in trusting implicitly in their integrity. Not long since Ramsay MacDonald issued a stinging rebuke to them when it was found that they were taking advantage of their position to distribute seditious literature throughout the country. In Canada the Russian Mission was discovered attempting the same underhand game, and although it could not be proved that Moscow was guilty of complicity, the republic must be held responsible for the breach of faith on the part of its chosen representatives.

The Soviet envoys in London have come as supplicants to the country which during the war advanced them sums amounting to more than $3,000,000,000, a debt which they repudiated. They have begged for help to resurrect the economical status of Russia which they themselves wilfully destroyed. They are the representatives of that section of the country which deserted the Allies during the war, and arranged with our enemies the Treaty of Brest Litovsk. They have been incessant in their activities both in Britain and throughout the Empire to undermine the traditions upon which our constitution rests. Their management of public affairs has shown them ruthless in their methods, inspired only by motives of personal greed, and utterly incapable of restoring order in the land or rebuilding on the ruins which they had accomplished.

It is well known that Moscow has never been friendly disposed towards Ramsay MacDonald, and on more than one occasion has expressed disgust because violent changes did not follow the accession of the Labour Party to office. On the other hand there have been in the ranks of Labour several whose sympathies with Bolshevism have been most pronounced, and who, from the point of view of the Soviet Republic, would make far more capable champions of their unholy doctrines.

Supreme Court

(Before Full Bench.)
In the matter of the King vs. Wm. F. O'Reilly.
 Howley, K.C., renewed his motion for the dismissal of the charge and the release of the prisoner. He submitted that the jury did not find the prisoner guilty on the alternative of obtaining money under false pretences.

Mr. L. E. Emerson submitted that as there was a disagreement on the alternative the Court had no power to dismiss the case. The Chief Justice in delivering judgment quoted sec. 4 of the Larceny Act and said that the jury did not exercise the power given them by the Statute and the prisoner was entitled to a discharge.

Mr. Justice Johnson held that the failure of the jury to bring in a verdict is neither an acquittal or conviction and therefore the defendant should be held on remand.

Mr. Justice Kent concurred in the judgment of the Chief Justice. He held that there was no other count than that of larceny. The finding of not guilty has exhausted the indictment and the accused was entitled to his discharge. He did not express opinion as to the right of the Crown to move in the matter again.

The Chief Justice granted the discharge of the prisoner after which the Court arose until 11 a.m. to-morrow.

The Organ Recital

Mr. H. B. Wardell, who has recently taken the post of Organist and Choirmaster at the Presbyterian Church, gave a short organ recital at that church last night after the evening service. Mr. Wardell, known to St. John's very highly commended by a former well-known organist, Mr. A. H. Allen, and this in itself, goes far to bring Mr. Wardell into our musical family with warmest greetings. The new organist is still in the twenties, and comes to us from a post in Briffeld, Yorkshire. That his heart is in the right place was amply shown last night, when his playing was marked by an enthralling expression not always apparent in an organist. He gave one the impression that he felt the effect of each chord. This enthusiasm may have led him in to a slight forgetfulness at times that he had only a chorus of 25 voices, but what can we do when the glorious chords lead one to the fullest expression of which one is capable. The Imperial March (Elgar) and Toccata, 5th Symphony (Widor) were played splendidly, the rhythm being clear even with the full power of the organ on, while the Priere, Prelude and Vieux Chanson were played with musicianly feeling, bringing out the fact that the Kirk has, in its amended form, quite a good organ. We learn that Mr. Wardell is also a pianist, and his work last night is sufficient to desire to hear more from him. The Kirk Choir upheld their reputation in the Anthem "Hail Glorious Light" and the well-known "The Heavens are Telling"; perhaps the most satisfying item was the Quartet: "Cast Thy Burden Upon the Lord." (Mendelssohn.)

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Oct. 25th.—The weather cold all this day. Out and trimed, by my barber who tells me I am getting somewhat bald which worries me greatly, about 'tis what I must expect at my age. Meeting Povey, I did again attempt to borrow a little of him to meet my bills which he says he is not able to let me have. Indeed, he is become so stingy a fellow that were it not for the news he brings me, being the veriest gossip I did ever know, I would in the future forego his company. He did tell me how everywhere there was the greatest expectation that Mr. Monroe would win his election, and so the talk goes, by a greater majority than I think. This night, to the club where I again win a match at billiards, and an improving beyond my greatest expectations.

Oct. 26th. (Lord's Day).—Up betimes, being sorely troubled in my sleep, and as I believe, because of my financial worries. My wife in high ill-humour all the day and chides herself that she is not for marrying me, but is a poor wretch if she loves me only for what money I may give her. The weather grows mild again so I do not mind going out. Heavily he to discourse of divers matters of business, and makes a proposal to me which will solve my difficulties of money. This puts me in a more contented frame of mind than I have been this fortnight past, and methinks I must watch my affairs the more closely in future that I may not have the same troubles another time.

DE VALERA AGAIN ARRESTED.
 LONDONDERRY, Ireland, Oct. 26.
 Eamon De Valera was arrested to-night at Columbus Hall where it was his intention to deliver a speech. When all hope of the coming of De Valera appeared to have been abandoned, a slim figure was observed approaching the side door of the hall. It proved to be the republican leader and a police officer immediately put him under arrest and transferred him in a motor car to the police barracks almost before anybody in or outside the hall realized that the Republican chief was a prisoner. De Valera came to the hall without disguise although he had discarded his eyeglasses, and he offered no resistance.

GENERAL WU MARCHING ON PEKING.
 TIENTSIN Oct. 26.
 Wu Pei Fu, the deposed marshal of the Peking Government armies is marching on the capital with heavy forces to drive out his former subordinate, Fong Yu Hains, who seized the city last Thursday and forced from office President Tsa Kun and compelled the executive to sign a mandate ordering the cessation of hostilities with Manchuria.

SOVIET GOVERNMENT DEMANDS AN APOLOGY.
 MOSCOW, Oct. 27.
 Responding to the note of protest from the British Foreign Office concerning the alleged letter of M. Zinovieff President of the Executive of the Communist International urging propaganda for the overthrow of existing institutions in Great Britain, the Soviet Government in a sharp note despatched late this afternoon denies the authenticity of this letter. The note seeks an apology for the subversive propaganda propensities imputed to the Soviet Government and proposes the establishment of an arbitrary mission to pass upon the verities of the so-called Zinovieff letter. It was telegraphed Christian Rakovsky, the Russian Charge in London repudiating the letter. In repudiating the Zinovieff letter, the Soviet officials are indignant over the fact that the British note of protest transmitted through the Soviet Delegation in London last Friday night was signed by J. B. Gregory, who is described as an official of the British Foreign Office instead of Premier MacDonald, which they regard as an affront to the Soviet Republic.

INDIGNANT DENIALS OF KNOWLEDGE OF ZINOVIEFF LETTER.
 MOSCOW, Oct. 27.
 Russo-British relations have reached an acute stage over the publication of the alleged Zinovieff letter which the Soviet Government brands as impudent forgery and an election campaign manoeuvre designed to destroy the Anglo-Russian Treaty and imperil the present friendly relations between the two governments. Mr. Living assistant commissioner for foreign affairs has sent a strong denial to M. Rakovsky the Charge d'Affaires in London and M. Zinovieff has denounced the whole affair in no uncertain tone to the British Trade Union Council, characterizing the document as a gross falsification. Soviet officials here take grave exception to the severe language employed in the British note and also resent the signing of the note by Mr. Gregory an under official instead of Premier MacDonald which they regard as an affront to the dignity of the Soviet Republic. They are especially indignant at the sentence in the British note that the Soviet Government must say definitely whether it has or has not the power to stop such propaganda by organizations over which it cannot exercise control. The British note as published in London does not contain the foregoing sentence in the form quoted, but tells the Soviet Government that if it has the power to carry out agreements it ought to do so, and it has not, and if the power and the responsibilities which belong to the state in other countries are in Russia in the keeping of private and irresponsible bodies, the Soviet Government ought not to make agreements which it knows it cannot keep.

SMUGGLED CHINESE IN CUSTODY.
 NEW YORK, Oct. 27.
 Seven Chinese who were smuggled into this country from Hong Kong in packing cases aboard a steamer, suffered no serious punishment from a court of ships during their 30 day voyage that one of them died soon after being taken into custody by the police yesterday, and six others were near death. The Chinese of this city charged with smuggling their seven countrymen also were arrested by the police. All of the prisoners are members of the Rip Side 'Fon' according to the police, who declare that the seven men had been smuggled as recruits in a 'Fong' war which so far has resulted in several fatalities. The police said they obtained information from the prisoners that the seven smuggled men captured yesterday were members of a band of Chinese army and twenty Chinese smuggled aboard a steamer on which seven battered and bruised men arrived yesterday. The name of the steamship was withheld by the police.

Newfoundlander Abroad

A friend in town has just received a letter from a former Harbor Grace lady, Mrs. (Capt.) W. H. Ellis (nee Miss M. E. Thomey) from which we copy a few extracts, which will be read with much interest by her many friends both here and in the second city. Mrs. Ellis is a Newfoundlander and is proud to own up to it and is ever ready to welcome everybody from "home."

During the world war she took a great interest in our boys. No doubt some of "The First 500" will remember her. Her home is at Plymouth. Mrs. Ellis says in part:—

"Many thanks for your letters and paper clippings which I received by H.M.S. "Hood." I felt quite honored.

"On the 28th of September I came home after a very pleasant holiday with my husband in Belgium and Holland since July. Before that I went to North Cornwall, thence to Cardiff and Newport among the Welsh people. We had a very enjoyable trip. "My husband sailed for Glasgow a few days ago, and I am now awaiting a wire of his arrival there at any hour.

"As we were sailing down the Channel we met the Grand Squadron homeward bound. We hoisted our flags and "dipped" to the Hood. The salute was quickly returned, while hundreds of men lined the decks and cheered heartily.

"The weather in England and on the Continent has been bad for months; in fact we have had no summer at all. Nothing but gales of wind and torrential rain day after day. I hope you have fared better in Newfoundland.

"I assure you the Evening Telegram is a welcome visitor to my home.

"Very best wishes to all my old friends in St. John's and dear old Harbor Grace."

"The Ne'er Do Well"

Thomas Meighan in Rex Beach's Famous Story at the Majestic To-day.

One of the best photoplays seen in many months is Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "The Ne'er-Do-Well."

Kirk Anthony (Thomas Meighan) lives up to the title of the production, and his father is thoroughly ashamed of him. One night at a party his friends are feeling gay and they decide that it would be a good joke on the unsuspecting Kirk to ship him to Panama penniless.

So it is that Anthony finds himself far from home and with no means of communication. Then the thrilling moments and mirth provoking episodes begin. He gets himself into great trouble with the authorities and, more serious still, finds himself desperately in love with a beautiful Spanish girl, played by Lila Lee. How he becomes a real man and wins a charming woman for his wife make an interesting story. The cast is made up of highly capable players, including Gertrude Astor, John Milton, Gus Weinberg, Jules Cowles, Laurance Wheat and George O'Brien.

Italian Ship Arrives for Repairs

S. S. Monte Beanco, 14 days from Rotterdam bound to Montreal in ballast arrived in port on Saturday night for repairs to her engines. The passage across the Atlantic was very rough and engine trouble developed. The captain decided to make St. John's as the nearest port. The Monte Beanco is an Italian ship of the same line as the Clara Camus which was in collision with the Meisama, some short while. Messrs. Bowring Brothers are the ship's agents. She is 6968 gross and 4511 net tons, and was built at Trieste, Italy, in 1913. Her dimensions are 453 feet in length, 52.6 feet beam, and 27.6 deep.

HALIFAX ROAD RACE.

MacAulay The Winner—O'Toole Finished Third After Wonderful Race.

Great excitement prevailed in the city on Saturday afternoon as to the result of The Halifax Herald and The Evening Mail Modified Marathon Race, which took place in Halifax at 2 o'clock, and in which Ronald O'Toole, Newfoundland's representative, was a competitor. The first news received was a private message from Messrs. Moirs Ltd., about 3.45 to Mr. F. V. Chesman, in which it stated that MacAulay was in the lead passing Fairview, six miles out. O'Toole second and McLellan third. To those who had the pleasure of hearing this first hand information, the news quickly spread, and the consensus of opinion was that O'Toole was making a plucky fight for the honors. At the Western Union Telegraph Office a large crowd had gathered to await the final result, and at 4 o'clock a bulletin board was put up announcing that MacAulay was first, McLellan second and O'Toole, third. About fifteen minutes later a message came through the Anglo to Mr. S. P. Cullen, which read as follows:—"MacAulay wins race, time 57.08 3-5; McLellan second, 59.18 1-5; O'Toole, third, 60.18 1-5. O'Toole feeling fine. I consider he did wonderful judging from men he ran against. MacAulay started after race that O'Toole is the coming man." (Sgd.) F. RICE.

When the times of the race had been made known, there was general disappointment that O'Toole had not done the race quicker. Later a message was received from Manager Bell to Mr. J. M. Tobin, giving the official times, and stated that the course was a quarter of a mile longer than last year. However, this helps to explain a little for the slow time made, and nothing will be known until the full particulars of the race have been received. The weather conditions were probably none too good.

Bell Sends Message.
Yesterday morning Mr. S. P. Cullen received a night message from Mr. J. Bell, manager of Ron O'Toole, which reads as follows:—"O'Toole got third place. He ran a great race all through. The course was a quarter of a mile longer than last year. MacAulay was in great form, also McLellan. I think O'Toole made a great show with such a fast field of starters. Many thanks for messages received from everybody."

A public press despatch from Halifax states as follows:—"R. O'Toole, of the Newfoundland Athletic Club, running a strong race, finished third in the ten mile road race for the championship of the Maritime Provinces, conducted here this afternoon, by The Halifax Herald. Victor MacAulay, of Windsor, N.S., came first and Silas McLellan, of Noel, N.S., was second. There were forty-eight competitors.

Judging from the latter message O'Toole must have certainly put up a gallant fight to try and beat the much touted MacAulay. The message received by Mr. Chesman in its early stages stated that O'Toole was running second passing Fairview over half the course. How much further he remained in that position is not known, but the trend of the message would lead one to believe that he chased MacAulay, the champion, hard, and none other than our local champion, O'Toole, caused MacAulay any worry. Further particulars of the race are eagerly awaited.

Hearty congratulations are due O'Toole for the excellent showing he made, whilst a similar mood of praise is also due Manager Jack Bell, for his great care and attention, whilst training his charge.

Besides a cup for the winner, three gold medals are also awarded to the first three runners. O'Toole has earned for himself a well earned distinction, and in view of the fact that it was his first race over such a rough course, with lots of hill climbing mixed between, his showing can be considered very creditable. Our representative defeated a fast field of runners, many of whom were hard at training for the greater part of the summer.

Motor Cars in Collision

Yesterday about 4.30 p.m. two Ford motor cars came in collision on LeMarchant Road as a result of one in front not giving a warning signal. Both cars were proceeding east along the thoroughfare, the front car stopped before the driver of the rear car had time to apply his brakes with the result that his machine played "high backs" with the one in front. Fortunately no one was hurt and very little damage was done.

Body of Missing Watchman Found

Yesterday morning a man named Mercer of Mundy's Pond, whilst passing through the woods at the head of the pond and near McDougald's Grove came upon the body of the watchman, Philip Woodford, who disappeared from the Poor Asylum, where he was employed, on Thursday, the 16th instant, at 3 p.m. The body was in a kneeling position and in the right hand was a razor, around the handle of which was wrapped a handkerchief. The unfortunate man had cut his throat from ear to ear. Mr. J. C. Furdister, who lives not far distant from the scene, on being informed telephoned the police station. Sergeant Long and Constable Pittman were immediately despatched to the scene and brought the body to the Morgue, where Mr. A. W. Miller, of the Poor Asylum, identified it as being that of Philip Woodford, a native of Harbor Ma'n. A post mortem examination was held on the body by Dr. Anderson, who pronounced death due to the wounds received. The body was then taken in charge by Undertaker Martin and brought to his Mortuary rooms, where it was prepared for burial.

The Passing of a Centenarian

There passed away yesterday, at the residence of his son, 295 Hamilton Avenue, William Owen, a native of Trinity. The deceased, who had just reached his one hundred milestone, came to St. John's about 80 years ago. Always full of energy, he was blessed with remarkable health. It was only about a week ago that he was taken ill, and up to that time, despite his great age, he was remarkably active. He is survived by 4 daughters, and 1 son, John. Another son made the supreme sacrifice during the war, when his vessel was torpedoed in the Mediterranean. His wife died many years ago. The funeral takes place to-morrow afternoon.

Seaman Drowned Near Dry Dock Wharf

BODY RECOVERED AT NOON YESTERDAY.

On Saturday forenoon the police were informed that a man named Kenneth Dyke, who had signed articles to sail on the steamer Home, on the day previous, had failed to return to the ship before her sailing and that no trace of him could be found. The police, after taking up the matter first learned that the man had left his home, 41 LeMarchant Road, 7 o'clock Friday evening to proceed to the ship, with a bundle of clothes. Later it was learned that he had proceeded ashore on board and had returned ashore again and that he was last seen about 10 o'clock, by some laborers, who were working on the dock wharf. The police continued the search until late Saturday night without any further information, and the only conclusion that they could come to was that he had fallen overboard. Yesterday morning the search was continued when Detective Lee, in company with two constables, and with the assistance of several citizens, began dragging operations. The search party were out in boats all the morning, and at noon the body of the missing man was brought to the surface, near the mouth of the Basin, by Mr. Hugh Walsh, of Cuddihy St. The body was then taken in charge by Detective Lee, wrapped in canvas and removed to the Morgue for post mortem examination. Meanwhile arrangements were made for a clergyman to break the sad news to the deceased's family. Dr. Anderson later visited the Morgue and pronounced death due to drowning. No marks were found on the body. Undertaker Carnell then took charge of the body. The deceased was 34 years of age, and formerly lived at Greenspard. His death, under such sad circumstances, comes as a severe blow to his wife and relatives, for whom much sympathy will be felt. How the deceased man met his death is unknown. It is quite possible that he was proceeding to his ship up the narrow part of the wharf and, tripping over one of the gumpheads in the dark, he was precipitated into the water without anybody seeing him or even hearing an outcry.

Thrilling Adventures in the Jungle

(By FRITZ BLOCKI)

"Thrills! Adventures? You can't very well go into the jungle without having them. The peculiar thing is, though, that when you're in the jungle as a member of a scientific expedition, you're not likely to be conscious that you're undergoing an adventure until after it is all over. What you're interested in at the time is capturing a particular specimen of bird, beast, reptile, or fish—whatever it may be. "That the specimen may chew your hand off or leave the mark of its claws on your face in its effort to get away somehow doesn't seem to occur to you while the fight is on. It isn't until afterward, when you sit down to think things over at your leisure, that the thought strikes you that you may have had a narrow escape."

It was William Beebe talking. He is honorary curator of ornithology at the New York Zoological Park, known more familiarly as the "Bronx Zoo," and is director of the tropical station of the New York Zoological Society. He had just returned from a five-month expedition into the wilds of British Guiana, South America, in search of zoological specimens to add to the Bronx collection. He had brought back innumerable cages filled with queer jungle creatures, some of which never before had been seen in this country. Among these were tree-climbing porcupines, agoutis, long-tailed rodents, and yellow headed vultures.

Beebe is a very tall, very slim man of 47, who looks like a scholar, and talks like one—in precise phrases, uttered softly and rather diffidently. His face, his hands and forehead have been burned to the hue of mahogany by the tropic sun on his many expeditions into the wilds. Otherwise, in neither appearance nor manner does he suggest his adventurous calling. Yet on more than one occasion he has attacked and subdued some of the fiercest creatures of the jungle with no weapon more dangerous than his bare hands and his courage.

On the expedition from which he just returned he lay in his cabin one night and permitted a vampire bat to creep over his body, hoping that the creature would sink its teeth in his flesh and thus permit him to disclose to science for the first time the sensation of having one of these strange and elusive animals suck the blood from his veins!

"About the most disquieting time we had on the expedition," Beebe told me "came one night when we were hunting nothing but a breath of air. Several of us were wandering about in the jungle, picking our way among the enormous trunks of the giant moro trees, and little thinking of any danger in store for us."

"Suddenly one of the party gave an involuntary gasp, and pointed toward a pool of moonlight that filtered through the trees not 50 feet away. In the centre stood a full-grown jaguar, glaring inequivalently at us with furtive, glowing eyes!"

"We stopped abruptly. There wasn't a thing we could do save to stand there. In the whole party there wasn't a weapon of any kind—not even a pocket-knife. And then, a most extraordinary thing happened. The jaguar turned about, as if bored, and marched calmly and leisurely away!"

"A day or so later we had a real adventure—one in which the danger was real and present—yet there wasn't one of us who thought of possible peril until it was all over. We had our headquarters in a large bungalow in a clearing at the edge of the jungle at Carribo, a point of land at the junction of the Manarin and Curvini rivers. The whole party was in camp one afternoon when I happened to notice what appeared to be a large stick protruding from the water at an angle and dotting down the river toward us, and floating down the river toward us, shouted to the others of the party.

"We got nets and oars together, jumped into two rowboats and started down the stream. We caught up with the boat and entangled it in our nets. They swung these little bits aloft, carrying them upright in their mouths like little green banners as they wend their way back to their nest, which may be as far as a quarter of a mile away. They remind one of a cavalcade of tiny warriors going off to battle in single file and carrying tall green spears before them.

the others worked the boat ashore. "When the boat grounded, we drove the animal out, surrounded it, and kept it at bay with sticks and clubs, seeking to prevent it from clawing its way through us to freedom until some one could obtain a box or crate in which to imprison it. One of the women members of the party, without pausing for orders, bustled herself about providing this, to find that the only crate we had large enough to accommodate an ant-eater was already occupied by a box constrictor that had been captured a few days before!

"Some women may be afraid of snakes, but this one isn't. She reached down, picked up the box, and without any hesitation thrust it into a smaller box with the two other women members of the expedition rushed down to the shore with the packing-cases. At last we succeeded in driving the infuriated ant-eater-into this. Then we were able to take a calmer view of our captive."

"It was one of the largest ant-eaters I have ever seen. Its eight feet of length included a nose almost two feet long. This is what we had seen in the water, for the rest of the animal's body is submerged when it swims. The body was covered with long, coarse black hair, and it had a great bushy tail. The claws were fully three inches long—more than twice the size of a lion's claws—and curled backward and upward so that the points would not become dulled in walking.

"Ant-eaters, you know, live on ants and antlike creatures called 'termites.' They tear open the nests with their claws and lick up the insects with their tongues, which are longer even than their noses. We couldn't supply our captive with its customary diet, but after a little experimenting devised a ration that seemed to suit it very well—eggs three times a day; a half dozen eggs and several quarts of milk.

"There was another afternoon of excitement when the women members of our party were alone in camp. Suddenly some of the natives started a frightful hubbub, shouting that an enormous snake was approaching in the underbrush. Running toward it, the women saw that it was a rainbow boa, more than nine feet long and several inches in diameter. This snake is beautiful and not poisonous, so they decided to capture it.

"One of the women made a dive for it, seeking to seize it behind the head, but the snake was too quick, and a real battle was on.

"Several times the women barely escaped being encircled. At last, though, they managed to drag the boa to an empty packing-box and to dump it inside. This snake is now housed at the Bronx Zoo.

"The wonders of the wild life of the tropics furnish much more interest to a scientific expedition, of course, than do the possibilities of adventure. For instance, we found an insect that looks a good deal like our common ant. These little creatures, though, are able to destroy a house in a short time! They are called 'termites.' They live entirely on wood. When millions of them attack a wooden dwelling or a tree, it soon crumbles into a heap because so many tiny holes have been bored in it. The termites build great nests on the limbs and trunks of trees that are found by the ant-eaters and torn to pieces.

"Another interesting pest makes farming almost impossible down there. One night an army of these walked off with the entire garden that one of our party had planted. These insect robbers, which also resemble our common ants, did the job so completely that the only trace of garden left was a bare patch of earth.

"When we awoke in the morning, and found the garden gone, our friend rushed out, amazed and bewildered. Just in time to see the results of his labors winding in a tiny crooked path along the ground. The garden was literally moving into the jungle before his eyes in thousands of tiny pieces of green!

"These pests are called 'leaf-cutting ants.' They live on green leaves that they carry off and chew but do not eat. They swing these little bits aloft, carrying them upright in their mouths like little green banners as they wend their way back to their nest, which may be as far as a quarter of a mile away. They remind one of a cavalcade of tiny warriors going off to battle in single file and carrying tall green spears before them.

That Offside Game!

By W. CRESSWELL, (The Famous Sunderland Back.)

There is one thing I am never able to understand about modern football. That is, why most forwards seem afraid to take the ball through on their own occasionally. Of course, I know that good combination and clever passing are essential to success, and that the selfish player is of very little use to his side. But there is reason in all things!

If a forward is running at full speed with the ball under proper control, a defender who advances to tackle him has very little chance of robbing him of the ball. In fact, I should put the odds at about ten to one against his being successful!

Suppose a man is coming towards me. As I go to tackle him he might do any one of a dozen different things without parting with the ball. Obviously his chance of guessing correctly which he will do is very small indeed. But what usually happens in nine cases out of ten? As soon as I get anywhere near him, the forward simply passes to the man who is in the best position to continue towards my goal.

That brings about two things. Firstly, as I go forward to tackle, I glance round to see which of my opponents is most likely to get the pass which I am certain is coming. I note his position and make my tackle in such a way that if the pass does come I shall have a good chance of intercepting it.

Secondly, as I move forward I go away from my goal, but the opposing forwards continue to run towards it, with the result that they "at once" place themselves offside! So even if I fail to intercept the pass and it goes to one of their forwards, he is at once pulled up by the referee's whistle!

If the forward, instead of passing, had kept the ball and beaten me himself, there would have been no offside. At any rate, I know that if forwards went in for a bit more individual play I should jolly soon give up playing back and choose some other position on the field!

I nearly got myself in a very awkward fix a few years ago. During the war I signed on for a well-known Scottish team, and a day or two afterwards was sent off by the Army authorities on a course of instruction. By the time my course had finished, my battalion had moved to Aldershot, and I never went near Scotland again!

As I had never played so much as a single game for the team, I thought I no longer belonged to them and, after the war was over, signed on for South Shields.

Then I found to my horror that I was still on the lists of the Scottish club and liable to get into serious trouble for joining two clubs at once.

Finally, after a great deal of fuss, I managed to get transferred to South Shields for the large sum of £15!

A season or two afterwards Sunderland paid four figures to secure my services.—Pearson's Weekly.

Star Movie To-Day

Mr. Karl K. Kitchen, brilliant special writer and war correspondent for the New York World, says: "There is no question that 'The White Rose' will appeal to women film-goers, for it is a picture that tears the heart strings. "On the opening night nearly all the women in the audience were in tears and one girl actually fainted. "It is the last word in the deaf and dumb drama. "D. W. Griffith is still the peer of all motion picture directors; as great an artist, in his line of endeavor as David Belasco is in his. This is the highest tribute to his genius anyone can pay."

Jews Invest Heavily in the Holy Land.

GENEVA, Oct. 25. Not less than $27,000,000 has been invested in Palestine by Jews from the time the country was first occupied by the British until to-day, according to first reports submitted by the Zionist organization, "acting under Article 4 of the Mandate as Jewish agency to the Mandate's Commission of the League of Nations, at its fifth session. The report, which represents a unique document in Jewish as well as international history shows that the investments in Palestine included those made by the Zionist organization, Keren Hayesod, the Jewish national fund and private Jewish investors.

Capital and Labor

"Is capital the enemy of labor?" asks the Ottawa Journal, and proceeds to answer the question by telling the story of the development of the pulp and paper industry in Canada. The Journal figures that amount of the wages as great as the interest and dividends paid to capital. Wages paid amount to $45,000,000 yearly. That is labor's share. The return to capital is in the neighbourhood of $2,000,000 yearly. That is capital's share.

The amount paid in wages has grown steadily from year to year as the amount of capital invested has increased, the one following the other in a parallel line of progression.

The editorial concludes: "The half crazy Bolshevik brain was never so nearly completely crazy as it was in his idea that it could destroy capital without hurting labor. Capital cannot do anything without labor; but labor can do little without the stimulus and aid of capital. Capital can not grow without employing more labor; the faster capital grows, the greater amount of labor it employs; and the more successful capital becomes, the higher scale of wages it pays. The greatest industry in the world is the United States Steel Company. Its skilled mechanics are among the best paid mechanics in the world. It employs a great deal of unskilled labor, but even that unskilled labor, mostly of foreign stock, is paid fifty times as much per day as, for instance, the unskilled labor of China, where, practically, capital does not operate in industry."

Preacher Scored

A famous preacher made a new score on one occasion against an anonymous correspondent. Whilst in his pulpit one Sunday morning, a note was handed to him by the vergier, and upon opening it he found scrawled across a sheet of paper the word "Fool!"

Rising to the occasion, he exhibited it to his congregation, and said: "In my time I have received much anonymous correspondence in which the writer has written the letter but forgotten to sign his name. But here is a strange thing—a man has signed his name and omitted to write the letter!"

Our Competent Medical Men

Dr. Harry Roberts says:—"In spite of all their practical limitations and their still long distance from their goal, the science and the art of medicine, as represented by their responsible exponents, stand higher today than they have stood for two thousand years."

He sets out in the Weekly Westminster to answer certain questions:—"In there, in the medical profession to-day, a spirit differing in essence from that of thirty years ago? This is one question. Do the men who have received their medical diplomas within the last decade differ essentially in outlook or technical equipment from their fathers and uncles who followed the same career? This is a second question. To these we may, perhaps, add a third: Among these younger men are there any outstanding individuals who, by reason of inspiration or special insight, are in a position to lead their seniors?"

"If neither the superman nor the mere mechanics are to be taken as just indices of the relative condition of contemporary medicine, to what phenomena shall we look?"

"The true measure is given by that substantial minority—a minority which has grown rapidly in the last fifteen years—of competent and intelligent practitioners who seriously regard their work and their profession, and are ever eager to understand the rationale of their technique, and, as must be the case with all who have studied the history of science, are intelligently critical of traditional postulates and dogmas, even when backed by highly reputed teachers and colleagues. In almost every little town, and in very many villages, one or more of these pillars of medical practice are to be found. They are, for the most part, little heard of outside their several districts, but their national value is beyond rubies. How, then, do the men in this category compare with the coffee-pounding men of half a generation ago?"

"In the first place they are, as I have said, much more substantial; that is to say, they form a much bigger proportion of the whole. In a very short time they will no longer be a minority. Secondly, they are altogether better equipped for the carrying out of those technical measures which formerly were confined to a small number of specialists. For, side by side with the development of specialism, the range of competent general practice has increased pari passu."

SIDE TALKS.

THOSE DANGEROUS FRANK OPINIONS.

"She asked for my frank opinion and I gave it." And right there the trouble began. It resulted in the blight of a budding friendship.

"No one ever wants anyone's frank opinion," says my friend, the cynic. "What he wants is the other fellow's admiring approval whether it's sincere or not."

Few Friendships Survive Them.

There's a lot of truth in the cynic's contention. Personally, I avoid opinions that are painfully frank with people whom I really care for. Few friendships survive them.

There was a man who asked me what I thought of his poem. I thought it was atrocious, and while I wasn't that frank with him, I did suggest that a little study of the rules of scansion and rhythm would doubtless be helpful. That wasn't what he wanted at all. He replied with some heat that the newer forms of verse defy patterns, and then changed the subject abruptly as one who finds it useless to talk with anyone so lacking in a sense of the truly poetic.

Beware Lovers Asking Advice.

And there was the case of the Authorman's friend. He asked the Authorman's opinion of a girl in whom he was interested and in an unguarded moment—got it. The girl was frivolous, shallow, and selfish, but he married her the following month and has been finding out to his sorrow ever since the truth of the frank opinion. All the same he has never forgiven the Authorman.

A lawyer told me that a client once wished to consult him about certain matters pertaining to the building of a new house. "Bring your architect with you when you come," he said, "for I shall want to talk with both of you."

"Oh, but I've finished with the architect," said the client. "I only hired him to draw the plans. I'm going to superintend the building myself."

The lawyer had been all through that situation and could speak from personal experience. He insisted on the architect. "You'll be sorry," he said. "I strongly advise you not to attempt it if you haven't had any experience with that sort of thing. You'll get into trouble sure as you live."

But the man insisted that he was perfectly competent to attend to the matter himself and went to another lawyer who wasn't so frank with his unsolicited opinions.

But he valued the Lawyer.

A few months later after the overhauling of the roof had been going on such a way as to save the contractor considerable money at the expense of the whole architectural beauty of the house, the distracted owner called in the architect to finish the superintending of the work. But he avoids the lawyer who advised it, when he meets him on the street, and never gives him any of his business.

Moral: Avoid frank opinions. Year friend will never forgive you for being right, at haec fabula doct.

An Amazing Story at the Nickel To-Night

"HOLLYWOOD" SHOWS THE MAKING OF MOVING PICTURES.

One thing's sure! The world in general is going to know a lot more about the way motion pictures are made after seeing "Hollywood" than they did before this Paramount picture, produced by James Cruze, which will be displayed at the Nickel Theatre to-night.

Not that it is propaganda, nor yet a travogue of the studios or of Hollywood. The story is a real one with laughs, tears and romance, quite in the accepted style. But what a background! And what wonderful folks are to appear! The big Paramount stars, leading women, leading men, character actors and actresses, directors, officials, writers.

The middle western family which gets to the film capital by divers means and for various purposes, sees them all and is properly awed and delighted. And the broad scope of the "heavens" discloses Hollywood settling against the mountains, the studios, the hotels, the boulevards, the restaurants, the golf courses, the Hollywood Bowl, and everything that makes it unique in suburban communities.

Frank Condon wrote the story which was adapted by Thomas Gerashy. It is marked, but it is the genuine hazy, industrious, wholesome Hollywood that will be seen, not the garish place some yellow journalists would like to make it appear.

Watch for "Nanook Of The North" which will be shown at this Theatre on Thursday. Particulars in this paper to-morrow.

"Nice People," "St. Elmo," "Great John Ganton"

THIS WEEK'S PLAYS BY YOUNG-ADAMS COMPANY.

The Young-Adams players open their second week in the Casino Theatre with the presentation of the big Broadway success "Nice People." In securing this production so soon after 't's appearance on Broadway, Mr. Young has accomplished a ten-strike. The piece is still being played on the road with Miss Francine Larrimore, who was starred in it on Broadway, in the leading female role. Mr. Young saw it when it was playing in the metropolis and made arrangements to get it as soon as it was released for stock offering. The outstanding character will be in the capable hands of our popular favourite, Marjorie Adams, whilst the male lead as taken by H. Wilcox Young will leave nothing to be desired.

The story of "Nice People" revolves about a young girl, raised in society and accustomed to getting what she wants. She lives the life of the average debutante of to-day, with all its silly little habits and its purposeless customs. Eventually there comes the real boy who is destined to change the entire course of her life. To tell more than that would be to spoil the enjoyment of the play.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the bill will be "St. Elmo" by Augustus Evans. This is a play that all St. John's is familiar with, and all have been eagerly waiting for its presentation by Mr. Young and his talented associates. Friday and Saturday's play will be Mr. Young's outstanding stage achievement, "The Great John Ganton." The final night of his last visit to this city, Mr. Young played this piece, and since then numerous patrons of the theatre have been asking for its repetition. The public is advised not to miss a single bill this week.

How Bobolink Wins His Mate

Just as a man should save a home and a visible means of support before he can properly marry, so must the bobolink guaranteed protection and have a building lot before he secures a mate, says Lee H. Crandall, in the Mentor. When the birds return in the spring from their southern migration, the first arrivals are males only. In early May flocks of cock bobolinks can be found living and feeding in perfect amity. Towards the middle of the month the birds widely scatter. Observation will show that each bird holds sway over a section of the meadow, and that intrusion by a rival is met by attack.

The proud possessor has a favorite perch, a bush or a tall weed, from which he pours forth his song. He is advertising to the newly arrived females of the species that he is the owner of a fine suburban plot, with assurance of all the necessities of bobolink life, and he is prepared to erect a one-room bungalow. He also informs other males that this particular territory is occupied and that all trespassers will be dealt with severely. A female approaches the territory and, if pleased with the prospect, remains as his mate. The little space of meadow becomes sacred to the newly wedded pair, and nothing short of death will separate them.

During the run the ship proceeded to North Sydney with a load of scrap iron, and returned with 414 tons of coal, the greater part of which was brought on to this port. Bolderous weather was met with on the run. Capt. Connors reports there is still a good sign of fish on the West Coast, but the bad weather of late has hampered operations. The bank fishery is practically over and all the fleet has done well. The following passengers landed here:—Gerald Doyle, R. Leggs, Alton Fudge, Otto Rose, Mrs. S. A Correction

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In the report of the Annual Meeting of the Woman's Franchise League contained in your issue of October 22nd, it may be noticed that Mrs. Cooper in her remarks made the statement that "every woman but two in Grand Falls signed the petition." This statement, which has now become a "hardy annual," is entirely incorrect in substance. An examination of the lists will reveal the fact that more than two names were missing, and I have no doubt the women who are the subject of this "chestnut" exercised the franchise as they saw fit and used their own mind in the matter.

Yours truly,
WOMAN.

Church of St. Mary the Virgin

Yesterday at St. Mary's Church was a very busy and also a very important day in many ways. Beginning with a Corporate Communion at 8 a.m. for Church workers found a large number present of those who are actively engaged in forwarding the work of the Church and Parish to ask God's special blessing on their efforts this year. The church workers met again at 8.15 p.m. for their annual service. The Rector, Rev. A. B. S. Stirling, addressed the gathering, and gave them some very practical as well as inspiring and encouraging thoughts to hold their minds during the coming year.

In the afternoon the two Bible Classes, Young Men's and Young Women's, met for the first time this season, and both registered record attendances. It behoves all the members of these classes to work hard to maintain and also to improve upon yesterday's showing. The Rector and the leaders of the classes were much encouraged by the record attendance yesterday.

At the evening service one of the largest congregations on record for St. Mary's was on hand to attend the Service of Dedication of the new Altar Rail and Pulpit recently presented to the Church by the Sanctuary Guild and Women's Association respectively. His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland performed the Dedication Ceremony and preached. The Bishop took as his text Psalm 119, verse 130, making reference to the various readings of that verse found in the authorized, revised and Prayer-Book versions of the Psalms. Before commenting on the text he congratulated the Rector and the congregation on the ever-increasingly evident signs of growth in the spiritual life of the Parish. It was very gratifying to him as Bishop to see such signs. The altar frontals and furnishings, which was his privilege to dedicate last year, the bringing in of extra clerical help, the beautifying of the sanctuary by two such gifts as were dedicated last evening, showed very plainly that great progress was made in the Christian life of the people.

Referring to each of the articles in turn the Bishop gave some very helpful and thoroughly sound Church of England teaching. The Altar Rail suggested entrance to the highest of privileges in the Church of England, and he went on to say that the Church through her strict discipline and constitution safeguarded and maintained the sanctity and awesomeness of the mystery of the Holy Communion. The Bishop disabused the minds of those who thought that the Church of England lacked discipline and that the people could come to the Holy Communion as, when and how they pleased. For the correction of such errors in the minds of such people he referred them to this teaching of the Prayer Book, which is the guide on all such matters in the Church of England.

Touching on the thoughts suggested by the dedication of a new pulpit, the Bishop said that the pulpit was the place where light and understanding were given to those who had minds to receive such. It was not a place for a preacher to advance his own opinion. It was not a political platform, but a place where the preacher stood with the authority and commission of Christ to unfold before the minds of the people the pure word of God. No man had a right to preach any doctrine other than that which would agree with the teaching and interpretation of Holy Scripture.

The whole service was very uplifting and of a very hearty nature, the congregation taking their full part in the worship.

The clergy who were present and who assisted at the service were: Rev. A. B. S. Stirling, Rector; Rev. J. Goodland, Assistant Priest; Rev. H. Pike, Acting Bishop's Chaplain, and Rev. G. Elliott.

Old Boys' Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the St. Bonaventure's Alumni Association was held yesterday in the College Aula Maxima, and was largely attended. The reports of the Centre Council, and the Hon. Treasurer having been read and adopted, the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. The Rev. Bro. J. E. Ryan took the chair and congratulated the Association on a very successful year and in passing referred briefly to the various items of the years work dealt with in the report. The election resulted in the following:
President—W. R. Howley, K.C.
Vice-President—J. G. Higgins, B.L.
2nd. V.P.—Rev. J. F. Piddy.
Hon. Treasurer—W. B. Skinner, Esq.
Hon. Sec'y—R. S. Furlong, Esq.
After the installation of the new officers in their respective offices the meeting proceeded with the business on hand. The matter of the appointment of a Committee on the Annual Reunion, and a Committee on Athletics, was left to the discretion of the Executive. These Committees will be shortly appointed, and will immediately commence their activities, and will report to the Association at an early date. Before the motion for adjournment was taken, Mr. P. F. Collins moved a vote of thanks to the Principal, Rev. Bro. J. E. Ryan, which was carried by acclamation.

Obituary

WILLIAM OWEN.
There passed away at his son's residence, Hamilton Ave., on Sunday, Oct. 27th, William Owen, at the old age of 100 years.
A native of Trinity, he came to St. John's in his early teens, and up to a week ago he was enjoying the best of health.
He was of a friendly disposition and made many a pleasant hour for those at home by his old time stories.
His wife predeceased him many years ago. He is survived by one son, John, carpenter at G. E. Lester's. His other son, Capt. Richard, lost his life during the war, his vessel being torpedoed in the Mediterranean. Four daughters also survive him. The funeral takes place to-morrow from 295 Hamilton Ave.

MRS. JOHN CHIEVERS.
It is with the deepest feelings of regret that we chronicle the death of October 12th of an old and highly revered resident of Plate Cove, B.B. in the person of Mrs. John Chievers. Kindness and generosity were her predominant characteristics, while her many noble qualities of heart and mind endeared her to all with whom she came in contact.
The late Mrs. Chievers was in her 87th year and is survived by two sons and five daughters, who mourn the loss of a wise counsellor and an affectionate mother. Mrs. L. Moss of Plate Cove is her eldest surviving daughter, and to her and the other relatives there will be many expressions of sympathy from far and near. In these expressions the writer, who enjoyed for many years the open-hearted hospitality of the Chievers family wishes to convey May her soul rest in eternal peace.—COM.
Plate Cove, B.B., Oct. 20, 1924.

Empire Address at Curling

There can be few people now who have not heard of the great British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, but, unfortunately, there are many who have not had an opportunity of visiting it. We therefore owe a great debt to Miss Hubbel, who has so kindly come amongst us in Corner Brook to describe, as far as may be in a short time, this great achievement.

Friday and Sunday were the evenings chosen by Miss Hubbel to put before us her story of Wembley and all that it stands for. On both occasions, an appreciative audience filled the Regent Theatre to hear Miss Hubbel who may rest assured that she has helped very materially to bring before us all that Wembley should mean to us, as citizens of that great fellowship of diverse races and countries, which we are all proud to call our British Empire.

As Miss Hubbel made quite clear, there are two aspects to the Wembley Exhibition. First, the show itself, with its buildings, parks, pavilions, etc.; second, all the far less material things of which these form the symbolic representation; and it was only fitting that, to a large extent, it was the latter aspect which chiefly occupied the interest of the lecturer and her audience.

The whole story was splendidly illustrated by a series of excellent lantern slides, these being aptly arranged so as to show side by side the numerous activities and places of the Empire, first as they actually are, and secondly in their representation at Wembley.

As a specific example of this, we may mention that famous project, the Canadian Pacific Railway, with all its many ramifications, familiar probably to most of us. This organization acted as a tremendous pioneering influence in the building up of one of our great Dominions, and it has a worthy exhibit at Wembley, including a full-size model of the newest 6000 class of locomotives. All this was very well described by Miss Hubbel.

In addition, Miss Hubbel had amassed a large fund of most interesting information regarding the Empire—its economic statistics, historical details, and general geographical facts. All this was most ably put before us, in the short time available, and, woven as it was into a great Empire story, and illustrated by the slides, helped all to appreciate not only the immense undertaking of the Exhibition itself, but—what is far more important—to realize the great privileges and responsibilities which fall to us as citizens of the greatest Fellowship of Nations.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Star of the Sea Association was held yesterday, when the past season's business was finalized. The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read and showed that the Association has had a most successful year, and is now in a strong condition financially and otherwise. The election of officers was then proceeded with under the system laid down by the constitution of the Association, and which makes every member eligible for office, but that he must have a majority of the votes cast. The election resulted as follows:—

- President—P. J. Cashin, M.H.A.
- Vice-Pres.—Joseph Murphy.
- 1st Asst. Vice-Pres.—J. F. Breen.
- 2nd Asst. Vice-Pres.—R. Dooley.
- Treasurer—F. J. Kenny.
- Asst. Treasurer—J. F. Ryan.
- Secretary—G. J. Conway.
- Grand Marshal—P. Furlong.
- Deputy G. Marshal—M. Leonard.
- Chairman Reading Room and Billiard Committee—James Carberry.

The election was conducted by W. F. Linegar, M.H.A. who, in installing them, wished them every success and complimented the members on their choice. The officers on taking their positions made short speeches of thanks, and promised to do everything in their power to forward the interests of the Society.

Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring officers, and especially to W. F. Graham, who retires from the Secretaryship, after twenty-seven years in the position. Votes were also passed to Mr. Linegar for conducting the election, to the Rev. Spiritual Director, and the Archbishop and Clergy, the Ladies' Auxiliary and the Press.

Motor Car Collides With Wagon

About 6.30 Saturday evening a motor car, driven by Mr. Isaac Goldstone, collided with an express wagon, owned by William Dunne, which was standing outside McCarthy's grocery store, on Water Street. Considerable damage was done to the latter vehicle. Mr. Goldstone, who escaped uninjured, was proceeding east at the time. The accident was attributed to the wheels of the car becoming caught in the street car rail, with the result that the steering wheel got torn from the driver's grasp and the car was turned across the street.
