No "weight" to carry—no "wait" for the suits to be made. They are all ready for you to slip into, and we'll send the heavy suit home. We made a heap of converts last week to our way of doing the clothing business, and we sent away more pleased gentlemen than the average tailor hopes to see in a year. Cool Cloth, Air Pore, Mandalay, Homespun and Mohairs—these are the proper fabrics for summer clothing. Priced from $10.00 to $18.00, with no "weight" to burden you, and no "wait" for a fitting. Just slip into one and slip out, and there you have it.

Will Be Maintained by City. Stated Mayor — Pickpockets Kept Out.

By a Staff Reporter.
HAMILTON, Monday, July 5.—After suffering between life and death for some time, Edmund Bradley, a clerk at St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, as a result of the injuries which he received when he was accidentally shot thru the stomach by a bullet from a revolver, which he was exhibiting to a group of ladies at 348 Aberdeen avenue, have not yet been definitely made. The accident occurred on June 18, and little hope was held out for his recovery. A strong constitution aided the young man in his fight for life, but a second hemorrhage caused his death.

The young man was only 17 years of age, and was employed as a clerk at the Imperial Bank. He was rushed to the hospital immediately after the accident. Doctors Harry, Unsworth, McKenahen, and Sullivan were in attendance, but his condition grew worse and his life was despaired of. The funeral will be held from the parental home at 348 Aberdeen avenue, but the funeral arrangements have not yet been definitely arranged.

Asylum shut out.

The next event will be the playing of the inter-city competition for the singles championship of the city, which starts on July 19.

The guard placed at the waterworks plant at the beach will be maintained, according to a statement made by Mayor Walters. Pending further notice, while the city will maintain the protection, but the city officials hope that the government will pay the charges, on the ground that it is the duty of the militia department to undertake such work in time of war. The home guard offer to protect the pumping station made to the city will be followed up by an offer to the militia authorities at Ottawa.

The police stated that the racing week just over was the quietest which Hamilton has experienced for some time. While the meeting of the Hamilton Jockey Club has been the rendezvous for a certain number of pickpockets and other characters, this has been almost totally lacking this year. This has been attributed to the clean-up made at Ottawa, a week before the Hamilton races started.

Special Services.
Special services were preached at Knox Presbyterian Church yesterday by Rev. Francis Greenway, Hamilton old boy, who now has charge of St. Rochester, N.Y.

WINE-LAYER LOST GERMANS ADMIT

With the assumption that an apology and explanation will be forthcoming, according to Copenhagen advices, the greater part of the battle was fought in Swedish waters, and the crew of the Oostgarns lighthouse had to flee to escape the shrapnel.

Separated by Fog

STOCKHOLM, via London, July 4.—Despatches regarding the naval engagement in the Baltic on July 3, between German and Russian warships, state that a German cruiser squadron and the mine-layer Albatross to the fight, for the purpose of laying mines in the Russian coast. The Albatross lost touch with the remainder of the squadron during a fog, and suddenly found herself among Russian warships.
A battle began between the Albatross and the Russian ships, and shortly thereafter the German cruiser came to the help of the Albatross, which was beset by four cruisers. The German ships were obliged to retreat toward Swedish territory. The Russians, keeping up a furious fire, pursued them so near the coast that the population of the island of Gotland could easily see the projectiles striking the water. The Albatross was hit by 25 shots and ran ashore on the nearby coast. The German cruiser escaped southward.
By this time another German squadron arrived on the scene and the Russians to fight. Owing to the fog it was impossible to tell the number of ships in the German squadron.

Berlin Admits Defeat

BERLIN, July 4.—A statement issued by the German Admiralty last night, relative to Friday's engagement in the Baltic Sea, confirms the report that the German mine-layer Albatross was forced to run aground on the coast of the island of Gotland, and states that twenty of her crew were killed and thirty-seven were wounded. The Albatross was ashore in a sinking condition after hours of heavy fighting with four Russian cruisers. The text of the statement follows:
"The admiral reports that a portion of light Baltic naval forces returning from outpost duty, steaming in the order, met at about 6 o'clock on the morning of July 3, in somewhat hazy weather, Russian armored cruisers patrolling between Gotland and the Swedish coast, and after a short engagement, our warships attempted to draw the Russian ships within range of our German ships."
"In the course of the fighting, the war vessel Albatross was unable to escape, and ran aground on the coast of the island of Gotland. After two hours of heavy fighting against four armored cruisers, which the Albatross was unable to escape, she was compelled to run aground in the morning of July 3, in the vicinity of the island of Gotland and the Russian coast. The enemy's attack was repulsed, and twenty-seven were wounded. The wounded were well tended by the Swedish officials and population."

Petrograd's Story of Fight

PETROGRAD, July 4, via London, July 5.—A detailed story of Friday's engagement in the Baltic Sea, as given by a Russian official statement issued last night. This communication follows:
"The Russian fleet, consisting of the Bayan, Bogatyr and Oleg encountered the enemy at 9 o'clock in the morning on the island of Oland and the Russian coast. The enemy consisted of a light cruiser of the Augsburg class, a mine-layer, and three destroyers."
"The sea was shrouded in a fog so dense that the ships frequently were swallowed up in darkness and therefore the gunfire was inaccurate. The Russians, attempting to intercept the torpedo boats, were unable to do so. A half hour the Augsburg, finding the Russian fire too hot, abandoned her more dense, but were unharmed. The mine-layer began to show signs of distress and the torpedoes endeavored to assist her escape, throwing volumes of thick, black smoke out of their funnels and rendering the fog more dense. Under fire broke out, the mine-layer was shot away, clouds of steam arose and the doomed ship began to list to starboard."
"Hauling down her flag she made for the coast. As she was badly damaged and was entering neutral waters, the Russians ceased firing and she was seen to go ashore behind Oostgarns lighthouse."
"The Russians cruised northward. At 10 o'clock they sighted a squadron of the enemy, including an armored cruiser of the Boon class, a light cruiser of the Augsburg class and four destroyers. The Russians immediately opened fire and a half hour later the enemy began to retreat, while several submarines attacked the Russians unsuccessfully."
"The Russian was sent at full speed after the retreating vessels, which were joined by another cruiser of the Bremen class. The Rurik soon had the satisfaction of seeing the effect of her salvoes, for the enemy's fire weakened. The Rurik's 4-inch guns were silenced, and fire broke out on board. Obviously disliking further conflict the enemy disappeared rapidly in the fog."
"The Russians sustained trifling damage. No one was killed; 14 men were wounded. Shortly afterwards the Russians were attacked by torpedoes from Russian torpedoes, which were destroyed. One of these torpedoes was damaged in driving off the submarine attacks."

SOME CROPS BETTER FOR SATURDAY'S RAIN

Downfall Was Not General, However, and Situation in Some Sections Serious.

Contrary to general opinion the rain of Saturday, July 3, was thought to be a general over the central counties of Ontario, but was comparatively limited in its area. At Bond Lake and up thru North York there was comparatively little rain, and in many places not even being laid.
The Township of Markham and the northern portion of Scarborough the rainfall was abundant, delighting the farmers and giving assurance of good crops. A narrow strip thru the Township of York and Scarborough, and north of Bond Lake, however, received none of the rainfall, and market gardeners and farmers report the situation as serious. Barley, oats, the late timothy hay and root crops in general, will benefit enormously by Saturday's rain, and a considerable amount of alfalfa is now in, but will not be injured to any extent.

THREE YOUNG LADS TOOK WOMAN'S CASH

Boys of Tender Years Proved Very Successful Pickpockets.

MUCH JUVENILE CRIME

Charge of Theft Laid Against Trio for Taking Luxuries.

Nine juveniles, ranging in age from 10 to 20, were arrested Saturday evening and Sunday on charges of theft. The starting feature is that the youngest trio, ages 10, 11 and 13, are said by the police to be accomplished pickpockets, and successfully extracted a dollar bill from a woman's chainelette at Hanlan's Saturday evening without her knowing it.
Albert Sanderson, aged 10, 232 Simcoe street; Tom Besinsky, aged 11, 3 Wolsey street, and John Cohen, aged 13, 93 Miller avenue, were arrested by officer 363 after they had secured a dollar, and after the officer had chased them a quarter of a mile around the bay waters in a punt.
The officer watched them shove their way out of a crowd waiting for a boat at the ferry dock, after which they sought a secluded spot and wrangled over the rightful ownership of a dollar bill. When P.C. 363 walked up to them the three ran for the promenade and scuttled over the railing into a boat in which they shoved off from shore. Clarke jumped into a punt and got them only after he had shoved the punt half way around the island.
The boys are charged with the theft of a dollar and the boat.
Charles of Thert also.
William Dobson, aged 17, 383 Weston road; Frank Robertson, aged 14, 301 Oiler avenue, and Sydney Hatten, aged 14, 55 Chambers avenue, were arrested charged with stealing a bottle of wine and a box of candles and a camera from Fraita's drug store, St. Clair and Silverthorn avenue.
The drugist watched the three boys make away with the goods, and instead of stopping them sent a policeman after them. Within 15 minutes he found them in a lane, by which time they had drunk the bottle of wine and eaten the box of candles. The officer couldn't find the camera.
The Claremont street police got three more youngsters Saturday evening, stealing lead pipe from vacant houses.

FIGHT NEAR RAILWAYS

and the Austro-German advance is said to be extremely costly.

Thus, on the two extreme wings the Russians appear to be firm, and where they are retreating, their retirement is orderly and accompanied by vigorous rear-guard operations. The Austro-Germans, who are advancing in the centre, are setting deeper into a country covered with forests and streams and barbed wire, between the middle Vistula and the Bug—natural advantages to the Russians, which military writers have repeatedly emphasized. They point out, too, the daily lengthening chain of communication along the enemy's flank, which brings an added burden to the Teutonic allies.

Some sections of the British public think the time has come for Great Britain and France to begin a general offensive in the west and thus force a transfer of German troops from the Russian theatre, but the more conservative military writers think that the time for this is not at hand and that the best policy is to pour into Russia every ounce of ammunition that can be spared without curtailing the necessary supply at the western front.

Turning Movement in East.
One of the main aims of the German operations in the east seems to be directed to a vast turning movement, behind the Russian lines, embracing the Lwow, one of the strong Russian bases, and to Petrograd, the Russian capital. The Russian military writers think that the time for this is not at hand and that the best policy is to pour into Russia every ounce of ammunition that can be spared without curtailing the necessary supply at the western front.

"The Russians will refuse to accept serious battle in a country devoid of railways."

"Save the Kiddies"

---Said the Rich Man

By WINIFRED BLACK

Copyright, 1915, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

WHEN the Lusitania went down with nearly all on board, the other day, a rich man stood at the rail and saw the deck beneath him sinking into the waves. He called his valet and gave him last instructions: "Here," said the rich man, taking off the life belt he had fastened about his waist, "here, let's save the kiddies," and they did.

They saved the kiddies—the rich man and his valet—and they went down into the sea themselves.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, your name has meant nothing to most of us who've heard it up till now, nothing but money.

The very syllables of it seemed to taste of gold, and in the pronunciation we seemed to sense the rustle of rich silk, the sparkle of precious gems, the perfume of delicate wines and everything that stands for what great wealth will buy.

But now, and from this forward, the name of Vanderbilt will mean something to us Americans besides money.

Just as the name of Astor has had a different sound since the sinking of the Titanic.

Rich man, poor man, beggar man and thief—all alike in the wild clamor of the rushing sea. We sneer, and sometimes with reason, at the follies and follies of the American aristocracy, but it is on record now that neither the poor man, the greater man nor the thief has it in him to die more nobly than the rich man who, we like to make ourselves believe, is something a little less than a human being.

The rank is but the guinea stamp—The gold's the gold, for a' that."

Gold, pure gold, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt. The best of all the metals. John Jacob Astor! You proved it, as the humblest citizen may, at the call of the Great Leveler.

The Most Important Thing.

"Save the kiddies!" What a lesson it was you taught us, Alfred Vanderbilt, standing there at the rail of the sinking ship!

"Save the kiddies!" That's the important thing for us here in our country to do today—save the children.

We've had our chance, we who have grown to manhood and to woman's heritage. We took it and made the best of it, or we let it pass and let it.

See the man who walks there at your elbow. He's rich, very rich, they say. What gives him the eyes of a hunted animal?

The woman in the crowd ahead of you, how pale she is, how agonized with remorse over something which, perhaps, she really could not help. You, yourself, are you satisfied with what you have done with your life and your opportunity?

If you had it to live over again, if you could begin at the beginning—what's the use, you can't!

The story is told, almost to the last word, but see, up there on top of the hill! Here they come, joyous and laughing and light of heart, the children—the hope of the race!

Quick, there's a bridge down there at the foot of the hill! That's where you stumbled and got the limp you'll carry with you to your grave! Quick, let's repair it, let's "save the kiddies!"

More Ways Than One.

Hark! What is that in the dark forest back there? Is it the roar of a wild and savage beast?

See! They are running toward it and laughing, the little children, who follow us so gaily down the winding road of life. Quick, let's warn them, quick, before it is too late!

They are young and full of courage. They can cope with all the wild beasts in the jungle, if we only tell them in time. "Save the kiddies!"

They are more unselfish than we, perhaps, broader minded, bigger souled. They may make an expedition into the dark forest and risk their own lives, for the benefit of those who will come behind them.

"Save the kiddies!"

My boy shall never make the mistakes that I made, not if I can help it. My girl shall have a better chance than I had—if there is such a thing as chance.

And the others—the children of my neighbor—shall they not have their chance, too?

My neighbor and I can get along the rest of the way as we started. We'll find the road through the bog and around the quicksands and over the shaky bridges as best we can. But, oh, there is one thing we can do—over the thing we can do—let's tell them about it and give them a chance.

Kitchens and Fish.

WELLS said MARY, with the light of resolution in her eyes, "I do. Now, Peter H. u. n. t. I'm not dictatorial, as a rule, but you're going to trot out and deliver the fish you've cleaned to the friends you want to have them—save one for breakfast, and then the rest out in the ash can. And I mean what I say."

I was so glad to have Mary rescue me from the abominable mess I was in that I didn't so much as make a sound. I started out with a plate of fish for my neighbor's next door. Then I took some fish to my mother-in-law, and some to mother and Dad. Mary worked in grim silence, her nose in heaven and her cheeks scarlet.

"If you ever go fishing again," she said once when I returned for another plate of fish, "I sincerely trust you'll ship your gifts to your friends straight from the lake, and take a man along with you to clean and crate them as soon as they come out of the water."

"Crate them!" I said weakly.

"Crate them!" repeated Mary. "I never wished any one any bad luck, but, Peter, I hope you'll never have such fishing luck as this again."

Just Like a Man.

"So do I," I thought, but I didn't say it.

"And it's just like a man, any way," my wife said on my next trip in for a plate of fish, "to get into such a muddle in the kitchen that he doesn't know what on earth to do. Ugh! Peter, how could you move around this way and leave a trail of fish scales everywhere you went?"

"I don't know," I admitted. "I've learned tonight that I can do lots of things. At least I can prepare fish most temptingly for the neighbors."

"How many people have you presented with fish?"

"About ten, I think."

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why the Wounded Cry For a Drink of Water

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B. M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University)

THERE is no doubt, judging from the accounts, which agree on all sides, that one of the most serious problems which confronts the Red Cross departments of the French, English, Italian, German, Serbian and Russian armies is to satisfy the thirst of those wounded and left to suffer on the fields of battle.

Testimony is received almost daily from these battlefields that, despite all of the preparations, extensive and liberal supplies and multitudes of nurses, doctors, orderlies and medical military measures; in spite of those wonderful dogs which seek out the wounded with little parcels of water attached to their collars, the most heart-rending agony of those shot and injured in battle is caused by their consuming thirst.

Yet this very thirst, so burning and terrifying to those bayoneted, sabred, shot and otherwise wounded victims of war is the very thing which has always reduced the numbers of those who die in battle. Not only does this rankling thirst usually irritate the brain in such a wise that consciousness is prevented from lapsing, but when unconsciousness does supervene, causes a series of gross and automatic vocal noises, which usually leads to the rescue of the victim of the thirst. Moreover, it prevents the mangled and mutilated sufferers of battle from bleeding to death.

Too Much Water Dangerous.

The very agencies which cause wounds and hemorrhages initiate a fiery thirst. With the loss of blood there arises an increase of the closing principles in the arteries. The blood and lymph channels shrink spontaneously, and at the same time their surfaces stick together with the tenacity of a bulldog's teeth.

This glistening together of the open wounds, whether they be large or small, is in part due to the occupation of the torn and sundered flesh by a blood clot. The very factors in the juices and tissues of the soldier's body, which thus enhances the speed and power with which his blood clots, at the same time produces the grievous dryness of the lips, mouth, tongue and neighboring parts.

The energy and living chemistry otherwise exerted to make saliva and the mouth fluids are rushed to the support of the more vulnerable spots. Thus the pleasure thirst becomes not only a token of trouble at another point, but a sign that the human system is concentrating its fighting forces in an able manner in the area injured.

In other words, pathetic and soul-stirring as the cry of the thirst victim of the battlefield is, yet its pathos has in it much that speaks well for the powers of the fighter's resistance. Indeed, it is at times a dangerous, if not a misplaced sympathy, which allows the wounded man to quaff too freely of water or other liquid. Only too often the doctors of the medical corps of an army are howled down as brutal because they refuse to permit men apparently dying of thirst to more than sip a little from a canteen.

As a matter of fact, however, it has been observed that too copious a draught of water given the severely wounded opens up their clogged wounds and starts them bleeding all over again. Moreover, too much water thus drunk will dilute the remaining blood corpuscles and serum excessively, open wide the sanguinary passages and originate a host of new infections, such as low blood pressure, shock, unconsciousness and blood poisoning.

Use of Sugar Water.

The mechanics of this will easily be understood when we recall that the delicate and intricate machinery of the vital structures of man are so arranged that each change of flesh, bone, brain and brawn is immediately and automatically made up, met and compensated for by corresponding change in each other tissue and organ. Thus, if the heart beats too fast in a healthful youth, the person the arteries and veins widen their channels at once in order to equalize the pressure. If the heart slows up, but the same canal contract and shrink. If there is an excess of serum in the blood brooklets, some of it is squeezed out by the kidneys and intestines; if it is not enough the kidneys shed partially down and

The Good-Night Story

THE RAINBOW By Vernon Merry

WHENEVER the little Indian children see a rainbow they call it "The Flower Path of the Southwind-God," and tell this story:

There was once a lovely Indian maiden who lived with her mother near a lake. She was always wandering about through the forest and along the bank of the lake gathering flowers, and for this reason her mother called her "Flower-Maiden."

One day while she was picking purple lilies she saw a young man sleeping under a tree. As she watched him a cold wind suddenly blew across the lake and the trees began to moan from the cold.

"I had better awaken the young man or he will become chilled and ill from this cold wind," thought the Flower-Maiden.

She spoke to him, but he seemed not to hear. Then she dropped some of the lilies upon his face and jumped behind a tree so he would not see her and said:

"The young man opened his eyes and walked straight to the maiden and said: 'But you for awakening me! I am the Southwind-god and I am here to keep the Northwind from returning before it is time. I felt tired and went to sleep. The Northwind blew in and I would have been frozen very soon if you had not been kind enough to have awakened me. Maiden, you have saved my life. Will you marry me and come to the home of the flowers?'"

The maiden gladly consented to wed the Southwind-god and they went to say good-by to her mother.

"Now we will go," said the Southwind-god.

"But not in this rain," said the flower maiden's mother.

Then the Southwind-god took his bow from his shoulder and to the arrow he tied a bouquet of flowers, which the maiden had gathered.

He drew the bow and shot the arrow up into the clouds and it trailed a great bow of all the prismatic colors, and the sun smiled through it and the rain-drops glistened and soon stopped falling.

And the Southwind-god took his bride by the hand and they walked across the sky on the flower path to the warm southland.

How She Made an Organdie Frock to Wear Over Any Slip.

WE were all "le-a-beds" this morning, having been up until the cold, gray dawn at the Tilden's lawn party. This affair was the swan-song of the social season, as every one will have left for their summer homes by the end of next week.

Nor were we disappointed, for right in the center of the lawn a dancing floor had been erected, and the orchestra was stationed behind a clump of shrubbery. As we danced about the lake, and take a man along with you to clean and crate them as soon as they come out of the water."

Smart All-White Organdie Frock.

Mrs. Tilden is noted for her originality. There's no end to the trouble she takes to make her entertainments a success.

When the invitations came asking every guest to wear white we knew that she had some clever scheme "up her sleeve," and were prepared for a glorious time.

When I slipped the frock over the silk foundation the bands of apple-green gave just a faint touch of color which made it appear very illusive and cool.

I wonder how I could have forgotten the charm of white organdie for three summers? I'll have several for a long time and make up for lost time.

Fight White Outpoints Freddie Welsh

FREDDIE WELSH TAKES A BEATING

Lightweight Champion Allows Charlie White of Chicago to Outpoint Him in Bout.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Freddie Welsh of England, lightweight champion of the world, took another beating in a ten-round fight last night, when time allowed the hard-hitting "Charlie" White of Chicago to outpoint him at the Brighton Beach racetrack. Welsh opened up a box of tricks and gave White a merry time of it for the first half of the bout, but he tired, slowed up and "tailed" toward the end.

White tried hard all the time. He lunged his weighty arms with full-like motion, but the crafty Englishman guarded wisely his vital spots and weathered the going, although giving several hard jolts. At times White's superior in this respect was far White's superior in this respect. White was over anxious. Maybe this may be charged to his second, however, for he screamed instructions, all having visions of a knockout and wealth, but to White's credit, it must be said he paid little attention to this advice, fighting his fight alone.

White jumped into the ring smiling, waving an American flag, evidently either bolstering up his own courage or else tempting the crowd to early cheers. Welsh climbed thru the ropes to a chorus of "boos."

No time was lost bringing the men together and starting them on their journey. Although Welsh agreed to make 135 pounds at three o'clock, when he climbed on the scales he was one pound over weight. White weighed 133½ pounds. They both began the round with a fight, getting in close and working with each hand. White played for the body, and near the end of the round shipped a hard left that hurt and forced Welsh to hang on. The Englishman, however, held his own for the round, Welsh left the mill in the second and managed to keep White guessing most of the round, although the Chicago boy landed several stinging blows to the body.

Welsh kept a watchful eye on White's famed hook and did not leave an inch of room for that blow up to the third round, White, therefore, again set his hands toward the stomach and again managed to land several hard punches, winning the round by a shade.

The Chicago boy tore after Welsh in the fourth and battered him around the ring, landing repeatedly, but not cleanly, with a left. At the bell Welsh was so worried that he hit several times after the gong had rung. White won this round decisively.

The champion boxed more cleanly in the fifth than at any time in the fight, repeatedly setting White back with a jab which found its mark on White's nose and started a flow. This he now stop up White, however, and he evened matters with body punches.

BRESNAHAN USES THE HONOR SYSTEM

Doesn't Make a Watchdog Out of Himself—Gets the Results

CHICAGO, July 3.—The massive Roger Bresnahan is the commander in chief of the world's best baseball team. He is the one who makes a watchdog out of himself, to see that the fellows are in their rooms at a certain hour of the night. He is the one who understands that they must be in perfect shape for the game, and that they must have their money, play good baseball and keep training rules to be in shape. Therefore, I rely on him to be honest, and his sense of duty to their employers. I take him for the man who will do off the field is one of my business, as long as what he "does not impair their work on the field."

For what they do on the field is one of my business, as long as what he "does not impair their work on the field."

Sounds like good common sense, doesn't it? But if Roger one ball players to realize what he preached. Sunday had better carefully guard his assets. Anyhow, it will be interesting to note the result of the Chicago pilot's theory of the honor system.

Herbert and Herche Engage in Pitchers' Battle That Was Stopped by Rain.

ROCHESTER, July 3.—Owing to the rain here today only nine innings of the double-header scheduled for today was played, and in that time the two teams scored. Herbert and Herche were both in excellent form with honors even, though the Hustlers had it in hits and total bases, but neither side could score.

REMARKABLE ATHLETIC PERFORMANCES IN WEST

Several Records Go at Chicago Try-Outs for the San Francisco Meet.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Seven Central Amateur Athletic Union records were bettered and two tied in the annual senior track and field championship meet of the organization held today. The team of the Chicago Athletic Association, with 89 points, won the leading honors, the Illinois Athletic Club being second with 72. Sixteen institutions or clubs were represented in the meet, which was held on Chase Field at the University of Chicago.

Several protests were filed by the rival leaders. The L.A.C. charged that C.C. Cooke and Arthur Alexander, who competed for the Cleveland A.C. at Dayton meet last July, were not eligible to compete for the C.A.A. today, because their year as unattached athletes would not be up until tomorrow. Carroll of the C.A.A. team, a University of Michigan student, protested as a non-resident since his home is in Lockport, N.Y. The C.A.A. filed similar objections against Alma Richards, who competed for the L.A.C., alleging that his home is in Provo, Utah.

WATERBLOSSOM'S FORT ERIE DERBY

Sloppy Track on Opening Day
Public Like the Mutual
Machines—Results

FORT ERIE, July 3.—Under the most adverse racing conditions the first summer meeting of the Niagara Stakes Association commenced at Fort Erie Saturday afternoon. A steady downpour of rain fell all afternoon making the track a sea of mud, but despite this 7000 people journeyed to the track. Twelve coaches brought the Toronto delegation, which numbered about 200. The management provided a splendid program of seven races.

T. C. McDowell's crack Kentucky filly, Waterblossom, by Waterbury, basing, won the opening day feature, the Canadian Derby, by a head from the Hamilton Derby winner, The Finn. Waterblossom won her last seven starts in Kentucky and made it eight straight Saturday.

Waterblossom was the second choice, and at the rise of the gate Martin rode her into a three lengths lead. At the turn-out at the back stretch the Finn gained a little. Byrne took the favorite to the centre of the track in the home stretch, and after a hard drive the Finn just failed to get up and was beaten a head by Waterblossom. The English-bred horse, Royal II, ran a much better race than he did in Hamilton, and was a better up third, half a length behind Waterblossom and the Finn.

King Hamburg, Rancher and Commanda were withdrawn owing to the change in the going. The last two ran second and third in the Hamilton Derby, but none of them have shown anything in the slop. It was only a three-horse race, but it was hard fought all the way.

This spring the pari-mutuels were installed at the track and the public were at first green as to the way they were controlled. The "iron men" and gave them a good battle on every race. The old betting ring has been rebuilt under the spacious grand stand, and 27 totalizing mutuels installed, and there is no overcovering which there is at other tracks. The machines are also two of these boards in the ring. The following were the scratchers.
